Unsouled is the 3rd, and so far the best book in the Unwind series. The last book, Unwholly, left off with the main characters Connor Latisser and Lev Calder running away from an evil facility where surgeons surgically dismembered troubled teens for fresh organs and limbs. They are on the run from the juvenile authority and are about to face extremely troubling challenges that put their mission, overthrowing unwinding, and their lives, in danger. As Connor and Lev are away, Cam, the Rewind boy who is made of different parts from different people is on a voyage to bring down the Proactive Citizenry, the very organization that brought him to life.

I would recommend this book to anyone middle school and up. It is a fantastic novel that I would rate a 10 out of 10 because of its fast paced action, as well as insight on social power struggles in a variety of communities and situations. This novel has a truthful side to it, which depicts a future society in which science is left unchecked and goes beyond our moral values as human beings. As you read this book, you will start pondering these deep thoughts, and the novel itself will keep you entertained for the whole read.
