The surname of Weeks, a corruption of the name Atwick/Atweeke alias Wickes or Weckes, seems to surface in the parish of Staines, County of Middlesex, which is located about fifteen miles west of London.

In 1592 we find the will of a Richard Atweeke als Weecke of "Stanes" referred to as "yeoman", which directs that his body is to be buried in the churchyard of Staines. To a son, Richard, he leaves a tenement in Thorpe and land in the parish of Thorpe, with the remainder to his son, William. To William, he leaves a tenement in Strowde in the parish of Egham, Surrey; to son John the elder, a close of meadow in Egham; to son John the younger, certain tenements and property in Staines. Sons Poole, Josias and Robert are also mentioned, and Robert is noted as the eldest son. Also mentioned are daughters Alice Weeckes, Joan Weeckes, Mrs. Robert Field and Rose Weeckes; brothers George, William and Thomas, and a sister, Susan. His wife's given name is Florence.
