Friends,

May God's grace richly abound among you.

Something has been creeping upon us, quite literally. It is so routine and common place, that we barely see it coming our way. Since June 22nd, the Summer solstice, we've been losing approximately 2 minutes and 8 seconds of daylight per day. Before we know it, the earth's shift on its axis will have us firmly in longer hours of darkness, shorter hours of daylight. Likewise, grief runs a similar course. We each have a solstice of sorts, a tender place where our daylight hours seem to shorten, until one day we look up to say, "Good grief! It sure is dark these days."

You will know that we've hit our solstice when you see us laying out of social circles, dodging worship services, crying during a hymn, suddenly talking loudly when we're usually the quietest of conversation partners. You will know that we've hit our solstice when you see us diving into social circles, attending every worship service, grinning during a hymn, suddenly getting quiet when we're usually the loudest of conversation partners. And, juxtaposed as those two preceding sentences might seem, we can be in both of those spaces at the same time, and even in other spaces, too. This is the nature of grief. And, in this season of lengthening nights, when our house seems too dark, too quiet, and too still, grief seems to creep in like a fog, sometimes to seemingly cradle us, other times to seemingly stifle us. To this end--let's ponder grief.

Right from the start, let's acknowledge that grief is not some sort of one-size-fits-all garment. Just as in clothing, there are different patterns, styles, and sizes to grief. We all experience it differently and we all wear it differently. No two people grieve alike. Sometimes we find that we grieve the loss of a friend or pet more acutely than the death of a relative. Some will weep uncontrollably. Some will not cry at all. Some never mention the loss; others talk of nothing else. And, in truth, this is all totally okay. Our grief is our grief. Another's grief is another's grief. They do not have to be alike to be both deep and valid. And, we must confess, that we find ourselves having to make peace with well-meaning people who cannot manage to say the right things. Occasionally, we are those well-meaning people whose words simply get in the way.

During a grief, especially right after the loss, no one truly wishes to hear either, "So-and-so is in a better place," or, "Be grateful that he/she is no longer suffering." Still, should someone say such a thing to us, it's perfectly okay to respond with something like, "I get what you're saying. Thank you for caring, but I can't hear that right now." People who know a grief will be able to hear you and to embrace what you are saying. Try not to take the speaker's remark personally. Don't we all say the wrong thing from time to time? Grief has a way of making us all so very uncomfortable. And, discomfort causes us to say something nutty that we'd truly intended to be helpful.

Grief brings a whole series of "first-lasts" and "last-firsts." The first year after a loss is a doozy. A song may play in a restaurant, grocery store, or other public place. It may catch us by surprise. The song has us suddenly feeling the entire pain and weight of the loss, all over again. Our response, which might shock us, could be to abandon the shopping cart, dash out, to land at our car in only enough time to collapse over the hood to cry. There is no shame in such a thing.

A grief deeply felt speaks directly to the depth of love present in that relationship. Also, realize that you might find that you suddenly feel guilty when you have the first good laugh at a cherished memory, or realize that, for the very first time, the loss isn't the first thing to pop into your mind when the alarm clock sounds. Life does go forward. We also go forward. This is part of the healing process.

The healing process looks differently for each of us. We grieve so differently from others, so it follows that our healing process looks differently from that of another. Our pain is not the other's pain. (and vice versa) At times, our process may include physical pain.

It is common for people to experience a sense of fatigue, stomach aches, headaches, loss of appetite, and loss of interest. Some people experience what seems like a rough cold or the flu. Our bodies process loss, it's more than just a function of heart and mind. Grief can land us in the doctor's office more often in the year following our loss, than in the sum of a few years prior. This may make us feel odd should this happens to us, yet it's just a part of our healing process.

And, just as we talk of symptoms with medical professionals, we also find healing in talking of our grief with others. While it's true that no one knows or feels our exact loss, it is also true that others know and feel loss. Often, healing happens in the hearing and sharing our stories. And, realistically, are we the only one who has ever experienced loss? Of course, not. In the fullness of God's time, we may find that a support group, social media group, or Stephen Ministry relationship moves us forward as we are able to take another step, half-step, quarter-step, or shuffle. These steps come as we find ways to tell our stories in our own words.

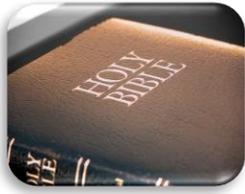

Grief is a process. It is never 100% gone. Much like days following the Summer solstice, grief come upon us a little at a time, maybe it catches us off-guard, prompting us to say, "Good grief! It sure is dark these days." That is a challenge of grief, but there is another side to it. Grief does have a Winter solstice of sorts, where in increments our days brighten little by little until one day, we are surprised to hear our own voice saying, "Good grief! It sure is bright these days." If your bright day is not today, know that it will come your way. It comes our way as we take time to grieve and to heal. The bright day comes our way in the fullness of God's time. No one can either rush it or force it upon us.

Wherever you are in your grief journey, dark days or bright days, know that you are NOT ALONE. And, know that friendship, support, prayer, or a silent friend to sit with you are only a phone call away. Call a friend, pastor, grief counselor, or Stephen leader. Community divides sorrows and multiplies celebrations.

And, take heart, for just as the Summer solstice has yet to snuff out the sun's light, no dark grief has yet to snuff out the Son's light. Occasionally, this reality is very hard for us to receive and embrace, but, nevertheless, it is true. Therein lies tremendous hope for us.

God bless---

"PREPARE TO SHARE"

Joy Lutheran Church Annual Stewardship Program
Sundays, September 29th thru October 20th

Joy will conduct its annual stewardship program for 2019 from September 29th thru October 20th. As the Apostle Paul appealed to Christians of his day for generous giving for the church in Jerusalem, so we appeal for generous giving for our church here. Please note these dates below, and do your best to be present each Sunday for this important campaign.

Sunday, Sep. 29th - Temple Talk: "PREPARE TO SHARE YOUR TIME & TALENT"

Sunday, Oct. 6th - Temple Talk: "PREPARE TO SHARE YOUR TREASURE"

Sunday, Oct. 13th - Sean and Stephen Bryant will be doing a shared presentation
"AFRICA MISSION AS STEWARDSHIP"

They will be offering African foods during fellowship, for people to try.

Sunday, October 20 - Stewardship Sunday: "PREPARE TO SHARE GOD'S BLESSINGS"

Stewardship Sunday - Commitment cards returned during worship

Hurricane Irma took down one Palm Bay AT&T cell tower in 2017. The tower has not been replaced, resulting in poor cell reception. Per some, the City of Palm Bay is compelling AT&T to replace the tower. This inconvenience creates a situation where Pr. Bryant's cell reception in JOY's building is poor. It also means that he steps out of the building to either the playground or the memorial garden to clearly take/return your call. Also, if you have an appointment with Pr. Bryant, and you do not see him in the building, please take a moment before leaving to check either the playground or memorial garden to see if he has stepped before your appointment to take/return another's call. Thanks for understanding that we do not always have control of AT&T cell matters. We work with such challenges as best we can.

God bless---

The Hymns We Sing

"It Is Well with My Soul"

Text: Horatio Spafford, 1828-1888
Music: Philip P. Bliss, 1838-1876

Horatio Spafford had experienced much tragedy and loss. His young son died, and the infamous Chicago Fire of 1871 destroyed much of his property. In the recession of 1873, he lost more property. While coping with his financial losses, he sent his wife and four daughters ahead of him on a trip to Europe. The ship, his family sailed on, sank in the Atlantic Ocean; only his wife survived.

As Spafford traveled to meet his grieving wife, his vessel passed the area where his daughters had died. He was inspired to write the words to the hymn we sing today:

*When peace like a river attendeth my way
When sorrows like sea billows roll
Whatever my lot, thou hast taught me to say
It is well, it is well, with my soul.*

There are six verses to this hymn; Spafford wrote the first four, another daughter wrote the last two. Spafford and his family moved to Jerusalem, where he died several years later.

Strategic Safety and Security Response - Educational Meeting.

Please mark your calendar for October 4th at 10am, at Joy Lutheran to hear from Officer J. Martinez, a representative of the Brevard County Sheriff's Department. This is an open session, feel free to invite neighbors, friends, and members from other houses of worship.

In the news we hear of tragic stories of violence taking place in the U.S., and sadly even worship facilities are not immune. That's why it's vital that churches be prepared for keeping their congregations safe in the event of an active incident.

Unfortunately, churches are attractive, soft' targets because of their open design, relative lack of physical security (especially during services) and the very nature of being open and welcoming to everyone.

"We are grateful to Peg Marion for pointing us in the direction of the Brevard County Sherriff's Office as a resource in this Crime Prevention Preparedness Course. We will explore preventative measures to protect ourselves when threatened by violence. Crime Prevention is important."

The men are always looking for an extra hand to help out. So, come out on Friday mornings and they will put you to work. What a great way to Stewardship your Time. The men are always looking for some more people, that don't mind getting their hands a little dirty.

HELP WANTED

We are in need of helpers to run the Power Points, on the sanctuary screen, for the Sunday service. Since our entire service is projected on our screen, this is obviously an important job.
