

Certificate of Computer Programming

The Certificate of Computer Programming is typically for vocational purposes and designed to provide students with the exact technical knowledge and skills necessary to create and manage computer language, along with an introduction or an overview of computer science. Coursework includes: discrete mathematics, data structures and algorithms relevant to the field, Introduction to computer programming , C++ computing, Concepts of programming languages, Discrete mathematics, Computer organization and assembly language, Java application development, Web page development and Data structures.

*32 Credit hours