How effective are our global institutions at preventing and responding to genocide?

In his presentation about the conflict in Darfur, Sudan, Dr. Savelsberg will discuss the International Criminal Court intervention, its consequences, and competing responses. Comparative notes will be included and may be a focus of the subsequent discussion.

Joachim Savelsberg is a Professor of Sociology and Law and the Arsham and Charlotte Ohanessian Chair at the University of Minnesota. Educated in his native Germany, he specializes in the sociology of law and criminology.
