

Dead Vatican City Banker

On June eighteenth (18th) of nineteen-eighty-two (1982) in the year of our Lord, Roberto Calvi was found hanging by the neck off the Black-Friar Bridge in London. Calvi was a sixty-two (62) year-old Italian banker employed with the Vatican bank. Stowed upon his exhausted body was a counterfeit passport, fifteen-thousand dollars in cash, ($15,000), and his pockets were stuffed with bricks; a recognizably gesticulate from the Freemasons.

This ostensibly occurred in the vicinity where a Masonic Lodge happened to abide, by pure luck according to the British papers. Though, this relation could be where the bridge derived its name from. Black Friar was moreover the nickname a secret-society which Calvin was a constituent.

The lodge on the contrary, had the given title of Propaganda Duey - otherwise known as P2 Lodge, established in eighteen seventy-seven (1877 A.D.) under its new leader known as Gelli. P2 changed course for the worse in the nineteen-sixty's (1960's) becoming supplementary high-level masonic in and criminal in nature. (a sign that perchance heightened Jewish-concepts of Freemasonry were assimilated into the lodge). It must be noted: The Freemasons retained mediators to act between politicians and the banks.

Rupert Cornwell worked in Rome for the Financial Times and wasn't a freemason. He covered this thought-provoking story and within the Times he printed that Roberto Calvi was known as God's Banker. Goerringer was another journalist who covered story of massive amounts of money being shipped to other accounts in South America. At the time of the death, an ongoing court case hitherto necessitated Calvin's presence within the courtroom regarding a matter of four and 1-to-the-tenth billion dollars ($4.1 billion) unaccounted for from one of Italy's top banks named Ambrosiano, which Calvi was Chairman.

British police were ostensibly quick to categorize Calvi's death a suicide, but this theory is comical. P2 and the Mason's had been vigorously attempting an inclusive take-over of Vatican City and truly entire state of Italy.

Vital Fact : In nineteen sixty-two (1962) after Vatican II was finalized, a deliberate campaign began to seek out pedophiles to become Priests or existing gay/pedophile Priests to be promoted into more prominent roles to inflict mind-control over Children; sounds similar to Hollywood, huh?
