- ID: I0041
- Name: Thomas DELOACH , Sr.
- Sex: M
- Birth: ABT. 1726 in Brunswick County, VA ¹
- Death: ABT. 1805 in Edgefield County, SC
- Event: Occupatio Baptist Minister
- Note:

Thomas Sr. was born in that part of old Brunswick County, VA which in 1781 became a part of the present Greenville County, VA. Soon thereafter he was taken by his parents to old Edgecombe County, NC and in 174405 he went with them to the present Chesterfield County, SC. At about 1749 he married Patience Allison, a supposed relative of Andrew Allison who was a justice of the peace for old Craven County, SC. In 1763 Thomas, then living in the present Richland County, "made affidavit before Andrew Allison as a witness to the execution of a paper by Abraham Odam and Cibbie his wife", who also were residents of that county. During the period of 1756-65, the name of Thomas DeLoache (also Delotch) appears as an adjacent landowner on certified plats for other persons (Plat Books in the State Archives at Columbia, SC).

It is noted from the above cited references that the surname of Thomas is spelled DeLoach or DeLoache, which forms are in current use by his descendants who bear that surname.

At about 1772-3 Thomas moved from the present Richland County to that part of old Colleton County, SC, which in 1765 became a part of old Ninety Six District, in 1785 became a part of Old Edgefield District/County, and in 1895 became Saluda County. In response to his petition to the Council of Colonial South Carolina for a grant of land in his new location, on April 6, 1773 a precept (writ, or judicial command in writing) was issued for the survey of 400 acres of land for him. The survey was certified for him on May 4, 1773 and the grant to him was signed on August 31, 1774. The grant, given to Thomas DeLoache by George the Third (King of Great Britain), was signed by William Bull the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of South Carolina. The 400 acres were described as follows:

"On Red Bank Creek and on Pen Creek, a branch of Little Saludy River in Ninety Six District, bounding north and northeastward on Samuel Everidge's/Etheridge's, Jacob Smith's, and Joseph Hogan's land; south and westward on Mr. Russell's land and land the owner's name not known and part vacant land; and partly encloses a tract of Sanders Walker and a tract of James Davis (Disones)."

A record of this grant is contained in the Council Journals of Colonial South Carolina, in a book of Royal Grants (Vol. 32, 1774, Class 1, page 558), and in a book of Memorials (Vol. 13, page 323) in the State Archives at Columbia, SC. It also is mentioned on page 171 of Leah Townsend's "South Carolina Baptists, 1670-1805."

Records in the courthouse at Edgefield, SC, show that Thomas DeLoache, Sr. disposed of the aforesaid 400 acres of land as follows:

(a) On March 7, 1777 he sold 200 acres to Jesse Jernigan. The witness to the deed were Thomas DeLoache, Jr., John Cotton, and Charity Cotton. On September 2, 1785 the deed was proved by Thomas DeLoache, Jr., and recorded on October 10, 1796 (Deed Book 0/13, 1796/97, pages 253-257). On April 8, 1795 the heirs of Jesse Jernigan sold 75 acres of this land to William Burdett. The witnesses to the deed were Henry King, Averilla King and Joel Brown (Deed Book 13, page 237). On September 4, 1807 William Burdett sold the 75 acres to William H. Lewis, who on December 19, 1813 sold the tract (with other lands) to James Bonham (Deed Book J/32, page 479).

(b) On January 31, 1789 Thomas DeLoache, Sr. and his son Michael DeLoache together signed a deed whereby they sold 50 acres to Moses Brown. The witnesses to the deed were Jacob Brown, James Allen, and Christopher Brooks (Deed Book 12, 1795-96, page 23). It appears that Thomas had previously given the land to Michael, but had not yet given him a covering deed; therefore the son was not free to dispose of the land in his own right. The 50 acres were separated by a branch, from a tract owned by Michael's brother Samuel DeLoache.

(c) On May 12, 1789 he sold 65 acres to Josiah Thomas. The witnesses to the deed were Henry King, William Burdett, and Samuel DeLoache. The deed was signed by him and his wife Patience DeLoache (Deed Book 10, _____-1794, pages 95-97). This land apparently was a part of the 200 acres which were sold to Jesse Jernigan, but had been recovered by Thomas DeLoache prior to its sale to Josiah Thomas.

(d) The 150 acres remaining after the sales to Jesse Jernigan and Moses Brown apparently were situated a short distance above the junction of Red Bank Creek and Penn Creek. This evidently was the home place on which Thomas and Patience were living at the time of the 1790 and 1800 census for Edgefield County, SC. It is assumed that they died there and were buried in a graveyard on an adjoining plantation belonging to their son Samuel DeLoache.

Thomas and Patience were living alone, and near to their sons Michael and Samuel DeLoache, at the time of the 1790 census for Edgefield County, SC. At the time of the 1800 census three sons of Michael were living with them.
