The Necromancer was addictive as heck. This book was so good I read it at school, in the car, and in long past my bedtime. It is the fourth book of the series, The Secrets of The Immortal Nicholas Flamel, and I think it is the best so far. The last book ended with the twins of the legends coming back to San Francisco after the vampire Scathatch the Shadow disappeared. Nicholas and Pernelle don't have the elixir of life anymore, so they are aging and are about to die. They are all in peril and the world is about to end. In this book the twins and the Flamels succeed to hinder the English Magician, Dr. John Dee, but they eventually finish the book in even worse condition than before.

I would recommend this book for anybody middle school or high school age and anyone who has read the first 3 books. This book is full of non-stop action and will keep anyone way past their bed time. It had great details and a lot of mythology from all around the world. It is clear to me that everybody should try to read this series at least once in their lifetime.
