Researchers note:

The question arises, why did Joseph Brabham, his wife, and all of his children, decide to move from Hampton, SC, to Central Florida? I am estimating the move to have happened shortly after 1920 as the 1920 Census shows them all still living together in SC and the 1930 Census shows Joseph B, wife; Carrie, children; Otto, and Harold in the same household but now living in Seminole County, FL. William Hiers, their son and my grandfather, married in 1921 and I have been told that this took place in SC and that they immediately moved down to Central FL. How soon the rest of the family moved is unknown but it had to have taken place before 1930.

I have no information through word of mouth of surviving grand-children of Joseph and Carrie as to why they moved but Joseph, Carrie, and one son, George, ended up living on or near an area called Astor Farms. I do not know for sure where they first lived once moving to Central Florida but from what I have learned farm land called Astor Farms was offered for sale in 10 acre lots by the Produce Land Corporation of Jersey City, New Jersey in the 1930's. I remember as a child visiting our Uncle George, son of Joseph and Carrie, on his large farm. I believe Joseph, being over 60, may have not purchased land to farm but it is certain that his son, George did. The house they lived in is very close to where George's farm was and is still standing. The farm land, however, has been turned into a subdivision called Astor Farms.

In the book, The History of Monroe, by Charlie Carlson & Christine Kinlaw-Best, the following is found on page 38. "Most old timers remember George Hiers as the main resident farmer of Astor Farms." I am not sure if he was considered the main farmer by how much land he owned and farmed, or by how long he continued to farm, or both. George died in 1985.
