

1967: Saint Petersburg, Russia unspecified date, unspecified hour if the early morning Source: Leningrad Commission for Abnormal Phenomena

The site of the supposed incident

Zinaida Volovoj (a young pregnant mother) was awakened by the sounds of engines revving early one morning. She looked out of the window of her small wooden house to see a bright yellow sphere hovering above the window of a house across from hers. Suddenly the yellow sphere rushed towards her. She ran in her bed and covered her head and then she heard the sphere fly over the house. A week later she was again awoken by the sounds of motors, she looked out to see the yellow sphere hovering above the same location. She stepped outside to hear a strong voice say, "Look, she has come out, she has escaped, we should leave today we have finished." Again the sphere rushed towards her and she ran into the house. The sphere then hovered above the roof and the witness ran outside again in time to see the sphere rise and vanish in plain sight. A couple of days later, Zinaida was awoken by loud booming voices coming from outside her home. She approached the window and again the yellow sphere hovered above the house. This time the sphere was hovering closer to the ground and behind a window or opening of the sphere she could see two persons. Zinaida steps outside her home. Minutes later, three human like figures, 2 men and a woman came down from the sphere. They were described as tall, very handsome, and wearing dark tight-fitting coveralls. The aliens noticed the witness and the woman began speaking to one of the men apparently reproving him for not “taken control of the witness and calming her so she could not see us”. The witness stood paralyzed staring at the aliens, unable to move. At this point one of the tall men, seemingly the older one, approaches her. He spoke to the witness telling her that they have searched for humans for a long time but men were not necessary for their survival, since humanity is far behind them in development. They simply study the humans and their “primitive” ways. He asked the witness about the source of two recent explosions in the area (mining operations) and at this point the woman intervened and told her companion that the witness was far too young and did not know. She then turned to the witness and asked her if she was informed. The witness remained too stunned to speak. The group then confabulated each other on what to do with the witness. Incredibly, one of the men suggested that they could burn down her wooden house (!). But the woman thankfully rejected this suggestion, recalling everybody that they had to go and visit other locations and time was short. At this point, the younger man told the others that he had “influenced” the witness brain so she would be sick. Then, the older man catapulted the witness back into her home and onto her bed by using a hand movement. Her head was covered with a pillow and a blanket and she had difficulty with breathing. She could hear the sphere directly above the house apparently spinning. She heard the woman say, “Let’s search for the cellar” and felt strong beams of energy directed towards her head and stomach, apparently coming from the hovering sphere. By now, the aliens realized that the witness was pregnant and one of the men said, “let us make her already give birth.” She felt increasing pressure on her stomach. But at this point the woman spoke: “Leave her alone; she suffered enough, we have to leave.” The witness indeed gave birth prematurely soon after the incident and the baby died as a result of a brain hemorrhage. Before leaving the strangers talked each other again, saying that it looked like the witness was feigning her death, which they found amusing. At this point, all three aliens vanished and the sphere also disappeared. Soon after this incident the woman and her husband moved from the location to the Poltava region. She rarely spoke of the matter since very few people believed her.

Reliability evaluation:

- very low -

one single witness only; no supporting declaration or data from other residents; no credibility; no evidences of investigation; possible dream or nightmare;
invention or false

