

Kendra Pasma is a licensed mental health counselor who specializes in working with those who have experienced trauma. Kendra is devoted to causes related to gender injustice and brings professional experience working with women and girls in various different settings to her work at Engedi Refuge.

Kendra earned her master's degree in marriage and family therapy at Fuller Theological Seminary. She has been providing therapy since 2008, working in community mental health settings as well as with faith-based organizations. Kendra practices therapy from a family systems framework, incorporating art therapy, cognitive-behavioral therapy, and trauma informed therapies into her work with clients. She and her husband live in Bellingham, Washington.
