Miranda, the owner of the magic flying carpet, sets off again in pursuit of evil Ellery and his schemes. In addition to the everlasting hunt for Miranda's flying carpet, Ellery plans on deceiving trick-or-treaters into believing the existence of ghoulish spirits in a haunted house and ruining Christmas and Chanukah. Miranda, with the help of many dear and faithful friends, manages to put an end to Ellery's wicked plots.

If I Had a Magic Carpet is an easy, early chapter book for young elementary school readers. In a fun read, young readers will refresh on the lessons their parents taught them. These same lessons are the ones that Miranda teaches and learns, herself. Both Miranda and Ellery are archetypes that most kids will be able to classify and relate to, defining their rights from wrongs. There was nothing I disliked about this book. Every single aspect this book has is very age appropriate. I definitely would borrow this book at the library.
