

Macon Mayhem David Watt 2016-17 game worn jersey, size XL.

Duchess, Alberta native David Watt played eight seasons of junior and college hockey before turning pro in 2016. He started the season with Columbus, playing seven games for the Cottonmouths and scoring two goals before being acquired by the Mayhem in mid November. Watt appeared in 15 games for Macon before being released on January 19, 2017. He returned to Columbus and finished the season with the Cottonmouths before retiring from professional hockey. This white Bauer jersey has an embroidered primary logo sewn on the front. Under the lace up neck, the Bauer wordmark logo is embroidered directly to the jersey. Embroidered Kroger and Marcos Pizza sponsor patches are sewn on the shoulders. The numbers are two color sewn twill, but the letters on the nameplate are heat pressed vinyl on a non-matching fabric nameplate. On the lower back, the Bauer logo is once again embroidered directly to the jersey. An embroidered SPHL patch is sewn on the opposite side. The player has signed the front in black Sharpie. Wear is limited due to Watt's short tenure with the team. I acquired this jersey from an eBay auction.
