RAJ READING: In the presence of truth there are NO unbelievers and NO sacrifices. In the security of reality, fear is totally meaningless. To deny what IS can only SEEM to be fearful. Fear cannot be real without a cause, and God is the ONLY Cause. God is Love, and you DO want Him. This IS your will. Ask for this and you WILL be answered because you will be asking only for what BELONGS to you.

RAJ: You see, this little puny self that needs to be fixed up through many lifetimes of refining, it sees its development as good added unto it by virtue of its having done something to be worthy of the addition.

But Love reveals to you What Already Is Yours, because it belongs to you. It has always belonged to you because God withheld nothing of What He Was, and God withholds nothing of What He Is from His Self-Expression—the Expression of Himself that is what is called you.

RAJ READING: Ask for this and you WILL be answered because you will be asking only for what...

RAJ: And I'm going to add the word "already."

RAJ READING: ...BELONGS to you.

RAJ: Is already set in place, like set in concrete, in you from the moment of your conception in the Mind of God.

RAJ READING: When you ask the Holy Spirit for what would hurt you, He cannot answer because NOTHING can hurt you, AND SO YOU ARE ASKING FOR NOTHING.

RAJ: Sometimes when you ask a question of Guidance, you will get no answer. And you will think, "Oh, I'm having trouble listening," when truly you're getting no answer because you asked no question. All you did was say, "Help me find my lap." You see? You were saying nothing.

RAJ READING: ANY desire which stems from the ego IS a desire for nothing, and to ask for it is NOT A REQUEST.

RAJ: Think about it. "Will you help me find my lap?" Is that a question? Can that be called a question? Does it make sense? Or, "I am in great need of a sample of dry water. Will you help me get a sample?" That's not a question, because all questions have answers. All questions lead to something that is possible. All real questions, that is.

Again.

RAJ READING: ANY desire which stems from the ego IS a desire for nothing, and to ask for it is NOT A REQUEST. It is merely a denial in the FORM of a request.

RAJ: "God, help me to override this material body that is not my ally, and the behavior of which says that I am going to die." Is that a real question? No. Because it postulates the existence of something that doesn't exist—a body that can be an opponent of yours, rather than being the Visibility and Tangibility of your Divine Individuality. So the question can't be responded to by God.

But if you say, "God, help me have the Vision, with a capital "V", of my body as the Visibility and Tangibility of my Divine Individuality, please. Help me to see What It Really Divinely Is, so that I may abandon my unreasonable fear of it, and so that I might embrace it with Love, with Singularity of Mind, rather than the conflict of wanting my body, but not wanting it because it might kill me." You see? That's a real question because there is a real answer. There is a Truth there to be revealed that actually does constitute a correction of a misperception; a correction of a misunderstanding that's keeping you in bondage to fear.

Again.

RAJ READING: ANY desire which stems from the ego IS a desire for nothing, and to ask for it is NOT A REQUEST. It is merely a denial in the FORM of a request. The Holy Spirit is not concerned with form at all, being aware only of MEANING.

RAJ: Being aware only of Meaning, the Holy Spirit experiences nothing when the words, "Help me find my lap. I've lost it," are said. Because there was no meaning there. It didn't mean anything. It doesn't have any meaning.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot ask the Holy Spirit for ANYTHING because there is COMPLETE COMMUNICATION FAILURE between them.

RAJ: This is important.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot ask the Holy Spirit for ANYTHING because there is COMPLETE COMMUNICATION FAILURE between them.

RAJ: This means that when you ask the Holy Spirit for something, and the Holy Spirit answers, you are asking it from a new place. It wasn't an ego. It wasn't you as an ego that asked and got an answer. The very fact that you get a response from the Holy Spirit means that you have been being in some way genuinely What You Are. You have asked the question from the Christ In You. And so it demonstrates to you in the here and now what I've been saying all along; that you are The Christ believing otherwise, and believing your belief.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot ask the Holy Spirit for ANYTHING because there is COMPLETE COMMUNICATION FAILURE between them. Yet YOU can ask EVERYTHING of the Holy Spirit because YOUR requests are real, being of your will.

RAJ: When you're not asking for something impossible, your ego isn't involved. You see that? When you are asking for something impossible, your ego is involved, and the very question is postulated in a way that will keep you from getting an answer, and continue to block you from the Experience of What You Divinely Are, as well as blocking you from the potential for correction of the misperception or belief that keeps you in bondage and suffering.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Would the Holy Spirit deny the Will of God? And could He fail to recognize It in His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...Sons?

RAJ: No.

Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: The energy which you withdraw from creation you expend on fear.

RAJ: How do you withdraw your energy from creation? By withdrawing it from your partnership with God. By saying, "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way." It's as if you're looking sitting just behind God's eyes, if I may, looking through God's Eyes, being One with the Entire Movement of Mind called Creation, and then you say, "Uh, excuse me, God. Just a minute. Um, I have something I need to go do." And what you're going to go do is look at creation from a different vantage point where you can see it in a way unique to you.

And so, the energy, or we could say, attention, which you withdraw from creation, you expend on fear. It's inevitable. The moment you lose the Father's Perspective, you lose your Experience of your Identity. You become an orphan—alone, Source-less. And it is an uncomfortable experience. Your Divinity sets off the alarms, you might say, that say, "You're out of your Mind," so that you might notice it, and get back. And so you are consumed with fear. And then if you become, as I've said before, devoted to this independent vantage point, your life purpose will become the overcoming of the fear.

RAJ READING: The energy which you withdraw from creation you expend on fear. This is not because your energy is limited, but because YOU HAVE LIMITED IT. You do not recognize the enormous waste of energy which you expend in denying truth.

RAJ: Yes. You do deny Truth. The last thing you really want is for the bright Light of Truth to shine on you, because you think it's going to uncover the errors in you. You think that that's the function of Truth—to uncover error. Why? So it can be punished. So correction can be made. The Light of Truth shining on you corrects the errors that you thought were there by uncovering the Truth, all that's True About You, right there, right now—which is the only thing there is about you there where you are, because God didn't place anything else there but That Which Is Real, That Which Is True, That Which Is Lovable.

RAJ READING: What would you say of someone who persisted in attempting the impossible, believing that to ACHIEVE it is SUCCESS? The belief that you MUST have the impossible in order to be happy is totally at variance with the principle of creation.

RAJ: In other words, it's once again nonsense. "I lost my lap." Nonsense.

RAJ READING: God COULD not will that happiness DEPENDED on what you could never HAVE.

RAJ: You know, there's just too much damned Integrity to Creation, so much that you haven't accomplished violating it. And you haven't accomplished being in actual denial of it. You haven't succeeded at denying it. Therefore, there is nothing for you to be punished for. Do you know what this means? It means that not only can you never earn your way back into God's Love, or into the Kingdom of Heaven, there is no one... just a moment... there is no one that needs to. It is by Grace that you come Home.

And the only thing that keeps you from spontaneously sinking into the experience of it, is the conscientious effort you bring to bear to make yourself worthy, to create a history for yourself that proves your worthiness. When all God says is, "Abandon your attempt to be worthy. Abandon your attempt to become equal to the Sons and Daughters of God. All of the effort you're putting forth keeps you so preoccupied that you miss the Experience of your Birthright that you are already worthy without works. You are worthy because worth was placed in you by Me. And it's all still there."

"But I don't deserve it. Look at me. Look at the mess I am. Look at how unwell I'm doing things. Look at how unstable I am. Look... look at how inconsistently I reach out for God, even though I want to wake up."

"Oh. Did you say you want Me to help you find your lap? You really think you just said something?" I say that to you. God says that to you. The Holy Spirit says that to you. You are talking nonsense. The sounds that came out of your mouth, although they seem intelligent and coherent to you, expressed absolutely nothing, because it talked about a you that doesn't exist.

And it ignored the you that God Is Being right there where you are right now, which you would experience if you stopped trying to lift yourself up by your own bootstraps and attempted to demonstrate and prove your worth by obediences practiced well. No. If you want to talk to me about obediences practiced well, or what new obediences you could engage in, I cannot respond, because you have said nothing. It is meaningless. You are already Home. You are already the Sons and Daughters of God. And you are so busy trying to become the Sons and Daughters of God that you're missing the obvious. And you know what? As long as the push is on for demonstrating your worth, the Experience of Grace will elude you. Grace is the only Way Home.

I love you. I look forward to being with you all next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We spoke at length last week about some wonderful things which I would encourage all of you to review, even as we move forward because they lay a groundwork that is essential as you move forward.

The one thing that you all suffer from is the idea... the idea, the belief, that you have a will different from the Father's. In other words, that you have one that you got from somewhere and it's all your own. And in entertaining that belief and adopting it as true, and behaving on its behalf, rather than on behalf of your Real Source, you automatically and unavoidably find yourself in a state of fear, because that which grounds you, that which is the immovability of you, has been set aside by you in favor of your imagination. And without that groundedness, you have no choice but to feel vulnerable.

But it's not your Birthright. Feeling vulnerable is not your Birthright. It is not natural to you. And ultimately, it's not a real experience. It's a perceived experience, but it's not real because the Christ That You Are, the Visibility and Tangibility of God That You Are is unalterable, hasn't changed, hasn't gone anywhere.

the intellectual mental processes that set into motion for you this invalid and unreal experience of vulnerability.

This you that you ask God to fix up is pure fantasy. It can't be fixed because it doesn't exist. And waking up constitutes your abandoning the belief that you as something on your own have a will different from God's.

We also talked about one other thing that I want to re-express, and that is that when you are convinced that you are an independent entity in your own right, and that it is your purpose to be this independent entity successfully and well, your prayers to God end up being prayers to help you be independently successful, responsible. But when you do, you are praying for something you do not want. If you could get God to say "Yes" to that prayer, you would be getting God to put His stamp of approval, His agreement, His determination on the idea that you are different from Him, that you are independent. And at the bottom line, that means that you would get God's determination about you that you are an orphan, and therefore permanently lost, because God's determination is an eternal determination. Thus, that kind of prayer will never get an answer.

Some of you are beginning to get a feeble glimmer of the fact that no matter how hard you try, you just aren't making it as an independent entity. And I don't mean that you are getting the idea as a result of quote "this lifetime" unquote, but a longer, a much longer experience of failure at not being able to determine your world and your life and yourself, all by yourself, and that you have not been able to come anywhere close to succeeding at creating a presence out of whole cloth, out of nothing more than your pure imagination. You are beginning to have the experience of exhaustion. You are close to being willing to give up the ethic, like the Prodigal Son [deep sigh], and turn wearily for Home—wearily because you're exhausted from the effort to accomplish something that's impossible. It's finally beginning to sink in to you that maybe it is impossible, and that it's no longer a task worthy of your attention.

Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: The fact that God is love does not require belief, but it DOES require acceptance.

RAJ: Believing something doesn't make it True or Real. The fact that it's Real is what makes it Real, whether you believe it or not. But for you to experience it, you have to be willing to accept the Truth of it. You must let the Truth penetrate your awareness by bringing no resistance to it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is indeed possible for you to DENY facts, although it is impossible for you to CHANGE them.

RAJ: Now see, you can deny that you're the Christ. You can just say, "I'm just a human being. And I'm struggling through my life. And my life is particularly difficult because my parents weren't highly educated. Or they thought they were, but they had peculiar ideas, and therefore I ended up being taught things that were not useful to me. Or they behaved toward me in a way that wasn't supportive of my developing a healthy sense of my self-worth. And as a result, I'm warped. I'm a twisted person, suffering through my adulthood because of their inarticulate way of raising me, their ignorant way of raising me." You see? "And that's me. Twisted, little, poor me struggling. But you know what? They couldn't kill my determination! [laughing] No man, they couldn't kill my determination. They couldn't get me down. And so, you know what? I'm overcoming my shortcomings with a vengeance."

And in one way or another, each of you is saying, "That's me! You know, sure glad I have the Course though, 'cause poor, twisted me really needs it." Bullshit! There is no poor, twisted you, except in your imagination. But you exist, and you need the Course. Why? Because you're twisted? No! Because you're not twisted. Because you have not stopped, no matter what you have come to believe, being exactly What God Is Presence-ing Himself As right there where you are.

The Course is like the Truth shining on you and uncovering what is Real about you, so that what is unreal about you which you have adopted and believed, can be seen for the fallacy it is, for the nothingness that it is, so that you stop acting as though it were true. And especially, so that you stop acting as though it were true because you have begun to realize that you don't have to do anything to earn What Is True about you. You don't have to do anything to deserve What Is True about you.

But there is one thing you do have to do. You have to stop behaving as though it's not true about you. You have to stop acting out the old habit patterns which are the way you get vengeance on your past. And I promise you that as long as you're trying to get vengeance on your past, or those whom you attribute to your problems to out of your past, you are confirming for yourself that you are a twisted victim now.

You, on your own, are what you're asking God to do when you say to Him, "Help me be independent without all of this suffering." You are determining for yourself that you are indeed independent, that you do indeed have a will of your own, that you are exactly what you believe you are, and everyone and everything else is what you believe it is. And you're confirming it, and locking yourself in to the very suffering that you do not want.

Of course, in order to have what you want, which is the Experience of Peace, the Experience of being the Presence of Love, the experience of invulnerability, the way in which you're going to get what you want, what you really want, is that you're going to have to let go of all of the determinations you have adopted as being true about you which are not true at all, because they were never set in place in you by That Which Is Presence-ing Himself right there where you are right this moment. Because God is not putting in you what He is not.

Simply realize that you love what you've determined that you are. You have an attachment to it. But it's an attachment to something that isn't real. It's an attachment to something that God didn't put there. And the attachment itself to something that isn't there, is something that God didn't place in you. Therefore, your addiction has no actual substance to it. And that's why you can be released from it instantaneously without withdrawals.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you hold your hands over your eyes, you will NOT see because you are interfering with the laws of seeing. If you deny love, you will NOT know it because your cooperation is THE LAW OF ITS BEING.

RAJ: There is no Love without you being the Presence of Love. It requires your cooperation. It requires your involvement. It requires you to let It in to you so that It can spill over through you. If you don't let It in, you're blocking the Function of your Being, or at least attempting to and suffering in the attempt, because when you attempt to do the impossible, it never feels good.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You cannot change laws you did not make,...

[pause]

RAJ READING: You cannot change laws you did not make, and the laws of happiness were created FOR you, not BY you.

RAJ: So much for, "Well, everyone creates his own reality. Everyone creates her own reality." [brief laugh] No way! Reality was set into motion not by you. And you have only one choice, and that is to cooperate with it. The human condition is the apparent result of not cooperating with the Way Things Work.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Attempts of any kind to deny what IS are fearful, and if they are strong,...

RAJ: Your attempts of any kind to deny What Is.

RAJ READING: ...if they are strong, they WILL induce panic.

RAJ: [amused] It's like the degree to which of the... the degree of force that you bring to the movement of your fist into an immovable object will be exactly correlative to the amount of pain you will experience.

To whatever degree you resist God, to whatever degree you deny your Identity, to that degree you will be having an uncomfortable experience; a suffering experience. Not because the wall is punishing you. Not because the Laws of God are punishing you. But because you are attempting to do something impossible. And whatever amount of force you bring to bear, whatever degree of determination you bring to bear upon the denial of What Is, you will be that uncomfortable. Get this point, because then you'll stop blaming God. And because you know what's causing the discomfort, you will know what to attend to.

You will know, "Oh, I'm going against the Way Things Work. I'm trying to be what I cannot be. I had better find something else to do." Ah! Now you're in the arena where a miracle can occur; a sudden shift of perception. And that's the key.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Willing AGAINST reality, though impossible, can be MADE into a very persistent goal EVEN THOUGH YOU DO NOT WANT IT.

RAJ: Does everybody now understand what that means when it says, "even though you do not want it"? Again, it means that you do not want, ultimately you do not want confirmation of your orphan-hood. You do not want confirmation from the only thing that can give a true confirmation which is God, you do not want confirmation that you are not connected with Him, not connected with your Source. You do not want that.

You think you want what you'll get in place of it. But what you'll get in place of it, is something you have imagined; not something that is actually available to you to have. And until you know that, you won't give up. Until someone tells you that, you won't have justification for giving up the ethic, the quest, for successful righteous independence.

Again.

RAJ READING: Willing AGAINST reality, though impossible, can be MADE into a very persistent goal EVEN THOUGH YOU DO NOT WANT IT. But consider the result of this strange decision. You are DEVOTING your mind to what you do not want. How real can this devotion BE? If you do not want it, it was never created. If it was never created, it is nothing. Can you REALLY devote yourself to nothing?

RAJ: Now that's the big question.

RAJ READING: Can you REALLY devote yourself to nothing?

RAJ: Did God give you the capacity to devote yourself to nothing? No. Is your devotion to nothing valid? No. Can you then ever have in actuality devoted yourself to nothing? No. Which means that all of this time that you have thought you were devoted to something, which was really nothing, hasn't been happening in actuality.

Now this is not an accurate, true illustration, but it gives you the idea. You're asleep on a grassy knoll in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven, having a dream of devotion to something that's impossible. What's really happening? The Son of God is basking in the sun on a grassy knoll in the Kingdom of Heaven. The Christ. And while falling asleep and having a dream, a fantasy passed by. But the fantasy didn't happen. The Christ resting in the sun, was what was happening the whole time. You see?

So, all of this time that you think you have spent refining your soul, all this time that you have spent trying to be a successful independent entity, has also been part of the fantasy. The span of time, all of these years and centuries of committed effort that you have put into it, is a fantasy, as well. There is no time that has occurred.

You've all had the experience of having a [snap of the fingers] full-blown idea instantaneously, which it's taken you a half-an-hour to share with someone else when you put it into words. Well, in the same way, [snap of the fingers] your dream of years and years of committed effort was a moment, [snap of the fingers] a flash.

Well, what's the cost to you to have to give up those years of determined effort to be a responsible, respectable entity that others ought to respect because of your commitment? Commitment of a fraction of a second? What are you giving up? Nothing!

But you see, you believe it's something. You've got the story worked out in your mind. You lived out the story in your mind. Not in actuality, but in your mind. And you believe the whole thing. And then, you believe that to give up that whole thing is a great sacrifice, instead of an [snap of the fingers] instantaneous flash of a thought, or a fantasy, that didn't actually happen, because what actually happened was that you didn't for a moment stop being the Christ, the fully-Christed Son of God, resting on a grassy knoll in the sun in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven. You see?

Now everything that I have said here could be called an allegory. I do not want you to take the specifics of the grassy knoll and the sunshine and the Christ lying on the grassy knoll, but you've got the picture. You've got the reason that I used that illustration.

RAJ READING: Can you REALLY devote yourself to nothing?

RAJ: Only in your dreams. [laughing] Only in your dreams. Therefore, you never have.

Therefore, you have not set yourself up for a penalty. When you wake up from the dream, you will not have a penalty to pay for having had the dream. You were paying the penalty while you were having the dreaming, and it was part and parcel of the dream. You know, the pain is the equivalent of the force you bring to bear upon doing the impossible. That's the penalty. But the pain was always the equivalent of the amount of personal force, willfulness, that you were bringing into play attempting to do what can't be done.

So, what's this with being bad little girls, and bad little boys, who didn't listen to their father, or their mother, and who deserves every bit of suffering they get? You see? That's part of the dream, too. "Well, I better not wake up, because if I wake up, then I'll really have to pay." No. When you wake up, you know the Truth. And you know the dream wasn't the truth. And the dream, and the content of it, never happened, except as a figment of the imagination.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God, in His devotion to you, created you devoted to EVERYTHING, and GAVE you what you are devoted to.

RAJ: Like I said last week, how could you have a devotion to something that God doesn't have a devotion to? How could you think that you have a function different from God's? And God's Function is to see everything that He has made and recognize Himself in it. That's your Function—to look at everything that God has made and recognize God in it. And in being willing to recognize God in it, instead of yourself, you will find yourself in it, because you're not separate.

The Mind of God is a Singularity. And there is no other mind for you to experience but that Mind. If you are Conscious, you are Mind. And there is only one Mind. That's what gets uncovered when the Truth shines on you. When the Light of Truth illuminates you, it illuminates God to you as You. And Seeing as God Sees, and Being as God Be's, becomes your unavoidable Conscious Function.

RAJ READING: God, in His devotion to you, created you devoted to EVERYTHING, and GAVE you what you are devoted to.

RAJ: Gave you everything.

RAJ READING: Otherwise, you would not have been created perfect. Reality IS everything, and therefore you have everything BECAUSE you are real.

RAJ: Now, that implies, doesn't it, that everything That Is Real includes everything That Is Real. Did you realize you are part of the Infinitude of the top of that petal, the third from left on that poinsettia, and every other petal and leaf, and the pottery pot? You're some part of the Infinitude of that Idea. You are essential to that poinsettia, just as it is essential to you.

RAJ READING: Reality IS everything, and therefore you have everything BECAUSE you are real.

RAJ: And the poinsettia petal has everything because It Is Real.

RAJ READING: You cannot make the unreal because the ABSENCE of reality is fearful, and fear cannot BE created. As long as you believe that fear is possible, YOU WILL NOT CREATE.

RAJ: How would you create? By letting yourself be the Presence of the Movement of That Which Is Creation. Which means you would have to yield your independent autonomous authority to the Movement of Creation that is already in Movement.

RAJ READING: As long as you believe that fear is possible, YOU WILL NOT CREATE.

RAJ: Well, another reason is that as long as you believe that fear is possible, you're still holding yourself separate from your Source and you don't know Who You Are. You don't know What You Are. And that, as I said, is always an uncomfortable situation. Why is it uncomfortable? Because your irrevocable Sanity is telling you, "You're out of your Mind. You're out of your Mind. Get back in your Mind. Get back in your Mind. Become Singular again. Stop trying to be what you aren't. Be What You Are. Come on back Home."

Again.

RAJ READING: As long as you believe that fear is possible, YOU WILL NOT CREATE.

RAJ: Creation requires defenselessness from you because you can't let anything in, or through, if you are defended.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Opposing orders of reality MAKE REALITY MEANINGLESS, and reality IS meaning.

RAJ: No. Can it actually make Reality meaningless? No. But it will make it meaningless to you, because you'll withdraw yourself from recognizing What It Really Is. And why will you withdraw yourself from recognizing What It Really Is? Because you've chosen to try to be something on your own, separate from your Source, and that still has value for you, even though it's an unreal experience that is happening only in the imagination, and [snap of the fingers] only in a fraction of a second. It's been a long second, right? A long fraction of a second. But if you understand, get the idea, that it is only a fraction of a second, and you'll realize how little there is to be undone. You see? It's not a big job that has to be done here. Just an unjustifiable abandonment of a commitment. You see? That's all.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Remember, then, that God's Will is ALREADY possible, and nothing else will EVER be.

RAJ: God's Will is not only already possible, it's the only thing in place. It's the only thing in play. It's all you get. The only reason that we would say that it's already possible is to counteract your belief that it's not, to implant in your mind that, in spite of what you believe, it's already possible. God's Will is already possible. And I carry it further and say it's already possible because it's the only thing in place. It's the only thing in play.

RAJ READING: This is the simple acceptance of reality because only this IS real. You cannot DISTORT reality and KNOW WHAT IT IS.

RAJ: And there you have the description of how the human condition came into play, or seemed to.

RAJ READING: You cannot DISTORT reality and KNOW WHAT IT IS.

RAJ: And the human condition, the material world and universe, a mortal body, sin, sickness, and death, are nothing more than a distortion of Reality. It's not a new world. It's not a new universe. It's not a different dimension. It's just a distortion of What Already Is, and What Only Can Be.

Willfulness, as I have described before, is like if you have a frame that you have nailed a piece of latex to, willfulness is pushing your fist through the latex, or your face through the latex, distorting the flatness of the latex so that it seems to have the configuration of whatever you've pushed through it, or against it. It can't be torn. It can't be broken. So the further you try to push yourself through the latex, the more resistance it's going to give, the more energy it's going to take. And you're going to say, "Whew! This is hard work. I am getting a lot of resistance from this. It's not yielding to me very well. It must be against me." [laughing] That's sheer projection. "I must be against it. I must really be pushing hard against it. I must be trying to do something that ultimately can't be done which is to push my way all the way through it."

RAJ READING: You cannot DISTORT reality and KNOW WHAT IT IS. And if you DO distort reality, you will experience anxiety, depression and ultimately panic because you are trying to MAKE yourself unreal.

RAJ: You're trying to make yourself stop being the Christ, and be a puppet without strings—a Pinocchio. You see? I promise you that's not what you want.

RAJ READING: When you feel these things...

RAJ: Anxiety, depression, and ultimately panic.

RAJ READING: ...do not try to look BEYOND yourself for truth, for truth can only be WITHIN you. Say, therefore:

Christ is in me and where He is God MUST be,
for Christ is PART of Him.

RAJ: God.

That's a prayer. It's an acknowledgement of the Truth that I've been sharing with you, which, at the moment, seems more like theory than Truth, or a possibility than Truth. But it is the Truth. And that's where you must start, if you're going to see healing. You must start with the Truth about you. You must invite that Truth in, because, even if it's just a little Ray of the Light of Truth shining upon you, it has a power of illumination that goes way beyond the little bit that you let in. But start there.

RAJ READING: Christ is in me and where He is God MUST be, for Christ is PART of Him.

RAJ: What is this? This is the way you begin to acknowledge Truth about yourself that goes beyond the definition you've been employing for so long.

You don't ask Truth to shine on the wretched, confused, awful mess that you've come to believe that you are. You ask the Truth to shine on the Truth In You. You're not here to fix up the mess, because the mess is part of this [finger snap] flash of an instantaneous fantasy. You see?

And you want the Light of Truth to shine on the Christ on the grassy knoll in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven with such warmth, we'll say, that it causes you to stir from your dream and notice your Self, the One You Are, at Home where you belong, consciously embracing It and your Self, for What It And You Are. That's what you want. We're not here to fix anything up.

This acknowledgement:

RAJ READING: Christ is in me and where He is...

RAJ: I'll just throw this in for extras.

I am in you. I am with you.

This doesn't mean, [in a funny lofty voice] "The Christ is in me, whatever the Christ might be. I know it's something holy. And it's in me. It's with me." No.

The Christ is Me. The Christ is a Conscious Son of God. The Christ is the Conscious Daughter of God. And the Christ is with you, each one of you, right now. This statement is a statement of fact. Christ is in YOU and where He is God must be, for Christ is part of Him.

This is the bridge away from the fixer-upper mentality. You get it? You are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point, and must understand yourself therefrom.

You see? That's what we're talking about. It's the acceptance of that fact that serves as a bridge out of something that is not, and never has been anything more than an [snap of the fingers] instantaneous fantasy, even though it seems to have enveloped great passage of time, great continuity of effort and discipline on your part that you thought would make you worthy of respect and dignity and truly autonomous entity-hood, if I may put it that way.

The next section is called:

RAJ READING: The Answer to Prayer

Everyone who has ever tried to use prayer to request something has experienced what appears to be failure. This is not only true in connection with specific things which might be harmful, but also in connection with requests which are strictly in line with this course. The latter, in particular, might be incorrectly interpreted as “proof” that the course does not mean what it says. You must remember, however, that the course does state, and repeatedly, that its purpose is the ESCAPE from fear.

Let us suppose, then, that what you request of the Holy Spirit IS what you really want, but that you are still AFRAID of it.

[Editor’s Note: Raj said “but you are” because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as “but that you are” as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: As I’ve said before, Paul really does want to wake up, but he is afraid of yielding up his special uniqueness—not meaning what he’s doing right now—but just special uniqueness that makes him different from everyone else, and therefore, you know, part of the Infinite Expression of God that has to be unique. And therefore, if he gives up that which he perceives to cause him to be unique, it will cause him to sort of blend into the Whole and lose identity. And so, he’s afraid to let himself into the unknown.

RAJ READING: Let us suppose, then, that what you request of the Holy Spirit IS what you really want, but that you are still AFRAID of it. Should this be the case, your ATTAINMENT of it would no longer BE what you want, even if IT is.

[pause]

RAJ READING: Should this be the case,...

RAJ: That you’re afraid of it.

RAJ READING: ...your ATTAINMENT of it would no longer BE what you want,...

RAJ: Because you don't want what you're afraid of, even if what you want is what you want. Even if waking up is what you want, you won't get it if you're afraid of it. That's what it's saying.

RAJ READING: This accounts for why certain SPECIFIC forms of healing are not achieved, even though the state of healing IS. It frequently happens that an individual asks for physical healing because he is fearful of BODILY harm. At the same time, however, if he WERE healed physically, the threat to his thought system would be considerably MORE fearful to him than its physical expression.

RAJ: Suppose that you seemed to have been born deformed, or with an infirmity, and you've lived with it for your whole life. And someone comes along and says, "Healing is possible." If there's dissatisfaction with the experience of limitation, the immediate, overwhelming response would be, "Oh, thank God! I can't wait to get out of this wheelchair," or, "I can't wait to get out of this bed that I've been in!" And it's a genuine, true feeling.

But, uh oh, the minute that one gets out of the wheelchair, well, nobody's going to want to help him. No one's going to take care of him. Boy, he'll have to get a job. He'll have to find a purpose. So much responsibility will come that was never there before.

"God, I don't know if I could take that. I don't want to be here, but I've already lost so much ground. I mean, after all, here I am thirty-five years old. Everyone else thirty-five years old has gone way ahead of me. I can't possibly make up the difference. I can't possibly become trained. I can't possibly change into a frame of mind where I feel competent and equal to everything else. And besides, you know, the loving support of everyone around me that I've received all these years, I know that's got to be of God. I know it's been real. I don't want to give that up. People wouldn't love me like that any more. They wouldn't love me if I didn't become responsible, self-responsible; if I didn't start taking care of myself. And then they'd say, 'Hey! Get on the stick and take care of yourself. We can't take care of you forever. Now you can get up and move around, you're as capable as everyone else.'" You see? Now that's fearsome after thirty-five years of constant, willing attentiveness that's been received. You see?

So, you think you want something, but getting it can be a fearful thing. So understand how that can be.

RAJ READING: At the same time, however, if he WERE healed physically, the threat to his thought system would be considerably MORE fearful to him than its physical expression. In this case he is not really asking for RELEASE from fear, but for the removal of a symptom which HE has selected. This request is, therefore, NOT for healing at all.

RAJ: "I want to be relieved of this particular suffering of being confined to my wheelchair," let's say. "But I don't want to be relieved of all the help I've been getting. I don't want to be relieved of not having to be self-responsible." You see? "Just this one little thing I want to be relieved of."

So it's not a request for healing at all. It's a request for a relief from a particular form of suffering, and not relief from not being able to do all the things that the suffering has kept him from being able to do.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Bible emphasizes that ALL prayers are answered, and this must be true if no effort is wasted.

RAJ: It's a Law of Being that effort cannot be wasted. Effort is always maximally effective.

RAJ READING: The very fact that one has asked the Holy Spirit for ANYTHING will ensure a response.

RAJ: Now this applies equally to your Guide. When you ask something of your Guide, whether you hear the response or not, there is always a response.

RAJ READING: The very fact that one has asked the Holy Spirit for ANYTHING will ensure a response. Yet it is equally certain that NO response given by the Holy Spirit will EVER be one which would increase fear. It is possible that His answer will not be heard at all. It is IMPOSSIBLE, however, that it will be lost. There are many answers which you have already received, but have not yet HEARD.

RAJ: That's like at Christmas. There are many gifts you have been given, but some of them you haven't opened yet.

RAJ READING: I assure you that they are waiting for you. It is indeed true that no effort is wasted.

RAJ: Now, it's likewise true that any Gift of Love that any of you have extended to a Brother or Sister, whether it was received or not, whether it was opened or not, has been put under their Christmas tree, as it were. It is in their presence, and will remain in their presence. No matter how completely they ignore it, it cannot be gotten out of their presence. And it remains there for them to notice and open until they notice and open it.

When you, any of you, make an Extension of Love out of the infilling and overflowing of the Movement of Love from the Father through you, because you dare to care enough to not react with judgment, but to be willing to recognize the Truth in them, and let them be the object of your affection, and thereby allowing this Movement of Love through you, that Love extended has hit its mark, and will remain there until it's let in. This is foundational fact. You can't get any more basically factual than that. It is the Truth, no matter what you believe about it. And I am telling you this so that you might understand that any Expression of Love that you have participated in the flow of, has not been futile. And its healing effect, like a dormant seed, simply awaits a little attention, a little moisture to germinate, and grow, and bless.

I want to come back to this prayer, because we're going to end here for tonight. Up until this section, "The Answer to Prayer," for the last couple of weeks our attention has been on you. The Course's attention has been on the Truth About You.

And we ended up with this bridge out of the fixer-upper mentality.

RAJ READING: Christ is in me and where He is God MUST be,...

RAJ: Which would have to mean in you.

RAJ READING: ...for Christ is PART of Him.

RAJ: Now if this is the bridge out of the illusion of a fixer-upper mentality and all that goes along with it, if this is the bridge out of it for you, it's the bridge out of it for your Brother. If this is what you must be willing to acknowledge about yourself in order to wake up, it is what you must be willing to acknowledge about your Brother in order for you to have the Vision that helps him to wake up.

Now, your Brother's behavior may not exhibit this knowledge, or this fact, at all. Are you going to go according to your interpretation of your Brother, developed during this expansive period of time that has passed in which you have been diligent and demonstrating respectability, and the passage of time is that which gives proof to your committed-ness, and your stability, and blah, blah, blah? That all is a [finger snap] fraction of a second of imagination, you know. Are you going to look at your Brother and believe beliefs that have been acquired by you during this long, long, long [finger snap] fraction of a second? And believe your beliefs? Or, are you going to look at your Brother, no matter what the behavior seems to be exhibiting, with a willingness to say, "Christ is in her. Christ is in him. And where He (the Christ) is, God must be, for Christ is part of God. Christ is part of Him."

The bridge out of the fixer-upper mentality in which condemnation, judgment, justice, penalty, are all elemental parts, the bridge out of that depends upon your not trying to function in the fixer-upper mentality. If you're going to abandon it for yourself, you've got to be willing to abandon it for your Sister, or your Brother. You're abandoning it for yourself while you're still being assholes to one degree or another. Right at this moment I'm... there's no judgment there. You're just not awake yet, and so, therefore, you are behaving ignorantly, because you believe what you believe, instead of the Truth. And so everyone requires this bridge out of the fixer-upper mentality.

And if it's your salvation, it's your Sisters' and Brother's salvation. If it's your salvation, your Extension of Love has to involve providing that bridge in your mind out of what their behavior is expressing, so that you can move to the point where you're willing to see Christ is in her, and where He is, God must be, for Christ is part of Him.

And it's not [said assertively, authoritatively], "Wow! Where Christ is God must be. God must be in you. You hear me? God, Christ, must be in you. Get it? If not, got it? If not, get it. Do you hear me?" No. No.

You don't impress the Truth upon them. You don't coerce them into the Truth. You don't know the Truth to make something happen. The Truth is What Already Is. And everything else is part of this humungous epic of [finger snap] instantaneous proportions. Nothing that you believe is something humungous.

Now I want to end here, because it sets the stage for next week. And for once, I'm going to ask each of you to read the next three or four pages before you come next week. Because it's going to be a meat and potatoes session, which means it's going to be very nutritious.

SEEKER: Starting where I should begin to read?

RAJ: Starting where to begin to read with the paragraph:

RAJ READING: If you would know your prayers are answered, never doubt a Son of God.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [inaudible]

RAJ: Right where we ended.

ANOTHER SEEKER: And we read how far?

RAJ: Read to the end of the chapter; 2 ½ pages.

Okay.

It's such a pleasure to be in the Light that illuminates What Is True About You. I love you all and I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 9 – THE ACCEPTANCE OF THE ATONEMENT
Section – THE ANSWER TO PRAYER
First Edition – p. 153 / Second Edition – p. 164
Chapter 8 – THE JOURNEY BACK
Sparkly Book – p. 202

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

The chapter we're reading in is entitled, "The Journey Back." And in a way we've been discussing who or what it is making the journey back. And for the last two weeks, we've discussed the fact that the you, you think you are—the you, you have made-up in the absence of your direct connection with your Source—in other words, the orphan you have defined yourself as—only exists as an imagination; not as a fact. It exists as an imagination in the only Mind there is, which, with reference to each of you, is the Mind of Christ. It's the Mind of Christ because it is God's Mind finding expression in you as the Movement of Creation.

So there really isn't some thing making a journey back. There is the Christ Mind, you might say, deciding not to energize, or validate, the steps it took away from Home into a private fantasy, into a land of definitions; definitions made about things that are Real; definitions about the Kingdom of Heaven and the Expression of God called you—the Christs—the Christ.

We discussed the fact that you only imagine that you have a will—a private, separate, independent will of your own. And that imagination in no way undoes the fact that the only will you have is the Will of God that God is exercising right there where you are. Your Mind and your Will are the Presence of God, and nothing else. Anything else you imagine is there is your definition.

And to the degree that you believe your definition, you become bound to it. And at the same time, you cannot escape experiencing a sense of isolation, because your determination to believe your imagination causes you to become almost totally distracted from What You Are—the Presence of God—as well as the Direct Experience of the Mind of God which is your Mind. The Mind of God is a Singularity. The Will of God is a Singularity. And you are It. It is you.

You see, the journey back involves becoming clear about this. First of all, about yourself; becoming clear that if, indeed, you want to come back into your Right Mind, you have to stop practicing or using your mind in a way that is at odds with What It Is, what its Nature is, what its Function is, so that in the abandoning of the misuse of your mind, its Function can register with you; its already-established Function.

Now, because of The Way Things Work, divinely speaking, your private realization about you isn't all there is to waking up.

The end of the last section was in the form of a prayer.

RAJ READING: Christ is in me and where He is God MUST be, for Christ is PART of Him.

RAJ: This expresses the Singularity. Christ is in me. Christ is What I Am. But Christ is also my Brother. And where my Brother is, my Father must be. And where I am, my Father must be. Where I am, my Brother's Father must be. You see, it expresses the Singularity in an all-inclusive way and leaves no one out.

You cannot wake up by yourself. The first step is to come to an awareness that your will and the Father's Will are not separate. They are not two things. They are one thing, and that one thing is God's Will.

What we're going to discuss tonight brings into play the other part of what is essential to waking up. What is your Function? If you were yielding to What You Are—What You Are, not who you are—if you were yielding to What You Are, you would find yourself engaged in acknowledging the Presence of God in each and every thing. As we've said before, that's the meaning of glorifying God. It isn't eyes toward Heaven with thoughts toward God and to hell with your brothers and sisters and the world and the universe. [whispered] God. [regular voice] No.

You don't glorify God by talking to God and giving your full attention to God. You glorify God by giving your attention right where you are—to the poinsettias, to each other. And you abandon whatever your current definitions are that you've given it; the current meanings that you've applied to them. And you say a prayer inside, "I wish to experience the Presence of God that has to be there in order for anything to appear to be there to me, whether it's what's really there or what I'm imagining is there." There has to be something there in either case. You have to be willing to take the time to get past your definitions, to get past the meanings that others have given you about whatever it is you're looking at.

And you have to be willing to say, "If anything is there at all, its Source has to be the Father. And it has to be the Expression of Meaning that the Father is giving to His Infinite Selfhood, His Infinity. And I would like to experience that." And then abide with whatever it is—the poinsettia, or the leaves, or your brother, or your sister, or the trees—to listen, to let in What There Is Of God there. That's the way you lay the groundwork for your Function to come back into play where you're able to see What God Is right there in Its Full Divinity, in Its Reality, in Its Harmony, in Its Beauty, in Its Loveliness, and in Its Awesomeness. That's the next step.

First, you have to be willing to recognize that if there's anything where you are, it's God Presence-ing Himself; not you presence-ing yourself. And then you have to let yourself be from the Place of Excellence in you where the Presence of God is being All There Is to you. And then you find your Function being brought into play.

You know, you've all at one time or another had the experience of, let's say, being in your home, or in the car, some place where you're alone, and you get your head on straight. You meditate. You become clear. You find your Peace. And your attitude is even; not suspicious. There is equilibrium. And everything is fine until the phone rings, or you run into somebody, and a conversation starts—a relationship occurs. And then it all goes out the window, right? Either your feelings about the person, or the way they are behaving, grabs your attention and you slip right back into all of the existing definitions that you have incorporated as a part of your perception of things. And your peace is gone.

This is why I called it the "meat and potatoes" session tonight, because your Brother now has to be included in what you have had to recognize about yourself. I said last week, the petal of the poinsettia, you are part of the Infinitude of the Being of the petal of that poinsettia, or the whole blossom, or the whole plant. You are part of the Infinitude of its presence. And you are as essential to it as it is to you. Well, so is your gosh-darn Brother and Sister.

Just to be perfectly clear, you cannot become clear within yourself about your relationship with the Father, and let the Father in, and flash out, wake up, and leave everybody else behind. That's not the way it works.

The moment you make that connection with the Father and you yield to the Father's Will, and let the Father's Will be yours, something will spontaneously and automatically happen. Something of necessity that is unavoidable will happen. And that is that that recognition of What You Are will have to spill over to your Brothers and Sisters. You must give it away else you won't have it yet. You don't have what you're not willing to give away. You haven't embodied What You Are until you embody it. In other words, make it recognizable in the world. Until you are being in a new way with everyone else because you know the Truth. Then it becomes yours.

But now you're faced with having to look at the bastard, or the bitch, whoever it might be, whatever position they may seem to hold—sons, daughters, parents, sisters, brothers, employers, neighbors. You see? You've got to extend the same acknowledgement that you've been willing to embrace about yourself in order to embody it as you, thus claiming it as yours, thus claiming by declaration Who You Are, What You Are.

So, let's go to the book.

Now I said it was a "meat and potatoes" night and maybe you might find a little gristle in here as well. And all the gristle will be is the place in you where you have resistance to extending your acknowledgement of the Divine Truth About You to another, for whatever justifications you may be holding. It isn't that what there is to chew is really tough. It's that you don't want to chew that bite yet. Okay.

I'm going to back up to the previous paragraph for a moment.

RAJ READING: The Bible emphasizes that ALL prayers are answered, and this must be true if no effort is wasted. The very fact that one has asked the Holy Spirit for ANYTHING will ensure a response.

RAJ: And I'm going to drop down.

RAJ READING: There are many answers which you have already received, but have not yet HEARD. I assure you that they are waiting for you. It is indeed true that no effort is wasted.

RAJ: Now continuing.

RAJ READING: If you would know your prayers are answered, never doubt a Son of God. Do not question him and do not confound him, for your faith in him is your faith in YOURSELF.

RAJ: Well, what is it when you doubt a Brother or a Sister? When you say you doubt him, you're saying you doubt his veracity. You doubt the goodness of his character. You are calling his veracity and his character into question. You are calling something about him into question. You are not giving a full honoring of that one. You are engaging in a form of attack. It is a ploy that is always used to make another uneasy, ill at ease, confounded, if at all possible, to cause that one to doubt himself or herself. Why? So that you, in your arrogant forcefulness, might be able to take control of the situation away from your Brother, or Sister, and be in charge, and not be at a disadvantage yourself.

You see, the bottom line of it is a matter of control, and has nothing to do whatsoever with whether or not the Brother is truthful. It has nothing to do with whether his character is good or bad. It has to do with whether or not you can convince that Brother to doubt himself so that he will abandon any position of authority, or assurance, that he's been able to muster up.

RAJ READING: Do not question him and do not confound him, for your faith in him is your faith in YOURSELF.

RAJ: Yeah. Well, if you lack faith in yourself, you'll want to be in control yourself. And so you will assume that your Brother is no more trustworthy than you are, except you're not going to let anybody know that you think you're untrustworthy. You're not going to let anybody know that you're willing to do whatever it takes to get your way, even if it's dishonest, deceitful, hateful. You'll just do what you need to do with a smile on your face and a picture of dignity. When you lack faith in yourself, you will express lack of faith in your Brother.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you would know God and His Answer, believe in me whose faith in you cannot be shaken.

RAJ: Ah! Here's an anchor for you. Something needs to be unshakeable. And obviously, if you are questioning and confounding your Brother, you are not having unshakeable faith in him. You're not having any faith in him at all. You're not having any faith in yourself. But you know that if you, like a banty rooster or a Chihuahua, make enough noise and sound fierce enough, you can make almost anything cower in your presence. And so that's what you do. But there's nothing presence [present] in that picture of un-shake-ability, of stability, of groundedness in something True.

So:

RAJ READING: If you would know God and His Answer, believe in me whose faith in you cannot be shaken.

RAJ: And I'll add: Whose faith in you cannot be shaken no matter how bully-ish you behave, no matter how loud a Chihuahua you are.

RAJ READING: Can you ask of the Holy Spirit truly and doubt your brother?

RAJ: Well, that might not make a lot of sense if it weren't for the fact that the Holy Spirit is nothing less than your Right Mind. So can you ask of your Right Mind truly and doubt your Brother? No. Because if you ask of your Right Mind truly, you will be inspired with the Answer that is Truth, and that Answer will be experiential in you. And in the experience of it, you cannot escape the fact that the Answer for you is true of your Brother as well. And that will cause your perception of your Brother to change.

RAJ READING: Can you ask of the Holy Spirit truly and doubt your brother? Believe his words...

RAJ: Your Brother's words.

RAJ READING: ...are true because of the truth which is IN him.

RAJ: I believe in you because of the Truth that is in you. And I have been going on endlessly disclosing to you the fact that there is a Place of Excellence in you; a place you hadn't dreamed of; something so perfectly excellent that it perfectly expresses and embodies God. It's awesome. If you know this is the Truth About You and if you've had an experience of it, then you know it's the Truth About Your Brother.

And...

RAJ READING: You will...

RAJ: ...be able to...

RAJ READING: ...unite with the truth in him, and his words will BE true. As you hear HIM you will hear ME.

RAJ: Well, most of you, if you sit down with the goal of becoming still so that you might hear me, expect to hear me tell the Truth About You—the illuminating, inspiring, uplifting, transformational Truth About You. And you expect me to do it in a way that will not convict you of all the things you felt you were worthy of being convicted for, so that you might be able to gently lay aside the beliefs that justified penalty, conviction. Why? Well, to speak in biblical terms, because you know there is no sin in me. There is no willfulness in me. And when you listen undefendedly for me, you will hear me.

But you know what? When it comes to your brother, you know your brother too damned well to believe that he, or she, might be the Presence of Love who could report back to you nothing but the Truth About You. You see? You know your brother and sister too damned well. You do! And that's the word you give.

And so you don't listen in the same way. You don't listen. It doesn't mean there's nothing there that they can say that might not be the very thing that wakes you up. But damn it, you're not going to listen, 'cause you know too well that they're selfish, self-centered, shitty, small-minded, and their interests are the only thing they're interested in confirming, supporting, and rendering successful. So by damn it, you're not going to listen to them in the way you would listen to me. You see? You're not going to listen.

RAJ READING: As you hear HIM you will hear ME.

RAJ: And we could reverse it: As you hear me, you will hear him.

As you hear me, you will hear him. It's all a matter of the permission you give in your own mind.

RAJ READING: LISTENING to truth is the only way you can hear it now and finally KNOW it.

RAJ: "Listening to Truth," it says, remember? It doesn't say listening to your Brother's present, limited perception of himself, or herself. It doesn't mean listening to your Brother's or Sister's ego definition of himself, or herself, or the behavior that follows.

RAJ READING: LISTENING to truth is the only way you can hear it now and finally KNOW it.

RAJ: Here it is, a little piece of gristle.

RAJ READING: The message your brother gives you is UP TO YOU. What does he say to you?

RAJ: And here's the real question.

RAJ READING: What would you HAVE him say?

RAJ: Well, you would have him say selfish things because you know the bastard. You would have him be dishonest because you know him too well.

Do you not think that the Voice for Truth, that the Holy Spirit, that God being All There Really Is there where your Brother is, cannot possibly find a way for your Brother to say exactly what you need to hear? Not what your Brother thinks you need to hear. Not even what your Brother might think he's saying. But do you not think that... do you not think that the Holy Spirit, or God, can have your Brother say exactly what you need to hear for your benefit, for your enlightenment, for your growth, and as a demonstration of the fact that there's something more there to your Brother than the definition you're so sure of; the definition of him or her that you're so sure is the truth?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your decision ABOUT him determines the message you receive. Remember...

RAJ: See, here's the second part of it. The first part of it was that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: Remember that the Holy Spirit is in him,...

RAJ: Or her.

RAJ READING: ...and His...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...Voice speaks to you THROUGH him.

RAJ: Oh, but you're not going to listen in a way that would allow that to register with you, because you know there is no good in him. He's demonstrated it over and over. She's demonstrated it over and over. They're nothing but willful individualities with self-interest as the bottom line. You say, "You're asking me to remember that the Holy Spirit is in him or her, and His Voice speaks to me through them? You're asking me to believe that? More than that, you're actually asking me to do it?"

Hey, if you want to wake up, then your Divinity and your Conscious Experience of your Divinity cannot be an exclusive gift from the Father to you, and you alone.

RAJ READING: What can so holy a brother tell you EXCEPT truth?

RAJ: You see, but you say, "Yeah, but it's not a holy Brother. He's not a holy Brother."

RAJ READING: What can so holy a brother tell you EXCEPT truth? But are you LISTENING to it?

RAJ: Hell, no! You're positive it isn't there.

And you're not going to make yourself vulnerable by being undefended enough to see if it's there. Because while you're undefended, the bitch or bastard is going to nail you and you're going to be unprepared. So are you listening to it? No!

Now listen.

RAJ READING: Your brother may not know who he is, but there is a Light in his mind which DOES know.

RAJ: Your Brother may not know Who He Is, and therefore his behavior may be bad behavior. His behavior will be misguided if he's not awake yet. But that's not justification for abandoning him.

And if it sinks in with you that you can't wake up until you're willing to look at your Brother, or your Sister, with the intent to see Singularity there, just as you have finally become convinced it's appropriate for you to do with yourself, what you've learned means nothing. If you're not willing to do that, you haven't learned anything and you haven't brought all of the elements into play that will constitute a miracle, a sudden shift of perception.

The sudden shift of perception that you are willing to consider might happen to you isn't something that will happen only to you. It will happen to you and cause you to see everything else differently, and require of you that you extend the Gift you have received, to embrace everything else with the same acknowledgement. And if that doesn't happen, the process is incomplete.

RAJ READING: Your brother may not know who he is,...

RAJ: But it makes no never mind.

RAJ READING: Your brother may not know who he is, but there is a Light in his mind which DOES know.

RAJ: There is a Place of Excellence in him. And if you don't see the Place of Excellence in him, you haven't see it or experienced it in yourself. If you have experienced it in yourself, you will have immediately recognized that everyone does.

RAJ READING: This Light...

RAJ: In his mind.

RAJ READING: ...can shine into yours, making HIS words true, and making YOU able to hear them.

RAJ: What does that mean? It means that when you are willing to listen minus your judgments, you will be able to hear what your Brother is meaning, no matter what he is saying.

Every time any one of you cries out in pain or complaint, why do you do it? If it's normal, you wouldn't complain. You would just let it be. But you complain because somewhere in you, you know it's illegitimate. Somewhere in you, you know you don't deserve it. Somewhere in you, you know that there's another way for you to be experiencing existing. And that's the Truth.

And so the complaint that you register with your voice and your words, that generally comes out in an obtuse way, and is generally directed at others in complaint about their behavior, has Truth. At the bottom line, the Truth that you know that the suffering you're experiencing is an illegitimate imposition upon you, and it's not your Birthright, and there is another way for you to be experiencing existing. That's the Truth that can be heard no matter what the obtuse exclamations of complaint are.

And so the question is, just as with the poinsettias, "Are you going to be willing to be with Whatever It Is That's Really There, and abandon your current perceptions and definitions of what it is, so that you might get to the bottom line of the Presence of God that is there so that It can replace your definitions, your misperceptions of It, and all of the attending mistakes that result from the misperception?"

Now you say, "Wow! That... that could really... I could really get into that. I mean I love poinsettias, or I love orchids, or I love this, or I love that. I'll be glad to become defenseless with it and find out What There Is behind the definitions I'm currently employing about it."

But when it's a Brother, or a Sister, who's registering a complaint in an obtuse way, you say, "Uh oh. This is too uncomfortable. I'm unwilling. I'm unwilling to be present with them." [Instead say,] "Let them be present in my mind with my having an attitude of willingness to be there to listen beneath the behavior."

RAJ READING: This Light...

[Editor's Note: Raj said "The Light" instead of "This Light."]

RAJ: In your Brother.

RAJ READING: ...can shine into yours,...

RAJ: Your mind.

RAJ READING: ...making HIS words true, and making YOU able to hear them. His words ARE the Holy Spirit's answer to you. Is your faith in him strong enough to let you hear?

RAJ: Or are you a self-satisfied, arrogant wimp? Sounds a little inconsistent, right? An arrogant wimp. A banty rooster. A little... a little thing who's going to be aggressive and seem to be as big as you can be, as ferocious as you can be. It's still not a lot of presence, you might say.

Is your faith in your Brother strong enough to let you hear? Is your faith? Do you have the strength to stand there in the presence of what your conditioning tells you is an obtuse and ugly and bad behavior that's not worthy of your energy or attention? Are you going to have the guts to be present there and look behind the presentation to find the Kernel of Truth that is at the root of the awkward and inarticulate expression of dignity that is felt, but not understood by that one. It's felt enough that each one of you yells out in complaint against suffering, even though you don't realize fully that you don't deserve to be experiencing any of it.

And it isn't the world, it isn't circumstances, it isn't the behavior of others, that's causing you to suffer. It's the fact that you don't remember What You Are. And in your ignorance, you believe what you think you are. And so you don't know your right to deliverance from the suffering because of What You Are. Just because of What You Are.

So...

RAJ READING: Is your faith in him strong enough to let you hear?

Salvation is of your brother.

RAJ: Why? Because it's the second half of the process of waking up. The recognition and experience of the Truth of What You Are is not enough to wake you up. It must be extended to your Brothers and Sisters. Inclusion must occur. The complete breaking of isolation must happen in order for you to have what you are giving, in order for the Truth About You to be fully embodied—manifested. That's the only Way It Works. Why? Because that's the return to your Function.

How can you be awake in the Glory of God, in the Fullness of Being, if you are not fulfilling your Function? And your Function is the recognition of What Is Real in each and every thing; the recognition of God in each and every thing. The acknowledgement of It. That's the glorifying of God. That's the fulfilling of Creation.

So...

RAJ READING: Salvation is of your brother.

RAJ: And I could say to the poinsettia, "Your salvation is of your Brother, or your Sister." You can't... you can't be fully Divine all by yourself. You see? Not even the poinsettia can be.

RAJ READING: Salvation is of your brother. The Holy Spirit extends from your mind to his, and answers YOU.

RAJ: What are the messengers that the Holy Spirit, you in your Right Mind, send out? They are the ones that will return and confirm to you their purpose for being sent out.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit extends from your mind to his, and answers YOU.

RAJ: Apparently back from his.

RAJ READING: You cannot hear the Voice for God in yourself alone because you are NOT alone. And His answer is only for what you ARE.

RAJ: Not who you are. What You Are.

RAJ READING: You will not know the trust I have in you unless you EXTEND it.

RAJ: Now you are aware that I have great trust in you. I have an unwavering trust in you because I know Who You Are. I know What You Are. And I know you can't ever be anything different from It, even if you imagine that you can be.

RAJ READING: You will not know the trust I have in you unless you EXTEND it. You will not trust the guidance of the Holy Spirit, or believe that it is for you, unless you hear it in others. It MUST be for your brother BECAUSE it is for you.

RAJ: You see? There's the Singularity. There's just nothing private. There are no private thoughts. And there are no private blessings. And there are no private realizations. And there are no private insights. If you have an "Aha!" experience and you see the Truth more clearly and it has changed you forever, to one degree or another, every single thing that exists has been changed forever, has been blessed by the realization.

RAJ READING: Would God have created a Voice for you alone?

RAJ: Well, it's nice to think that maybe He would, isn't it? And hey, what if you're the only one that's hearing it? No one else has yet. It's very easy to believe that now you are in the position of being the one who's hearing the Voice for God, and you can be the Messenger of God to the world with this wonderful special position. You see?

And indeed, you may find yourself giving voice to the Voice for Truth, and others might be benefiting. But when they begin to hear themselves as a result of the trust you have in them, because you have let the trust I've had in you be extended, you may find yourself becoming jealous because they heard without as much process as you did. They got it easier than you did. They heard right away when it took you three weeks. And now maybe somebody else will listen to them, instead of you. You see? Oh, boy.

RAJ READING: Would God have created a...

RAJ: Capital V.

RAJ READING: ...Voice for you alone? Could you hear His answer EXCEPT as He answers ALL of God's Sons? Hear of your brother what you would have me hear of you, for you would not want ME to be deceived.

RAJ: Another way of saying that is listen to your Brothers in the way that you would want me to listen to you.

And I'm sorry to say that the way you would want me to listen to you is a lot more benevolent than the way you are willing to listen to your Brother. And you need to notice that so that you can abandon the lack of benevolence, the lack of trust that there is a Place of Excellence in your Brother, the lack of trust that there is a Light in him. And when you break that habit of perception, and your behavior ceases to embody your lack of trust in your Brother, you will begin to hear your Brother differently. And I don't just mean that you will begin to hear what... you'll begin to hear the Truth of what they're saying underlying their awkward expression of suffering. You will actually begin to hear them expressing realizations that they're having that you can identify with. And you will begin to feel more at one with your Brother and Sister. And your ability to abandon your preexisting definitions of them will be enhanced.

RAJ READING: I love you for the truth in you, as God does. Your deceptions may deceive YOU, but they CANNOT deceive ME.

RAJ: Well, are you willing to look at your Brothers and Sisters and acknowledge within yourself that their deceptions may deceive them, but they cannot deceive you? That's what you need to do.

RAJ READING: Knowing what you are, I CANNOT doubt you. I hear only the Holy Spirit in you, Who speaks to me through YOU. If you would hear ME, hear my brothers in whom God's Voice speaks.

RAJ: You know what we're talking about? We're talking about healing. We are talking about transformation. And we're talking about the fact that you're going to be involved in it. And you won't be excused from this particular lab, or lab work.

You go into a special care facility and you see children who are mentally impaired, who do not have the faculty of speech or communication, and they moan, and they make sounds that are unintelligible. And the nature of the sounds that you hear are disturbing to you, and saddening to you, and depressing to you. Why? Because you're only listening with your ears, so to speak. You're only listening with your current definitions and understandings of things. There is a Truth asserting itself and finding its way into expression awkwardly and inarticulately. And it's a call for Love.

Well, what's Love? Love is you listening for the Holy Spirit in your Brother, in that child who can't communicate at all well, or, shall I say, kindly or unkindly. It can't communicate in anything other than a moan, or a wail, or a[n] inarticulate sound. But you can listen for the Holy Spirit in that one. You can listen for the Christ in that one to see what the Christ is saying, what the Truth is that's being expressed. You see? You send out a messenger. I wish to hear the Christ in this one—the eternal, unchangeable Presence of God that cannot be inarticulate in any way.

And you listen for that, not being deceived by your present definitions of things that obscure the Truth there, and make you recoil and want to withdraw and be depressed. Whether it's an extreme case of inability to communicate, or whether it's a lesser one where it's just somebody with a high fever and diarrhea, are you going to respond to the presentation based upon everything you've learned about such appearances, and the definitions and meanings that have been given to such appearances by others, as well as you from your own experience? You see? Are you going to care about your Brother enough to listen beyond the presentation for the Truth that is finding its way into expression poorly? And remember, it's finding its way into expression poorly because that one does not know Who He Is or What He Is.

RAJ READING: I hear only the Holy Spirit in you, Who speaks to me through YOU. If you would hear ME, hear my brothers in whom God's Voice speaks.

RAJ: God's Voice is in the wail, is in the complaint, is in the expression of frustration. But it doesn't come out as God's Voice, because the one wailing and expressing frustration thinks he is (or she is) what he (or she) believes he (or she) is, and doesn't know the Truth, and doesn't know the Freedom that it's their Birthright to be experiencing. And so, they say they object, thinking they have no right to object. And so it becomes an expression of disgust for the situation, an expression of anger about the unjust situation.

But underneath it is the pure awareness that the imposition of injustice is invalid. And there is immediate release available if that one released the belief, or the definition, that they're clinging to that says they have no right to a different kind of experience because they are just a mortal in a material universe. And so their God-given Knowing that they don't need to be experiencing this is met by the strong belief that they have no choice, and objection occurs. And that is the Voice of God.

If you want to see transformation, you've got to stop listening to and validating the form of the objection, and the emotional reactions you have to those particular forms of objection because they're offensive to you. They scare you. Why do they scare you? Because they're going on outside of your comfort zone. And you don't think you can do anything about it either. You're laboring under the same sense of limitation that the one complaining is experiencing and expressing.

But you have the opportunity to get past that because you know you have an alternative, because that's all we've been talking about for two and a half years. So you have the advantage. Now you know that it's your responsibility to take an active part. Why? Because until you realize that you can't wake up by virtue of your private connection with God, and a full sense of what Singularity means, and your willingness to yield to Singularity, that that is not all it takes to wake up, until you realize that, you will not realize that you must extend it in order to have it as you. You must extend it to your Brother. You need your Brother in order to come fully out of your orphan-hood, your chosen state of separation and isolation. You're obligated to do it if you want to wake up. You're not obligated to your Brother. You're obligated to The Way Things Work.

And if you want to wake up, you've got to extend the realization of Truth that you have to your Brother, so that the Truth that is embodied in you shows. You must come out of the closet, and declare yourself, and be the recognizable Presence of Truth because why? Because you've actually extended it. You've included your Brother in the acknowledgement of What Is True about you.

RAJ READING: If you would hear ME, hear my brothers in whom God's Voice speaks.

RAJ: God's Voice speaks through all of you, whether you're awake or not. You are the Presence of Divine Love, whether you know it or not. And the Gift of What You Divinely Are is being made constantly, whether you know it or not. And this is true of your Brothers.

And so, you must begin to listen to your Brothers in a new way. You can count on it that until you are awake, or your Brothers and Sisters are awake, every word that comes out of your mouth will be, to one degree or another, self-serving in order to secure your safety and your peace in the hostile world you think you're in. It's unavoidable.

So nothing that anybody says is an articulate expression of Truth. And so you cannot trust what anyone is saying, no matter how well they're saying it. You cannot trust that what they're saying is what is meant. And if you're going to be an agent for change, if you're going to be the transforming Presence of the Christ, you're going to listen behind the words, always for the Meaning. I don't mean the deep, dark meaning that is giving rise to the awful behavior. I mean the single, pure, element of Truth that constitutes that one's freedom that that one feels, but can't express, because he can't believe that it's the Truth about them. And their inability to embrace the dilemma that they find themselves in comes out in an anguished cry. That's what comes out of all of you.

And healing will not be the result of someone else hearing your anguish. Healing will come from someone else hearing the Meaning at the bottom of the anguish that is the Illumination of the Truth that you're suffering illegitimately, without justification. And therefore, the suffering has no right to continue to appear to be for another instant. And there is nothing to support it for another instant. And the one who sees that can speak in ways that allow for the undoing of the commitment you have, you who are wailing have to your dilemma because you believe it's absolute.

Now, the thing is you must be the ones who are willing to listen behind and beneath for the Light of Truth that is finding its way out into some form of a call for help, a call for Love. That is if you want to wake up. That is if you want to rediscover and fulfill your Function, and be at Home, and be happy, and to experience your Invulnerability, to experience your True State of Being.

Again.

RAJ READING: If you would hear ME, hear my brothers in whom God's Voice speaks. The answer to ALL prayers lies in them.

RAJ: The answers to all your prayers lie in them.

You want release? Then desire to know the Truth from the Place of Excellence in you, so there's a reuniting of you with your Right Mind. So that then you can extend your Right-Mindedness as a transformational healing Presence to your Brothers and Sisters, and glorify God in them, instead of what they are presenting.

RAJ READING: You will be answered as you hear the answer in EVERYONE. Do not listen to anything else, or you will not hear truth.

Believe in your brothers BECAUSE I believe in you, and you will learn that my belief in you is justified. Believe in me BY believing in them, for the sake of what God gave them. They WILL answer you, if you learn to ask truth of them.

RAJ: Now, does this mean that when they're being really bitchy, or really difficult, that you try to extract the Truth from this uncooperative, difficult person? No. Because they're already articulating the Truth very poorly and you can't extract a clearer expression of it from them.

But you listen for the Truth About Them in them. You feel for It in them. You ask the Holy Spirit in them to give voice to what they are Meaning, not what they are saying, so that you may respond from there, which is the Truth In Them that they will be able to feel because it is the Truth In Them. And they will recognize that you are hearing them in spite of what they were saying. They think they're saying exactly what you will say when you hear what they are Meaning, even though it's not what your conditioned perceptions say they were actually saying.

RAJ READING: They WILL answer you, if you learn to ask truth of them. Do not ask for blessings without blessing them, for only in this way can you learn how blessed YOU are. By following this way, you ARE looking for the truth in you.

RAJ: You must have an object of your affection if you are going to wake up. Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is not going BEYOND yourself but TOWARD yourself. Hear only God's Answer in His Sons, and you ARE answered.

RAJ: If the Holy Spirit is nothing less than your Right Mind, all of your answers are within you already, because you are more than you thought you were when you thought you were just the result of a sperm and an egg. You are the Divine Presence of Mind—the Presence of Mind—the spontaneous, all-inclusive, not-missing-a-thing Conscious Awareness of Existing—the Presence of Mind.

You say, "Well, he had the presence of mind to do such-and-such. I don't know how he did it under the circumstances, but he had the presence of mind to do it. Thank God!" You see? You aren't just the Presence of Mind. You're the Presence of Mind—the actively-conscious, alert, not-missing-a-thing Conscious Awareness of Existing.

You are lucky. Next weekend is Christmas weekend. And there's enough to chew on here for more than a week. So we will not gather together next Sunday evening, but will resume January 2nd, the day after New Year's. And we will finish up this section, the rest of the "meat and potatoes."

And we will take time, the next time we gather together, to discuss any questions you might have about what we've been discussing. I encourage you to review what we've read tonight. And I encourage you to review what we didn't get to tonight.

I will tell you something. Meat and potatoes stick to your bones and give you a greater feeling of, for lack of better words, the Substance of You. And these are very significant points we're discussing that will strengthen you—meaning that they will give you the ability to be less responsive to the fear that comes into play when bringing the Truth to bear upon relationships become an issue in your lives. And this needs to stop being scary for you, else you will avoid what you fear, when your salvation lies in not avoiding what you fear.

I love you.

SEEKER: [in the background] Happy Birthday, Raj.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] Thank you.

RAJ: I will wish you all a Merry Christmas. Have fun celebrating my birthday, realizing that it's simply a temporary means of remembering what it's important for you not to forget—that God loves you. And you could say demonstrated His Love for you by providing you with a Brother loving you unconditionally as a role model, or an example, of what it's your Function to do with each other, because that's the way out of the human condition, suffering.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Anyone run into any gristle this last two weeks? Well, remember I said that it isn't that what you've been given is really tough to chew. It's just that it's not the bite you want to chew yet. And that's a key point. You see?

Are you willing to have healing? Or do you still have some investment in quote "getting even"? Are you ready to have healing, or is there some unfinished business for you to take care of? As you know, in the Bible it says that I said to a number of my disciples at the beginning, "Follow thou me." And they said, in so many words, "Well, I'll be happy to, but if someone in the family has died and that we need to take care of that, and then I will join you," or, "I have such-and-such to take care of, and then I will join you." And I said, "Let the dead bury their dead. Follow thou me." You see, it illustrated the need to be willing to put your attention where it is needed, to put your attention where healing will be facilitated, to put your attention where waking up can happen. And it cannot happen with unfinished business being attended to. That's part of your dream. It can't happen when you're still trying to fix up part of your illusion. That was the point.

You all have experienced now the fact that it's relatively easy, not totally easy, but relatively easy to devote your attention to an improved concept of yourselves. You're willing to give your attention to the idea that there is a Place of Excellence in you, a place that is utterly Divine, that is God Presence-ing Himself right there where you are. And there is a willingness to yield into It, to lean into It, and to begin to depend on the Clarity that is forthcoming when you do lean into It. As I said, this still isn't easy for you, but you're engaged in it. And in engaging in it, you gain experience. Ease develops. You become more comfortable in this apparently unknown new territory for you, even though I've pointed out that you're coming back into your Original Territory, your Natural Being.

Now, we have found out that that's not all there is to it, because you also need to develop the ability to lean into the Place of Excellence in your Brothers and Sisters; that you need to be willing to see that there is a Place of Excellence in them, and give your attention to that, rather than whatever ignorances they are expressing. What happens when you do that? Oh, all kinds of justifications come up, don't they, as to why you shouldn't, or can't, yet because you have some things to attend to with them. You have some issues of justice to attend to first, right? Or "Well, why should I give that much to them when no one else is giving half that to me?" Justice, justice, justice is what it boils down to. And you want to exact... you want to exact the evidence of justice from them, or from the situation. You want to get satisfaction first.

Thank God. Thank God that God doesn't respond to you that way. Thank God that I don't. Thank God that the Holy Spirit doesn't. Thank God that your Guides don't, because then you would be truly lost.

What's another? "Oh, well, you know, I'm coming along fairly well giving myself the benefit of the doubt. I'm coming along fairly well in honoring myself in a new way by leaning into the Holy Spirit in me. And it's not easy. And now you want me, at the same time that I'm having some difficulty in experiencing myself in a new way, to extend this to another who I'm even less inclined to extend anything to? You're... [small laugh] you're pressuring me! You're moving me too fast!" Hell, we've been talking for two and a half years and we've only gotten 203 pages. [slight audience amusement] You're being rushed? See, it's the gristle. It's the little bit of a bite that you don't want to chew yet. But the bite is filet mignon perfectamente. That's what the bite is.

This section is called, "The Answer to Prayer." The answer to prayer is a miracle, a sudden shift of perception, healing. Do you want healing? Then you must give healing.

And although you might be inclined to more easily be open to being the agent for change for your pet who is ill, or for a favorite plant in your house, I am encouraging you to go to the place where you're least inclined to give healing, and that is to your Brother and Sister, because you use your Brother and Sister as the justification for not having healing. You don't use your favorite plant as a justification for not having healing. You see what I mean? The only place you have difficulty is where? In relationships!

You can turn to the Holy Spirit for healing. And you can turn to the Father. You can turn to me. And in our relationship, you can experience healing. But I'm going to tell you, the healing won't be permanent as long as you're justifying not extending it to someone else. Because that's the way you make it your own. That's the way you embody it.

Let's go to the book. In the previous paragraph, we were speaking about believing in your Brothers. Now, continuing.

RAJ READING: To disbelieve...

RAJ: In your Brothers or Sisters.

RAJ READING: ...is to side against, or to ATTACK. To believe is to accept, and to SIDE WITH. To believe is not to be credulous, but to accept and APPRECIATE.

RAJ: In other words, to believe is not to be stupid, is not to believe everything a Brother or a Sister says. It's not to be ridiculous. It's something else entirely.

RAJ READING: To believe is not to be credulous, but to accept and APPRECIATE.

RAJ: [whispered] Accept and appreciate.

If you had a situation like you've had this past week where many, many died [in a tsunami] and if, as they were this past week, their bodies were strewn around, you would walk through them listening for a sound. Here's a live one. This one's breathing. You would look for the signs of life and you would respond there.

Now:

RAJ READING: To believe is to accept, and to SIDE WITH.

RAJ: What are we talking about accepting? We're not talking about accepting bad behavior. We're not talking about accepting expressions of self that are based upon an ignorance of What That One Truly Is, which cause his expressions to be unkind or unlovely. We're talking about recognizing signs of life where that one is. And awkward and inarticulate expressions coming out of one's mouth, hateful expressions spewing forth are, if nothing else, a sign of life, right? So here is a live one. You get it? And you accept this live one as being, as existing. And you side with that one's existence, that one's Presence, no matter how he, or she, is demonstrating that Presence with bad behavior or good behavior, kindness or unkindness.

RAJ READING: To believe is to accept, and to SIDE WITH.

RAJ: Join with. Identify with. You exist. They exist. You have something in common. You can join with them.

RAJ READING: To believe is not to be credulous, but to accept and APPRECIATE.

RAJ: Accept and appreciate what? The signs of life. If they are alive, if they exist, if there is something you can identify with in those very basic terms, then you can, you have the means to be aware of the fact that Whatever Is True about you that has been revealed to you, and which you have been able to incorporate and identify with yourself, is True about them. If there is a Place of Excellence in you, because there's a sign of life there, life is there and the Place of Excellence is there. And if that Place of Excellence in them is the Holy Spirit, just as it is in you, then no matter how they are expressing themselves presently, you have a line of communication that can be activated. And so you choose to activate it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: What you do not believe you do not appreciate, and you CANNOT be grateful for what you do not value.

RAJ: It's very practical. If you look at a Brother and you cannot appreciate him, you cannot value him. If you do not value him, you will find him unworthy of extending the acknowledgement of the Truth. You will find him unworthy to hang in there with, to be present with, to be involved with.

RAJ READING: What you do not believe you do not appreciate, and you CANNOT be grateful for what you do not value. There is a price you will pay for judgment because judgment IS the setting of a price. And...

RAJ: Here's the hooker.

RAJ READING: ...as you set it you WILL pay it.

RAJ: Judgment is the setting of a price.

You just never express a judgment for no reason. You express judgment, as we discussed last week, for the purpose of confusing and overwhelming your Brother; to put him off balance. You make judgments so as to cause that one to lose any confidence he may have in himself so that he is unable to authoritatively stand up for himself, and you are in a better position to influence him, or to get from him what you want. Maybe you just want the Brother to go away and leave you alone. You see? It isn't always that you will want his agreement. But you will want something, and so you bring judgment into play.

But there's a more fundamental reason for expressing judgment, and that is that the circumstances with your Brother, or Sister, have brought you to the end of your rope. Up until now, you've been able to cope pretty well. You've been able to be positively oriented with that one. You have given, and given, and given, and given. And something has happened that was quote “the straw that broke the camel’s back” unquote. And now you’ve had it! Now you don’t know what to do. Whatever the straw was that broke the camel’s back has put you at a loss. And you feel incapable of continuing to make the gift. You feel incapable of making the gift because you find yourself at a loss. You don’t know what to do. And so you say, “This one is a stubborn one. Nothing that I do is heard. Nothing that I say is heard. And nothing that I do is valued. I persist, and I persist, and I persist, and they come up with one more thing.”

But, you see, now you’re talking about them. You’ve shifted, and it’s them out there. And you’re characterizing them. And all of this characterization is doing only one thing—it’s covering up the fact that you don’t want to acknowledge that you don’t know what to do now.

So you’re really at a wonderful point. “I don’t know what to do, Father.”

Ah, now we’re doing something different from them out there and their stubbornness. And maybe they’re just not capable of learning. Or they love their problems too much. “I’m never gonna be able to get through to them. It’s all them.”

“Father, I’m at a loss here. I don’t know what to do. I’ve carried it as far as I can. And you know what? I thought I was listening to You. And I thought I was sharing with them what you were leading me to say. And I thought I was being the Presence of Love. And I thought I was doing it well. But it hasn’t worked. It’s not working. And I’m exhausted. I give up on them. I can’t do it!”

If you’re exhausted, it means you’ve been doing too much all by yourself, even though you’ve included God along the way. Because it’s at exactly this point where what you’re presented with seems to go beyond your capacity; that you stand at the edge of the pregnant void; this wonderful place where you are actually primed for insight, or even revelation, if you will abandon the last vestiges of control that you were trying to bring into play, of course, beneficently because you have an object of your affection. You’re at a point where you truly need inspiration, where you truly need to yield even further into that Place of Excellence in you—the Holy Spirit. Why? Because you deserve to be healed of the experience of emptiness. You need to be healed of seeming to be overwhelmed yourself. You need to be healed of an apparent incapacity to be the Presence of Love further. You see?

So here’s where, instead of backing out and blaming them and characterizing them in the most ferocious terms, this is where you need to take a deep breath, stop the judgment, and let go further into God. Let go further into the Place of Excellence in you in which Love is inexhaustible, because of the inexhaustible nature of its Source, which is the Father.

You see, when you abandon being the Presence of Love because you feel exhausted and at a loss, you lash out and you point the finger. And it's their fault, but you won't tell them what the fault was. You won't tell them that they pushed you to the edge of your known capacity for being the Presence of Love, and that you're scared to yield further.

And so you set a price by engaging in judgment. And you're going to exact from them something that will make up for all that you've done. [small laugh] And that will make up for the fact that they haven't received it all, and the fact that they've pushed you to a place where you are experiencing the discomfort of not knowing what to do next, even though you have been pushed to the threshold of inspiration, even though you have been pushed to the threshold of a greatly expanded experience of your Function.

RAJ READING: If paying...

RAJ: Paying the setting of a price.

RAJ READING: If paying is equated with GETTING, you will set the price low but demand a high RETURN.

RAJ: You want a lot for a little. The ego wants a lot for a little.

RAJ READING: You will have forgotten, however, that your return is in PROPORTION to your judgment of worth.

RAJ: If your Brother, in your opinion, is not worth your attention, you will behave toward that Brother as though he or she isn't. And the return you will get will be what you've given.

RAJ READING: If paying is associated with GIVING, it cannot BE perceived as loss, and the RECIPROCAL relationship of giving and receiving will be recognized.

RAJ: As well, the experience of your relationship with your Brother will be recognized, will be experienced. And the opportunity for transformation will continue to be present.

RAJ READING: The price will then be set high...

RAJ: You will want to pay a lot because you're going to get a lot. When you pay a lot, you give a lot. What you give, you keep. What you give, you have.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the rest of the sentence. Here is the complete sentence: The price will then be set high because of the value of the return.]

RAJ READING: The price for GETTING is to lose sight of value, making it inevitable that you will NOT value what you receive. Valuing it little, you will not appreciate it and will not WANT it.

RAJ: How many people do you know who are accumulators? They get, get, get. They have lots and lots of things. But are they happy? And do they even use the things they've gotten? Do they actually enjoy having them? No, because having them wasn't what was important to them. The getting of them was what was important.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the following sentence: Never forget, then, that YOU have set the value on what you receive, and have priced it by what you give.]

RAJ READING: To believe that it is possible to get much for little is to believe that you can bargain with God. God's laws...

RAJ: I'm going to add: On the other hand.

RAJ READING: ...are ALWAYS fair and perfectly consistent. BY giving you receive.

RAJ: See how consistent that is?

RAJ READING: But to receive is to ACCEPT, not to get. It is impossible not to HAVE,...

RAJ: It's the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom—everything.

RAJ READING: ...but it IS possible not to KNOW you have.

RAJ: And at the moment, all of you don't realize all that you have because you've decided to call Creation that has been given to you the world and universe; a material thing that has nothing to do with God, so you see very little of God in it. You have determined that it's not God. And in fact, some who read the Course interpret it to mean that the world is an illusion, it is not of God, when the fact is that if there's anything in front of your face, anything that you're experiencing, it is God experienced clearly, or through a glass darkly. There's no other choice. But until you begin to value it as the Manifestation of God, you will not find God there. And you will not, thereby, have your vision of it corrected so that you are no longer seeing it through a glass darkly.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The recognition of having is the willingness for GIVING, and ONLY by this willingness can you recognize what you have.

RAJ: Now I know that you have not had a great number of experiences of the world being the Kingdom of Heaven yet, but you have had some. You have had some glimpses. And I tell you that your one task is to persist in being willing to look at your world with the desire to see more of God there than you're presently seeing, and to be, as I said, persistent in this.

Now, the same applies to your Brothers and Sisters. It doesn't matter how awful they are appearing to you, whether they are appearing that way because of their own faulty decisions within themselves, or whether they're appearing that way because you are insisting on seeing them as something other than the Excellence of God expressed because, as I said last week, you know them too damn well.

We're talking here about breaking the habit of how you're perceiving everything. And the only way you can break the habit of how you're seeing everything is to be willing to look in a new way from a new standpoint; a standpoint that has its basis in Truth, with a capital "T".

RAJ READING: The recognition of having is the willingness for GIVING,...

RAJ: It's the willingness for persistently giving your attention to your Brother in a new way—giving your attention in a new way, regardless of all of the justifications you have for looking at them in the old way.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...and ONLY by this willingness can you recognize what you have. What you give is therefore the value you put on what you have, being the exact measure of the value you put upon it. And this, in turn, is the measure of how much you WANT it.

RAJ: The big question is, "Is there any point at which you can justify giving up on your Brother?"

"Well, yeah. [small laugh] If he behaves badly enough."

Well, what you mean when you say that is if he behaves badly enough to put you at a loss where you don't know to do. You see? You just can't stand to be at the threshold of the pregnant void. You can't stand to be at the threshold of the unknown where a miracle can occur, where inspiration and insight will happen. Why? Because it takes too much effort on your part? It requires giving more attention than you're willing to give, more attention than you feel is justified? Well, how much do you want to wake up? How much do you want to be Sane?—that’s another way of putting it. How much do you want to be Sane?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You can ASK of the Holy Spirit, then, only by giving TO Him, and you can GIVE to Him only where you SEE Him.

RAJ: “Well, I’m not really ready to see Him in my brother, or my mother, or my wayward son, or daughter. I’m not really willing to see the Holy Spirit in the president!”

Mmm. Well, okay. But understand that you’re the one unwilling. And therefore, you’re the one keeping yourself in the dark. It’s your word that you’re laying down. What? Against your Brother? No, against yourself. “I am, under the circumstances, unwilling to be more fully conscious.” That’s how much you want to wake up. Thank God for those who push you to the edge. You would say, “Thank God,” to them if the edge was a place you valued.

And I will tell you something. As you stand at the edge under dynamic circumstances or peaceful circumstances, and experience the inspiration that constitutes a miracle, a sudden shift of perception, you will begin to value the edge more. And so, if someone pushes you to the edge, you won’t retaliate against them. You’ll say, hopefully you’ll remember to say, “Oh, yeah. This is when really great things begin to happen. And I’m not going to distract myself from the influx of a miracle by grouching at them for uncovering in me an emptiness that can’t be the Truth about me, that needs to be filled; an opportunity for me to be more conscious than I thought I was able to be.” You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you see Him...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...in everyone, consider how much you will be ASKING of Him...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

You’ll be asking the Holy Spirit to show up everywhere, right? By being willing to see the Holy Spirit in everyone, you’re asking the Holy Spirit a lot.

RAJ READING: ...consider how much you will be ASKING of Him, and...

RAJ: Here’s the kicker.

RAJ READING: ...HOW MUCH YOU WILL RECEIVE.

RAJ: You see, this is why you don't need to be afraid of the edge. Because it's the place where how much you can receive can make itself available to you, because you're not defended against it, or distracted from it by your preoccupation with being pissed off at the person who drove you to the edge of your known capacity to be conscious.

Now you can look at that one who's driven you there and say, "You ask too much," or, you can actually do what you really want to do and say to me right now, "You ask of me too much." But I am telling you that I'm asking you to put yourself in a position of discovering how much more of What You Really Are there is available to you, and that is part of your Natural Sanity which is perfectly normal to you, and you are capable of it.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...will deny you nothing because you have denied HIM nothing,...

RAJ: You have not denied Him your attention.

RAJ READING: ...and so you can share everything. This is the way, and the ONLY way, to have His answer because His answer is all you CAN ask for and WANT. Say, then, to everyone:

RAJ: Quote.

RAJ READING: Because I will to know myself

I see you as God's Son and my brother.

RAJ: Unquote.

You can't solve the problem from the level of the problem. You can't solve the problem by understanding the elements of the problem better. You can't understand your Brother (or Sister) by pegging him (or her) with a definition in your mind; an explanation of them psychologically, physically, or any other way. What happens when you peg a butterfly? Well, it's dead, and in a case, very carefully arranged by you to look its most dead beautiful.

You have to be willing to let go of whatever way you have already pegged your Brother, or Sister, and defined them in your mind, because if you don't, whatever way you have carefully arranged what your Brother is by definition in your mind, will, because you have arranged it, get your allegiance and pride. And you will not be available to have the Holy Spirit, or God, provide you with a sudden shift of perception that allows you to see the Living One that they are, who isn't bound either by your definition of them, or their own definitions of themselves. And until you do abandon those definitions, and until you, by virtue of having abandoned them, are able to see the living, non-static, unpegged Presence that they are, there will be no opportunity for you to be the presence of appreciation, the presence of no judgment, that will allow them to abandon their defense and have a sudden shift of perception themselves.

I'll tell you something. It's not up to them to make your decision to stand at the edge and embrace what is beyond it, easier for you. That's just another convenient delaying tactic. "You better behave differently so that my standing at the edge doesn't seem so imperative. You need to make it easier for me." And we're right back into the old ego-bullshit of manipulating into mutually-agreed-upon definitions and ways of behavior that constitute the dream you need to wake up out of.

So here's the big question. Here's your bottom line vulnerability. "What if when I do this and I do have miracles happening, sudden shifts of perception do occur, and I make the gift, and I, by embodying it now, have it, what if they don't change? What if they continue to act badly? What if they continue to engage with me in a manner that is calculated to upset me? Am I supposed to just say, 'Thank you for the miracles,' and let them continue to behave badly?" See, the suggestion is that maybe you will end up being a doormat, because you're so busy making the gift, that you're not saying "No"—that you abandoned simple intelligence. You're afraid that abuse will become the norm.

[Editor's Note: Now Raj goes back and reads from the beginning of today's material.]

RAJ READING: To believe...

RAJ: In your Brother.

RAJ READING: ...is to accept, and to SIDE WITH. To believe is not to be credulous, but to accept and APPRECIATE.

RAJ: No. None of this is going to amount to your being credulous, stupid, naïve. Anything goes. Whatever you say, I believe, I accept. Whatever way you behave, I believe, I accept. No.

I promise you... I promise you that you cannot abuse me. And if you try to, if you engage in that attitude and behavior, I will call it for what it is. Not to attack you. Not as judgment. But to show you that you're doing something that isn't working, to show you that you're doing something that you don't want to do any longer, because it isn't working—because it doesn't blend with the Way Things Work. And then I will illuminate the Way Things Work so that you can make a choice for that, instead. And I will hang in there with you, but I will object. I will object, not by attacking you, but I will object by calling the game for the game that it is, and not reacting to it, and saying, "This doesn't work. Don't do this with me. It won't work. Stop doing this with me. Do this, instead."

But, you see, that involves ongoing involvement, a continuing to give your attention there where your Brother is, not to his behavior, but to that of Excellence in him that you know has to be there. You will find that inspiration and insight will give you the clarity to know how to be in the moment with that Brother, or Sister. And, of course, I mean by that mother, father, son, daughter, acquaintance—everyone. You will find yourself knowing how to be with that Brother and Sister [in a way] that does not allow chaos to persist. You will find that guidelines, boundaries for communication, will be established out of your mouth. You will not let chaos rule. You see?

You will find yourself taking hold. But always you will find yourself taking hold in a context not that you knew of ahead of time, but a context in which whatever inarticulate expressions, or whatever willingness there is to be inarticulate is being expressed by your Brother, will be squelched and required to fit in to a means of communication that will allow dialogue to occur, rather than ongoing mystification, confusion. And so you may very well find yourself seeming to be authoritative, but not an exercise of control expressed as a means for your not having to step up to the edge and lean into the unknown; not as a defense against having to be more conscious.

The exercise of control will be the nudging and the guiding of ideas that help provide a structure in the relationship that allows the one you're with to abandon his or her defensive practices, and relax enough to let themselves—Who They Are—find expression, and for healing to occur. It might take a while, but since you will not be into control, you will not be expressing an agenda for this other one. You will... you will be the part of the dance of the relationship that it's your Function to be, that supports in the most graceful manner—in other words, with grace—a natural movement out of the darkness of chaos on the part of your Sister or Brother. But it's almost as though you're playing a tune that you have never heard before, on an instrument you don't know how to play, with fingers doing things they were never trained to do. And it will happen easily.

Paul has no idea every Sunday night when we sit down what's going to come out of his mouth, and it comes out most easily simply because he lets. A tune is played, a dance occurs with everyone. It's not hard. But you have to be willing to embrace your Brother as the Christ. You have to be willing to look for and see the Holy Spirit in your Brother, just as you are becoming more willing to see and lean into the Holy Spirit in you, which is nothing more, nothing less, than your Right Mind, which is nothing less than the Presence of God.

Now that is the answer, no matter how complicated the details of any given situation might seem to be; no matter how complex they might seem to be.

“The Journey Back”—another chapter under our belt. The journey back is not made by an ego improving itself, but is the reawakening in you of the Christ of you coming back into its Right Mind, because it’s no longer engaging in a fantasy activation in order to try to make a sense of self real. And it abandons its divorce proceedings from the Father, and rejoins, and lets in the experience of its Excellence. And then lets in the Excellence of his Brother, or Sister, as well, because in doing that it makes yours what you have been willing to extend, what you have been willing to let fill you by virtue of breaking the isolation from your Father, and which you have extended on and made your own.

I find you worthy of acknowledging the Divinity of You. You must find your Brother worthy of acknowledging the Divinity in him, because that’s the way you remember Who You Are. And that’s just the Way It Works.

I said that I would open this evening’s get-together for questions, or comments, or frustrations—whatever. You can talk about gristle you’ve run into, or filet mignon, that you’ve experienced, but this time is open because this is the nitty-gritty here. Shall we start with the complainers? [audience amused] Let’s say the ones that have had a rough time.

SEEKER: I can kind of understand. I mean I grasp it. I feel like I grasp it. Then I get out there and I find that really trying to do this, I feel sort of like lost, like I lost my anchor. And the difficulties that arise, the difference, the changes in the relationships that I have with people, I find disconcerting, because it feels like I’m disrupting the way things have always been. And I’m making people pissed at me. And that’s definitely, I don’t believe that’s my intent. I don’t think I’m intentionally trying to go out and do that. Is that kind of part of the...

RAJ: Well, I’m not intentionally go out and trying to do that either, but [seeker laughs] there’s often the same result. Apparent disruption is not automatically cause for you to stop coming from the Place of Excellence in you. It is one of the means the ego uses to maintain the status quo and keep change from happening, keep miracles from happening.

Well, when you were confronted with that, you find yourself feeling at a loss, right?

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Yes. Oh, so there you are at the edge, right? Well, you were at the edge before you moved over enough to feel confident to do this new thing that you're doing which seems to be meeting with resistance. So change is occurring. Shifting is occurring. Stay at the edge that it pushes you further into so that you can listen and be appropriate under the new elements of change that are now occurring.

SEEKER: When that disruption happens, I'm sometimes not sure. Am I going the right direction? Have I... asking myself am I slipping off? Did I get off into another, a new ego-trip kind of thing? It's real tricky, slippery, very slippery. Is that...

RAJ: The difference between the two will become more and more obvious as you persist in the experience of stepping up to the edge and leaning into the unknown, into the void, to listen for how to be, and what to do and that—what to say next.

You're not so totally unconscious that you don't recognize when you have really slipped into ego. It's only in the, what I'm going to call, the new area of trust-building that you are engaging in by being in a new way. You have to persist long enough for the trust to develop, so that there is not as much fear associated with being out of control, but still acting in the world. You see?

SEEKER: Yes. That's feels better. I think I know what you mean. There's nowhere else to go 'cause what was before is not there anymore, so I only have... there's only forward to go. A little sideways once in a while.
[laughing]

RAJ: What we're talking about all along the way here is the building of trust around being in the world without using all of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that have been put into place that seem to provide a sense of real security.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You're welcome.

Hands. Right there.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Well, you mentioned that God's Will and ours are one, and based on this last two weeks when a lot of really crazy things happened, I kind of was thinking about that. And I've been listening to your CD. I realized that it's because I really was being distracted by my own definitions of everything. So then I had this brilliant idea that maybe the smartest thing was to quit thinking about the past, and quit trying to plan for the future, which left just now, and to drop all the definitions and drop all the defenses that I had. And I noticed the thought would come up, and there was all kinds of defense around it. And when I would let all the defense go, I could just feel my whole body energize somehow. And that... this is leading to where my question is, really. Okay. So then, I'm thinking all right, I'm not a body, I'm a mind. So what does a mind do? Well, a mind thinks. And then I think I heard you say it creates.

RAJ: What Mind does is it pays attention.

SEEKER: Oh, thank you. I knew that there was more. There's nothing in that. I knew there was more. Thank you. And you know me, I really want definitions of everything.

RAJ: Well, thinking is a distraction from paying attention.

SEEKER: This is so cool. Thank you. [laughing]

RAJ: Yes. Get that down in your book of definitions. [audience laughter]

SEEKER: [laughing] Thank you.

RAJ: It is well to have the reminder, because this is a reminder to let go of definitions.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: Continue.

SEEKER: I think that really handled it. I really wanted to understand what a mind does. And, you know, if that's what I am, if I'm this Mind, then I need to pay attention. And it has to be in the now because...

RAJ: Well, Mind automatically does that.

SEEKER: Oh! I don't have to make it do that? Okay.

RAJ: When you stop thinking, you'll find that what's left is you paying attention.

SEEKER: Oh.

RAJ: You being Conscious.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: And actually, you will find yourself paying attention in a way that constitutes being more present with everything than you have ever been before, because always your thinking has stood as a barrier, a cushion, between you and that thing. So you have not really been able to be intimately present with everything, because you've got this definition of it sitting between you and it. You see?

SEEKER: Mm hmm.

RAJ: So as you let go of the past, as you let go of the definitions, you end up, you might say, just being Pure Consciousness.

SEEKER: That would be cool.

RAJ: Now Pure Consciousness is not infinite space absolutely clear of anything in it. Consciousness is the experience of attentiveness to what there is to be attentive to, which is Creation.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: God.

SEEKER: Okay. Okay.

RAJ: So you will find yourself being a better driver. You will find yourself being a better organizer, if that's what's needed. Or you will find yourself being less organized because you were too compulsively organized before. You will find yourself being so present with everything in such an appropriate manner that the only way to describe it would be that you will have the experience of being more alive and more connected with everything.

SEEKER: That would be good.

RAJ: And everything will extend way beyond what you've, in the past, called everything. So you will not lose your capacity to be intelligent. You will not begin to do foolish things. You will be the Presence of an orderly Mind, you might say—not by virtue of your ordering it—but an orderly Mind that sees order everywhere, that is by virtue of its fundamental, intelligent structure communicating intelligent structure and expecting to see intelligent structure—not by plan, but just by Function. And everything will reflect back to you the quality of Truth with which you're looking at everything.

Now, in practical terms that means that everything that needs to get done will get done. All of your relationships with the people in your experience will be healing, or will be harmonious. You won't be airy-fairy, strumming a harp. Your everyday life will... every element of it will fit together in such integrity that there's not a single space for confusion, or chaos, to enter. And every aspect of it will be in Movement—the Flow of Creation identifying the Father's Will.

And so, you will feel the orderliness of it; I'm even going to say the subatomic orderliness of it; the Orderliness of the Movement of Being. And you will feel it right in this room here. You will feel the space that seems to be empty, and how it configures perfectly with every board in the ceiling and every indentation in the walls where the windows are, and how perfectly the glass interfaces with the space inside and identifies beauty, and more. You will feel the perfection of all of the space and everything in it; in the space. You will experience the awesomeness of this room, the outdoors, of your home, of the space in between, of the way your car moves from here to there, and the space that the air took up before your car moved into it shifts to the space behind it, and so on. You will feel the integrity of all of it.

And I tell you, it is an awesome experience, not one that you, in bliss, are sitting back having about everything else, but that you engaged in the Movement yourself experience. What I'm trying to convey here, again, is not an other-worldly experience, but a new experience of right where you have been all along. And why will you have this experience? Because, in the absence of thinking, you will find that what is left is Consciousness—Consciousness being attentive, and experiencing What Is Here without the interference of the definitions about everything that is here that you were employing before. And I will stop there with your answer.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You're welcome.

Over here.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Thanks, Raj. I, too, have been chewing for the past couple of weeks, struggling, if you will, with the... on the one hand, yeah, I felt like in a way the way you described. You said some of us may feel like this is unfair that you're asking us to do this, you know. And because it just seems too advanced, it's like wait, wait, wait! Shouldn't that come at the end of the book, or something? Because, you know, I'm having a hard enough time getting to a point where I can...

RAJ: Let me say this. The end of the book is where the last step is taken. And we're talking about the second step.

SEEKER: Okay. Well, I'm still struggling with the first step.

RAJ: Indeed. And as I said, I've now said you have to take two kinds of steps together. Yes.

Continue.

SEEKER: Right. And I feel like I'm one of those...

RAJ: Wait a minute. I also said you are capable of it.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Okay.

SEEKER: Oh, I totally know that. I was blessed in the past by a point in time when I was at the bottom of my bucket, and I was just in a complete state of "I give up, God." You know, take me out of here. Whatever You're going to do with me, it's okay. I'm through with this, you know. Whatever happens, "I surrender" kind of attitude. And out of that, when I meditated thinking, "Okay. This is fine with me if this is the last time I ever meditate, you know. This is... I want to go to Heaven, or wherever." I want to be out of here, was my attitude.

And somehow, by grace, I had an awakening, or, what I'd call nowadays, is sort of like a "preview of coming attractions" experience where it was very much like you described. In other words, there's a spontaneity of right action, appropriate speech, a state of living in fulfillment, and knowing that my needs are met moment by moment. And there's a spontaneous expression of sharing; wanting to give from that overflowing of your heart.

But, okay, that sort of dwindled away. And I got back into the ego state where everything is a struggle. And I see, you know, even though I have that memory back there of that experience, I'm still in a state of, right now, in a state of "okay, Raj is saying grasp this, do this." And I'm trying to do that from an intellectual plane, which is what you've been talking about tonight, which I really appreciate this sort of screen of definitions. And all the ego could do would be to try to pretend, or see, okay, I'm going to try to behave like Christ today. And I'm going to be good. And I'm going to... you know. It's an act. It's the best that could be done.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: And it's just another costume. It's not the real thing.

RAJ: It's another delay.

SEEKER: And so inside me, I know. I know the difference experientially, and so I just go back and say, okay, look, there's nothing I can do other than meditate and hope that I can let go of my resentments towards family members, other people, and all these bullshit stories that I have that I want justice.

RAJ: I understand. Let me interrupt.

SEEKER: So I really appreciate what you said tonight.

RAJ: What can you do? What am I asking you to do?

SEEKER: What I was struggling with, which tonight you've brought some clarity to, is it seemed like you were asking us to not only know ourselves as Christs, but to see that Divineness in our brother, and our sister, and our neighbor, and our boss, and everybody. And I was feeling like [whoosh sound], you know, I can't even see that in myself right now experientially. All I could do is try to imagine it, or intellectually define it.

RAJ: You want to know something?

SEEKER: What?

RAJ: If you, or anyone else who might ever hear these words, listens, you will learn something wonderful. If you find yourself ill and in the hospital, you want to know the surest way to have a healing? Find someone else, perhaps in the very same room you're in, someone else who is in the hospital, and devote your[self]... let them be the object of your affection. If you want healing, give healing.

"Oh! But you ask too much! I'm in the hospital. I'm not in tip-top shape. I don't feel energetic. I don't feel like giving." Well, that's why you're in the hospital. You see? Illness is an extreme form of isolation caused by self-preoccupation, in one way or another.

And so, here you are, I'm saying, in the hospital. And I'm saying what you're called upon for is to be willing to have someone else in need be the object of your affection and give your devotion to that one, listening to God for the Truth about that one.

"Oh! Oh! You mean... well, but what about me? I'm the one in the hospital that needs healing. You know, who's gonna do this for me? You want me to do it for them?" Yes.

Why? Because it's the way you break your isolation. It's never going to be easy to break your isolation, because it's a very ingrained habit. And anyone asking you to do what it takes to break the isolation is going to seem like an unreasonable demand, because you have other things to take care of. You have more urgent things. Blah, blah, blah. 'Tain't so. You have only one thing that you need to do, and that is break the isolation.

And so, if you want healing, be a healing presence, whether you think that it's an opportune time or not. If you want healing, give healing, because what you give, you get to keep. What you actually really extend becomes yours, becomes embodied.

And you know what? Until you wake up, there's always going to be some apparently worthy thing for you to attend to other than what I've just told you to do. There's going to always be some sort of emergency, or urgency, or strong need that you feel compelled to deal with. But I'm telling you that those things are the result of your having forgotten to say, "Father, help." You have forgotten to let something else in. So find an object of your affection, and extend Love so that you might have Love.

Continue.

SEEKER: Yes. I appreciate that shift of perception from... let's... you know, I have experienced that. I could be dwelling on something from the past that I have grievance over, and then maybe the phone rings and it's one of my sons. And I'll just instantly I'm in a state of gratitude, appreciation. So the mind is really fickle in that way. It can shift from one thing to another. I could be totally depressed at one moment, and then very happy in the next.

RAJ: But there is something determining where the attention is going to shift to and whether it's going to do it at this moment. So you... there is a decider there.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: You could have answered the phone, found out it was your son, and projected all of your negative feelings about the past that you had been ruminating about onto him, and ruined the conversation.

RAJ: Okay.

SEEKER: Where I have a little bit of a "yes but" in what you're saying here is affection.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: If I see something beautiful, I don't have any trouble feeling love and appreciation for it. It just comes spontaneously. But if I see someone who is the way you described; say I'm in the hospital and the guy in the bed next to me is in worse shape than me, or maybe not, whatever, I don't want to get into a sort of a self-righteous kind of okay, I'm going to extend love to this decrepit, poor person because I want healing for myself. That's bullshit!

RAJ: That's right.

SEEKER: I want to be coming from natural, real affection.

RAJ: You don't want to do any of it yourself.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: What I mean by this is that if you're going to extend Love, you're going to have to turn first to the Father, and ask the Father to reveal to you what is lovable about this man, what is the Truth about this man. And you are going to listen for the Father, just as Paul is listening for me right now, so that you might be infilled with what the Father extends, so that you might... so that your perspective is changed and automatically embraces that one. And there won't be anything about your doing something for somebody else so that you will get something. I'm just explaining to you that when you do that, something does happen.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: And you get to keep what you have given. And you will never have what you never give. Okay.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: I want to make sure there is time for anyone else.

SEEKER: Okay. Sure. Thank you.

RAJ: [indicating to someone that they can speak] Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Thank you, Raj. The answers of some of the other people who've asked questions have already given me some of the answers to my question. But being a father, and a brother, and a husband, over the last two weeks I have had the chance to enjoy the last lectures that we've enjoyed out of the Course... um... have been some[what] of a personal tsunami for me because of the...

PAUL: A personal?

SEEKER: ...personal tsunami of my own with the family that we've...

PAUL: Personal "sue-no-me"?

SEEKER: Tsunami. Tsunami.

PAUL: Oh, tsunami. Okay. [laughing]

SEEKER: Considering what we've just gone through. And I have to wonder how one can bring all these personalities into some kind of agreement, even when I walk with the Course in my hand and my heart.

RAJ: Why do you have to bring them all into agreement?

SEEKER: That's a good question. It seems to be such a personal conflict and chaos in the family with personalities.

RAJ: A conceptual one? Or...

SEEKER: There is a strong feature about each personality in my family. And they seem to find the differences, not the commonalities to allow love in their life. And it makes it hard, from my perception, to try to...

RAJ: They love rigorous interchange.

SEEKER: They do that. It gives me an opportunity to use the Course in Miracles frequently. But sometimes I think my feet are still in the concrete.

RAJ: "Father, help me. Help me neglect to exercise judgment just because I am with those whose rigorousness makes it appear to me that they are expressing more ego-dynamics than I, for myself, want to employ."

What I'm trying to say to you is that maybe what they're doing isn't all ego-dynamics, but just a different way of expressing themselves; sort of a different language of communication than the one you're familiar with, and which, because you're not familiar with it, causes you to feel inadequate, at a loss. I am suggesting that you go within to ask whether or not any exercise of control is needed at all. And if not, how you can be present with it without engaging in judgment, and how you can be with it without feeling threatened by its intensity. To be spiritually aware does not mean to become delicate and unable to withstand vigor.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You're welcome.

Over here.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj, what's interesting for me is that I'm in a situation in my life right now where it's a relationship that started out as a contractual agreement, in that I had some technical work that needed to be done on a project that I was working on, and I wasn't, I didn't have that technical ability, so I contracted someone to come in and do it. And what I thought was going to turn out to be a three-month project is now going over ten months.

And it's a situation where initially I felt, well, the person's just incompetent, and so I need to just take all my stuff back from them and find someone else. And then I thought, well, you know, and again I'm giving you the history, 'cause for me there was a shift in it in that, you know, then I thought, I beat myself up that, well, I should've had a termination date in the contract. And so I went... all this operating number one stuff about doing business the right way came up. And then I thought, well, wait a minute. This... no. This is a lose-lose situation. I'm not getting what I need from the relationship, and she's not getting what she needs from the relationship. So let me look deeper into this. And then, of course, just by coincidence, we're covering this stuff in the Course. And so now I'm saying okay, now what's the real message? What is she telling me?

So I set up some meetings with her at her house with the computer to work on the project so I could be right there with her involved in the project as she was. And then I realized that this lady has so many other distractions going on in her life that it's very difficult for her just to sit with the project for any length of time. And so I've been with her now on several occasions to try and move the project along. And I'm still... it's like the first thing I came up with was there's an attention deficit disorder going on here. In other words, she can't really bring her forces to bear here.

And then on my side, it was me saying, you know, she's taking advantage of me here, you know, my patience, my resources, whatever. So there was a real charge behind it. And that's what fascinated me about the situation is that whenever there's that much of a charge behind a situation, I know that there's more meat here to chew on, and that I need to go in with it so I can get clear, because until I can get clear, it's not going to move on, or I'm going to have to repeat it again. So that's the point that I'm at now where it's coming to like, you know, the ball is in her court again. She's got to finish this thing up and present me with a finished project, a finished product.

And so now I'm being more open and looking beyond the surface than I ever have been with this situation. So, I am at that point, like you said tonight, where I'm going, "Father, you know, what's going on here? What's the meaning of this situation?" But, yet, at the same time I don't want to get caught in this situation of, well, I'll give her just one more chance. I'll give her just one more chance. You know, it's like... or the situation of, well, if I really pray hard and be open to the Father, the problem will go away. You see what I mean? So that's my question. It's like what's the appropriate... you know. Okay, now, I'm waiting. I'm listening. I'm paying attention. Is that all? Do you stop there? Do you just keep paying attention? Or what's the...

RAJ: That's exactly what you do. You continue paying attention. The new modus operandi is pay attention, pay attention, pay attention, pay attention. That's called Being.

SEEKER: So instead of taking the initiative, it becomes responding appropriately.

RAJ: Exactly. And responding from a deep connectedness in you to the Movement itself, irrespective of personalities, psychologies, mental disorders, or definitions that are out of the past. You be in life ongoingly with innocence.

SEEKER: Well, just... I mean you know so I'll ask if that's what I'm doing now, right?

RAJ: That is what you are doing now, but you are still struggling with letting go of some ordering structure, or grid, to hold the Movement up against so that you may judge, or a judgment can be made.

SEEKER: Progress. Yes. Yes.

RAJ: Indeed. And that's...

SEEKER: Silly.

RAJ: It's the useless stuff that you are learning to let go of.

SEEKER: Yes. Right. Because in effect that says, I mean holding onto that structure says I know the timetable for this particular thing to be done, as opposed to following God's timetable, so to speak.

RAJ: Now you notice also that you're talking about circumstances, projects, time, et cetera. We didn't read anything about circumstances, time, projects. We were talking about relationship and the necessity for each of you to be willing to see the Holy Spirit, or the Christ, in your Brother, just as you are learning you have to do with yourself. And to reach for, to lean into, to connect with the Holy Spirit in your Brother, or your Sister. And that you've spoken very little of here. But your attention is in that direction. I simply want to bring it more solidly in that direction.

You don't give your attention to the Excellence in them so that you can find out how to be in better control, or to find out what their problem is. You talk to the Holy Spirit to find out what the Truth about them is so that you, in your Conscious Awareness of Truth about them, are sending out those messengers about them. They will come back reporting what they were sent out to find, which will be confirming of your right intent, but which will also be a blessing for this other one. You see?

SEEKER: See, what I'm experiencing right now is I see this person struggling. Okay? And so, like I'm a little bit fixated on their struggle, saying, "How can I support this person in their struggle?"

RAJ: What's the definition of struggle? And what degree of struggling? What's the degree of intensity of the struggle?

SEEKER: Right. Right. Right.

RAJ: This is something you're applying to a benign picture.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: You see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: Right.

Now theoretically I can... and I say this theoretically, I can see, I mean I know that this person is a good person. The Holy Spirit is in them.

RAJ: How do you know that?

SEEKER: Because I can feel it. I mean you can, I can feel that this person is not a bad person. They're not trying to take advantage of me. They're not, you know, jerking me around. They're doing the best they can.

RAJ: Yes, but I want you to feel that they're a good person because the Holy Spirit has revealed it to you, and not because you can sense that she fits into a certain structure of definitions.

RAJ: You see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: I want it to be, I want you to be looking more for an experience than a sense.

SEEKER: Right. But the thing is...

RAJ: An experience that has been derived from an actual connection with the Holy Spirit.

SEEKER: Right. And that's what I'm trying to get at here. That is not, that does not come from trying to see it in the other person. It comes from being open and asking to be shown. Correct?

RAJ: And I am telling you that you, from your human experience, recognize that she exhibits, let's say, a certain number of criteria that tell you that she's basically a good person. And that's not the same as a direct connection with the Holy Spirit.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: So I'm pointing you in the direction of going deeper for a Holy Spirit experience, rather than a recognition that certain criteria have been met that allow her to be recognized as a basically good person who's overwhelmed herself for whatever reason.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And the best way for me to receive that is just ask for it and be open to it.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Not having. Not doing. There's nothing to do here. It's just...

RAJ: Except ask.

SEEKER: Except ask.

RAJ: Step right up to the edge of what you don't know and lean into it with the desire to know the Truth that needs to be known.

RAJ: The Truth that heals.

SEEKER: Right. It's, to me at this point, it seems like that is more important than project completion, or project success, or...

RAJ: They're so inseparable it's not funny.

SEEKER: Right, right, right. But what I'm saying is my attention is now on what... the real value is what is the... how can I make this connection? How can I see the miracle unfold from the situation?

RAJ: Yes. Exactly.

SEEKER: And then just be with that.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Okay. Thank you.

RAJ: Yes.

If we end right now, is there anyone who will go away and be absolutely angry because they didn't speak up? [audience laughter] Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Just dejected and hurt probably would have been it.

I've been kind of fuzzy about the understanding of what extending healing meant. And as everyone's been asking and as you've been talking, I think I've realized that I thought if I extend healing, I would see a change out there. And I feel like I feel, you know, affection in here for an object of my affection out there, and then they start to talk. [laughing] You know, and then they say their complaints, or their whatever.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And I can't agree with what they're saying, but I haven't known how to offer anything else. I did have a...

RAJ: They don't want you to agree. They want a different answer themselves. They want not to have to register that complaint, or that perspective. And so you have to listen for what the answer is. You have to listen for what the answer is so that you can share that.

What's behind the moan? What is the Truth that makes them feel the illegitimacy of their experience, so that they have justification for complaining about the experience? Do you see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: Yeah. I did it with a stranger once.

PAUL: Pardon.

SEEKER: You know, it happened to me with a stranger. And I really leaned in, you know, to my Guidance, and I heard, "I'll give you a new experience of this person if you don't run away." And we didn't have any words. But I totally received, you know, a miracle and a blessing and really saw the beauty of them. I find it, I mean maybe I just am not leaning into it as much with people that I know and I'm having a conversation with.

RAJ: Exactly. Like I said, you know them too damn well to think that there is a Place of Excellence in them.

SEEKER: [laughing] Right. Yeah.

RAJ: You see? Yes.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: And of course, that's your judgment. And those are the messengers you send out.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: And communication doesn't occur, no matter how much talking goes on.

SEEKER: Okay.

Because when it happened that spontaneous time, like I had no, you know, agenda for that person having a change in front of me, even though he did have a change. You know he went from being snarling and everything to being calm. But I think I'm, you know, quote "extending healing" to a lot of people around me to change them, and to, you know, control the situation, or something. And so that's not leaning into the Holy Spirit at all, you know.

RAJ: Yes. The key here is one of the pieces of gristle.

[Editor's Note: Now Raj reads a sentence from earlier in this section. The sentence was covered in an earlier meeting.]

RAJ READING: The message your brother gives you is...

RAJ: All capital letters.

RAJ READING: ...UP TO YOU.

RAJ: If you think there is an ego there, and you're listening for an ego to speak, an ego is what you're going to hear, even if they're speaking the utter Truth. If they are speaking the utter Truth and you recognize the excellence of it, because you're expecting an ego to speak, you are going to be suspicious of the motive for such Holiness and Excellence that's being expressed, and you will not see it.

And if they are coming from an ego place, and what they are saying is an expression of confusion and misunderstanding of What They Are, you, if you are listening for the Holy Spirit in them, will hear what is behind their poor expression, so that you can respond to that. But what you hear will be up to you, and that is the key.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Now, just because we move on doesn't mean that this chapter should be left behind. Review it over the next few months. Review it, remind yourself, because it sets a foundation for the rest of what is to come.

Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Was there another question over here? [no question was forthcoming]

Okay. You are a wonderfully lovable, motley crew. [audience laughter] I love you greatly and I look forward to being with you next week.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

RAJ READING: [Chapter 9] THE CORRECTION OF ERROR

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, this is a section heading, not a chapter heading. In the first and second editions, this is the third section in Chapter 9.]

RAJ: What's another way of saying that? The correction of misperception.

And how does misperception get corrected? By providing the conditions in which a miracle can occur. And what is a miracle? A sudden shift of perception. And how do you provide the conditions for a miracle to occur? By abandoning your best judgments, by abandoning your thinking, by becoming still and going within and asking to know the Truth. Asking of whom or what? The Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. By asking your Guide, or by asking God.

In other words, you provide the conditions for a miracle, a sudden shift of perception, by reaching beyond your memory, by reaching beyond your strongest beliefs, by joining with something beyond the realm of your limited conscious awareness, or the area of your unlimited Conscious Awareness that you have circumscribed and bound yourself to. You provide the conditions for a miracle to occur by abandoning your isolation. And you abandon it by inviting something else in. When you do that and a sudden shift of perception occurs, error is corrected, misperception leaves you, causing you to no longer be looking at your world through the lens of your misperception, and allowing you to see everything through the Eyes of God. In other words, with the capacity to see What Is Truly There with the concurrent or simultaneous awareness that you, who are looking at it, are the Presence of Mind which is the Mind of God. So it isn't you seeing something awesome where you had seen something quite ordinary in the past. It's you, being something quite awesome, seeing that which is quite awesome that you had missed before when you thought you were what you believed you were, and looked at everything through that lens.

This section is relatively easy to understand without explanation.

RAJ READING: The alertness of the ego to the errors which other egos make is not the kind of vigilance the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...would have you maintain.

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: The alertness of the ego to the errors which other egos make is not the kind of vigilance the Holy Spirit would have you maintain. Egos are critical in terms of the kind of "sense" they stand for. THEY understand this kind of sense, because it IS sensible to them. To the Holy Spirit, it makes no sense at all. To the ego, it is kind and right and good to point out errors and "correct" them.

RAJ: Well, where does the correction, where does... where is the error that the ego is trying to correct? It's always out there in someone else, or something else, or in a circumstance, or in a political system—whatever.

RAJ READING: To the ego, it is kind and right and good to point out errors and "correct" them.

RAJ: Which involves manipulating your world out there to correct the errors, to correct those who are coming from erroneous places, who are thinking erroneously and behaving badly because of their erroneous perceptions. But that doesn't fit in, does it, with what I described as the means for the correction of error, because what I described had nothing to do with manipulating anything out there. It had to do with you providing the conditions under which the miracle could occur, the sudden shift of perception in you, the result of which is your seeing with new eyes not bound by your previous concepts and misperceptions.

Again.

RAJ READING: To the ego, it is kind and right and good to point out errors and "correct" them. This makes perfect sense to the ego, which is totally unaware of what errors ARE and what correction IS.

RAJ: Well, we discussed what errors are. They are misperceptions believed by you, by anyone. And the correction of misperception occurs in you by your again providing the environment, the conditions, in which a sudden shift of perception can occur.

You must ask the question, "Where is the error and who is suffering from it?"

If you say the error is out there, causing bad behavior out there which I'm suffering from, you're already caught in the dream. And you are not providing the conditions under which a sudden shift of perception can occur, which is what will constitute the correction of error. The error lies in the fact that you are not looking at your Brother, or at your world, with God, or with the Holy Spirit. You're doing it all by yourself in the privacy of your very private definition of yourself—in other words, as an orphan. That is where the error is and that is what the error is. And that is the only place that the error can be corrected that will suddenly cause you to become what could be called an agent for change, a healer.

Indeed, you do have Brothers and Sisters who are suffering from their own misperceptions. And they are behaving on the basis of their misperceptions, their misunderstanding of Who They Are. And they deserve not to be suffering from that, just as much as you.

When you go within and you join with the Father, or the Holy Spirit, and you allow the miracle to occur, the sudden shift of perception within you to occur, you will now not behave toward your misperceiving Brother as though the error is there and you must correct it there. You will be with that Brother, knowing What He Truly Is, because you'll be seeing something awesome there. And as I said, that vision will be accompanied by the awareness that the Awareness, the Consciousness That You Are, is Itself something awesome.

And the awesomeness of What You Are, and the awesomeness of What Your Brother Is, will cause you not to attack him, not to try to change him, but to be with him in a way that is so utterly benign that he cannot help but feel the Love that he is embraced with, or embraced by, when he's with you, causing him to feel a level of safety, and even courage to dare to drop his defense. You will be an agent for change because the Movement of Love that will be engendered by you, by your letting it through, will be recognized by him or her. And the invitation for him to put down his defenses will not be perceived as coercion, or as an attempt to correct.

Because remember whenever you engage in attempting to correct a Brother, there is an unstated premise to your attempt, and that is that your Brother is at fault. There is a judgment there and your Brother feels that. And that immediately calls for defense and causes your Brother to see you as a manipulator coming from the same ego place he, or she, is coming from, which means that your motives for manipulation are self-serving to you and that one better defend himself vigorously. This is why the attempt to correct a Brother doesn't work, and does initiate and bring forth strong radical defense, even though there isn't a bit of sense to the defense, even though you can see that the defense is insane.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Errors ARE of the ego, and correction of errors of any kind lies...

RAJ: Where? Not in changing the egos of others, but it lies...

RAJ READING: ...solely in the RELINQUISHMENT of the ego.

RAJ: And who's going to relinquish it? The one who sees errors out there to correct. Who's going to relinquish it? The only one you know about—you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you correct a brother, you are telling him that he is wrong. He may be making no sense at the time, and it is certain that, if he is speaking from the ego, he WILL be making no sense. But your task is still to tell him he is RIGHT.

RAJ: Now listen to the next sentence.

RAJ READING: You do not tell him this verbally, if he is speaking foolishly, because he needs correction at ANOTHER level, since his error IS at another level.

RAJ: There is a rather foolish new-age premise that everyone is creating his own reality and no one has a right to override it because it is a gift of God, or from God, to you to be able to create your own reality. That is your function. That is what you're in this experience for. Therefore, no one has the right to tell you that you are wrong. You have a God-given right to create your own reality without objection from any quarter. That is foolishness.

This can be carried further by those who pick up the Course, who are unclear and think that this is, indeed, supporting that premise, and so one reads and says, "It says, 'But your task is still to tell him he is right.'" No, he's not right in his misperception.

But you know what? The key element here is that no matter how your Brother, or Sister, is behaving, in fact no matter how any one of you is behaving, ignorantly based upon misperceptions you have, it doesn't change the fact that although forgotten by you, you are at this instant the full and Direct Expression of God. It is God who is embodying Himself/Herself right there where you are. And nothing else is present but What God Is Being right there where you are. And the acknowledgement of this is the acknowledgement that you are fundamentally right. Your very Being is right. Your very Being is flawless, innocent, at this moment.

Your behavior doesn't reflect that fact, and correction is called for there. But your misbehaving based upon your misperceptions doesn't change What You Divinely Are. And some one of you with everyone else, with every other one of you, must dare to take the radical stand that the one you are confronted by is fundamentally right, is fundamentally the Christ. Someone must dare to look at his Brother, or Sister, with the conscious intent of acknowledging that, instead of continuing down the path of the general misperception that everyone is just a mortal, a product of a sperm and an egg, a physical organism. Or, perhaps a little bit better, a spirit temporarily in a body and appearing to be a material organism. You have to start daring to be radical enough to look at your miserable Brother and not believe what you're seeing, to contradict it in your mind by acknowledging What Is True.

Now, you have book-learning, you have knowledge, you might say, from having read the Course, from having been with me in these sessions. You have knowledge as to what the Truth about your Brother is. And on the basis of that knowledge, you can break the habit of what you used to think by thinking something new, but that is not all it takes, because that's not you experiencing What Is True. But if you will abide with the knowledge you have gained and be with it, rather than being in a constant state of reaction to your Brother's bad behavior, you will provide the conditions under which a miracle can occur in you, the conditions under which you will suddenly find yourself relinquishing the ego—your ego. And that's the point at which you become an agent for change and healing can begin to occur.

Continuing.

[Editor's Note: This is part of the sentence before the last sentence which was read.]

RAJ READING: ...your task is still to tell him he is RIGHT.

RAJ: You understand the difference here? It doesn't mean that you look at him and at his behavior and at what he's saying and you say, "Yes, that's right. That's right. You have the right to create your own reality, and you're doing quite a job of it. And you're right." No.

Your task is still to tell him he, the Divine One That He Is, is right. And the Divine One That He Is that is right is present at the very moment that you're saying it, in spite of his ignorant behavior. You dare to take the radical stand of acknowledging What Is True About Him right when he is behaving badly.

RAJ READING: You do not tell him this verbally, if he is speaking foolishly, because he needs correction at ANOTHER level, since his error IS at another level. HE...

RAJ: Now listen.

RAJ READING: HE is still right, because he is a Son of God.

RAJ: You see? The level at which the change has to occur is within him where he's willing to make a shift in his perception as to What He Is, not just a tentative and short-lived physical organism, but as an Eternal Presence of Mind that is God Being Himself right there where that Mind is. Period.

RAJ READING: HE is still right, because he is a Son of God. His ego is always wrong, no matter WHAT it says or does.

If you point out the errors of your brother's ego, you must be seeing through YOURS, because the Holy Spirit does not perceive his errors.

RAJ: Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. Your Right Mind does not perceive your Brother's errors.

So if you're seeing errors to be corrected, you're not seeing through anything other than your very own ego. And you're not in a position to be an actual agent for change. You're only in a position to exert more force, more apparent power, than the strength of your Brother's conviction as to his way of looking at things and causing him for self-preservation to yield to the force that you bring to bear upon him. But both of you are still totally ignorant of What You Are, and there is nothing present to be an agent for change. No healer/healing present or possible.

Again.

RAJ READING: If you point out the errors of your brother's ego, you must be seeing through YOURS, because the Holy Spirit does not perceive his errors. This must be true if there is no communication at all between the ego and the Holy Spirit.

RAJ: Why isn't there any communication at all between the ego and the Holy Spirit? Because you've divorced the two. When you divorced the Father and said, "Father, I would rather see it my way," you caused a split between yourself—what you currently call yourself—and What You Divinely Are, which is called the Holy Spirit until you remember Who You Are, and then you become the Son of God, the Presence of God, as an Experience.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego makes no sense, and the Holy Spirit does not attempt to understand anything that arises from it. Since He does not understand it, He does not JUDGE it, knowing that nothing it engenders...

RAJ: Meaning the ego.

RAJ READING: ...means anything.

RAJ: The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: Sanity and Perception

[Editor's Note: This heading is not in the first and second editions.]

RAJ READING: When you react AT ALL to errors, you are not listening to the Holy Spirit.

RAJ: Why? Because the Holy Spirit doesn't see errors. It does see calls for correction. But it's like this:

There's an old car, a junk heap, parked in a field and a plant starts to grow underneath the junk heap— the junk, the car—the junk car. And as it grows up, it bumps into the underside of the car and can't proceed further.

Well, from an ego standpoint the correct response would be to say to that plant, "What a fool you are for germinating there. Look at you. You can't grow tall like you're supposed to. You've started growing in a place where you are hit by an obstacle and blocked from normal growth. How foolish of you. You're doomed to a misshapen bent existence. And you will never be able to stand proud like your other brother and sister plants. And you will be the subject of ridicule and laughter. How foolish of you to have done that."

The Holy Spirit, on the other hand, does see a call for correction, but the correction isn't scolding and ridicule. The correction is to lift the junk heap off, because the Holy Spirit sees that it's the nature of the plant to grow and stand tall and straight. And It, the Holy Spirit, stands in support of establishing that Meaning and Purpose that is the plant's, with nothing blocking it. And so it doesn't scold the plant. It moves the junk car, the junk heap. Its behavior acts in complete support and consistence with the Function and the Meaning of the existence of that plant. The plant, as a result, does not feel belittled. It does not feel ashamed. It feels the recognition of its Truth. And what I mean by that is it feels the recognition of its innate Meaning and Function, and appreciation is spontaneous, not defense.

You see the difference? Correction—from the standpoint of clear perception—emboldens, nurtures, supports, and substantiates That Which Is True in each and every thing.

Again.

RAJ READING: When you react AT ALL to errors, you are not listening to the Holy Spirit. He has merely disregarded them, and if you attend to them, you are not hearing HIM.

RAJ: You're not hearing that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. You're still standing in the dark. You're still standing in ignorance.

RAJ READING: If you do not hear Him, you ARE...

RAJ: And the word "are" is emphasized.

RAJ READING: ...you ARE listening to your ego, and making as little sense as the brother whose errors you perceive. This cannot be correction. Yet it is more than merely lack of correction for him. It is the giving up of correction in YOURSELF.

RAJ: And I would add: By you.

It constitutes you making a choice to continue to be ignorant, to not experience a sudden shift of perception that causes you to no longer misperceive and allows you to more clearly fulfill your Function as the Presence of Love.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When a brother behaves insanely, you can...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...heal him only by perceiving the SANITY in him.

RAJ: Remember, this chapter is called, "The Correction of Error." Why? Why would we have a subject like that? Why would we discuss it? Because there is something that needs to be done. There is something that needs to happen because you're not experiencing your Function. You're not experiencing your Divinity. You're bound by a tiny perception of yourself that limits the Divine One That You Are greatly. And correction is called for.

Remember what we're reading about is not about nice happy thoughts that cause you not to be distressed when everyone else is being distressed—someone finding bliss in misery. That's not what it's about. It really is about correction. It really is about experiencing Heaven, instead of what you're experiencing.

Your Function is to heal and to be healed. Your Function at the moment is to wake up, so that any stress and misery and tension that you might be experiencing will fade away, no longer to be any part of your experience so that you can be in a new way in the world and with your Brothers and Sisters.

I'm going to back up.

RAJ READING: If you do not hear Him,...

RAJ: Meaning the Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...you ARE listening to your ego, and making as little sense as the brother whose errors you perceive. This cannot be correction. Yet it is more than merely lack of correction for him. It is the giving up of correction in YOURSELF.

RAJ: It is giving up your own healing.

And I promise you that whenever you find a Brother, or a Sister, not to be worthy of your willingness to see What Is Real, with a capital "R", about them, you are using your Brothers and Sisters as justification for not experiencing healing and awakening yourself. If you want to wake up, you're going to have to begin to use your Brothers and Sisters as justification for seeing What Is True about them so that you might wake up.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When a brother behaves insanely, you can heal him only by perceiving the SANITY in him.

RAJ: The Divine Sanity. The Real Truth about him.

RAJ READING: If you perceive his errors and ACCEPT them, you are accepting YOURS.

RAJ: It really is impossible for you to believe something is True about something, about someone else, that isn't True about you. I mean really True. When you experience the Truth about you, it is experienced as an insight or a revelation. You feel it. You know it to the tips of your toes. And it's not knowledge. It's Knowing. It's incontrovertible Truth. And when you have that experience, you know it's True about everyone.

So...

RAJ READING: If you perceive his errors and ACCEPT them, you are accepting YOURS. If you want to give yours over to the Holy Spirit, you must do this with his.

RAJ: You must be willing to turn your Brother's errors over to the Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: Unless this becomes the one way in which you handle ALL errors, you cannot understand how all errors are UNDONE. How is this different from telling you that what you teach you learn? Your brother is as right as you are, and if you think he is wrong you are condemning yourself.

RAJ: What Your Brother Divinely Is, is as right as What You Divinely Are.

RAJ READING: ...and if you think he is wrong you are condemning yourself.

RAJ: Because you're abandoning your opportunity to be aware of What Is Divinely True About You as well as your Brother. This is why your Brother is so important. Until you extend the acknowledgement of Truth to your Brother, you cannot have it for yourself. This is a fundamental Law of Being you, might say. Not a law thought up and written down, but an Element of the Way Things Work before anyone could have a thought to make-up a law. You see? It's the Way Things Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: YOU cannot correct YOURSELF.

RAJ: Surprise.

RAJ READING: YOU cannot correct YOURSELF.

RAJ: That in you which would see a need for correction is that which is misperceiving. And that which is misperceiving cannot bring about the correction. You see?

But are you stuck? No. Because all you need to do is to be willing to break the isolation and reach outside of your normal mental playground, and say "help" and invite something else in that breaks the isolation. And in the breaking of the isolation, a sudden shift of perception occurs, a miracle happens, and you know the Truth. It's revealed to you as experiential down to the tips of your toes. And misperception abandons you. And no one corrected you, not even you.

RAJ READING: YOU cannot correct YOURSELF. Is it possible, then, for you to correct another? Yet you CAN see him truly...

RAJ: You have that capacity. You might not be able to force him to be What He Truly Is, but you have the capacity to see him truly.

RAJ READING: ...because it is possible for you to see YOURSELF truly. It is not up to you to change him, but merely to accept him as he IS.

RAJ: Another sticky sentence. How often do you hear somebody say, "Well, if you would just accept me as I am, everything would be all right." No, it wouldn't.

RAJ READING: It is not up to you to change him, but merely to accept him as he IS.

RAJ: To accept him as He Divinely Is. To accept him as What He Truly Is. To accept him as the Presence of God, as God Presence-ing Himself right there where your Brother is.

You accept him as He Is, not as he believes himself to be. You see the difference? Because it's very important. And if you do not see it, you will be as unclear and vague and messed up as the Brother who says, "If you will just accept me as I am, you'll see that everything will be all right."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: His errors do not come from the truth that is in him, and only this truth is yours. His errors cannot change this,...

RAJ: Meaning the Truth that is his and yours.

RAJ READING: His errors cannot change this, and can have no effect at all on the truth in YOU. To perceive errors in anyone, and to react to them as if they were real, is to MAKE them real to you. You will not escape paying the price for this, not because you are being punished for it, but because you are following the wrong guide, and will lose your way.

RAJ: Another way I could say it is that you will not be paying attention to the Way Things Work. And so you will behave at odds with the Way Things Work. And whenever you do that, there is always dissonance, because it is an attempt to be unnatural as though you actually had a capacity to be unnatural.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your brother's errors are not of him, any more than yours are of YOU.

RAJ: Now who is this him and you? The piss-ant little ego sense of yourself? No.

Your Brother's errors are not of What He Really Is, any more than yours are of What You Really Are. And you must remember that no matter what kind of presentation you are making to the world, or your Brother is (or Sister is) making to the world, you haven't changed What You Really Are and you haven't gotten rid of What You Really Are. And you haven't damaged What You Really Are. And you haven't irrevocably injured yourself for the rest of Eternity, so that you're stuck in the problems you're experiencing.

Again.

RAJ READING: Your brother's errors are not of him, any more than yours are of YOU. Accept his errors as real, and you have attacked YOURSELF. If you would find your way and keep it see only truth beside you, for you walk together. The Holy Spirit in you forgives all things in you AND...

RAJ: You see the sentence didn't end there because the idea isn't complete yet.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit in you forgives all things in you AND in your brother. HIS errors are forgiven WITH yours.

RAJ: Darn it. You're just not going to get back into the Kingdom of Heaven all by yourself.

RAJ READING: Atonement is no more separate than love.

RAJ: You see? How can you Love if you're all alone? You can't be Love if there isn't an object of your affection. Love cannot be an isolated experience.

RAJ READING: Atonement is no more separate than love. Atonement cannot be separate because it COMES from love. ANY attempt you make to correct a brother means that you believe correction by YOU is possible, and this can ONLY be the arrogance of the ego.

RAJ: And I promise you, and you've all had the experience in one way or another, that when you think that you're in a position of calling forth correction in a Brother, you're met with resistance because your attitude is insulting. It's a claim to be different from your Brother, better than your Brother, perhaps stronger than your Brother, not better, and then not even more right, but stronger. It's always a position of difference.

And whenever anyone acts as though they are different from you, how does it make you feel? Well, there's a long list of words. They're all negative.

Correction, an “I’m better than you” attitude, or “I know what you need” attitude, does not arise out of compassion, which means there’s no Love in it. But correction—and I’m going to put quotes around the word “correction”—“correction” that arises out of Love arises out of compassion and out of an awareness of no difference between you and your Brother. And therefore, there’s no arrogance.

And then, if in the absence of arrogance, your Brother finds that you’re seeing something in him that goes beyond what they envisioned about themselves, something that says, “Little plant, look. I’ve removed the junk heap from above you so that everything in you that wants to stand straight and tall can, because that in you which wants to stand straight and tall is What’s Real, and it’s what needs to be embodied, and I know this.” Whew. That’s compassion. It’s Love.

And because it touches the plant, you might say, or your Brother or Sister in the very essence of their Function of Fulfillment, gratitude comes forth. Defenselessness comes forth. Defense melts. Why? Because you have not been the focal point in the interaction. Your Brother’s essential Fulfillment of Purpose and Being was the focal point with you, and your Brother recognizes it. You see?

So Atonement is not about separation. It’s about exactly the opposite.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Correction is of God, Who does not know of arrogance.

RAJ: And I’m going to add: But does know of the central essential Meaning which He has embodied of Himself in each and every thing, and which He Knows can take no part in experiences of limitation or resistance. And, therefore, He—God—cannot validate impediments and removes them.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit forgives everything BECAUSE God created everything.

RAJ: [pause] Continuing.

RAJ READING: Do not undertake HIS function or you will forget YOURS. Accept ONLY the function of healing in time because that is what time is FOR.

RAJ: You have the experience of time, don’t you? You are not experiencing Eternity, the Infinite Now, you might say. And this time is available for one purpose—for you to remember Who You Are, for you to come to a point of decision of willingness to abandon your infatuation with your apparent capacity to define yourself and everything else, yourself and your Brothers and Sisters, yourself and your world, and to be from an isolated, lonely context of conscious awareness which isn't your Birthright.

Time is here so that change can happen, sudden shifts of perception—not change of circumstances, not manipulation of situations and Brothers and Sisters. Time is here for you to let one thing and one thing only happen—sudden shifts of perception that allow you to remember What You Are so that you can embrace it once again, instead of denying it and suffering from the denial.

RAJ READING: Accept ONLY the function of healing in time because that is what time is FOR. God GAVE you the function to create in eternity.

RAJ: You see? Not time. God didn't give you, as part of His generous Gifting of What He Is, the experience of time. That wasn't part of His Gift. But, let's put it this way: The moment you said, "I'd rather give definitions to everything myself. I want a bill of divorcement, God," then you were immediately given enough time to come to your senses. So use the time for what it's for—to come to your senses. You see?

RAJ READING: God GAVE you the function to create in eternity. You do not need to learn this, but you DO need to learn to WANT this, and for this all learning was made.

RAJ: You see? Knowing is the State of Being. Learning is what you're faced with when you've said, "I don't want to know the Truth. I want to make the truth up myself." And all of a sudden, you now have time to do it. You have time to wake up again. And you have an experience called learning, which is not native to your Being. In other words, you have the opportunity to remember the Truth About Yourself, and that's what learning is. It is remembering Who You Are, coupled with your embracing it and activating it, and not being in a constant state of denial of it.

RAJ READING: You do not need to learn this, but you DO need to learn to WANT this, and for this all learning was made.

RAJ: In other words, all learning was made for the purpose of bringing you to the point of wanting to wake up.

RAJ READING: This is the Holy Spirit's good use of an ability which you do not NEED, but which you HAVE made.

RAJ: You don't need time and you don't need learning, but you made it, and so the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, uses it well on behalf of your reawakening.

RAJ READING: Give it to Him! You do not know how to use it.

RAJ: You don't know how to use time.

RAJ READING: He will teach you how to see yourself without condemnation by learning how to look on EVERYTHING without it.

RAJ: Ah! We're back to that same subject that we cannot escape. You can't do anything by yourself. You've got to include your Brother.

RAJ READING: He will teach you how to see yourself without condemnation by...

RAJ: What? Looking on yourself without condemnation? No.

By looking,...

RAJ READING: ...by learning how to look on EVERYTHING without it.

RAJ: It just isn't going to be the case that you're going to finally stand in the Kingdom of Heaven looking back at all your crummy brothers and sisters who are so awful and saying, "Tsk. One day you'll make it. I made it. Tsk." You see? So if you had the illusion that you could do it whether anybody else did it or not, and that you could get ahead of everyone else, or that you recognized something Divine in you and you determined that that was a truth and that that made you a little bit different from everyone else and did put you a few steps ahead, it's not the Truth. It's not the Way It Works.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...will teach you how to see yourself without condemnation by learning how to look on EVERYTHING without it. Condemnation will then not be real to you, and all your errors WILL be forgiven.

RAJ: How could condemnation not be real for you, but in your mind, still be real about everyone else?

"My God! You mean I have to swallow the whole elephant in one bite? I mean can't I just learn how not to condemn myself? You mean that in order for me to stop condemning myself, I have to stop condemning everything?" Oh, tsk, tsk, tsk, poor babies. What a horrible thing to have to do to somehow have a slip of the mind where you've forgotten to condemn.

Is it really that valuable a mental commodity to you? Not really. But you thought it was valuable because you thought it was essential to your survival, because you're looking at the Kingdom of Heaven through separate, lonely, unanchored eyes in which everything is not dependable, and nothing is anchored in a fundamental Source that is Principled and Intelligent. And so you have thought that condemnation was one of the essential tools that you had to use, or that you have to use, in order to control things into some semblance of intelligent order.

I'm going to tell you something. Love harmonizes naturally, without coercion. Love brings order because it harmonizes everything.

The question is, "What do I do with all these bastards in the meantime until I manage to do this? How do I protect myself until I know I don't need protection any more?" The ego is sly and tricky. It's asking the question because if it can get you to try to answer that question, you'll never get to the point of wanting to experience the Truth about your Brother, because you'll be busy getting the tools of your defense together to defend you in the meantime until you swallow the whole elephant, until you can bring yourself to abandon condemnation.

You had better be willing to consider the possibility that what you see as a call for correction, and what you see as an appropriate response to a call for correction, is something the Holy Spirit isn't seeing at all. The call for correction... what's needing to be corrected is not what the Holy Spirit is seeing, even though the Holy Spirit sees a call for correction. And you had better come to a point where you recognize that you have no way of knowing specifically what you would need to be ready to defend yourself against without the help of the clarity of the Holy Spirit, so that you aren't taken in by the invitation to deal with these bastards until you can manage to let go of condemnation.

In the meantime, you want to abandon "a meantime." Because I guarantee you, the response that will contribute to correction is nothing you will be able to perceive until you're willing to let go of condemnation and ask of the Father, or the Holy Spirit, to have revealed to you experientially the Truth about your Brother, the Truth that never stopped being True—the Christ that stands there no matter how he, or she, is behaving—God Presence-ing Himself right there where your Brother and Sister are, in spite of how they're behaving, in spite of how they're misperceiving themselves, in spite of how you're misperceiving them.

And remember, this is what you have time for. "Oh, I don't have time!" That's the only thing you have time for. That's why it was gifted to you, so that you might do this one thing that undoes your decision to be an orphan, your decision to have gotten a divorce from your Father and caused you to forget your Identity because you abandoned That Which gave you Meaning.

I can go on and on. And I will at another time.

I know. I'm not moving fast enough for you.

How do we get to it? Well, [laughing] you get to it by not having a meantime. You get to it by doing it now. You get to it by not taking the bait that says, "Get your defenses ready so you can be protected until you can let go of condemnation."

Okay. I said I could go on and on.

If this is what you've been given time for, if correction is the purpose of time, then the means of accomplishing the correction is yours, and you are capable of implementing it. It's not a task that has been given to you that you're not quite able to engage.

Remember, you at this very moment are the full-fledged Christ—whatever ultimate sense of the word "Christ" that you have been carrying with you, whatever fullest definition of the Christ that you have made-up—is What You Are right now. To come back into your Right Mind, for your Sanity to return, is not only totally possible, it's inevitable. Why? Because you will have learned how to be the Christ? No. Because you will remember that that's Who You've Always Been. The capacity is present right now.

So, if you've been given time in order to come to your senses, and if you've been given something called "a capacity to learn" for this purpose, you have all been provided with all of the essentials to accomplish it. You've been given this help. Why? Because you have the capacity. Why? Because you never stopped being What You Divinely Are.

Do you see that even what you would call your ignorance is like a bowl that you are held in, and everything about the bowl stands in support and nurturing of your coming back into your Right Mind? Everything that exists, even in your ignorance, is in Harmony with the Way Things Work. And the Way Things Work is nothing less than the Will of God expressing Being. So you're not lost. And there's not a strenuous journey here ahead of you. And you're not being asked to do anything that isn't utterly natural to you to do.

With this I will stop.

During this coming week, watch your mind, observe it, and when you find yourself beginning to indulge in any form of condemnation, notice it and halt it. Why? Because you know that no matter how delicious the condemnation might feel to you, you are not listening to the Holy Spirit. If you are not listening to the Holy Spirit, you have yourself blocked off from what? That which is nothing more than your Right Mind. Now, is that the way you want to exist in your day, with that kind of a split, unplugged from the Juice of your Divine Being? No. That's why you'll stop. You see? Because when it's happening, you're not listening to, and you are incapable of hearing, the Holy Spirit, that which is your Right Mind.

Okay. I said I would end there, and I will.

And I look forward to more good times with you next week. Okay. I love you.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

It may seem as though I'm too repetitious. It may seem as though I'm saying the same thing over and over again in different ways. And even though I say it in many different ways, it's still incomprehensible. Why? Why would I say the same thing over and over again? Well, one reason is to convey to you that the answer is not complicated. There aren't ten thousand compartments to the answer. There aren't ten thousand things for you to learn in order to wake up.

I've said many times, you are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you're at that Point and you must understand yourself therefrom. I keep telling you that right now you are the Christ, right now you are the Presence of God. What am I doing when I keep presenting you with this idea? I'm presenting you with a different way of perceiving yourself, a different way of considering yourself. I don't come here each week and scold you for how poorly you did the week before. I do not confront you with your stupidity, or your insanity, or your ignorance. I do not focus in on what you would call "the problem." I'm always focusing in on the answer, which is something quite apart from most of the things that occupy your time during the week and your concerns. I remind you that the Ultimate of You is present in every moment.

Now if you think that I am speaking to the ignorant one that you think you are, you will delay your progress, because when I say you're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it, I'm not addressing, as the term has been applied to Paul, the "bumbling oaf" in you. I'm addressing the Christ that you are. In doing that, I substantiate It, instead of substantiating the bumbling oaf.

Most of the time as the week goes by in between Sunday evenings, your attention is more focused on the bumbling oaf that you are, and what a stupid asshole you are, and how ignorant you are, and how poorly you're doing. And in addition to that, you apply all of these criteria to everyone you work with and everyone you run into.

It's simple. You see what you're looking with. Whatever your frame of mind is colors everything you see, causes everything to be seen in that context.

If you know that you are a conniving bastard or bitch, if you know that you are dishonest if you need to be in order to get something good done or something bad done, it is impossible for you to look at your Brother or Sister and not see the very same thing there.

Looking at everything the way you've always looked at everything is not going to cause anyone to wake up. It's not going to facilitate a sudden shift of perception, is it? It's going to insure that everything stays the same. What we're talking about here all the way through, but especially in this chapter called, "The Correction of Error," what we're talking about is the fact that in order for your experience to change, you've got to be looking at it from a new vantage point. You've got to start looking at it in a new way. And at the bottom line that means you've got to stop looking at everything alone, as though you're an isolated observer amongst a bunch of other isolated observers. You really have to wish to look at everything with the Holy Spirit, or with the Mind of God. And you don't know what it will look like, and you don't even know for sure how to cause that to happen, but it's being laid out for you.

What I want to pinpoint here before we go back into the book is that before anything is going to change, you are required to be willing to look at everything with new eyes, with eyes refreshed by something beyond your memory, refreshed by information not gathered from the past. You are addicted to your memories, and you are addicted to your pet theories, and you're addicted to what you've determined everything to be, because it's what you think keeps you sane, it's what you think keeps you grounded, when actually what it does is it keeps you bound in a tiny frame of reference that absolutely disallows for you to experience Reality As It Is, which is Harmonious, Beautiful, Divine—something far beyond your most fantastic imaginations.

The first step has to be taken by you, not everyone out there. And the first step that has to be taken by you is a desire to see God—Infinite Good, indivisible and undivided—and therefore unconflicted Good in your experience. You don't know how to do that so you have to ask for help. And the help is available to you, but you've got to reach for it first before you start attending to fixing everything up. Otherwise, you will correct everything based upon the firm definitions that you've already established and constantly employ.

Now, we've been recently talking about the fact that in order for you to wake up, in order for you to have a sudden shift of perception, you must have a reason for inviting it in. And your reason for inviting it in must be something other than yourself. You're all very used to being self-centered, taking care of yourself, covering your ass, insuring that you will have the best experience you can, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera.

We've been discussing the fact that you must have an object of your affection and that you must give what you would have. You must give, in order to make your own That Which has already been set in place as yours, because you're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it. You see?

This means that you have to dare to take a radical position. You don't mind at all if I say to you as a truth, as the Truth, that you are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it, that you are at that point and you must understand yourself therefrom, instead of understanding yourself from your memory banks and the definitions you've created for yourself. Now I'm taking the radical stand that you need to take. You need to take that stand with your Brothers and Sisters. And no matter what they're doing, and how your mindsets are interpreting their behavior, and no matter what their mindsets are causing their behavior to be, they are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; they are at that Point, and you must understand them therefrom. You must be willing to take that radical step, that radical point of view, because if you don't, you will continue to be stuck with your best definition of them, which is a very poor definition of them. And you won't be able to make your own, the Truth about you that I'm telling you.

Problem-solving as it's generally practiced involves, first of all, identifying the problem, and then identifying the source of the problem. And the source of the problem is always something out there. And it's always someone, or some mechanical flaw. And then, the correction of it is, whether it's someone or a thing, is handled mechanically. You mechanically manipulate. You retrain, you recondition the human being. But this human being that you're in the practice of reconditioning is being looked upon as an object, a weak link in the chain of command, or a weak link in the process of getting a job done. You see? "We've got to do something with Henrietta. She's the weak link." You see? Very mechanical. And so you sit Henrietta down, and you lecture her, and you tell her how it must be and how she must look at it if she's going to be an effective part of the flow of whatever the product is that she's a part of manufacturing. You see?

And so, through law, or forceful manipulative training, you make each other be robots without any sense of the fact that here is Soul, here is Life, here is Love, embodied. The individual who's just a cog in the wheel must learn to conform with the organization or the society, and to hell with how they feel about it. In fact, tell them as part of their brainwashing that they will feel good about themselves if they behave as a nice obedient cog in the wheel.

Do you see what I'm saying? What I'm saying is that each one of you is God Expressing Himself right where you are. Each one of you not only has a Divine Gift to give, each one of you is a Divine Gift to All, to the Whole. And you like to hear me say that about you. And your Brothers and Sisters need to hear you say it about them. And if you can't say it about them, they still need to feel the fact that that is the manner in which you are consciously embracing them, because that is the radical stand that will initiate change, healing.

Let's go into the book.

RAJ READING: Atonement as a Lesson in...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...Sharing

RAJ: Sharing—that's the opposite of isolation, that's the opposite of uninvolvedness.

RAJ READING: Atonement is for all because it is the way to UNDO the belief that anything is for you alone.

RAJ: You see, it's the undoing of aloneness that is your salvation.

RAJ READING: To forgive is to OVERLOOK. Look, then, BEYOND error, and do not let your perception rest UPON it, for you will believe what your perception holds.

RAJ: You see, I look at you and say to you, "You're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you're at that Point. I understand you therefrom, and you must understand yourself therefrom. I'm overlooking all the things you did this last week, or all the things you thought you did. I'm overlooking the mindset that keeps you bound to tininess. And I am reflecting back to you what I'm seeing. You see?"

RAJ READING: Accept as true only what your brother IS,...

RAJ: That's what I'm doing with you. That's what your Brother needs you to do with him, or your Sister with her.

RAJ READING: Accept as true only what your brother IS, if you would know yourself. Perceive what he is NOT, and you cannot know what you are BECAUSE you see him falsely.

RAJ: And again, if you see anything falsely, you see everything falsely. And it's because you have agreed to embody a false picture of yourself.

RAJ READING: Remember always that your identity is shared, and that its sharing IS its reality.

RAJ: So if you're going to share, make sure that you share only the best, that you share only the Truth, because you either lock yourself into suffering, or real freedom, depending on what you choose to share.

RAJ READING: You have a part to play in the Atonement, but the plan of the Atonement IS beyond you. You do not know how to overlook errors, or you would not make them. It would merely be further error to think either that you do NOT make them, or that you can correct them WITHOUT a Guide to correction. And if you do not FOLLOW this Guide, your errors will NOT be corrected. The plan is not yours BECAUSE of your limited ideas of what you are.

RAJ: Your definition of yourself.

RAJ READING: This limitation is where ALL errors arise.

RAJ: And I would add: And is where they're all experienced.

RAJ READING: The way to undo them, therefore, is not OF you but FOR you.

RAJ: Well, if they're not of you and they're not of your creation, there must be something more than you in this universe. And there's the rub, because you've got to reach out to something beyond yourself which takes away your so-called position of authority, and of your only chance to make something of yourself so that you can be proud of yourself and so that you can feel that you're respectable. You're familiar with my song and dance about all of that. And if you're familiar with it, it's becoming part of you. It's part of your understanding of yourselves, and so it's not as foreign as it used to be.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Atonement is a lesson in sharing, which is given you because YOU HAVE FORGOTTEN HOW TO DO IT. The Holy Spirit merely reminds you of what is your natural ability.

RAJ: You see, the Holy Spirit doesn't say, "Oh, you goofed again! Oops, you goofed again! You stupid idiot!" No. The Holy Spirit does what I do—merely reminds you of what is your natural ability. The Holy Spirit reminds you that you're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it. So abandon this trek, this hope of becoming something Ultimate, this advance toward Home. You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: By reinterpreting the ability to attack, which you DID make, into the ability to SHARE, He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...translates what you have made into what God created.

RAJ: Now what does that mean? Translates the one you made-up and that you're calling yourself, into the One That You Are That God Created and which has been present as the only Real Thing about you all along. The Holy Spirit translates what you have made into What God Created.

RAJ READING: If you would accomplish this THROUGH Him, you cannot look on your abilities through the eyes of the ego, or you will judge them as IT does. All their harmfulness lies in its judgment. All their helpfulness lies in the judgment of the Holy Spirit.

The ego, too, has a plan of forgiveness because you are ASKING for one, though not of the right teacher.

RAJ: And I just want you to think for a moment as to how often, when somebody tells you of a problem they're having, how often you, [snap of the fingers] before they even get their sentence finished, have an answer for them. That's how quick the ego has a plan for their salvation. I want you to get the feel for that, because you all know how quickly you can have a retort to anything, even a helpful one, even though this helpful one is full of judgment and unkindness when you give the answer to this poor one.

All along, what I'm encouraging you to do and what the Course is expounding on, is to hesitate a moment before you let the ego speak, and draw upon another Source consciously, in effect demonstrating the fact that you don't want to reply, that you don't want to rely on memory or agreed-upon definitions, even agreed-upon answers; that you want to draw upon a Source outside the level of the problem and outside the established interpretations that cause the problem to be called a problem. What do I mean by that? Very simply, if you're at the table in the western world and you've eaten and you let out a huge burp, it's considered to be a problem, where in other countries it is considered to be an expression of gratitude and appreciation for the wonderful meal, and it's not a problem at all.

You must learn to hesitate, step back, and reach into the unknown, literally. You must reach into that place where you don't know the answer, and ask to know what to say and what to do before you act.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego, too, has a plan of forgiveness because you are ASKING for one, though not of the right teacher. The ego's plan, of course, MAKES NO SENSE and WILL NOT WORK. By following it you will merely place yourself in an impossible situation, to which the ego ALWAYS leads you.

RAJ: That place is called, for lack of better words, the human condition. The ego leads you there and helps you re-substantiate it.

RAJ READING: The ego's plan is to have you see error clearly FIRST, and THEN overlook it. Yet how can you overlook what you have made real? By seeing it clearly you HAVE made it real and CANNOT overlook it.

RAJ: In a Gathering, whenever any of you ask a question, it's usually with regard to a problem you're having. And you give a description of the problem. You give a description of the situation and how it's impacting you. While you're doing that, Paul is sitting here and I'm going to say that he has learned not to pay too much attention to what you're saying, not to let you and what you're saying become the focus of his attention. And so all of the time you are asking your question and describing the problem, his attention is on me. He is hearing you, but he is more attentive to me and what my response will be when I respond. In other words, he overlooks your problem. He looks beyond it to me. And in so doing, that which would [finger snap] respond with an off-the-cuff remark or response, isn't energized in him. And so his presence as an ego, or his presence as a personality, does not get confirmed, or enlarged, or activated. And as a result, he is able to let me respond. This is what you need to be willing to do for your Brothers and Sisters. This is what overlooking error means.

Paul has learned that if he listens to you, and if he cares about you, he will begin to be affected by your plight. He will join you in its awfulness. And when he does that, it makes it very difficult for him to hear me. And the same thing applies to every one of you when you're dealing with your Brothers and Sisters. Very often caring about your Brothers and Sisters means that you are willing to let their problem be made real for you, and thus you lose the vantage point in which clarity beyond the problem can find entrance into the situation, and thus transformation and healing is blocked.

Again.

RAJ READING: Yet how can you overlook what you have made real? By seeing it clearly you HAVE made it real and CANNOT overlook it.

RAJ: You also make it harder for yourself because at some point you cannot bear the burden of empathetically caring about your Brother and Sister and feeling their hurt. And so, at some point, you finally have to make the conscious choice to step back—which should have been in the very first moment where you're supposed to hesitate before you respond—then you have to step back, and the stepping back is more difficult because your empathetic feelings of sadness and hurt for them must be released so that you might get back into your Peace, into that clear place where you're able to access the Truth. And that's harder work to do after the fact than it is to hesitate at the moment of the presentation of a problem and step back then. And you've also delayed potential healing for your Brother and Sister.

RAJ READING: By seeing it clearly you HAVE made it real and CANNOT overlook it.

This is where the ego is forced to appeal to “mysteries,” and begins to insist that you must accept the meaningless to save yourself. Many have tried to do this in my name, forgetting that my words make PERFECT sense because they come from God. They are as sensible now as they ever were because they speak of ideas which are eternal.

RAJ: You see, the ego appeals to mysteries, not to What Is True, not to what is clearly enlightening, but to magic. It says, “Oh, yes. Your problem is real, but if you do this and you do that, you can save yourself all by yourself. Oh, your problem is real, but there's a way for you to learn to live with it without suffering.” These are the mysteries. This is the magic. You see?

Never at any point does the ego say to you, “Why, you are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you are there. And the problem you're experiencing is invalid. It's an imagination. And you can be free of it, because it isn't real. Shall we explore its unreality together?” No. The ego never starts with you as What You Are. It starts with who you think you are at the point when you're describing your dilemma.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Forgiveness that is learned of me does NOT use fear to UNDO fear. Nor does it make real the UNREAL and then destroy it.

RAJ: You see? It doesn't make the unreal real and then destroy it. It says there is no "you" in actual existence to be suffering, because you are the Direct Expression of God right now and never fell from your high estate. And I'm going to talk to you till I'm blue in the face, till you're blue in the face, reminding you of this fact so that you might release the confidence that you have in the definition you've given yourself that you are just a mortal, and that you are not Divine, and you couldn't possibly be like Jesus the Christ, at least not for a long time.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Forgiveness through the Holy Spirit lies simply in looking beyond error from the beginning,...

RAJ: Before that immediate ego-response that spouts forth the ego's plan for your Brother's salvation.

RAJ READING: ...and thus KEEPING it unreal for you.

RAJ: When Paul listens to you asking me a question, he stays out of the way. And your problem does not become real for him. And my answer can become real for you.

RAJ READING: Do not let any belief in its realness enter your minds AT ALL, or you will also believe that YOU must undo what you have made in order to be forgiven.

RAJ: Again, how do you not let any belief in its realness enter your minds at all? By being anchored in a different Source of information, if I may put it that way; a Source of information different from your Brother's ego-sense of what he is at the moment, and even yours.

Why? Because... continuing...

RAJ READING: What has no effect does not exist, and to the Holy Spirit the effects of error are TOTALLY nonexistent.

RAJ: You're not behind the Point of Perfection with corrections needing to be made. You're not advancing toward it. You are there. And therefore, what you seem to be most definitely suffering from is not True, has no existence, and can have no real effect. But the effectlessness of it, will not register with you until you are drawing upon a Source different from the ego that formed the condition you're suffering from. And is that difficult or impossible? Not if that Source is nothing more than your Right Mind, which is the Holy Spirit, which is your Divinity held in trust while you fool around with ego perceptions, and which never went anywhere.

Referring to the Holy Spirit:

RAJ READING: By steadily and consistently cancelling out ALL its effects, EVERYWHERE and in ALL respects, He teaches...

RAJ: Who? You.

RAJ READING: ...that the ego does not exist,...

RAJ: As a fact—I'm adding that.

RAJ READING: ...and PROVES it.

RAJ: Now how does It prove it? By helping you to learn to disregard all of your conditioned responses, by helping you disregard all of the definitions you have made-up, by helping you arrive at a point where you are not valuing the definitions.

RAJ READING: Follow His...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...teaching in forgiveness, then, because forgiveness IS His function, and He knows how to fulfill it perfectly. That is what we meant when we once said that miracles are NATURAL, and when they do NOT occur something has gone wrong.

Miracles are merely the sign of your willingness to follow the Holy Spirit's plan of salvation, in recognition of the fact that you do NOT know what it is.

RAJ: You see, what keeps you bound in suffering is the fact that you think you know what the answers are. And so you never reach outside of your comfy, cozy self-satisfaction, even though you are self-satisfied in the midst of misery.

Referring to the Holy Spirit:

RAJ READING: His work is NOT your function,...

RAJ: And let's be clear here. The Holy Spirit's work is not the function of who you think you are at this moment. The Holy Spirit is your Right Mind. The Holy Spirit is What You Divinely Are. The Holy Spirit's Function is to remind you of this so significantly that you will abandon the idea that you're something else—something that you have made-up—that you are what you believe you are and what you've been taught you are. But that which has been taught things that aren't True, cannot perform the Function of reminding you of Who You Really Are. So, as you are waking up, the Holy Spirit's Function is not the function of the "you" that you think you are. That's what that means.

RAJ READING: His work is NOT your function,...

RAJ: Now I've said this in another way before. If it could be conceived that it's your function to wake yourself up, you would not be required to reach out beyond yourself at all, and that would constitute eternal damnation because what you think you are can't get you out of your ignorance. That which is causing your ignorance cannot get you out of it.

So while you are in the process of abandoning your self-satisfaction, abandoning your sense of worthiness that you have acquired at your own hand, while you are letting go of that, you've got to reach outside of any part of you that thinks it, by its hand, can accomplish anything valuable. You have to abandon your faith in who and what you think you are, because who and what you think you are is pure imagination. It's not Reality. And you're wanting to come back into, I'm going to say, your full-fledged Right Mind, your Sanity.

Another way of saying it is your state of insanity cannot be the means of re-establishing your Sanity. And so, while you are not seeing clearly, you must abandon little tiny self-reliance and ask for help. Ask the Holy Spirit, ask that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, which serves God, not the ego. If you don't arrive at a point where you will reach out beyond your best understanding and your best definitions, you will not find Sanity returning. You will not find change/transformation happening. You will continue to be as stuck as you are.

RAJ READING: His work...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...is NOT your function, and unless you accept this, you cannot learn what YOUR function is. The confusion of functions is so typical of the ego that you should be quite familiar with it by now. The ego believes that ALL functions belong to it, even though it has no idea what they ARE. This is more than mere confusion. It is a particularly dangerous combination of grandiosity AND confusion which makes it likely that the ego will attack anyone and anything for no reason at all.

RAJ: There is such self-confidence that it believes that anything it does will be right.

RAJ READING: This is exactly what the ego DOES. It is TOTALLY unpredictable in its responses because it has no idea of WHAT it perceives.

RAJ: You look at the Kingdom of Heaven and you say it's planet Earth. You have no idea What It Is that you're perceiving. All you're perceiving is the definition you have overlaid upon Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven.

RAJ READING: If one has no idea of what is happening, how appropriately can you EXPECT him to react? You might still ask yourself, regardless of how you can ACCOUNT for the reactions, whether they place the ego in a very sound position as the guide for YOURS.

RAJ: In other words, the guide for your reactions.

RAJ READING: It seems absurd to have to emphasize repeatedly that the ego's qualifications as a guide are singularly unfortunate, and that it is a remarkably poor choice as a teacher of salvation. Yet this question, ridiculous as it seems, is really the crucial issue in the whole separation fantasy. Anyone who elects a totally insane guide MUST be totally insane himself.

It is not true...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: It is not true that you do not know the guide is insane. YOU know it because I know it, and you HAVE judged it by the same standard as I have.

RAJ: Those two sentences equal this other one: You are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom.

You see? You know it. You know the guide is insane because I know it. We're talking from Home here. I am talking with the Divine One That You Are, not the one you think you are.

I am extending to you by these sentences the gift that you need to extend to your Brother, at least in your mind. Instead of saying, "That idiot doesn't know anything," you say, "he knows the Truth." He knows it because I know it. Because the Ultimate Truth is already True, and always has been True, and it's never been changed by any imagination that my Brother indulged in, or any imagination that I ever indulged in. And I stand here in front of my Brother who's behaving at odds with that, and I'm acknowledging that he knows it because I know it. We are Brothers with the same Parent, and no imagination can change What We Are. And so I claim for my Brother the Ultimate Truth about him right now, no matter how he's behaving.

And much of the time my claiming it for him is done silently. I relish the occasions like now where I can verbalize it, say it out loud so you can hear it.

Now here's the good news.

RAJ READING: The ego...

RAJ: Who and what you think you are. Who and what you have determined yourself to be in the imagination.

RAJ READING: The ego literally lives on borrowed time,...

RAJ: Why "borrowed time"? Because there is no [laughing] real time. It lives on borrowed time.

RAJ READING: ...and its days are numbered. Do not fear the Last Judgment, but welcome it and do not wait, for the ego's time is borrowed from YOUR eternity.

RAJ: Oh. Uh oh. It's been costing you something. This dallying with the ego, which has created the sense of time, has been borrowing from your Eternity and your experience of your Eternality. It's been an unfair deal, and you are the one who's coming up on the short end.

RAJ READING: Do not fear the Last Judgment, but welcome it and do not wait, for the ego's time is borrowed from YOUR eternity.

RAJ: Don't wait for your Eternity to be returned to you.

And what's the Last Judgment? The Last Judgment is, "This is my beloved Son and Daughter in whom I am well pleased." Wow! That isn't exactly what you thought judgment meant. The Last Judgment is the Judgment of Truth About You extended to you in a way that you can recognize and hear and feel and let in. Don't wait for it. Don't hold it off.

RAJ READING: This IS the Second Coming, which was made FOR you as the First was created. The Second Coming is merely the return of SENSE. Can this POSSIBLY be fearful?

RAJ: So how do you set into motion the return of sense? By consciously and conscientiously choosing to hesitate before you respond off the top of your head, and reaching to a Source other than your memory, or your Brother's and Sister's story about their dilemmas, or your Brother's and Sister's behavior. You hesitate, as Paul does before every Gathering, and you join with a Source, for lack of better words, completely other than yourself. Why? Because part of breaking the isolation is an act of actually leaning into and joining with something other than yourself, even though you have been told that ultimately what you will be leaning into is your Essential Self.

Your Essential Self will not feel like you as you begin to reach out to It. Let it be that way, else you will not have anything to abandon yourself into, nor will you have any justification for abandoning your acquired definitions, meanings, and your commitment to them, which is what keeps you insane.

Many of you wish you could be a healer. I will tell you that every single one of you will have to become a healer, because you cannot wake up without being involved with another. And the moment you genuinely dare to become involved with your Brother from the standpoint of his being neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it, and as a result of your willingness to understand him from that Point of Perfection, you will heal. You will take the essential step of breaking the isolation in a double way. You will break the isolation between you and your Brother or Sister, and you will do it by interacting with your Brother or Sister by virtue of having broken your isolation from the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, and therefore your connection with your Father Who gives you your Identity.

Monotonous repetition. But if we move too fast and get past your remembrance that there has to be a point of hesitation, a moment of hesitation before you respond, so that you can make a different choice of the Source of what you're going to say, you will move on to making things happen without hesitating, and switching channels, so to speak, abandoning your ego-conditioning in favor of listening into the unknown-to-you-at-the moment, and being with your Brother and Sister from there.

I am not moving too slow and I'm not moving too fast. And I will not move beyond the point of learning until it's learned. And so I'm asking you to trust my teaching methods. And if I haven't yet given you something to give your attention to in a broader scope that you wish I would, be willing to abandon your impatience. Be willing to abandon the radical idea that you know what you need to learn and when. And be with me as we move together in uncovering the fact that you're at the Point of Perfection.

I love you all. And I'm not worried for your sakes. It's not imperative for you to be moving faster than you are, because error has no effects. False imagination has no effects.

I love you and I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We'll go right into the book. And I'm going to backup a couple of sentences for context.

RAJ READING: Do not fear the Last Judgment, but welcome it and do not wait, for the ego's time is borrowed from YOUR eternity. This IS the Second Coming, which was made FOR you as the First was created. The Second Coming is merely the return of SENSE.

RAJ: A return where? In your mind. In you.

RAJ READING: Can this POSSIBLY be fearful?

What can be fearful but fantasy, and no-one turns to fantasy unless he despairs of finding satisfaction in reality. Yet it is certain that he will NEVER find satisfaction in fantasy, so that his only hope is to CHANGE HIS MIND ABOUT REALITY.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "until he despairs" instead of "unless he despairs."]

RAJ: So utterly simple. I didn't say to think about changing your mind. It doesn't say to find a way to reason it out so that you can change your mind. As the now well-know phrase goes, "Just do it!"

RAJ READING: Only if the decision that reality is fearful is WRONG can God be right. And I assure you that God IS right. Be glad, then, that you HAVE been wrong, but this was only because you did not know who you were.

RAJ: You see? You forgot Who You Were when you got your divorce from the Father, and now you think you are what you think you are, instead of What You Really Are.

RAJ READING: Had you remembered, you could no more have been wrong than God can. The impossible can happen ONLY in fantasy. When you search for reality in fantasies you will not find it. The symbols of fantasy are of the ego, and of THESE you will find many. But do not look for meaning in them.

RAJ: Something happens to you in your day. Something goes wrong. You say, "What was the meaning of that?" Don't you? "What significance does that have for me in my learning process?" And then you think about it, and you imagine about it, and you can come up with some pretty fantastic imaginations of what the meaning must be, when the fact is that it is meaningless from beginning to end. And if you do succeed in coming up with an explanation of its meaning for you, you have a meaninglessness defining something that was meaningless. In other words, the definition that you come up with is part of the illusion as well, is part of what has no meaning, even though you seem to have created meaning for it that actually gives the bad experience that you had some reality for you.

The definition you give, or the explanation you give, to the bad experience and its so-called value for you is a symbol of fantasy. You've created a symbol about something that wasn't real in the first place. And the symbol is as unreal as the event that gave rise to your creating a symbol for it.

RAJ READING: The symbols of fantasy are of the ego, and of THESE you will find many. But do not look for meaning in them. They have no more meaning than the fantasies into which they are woven.

Fairy tales can be pleasant or fearful, pretty or ugly, but no-one calls them TRUE. Children may believe them, and so, for a while, the tales ARE true for them. Yet when reality dawns the fantasies are gone. REALITY has not gone in the meanwhile. The Second Coming is the AWARENESS of reality, not its RETURN.

RAJ: Again, you are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it, even though you think you are at one or the other. You are at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Second Coming is the AWARENESS of reality, not its RETURN. Behold, my children, reality is here. It belongs to you and me and God, and is perfectly satisfying to all of us. ONLY this awareness heals, because it is the awareness of truth.

RAJ: What is fantasy? Fantasy is the word used to describe the state of being asleep, the state of not being conscious of Who You Are, of What You Are. Fantasy is you believing the definitions you have made-up about everything, which means it is you being unconscious of What Everything Really Is.

And most all of you exist in that state because you don't hesitate enough. When you look at something, you don't hesitate a moment to say, "What is really there?" You don't hesitate long enough to say, "Father, or Holy Spirit, reveal to me what the Real Meaning of this that I'm looking at is. Reveal to me What God Is Being there from God's Perspective." You don't hesitate enough to shift gears. And that's the key.

Another way of saying it is you don't hesitate long enough to shift teachers. And there are only two teachers—the Voice for Truth, and the voice for fear or the voice of the ego. And let me remind you, you're always listening to one or the other of the teachers.

There is no "you" that's able to look at things by yourself. As I've said before, you're always the puppet of something. Either you're the unresistant Presence of God Expressing Himself, or you're the unresistant presence of the definitions you and everyone else have made-up, either privately or together. You're either being the expression of memory, or you are letting yourself be the Expression of That Which Is Forever New, which is God Moving, God Being, which is Creation. There is no middle ground. You're never independent. You're never not the puppet of a master.

So, if you don't want to be bound in fantasy, you're going to have to hesitate a moment before you come to a conclusion about what you're looking at or seeing to say, to make sure that you are choosing the right puppet master. Forget about cutting the strings from the puppeteer. That's not the goal of your existence. It's the goal of your ego, but it's not the goal of your Being. Accept it—you are a puppet. You are not self-existent. There is no choice about it. The sooner you accept the fact that one way or the other, you are a puppet, you will get down to the business of choosing who your puppet master will be. And the sooner you make that choice, the more rapidly you will come back to your senses. The Second Coming is merely the return of sense.

When you think you have the option to be independent and you fight for your independence—"look no strings"—you are fighting for the right to continue to be ignorant about What You Are. You are fighting for the right to continue to remain ignorant that the very Source and Fundamental of your Being is God Himself.

Now, how insulting can that really be to abandon a sense of independent selfhood that absolutely inhibits you from knowing Who You Are, disallows you from experiencing the Meaning, with a capital "M", the significant awesome Divine Meaning of your Being, your Presence, your being Conscious? It should be insulting to you that the suggestion is made that you should hold on to the state of ignorance in which you cannot possibly feel your value and your worth. It shouldn't be insulting to yield authority to the Father, when the result of yielding authority for your existence to the Father and yielding your apparent capacity to think for yourself to the Flow of the Father's Conscious Awareness of being the Movement of Creation— that should not be insulting. That should be something you reach for, with vigor even.

RAJ READING: Behold, my children, reality is here. It belongs to you and me and God, and...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: ...is perfectly satisfying to all of us.

RAJ: Have any of you recently experienced a state of being purely satisfied? But that's your Birthright. This apparent right to declare independence and self-existence is a hollow suggestion that I encourage you not to validate any longer. It gets you exactly nothing. What it gets you is the absence of your direct experience of your Worth, the direct experience of your Validity, the direct experience of your Divinity, the direct experience of your Meaning, or we could say, Meaningfulness.

Continuing.

The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Unhealed Healer

RAJ: Mind you, you're the puppet of one of two masters. There aren't any more to choose from. And there is no other state of being to experience. If you've chosen the ego as your master, then the ego's plan for forgiveness is what the ego will present to you as your thought.

RAJ READING: The ego's plan for forgiveness is far more widely used than God's. This is because it is undertaken by unhealed healers,...

RAJ: What's an unhealed healer? It's someone who's dreaming a dream. It's someone who has forgotten What He Is, and is trying to do the best he can in this state of amnesia. An unhealed healer is someone who isn't hesitating a moment to say, "Father, or Holy Spirit, what's the Truth here? What's the Truth about this, or that, or the other thing?" The unhealed healer is the one who doesn't hesitate and ask, and then speaks up on the basis of his or her own acquired definitions of what is true, and then attempts to heal his Brother, or Sister, based upon that.

RAJ READING: The ego's plan for forgiveness is far more widely used than God's. This is because it is undertaken by unhealed healers, and is therefore of the ego. Let us consider the unhealed healer more carefully now. By definition, he is trying to GIVE what he has not RECEIVED.

RAJ: Help based upon past experience, which means based upon ignorance built upon in the absence of that one knowing What He Divinely Is, cannot be helpful.

I have pointed out that it is necessary to have an object of your affection, that you have what you give, and what you give, you get to keep. And so you have an object of your affection, but you don't try to initiate the affection from your memory, or your tiny personal sense of yourself. You ask the Holy Spirit, "What is the Truth here? What needs to be known here?" And you let yourself be infilled with it so that it overflows and extends to your Brother—the one who needs healing.

If you haven't hesitated a moment, stepped back, and said, "Father, help me know what needs to be known so that I may embody it and give it expression," if you haven't done that, but you still try to help, you are an ignorant one trying to help another out of his ignorance. And that's not what I've been talking about.

By definition, the unhealed healer is trying to give what he has not received.

RAJ READING: If he is a theologian, he may begin with the premise, "I am a miserable sinner and so are you."

RAJ: And so as not to get too intellectual here, it says, "If he is a theologian." Do you think there's such a thing as a theologian? I mean a real something out there called a theologian. Or is a theologian someone real out there that you have applied your definition of a theologian to?

Does anyone know what a theologian is? Somebody will say, "Oh, of course, I know what a theologian is." And if each of you said, "I know what a theologian is," and you shared what it was, each of you would have not an identical response because a theologian, to you, is whatever that word has come to mean in your mind.

And you want to know something else? There is a theologian in you. Oh, you can talk theology. You don't say, "I'm a theologian," but you can think like theologians think.

An unhealed healer, by definition, is trying to give what he has not received.

RAJ READING: If he is a theologian,...

RAJ: And all of you are. That's what I'm trying to point out. All of you are theologians, and your definition of a theologian applies to you, as well as to everyone else you pin the tail on.

When you talk or think about theologians, you aren't seeing the individual there. Is that clear? You have your definitions and you apply them, like a tail on the donkey, and so you don't see each other. So understand that when it says, "If he is a theologian," this is speaking about you. Don't sit there in your spiritual advanced state saying, "Yeah. The theologians. Argh! You know about theologians. Yeah." [small laugh] All the meaning there is to the word "theologian" is the meaning you have come to accept. And it applies equally to you. So now we're not talking about "those theologians." We're talking about every one of you.

RAJ READING: If he is a theologian,...

RAJ: If you are a theologian.

RAJ READING: ...he...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...may begin with the premise, "I am a miserable sinner and so are you."

RAJ: You see? [small laugh] In one way or another, all of you say this about each other.

Whew!

RAJ READING: If he is a psychotherapist, he is more likely to start with the equally incredible idea that HE really believes in attack and so does the patient, but it does not matter in either case.

RAJ: How many of you practice a little psychotherapy from time to time on your Brothers and Sisters, and even on yourselves, without ever hesitating and stepping back to say, "In spite of how I would psychotherapize this situation, or me, what is the Truth here? What is the Reality that's going on outside the box of all of the definitions I have come up with that I apply to others, as well as myself?" And don't ever think that what you're applying to others, you're not applying to yourselves.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have repeatedly stated that beliefs of the ego cannot be shared, and this is WHY they are unreal. How, then, can "uncovering" them MAKE them real? Every healer who searches fantasies for truth

MUST be unhealed because he does not KNOW where to look for truth, and therefore does not have the answer to the problem of healing.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "that the beliefs" instead of "that beliefs."]

RAJ: Somebody's behaving badly, and the idea is expressed that they are behaving badly because of something that happened in their childhood. They may even feel that they are behaving badly because they are angry about the injustices that occurred in their childhood. That's not where the problem is.

The problem is that the one behaving badly has forgotten What She Is, has forgotten What He Is—the Presence of God Presence-ing Himself right there. And that one thinks that he's an independent presence having nothing to do with God, having no such Source, having, shall I say, no such credentials that state the awesome Divine Meaning of his or her Being.

RAJ READING: There is an advantage to bringing nightmares into awareness, but ONLY to teach that they are not real, and that ANYTHING they contain is meaningless. The unhealed healer cannot do this because he does not BELIEVE it.

RAJ: Doesn't believe what? Doesn't believe that the definitions and meanings that he's applying to everything aren't true. Doesn't believe that there's Meaning, with a capital "M", beyond the meanings he is applying to himself and everything.

An unhealed healer could be called an unconscious director of the state of consciousness. It's absurd, and if you see it in its absurdity, you will be able to more easily opt for asking for help and saying, "Father, what is Your Perspective here? What is the Truth here?"

RAJ READING: All unhealed healers...

RAJ: All unconscious directors of things.

RAJ READING: ...follow the ego's plan for forgiveness in one form or another. If they are theologians,...

RAJ: Or if you are in your theologian mode.

RAJ READING: ...they are likely to condemn themselves, teach condemnation, and advocate a very fearful solution.

RAJ: Here's a fearful solution.

RAJ READING: Projecting condemnation onto God, they make Him appear retaliative and fear His retribution.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "onto God, and make" instead of "onto God, they make."]

RAJ: Now that idea is an imagination that can be called a symbol. A retaliative, jealous God—that's a symbol. It's a familiar symbol that almost everyone carries with them.

And there is a fear of God. Why? Because someone—here it says a theologian—someone experiencing fear, because truly he no longer remembers What He Is, has shared his fearful thought with another and found agreement. And then because it's too difficult to own responsibility for the experience and say, "I am creating this experience by refusing to pay attention to and be conscious of my Source," that unwillingness to be honest causes the blame to be projected out there on God—it's as simple as that—making Him appear retaliative, and justification for fear of His (God's) retribution.

RAJ READING: What they have done is merely to IDENTIFY with the ego, and by perceiving clearly what IT does, condemn themselves because of this profound confusion. It is understandable that there has been a revolt against this concept, but to revolt AGAINST it is still to BELIEVE in it.

RAJ: You don't revolt against something that doesn't exist, do you? The only reason you revolt against something is because you think it exists and is real and has to be done away with.

The solution isn't a matter of manipulating your memories. It isn't a matter of manipulating the dangerous world, the conflicted world you see because you're in a state of inner conflict. The answer lies in leaving those things aside and saying, "Father, help," stepping outside the limits of your definitions and the self meanings you have provided yourself, and letting something else in, breaking the isolation. That's what "hesitating a moment before coming to conclusions" means.

RAJ READING: It is understandable that there has been a revolt against this concept, but to revolt AGAINST it is still to BELIEVE in it. The FORM of the revolt, then, is different, but NOT the content.

RAJ: You see, it doesn't matter how many forms of correction you try to bring to that which calls for correction. You can try to deal with disease medically. You can try to deal with it spiritually through prayer. You can try to deal with it naturopathically. But you see that no matter what the form of the correction is that you pick, you are still operating at the level of being an independent see-er, not having hesitated and stepped back. And so, no matter what form you are using, one is not better than the other; they are all equally meaningless.

Because the only meaningful step to take is to break the isolation and say, "Father, share with me Your Perspective, because I have been told that it is my perspective by Birthright, and I haven't been experiencing it. And my not experiencing it, I am told, has caused me to see everything erroneously, and is responsible for the ever-present anxiety that I feel, the ever-present uneasiness that I feel, the ever-present vulnerability that I feel. And I don't want to feel it anymore. I'm willing to consider the possibility that this information that's given to me is correct. And so I will do the thing I don't understand. I will reach out into that which seems to be empty. I will reach out for You whom I've never had, as far as I know, a direct experience of. Or if I did, they were, as far as I'm concerned, flukes, rare events, rare favors, which I feel tremendously blessed by, but they're nothing that I can feel confidently as an ever-present source. But I'm going to reach out as though it's there. Please help!" And then you shut up and you make room for the response.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The newer forms of the ego's plan are as unhelpful as the older ones, because form does not matter to the Holy Spirit, and therefore does not matter at all.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "ego's plans" instead of "ego's plan."]

RAJ: What doesn't matter to the Holy Spirit doesn't matter at all. The only thing that matters to the Holy Spirit is What Is Real. And that matters!

RAJ READING: According to the newer forms of the ego's plan, the therapist...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...interprets the ego's symbols in the nightmare,...

RAJ: Don't you do that? "Wonder what meaning this bad experience has for me. Wonder what the meaning is of that person who's behaving badly has for me." So in your ignorant state and your ignorant experience of the Kingdom of Heaven, you interpret the symbols that are occurring in your nightmare, not realizing that that which is having the nightmare doesn't exist either, really.

So:

RAJ READING: According to the newer forms of the ego's plan, the therapist interprets the ego's symbols in the nightmare, and then uses them to prove that the NIGHTMARE is real. Having MADE it real, he then attempts to dispel its effects by depreciating the importance OF THE DREAMER. This WOULD be a healing approach if the dreamer were properly identified as unreal.

RAJ: And I will add: As well.

RAJ READING: Yet if the dreamer is equated with the MIND, the mind's corrective power through the Holy Spirit is DENIED.

RAJ: In other words, if the definition of yourself, that you have provided yourself, is equated with your mind so that it ceases to be a definition that you're holding, but is your very experience of yourself, you are sucked totally into the illusion. You're believing the dream totally.

And:

RAJ READING: ...if the dreamer is equated with the MIND, the mind's corrective power through the Holy Spirit is DENIED.

RAJ: Why? Because there will be no occasion for you to reach beyond.

You are Mind. You are Consciousness. You are that Conscious Awareness which constitutes the Experience of Being Infinitely, the Conscious Experience of Creation. That is What You Are.

No definition has to be applied to it. "I'm a good guy." "I'm a sleazy girl." "I'm a wonderful parent, a wonderful mother." "I'm a poor provider for my family." No. You aren't any of the definitions or meanings that you've applied to yourself.

And when you realize that you are Conscious Awareness, Pure Mind, that that is What You Are, you will be able to see the definitions or meanings that you've applied to yourself as something you are taunting yourself with, teasing yourselves with. But they are ideas floating around which you are taking hold of and having fun applying to yourself. You won't be fooled into thinking that you are the definition. And then the Mind's corrective power through the Holy Spirit is affirmed, and change can occur. Healing can occur. Enlightenment can spontaneously happen.

I am keeping what could seem complex simple here. Just let what I'm saying abide with you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is noteworthy that this is a contradiction even in the ego's terms, and one which it usually DOES note, even in its confusion. If the way to counteract fear is to REDUCE the importance of the fearer, how can this build ego STRENGTH? These perfectly self-evident inconsistencies account for why, except in certain stylized verbal accounts, no-one can EXPLAIN what happens in psychotherapy.

RAJ: [small laugh]

RAJ READING: Nothing real DOES. Nothing real has happened to the unhealed healer, and he learns from his own teaching.

BECAUSE His ego is involved, it always attempts to gain some support from the situation. Seeking to get something for HIMSELF the unhealed healer does not know how to GIVE, and consequently cannot share. He cannot correct because he is not working CORRECTIVELY.

RAJ: The only way to work correctively is not to stand in the position of an independent corrector, an independent healer, an independent entity with certain talents, certain gifts. Because as long as it is a given that he is an independent entity, he doesn't stand in the position of receipt of his Birthright from the Father, which when given away, the healer gets to keep. That constitutes not a healed healer, but a healer.

An unhealed healer and a healed healer both are nonsense. Because an unhealed healer and a healed healer would still have to be describing an independent entity.

RAJ: The unhealed healer...

[Editor's Note: Raj substituted the phrase "The unhealed healer" for the pronoun "He."]

RAJ READING: ...believes that it is up to him to teach the patient what is REAL, but he does not know it himself.

RAJ: What is important about what we're reading about tonight is the fact that it is meant to promote the awareness that you are never anything more than a puppet, and therefore a puppet of one of the only two teachers they [there] are. You have no capacity to accomplish anything on your own, and you never have. And this is the insulting Truth that each of you has to accept and get past so that you abandon trying to be independent, and you are moved to reach out and break your self-imposed exile from Home, and from the Father, from your Source.

The unhealed healer is a goner. The unhealed healer can't be improved. The unhealed healer can't be changed into a healed healer.

If you want to be a healer, you've got to find something in you that cares about your Brother. And then you ask God to fill you with that which meets the human need in your Brother's experience from the Father's Perspective, and not based upon any interpretations you independently are applying to your Brother and Sister, and which lead you to conclusions as to what the correction should be. If you do that, you are filled with too much false confidence that will block you from hearing whatever might contradict it. And so you will defend your independent position, even though you think you're asking God for revelation, the revealing of the Truth that will heal.

I am indeed attempting to wipeout your confidence, or encourage you to invalidate the confidence you have in your personal private capacity to do anything. Because until that confidence is negated, you will feel no need to reach out, you will feel no need to break the isolation. And thus, your Birthright will remain hidden from you. And it's not your Birthright for it to be hidden from you.

The unhealed healer...

RAJ READING: ...believes that it is up to him to teach the patient what is REAL, but he does not know it himself. What, then, SHOULD happen? When God said, "Let there be light" there WAS light. Can you find light by analyzing darkness as the psychotherapist does, or like the theologian by acknowledging darkness in yourself and looking for a distant light to remove it while EMPHASIZING the distance?

Healing is NOT mysterious.

RAJ: Healing is not mysterious.

RAJ READING: Nothing will occur unless you understand it since light IS understanding. A "miserable sinner" cannot be healed without magic, nor can an "unimportant mind" esteem itself without magic. Both forms of the ego's approach, then, must arrive at an impasse,...

RAJ: In other words, they can't succeed. You will come to a dead end.

RAJ READING: ...the characteristic "impossible situation" to which the ego ALWAYS leads.

RAJ: And of course, that's where the statement, "man's extremity is God's opportunity," makes sense, because it's when you get to the impasse that the opportunity is present to give up the arrogant and persistent attempt to be independent. It's the place where one can give up on a path that will not work and say finally, "Help! I need help. Everything I have tried has not worked. I give up. I will not rely upon anything I ever believed. I'm reaching out for Your Perspective, Father. I'm reaching out for a Perspective that's nothing like what I created for myself. Help."

Now, continuing.

RAJ READING: It CAN be helpful to point out to a patient where he is heading, but the point is lost unless he can change his direction. The therapist cannot do this for him, but he also cannot do this for HIMSELF.

The ONLY meaningful contribution the therapist can make is to present an example of one whose direction has been changed FOR him,...

RAJ: Not by him; for him.

RAJ READING: ...and who no longer believes in nightmares of ANY kind. The light in HIS mind will therefore ANSWER the questioner, who must decide with God that there IS light because he SEES it. And by HIS acknowledgment the THERAPIST knows it is there.

RAJ: In other words, when the patient sees it, it confirms what the therapist was seeing, and the therapist finds that it has been made his as well.

RAJ READING: That is how perception ultimately is translated into knowledge. The miracle worker begins by...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...PERCEIVING light,...

RAJ: Not perceiving the problem.

RAJ READING: The miracle worker begins by PERCEIVING light,...

RAJ: Why? Because he didn't believe what the patient was saying, or his Brother or Sister was saying, or the presentation that was being made. Before coming to a conclusion, the quote "therapist" unquote hesitated a moment and said, "What needs to be known here? What is the Truth from God's Perspective that needs to be known here?"

RAJ READING: The miracle worker begins by PERCEIVING light, and translates HIS perception into sureness by continually extending it and accepting its acknowledgment.

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: The miracle worker begins by PERCEIVING light, and translates HIS perception into sureness...

RAJ: Now what that means there in "translates HIS perception into sureness," it means makes it his own by giving it away.

RAJ READING: ...by continually extending it and accepting its acknowledgment.

RAJ: It's acknowledgement where? In the Brother, or the client. In the one to whom the extension is being made.

RAJ READING: Its EFFECTS assure him it is there.

RAJ: It what? The Truth. The meaningfulness of what was being extended.

And thus in the Brother's or Sister's or client's acknowledgement of it, reception of it, it demonstrates the Movement of God that has moved through the therapist. And the therapist knows that the Movement of God is True and Real and Actual, and so he gets to keep what he gave because in giving it and in its receipt, it proved experientially the actuality of it. And it wasn't just a concept being provided out of memory by an independent separated entity.

Now, listen to this, and I'm speaking to the therapist in each one of you.

RAJ READING: The therapist does not heal; HE LETS HEALING BE.

RAJ: He allows it to happen by getting out of the way as an independent or unhealed healer, and lets God shine through by invitation. And in the shining through and the receipt of what has shone through, the healer makes his own, or gets to keep, what was given.

And the apparent healer and the apparent healed are blessed in what? In greater self-appreciation and arrogance? No, in greater awesome awareness that God is All There Is to them, and they are What They Are by Grace—not by having earned it.

RAJ READING: The therapist does not heal; HE LETS HEALING BE. He can point to darkness, but he cannot bring light of HIMSELF, for light is not of him. Yet, being FOR him, it...

RAJ: The Light.

RAJ READING: ...must also be for his patient. The Holy Spirit is the ONLY Therapist.

RAJ: Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, is the only therapist.

RAJ READING: He makes healing perfectly clear in ANY situation in which he is the Guide.

RAJ: Well, the only situation wherein He can be the Guide is when somebody hesitates a moment before coming to a conclusion or a determination, and says, "I, of myself, can do nothing. Not my will, but Thine be done. What is Your Will?" And then he shuts up, and fearlessly pays attention, listens. And because he cares enough about his Brother, he listens for something that he anticipates will be of pure value and of such unconflicted meaning that the only possible effect it could have would be the dissolving of confusion, the entrance of transformational clarity.

The Holy Spirit...

RAJ READING: ...makes healing perfectly clear in ANY situation in which he is the Guide. The human therapist can only let Him...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...FULFILL His function.

RAJ: You see? The unhealed healer thinks healing is a function he is supposed to perform. But there is no unhealed or healed healer. There is no independent entity. There is no entity that is not a puppet at the end of strings that something else is holding.

And so, as simple as it is, none of you wants to hear it. Your salvation, your fulfillment, everything you are looking for that is Good and True about you, will only be able to be found when you yield to That Which is responsible for your existence. And you are not responsible for your existence. There is a God, and you are where God Is Presence-ing Himself, and thereby Presence-ing Himself as All That Is Holy, all that is truly and really Meaningful, all that is truly Invulnerable, and all that could ever possibly be called Respectable. The fulfillment you want that you think you will lose when you give up your arrogant attempt to be independent, all that you will give up, all that you will lose when you give up your arrogant attempt to be independent, will be the amnesia, will be the unconsciousness of all that is Beautiful and Good and True and Meaningful about you. You will be left with the very thing you have been looking for by trying so damned hard to be so damned good that you can prove your worth.

Again.

RAJ READING: The human therapist can only let Him...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...FULFILL His function. He needs no help for this.

RAJ: Except [small laugh] to have you get out of the way, to have you stop blocking the movement of that which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: He will tell you EXACTLY what to do to help ANYONE...

RAJ: To help anyone.

RAJ READING: ...He sends to you for help, and will speak to him through you,...

RAJ: "Oh, there we go again. [sigh] I'm just supposed to be the mouthpiece for Truth? That doesn't help me be anything in my own right. That just gives all the glory to the Holy Spirit." You see, there's your ignorance. The Holy Spirit is nothing more than you, than your Right Mind. But until this that wants to stand independently as a creditable and valuable and valid entity...

PAUL: I'm sorry I lost it.

RAJ: That which wants to stand as an independent, valuable and valid entity that's concerned about not getting the credit, is that which isn't actual. It isn't Real. And the concern it expresses, which seems to be you expressing your concern, keeps you distracted from being able to make the choice for the Holy Spirit that would return your Sanity to you by returning you in your Whole Mind as the Holy Spirit. And that's the simple way it works.

RAJ READING: He will tell you EXACTLY what to do to help ANYONE He sends to you for help, and will speak to him through you, if you do not INTERFERE. Remember that you ARE choosing a guide for helping,...

RAJ: You see? You're never doing it all by yourself. You are always choosing a guide for helping, and it's one of the two voices.

RAJ READING: Remember that you ARE choosing a guide for helping, and the WRONG choice will NOT help. But remember also that the RIGHT one WILL. Trust Him, for help is His function, and He is of God.

As you awaken other minds to the Holy Spirit through Him, and NOT yourself,...

RAJ: Not who you think you are. Not your definition of yourself.

RAJ READING: ...you will understand that you are not obeying the laws of this world, but that the laws you are obeying WORK.

RAJ: Quote.

RAJ READING: "The good is what works"...

RAJ: Unquote.

RAJ READING: ...is a sound though insufficient statement. ONLY the good CAN work. Nothing else works at all. This course is a guide to behavior. Being a very direct and a very simple learning situation, it provides the Guide Who TELLS you...

[Editor's Note: Raj said "and very simple" because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as "and a very simple" as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: Tells you.

RAJ READING: ...what to do. If you do it, you will SEE that it works. Its RESULTS are more convincing than its words. They will convince you that the words are true.

RAJ: And you will be able to keep, to have what you have given.

RAJ READING: If you do it, you will SEE that it works. Its RESULTS are more convincing than its words. They will convince you that the words are true. By following the right Guide you will learn the simplest of all lessons:

RAJ: Quote.

RAJ READING: "By their fruits ye shall know them, and THEY shall know THEMSELVES."

RAJ: By the fruits of their sharing, you will know them. And by the receipt of the fruits of their sharing, they will have what they have given. They will know themselves more clearly.

It is not bad news to find out that you do not have the capacity to accomplish anything. You don't exist independently, having independent capacities. The sooner you dare to feel helpless, the sooner you will have the courage [laughing] which will probably be experienced as an overwhelming fear that you've got to do something new, or things are really going to get terrible.

You won't have the confidence to reach out, to break the isolation, and to say, "Help! I give up control. I would like to move through my life, I would like to experience my life in harmony with the Intent of the Mover of Life. And I realize I am not the Mover of Life. I thought I could be. And I have tried and tried. God, how I've tried! And I'm realizing that it doesn't work. I'm realizing that I'm getting tired of persisting in doing what doesn't work. I want to be in harmony with the Mover of Life. Mover, wherever you are, Mover, whoever you are, talk to me. Illuminate me. Show me the Truth."

That's how you move out of the realm of the unhealed or healed healer, and become a transformational Presence, because God in you is finding expression through you, and you are remembering your Birthright, and you are remembering What You Are. You have no better gift to give your Brother, and thereby receive yourself.

Mind you, this isn't something to think about. It's something to do. Whether it's the poinsettia when you first see it, or your Brother or Sister when you first see him or her, hesitate. You've got to do that hesitation before you blindly accept what your memory provides you with, or the meanings you have applied and created out of imagination.

You've got to hesitate. Why? Because your Brother is worth it? Yes, but the real reason for doing it is that you don't deserve to be experiencing one more moment of misperceiving Reality and yourself. It's not your Birthright, and God isn't holding it away from you. And it makes no sense to be unconscious of the Truth.

So use every encounter, use every situation this week, even as when you walk your dog and you see a weed on the side of the road, or another tree cut down, or how noisy the road down below is getting, take each one of those things and hesitate before you come to that damned conclusion, and step back and say, "Father, give me fresh eyes to see. Let me see things here through Your Eyes." And then don't forget that what you're asking for is something that is going to change the way you're experiencing yourself and your world, that will constitute a blessing, you wouldn't have wanted to miss. Don't forget that, so that you are free to let go of the grouching and grumbling about the very thing that caused you to have to hesitate and ask God, "What's going on?" You don't want the grouching and grumbling to continue. You want the presence of curiosity to replace it, because the answer will be so transformational, and will be such a blessing for you, that you wouldn't have wanted to miss it.

Okay. Enough said.

I love you, and I look forward to being with you next week.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Last week I reminded all of you of the good news that you're all puppets serving one of two teachers, and there's no other choice. And I also made it clear to you that it was my purpose, as it is every time I'm with you, but more pointedly last week, last time we were together, that my purpose was to undermine your self-confidence. You see, what you consider to be your greatest strengths are actually your greatest weaknesses, because whatever self-confidence you personally have in your personal private capacity to function well and to be an effective presence, whatever strengths you count yourself as having, reinforce your determination to do things by yourself. "To do things by yourself" means to be doing it solo, separate and apart, authoritative in your own right.

And yet, it's this determination and the enacting of that determination that keeps you from having the curiosity, or even the experience of need necessary to ask the Holy Spirit for help. And what is the Holy Spirit? Nothing more than your Right Mind. So if you're determined not to connect with your Right Mind, it means you're determined to be unconscious of What You Are and What Everything Is. You're determined to define everything yourself and live according to your make-believe world. Now, how can that be described as anything but a weakness? To be unconscious of What You Are and What Everything Is, is weakness.

We talked about the fact that the key is, before you respond to anything, hesitate and ask of the Holy Spirit, "What is the Meaning of this? What is appropriate here?" You see? You break the isolation, and you break the arrogant self-determination. And you leave yourself open for an experience other than the ones you've had in the past, and a perspective different from what you say you have enjoyed in the past, and you lay the groundwork for, or you provide the environment in which a shift of perception can occur. A shift of perception being what? A miracle. That's what you're all aiming for, or you wouldn't be with me each week.

But it's easy to forget. The habit of independence, the habit of self-confidence is strong. And not only that, you have incorporated into your make-believe self and world the idea that it's your purpose to improve your skills, to improve your capacity to function independently well. It is your purpose to do that to secure your credibility, your integrity, your respectability. You see? So it's a hard habit to let go of because you're so conditioned to think that the loss of your self-confidence and the loss of your capacity to behave independently will constitute a loss of integrity, a loss of all that's meaningful and important about existing for you. So it's not an easy habit to break, but it is a habit which must be broken if the Ultimate Good that all of you want is to become your Conscious Experience.

You cannot use that which is a denial of All That Is True About You as a means of getting to the experience of All That Is True About You. And so I'm here to keep reminding you that the path you've been on is one that denies the possibility of arriving at the destination you have made-up to be at the end of this path, so that you will do what? So that you'll hesitate. Maybe you won't take the next step on that path taking you to the place that you didn't want to go, the path that won't take you where you do want to go, so that you can reconnoiter. That's what you're doing when you hesitate a moment and you say, "Father," or you say, "Holy Spirit, what's the Truth here?" You're reconnoitering. You are putting yourself in a position where a change of direction can occur. And if you're considering the possibility of a change of direction, you are weakening the commitment you've had to reach the destination you thought you could reach by determinedly moving forward on this road, this path, that won't take you where you want to go.

Now, I am with you at every single moment. You don't listen for me at every single moment, but I'm there. Even though you don't listen for me at every moment, you, through a constructive use of your memory, can remember to hesitate as often as possible during the course of each day, and express a little curiosity to see outside of the box, to see outside of the make-believe world you've made-up, for alternatives that you can't possibly come up with through the use of your imagination, for alternatives that will free you from the suffering which is inseparable from your being on a road that leads to what you don't want, even though you believe it is going to lead you to the Ultimate.

So, the need is to hesitate and inquire. And why do you inquire? So that you can have a clearer perception yourself, unlike your poor neighbor? So that you can be clearer than somebody else? No. You ask because you have chosen to have an object of your affection, whether it is a tree, or a plant, or a Brother, or a Sister. You have chosen to have an object of your affection—something or someone to whom you are willing to give an acknowledgement of their Divinity, an acknowledgement of What They Essentially Are, separate and apart from what you have come to believe they are. And why do you do this? Because until you make a gift of the acknowledgement of What Is True about a thing, it doesn't become yours.

This is the exact opposite of the way the world works. I'm not talking about the world that you see when you look out. I'm talking about the world that all of you and everyone else has made-up in your minds that you are serving. And in the process of serving that world of concepts, you are missing each other and you are not recognizing the Kingdom of Heaven that you're right in the middle of.

So, when you turn to the Holy Spirit to break the isolation, the reason you do it is to become aware of the Truth about your world or your fellowman, so that you might extend your new awareness of What It Is, so that you might be undefended against what you've made-up about your world or your Brothers and Sisters, and actually connect with them—Who They Really Are.

So, you break the isolation in two ways. You break it by abandoning your self-confidence and asking of Someone or Something that has the larger picture, to uncover the larger picture to you, to show it to you. So you've broken the isolation in that way. And then, the fact that that's not all of it, comes into play. You ask to know the Truth so that you may extend the acknowledgement of What Is True to an object of your affection, or we could say, an object of your attention. And there you're breaking the isolation as well.

You see, it's very simple. When you have imaginations about your Brothers and Sisters, when you've determined who and what they are and what kind of person they are, you have isolated yourself from Who They Really Are. You've made yourself very private. So when you're willing to see Who They Really Are, you're abandoning and weakening that attempt to be autonomous and private as well.

Now, all of this that I've been talking about comes under the heading of healing—the correction of false perception—the being healed of misunderstanding everything and behaving as though your misunderstanding is true understanding, thus causing you to behave in a way totally inconsistent with What's Really There and arousing reaction, creating chaos.

One of the key sentences last week was:

RAJ READING: The therapist...

RAJ: Or we could say, the healer.

RAJ READING: ...does not heal; HE LETS HEALING BE.

[Editor's Note: Raj skipped the next two sentences in the book, then continued.]

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is the ONLY Therapist. He makes healing perfectly clear in ANY situation in which he is the Guide.

RAJ: Again, be careful, because it's so easy to think that you are deferring to something better than you, something different from you. But all you're deferring to is that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, which you don't recognize as yours because you have, for so long, been entranced with the make-believe "you" and the make-believe "world" that you made-up. The make-believe "you" can't heal a damn thing, because it doesn't really exist as something that can do anything.

So, yes, you have to defer to the Holy Spirit. You have to reach out to that which seems not to be you, so that reintegration of your sense of Identity with What You Really Are can occur.

RAJ READING: The human therapist can only let Him...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...FULFILL His function.

RAJ: See, that's what's so insulting to the ego. "You gotta let somebody else do the work and get the credit." But it will only seem as though something else is getting the credit while you have yourself misidentified in your own mind. But leaning into that which you don't recognize as yourself is the only way to escape your addiction to your misidentification. And so you must do it, whether it feels natural to you, or not.

So, let's continue in the book.

RAJ READING: The Awareness of the Holy Spirit

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here instead: The Acceptance of Your Brother]

RAJ READING: How can you become increasingly aware of the Holy Spirit in you EXCEPT by His effects?

RAJ: Well, let's stop for a moment.

You reach out to the Holy Spirit. You let the Holy Spirit fill you up until you are so full that it overflows and extends to your Brother, and your Brother is healed. Your Brother is transformed. Your Brother experiences a change in his experience.

Because it hasn't felt like you have done anything, because of course you are still identifying with your misperception even though you're reaching out to that which is the only Real thing in you, the only way you can tell that you have done anything is by the effect of the Movement of the Holy Spirit. The only way you can tell that you're on the right track is not because you can see directly a cause-and-effect relationship started by you and affecting your Brother, but because a change has occurred that you can't take credit for, and yet you know you were inseparable from.

It's sort of like being hooked up to equipment that can tell whether you're in an alpha state, a theta state, and so on, and it's hooked up to a little model railroad, and the more centered and at peace you become, the train begins to go around the track. It's going around the track because you're doing less and less. And the less you do, the faster it goes. And if you try to make it go, it will stop.

And so, here it is, going around the track. You see the effect of what? Of your backing out of a place of authority, a supposed capacity to make things happen, and to move out of an aggressive frame of mind into your peace. And so, as a result of your doing less and less, more and more happens. And because of the effect, and because of the fact that the wires are hooked up to you, you know you had something to do with it. You know that if indeed you wanted the train to go around and around, you were doing something right, even though the something right that you were doing was less and less of anything. The less you did, the less you do, the more it goes.

So, it's like a lesson in reverse. You learn that the only way to be truly effective is to abandon trying to be effective. And as you have that experience more and more, it becomes easier and easier to let nothing be done by you from an independent frame of mind, knowing that the less you do, the more will be done.

As you let yourself have that experience, you begin to have a new experience of Identity. What you begin to recognize as you, is the absence of doing anything yourself privately. And so, the evidence of your being on the right track helps to provide you with a new Source of the experience of your Identity. In effect, the more consistently you let the Holy Spirit come through you, because you, as a personal authorizer, are doing less and less, the more opportunity you have to find out the Real Meaning together with the Real Experience of being What You Truly Are.

But you must let yourself into that place where something can happen that you can't take credit for, but because you're inseparable from it happening, you know that it must have something to do with you. It's just not the "you," the authoritative you, the skillful you, that you used to practice being and get your sense of identity from.

RAJ READING: How can you become increasingly aware of the Holy Spirit in you EXCEPT by His effects? You cannot see Him with your eyes, nor hear Him with your ears.

RAJ: Mind you, this "Him" is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: How, then, can you perceive Him at all? If you inspire joy, and others react to you WITH joy, even though you are not experiencing joy yourself, there MUST be something in you that is capable of producing it. If it IS in you and CAN produce joy, and if you see that it DOES produce joy in others, you MUST be dissociating it in yourself.

RAJ: Well, [laughing] it isn't like dissociating it in yourself is some new experience caused by virtue of your doing something right and the train goes around the track. What it amounts to is that if you are letting the Holy Spirit be through you and there are blessings—blessings that you see are experienced by others, that you know you were part of even though you weren't the originator of the Movement of the Joy that's experienced—you by virtue, who by virtue of what you have done and seen, should be having the experience of what was given being made your own. And if you're not, it's because you are dissociating all of it from you. Again, this isn't something new, but when it happens, you are in a position of being able to clearly see the dynamic—you've been dissociated all along.

Now, dissociated. Dissociated.

Oh, a psychological word. What a... you know, what does that mean?

Well, we'll take Paul as an example. Poor Paul. He has devoted twenty-three years of his life to let the Holy Spirit speak, to let It come through him. And when he does, he's not in any state of tension, any state of confusion, any experience of unworthiness. And yet, by the same token, any worth that's there, any clarity that's there is nothing he can take credit for as a private, separate, independent Paul that he thought he was as he was growing up. But, just wait until after the Gathering is over and he puts me on the back shelf, which means he stops listening. He stops... he abandons the joining. And now Paul says, "Wow." Oh, he looks around at those who listen to me when he's letting me speak and he says, "Damn. They don't seem to be learning anything!" Oh. Well, you see, there's the dissociation right there.

The dissociation is that he left the place of being joined to have thoughts of his own. That's what the dissociation is.

So now there's Paul on Sunday nights. And there's Paul every other month on the Internet—"An Afternoon with Raj." And on the alternate months, there are larger numbers of people present. And then there's Paul in between. I don't mean to say that he abandons me totally, but he does dissociate.

And he wonders what the heck good it's been for him to spend twenty-three years with no more results, with no more evidence of benefit. And yet, it isn't as though those who listen to me don't share with Paul that there's benefit. What it boils down to is that he's saying, "Well, what am I getting out of it?"—meaning, "What does this made-up I... what is it getting out of it?" Well, it's not getting anything out of it.

Of course, like right now when he's letting me speak, he's not experiencing or having any of the thoughts that have to do with inequity. It's only when he dissociates himself from it that he, in his right to have his own made-up thoughts, makes up the worst thoughts you can imagine that cause him to feel bad and useless and worthless, because after all, for a good part of twenty-three years, the made-up Paul hasn't done much because the Real Paul has let What Is Real happen. You see what I'm saying?

[Repeating.]

You cannot see the Holy Spirit with your eyes, nor hear Him with your ears.

RAJ READING: How, then, can you perceive Him at all?

RAJ: Well, here's how.

RAJ READING: If you inspire joy, and others react to you WITH joy, even though you are not experiencing joy yourself, there MUST be something in you that is capable of producing it. If it IS in you and CAN produce joy, and if you see that it DOES produce joy in others, you MUST be dissociating it in yourself.

RAJ: Which really means you must be dissociating yourself from it in you. And you do the dissociating by claiming the right to think for yourself and have your own personal private viewpoint in which the function of the Real Function of Your Being becomes unavailable to you, because you're choosing not to pay attention to it. You're choosing not to have it as the object of your attention. So you dissociate yourself from All That Is True by giving conscious preference to what you preferred to make-up about everything, and living in that imagination. It's that simple.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It seems to you that the Holy Spirit does NOT produce joy consistently in you ONLY because you do not consistently AROUSE joy in others.

RAJ: Well, why don't you "consistently arouse joy in others"? Because they're not the object of your attention. They're not the object of your affection. Who you have made yourself up to be is. You see?

RAJ READING: Their reactions to you ARE your evaluations of His consistency.

RAJ: When Paul is just being Paul existing in his memory of who he is, his made-up structures of who he is, he doesn't inspire much joy in anybody. He may not be a problem for everyone, but you know what? The train isn't moving. The Movement that arises out of union, isn't occurring. And so, whatever appears to happen can't really be fulfilling—not fulfilling capital "P" Purpose.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you are inconsistent you will not always GIVE RISE to joy, and so you will not always RECOGNIZE His...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...consistency.

RAJ: And you know what? That's what makes you miserable. That's what makes Paul miserable, grouchy, fussy, not too happy with his lot in life, because [little laugh] after all of this devotion, he hasn't gotten that much out of it. But the "he" that hasn't gotten much out of it, is the conceptual "he" that he holds in his mind. It isn't getting much out of it because it can't take credit for any of the good stuff that's happening.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: What you offer to your brother you offer to Him,...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...because He cannot go BEYOND your offering in His giving.

RAJ: What you offer to your Brother, you offer to the Holy Spirit.

Let's reverse it to make sense. What you offer to the Holy Spirit in terms of your attention and in terms of your willingness to yield to Him and not function solo, that willingness is what ends up being given to your Brother, because the Holy Spirit can be through you, and therefore something of value ends up being extended to your Brother.

So what you offer to your Brother—let's say it's not much—you offer to the Holy Spirit not much in terms of attention and willingness to let the Holy Spirit in. Make sense? It's not really complicated, even though your ego can say, "Now that is a mind-bender and I'm gonna have to take a while to understand that."

RAJ READING: What you offer to your brother you offer to Him,...

RAJ: If you offer little to the Holy Spirit, you're offering little to your Brother.

If you look at your Brother and say, "Yeah. [small laugh] What can I expect? She's a nerd, or she's a jerk, you know," what are you offering? Not much. And in that state of mind [laughing] you're not offering much of your attention to the Holy Spirit either, because you're really pleased with your skill in being able to squarely peg your Sister and assess her correctly. You see?

What you offer to your Brother or your Sister, you offer to the Holy Spirit, because He cannot go beyond your offering in His giving. The Holy Spirit cannot give more than you're willing to let in. And so only what you let in can end up being extended to your Brother.

Again.

RAJ READING: What you offer to your brother you offer to Him,...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...because He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...cannot go BEYOND your offering in His giving. This is not because HE limits His giving,...

RAJ: It's not because the Holy Spirit limits His giving.

RAJ READING: ...but simply because you have limited your RECEIVING.

RAJ: And how do you limit your receiving? By dissociating from that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, and utilizing the blank space that's left in your mind to provide your own definitions and meanings to fill it up. And that's all that you can possibly extend to your Brother and Sister, except that the gift you extend in that frame of mind is always a gift of subtraction. It always leaves your Brother and Sister less whole—not as whole—less whole.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The will to receive is the will to accept.

RAJ: “The will to receive” is not something your ego is capable of doing.

So I want you to know that whenever you arrive at a point where you’re willing to say, “Help,” where you’re willing to reach out to the Holy Spirit, where you’re willing to abandon your isolation and let something else in, you move out of the realm of subtraction. You move into the realm of addition. And what is given does not deplete you, but becomes yours, as well.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If your brothers ARE part of you, will you ACCEPT them? Only they can teach you what you are, and your learning is the result of what you taught them.

RAJ: Now this might sound a little bit like gibberish, but bear with me.

RAJ READING: If your brothers ARE part of you, will you ACCEPT them? Only they can teach you what you are, and your learning is the result of what you taught them. What you call upon in them you call upon in YOURSELF. And as you call upon it in them it becomes real to YOU.

RAJ: These sentences express Singularity.

It says that no matter how many there seem to be of you and your Brothers, there’s only one thing going on. Your Brothers teach you Who You Are. No. Your Brothers teach you What You Are. Your Brothers teach you what you are by virtue of their clear or unclear behavior, their clear or unclear thinking.

They teach you What You Are by providing you with the opportunity to engage in this hesitation that causes you to turn to the Holy Spirit, that causes you to experience an infilling which you may not feel totally yet, but which will overflow and be extended. And when it is received, you have the evidence of the Movement and the evidence of What You Are—the puppet—the place where God manifests. Not you manifest, but where God manifests. Or your Brother’s clear or unclear thinking and behavior based upon it, causes you to not hesitate, but to move forward, like a bulldozer, from your best judgments and really put your Brother in his place, or move him to the best of your made-up ability to cause him to find himself in a better place than he was.

But see, even if your Brother's behavior changes and his way of seeing himself seems to have improved, the train still hasn't moved around the track, because you were never joined in the Place of Peace and Real Union. Hell, your Brother, his behavior might improve, and he might be happier, because you taught him through your skill and expertise how to jew his brother out of money, how to behave in business practices that are sleazy but which make you a million. You see? No train has gone around the track, even if your Brother seems happier. You see what I'm saying?

RAJ READING: Only they can teach you what you are,...

RAJ: By bringing into play which mode of being you choose to practice—joined or unjoined.

RAJ READING: ...and your learning is the result of what you taught them.

RAJ: Give nothing, get nothing. Oh, that is the learning you're supposed to be getting, but everybody is so persistently committed to being successful independently that no one wants to acknowledge that it isn't working. And so learning doesn't occur. And the lesson your Brother is teaching you, isn't registering with you.

RAJ READING: Only they can teach you what you are, and your learning is the result of what you taught them. What you call upon in them you call upon in YOURSELF. And as you call upon it in them it becomes real to YOU.

RAJ: You call upon nothing in them. You call upon living out of habit. You call that forth from them, and that's what you get to keep for yourself.

And there's no learning there. But it reinforces your ignorant state. And because of this ethic that you have programmed into your made-up sense of self, you take this experience as a call for an even greater exertion of effort on your part to do better next time, so that without hesitating and breaking the isolation, you might do a better job than you did this time. That's why it's called insanity.

RAJ READING: God has but one Son, knowing them all AS one.

RAJ: God has only One Creation, no matter how Infinite It Is.

RAJ READING: God has but one Son, knowing them all AS one. Only God Himself is more than they, but they are not less than He is.

RAJ: As I've said before, God withholds nothing of What He Is in His Expression of You. I have also said that you can say, "God is all there is of me, but I am not God."

Again.

RAJ READING: Only God Himself is more than they,...

RAJ: His Sons.

RAJ READING: ...but they are not less than He is. Would you know what this means?

RAJ: That doesn't mean [laughing], would you know what it means if it came up and slapped you on the side of the face? It means, would you really want to know what that means? Will you want to know what that means enough to explore what it means by doing things different, by hesitating that moment and abandoning your mental habits of misidentifying yourself and your world—the Kingdom of Heaven?

RAJ READING: Would you know what this means? If what you do to my brother you do to me,...

RAJ: Here's another gobbledygook sentence that simply expresses a Singularity.

This and that are This, and that and this are This, because everything is This. Only This is going on. No matter how many "that's" there are, it's all This. It's all One Thing going on. It's One Thing Infinitely Self-Expressed. It's Creation. It's what God Is Being Infinitely.

RAJ READING: If what you do to my brother you do to me, and if you do everything for yourself because we are PART of you, everything WE do belongs to you as well.

RAJ: It's like no matter what angle you look at this from, no matter how many different angles you look at it from, it's all the same thing going on. There just isn't anything private. It's only when you claim to be autonomous, you imagine that you can be autonomous, that you can seem to have things that are yours that others can't have and don't have, and that others can have that you don't have and can't have.

RAJ READING: Every Soul God created IS part of you, and shares His glory WITH you.

RAJ: God's Glory with you.

RAJ READING: His Glory belongs to Him, but it is equally YOURS.

RAJ: God's Glory belongs to God, but it is equally yours.

God has withheld nothing of What He Is in His Expression of You, and your Brother, and the tree, and the sowbug.

RAJ READING: You cannot, then, be LESS glorious than He is.

RAJ: And you can't be less glorious than your Brother is. And your Brother or Sister can't be less glorious than you are, [laughing] no matter how well you have described them in the most unfortunate words to be less than you.

You just can't afford to maintain this sense of autonomous, isolated existence, because it blinds you to What You Are. It blinds you to What Your Brother Is. It blinds you to God. It blinds you to All That Is, as I've said before, awesomely, profoundly Meaningful. Everyday you wake up and you open your eyes, and what your eyes fall on is profound because it's God Being That.

Your experience of your Identity will uncover to you that your Brother's Identity is identical to yours—that you and your Brother are One—One in Being, One in Nature, One in Character—Individual, without having abandoned Indivisibility.

When you claim a private, autonomous sense of self and try to exercise it, you are saying that you have attempted and you've fooled yourself into believing that you have succeeded in dividing That Which was Indivisible—God Infinitely Expressed. And as long as you maintain this sense of having successfully divided what is Infinitely Indivisible, you will seem to have... you and everything else that you are infinitely divided from, it won't be a true experience.

And the only reason you'll be having it and the only reason it will seem real, is because you've given preference to it. And you're enjoying this so-called thrill of believing that you've had the authority to do something that actually changed what couldn't be changed. "Wow! You are equal to God." And you are enjoying the experience, even though it is pure illusion.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God is more than you only because He CREATED you, but not even this would He keep from you.

RAJ: You see? You did not create God, and in that sense you are not God.

But you know what? The subject wouldn't even come up if you weren't, at the moment, indulging in a sense of independent selfhood, and giving preference to it in your mind. When you abandon it, there is no sense of separation from everything. Everything does not meld into some amorphous, nebulous something that you're inseparable from. What happens is, you find yourself free from having to maintain an illusion. And you find yourself free from having to defend an illusion. And you find yourself free of having to coerce others into agreeing with your illusion. You find yourself in a position with no call for defense. And you enjoy the Infinite Oneness. You enjoy the Singularity Infinately.

RAJ READING: God is more than you only because He CREATED you, but not even this would He keep from you. Therefore you CAN create as He did, and your dissociation will NOT alter this.

RAJ: That means while you're dallying with the ego, being dissociated, That Which Is Real and That Which Is True hasn't been altered in the slightest.

RAJ READING: Neither God's Light NOR YOURS is dimmed because you do not see.

RAJ: If you put on a blindfold while you're standing in your backyard in the middle of the afternoon on a sunny day, well, the sun didn't go out just because everything's black for you. Reality hasn't changed just because you've dissociated and have moved into a head trip that you prefer to Reality.

RAJ READING: Neither God's Light NOR YOURS is dimmed because you do not see. Because the Sonship MUST create as one, you remember creation whenever you recognize PART of creation.

RAJ: Remember? This is, that is This, and that is This, and that is This, and this is This. It's all One Thing.

Because you and your Brother are One without merging, I'm going to put it that way, whatever of What The Father Is Being that you are letting through you is Creation happening that you are inseparable from. And because you and your Brother are One, that which you are making your own by letting it through you to be received, becomes that which your Brother is able to have. The gift you give that becomes your own is the gift you give that becomes every Brother's own.

So, Creation is you letting God's Love through you in the way that God knows fulfills Purpose. And that Movement constitutes the Movement of Creation. And because you are not autonomous and separate and different from your Brothers, your gift becomes the gift that they give. And when you get to keep it, and you recognize it as your own, they get to keep it and recognize it as their own. And everything that they allow of the Movement of Love through them that constitutes the Movement of Creation is likewise yours to keep.

And so, you get to enjoy being part of, you might say, being creative, because you're not independent and autonomous, and your willingness to be in union causes the train to go around the track. And you're able to see: Ah! I'm in the Movement of Creation by not doing anything as a private, autonomous authorizer. And every single one of the Brotherhood has, you might say, the experience of what I am being along with me, and is blessed by what I am able to have, because I gave by not doing anything as an independent authorizer.

If I see the train going around the track and see the evidence of the Movement of Creation, and am recognizing that it's the Movement of Creation, every other Brother and Sister in the Brotherhood is able to joy in the movement of the train, because they all know what it means, too, and they know it's inseparable from them. And this is where the Singularity comes back into play.

RAJ READING: Because the Sonship MUST create as one,...

RAJ: You see?

RAJ READING: ...you remember creation whenever you recognize PART of creation. Each part you remember adds to YOUR wholeness because each part IS whole. Wholeness is indivisible, but you cannot learn of your wholeness until you see it EVERYWHERE.

RAJ: And you're not going to see it anywhere until you stop the two-step and do the hesitation.

I love you all.

Ain't this fun? I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Over the past few sessions we've discussed the practice of hesitation. It is key. Don't underestimate its importance. Hesitating before responding off the top of your head, hesitating before engaging in a knee-jerk reaction, is the only thing that is going to help you get off the merry-go-round of life—the constant repetitive practice of everything you've already believed—the constant repetitive reinforcement of everything that keeps you from waking up, experiencing enlightenment, fresh insight, that allows you to be and behave in a new way, and in new ways that elicit new responses from your world.

Now, be aware that when you hesitate [in order] to inquire of the Holy Spirit what is appropriate, the goals are going to change. You hesitate in order not to perpetuate self-defense, because always your knee-jerk responses, always your responses off the top of your head, will reinstate the practice of self-defense. That is what you all do automatically.

Many of you get confused when you turn to the Holy Spirit. And because you've turned to the Holy Spirit because there is an emergency of some sort, or a need of some sort, or you are feeling a need for defense, you turn to the Holy Spirit and you ask the Holy Spirit for a better defense. "I, I, I, I." "How can I protect myself? How can I keep from being bombarded with unpleasant people—trying situations?" And you ask a question that the Holy Spirit can't answer, because the Holy Spirit doesn't see the conflict that you see as though it were real. The Holy Spirit does know your frame of mind and your current perspective, but unlike you, the Holy Spirit doesn't believe your perspective.

Perhaps the most difficult aspect of practicing this hesitation and succeeding at its purpose, is allowing the shift that must occur from self-defense to extension [to] take place.

And the Holy Spirit says, “But you’re not abandoning your conflicted frame of mind. You’re not abandoning your confidence in your belief that you are threatened, so that you can dare to reverse your position from ‘I, I, I’ to ‘you, you, you’ or everything else, and make a Gift.”

“Yeah, but Holy Spirit, that isn’t what I came to You for. I came to You to have an answer that would help me feel safe.”

And the Holy Spirit says, “Yes. But you’re asking Me to give you an answer that makes you feel safe while you’re still abiding in your own misperceptions of being a solitary, a lonely, vulnerable entity. And you see, that isn’t What You Are. And I cannot provide an answer that will help this ‘you’ that you think you are, but which only exists in your imagination, to feel safe. I cannot make an imagination feel safe. But I can reveal to you What You Are. And I can turn your attention, if you’re willing, in the direction that will lift you out of the box of polarity, the box of conflict, that you see yourself in because you are believing that you’re separate, solitary, isolated, and vulnerable. And so, you are going to have to shift your modus operandi. You’re going to have to allow your intent to change from self-protection to Love, from self-protection against that which you are perceiving as opposing you to the Extension of Love to That Which Is Really There. Why? Because with Me, you can only have one goal. In Reality, you can have only one goal. And that goal is the Extension of Love. You’ve got to be willing to shift to the prayer, to the intent, ‘I wish to see only the Evidence of Love.’”

Now, when you say, “I wish to see only the Evidence of Love,” don’t let it just be just a wish. “Oh, well, I wish to see the evidence.” “I wish to see the Evidence of Love, but...” You know. “Well, I really do wish to see the Evidence of Love.”

But you have the wish, and it sits there un-acted upon, I’ll put it that way. If you wish to see the Evidence of Love, you are going to abandon the way others are presenting themselves. And they are presenting themselves based on their sense of being isolated, and alone, and vulnerable, and in danger, as well. They’re presenting that. Is that what you wish to see? Is that what you’re going to give your attention to? Is that going to be what you base your responses and actions upon? No.

“I wish to see the Evidence of Love” means that you engage in looking right where someone is presenting themselves poorly, or badly, or obtusely—you look there with an active desire to see the Evidence of Love. You look without validating the manner in which your Brother or Sister is presenting himself or herself. You don't validate it. You invalidate it by disregarding it and looking with an actual desire to recognize the Presence of Love there.

And you may have to start out purely intellectually by saying to yourself, "If there's anything right there where I see a difficult person, if there's anything there presenting itself badly, there must be something there behind it that is genuine, because there is no such thing as a pure illusion." And so, at least intellectually, you acknowledge that there must be something Real, with a capital "R", there. And you persist in letting that premise be elaborated upon, either by drawing from prior—and I'm talking about memory—prior teaching that you might have learned about What You Are Divinely that you can transfer in your mind, intellectually, to this person.

Now, what's happened here so far? You've abandoned... you've hesitated and you've abandoned your habit of interpreting what you're seeing from memory. You've abandoned interpreting what you're seeing based upon the obtuse presentation your Brother or Sister is presenting. And you go to another place to draw upon for clarity.

So, by starting out with more than just a wish to see the Presence of Love there, but a conscious act of giving attention there, and redefining it, I am going to say, intellectually, as to what you have learned must Really be going on there, you are now not being the evidence of habitual thinking, habitual perceptions. And you have freed yourself from confirming, let us say, the bad behavior of your Brother or Sister, together with the poor assessment of them that must follow that determination. You're now in new territory where your inquiry of the Holy Spirit can be answered because you're not blocking the new goal that the Holy Spirit will present to you of being the Presence of Love.

When you hesitate, you're providing the opportunity to get off the merry-go-round of habitual perception where the view is the same over, and over, and over, and you can confidently expect the view to remain unchanged, and therefore you can be confident that healing/transformation/correction will not occur. That's what you're stuck with if you don't step off the merry-go-round of habit. And that's why hesitation is so important.

But remember that when you hesitate and get off the merry-go-round, your goal is going to be new. It's not going to be self-centered. It's going to be all-inclusive. And the gift is not a gift that you think needs to be given to you, but the gift will be your acknowledgement, your willingness to acknowledge, your invitation to be able to acknowledge God in everything you see.

The only protection you will ever be provided with by the Holy Spirit is the realization that you need to abandon defense. The only way you will ever be safe is by abandoning your perception of an opponent— something not like you; something not good like you; not somebody who doesn't...

PAUL: Just a moment.

RAJ: You see, until you can abandon the sense of difference, you're not going to be willing to embrace. You're not going to be willing to extend. And the simple fact is that until you make the Extension of Love, the Love won't be had by you. It won't be made yours. And until it's made yours, you're still going to be in some way seeing yourself as separate, isolated, alone, vulnerable, and therefore in need of defense.

As you know, whenever we sit down for a Gathering, Paul says, "I allow only for that which expresses the Christ-Consciousness. And I allow only for that which is in Harmony with the Purpose of capital 'B' Being—the Father's Will." In other words, "Thy Will, not mine, be done." This is what he says. "Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in me, and rule out of me all self-will. And may Thy Word enrich the affections of all mankind and govern them." That's called hesitation.

No matter what's going on in his life, no matter what may be catching his attention or hooking his ego, when it's time for a Gathering, he sits down and hesitates, stops proceeding down the path of spontaneous reaction. He hesitates and shifts. He abandons self-defense by virtue of his expressed desire for his will not to be done, but for the Father's Will to be done. And for everything that follows to express what? Reaction, hate, fear, anxiety? No. That which expresses the Christ-Consciousness.

That's the way you shift. And that shift is essential, and is something that everyone needs to begin consciously and conscientiously practicing, because until you get off the merry-go-round in this manner, you're going to continue to listen and be attentive for that which will confirm your vulnerability because you're asking for better and better defense.

What you want in terms of answers is that which reveals to you that you are invulnerable—not because there is much to be defended against, but you have the ultimate defense and now you're invulnerable—but because you've moved out of the state of isolation in which the Kingdom of Heaven appears to be conflicted, and therefore dangerous to you.

Oh, but the suggestion is that things are too dangerous for you to take the time to hesitate. You know the saying, "He who hesitates is lost." Well, the fact is that he who hesitates is saved. If the hesitation is the first step in shifting one's goals and shifting the source from which you gather your comprehension of everything you're experiencing, you could say, "He who hesitates is found," like the Prodigal Son whom the Father lost, but on his return, his Father has found.

Let's go into the book.

RAJ READING: Wholeness is indivisible,...

RAJ: It's a Singularity.

RAJ READING: ...but you cannot learn of your wholeness until you see it EVERYWHERE.

RAJ: I wish to see only the Evidence of Love. Until you have that wish and look for it, you won't find it anywhere. And if you stay in a state of defense against your neighbor, or your family, or your boss, or anyone, if you stay in a state of defense with them, you will not see Love there because you will not be looking for Love. You will be looking for more and more evidence of the fact that you need to be defended.

You could say instead of "Wholeness," Being is Indivisible, Being is a Singularity.

RAJ READING: Wholeness is indivisible, but you cannot learn of your wholeness until you see it EVERYWHERE.

RAJ: Until you give the acknowledgement of it away.

Now I promise you that as long as you feel that defense is essential, you will not take the essential step of giving away the acknowledgement of Wholeness, the acknowledgement of God. That's very elemental. It's very fundamental. And you can't afford to overlook it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You can KNOW yourself only as God knows His Son, for knowledge is shared WITH God.

[Again.]

RAJ READING: You can KNOW yourself only as God knows His Son,...

RAJ: Anything else that you would engage in would be a belief about yourself. And you believe a lot of things about yourselves. And your beliefs, because they aren't Knowing, have no basis in What God Is Being right there where you are. And therefore, you don't know yourself. You're lost in a morass of complex beliefs and belief systems.

RAJ READING: ...knowledge is shared WITH God. When you awake in Him you will know your magnitude by accepting His limitlessness as YOURS, but meanwhile...

RAJ: Until you do that.

RAJ READING: ...you will judge it as you judge your brothers', and will accept it as you accept THEIRS.

RAJ: It's like the Singularity still applies in the box as well as out of the box. And so what you believe about yourself, you will believe about your Brothers. And what you believe about your Brothers, you will believe about yourself.

And if what you believe about yourself and your Brothers is based upon a sense of yourself that's not true, based upon a sense of yourself as being independent from a God, a Divine Source, then everything that you believe based upon that misunderstanding, you will apply equally to yourself and your Brothers.

Now the simple fact is that when your perceptions are based upon ignorance, when they are not based upon Truth, there is throughout them tension, fear, frustration, general but absolute conflict. But when you know yourself, because you've stepped out of that level or out of that box, what you learn about yourself, you know is True about your Brother. And you extend it to your Brother. And the Singularity applies. What you know about yourself, you know about your Brother. And what you know about your Brother, which isn't gathered from what they're presenting necessarily, you know about yourself. And there is no conflict in it. And there is no fear in it. And therefore, there is in you no shred of defense. And your Innocence becomes theirs, because it is a Singularity. And although, in time they may not acknowledge their Innocence readily, they find no justification for increasing their defense with you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are not yet awake, but you can learn HOW to awaken. Very simply the Holy Spirit teaches you to awaken others.

RAJ: "Oh, God. It would be so much easier if all I had to do was work on myself." Well, 'tain't so.

You see [laughing]...

RAJ READING: You are not yet awake, but you can learn HOW to awaken.

RAJ: And here's where the shift of intent occurs. The goal changes.

RAJ READING: Very simply the Holy Spirit teaches you to awaken others.

RAJ: Oh, it breaks the isolation, first thing off the top of the list. You've got to be involved. You've got to care. And then you've got to care to send only the very best, because whatever you send is what you get to keep.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: As you see them waken you will learn what waking MEANS, and because you have willed to wake them, their gratitude and their appreciation of what you have given them will teach YOU its value. THEY will become the witnesses to your reality, as YOU were created witnesses to God's. Yet when the Sonship comes together and ACCEPTS its oneness, it will be known by its creations, who witness to its reality as the Son does to the Father.

RAJ: You are here to glorify God. Another way of saying that is, you are here to confirm What God Is.

And the gifts that you give which are received, stand as confirmations of What You Are, which stand as confirmations of What God Is.

RAJ READING: Miracles have no place in eternity because they are reparative. Yet while you still need healing, your miracles are the only witnesses to your reality which you can RECOGNIZE. You cannot perform a miracle for YOURSELF because miracles are a way of GIVING acceptance AND receiving it. In time the giving comes first, though they are simultaneous in eternity,...

RAJ: Or you might say, they are simultaneous in actuality.

RAJ READING: ...where they cannot BE separated. When you have learned that they ARE the same, the need for time is over.

RAJ: Well, let's not jump to that last sentence and try to be from that standpoint.

Take the time that it takes to embody your willingness to shift from self-defense to the Extension of Love. You must take the time to extend the acknowledgement of What Each Other Truly Is, because until you do that, you won't have the confirmation or the experience of What You Are. It won't become your own. You can't do it all by yourself. And you can't do it for yourself. But you can be inseparable from the Movement that causes you to receive the blessing. You see? But you just can't get around the fact that you have to be willing to give, to extend something where your private, personal, tiny, vulnerable sense of self says, "They don't deserve it," or, "It's foolish to do this because they're not going to understand it. Don't do it."— because you've got to attend to protecting yourself.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Eternity is ONE time, its only dimension being “always.” This cannot mean anything to you, however, until you remember God’s open arms and finally know His open Mind. Like Him, YOU are “always,” in His Mind and with a mind like His.

RAJ: Because there's only One Mind to be shared.

RAJ READING: In YOUR open mind are YOUR creations, in perfect communication born of perfect understanding.

RAJ: But at the moment, we could say, “In your closed mind are your creations in imperfect communication born of imperfect concepts.”

When you think you have nothing to do with a God, that you're just a physical organism, born of a sperm and an egg, you cannot make a gift that will lift you out of that ignorant misperception. And you will constantly confirm it.

Now how hard is it for you to break the habit of self-defense, and hesitate and make this kind of shift? You find a lot of resistance. Some of the resistance just comes in the form of, “It's difficult for me to believe that this can be true.” But that is a resistance. It is a difficulty.

Now, if it's difficult for you to be willing to make this shift, you've got to use some common sense and realize that when you do make the Gift to someone else so that you might have it, you are likely to run into resistance as well, initially. And so it's going to make it seem like doubly-hard work. But we are undoing a deeply-established habit. And if you are the ones who have arrived at the point of seeing the way out, even though it's difficult for you to accept fully and embrace easily, don't be surprised if there's a little bit of effort that is called into play, because you become, in effect, the way-showers to an audience that says, “I don't have time to go that way because there are too many dangerous things going on that I must attend to, or in one way or another, it will cost me my life.”

Repeating.

RAJ READING: In YOUR open mind are YOUR creations, in perfect communication born of perfect understanding. Could you but accept one of them, you would not want ANYTHING the world has to offer. Everything else would be totally meaningless.

RAJ: Now it's not necessary for you to swallow the whole elephant in one bite.

Don't say: "Well, gee whiz. There are some experiences that I have had that make what I'm hearing truly meaningful, and there are some experiences of the Presence of God that have demonstrated to me that what I'm experiencing is not really satisfying, but I haven't yet seen everything. As It Is so that I am not tempted in any way to look at things the way I used to, and to believe what I used to believe. And so it seems as though there are still things the world has to offer to me that I haven't let go of."

It doesn't matter. You persist with the way out, knowing that the habits in you resist the step, and the habits in others resist the receipt of any gift you actually manage to extend to them.

It isn't that waking up is so hard. It is that your commitment to your beliefs is so deep. And it is the depth of the commitment to your beliefs that makes it seem as though it's not worth it to put forth the degree of effort that you perceive it will take in order to wake up.

Well, what I'm telling you is that from within the box, from within your accepted state of mental conflict, the easiest thing in the world, the most natural thing to you is going to look difficult because part of your deeply ingrained belief is that what is perfectly natural to you is not natural to you. Why? Because you aren't Divine. Why? Because you aren't the Christ; there's only one Christ—Christ Jesus. Someday you may be like him, but you're not the Christ. You can't even lay claim to any part of what "Christhood" means because you're not That. And you're firmly committed to that belief. But you are the Christ, and to be the Christ is utterly natural and utterly effortless.

I'm telling you that so that when it seems as though what I'm saying is an impossible task, you may know that it is the one thing that is actually possible, so that you will persist, not in doing the impossible, but in recognizing that it is going to look impossible from your conflicted point of view. If you know that it's going to appear to be impossible from your conflicted point of view, you will have more justification for practicing hesitation and shifting gears, because when you shift gears, the appearance of the impossibility of it vanishes. It vanishes because it was nothing more than part of the infrastructure, you might say, of imaginative ideas based upon error, not based upon Truth. And that's the only reason it appears to be impossible.

RAJ READING: God's meaning...

RAJ READING: God's meaning is incomplete without you, and you are incomplete without your creations. Accept your brother in this world and accept NOTHING ELSE, for in him you will find your creations because he...

RAJ: Your Brother.

RAJ READING: ...created them WITH you.

RAJ: Well, in the process of Awakening, what will your creations be? Your creations will be the active, conscious Extension of Love; the active, conscious Extension of the Vision of your Brother's Holiness that the Father has revealed to you.

Does that mean you're acknowledging the Divinity of that poor bastard? No. It means you're acknowledging the Divinity of the Christ that you are seeing where your limited perception was seeing a bastard. But now you know that there never was a bastard there. There was just your misperception which grew out of your own sense of vulnerability and fear that had to have an enemy in order to justify its fight for survival in a hostile environment—a hostile environment that was created only in the imagination in the void left when you got your divorce from your Father and said you would rather see things your way.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You will never know that you are co-creator with God until you learn that your brother is a co-creator with YOU.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "your brother is co-creator" instead of "your brother is a co-creator."]

RAJ: Here's the Singularity again, like I said before. That is This, and that is This, and that is This, and that is This. It's All One. No matter how Infinite the Expression of Being that the Father Is Being, it's still All The Father.

You, divinely speaking, are inseparable from the Father. And therefore, What The Father Is Being is What You Are. And your Experience of Being constitutes an Extension. And the Gift you give is your creation. But understand that we've been saying that the Gift you end up giving when you break the isolation is the Gift the Father has given to you. So the Gift you give is the Father's Gift. And you give it to your Brother.

And if you're going to stay at the level of Singularity, you're going to realize that you giving the Gift to your Brother is what your Brother's Function is, too. Your Brother gives the Gift from the Father to you, to his Brothers. It's One Thing embodied, for lack of better words, Infinitely.

It's essential for you and your Brother to be brought into a pure awareness of What Truth Is. It is necessary for you to abandon the idea that you, as a spiritually advanced person, are gifting somebody apparently unworthy of the Gift, so that he or she might be blessed enough to become illuminated.

The Gift of Acknowledgement that you give to your Brother is not a gift to what they're presenting themselves as. And it is not a gift to the concept you have of them. It's a gift to What They Truly Are. I mean if you're giving the Acknowledgment of What They Truly Are, you must be seeing What They Truly Are. And you know that you're not giving a gift to the bitch or bastard that you thought they were, or that they think they are, or that they're behaving like. You see?

Is this a real stretch? No, it's really simpler than what you're thinking. You know what? If your Brother isn't worth this kind of attention, then neither are you.

The Singularity is always there. If you want to wake up, and whether you want to or not, you will, because you're being asleep is an illusion—you are already the Ultimate. But if you want to wake up, you're going to have to find your Brother and Sister worthy of your attention, and whatever it takes, however long it takes, to be the Light, you might say, that provides the illumination necessary for your Brother or Sister to see It for himself or herself. Now, that is something you have to keep in mind because you seem to be coming out of a three-dimensional frame of reference—time and space and little entities progressing—little private entities growing into a clearer experience of themselves.

But what I've pointed out to you tonight is that although that's the appearance, and part of your learning is the willingness to give for as long as it takes, even if it's forever, the fact is that the Gift is being given to One Who Already Knows, because you've got to be addressing the One Who is neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it, but is there, and must be understood therefrom. And it's your task to understand them from there, and see them from there, because that is the Truth.

If you say, "My brother is worthy of this kind of attention for a couple of weeks, or a couple of years, but not forever," then you can see that your intent to make the gift isn't Whole and doesn't constitute a shift in you. It's partial giving. It's conditional giving.

Your capacity to be the Presence of Love, because you are the Presence of Love that God Is Infinitely Being right where you are, is your capacity to give it without limit, and to give it gladly because it constitutes the fulfillment of What You Are. And so part of your stepping out of time is learning to be willing to be the Presence of Love for as long as it takes, without reserving the right to not give it if it's going to take too much time.

When you're willing to give it for as long as it takes, like I am willing to give it for as long as it takes, when you are willing to do that, you will have made a shift inside. And now there won't be anyone holding out for a little bit of time to be able to spend not being the Presence of Love. And if you're not willing to be the Presence of Love forever, the Wholeness of You hasn't dawned on you within you as your new Awareness of What You Are, which is a return to your Sanity.

Doing this is not an insurmountable problem, but I've made it very clear to you. Why? So that you won't waste your time with non-essentials. And so that the shift that comes as a result of hesitation might occur wholly, with less process to it.

I love you, and I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Discussion Today Topic: Hesitation

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, everyone has had a good couple of weeks to practice hesitation instead of the two-step. I'm going to ask for you to share what the practice has brought up for you, because in a way it's not an easy practice. So, I'll just pass the mic around and if you wish to respond, fine; if not, pass it on to the next person.

SEEKER: Well, mostly I figured out how very little I ever actually hesitate. I would remember to hesitate after the moment passed when I could have actually done that. But I'm getting closer to... I mean I'm remembering sooner after I don't hesitate than I did when I started. I've got to work on it. I still have my little stickers.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [speaking to previous seeker] I expected you to go on longer. [laughing]

I actually forgot about it the past few days, and it would have been really good to remember it. But before that I did find that the hesitating... well, that the lack of hesitating is kind of always to defend something. And that in the hesitating, I found that what I would have defended didn't really need defending. But then I forgot, and I got back into the habit of defending again, so. Then I got really tired and I realized that that kind of defense takes a lot of energy, so then it was easier to hesitate because I was tired.

ANOTHER SEEKER: For me, what seems to be going on, I think it's been a year, not this last Christmas but the year before, when you told us to stop and actually acknowledge the clerks in stores, and that's when I discovered, as Judy has talked about too, that you can have these wonderful blessed moments with strangers that you don't have opinions about to start with, so that you have all this love available from perfect strangers. And you leave, they're feeling good, you're feeling good; it's wonderful.

So this hesitation thing, it's dawning on me the same thing can happen with the people I have opinions about. And yesterday I called my sister with whom I... well, actually someone I avoid, and had forty minutes of a wonderful conversation with this person who is on the Point of Perfection. I never really had seen her that way, as I recall. [small laugh]

So, yes, I want to do it more. It's made a tremendous difference in the amount of defense that I usually live with.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Two things come to my mind.

One is I've noticed that I have an opinion about everybody. I don't even have to know them. I just look at somebody and an opinion comes up. And I think because of the whole idea of recognizing that your salvation comes from being able to connect with the other and that the other is a teacher, what I found was that now the opinion comes up and immediately I ask the Holy Spirit for me to see things differently. And I don't know what I'm expecting to see but the opinion coming up triggers that mantra, so to speak.

And then the other thing is, which I've just recognized, is there will be people who call me or come to yoga class, and then for some reason, and there's every kind of excuse, I've heard a lot of different excuses as to why they can't continue to come. And what I found is that what will come up for me is there will be something that I might be able to say that would be helpful for that person before they leave. And I've in the past said, "Well, they're gone, so I'm not even going to waste my time with them." And now I'm beginning to realize that it's very important for me to make any constructive comment to them, because they're never gone, and there's never a separation, and that person is never disconnected from me, even whether they're coming to class or not.

And so, that's the next thing that I want to bring into my experience is to always recognize my connection with everyone, whether they're a participant or not [a] participant in my life.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'm afraid I haven't remembered to hesitate until after the event.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Something I've noticed in the last few weeks while taking solitary walks, and even a trip I took to southern California and back, that I had to have it in the past if I'm in a solitary mode with... if I come across... come up next to people, cross them on the street, or engage them in a store setting as I think someone said, that I tend to be a little resistant, but what I've noticed in the last few weeks was that while approaching someone on a walk, or engaging with them in a minor business transaction, that the thought that they are a Brother or a Sister has come into mind and has colored the transaction. As fleeting as it might be, just passing someone and making eye contact and saying "hello" with a quality that's been very refreshing and validating for the whole idea that I am more connected to others than I give myself credit for. So it's been a kind of interesting series of minor but noted exchanges/experiences.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I think I've only done just slightly better than I usually have. So I'm looking for an excuse as to why I haven't done better. But I really don't have one, so I think that's about all I can say right now.

RAJ: Two things:

To hesitate after the fact is an excellent practice as well. Just because you didn't hesitate on the spot doesn't mean that hesitation isn't still valuable. What are you hesitating for? You're hesitating to break the habit, or to interrupt your habitual thinking. Right? And after the fact when you say [snap of the fingers], "Damn. I should have hesitated," you still need to hesitate, because your mind is still running down this track where you are still involved in the frame of mind that wasn't the best at the time of the incident. And so there's still the need for the interruption of your habitual thinking.

Now the second thing is, what is the purpose of hesitating? It's to interrupt your habitual thinking and to listen, to turn to the Holy Spirit to ask, "What do I need to know here? What's the Truth here? What is the Truth that would constitute my reflecting Love in my environment and in light of the experience I just had in which I didn't hesitate?" Remember, the reason for hesitating is to switch tracks.

There is a statement that's very helpful: Love illumines, designates, and leads the way.

You hesitate to open up to the Holy Spirit or to the Father, to let yourself be infilled with Love, the Father's Love; something which blesses you. This Love that is the Father's Love illumines the way, designates the way, and leads the way. So you see, when you hesitate, the purpose is to shift the source of that which governs you. Is it going to be your habitual thinking, or is it going to be something outside of that that's larger, whose motive is Love and not self-defense? It's the point at which you stop acting like a puppet without strings, and you allow yourself to truly be a puppet so that the Father's Love illumines for you the way, designates the way--says, "Walk this way,"--and leads the way. Love doesn't say, "That's the way to go," and then steps out for a cup of coffee while you try to do your best. Love says, "Here is the way. Walk this way and follow me." You see?

So it doesn't matter whether you hesitate after the fact or not. At any point that you hesitate [in order] to switch tracks, to yield to guidance with the intent to be the Evidence of Love, any time you do that is the appropriate time.

Now, I'm going to pass the microphone again. This time if any of you have had the experience of hesitating, and experienced an influx of changed perspective in any way that was helpful at any time in the last couple of weeks, I would like you to share that. And if it didn't happen, that's fine, but I want to open up this avenue for discussion.

SEEKER: Well, it's when I first... I have to pause here and wonder which one of the two stand out in my mind the most. And yesterday I had a phone call from my sister-in-law who... it's too bad that the topic that brings us in the historically in different arenas is on a spiritual model that she is a deep fundamentalist, and in the years past, has been very argumentative about anybody who hasn't been saved. And that model, yesterday, did not come up in the conversation because I, in fact, did hesitate, but not initially.

Maybe five minutes into the conversation I did take a moment of pause and seek the real meaning of the phone call, and from that moment on, the phone call was entirely different. And the amount of love that she shared with me not only about her feelings toward me, but toward my wife, which is her sister, that was very reassuring. And the conversation itself all the way through until its termination was a very pleasant and delightful conversation to have with her. And I felt that I wasn't taking charge of the conversation; it was already charged with Love. And it was a pleasure to have that happen and when it's very similar to someone who mentioned earlier when they have paused with a relative of theirs. And to me that was a very significant change.

It isn't easy to pause. I've, like the rest of you, hesitated to even answer at first, because I find myself pausing further in after I have gotten in... already stepped into the quagmire of the conversation, saying, "Gee, I should have paused," and find out where this is supposed to go.

And thank you for sharing that's really not a bad place to stop either. Take that second look and say, "Okay, I missed the pause, but I'm going to go back and pick it up," and see what I need to know about this conversation, or whatever the transaction is.

RAJ: Hesitation is not meant to be used as an avoidance, but as a vestibule in which you can shift the way you're being involved with your Brother or Sister. And you remain involved.

Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

I'll pass the microphone to the next person.

ANOTHER SEEKER: A good deal of my experience was realizing that I didn't hesitate on the really big things, that I call big things, that felt big to me. And what I realized was why I don't. What I was doing when I wasn't hesitating, I was defending myself. I was very defensive and reaction. And I forgot that I don't... there's... I have nothing, there is nothing I need to defend. I forgot that part.

And later on I would look at it and think, "Oh, I wonder what would have happened if I had hesitated. I wonder what would have come to me to do." Because all the things that I'm doing have made no difference whatsoever, and I keep doing the same thing over and over again. It's not changing anything. And I really want to see what this would do for the situation, including myself.

And after the fact sometimes I could look back and look at it a little bit different and kind of have some insight into where the other person's defenses were. And I have a little more compassion for the fact that their struggling also. It isn't just me struggling. It's their struggling, and they don't realize why they're struggling, or even that they're struggling. So...

RAJ: So hesitating after the fact still allows insight to occur and shifts of perception to occur that allow you to be with whoever it was in a different way and to consider them in a less judgmental way with more compassion. That very shift, even though no conversation has taken place between the two of you, has its effect, because there are no private thoughts. You see? What happens is that the messengers you send out after you have hesitated are different messengers sent out to gather and bring back to you a report that will confirm what they were sent out to find. So don't ever think that if you haven't responded appropriately on the spot that the opportunity to be appropriate has been lost.

Okay.

SEEKER: Thanks.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I can't remember like a... or sight a particular incident, but there were several times over the last couple of weeks in conversation with Chris where just me hesitating and, you know, just kind of listening for what he might really be saying, or Who He Might Really Be, allowed me to feel a lot more like Love and Peace, and I think brought a lot more harmony to our home and our interactions with each other.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Yeah.

ANOTHER SEEKER: What comes to mind for me, I work with someone who gets very angry very easily. And I seem to do a lot of things that are irritating, and so for months I have been so on the defensive. And what's come up in the last two weeks, and I don't know if it's because of my hesitating, but a friend helped me remember that working is not about earning money. God's abundance is there for me. So my job should be to be there to extend, and that's what I've been trying to hesitate and remember. That's what I'm really there for.

And so the defenses are coming down. I've actually had moments when I really love this person; just felt absolute love. And I still have a job and I'm amazed. I just... I'm amazed I still have a job.

Anyway it is really helping me not be so frightened. I haven't gotten the extending part down very well, but you said that it might...

RAJ: But you are extending a willingness.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: You are extending something.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: A willingness not to be fearful, which is another way of saying a willingness not to be defended in the presence of this person who easily gets angry. So you're extending defenselessness. You are extending Love. And you're not holding her to a past interpretation of her and her behavior and her psychological patterns. You see?

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: You are extending something.

SEEKER: Thank you. And thank you for all your help.

RAJ: You are welcome.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I guess it was the last time we... a Sunday that we were asking questions and you asked about if we had any questions relative to the material and I related that I was having a difficulty with someone who I contracted to do some technical work for me and that they... it was supposed to take about three months and it's been going on a year. And what I did with that situation was I asked the Holy Spirit to help me get rid of the negative emotion around the whole situation and around, you know, relating directly to this individual. And I just kept asking for that.

And I don't... I can't even put my finger on when the shift took place, but the upsettedness about it just left me, so that it was like... the charge is gone. And if it takes another year, that's okay. If, you know, if it doesn't, that's okay. So I became neutral about the situation. About two days later, the person calls me up and says, "I got it done and, you know, here it is." And it was like the whole relationship was transformed. And there was no, you know, had been no interaction between us for weeks. And so, it was like, you know, all this like cause and effect; just cause and effect.

For me now it's about negative... if I get a negative uncomfortable feeling about a situation, or person, or whatever, that to me is the trigger that some transformation needs to take place in the way I need to see this thing. And so that's what I ask the Holy Spirit, you know, help me to see things differently. And what I'm beginning to see...

RAJ: Which is the way one hesitates.

SEEKER: Yes. Yes. But it's the negative emotion that triggers it. And then where I've been kind of like let down by the situation, up until recently, was that it seems like there was no transformation happening. But I was persistent. I kept asking, and asking, and asking. And then this thing happened with this individual which was, you know, like a real eye opener. So I guess it's starting to work, you know, even though there's not...

RAJ: You're starting to employ it. It has always worked. [audience laughter]

SEEKER: Right. See that was the thing. It was like I was employing it, but I didn't see any results. In other words, there was still a charge there. But now it seems, and I don't know why, it's like why, you know, is it that the constant persistence wears... begins to neutralize the resistance I have around the concept, or feeling about it? You see what I mean?

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: In other words, my habit has been looking at it, saying, "Oh, this doesn't work. This isn't working for me. I must be doing this wrong." Or, you know, I'm not understanding what Raj is saying, and that's why it's not working--never realizing that on some level there's resistance to it, and that's why it's not working.

RAJ: Plus the thought process, "I must not be understanding Raj," or "I must be doing something wrong," this is Michael authoritatively taking the reins and determining an explanation. There's no hesitation there.

SEEKER: Ah.

RAJ: You see? You can recognize there is something out of order, that there's a call for correction, and instead of defining the nature of the call for correction better, you shut up and you say, "Father, Holy Spirit, what's the Truth here?"

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: "What is the Truth that embodies my intent, my desire to see the Evidence of Love and to be the Evidence of Love?"

And being the Evidence of Love is allowing yourself to be the place where Love is embodied, not at your hand, but as a spontaneous result of being open enough that the Father's Love and the Father's Perspective can register with you as a shift of perception that constitutes an "Aha!" or even a series of "Aha's" that simply spontaneously overflow into your perceptions of everything that's around you, and specifically regarding whatever caused you to hesitate in the first place for clarity.

SEEKER: So here I, you know, I feel a judgment come on which gives me a bad feeling, and then I hesitated and asked for my perception to be changed, and then I would judge the process. And that was where I was trapping myself.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: I see. Thank you.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Well, during a recent trip to southern California, I drove on the trip 1400 miles down and it gave me plenty of time for my mind to work some scenarios on the forthcoming visit that I was looking forward to. But there was a degree of unease because I was working scenarios that were based upon memory or some idea of the future; what it would be like. I had the pleasant anticipation of visiting my son and his family, but my mind was working its own scenarios--what it might be like, what I can contribute, how it will be like.

And I was uneasy enough about that process to where I just got a little bit upset, and with that process, stepped back and, you know, prayed that I'd be able just to be present and let the chips fall. And the visit turned out to be not what I expected. There were longer periods of quiet. But enough good happened, enough experience in the present of being with those people that I felt, you know, glimmerings of the appropriateness of that kind of sense--that time was involved. Whenever I would go to the past, our history together, or some sort of ideas about the future--how it might be, how I might be as a granddad, or how they might be as grandkids--just be with them. It was really quite refreshing. And there were some really bright moments of Love. And it was very gratifying.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I've been in a situation where my life as it existed before doesn't seem possible. And the future is so unclear that I've been forced to just get up and show up in a long-term care facility, which initially just seemed like an assault to my senses, and just be there. And I've witnessed to just being led through the day each day and where there's so much love and care and support. And it's just something I've never experienced before. Surrendering to what's possible in the moment, rather than grieving about what's [??], or trying to plan or worry about the future.

RAJ: In other words, you're not using the present moment to secure a safe future. You're not using the present moment to defend yourself against a negative future. Right?

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Yes. Yes. And you're not trying to control the moment you're in.

SEEKER: I don't know how.

RAJ: Exactly. And you're finding a way to be this way gracefully, relatively speaking.

SEEKER: [small laugh] Right. By the Grace of God.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Yes. You see, the reason for abandoning control, which is what hesitation is, is to allow yourself to have the Experience of Grace. Until you get off the pedestal, until you get off the speaker's platform where you're in charge, you can't find out that God is already in charge, and that by Grace you are Loved and your needs are met. Not necessarily in the way you would plan them out, but in ways that you can't take credit for. And therefore, the fact that care is occurring that you aren't responsible for is a demonstrable... or it's a demonstration that there is a God.

It's very humiliating to let yourself into that place, but the humiliation of the ego uncovers the humility of you. And so it feels as though you have moved from being humiliated into an experience of humility. And humility is nourishing. Humility is fulfilling.

Because until you have a demonstration in your experience of the fact that there is really a God, it's just theory. This is another reason for practicing hesitation, because it allows a shift of perception to occur, which isn't just a shift of ideas, but it's a shift of a way of being present. And part of the shift of the way of being present involves what you might call being more permeable--less defended, more can get in. And what gets in is the experience or demonstration that *there really is a God, and it's not up to you, and it never has been up to you.

It never has been up to you. And that is an incredible relief that no longer or it ceases to suggest humiliation. It uncovers an Experience of Wholeness that you can grasp is permanent, if you won't try to take hold of the reins again.

Hesitation is for the purpose of letting a shift of perception occur. Which is what? A miracle.

Thank you for sharing.

Now, nobody has brought up the subject, but hesitating so that you might interrupt your habitual thought processes and your habitual perceptions, and so that you will be susceptible to the influx of revelation is not a means by which you gain control over your world. It isn't a way by means of which you can make somebody be healed. And we need to be clear on this. Your doing it and your experiencing the influx of the Father's Love that causes your perception of everything to change so that this experience overflows you and gets spontaneously extended, this does put you in a position being an agent for change, a facilitator, you might say, of change, but it doesn't put you in the position of being able to authorize the change to happen now or ten minutes from now.

You have to be willing to be the Presence of Love that doesn't have an ace up its sleeve. It's not a love that is extended if the one it's extended to will do such-and-such. You see, when the Movement of Love infills you and overflows you, and thus gets extended, the furthest thing from your mind is control or manipulation. It's like you hear something funny and you laugh, laughter escapes your lips and it reaches out and it touches everyone in the area, but the last thing you're thinking about is, "What effect is my laughter going to have on everybody in the room?" You're not saying, "Oh, my laughter is going to heal everyone. My laughter is going to change everyone." No. You're caught in the Movement of Joy.

Now, if someone in the room is down in the dumps and they're not committed to their misery, they're likely to be blessed by your laughter, and it might just break the spell and change their day for them, because they were so tickled at your unaffected, un-self-conscious outburst of joy.

There may be someone in the room who's miserable and quite committed to their misery, and your joy released will not touch them. In fact, they may say, make some remark, you know, "Hey, cut the racket out back there! Gotta get my work done. Cut out the laughing." You see? A response that matches in no way the feeling you're having.

What do you do when you do hesitate and you do reach within to the Holy Spirit or the Father, and you wish to have the Truth revealed, to know what the Truth is, and it is revealed, and it does end up being spontaneously extended and it is met with absolute resistance? Perhaps even ugly resistance, unkind resistance. Well, if the Extension of Love that is extended out of Love or from Love to your Brother or your Sister is not met with receipt, and if the extension and receipt of it, we'll say, is what means you get to keep it, what do you do with that? It would appear that someone's commitment to their misery could keep you from being able to keep what you've given away. You understand what I mean?

And here's where you have to be careful. Those who are committed to their misery are confused. But they're not just confused; they're confused and their confusion is set into place with a linchpin. In other words, it is strongly secure. [pause]

PAUL: Just a moment. [pause]

RAJ: What you have to be careful of, first of all, their commitment to it is an addiction to it, an addiction to their misery, and you have to be careful that you don't become addicted to trying to overcome their addiction. This is very important. If they say "No," it is not appropriate for you to persist in forcing, we'll say, the wonderful Truth that you're knowing about them upon them. But it's very foolish for you to abandon the Truth that has been revealed to them to you about them.

Because your mind is going to be occupied by something from the Voice for Truth or the voice for fear, it's going to be occupied or filled with something from one of the two teachers. It's your Function, it's the Divine Function of your Being to be glorifying God--meaning recognizing God because God has uncovered Himself to you. That's your Function.

And so if you are met with firm resistance, you don't stop knowing the Truth that's been revealed to you, but you do not inflict it upon one who is absolutely, steadfastly refusing to let it in. You back off. You disengage from the one-on-one resistance, and you persist in remembering, staying in touch with the shift of perception that the Father provided you about them. It's your job not to backslide and slip back into the historic definitions that you have had about that person.

Well, the ego would say, "Yeah." And of course the ego always has things to say about your spiritual advancement or real progress. The ego says, "Yeah, they're keeping you from waking up. Wow. They're no friends of yours. You're right. It's not fair." You see? And invites you to move back into judgment.

I've said before that those of you who are dreaming dreams are, for lack of better words, having a nap on a rolling hillside in the Kingdom of Heaven. Until you begin to stir, we do not disturb you. You want your dreams. But the moment the dreams begin to be uncomfortable and you begin to toss and turn and moan, and the indication is that you're on the verge of becoming conscious, we are right there in support of your decision to move out of your misery.

Now this is very important. And I'll tell you something. Those of you, and I'm not speaking of you specifically, but those of the Brotherhood who are still sound asleep and deeply committed to their dreams, are not keeping us from waking up, have not kept us from waking up. And so, you keep the Vision, you stay with the Vision that has been revealed to you that is the Truth about your Brother or your Sister, even though they are absolutely refusing to let it in. And you gently leave them and turn toward those who are beginning to stir. Is this clear?

You can, if you are not careful quote "because you really want to wake up" unquote become compulsively aggressive in terms of helping your Brother or Sister to wake up, especially if they are resisting it. Now you will have to listen to know whether to persist or not. But what I'm addressing is the tendency that is there for you to become one of the Christian soldiers marching on to war against that which is unreal. And that's not Love and that's not what it's about.

Does anyone remember the distinction I shared with you between sin and sickness? Very simply, sickness is a misperception believed in that no one wants, that no one likes. Sin is a misperception believed in that, for one reason or another, one has made commitment to.

They make commitment to it because they see it to be to their benefit. "Poor me. Woe is me." They've learned that if they believe that and they profess it, it will attract helpers who will say, "Oh, yes. Woe is you. What can I do to help you?" And so this person has a misperception of themselves, which is to their detriment because it keeps their Birthright of Wholeness out of sight for them. They make commitment to it because they see a benefit in it. And they end up using others. And it becomes a lifestyle that they hold on to, because they don't have to become self-responsible, and a number of other reasons.

So, sin is, you might say, the taking pleasure in ignorance because there is a benefit to it. And the frame of mind is used to take advantage of others, which is to the detriment of others. The correction of sin is different from the correction of sickness. Because in order for sin to be corrected, there's a process of education that must occur. The individual practicing it, has to somehow be educated out of their misperception and their attraction to their misperception.

So I bring this up because if you are dealing with someone committed to their misperception that puts them to a disadvantage and everyone around them to a disadvantage, it is going to take quote "more time and more persistence." And because their practice of sin has become an ethic in their life, a strong-willed way of behaving in life because the payoff to them is great, you, if you're going to present any different perspective to them, are going to be seen as an intruder; someone who wishes to violate a very definite preset configuration that they're holding on to that keeps their lives together. And so you are not going to be met with open arms. And you are going to be met with great resistance, and most likely unkind resistance, because their ego wants to get rid of the threat to its imagined stability.

This is one of the situations in which, in most cases, it is necessary to step back, and, you might say, love them from a distance. You must step back to the place where the True Perception of them that the Father has provided you that has uplifted you and overflowed you. It is important for you to step back to the place where that does not get covered up or distorted by their obtuse responses. And you continue to hold them in that perspective because it's the Truth. And you are not about to abandon the Experience of Truth that you've had, just because they are being unreasonable, obnoxious, and unkind to you.

Now, I know everyone loves to have a pat answer that works in all situations. You've got to hesitate every moment, and listen every moment. Because there will be times when if you're dealing with someone addicted to their misperceptions, there will be times to speak up and to share what they normally would object to strenuously, and there are other times not to. There are times when you can fulfill your purpose of extending Love when the point will hit home, and there are times when it won't.

And if you don't listen for the difference, you will end up becoming compulsive in your attempt to help this "woe is me" individual. And you end up becoming their servant. It might not be that you end up jumping when they say jump, but you end up being constantly miserable because you can't make any headway. And so now your life has become debilitated because you've lost the Father's Perspective. You have forgotten that what you're here for is to see the Evidence of Love, and you're here to be the Evidence of Love, to be the Presence of Love. You see?

So what you do is, you listen carefully and you speak or you don't speak, you speak firmly or you speak very gently, depending upon what the leading is when you've hesitated and listened. And you don't lose your clarity, and you don't become distracted from staying with it, where there is no reaction going on. The moment you begin to feel reactive to someone who is standing in absolute defiance of any love that you would extend to them, you've lost your Peace. You've taken hold of the other end of the rope for the tug-of-war and you're engaged, but not engaged in your Function.

Now, those who are holding on to their limitations, those who say, "I can't take time to hesitate because the circumstances in my life are so threatening that if I don't take care of them, ultimately I will die," is something that you can become subject to. Not because they're saying it to you, but because you in watching them are saying to yourself, "I need to hesitate to get the right perspective so that I can be the Presence of Love extending Love, because their situation is dire and they may indeed die, and therefore I can't say 'No' and back off." You see what I'm saying? You can become caught in not releasing them from your focused attention, if I may put it this way, your focused attempt to give, because indeed you see that their behavior could result in their death, and their behavior is becoming so much more erratic that dire circumstances are more likely, and therefore you cannot afford... you cannot afford to get back into your Peace and relax. You must continue to persist in giving the gift. And you are now compulsively attempting to be in control... and [are] absolutely out of control. You have abandoned your capacity to be an agent for change. Is that clear? Does that make sense? And this is not what you're here for. And this is not what hesitation is about.

Hesitation is not a means of control. Hesitation, listening, experiencing the infilling that you can't contain within yourself, is something you do because it's your Function. It is your Function to be able to recognize God in each and every thing. And so you do it just because, whether the things you are seeing are recognizing it about themselves or not. And you persist in doing it because it's your Function, not because it will help them. You do it, because doing it, is you being in your Right Mind.

And the fact is that you're doing it because it means you're in your Right Mind, will have the effect of undermining your Brother's or Sister's fear that causes them to be committed to that which is detrimental to them. That undermining is inevitable. And so you continue to make the gift because it has its effect, but not in your time frame, and not because you have some kind of control. It undermines because there is no way for them to remain as strong in their determination to be ignorant when you or anyone else is being the Presence or Evidence of Love. And so, in making the gift because you choose not to use your mind in any other way, does ultimately end up allowing you to keep what you are giving.

You know what? If you were on a community development, a redevelopment committee, or if you wanted to be involved in rehabilitating your community, you could go out and find the ugliest place in the worst condition in town and tackle that to restore it. But you could also go out and get one, find one, that is less in need of restoration, that's easier for you to do, that you might be more capable of coping with at the moment.

So what am I trying to say? I'm trying to say that when we're talking about hesitation, we're not talking about your going out and finding the most difficult thing there is to hesitate about, and then trying to meet that challenge, when you already have enough trouble hesitating to find out what the Truth About You is. Do you see what I'm saying? And so don't... don't foil yourself by saying, "Okay, I'm going to test out this hesitation bit on the most impossible situation I can find, to find out whether it's True, whether it's valuable."

As I said, when my Brothers and Sisters, dreaming on the grassy knolls in the Kingdom of Heaven, are sound asleep, I do not give my attention there. But the ones who are rousing, [snap of the finger] I'm right there. Because everyone is going to wake up for their reason, because they want to, because they have arrived at some point where they seriously want something different from what they've been dreaming, and that's where you respond.

And you don't feel guilty about not being able to do anything for the ones who are snoring loudly, deep in their dreams. But you're always paying attention for the first moment anyone [snap of fingers] has an interruption in their snoring and begins to twitch, or turn, or show signs of returning consciousness, or the potential for it.

It's not really called "conservation of energy." It's a matter of understanding How It Works. You can't override free will.

Free will is Divine Will used inappropriately, because those using it are experiencing everything through a distorted perception. It's Divine Will and it cannot be overridden. So, you have to wait until there is a decision, a real opportunity for communication between What They Divinely Are and What You Divinely Are to occur. And the moment the circumstance is there, [snap of the fingers] you take hold of it. But you don't spin your wheels trying to overcome the will of a Son of God who is absolutely determined to be in a state of denial of What He Is. But all the while that you're not forcefully trying to overturn that Son of God's will, you don't abandon the clarity about them that the Father's Love has revealed to you.

The more who awake constitute, or the increasing numbers of those who are waking up constitutes a decrease of numbers of those who are in mutual agreement to see everything as it's not. And that means that the misperception of the Kingdom of Heaven loses strength causing those who are dreaming to have more fitful dreams, because they can't hold it together as well.

Much to let register and sink in, but it will simplify things for you.

And one last word, remember that when you are hesitating and reaching within to the Holy Spirit, or your Guide, or the Father, it is to have your Function as the Presence of Love be revealed to you so that you become the Evidence of Love in the world whether it's recognized or not. And then you are ever so grateful when it is.

Okay.

I love you all. That was a "meat and potatoes" evening. And I look forward to being with you.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, how many of you are working on yourselves in the prospect of waking up? And how many of you are not working on yourselves and feeling guilty about it? And in light of those two questions, how many of you are having fun?

The Course speaks—and I know some of you will disagree—with great clarity. [some audience laughter] In fact, it speaks quite starkly. This is true. This is not true.

It could suggest that all of you should be applying yourself with great diligence, because the ego is not your best friend, the ego doesn't have your interests at heart, and it's constantly working on you to keep you from experiencing your Birthright. One could think that you exist in the middle of a war, and that the call is for you to win the war. And so, many of you neglect to play.

Everything that we've been reading about since the beginning of the study group should be, or has the potential for, causing exhilaration and enlivenment in your mind—greater curiosity than you've had before to recognize What Is True in whatever confronts you during your day. It should be causing you to feel as though you are a participant in an adventure, rather than a work ethic.

And I want to remind you of this. Some of you get so diligent that you become unkind with each other. "Well, I'm working very diligently, and you're goofing off. You say you're working, but your actions and your works don't show it." And what you're saying is, "I can't be happy with you having fun when I'm having to apply myself so diligently. It's not fair. You're not being as serious about all of this as you should be, which means you're not treating all of this with the diligence that I am requiring of myself." What you're not saying is, "I can't let myself off the hook. I insist upon being at the ready, diligent, on guard, watching for the slightest ego activity in myself and in others so that I can correct it."

You've got to ask yourself (some of you do): Am I having fun? Am I experiencing enjoyment of any kind in this process of awakening? In the pursuit of the Truth that I'm engaged in, am I being able to enjoy my fellowman more? Am I able to be present with my fellowman without constantly seeing everything that needs to be corrected in him or her? And if I were to be a little bit laid back, and be with others, be present with others without being engaged in this work ethic, am I being just sucked into the dream? Am I not attending to, or neglecting, something that I should be? Am I becoming too loose, too un-attentive?

I'll tell you something. Enjoyment in your daily lives is part of life. When you reach for your Peace and find it, you're in a place where you can notice what is delightful, and acknowledge it, embrace it, participate with it. To not always have your nose to the grindstone working on hard issues is not a sin. Instead of having your nose to the grindstone, so to speak, [laughing] let your nose notice the smell of the roses. And realize that the experience, because there are no real illusions, the experience has Reality to it, whether you know the full significance of the Reality of it or not. So be present with enjoyment with the same curiosity to see the more of What's Really There as you're trying so hard to do with the ugly things. You see?

Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: Salvation and God's Will

RAJ: Or, "The Two Evaluations," depending upon the book you're reading.

Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the heading is: [The Two Evaluations]

RAJ READING: God's Will is your salvation.

RAJ: [laughing] We could say it's your will that's your downfall—the will you think you have all by yourself.

RAJ READING: God's Will is your salvation. Would He not have given you the means to find it? If He wills you to HAVE it, He must have made it possible and very easy to obtain it.

RAJ: Well, not only would He not have given you the means to find it, He did give it to you. It's already yours. It's already in your possession.

You're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it. You're at that point, so the gift has been made. He has given you the means to find it.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the following sentence: Your brothers are everywhere.]

RAJ READING: You do not have to seek far for salvation.

RAJ: What's salvation? God's Will. God's Will is your salvation. You do not have to seek far for it.

RAJ READING: Every minute and every second gives you a chance to save YOURSELF.

[pause]

RAJ READING: Every minute and every second gives you a chance to save YOURSELF.

RAJ: Well, what does that mean? Well, if the flower here is the evidence of God's Will, if it's the Movement of Creation that God Is Being, then every time you look at that flower, you're presented with the opportunity to see God. You're presented with the opportunity to see the more that you're not seeing yet and be in your Sanity again. Every single thing that confronts you is nothing less than the Kingdom of Heaven seen clearly or through a glass darkly.

So:

RAJ READING: Every minute and every second...

RAJ: And every thing that you experience.

RAJ READING: ...gives you a chance to save YOURSELF. Do not lose these chances, not because they will not return, but because delay of joy is needless.

RAJ: You see, the delay of joy is needless. Fun should be an ongoing experience, because not having fun is needless. It's not something nice to have.

It's your Birthright to be experiencing because Reality is so wonderful. There is wonder to everything that confronts you. And this is why you can dare to be curious every morning, every moment of your day. This is why you can dare to anticipate insight/revelation, rather than [laughing] the things you actually expect.

RAJ READING: God wills you perfect happiness NOW.

RAJ: Well, is it a special gift to you poor sinners? [laughing] No! It's your Birthright. It's your innate nature because you're not what you think you are. You are the Presence of God. You are the Presence of the Ultimate. You are the Christ.

RAJ READING: God wills you perfect happiness NOW.

RAJ: What? Without your having to stretch taller? What? Without your having to work harder to wake up? God sees not a struggling sinner working to lift himself up. God sees His Self-Expression and recognizes Himself in you.

And the act of recognizing Himself in you constitutes the Extension of the Gift of Joy, and the acknowledgement that it has been received already by you, whether you're choosing to look at it or not. The Acts of God are already accomplished in you right now, whether you're letting it in or not, whether you're arguing against it or not, whether you're sure that it couldn't possibly be true about you because after all look at yourself. You see?

RAJ READING: God wills you perfect happiness NOW. Is it possible that this is not also YOUR will?

RAJ: Oh, you have an inkling of it, because you—whether you have it or not, whether you're experiencing it or not—do desire to experience perfect happiness. Every single one of you have that desire.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: And is it possible that this is not ALSO the will of your brothers?

RAJ: You see, I'm sitting here talking to my Brothers and Sisters. And I'm saying to you, your will is to experience perfect happiness. And you're miserable when you're not experiencing it. And you recognize that something is wrong because you're not experiencing it. Why? Because, at the bottom line, you know that perfect happiness is your Birthright that can't be taken away from you, and you can't be happy not experiencing it. So I'm talking to my Brothers right now, and I'm saying to you, face it! Pay attention to the obvious in you. You do desire to experience perfect happiness.

Now, what about your Brothers and Sisters? Are you looking at them, and at least in your mind, acknowledging that they too desire perfect happiness? Are you extending that recognition to them as well?

Or are you just riding along on whatever habit of perception you've developed about them? "Oh, that bitch, that bastard, they're never gonna change. They're not worth my attention. They're a pain in the ass." Well, wait a minute. What happened to the opportunity you have to say, "They desire to experience perfect peace, too"? Well, you can't get too close to that acknowledgement as long as you're going for justice, and as long as you enjoy indulging in judgment.

But, your Brothers and Sisters are all around you all day long, every day, and they, by being there, continually provide you with the opportunity to abandon your favorite perception of them, or your favorite unfavorable perception of them, and say, "Wait a minute. They desire to experience perfect happiness now, too."

And now we can go a little step further. And why do they? For the same reason you do! Because it's the Father's Will for them to have it. And they're nothing less than the Direct Expression of the Father in whom the Father recognizes Himself. You see?

So, do you want to see transformation, or do you just want to repeat your old habits of perception over and over again? Do you want to just have the effects of your ego over and over, or do you want to reach beyond it? Do you want to see something new, or do you just want to reinforce what's always been?

Now, if the Father has placed within you joy, and if the Father has placed within you perfect happiness, then it's your Function to be allowing it to blossom in you. It is not your function to be denying it, or squelching it, or covering it up.

[Editor's Note: Raj now goes back to the beginning of the paragraph and skips around, reading various sentences in the paragraph.]

RAJ READING: God's Will is your salvation.

RAJ READING: ...He must have made it possible and very easy to obtain it.

RAJ READING: Every minute and every second gives you a chance to save YOURSELF.

RAJ READING: God wills you perfect happiness NOW. Is it possible that this is not also YOUR will? And is it possible that this is not ALSO the will of your brothers?

RAJ: You see, we're getting your head on straight at the moment. We're getting your intent and your choice of what to be conscious of in alignment so that it expresses a Singularity, rather than a confusion that can only elicit a confused or conflicted experience.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Consider, then, that in this joint will...

RAJ: Meaning yours, and the Father's, and your Brother's.

RAJ READING: ...you ARE all united, and in this ONLY.

RAJ: So you can magnify all the differences you see between yourself and your Brothers, if you wish, or you can find out where you are in harmony, even if it's only in one thing.

RAJ READING: Consider, then, that in this joint will you ARE all united, and in this ONLY. There will be disagreement on anything else, but NOT on this.

RAJ: It would be pretty difficult for you to walk up to anybody and say, "Do you desire perfect happiness? Whether you think it's available to it or not, to you or not, do you desire it?"—it would be almost impossible to go up to anybody and have them say, "No."

All of you have this basic ground of mutuality and agreement. And this is where there is an open door for communication to develop. Magnifying differences will not do that. It keeps separation alive, reinforcing it constantly.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This, then, is where peace ABIDES. And YOU abide in peace when you so decide.

RAJ: Well, it isn't like you can say, "Okay, I have decided to abide in Peace." The decision to abide in Peace, like a song that isn't a song until it's sung, is nothing until it's embodied. Your decision to abide in Peace is going to be demonstrated by how you're using your mind.

Your choice to be in your Peace will be demonstrated in your willingness to abandon your preconceptions about your Brother, and your practice of acknowledging that your Brother desires to experience perfect happiness because _____ [you fill in the blank yourself]. You see, you continue to embellish and reinforce the truth of this by explaining it further. Because the Father has placed the experience of perfect happiness in your Brother just as he has in you. Because your Brother isn't what he thinks he is, or what you have thought he is.

Your Brother is at this moment now nothing less than God manifesting the Presence of God right there. Your insistence upon recognizing the Truth in your Brother and in every thing is the practice that gets you off the wheel of history. It's the practice that constitutes the hesitation in reinforcing your preexisting concepts that blind you to the Truth.

Again.

RAJ READING: This, then, is where peace ABIDES. And YOU abide in peace when you so decide.

RAJ: It's up to you—when you so decide.

When you don't so decide, you won't experience your Peace yet. Not because it's not available, but because you haven't chosen for it yet. You'd rather stay in your conflicted perceptions and reinforce them, inflicting them on yourself and on your Brothers and Sisters.

RAJ READING: Yet you cannot abide in peace unless you accept the Atonement because the Atonement IS the way to peace.

RAJ: What is the Atonement? You could say that the Atonement is the movement back into your Right Mind. The Atonement is you coming back Home.

In other words, in an overview, the Atonement is you no longer insisting upon turning your back on Home and carving out for yourself, by your own will, a life that is of such significance—no matter what you had to do to your Brothers and Sisters—that you can finally say you have arrived, and you have done it by your will, and it is your accomplishment, and you have made yourself worthwhile entirely by yourself. In other words, you have created a finalized ultimate entity that has nothing to do with God. That's the opposite of the Atonement.

The Atonement is what happens when you abandon that and start moving back Home, start moving back into your Sanity. It's a choice for Love. In other words, it's a choice for being Love. Love that is not so arrogant that it can proffer it out, or withhold it at will from different things. Love that humbly blesses everything it looks upon because it looks upon everything with Love, and therefore blesses everything and you, who has extended it. Atonement is the way to Peace.

RAJ READING: ...you cannot abide in peace unless you accept the Atonement because the Atonement IS the way to peace. The reason is very simple, and so obvious that it is often overlooked. That is because the ego is AFRAID of the obvious, since obviousness is the essential characteristic of reality.

RAJ: I'll tell you, the Kingdom of Heaven that confronts you is obviously the Kingdom of Heaven. It really is obviously the Kingdom of Heaven.

RAJ READING: Yet YOU cannot overlook...

RAJ: The essential characteristic of Reality.

RAJ READING: ...YOU cannot overlook it unless you are NOT LOOKING.

RAJ: When you are so sure of the nature and character of your boss, or your child, or your parent, or anybody else, you are not looking. You're closing your eyes, in so many words, and projecting your picture out there upon them. If you were looking with Love, if you were looking undefendedly, if you were looking without interposing anything between yourself and what you're seeing, the God-ness of what you're seeing would be so obvious to you that your mind would be transformed, and your behavior would change. All this is describing is the willingness to look and hesitate before you interpose your preexisting definition about what you're looking at.

And just remember for a moment, that one desires to experience perfect Peace because perfect Peace is the Father's Will for them. And it's the Father's Will for them because the Father has placed it in them. The Father placed it in them because they are the Son or Daughter of the Father, and He recognizes Himself in them. And His recognition of Himself in them declares the completed fact of their Divinity, just as it does with you.

When you allow that shift to occur in you, you have succeeded in hesitating before applying your definition. And you've laid the groundwork for the experience of that Truth to infill you.

Listen to this.

RAJ READING: It is PERFECTLY obvious that, if the Holy Spirit looks with love on ALL He perceives, He looks with love on YOU. His evaluation of you is based on His knowledge of what you are,...

RAJ: Not what you think you are, but What You Really Are.

RAJ READING: ...and so He evaluates you truly.

RAJ: Now that's what the Holy Spirit does with you. That's what "that which is nothing more than your Right Mind" does with you. That's what your Right Mind does with you. Your Right Mind loves you. It doesn't tell you how awful you are. It feeds back to you your worth; not the worthlessness you think is the characteristic of you.

Now, if the Holy Spirit, or any Awakened Brother, or the Father, does that with you, your task is to do that with each other, because that's the only thing that will heal or transform.

RAJ READING: His evaluation of you...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...is based on His knowledge of what you are, and so He evaluates you truly. And this evaluation MUST be in your mind because HE is.

RAJ: And He is in your Mind, because He is your Right Mind.

Now:

RAJ READING: The ego is also in your mind because you have ACCEPTED it there.

RAJ: Well, I'll say that you not only have accepted it there, you made it up there. You created the ego, which is nothing but a collection of definitions and beliefs about yourself that you made-up when you said, "Father, I'd rather see things my way."

So:

RAJ READING: The ego is also in your mind because you have ACCEPTED it there. ITS evaluation of you, however, is the exact opposite of the Holy Spirit's because the ego does NOT love you. It is unaware of what you are,...

RAJ: Unlike the Holy Spirit who knows exactly What You Are Really, the ego does not know What You Are. Why? Well, the ego is a denial of What You Are. The ego is you using your mind to say, "I am divorced from my Father and I do not have a source other than myself. I am claiming myself as my source and I am going to be God now. And I am going to define everything now." You see?

The ego...

RAJ READING: ...is unaware of what you are, and wholly mistrustful of EVERYTHING it perceives because its own perceptions are so shifting.

RAJ: The ego is instability itself. It, therefore, knows nothing trustworthy. And its existence seems to arise out of the goal to bring everything into order.

RAJ READING: The ego is therefore capable of suspiciousness at best and viciousness at worst.

RAJ: I'm going to stop here for a second.

This is a favorite, or has become a favorite quotable quote from the Course.

RAJ READING: The ego is therefore capable of suspiciousness at best and viciousness at worst.

RAJ: And someone sees somebody behaving badly and he says, "Yeah, well, what can you expect? 'The ego is therefore capable of suspiciousness at best and viciousness at worst.'" And nothing else is said. So it seems to validate the existence of the ego, and its character, and its nature, and its method of operation. And it just leaves it hanging there as though it's a declaration of something important.

RAJ READING: The ego is therefore capable of suspiciousness at best and viciousness at worst.

RAJ: But—see, we're going to continue the sentence—but the ego isn't real. The ego is a sense of self made-up out of imagination, and so its suspiciousness and its viciousness, having no real source, can have no real effect. And so I do not need to be afraid of it, whether it's in its suspicious mode or in its vicious mode. Or you can finish the sentence by saying, "The ego is, therefore, capable of suspiciousness at best and viciousness at worst, but my Mind is part of God and I am very holy." Or, "So-and-so has acted viciously. Well, what can you expect? The ego is suspicious at the least and vicious at the worst, but that individual's Mind is part of God and he is very holy, she is very holy."

You see, you don't leave it dangling in the air unchallenged or uncorrected. You don't leave it there without bringing the Truth into the picture that says, "This one who appears to be behaving suspiciously or viciously, his behavior doesn't reflect What They are. That one's Mind is part of God and he or she is very holy."

You see what I'm saying here? By correcting a statement about error, by correcting a statement about that which isn't true, you take away its sting, you take away its seeming capacity to cause you harm, and you also take away its capacity to be successfully applied to the person who seems to be behaving badly, because you lift them out of that definition of the ego. You're not an ego. And you're not your ego—the one you've made-up. And your Brother isn't an ego, and isn't whatever definitions he or she has made-up about herself. Not only that—they aren't that. But their Mind is part of God and they are very holy. You see?

What if everyone got up tomorrow morning, went through their day going to work, driving the freeway, buying lunch, doing whatever their activities were during the day, what if all day long everyone, just in their mind, was looking at someone else and saying no matter what their behavior, "But that one's Mind is part of God and he or she is very holy." What if that was the active acknowledgement that everyone was giving to everyone else throughout the day tomorrow? Do you think it wouldn't be transformational? Do you think that it wouldn't become embodied as a visible change in the world? Do you think that without everyone pointing out each other's flaws and judging them for it and trying to make them feel guilty for it, that that wouldn't cause everyone to start behaving in a new way?

The absence of what everyone does do would be a demonstration of hesitation. And instead of bouncing off of your predetermined, loved perceptions and definitions of everything, you wished to see God there. You wished to see the Evidence of Love there.

You know, I gave you the two prayers: I wish to see the Evidence of Love. And I wish to be the Evidence of Love.

Now, "I wish to see the Evidence of Love" doesn't mean looking at somebody who's behaving badly and say, "Man, I wish to see the Evidence of Love there. I wish they would change. I would like to see them behaving nicely." That isn't what it means (that I wish to see the Evidence of Love). What it means is, I wish to see them without looking through a preexisting definition I am holding about them. I wish to see there, not I wish to get from there. I wish to see there what I know is the Truth about them. I wish not to see my misperception of them. I wish to see what revelation, insight, has uncovered to me about them which I am seeing there, in spite of the way I used to interpret their behavior, and in spite of the way they see themselves.

You see what I'm saying? When you say, "I wish to see the Evidence of Love," it's you engaged in an act of projecting the True Consciousness of them there, instead of getting hung up on your perceptions of what's going on based on your own tiny, fearful frame of mind, coupled with their behavior that is based on their tiny, troubled frame of mind. To say, "I wish to see the Evidence of Love there," doesn't mean, "I wish they would change." It means I wish to see them in a new way. I wish to extend to them whatever Consciousness of Truth God will reveal to me. You see? It's far different from saying, "Gee, it would really be nice if they were a little more pleasant to be around." That's not wishing to see the Evidence of Love. There's no gift in it.

"I wish to see the Evidence of Love" means you are going to take the proactive step, we'll say, of insisting upon asking for the Vision that will let you see or grasp the meaning of the fact that if there's anything there at all where your Brother or Sister is, it has to be God. The moment you do that, the lens through which you're looking shifts and you are looking for something different. You are looking to see the Evidence of Love there. You're looking to see the more of What's Really There than what you had seen, or even what your Brother thinks is there and calls himself or herself. Are you getting what I'm saying?

To wish to see the Evidence of Love is not a wish to stand in receipt of something. It's a wish to make a gift of a new way of seeing that is gathered not from your memory, but a willingness and an expressed desire to have the Holy Spirit reveal to you What Is Truly There, just as the Holy Spirit, your Right Mind, looks at you and sees What's Truly There and extends it to you, and does not believe what you think you are and all the feelings you have associated with what you think you are. And that's why your communion with the Holy Spirit is always healing. And that's why the Holy Spirit can turn everything, every situation to your advantage. You have the opportunity with your Brothers and Sisters to be that which turns whatever is happening in their life to their advantage.

So:

RAJ READING: The ego is therefore capable of suspiciousness at best and viciousness at worst.

RAJ: Not a great capacity in terms of capabilities, is it?

RAJ READING: That is its range.

RAJ: [laughing] That's all.

RAJ READING: That is its range. It cannot exceed it because of its uncertainty.

RAJ: And it's incapable of achieving certainty.

RAJ READING: And...

RAJ: It says here.

RAJ READING: ...it can never go BEYOND it because it can never BE certain.

RAJ: Well, what does all of that mean, you know, viciousness and suspiciousness, and blah, blah, blah? It means that if you're engaging in the practice of memory, if you're engaging in the constant rehearsal of an imagination, you are being nothing, doing nothing, accomplishing nothing. Even when it can be called suspicious or malicious, it's accomplishing nothing. Because why? Because it doesn't express the Father's Will. And the Father's Will is what constitutes your will really. Anything else you engage in is a bunch of nothing, no matter how seriously you take it, and no matter how hard you are working on yourself to wake up. [small laugh] So no matter how many dynamic words you might be able to apply to the ego—suspicious, malicious, greedy, blah, blah, blah—you're talking about nothing but a bunch of hot air. You're talking about nothing.

The choice is between nothing and something. The Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind, and nothing. The ego—nothing.

RAJ READING: You, then, have two CONFLICTING...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...evaluations of yourself in your minds, and they CANNOT both be true. You do not yet realize how COMPLETELY different these evaluations are because you do not understand how lofty the Holy Spirit's perception of you really is.

RAJ: It's another way of saying how lofty that which is nothing more than your Right Mind is.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit. Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...is not deceived by anything you do because He never forgets what you ARE.

RAJ: Well, I'll tell you, you go through your day and constantly forget Who You Are, and constantly forget Who Your Brother Is. And you believe what's left, which is whatever you've made-up, and whatever they've invited you to make-up.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego is deceived by everything you do, even when you respond to the Holy Spirit, because at such times its confusion INCREASES.

RAJ: [small laugh] When you talk to the Holy Spirit, when you have communion with the Holy Spirit, the ego really gets confused. You see? The confusion increases. Why? Because it's losing your attention, it's losing your devotion, and it doesn't know what to do about it.

As I've said before, the only thing the ego—talking as though it were something real—the only thing the ego can't defend itself against is disregard. And when it can't defend itself, it's in a great state of confusion.

RAJ READING: The ego is, therefore, particularly likely to attack you when you react lovingly because it has evaluated you as UNLOVING, and you are going AGAINST its judgment.

RAJ: Now, it's very easy to read that and interpret it as though it's talking about [whispered] someone else's ego.

RAJ READING: The ego...

RAJ: Someone else's ego.

RAJ READING: ...is, therefore, particularly likely to attack you when you react lovingly because it has evaluated you as UNLOVING, and you are going AGAINST its judgment.

RAJ: But your very own ego does this to you.

How on earth do you think you could be distracted from coming back Home if it weren't for the fact that this sense of self that you have made-up, which has no real existence, must keep you in a state of confusion and an experience of vulnerability that it can convince you, you must attack and bring into order.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego will begin to ATTACK your motives as soon as they become clearly out of accord with its perception of you.

RAJ: Just try to be the Presence of Love, just try to engage in trust, and see how quickly the ego presents itself to you and tries to convince you that you're out of your mind, that you are unworthy, that you are worthless, and that what you think means nothing significant, and undermines any semblance of a sense of integrity that might have begun to feel. That's the way it works. So don't always be looking at someone else's ego and saying, "Yeah, of course, it's going to attack me."

This sense of an independent selfhood that you embrace as being you is itself a denial of What You Really Are. And so it can't see Who You Really Are. And when something in you begins to have a glimmer of What You Really Are, and your attention shifts to that and away from the ego, the ego does not like that. It feels threatened. And so it calls your worth into question and tries to engage you in becoming defensive.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego will begin to ATTACK your motives as soon as they become clearly out of accord with its perception of you. This is when it will shift abruptly from suspiciousness...

RAJ: Or you could say being ill at ease or experiencing an undercurrent of uncomfortableness.

RAJ READING: ...from suspiciousness to viciousness, since its uncertainty is increased. Yet it is surely pointless to attack in return. What can this mean...

RAJ: Attacking in return.

RAJ READING: What can this mean except that you are AGREEING with the ego's evaluation of what you are? If you are willing to see yourself as unloving...

RAJ: Or unworthy.

RAJ READING: ...you will NOT be happy. You are condemning yourself, and MUST therefore regard yourself as inadequate.

RAJ: Now I want to remind you that even if you indulge in regarding yourself as inadequate, the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, does not agree with you. Your Right Mind still sees Who You Really Are.

And you know what? In those moments where you have forgotten and you have begun to regard yourself as inadequate, you need to say about yourself, "But, my Mind is part of God's and I am very holy." You see, you need to remind yourself of the Truth About Yourself, and not just say, "Yeah. I am inadequate. And what a pisser it is. I mean I feel really awful about myself." You see, you don't just walk on down that path. You hesitate and change tracks and you say, "But my Mind is part of God's and I am very holy." And you remind yourself so that, in so many words, you can reconnect on that track—the track of What's True About You. That simple recognition, even if it's just words you're saying in your head, have broken the habit of perception and has put you in a place where the Holy Spirit can connect with you feelingly, insightfully, not intellectually, but in your very Being, in your heart.

So:

RAJ READING: Would you look to the ego to help you escape from a sense of inadequacy it has PRODUCED, and must MAINTAIN for its existence? Can you ESCAPE from its evaluation of you by using its methods for keeping this picture INTACT?

RAJ: The only thing that will release you from it, is hesitating to continue moving down that track and shift gears, as it were.

RAJ READING: You cannot evaluate an insane belief system from WITHIN it.

RAJ: A psychiatrist might be able to evaluate a patient's insanity because the psychiatrist isn't insane and has the larger perspective. The one who's insane cannot evaluate the insanity, and therefore cannot facilitate the departure from the insanity.

RAJ READING: You cannot evaluate an insane belief system from WITHIN it. Its own range precludes this. You can only go BEYOND it, look back from a point where SANITY exists, AND SEE THE CONTRAST.

RAJ: You see, you cannot say, "I am a sinner. I must repent. I am a sinner. I must repent. I acknowledge I am a sinner and I must repent in order to get out of my sinfulness. I am a sinner." You see, you keep saying, "I am sinner and I want to get out of my sinfulness. I am a sinner and I want to get out of my sinfulness." So, you have to stop saying that, and you have to say, "I am neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it. I am at that point and I must understand myself therefrom. I cannot understand What Is True about me from a mindset of being a sinner."

And you also can't get past whatever blinders you have on regarding your Brother as long as you don't lift them out of that definition of being a sinner and replace it with an acknowledgement that neither are they behind the Point of Perfection or advancing toward it. They are at that point and they must understand themselves therefrom.

But if you're the one whose face they're in, you must hold to that as well, because only there will you be standing beyond whatever insane belief system they're employing, or whatever insane belief system you had been employing about them. And only from there, can you look back from a point where Sanity exists and see the contrast. And until you see the contrast, you have no means to say to them, "If you'll turn to the left here and walk three steps, and turn to the right and walk five steps, and now stand there for thirty seconds before moving. Don't move." You can lead them out by knowing, in so many words, exactly what to say, and when to say it, and when not to say anything. But you will be speaking from a clarity of, or you could say, seeing the infrastructure of their accumulated beliefs that they have assembled in a crazy manner.

Again. This is important.

RAJ READING: You cannot evaluate an insane belief system from WITHIN it. Its own range precludes this. You can only go BEYOND it, look back from a point where SANITY exists, AND SEE THE CONTRAST. Only BY this contrast can insanity be judged as insane. With the grandeur of God in you, you have chosen to be little and to lament your littleness. WITHIN the system which dictated this choice the lament IS inevitable. Your littleness is taken for granted there,...

RAJ: You know. "Oh, you know, I am so unworthy." Well, so many of you just take that feeling for granted.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...and you do NOT ask, "Who granted it?" The question is meaningless within the ego's thought system because it opens the WHOLE thought system to question.

RAJ: And that's all the ego is, is a thought system. A collection of ideas, beliefs, concepts that have been put together in some semi-logical order, and then accepted and believed and acted upon. But the question, "Who granted what you're taking for granted?", calls that whole structure into question.

When you hesitate and say, "But, Father, what's the Truth here?", it calls that whole thought system into question, and opens up the door for you to find yourself experiencing the Perspective of Reality that it's your Birthright to be experiencing. Because in the absence of keeping your ego in office, like a elected official, you've withdrawn your vote of confidence in it and placed it elsewhere—in the Holy Spirit, or an Awakened Brother, or the Father. One who speaks on your behalf, knowing Who You Really Are, so that your investment of attention to that Source has one effect, and that is to restore your Mind to its Wholeness, so that you are no longer governed by a tiny sense of yourself that was the best thing you could come up with through the use of your imagination once you were quote “unplugged from God” unquote.

The Holy Spirit sees you as You Really Are. And your Function here with your Brother and Sister is to see them as They Truly Are.

[Editor’s Note: Raj now starts reading from the first paragraph which was read today.]

RAJ READING: God’s Will is your salvation. Would He not have given you the means to find it? If He wills you to HAVE it, He must have made it possible and very easy to obtain it.

RAJ: Well, what are the means? Your Brothers.

RAJ READING: Your brothers are everywhere. You do not have to seek far for salvation.

RAJ: But as I also said, you don’t have to make a work ethic out of this. The pleasant people around you, you still aren’t seeing all of What Is Really There. You see what I’m saying? So the opportunity to be open to the fuller experience of What Is God Is Being right there, is available to you with someone who’s being pleasant. Remember that. And remember when you smell the roses—and they’ll be blooming very shortly—that it’s a Divine Experience for you to have the fuller experience of than you’ve been having. So let the experience of pleasure, of fun, of joy, be your opportunities for seeing the more of what’s there than your current beliefs and definitions are allowing you to see. Pleasant relationships can be the occasion for awakening just as unpleasant relationships can be. So don’t make things hard for yourself by devoting yourself to the unpleasant situations to such a degree that you hesitate to engage in a little bit of joy and pleasure and fun, as though they constitute playing hooky from what counts. Because those experiences offer you just as much opportunity for insight and revelation and for the Holy Spirit to disclose to you your Function of recognizing God in those experiences as well.

Okay.

I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

For some of you, Easter is over, but for most of you it is still Easter. And I'm going to ask a rhetorical question of everybody, "How much of today did you spend embodying Friday?" In other words, how many of you were actively or quietly engaged in crucifixion processes, either crucifying yourself or crucifying someone else? How many of you didn't move into Resurrection Day today—your own or the support of another's? Just tuck that question away.

Would anyone like to wish me a Happy Easter? Thank you. It was a day of Joy, and it is a day of Joy.

To sort of tie the whole thing up in a simple nutshell, my birth was the first time that the Divine Idea of God was successfully introduced into the human condition. Oh yes, you had seers and prophets. You had those who believed in God. But no one was yet willing to be what could be called "God with us"—meaning with everyone in the human condition. You might say no one up to that point had been willing to step up to the plate and embody God rather than the human ego concept of existence. That made what you call Christmas a significant date and an event that was of universal significance, because now there was someone stepping up to the plate who wasn't going to embrace and continue all the concepts of human existence which God was left out of, other than the simple act of observing and honoring His Presence "out there" somewhere.

And then, of course, you all have various records of my life as I grew up, and the things I did, and the things I didn't do. I had plenty of opportunity to be distracted, just like every single one of you has. And the only benefit I had that you don't have is that I was never allowed to forget my Source, my Divine Source—a Source beyond the human condition; a Source beyond mere copulation and the development of an embryo through what everyone else would call the normal processes. My mother was, as I've said before, an excellent Jewish mother and she did not let me forget when I was tempted to quote “be like everyone else,” join the crowd.

You don't have a remembrance at the moment, which is why we get together to talk about remembering and for me to provide you with imagery and ideas that help you to remember, that inspire “Aha's,” little light bulbs going on, even if it's just simply, “Wow! Maybe that's true. Maybe what he's saying is true. I don't see it, but, you know, maybe it's true.” That's a little crack in your defenses, in your assuredness that you understand what you are and what everything else is. It creates a weakness in the shell, so to speak, in the ego structures. It helps you to imagine that there is a box that there's an outside to that you're caught inside of. You see? Something that wouldn't occur to you spontaneously.

Now we come to Easter, what you have come to call Easter. You have had, in my life up to that point, a record of my remembering Who I Was and not abandoning it in favor of the status quo, and my willingness to embody God, and to inspire in others an awareness that God is their Source, and that all the things that I was doing, they could do also—that what was natural to me was natural to them.

But I will tell you, they were still very caught up in their already-existing definitions and concepts about themselves. They still saw themselves as “matter bodies.” They had difficulty grasping that they were Ideas in the Mind of God, that the Infinite Mind That God Is was their Source, and that everything about them was Spirit, not matter. And so part of the success, if you want to put it this way, of my being present in that day was to provide them what you would call physical proof that the physical is Spirit, else they would not have had the evidence needed to help them break the habit, skip the tracks of their habit of how they thought about themselves, and to see themselves from outside the box.

The crucifixion was nothing. I mean they all understood crucifixions. They called for crucifixions. They watched crucifixions. They cheered when the one crucified died. It was a part of the fiber of their community. That wasn't special, but the Resurrection was.

And what I want you all to be aware of is the significance in the fact that the Resurrection was a Resurrection of what? A physical body—what would be called a physical body. How was this significant? Because I'll tell you something, matter cannot be resuscitated. Matter cannot be regenerated. Matter cannot be transfigured. Matter cannot be healed. It is generally accepted in the current belief system that when I resurrected I was beyond the human condition, that everything about me was Spirit. And yet, there was my figure, recognizable, except to Mary initially in the garden.

This is important, because I keep telling you that your body is the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality. And your Individuality is God-derived, and is therefore Eternal. That which renders it visible and tangible is equally Eternal, is equally Divine. And that's one of the things you have evidence of in the Easter story; the event commemorated by Easter. It demonstrated that what you call "the body" survives death. That which identifies you and renders you experienceable survives this element of existence that is seen only through or in the human condition—the experience of death, the event of death. It's only seen in the state of ignorance that you are in when you have forgotten what your Source is, and therefore What You Are.

Another aspect of it that's important not to overlook is that this state conceived to be beyond the human condition is present right where the human condition seems to be going on. After the Resurrection, there was no ball of Light with an opening in it that was obviously otherworldly, or different, that anyone who wanted to see me could enter into, and in this rare and refined environment, see that I still existed. No. I was right in the same room. I could be touched. We could hug. I could be felt. You see?

Every moment you are confronted with Reality and nothing else, right here and right now. Right now everything that you are experiencing is the Kingdom of Heaven experienced clearly or through a glass darkly; you could say clearly or through the lens of the human condition. So my presence after the crucifixion and after the Resurrection, was a demonstration of the fact that all of you are in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven not recognizing it for What It Is. But it's there, just like I was there after the Resurrection in form. But the form wasn't matter, and the form had never been matter, even before the crucifixion. And the form of everyone else, and the form of everything else, had never been matter. You see?

So Easter provided the demonstration of the fact that Life is Eternal; an unbroken Whole without parts called before and after, inside and outside. Life is Eternal. And this Life that is Eternal is demonstrated, or made obvious or experienceable by form which is pure Spirit—pure Spirit that configures itself to perfectly identify God's Idea called you or me. And that's what's going on right now today in every moment. Sort of gets you to think outside of the box, doesn't it?

No. I showed that the here and the hereafter are both here. The Ultimate is the only thing going on.

Now comes the really significant point. My life that most of you are familiar with is your life. When you read it, this is your life. It's the process of Waking up and coming Home. You're here for the same reason I was here—to not to forget, to not forget to embody God. To remember to let God be present in you, not along with you, but as you, and to come to a point where you desire not to have any other presence of mind right where you are than God's Presence of Mind that is the only thing You Really Are. And to consciously neglect to continue to give expression to what you think you are and what you think everything else is, and how pleasant it makes things for you if you don't buck the system by seeing things a different way from the way everyone else is dreaming their life in the Kingdom of Heaven. You're here to remember What You Are and to step up to the plate and let the God of you, let the God-ness of you be what finds expression in your words, in your thoughts, and in your actions.

You're never ever going to get away from Visibility and Tangibility. In other words, what has been called form. What you are going to get away from is the way you've been defining form as matter, instead of Spirit which is purely and utterly Divine and of God. If you were able to manage to get beyond form, you would have managed to get beyond Creation. And I'll tell you that is a void, that is an emptiness, if there ever could be such a thing. Creation, with a capital "C", the Movement of God, is absolutely experienceable—experienceable in an infinitude of ever new form and expression.

Oh, yeah, I guess you could say that the Ascension proved that there was no form because then I moved beyond form into the formless—some sort of blissful experience that everyone imagines. But I'm going to tell you something. The reason everyone imagines that beyond the human condition and beyond even the state of Resurrection there is some sort of formless bliss, the only reason you think that, is because if it's true and you can get there, it will mean that you won't have to step up to the plate and embody the Presence of God, instead of the presence of your definition of yourself. It's a cop-out.

I have never been bodiless. I have never, in other words, been unidentified or unidentifiable. And none of you will be either. The moment any of you becomes unidentifiable, God will have become unidentified. And that would mean that God would have to become less than God, and that is an impossibility.

Everyone had better simply accept the fact that there isn't a formless bliss, and that right now with all of the forms you're experiencing, you're in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven. And every single thing you're experiencing is Divine. And the Substance of everything you're sitting on, or feeling, or moving, is Spirit moving at the behest of Mind. They are Ideas moving at the direction of the Mind that formed them.

"Yes. Uh huh. Yeah." You say, "Well, you [Jesus] said, 'I go before you to prepare a place for you.'" Well, I was preparing a place for you while I was here. I was preparing you for a place while I was here. I was preparing you for the Kingdom of Heaven you were already in, that you didn't dream was within your grasp. I went before you in time, we'll say. I went before you so that you might have the need to be the Presence of God since you couldn't pawn it off on me. My absence meant more capital "S" Self-reliance would be called for. You would have to lean within. You would have to go to the Place of Excellence in you, the Altar in you, and bring your devotion there, because that Place of Excellence in you is the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

Even now, you know, you notice that I don't take responsibility for you. I point you always in the direction of becoming more alive to What You Divinely Are, and point you in the direction of taking hold of it and practice leaning into it, and listening, so that what? You might be infilled with it! And so that it might overflow you and get extended to your Brothers and Sisters while you're still here, so that God gets clearly what? Embodied. Body, body, body, body, body—embodied here and now so that the Light That God Is might illuminate your world, your definition of the world, and uncover to you that it is the Kingdom of Heaven, and that you are the Christ, that you are the Son and Daughter—the Direct Expression of God. There isn't another place to go.

"What? No way to get out of the human condition?" You know, well, what is the human condition? Is it the world? Is it Israel? Is it Iraq? Is it China? Is it the U.S.? No. Remember, the human condition isn't something you're in. The "human condition" is something you're looking at the Kingdom of Heaven through. The human condition is all of the concepts and definitions that you've either made-up or received from elsewhere, and adopted as your own. And it's the sieve, the filter, through which you interpret the experience of the Kingdom of Heaven.

The human condition is better described as the human conditioning of what? Your mind, that causes you not to see clearly, but through a glass darkly; to see the Kingdom of Heaven with distortions that you are convicted about, you are convinced about, and that you are devoted to. No, there's no way to get out of the human condition that you're surrounded by, because there ain't no human condition you're surrounded by. There's a human conditioning of your mind with which you're coloring your experience of the Kingdom of Heaven.

"And how do you get out of that?" You get out of that by reaching beyond it. "Where to? Some spiritual realm?" No. You turn within to the Altar, the Place of Excellence in you, quietly, I'm going to say mindfully—not thinkingly, just mindfully—the presence of attention—and you desire to know of the Holy Spirit what the Truth is, or [to know of] God what the Truth is. You turn to a point that never left you, because there's no way, no matter how differently you defined yourself, for you to not be the only thing you were created to be, or the only thing that the Father Is Being You As at this moment.

Before the Resurrection, everyone thought they were in a box. They thought they knew how things worked, and what the parameters were. But after the Resurrection, there was an outside to the box. There was an outside of the box that was still present inside the box. They could see it inside the box! Somebody who was in the afterlife was still in the box. You see?

And of course, it was too hard for many to believe. And many didn't believe it. And today it's still hard for many to believe, and they still don't believe it. "Oh, it's just a religious belief, you know. The Christians all believe that junk." But the demonstration was there.

And you know what? My life was a demonstration of the first—this is not the best choice of words—but the first insertion of Divinity into the human condition that could be recognized from within the human condition by those experiencing the human condition. And then the crucifixion, Resurrection, and Ascension set the contents of my life, the content of the Presence of God in the human condition. It set it, we're going to say, in concrete. Something was accomplished from beginning to end, that until the end, hadn't been accomplished. But what was accomplished was the breaking of the perceived absoluteness of what everyone called the human condition or life. And it was done forever.

Not any one of you has to break or undo the belief in material life. It doesn't need to be done again. It was done forever. That's why you could say it was done for you. It doesn't need to be accomplished again. Because it was done, it means that each one of you at this moment is free to wake up, because you don't have to break the boundary. The boundary was broken, and the boundary is gone.

That is what makes the commemoration of Easter important, because it keeps present for you the opportunity to go ahead and wake up, to get the picture, to get the idea so that you willingly inquire outside the box on a regular basis, so that you willingly dare to let yourself be What You're Here To Be. What you exist for, in other words. You're not here to be something as opposed to being some place else being what you're supposed to be. You're here. You exist for a reason, and that is to give voice to God, to give expression to God, to let God express right where you are.

I'm talking to you right now. It's a demonstration that there is life after death. But it's not the same kind of demonstration that my physical presence would have. And it's not the same as it did have after the Resurrection.

I am not appearing physically right now because it would give you a significant distraction. You would begin to think of me as form. You would have a memory of my image in your mind. And you would begin to think of me as “he” and “him,” instead of the Presence of Love, instead of as the Presence of Mind that loves you so much that it wants you to recognize the Presence of Mind that you are, and that that is the Presence of God, and that this Presence of Mind is what is rendered Visible and Tangible by the gathering of Spirit in a form that renders you experienceable—visible, in other words, you could say. You see?

It is time to get out of the human condition. But remember, remember this. The human condition is the human conditioning that has been placed, like colored glasses, in front of your awareness that causes you to see the Kingdom of Heaven in Its Divinity as though it were just a physical, material universe that has nothing to do with God and that someday you will transcend.

You know what? If you were going to transcend it, if that was going to happen, after the Resurrection you would not have seen a body. You might have heard a deep Voice coming out of the ethers, like in a séance, that everyone could hear—eerie, mysterious—but bodiless, not embodied. If that were what you needed to learn about remembering Who You Are and coming Home to the Father, that is what would have happened.

What happened though demonstrated exactly what the facts are. There is Life after death, and it still is identified and identifiable and huggable, without the impediments that were associated with form when it was conceived to be matter and misinterpreted and treated inappropriately, because it wasn't seen as Spirit and it wasn't seen as Spirit gathered in a configuration that identifies the Divine One That You Are perfectly. And I'm telling you right now that the Identification of you that Spirit configures as, is perfect, and is, therefore more beautiful, more symmetrical, exuding the Energy of Love [more] than you're experiencing right now.

And what did Easter demonstrate? That you don't have to wait to go to the hereafter to experience it. That it's time now to experience it. Because there is no hereafter. There's only the here, and what the here divinely is in its Ultimacy—I know there's no such word—but in its Ultimacy.

Understood correctly, Easter did away with the box. The box can never be successfully reestablished. This is the good news. There is no matter. All is Mind. Mind is God. And the Movement of Mind that God is, is Creation. And Creation is recognizable to the Mind that moves and sees Its Movement. It's experienceable by Mind. And the Substance of every Idea in Mind is, for lack of better words, substantial—not flimsy, not ethereal, not wispy, not almost recognizable because it's so substanceless, but absolutely recognizable and experienceable.

The story of my life is the story of your life. And because of what I did, you can now know it, because you have something that happened from outside the box that you were able to experience inside the box. Everyone in that day was able to experience what was happening from within the box—an out-of-the-box experience in the box. It's mind-boggling. It's mind-boggling until you recognize that the box was a figment of the imagination. All of the Ultimate, all of Heaven, is going on inside the box, because Creation is Whole, and Creation is Singular, and Creation is Infinite.

And there just ain't no place left for an independent and different experience of life to go on. Either you're having a different experience of the Kingdom of Heaven, or you're having an Actual Experience of the Kingdom of Heaven, a Real Experience of it. Either you are experiencing yourself as What You Really Are, or you're not. But what you're not experiencing is [laughing], I'm going to say, a non-experience of something that does exist. It doesn't make sense, does it? But that's called the human condition. And that's what everybody has been living, and never thinking outside of, never questioning.

So you already are, and always have been, outside the box. You're the Mind in which Infinite Creation is experienced. It has never been in a box. You have never been in a box.

But you can imagine a box and get into a very focused, tiny reverie about what it's like to be inside this box. And you can consciously ignore the rest. But that which is having this tiny, infinitesimal reverie is Something Infinite. Remember, the dream has been dispelled. Its capacity to command your attention, and keep you bound in it, has been dispelled. And all you need to do is to bring a little bit of curiosity into play to see beyond your imagined box, boxes. A curiosity to see the more that's there than what you're seeing.

The same old thing I've been saying for a long time. But I haven't brought it out from quite this standpoint that the blockage to your Waking up is already gone, was actually already dispelled in the Birth, crucifixion, Resurrection and Ascension. The mystery was demystified. It's already been demystified. You might be catching up on the demystification a little late, but it was demystified. And you do not have to overcome the state of mind, the state of the human condition that everyone was in that had never been challenged, and that no one had ever thought to challenge, and which therefore constituted a boundary of great density for everyone inside the boundary. You're not undoing a fundamental illusion that absolutely everyone is committed to. That's been done.

Let's go to the book. You might be surprised at how much this has to do with Easter, even though the word "Easter" is never used.

RAJ READING: We said before that the ego does not know what a real question is.

RAJ: I'm going to back up a little bit.

RAJ READING: With the grandeur of God in you, you have chosen to be little and to lament your littleness. WITHIN the system which dictated this choice...

PAUL: I'm sorry.

RAJ READING: With the grandeur of God in you, you have chosen to be little and to lament your littleness.

RAJ: See that was life before Christmas and Easter.

RAJ READING: WITHIN the system which dictated this choice the lament IS inevitable.

RAJ: In other words, within the box, within the human conditioning that served as a filter that distorted everything about the Kingdom of Heaven that everyone was looking at.

RAJ READING: WITHIN the system which dictated this choice the lament IS inevitable. Your littleness...

RAJ: And I will say, everyone's littleness then...

RAJ READING: ...is taken for granted there,...

RAJ: Your littleness was taken granted. Everyone's littleness was taken for granted.

And...

RAJ READING: Your littleness is taken for granted there,...

RAJ: Within that filter system.

RAJ READING: ...and you do NOT ask, "Who granted it?" The question is meaningless within the ego's thought system because it opens the WHOLE thought system to question.

RAJ: You see, the Resurrection demonstrated that the here and the hereafter are all here, that the limits that everyone thought were all there was to life were pure imagination. In other words, it demonstrated that there really wasn't a box at all.

RAJ READING: ... “Who granted it?” The question is meaningless...

RAJ: Within the box.

RAJ READING: ...within the ego’s thought system because it opens the WHOLE thought system to question.

RAJ: When you ask a real question, “Father, help me,” when you ask a real question, “Holy Spirit, what’s really going on here?”, that’s a real question because there is an answer to it. But the ego doesn’t recognize it as a meaningful question because you’re not asking the question of the ego. Right? It only sees meaningful questions as questions you bring to it.

RAJ READING: We said before that the ego does not know what a real question is. Lack of knowledge of any kind is always associated with UNWILLINGNESS to know, and produces a total lack of knowledge...

RAJ: A total lack of knowledge.

RAJ READING: ...simply because knowledge IS total.

RAJ: You see, before the Birth and the crucifixion and the Resurrection and the Ascension, everyone was unwilling to know more than the human condition as it was thought to be, because no one had any place from which to have an idea that went beyond it. You see? And so, they didn’t ask. They were embodying an unwillingness.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: NOT to question your littleness, therefore, is to deny ALL knowledge and keep the ego’s WHOLE thought system intact.

RAJ: Wow. Well, it’s true, isn’t it? Man, oh man, the ego just does not like to have the status of the status quo to be changed. I mean, gee whiz, all I did was come in and share a little bit about God. Ooh! It upset the ego’s thought system. The Roman guards were worried. The Jewish rabbis were worried. I was upsetting the apple cart, you see. The ego wants to hold its thought system intact because it cannot allow change. It cannot cope with change.

Now:

RAJ READING: You cannot retain PART of a thought system because it can be questioned ONLY at its foundation.

RAJ: In other words, [laughing] I had to undo the box, not the things going on inside the box. You see? The box, the human conditioning that served as a filter that distorted everyone’s clear experience of the Kingdom of Heaven that they were in, needed to be identified for what it was—a way of seeing that had been adopted, rather than actual physical circumstances that were beyond everyone's control.

RAJ READING: You cannot retain PART of a thought system because it can be questioned ONLY at its foundation. And this must be questioned from...

RAJ: Where?

RAJ READING: ...beyond it because WITHIN it its foundation DOES stand.

RAJ: You see? I appeared after everyone knew I was dead. That's the edge of the box, isn't it?

That was always the edge of the box. One edge of the box was where birth happened, and when you got to the other edge of the box, that's where death happened. And when you know that that's all there is, there's no way to change, or have a new thought present itself.

RAJ READING: You cannot retain PART of a thought system because it can be questioned ONLY at its foundation. And this must be questioned from beyond it because WITHIN it its foundation DOES stand. The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...judges against the reality of the ego's thought system merely because He knows its FOUNDATION is not true.

RAJ: You see? The ego is nothing but the collected thoughts and theories and beliefs that explain the edges of the box, and everything in between. It does not conceive of there being anything outside it, before it, above it.

So someone, who was not within the box, had to speak apparently within the box and be in a way that demonstrated that the box didn't really exist. And that's what the Birth, crucifixion, Resurrection and Ascension did.

And what it did was illustrate the Truth About You to you so that you might abandon the box, so that you might abandon determining yourself to be a hunk of matter that came forth from material processes that had nothing to do with a God and that are governed by the laws of matter instead of the Laws of Spirit, who are bound to be born, grow up, grow old, grow ill, and die. Where healing cannot occur because it's not built into the system. You see? But it isn't true, because form is Spirit. And because Spirit has as Its Function to conform to, configure to the Ideas that God sets into place, it is not bound to carry out death processes. And it is not bound to not, shall I say, re-conform visibly as that which is perfectly whole and healthy where deterioration or injury or accident had been before.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit judges against the reality of the ego's thought system merely because He knows its FOUNDATION is not true. Therefore, nothing that arises from it means anything.

RAJ: You see? We started talking about the Holy Spirit. We're talking about the Real You. Your attention is being pointed outside the box. Your attention is being directed to That Which Knows The Truth, that is at the bottom line, for lack of better words, the Real You right now.

So, we're talking about something outside of the box—the set of definitions that you have been using to understand who and what you are. You see? You have definitions. "Yeah, you're a physical body. Yeah, it can be injured. Yeah, it can get old. Yeah, you can mistreat it and it will suffer. And yeah, if you do it too much or too badly, you can go beyond the point of return." You see? It's not true. We're going outside the box here.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Your Real Mind.

RAJ READING: ...judges against the reality of the ego's thought system merely because He knows its FOUNDATION is not true.

RAJ: There is no box. There are no edges.

RAJ READING: Therefore, nothing that arises from it means anything. The Holy Spirit judges every belief you hold in terms of where it comes from. If it comes from God, He knows it to be true. If it does not, He knows that it is meaningless.

RAJ: There ain't no box.

RAJ READING: Whenever you question your value,...

RAJ: In other words, whenever you look at yourself through your human conditioning that causes you to see what's called a human condition.

RAJ READING: ...say: "God..."

RAJ: Uh oh. That went right outside the box, didn't it?

RAJ READING: ... "God Himself is incomplete without me."

RAJ: "Ahhh, well, that doesn't make sense at all, because we talked about outside the box, but I'm inside the box." You see? No. There ain't no box. And that's what the Birth and the crucifixion and the Resurrection and the Ascension demonstrated. There ain't no box. There ain't no material life. There ain't no matter. It's all the Kingdom of Heaven, right here, right now, seen clearly or not. But you're never seeing something else.

And you aren't ever anything else, anything other than the Christ seeing it clearly or not clearly. You're never anything less than exactly what God is embodying of Himself right where you are, even though the Totality of It is not being consciously embraced by you, because you'd rather be tiny and have your own personal perspective and enjoy the thrill of being out of your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: Whenever you question your value, say:

“God Himself is incomplete without me.”

RAJ: I did not do this during the flogging and the trip up the hill with the cross. I didn't question my value, but it would have been easy.

I could have said, “What a fool I've been. I'm so out of sync with everything in this world that I shouldn't be surprised that I'm being treated this way. What an asshole I have been. I could have had such a pleasant life, like everybody else.” No.

When you turn to the Holy Spirit, when you go within to the Altar within and you reach out, you're expressing a devotion to that place where you're bringing your attention. And you express the devotion by actually bringing your attention there.

And I never wavered in my having my attention throughout Good Friday on God, and letting Him be me. I embodied the statement, “God Himself is incomplete without me.”

RAJ READING: Remember this when the ego speaks,...

RAJ: Yeah. And there was a lot of ego speaking as I went along the streets, and the jeers and the taunts, and you know, to say nothing of the determination that I was to die from the reverent authorities.

RAJ READING: Remember this when the ego speaks, and you will not hear it. The truth about you is so lofty that nothing unworthy of God is worthy of you.

RAJ: Which means that all of your private little thoughts that you enjoy so much, all of the thoughts of tininess and belittling that you engage in about yourself and others, they're not worthy of you because you are not matter. You're not a physical organism. Every evidence of Life throughout your body is the Movement of Spirit, governed by the Laws of God with one Intent—to identify the Presence of your Individuality perfectly.

Again.

RAJ READING: The truth about you is so lofty that nothing unworthy of God is worthy of you. Choose, then, what you want in these terms,...

RAJ: Don't be wishy-washy about it.

RAJ READING: Choose, then, what you want in these terms, and accept nothing that you would not offer to God as wholly fitting for Him, for you do not WANT anything else.

RAJ: You don't really want anything else.

You're just so damn sure that there is a box, and that things work the way you think they work, and that there's a beginning and an end, and probably not anything else. But certainly, if there is something else good, it's outside the box. It's after the end. It's when you get to the edge where it's called death. And it's beyond that, somewhere.

No. There ain't no box. And the Kingdom of Heaven and the Wholeness Of You is inside and outside this artificial boundary that everybody believes is real, and which my life undid forever.

RAJ READING: Choose, then, what you want in these terms, and accept nothing that you would not offer to God as wholly fitting for Him, for you do not WANT anything else. Return your part of Him,...

RAJ: The part that you are.

RAJ READING: Return your part of Him, and He will give you all of Himself in exchange for your return of what belongs to Him and renders Him complete.

RAJ: That's what the crucifixion, Resurrection, and Ascension did. It returned to God what was God's by publicly, we will say, in a way that could be recognized by everyone that a choice was made to honor God rather than the status quo. The choice was made to be outside of the limits of the box everyone at that time thought they were confined by. And it was more important to do that than to conform. I made the choice to return to God the part of Him that was His, that was me. That's what it demonstrated. Even right up to the bitter end, I did not yield to the demand to conform to the laws of man. In other words, to the framework of the human condition; the beliefs and belief structures of the human condition.

RAJ: Capital "H".

RAJ READING: ...Him, and He will give you all of Himself in exchange for your return of what belongs to Him and renders Him complete.

RAJ: That's what my life illustrated/embodied.

You hear that word? Use that word, "embodied." Don't be afraid of being embodied. Remember that if God is not embodied, there is no Creation. If God is not expressed, there is no Creation. And God without Creation, is an oxymoron—senseless, meaningless.

My life, and apparent death, Resurrection, and Ascension forever changed the world. Join me and use your life for that. The hard work was done, I assure you. And I will continue to say, "Come on, guys! Come on, guys!"

I love you. And I look forward to being with all of you next week.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Well, you all love to think, don't you? And what you don't realize is the devastating effect it has on your Experience of Being. You also do not realize the temporary beneficial effect it can have on your lives. I say "temporary" because thinking used intelligently quickly helps you move to a point beyond thinking.

There's been a heavy subject of death presented to all of you over the last couple of weeks. And when you leave tonight, I'd like you to contemplate how you used your mind over this past week and a half as you were confronted with the subject of death. I'm also going to ask you to contemplate how consistent your thinking was with what we discussed last week.

You know, God has withheld nothing of What He Is from His Self-Expression called you. But there are three things you didn't get—they weren't things He could give. But the three things you didn't get were sin, sickness, and death. If they weren't given to you, they're not your Birthright. If they're not your Birthright, then any one of them as a topic of thought is useless and meaningless.

At the bottom of the screen on your TV, [said somberly] "The Pope's condition is very grave." How many of you thought, "Oh dear!" [laughing] You see, I could say, "You see how lazy you are?" But I'm going to say, "Do you see that you're not quick enough to catch the suggestion?" You were invited into a concept that you shouldn't have allowed yourself to be invited into, but rather you should have said, "That's ridiculous." When you said, "Oh dear," you were sending out a messenger, and your messengers always come back to you confirming the purpose for which they were sent out.

But there's another point you must realize. The messengers you send out are the messengers that are teaching you about you. And when you say, "Oh dear," about anyone's grave condition, you're saying, "This is my inevitability." And you're teaching yourself. Why? Because you didn't contradict it. You acquiesced to it.

Earlier this evening I heard someone say, "Well, he's behaving like he's a young man." So it's, "Stupid him. You know, he's not a spring chicken anymore." That's just another form of the same teaching. It's the way you create [laughing] a grave condition that will lead you to the grave.

Why talk about, why consider the fact that every single one of you is the Christ? Why consider that every single one of you is the Direct Expression of God? In other words, that you aren't a unique dropping, we'll say—something [small laugh] left behind by God that came from God, was made by God, but doesn't have anything to do with God anymore—when you are at this instant and at every instant, the living proof, you might say, the living evidence of a Current and Living God.

You've got to be more alert. The reason we consider these things is so that you will, first of all, think better, use better thought processes. And also so that you will dare to take time not to think, so that you are not filling your mind with that which distracts you and blocks you from the experience of the directness of God's Movement of Creation right where you are in that moment—which has nothing to do with sin, has nothing to do with sickness, or deterioration, or death.

If you're going to be sloppy, you're going to have the continued evidence of sloppy mindfulness—sloppy un-mindfulness. And there's going to be no transformation. And you might as well throw the book in your bookcase, and just go out and watch the footnotes on your TV screens, and learn from there and be from there, and never become an agent for change in quote "the world." By what? Thinking wonderful new things about it? No. By being in a new way relative to it.

Now one can say, "That's going to be a lot of work." But just get your feet on the ground. You're thinking something. Why not think the Truth? Why not think that which leads you into a clearer Experience of Truth? Why not think that which allows you to have enough Truth to become quiet, to go into the silence, and invite the influx of the Direct Experience of What God Is Being right where you are?

You all need new evidence in your life experience—in your life experience. Not your life experience out there in the world, but in your experience of everything.

If you've been watching the TV, you know that once the Pope died, certain ritualistic processes began, as though that were unique to the church processes.

But you want to know something? Certain ritualistic processes began quite a while ago. In preparation for what? The death of the Pope. [laughing] I mean, it's so expected that your TV networks already had his obituary in the can on a shelf to be pulled out. And why do they have it in the can, instead of responding in the moment? So that another network doesn't beat them to the punch with better coverage. How would you like your obituaries and a reflection on your life to already be in the can today? Doesn't that send out a message? Isn't that a messenger?

The whole human condition that we spoke about last week is made up of this kind of already organized processes set in place to accommodate for and account for everyone's death, including yours. And you already have some things in the can about yours. "Well, you're not a spring chicken anymore. Well, you know, when you get to be that age, you're very likely to have this condition, you know, because there's nothing real about your body. It's just a hunk of matter, and matter deteriorates. Matter is not eternal." And so you accommodate for that, and you say, "Well, okay, but I'm a Divine Idea of God. I, my soul, will survive." And so you find a way not to feel too bad about the loss of the Visibility and Tangibility of You because something will survive. And that very thought secures the deterioration and death and disappearance of your body.

Except, you know, [laughing] you just have one giant surprise. The moment death happens, you find out that although you're not with everyone else, [laughing] you still have a body. You're still fully identified. That which renders you Visible and Tangible is still with you because it's where you are always.

So what was all this nonsense that you had gotten in the can about yourself ahead of time that led you to not challenge the idea of your mortality? And that led you not to challenge the idea that there's matter at all. Why did you go through this week since last Sunday when we spoke together, why did you go through this week and not challenge what you saw and what you heard? Why did you let your feelings be moved out of or from some level of compassion for this person going through this thing called death? Why didn't you, with joy, remember what we talked about last week and use that to replace the invitation? I gave you an invitation last week. Why didn't you let that replace the invitation that the news media was presenting to you?

You know, maybe you can say that it would have been unrealistic for you to think that it might have been responsible for the Pope's recovery, but, you know, what you can't talk away is the fact that the way you used your mind, didn't move you any closer to the Resurrection, didn't move you any closer to being one who gives evidence of the Deathlessness of Being.

Now, am I scolding you? No. I'm saying you missed an opportunity. You missed an opportunity to experience insight at a time when everyone was succumbing to a misunderstanding of what life is. And there was succumbing to the ongoingness of the status quo. You didn't have the joy of finding your freedom from the discouraging experience of being a sheep following the leader, whoever it might be at the moment. And as a result, you didn't become part of that which would shift, not only your future, but the future of everyone else, because the messengers you would have been sending out would have been like the dominoes starting a new result.

How many of you, before the Pope passed on, began to already treat him as though he wasn't here? "Well, I wonder who the new Pope is going to be? You know, I know some are more liberal, and others are less liberal. And, you know, maybe we'll finally get a Pope that will let the priests marry and maybe let women become priests." Poor Pope John Paul. He's still alive! And like they did, they accidentally rang the bells, while he was still alive, that announced his death. And you're ringing the bells already, too. While he's still alive you're saying, "Well, I wonder what it's going to be like with the new Pope?"

Now, life is not that expendable. It's not kind or loving to discount someone because, "Oh, now there's an opportunity for maybe some progressive change." [small laugh] Well, so much for the wonderful obituaries the networks have put together. You're already discounting his life because he didn't do what maybe somebody will do now. And so your obituary of him is less than lovely, less than complimentary. "He did wonderful things, but you know what? It's time for a new paradigm." [small laugh]

How often do you hold someone's continuing existence responsible for your lack? "Well, at least when she goes, I'll have some freedom from such-and-such." Or, "When he dies, I'll get his inheritance. I'm really, I'm really, really, really in need." Which says, "I wish he would die soon."

You see, when you begin to think without having listened for the Truth, the result is confusing. The result is malicious. The result is self-centered. The result is competitive. The result is insanity.

You know, in Peter Pan, Tinkerbell was dying, and all it took was someone believing in fairies to bring her back to life. Well, of course, everybody's too grown up to believe in fairies, right? And everybody's too grown up to believe in not dying. You know too much of the facts. But what you know is made up of confidences that are sheer idiocy.

From within the level of ignorance, "what you think" is not seen as idiocy. My telling you that it is idiocy is not a criticism of you, but it's giving you a perspective from outside of the box you're caught in. I say it so that you can say it, and thus not buy into it willy-nilly, thoughtlessly.

There need to be growing numbers of people who watch the TV with news of the sort that was on this past week, who are saying, "That's not the Truth," when the captions come on, or in somber voices everyone speaks kindly and respectfully of somebody worthy of respect, but they speak that way in "the shadow of death." Of course, when he's healthy and vital, [laughing] the respect goes out of the way and a lot of criticism can come into play.

But, what if everyone, what if increasing numbers of people, confronted with what was presented this past week and a half, were seeing it and contradicting it in their mind, saying, "That's ridiculous. That's absurd. How could anyone believe this about the Visibility and Tangibility, the Presence-ing of God, right there that is the only thing that's going on, that has to be the only thing really going on?" Like Tinkerbell, when someone believed in fairies, was resuscitated, the whole human mindset would be lifted, would become less dense. And those messengers that you send out would come back with increasing confirmation of their intent. And so the blessing you would receive by extending the acknowledgement of Truth, and by the sending out of the messengers of Truth, the blessing you would receive, because that's what happens when you give it, would bless you as well as the recipients. And a new movement would begin. And that's what this is all about.

This isn't mind-control. This isn't manipulation. Because remember, there's no matter to manipulate. There's only the Substance of Spirit, which is what the Visibility and Tangibility of the Presence of God is constituted of. So it's not matter that needs to be changed. And it's not matter that can be manipulated, because there ain't no such thing. But you might say the tone of mind shifts and contributes, with a domino effect, the shifting of mind in those who are likewise caught in their thinking.

So the question is, "What are you doing with your mind?" What I'm describing to you and what I'm encouraging you to become involved in will be much more satisfying and much more fulfilling to you, because even though it involves thinking, it sets your mind on the right track, on the right tone. It will reduce fear in you, because you will not be confirming your own death knell as you confirm someone else's. And as you begin to be lightened, as you are more lightened up, you will find it easier to expect not death, not disease, not deterioration, but more and more evidences of Life, more and more evidences of what we'll call regeneration. Not regeneration of matter, but regeneration—renewal of your mind, your mind habits, and what you invite in to occupy it. And that, in itself, will be Self-fulfilling Life pulsing, you might say, moving in you as a new you, as you renewed, bringing you back into your original primitive State of Divine Being, which has always been your Birthright to be experiencing.

Let's go into the book.

RAJ READING: Grandeur versus Grandiosity

RAJ: I'm going to say one more thing.

There is talk of the disappearance of the Universe. It has presented itself in the context of the teachings of A Course In Miracles. Let me just set one thing straight. The only thing that is ever going to disappear is, or the only things that are going to disappear are sin, sickness, and death—the mortality of the Universe—the potential for deterioration of the Universe and anything in it. The capacity of any part of the Universe to be so at odds with itself that it can become attached to being self-destructive, which is what sin is, that is the only thing that can disappear. Look forward to the disappearance of those. And let that be enough said about that.

Okay.

RAJ READING: Grandeur versus Grandiosity

Grandeur is of God, and ONLY of Him.

RAJ: Now, [little laugh] interesting sentence that follows.

RAJ READING: Therefore, it is in you.

RAJ: "Oh. I thought it was of God and only of Him?" It is, because God is All There Is of You. What the Life-Principle is being, what the Infinite (capital "M") Mind is being, is You. That's what It is being—You.

RAJ READING: Grandeur is of God, and ONLY of Him. Therefore, it is in you.

RAJ: Inseparable from you.

RAJ READING: Whenever you become aware of it, however dimly, you abandon the ego automatically because, in the presence of the grandeur of God, the meaninglessness of the ego becomes perfectly apparent.

RAJ: How many of you have had an experience of the influx of what could only be called the Presence of God, or the influx of a Divine Experience, that lifted you spontaneously into a more Infinite Perspective in which, in one way or another, you knew of the Perfection of absolutely everything infinitely, and the fact that none of the Perfection, none of the Infinite Perfection of Everything was separate or different from you? When that happened, you abandoned the ego automatically. In other words, you didn't think about it, and you didn't say, "Oh, wow! My ego is gone." You were touched fully, greatly, largely, with the Experience of Truth. The meaningless[ness] of the ego became perfectly apparent, [laughing] but you weren't thinking of that. You stood in awe of the Meaningfulness of That Which Is Real.

RAJ READING: Though it...

RAJ: The ego.

RAJ READING: ...does not understand this, the ego believes that its "enemy" has struck, and attempts to offer gifts to induce you to return to its "protection." SELF-inflation of the ego is its alternative to the grandeur of God. Which will you choose?

RAJ: I'll tell you one thing, the idea of choice will not enter into your mind until you begin to think about the experience you had. And of course, the minute you think about the experience, you have withdrawn at least part of your attention from the experience, and you've split your mind. And then, because you love to think, and because you have thought that thinking was your purpose in life, your tendency is to shift fully back into thinking.

"Wow. I'm going to have to write a book about this experience. It's so clear to me that I know I could write it so beautifully that many people would love it. And it would be a best-seller, and I would be set for life." Oh.

RAJ READING: Which will you choose?

[pause]

Grandiosity...

RAJ: And I'm adding this: In contrast to Grandeur.

RAJ READING: ...is ALWAYS a cover for despair. It is without hope because it is not real. It is an attempt to counteract your littleness, based on the belief that the littleness is REAL.

RAJ: How do you counteract the littleness of your mortality? By believing that in spite of all the evidence you've seen, there must be something intrinsically of value about you, certainly something intrinsically of value about you that you didn't make-up about yourself, because you really do know that you aren't able to truly create anything of real value. And so you suppose that there must be something else that created you, and it must be much bigger than you, and it had better be something beneficent. And so you make-up a "God" that is going to secure your ongoingness. That idea, when it hasn't arisen out of a Direct Experience of God, is an example of grandiosity, made as an attempt to overcome your littleness and to give you a way out of the depression of the littleness of you.

Grandiosity...

RAJ READING: ...is an attempt to counteract your littleness, based on the belief that the littleness is REAL.

RAJ: You see?

And I'm coming along and I'm saying, "No. There ain't no box. There is no littleness. You never were little. You never will become big because you have always been whole."

Speaking of the belief that the littleness is Real, it continues:

RAJ READING: Without this belief grandiosity is meaningless, and you could not possibly want it.

RAJ: Well, I'm coming along and I'm telling you that there is a Place of Excellence in you. Grandeur is your nature. And so you can abandon your attempts to create grandiosity, or to become grandiose, by your own efforts. You can abandon it because it gets in the way of your experiencing your innate Grandeur.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The essence of grandiosity is competitiveness, because it ALWAYS involves attack. It is a delusional attempt...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: ...to OUTDO, but NOT to undo.

RAJ: You see? When you think you're in the box, you try to outdo the conditions in the box, you try to outdo what others are doing in the box, when what needs to be done is the undoing of the belief that there is a box.

RAJ READING: We said before that the ego vacillates between suspiciousness and viciousness. It remains suspicious as long as you despair of yourself.

RAJ: Well, what else can it do? When you think you are little. When you think you are a hunk of matter that just happens to have electrical synapses occurring in a particular hunk of meat in your head, that you thereby have this incredibly inconsistent experience of consciousness. And I say "incredibly inconsistent" because Consciousness is about as un-material as you can get. And the very idea that it arises out of matter is ridiculous.

Well, as long as you believe that you're in the box, you can't help but feel vulnerable. Why? I keep saying it so you can keep remembering it. Because you have forgotten Who You Are. Because you have divorced yourself from your Source and have blocked the Conscious Awareness of your Source out of sight, so that you might have this private experience for a while. And so, being vulnerable, you are automatically suspicious about everything.

RAJ READING: It remains suspicious as long as you despair of yourself. It shifts to viciousness whenever you will not tolerate self-abasement and seek relief.

RAJ: Oh. So the minute you [small laugh]... the minute you look to something else as the source of your information, it will become vicious with you.

RAJ READING: Then it offers you the illusion of attack as a solution.

The ego does not know the difference between grandeur and grandiosity because it does not know the difference between miracle impulses and ego-alien beliefs of its own.

RAJ: The reason it doesn't know the difference between those two is because it doesn't experience miracle impulses. Miracle impulses come from a different place—the Place of Excellence in you—from That Which You Divinely Are—the Holy Spirit—your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego.

RAJ READING: We once said that the ego IS aware of threat, but does not make distinctions between two entirely different kinds of threat to its existence. Its own profound sense of vulnerability renders it incapable of judgment EXCEPT in terms of attack. When it experiences threat, its only decision...

RAJ: And remember, there were just two.

RAJ READING: ...its only decision is whether to attack NOW, or to withdraw to attack later. If you accept its offer of grandiosity, it will attack immediately. If you do not, it will wait.

RAJ: And how does it attack? It attacks your capacity to have the experience of your Grandeur by enticing you to become competitive with your fellowman, or even competitive with yourself, setting you off on a track of harsh self-improvement, because it's so greatly or sorely needed. Why? Because you're so awful right now, but you're not stuck with it. It says, "You're not stuck with it. You can improve yourself. You can learn how to be more successful in the box."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego is immobilized in the presence of God's grandeur because HIS grandeur establishes YOUR freedom.

RAJ: As I said, whenever any of you have had an Experience of Illumination, you could say it overwhelmed you, but it overtook you without putting you out of balance. And in Its Presence, you were free of your conditioned thinking.

RAJ READING: ...HIS grandeur...

RAJ: Which is yours.

RAJ READING: ...establishes YOUR freedom. Even the faintest hint of your reality literally drives the ego from your mind because of complete lack of investment in it. Grandeur is totally WITHOUT illusions, and because it is real, it is compellingly convincing.

RAJ: Why are we talking about this? Because it's an experience available to you right now because it's your Birthright to be experiencing it right now. And you would be experiencing it right now, except for your conscious practice of thought processes that hold you to be a hunk of matter that can sin, that can be subject to disease, and that ultimately will die. And you keep reinforcing those.

But you wouldn't keep reinforcing them if you took what we've been reading about here about your Grandeur and about the Place of Excellence in you, if you took it seriously and gave that more of your consideration than you do the convictions you have of your mortality, and your conviction that you have a matter-body. Maybe it's a matter-body that behind it has a spiritual idea to support it, or that behind it is something Real that you're not seeing yet. But I keep bringing home to you that what's Real about your body isn't behind what you're seeing. It is what you're seeing, because there isn't anything else available for you to see except the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality, which is God-derived, and therefore, the visibility and tangibility is the Visibility and Tangibility of God Himself! You see?

And let these ideas be repetitious. I repeat them. Let them be... remind yourself of them frequently, because your reminding yourself of it is a constructive use of your mind, even though it's still thinking, because it puts in place in your mind something that is True, even though the experience is still escaping you. But you're closer to having the experience by having the Truth in your mind than you are when you have an illusion in your mind that you're convinced about.

Again.

RAJ READING: Grandeur...

RAJ: Your Grandeur.

RAJ READING: ...is totally WITHOUT illusions,...

RAJ: Right now! Right now the Grandeur of You is totally without illusions. And it's not off in the future—the Grandeur of You. It's inseparable from the experience of being Conscious.

RAJ READING: Grandeur is totally WITHOUT illusions, and because it is real, it is compellingly convincing. Yet the conviction of reality will not remain with you unless you do not allow the ego to attack it.

RAJ: How do you let the ego attack it? By beginning to think about what it might mean for you to be Divine and what kind of power it might give you. And what a tremendously impactful agent for change you could become in the world if you embraced it because, of course, you would have a leg up on everyone else who isn't aware of it yet, and you could let them in on it slowly so they would be dependent upon you. And you could be the prophet. And you could be the big guy. And you could get all the praise and reverence, etc. You see, but the focus is on you, instead of the giving of the Gift of Acknowledgement that illuminates another's Reality to him.

RAJ READING: ...the conviction of reality...

RAJ: About you.

RAJ READING: ...will not remain with you unless you do not allow the ego to attack it.

RAJ: And I'm saying by engaging in thinking—your favorite practice.

RAJ READING: The ego will make every effort to recover and mobilize its energies AGAINST your release. It will tell you that you are insane, and argue that grandeur CANNOT be a real part of you because of the littleness in which IT believes.

RAJ: But it won't say, "I'm trying to convince you of it because I can't conceive of it." It will just try to convince you because without your faith in it, it will die. It will fizzle out.

RAJ READING: Yet your grandeur...

RAJ: Right here, right now, in these chairs as you sit.

RAJ READING: Yet your grandeur is not delusional...

RAJ: Why?

RAJ READING: ...BECAUSE you did not make it.

RAJ: Whew! That's the marvelous answer.

Why can't the Truth about you be taken away from you? Because you didn't make it. The fact that you're not responsible for your existence, recognized is your salvation. Why? Because if you're not responsible for your existence, you're not responsible for making a success out of it. And you're not responsible for keeping it going. And you're not responsible for protecting yourself against everything that would assail it. You see? Because you didn't make it, you don't have to do anything about it, except allow it to be.

And when you abandon your project of protecting yourself and keeping yourself alive, when you abandon that, your mind is free, available to see What's Really Going On, to have the Presence of God register with you because you're not constantly saying, "Get out of my face. Get out of my face. I need to reestablish what this really is right here. I need to reestablish it. I need to reassert my sovereignty, my personal sovereignty over the situation. Don't bother me with this nonsense about that I need do nothing. Don't bother me with this nonsense that Grandeur is already my nature." You see?

But if you even begin to talk that way, you would begin to feel it, and you would begin to move into it and gentle down and soften, and become less defensive, and therefore more permeable, if you will. And the Experience of God as you, would begin to register with you.

The fact that you did not make anything that is Real about you, the fact that you are not responsible for anything that is True about you, is the key to your release from the compulsive attempt to overcome your littleness. You see? There ain't no such thing as littleness about you. There ain't no box.

And the fact that there isn't a box has already been demonstrated. It doesn't need to be demonstrated again. You don't need to reinvent the wheel, so to speak. It's already been invented. Now you can enjoy the benefits of the wheel. Now you can enjoy the benefits of experiencing being where there is no box.

RAJ READING: YOU...

RAJ: Meaning your confused thinking.

RAJ READING: ...have made grandiosity and are afraid of it because it is a form of attack,...

RAJ: You see, it's actually an attack on you. It could appear to be an attack on God because it's used to deny God's Existence, but it's an attack on you because it is a significant distraction from your remembering Who You Are.

RAJ READING: ...but...

RAJ: It says here.

RAJ READING: ...your grandeur is of God, Who created it out of His Love. From your grandeur you can only bless because your grandeur is your ABUNDANCE.

RAJ: You see? It's Whole. Whole. It's a Singularity. It's All-Inclusive. There's no outside to it. It's Infinitely All-Inclusive.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: By blessing you hold it in your minds, protecting it from illusions and keeping yourself in the Mind of God.

RAJ: And you protect it from illusions by not entertaining illusions—not by defending—but by just not giving your attention there. You see, you just don't give attention to the footnote at the bottom of the screen on the TV, which is someone else's interpretation, someone else's thought, who hasn't bothered to look outside the box, or even to realize that there ain't no box.

RAJ READING: Remember always that you cannot be anywhere EXCEPT in the Mind of God. When you forget this, you WILL despair and you WILL attack.

[pause]

RAJ READING: Remember always that you cannot be anywhere EXCEPT in the Mind of God.

RAJ: As this little tiny you in the great big Mind of God? And you're there in the Mind of God. Oh, that's very comforting, isn't it, for littleness?

You are in the Mind of God because God conceived you. And in conceiving you, embodied Himself—All That He Is. And so, you are the Mind of God embodied. God's Mind embodied is you experiencing the Mind of God.

God is Singular, but God isn't solitary. God is Singular in that in the Allness of Mind That God Is, there's nothing unlike Mind. There's nothing unlike God. But God's Conscious Experience of Being is an Infinite Conscious Experience of Infinite Creativity. Infinite Conscious Experiences of Visibility and Tangibility of Ideas that are visible and tangible to the Mind that formed it. And so God is infinitely filled with What God Infinitely Is. And it's an experienceable experience. It's an experienceable Conscious Experience. And it's specific and Universal simultaneously.

And this Mind that is so experiencing Itself is What God Is Being as you. And so you, as Singular and as Whole as God, experience with God What God Is Being. Not what little you is being, but what God-You is being.

RAJ READING: Remember always that you cannot be anywhere EXCEPT in the Mind of God.

RAJ: And what all of you ultimately are wanting to do is to be conscious as God Is Being Conscious, to be Conscious with God. And you do this by abandoning all thoughts that you have engaged in, all fears that you have engaged in, that distract you from purely seeing Everything As It Is, and Yourself as well.

Now I've mentioned the two prayers before. I wish to see the Evidence of Love and I wish to be the Evidence of Love. And I think there is still some confusion about that.

The prayer, "I wish to see the Evidence of Love," think about it. [pause] If it was the 1850's and, as with most people in the U.S., you lived on the East Coast, you might have this dream of going and seeing the Pacific Ocean. You would wish to see the Pacific Ocean. Well, if you wish to see something, you go and look for it, don't you? You go and find it. You wouldn't just sit on the East Coast and say, "I wish to see the Pacific Ocean," and close your eyes and have an experience of the Pacific Ocean. You would go and find the Pacific Ocean so you could experience the thunder of it, and the beauty of it, and the sunset shining on it, and the moon glistening on it, and the smell of the saltwater, and the smell of the fish. You would go where the experience was to be had. You would look for it.

When you are looking at a Brother or a Sister and you say, "I wish to see the Evidence of Love," it means you have to do something. It means you, in your mind, must have the intent to look for the Evidence of Love in them. You don't say, "I wish to see the Evidence of Love," and wait for them to evidence Love.

You don't watch that notice across the bottom of the TV screen, "The Pope's condition is very grave," and say, "Damn. I wish he knew more about the Truth than he does. What a shame for him to have to die because he doesn't grasp that he's the Christ, and that death was not given to him by God, and suffering has nothing to do with Reality." Well, that's not wishing to see the Evidence of Love, is it? It's a very independent, sort of arrogant, sort of grandiose... it's a little bit of grandiosity. "Gee whiz! Too bad he doesn't know what I know. He wouldn't have to die."

Except when you say, "He doesn't know it, and therefore he's going to die," you're saying, "Death is inevitable under some conditions, and therefore I'm not invulnerable to it." That's just a little aside.

But what's called for when you see these things is to say, "I wish to see the Evidence of Love," and then put in some time looking for it. Spend some time getting your thinking in line with the Truth, so that you are acknowledging that no matter how the Pope is seeing himself, the Truth is that God is the Source of his Being and God cannot die. And he is some part of the Infinitude of my Being, and I'm not dying, and therefore no part of me can seem to die. And I don't have to buy into this illusion about me or about him.

You get your thinking in line with the Truth—that's the way you look for the Evidence of Love. You have to look, not to him, but to your capacity to know the Truth. And bring your thinking in alignment with the Truth that you do know so that then you might have a moment when you shut up to have the experience of it infill you, which will be much easier to do than when, than if you have sat there and said, "Oh dear. Oh dear. What a shame. I am so sad." You see?

To be very frank with you, grandiosity is you having your own ideas and favoring them—no matter how insane they are—more than wanting to know the Truth and turning to the place where Truth is available to you and looking for it—wishing to see the Truth, wishing to grasp the Truth, so that you might let the Truth constitute the messengers that you send out.

Now, have I said, "Stop thinking entirely"? No. For the time being, I've told you, "Think constructively. Think in alignment with the Truth." Why? So that you can powerfully make changes? No. So that the arrogance of mental mind-control yields to the humility of letting Truth be revealed to you, because you desire to know God's Truth. Why? Because you are inseparable from God. His Mind is the only Mind truly available to you to be experiencing, and you want to be experiencing It so that that experience is what gets extended as you look to see the Evidence of Love.

And so, when you wish to see the Evidence of Love, you're saying that you wish to be the place where Love, the Acknowledgement of Love is extended from. And when the Acknowledgement of Love is extended, you become the Evidence of Love. And in that Singularity of your Mind, miracles happen. Sudden shifts of perception occur. And transformation happens.

One more thing to make it easier for you. You don't have to tell anybody you're doing any of this. I didn't say, "Go out and sound like a fool in front of everybody." But speak, use your mind to be heard of God and to hear of God, because it's what goes on in your mind that constitutes the kinds of messengers you're sending out, and what they will return with, which will color your perception, or cause it to become less colored and more and more clear.

Okay.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week.

And I hope you all have a better week. And I hope the whole world has a better week because you're having a better week. And sincerely, watch how you use your mind, and watch your behavior. When you're watching a screen that has only one intent behind there being something to watch, and that is to move you to do whatever someone else wants you to do that will make them money.

Good night.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

It's always well as we're going through the book to remember that the book isn't about God, or about this subject, or that subject. It's all about you. And at the bottom line, it's all about the way you're using your mind. You should catch yourself if you find that you're beginning to think about something the Course has said as though you're thinking about a disembodied or distant idea, or concept, that you hear, can consider and look at and sort of objectively evaluate and come to understand. Because as long as you do that, it's not connecting with you. Now part of what makes the Course difficult to grasp is that it's not really addressing the one you think you are. It is addressing the one that you are—the One That You Divinely Are. It says things that you are capable of grasping because of What You Divinely Are.

But as long as you're insisting that you're something else, that you're little and tiny and puny and inconsequential and powerless, and on and on and on, you're going to say, "Well, this doesn't relate to me. This isn't helping me get more power. This doesn't help me at being better at what I am."—meaning "what I think I am." But it's all about you. And it's all about helping you release yourself from all the definitions you and everyone else mutually have made-up, and which you rely upon as dependable, I'm going to say, foundations for living successfully and surviving.

One of the things that we've been engaged in, and that anyone would find themselves engaged in if they were reading the Course by themselves, is the acquiring of new definitions. And one could think, "Well, we're just replacing bad definitions with good definitions, but we're still going to be existing in a context of definitions." No. [laughing] Here's what it's like. You have a rope that you have wrapped around yourself, and you have managed to tie yourself into [a] very constricted position, and then you have tied some really excellent knots, and you're bound. And we're coming along and we're saying, "Okay. Here's how you untie this knot." And the tendency is to think that the manner of untying the knot and the purpose of untying the knot is so that you can be given a better knot, because obviously the quality of the knots you made were not excellent because you weren't coming from a Place of Excellence in you when you made them. But, no. We're undoing the knots so that you can unwrap the rope and become free.

Now why am I saying this? I'm saying it because I want to start out this evening redefining God, because your definition of God is one of the knots that you keep yourself bound by. The basic problem with your definition of God is that it's a noun. God, the meaning of the word "God" is a verb. It means Being. God is not a Being. That would be a noun. God is Being Itself—Singular, boundless, unlimited Being—Movement.

It is a Movement of Mind. Well, you can talk about the word "Mind" as though it were a noun, but it's also a verb. It is an uninterrupted Experience of Being Conscious, of Consciousness—never inactive—boundaryless—again Singular. And this Movement of Being Consciousness is called Creation. It is What You Are. Being, the Movement of Being, is the center and circumference, the totality of every single thing that can be experienced—we'll say the Universe, and even more—the flower—everything.

But I want to come back to this fundamental idea. God is not a Being. God is Being Itself. It is difficult to apply words to it. But it is exactly what you are experiencing right now. You are experiencing being. You can think of yourself as a Being, but you are an unstoppable Movement of Conscious Awareness being Conscious. You didn't trigger [finger snap] the spark of Conscious Awareness that you're experiencing ongoingly. You're not responsible for it. It just is what you're faced with and that you can't get away from. You see? It's changeless, but it's forever on the move, if you will.

So now when you read about God and you read about the Father, you can be alert so that you don't begin to think of a Being—a masculine figure with a long white beard and flowing robes, sitting somewhere at the point of authority in the middle of Creation. You see? Someone you could pray to who may be generous and help you, and may say, "Mm. You have a little more to learn. It's not quite time for you to be free of your problem." You see? You can begin to think, you can begin to be alert so that you don't play into that.

Being is like a river. Now let's take the Amazon River because it's a very long river. The river is in movement. The river is a movement of water. Water that is not moving is a pond, or a lake. A river is a movement of water. And you could take one point in the Amazon and, let's say, scoop out a cup of water, and a thousand miles down river you could scoop out another cup of water, and the quality of the water in one place might be slightly different, because it had gone over rapids and had air beaten into it so it's more highly oxygenated and so on. And you could begin to think as though there are parts of the river. But the river is one river, and the river is all movement.

You could say there are molecules, so you can find a way to describe water as though it's made up of parts. And you could think of yourself as some of the molecules of water up here, and others of you could think you're part of the molecules a thousand miles downstream. And you could create within yourself a sense of having a unique experience of the Movement of Being. But you know what? A discrete or unique experience would be purely conceptual, because the river is a Singularity. It's Total. It's all One.

As you begin to let go of your private, tiny, little definitions of yourselves, what you're doing is experiencing a breakdown of the sense of separation, so that you finally arrive at a point where you can say, "Thy Will be done." You say, "I yield to the Movement that I'm part of and inseparable from. I abandon this funny activity that I've engaged in of partitioning myself off from the Whole. I am willing to abandon wanting to be somewhere other than where the Movement of the river has me. I yield to the Movement."

That's what yielding to the Father means, or yielding to God. It means allowing yourself to come in, back into that place of humility that allows you to fit in. And then abandon the idea of fitting in so that the Movement Itself can be experienced by you as the Totality of You, and of yourself as inseparable from the Whole Movement. And this is when you have the experience of being a co-creator with God by allowing yourself to be the Movement, by allowing the Movement to be All There Is of you. You're no longer holding yourself apart. And the Movement of the Whole becomes available to you as your Infinite Conscious Experience of what? Being. Not of being something. Not of being God. Not of being in partnership with God, another thing. But the Mind that is moving that constitutes the Conscious Experience of Being in which nothing of what is natural to that Movement is experienced as being withheld from you.

I know this is nothing new, but I'm trying to put it in different words so that it might register more fully. The culprit that disallows you from experiencing What God Is as Being is an idea that you have that you have a will of your own that you can exercise—a will, we'll say, different from that which gives impetus to the Movement of the river itself. Which means that you think that the little part of the river that you're in, can, through the use of will, move a little bit to the right, or in a direction other than the Movement of the river. And this capacity to express will has created in you a sense of a self that has it, that has will. And so this will becomes the cornerstone of a definition of self—a self that has no existence really, because you are the Movement of the river, because you are inseparable from it. You are at this very moment the Movement of the Conscious Experience of Being.

Now as a result, you all are a collection of conditioned responses based upon the definitions you have created, or acquired, and incorporated. And these constitute the box, that for the last few weeks I've been telling you, doesn't exist. As a result of these definitions which you've adopted, you walk through the Kingdom of Heaven and you don't see it. You see your definitions.

Now a while back someone objected when I used Paul as an example, saying that the Christ would never put someone else on the carpet, so to speak. But, whenever I use Paul as example, it's because it also illuminates something for him. And for everyone else, it makes the expression of Spirit, actual Truth, more relevant.

Now, before the Gathering tonight, some avocados were needed in the kitchen and Paul was asked if he would go downstairs and get them. He said, "Sure." Well, he knows where the avocados are. I mean, after all, he's very likely the one that put them there when he got home from the grocery store. Paul went downstairs, looked in both of the refrigerators, found no avocados, came back up and said, "They must be up here because there's not a single avocado down there." Well, in between the two refrigerators, there's a table in which squash and things that don't have to be refrigerated are sitting. Susan said, "They're right on the table." And Paul said, "I didn't even look on the table. They're supposed to be in the refrigerator. I only looked in the refrigerator." And Judy says, "Gotta learn to look outside the box." [mild audience laughter]

You see, they were there, but not where Paul knew they should be. And so he did not see them, because he was not looking with curiosity. He was looking with confidence. You see? His definitions were what he was relying upon. And every single one of you walk through your day thinking you know something, and as a result of what you think you know, you miss the Kingdom of Heaven. And yes, an experience of the Kingdom of Heaven would be one where something practical like happening to look where the avocados are, because there was an impulse to, allows you to find the avocados, to know where they are. You see?

You all go through your day, unless you have specifically sat down and meditated and become still and let go of your definitions, you are all going through your day truly as automatons—robots living out the expectations and the confidences that are based upon the definitions that you have adopted as factual. You don't get up in the morning and walk through your day with innocent eyes—eyes that don't know what to expect, eyes that are not biasing the experience of vision in any way. That's what "yielding to God" means when we're talking about yielding to the Father, or yielding to the Holy Spirit. That's what we're talking about in practical terms. It all has bearing upon and relates to what? Every Conscious Experience of what? Being—that you're all experiencing unavoidably and unalterably at every moment.

You are living the Life Divine right now. You are experiencing the Conscious Movement of Being. Being. You are not a Being having an Experience of Being. You are Being. You see, "to be or not to be," is not the question. There's no choice! Being is What You Are right now. Not a Being. But Being is What You Are right now.

We talk about there being a Place of Excellence in you. We've talked about it being the Altar within you, and that the need is to go within into the Altar. It didn't say to go out on a stage in front of humungous crowds. It didn't say to find large gatherings of people to socialize with, and to be with, and to get things from, and give things to. You go within to the Altar. It's a very quiet place. It's a very private place. It's a place where only you can go and only you can be. Because there's no one else there other than the Holy Spirit, going there can't be used to impress anyone, can it? It can't be done for egotistical reasons, in other words.

I'm going to paraphrase a statement. The student of Truth is alone with his own Being and the Reality of things. When you go within to the Altar, very often initially it's necessary to learn how to meditate and become still. And the reason is because to get to the Altar, you have to leave the ego behind. You have to leave your precious right to think your own thoughts and have your own definitions, you have to be willing to leave that behind, because in order to arrive at the Altar and learn, you have to be empty.

At the very least you have to be willing to let something in other than what is already there. In order to go in to the Altar and learn, you must become humble. Humility must characterize you when you're there. Humility is the Nature of Being. It's also the Nature of Grandeur.

And all of the stuff that you can't take there is that which is characteristic of grandiosity, of the ego. Grandiosity is something that one engages in when he believes that he has accomplished the requirements necessary to fulfill a definition he's holding in his own mind about what success is.

Grandeur, on the other hand, is something that is inherent in you because of the Nature of Being. It's a Wholeness, a Singularity, characterized by Excellence, characterized by Perfection—Perfectness of Symmetry, we'll say—perfect balance of form and outline and color and illumination and Spirit. It's characterized by Exquisiteness. Not exquisiteness that impresses, but Exquisiteness that constitutes the experience of Loveliness that is unsurpassable. And Loveliness is Love expressed. Everything that you're experiencing right now wherever you are, the nature of it is Love. Loveliness is what is characteristic of it—Loveliness far more profound than you can imagine. And it's not separate from your hands and your feet, and the room you're in and the things in the room.

But you know what? Like Paul, you've got to stop being so damn sure you know where the avocados are, so that you can look at what is right in the front of your face and actually see it, and know that it and the seeing of it are all part of the Singular Movement of Conscious Being, of God, of You, but not separate from each other—all the same thing.

Let's go to the book.

We could stop there and you could all leave and have a radically different week from any other week you've had, just on the basis of consistently and conscientiously remembering that God is a verb, and the verb means Being. And it's the Movement of Mind being Conscious, having what you would call the Conscious Experience of Being. And therefore, everything that you are having conscious experiences of, are one and the same—Living—the Living Conscious Experience of Being—not being a thing, but Being—a Living, Existing—and therefore, isn't foreign to you, isn't separate from you, is as totally lovable as you, is constituted of Love, just as you are.

And so there needs to be great inquisitiveness. And you need to not be lazy. Why put off the fuller Conscious Experience of what? Being. Being conscious of What Being Is—Mind unconfused about Its Infinite Conscious Experience. That's why it's called waking up. [finger snap] Lights going on. [finger snap] Illumination occurring. Seeing things clearly, instead of through a glass darkly. Let there be curiosity and inquisitiveness.

And if you're so damn sure that the avocados are in the refrigerator when they're not, if you're so damn sure that so-and-so is never going to change, catch yourself. Stop it! Abandon that confidence, that definition. And be willing to look outside the box, because not only are you not in the box, they're not in the box either. But you're not going to see what they are until you're willing to stop looking where you think you have to look. And you think you have to look where your very own definitions tell you a thing has to be.

Well, none of you would have enjoyed avocados in your sandwich if Paul had refused to look to see where the avocados were. And none of you will have a changed experience if you're not willing to look for the Evidence of Being in places and in styles, or characteristics, that you're not prone to be attentive to.

Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: The ego depends SOLELY on your willingness to tolerate it.

RAJ: Simple, short sentence.

What would happen if you weren't willing to tolerate it? It would disappear. It depends entirely, solely, on your willingness to tolerate it. You give it all the life it has. You see?

[laughing] As long as you're sure the avocados are in the refrigerator, you're in a box. You're in the box. You've got blinders on. And the sense of yourself that's so confident, will be the sense of yourself that you'll experience, as long as you're tolerating it, as long as you're actually choosing for it, as long as you're not conscientiously trying to think a little bigger, be a little bigger, behave as though there isn't a box, behave as though your definitions don't mean anything. Your definitions will bind you as long as you tolerate them.

You see? It's all about us—every single one of us. And no, that's not Paul saying that. The Truth in here is about every single Individuality. And you know what? The lies about us are the same lies about all of us.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you are willing to look upon your grandeur you CANNOT despair, and therefore you cannot WANT the ego.

RAJ: If you are willing to see the avocados where they are, you cannot despair. You'll be able to enjoy the sandwich. And therefore, you cannot want to think that the avocados are in the refrigerator which is empty of avocados. You see? When you have fulfillment, you cannot want lack. [laughing] You see, this isn't some spiritually deep thing here.

RAJ READING: If you are willing to look upon your grandeur you CANNOT despair, and therefore you cannot WANT the ego. Your grandeur is God's ANSWER to the ego because it...

RAJ: Your Grandeur.

RAJ READING: ...is true. Littleness and grandeur cannot coexist, nor is it possible for them to alternate in your awareness. Littleness and grandiosity...

RAJ: Not littleness and Grandeur.

RAJ READING: Littleness and grandiosity can and MUST alternate in your awareness since both are untrue, and are therefore on the same level.

RAJ: In other words, littleness and grandiosity are both elements inside the box, or inside your belief that a box exists in which you are choosing to live within and function within and delight in the challenge of.

But littleness and Grandeur cannot coexist because the one is the nonexistence of the other. You see? When you know where the avocados are, you no longer don't know where they are. You see? It's humorously simple.

Again.

RAJ READING: Littleness and grandiosity can and MUST alternate in your awareness since both are untrue, and are therefore on the same level.

RAJ: And another reason that they must alternate is because littleness is very uncomfortable, and so you find yourself needing to do something to overcome the discomfort. And instead of finding the clarity in which you see that the box doesn't actually exist, if instead of that, you seek to make yourself feel good while still in the box, you will have to find a way to puff yourself up and to talk yourself into feeling good about yourself. And so you will have to engage in processes that will allow you to fulfill criteria that you have established that identify the meaning of success. And that is how you achieve grandiosity in order to overcome the feeling of littleness. However, the grandiosity that you have created for yourself was not created by God and arose out of a misperception or a false perception of What You Truly Are. And therefore, the grandiosity, although temporarily achieved, will always be lost because something built on an illusion cannot stand. And so then, once again, you'll be experiencing littleness, and you will have to do something about it. And so it alternates back and forth eternally until you finally arrive at a point of somehow discovering that there ain't no box.

And as I said two weeks ago, my Birth, death, Resurrection, and Ascension forever undid that apparently absolute belief that everyone had been suffering from—that they were inside a box and that they were something they were not.

Again.

RAJ READING: Littleness and grandiosity can and MUST alternate in your awareness since both are untrue, and are therefore on the same level. Being the level of shift it is experienced as shifting, and extremes are its essential characteristic.

RAJ: You see, tomorrow Paul can go downstairs to the refrigerator, expecting to see something else there that might not be there and not find it, and then he'll have to face Susan who won't have forgotten, although Paul will like to conveniently forget that the same thing happened the day before. And so he hasn't learned anything yet. But what that means is that there is something to learn, and there is a benefit to be had if he will just go downstairs or do whatever he's doing without preconceptions. You see? Without thinking inside a box, and to be unconditionally open to a more all-inclusive Conscious Experience of Being—verb.

RAJ READING: Truth and littleness are DENIALS of each other because grandeur IS truth. Truth does not vacillate; it is ALWAYS true.

RAJ: The Movement of Being never vacillates. It always is.

RAJ READING: When grandeur slips away from you, you have replaced it with something YOU have made.

RAJ: A definition, an expectation, a concept, which you are giving preference to in place of saying or constantly being in the attitude of, "I, of myself, know nothing. I, of myself, have no capacity to experience the Conscious Experience of Being." You see, you are That. Being is What You Are and you have no choice about it. You don't have a capacity to be it. It already is you.

And you can't afford to replace that simple, unalterable fact with a crazy idea that says you do have a capacity to be what you want to be, to be what you define yourself as. And if you compulsively attach yourself to the project of being what you can't be, you will, for the time being, render yourself unconscious of What Really Is. And you will have this little fantasy, this little nightmare, that you call the human condition.

But you know what? I have to keep reminding you that the only way you can do this is by using the already-existing Elements of Creation and providing a bias to them, applying a bias to them. You've got to distort your perception of something that is Eternally Real. This is important. It's a valuable thing to understand, because it means that as soon as you stop applying the bias to it, What It Is will register with you. It doesn't require work. It requires less work. It requires you to stop applying a bias to Something That Is Eternally Unchangeable. That's work. It's not going to be work to get back in your Right Mind, to see Things As They Are. It's going to be you neglecting to apply the bias.

Again.

RAJ READING: When grandeur slips away from you, you have replaced it with something YOU have made. Perhaps it is the belief in littleness; perhaps it is the belief in grandiosity. Yet it MUST be insane because it is NOT true. Your grandeur will NEVER deceive you, but your illusions ALWAYS will. Illusions ARE deceptions.

RAJ: What? Deceptions your ego pulled on you? No. A deception you pulled on yourself by saying, "I'd like to have a moment to look at the Movement of Being and use the capacity I have as a Being to alter the course of the river a little bit. Ha, ha, God! [laughing] I gotcha to be what You weren't gonna be. Now I'm somebody!" You see?

Waking up... let's put it this way, there is no hereafter in which to wake up. As I said last week, the hereafter is here. My Presence after the crucifixion, after the Resurrection, was a demonstration of the hereafter here! The Kingdom of Heaven that you associate with the hereafter is here! It is what you are experiencing "through a glass darkly," but it is what you're experiencing.

Now, you know, after the meeting tonight, Paul could have a conversation with Sue and say, "Listen. We need to have a little more consistency here in how we handle the food in this house. And, you know, if the avocados go in the refrigerator, they go in the refrigerator. You don't put them someplace else. Otherwise we're going to have an understanding that every time you put the avocados where they don't belong, you're going to hear from me. And I'm going to make it as unpleasant as I can until you knuckle under and are consistent enough to put them where they belong, so that you and I don't have a discrepant experience with each other. And we can have harmony because we're always putting things where they belong. We're always putting them where I have determined they ought to be. We're always going to put them where we together are going to mutually agree that they will be." You see?

And now, what are we doing? [laughing] We are developing something for psychologists to study—the science of psychological human behavior and how to come about a harmonious experience through the practice of conscious, mindful control. You see? An infrastructure of proper behavior could begin to be established, when the answer is not to improve things inside the box, but to challenge the existence of the box entirely, so that no matter whether the avocados got left in the trunk, you'll know where the avocados are when you want them. You see?

Is some of this jelling a little bit more and making the Truth that's in here relevant so that the experience of What God Is becomes available in the simplest of daily events? I told Paul in the beginning, All of You—meaning "All of What You Are"—All of You is always functioning. All of You is always present. And All of You is always available. Now all of any one of you, all of What You Are, is Creation. All That Exists is some Aspect of the Infinitude of your what? Being—verb. Being. Existing. It's always all available to you. Not only where the avocadoes are, but where the Pope is. Not only where the avocadoes are, but the experience of what it's like to stand on the surface of Mars. The surface of Mars is part of the Infinitude of your Being. If it's always available to you and it's always present as you, you can have the Conscious Experience [finger snap] now.

Nothing, not anything, not any Aspect of the Infinitude of your Being which is inseparable from God Being, nothing of the Infinitude of You will be unavailable to you, because you're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it—you are at that Point. And what we're talking about tonight is disclosing how it is that you can begin to have the experience and understand yourself therefrom, instead of from the standpoint of who you definitely think you are, and how you definitely think things work, which cause you, like Paul, not to find the avocadoes because you were looking a foot and a half to the left. And he couldn't conceive that the avocadoes would not be in a refrigerator.

RAJ READING: Your grandeur will NEVER deceive you, but your illusions ALWAYS will. Illusions ARE deceptions. You cannot triumph, but you ARE exalted.

RAJ: Well, it's only someone little, who attempts grandiosity, that could feel they had triumphed over adversity, over the conditions of the box.

RAJ READING: You cannot triumph, but you ARE exalted.

RAJ: [laughing] Exalted. The blinders get ripped away. You can see more. Your frame of reference is exalted. It's not tiny by virtue of commitments you're holding on to that keep you seeing in a limited fashion. You are experiencing the fuller Conscious Experience of Being. Being.

RAJ READING: And in your exalted state you seek others like you and rejoice with them.

RAJ: Uh oh. I hear somebody saying, "Oh, boy! That would really be nice. I would love to meet some other people who think like me, you know. I would love not to have to associate with and deal with these people who are so ignorant of the Truth. Because it's so much work. It's so stressful."

Now you may think I'm digging deep for meaning here, but I'm not. And you need to see that this is included in this statement.

RAJ READING: You cannot triumph, but you ARE exalted. And in your exalted state you seek others like you and rejoice with them.

RAJ: I wish to see the Evidence of Love. Well, if you wish to see the Evidence of Love, you will seek for the Evidence of Love. And you will seek for it in others so that you can find that they are like you and you can rejoice with them.

You don't go off and leave the shitty bastards behind that made it so difficult for you, so you can find those who are already in this exalted state that you are and you won't have to put up with shit anymore. No. In your exalted state, you seek others. You look into your Brother's eyes—the bastard, the bitch, the one who's giving you hell, the one that's causing you so much stress—and you rejoice with them because you have sought for the Truth in them, and through diligence and persistence to see the Truth, you found it. If you were exalted because you've recognized there ain't no box, then you're going to look into your Brother's and Sister's eyes, who are still thinking they're in the box, and you're going to share the news with them so that they can see that they aren't in it either, and the two of you can rejoice together.

RAJ READING: It is easy to distinguish grandeur from grandiosity because love is returned, but pride is not.

RAJ: Love is inseparable from Grandeur because humility is the characteristic of Grandeur. And in the presence of humility, no one feels threat. And I promise you that any time any one of you experience an absence of threat, you feel loved.

Grandiosity, on the other hand, the characteristic of it is arrogant pride, self-satisfaction. Pride can't be shared. It's a private experience of [laughing] bloated self-appreciation.

RAJ READING: Pride will not produce miracles, and therefore will deprive you of your true witnesses to your reality.

RAJ: What are your True witnesses to your Reality? They are the messengers that return to you that you've sent out.

What reality? I'm going to say it this way. From what reality are you sending out your messengers? The reality of grandiosity? The reality of your personal private definitions? They will come back to you and confirm your perceptions, your ignorances.

But if your Reality is the experience of humility in which you make no claims about yourself but the Father's Claims About You by virtue of His expressing Himself as you, those constitute a Grandeur that you can feel and that you know is True About You, and you know you didn't manufacture. And from that experience, you send out different messengers, and thus you are not deprived of your True witnesses to your Reality.

RAJ READING: Truth is not obscure nor hidden, but its obviousness to YOU lies in the joy you bring to its witnesses, who SHOW it to you.

RAJ: How many of you have had the experience of being in a really bad mood and some happy bloke walks into the room and just showers you with the joy that they're feeling? You see? This does not witness to your reality, and it can really bug the hell out of you. And you will not respond to the witnesses for joy with joy, and thus you don't fulfill your Function of glorifying God.

RAJ READING: Truth is not obscure nor hidden, but its obviousness to YOU lies in the joy you bring to its witnesses, who SHOW it to you. They attest to your grandeur, but they cannot attest to pride because pride is not shared.

RAJ: And I'm adding: Pride cannot be shared.

As I said, it's a very private experience.

RAJ READING: God WANTS you to behold what He created because it is His joy.

RAJ: God wanted Paul to see the avocados [audience laughter] because they were there to be seen for what they were, to be used for the purpose they were there for. If God wants for Paul to see the avocados, He wants all of you to see the Presence of Being, the Presence of What He Is, the Presence of What (capital "B") Being Is in everything—the flower, the table, the leaves, the fingernails, the poncho, the chair, the socks. You see? You may call them something else when you see them for What They Truly Are. But the name is not what they are. What They Are is Real.

You know, there's a song, [singing] "Roll out the barrel." Well, roll out the curiosity. And you know what? If you do it this week, and there aren't major changes, you know what? There will have been one major change. You will have been using your mind in a new way that is utterly constructive. And so, it's not a test. It can be looked at as a matter of practical discipline to start using your mind in a way that has as its goal to see the Face of God here and now, to see the Kingdom of Heaven here and now, to see Grandeur of Being in the simplest of things that you encounter every day.

If you don't see a lot of brand-new things, all it means is that your previous habits are so ingrained that they are still taking precedence. But what they are causing you to see isn't real, and therefore it isn't something to be willing to settle for just because your really great, conscientious persistence during the coming week, didn't cause major transformation.

You know what? This piece of paper wants you to see What It Really Is. The petal on the flower wants you to see What It Truly Is. You say, "Well, maybe I could understand the petal of the flower because the flower is alive. But this piece of paper is inanimate. It's not alive. How could it have a want?" Because there ain't no such thing as matter. All Substance is Spirit. Spirit is God. Substance is Living. The Substance of Spirit is Love. Every single Idea in the Mind of God is experienceable, as I've been saying. And because Everything is an Idea, the Substance of which is Spirit, it is Conscious—Living—Conscious. It has an Intent to communicate its Meaning for Being. Its Meaning for Being—not for being a piece of paper, but for Being, simply Being. You see? Being, the Conscious Experience of Being, is a conscious experience of intimate relationship, conscious intimate relationship, with every single Idea in the Infinitude of Creation that you call "things."

Maybe you have trouble with the contents of this book, but the book is Spirit. It is an Idea that is experienceable as a book. As a book, it wants you to experience its reason for existing as a book, regardless of the content, but also including the content.

Start looking at everything as though it's alive—not matter alive, but an Idea. Not matter. A Living Idea. A Living, Conscious Idea that exists for the Purpose of expressing and extending its Meaning so that it can be recognized and experienced. You are living in the middle of a Living God. You are living in the middle of an unalterable, unchangeable, unlimited Movement of Being/Existing that's called God.

You say, "Well, how can I pray to a Movement? You know, I can pray to God because God is a thing, a noun. God is a thing I can send messages to. Now you say that God is a verb—Being, Movement. How can I pray to that?" Well, I said a number of years ago, prayer is saying "Yes" to God. It's the little molecules of water, that desperately want to see it (themselves) as unique and separate, yielding to the Movement of the river so that it finds itself as the Movement, because it lets the Movement be all there is to it, or all there is to them (the molecules).

Prayer is saying "Yes" to God. That's prayer. Not, "Will you do this for me?" You say, "God, help me to be what You want me to be." Or, "Help me not get in the way of What You're Being right here where I am, so that I might experience That, rather than the interesting, challenging, miserable experience I'm having by virtue of my choice to give preference to my definitions and my meanings and how I want things."

Okay.

I love you. And I look forward to being with you next week.

And if you don't understand what I've been saying, and if you're frustrated by what I've been saying, then acknowledge it, and then be willing to set down any emotional charge you have about it, and go to the Altar, go within to that Place of Excellence in you. Just remember, you can't take frustration there with you and still be able to learn. You can't take anger with you. And you can't take the confidence that there are no avocados downstairs because there aren't any in the refrigerators.

Don't go in there with confidences. Say, "I don't know what the hell is going on. I don't know what the heck anything means. I think I do, but I'm willing to acknowledge that I'm not enlightened at this moment, so therefore, I'm willing to set aside what I believe and I'm willing to set aside (the fact that) the emotions I'm experiencing because nothing is working the way I believe they ought to be working. And I am choosing to be willing to be quiet and listen. I know that the Truth wants to be known. I know it's my Birthright to know it, and so I'm going to get out of the way and be undefended against the experience, the influx of it." And then be willing to persist. If you don't hear the answer the first time, if you don't see the avocados the first time, go back again and look with less confidence even. They're there. The answers are there. They're in you.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

I'm going to start out with some good news. With all this talk about the ego and how it's not your friend, and so on, together with the sloppy way or careless way in which reference to the ego is made, it can seem that you have become an ego. "I am an ego. I have actually become something different from What God Created. And I'm living out a life that expresses ego-hood." And this definition of yourself as an ego becomes part of the box from which you experience being.

And because, through careless thinking, you think of yourself as an ego, and now you know that there's more to life than ego-hood, you think that you have to overcome this thing called "an ego." And it makes it sound as though you have to abandon what you are, you have to somehow stop being what you have become. It's possible for you to begin to think that your waking up is going to be the extinction of you, because the Real You is so radically different. And that's not something an ego wants to do—become extinct. And so there is a part of you that resists waking up, even though you are desiring to wake up.

And of course, [there is] this idea that Individuality (which is another word for Indivisibility) is going to disappear and you will drift into a blissful, undefinable, pink cloud of bliss where there will be no differentiation of any kind, just an experience of love and peace which your common sense tells you is just a more pleasant form of and perhaps a more beautiful form of a static experience—we could say a pleasant form of being dead.

Now, I've said before many, many times, the only thing that is confronting you, the only thing available to you to experience is the Kingdom of Heaven, which you're seeing clearly, or through a glass darkly. That idea allows you to begin to be able to look at everything with a curiosity you didn't have before, because you're seeing the Ultimate—you're just not seeing it in its Fullness. And it's easy for you to imagine that your capacity to see it more fully as What It Is, is available to you, and the only reason you haven't been experiencing it was because what you thought it was, was the only thing you thought it was, and there was no alternative to it.

Now, the equivalent of this, that will also be helpful to you, is for you to understand that you right now are the Christ, the Christ Mind, the Christ Consciousness, seeing everything clearly, or through a glass darkly. You're not an ego seeing things clearly or through a glass darkly. In other words, you are the Ultimate right now, experiencing the Ultimateness of you fully, or in a very limited fashion.

So you're not here to struggle to become the Christ. You're already that. You are already the Presence of Mind. You know, something happens, an emergency occurs, and somebody jumps in and does all the right things, while other people are standing around, dazed a little bit, immobilized, and people say, "Well, he had the presence of mind to respond appropriately." That's what the "Presence of Mind" is when I use that word.

You are the Presence of Mind. Not the Presence of a thing called a Mind, but the Presence of active Conscious Awareness, from which nothing escapes, in which everything is experienced, and experienced with correct perspective so that you are able to be appropriate at every moment.

Now, what I want to convey most clearly to you is that right at this moment, that is What You Are. You are the Presence of Mind in which every experience is available to you to see with clear perspective, True Perspective, and to be able to be appropriate at any given moment, at every moment. Either that is what is going on right now, or something less than that is going on right now. But the fact that something less than that is going on doesn't mean that you have become less. It's like you sitting in these chairs suddenly realizing that you don't just have to sit there. You have two legs. You can stand up, and you can run, and you can walk, and you can dance. It's as though a capacity is present that it hasn't occurred to you to utilize yet.

Do you see, though, that what I'm saying is that the Ultimate of You is present, being embodied ultimately, or less than ultimately? You've already arrived, because you never left What You Are. You never managed to become so out of sync with Reality that you became something brand-new that God never created.

Now if the Kingdom of Heaven is what you're experiencing right here, right now, and if you are the Presence of Mind that is God, then all that's left for you to do in order to wake up is to realize that it's utterly easy, because you are already what you hope to become. And every thing is already the Kingdom of Heaven.

And you're in it, and it's in you, because the Kingdom of Heaven is within you. So, no struggle. None of this is about struggle. None of this is about becoming.

As you go through this next week, I want you to carry this with you, and I want you, many times a day, as often as you can remember, to entertain the idea consciously, "I'm in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven. I'm already in the Ultimate Place. Wow! I want to see it. That's all. I want to see it. I want to experience it. And also, I am the Christ. I never did become something else that I've got to work out of being. I'm already the Christ experiencing and exercising my capacities in a limited fashion." What does this mean? It means that you are always engaged in Divine Being. You're always engaged right now, right here, in this quote "this lifetime" that you think is separated off from Eternity. You're already in this lifetime here and now...

PAUL: [pause] Just a moment. [pause]

RAJ: ...being the Divine One That You Are, [the] Divine One That God Is Being right there where you are.

This is why the Course says that the journey Home is a journey without distance. It's also a journey without improvement. It's a journey of not bettering yourself. It's just a journey, in so many words, of being without providing as many constraints upon yourself.

Here is an example. Many of you would love to teleport or levitate. It would make many things much easier, and certainly would affect your economy and the world, if oil was not needed. [small laugh] But what if simply walking around the room was an actually limited form of teleportation and levitation? Do you see what I'm saying? Right now everything you're doing is an embodiment of Ultimate Things which you think are human and material and physical and unspiritual and un-Ultimate. Now, if you were to consider that a simple thing like walking was something much more than walking, you would immediately find your movement, your normal everyday movement to be much more fascinating; something to pay much more attention to. You know, if you're levitating a millimeter a second, if you're teleporting a millimeter a second, there's not a great sense of movement, but you're still engaged in teleporting. Do you see what I'm saying?

You are already living the Life Divine and misinterpreting it—not seeing it fully. This is why you can dare to bring so much more curiosity to what you call your normal daily experience than you usually do. In fact, the majority of you find your everyday experience to be a significant distraction to your spiritual path. You cannot have a single experience in your day that isn't a Manifestation of Divine Ultimate Activity.

It's like a bunch of kids out in the universe, out in the play yard, and the majority of them are making sweeping movements from universe to universe, or galaxy to galaxy, and little Henry is teleporting a millimeter a second. And the other guys say, "Come on. Come on. Why are you moving so slow? You know, come on! Be more expansive in teleporting."

"Oh," he says. "Well, no. You know, if I move too far too fast, I miss everything in between. And I want to smell the roses. I want to savor everything." But if he savors everything slowly, he will get locked into a habit of savoring everything slowly. The other boys will eventually leave him alone. And he will be able to think, "Well, this is all there is. This is the way it is. I like it this way. I'm going to continue doing it this way. I'm not going to embody my Expansiveness, my All-Inclusiveness, my Universality." You see?

And perhaps some of the other boys exercising their full capacities come upon him and he talks so convincingly about the value of not overlooking things and taking the time to move slowly, that some of the other boys join him. They want to explore this possibility. Before long there's a group of boys only moving a millimeter every second, you see, and thinking this is great. And pretty soon the whole group forgets about being expansive. And even if those who are expansive drop in from time to time, they say, "No. No. I'm not interested." You see, when the Voice for Truth registers with you, you say, "Why that's too outlandish. No. No."

But my point is, there isn't anything about your daily existence that isn't absolutely Divine and that in which you are not utilizing your Ultimate Capacities as the Christ in a limited fashion. But you're being the Christ right now—just hesitantly, [laughing] slowly. But the point is that you aren't moving around because you are a physical body in a physical universe, that has a circuitry in it with electrical synapses and communication that cause muscles to contract, and so on, and that's the reason you're moving around. You're moving around because the intent to move, the intent to be in this way or that way is there, and that Intent is the Law of the Visibility and Tangibility of You. And Ultimate Things are what are appearing as you moving right now.

"Sure wish I could learn how to teleport." Well, damn it, you are teleporting every day. The moment any of you stands up from your chair, you are levitating and teleporting simultaneously. You already know how to do it. You just do it in tiny steps, and slow. And why? Because you really do believe that you're just a hunk of matter, that you're caught in this lifetime in a body which you will shed one day, and then have your freedom to express your Divine Capacities. Or you will finally learn enough or refine your soul enough to be able to enjoy your Divine Capacities.

You can't move your little finger without it being the Movement of Creation. Everything you're doing is being done by Ultimate Means. And I want you to remember that this week. And I want you not to forget it.

We're talking about miracles. Miracles are sudden shifts of perception. We're shifting perceptions right now, whether you forget about it in a half an hour, or not. We are shifting perceptions. It hadn't occurred to you before that when you move, here and now, in this lifetime, in this so-called material world, that the Movement is a Divine Capacity to be wherever the Intent is to be, and you arrive at that point by means of Divine Capacities, such as teleportation, such as levitation.

Think about it. I mean, contemplate it this week. You are already the Ultimate doing everything by Ultimate Means, but interpreting it entirely differently. And your interpretation that you are a body in a material universe, blinds you completely to the impulse to be in radically new ways, such as teleporting home instead of driving home. Or getting in your car, and teleporting yourself and your car into your garage, and then not using your car ever again, and not having to pay $3.00 a gallon for gas. You see?

Here and now is where to be radical, because here and now is where the Ultimate is occurring in slow motion. You see? Okay. In other words, your Grandeur is what is in operation right here and right now. You're just not letting it show. You're just reluctant to let it be embodied. Your reluctance is based upon false premises.

But you know what? It's not an ego choosing to do less. It's a Christ choosing to teleport in slow motion, and then doing it for so long that It temporarily forgets what Its Full Capacity is. But it doesn't change the fact that you are the Full Expression of God here and now, with nothing of your Capacity To Be withheld from you by the Father in His Expression of You, His Presencing of Himself right where you are.

So when we're talking about Grandeur, we're talking about your Divine Capacities that you are utilizing to do anything that happens, but which you don't recognize as Grandeur because you think that every single thing you do is a body using energy that can deplete the body and cause you to lose the capacity to continue indefinitely in that activity, requiring you to have rest, and to eat and get more nourishment because you get your nourishment from something out there that you put in here, and blah, blah, blah. You've got it all figured out wrong.

Okay. Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: Can your grandeur be arrogant when God Himself witnesses to it?

RAJ: It would only be arrogant if you were claiming something that God wasn't claiming for you.

The Father says, "I withhold nothing of WHAT I AM from you. ALL THAT I AM, You Are." So it's not arrogant for you to dare to go through your day teleporting or levitating a little bit more than a millimeter every half a minute.

RAJ READING: Can your grandeur be arrogant when God Himself witnesses to it? And what can be real that HAS no witnesses? What good can come of it? And if no good can come of it, the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...cannot use it. What He cannot transform to the Will of God does not exist at all.

RAJ: Now the only thing that the Holy Spirit can transform to the Will of God is your Christhood that you are only being willing to be conscious of in a very limited fashion. And so the Holy Spirit can take your sluggish teleportation and transform it into speedy Universal Movement, because it's something that's already the Truth About You.

And you could say, "Wow! The Holy Spirit has given me a capacity that I didn't have before. Wow! I must have been doing something right. I can't think of what it was in my spiritual path that triggered this sudden shift, but, Wow! I've been given something I didn't have before." No. Your Divine Capacity that you had been using in a limited fashion was uncovered in more of its Fullness to you by the Holy Spirit. And so the Holy Spirit turned your so-called limitation to your advantage.

RAJ READING: What He cannot transform to the Will of God does not exist at all.

RAJ: What He can transform to the Will of God is something that is already True About You that you're already utilizing, even though it's in a very limited fashion.

RAJ READING: Grandiosity is delusional because it is used to REPLACE your grandeur.

RAJ: So, what would grandiosity be? Well, grandiosity would be you not wanting to move so slowly, wanting to move faster, recognizing that the limitation was not legitimate, and so, you as a puny body that you think you are, begin to exercise and start going to track meets, and you get a trainer, and you work to break the 3-minute mile or the 4-minute mile.

Grandiosity is you, as what you think you are, working from within the box, working within your current definition of yourself, and exceeding the physical limits that you seemed to be bound by. And yet, all you've done is rearrange something inside the box without stepping out of the box.

You know, you might start opening yourself up to the fact that you are already levitating and teleporting, by not trying to go from here to Paris, or even here to the next room, but by going up a flight of stairs expending less energy because you're willing to go up the stairs without thinking that your body is carrying you up the stairs by virtue of physical energy. Just go up and down stairs, or engage in a physical activity that you engage in every day, like vacuuming or mowing the lawn, and have the inquisitiveness to see it happen with less physical effort, and therefore, less depletion. There are many creative ways to approach this, but you won't even do it if you think you're just a body, and Divine Capacities are for somewhere in the afterlife.

RAJ READING: Grandiosity is delusional because it is used to REPLACE your grandeur.

RAJ: In other words, the attempt to break the 4-minute mile, the attempt to come up with faster and faster jets, the ability through technology to develop a quote "transporter" unquote, as in Star Trek, that will get you from one place to another instantaneously, is a form of grandiosity, because it's an attempt to do something that's actually Divine without engaging Divinity in any way; managing to accomplish something Divine as a body that has nothing to do with God, and which someday, as they so sweetly say, when someday you lay it aside. Isn't that repulsive? [some audience amusement] "Someday when you lay it aside."

RAJ READING: Grandiosity is delusional because it is used to REPLACE your grandeur. Yet what God has created cannot BE replaced. God is incomplete without you because His grandeur is total, and you cannot BE missing from it.

RAJ: Now this isn't some nice, theoretical idea—that:

RAJ READING: ...His grandeur is total, and you cannot BE missing from it.

RAJ: You see, for it to be theoretical, it would be like, "Well, yeah, but I know I'm in the mortal condition right now. But I also know that I'm held in the Mind of God as What I Truly Am." You know, the Mind of God "somewhere else," unrelated to this human condition that you're experiencing for the time being until "you gently lay your body aside."

RAJ READING: ...His grandeur is total, and you cannot BE missing from it.

RAJ: That means you're not missing from it. Right now you're not missing from it. You, right here, right now, are not missing from it. You are the Presence of God experiencing Life by means of Divine Capacities, but giving it definitions that exclude their Divinity, and thus rendering yourself unconscious of the full scope of your Capacities.

"Well, I'm just an ego, you know." No, you're not. "Well, I've got a lot to learn." No, you don't.

The simplest... remember this, the simplest acts that you engage in employ Divine Capacities and nothing else.

RAJ READING: ...His grandeur is total, and you cannot BE missing from it.

You are altogether irreplaceable in the Mind of God. No-one else can fill your part of It, and while you leave your part of It empty,...

RAJ: By dallying with the ego. By playing with this fantastic idea that you exist independent of God.

RAJ READING: ...while you leave your part of It empty, your eternal place merely waits for your return.

RAJ: Which is another way of saying, it awaits your recognition of It—not that you're going to journey back to It.

RAJ READING: God, through His Voice,...

RAJ: The Voice for Truth. The Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...reminds you of It, and God Himself keeps your extensions safe within It.

RAJ: You know what? If you're going through every aspect of your day employing Divine Capacities, then you are succeeding, even if it's in limited fashion, to be the Movement that expresses the Christ That You Are that constitutes Creation. And even though this happens unknown to you, all that you are expressing is held in trust for you to experience, once you decide to open up your eyes and get a little bit bigger view.

If you walk up the stairs as a body, getting tired because you're walking up the stairs, you are at the same time the Ultimate, the Christ. The movement is levitation/teleportation combined. And those Divine Capacities being used, if I may put it that way, constitute an affirmation or confirmation of God—an embodiment by virtue of it being an Act of Divine Life. And that affirmation or confirmation never fades. It is an eternal confirmation.

And the awareness of it will become yours when you stop this silly habit of thinking that right now you're not the Ultimate; you really are just a body trudging up the stairs every day, and down the stairs, and up the stairs, and down the stairs, and stressing your heart and moving yourself closer to the grave, because your body is physical and doesn't have Divine Capacities of regeneration. And therefore, you know, your daily activities are part of what they jokingly call "the terminal disease called 'life.'"

RAJ READING: God, through His Voice, reminds you of It,...

RAJ: Your Eternal Place in Him.

RAJ READING: ...and God Himself keeps your extensions safe within It. Yet You do not know them until you return to them. You CANNOT replace the Kingdom,...

RAJ: Well, why would it say that? Since when did [laughing]... since when did any of you think you were engaged in "replacing the Kingdom"? "Well," you say, "That would be a very arrogant idea." [small laugh] But when you're insisting on calling the Kingdom something else called a physical universe that started from a big bang, that will slowly reach a point of ultimate expansion and then fall back in on itself and everything will cease to exist, and start all over again—when you do that, you've replaced the Kingdom with a different definition of It. And then you've replaced It further by believing your definition and making commitment to your definition. And in the process of all of this, you confirm further your ignorance of What It Is and What You Are.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT replace the Kingdom,...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: Even though the human condition is evidence of the fact that you try.

RAJ READING: ...and...

RAJ: Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...you cannot replace YOURSELF.

RAJ: But you've tried. You didn't know you were trying, because, you know, your parents taught you, your physicists, your scientists teach you, your doctors teach you that you are a body. And here's how the body works, and here's what physics says about it. And for every expenditure of energy, there's a cost, and that cost must be replaced by food, or medicine, or oxygen, or rest. You see? So you have been replacing yourself.

But it says:

RAJ READING: You CANNOT replace the Kingdom, and you cannot replace YOURSELF. God, Who KNOWS your value, would not have it so, and so it is NOT so. Your value...

RAJ: In other words, the Meaningfulness of your Presence.

RAJ READING: ...is in GOD'S Mind, and therefore not in yours alone.

RAJ: You all do go around with a picture of your value. And you try to live your life so as to demonstrate more and more value—more and more of your value. You see? But once again that's a value created inside the box that doesn't exist. And it requires the mutual agreement of others to confirm, in order for you to be able to believe it. Because, after all, if they don't recognize your worth, you haven't demonstrated it yet. And therefore, because you haven't demonstrated it, it isn't valid. It isn't there yet.

RAJ READING: Your value...

RAJ: Though, that's outside the box, that has nothing to do with the box.

RAJ READING: ...is in GOD'S Mind, and therefore not in yours alone.

RAJ: The value of you that's in your mind is a mind you have fantasized, is a value you have fantasized. And so, yes, you have to arrive at a point where you abandon your personal evaluation of yourself. Some of you suffer from a valuation of yourself that is too great, because it's not Real. And others of you suffer from a valuation of yourself that is too little. And either valuation—one that's inflated but not Real, and one that is deflated that is not Real—is nonsense, is meaningless, is a big fat zero. So either evaluation that you apply to your[self], any evaluation you apply to yourself must be let go of.

RAJ READING: Your value is in GOD'S Mind, and therefore not in yours alone.

RAJ: You abandon the one that is in yours alone, and you just accept the fact that your Value, your Meaningfulness, is Infinitely Divine and Divinely Infinite, and it's held in place by God's Determination of What You Are. And the measurement He uses for His Determination of you is What He Is. And He knows that you are nothing less than What He Is, because He is the One expressing You, being You.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: To accept yourself as God created you...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: As God sees you and determines you to be.

RAJ READING: ...cannot be arrogance because it is the DENIAL of arrogance.

RAJ: You see that? Arrogance is you inside a little box trying to be more of what you think you are, but aren't. That's arrogance—plain, pure and simple—not complicated, not otherworldly.

RAJ READING: To accept your littleness IS arrogant because it means that you believe YOUR evaluation of yourself is TRUER than God's.

RAJ: And you say, "Well, but I didn't know that my evaluation... that I thought my evaluation of myself was truer than God's, because my parents told me what I was. And everyone else tells me what I am. And, indeed, to me it looks like that's what I am. And I don't remember ever in this lifetime determining to see myself in a different way from the way God was seeing me." Well, I'm sorry. You may not remember when you did it, but you did it. There was a point at which you said, "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way. I would like to explore the interesting experience of determining what things are and what I am." And so now you're undoing it. Now you're undoing it because you are tired of the experience, and you are inviting in the Voice for Truth. You are inviting in my Voice to tell it to you the Way It Is, so that you can stop dallying with the ego.

Now, continuing, it says:

RAJ READING: Yet if truth is indivisible your evaluation of yourself must BE God's.

RAJ: What that means is that the little you that doesn't really exist, in the little box that doesn't really exist, can't actually make an evaluation of anything, much less evaluate something that doesn't exist. So what you call your evaluation of yourself is tinkling brass. It's nonsense. It, therefore, is nothing in actuality. And that's why you've got to not continue to value the definition you've made-up.

And because it's nothing, it means that God's Will is still in place, as a Singularity, as the only thing going on. And you still are right at this moment the Christ engaging in Life by means of Divine Capacities and simply misinterpreting them. So if Truth is indivisible, a Singularity, your evaluation of yourself, the only evaluation that could constitute an actual evaluation, must be God's. There isn't any other evaluation that could be True.

You're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you're at that Point and must evaluate yourself therefrom, must understand yourself therefrom. And that's what we're talking about today. We're talking about the fact that right now you are the Christ. This is the evaluation. And every act you engage in is an act employing Divine Capacities. You've just been interpreting them in an extremely limited way.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You did not establish your value, and it NEEDS no defense. Nothing can attack it or prevail over it. It does not vary. It merely IS. Ask the Holy Spirit WHAT it is and He will tell you,...

RAJ: Oh, you get that? You go where the answer is. Where do you go? To that which is nothing more than your Right Mind—the Holy Spirit. Isn't that utterly intelligent?

RAJ READING: Ask the Holy Spirit WHAT it is and He will tell you, but do not be afraid of His answer, for it comes from God. It IS an exalted answer because of its Source,...

RAJ: Meaning that its Source is not an imagined you inside an imaginary box that doesn't exist.

RAJ READING: It IS an exalted answer because of its Source, but the Source is true and so is Its answer. Listen and do not question what you hear, for God does not deceive.

RAJ: The Voice for Truth is the Voice for God. The Voice for Truth does not lie because it is the Voice for God, and God tells the Truth. God tells it As It Is. That's what that means. Not the Truth [sung in a loud, ascending, musical, trumpet-like voice, as though Truth's arrival is being announced by the sounding of trumpets] da ta da ta da dum. But He tells it As It Is—simple as apple pie, normal as apple pie—but radically different from the way you've been thinking about it.

RAJ READING: He would have you replace the ego's belief in littleness with His own exalted answer to the question of your being, so that you can cease to question it and KNOW it for what it IS.

RAJ: You don't have to go far to find something as interesting as good science fiction. You don't have to go very far for experiences that are radically new and transformational. Everything you're experiencing is an experience in your Mind. I'm not going to say, "a Mind," because "Mind" is not a noun; it's a verb. It's a Movement of Consciousness. Everything is in your Mind. Everything is your Mind in Movement. And your Mind in Movement is the only Mind there is, in Movement, which is God.

So you don't have to go any further than your own Mind to find God or yourself. And you don't have to go any further than your own Mind, which means turning toward the Altar, going to the Place of Excellence in you, and inquiring of the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind, as to what the Truth is. Understanding that the Truth you're going to be told, will have everything to do with everything you're already experiencing—like walking up stairs, like standing up out of your chair—telling you What It Is Truly, and, as I'm telling you today, conveying to you that that which is aware of it and that which is engaged in it, is and always has been the full-fledged Christ, the Sons and Daughters of God, if you will, being What They Divinely Are, using Divine Capacities that are what constitute them fully, or in very hesitant ways. But you've been the Christ being the Christ, utilizing Christly Capacities to do everything that you thought was un-Christlike and sinful and never hitting the mark. Even when you have not hit the mark, you've done it with your Divine Capacities.

Sure, you can toss a tin can into the trashcan and miss the trashcan, or you can toss it in the trashcan and get it into the trashcan. Either way, it doesn't mean that two different characters did it—that when it missed the trashcan, it was an ego—and that when it went in the trashcan, it was the Christ. And it didn't go into the trashcan because you have no meaning and you are lost temporarily—you have strayed from God and you're experiencing the penalties from having strayed from God. No. It just means that the Christ has thrown the can, it missed the trashcan, and the Christ says, with all the Christ's Divine Capacities, "Well, you missed the trashcan because you're an ego." You see? [small laugh]

The Christ has the capacity to say anything the Christ wants, and believe what is said. Do you see what I am saying so clearly to you? That whether you are living What You Are clearly, or through a glass darkly, you are the Christ doing it all.

So you have already arrived. And all that's left is for you to be more curious about what these Divine Capacities are that you're employing every day, thinking that they're just physical capacities, which will ultimately create physical incapacities for you, because you aren't Divine. You see?

Oh, I see over here on the next page, the word "ephemeral." Well, that's a really neat spiritual word, isn't it? Ephemeral is so nonmaterial, so unrelated to, you know, carrying out the trash, or walking up and down the stairs. And we've been reading here about Grandeur. We've been talking about that God is incomplete without you, and you cannot be missing from His Grandeur. Could have gone way off on a big head trip about all of this grandiose, spiritual subject matter. But it's all about you. And it's all about you right here, right now, needing to dare to look at everything you're experiencing with eyes that are different from your conditioned expectations, with a curiosity.

And I've told you today why you can expect that curiosity to be responded to in ways that allow you to see yourself and be yourself in new ways, which doesn't mean be yourself by ascending into Heaven, but you ascending up the stairs as you carry the groceries in with no effort. You don't have to do it as a body anymore. You never did. And you never have. You never have. You get it? You've always levitated and teleported everywhere you've moved. You didn't teleport a body. Form identified the Movement of Mind.

Waking up is really interesting, isn't it?

Okay.

I look forward to being with you all next week. And I love you.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Well, the new Pope gave his first homily this morning. And I'm aware that there are thoughts and discussions going on that, since the Fatima prophecies indicate that subsequent to them there would only be two more Popes, maybe, possibly, do you think, the Pope Benedict may just be the reappearing of the Christ? Might he have more significance than otherwise might be expected?

Well, my only response to that is, you're here, aren't you? You are the Christ, and you're here. You have come. Is that not what we've been talking about for months? You see, it's very easy to slip back into old habits—looking out there, waiting for Him to come, waiting for the One who has the answers. Well, that one is each of you.

Let me ask this. If Pope Benedict was the Second Coming, or if Maitreya was the Second Coming, or if any other Individuality was the Second Coming, do you think that he would walk in and say, "Your problems are solved"? Do you think that you all would suddenly be swept up in illumination?

Well, how honest are you all willing to be? How many of you really want to be swept up into illumination? How many of you want to let go of your cherished concepts? How many of you would want to find yourself having a different experience of yourself? In other words, how many of you would really be willing to change? You would sort of be put on the spot—all of you. "Oh, my God. [small laugh] It's time! The time has come. I have to wake up now. No more dilly-dallying." And then, in the back of your mind, you rapidly think about where you put those boots with the real sturdy spiked heels that you will be able to use to dig in as you're pulled forward faster than you want to be pulled. Many of you would say, "This is not fair. I'm not supposed to be forced to wake up. Maybe it's my Birthright, but nobody has the right to force me to do it when they say to do it.”

Stop waiting. Stop waiting for someone else. Stop waiting for me to come out there. I’m already coming in the quiet of your very own minds. I’m already here to help you show up as Who You Are, and stop pretending that you aren’t, and stop believing that you aren’t, and stop acting like you aren’t.

You’re here. The Christ has come. You’re here. You exist. You are conscious, now, on this planet, on this day, in this moment of Conscious Awareness. And in this moment of Conscious Awareness is just as good as any other moment of Conscious Awareness to stop the farce, to stop pretending that you aren’t What You Are and that somebody else will be it for you.

Pope Benedict is the Christ just like you are the Christ. How much of it he will be willing to embody remains to be seen, just as how much of it you are willing to embody remains to be seen. So tend to yourself. And don’t delay on attending to yourself because you’re waiting for so-and-so to appear, or to see if so-and-so will be the Christ, if so-and-so will step up to the plate. You see? It’s just a distraction. It’s all a distraction from your finding yourself in a place of delightful discovery of What You Are. The delightful discovery of going up the stairs without moving your feet, three inches off the ground all the way up. It’s discovering that you have the capacity to look at what your old habits of perception would have determined to be un-Godlike, and seeing God there, and having the pleasure of seeing God there and not being fooled anymore into believing that it’s something else, and then suffering from your belief. It’s a pleasant experience. It’s an experience of discovery.

So I just wanted to take a moment to get everybody back on track. Let Pope Benedict be the Christ. Let Joe Blow down the street be the Christ. And you bring your attention more significantly within you, paying attention to your capacity to be What You Already Divinely Are with enough curiosity to let more of What You Divinely Are into your frame of reference.

This is a course in sudden shifts of perception. Well, [laughing] hey, you can all be very happy if Pope Benedict has sudden shifts of perception. But until you have yours, so what? You’re not having your joy. And not having your joy means that you will not be experiencing the Fulfillment of Being—remember, verb—the Fulfillment of Being that it’s yours to be. And that’s what I want for you and that’s what you want for yourselves. Don’t delay it by waiting for someone else to do it.

Okay. Let’s go to the book.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: Chapter 10 THE IDOLS OF SICKNESS]

RAJ READING: The Inclusiveness of Creation

[Editor's Note: In the second edition, the following heading appears here instead: Introduction In the first edition there is no heading but the content is still an introduction.]

RAJ READING: Nothing beyond yourself can make you fearful or loving because nothing IS beyond you.

RAJ: Now let's go back to the first three words and get the emphasis in the right place. The wrong place is "nothing beyond you." Beyond you. Nothing out there. Nothing beyond you can make you fearful or loving.

And here's the correct emphasis.

RAJ READING: [with Raj's emphasis] Nothing beyond YOURSELF can make you fearful or loving because nothing IS beyond you.

RAJ: This is important because you always determine for yourself whether an experience is a fearful or a loving one, whether an experience is one that should cause you fear or inspire love in you. It is not the experience that determines it. It's the definitions you give.

RAJ READING: [with Raj's emphasis] Nothing beyond YOURSELF can make you fearful or loving because nothing IS beyond you.

RAJ: You are a Singularity. You are the Presence of Mind that is Mind being Consciousness. Nothing is going on outside of that, because there is no outside to it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Time and eternity are both in...

RAJ: Where?

RAJ READING: ...your minds, and WILL conflict until you perceive time solely as a means to REGAIN eternity.

RAJ: Time isn't out there. Eternity isn't out there. Consciousness is Infinite and All. It is, therefore, ever-present. Omnipresent. And Omnipresence is Eternity.

Now, another way of saying this is, instead of:

RAJ READING: Time and eternity are both in your minds...

RAJ: Illusion and Truth are both in your minds.

RAJ READING: ...and WILL conflict until you perceive time...

RAJ: An illusion.

RAJ READING: ... solely as a means to REGAIN eternity.

RAJ: What is Real.

RAJ READING: You cannot do this as long as you believe that ANYTHING which happens to you is caused by factors OUTSIDE yourself.

RAJ: See, this is why it's so important to consciously embrace a shift of perception instead of just waiting for it to come. You can consciously embrace identifying yourself as a physical body, a tiny thing in the middle of a huge universe, or you can identify yourself with the Conscious Awareness That You Are in which all experiences are going on. You see?

You're all easily overwhelmed by the Infinity of Creation, the diversity of it, the incredible beauty. No matter how close up you get, or how far back you stand, you all get overwhelmed with all of this stuff, all of this conscious experience. And you don't let it register with you that all of it is going on in your Mind. Or, better put, all of it is going on in Mind, in the Conscious Experience of Being.

You're not a small object in the middle of billions, trillions, gazillions of other objects, infinitely. You're the overlooked, [laughing] ignored Mind in which all of these experiences are going on. You are the boundaryless Mind; this very Conscious Awareness that you're experiencing as you listen to me speak and hear the sound of Paul's voice and see the things in the room.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You must learn that time is solely at YOUR disposal, and that nothing in the world can take this responsibility from you.

RAJ: Well, what responsibility? The responsibility to use time to regain Eternity. [laughing] You can use the time you seem to have to waste time, or you can use the time to wake up. You can use time to stay in the illusion a little bit longer, or you can use time by means of giving your attention to those things that will promote your Awakening. You see?

You can exist in fear of what will happen. You can exist in fear of what your government is going to do, or another government is going to do, or what an axis of evil is going to do, or a certain race of people is going to do, or whether or not a meteor is going to come and destroy the whole earth. You can exist in a myriad of thoughts. You can exist in a practice of placing your attention on things that will not promote a sudden shift of perception. You see? Or you can spend time giving your attention to those things which will promote a sudden shift of perception. You can give your attention to being a tiny, miniscule, little thing in the middle of an unpredictable universe, or you can give your attention to the idea that you are the Conscious Awareness in which all conscious experiences are occurring.

And you don't have to imagine being Conscious Awareness, because you know right at this moment you are conscious and you're experiencing being conscious. That's not some radical, ethereal idea. You are right now conscious.

You say, "I'm alive." But that means, "I'm conscious of being. I'm having conscious experiences."

You have, you say, a mind. And I'm saying Mind, that Mind is What You Are. And that Mind is boundaryless. Right now, these ideas promote sudden shifts of perception.

RAJ READING: You must learn that time is solely at YOUR disposal, and that nothing in the world can take this responsibility from you.

RAJ: And I'm adding: Of using that time constructively for the purpose of nurturing sudden shifts of perception that will constitute waking up.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You can VIOLATE God's laws in your imagination,...

RAJ: Only place you can violate God's Laws—in your imagination.

RAJ READING: ...but you cannot ESCAPE from them.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "ESCAPE them" instead of "ESCAPE from them."]

RAJ: What are God's Laws? Well, you might say, "Well, there [is] 'Thou shalt not kill.' That 'Thou shalt not commit adultery.' 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife.'" It's a lot of no-no's, isn't it?

But God's Laws are that Love prevails. Love is the Law. The Being of Love is your Function. The capacity to be What You Are is inherent in you and can never be taken away. And What You Are as What I Am Being right there where you are is All There Is of you and it's everything. And it's all-inclusive. And not a single Brother or Sister, or leaf, or ant, or planet, or solar system, is left out of it. Nor is your Brother's Mind left out of it. You are all joined totally and completely.

Now these are God's Laws, because these are What The Truth Is. The Truth, let's say, the unchangeableness of Truth is God's Law. You see?

RAJ READING: You can VIOLATE God's laws in your imagination, but you cannot ESCAPE from them.

RAJ: In other words, the Truth About You remains the Truth About You, no matter what you imagine. That's not complicated, is it?

RAJ READING: They were established for your protection, and are as inviolate as your safety.

God created nothing beside you and nothing beside you exists, for you are part of Him. What except Him CAN exist? Nothing BEYOND Him...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...can happen because nothing EXCEPT Him is real.

RAJ: When it says, "God created nothing beside you," it means, "God created nothing unlike you." God is a Singularity, and All of Creation reflects that Singularity. All of Creation is that Singularity rendered experienceable.

RAJ READING: Nothing BEYOND Him can happen because nothing EXCEPT Him is real. Your creations add to Him as YOU do, but nothing is added that is different because everything has always BEEN. What can upset you except the ephemeral,...

RAJ: Everybody know what "ephemeral" means? Something that's short-lived; something temporary.

RAJ READING: What can upset you except the ephemeral, and how can the ephemeral be real if you are God's ONLY creation and He created you eternal?

RAJ: Meaning not temporary; not short-lived.

You see, that which is temporal has to be an illusion. Anything you see that seems to come and go is a misperception of an Eternally Divine Idea in the Mind of God.

What can upset you except that which isn't Real, believing that it's Real.

RAJ READING: What can upset you except the ephemeral, and how can the ephemeral be real if you are God's ONLY creation and He created you eternal? Your holy will establishes EVERYTHING that happens to you. EVERY response you make to EVERYTHING you perceive is up to you because your will...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...determines your perception of it.

RAJ: Can you understand this? This whole idea expressed that somebody gives you a bunch of lemons, what do you do? Complain about it, or make lemonade. All depends on where you're standing and what your attitude is. You can either see it as a problem or an opportunity.

RAJ READING: EVERY response you make to EVERYTHING you perceive is up to you because your will determines your perception of it.

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: Your holy will establishes EVERYTHING that happens to you.

RAJ: Does it establish that you get a bunch of lemons? No.

But you know what? As I mentioned last week, you are the Christ, you are going through your days employing Capacities that are absolutely Divine to have an experience that is either limited or unlimited. But at all times you are the Totality, the Ultimate of what God has created right there where you are.

So:

RAJ READING: Your holy will establishes EVERYTHING that happens to you.

RAJ: And if you use your holy will to insist that you are tiny—a little, tiny hunk of flesh born of woman and a few days and full of trouble—that will be your experience, because your holy will determines how you're going to experience anything. You can use it well, or you can use it poorly, but it doesn't change the fact that that which is using it is Ultimate—the Christ, the Presence of God.

RAJ READING: EVERY response you make to EVERYTHING you perceive is up to you because your will determines your perception of it.

RAJ: Now, you don't have two kinds of will. You don't have a human will and a Divine Will.

You have a Divine Will which you're using well or poorly. That's all there is to it. Become clear about this so that you can take responsibility for your experiences, or so that you can take responsibility, better responsibility for how you're using your Divine Mind. Because, as you begin to use it well, you will have fewer and fewer distressing experiences, or, conversely, poor behavior on the part of others will distress you less and less, because you're in a balanced frame of mind, which, because it is undisturbed, constitutes the Presence of Mind that knows how to be appropriate under the circumstances. And as a result, be able to be an agent for change, for correction.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God does not change His Mind about YOU, for He is not uncertain of HIMSELF. And what He knows CAN be known because He does not know only for Himself.

RAJ: Now, why would it talk about God not changing His Mind? Because you change your minds all the time. And God is your measuring stick. God is the actual measuring stick of Who and What You Are.

So it's helpful to know that:

RAJ READING: God does not change His Mind about YOU, for He is not uncertain of HIMSELF.

RAJ: That means that if you find yourself changing your mind frequently, you may know that you are not using your mind well. If your Brother is the Christ, there's nothing other than that to think about him. There's nothing other than that to look for in him. There's nothing other than that—and I'm going to say this very carefully—there's nothing other than that to hold him to. There's nothing other than that to reflect back to him, even if he's behaving in a totally inconsistent way. You've got to find a way not to have to change your mind anymore, because God didn't give you that capacity, not having it Himself. And He couldn't embody anything unlike Himself in the Extension of Himself called you.

RAJ READING: God does not change His Mind about YOU, for He is not uncertain of HIMSELF. And what He knows CAN be known because He does not know only for Himself.

RAJ: What does that mean? It means that when you look at your Brother and you see something distressing there, you say, "Wow, he's not very clear," or "Wow! He's really in a bad space," or "Wow! He's really a bad person," or "Wow! He is a very dishonest person. I must be careful about him," well, as you go through these thoughts and feelings and build up a case against your Brother, you are absolutely disallowing yourself from seeing What God Is Being right there. You're saying that What God Is Being right there is not available to be known, because you, knowing what he's really like, had to keep yourself in a state of defense so as not to be overwhelmed by or abused by your Brother.

Now the only reason you would come to the conclusion that the use of your attention must be put to defending yourself against your Brother is because you don't think that What God Is Being right there is there to be experienced or known, because if you thought that it was, you really would get busy giving your attention to recognizing it.

But it says here:

RAJ READING: ...what He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...knows CAN be known because He does not know only for Himself.

RAJ: His Knowing is the only Conscious Awareness, true Conscious Awareness of anything that you can have. Anything else is something you made-up with your imagination.

So, you know when you get up each day and when you look at the world, you need to remember that What God Knows—and everything you see is the result of His Knowing—the Effect, the Image and Likeness, the Manifestation of His Knowing—Whatever God Knows is available and can be known right now, right here, by you.

RAJ READING: ...because He does not know only for Himself.

RAJ: His Knowing is what you will find yourself experiencing when you are in your Right Mind. Which is what? The Holy Spirit. It is nothing less than you're in the Right Mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...created you for Himself, but He gave you the power to create for YOUR self so you would be like Him. That is WHY your will is holy.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "so you could be like Him" because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as "so you would be like Him" as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: And remember, it is your will, your holy will that you use either immaculately well or poorly, and as a result, you determine for yourself what you will experience. That means that you will determine for yourself whether you're going to experience the Kingdom of Heaven, or Reality, as What It Is or what you've made it up to be. That's all.

RAJ READING: He created you for Himself, but He gave you the power to create for YOUR self so you would be like Him. That is WHY your will is holy. Can anything exceed the Love of God? Can anything, then, exceed YOUR will? Nothing can reach you from beyond it because, being in God,...

RAJ: In other words, inseparable from God.

RAJ READING: ...YOU encompass everything.

RAJ: You, as Mind, encompass everything. Everything is being experienced in the Singularity that is Conscious Awareness. You are experiencing the Ultimate at every moment, even in what you call “this lifetime.” Well, you see, you’re not in a lifetime; you’re in Mind. You could say, you are, for lack of better words, in the Conscious Awareness that is conscious of a world. And in actuality, you’re not in that Mind; you are that Mind. That Presence of Mind is the constituting Presence of you. It’s What You Are.

RAJ READING: Nothing can reach you from beyond it...

RAJ: Meaning your will.

RAJ READING: ...because, being in God, YOU encompass everything. Believe this, and you WILL realize how much is up to you.

RAJ: Oh, that can sound like a humungous burden—responsibility. “You will realize how much is up to you,” is like, “Well, everything is up to me!” But you know what? If it’s up to you, then it isn’t up to anybody else. You immediately become free of others’ assertion of human will over you that you think you have to defend yourself against. And suddenly life has become utterly simple. There’s no battle.

RAJ READING: ...YOU encompass everything. Believe this, and you WILL realize how much is up to you.

RAJ: This is like the relieving answer is it’s all up to you. It’s not up to anybody else at all.

And so I’m free in the quietness of the Presence of Mind That I Am to come to clarity. That’s the only determining factor. And so, instead of being a struggle with everyone, and the laws of the community, and the laws of the land, whether they seem to be just or unjust, all it amounts to is you being able, without all the distraction, to give your attention by your will, by your choice, to that which will promote sudden shifts of perception—miracles—the markers of Awakening. Suddenly everything has become simpler, not more difficult.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When anything threatens your peace of mind, ask yourself, “Has God changed His Mind about me?” Then ACCEPT His decision, for it is indeed changeless, and...

RAJ: Here’s where you do your part.

RAJ READING: ...refuse to change your mind about YOURSELF.

RAJ: Well, some of you might say, "Well, I don't change my mind about myself. I'm very consistent. I am very dependable. Everyone knows me. Everyone knows they can depend upon me to be who I am." But what you have to remember is that if this definition of who you are that's so dependable and everybody can count on wasn't arrived at through union with the Holy Spirit, then you've already changed your mind about yourself.

If you constantly go around and you say either, "I'm very competent and I do everything well," or you say, "I really am not very competent and I'm always doing things wrong. And there's no hope for me. I am dependably incompetent," either way, you've made a definition of yourself. What you're saying hasn't arisen out of a direct experience of the Place of Excellence in you that is the Presence of God that you're able to recognize as the Presence of God, and so you've already changed your mind about yourself from What God Knows About You. You see what I'm saying?

RAJ READING: ...ACCEPT His decision, for it is indeed changeless, and refuse to change your mind about YOURSELF. God will never decide AGAINST you, or He would be deciding against Himself.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: At Home in God]

RAJ READING: The reason you do not know YOUR creations is simply that you would decide against them as long as your minds are split, and to attack what you have created is impossible. But remember that it is AS IMPOSSIBLE FOR GOD.

RAJ: What does that mean?

RAJ READING: The reason you do not know YOUR creations is simply that you would decide against them as long as your minds are split,...

RAJ: Well, what are your Creations? A design you made? An object you molded? No.

Your Creations are Movements of Love, I'm going to put it that way; actions that have arisen out of a genuine Connection With Love in you. Creation is the Movement of Truth that you have allowed through; actions that express Truth that you Know. Creations literally are whatever proceed from a Connectedness With The Infinite, a Connectedness With The Divine, no matter how limited the Connection may have been, or how unlimited it may have been.

Paul is in the Act of Creation right now. Because he loves—and I will put it this way so it might be a little clearer—because as a human being (whatever his definition of a human being is) because he loves, he hesitates to act, and listens and makes the Connection with the Holy Spirit, makes the Connection with me, and what happens is that which blesses not just those of you who are hearing it, experiencing what is happening, but the Whole Brotherhood, infinitely speaking, All of Creation is blessed by it.

Now, all of you, in the process of Awakening, must come to a point where you don't depend upon Paul being the Presence of Love that constitutes the Movement of Creation. Each one of you must arrive at a point of doing exactly what Paul is doing—going within, leaning into the Place of Excellence in you, and beginning to depend upon what emerges, instead of leaving the responsibility up to Paul and saying, "Well, whatever Raj says through Paul, that's what I'm going to depend upon." The element of trust must be brought into play as you lean into the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. And then you must be willing to dare to act upon your Knowing—what comes from the Holy Spirit.

Well, you know, there are many who are so happy that Paul does this, because it means they don't have to do it yet. Because they don't know if they could do what Paul has to do, what they see as Paul having to do, which is not live quite the same as everyone else does. And who would be willing to publicly acknowledge that they practice listening to the Christ and give voice to what they hear without apology and without guilt and without self-consciousness?

"Well, you know, I wouldn't mind listening to Guidance if I didn't have to tell anybody about it." It's like saying, "I wouldn't mind being gay if nobody had to know." You see?

RAJ READING: The reason you do not know YOUR creations is simply that you would decide against them...

RAJ: You see? You would want to keep them quiet, you would want to keep them undercover, as long as your minds are split.

RAJ READING: ...and to attack what you have created is impossible.

RAJ: So, [laughing] you see, what you would attack of your Creations, that you cannot in actuality attack, simply cannot register with you. It's one of God's Laws—meaning it's just the Way It Works. Even with your wonderful holy will, you cannot do what you cannot do. And since you, as long as your minds are split, would attack your Real Creations, your Real Creations are unavailable to you. You cannot be conscious of them. It keeps them safe, and it keeps you safe, until you're willing to abandon the split mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The law of creation is that you love your creations as yourself because they ARE part of you. Everything that was created is therefore perfectly safe because the laws of God protect it by His Love.

RAJ: So again, if you are, through the use of your holy will, practicing a split mind, your Creations simply won't be available to you consciously for you to attack. And they are, therefore, perfectly safe because the Laws of God protect them by His Love.

RAJ READING: Any part of your mind that does not know this has banished itself from knowledge because it has not met its conditions.

RAJ: The conditions of Knowledge.

You cannot know Singularity in a singular fashion when your mind is conflicted. And therefore, until you abandon your fascination with conflict, you won't see or experience Singularity as It Really Is. It's that simple.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Who could have done this but you?

RAJ: Well, is that a guilt trip? No.

It's once again what will relieve you. If you alone could have done this, it means nobody else did it. And it means you are, therefore, not at the mercy of anyone else, and you're not in a position of having to conflict with others to overcome them to free yourself. No one else had anything to do with it, and therefore, you are completely free to just change your mind.

RAJ READING: Who could have done this but you? Recognize this gladly, for in this recognition lies the realization that your banishment is NOT of God, and therefore does not exist.

RAJ: You see? You didn't fall. You weren't part of the "Great Fall." No "Great Fall" ever happened. You were, and are, and always will be, only What You Are, which is only What God Is Being right there where you are right now.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are....

RAJ: You are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it.

The book says:

RAJ READING: You are at home in God, dreaming of exile, but perfectly capable of awakening to reality.

RAJ: If you're dreaming that you're in exile, then there's no self-improvement process you have to go through, is there, to wake up? It's just a dream of being in exile.

And are you in the dream because God punished you? No. You're in a dream because you chose to have a fantasy. That's all.

And there's no process to waking up to the Ultimate of What You Are. There's just a choice to be made to stop insisting that you are what you think you are, and having ongoing, ongoing, ongoing curiosity to see the more of What You Are that's present right here.

RAJ READING: You are at home in God, dreaming of exile, but perfectly capable of awakening to reality. Is it your will to do so?

RAJ: To awake to Reality. Not yet.

But no biggy. You know, you are perfectly free to will to not know What You Are, and to will to engage in a conflicted, polarized frame of mind which colors the Kingdom of Heaven for you so that you behave in ways that are inconsistent with the Kingdom of Heaven. You're perfectly able to, you're perfectly allowed to, but it hasn't made it Real, and doesn't make it Real.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You know, from you own experience, that what you see in dreams you think is real as long as you are asleep. Yet the instant you waken you KNOW that everything that SEEMED to happen did not happen at all. You do not think this mysterious, even though all the laws of what you awakened TO were violated while you slept. Is it not possible that you merely shifted from one dream to another, without REALLY wakening?

RAJ: You fall asleep at night and you have a dream, and you wake up and you say, "I'm awake." But now you're learning that what you call "being awake" is still a state of misperception. That's very helpful because your experience with night dreams helps you have an experiential perspective that allows you then to look at your experience right now while you say you're awake, and say, "Maybe my way of perceiving is still altered, is still not consistent with What's Real."

When you had the dream, when you get up in the morning, are you guilty of the dreams you had? No. And when you wake up in terms of coming back into your Right Mind, the way you've been experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven right now you will find will be no cause for guilt at all either.

So you don't need to be afraid of sudden shifts of perception because they won't render you judgable, and they won't set you in line to the great courthouse in the sky, waiting for your case to come up to be heard, and where judgment will occur, and then you will know whether you go to hell or Heaven. You see?

So let your curiosity arise. And let your curiosity be genuine—not tentative.

You are the Christ and you can use your holy will on your behalf, instead of to your detriment. And you can use it in many ways that is to your betterment—one of which is what we discussed last week when you go up and down the stairs. To do it with a light step. To realize that you are using Ultimate Capacities to move from one place to another in a very limited way, and you want to experience those Capacities in a less limited way so that you either levitate effortlessly up the stairs, or you teleport instantaneously up the stairs.

Don't engage curiosity in a heavy, laborious, studious way. Let there be lightness to it. Let there be fun to it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Would you bother to reconcile what happened in conflicting dreams,...

RAJ: And here it's referring to the night-dream and the day-dream that you're all having an experience of because you're not seeing your day through the Eyes of God which God gave you to see through.

RAJ READING: Would you bother to reconcile what happened in conflicting dreams,...

RAJ: You know, you could say, "What's wrong with me? How could I be so confused that I have two unreal dreams. I must really be messed up!" And you could go on, and then you could begin to develop theories and teachings, and steps to be taken to learn how to separate this dream from the other dream, and thus prepare yourself for deserving to see everything clearly.

RAJ READING: Would you bother to reconcile...

RAJ: Or do anything at all about.

RAJ READING: ...what happened in conflicting dreams, or would you dismiss both together if you discovered that reality is in accord with neither? You do not remember being awake. When you hear the Holy Spirit you merely feel better because loving seems POSSIBLE to you, but you do NOT remember yet that it once was so. And it is in this remembering...

RAJ: [small laugh] We could say it is in this dim remembering.

RAJ READING: ...that you will know it can be so again.

RAJ: And I will add: And your faith will be increased. And you will unleash your curiosity a little bit further, and become more undefended, and thus provide the environment in which a miracle can occur—a sudden shift of perception.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: What is possible...

RAJ: Meaning waking up totally, or experiencing that loving is possible.

RAJ READING: ...has not yet been accomplished. Yet what has once been is so NOW, if it is eternal.

RAJ: And you know what? No matter how convoluted the concepts are that you might have created to cause you to misperceive things, you cannot have made anything out of yourself that is less than, or different from, the Presence of God being You. And there is no way you could have arrived in a place, or a state of existence, that no longer includes and embodies What You Ultimately Are. It's just absolutely impossible.

And that is why I keep repeating this, that you are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you remember, you will know what you remember IS eternal, and therefore IS now.

You will remember everything the instant you DESIRE IT WHOLLY, for if to desire wholly is to create, you will have willed away the separation, returning your mind simultaneously to your Creator and your creations. Knowing THEM you will have no wish to sleep, but only the will to waken and be glad. Dreams will be impossible because you will WANT only truth, and being at last your will it will be yours.

RAJ: You see, you're not going, it is not going to be possible, it will be impossible for you to arrive at the Experience of Singularity—which means no conflict, no polarities, no tension—it will be impossible for you to arrive at an Experience of Singularity while you're still trying to be a definition trying to reach the Experience of Singularity. As long as you think you are a conflicted being trying to become worthy of experiencing the Singularity, you will not be able to arrive at the conscious experience of it.

You have to stop thinking of yourself, you have to stop conceiving of yourself as a conflicted mortal, a conflicted hunk of flesh, a vulnerable outcome of physical processes. You're going to have to abandon the idea of smallness, physicalness, and vulnerability. You are going to have to start understanding yourself from the Ultimate right here.

And you can do it. And it will be easier for you to do it because someone has shared with you that that's the Answer. It's not an answer that is on the front page of the news every night. It's not an answer that's printed in the flyleaf of every book that's published, just to remind you of something utterly essential to coming back into your Right Mind. But someone's telling you.

Piss-ant mortals never get into the Kingdom of Heaven. Why? Because there ain't no such critter.

But the Divine One That You Are can recover, or rediscover, the Kingdom of Heaven because of What You Divinely Are, and because What God Knows, God does not Know only for Himself, but constitutes your Inherent, Eternal, Ever-present Knowing—we could say, your Capacity To Know.

And I/we only would say "your Capacity To Know" because at the moment you don't seem to be experiencing it. But your Mind is not incapacitated. The Capacity is present. The Capacity is functional. And all you have to do is stop willing not to know it because you prefer to will to know something that's pure imagination and believe that it is true.

And all I'm ever doing is promoting your withdrawal of your confidence in your imagination, and saying, "Hey, everybody. Over here there is something Real going on. And it's here for you to see, and you have the Capacity to see it." All you have to do is want to see it, instead of wanting to see what you're presently seeing. And you've got to be willing to stop willing to believe what you see just because your parents, and all of the teachers you ever had, taught you what the truth was, and all of the books you read, as far back into ancient history as you can go, tell you this, and so it must be true. I'm sorry. It's not.

But you have to will to abandon your confidence in anything that has arisen out of imagination. And then you have to will to be genuinely curious. "Well, curiosity can be dangerous, you know, because you have to abandon your securities. You have to be willing to be vulnerable to the unexpected." Well, not being willing to do that, and not willing to do it will just give you more of what you already have. If you like it, you like it. But you don't have to. It's okay not to. And not willing to be committed to misperception, at the least, causes you to be subject to spontaneous revelation. Not a bad result from a little bit of neglect.

With that, I will leave you for tonight. I will be with you every moment though. And I trust that you will approach the coming week with curiosity, and less defendedness, and a little bit more anticipation of joy in this process.

[speaking to each one present in turn] I love you. And the fellow behind the console, I love you. And I love you. And I love you. Love really is possible.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

How many of you are, this evening, experiencing some distress because you're not pleased with yourself? And how many of you are experiencing some distress because other people are not pleased with you? Or to be more focused, how many of you are feeling some distress because you are displeased with yourself or other people are displeased with you?

The really simple answer and resolution to the displeasure is, lies in the words, "It's because you don't know Who You Are." If you knew Who You Were, you wouldn't indulge the feeling of not being pleased with yourself, because Who You Are is too wonderful to be displeased with.

I've said before that in the whole time I was growing up, my mother never let me forget Who I Was. Unfortunately, you did not have mothers or fathers who could constantly remind you of Who You Are. My mother constantly reminded me of the Ultimacy of my Being, that God was my Father and I was Divine, that I had a Heritage that was Immaculate. Yes, I sometimes heard that as a level of responsibility that I therefore had, that no one else had. And sometimes I didn't want to have anything to do with it. But the fact is that because I was never allowed to forget Who I Was and that my Source was Divine, not human, I never was able to fully succumb to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that all my buddies wanted me to join in, or even any of the adults around me.

I am, every time we get together, reminding you of Who You Really Are. You experience distress with yourself because you believe you are who you think you are, who you have been educated to think you are. You are like a child of royalty who was stolen away from his royal parents, you might say, and were brought up with common man and had no sense of your birthright or your heritage. And then one day you're found by the royal family, and you're brought back home, and you're told that you're not the common one, that you are royalty. But you have grown up and acquired all of your concepts about yourself from those with whom you were living. And it's not possible for you to just suddenly feel royal. But if you're constantly reminded of it, if you're constantly reminded of your Real Heritage, it becomes easier and easier for you to abandon, or invalidate and abandon, the definitions you've made-up and made commitment to.

I know that I'm being very repetitious, but the repetition needs to be made. The sentence is so simple and it needs to be remembered. You are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom.

You are Divine. You are the Son, the Daughter, the Offspring, the Child of God—God's Self-Expression. And you are employing Ultimate Capacities all the time because they're the only Capacities you have available to you. You are using Ultimate Capacities every day, every moment, even though you're using them to create a sense of limitation, activities of limitation, activities of overcoming limitation. But the Ultimate One That You Are, the Ultimate One that you are attempting to access, to become like, You Are right now.

Please, as you go through the next week, bring this thought to the foreground of your mind frequently. Even if everything that's going on seems to argue against it and prove to you that it can't be true, be "the mother you don't have" reminding yourself of Who You Are, or "the father you don't have" to remind you Who You Are. You be it. Remind yourself of it.

The more you remind yourself of it, the more curiosity you are going to have to explore and employ these Ultimate Capacities more fully. You've got to remind yourself that you have Capacities that you're not using fully so that you might dare to experiment, for lack of better words, play with looking at everything with a willingness to see the more that's there, the more that I'm telling you is there, than what you're seeing. Let there be moments of willingness to be more intimate with a salt shaker that's on the table in the restaurant you're having lunch in, or the chair you're sitting in—anything. Let there be moments where you abandon your routine to just be present with something with an openness and a curiosity to see what you may never have seen before. And then go on about your business, but get into the habit of, even momentarily, having the curiosity and the willingness to be present with something, to experience the more that's there. This is the way you will break the habit, the persistence of misperception rather than the persistence of Vision, the persistence of the misperception of Who and What You Are that you're so willing to believe and then berate yourself for.

If you knew you were royalty, you would say, "I don't have to put up with this shit!" You see? But you just think you're the common man. You just think you're a mortal working his way through this lifetime. Well, you're not. And you need to be a little bit more active and vehement in your denial of the idea that that is all you are. Be a little bit more aggressive. Be a little bit more self-disciplined to the point where you at least remind yourself frequently during the day. “Well, they think I’m awful, but... and they’re distressed with me, but... my Father is God, and my Inheritance is the Fullness of His Being. And my Capacities are what He has laid down in me. I am more than they think I am. And I don’t have to respond like some inconsequential turd.” You see? “I may be unhappy with myself, but I don’t have to be.” If you have to pawn it off on me, fine. Say, “Raj says I don’t have to be.” But at least remind yourself that you have an option. There is another way to look at this.

If you remind yourself of it, you will remember to try. And trying to be in a new way, bringing the curiosity necessary to having a new experience, is what lays the groundwork for what? A sudden shift of perception. But it’s going to take practice. And let the practice be fun. Let it be lighthearted.

Paul said—not Paul Tuttle—“Paul the disciple” said, “Now are we the Sons of God. And it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he,” meaning Jesus, “when he shall appear, we shall be like him.” Why? “Because we shall see him as he is.” Interesting, isn’t it? It doesn’t say, “We will recognize him because of who he is, and he will impress us with who he is, and thereby we will know who he is.” It says, “And we will then find ourselves to be like him.” It says, “We will be like him because we will see him as he is.” We will see him As He Is in Reality.

Well, in a way, it’s sort of like which came first, the chicken or the egg? Are you going to be like me because you see me? Or are you going to see me as like you because you see yourself correctly? It’s a moot point. But the key is that now are you my Brothers. Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God, the Offspring, the Expression of God. And it’s time for you to recognize yourself.

And in order to recognize yourself, you’re going to have to abandon your confidence that you know that you are simply a mortal, a flesh-and-blood body that has a temporary lifespan, and afterwards, the Ultimate may be your experience. No. Now the Ultimate is going on. So you’ve got to start today letting that fact abide in you like a glowing Light that gets your attention. And now is the world the Kingdom of Heaven. And you’ve got to let that idea pulsate and glow in your mind, and get your attention so that you will dare to look at it all with innocent eyes, fresh eyes, not preoccupied with past definitions.

Let’s go to the book. The section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Decision to Forget

Unless you KNOW something you CANNOT dissociate it.

RAJ: Dissociate. Separate from yourself, or separate from its source.

RAJ READING: Unless you KNOW something you CANNOT dissociate it.

RAJ: Okay, let's render this more understandable. When you said, "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way," and got your bill of divorcement, you were dissociating yourself from the Father. That's all. You got a divorce. A separation occurred. That's dissociation. That was the dissociation.

Now mind you, it's well to remember that just saying, "Father, I'd rather see it my way," does not constitute a dissociation. To have the thought doesn't mean anything. But to actually say, "My definition of this is such-and-such," at that point dissociation occurred because you were saying, "This thing is not What The Father Is Being right there. It is what I say it is." And at that point you established a sense of independence. And that's when the dissociation occurred—when you actually made a decision that a thing was what you said it was, rather than What The Father Was Being right there.

Now:

RAJ READING: Unless you KNOW something you CANNOT dissociate it. Knowledge therefore PRECEDES dissociation, and dissociation is nothing more than a DECISION TO FORGET.

RAJ: Now, here's another practical aspect of this statement. We were talking last week about the fact that What The Father Knows is your True Knowing, is your Capacity To Know What A Thing Is Truly. And the Father does not Know something for Himself alone. His Knowing constitutes your True Knowing because it was placed in you by virtue of God extending Himself right where you are.

Now, if dissociation has occurred, in other words, if you are experiencing everything with the meanings you're giving it rather than What It Truly Is, it means that you did know originally What It Was—which means that right now you really do know What Everything Is. In other words, if you are experiencing dissociation, it means that you did know. And if you did know, you do know. Nothing has been lost. Nothing has to be regained through mental gymnastics or hard work. You're at the Point of Perfection and must understand yourself therefrom. If Knowledge precedes dissociation, then if you're experiencing dissociation, by reversal, you know that You Are The Ultimate right now.

Do you see what I'm trying to say? It's another way of saying if you are experiencing a misperception of something, there's something Real there to be misperceived. The Ultimate is going on. It's the only thing confronting you. If you're having a misperception of it, What It Really Is, is right there. And so you can say, by reversal, "If I am misperceiving this orchid, it means the Real Orchid is there." Not off in the bye-and-bye after you die, but right here, right now. If you're experiencing a misperception, the thing that you're misperceiving is fully and actively present. The Ultimate is here.

If you are experiencing life through dissociation, then it means you do know What It Really Is, and you are just in a momentary state of denial of What It Is. So, the Kingdom of Heaven isn't off in the future, and your Capacity to recognize it, isn't off in the future. If you're experiencing dissociation and misperception, it is the proof you need that the Real Thing is present, and you know What It Is right now. You do know What It Is.

I must point this out to you so that you don't indulge in the idea that seeing everything for What It Is, and recognizing and experiencing Who You Really Are, is not something that will arrive as a result of great struggle on your part, of standing tall and trying to be more than you are, of being a caterpillar that has to go through a process of metamorphosis in order to become a butterfly—something that the caterpillar wasn't yet. You see what I'm saying? You are the Ultimate right now.

Again.

RAJ READING: Unless you KNOW something you CANNOT dissociate it. Knowledge therefore PRECEDES dissociation,...

RAJ: Knowing precedes the experience of a belief.

RAJ READING: ...and dissociation is nothing more than a DECISION TO FORGET.

RAJ: "Father, I'd rather see it my way. I choose to forget What A Thing Really Is. I choose to forget my Source. I choose to define myself and to define everything else. I choose to forget Who I Am, because if I don't forget Who I Am, I won't be able to successfully convince myself that my definitions are true and real."

So it's the decision to forget.

RAJ READING: What has been forgotten then appears to be fearful, but ONLY because the dissociation was an ATTACK on truth.

RAJ: You see? "I disagree with You, God. This is an orchid and it grows from a seed, not from the Impulse of Creation That You Are. It grows from a seed. And you know what? I'm going to determine that if it doesn't get watered, it will wither and die and be no more." You see? "I don't care if you say it's Eternal, God; I say that it's mortal. I say that without proper treatment, it will die, and that plant will forever more not be."

You see? It's a disagreement with God. It's a standing at odds with God. It's an attack on God.

RAJ READING: You are fearful BECAUSE you have forgotten. And you have REPLACED your knowledge...

RAJ: Your Knowing.

RAJ READING: ...by an awareness of dreams...

RAJ: Fantasies. Imaginations.

RAJ READING: ...because you are AFRAID of your dissociation, NOT of what you have dissociated.

RAJ: Let's be clear on this.

RAJ READING: ...you have REPLACED your knowledge...

RAJ: True Knowing.

RAJ READING: ...by an awareness of dreams...

RAJ: Things you made-up.

RAJ READING: ...because you are AFRAID of your dissociation, NOT of what you have dissociated.

RAJ: You are afraid of your act of divorcement and what it says about you. You are afraid of your act, your misbehavior, your disobedience.

RAJ READING: ...you are AFRAID of your dissociation, NOT of what you have dissociated. Even in this world's therapy, when dissociated material is ACCEPTED it ceases to be fearful, for the laws of mind always hold.

RAJ: Even in the dream, the Laws of Mind hold.

The question has been asked at times, "Why are we afraid to wake up?" You are afraid to wake up because in your imagined independent state, you've lost your sense of balance, you've lost your perspective, you've lost the sense of your Source. You no longer recognize your royalty. And at the bottom line, you know that this lack of remembering of What You Are was an attempt to be at odds with your Father, your Source, and therefore, was a denial of your Reality and the Truth Of What You Are. And you feel vulnerable. And the assumption is that you are guilty, and that once you dare to say, "God, help. God, I want to let You back into my life," you will be punished.

But the fact is that when you let God back in, you let in the Truth Of You. You let in the Stability of your Being. You let in the Experience of the Eternality of your Being. And you let in the recognition that your imaginations accomplished nothing, and therefore, nothing disobedient was accomplished. And your Eternal Invulnerability is experienced. You find your safety, rather than judgment and punishment. When you let back in what you've dissociated, the experience is Wholeness. And Wholeness is unconflicted. And the concept of punishment is meaningless.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Yet to give up the dissociation of REALITY...

RAJ: In other words, truly with a capital "R".

RAJ READING: Yet to give up the dissociation of REALITY brings more than merely lack of fear.

RAJ: It brings more than just peace. It brings more than just relief. It brings more than just the absence of anxiety and fear.

RAJ READING: In THIS decision lie joy and peace and the glory of creation.

RAJ: I tell you, as I've told you before, that absolutely everything you're experiencing—the flower, the stem, the leaves, the roots, the bowl that the plant is in—every aspect is awesome. It pulses with and generates Love, on, and on, and on. It is utterly Divine and Awesome. Right now, right here, this plant and each one of you as you sit there, are awesome. You pulse with Love. You pulse with Divine Illumination. The experience of you, and I would say, the experience of each other from each of your points of view, are awesome, overwhelmingly glorious. I say "overwhelmingly" because it far exceeds what you might imagine, right here, right now.

RAJ READING: ...to give up the dissociation of REALITY brings more than merely lack of fear. In THIS decision lie joy and peace and the glory of creation. Offer the Holy Spirit only your will to remember,...

RAJ: Well, let me tell you this. The moment you begin to express genuine curiosity, you are offering the Holy Spirit only your will to remember.

So:

RAJ READING: Offer the Holy Spirit only your will to remember, for He retains the knowledge of God and of yourself FOR you,...

RAJ: And I keep reminding you, as it said earlier in the Course, the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. So offer the Holy Spirit only your will to remember, for your Right Mind retains the knowledge of God and of yourself for you.

RAJ READING: ...waiting for your acceptance.

RAJ: Waiting for your curiosity. Waiting for your desire to see outside the box.

RAJ READING: Give up gladly EVERYTHING...

RAJ: All of your definitions, all of your preconceptions, all of your confidences, that didn't arise out of a Connectedness with the Father.

RAJ READING: Give up gladly EVERYTHING that would stand in the way of your remembering, for God is in your memory, and His Voice will tell you that you are part of Him when you are willing to remember Him and know your own reality again.

RAJ: Well, like I said, you didn't have a mother to remind you of your Reality, but I'm reminding you of it. And you start reminding yourself of it, whether it seems true or not.

RAJ READING: Let nothing in this world delay your remembering of Him, for in this remembering is the knowledge of YOURSELF.

RAJ: Practical translation: When you let God in, you're letting in your Source. When you let in your Source, you remember Who You Are. You come... you snap back into your Right Mind.

And so...

RAJ READING: Let nothing in this world...

RAJ: Which means, let nothing in all of your current definitions.

RAJ READING: ...delay your remembering of Him, for in this remembering is the knowledge of YOURSELF.

RAJ: That's how you remember Who You Are, by no longer denying your Source. That's the only way you can remember Who You Are.

Now, listen to this.

RAJ READING: To remember is merely to restore to your mind WHAT IS ALREADY THERE.

RAJ: Neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it. You're there!

RAJ READING: To remember is merely to restore to your mind WHAT IS ALREADY THERE.

RAJ: Again, this is not a process of achieving something that you aren't yet. And it's not a matter of acquiring what you don't have yet.

RAJ READING: To remember is merely to restore to your mind WHAT IS ALREADY THERE. You do not MAKE what you remember; you merely accept again what has been made but was rejected.

RAJ: Dissociated. Separated from you.

RAJ READING: The ability to accept truth in this world is the perceptual counterpart of creating in the Kingdom. God will do His part if you will do yours, and HIS return in exchange for yours is the exchange of knowledge FOR perception.

RAJ: Another way of saying that is you will receive the Experience of Knowing in place of what you've made-up, in place of the perceptions you've created, the definitions you've created.

But I'll tell you something, the exchange has to occur. Just as you, in order to dissociate or get a divorce from the Father, were required to not just say you wanted to see things your way, you had to actually give a definition to a thing and then give your preference to it—to come back Home, you not only have to be willing to say, "Father, I'm willing to exchange my definitions for the Real Meanings," you actually have to go ahead and do it.

That's why I'm encouraging you, at anytime during the day, with any object in front of you, to let there be an intimate moment where you're willing to see and desire to see, you're curious to experience the awesomeness, the gloriousness of that thing, the Gloriousness of What The Father Is Being right there, which you're not currently seeing because you do think it's just a material object. You're actually going to have to be willing to let the exchange happen, which means you're going to have to be willing to let the new experience in.

RAJ READING: NOTHING is beyond His Will for you.

RAJ: God's Will for you.

RAJ READING: But signify your will to remember Him, and behold! He will give you everything but for the asking.

RAJ: Anything complicated here? Difficult process? No. It will be yours for the asking. "Oh, that's too easy." No.

Well, everything we're talking about is ultimately easy. Of course, the teachers and the developers of curriculums for awakening, religious systems and so on, will give you complex processes. And they'll tell you that it will be difficult because you are a sinner to start with. You're already on lousy ground, with not much of a basis for deserving to ask for enlightenment and expect to get it. You see?

Now:

RAJ READING: When you attack you are denying YOURSELF.

RAJ: What does that mean? When you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way," which was an attack on What Really Is because you wanted to give preference to making your own definitions, you ended up unexpectedly losing the Experience of Who You Were. You became the recipient of the result of your decision. And now you think you're blackballed. "God has blackballed you, and it's going to be difficult to get back into the Kingdom of Heaven. You're going to have to go through the day of judgment." You see? You've been blackballed because of your disobedience.

You were the recipient of your decision to disregard God. God wasn't the recipient of anything. You see?

RAJ READING: When you attack you are denying YOURSELF.

RAJ: You are denying yourself the remembrance and the Experience of What You Divinely Are. That's what has happened.

RAJ READING: You are specifically teaching yourself that you are NOT what you are. Your denial of reality precludes the ACCEPTANCE of God's gift because you have accepted something ELSE in its place.

RAJ: An imagination that you are giving preference to.

RAJ READING: If you understand that the misuse of defenses always constitutes an attack on truth, and truth is God, you will realize why this is ALWAYS fearful.

RAJ: Well, [laughing] it's always fearful because, ultimately, you're the recipient of the attack. And you've already been the recipient of it, and you're already feeling vulnerable because of it. You live with an undercurrent of fear and insecurity, and you think it's just "the state of life." It's "the way life is." But it isn't.

It's just that the Kingdom of Heaven looks fearful to you when you're saying it's something else. Because you are truly afraid that What It Really Is will manage to register with you and undo your so-called "creations"—all of the definitions you've made-up and all of the definitions that you've agreed with everyone else about so that numbers give strength to your misperception. You see? You're afraid that Reality is going to uncover the invalidity of everything you've made-up.

RAJ READING: If you understand that the misuse of defenses always constitutes an attack on truth, and truth is God, you will realize why this is ALWAYS fearful. If you further recognize that you are PART of God, you will understand why it is that you always attack yourself FIRST.

RAJ: You see, the ego's thought system is such that it targets you. It says you are unworthy. It says you are a sinner. It says you were born in sin. It says you are the underdog, and it will be difficult to get out from under that status because you deserve it. You see?

Everyone is down on himself first. "If you're feeling uneasy, if you're feeling vulnerable, if you're never at peace, why there must be something wrong with you." And that's a little difficult to take, so then you say, "Well, no. It's everybody else." And it's not you and it's not everybody else. It's just that you've forgotten Who You Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you realized the complete havoc this makes of your peace of mind, you could not make such an insane decision. You make it only because you still believe that it can GET you something you WANT.

RAJ: And the only thing you ever wanted was to be able to define everything yourself, thinking that would be like being God, and that it would give you a pleasure and a satisfaction of authorizing things. You see?

You make that decision...

RAJ READING: ...only because you still believe that it can GET you something you WANT. It follows, then, that you want something OTHER than peace of mind, but you have not considered what it must be.

RAJ: You say, "Gee, I didn't expect this just by saying, 'But, Father, I'd rather see it my way.' I didn't expect that I would forget Who I Was." You see? "I just wanted to be able to authorize a few things." Like Mickey Mouse in The Sorcerer's Apprentice, he just wanted to be able to authorize a few things. He didn't know that, [laughing] you know, that things could go amuck!

You didn't realize that you would forget Who You Were, and you would lose Conscious Connection with your Source, you would lose the Experience of the Integrity of your Being. You didn't realize it. You didn't realize that's what you were asking for, or you would never have asked for it.

RAJ READING: If you realized the complete havoc this makes of your peace of mind, you could not make such an insane decision. You make it only because you still believe that it can GET you something you WANT.

RAJ: What did Mickey do? Things started to go awry—too many buckets of water, too many brooms bringing them in, filling up the castle. And what did he do? Did he go to the sorcerer and say “Help”? No. He waved the wand some more.

RAJ READING: It follows, then, that you want something OTHER than peace of mind, but you have not considered what it must be. Yet the logical outcome of your decision is perfectly clear, if you will LOOK at it. By deciding AGAINST your reality, you have made yourself vigilant AGAINST God and His Kingdom.

RAJ: Why? Because you are afraid that it will undo what you believe you have authorized. And it will take away any supposed authority you thought you had gained, and therefore, it will take away what you require to be there in order to feel a sense of self-respect as long as you don't remember Who You Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: And it is THIS vigilance....

RAJ: Against God and His Kingdom.

RAJ READING: ...that makes you afraid to remember Him.

RAJ: [small laugh] When the sorcerer finally came down the stairs and Mickey saw him, he cowered. Mickey cowered. He was afraid of what had the answer. You see?

Now, continuing.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: The God of Sickness]

RAJ READING: You have NOT attacked God and you DO love Him.

RAJ: You just thought you attacked God. And you now just think you're afraid of Him.

RAJ READING: You have NOT attacked God...

RAJ: That's the Truth of it.

RAJ READING: ...and you DO love Him.

RAJ: And that's the Truth of it.

RAJ READING: Can you change your reality?

RAJ: No. You can imagine that you can and that you have, but you can't.

RAJ READING: No-one can will to destroy himself. When you think you are attacking your self, it is a sure sign that you hate what you THINK you are. And this, and ONLY this, can BE attacked by you.

RAJ: You see? [laughing] Poor Mickey. I'm sure he got very mad at himself for all of the ruckus that he was creating, but he was unwilling to abandon doing what made it worse.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: What you THINK you are can be hateful, and what this strange image makes you do can be very destructive.

RAJ: Ha, ha, ha. The joke's on you.

RAJ READING: Yet the destruction is no more real than the image,...

RAJ: That's where the joke's on you. None of it is Real.

RAJ READING: Yet the destruction is no more real than the image, although those who make idols DO worship them. The idols are nothing,...

RAJ: Your imaginations are nothing. Your definitions are nothing. The conclusions you've come to about yourself, not only aren't true, they're nothing.

RAJ READING: The idols are nothing, but their worshippers are the Sons of God in sickness.

RAJ: You are each the Son or Daughter of God utilizing Ultimate Capacities, utterly Divine Capacities, well or poorly.

RAJ READING: The idols are nothing, but their worshippers are...

[Editor's Note: Raj said "the worshippers" instead of "their worshippers."]

RAJ: Something Ultimate.

RAJ READING: ...the Sons of God...

RAJ: What? Behaving poorly.

RAJ READING: ...in sickness.

RAJ: You see? You didn't become something else. You didn't become a mortal. You didn't become an orphan.

RAJ READING: The idols are nothing, but their worshippers are the Sons of God in sickness.

God would have them released...

RAJ: Would have you released.

RAJ READING: ...from their sickness and returned to His Mind.

RAJ: Well, if you're returned to His Mind, you're returned to your Right Mind. To be returned to His Mind is to be returned to your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: He will not LIMIT your power to help them...

RAJ: [pause] Let's back up.

RAJ READING: The idols are nothing, but their worshippers are the Sons of God in sickness.

God would have them released from their sickness and returned to His Mind. He will not LIMIT your power to help them...

RAJ: Meaning your Brothers and Sisters.

RAJ READING: He will not LIMIT your power to help them because He has GIVEN it to you. Do not be afraid of it because it is your salvation.

RAJ: Oh, but like I said last week, you're like someone who says, "Well, I wouldn't mind being gay if nobody had to know about it." Well, you've been given the power to help your Brothers and Sisters wake up, return their Mind to God, return their Mind to the Place of Excellence that is within them by reflecting back to them, as I'm doing with you, What Is True About Them, in whatever language works.

And to help them remember the Truth About Them is your salvation as well, because what you give away, you get to keep. What you extend becomes yours. That's the Way It Works.

RAJ READING: Do not be afraid of it because it is your salvation. What Comforter can there be for the...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...sick Children of God...

RAJ: The sick Ultimate Expressions of God.

RAJ READING: What Comforter can there be for the sick Children of God except His power through YOU?

RAJ: If you want to remember Who You Are, you've got to let God back in. If you want your Brother to remember Who He Is, you've got to remember God when you're looking at your Brother.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Remember that it does not matter WHERE in the Sonship He is accepted.

RAJ: It can be right in the same room where you are.

RAJ READING: He is ALWAYS accepted for all, and when YOUR mind receives Him the remembrance of...

RAJ: Let's back up. [pause]

RAJ READING: Remember that it does not matter WHERE in the Sonship He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...is accepted.

RAJ: Like I said, it can be right there with you.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...is ALWAYS accepted for all,...

RAJ: Just as God does not Know for Himself only, you do not know for yourself only. I didn't say think. I said Know. When you have the Experience of Knowing, which is far different from thinking or imagining, you know it for all. It is accepted for all.

RAJ READING: Remember that it does not matter WHERE in the Sonship He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...is accepted. He is ALWAYS accepted for all, and when YOUR mind receives Him the remembrance of Him...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...awakens throughout the Sonship.

RAJ: There are no private thoughts. And there's no private Knowing. When you have the Experience of Knowing the Truth, you know it for the Whole Sonship. The Whole Sonship is blessed.

Listen to this.

RAJ READING: Heal your brothers simply by accepting God FOR them.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the word "simply" this time, but he will read it the next time he reads the sentence.]

RAJ: When you care enough about your Brother to remember God right there where they are, no matter how they're behaving, you provide the environment in which a miracle can occur for your Brother. And in the extension of the recognition of What They Divinely Are, you are blessed by making What You Are clear to yourself. You get to keep what you give.

RAJ READING: Heal your brothers simply by accepting God FOR them.

Your minds are not separate, and God has only one channel for healing because He has but one Son.

RAJ: God is a Singularity. What God Knows is Forever, and Infinite, and Always—Indivisible, Unchangeable.

RAJ READING: Your minds are not separate, and God has only one channel for healing because He has but one Son. His remaining communication link with all His Children joins them together, and them to Him.

RAJ: Well, you know, how is this going to happen if you are what you think you are and you do not know of your royalty? It can't, and that's why you've got to stop working up to becoming something more than you are. And you've got to dare to stand right where you are and understand yourself from an Ultimate Place.

Well, how do you do that? You can't do it by yourself. You've got to invite the experience in. You've got to say, "Help, God. I want to know the Truth right here. I don't want to know the truth about how bad things are. I've got all of that figured out myself. I want to know What The Truth Is here about my Brother, about my world, about myself. And I understand from Raj that the only way I will get to know the Truth about my Self is to connect with You again—annul my divorce."

Only in this way can you present something new—something outside the box, something from outside the box, something from outside all of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that everyone has been bound by. And when you do that, although you have no evidence of it yet, when you do that, not just the one you've been willing to bless is blessed, but the Whole Brotherhood feels the Impulse and Movement of Love that has motivated an Ultimate Act by you which has claimed your Being from the standpoint of its Ultimacy, of being at the Point of Perfection. And your Brother who is in need of healing is blessed, and every Brother who is already Awake is blessed, because the Pulse of Love is a Universal Movement that everyone feels.

RAJ READING: His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...remaining communication link with all His Children joins them together, and them to Him.

RAJ: It uncovers the Singularity once again.

RAJ READING: To be aware of this is to heal them because it is the awareness that no-one is separate, and so no-one is sick.

RAJ: Remember, back above:

RAJ READING: The idols are nothing, but their worshippers are the Sons of God in sickness.

RAJ: Experiencing a sickness of the mind, you might say.

[Continuing.]

RAJ READING: To believe that a Son of God CAN be sick is to believe that part of God can suffer. Love CANNOT suffer because it can not attack. The remembrance of love therefore brings...

RAJ: What? Not judgment and punishment.

RAJ READING: ...invulnerability with it.

Do not side with sickness in the presence of a Son of God even if HE believes in it...

RAJ: Now this applies in two ways. It applies to those who think they are ill with a disease.

But you do not want to side with sickness in the Presence of a Son of God—meaning you do not want to join with him in his false definitions of himself or of the Kingdom of Heaven that he thinks is just the world—full of material flowers and bugs and human beings and trees that are far from Ultimate, and that someday he'll die out of, with a chance of experiencing something Ultimate. You do not want to join or side with sickness of that sort in the Presence of a Son of God, even if he believes in it.

RAJ READING: ...for YOUR acceptance of God in him ACKNOWLEDGES the Love of God which he has forgotten.

RAJ: Every night Paul says a prayer—he asks for healing for everyone. And actually he uses the word “everywhen,” meaning beyond the current sense of time and location—everywhere, everywhen. He asks for healing for everywhen—as opposed to everyone—everywhen, who is asking for healing, even if they are only expressing it as hope with little faith.

People can go to bed hungry at night and hope that maybe they'll find something to eat tomorrow. And they can hope it, but not have much faith that it will come to pass. And Paul knows, not intellectually, but from a revealed level, that when he asks for this for them, he brings the faith that they don't have. And so he asks for what they're asking for with the faith they don't have, and thereby, does it for them; brings the faith into the equation for them because at the moment they can't see it, they can't feel it.

RAJ READING: Your recognition of him...

RAJ: Your Brother.

RAJ READING: ...as PART of God teaches him the truth about himself, which HE is denying. Would you STRENGTHEN his denial of God, and thus lose sight of YOURSELF? Or would you remind him of his wholeness, and remember your Creator WITH him?

RAJ: You see? That's what you get to keep when you extend it to your Brother.

RAJ READING: To believe a Son of God is sick is to worship the same idol he does. God created love, NOT idolatry. All forms of idolatry are caricatures of creation,...

RAJ: Caricatures. You know, cartoons, imaginations, fantasies. Not anything you could really find in the world, although Volkswagen comes close these days.

RAJ READING: God created love, NOT idolatry. All forms of idolatry are caricatures of creation,...

RAJ: Pictures you've created in your mind, and defined, and made commitment to.

RAJ READING: All forms of idolatry are caricatures of creation, taught by sick minds...

RAJ: Minds that aren't clear, in other words. Minds that are confused. Minds that are conflicted.

RAJ READING: ...which are too divided to know that creation...

RAJ: The Act of Creation.

RAJ READING: ...SHARES power and NEVER usurps it. Sickness is idolatry because it is the belief that power can be taken FROM you. Yet this is impossible...

RAJ: Because you're not behind the Point of Perfection.

RAJ READING: ...because you are part of God,...

RAJ: Are. Current. Present tense. Are part of God.

RAJ READING: ...Who IS all power.

RAJ: A conflicted mind is the only definition of sickness there really is.

What you call “sickness,” physical sickness, is simply the only way you can see the Kingdom of Heaven, or a part of the Kingdom of Heaven, when you’re looking through the lens of conflict and fear and everything that’s associated with it. And the only reason you would indulge in being conflicted is because you don’t know Who You Are. Remember this, because the answer to the conflict lies in remembering Who You Are—that you are royalty, you are Divine, you are Ultimate, and you don’t have to put up with this shit. You see what I’m saying? You need to arrive at a feeling in you that says, “What I am experiencing is inappropriate, unacceptable. I don’t have to be experiencing this.”

Well, you’ve got to be careful because you could say, “Because I’m above it all.” No, you’re not better than it. You are the absence of it. You are the Singularity. You are the Presence of God in whom all of this shit is absent. It doesn’t have to be gotten rid of. It has to be seen for what it is—something that it’s not your Birthright to be experiencing. And therefore, it is something you can’t truly be experiencing. And therefore, it is something that cannot continue to present itself to you as though it is real, because you’re not going to validate it any longer. Not because you’ve conquered it. You’re just not going to be fooled any longer, because you’re remembering Who You Are.

And then, remember this. When you feel like saying, “I don’t have to put up with this shit,” and you add, “that so-and-so is dishing out,” be careful that you don’t fall into the trap. Because you’ve got to follow that by saying, “And neither does he or she have to put up with this shit, because he or she is truly the Presence of God that is the nonexistence of what seems to be triggering their behavior.” It isn’t real for them either. You see? Then your statement that, “you don’t have to put up with this shit that they seem to be dishing out,” does not become an egotistical state of position relative to them, because you immediately follow that by bringing them into the circle—that they don’t deserve it either because it’s not the Truth About Them either.

And what is Divinely True About Them is they’re not behind the Point of Perfection and they need to understand themselves therefrom. And therefore, you’re not going to arrogantly “overcome their shit that they’re laying on you”—you are going to be in a way that’s recognizably Love and that provides the environment for them to experience a sudden shift of perception—a miracle.

Now we are going to stop here because you need a week to digest what I’ve said, before we can contend with what comes next. Sometimes you all move too fast because there's such eagerness and impatience that you don't let something sink in and jell with you, providing a basis for what is to come to be heard more completely, more fully.

So, enjoy this week, and remember to let there be many points during your day of intimacy with any object that's in your immediate vicinity, where you bring a curiosity to see the Awesome Gloriousness of Real Creation happening in front of you. And I use the word "intimacy" on purpose, because intimacy requires attention. And I want you to, even if it's for thirty seconds at a time, to really bring your full attention to this practice. And, remember that you're engaging in this practice to help trigger the remembrance of the fact that what I'm asking you to do is the normal, ongoing, Eternal State of Being Conscious. And so you're just inviting little tastes of it here and there, lightly, without a sense of overcoming sin, and letting a sudden shift of perception occur, if it occurs.

Remember, you've got to be the mother or the father who doesn't let you forget What You Divinely Are. And just because you didn't, doesn't mean that you really are the slob you think you are.

Okay. [hand clap] I look forward to being with you next week. And I love you all.
Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

I hope all of you managed to have at least some wonderful moments of intimacy with things in your experience. And I would encourage you to continue this practice indefinitely.

The desire to look at a thing, abandoning your preconceptions about it, with a desire to see the more of What Is There than what you're seeing is what? It's an invitation to God to reveal Himself to you as What He Is Being right there. There can be nothing else right there but the Current, Living, Active, Movement of God called Creation. And so no matter what you're looking at, there is ultimate Meaning, with a capital "M", there to be experienced.

It would be meaningless for a thing to have Meaning that you were unconscious of. The point is for the Meaning to be experienced. It is the Purpose of Being—a verb—it is the Purpose of Being to be experienced. And so, whatever it is you are looking at is there for the purpose of your experiencing What It Means. There is nothing happenstance about it being there. It is never meaningless for you. And it's the fulfillment of your Being for you to be experiencing its Meaning.

So, continue this practice, knowing that at the bottom line the purpose of the practice is a conscious opening up to the Presence of God and an Experience of God right there. It is an easy way to let God in. And I'll tell you this. The practice you get from looking at a salt shaker, or a piece of paper, or whatever it might be, gives you practice in an uncharged situation at seeing God there so that it can become familiar to you and somewhat natural to you, thereby allowing you when you are in a charged situation, or a difficult situation with a Brother or a Sister to shift gears, not go into automatic and run by your mind all the definitions you have created about that Brother or Sister, and successfully desire to see the more of What Is There than what your Brother is seeing of himself and beyond what your current definitions are about that Brother, inviting in the Experience of God right there so that receiving the experience makes it possible for you to extend the experience, instead of extending reactions based on your definition of their behavior, your definition of them, and your current definition of yourself, which says, "I can't be tolerant of so-and-so's behavior"—which keeps you both locked in to the box. So this is a valuable practice—one that will provide you with the experience necessary to be with your Brothers and Sisters from a new place and in a new way, whether you do it well in the beginning or not.

We're going to be reading about idols tonight. We were talking about it a bit last week. And I would like to visit one of the commandments. [Exodus 20] "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven images or"—and this "or" is the big thing—"or any likeness of anything that is in the heavens above, the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth." What does that mean, "make unto thee a likeness of anything"? Well, it's very simple. The minute you give a definition to anything, you have created a likeness. You have taken something actual of the Kingdom of Heaven and you have created a likeness.

It is as though you have, in computer language, copied something. You have made a copy, and you haven't done anything with it yet. It's in the RAM memory. It's there but it's not on the screen yet. And so you look at a thing and you make a copy of it, and then you say, "Okay, this definition that I am making up about this copy is what that is." In computer language, you would give it a new file name and then you work with the file from then on—you work with the copy.

You've made an image, a likeness of something Real, and then given it a definition, and then given it preference to the Real Thing. Now you have an idol. And all of your idols are parts of the Kingdom of Heaven which you have given new file names to, new definitions to. There's nothing else for you to work with.

And then, what do you do? By virtue of giving your attention and commitment to them, you have begun to serve them. They are the new "presence of god," and to hell with the Real Presence of God. And so now you are bowing down to and serving the idols you have made.

You don't just do it with objects out there. You do it with yourself, too. And you did the very first step thereof when you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. I'd rather see things on my own." Well, there is no such thing as "on my own." That's just an imaginative idea. But you said, with all seriousness, "I'd rather see it on my own," and then you proceeded to think you did it. Now you had a definition of yourself as something different from What You Are. You had a definition of yourself that said, "I am capable of doing something on my own. I am an independent entity, a causative presence. I can make things on my own, independent of anything else." And so you became your first idol. Your definition of yourself, your act of independence, became your first idol. And then you created everything that you saw to serve your will, to serve you.

But the interesting thing is that once you did that, you then had to begin to serve the definitions you gave, because those are the only things that can seem to give you support for this imaginary, independent position that you now have conceived that you occupy and are. And so you're dependent upon your creations to define you, and you end up serving them. And you must protect them because they protect you in this imaginary, false position.

So, what are we doing when we're taking a few moments during the day, having intimacy with anything in your presence? We're in the act of undoing the idolization of the definitions you've given, and thereby you are weakening your so-called "authority," your so-called "capacity" to create something by yourself. And you're undoing the isolation that you found yourself in, but that you were surprised to find yourself in when you said, "I want a divorce, Father."

So, do this. It's a pleasure to do it. You can do it lightly. And it is one very practical way to use your will to let your Source back in, to use your will to join with the Father, who by virtue of His Fatherhood, gives you the clear experience of your Identity as His Offspring, as His Presence rendered visible, tangible and experienceable.

Let's go to the book.

Just reviewing for a moment.

RAJ READING: To believe a Son of God is sick...

RAJ: Meaning one of your Brothers.

RAJ READING: ...is to worship the same idol he does. God created love, NOT idolatry. All forms of idolatry...

RAJ: All likenesses of anything in the heavens above, the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth.

RAJ READING: ...are caricatures of...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...creation,...

RAJ: Itself.

RAJ READING: ...taught by sick minds which are too divided to know that creation SHARES power and NEVER usurps it.

[Editor's Note: Raj skips the next two sentences in the book, then continues by beginning the new material.]

RAJ: Okay, continuing.

RAJ READING: A sick god MUST be an idol, made in the image of what its maker thinks HE is.

RAJ: You see?

RAJ READING: And that is exactly what the ego DOES perceive in a Son of God; a sick god, self-created, self-sufficient, very vicious, and very vulnerable.

RAJ: You say, "Well, I don't think of myself that way." Of course you do. You try very hard to be self-sufficient. You think you are self-created. You think that your world is your definition of reality; what you have determined. "Each person has his own experience of reality."

Of course, you don't say that you're very vicious, but you're not kind, because when you believe that you are vulnerable, you attempt to protect yourself and your protection is always some form of defense. What? Against someone, against whatever would undermine your security. It's not Love. And so, to one degree or another, it is a form of viciousness. It is a form of attack.

And of course, you do see yourselves as very vulnerable. That's the reason that you attack. That is the reason you engage in self-defense. That's the reason you try to be a success, so you won't have to put up with being vulnerable. You try to be a success because you have forgotten that you are the Fullness of God already, right now, right there where you are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Is THIS the idol you would worship? Is THIS the image...

RAJ: What? The likeness.

RAJ READING: ...you would be vigilant to SAVE? Look calmly at the logical conclusion of the ego's thought system, and judge whether its offering is really what you want, for this IS what it offers you.

RAJ: Again, what does it offer you? It offers you the idea that you are self-created, self-sufficient, very vicious, and very vulnerable. That's the only thing it can offer you. And the only reason it can seem to successfully offer it to you is because you have forgotten Who You Are.

RAJ READING: ...judge whether its offering is really what you want, for this IS what it offers you. To OBTAIN this you are willing to attack the Divinity of your brothers, and thus lose sight of YOURS.

RAJ: You see? You get to keep what you give. It's just the Way It Works. If you attack the Divinity of your Brothers, that's what you get to keep, and thus you lose sight of yours [your Divinity].

You see, to have a moment of intimacy with a fingernail file, or a rock, is actually an invitation to an experience of What A Thing Is so that you can acknowledge it for What It Is and be able to keep it as yours, because it's a part of learning about What You Are. Just a simple little practice, but it will have monumental results, totally transforming results. You will not be able to experience What That Thing Is without having a brand-new experience of yourself, an enlightened experience of yourself.

Again.

RAJ READING: To OBTAIN this you are willing to attack the Divinity of your brothers, and thus lose sight of YOURS. And you are willing to keep it hidden and to protect this idol, which you think will save you from the dangers which the idol itself STANDS FOR, but which do not exist.

RAJ: You are willing to keep the Truth about you and the Truth about everything hidden in order to protect the definition you have made about everything. And you think that by keeping the Truth hidden, it will save you from the dangers which the idol itself stands for. Your idols stand for a defense against the punishment you are afraid you will be met with if you let the Truth that you've been denying register with you, because after all, you have been denying God—when all you've been denying, momentarily, is your Capacity to experience Who and What You Are. The idol apparently protects you from the truth that will punish you. But there is no such truth there. Knowing the Truth will set you free.

Now:

RAJ READING: There are no idolaters in the Kingdom, but there is great appreciation for every Soul which God created because of the calm knowledge that each one is part of Him.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "from every Soul" instead of "for every Soul."]

RAJ: Well, what on earth can that mean? It can only mean that, although you can easily identify yourself as an idolater, you can't possibly be an idolater because there are no idolaters in the Kingdom.

What there is...

RAJ READING: ...is great appreciation for every Soul which God created because of the calm knowledge that each one is part of Him.

RAJ: God.

That's what you know. You do know it. The Knowing is there in you.

RAJ READING: God's Son knows no idols, but he DOES know His Father.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "know the Father" instead of "know His Father."]

RAJ: You do know the Father.

You don't know any idols because the idols are purely fictitious. At the moment, you don't think they're fictitious. You think they're valid, you think they're real, and you also think that they are essential to your maintaining a sense of sanity and stability.

So-and-so is behaving very badly, in very destructive and unpleasant ways, and you say, "Because so-and-so is behaving this way, I need to be very careful around him or her. I recognize the kind of person he or she is, and I recognize that he or she is caught in his or her own misperceptions. It's very clear to me. And as long as they are, they are caught. And they are going to behave this way—in an undependable way, in a critical way, in an unpleasant way, and even possibly in ways that are dangerous to my well-being." Well, there is your idol. There is your definition. There is the likeness you have created in your mind in place of What That One Really Is. And if there's nothing to jog your memory, you will commit to that. And you will engage in an endless conflict, an endless attempt to overcome how you are seeing them, except that you say, "That's the way they are." And that does not promote healing. That does not promote correction.

Somebody has to jog your memory enough to cause you to stop, to hesitate, right in the circumstance and remember that what is called for is, at the least, a moment of intimacy with the more of What Is There than the definition you have made-up, and the more that is there than the definition your Brother or Sister has made-up about himself or herself. That is the only thing that will allow a response to come forth that will heal, that will transform, that will not call forth more and more vicious defense.

And that's how you become the Presence of Love that really is an extension. An extension—a gift that you get to keep but which also blesses—breaks down the density of the box that you're caught in, that they're caught in. And that's the only thing that will do it.

So the fact is that in spite of what you might think, there are no idolaters in the Kingdom. And therefore, you are not an idolater, even though you have made-up idols, and even though you think you've made commitment to them. It was an act of emptiness in which nothing happened. And therefore, you are still not idolaters. You might be confused, but you haven't become the ungodlike thing that you think you have become.

RAJ READING: There are no idolaters in the Kingdom, but there is great appreciation for every Soul which God created because of the calm knowledge that each one is part of Him.

RAJ: See, you will begin to get a glimpse of What Is True about your Brother, and the fact that he or she is part of Him, when you are willing to hesitate and have a moment of intimacy where you're willing to see the more of What Is There than what you believe is there.

RAJ READING: God's Son knows no idols, but he DOES know His Father. Health in this world is the counterpart of value in Heaven. It is not my merit that I contribute to you but my love, for you do not value yourselves.

RAJ: You see, it's the likeness that you have created, the likeness of heavenly things that you have created that you value. And you value them with extreme commitment because you believe they are essential to your maintaining your identity. You call it, "maintaining your feeling of security." You can't feel secure when you do not know yourself truly.

RAJ READING: When you do not value yourself you become sick, but MY value of you can heal you because the value of God's Son is one. When I said, "My peace I give unto you," I meant it. Peace came from God through me to YOU. It was for you although you did not ask.

RAJ: I'll tell you, sometimes you are so caught up in your self-definitions and your concepts that when someone does extend Peace, or extend value to you, you'll say, "I didn't ask for you to talk about that. I don't want to hear about that. If you want to honor me, you'll ask me what I want to talk about. And you'll talk about what I want to talk about. And we'll deal with things that are meaningful to me." This is when you're really in a pissed-off state of mind and you are wanting another's respect—meaning that [laughing] you want them not to pay any attention to any truth they might know and any rational mental processes that reflect God, so that they can devote their attention to you and your irrational point of view and validate it in order to make you feel safe. You see? Because "safe" means "not having to change."

Now, I want you to take this sentence and let it apply to you, instead of me. Let it apply to you in your extension of your real attention to your Brother.

Saying this as though to your Brother:

RAJ READING: When you do not value yourself you become sick, but MY value of you can heal you because the value of God's Son is one.

RAJ: In other words, not broken up into parts; not dished out in different quantities. It's One. It's Singular.

You see, what I do with you, the way I treat you, is what you are to learn about "how to be with your Brothers and Sisters"—with commitment and persistence, even if your Brother is resistant against the Truth that would heal him or her, because he or she sees it as undermining the infrastructure of beliefs that he or she has made-up to provide a sense of security and safety while being unconnected from their Source.

I'm going to change the words here a little bit for you to apply to yourself, relative to your Brothers: Peace comes from God through me to you. It is for you, although you did not ask.

Don't wait to be asked to extend the acknowledgement of God in your Brother. Don't wait to be asked to have that moment of intimacy in which you're willing to see the more of What's There than either you are currently seeing, or your Brother is currently seeing about himself. Don't wait to be asked. Be willing to be intimate. It doesn't require words. It doesn't require them to do anything to cooperate with you before you can do it. It just requires you to actively express curiosity to see the more of God that is there than you're seeing and than they are seeing.

That's what I do with you. And I am the Wayshower.

Now:

RAJ READING: When a brother is sick it is because he is NOT asking for peace,...

RAJ: When you are sick, it is because you're not asking for peace. When you're sick, you're not at peace. And before you were sick, you were not at peace, and you did not monitor or pay attention to the use you were putting your mind to. And you valued it, and so you, through your conflict, ate away, undermined the experience of Harmony—the experience of the Harmony of your body, which it is your body's Intent to be perfectly because that is what identifies you perfectly. You undermined the experience of it.

RAJ READING: When a brother is sick...

RAJ: When you are sick.

RAJ READING: ...it is because he...

RAJ: And you.

RAJ: ...are... [Editor's Note: Raj replaced the word "is" with the word "are."]

RAJ READING: ...NOT asking for peace, and therefore does not know he HAS it. The ACCEPTANCE of peace is the denial of illusion, and sickness IS an illusion.

RAJ: And so is the "you" that thinks it can successfully create definitions for Aspects of the Kingdom of Heaven.

RAJ READING: Yet every Son of God has the power to deny illusions ANYWHERE in the Kingdom merely by denying them completely in himself.

RAJ: Well.

RAJ READING: ...illusions ANYWHERE in the Kingdom...

RAJ: In the heavens above, in the earth beneath, or in the waters under the earth.

Anywhere in the Kingdom of Heaven where you've created a likeness; a copy with a new file name that you made-up.

RAJ READING: I can heal you because I KNOW you. I know your value FOR you, and it is this value that makes you whole.

RAJ: Now, is it my valuing of you that I know for you? No. It's the Value Of You that is inherent in you; that is inviolable, unchangeable, because it's the Presence of God right there where you are, which is the only thing presencing Itself right there where you are. That's your Value. And that's the Value I know about you. That's the Value I know for you while you're intent on dallying with a likeness you have made-up in your mind about yourself, and which you're giving preference to, thinking that you're doing something when nothing at all is happening.

RAJ READING: I know your value FOR you, and it is this value that makes you whole.

RAJ: You see, it didn't say, "It is this valuing of mine that makes you Whole."

It's this Value that is your Value that makes you Whole. And my recognizing it for you while you're ignoring it, and my confronting you with it in the most helpful ways, is what helps you remember to value yourself, and to no longer value the likeness you have made of yourself in your mind that's called "a concept of yourself."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: A whole mind is not idolatrous, and does not know of conflicting laws. I will heal you merely because I have only ONE message, and it is true. Your faith in it will make you whole when you have faith in me.

RAJ: You see, I have only one message.

Right now you have another message. It's called "a likeness" that you've made-up. And so there's the Real You giving your attention to a likeness that the Real You has made-up. And you are believing the details of the likeness that you have made-up. And all along you are the Christ, the Ultimate One, having this limited experience, because you've made a likeness of yourself and you're believing it and valuing it.

So you've got two messages going on. Really, you see, you are actively being the Christ behaving in an un-Christlike way and believing your behavior. It's really simple. You have never become the likeness that you made-up out of pure imagination.

RAJ READING: I can heal you because I KNOW you.

RAJ: You know what? When you look at a rock, or a flower, or a salt shaker, and have a moment of intimacy, and you are defenseless enough with it to have an influx of Awareness of What It Really Is, you will find that it will look different to you, because you did have definitions of it that didn't let you see it with total clarity. And you might be inclined to say, "I healed. Wow! And what it's like when it's healed! I am so glad I did that, because it was a shame for it to look the other way. I am so glad I was able to heal it." Well, it wasn't healed. It was revealed to you as What It Really Was, and so the distortions vanished.

You didn't heal it. You let it be What It Is, and you let What It Really Is register with you. You became defenseless with it. You became innocent of projecting upon it what you wanted it to be, because you thought that wanting it to be something and being able to make it be what you want it to be, made you real as a creator on your own.

RAJ READING: I can heal you because I KNOW you.

RAJ: You see? But can I actually change you? No.

I can be the agent for the Impulse of Revelation of revealing to you What Is True About You. And then you will see What Is True About You. And you will no longer be fooled. And your vision will not be distorted. And indeed, you might say, [finger snap] "I have been healed!" But you will know that the truer statement would be, "I have been revealed. I, Who I Really Am, have been uncovered." And the uncovering can happen because I Know You. And the uncovering can happen with others because you Know them, if you're willing to have that moment of intimacy with them in which you desire to see the more of What Is Really There than what either of you is currently seeing.

But you see, your Brother isn't the one who is going to be opening up for that. You will open up to it for your Brother. And that's the Gift you make. You initiate the process by being willing to abandon your definitions—the likeness you have made-up of them in your own mind and by which you are determining how you should behave with them, or against them. You are abandoning that, with a willingness to see the more that is really there.

RAJ READING: I do not bring God's message with deception, and you will learn this as you learn that you always receive as much as you ACCEPT. You could accept peace NOW for everyone you meet,...

RAJ: You see? [laughing] That sounds nice if it's said slowly.

RAJ READING: You could accept peace NOW...

RAJ: "Oh, I can see that as a possibility. I certainly would be willing. I'm willing to accept Peace."

But here's the rest of the sentence.

RAJ READING: ...for everyone you meet,...

RAJ READING: You could accept peace NOW for everyone you meet,...

RAJ: "Well, now you messed it up. Now you really made it complicated."

You see? You would love to be able to do this alone. You would love to be able to do it in the privacy of your own [small laugh] so-called, imagined, boundaried or bordered, mind.

But you don't get to keep what you don't give. And so, if you want Peace, you've got to give Peace to everyone you meet.

RAJ READING: You could accept peace NOW for everyone you meet, and offer them perfect freedom from ALL illusions because YOU heard.

RAJ: Because you let the revelation in.

RAJ READING: But have no other gods before Him,...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...or you will NOT hear.

RAJ: You see? Your likenesses that you have created are the gods that you have put in place, in place of God Himself.

"Thou shalt have no other gods before me."

"Thou shalt not..."—here's, you see, now here's the explanation in the second commandment—"Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven images or any likeness of any thing..."—because you would have to make a likeness of something—"...that is in the heavens above, the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth."

In other words, no matter where you could go to find a thing to make a likeness of, don't make a likeness of it. Because you make a likeness of it and you make it a substitute for God. You make it a substitute for your Source. And in doing that, you caused yourself to lose Conscious Awareness of What You Are. And that is too great a cost.

That is an unreasonable cost. And it is also a cost that is impossible to extract from you. The Christ cannot pay that cost. You cannot pay that cost. You cannot lose your Identity. It is an impossibility.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God is not jealous of the gods you make,...

RAJ: You should all be smiling. It is amusing that God might be jealous of the "gods" you make, the likenesses that you have created.

RAJ READING: ...but YOU are.

RAJ: Oh, you protect them. You protect them at the cost of all sane behavior.

RAJ READING: You would save them and serve them because you believe that they made YOU.

RAJ: "Well, you know, I had four years of college. I have three doctorates. I have practiced my profession for twenty years. I have written fourteen books that are well-received. I received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1998. And all of these things demonstrate that I am somebody to be recognized. You see, all of these things have made me. All of these things have rendered visible the fact that I'm valuable. But without them, I would be nothing."

RAJ READING: You would save them and serve them because you believe that they made YOU. You think they are your father because you are projecting onto them the fearful fact that YOU made them to REPLACE God. Yet when they seem to speak to you remember that nothing CAN replace God, and whatever replacements you have attempted ARE nothing.

RAJ: They're just likenesses, copies. They are not the original.

RAJ READING: Very simply, then, you may BELIEVE you are afraid of nothingness, but you are really afraid of NOTHING.

RAJ: The fear is a farce. The fear is an illusion.

RAJ READING: And in THAT awareness you are healed. You WILL hear the god you listen to.

RAJ READING: You WILL hear the god...

RAJ: You will hear God in the orchid when you wish to see and experience What God Is Being there and seen as an orchid. Or you will see whatever you have determined it is, if you think that you are seeing that the only thing there is the likeness you have created. You will see whatever God/god you are looking for.

RAJ READING: You WILL hear the god you listen to. You MADE the god of sickness, and BY making him, you made yourself able to hear him.

RAJ: This god of sickness.

RAJ READING: Yet you did not create him because he is NOT the Will of the Father.

RAJ: It's a likeness. It's not the real thing.

RAJ READING: He is therefore not eternal, and will be UNMADE for you the instant you signify your willingness to accept ONLY the eternal.

RAJ: Well, in a way, that's what you're doing when you are willing to have a moment of intimacy with whatever your eyes fall upon in front of you at any given moment. Because the more of what's there that you're not seeing is the Eternal, and as I said last week, is awesome.

RAJ READING: If God has but one Son, there is but one God. You share reality with Him...

RAJ: You hear that?

RAJ READING: You share reality with Him...

RAJ: That is the Way It Is. You might be ignoring it at the moment, but you can't get away from the fact that:

RAJ READING: You share reality with Him BECAUSE reality is not divided. To accept other gods before Him is to place other images...

RAJ: Likenesses. Different file names.

RAJ READING: ...before YOURSELF.

RAJ: Let's see, so you honor what you idolize, or you honor What Is Real.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You do not realize how much you listen to your gods, and how vigilant you are on their behalf.

RAJ: But I'll tell you an easy way to find out how much you do. Pick a difficult situation, or somebody you don't like, and see how much difficulty you have allowing yourself an intimate moment with them, with the desire to see the more of them, the God that is there.

RAJ READING: You do not realize how much you listen to your gods, and how vigilant you are on their behalf. Yet they exist only BECAUSE you honor them. Place honor where it is due, and peace will be yours. It is your inheritance from your REAL Father. You cannot make your Father, and the father you made...

RAJ: The likeness of God which is you. [laughing]

RAJ READING: You cannot make your Father, and the father you made did not make you.

RAJ: All of the idols you have made to prove that you are valuable didn't make you, haven't made you, and never will be able to make you valid and real in your own right.

RAJ READING: Honor is not due to illusions, for to honor them is to honor nothing.

RAJ: And the key here really is to dare to look at the likenesses you have made, the definitions you have made, the concepts you have originated, and dare to say: "These can't possibly be valid or real, because they did not arise out of a Connectedness with the Father that I was experiencing. And therefore, although I may not be able to release them all instantaneously, I am willing to acknowledge that they might all be flawed. And therefore, I am going to turn to a Source that can reveal to me What Is Real so that my experience of What Is Real can easily replace what will obviously be unreal. And I'm going to do this daily by attempting to have moments of intimacy with the strangest and most unusual and random objects that are confronting me at any moment when it occurs to me to let down and have a moment of undefended intimacy. And then, maybe once or twice a week, I will consciously practice this intimacy with somebody I don't like, or a circumstance that I can't stand. I will not overwhelm myself with attempting to do that all the time."

The first two commandments pretty well cover the whole thing. Now if you don't think that you have made-up any likenesses, if you think that everything you're seeing and the way you're determining what they are does not involve any definitions you have come up with, and that you are purely seeing the Presence of God in this horrible circumstance and that unpleasant person, and so on and so forth—and a flower that can die, or a child that can become ill, or a friend who can become permanently maimed—if you think that you are seeing these things and you are seeing God's Truth, you have a most wonderful surprise awaiting you. There is another way to see it all—a way that uncovers the Loveliness of Divine Love that moves and by Its Movement constitutes Creation. There is more for you to see. And it is awesome. And it's utterly natural to you to be experiencing it and nothing else.

Judy, Chris, I love you. I love you. And I look forward to being with you through the week and with you next Sunday.

Yes. My smile is joy. And there is reason for it. And what is the reason? It is you, right now. And I acknowledge that in you which is joy producing. I encourage you to be willing to look at those you know, and feel for the Capacity to experience Joy and a Capacity to feel Love for them, without their having arrived yet at total Awakening.

I am now through.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

First Edition – p. 173 / Second Edition – p. 186

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Let's go right to the book. And just for continuity, I'm going to back up to the beginning of the paragraph.

RAJ READING: You do not realize how much you listen to your gods, and how vigilant you are on their behalf.

RAJ: And remember that your "gods" are the likenesses that you have created—the new definitions that you have applied to Aspects of the Kingdom of Heaven and to which you have committed yourself rather than to What They Really Are.

RAJ READING: You do not realize how much you listen to your gods, and how vigilant you are on their behalf. Yet they exist only BECAUSE you honor them. Place honor where it is due, and peace will be yours. It is your inheritance from your REAL Father.

RAJ: Peace is.

RAJ READING: You cannot make your Father, and the father you made did not make you.

RAJ: The "father" you made are the likenesses that you created which apparently give evidence to your independent, autonomous self, and which you have subsequently come to serve because you feel they are so valuable to your continued, supposed, successful, separate existence from your Source.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Honor is not due to illusions,...

[Repeating for emphasis.]

RAJ READING: Honor is not due to illusions, for to honor them is to honor nothing. Yet fear is not due them either, for nothing cannot be fearful.

RAJ: [small laugh] Well, many of you, as you have moved along your spiritual path and have come to recognize that the ego is not your friend, have come to believe that it's your enemy and that you need to be alert, fearful, in fact, about what it might do to foul things up in your life. You think that it is something to be alert for, and cautious around, and afraid of.

But, it's nothing but a hypothesis that you're treating as an actuality. And so, to be afraid of it is to be afraid of nothing. And it's a foolish use of your mind and attention.

RAJ READING: You have chosen to fear love BECAUSE of its perfect harmlessness,...

[Editor's Note: The next three paragraphs were not verified with the recording because there is a gap in Dave's recording. I'm guessing Sun Rose probably recorded the live AUDIO broadcast whereas Dave recorded the live VIDEO broadcast.]

RAJ: Wow! That's incomprehensible, isn't it? How is it that, "You have chosen to fear Love because of its perfect harmlessness"?

Well, let me ask you this. What does a warrior do in time of peace? [laughing] Well, they become mercenaries. [laughing] Warriors find peace to be unfulfilling because there's no call for them to engage their expertise. Right? And so peace is the last thing that a warrior wants. It causes them to indefinitely be invalidated. Do you see that?

And as long as you all are intent upon seeing things your way, as long as you're intent upon maintaining this imagined divorce from your Source, you are in a position of a warrior because you've got to defend a false position. You've got to constantly reinforce, somehow, your independent autonomy and authority. And, so, you engage in ongoing battle to prove your existence.

That's why you fear Love, because Love does not call upon the skills of a warrior. Love does not call for defense. And so Love is a fearful thing because it means unemployment. Why? Because of its perfect harmlessness.

So:

RAJ READING: You have chosen to fear love BECAUSE of its perfect harmlessness, and because of this fear, you have been willing to give up your own perfect helpfulness and your own perfect...

RAJ: Capital "H".

RAJ READING: ...Help.

RAJ: Well, what's your own perfect, capital "H" Help? It's the Holy Spirit—that which you find at the Altar in the center of you which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

Your Right Mind is not the mind of the warrior. So now... [laughing] now not only does your warrior—the warrior that you have defined yourself as—not only does it become unemployed. If you wake up, it becomes extinct. It disappears. This is a very fearful thing to that mindset, that frame of reference.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Only at the altar of God will you find peace. And this altar is in you because God put it there.

RAJ: It's in you because it is you. Your Right Mind is not actually in you—it is you.

But when you chose to use your mind independent of the Father, in denial of the Father, it was in denial of your Right Mind. And so you found yourself to be separated from it. And so, from this independent vantage point which could be called a three-dimensional vantage point, the only way your Right Mind can be conceived of is as something in you—the Altar in the very center of your Being.

And it seems to be something you can approach because you have distanced yourself from it imaginarily, but with such commitment that you believe your belief. And so now That Which Is You seems to be something that you can approach, that you can go within to and arrive at. But all you're really doing is coming back into the natural, fuller Capacity that is divinely yours, because you are the Right Mind that God Is Being right there where you are.

RAJ READING: Only at the altar of God will you find peace. And this altar is in you because God put it there. His Voice still calls you to return, and He will be heard when you place no other gods before Him.

RAJ: In other words, when you no longer "make unto thee any likeness of any thing that is in the heaven above, the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth." When you no longer place an image or a likeness of something in your mind and give preference to the likeness that you have created in your mind, then you will have no other gods before Him, and you will wake up.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You can give up the god of sickness for your brothers; in fact, you would HAVE to do so if you give him....

[Editor's Note: Raj said "you would give him" instead of "you give him."]

RAJ: The god of sickness.

RAJ READING: ...up for yourself.

RAJ: You see? You can't claim your freedom from sickness without at the same time claiming your Brother's freedom from sickness. That's why you can't abandon your Brother in his ignorance and go along your merry, spiritual path and expect to have the fulfillment that is due you because you are the Son or Daughter of God.

Again.

RAJ READING: ...in fact, you would HAVE to do so...

RAJ: Give up the god of sickness for your Brothers.

RAJ READING: ...if you give him up for yourself. For if you see him anywhere,...

RAJ: The god of sickness.

RAJ READING: ...you have accepted him. And if you accept him, you WILL bow down and worship him, because he was made as God's replacement.

RAJ: Like any other likeness that you have created, it was made to replace the direct Conscious Experience of "what the likeness is a likeness of." In other words, the Spiritual Original.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The god of sickness.

RAJ READING: ...is the belief that you can CHOOSE which god is real.

RAJ: You see, this stepped back a step. You can say, "Oh, I have a stomach ache, or I have this disease or that disease, and this is the god of sickness," but really the god of sickness is that you think you have a capacity to make-up a likeness and have it become real, and then have the choice, have the capacity to make a choice between it and What Is Real. You see?

What happens is, when you say, "Mm. That is a lampshade. And that lampshade is made out of fibers and paper and other material elements. It is inanimate. It is matter. It has nothing to do with God. It was made by human beings, having been conceived by a mind in their brain, in their head."—and you have now created a likeness.

There is Something there. There truly is Something there that is Divine; that is Absolutely Divine and the Substance of it is Life Itself, Living Love, right here, right now. That's the Truth about it. But the definition I first gave is a made-up definition that is contrary to the Truth about it. And that definition, if accepted, causes you to experience an image, a likeness of What Is Real that has no Truth to it at all. It stands between you, then, and the Presence of God that is really there. And as long as you give commitment to it, it blinds you to the Presence of God. Your definition becomes the replacement for What Is Really There.

And you will serve that. You will serve that replacement because it does provide confirmation to you that you are indeed able to successfully create a replacement for God. And that makes you—as an independent authorizer—seem to be validated. It seems to make you as an independent authorizer real.

Now, you have created a context in which you have the capacity to choose between the Real Thing or the likeness—which is utterly fallacious. [small laugh] The most absurd of imaginations. And that is really “the god of sickness.” You could call it, “the god of mental illness,” “the god of insanity.”

The god of sickness...

RAJ READING: ...is the belief that you can CHOOSE which god is real.

RAJ: So if you want to cut through any illusion—whether it is sickness, whether it's disease, whether it's death, whether it's injury, whether it's jealousy, whether it's strife—if you want to cut through it quickly, don't give your attention to the elements of the strife. Give your attention to the fundamental false idea that you have a capacity to make a choice between God and an “image of God” that you've made. Attend to the idiotic idea that you can function in a way that God did not give you the capacity to function.

Instead of saying, “I've got to find a way to deal with this cancer that seems to be in my body, or this cancer that seems to be in my friend's body,” you need to say, “I need to deal with a fundamental premise that I have a capacity to see something that isn't there.” Now that cuts right to the chase.

And then, instead of saying, “Well, how could I have come to have this capacity? What flaw is there, or was there, in me that allowed me, a Child of God, to do this?”—and then go on an internal witch-hunt—[instead] you say, “Father, show me What You Are Being right there. I don't give a hoot about how I came to see something else. I don't care to find out what was wrong with me that caused me to see something that wasn't real. Father, I want to cut to the chase, and I want to know from You what You...”

[Editor's Note: There is a gap in the recording here so some material is missing.]

Okay. Continuing.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The god of sickness. Or we could say, "the god of illusion."

RAJ READING: ...is the belief that you can CHOOSE which god is real. Although it is perfectly clear that this has nothing to do with reality, it is equally clear that it has EVERYTHING to do with reality as you perceive it.

RAJ: So as long as you are indulging in the belief that you have a capacity to see things the way you want to see them, you will experience a distorted perception of the Kingdom of Heaven, right as you look at it, right as you are seeing it. And you are not seeing a new creation at all.

The next section is called:

RAJ READING: Magic versus Miracles

Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the heading is: [The End of Sickness]

RAJ READING: All magic is a form of reconciling the irreconcilable.

RAJ: It's what all of you engage in all the time. Because you live in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven, you are the Christ experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven because that is your Mind's Function, and at the same time, you are choosing to apply your own definitions to everything and live as though you are not in the Kingdom of Heaven while you are in the Kingdom of Heaven, and thus have a simultaneous, dual existence. Thus you are constantly attempting to reconcile the irreconcilable.

RAJ READING: All religion is the recognition that the irreconcilable cannot BE reconciled.

RAJ: That's the real meaning of the word "religion."

RAJ READING: Sickness and perfection ARE irreconcilable. If God created you perfect, you ARE perfect. If you believe you can be sick, you have placed other gods before Him.

RAJ: Likenesses in place of What God Is Being right there, which you're giving preference to.

RAJ READING: God is not at war with the god of sickness you made, but YOU are. He is the symbol of willing AGAINST God,...

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The god of sickness.

RAJ READING: ...is the symbol of willing AGAINST God, and you are afraid of him....

RAJ: Your creation.

RAJ READING: ...BECAUSE he cannot be reconciled with God's Will. If you attack him, you will make him real to you.

RAJ: This is why I have often said, "The only defense you have against the ego is disregard." The only thing the ego cannot defend itself against is disregard. The only thing that your infrastructure of false beliefs that you are constantly trying to validate cannot defend itself against is disregard. And when you disregard it, you're taking away your willingness to constantly try to reinforce it, and thus it begins to crumble.

This little practice I gave you of taking time to be intimate with the things that confront you in your experience is a very effective way of weakening your willingness to reinforce that which stands between you and God. And at the bottom line, what is it that stands between you and God? Your decision to see things your way. It isn't all the false things you're seeing. It isn't all the conflicted things that are threatening you. It's that you chose to say, "I want to see things my way." And in choosing to see things your way, you put yourself in a position of seeing everything falsely, and therefore as a threat to you. Not because everything is actually a threat, but because you're trying to act or behave as though you're out of your Mind. Outside of God, in other words.

It says here:

RAJ READING: ...you are afraid of him...

RAJ: The god of sickness.

RAJ READING: ...BECAUSE he cannot be reconciled with God's Will.

RAJ: Well, let's bring this right home. God's Will is your will when you're in your Right Mind. And so what you have created by means of your definitions stand at odds with your Sane Capacity to experience everything truly. Therefore, your "creations"—and here I mean your development of likenesses—cannot be reconciled with What You Divinely Are. They not only block you from the Direct Experience of God, they block you from your very own Sanity—your Right Mind.

You cannot be comfortable engaging with something that is at odds with your Fundamental Being and be comfortable. You cannot act at odds with your Self, with a capital "S", and be comfortable, because your unchanging Sanity will provide you with alarms that tell you "you're off the beam," that you are trying to be something that you cannot be.

And the noise of the alarm, you will call a distressing experience. The problem, as I have said before, is that you then attempt to do something to get rid of the alarm by manipulating your definitions, instead of abandoning them which is the only thing that will cause your Sanity that you can't get rid of to stop telling you that you're trying to do something you cannot do.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The god of sickness.

RAJ READING: ...is the symbol of willing AGAINST God, and you are afraid of him BECAUSE he cannot be reconciled with God's Will. If you attack him,...

RAJ: The god of sickness, which we could call "the ego."

RAJ READING: ...you will make him real to you. But if you refuse to worship him in whatever form he may appear to you and wherever you think you see him, he will...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...disappear into the nothingness out of which he was made.

RAJ: Why? Because you're going to be confronted with something awesome. You're going to be confronted with a miracle—a sudden shift of perception in which the Truth will be so clear to you that there won't be any capacity in you to be interested in the dull, monotonous, uncomfortable experience of a split mind. You will suck in the awesome. And by virtue of your total abandonment of any investment in reinforcing the ego or the god of sickness, it will vanish from your mind.

What do all of you metaphysical warriors do to defend that which is vulnerable? You think. You think righteous thoughts. You think the truth. You look for a more powerful truth to think. You busy your mind with what you call "the truth," so that you won't be distracted by a clearer recognition that you're not thinking clearly, that you are using your mind in an erroneous way.

But...

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Reality can dawn only on an unclouded mind.

RAJ: That is why silence is your salvation. That is why listening is essential and so valuable. Because in the silence of your mind, there are no clouds of dissonance, tension, strife, fear, anxiety, and on, and on, and on.

When you go into the quietness of your Being, you abandon your warriorhood. Now it is such a habit that you might not be able to abandon it for more than a moment in the beginning, but as you practice, the moments will grow longer, and longer, and longer, until they're long enough for you to recognize that these experiences are not psychological flukes, or an absence of synapses in your brain, but are a Real Experience of your Being. And as that begins to become clear to you, you begin realize that you can make a choice between fear (your warrior-mentality that sees everything as a potential threat) and your Peace in which you see no threat whatsoever. And you are able to be present with your world in an entirely new way that has nothing to do with warriorhood, but has to do with fulfillment that you haven't earned, or obtained by conquest. It simply is there, and it simply is You, and there's nothing to be done about it.

RAJ READING: Reality can dawn only on an unclouded mind. It is always there to be accepted,...

RAJ: Ever-present.

RAJ READING: ...but its acceptance depends on your willingness to HAVE it.

RAJ: "Oh, of course, I'm willing to have it." Not as a warrior, you're not. Because if you let yourself have it, all of the things that seemed to make you a valuable and successful entity will no longer be employed. And you will temporarily feel valueless. Why? Because you're not used to experiencing fulfillment that you haven't had to achieve through conquest. And so, how can fulfillment that you haven't had to achieve by conquest truly be yours already?

But you've separated yourself from it. You say, "That's not me. But I want a little bit of that, and so I will conquer this territory." Nowadays you conquer it with money. You pay enough and you obtain it; you claim it. Now you say, "It is mine. I did what was necessary to claim it and make it my possession. Now it is part of me." But that little plot of land you got, plus Saturn in the sky, is yours, is You already, just because. Just because that is the Nature of Being—your Being.

To the warrior, it is insulting to be loved so much that every single one of your needs is met without your having to raise a finger. That is an insult to the warrior-mentality. And the insult is something all of you are going to have to get past.

"Well, I have everything I need. I have everything and more than I could have wanted. And the quality and the exquisiteness of it all is far beyond my wildest imaginings. But it makes me feel useless. I used to get my sense of worth out of having clear-cut goals and taking whatever steps were necessary to achieve the goals. Even the most excellent things that I did that blessed others were a result of my having goals that I step by step caused to manifest in my life, proving that I was valuable. Now this sort of automatic fullness renders me impotent, without even an occasion for demonstrating my potency."

That's why you fear Love... because of its perfect harmlessness. And in the presence of the total experience of its perfect harmlessness, you are rendered nothing.

How can a warrior be happy with nothing to conquer? How can a warrior be happy being Whole? The warrior can't. And so waking up means that you're going to have to abandon the warrior-mentality, together with all of the aspects of the warrior-psychology that you were employing for the sole purpose of demonstrating your worth and your validity. And you're going to have to yield to, succumb to, having all without one iota of effort being put forth by you to have it.

And then you're going to have to let in the Idea that you have it because you are the Offspring of Love Itself. It is Gifted to you because it is the Nature of Love to not withhold any of What It Is from Its Self-Expression, and that this Love that you are Loved by is Itself the Ultimate Demonstration of your Worth, of the High Esteem in which you are held, because Love recognizes You for What You Are before you raise a little finger, or take one tiny step on your own. And so you will have to tough out the transition from warriorhood to the Real Conscious Experience of Being, of Wholeness, of Singularity, so that you can not only become familiar with it so that it no longer seems strange to you, but so that you might also have the realization that you are Whole because you are Loved because you are Ultimately Significant and Ultimately Worthy.

So again.

RAJ READING: Reality can dawn only on an unclouded mind. It is always there to be accepted, but its acceptance depends on your willingness to HAVE it.

RAJ: Your willingness to have it will be demonstrated by your willingness to abandon that which keeps you from having it—the "warrior-mind."

RAJ READING: To know reality must involve the willingness to judge UNREALITY for what it is.

RAJ: Not valuable.

You must be willing to judge warriorhood for what it is—an absolute impediment to your Joy and your Peace and your Fulfillment. Steps you took in the wrong direction, for wrong reasons, based upon an ignorance of How It All Really Works because you had said at some point, "Father, I would rather do it myself. Father, I would rather see it my way."

Again.

RAJ READING: To know reality must involve the willingness to judge UNREALITY for what it is. This is the RIGHT use of selective perception. To overlook nothingness is merely to judge it correctly, and because of your ability to evaluate it truly,...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...TO LET IT GO.

RAJ: Not so that you can tangle with it. Not so that you can object to it. Not so that you can force it out of your experience. [laughing] But so that you can, like this piece of paper between my fingers, open the fingers up and just let it go. It will leave you because it's not you.

And the only reason it was in your experience was because you constantly reinforced its presence, because you thought it was causing you to be something real, something significant, something respectable, something valid. And why were you doing things to become respectable? Because you didn't think you had Natural, Inherent Respectability. Why? Because you forgot Who Your Father Was. You forgot the Source of your Being and had said, "I'm going to determine things for myself."

[Editor's Note: Raj now reads part of a sentence already covered earlier in the previous ACIM paragraph.]

RAJ READING: ...if you refuse to worship him in whatever form he may appear to you and wherever you think you see him, he will disappear into the nothingness out of which he was made.

RAJ: And all you have to do is to evaluate it truly and let it go.

[Editor's Note: Raj now continues where he left off.]

RAJ READING: Knowledge...

RAJ: Or what I refer to as Knowing, with a capital "K".

RAJ READING: ...cannot dawn on a mind full of illusions,...

RAJ: Full of likenesses that you've cluttered up your mind with.

RAJ READING: ...because truth and illusions are irreconcilable. Truth is whole, and CANNOT be known by part of a mind.

The Sonship cannot be perceived as PARTLY sick because to perceive it that way is not to perceive it at all.

RAJ: Why? Because it is a Singularity, a Wholeness.

RAJ READING: If the Sonship is one, it is one in ALL respects. Oneness CANNOT be divided. If you perceive other gods...

RAJ: Likenesses. If you perceive likenesses that you've created.

RAJ READING: ...your mind is split, and you will not be able to LIMIT the split because the split IS the sign that you have removed part of your mind from God's Will,...

RAJ: That was the bill of divorcement that you put into place.

RAJ READING: ...and this means it is out of control.

RAJ: [laughing] Of course, it's out of control. You have said, "I do not want to be in Your Control, Father. I do not want to be a puppet at the end of Your Strings, exhibiting all of the Infinite, Exquisite Creativity of Your Being that the strings that connect me to You, cause me to embody spontaneously and naturally without my having to earn the right to give expression to them. I'd rather not have that connection, God. I'd rather not have You be controlling me. I would rather not have the insulting experience of being a kept man or a kept woman."

And so you seem to be lacking the control that Infinite Harmony would establish in you. And your existence is a state of chaos out of which you are determined to make or create order. And every act you engage in of creating order out of this chaos will prove to God that you are a viable and valid entity without strings. And that becomes your goal. That becomes your addiction. And every bit of energy you put into it, keeps you insane. In other words, not seeing clearly.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: To be out of control is to be out of REASON, and the mind DOES become unreasonable without reason. This is merely a matter of definition. By DEFINING the mind wrongly, you perceive it as FUNCTIONING wrongly.

RAJ: By defining the Kingdom of Heaven wrongly, you see it as functioning wrongly. And so that which is the Infinitude of your Being that is perfectly in Harmony with you because you are Divine and a Singularity, becomes a world of threat, of potential dangers; a cause for constantly being on guard so as not to be overwhelmed by the unexpected.

When you define something wrongly, you will perceive it as functioning wrongly. Those two things go hand in hand. And you don't correct the wrong functioning by manipulating what you're looking at. You correct it by letting go of the definition that is wrong that you are holding, by letting go of the wrong use of your mind, the impractical use of your mind.

And for you to go through your days determining what you're going to do and how you're going to be based upon memory, rather than a Connectedness with the Place of Excellence in you—the Holy Spirit, your Right Mind—you are bound to see things incorrectly and behave incorrectly, and cause yourself to feel an even greater need to manipulate the situation, rather than correcting the use of your mind that you're putting your mind to.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God's laws...

RAJ: Which simply means, "the Way Things Work, and the only Way Things Work."

RAJ READING: ...will keep your minds at peace because peace is His Will, and His laws...

RAJ: The Way Things Work.

RAJ READING: ...are established to uphold it. His are the laws of freedom, but yours are the laws of bondage. Since freedom and bondage are irreconcilable, their laws cannot BE understood together. The laws of God work only for your good, and there ARE no other laws beside His. Everything else is merely lawless, and therefore chaotic.

RAJ: It's so simple. You are the Sons and Daughter of God. And if you behave as though you are not, there's going to be the unavoidable recognition that you're doing something or attempting to do something impossible. And the recognition will be called "dissonance." Something significant enough to catch your attention so that you might say, "Wow! This doesn't work. I'm going to abandon this tack that I've taken. And I'm going to yield to the Way Things Work. I'm going to allow myself to be the puppet of the Way Things [Work.]"

Everything we've talked about tonight might seem to be complicated or difficult to grasp, but it's utterly simple. And even if part of you feels thrown off balance by it, part of you understood it perfectly. I mean actually consciously every bit of it made sense. The feeling of being thrown by a loop for it, comes from the fact that you don't know what to do with the information. Well, you see, that's the warrior-mentality. Information is something to be useful, to be put to use to make something happen.

I want you to let yourself be, just be in whatever level of uneasiness you're experiencing. And just abide with the information. Stay with the part of you that understood it perfectly. And recognize that the part of you that is thrown by it, is the part you need to abandon. It's the old warrior-perspective, and it cannot understand it. And if it can, it will try to get you to re-engage in using the information for some goal. But your clear understanding of what I've said, constitutes an experience of relief for you because you really feel the fact that there's nothing to be done about it, except to let the feeling and the experience in, and abide with it. Have an intimate moment with it. An ongoing intimate moment with it.

We will end there.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Have you ever noticed how your daily social interactions and your social life with friends is usually made up of interactions or discussions that have at their root [laughing] your not knowing “what the answer is” about this, that, or the other thing? You basically spend your time talking about “What if this?” or “What if that?” What if China behaved differently? What if Bush does this? What if the economy keeps getting worse? What if there was a new way to do this, or that, or the other thing?

As long as you can come up with some really interesting “what ifs,” you can be the center of attention. You can be the contributor to a wonderful evening of conversation, and you can come home and feel as though you had spent your evening well and something of substance had happened. In other words, your social lives, your interactions with each other thrive on not knowing “what the answer is.”

I’m going to say, in light of the Christ that each one of you is, that you feign ignorance for the purpose of having an interesting evening. Why do I say you feign ignorance? Because you have the capacity to know “what the answer is” and you’re not choosing to utilize it.

Hey, [laughing] you’re having a wonderful party. Twenty, thirty people are standing around chatting, talking. Some parts of the group are more animated than others. But what if in each group the answer was arrived at? Oh, [laughing] what would you do then? I mean, what would there be to talk about? What would be a reason for interaction? What if everybody came to the party already knowing the answers? [laughing] What would you do?

When we get together as we are right now, we’re not having that kind of social interaction. What I’m talking about is not a “what if” but a “what is.” You see, as long as you stay in the “what if” mode, you never arrive at anything you have to commit to. And yet, to know the Truth and make commitment to it, is the whole point.

Now, in your social interactions, you tend to group together with people who are asking similar “what ifs.” You might be a seamstress, or a quilter, or a... you know, and you get together with others because they say, “Well, what if you did it this way? It would be easier. It would be more efficient. You could get your points perfect, and so on and so forth.” And those quilters would not get together with auto mechanics who are saying, “What if we work on the hydraulic system and tweak it this way or that way to get better mileage or better speed?” You see? You tend to group together with those who ask similar “what ifs.”

And those in a metaphysical or spiritual vein will get together with others who are asking “what ifs.” What if God is All? What if sickness really is an illusion? And you can still get caught in never getting to the answer. You can enjoy the possibilities presented by the “what ifs” that come up, but then a brother, or a father, or a husband, or a good friend says, “The doctor has said blah, blah, blah, and has only given me so many months to live.” Now you find yourself in a very uncomfortable position—a position you wouldn’t find yourself in if you had not been using your prior time just enjoying the potentials brought up by “what ifs.” Now you come to a point where there’s a requirement to make a commitment to something. Because until you make commitment to Truth, the force of Truth will not proceed from you. This is the reason I keep saying to take every opportunity you can to have an intimate moment with anything in your experience so that you can shift gears from a “what if” to an experience of What Is Real, when there aren’t heavy-duty dynamics associated with it.

Now there seem to be two orders of reality. Actually there only seems to be one real order of reality and that’s the one described by your doctors and your scientists. And your world, generally speaking, starts with the big bang theory. The world is a material universe functioning according to laws of physics. Laws of matter is another way of putting it. But then there are those spiritual folk who say, “But there is a God. And God is Supreme. And God’s Laws govern. And they don’t coincide with the laws of physics. What are called ‘the laws of physics’ can serve God’s Laws, but in and of themselves they are not absolute.” So now we seem to have two orders of reality.

And if you’re a student of the Course, or if you are in a metaphysical vein, you talk in terms of God’s Laws being Real, and material laws being an illusion or being unreal. And so these two orders of reality are called “Reality” and “unreality,” but you still have two orders going on. And you will seem to have two orders of reality going on until you withdraw your commitment from one and invest it in the Real One.

You see, when you got your divorce from the Father, you gave your allegiance to (in quotes) “unreality”—the likenesses that you made-up to replace What Everything Really Was. And then you made commitment to your definitions. Because you made commitment, you brought your will—which is a Divine Will, it’s the only Will there is—you brought it into play and your decision has governed your experience. It makes God and God’s Laws seem to be otherworldly—spiritual in the sense of not really having too much to do with the material world—ethereal, evanescent, wispy, wonderful, but not really relevant.

And so, in many ways, the Laws of God and God being the only Creator is really rather unreal— [knocking on the table] not real, tangible, solid. [knocking on the table] Stuff that makes noise, stuff that hurts your knuckles if you hit it too hard, you see, that’s real.

Now, the warrior that all of you are to some degree or another, is really the Christ using his or her power poorly. Now what are you going to do, if you decide [to do anything] upon hearing of the potential demise of a friend, or a relative, or a mate—as a warrior what are you going to do? Let me put it this way. In order to respond as an agent for change, meaning change from the status quo, you, as the Christ, are going to have to use the very same capacities that you “as the Christ pretending to be a warrior” were using.

What are the characteristics of a warrior? Well, commitment to purpose, diligence, unswerving allegiance, strength, the capacity to commit fully. You see, there isn’t really a warrior with those capacities. There is the Christ with those capacities pretending to be a warrior. And what you’re called upon to do, in order to actually be an agent for change, is to bring those very same qualities and capacities into play on behalf of What Is True. In other words, on behalf of the Order of Reality that is the only Real One, even though you have come to believe that that one is vague, wispy, spiritual, and therefore, not really, really, very relevant to the human condition—when the fact is it’s absolutely relevant to the human condition because “the human condition” is what you are calling the Kingdom of Heaven and Life as a Christ. You see? You’re calling it something different from What It Is.

Tell me, what would be the point of our sharing these ideas that I’ve been talking about if it weren’t for the purpose of your being able to face a dire circumstance, what is termed “a dire circumstance,” in a way that contributes to its disappearance? Well, someone this past week said, “I don’t think I have a snowball’s chance in hell at [small laugh] being able to be an agent for change.” Someone else said, “Well, I’ve never seen cancer healed, or, I’ve never seen this problem overcome.” Well, I promise you, you never will see it overcome if you adopt that attitude, or continue to reinforce that attitude. You will never see a change, a healing, if you are unwilling to step outside the box and look outside your current definitions. And so you all need to get about the business of consciously, purposely intending to see things with new eyes because it's your Birthright to be seeing the Kingdom of Heaven, instead of "the human condition" that you're claiming is what is going on instead of the Kingdom of Heaven right where the Kingdom of Heaven is.

Now a warrior would stand up to the problem, whatever the dire circumstance is, and find a way to beat it. But, for lack of better words, an Awakening Christ, one who is not caught in the warrior role and mental attitude, would say, "I challenge the god of sickness by challenging the idea that I have the capacity to choose between God and the gods I made-up. I challenge the idea, the belief, that I have the capacity to see something that God is not being right here, right now, nor has He ever been." You see, the Awakening Christ, leaving the warrior stance, doesn't try to change circumstances, but calls into question an apparent capacity that he has to see something that isn't Real, to see something that isn't True—meaning to see something that was not set into place by the Creative Act of God. And then, using the capacity to bring full commitment into play, he or she stands right in the face of everyone else's reaction to the dire news and does not join in with it, and with purpose and diligence remains true to the Truth.

You say, "Well, nobody I know has ever overcome a death notice." Well, hell, at least you have somebody still alive to work with. I didn't have that with Lazarus. In fact his sister said, you know, laughed, scorned me, you know, "His body stinketh." He'd been dead so long that he'd started to decompose. You know, this was the material view, this was the typical view adopted and committed to by her and everyone else. But it wasn't my view. And I couldn't afford to say, "Oh, yes, I know. It's awful, isn't it? What a loss. Everybody is going to miss him. Yes, you are right. Nothing can be done." You see? Hey, and what evidence did I have then to rely upon of anybody else having been raised from the dead? Not any more than you have. But that's not a handicap. That is not a handicap. One with God is a majority, is a Singularity.

And with your already well-developed, existing capacity to be a warrior, you can use those qualities and capacities to be the Christ. You don't have to develop new capacities. You just have to use your capacities well, instead of poorly. You see? You may not see how to do it, but you can see intellectually my point. All of this that we're talking about is about being differently in the same old circumstances. In other words, challenging the status quo, not by overcoming problems out there in the world, but by withdrawing your commitment to a so-called "capacity" you think you have to see what God didn't make.

And we've already talked at length about how you do that; how you withdraw from your commitments to your definitions. You stand right in the face of the problem that everyone else is crying and whining and grieving about, and you say, "I choose for my Peace, because in my Peace, my capital 'V' Vision becomes available to me, which is essential to my seeing the Truth and finding correction happening." Correction meaning visible, tangible healing where the doctors say, "Where before I saw a problem, I see nothing but perfection."

So don't whine and cry because you've been presented with an opportunity to be a warrior well, to be the Presence of the Christ committed to the capital "V" Vision of Reality—the only Reality there really is—that heals, that corrects the illusion for all to see. You abandon your strength, your imagined strength over things, in favor of your Strength to not be distracted by what doesn't exist. You abandon your allegiance to the laws of physics. You abandon it in favor of making commitment to and giving your allegiance to Truth—the Omnipotence of God.

Now, before we get into the book, one last thing. When you agree with the grievous reactions of everyone else to whatever it is the doctors have said, you have abandoned yourself to their fate, and you've abandoned them to theirs. I say that because if you refuse to yield to everyone's typical response, and you disagree with their typical response, and you do not validate the dire outcome that is predicted, you do it for yourself and them. And the gift you give them, you get to keep. If you want to buy into their mortality, you buy into your mortality. And you will seem to create for yourself a fantasy of mortality. But why? The habits are deep. The mutually-agreed-upon concepts and definitions have been around for a while. But you don't have to succumb to them. And the fact is that the whole point in everything we've been doing leads you specifically to the point of contradicting the presentation with whatever clarity about Truth you have experienced, and standing with warrior-like allegiance and commitment to those Truths. Not "head truths," but felt Truths.

Oh, but here we get back to how everybody is conditioned to behave with each other in social settings. And hey, you know, a whole family getting together, family and friends commiserating over the bad news from the doctor, hey, that's just a party with a downbeat. It's just a social gathering on a negative basis where everybody doesn't know the answer, but suggests answers, you know. "Well, we know he's really eternal and so we don't have to really be so sad because we know he won't really die. And we know that someday we'll be able to be with him again." You see? Those are apparently answers. You come up with them so as to not feel as bad as you might otherwise feel.

But answers that are Answers correct the illusion, correct the problem, eradicate the problem. And that's what this is all about. So when you get this kind of news, remember what this has all been about so that you don't spontaneously join in the crowd mentality and lose your opportunity to demonstrate your immortality along with your brother's, or father's, or husband's or wife's. You see? One could say, "Well, this is an opportunity." Here's another kind of thing that you could hear in a social setting, "This is an opportunity for me to find out whether all this that I've been believing in is true or not." You see, it's a little bit more positive attitude. "This is my opportunity."

Either you love Truth, or you don't. Either Truth is all-important to you, or it's not. And you don't do something, you don't align yourself with the Father, you don't turn to the Father in your extremity to find out whether the Truth that you've been learning is true. You've got to be more connected than that. You've got to make commitment to Truth regardless of the outcome, because you don't want to be participating in or experiencing delusion in any way. It's like it's time to put your cards on the table to see whether you've got anything in your hand or not. And if you've been bluffing, let it be known. And if you're not bluffing, then [finger snap] be consistent with what you really believe and stop presenting yourself as though you "don't know" because that fits in with the group mentality; that's safe.

Thank God for every opportunity you have to challenge what you know cannot be true. And every single one of you know that God, Life Itself, the Energy and Movement of Life Itself, is incapable of creating anything that comes anywhere near death; the snuffing out of the slightest speck of Reality. You know that. That's what's in your hand, and that's what you need to put on the table, and declare yourself to yourself, and become consistent, and not just appear to play at it because that's what everyone else does and no one likes a "Jesus freak." No one likes a holy, holy man. So I will know what I know but I will not present myself as though I know it, not even to myself. But you come upon circumstances that call for that kind of clarity when you get the bad news about yourself, or you get the bad news about someone else.

Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: The laws of God work only for your good, and there ARE no other laws beside His.

RAJ: Now, you've got to accept that as an Absolute Fact. It is the Truth. Either something is, or it isn't. There aren't any "maybes." There aren't any "what ifs."

RAJ READING: The laws of God work only for your good, and there ARE no other laws beside His. Everything else is merely lawless, and therefore chaotic.

Yet God Himself has protected everything He created BY His laws. Therefore, everything that is not under them does not exist.

RAJ: It's very black and white. And that's what commitment is. It's very black and white. It either is there, or it isn't there. There aren't any "what ifs." There aren't any "maybes."

RAJ READING: "Laws of chaos"...

RAJ: Which you all talk about, and your physicists talk about it, and therefore it seems as though you're talking about something real because you've got words naming it.

RAJ READING: "Laws of chaos" are meaningless by definition.

RAJ: If God is All and God is Singular, then All of Creation exists in Absolute Perfect Harmony. That's the Law of Being. That's the Law of Existence.

"I know," you say, "but I look around me and I see chaos." Then I say to you, you look around you and see nothing! You look around you at the Kingdom of Heaven and see "the human condition" and I tell you that what you're seeing doesn't exist. Your false interpretation of the Kingdom of Heaven is not the Kingdom of Heaven. And what you think the Kingdom of Heaven is that you're calling "the human condition" is a hypothesis and has no actual existence. You are looking at your belief and you are seeing nothing.

Cancer is nothing, believed to be something. It's an imagination believed to be more than imagination, and then suffered from. And all of it isn't happening. That's a radical statement. But in the Order of Reality that is Real, it is an Absolute Statement that means that you, and your fathers and husbands, and mothers and wives, and children, who are faced with death, cannot possibly be faced with them. And therefore, you cannot afford to join in their belief and the belief of everyone else around them that they can die and that they will die.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Creation is perfectly lawful, and the chaotic is without meaning because it is without GOD.

RAJ: Chaos was not made-up in the Mind of God and chaos was not made-up in the Mind of the Son of God. But the Son of God has had an imagination, and has imagined things that God did not create, and then made commitment to those imaginations, thinking that he has created something when he has created nothing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You have given your peace to the gods you made, but they are not there to take it from you...

RAJ: There's nothing there to take your peace away from you.

RAJ READING: ...and you are not able to give it to them.

RAJ: Because there ain't nothin' there to give 'em to.

You see? You see how black and white this is? Either God's Laws are Omnipotent, or, there are no Laws of God and everything is chaos. And yet, at this very moment, if you just pay attention to where you are, chaos is not going on.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are NOT free to give up freedom, but only to DENY it.

RAJ: We could say you are not free to give up Reality, but only to deny it. You are not free to give up being the Christ, but only to deny it. You are not free to give up Knowing, but only to deny it, only to deny that you know. Because after all, if you knew, it would be a pretty dull evening with the crowd tonight.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT do what God did not intend because what He did not intend DOES NOT HAPPEN.

RAJ: This is how black and white and absolute you need to get, you need to be, when you hear so-and-so has a terminal condition, or you have a terminal condition. The only way that experience, that illusion could seem to come up is if you've been willing to abandon your Capacity to be clear—your Capacity to be clear, to be Singular. And you do that, you all do that for many reasons—so that you don't stand out in the crowd, so that you don't make waves, so you don't stand in receipt of others' jealousy because they think you have more than they have, or their hate because they don't want to hear the answer when you are the answer, and so on.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your gods do not BRING chaos; you are ENDOWING them with chaos and accepting it of them.

RAJ: Now, you do have a Capacity to endow things because you're the Christ and you have the Will of God as your Will.

So:

RAJ READING: Your gods do not BRING chaos; you are ENDOWING them with chaos and accepting it of them. All this has never been.

RAJ: Seems to have been, but it has never been. That is why there can be instantaneous healings. Because “the thing healed of” has never been because God never created it. And that’s why its seeming presence can evaporate instantaneously.

And I don’t care whether you’ve never seen it happen yet. It’s the Truth and it does happen. And you might begin to seek out those to associate with who are asking the “what if” kind of questions that include experiences of healing, because they are all around your globe. They just don’t get the publicity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Nothing but the laws of God has ever operated, and nothing except His Will will ever be.

[Editor’s Note: Raj said “Nothing but the laws of God have” because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as “Nothing but the laws of God has” as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: Is that other-worldly? Is that irrelevant? Well, you can make it irrelevant by saying, “Yeah, in the sweet bye-and-bye I can believe that’s the case, but not here.” And so you, with all the authority of the Christ, lay down the law and govern your experience. And I’m saying that you, as the Christ, can lay down a different law—a law that is in harmony with God’s Law.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You were created through His laws and by His Will, and the manner of your creation established you AS creators.

RAJ: With a Capacity to endow.

RAJ READING: What you have made is so unworthy of you that you could hardly want it if you were willing to see it AS IT IS. You will see nothing at all. And your vision will automatically look beyond it to what is in you and all around you.

RAJ: Listen to this again.

RAJ READING: What you have made...

RAJ: You know. What have you made? You’ve made a definition.

And it goes like this. If a doctor says you have terminal this or terminal that, and shows you X-rays demonstrating that what he says is there, is really there, [you say,] “I will believe him. I will take it in hook, line, and sinker. And I will not object. I will agree with him completely.” And then you cry and you anguish when you get his word—the doctor’s. But it isn’t because you’ve gotten “his word." It's because you have this definition, this rule in your own mind that says, "I will unquestionably believe this man's statement without ever questioning the depth, or the breadth, or the height of his knowledge of What Truth Is."

RAJ READING: What you have made...

RAJ: Such as a rule like that.

RAJ READING: ...is so unworthy of you that you could hardly want it if you were willing to see it AS IT IS.

RAJ: In other words, as just a hypothesis that's not real, has no existence, and that you have made commitment to it, and you're making yourself miserable.

RAJ READING: ...if you were willing to see it AS IT IS. You will see nothing at all.

RAJ: You will see that there's nothing there.

RAJ READING: And your vision will automatically look beyond it...

RAJ: Isn't that what I've said? Look at the flower and have a moment of intimacy with it to see the more that is there than your current definition is allowing you to see.

RAJ READING: ...your vision will automatically look beyond it to what is in you and all around you. Reality cannot break through the obstructions you interpose,...

RAJ: The likenesses that you serve. The gods that you have made-up.

RAJ READING: Reality cannot break through the obstructions you interpose, but it WILL envelop you completely when you let them go.

RAJ: When you let the obstructions go. And it will envelop your brothers, and your husbands, and your fathers, and your wives, and your friends.

RAJ READING: When you have experienced the protection of God the making of idols...

RAJ: Images. Likenesses.

RAJ READING: ...becomes inconceivable. There are no strange images in the Mind of God, and what is not in His Mind cannot be in yours because you are of ONE Mind, and that...

RAJ: Capital "M".

RAJ READING: ...Mind belongs to HIM.

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: It is yours BECAUSE it belongs to Him,...

RAJ: Because it belongs to Him, His Extension of Himself includes All That He Is, and so it is yours because it is His.

RAJ READING: It is yours BECAUSE it belongs to Him, for ownership is sharing to Him.

RAJ: To have, give all to all. What you give, you get to keep.

RAJ READING: ...ownership is sharing to Him.

RAJ: And it thereby has to be the same for you.

RAJ READING: And if it is so for Him, it is so for you. His definitions ARE His laws, for by them He established the universe as what it is. No false gods you attempt to interpose between yourself and your reality affect truth at all. Peace is yours because God created you. And He created nothing else.

RAJ: Now, for those of you who are dealing with the pronouncements of physicians regarding loved ones, I want you to read this section that we're reading from and every time it uses the word "you," let it represent "the loved one" that has received this determination, because then you're knowing the Truth about your Brother.

So, you say of your loved one:

RAJ READING: When you have experienced the protection of God the making of idols becomes inconceivable. There are no strange images in the Mind of God, and what is not in...

RAJ: ...the... [Editor's Note: Raj substituted "the" for "His."]

RAJ READING: ...Mind cannot be in yours...

RAJ: Meaning your loved one.

RAJ READING: ...because you are of ONE Mind, and that Mind belongs to HIM.

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: It is yours...

RAJ: Your loved one's.

RAJ READING: ...BECAUSE it belongs to Him, for ownership is sharing to Him. And if it is so for Him, it is so for you.

RAJ: What better use could you put your mind to in response to the grief and the sadness that your loved ones are experiencing? Could it possibly be more beneficial for you to join them in their grief? You know better than that. So use your mind this way.

Continuing, with reference to your loved one.

RAJ READING: His definitions...

RAJ: God's Definitions.

RAJ READING: ...ARE His laws, for by them He established the universe as what it is. No false gods you attempt to interpose between yourself and your reality affect truth at all.

RAJ: Meaning it doesn't affect the Truth About You at all.

RAJ READING: Peace is yours because God created you. And He created nothing else.

RAJ: So, if something else seems to be going on, nothing else is going on.

RAJ READING: The miracle is the act of a Son of God who has laid aside all false gods, and who calls on his brothers to do likewise.

RAJ: Well, how on earth could you be a participant in a miracle if you are crying and whining and grieving along with your distressed Brother or Sister?

RAJ READING: The miracle is the act of a Son of God who has laid aside all false gods,...

RAJ: Who is not validating illusion. Who is not validating what can't be true. And [who] isn't joining in, but is, instead, going within to the Altar and saying, "Father, what is the Truth here? I don't know enough about Reality to come to a conclusion about this illusion. I don't know enough about How Things Really Work to know how upset I really ought to be under the limited circumstances I find myself." You see? "So, I am going to appear to be irresponsible, and not be reactive when I don't know yet enough of the Truth to know whether this really is serious." You see? "And in the absence of playing into reaction, I'm going to stay in my Peace and I am going to listen for Your Voice. And when I can't hear Your Voice, I will pay attention to the Words of Truth that I understand the meaning of, even if I haven't experienced the Meaning of them."

RAJ READING: The miracle is the act of a Son of God who has laid aside all false gods,...

RAJ: Mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

RAJ READING: ...and who calls on his brothers to do likewise.

RAJ: His brothers, his father, his mother, his wife—whoever is suffering from false gods at the moment.

RAJ READING: It... [Editor's Note: Raj substituted "The miracle" for the pronoun "It."]]

RAJ: The miracle...

RAJ READING: ...is an act of faith because it is the recognition that his brother can do it. It is a call to the Holy Spirit in his mind, a call to Him...

RAJ: With a capital "H".

RAJ READING: ...which is strengthened by this joining.

RAJ: You see? That's your Capacity as the Christ to be the agent for change, because you're not joining with the little, puny ego-sense of self that sees his life coming to an end unavoidably. And it is joining with the Eternal Christ that has to be there in order for there to seem to be less than that there.

RAJ READING: Because the miracle worker has heard Him...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...he strengthens His Voice...

RAJ: God's Voice.

RAJ READING: ...in a sick brother by weakening his BELIEF in sickness, which he does NOT share.

RAJ: You see? Your task here is to be a miracle worker, not a grieving family member. Is that clear?

RAJ READING: The power of one mind CAN...

RAJ: Get that word, "CAN." Not cannot.

RAJ READING: ...CAN shine into another because all the lamps of God were lit by the same spark. It is everywhere and it is eternal.

In many only the spark remains, for the great rays are obscured. Yet God has kept the spark alive so that the rays can never be completely forgotten.

RAJ: So, when you have heard the bad news and you find yourself unable to keep your Peace or your Joy and you become depressed, you're not lost.

RAJ READING: ...God has kept the spark alive so that the rays can never be completely...

RAJ: Gone.

RAJ READING: ...forgotten. If you but see the little spark you will learn of the greater light, for the rays are there unseen.

RAJ: And this is your task. Your task is to be the place where the miracle can occur right in the face of an illusion that seems to justify your abandoning your willingness to believe the Truth.

You see? "But it's so grievous. There's no way I can keep my Peace. It is so grievous. And I've never seen anybody else escape from this. So, I'm going to abandon the awareness of Truth that I do have." You see? Well there's the Christ making a law, endowing something that doesn't exist, or endowing something that doesn't deserve your allegiance with justification for allegiance. And you see, you're serving the god of sickness, which I pointed out last week was your belief that you have a capacity to see something that doesn't exist, and then make a choice between "what does exist" and "what doesn't exist." It is the belief that you have a capacity to choose between gods.

Again.

RAJ READING: If you but see the little spark you will learn of the greater light, for the rays are there unseen. Perceiving the spark will heal, but knowing the light will create. Yet in the returning the little light must be acknowledged first, for the separation was a descent from magnitude to littleness. But the spark is still as pure as the great light because it is the remaining call of creation. Put all your faith in it, and God Himself will answer you.

RAJ: You have the capacity to put all your faith in it, because you have been a great warrior fighting on the wrong side, fighting for the wrong thing. But the strength is the Strength of the Christ brought to bear in stupid directions. Now bring that same Strength that you have never stopped exercising, bring it to bear on the Truth.

RAJ READING: Put all your faith in it,...

RAJ: Let your capacity as a warrior to make full commitment come into play and give your full allegiance to the Truth.

RAJ READING: ...and God Himself will answer you.

RAJ: Everything is black and white. Everything is either "yes" or "no." Either there is existence, or there is nonexistence. And all of you, I encourage all of you to cease existing in "the neverland" between "what exists" and "what doesn't exist." And stop being with each other from that place of nebulous not knowing, in the world of "what ifs." Become hot or cold, black or white.

Okay.

I invite everyone to just abide with what I have shared. Don't engage in "what ifs" about it. I was not having a casual social interaction with my friends. I was being the Answer with my friends, uncovering the fact that my friends are the Answer and know the Answer.

Okay.

I love you, and I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

You know, if there's one thing that should be becoming ever clearer as we proceed through the Course, it's how inextricably intertwined each of you are with each other. You can't be in the dream alone, and you can't wake up and be alone.

What you see about a Brother is what you believe about yourself. It's really impossible for you to have a sense of another that is better than your sense of yourself, because you see what you're looking with. In other words, I'm going to put it this way, whether you're experiencing a dream, a fantasy, or whether you're experiencing Reality, you are experiencing a Singularity. You can't get outside of the Singularity of God. You can't get outside the Singularity of Reality. As a result, if you imagine that you are outside of the Singularity, the Singularity governs your experience absolutely, and so your illusions are bound to the same laws that Reality is.

Again, if you were awake at this very moment, you would be experiencing everyone and everything as it is, As It Truly Is. Every Aspect of Creation would be... this is not a good choice of words, but would be colored by the purity of your vision. Your experience of it would be absolutely consistent with the purity of your vision. Likewise, if you are engaging in fantasies, and you are honoring and believing your fantasies, then all of the Kingdom of Heaven and everyone in it that you see will be absolutely consistent with the lens you're looking through—I will say the impurity of your vision.

This is just another way of saying, you are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom. If you're already the Christ, if you are already exactly What God Is Being right there where you are, but you're choosing to interpret it—the Conscious Experience of Being—as something other than that, you will, by virtue of the Law of Being, find everything you're looking at absolutely colored by, affected by, consistent with whatever the distortions are that you are embodying and identifying as you, as yourself and your mind.

You're already embodying your Christhood right now poorly. Why do I keep harping on this? Because it's got to register with you sooner or later that right now you are the Ultimate behaving as though you're not Ultimate. And your Ultimatehood is not off in the future after you die. And you must get this point so that you will begin to behave differently right here, right now. Because until you behave differently, you will not see differently. Whether you die a hundred thousand more times, or seem to, you will not get into Nirvana. You will not get into the Kingdom of Heaven, until you choose to behave differently, use your mind differently, be differently. So right here and right now is the place to have your curiosity that I keep talking about. And your experiences with your Brother or your Sister, your fellowman, is the place to begin to be differently.

We've been talking about the god of sickness. And let's remember, let's remain clear of what "the god of sickness" is. The god of sickness is a capacity you think you have to decide which God/god is Real/real—God Himself, or the likenesses you have made-up in place of God which you think you have a capacity to ordain with Ultimatehood—[laughing] a god that equals God Himself.

What are the gods you've made-up? The definitions of each other and of yourself and of everything—the definitions you have made-up about everything that are different from What They Really Are. The images, the likenesses that you have made-up in your mind are not really the god you're serving. The god you're serving is this imagined capacity that you think you have to make-up images and then decide you are going to call them something different from What They Are, something different from God. Remember this. The god of sickness is this so-called "capacity" you think you have to make-up images and likenesses and serve them, instead of God. It's a capacity that you don't have, but you imagine you have it. And you have imagined multi-layered definitions that support and boost your faith in this so-called "capacity."

It's important to remember this. If you see another or you see yourself sick, it isn't the disease that is the "god" that's trying to control. That's not the "god" of disease. And the disease is not a god. It [the "god"] is your supposed "capacity" to see something there that God is not being.

So let's lighten up a little bit. Let's just say you look at your neighbor, or your friend, or your mate, and you see a human being. And your experience with that human being is ordinary, run-of-the-mill, an everyday experience. It certainly is not a holy experience. There is not a tone or a ring of Divinity, of Ultimacy, to it. Well, there you are experiencing your definition of that one in place of What

That One Really Is, which is the Presence of God. Every interaction, every sighting [laughing] of another person is supposed to be awesome. Why? Because you are the Christ, with the Real Capacity to see the Christ or God in your Brother. And so is your Brother. God experiencing God is an awesome experience.

I told my disciples, "If you have seen me, you have seen the Father." And I've said before to you, "If you have seen your Brother, you have seen the Father." If you're not seeing the Father, something is wrong. And all that's wrong is that you are bowing down to this "capacity" you think you have to see something other than God right there where God is the Only Thing going on. And as a result, you don't have a wholesome, satisfying, joyful experience. It's an experience of potential threat. It's an experience of vulnerability. It's hell.

So, if you are inextricably intertwined with your Brother and Sister, then it's with your Brother and Sister and every single thing in your experience that you are called upon to look at with new eyes. Because the willingness to look at it with new eyes, instead of your previously developed definitions, is what allows the light bulb to go on, the "Aha!" to occur, the insight (the revelation) to happen. And until it happens, no matter how many times you quote "die" unquote, nothing will change. So, all of you stand at the threshold of insight and new vision. And you should be utilizing your experiences with each other and with your world for the express purpose of having this new vision.

Okay. Let's go to the book.

The section heading is:

RAJ READING: The Denial of God

The rituals of the god of sickness are strange and very demanding. Joy is never permitted, for depression is the sign of allegiance to him. Depression means that you have foresworn God.

RAJ: Withdrawn your allegiance. Withdrawn your commitment. Gotten your bill of divorcement.

RAJ READING: Men are afraid of blasphemy, but they do not know what it means. They do not realize that to deny God is to deny their OWN identity, and in this sense the wages of sin IS death. The sense is very literal; denial of..

RAJ: Capital "L".

RAJ READING: ...Life perceives its opposite, as ALL forms of denial replace what IS with what is NOT.

RAJ: When you create a new definition for something, it is an act of denial of God. You're saying, "I prefer in place of What God Is Being there, and in place of my Conscious Experience of What God Is Being there, to see something else and give my attention and my commitment to it." Every single definition or concept you have made-up or come to, I'm going to say, ignorantly, is a denial of God, because it is something you are putting in place of God, in place of What The Real Thing Is that you've created the new definition about. And your definition stands between you and God.

Now this is important.

RAJ READING: No-one can really do this,...

RAJ: And you should read that not as an admonishment, but as something funny.

RAJ READING: No-one can really do this,...

RAJ: You should smile and feel the smile towards yourself when you realize that you cannot really do this.

RAJ READING: ...but that you can THINK you can and believe you HAVE is beyond dispute.

RAJ: Just because you think you can, and just because you think you have, doesn't mean you can or have. In thinking that you can and thinking that you have, you are imagining that nothing was something—that when you did nothing, you did something, you accomplished something. And see, that's where the hooker is. When you think you have accomplished the creation of something that God didn't make, that gives you an egotistical hit, a high. And like a drug, you become addicted to it. But you have become addicted to an empty act; an act that was not an act at all. And that's why the best description of your present sense of things is "insanity," because you think you've done something that you haven't done. And you are committed to continuing in that perspective.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Do not forget, however, that to deny God will inevitably result in projection, and you will believe that others AND NOT YOURSELF have done this to you.

RAJ: Why? Why is that automatic? Because nobody ever sat down and thought, "Well, I'm going to blame everybody else." It's automatic because the moment you have looked at God and said what you were looking at was something else—not God—you acted apparently independently of God and lost the experience of your Identity. And in that experience of loss of Identity, you automatically feel vulnerable. If you don't know Who You Are, you are at a complete loss for understanding anything truly. And in that state of vulnerability, you cannot help but look at all the definitions you made and see them as untrustworthy, because after all, look what created them—[small laugh] something that has no Identity; something that doesn't know What He Or She Is. And so you immediately find yourself at odds with everything, and experience the necessity of defense against it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You will receive the message you give because it is the message you WANT.

RAJ: Now, I'm going to split a hair here. It says:

RAJ READING: You will receive the message you give because it is the message you WANT.

RAJ: This does not mean that the message that you receive, after having given it, is what you want. It means that you want to be in a position of giving a message. You want to be in a position of authority. You want to be in a position of being able to make a definition, not realizing that in wanting to be in that position, you will end up receiving back what you're giving, because you always get to keep what you give away.

Your definitions, whatever they are, are wrong, because you've made a very concerted effort to have that definition be different from What God Is Being, else it wouldn't be your definition. You wouldn't be able to take credit for it. You wouldn't be able to create an imagined experience of authority that was successful in its enactment. So you want to be able to do that. You want to be able to have your definition and give it.

So:

RAJ READING: You will receive the message you give because it is the message you WANT.

RAJ: And I'm going to add: to give.

It's not the message you want to receive. You complain highly when you receive the message back. But it's the message you want to give. Because if you don't exercise some form of proactive authority, there's nothing for you to take credit for and thus substantiate for yourself some sort of actual identity. And you see, everything you're going to do, once having gotten your divorce from the Father, will be for the purpose of asserting and developing an identity, because you're at a total loss when it comes to experiencing what your Identity is. That's the first order of the day, for one who's gotten a divorce from the Father—to establish his or her identity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You may believe that you judge your brothers by the messages they give YOU, but YOU have judged THEM by the message you give to THEM.

RAJ: Well, what message did you give them? Well, if you have a definition of them and you're behaving toward them according to the definition you have, you're sending a message to them that they're not the Presence of God—they are what you have determined them to be. Such an insulting thing to do. They are less than the Presence of God. Not only that, they aren't even who they think they are; they are who you think they are. It's the height of arrogance.

And yet, at the bottom line, it's one of those non-acts—an empty act. Nothing is happening. But you think it is, and your Brother thinks it is. And the two of you who don't exist, the egos that aren't really there, get into a fight, a disagreement, a contest, a fight over who has the most authority. And all the time this is going on, nothing is going on. But you think it is. And it's not your Birthright to be having this dream.

Again.

RAJ READING: You may believe that you judge your brothers by the messages they give YOU, but YOU have judged THEM by the message you give to THEM. Do not attribute your denial of joy to them, or you cannot see the spark in them that could bring joy to YOU.

RAJ: Now, maybe they do think they're an ego, just like you think you're an ego, but your belief and their belief don't change the fact. They just cause you to be in a fog. And so the Light in them is still there, even though it's dimmed to them and dimmed to you, so that it seems only to be a spark. But the spark is the Light Itself.

If you want to start waking up, you've got to be more interested in seeing the spark in them, and knowing that the spark is in you, and being willing to look from the spark in you, which doesn't rely on any of the definitions you've made-up. And this is the way you begin to undo the vast, complex experience of nothingness that you've been caught in.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is the DENIAL of the spark that brings depression, and whenever you see your brothers WITHOUT it, you ARE denying God.

RAJ: Now that can be taken two ways.

RAJ READING: ...whenever you see your brothers WITHOUT it,...

RAJ: In other words, not having it in themselves.

RAJ READING: ...you ARE denying God.

RAJ: Or you could read it:

RAJ READING: ...whenever you see your brothers WITHOUT it,...

RAJ: Meaning without looking with the Light in you from the spark in you.

RAJ READING: ...you ARE denying God.

RAJ: And both are true.

Remember, you define your Brothers and Sisters, you define each other by the definitions you have adopted for yourself. And if you know and have an experience of the spark in you, you know immediately that the spark is in your Brother, and that therefore your lesser definitions of him are not true, and therefore shouldn't be validated. And you won't validate them because you will have a natural curiosity to unearth the spark further, unearth the Light further in them through your own curiosity to see the more of What God Is Being right there where they are.

Now, listen to this.

RAJ READING: Allegiance to the denial of God is the ego's religion.

RAJ: Well, you don't really usually think of yourself engaging in the denial of God, but remember as long as you are having an experience of a Brother, or a Sister, or anything that you can see, and there's nothing awesome about it, you're looking at your own definitions with commitment. And therefore, you are putting in front of God your definition, like a mask, and giving preference to it. And that covers God up. It's a denial of God. That's all that a denial is.

Your denials of God aren't you standing raising your fist to the Almighty and cursing Him. Oh no. It's much more subtle and much more calm than that. All you do is you look at the flower and you say, "Oh, that's a material flower. It came from a seed. It's a product of material evolution, physical evolution." And right there you've denied God, because you've given preference to maybe the best definition you have so far, but you're still giving preference to a definition, instead of being willing, as I've said, to have moments of intimacy with any one thing, including the flower, with a curiosity to see the more that is there than what you're seeing, knowing that the more that is there is a clearer and fuller experience of the Divine Expression of God right there.

RAJ READING: Allegiance to the denial of God is the ego's religion.

RAJ: Well, there's another reason you have an allegiance to the denial of God. There's another reason you have an allegiance to the definitions you've made-up. And that is that all of the definitions you've made-up have been made-up for the sole purpose of establishing a recognizable identity where you are, since you lost the conscious experience of it in your decision to see things your way. So there's commitment and allegiance to the definitions you give because you believe that they are what make you real.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The god of sickness obviously demands the denial of health because health is in direct opposition to its own survival.

RAJ: Just as the warrior finds Love to be offensive and threatening, the ego finds health to be threatening. Because with health that hasn't been earned or deserved, there's no need for the ego. What is the ego? A defense system. The experience of health, uninterrupted health, just as with the experience of uninterrupted joy, gives the ego nothing to do. It's whatever challenges health, well-being, that puts the warrior into play, and the ego is a defense mechanism. It is a warrior. It doesn't want to be without a job. At the bottom line, if it were without a job, you would know Who You Were and you wouldn't be continually committed to the definitions you made-up.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: But consider what this means to YOU. UNLESS you are sick you cannot keep the gods you made, for only in sickness could you possibly WANT them.

RAJ: Now let's take this into a larger picture. Unless you are divorced from the Father, you cannot keep the gods you made, for only in the absence of your connection with the Father, could you possibly want them. You see? When you're not divorced from the Father, you know Who You Are, and so you don't have to create an identity for yourself. And you don't have to create likenesses, definitions, to secure your identity, to prove that you exist, to prove that you are a force to be dealt with. You see?

RAJ READING: UNLESS you are sick...

RAJ: And I'm going to say, out of your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...you cannot keep the gods you made, for only...

RAJ: ...when you're out of your Right Mind...

RAJ READING: ...could you possibly WANT them. Blasphemy, then, is SELF-destructive, NOT God-destructive.

RAJ: Important point. All of this activity that you're engaged in of creating definitions, maintaining them, committing to them, and defending them, affects Reality not at all; does not affect God at all. It doesn't change anything of What Is Real, but it does cause you to forget Who You Are. And in that sense it is self-destructive. Not that you could actually be destroyed, but when you can't remember Who You Are, something essential has disappeared, something essential has apparently been destroyed—the Conscious Experience of What You Truly Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It means that you are willing NOT to know yourself IN ORDER to be sick.

RAJ: Well, aren't you willing to not know yourself in order to get the hit that you get from making up definitions of things that are different from God, and then joining with others to try to get them to see it your way, and for your way to be better than their way, so that they will join with you, and thus bolster you up and make you seem even more real?

RAJ READING: ...you are willing NOT to know yourself IN ORDER to be sick.

RAJ: In order to exist in a way that it's not your Birthright to be experiencing.

RAJ READING: This is the offering which your god demands...

RAJ: What god? The supposed "capacity" you have to choose which God/god is Real/real.

RAJ READING: This is the offering which your god demands because, having made him out of YOUR insanity, he is an insane idea.

RAJ: Now, let's not get too serious here. This insane idea is something that doesn't even exist. It doesn't have any reality, so don't become afraid of your insanity and don't become afraid of this god. It's all hogwash.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: Your god.

RAJ READING: ...has many forms, but although he may seem like many different things he is but one idea;—the denial of God.

RAJ: Again, the choice to define some part of Creation as something not having anything to do with God, and as something that God isn't being right there, but rather something you have decided it is.

What does this all mean? Does it mean that you are awful because you're not seeing God anywhere, which means that you have a definition for everything that is different from God? No. All it really means to know this is that you are constantly faced with an opportunity, a threshold to move over from ignorance into Knowledge, from not-knowing into Knowing.

Now, your explorers are beginning to reach out beyond your planet to explore the universe. But what you need to do is to look at the flowers in front of you, or the fellow next to you, and reach out beyond the definition you gave it with a curiosity to know God—a desire to have a holy experience, a desire to have an Experience of Wholeness, of Singularity, of Reality.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Sickness and death entered the mind of God's Son AGAINST His Will.

RAJ: Meaning against God's Will.

RAJ READING: The "attack on God" made His Son think he was...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...fatherless...

RAJ: An orphan. Lacking Identity. Lacking a Source.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...and out of his depression he made the god of depression.

RAJ: It's like, "Wow, what a horrible experience I'm having. Wow, wonder what this means? Wow, I've got to do something about this. Wow, I've got to start doing things that make me feel better. I'd better start making some definitions. I'd better start taking hold of things here because this is a chaotic experience that I don't understand at all, and so I'm going to bring order to this situation so that I can feel less vulnerable." And so you began to serve the depression. [laughing] You began to serve the bad feeling by creating something to relieve you of it. You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This was his...

RAJ: God's Son's.

RAJ READING: ...alternative to joy because he would not accept the fact that, although he was a creator, he had been created.

RAJ: You see? "Oh, but I'd rather experience my creatorhood on my own. I'd rather wave the wand and have it happen at my will, regardless of God." You see?

This God's Son...

RAJ READING: ...would not accept the fact that, although he was a creator, he had been created.

RAJ: He wasn't self-created. He wasn't autonomous. He has no real existence without That Which is constantly creating him by being him, because the Movement of God is what is being everything forever, continuously.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Yet the Son IS helpless without the Father, Who alone is his...

RAJ: Capital "H".

RAJ READING: ...Help. We said before that of yourselves you can do nothing, but you are not OF yourselves. If you were, what you have made would be true, and you could NEVER escape.

RAJ: You would be stuck in this experience if the definitions you had given everything which didn't take their Source into account...

PAUL: I'm sorry. I lost it.

RAJ: If the definitions you gave to everything that were different from What The Father Is Being right there and if you were able to make those definitions be the real meaning of the things you had defined and you had actually engaged in a real act of creation, you would be bound by your definitions right now and there would be no escape.

Now the simple fact is that most of you at one point believed that what you see is what you get. "This is it. This is life. This is creation. And whatever the Kingdom of Heaven is, that's for another time and another place." And so, if there's famine, if there is pestilence, if there is disease, well, you just put a rod up your backbone and get a stiff upper lip and you cope with it the best you can because that's life. You are behaving and have been behaving as though the definitions you've given to everything are absolute and are actual. And you tolerate it to the best of your ability. And you act, you be strong in the face of it. And you have courage in the face of it.

And then I come along, or someone with insight and having had the experience of revelation comes along and says, "There's another way to look at this. This is not all there is. The way it's being seen is not the way it truly is." And you say, “Wow! That sounds wonderful, but it’s hard to believe. I don’t have any evidence of what you’re saying to back it up.” Right. You are already behaving as though you are trapped.

RAJ READING: We said before that of yourselves...

RAJ: Of yourselves.

RAJ READING: ...you can do nothing, but you are not OF yourselves. If you were, what you have made would be true, and you could NEVER escape.

RAJ: Well, you have thought that “the way things are as you’ve defined them” is true and that there is no escape from it, except, thank God, one day you will die. And I’m here to tell you, save your energy. Don’t bother with dying, because it won’t change a thing. Get about the business today of seeing the connection that you have with your Brothers and Sisters that you can’t get out of; the interrelatedness that can’t be broken. And start being with them in a new way. Make a new gift to them so that you get to keep something new. And start waking up now.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is BECAUSE you did not make yourselves that you need be troubled by nothing.

RAJ: “Oh,” you say, “But I am a self-made man.”

“I’m a woman working on being able to be a self-made woman, like men have been self-made men. I can’t say as a woman I’m a self-made woman yet, but I’m fighting for my rights to be a self-made woman.”

Right? And you self-made men, where’s your peace? Where’s your feeling of invulnerability? Where is your ability to be without being on guard, all you self-made men? It’s not there. It’s an empty victory. Look at it.

RAJ READING: It is BECAUSE you did not make yourselves that you need be troubled by nothing. Your gods...

RAJ: Your images, your likenesses, your definitions that you’ve made-up.

RAJ READING: ...are nothing because your Father did not create them. You cannot make creators who are unlike your Creator...

RAJ: With a capital “C”, meaning God.

RAJ READING: ...any more than He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...could have created a Son who was unlike Him. If creation is sharing it cannot create what is unlike itself. It can share only what it IS. Depression is isolation, and so it could not have BEEN created.

RAJ: You realize isolation is incompatible with sharing. But Creation is sharing. Creation is extending. Not like extending a rod into the air, but like extending the energy of you toward that which can receive it and have it be received, which constitutes a communication, or a Communion. That's sharing. That's Creation.

RAJ READING: If creation is sharing it cannot create what is unlike itself. It can share only what it IS. Depression is isolation, and so it could not have BEEN created.

RAJ: Oh, but you say, "But I am depressed! Don't tell me it's not real. Don't tell me it wasn't created."

Well, I'm sorry, but what you're calling "depression" is not a thing that was created. It's the experience, the unavoidable experience of trying to do something you can't do. You see? Depression hasn't got you. You've got hold of an attempt to do something you can't do, and it won't work, and because you are Ultimate Sanity, your Sanity tells you, there is a Knowing within it that says, "Stop trying to do this because you can't accomplish what you can't do."

You say, "Whoa! Something's telling me, the Christ, what I can and can't do?"

Yeah.

"Well, what about my authority?"

I'm sorry; you don't have authority to do what can't be done. And as long as you try to do what can't be done, you're going to have an experience the equivalent of the meaning of the word "No" (n-o), because that's your Sanity—to tell you, "Stop trying to do what can't be done." That's not depression. That's Sanity. Depression is when you want to grouse about the "No." Depression is when you don't want to accept the uselessness of trying to do something that's impossible, so that you can get about being in harmony with what is possible.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Son of God, you have not sinned,...

RAJ: You have not sinned. You haven't accomplished anything that you thought you had accomplished, so don't even waste your time calling it a sin. [pretending a judgmental tone of voice] "You have sinned against God. You have denied God. You have stood up to God, you little nothing! How dare you! You will be punished in hell for eternity." It's all gobbledygook. You haven't accomplished anything. Nothing has happened, even though you firmly believe that something has.

RAJ READING: Son of God, you have not sinned, but you HAVE been much mistaken. Yet this can be corrected, and God will help you, KNOWING that you could not sin against Him.

RAJ: Key point. This whole theory about being a mortal sinner that deserves the wrath of God is just more of the gobbledygook, more of the nonsense.

God knows that you could not sin against him, and therefore God will help you. That's why it's so important. God will help you because you have not succeeded in sinning, which would be the only justification conceivable imaginarily for God to withhold His Love from you. God sees that you have done nothing against Him, and you have done nothing that you're suffering from, and [God] would help you by sharing His Vision with you to see the Truth so that the Truth might set you free from your ignorance.

Again.

RAJ READING: Yet this can be corrected, and God will help you, KNOWING that you could not sin against Him. You denied Him BECAUSE you loved Him, knowing that, if you RECOGNIZED your love for Him you COULD not deny Him.

RAJ: Interesting or confusing? [small laugh] It's interesting.

You never stop being the Christ. And so your Nature is such that it's impossible for you to stop loving God. It's impossible for you to stop loving God with a passion. Well, you might almost say, with a compulsion. Why do you think you hold on to your personal concepts and definitions so strongly, if indeed those constitute a defense against the experience of God? Because they seem to give you your identity at your own hand, and you become your own creator. And that is egotistically satisfying. And you do this with vigor because you, underneath all of this effort, have an undying Love of your Father, of your Source. And if you did not busy yourself with great intensity at securing your identity on your own, you would find yourself sucked Home to the Father because your Love is so great for Him. And that would be the end of this so-called "independent, autonomous, authoritative, successful you."

RAJ READING: You denied Him...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...BECAUSE you loved Him, knowing that, if you RECOGNIZED your love for Him you COULD not deny Him.

RAJ: And I'm going to add: And you would quickly abandon all of your definitions and all of this self that you have tried to build up and succeed at making whole and real in its own right.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your denial of Him therefore means that you love Him, and that you know HE loves YOU.

RAJ: Don't make little frowns of quizzical curiosity and disbelief.

Remember, you are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and you must understand yourself therefrom. And these words are talking to you from that Point of Perfection that you're already at.

You do love Him, and you do know He loves you. And your vigorous denial of Him, meaning your vigorous commitment to all of the definitions you have made-up, prove by reversal that you do know that you love God and that He loves you. And you can't afford to look at that because at the moment it's still more important to you to make an independent mark. In the world? No. In creation. That's what you're after. If you're not yielding to God, you're attempting to become equal to Him.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Remember that what you deny you MUST have known.

RAJ: And if you have denied it so successfully that you don't remember what it is you're denying, because you've given your preference to the definition you're denying God with, it doesn't change the fact that you know God, and knew God, and knew the Real Meaning.

RAJ READING: Your denial of Him therefore means that you love Him, and that you know HE loves YOU. Remember that what you deny you MUST have known. And if you accept denial, you can accept its UNDOING.

Your Father has not denied you. He does not retaliate, but He DOES call to you to return.

RAJ: And let's bring this home a little bit more. God "out there" is not calling you Home. Your Right Mind is calling you back into your Right Mind. Got it? Because you can't have successfully become a split mind, an unintegrated mind, a non-Singular Conscious Experience of Being. It's impossible for you to have become that, even though with great, you might say, mentally coercive energy, you have been able to create a stretch and a twist in the fabric of Conscious Awareness so that things look different and you can say, "There! I made it look like that! And that is what it's going to be. I am going to maintain it as that, come hell or high water." But all you've done is skewed your perception. You haven't changed What You Are, and you haven't changed What Reality Is.

RAJ READING: Your Father has not denied you. He does not retaliate, but He DOES call to you to return.

RAJ: Again, your Right Mind calls to you to come back into your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: When you think He has not answered your call, YOU have not answered HIS. He calls to you from every part of the Sonship because of His Love for His Son.

RAJ: His Love for you is as uninteruptible as a parent's love for his or her child. It's just there, always.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you HEAR His message He has answered you, and you will learn of Him if you hear aright.

[pause]

RAJ READING: If you HEAR His message...

RAJ: Well, where are you going to hear his message from? The guy sitting next to you. The chair you're sitting on. The tree growing outside your door. The sunset. Right here, right now, this life.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Love of God is in everything He created, for His Son is everywhere. Look with peace upon your brothers, and God will come rushing into your heart in gratitude for your gift to Him.

RAJ: A short while back I shared with you that your attention is God's Treasure. When you give God your attention, He treasures it, and...

RAJ READING: ...will come rushing into your heart in gratitude for your gift...

RAJ: Of your attention.

RAJ READING: ...to Him.

RAJ: If you're not looking at anything you see with a desire to see God there, you are, by the unwise use of your mind, demonstrating that you're giving preference to what you think that thing is. And what you think that that thing is stands between you and What It Is, between you and What God Is right there. And so that constitutes a denial of God. And that's all that constitutes the denial of God.

The unfortunate or fortunate thing is that as a result of doing that, you unavoidably experience depression, fear, and you develop a commitment to cope with it—the depression and the fear—instead of abandoning the unwise use of your mind that's causing you to hear, "No, you can't do this."

It isn't, "No! You can't do this! I am not going to let you do this!" God doesn't stand against you and against what you're trying to do. God Knows, the Nature of Being Knows, the Way Things Work Knows, that you can't do what you can't do. And so it just simply says, "You can't do this. There's no way to do it. You can try till you're blue in the face. Sooner or later you're going to find out you can't do it. I'll save you a little time by telling you, you can't do this. It just won't work." You see? There's no anger there. God doesn't provide resistance against your success. God simply says, "You can't do what you're trying to do. It won't work."

You know, waking up, this whole thing we're talking about just isn't a religious thing. It isn't a spiritual thing. It's a very practical down to Heaven [laughing] awareness of How Things Work, so that you don't waste your time doing what doesn't work, and so that you stop behaving as though you're something you cannot be. And so that you will start right where you are to look at everything you're already experiencing with a willingness to see it with new eyes, with new vision—vision innocent of anything you would insert between you as the beholder and what you want to behold. And every moment of every day provides you with this opportunity, without getting "holy, holy" about it, or too spiritual. It's a "feet on the ground" process. It's a "feet on the ground" of Being, with a capital "B".

Remember that when we're talking about the illusion and the ego with all seriousness, and we talk about all the awful things with such great clarity, it isn't so that you can become frightened about it. It's so that you might, with all the clarity you have about it, be able to stand there and say, "Oh. All of this serious, complex stuff doesn't exist. God didn't create it. I created it with my imagination. And what I've created doesn't constitute a creation, 'cause it couldn't undo God. God hasn't been undone. What I thought I did, I didn't."

That's why you receive apparently God's Love by grace. And that's why you receive healing apparently by grace. Because there's nothing for you to be forgiven for, because you couldn't do what you couldn't do, and therefore you didn't, and it was never done. And you don't have to find complicated ways to extricate yourself from something that never happened. You will wake up by Grace. And you're going to wake up here. And you're going to wake up as close to now as you're able to let yourself by not making the process more complicated than it is with this wonderful imagination and apparent "capacity" to make definitions.

I love you all. And I trust all of this is beginning to become even more meaningful than it has before, and that it may be beginning to dawn upon you that waking up is less complex than the imaginative effort you had to go through to make the dream you're waking up from.

Okay. I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

We talked last week about the fact that God loves you so much that the moment you start for Home, the moment you give what He treasures to Him, which is your attention, that in so many words He rushes out to meet you. And we also discussed the fact that you love God so much, each of you, right now, love God so much that you avoid experiencing that fact. It does sound crazy. It's hard to understand why you would do such a thing. But there is a reason, and the reason is that if you were to let yourself feel it, you would have to abandon a project, a pet project, that you are addicted to. And that pet project is to be right.

"Gee," you say, "I didn't know I was trying to be right." Well, think about it for a moment. If you have had as a goal to be independent, autonomous, and successful at it, you have been working very diligently to do it so perfectly that you could establish that your word, your definitions, the meanings you wish to give to everything, are right. Because the minute you can demonstrate that they are right, that you are right, you've demonstrated that you have accomplished successfully being independent. It's called "self-righteousness." And for the most part, what you call "righteousness" is just that, and only that.

The Truth, whether you find it in A Course In Miracles or anywhere else, will undercut your self-righteousness constantly. Self-righteousness is arrogance. Self-righteousness is or the practice of being right is your attempt to become equal with God—which can't be done. But, there is this carrot hanging in front of you that you're chasing after, and that is to actually accomplish becoming equal to God—a creator on your own.

Have you ever noticed that when you're around a very righteous person, it's very difficult to communicate with them because they never listen to you? They're always reflecting back to you their point of view in a generally coercive way.

Their intent is to get you to agree with their point of view, and so they don't let you in. And it's uncomfortable to be around them.

Now all of you may not be obnoxiously righteous, but you must understand that when you are trying to confirm your perspective on things to yourself, or to anyone else, without ever saying, "God, what's the Meaning here?", without ever letting anything else in, you are in a state of a denial of Reality that holds you apart from it and keeps you from being infilled by it.

Righteousness is a defense against Right, with a capital "R". So, from the ego standpoint, everything we're talking about is bad news. Because, in the process of yielding to the Father, in the process of yielding to your Right Mind, you must abandon the very idea of being right or wrong. You have to abandon being something in your own right. The "you" that has been trying to establish itself as "real" or "right" must get less and less of your attention. Notice I said "it" must get less and less of your attention, because you're not "it." You are the Divine One. You are the One God Created. You are the One that cannot ever become less or different from What It Truly Is. This means, then, that from the ego standpoint, waking up means it was a failure. It means, and it will feel like, you are having to abandon the cause of being right, of becoming right, of proving you are right, and thereby proving that "you in your own right" are real.

And so, as you let humility in, as you become humble instead of arrogant and self-righteous, all of the feelings associated with the ethic you're giving up will feel like failure, will feel like failure, will feel like failure, will feel like failure. And it will echo over and over and over, you're a failure, you're a failure, you're a failure. You're failing at your goal. You're failing at your cause. But see, that's the temptation of your conditioned thinking that would invite you back into the ethic of trying to prove you're right. And so in this sense, waking up doesn't feel good.

You see, just because you can't be right doesn't mean that you must be wrong. It means that there is something else to be than right or wrong. And the something else to be is is Whole. The something else to be is What You Truly Are. And as we've discussed over and over, the only way you can be What You Truly Are is to acknowledge your Source—that you are not the source of your existence, God is, Something Else is, and you are the Embodiment Of It. You are the Presence Of It presencing Itself right where you are. There's no sense or experience of failure that accompanies that. And there's also not any sense of being right. But there is the Experience of Pure Integrity. Not integrity over and against that which lacks integrity, but simply Integrity as the State of Being. And in that is Invulnerability. The Invulnerability that is yours, always has been yours, and always will be. It's an eternal constant.

This is what you get instead of the tense struggle you are experiencing in your attempts to be right—ultimately right. This is what you get when you abandon self-righteousness. This is what you get when righteousness is not your goal. You get to be Whole. You get to be Sane.

Let's go into the book.

RAJ READING: Do not look to the god of sickness for healing...

RAJ: And let's remember that the god of sickness is not sickness. Sickness is not the god. The god of a sick mind, the god of sickness is your belief that you have a capacity to formulate images and concepts, and then choose for them to make them real; that you have a capacity to have a perspective and a point of view different from the only one that's really available to you, which is God's Point Of View embodied in you as you.

RAJ READING: Do not look to the god of sickness for healing but only to the God of love, for healing is the ACKNOWLEDGMENT of Him.

RAJ: God.

What does that mean, "Do not look to the god of sickness for healing"? It means do not look for a personal capacity that "you as you have defined yourself" have to accomplish anything on your own.

Healing of yourself, or of another, and I'm really addressing the idea of healing another, can never be the result of a force of will that you bring to bear with your best expression of truth to change someone else. That's looking to the god of sickness for healing. It means you're looking to something that has apparently arisen out of a capacity you have to have a point of view different from God's, and then using that point of view about yourself and your righteous capacity to accomplish things, to force another one to experience his or her good.

Looking to the god of sickness for healing means that you're looking to something other than God Himself; that you're not silencing your mind and your concepts and the chatter of ideas that you love, and in the silence desiring of God to know what is the Truth so that you might let that through, so that the inspiration that comes might easily find voice and words and actions that are in perfect harmony with it.

RAJ READING: Do not look to the god of sickness for healing but only to the God of love, for healing is the ACKNOWLEDGMENT of Him.

RAJ: Oh, the healing of what? Your Brother that's in need of healing, or you healed of your independence because you prayed and you let God in and abandoned your independence? You must be healed in order for you to give the Gift of Healing.

Now I know that there are those who say, "Well, the only place the healing needs to occur is in you. That once you let the Father in, together with the influx of Truth that you will find yourself knowing, you will no longer see a call for healing. You will no longer see a Brother in need of healing." And that is not true. You will find yourself seeing the calls for Love from your Brothers as calls for Love, instead of demonstrations of their illness. But until there is clarity in their mind, they will continue to embody their illness, their devotion to their ability, their capacity to formulate concepts and try to make them real by seeking mutual agreement through mild-mannered or coercive means. And so you will see their obnoxious behavior not as a statement of their obnoxiousness and what kind of person they are, but as a call for Love. And you will extend the Love that you're in-filled with.

You are not creating other's bad experiences. When you see a bad experience, when you see bad behavior, when you see obnoxious behavior, when you see individuals suffering from their beliefs, you're not creating that out of whole cloth. And your mind is not the only place that healing needs to occur. But your mind is the place where the influx of Love and Truth must come in order for you to see another's confusion as a call for correction, rather than a statement of their actual condition.

I've said, "Listen, learn, and do." You listen. You go within, you listen, and you learn by means of the influx of the Experience of Truth, and then you do—meaning you act spontaneously out from the Clarity of Truth that you find yourself knowing because it's been revealed to you. And you do engage in actions that promote correction so that your Brother's confusion is replaced by knowing the Truth that frees him up.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you acknowledge Him...

RAJ: Meaning God.

RAJ READING: ...you will KNOW that He has never ceased to acknowledge YOU, and that in His acknowledgment of you lies your Being.

RAJ: There's that verb again.

RAJ READING: ...lies your Being.

RAJ: Lies the very Wholeness of you.

RAJ READING: You are not sick and you cannot die.

RAJ: [small laugh] And I know you say, "Yeah, I know, but that's very hard to believe because all the evidence is that I can. All the evidence is that everyone has." And thus you tell me of your god. You tell me what you are worshipping. You tell me what is of value to you, what you believe is more valuable to you than the Truth. Now you might not think that's righteousness, but it is. You value what you believe more than you value What God Is Being.

You might think you're very malleable and flexible and willing to wake up and to hear the Truth from me, but you will argue. And when you hear of somebody with a terminal disease, you will find yourself confronted with your own sense of mortality, and you'll say, "I have nothing to object to that with." And in effect, your behavior and your attitude tells me that you're trying to teach me that the god of death is all-powerful, and that's the god you are serving, and that you're certainly not going to mentally contradict your god of death.

You say, "I can't contradict it. Nobody but you has ever accomplished it. And I'm not even sure I'm talking to you, Jesus. I would like to believe that I am, but I don't know for a fact. But I sure do know that there's no one on this planet today that was here 2000 or 5000 years ago and has been here uninterruptedly. And so I have no justification for an absolute faith in my Divinity or the fact that I need not die." Just be honest with yourselves. This is the god you serve. This is the god you have faith in. And this is the god you will confirm. I mean, really, tell me, you're at a dinner party with friends, or maybe they're people you have never met before, are you going to sit there and say, "You know, none of us needs to die. I'm not going to die"? Oh, no. Why not? Because you are an obedient servant to your god.

If you are not aware of the obedience to your god that you practice, you will have no basis for conceiving of there being another experience. Nor will you see that there is an absolute call for you to dishonor this god, disagree with this god, argue every single point that stands in the favor of this god, and consciously and conscientiously withdraw your allegiance to it, by what? By no longer giving lip-service to God. "Oh, I know there's a God. And I know my Life is Eternal. And I know I will forever be with God." Come on! That isn't what you believe. You believe that the ultimate stroke or action that exists to be experienced is your death.

Now, is that bad? Does that make you wrong? No. It just means that you've forgotten that there's another way to look at this and that you can withdraw your allegiance to this god, to this belief, and place it somewhere else. And then begin to do it.

And I tell you what, when you've overcome death, then tackle taxes. [single audience laugh]

RAJ READING: You are not sick and you cannot die. But you CAN confuse yourself with things that do.

RAJ: What can die? Your misplaced faith. The concepts that you've made-up that couldn't actually replace What God Is Being. Your faith in your concepts. Your faith in the images and likenesses that you've created.

RAJ READING: ...you CAN confuse yourself...

RAJ READING: You are not sick and you cannot die. But you CAN confuse yourself with things that do. Remember, though, that to do this IS blasphemy, for it means that you are looking without love on God and His creation, from which he cannot BE separated.

RAJ: You see, when you look at things and you think you know what they are, and their Meaning has not been revealed to you by That Which Made Them, you are blaspheming God by having a preferential concept that says, " This is more real to me, this is more valuable to me, and this is the god I would rather serve than God."

Again, can you go to hell for this? No. You are in hell for this. And ultimately, you're suffering from something you haven't actually accomplished. You're just suffering from believing that you have, and being at odds with Who You Are and what you can really do.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Only the eternal can be loved, for love does not die. What is of God is His forever, and you ARE of God.

RAJ: You see? Well, that's not part of the teaching of your god, is it—the god of death? No. It says you aren't of God, you are of yourself. And you have a capacity to demonstrate that fact. And in fact, you will have my undying support in your attempt to prove the fact that you don't belong to anyone, that you are self-sufficient, and that you have a capacity to authorize and create. Forget about God—you are god.

But, again...

RAJ READING: What is of God is His forever, and you ARE of God. Would He allow Himself to suffer? And would He offer His Son anything that is not acceptable to Him?

RAJ: But your god, the one you fear, offers you death as the crowning end to a miserable life.

That's worse than a gold watch after forty years of work. Tell me, which of you, who of you, would go to work at a company that promised you that upon retirement you would die? [single audience laugh] But you say, "But those are the only kind of companies that exist. And for centuries everybody has worked for those kind of companies. And upon retirement, they did indeed die. I have no example of there being any other kind of experience. And so I will continue to dedicate myself to put in my forty years." You see, the god of sickness is the idea that you have a capacity to decide which God/god is Real/real—either God, the only one there is (with a capital "G"), or the god (with a small "g") that I've made-up. Now if God is Life (with a capital "G"), then a small "g" god has to be the opposite—unlike God—therefore the god of death.

Now just let this sink in. Just let this register. Because this is not the God you would serve. And not only that, Truth dawning in your minds by virtue of our conversations, or by virtue of you reading the Course, or by virtue of your own enlightenment, is telling you that the god of sickness is a supposed capacity you think you have to decide which God/god is Real/real, and that one of them is pure imagination—the one, it happens, that you've been serving—and that it's your Birthright not to be serving that god, but to be yielding, and I'm going to say, partnering with the only God there is—your Father, the Source of you, That Which Is Embodying Itself/Himself/Herself right where you are as All There Is to you. And that your Birthright and your Inheritance is from Him. And the Inheritance is the undistorted Fullness of All That He Is—the conscious, undistorted Experience of All That God Is. And that there is no alternative to Life.

And so, somebody is poking a little hole in your box and a little bit of Light is coming in. And as the Light comes in, it's going to uncover what you've been doing that hasn't been working, because what you've been doing can't be done. And it's not to make you guilty. It's not to make you wrong. But because being right has been your ethic, it will seem to you initially as though it is stating that you are wrong. And of course, wrong is bad, and bad means penalty. That's all part of the rigamarole of the righteous mind.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the following sentences at this time: If you will accept yourself as God created you, you will be incapable of suffering. Yet to do this, you must acknowledge Him as your Creator. This is not because you will be punished otherwise. It is merely because your acknowledgment of your Father IS the acknowledgment of yourself as you are.]

Does your god teach you this?

RAJ READING: Your Father created you wholly without sin, wholly without pain, and wholly without suffering of any kind.

RAJ: And I've said there are only three things that the Father won't let you have: sin, sickness, and death.

Is that what your god teaches you? Oh, no. No. "No, for sure there's going to be sickness. And for sure there's going to be death. And in all likelihood, considering the fact that you have such a miserable existence, you're going to indulge in a little bit of sin for a little bit of pleasure." That's what your god teaches you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you deny Him...

RAJ: God, with a capital "G".

RAJ READING: ...you bring sin, pain and suffering...

PAUL: Just a moment here.

RAJ READING: If you deny Him you bring sin, pain and suffering into your OWN mind because of the power He gave it.

PAUL: I'm sorry. Just a moment. Okay.

RAJ: We're going to back up.

RAJ READING: You are not sick and you cannot die. But you CAN confuse yourself with things that do. Remember, though, that to do this IS blasphemy, for it means that you are looking without love on God and His creation, from which he cannot BE separated. Only the eternal can be loved, for love does not die. What is of God is His forever, and you ARE of God. Would He allow Himself to suffer? And would He offer His Son anything that is not acceptable to Him?

If you will accept yourself as God created you, you will be incapable of suffering.

RAJ: That's a mighty statement.

Can you say the same thing about your god? If you will accept yourself as your god has defined you, that you will be incapable of suffering? Oh no. You'll not only be capable of suffering, you will inevitably suffer and you will inevitably die.

RAJ READING: If you will accept yourself as God created you, you will be incapable of suffering.

RAJ: But God didn't create you independent of Him. And so if you do not want to experience suffering, you're going to have to let your Source back in to your mind. And you're going to have to be willing to be subject to the capital "W" Way Things Work, which will mean that you will have to abandon any further attempts to be right/righteous in your own right or on your own.

Now when you can see it so starkly that your allegiance to your god means that you're serving the god of death, then what do you have to lose? What do you have to lose to dare to let God in? I mean [laughing] what could take away from you more than your life, which your present god already does, apparently, you believe. So hey, you might say, "What the hell. I'm going to try accepting myself as God created me, and see if I will be incapable of suffering." You know, the god you're serving already has you losing your life.

Again, so important.

RAJ READING: If you will accept yourself as God created you, you will be incapable of suffering. Yet to do this, you must acknowledge Him as...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...your Creator.

RAJ: You see, this is where the rub comes in, because you're engaged in an ethic of proving that you are your own creator, and that you are going to create yourself by succeeding at accomplishing something on your own by being right on your own, and demonstrating your rightness so inescapably that nobody could miss the rightness of you, and, in that ultimate demonstration of being right, securing your existence as a valid, independent agent. But, because that's not What You Are, you can't do it—thank God.

God is not a theological idea. God is not a religious idea. God is palpable capital "P" Presence. God is the experienceable Conscious Experience of Being. It's what each of you is experiencing right now and misinterpreting.

RAJ READING: If you will accept yourself as God created you, you will be incapable of suffering.

RAJ: And I will add: You will experience healing.

RAJ READING: Yet to do this, you must acknowledge Him as your Creator. This is not because you will be punished otherwise. It is merely because your acknowledgment of your Father IS...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...the acknowledgment of yourself as...

RAJ: ...who...

RAJ READING: ...you are.

RAJ: See? It undoes the declaration of emancipation that you took, that you made—the divorce you got that caused you by virtue of the divorce to forget Who You Were because your Father is what makes you Who You Are. The Son is the Son because of the Father. And the Daughter is the Daughter because of the Father.

RAJ READING: Your Father created you wholly without sin, wholly without pain, and wholly without suffering of any kind. If you deny Him you bring sin, pain and suffering into your OWN mind because of the power He gave it.

RAJ: The power He gave your own mind.

RAJ READING: Your mind is capable of creating worlds, but it can also deny what it creates because it is free.

RAJ: Denial is a foolish activity, but it is an activity you can engage in.

And when we're talking about Awakening, we're just talking about your neglecting to deny God by looking at each and every thing in your experience and saying, "What is the more that is here than what I'm seeing? Because at the moment when I look at it, I am not having an Experience of God, and therefore something is missing. Because if anything is there at all, it must be God appearing. And there must therefore be an accompanying Experience of Divinity, of Holiness, of Joy, of Bliss."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You do not realize how much you have denied yourself, and how much God, in His Love, would not have it so.

RAJ: Wow.

Well, the ego could say, "Well, when you tell me that I don't realize how much I have denied myself, that sounds like a real putdown to me. You trying to make me feel bad? You trying to depress me? You trying to make me feel guilty? Well, I'm going to." [audience laughter] You see? [said in a loud, angry voice] "See how much the Truth helped me, God? You gonna tell me the Truth? I'm gonna be depressed, because You've got to be telling me that I'm wrong! You've got to be telling me that I should feel bad because I don't know how much I've been denying myself. So there, God, try and save me. You just try and save me. I'm too depressed to listen to you. I'm unwilling to listen to you. It's not fair what you want. It's gonna take me a month to get over my misery just from this one connection with You, God."

But anyone who is Awake recognizes that kind of response as a call for not reaction, but as a call for something that allows for sudden release, such as a simple thought.

"Wouldn't you just like to see the more that is there that you've been missing? I know you're very upset and very angry and very depressed, but aside from that, isn't there a part of you that would simply like to see the more, to see what you've been missing? It doesn't matter what you haven't been seeing. It doesn't matter how long you've not been seeing it. It doesn't matter what it says about you that you haven't been seeing it. Hey, wouldn't you like to see the more? Come on with me and let's take a look. Engage your curiosity a little bit."

"Oh, and now you're gonna sweet talk me, huh?"

"Mm hmm."

"First, you kick me down, and then you try to be sweet."

And you, like God, if you're confronted with this, should smile also in response to that. And then you can say, "You know what? There is more for you to see. And again, it doesn't matter that you haven't been seeing it. It doesn't matter how long you haven't been seeing it. You're capable of seeing it. And when you would like to see it, let me know. It's okay."

RAJ READING: You do not realize how much you have denied yourself, and how much God, in His Love, would not have it so. Yet He would not interfere with you because He would not know His Son if he were not free.

RAJ: A Son is not a slave. A Son is not something to be controlled, any more than God Who Is Omnipotent can be controlled.

The invitation from the Son is to cause reaction from the Father. "Well [Son], you are absolutely incorrigible. I never should have even bothered to try to tell you the Truth. You are what you say you are, and I'm through with you." If that happened, it would mean that the Father had forgotten that this was His Son, like Him, constituted of only That Which The Father Is, embodying All That The Father Is, with no other source of anything to be embodied. And the Father doesn't forget this, else He would forget His Son, just like the Son forgets the Father when he says, "I'd rather see things my way." And conversely, if God forgot who His Son was, that His Son was His Son, He would forget that He was the Father. Existence would cease.

But you see, when you forget, when the Son forgets Who He Is, existence doesn't cease, because the Son isn't God, even though God is All There Is to the Son. And that's the ego-insulting fact that everyone has to be willing to accept. It is your salvation.

God...

RAJ READING: ...would not interfere with you because He would not know His Son if he were not free. To interfere with you would be to attack Himself, and God is not insane.

RAJ: You see, for God to interfere with you, would mean He would have to forget that you are His Son and What Is True About You, which would cause God to forget Who He was. That would be an attack on Himself—grounds for insanity—which cannot happen.

RAJ READING: When you denied Him, YOU were insane. Would you have Him SHARE your insanity? God will never cease to love His Son, and His Son will never cease to love Him. That was the condition of His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...Son's creation, fixed forever in the Mind of God. To know that is sanity. To deny it is insanity. God gave Himself to you in your creation, and His gifts are eternal. Would you deny yourself to Him?

RAJ: Oh yes, you would! You prefer the god of death. And you would rather fear the god of death than love the God of Life. Why? Because you don't have any justification for doing anything else. All the evidence tells you that death is ultimate, absolute, and final.

And you play with your spirituality. You play with wonderful ideas, like Life is Eternal. But you really still believe that death reigns, and that it is to be ultimately feared, and there's no justifiable reason for believing that death can be overcome. It's too much to ask you to believe that death can be overcome, that terminal illnesses can be healed.

And that their absence is just "remission." You see? I mean death, you're never let off the hook from death. If you no longer have a terminal disease, it's not that you're healed and whole—it's that "it's in remission." It's there, but it's not at work killing you. You see? And the reason you never let yourself off the hook is because you will not withdraw your allegiance and devotion to the god you believe in.

Can I invite you to just be radical and do something different than serve this god so obediently? Your god can't take away anything more from you than your life. And that's already in the agreed-upon contract you have with your god. So, you're not even risking anything to do something radical and to believe that maybe God is as actual as the god you're serving, and that you are actually as Divinely Real as I'm telling you that you are. And that in your being radical enough to shift your allegiance from your god to your Father, you just might remember Who You Are, and be transformed out of an insanity that you can't believe you're in, but I'm telling you that you are.

But insanity is not terminal. It's just an ongoing bother until you abandon it—like a mosquito buzzing around your ear.

Here's the Truth.

RAJ READING: Out of your gifts...

RAJ: Through this practice of being a little radical.

RAJ READING: Out of your gifts to Him...

RAJ: And what's the most valuable gift you could give Him? What is it that is His Treasure? Your attention.

You know, steal a little bit of your attention away from your god, the god of death, and give God a little bit of your attention. That's the most wonderful gift you could give Him.

RAJ READING: Out of your gifts to Him...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...the Kingdom will be restored to His Son.

RAJ: To you.

RAJ READING: His Son...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...removed himself FROM His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...gift by refusing to accept what had been created for him, and what he himself had created in the Name of his Father.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "of the Father" instead of "of his Father."]

RAJ: You refused to accept it because you said, "Father, I'd rather do it myself."

RAJ READING: Heaven waits for his return,...

RAJ: The return of the Son—you.

Another way of putting this that keeps it well grounded is that your Right Mind awaits your return to embrace it.

RAJ READING: Heaven waits for his return, for it was created as the dwelling place of God's Son. You are not at home anywhere else, or in any other condition.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "not home" instead of "not at home."]

RAJ: Now this is what God tells you. It isn't what your god tells you.

RAJ READING: Do not deny yourself the joy which was created for you for the misery you have made for yourselves. God has given you the means for undoing what you have made.

RAJ: Meaning what you have made-up.

RAJ READING: Listen, and you WILL learn what you are.

RAJ: Well, there's that word again.

RAJ READING: Listen,...

RAJ: Stop talking. Stop asserting your definitions. Stop describing the likenesses and images you are making up. Stop trying to be right, and stop using every action you can engage in to convince others that you are right just so that you can somehow validate, ultimately, eternally validate yourself by virtue of your having demonstrated that you on your own are right.

Now, don't make this all complicated. Don't make it all emotional. Don't even make it intellectual. Don't figure that you've got to reason this out to the n^{th} degree so that, by virtue of understanding it totally, you will be transformed, because there won't be any little tiny spot or speck in your mind that's confused and that will make you clear. No. That's still control. That's still you being in charge.

The simple way out of this is to simply be conscious in every moment of your day with the curiosity to see the more of What God Is Being there than what you're presently seeing. Why? Because you want to feel the Joy, and you want to feel the Bliss. You want to experience the Divinity, the Godness, the unadulterated and unchangeable Goodness of everything.

And I want to leave you with this simple thing. When you are sure about anything, without having had an intimate moment with that thing in which you became undefended enough to let that thing disclose to you What It Divinely Is, your attitude and behavior is a call for Love. It's a call for correction.

You can't just say, "The misperceptions that I'm having at the moment are not real, and therefore everything's okay." No. Not knowing the Truth about a thing is a state which itself is a call for correction. And so, ask for correction.

Let your prayer each day, each moment, be, "Father, correct my perception. Help me abandon my allegiance to incorrect perception. Help me to be corrected." Don't wait for someone else to come along and recognize that the way you're being in the world is a call for correction, who will then love you enough to elicit and inspire a corrected perception. Ask for correction yourself. Initiate the process of correction yourself. In other words, understand that when you look at a flower, or you look at your mate, or you look at a friend or a tree, or whatever, and you say, "I desire to see more of What God Is Being there than I'm seeing," you are asking for correction of your mind, which means that you're going to have to allow a change of mind to take place. And you are going to have to let yourself be made new. Just be aware of that.

I love you.

The more stark the difference between Truth and illusion, the more fascinating and the more interesting waking up becomes. So don't be afraid to look illusion squarely in the face. And don't be afraid to look at your misguided behavior squarely in the face, because when you do, it becomes obvious to you what you do and don't want to participate in. And so you can bring your willingness to the process of inner correction. And you won't die from it, and you won't hurt from it, and you will not be made to feel guilty, in the process, for anything. But you will be called upon to allow the correction to occur, so that you are no longer engaging in the actions arising out of misunderstanding or lack of clarity in you that has reinforced your bondage and kept you from knowing Who You Are.

You know me, I could talk endlessly. There is enough here for you to let sink in, be with.

And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Don't think for a minute that it's always your family, or your friends, or your acquaintances, who are the ones who stubbornly resist accepting the Truth, who stubbornly hold on to their already established concepts, and who fight for their right to be ill, or fight for their right to be distressed. I say this because it's very easy as you learn more, as light bulbs go on and you see things in a new way and you begin to behave in a new way and your experience improves, it's very easy for you to want your family and your friends to have this experience as well.

And so when you see them distressed and you know they don't need to be, or you see them ill and you know they don't need to be, you want to do something about it and you share with them what you've learned. And maybe they laugh at you or maybe they pooh-pooh it, but one way or another they don't accept it and their life doesn't change. Correction doesn't occur. And you say, "Their unwillingness to listen is forcing me to have to watch them suffer, and that causes me great heartache. That causes me anguish." And really, at the bottom line, what your ego is doing there is saying to you, "They are showing you that Truth is powerless. They are showing you that you are powerless." In other words, they are showing you that you must just suffer watching them suffer, deteriorate and die.

And this causes the warrior-in-you to get up on its haunches and take hold of them by the shoulders and shake some sense into their head, as though you could. And at the bottom line, all the warrior is trying to do is to make them change so that you will be relieved of having to watch them take a path that constitutes suffering and deterioration and death. You act boldly to relieve yourself, to make them stop making you hurt. You say, "Boy, if that isn't stubborn will, I don't know what it is. They are so g—d— stubborn, it pisses me off. It makes me so angry to see how headstrong they are. And it really pisses me off that I can see the answer and I can share it with them, and they refuse to accept it. They insist upon the path they're on. They are determined to continue forward, even though they want to fill my ears with the distress of it all that they're experiencing."

Now here's where the practicality of it all comes in. Here's where the black and whiteness of it comes in. Each of you is just as stubborn as they are, except that you are more comfortable with your determined path than you are with theirs.

We've been slowly moving through the Course. And ultimately you will find that there were umpteen times over the past two and half years in which you could have gotten it, because the best is not saved for last. The best has been conveyed on every page every time we've met. So what's the value of this realization? The value of it is, the value of it lies in the realization that no one—not your friends, not your parents, not your children, not your acquaintances—no one, not even you, will see the Truth until each one gives permission. That means that you personally have no power to force anyone to accept their good. But you do hold the key to your Awakening because you are the one who can give yourself permission to let God in. No one else can give that permission for you.

And here's the interesting thing. When you do that—when you say, "Father, Thy Will not mine be done. I'm willing to abandon the exercise of my will and the authority that I think it ought to have. I'm willing to abandon that. Maybe not 100% of the time, maybe not even totally at this moment, but I am willing to soften my authoritative stance enough to hear Your Voice, enough to let myself feel the Fullness of Being that it's my Birthright to be experiencing because You are my Source and You are withholding nothing of What You Are from me,"—and when you do that, I mean when you really do it, you will feel yourself infilled. And as I've said before, the infilling of it, the Experience of Love that you feel yourself embraced by and consumed with will give you new eyes with which to see your parents, your family, your friends, your acquaintances, that doesn't originate with their behavior or their beliefs, but originates with a clarity you find yourself imbued with because you have given up your stubbornness, at least for that moment. And then you will be inspired to say or do or act in a certain way with your friends or family or acquaintances. But it won't give you power to change them against their will.

The Fullness of the Gift you share with them by speaking from the infilling, may just plant seeds which they will wait to water and harvest. But you will know that you have been with them from a Place of Wholeness—one in which your Purpose has been fulfilled, or is being fulfilled. And whether the quote "response" from others that you're sharing this with is immediate or not, will make no statement to you about your effectiveness.

It's so easy to think that learning the Truth is a means of getting power from a new level, which is exactly what the warrior-mentality would look for. That you operate in a warrior-mentality is a given, even though we haven't talked about it up until just a month or so ago.

How many of you have seen [the movie] War of the Worlds? And of those who have seen it, for how many [finger snap] did a red light go on, did a red flag [finger snap] go up, because in the opening and closing moments of the film, the big bang theory and evolution was presented? It was an incredible teaching tool, this film was, because of its dynamic, its impact, and the number of people it will reach. And they will watch it and they will say, "Yes, the aliens quote 'had not earned the right to live on this planet,' and thus they were destroyed by a microorganism against which they had no immunity."

How many listened to that and no red flag went up at all? No recognition that here the warrior-mentality, the conflict-ridden context of existence was being reinforced, inviting strengthened mutual agreement about the human condition. If no flags went up, if no recognition that this was exactly the opposite of what we've been talking about occurred, you watched it in the warrior-mentality that you accept and employ. Yes, you employ it.

If whatever you accept, you employ in coping with your world—if red flags didn't go up, if an alert did not occur, even the most minor recognition that, "Wow, this is exactly the opposite of what Raj has been talking about," you demonstrated your stubborn willingness to not embrace the Truth that we've been talking about. And you demonstrated your stubbornness—which means your practice of inertia—your practice of being slow to lean out of the rut to your lack of enthusiasm for seeing differently. That's stubborn will.

You say, "God, I was just watching a movie. And you're telling me I was in there being willful? Don't be ridiculous!" But wait a minute. You don't just exist in the context of a movie, or the context of a single event in your week or your day. You exist in the context of the frame of mind you are employing. You live in the context of the way in which you are using your mind.

Now last week we ended up by my inviting you to ask for correction. In other words, don't just move along in your stupid rest. Don't just move along in your ignorance, the status quo, the level of comfort you've reached while not yet being awake. If you're not experiencing the Divinity of Existence, if anything you see is not registering with you as awesome, then you are stubbornly insisting on not seeing that. You are still stubbornly insisting upon your staying right in your orphan-hood—your wanting to be able to authorize, instead of God.

And so, yes, by not seeing more than what was being presented, you were being willful. You were continuing the willful act of saying, "But, Father, I'd rather see it myself. I'd rather see it my way." And that's the habit we're breaking. That's the habit I'm encouraging you to break. So let's be alert. And let's not just accept the status quo. And let's take a moment every now and then, or even more frequently, to say, "Father, what's the more of what's going on here than what I'm seeing? What's the more that You're Being than what I'm seeing? I'm willing to abandon my definition to have the rare experience of seeing it and experiencing it the way You're Being It."

Each of you is coping with being an orphan in very definite well-established ways, just as your friends and family and acquaintances are dealing with and coping with their lives in very specific ways. And you are not a whole lot more amenable to changing your ways than they are.

Now that can be taken as a criticism, and you all can feel really bad about it if you want. But that's part of the warrior-game, too. And you know what? I'm not going to try to stop you. Feel bad if you want.

When there's no payoff for feeling bad, when everyone around you doesn't jump up and try to argue you out of it, what happens? There's no payoff. But more than that, what happens is that you experience suddenly being alone—lonely—which is a direct experience, an unclouded experience of the isolation you claimed for yourself when you said, "Father, I'd rather do it my way. Father, I would rather provide the definition of this, that, and the other thing." That was a step into isolation.

So, I'm not going to tell you not to feel bad. I will say to you that what I've shared shouldn't make you feel bad, because it's very practical information which, because it is so clearly put, you, through the use of intelligence, can choose to either continue employing or stop employing. And your choice will clearly be yours to you, so that when you really become tired of discomfort, you will know that the decision was yours, and therefore the power is yours to abandon that path.

Of course, this brings up another point. You say to me, "Does that mean I should just let my parents die? Does that mean I should just let my children continue to kill themselves with drugs? Does this mean I should let people who are making unwise choices do it without arguing with them?" Well, the answer is "Yes." Why? Because you've got to credit them with as much intelligence as you credit yourself. What do I mean by that? I mean that you've got to acknowledge that they are the Christ, they are the Ultimate, using their mind poorly—but they are still doing it with purpose and resolve and commitment—three elements of Sane Being [which is being] used unwisely. And they will use those three capacities wisely only when it serves them to do it—not when it serves you for them to do it.

You know what? The minute you start treating another as though they have Fundamental Divine Capacities that they are using on purpose, and you're not about to argue them out of the poor use of their mind that they're putting their mind to, as I said, there won't be the payoff for them. You will be crediting them with the fact that they are very skillfully—and I mean that truly—they are very skillfully with great adeptness, configuring and conforming their lives to be exactly the way they want it to be and exactly the way they know it is necessary for it to be for them. Therefore, they are in ultimate terms, completely safe. And when you no longer provide resistance for them to kick against, the warrior-in-them will have lost a job. And it will put them in a position of having to decide to use their God-given Capacities in a different way.

How slowly are you getting the meaning of the Course? Two and a half years could be considered slow—that is, if one is judging, which I'm not. You're getting it as fast as you're willing to get it. Are you doing poorly because it's however slow it is? Only if you're willing to get into judgment and evaluation. You're letting in as much good as you can bear, to tell you the truth. And in that sense, you could say you're doing very well because correction is occurring. Your lives are changing. Your perspective is changing. You are slowly abandoning the commitment to the warrior-mentality.

Now you may feel that recently I've become more focused or more pushy. No, I'm not trying to hurry you up. But you know what? You're able to hear better. And so you're hearing what I'm saying louder. Because you are hearing better, your movement of Awakening, if I may put it that way, is becoming more pronounced. Your movement of Awakening is becoming more pronounced—what I'm saying isn't. You're going to be able to go back to the tapes of the first meetings we had in the study group and find that I've said some radical new thing you just heard way back then but it didn't register with you because you weren't listening as well.

So, before you use your mind poorly by engaging in judgment about your family, your friends, and your acquaintances, and their stubbornness, before you engage in the judgment that will actually cause you to become ill if you become too intense about it, just dare to look at it (the situation) realistically enough to say, "Wow! They're just like me. I'm just like them." And then get down to the business of going within and asking for correction for yourself. And practice connecting with the Father. Practice leaning into the Holy Spirit—leaning into It so that It might support you, infill you with clarity. Because until that happens, you won't have anything to give away that you'll want to keep.

“Oh yes, but you talked about being able to be an agent for change and that made me feel so good. I was so happy to hear that I could actually be a true and valuable agent for change.” Well, that was nothing but the warrior-in-you feigning a willingness to not be a warrior. And it really meant to be a warrior in a new and more delicate way—not quite as direct, not quite as forceful—but just as effective because it would be coming from the right place. You see?

Being an agent for change is what you are when you have said, “Not my will, Father, but Thine be done.” And then you have been undefended enough for Truth to penetrate your awareness from the Place of Excellence in you—the Holy Spirit, the Communicator of God’s Will to you. That is the only path you should be determined to walk. And when you walk that path and you become a Presence, totally involuntarily changes begin to occur around you. People will begin to report back to you that your mere Presence changed their lives in one way or another.

And all you will be able to do is stand with them in awe. “That’s wonderful. Thank you for telling me. I rejoice with you.” That’s a far cry from, “I told ya so. Yep. You brought the problem to me and I set ya straight and aren’t ya grateful? I’m so glad I could be of help.” You see the difference?

Let’s go into the book.

RAJ READING: If God knows His Children as wholly sinless, it is blasphemous to perceive them as guilty.

RAJ: Well, if you’re perceiving them as guilty, it means you’ve applied a definition to them that the Father didn’t apply, right? You’ve made-up a definition and you’re giving preference to that.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If God knows His Children as wholly without pain, it is blasphemous to perceive suffering anywhere. If God knows His Children to be wholly joyous, it is blasphemous to feel depressed.

RAJ: I’m just going to plant a seed here. Every one of you, if you’re experiencing depression, experiences it by design. You have decided, “What are the dynamics and what are the circumstances under which I can’t be happy?” You have... what do they call it? Oh, there are “designer drugs” they are called. And there are “designer illnesses.” There are “designer mental problems.” They’re all designed. And they’re all designed to have a particular effect—an effect that’s wanted.

“No. But I’m not choosing to be depressed. I’m not choosing to be sad.” Yes, always you are. You have determined the circumstances and the conditions which, if they occur, you can’t help from feeling depressed about.

Now, I know many of you are shaking your heads and disagreeing with me, but take a look. Does what depresses you depress your neighbor? Oh, no. Your neighbor says, “I would love to have your problem. That would be no problem for me at all.” Well, you see, that’s not that one’s “designer suffering” or “designer problem.” They didn’t design it that way. But what depresses them you would be glad to have to deal with because you would have no problem with it.

So what does this mean? In simple, practical terms, it means that every one of you make-up your problems. You design your problems. And at any given moment, when a circumstance or event occurs that would cause you to be depressed, at any given moment when that event or circumstance occurs, you could say, “Today I’m not going to be depressed by that.” And if you mean it, you would find yourself moving on through your day doing what you had planned on doing, or needed to do, unaffected by the fact that that event or circumstance happened. Now this is the Truth.

It’s interesting, you don’t hear the word “blasphemous” or “blasphemy” very much these days. What does it mean? Well, it has a couple of meanings. One of them is to behave in a disrespectful way or to have a disrespectful attitude toward God. But the more significant definition is the act of claiming the Rights of God.

Well, when you say, “I’d rather look at that rose and see it as a physical organism made up of matter, short-lived, it will die,” wow, you’re replacing God. You see? You are taking on the rights, you are claiming the Rights of God to be the Creator of something. And your definition, you expect to be able to prove is true. That’s blasphemy. You’re taking on claiming the Rights of God. You’re trying to be equal to God.

Are you going to be punished for blasphemy? Well, no external source is going to punish you. But you’re already being punished when you’re in the frame of mind that says, “Father, I’d rather define it myself. Father, step back, please. I’m about to override What You’ve Made There by giving it a new meaning. Don’t interfere with me.” And God doesn’t interfere with you. But you pay the penalty of forgetting that you’re God’s Son, God’s Daughter, God’s Expression. And you suffer from the ignorance of Who You Are. And we’ve gone on at length about that. But that’s how blasphemy works and that’s what blasphemy is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: All of these illusions,...

RAJ: Meaning seeing your Brother as guilty, or in pain, or suffering.

RAJ READING: All of these illusions, and the many other forms which blasphemy may take, are REFUSALS to accept creation as it is.

RAJ: The way God Is Being It as What God Is Meaning It To Be.

RAJ READING: If God created His Son perfect, that is how you must learn to see him to learn of his reality. And as PART of the Sonship, that is how you must see YOURSELF to learn of YOURS.

RAJ: Now what that means is that as an experience, you have to be willing to move from the ideas and beliefs about yourself and everything else that you have created and are so sure of, into an area where you are willing to look at those things without the definitions—which means that you are going to be looking at something that has no apparent meaning to you, except that you know from what I've said that the elements of it are Divine, Eternal, Awesome, and so on. And it is as though you have to move into a realm of what seems like fantasy compared to the definiteness of the concepts you've been employing. And so you must be willing to look at your Brother, or the flower, or whatever it might be, with a vision that is still not substantiated to your eyes. It's as though you must be willing to know the Truth before there is anything there to substantiate it to you.

Your brother (your family member) behaves in a way that is awful and disturbing and unintelligent. And you have physical evidence of it. You must be willing to stand in the face of that, even in the face of their unrelenting presentation of it, and be willing to withdraw from what your eyes are telling you and what they are asserting, to go within to the Altar, to go to the Source of the Experience of Truth. And so it's as though you are abandoning tangible reality for intangible make-believe almost. And that's the way it may seem, but by going within to the Source of the Experience of Truth, you are, for lack of better words, aligning yourself with Reality, with a capital "R", that doesn't seem to be visible to you at the moment. And that's what opens the door for a miracle—a sudden shift of perception that is healing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Do not perceive ANYTHING God did not create, or you are denying HIM.

RAJ: You know what that means? As depressing as it might sound, it means that for the most part as you go through your day, you are denying Him because you are perceiving things that God did not create. And you know what? You don't know which are the things that God did not create. Now, I do not want to be confusing here. When you go through your day, the only thing in your face is What God Has Created. But the way you're seeing it, what you are determining those things to be, is not What God Created. And it is what you have determined everything is that stands between you and your direct experience of the Presence of God there.

Now, put negatively as I've just done, it could be another reason for you to feel bad. Or, it could serve to simply mean that the only thing confronting you is the Kingdom of Heaven seen through a glass darkly, and therefore, it is utterly reasonable for you to engage a level of curiosity that you've not brought into play before. And that doesn't involve feeling bad at all.

But I must point out to you that most everything you're seeing is not What God Has Made, so that you have a reason to bring greater curiosity into play. If you don't know that there is more to see, you won't be curious. And if I don't tell you that the majority of what you see, not just a little bit, but the majority of what you see is not What God Created, you won't know how much Good you have in store for you that's right in front of you—which can increase your reason for engaging in curiosity even more.

Some people don't hear good news when it's provided in a pleasant way. And so it is sometimes helpful to say, "Here's the good news. Most of what you're seeing isn't What God Is Being. Most of what you're seeing is an illusion. Most of what you're seeing is and constitutes an inadequate experience of Being. But it's just an inadequate perception of something full of Ultimate (capital 'M') Meaning—Awesome Divinity. I don't want you to be comfortable in your ignorance, even if you're not feeling distressed in it, because it's not your Birthright to be experiencing such finite limitation."

Again.

RAJ READING: Do not perceive ANYTHING God did not create, or you are denying HIM. His is the ONLY Fatherhood, and it is yours only because HE has given it to you. Your gifts to yourself are meaningless, but your gifts to YOUR creations are like His because they are given in His Name.

RAJ: See, the gift that you give to your world by saying, "It's a physical world and a material universe," is not a gift that's given in His Name, because He doesn't show up anywhere in that definition. All that shows up is you. And you are an orphan. You see?

When you look at something and the Gift you give to it is an Acknowledgement, a Recognition of its Divinity, the Gift is given in God's Name because you had to invite God in, in order to experience the Reality of the thing you're giving the Gift of True Acknowledgement to. And that Gift of Acknowledgement, that Recognition of the Divinity of a thing and your Acknowledgement of it, is what constitutes your creation.

RAJ READING: That is why your creations are as real as His.

RAJ: Why? Again, because they are given in His Name—without excluding Him.

RAJ READING: Yet the real Fatherhood must be acknowledged if the real Son is to be known.

RAJ: It's the only way you're going to come back into the True Experience of Who and What You Are—by annulling the divorce with your Father.

RAJ READING: You believe that the sick things which you have made are your real creations because you believe that the sick images you perceive ARE the Sons of God.

RAJ: [small laugh] Well, that's where blasphemy comes in, because you're trying to be equal to God. You are engaging in acts of usurping the Rights of God and claiming them for yourself. And so the things that you have made become your offspring, your creations, the son of a god.

RAJ READING: Only if you accept the Fatherhood of God will you have ANYTHING because His Fatherhood GAVE you everything. That is why to deny Him IS to deny yourself. Arrogance is the denial of love because love SHARES and arrogance WITHHOLDS. As long as both appear to you to be desirable, the concept of choice, which is NOT of God, will remain with you.

RAJ: Remember, the god of sickness is the belief that you have a capacity to choose between gods—between God Who Is Real and the likeness of God that you have made-up.

So:

RAJ READING: As long as both...

RAJ: Love and arrogance.

RAJ READING: ...appear to you to be desirable, the concept of choice, which is NOT of God, will remain with you. While this is not true in eternity, it IS true in time, so that, while time lasts in YOUR minds, there WILL be choices. Time ITSELF was your choice.

RAJ: And I'm going to plant another little seed.

When you are not resisting God, you are inseparable with the Movement of Being—which is Eternal, a Singularity—and "time" is a meaningless word and a non-experience. When you attempt to resist the Movement by engaging in an independent movement, you create a tension—a tension (t-e-n-s-i-o-n)—and it causes the Omnipresent Conscious Experience of Being to appear to be moving away from you because you are resisting and digging in your heels. It is an illusion, but it seems quite real to the one doing it.

Has it not ever caused you to wonder why it is when you look out into space with your telescopes that it appears that no matter where you might be in the universe, it is moving away from you? That's part of the illusion brought into play by the act of resistance which is constituted of your attempting to act independent of the Movement of Existence, the Movement of Being.

Not only that, hasn't it ever caused you to wonder why when you look through your telescopes once you get just a fraction of the way away from your planet, you're seeing the past? When you look at your sun, you're seeing what happened eight minutes ago. You're not able to see the present. It's almost as though you are in prison. What's Really Going On Now is absolutely unavailable to you. All you can see is what was. You have been put in a very limited experience—one of absolute isolation. That's the way time is experienced. And time is a sensation, you might say, an illusory sensation that is brought into play when you begin to resist the Movement of Being by having a determination to act independent of the Movement.

The moment you relax that determination and yield back into what will seem like cooperation with the Movement, once you let the Movement take over, everything will snap back into focus, so to speak. Time will cease to be an experience. And the Universe will become available to you in its Totality in the Now—will be visible with telescopes. And you will not be experiencing an isolation. Nor will you be experiencing an expanding universe. So much for the big bang theory—that's just the best explanation that can be come up with when one is attempting to be the definer of life without ever inquiring of Life Itself What It Is.

Just a little seed I planted there about why things appear to be the way they are. Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you would remember eternity, you must learn to look ONLY on the eternal. If you allow yourselves to become preoccupied with the temporal, you ARE living in time.

RAJ: Well, the only things that are temporal are the definitions you made-up. And if you've been making something up, you're standing in resistance to and at odds with the Movement of Being Itself. And that's called "time."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: As always, your choice is determined by what you value.

RAJ: And right now you are valuing this apparent capacity you think you have to make-up definitions that can, by the force of your will and your determination and your skill at being coercive with your Brothers and Sisters, cause to become as Real as God's Creations. That's what you're valuing at the moment.

And you don't say, "I value this." You say, "I'm stuck in this." But you won't abandon the definition you're applying to the word "this." You're not willing to abandon the act of independent authorization that causes you to seem to be stuck in the human condition—when all there is to the human condition is the Kingdom of Heaven seen through a glass darkly, seen through the lens of your definitions.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Time and eternity cannot both be real because they contradict each other.

RAJ: Remember, "time" is a sensation you have that colors your experience of Eternity and causes it to seem to be moving away from you and keeps you from seeing it all in the Now—causing it, the majority of it, to appear to be the past.

RAJ READING: Time and eternity cannot both be real because they contradict each other. If you will accept only what is timeless as real, you will begin to understand eternity, and make it yours.

RAJ: The only thing that is Timeless is Everything when you're not applying a little bit of torque to your perception of it all and having an independent slant on it. And the only way to get back to the Timeless is to stop applying that little bit of torque, which is brought into play by an unwise use of will.

How do you abandon an unwise use of will? By being willing to yield to the Way Everything Works—the capital "W" Way—by yielding to and wanting to experience Truth, What God Is Being, right where you have overlaid the Kingdom of Heaven with your definition. So, stop being so sure of yourself and start being curious to see beyond what you think everything is. And let that become your practice. And let it become your practice more and more consistently through your day.

"I wonder What That Really Is? I wonder What That Really Is?" Like a child in the car. "What's that? What's that? What's that?"—until it drives you crazy. "It's a cow." "What's a cow?" You see? "I wonder what the more is that is there."

Become curious. Become innocently curious and ask your Father, "What's the More Of You that's here than what I'm seeing?"

And just as with children, your curiosity may come too fast and furious, and the answers you're getting aren't as complete as you want them, and you become impatient. Well, just calm down and just continue to ask. The persistence of asking, you might say, sets up a new field of energy. Please do not take me literally here. It sets up a mental context of receptivity that draws, like desire does, something toward you. And so, as you go through your day, whether you're getting vividly enlightening answers or not, continue to ask because it sets the tone of receptivity. Stop settling for the status quo.

I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

You know, last week I said, you know, if you want to feel bad because you're moving slowly in your process of Awakening, or if you're feeling guilty for not trying hard enough, if you're feeling as though you're doomed to failure because you've been trying to know the Truth for years to discover it and look where you are, I said if you want to feel bad because of those things, go ahead. But I want to reaffirm that every intent you feel that you enliven within yourself to see the more of Reality that is present than what you're presently seeing, you're doing well. Because you are doing what? You are providing what I'm going to call the mental environment—your mental environment—you're providing the environment in which discovery and realization can occur. You're providing the environment in which a sudden shift of perception can occur.

And I want to remind you of something. You exist by Grace—not by anything you do or don't do. You will wake up by Grace and you will experience healing by Grace. You may provide the environment in which Grace can register with you, but you can't be responsible for the healing or the Awakening.

And if you on your own can't be responsible for it, then there's nothing to feel bad about if you haven't experienced it yet. Feeling bad about things, feeling guilty about things is part of the human condition. And what I mean by that is that it's part of the frame of reference that everyone is in who has said, "Father, I'd rather define it myself. Father, I'd rather do it my way," and then proceeded to try to do it. The impossible is being attempted. It can't be accomplished. Down deep every single one of you knows it, and you feel foolish for trying it. You cover it up, but it's there. You know it can't be done.

Because you feel vulnerable in that independent, so-called independent state, you recognize that something is wrong—and I mean by that out of kilter, out-of-sync. And wrong is bad, and therefore you must be guilty for doing something wrong. No. It doesn't call for guilt. Being out-of-sync with things isn't something you will be punished for. It's an experience that simply needs to be abandoned. That's all it means. You're doing something that can't be done—abandon the attempt. As long as you don't abandon the attempt, you will feel vulnerable, you will feel uneasy, you will feel the out-of-sync-ness.

And so I encourage you all to forget about feeling guilty, to forget about feeling bad, to stop thinking that you know how much better you ought to be doing—and just energetically, enthusiastically engage your curiosity about each and every thing you're confronted with. "Father, I would like to see the more of What You're Being right there, right there, right there, than what I'm seeing." That invitation is a desire. Even if initially you think that desire is pure foolishness, it is a desire that nurtures or makes a nurturing environment for the light bulbs to go on, for the "Aha's" to occur, for insight and revelation to take place. So lighten up. Lighten up but persist in the curiosity.

Lighten up so that persisting in the curiosity becomes a fun experience—not a heavy duty one in which you're attempting to overcome all the sins you've engaged in by trying to do things all by yourself. You've engaged in doing nothing! You've engaged yourself in accomplishing nothing. No sin has occurred. No punishable sin has occurred. It is possible for you to imagine you've done something wrong, but it's not possible to do something wrong, because Reality cannot be altered from What It Is—and it is a Singularity, not a polarized oppositional environment. So I'm encouraging you to stop engaging in self-judgment and self-criticism. Grace occurs when you're not expecting it. Grace does not occur by a decision you make. Transformation and healing are inevitable because of What You Divinely Are.

You know, we talked a couple of weeks ago about the only sure things are death and taxes. Well, that's not true. The only sure thing is that you will wake up. The only sure thing is that you will remember Who You Are, because you cannot totally forget Who You Are and you cannot secure your place in an illusory sense of self forever. Remember that.

Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: Chapter 10

RAJ: In the Sparkly Book.

RAJ READING: GOD AND THE EGO

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the chapter heading is: Chapter 11 GOD OR THE EGO]

RAJ READING: Either God or the ego is insane. If you will examine the evidence on both sides fairly, you will realize that this must be true. Neither God nor the ego proposes a partial thought system.

RAJ: I want you to consider this image. You all look around you at your world through two eyes, and as a result you see a three-dimensional image. Everything you see is affected by, or your perception of everything you see is affected by the fact that you're looking with two eyes. Now let's say that you said, "I'd rather see it a different way," and so you took your hand and you covered up one of your eyes, or you got a patch and put it over one of your eyes, and now you're looking at everything, same thing you were always looking at before, but now all you're seeing is a two-dimensional image—flat, no sense of depth. And everything you see, your perception of everything will be absolutely governed by the fact that you're only looking at it with one eye.

When it says, "Neither God nor the ego proposes a partial thought system," it means that, like with your vision, whether you're looking with two eyes or one eye, absolutely everything that you experience visually is totally affected by the choice of the way you're going to look at it—with two eyes or one eye. I mentioned recently that from the vantage point of the ego, everything is a singularity—just as from the vantage point of God, everything is a Singularity—and this is just a reaffirmation of that.

Now waking up is rather like somebody saying to you, "Open up your other eye."

"Other eye?" You see, you've been looking with only one of your eyes for so long you've forgotten that you have another eye. "Well, another eye? Open my other eye? I don't know what you're talking about."

Well, experiment a little bit. Squinch your face around and see if you can make some other part of your face do something you haven't let it do for a long time. In other words, have a little curiosity. Explore a little bit. Have some fun venturing into an activity that you haven't ventured into for a long time. You see? So that instead of looking at things [laughing] with a private eye, you might look joined with another eye.

RAJ READING: Neither God nor the ego proposes a partial thought system. Each is internally consistent,...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: And total.

RAJ READING: ...but they are diametrically opposed in all respects, so that partial allegiance is impossible. Remember, too, that their results are as different as their foundations, and their fundamentally irreconcilable natures CANNOT be reconciled by your vacillations.

RAJ: You can't dance a jig good enough to make the two one. You don't have enough mental agility to bring the two together.

Now:

RAJ READING: Nothing alive is fatherless, for life is creation. Therefore, your decision is always an answer to the question, "Who is my father?"

RAJ: Remember that the god of sickness is a capacity you think you have to choose which God/god is Real/real—God or the likenesses of God you have made-up. When you bow down to the likenesses of God that you have made-up by redefining What God Is Being, you are exercising a capacity you think you have to see things independent of the Father, even though [laughing] it's All That The Father Is Being that you're give new definitions to. You see, [small laugh] you say, "But, Father, I'd rather do it on my own," but you don't have anything to work on, on your own. So you deny the Father, while at the same time redefining the Father. Now that is called "a split mind" in the sense that you are denying God by using What God Is to accomplish the denial. That's not independence at all. It's a confused mind. You see?

You're still fixated on God even though you're saying, "God, I don't want to have anything to do with You." So you apply a little bit of torque, a little bit of bias, to your experience of What God Is Being, and so that you can say, "You see? What I'm seeing is not God." But what you're looking at and saying, "It's not God," is just a distorted perception of what? God. There's no independence or separate activity there. There's just insanity.

Now what good does it do to know that? The good it does is that it helps you to realize that all the time you're working so hard to come back Home, you are working with the fundamental raw materials of Creation, with a capital "C"—meaning that all you're doing is learning to look at things without applying your bias to it. You're looking at the Presence of God that you don't think is God, and you're saying, "God, I want to see You there." What this means is that you haven't managed to create a false creation somewhere other than Where God Is that would make it rather difficult to get back to Where The Father Is, to get to this other Universe or this other Dimension Where God Is, instead of this dimension you have created.

You're right in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven with constant opportunity to discover the Kingdom of Heaven right in front of you where it's always been. You're already Home, in other words. This is the reason it helps to know this. Because it's not off in the future and it's not off in another dimension—it's right here. All the materials that you have to work with are God Materials. All of them are the Presence of God. That's how close God is and that's how close you are to God.

And even you are not the definition you have made-up about yourself. You are the Expression of God. So every single one of you is in the best possible position you could be. You're already Home. You are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it. And all it calls for you to do is to pay attention from that standpoint with curiosity that understands that there isn't a whole lot to be accomplished—just a shift of perception.

Since the whole mess was established by or apparently established by a decision you made to see things independent of the Father, and it resulted in effect by your getting a divorce from your Father and standing as an orphan, it stands to reason that your waking up, your coming back Home, will always rest on and proceed from your decision to know the answer to the question, "Who is my Father?"—because that's the way you undo the divorce. And that's the way you undo your amnesia about your Identity. Because the moment you invite the Father back in with an acknowledgement that you have a Father, you immediately lay the groundwork for your experiencing yourself as the Father's Offspring, which is your Identity, in which lies your Sanity and the end of your confusion.

The key to Awakening, therefore, lies in the simple question, "Who is my Father?"

Again.

RAJ READING: Therefore, your decision is always an answer to the question, "Who is my father?" And you will be faithful to the father you choose.

RAJ: This would imply that since the chapter is entitled, "GOD AND THE EGO" or "GOD OR THE EGO," that they represent two fathers, and you will serve one or the other.

Let's continue.

RAJ READING: Yet what would you say to someone who really believed this question involves conflict?

RAJ: That question sort of jumps out from left field, doesn't it? Why would it say that? Why would that question be asked at this point?

RAJ READING: Yet what would you say to someone who really believed this question involves conflict?

RAJ: Well, you do think there's conflict, because you think there really is an ego and you think there really is a God. And you think that they really are opposed to each other, and they really are two actual presences at odds with each other. After all, you are serving one or the other. You're giving your allegiance to one or the other. You have a preference for one or the other. So you do think there's conflict.

RAJ READING: Yet what would you say to someone who really believed this question involves conflict?

RAJ: Well, if you are not coming from a separated place, you would say to that one, "It's impossible for there to be conflict between Something and nothing." God is the capital "S" Something That Is All. And the ego is an imagination you came up with that isn't real, and has no existence except as a spurious thought. And even though you have been letting this spurious thought be the foundation for your perception of the world and for your experience, it doesn't exist and the way you've been experiencing the world has been pure illusion. There can't be conflict between Something and nothing. You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If YOU made the ego, how can the ego have made you?

RAJ: Well, it's not really too difficult to answer that question, believe it or not. I'm going to start out by saying that when you are awake, you don't think. You don't go through evaluative processes. You don't go through processes of logic. You don't make assessments of the Only Thing There Is to think about or have assessments of—which is Creation. You are not holding yourself apart from it and you are totally at one with it. And you stand in constant awe of it, in constant wonder at it. And when you stand in wonder at it, you are, for lack of better words, having an unboundaried Experience of Joy and Bliss, because you are experiencing All of Creation without distance between you and it. You and it are One.

And you recognizing What It Is—there are not better words than this—experience Awe, experience a Fullness of Joy that I can best describe as something which comes over you and consumes you and fills you until it is the All of You of your Conscious Experience. And there's no time or inclination to think about the experience. It is Whole. The Infinity and Eternality of Creation is totally available to you and constitutes your Conscious Experience. You and Creation, you and your Brothers and Sisters are not separated in any way, even though you are all eternally distinct. And you don't need to think. You don't need to have language to talk with them, to communicate with them, because the Communion of the Singularity of Creation is Total and Now for you.

Now, the minute you have a thought, the minute you do say, "I wonder how this would look if I stood a little bit to the left, or stood back a little bit, or narrowed down my range of vision so that I wasn't taking in the whole thing. What would it look like if I looked at it in a different way?"—that's a thought—a thought which apparently you could act upon. And it's a thought that all of you did act upon. And it led to other thoughts.

Once you had torqued or biased your perception of Creation, it made you ask more questions. And before long, you thought to say, "Well, I wonder who's asking these questions?"—because asking questions and having thoughts, not being part of Reality, never had been part of your experience. And so you said, "Wow! There must be a thinker here." You see? "And that thinker must be me! That means I'm something."

But mind you, these are just thoughts being put together in an apparently intelligent and logical way so that the togetherness of it seems to state the presence of something actual. Well, because the thoughts aren't you, then the thought that says, "There must be a thinker here and the thinker must be me," that thought still isn't you. Stay with me here. But if you believe the thought, you will proceed forward on that basis and be lost, because you will have taken the bait of the illusion and succumbed to it.

What happens when you take the bait is you take this imaginatively created sense of self as a fact, and you make a god of it, and you begin to serve it, even though, as I've been saying, it's nothing more than a hypothesis. It's just an imagination which ultimately makes no sense whatsoever. What you make a god of, you begin to serve. And you've been very happy to serve your ego for a long time, because it's thrilling and invigorating and scary as hell.

And it keeps you feeling alive because you're constantly having to overcome... [small laugh] I'm going to say you're constantly having to overcome the tendency to realize that all of what is happening in that frame of mind is unreal, so that you can step back from the point where you took the bait of the idea that because there was someone thinking, there must be a thinker and that thinker must be you. You need to step back from that.

And literally, one of the most effect ways to step back from that thought is to move out of the arena of thinking which you do by meditating, so that you have the opportunity through truly meditating to find out that Consciousness and thinking are not equivalents. They are not one and the same thing—that when no thought is going on, you still are Conscious. A better way of putting it is that you experience the fact that you are Consciousness, or Consciousness is What You Are—Mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The authority problem remains the only source of perceived conflict, because the ego was made out of the wish of God's Son to father Him.

RAJ: In other words, God.

You see, that was the meaning of blasphemy that we talked about last week—your claiming the capacity to be equal to God.

RAJ READING: ...the ego was made out of the wish of God's Son to father Him.

RAJ: Well, it's worked pretty well. I mean it certainly is believed that that is possible. Sociologists and students of religion, historically speaking, many of them who do not have a belief in God, are able to look at mankind and see that man has created God for himself out of some great deep need. The connection with God has been so completely forgotten, because it has been so completely ignored that it actually has become possible for a large number of people on your planet to believe that God is nothing but a religious belief that makes everyone feel more comfortable in the human condition and gives them the means to cope with the human condition as long as they're in it. You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego, then, is nothing more than a delusional system, in which you made your own father. Make no mistake about this. It sounds insane when it is stated with perfect honesty, but the ego never looks upon what it does with perfect honesty. Yet that IS its insane premise, which is carefully hidden in the dark cornerstone of its thought system.

RAJ: Why all the attempts to achieve? Why all the attempts to be successful? Why all the attempts to become something or become more? Because there's an innate Knowing that all of you have that of yourself you are nothing. But you don't want to look at that, and so you cover that clarity, that Sanity, up in the darkest recess, the furthest out of sight. And then you put all of your energy into proving that it's not true, into proving that you can become something, in proving that you can authorize things.

Well, who are you going to prove it to? You can only prove it to other people who are in the same state of mind. And so life becomes a process of coercing everyone into seeing you the way you want them to see you—to see you for who you want yourself to be. And existence is a matter of ongoing manipulation in an attempt to establish mutual agreements about what, primarily? About who you are.

And as long as you do that, you never allow yourself to get to the Fundamental Kernel of Truth that's hidden away in the dark recesses of your mind, covered up—that you of yourself can do nothing, that you of yourself do not exist. But you do exist, and therefore you exist because of Something. You are the Expression of Something. You are the Son of Something. Therefore, you have a Father. There is a Source, and you're not It.

And because you are not It, but It is All There Is of you, you need do nothing to become. You need do nothing to accomplish. You need do nothing to be a success. And you need not engage in the coercion of your Brothers and Sisters to arrive at mutual-agreed-upon definitions of you. And then allow yourself to succumb to and abide in that Kernel of Truth that was hidden away in the dark recess, and just be. And in the absence of the struggle to become, find the Fullness and Wholeness of You uncovered to you once again, because you're not busy denying it by struggling at becoming.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego, then, is nothing more than a delusional system,...

RAJ: A fantasy.

RAJ READING: ...in which you made your own father. Make no mistake about this. It sounds insane when it is stated with perfect honesty, but the ego never looks upon what it does with perfect honesty. Yet that IS its insane premise, which is carefully hidden in the dark cornerstone of its thought system. And either the ego, which you made, IS your father, or its whole thought system will not stand.

RAJ: Awakening is the process of discovering that it will not stand and letting it collapse, leaving you empty of all the definitions you have come up with to attempt to give meaning to your existence so that you might demonstrate your independent actuality.

As I've said before, in the absence of those definitions, you will have a temporary transitional experience of meaninglessness, because as what you've been familiar with is released and you're no longer looking at it, and it no longer seems to be available to you because you're not energizing it, you are confronted with that which doesn't seem familiar to you and isn't making total sense to you yet. It's God. It's Reality. It's What Everything Really Is. And you must be willing to abide there as your eyes, we will say, adjust to the new view. And you must abide with it long enough for it to begin to once again make sense to you. And I must say that so that when you have these experiences of, "Wow. Nothing I see means anything," you will abide with it, instead of recoil from it and once again reengage your thinking processes.

"Wow. Nothing means anything, at least not according to any of the definitions I've ever had. But I'm willing to sit here and pay attention, because I remember

Raj said that every Part of Creation has the capacity to communicate Its Meaning to me and to everything. And Its Meaning is the Meaning the Father has set into place by being the Movement of Creation. So the Presence of God there in that thing, has the means of communicating What It Means (What It Is) to All of Creation throughout Infinity, so that everyone who is Awake, and is not experiencing any tiny isolation, will have the full experience of the Meaning of that thing along with every other thing, and in that experience have what I will carefully call “The Experience of the Wholeness of You”—the one experiencing it all.

I know some of you have a feeling at times that what I’m sharing doesn’t have any relevance to everyday life. And you can’t figure out how to apply it to everyday life. What you’re calling “everyday life” is really your best perceptions of what’s going on around you; perceptions that are arising out of a false experience of your being independent, separate, tiny and vulnerable. And yes, what I am saying doesn’t really have relevance to those definitions, those filters through which you are looking at everything and seeing Creation incorrectly or falsely. It is good to realize that there isn’t a relevance between Reality and your misperceptions of Reality. The Experience of Truth is not a tool that you can bring into your false perception of things and manipulate the perception around so that it’s pleasant.

Again, going back to the beginning.

RAJ READING: Neither God nor the ego proposes a partial thought system. Each is internally consistent, but they are diametrically opposed in all respects, so that partial allegiance is impossible. Remember, too, that their results are as different as their foundations, and their fundamentally irreconcilable natures CANNOT be reconciled by your vacillations.

RAJ: Or by your mental manipulations.

Now I’m going to tell you something. When you reach for the Truth, when you ask of the Father or the Holy Spirit to be illuminated by What Is Real and the illumination comes and you feel bliss and you feel whole, and you are not filled with fear even if the circumstances which drove you to reach to the Holy Spirit haven’t changed, you have been moved into a place that you should hold onto with great love and appreciation and valuing—even if from the warrior-mentality or from the old ego-standpoint that’s looking for a way to change the human condition, nothing has changed. You cannot afford to take the bait, so to speak—to go into bliss or go into your peace so that you may bring your peace back into the illusion, into the misperceptions and accomplish something with it. That’s not what it’s about. You must hold onto the Experience of Wholeness that you’re having. Hold onto it by continuing to give your attention to it. And from Its Place, move in the world. That's called "being in the world, but not of it." That's called "be." And by being heal the sick.

The dream will not improve by dissolving unless you insist upon desiring of the Holy Spirit, or your Guide, or the Father, to have the Conscious Experience of Truth and of Reality, and then holding fast to it (the experience), holding fast to the ongoing Connection with the Holy Spirit where sudden shifts of perception can continue to increasingly occur. If you stay there, the human condition will report back to you changes, improvements, healing. And you will begin to see things more consistently as They Truly Divinely Are.

The ego is a hypothesis—an imagination. And the ego as what you are and your belief that it is what you are is also a hypothesis—a mad idea, a crazy idea—an idea that has no substance or Truth to it. And you cannot move into the Conscious Experience of Truth and somehow bring That Which Is Irreconcilable with a mad idea, back into the mad idea's territory and make the mad idea less mad. You see, you say, "Oh, I want to crawl out of the crab barrel. I want to get out of all this confusion, and all of this confinement, and all of this tininess, and all of this struggling to get to the top. I want to get out so that I can go get the good news and bring it back." Well, let me tell you something. When the crab gets out of the barrel, it can't bring all of the space and all of the freedom and all of the lack of conflict from outside the barrel back into the barrel, because the barrel is a confined space. It is a space that can't hold all of everything else, all of the absence of conflict and struggle and strife.

And even if you could bring back a little bit of it, all of the other crabs in the barrel would be still saying, "Don't bother me with that crap. I have got to get past Henry here because he's between me and the top of the barrel. And that's what I... if you can tell me how to do that, I'll listen to you." And you say, "Well, gee whiz. While I was out of the barrel and I was experiencing unimaginable things, I never did hear anything about how to get past Henry,"—because being out of the barrel doesn't have anything to do with being in the barrel. The Truth doesn't have anything to do with illusion. The Movement of Creation which is Real and the Energy of Spirit that constitutes every Manifestation of Creation Infinitely is not a hypothesis—it's actual. It's the Conscious Experience of Reality. And what's actual can't interface in any way with that which is hypothetical.

So what am I saying to you? I'm saying, "Stop being frustrated," if you're getting something out of what I'm saying, but you're frustrated because you can't relate it to your immediate human condition; because there ain't no human-condition-as-such—there is just the Kingdom of Heaven being perceived by you through a sieve. What I called last week your "designer problem," your "designer distresses," your "designer glasses" that give the most incredible distortions, the most incredibly fascinating distortions—oh, that can occupy you for hours, trying to get it straightened out, making sense out of it, so you can be at peace. You see?

You have given definitions to your circumstances, but the definitions are hypotheses that provide a little bit of distress. When you take a rod of steel and you twist it and you cause a little torque to occur, the word that is used for that is "distress." The metal is being distressed. And when you apply distress—a designer distress, a distress that is absolute for you—"If she says that to me one more time, I will hit the roof! I will leave her!"—well, there's your design and that's your "designer distress". And you know what? The word that could send you through the roof could be "popcorn." [audience laughter] You're getting the feel for it.

Because you're in the middle of one thing only, the Kingdom of Heaven, which is a Singularity—which means there are no polarities; there is no polarization; there is no conflict; there is only Perfect, Infinite Unity. Your willingness to turn to the Holy Spirit to have the True Experience of Reality revealed to you is going to cause you to see the only thing that's in front of you more clearly for What It Is, which isn't going to have anything to do with the "designer perception" that you have developed and apply to the Kingdom of Heaven.

And so improvement, healing, regeneration and redemption of experience is going to occur, but not because you've been able to bring some of Infinity back into the limitations of the crab barrel and work things around, manipulate things around, so that there's more room and more freedom, and everyone knows that they do not have to get past Henry to become something. Ultimately everyone will abandon the barrel. And the barrel will sit empty, without any confinement associated with it, without any activity going on in it of stress and distress, suffering and becoming, and proving oneself, and demonstrating that oneself is real, and all that accompanies being an orphan.

[Editor's Note: Still re-reading material from the first paragraph covered today.]

So...

RAJ READING: Nothing alive is fatherless, for life is creation.

RAJ: The Movement—the Infinite Movement of Being—God.

RAJ READING: Therefore, your decision is always an answer to the question,...

RAJ: This is no matter what decision you make—whether you're going to still try to get past Henry, or whether you're going to climb out of the barrel entirely,

[or] whether you're going to try to bring back what was outside the barrel into the barrel, or whether you're going to permanently stay outside of the barrel—any of these decisions.

RAJ READING: ...your decision is always an answer to the question, "Who is my father?" And you will be faithful to the father you choose.

RAJ: So, you won't go out, like onto a high mountain, and reconnoiter with God and then take what you have gathered from God back into your dream, back into your private sense of yourself to use on your Brothers and Sisters for their good through coercion, manipulation, to make things better for them, because you love them. Because all that will amount to is you as an ego, as a warrior, attempting to do something so much better than everyone else that everyone else benefits and will recognize your value and say to you, "We adore you. We honor you. We know you are a meaningful Presence, so much more meaningful than us. And we want to become your students. And we want you to teach us how to be like you. We want to join with you, and be like you, and be with you, and for you to be with us. We want to have 'a holy relationship.'" And I do mean that sarcastically. And I do mean that as a wake-up call to all of you who misunderstand the meaning of the term "holy relationship" as it's used in the Course. And I will have more to say about that at another time. Let that be a little seed planted.

I will just say, as a last word today, holy relationships are not a means of proving that you are meaningful. Better relationships than you've ever had before, based upon Knowledge of God and Knowledge of Truth brought to bear in a human relationship between two individuals still independent from God, does not constitute anything worth achieving, even if it's called "the nurturing of a holy relationship." I mean the guy trying to get past Henry, will not be a better crab—by virtue of having a holy relationship with Henry where there's no more strife between he and Henry—when they're both still in the crab barrel and aren't interested in getting out.

I will stop there.

I love you all.

And I'm just going to say no matter what you think, you're not in the crab barrel. [audience laughter] And you don't have to get past Henry, or Henrietta. And you don't have to change a g—d—- thing in the crab barrel, because the crab barrel is an unnatural, and not even actual, environment.

I look forward to being with you all next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

We've been talking last few weeks about having false gods, in so many words. We've talked about the first commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," and the second, "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven images or any likeness of any thing in the heavens above, the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth."

And I've been homing in on the word "likeness." Because the ego, or from the ego frame of reference you look at God, which means you look at anything that you can see, and you say, "That's an elderly lady. That's a fat woman. That's a young person, inexperienced. That's a beautiful person," and as you do that and you apply a definition to what you're looking at, you are creating a likeness. And if you believe what you're saying, you serve that likeness. You behave on the basis of that likeness. Put simply, a false god, or a likeness of God, is any definition you apply to anything. But specifically it's any definition that you apply to God that calls It something other than God.

Those first two commandments lay the groundwork for being awake. Have only one God and don't make any likenesses of that God. Don't make-up definitions for What God Is Being and then serve those definitions, because when you do, you are not serving God and you're also not fulfilling your Function.

What is your Function? The Course uses the word "co-creation." And everyone would love to be a co-creator with God. It's very egotistically satisfying to think of having such a capacity. But to co-create with God is to be that point, that movement, that act of acknowledging God in what you see.

And I'll tell you, when you look at your neighbor and you say, "Wow, she's a real bitch," you're not acknowledging God and you're not co-creating with God. You're engaged in nothing—an act that is empty. And in the absence of your ability, or willingness, to see God there, you've divorced yourself, separated yourself from God. And as I said, you're not fulfilling your Function which is to be seeing God there and to have no other wish on your mind except to stand in awe of God.

God treasures your attention. But you withhold your attention from Him when you look at each other, or you look at any thing, and you give it a different definition and choose to honor that definition. So you've withdrawn your attention from God and you've given it to the definition that you prefer to apply to that Aspect of God, we'll say. This application of a definition to the Presence of God is the meaning of the word "projection." It's that simple. You don't have to get into deep psychological explanations.

Now, it's very important to understand that the lady that you've described as beautiful, or the lady that you've described as elderly, or the gentleman that you've described as fat, is not a projection. What you've called them is a projection, but what you're seeing is not.

The world is not a projection of your ego. And the world and Universe will not disappear when you stop projecting your private, personal definitions upon them. What will happen when you stop applying your definition to these things is that in the absence of the noise, the static of your thinking processes, What Everything Is will have an opportunity to register with you, because you won't be making noise that you distract yourself from Reality with.

Now some of the definitions you govern yourselves by, we'll say, did not originate with you. Some of them originated with your parents, or those you accepted as your teachers in one way or another.

And so, a loving parent might at one point have said, "You know, I know you love to build things, but building things requires a knowledge of math, and math just doesn't happen to be one of your skills. It's not something you're adept at. But you are very adept musically speaking. And so I would encourage you, instead of going into construction, to go into the field of music." Now this might sound like a very caring and loving and constructive and supportive thing to say, but what may the child have heard? "You're not very adept at math." And so for the rest of that child's life, he doesn't tackle things that require math and doesn't apply himself to be curious about the principles of math. And so he gets to be forty-five years old, and whether or not the statement was true, he is not very skilled at math. So some of the definitions you have adopted from other sources, and some of the definitions you apply to yourself are ones you made-up along the way all by yourself.

But, you know what? There's no one that math can't be taught to if you have a teacher who's willing to take the time and find the way in which to express it that piques the curiosity of the student, and gives him the impression that it's something he can comprehend. Then that student will let go of this definition and open himself up to the pleasure of finding that he's quite capable.

Now let's also get very clear on something else. It's really nice to be able to find someone to blame for your problems—someone other than yourself. And so, to say, "Well, my problems were caused by the ignorance of my parents and their telling me, in all helpfulness, what I couldn't do and what I ought to do," instead of saying that, you've got to remember something. Whenever someone says something to you, it's like, if you're a computer user, it's like having a program on your computer and an announcement comes out from the company who designed the program that there's an upgrade. And you can investigate the upgrade. You can get all the information on it. You can even download it so that you can use it temporarily to try it out. But there comes a point where, in order for you to have it as your own, you must what? Endorse it. You must give it your endorsement, and register it, and perhaps pay for it. At this point, in effect, it goes on your hard drive. And that fact that you have put it on your hard drive, and you've kept it on your hard drive, is nobody else's fault. You can't blame anyone else for it.

So if your parents have said, "You're not very good at math," or, "You're not very good at this," or, "You really will never be very good at social interactions; you are a misfit," if you're operating on the basis of that, it's not because they said it. It's because, at some point, you endorsed it. And you by your own determination incorporated it as a result of your decision.

And the simple fact is that no matter where your definitions came from, they still constitute false gods. They still constitute likenesses applied to Something that is utterly Whole, something that is utterly Complete—you, or your Brother, or anything you see in your world.

And waking up is a matter of abandoning the definitions, no matter where they came from. And some of the definitions you will have to abandon will require you, first of all, to let go of the pleasure you get at blaming someone else for your having the problems you're having. All problems are the evidence of having applied a definition on top of the Presence of God, on top of Creation Itself, and honoring that definition and thus obscuring Creation. And by obscuring Creation and refusing to see It because you value the definition you have made-up more than What It Really Is, you neglect to recognize God there, which is your God-given Function and is the part you play in co-creation.

Let's go into the book.

The subject heading is:

RAJ READING: Projection versus Extension

[Editor's Note: This heading is not in the first and second editions.]

RAJ READING: You have made by projection, but God has created by extension.

RAJ: The Course speaks often about "making" as opposed to "creating." And the easiest and simplest way to grasp the meaning of that is that you apparently practice authority by applying a definition to something. You make-up the meaning for that thing which was fully expressed by God in the first place. So after you have made-up your definitions...

PAUL: [pause] Just a moment. [pause]

RAJ: ...you must arrive at a point where you unmake them.

RAJ READING: You have made by projection, but God has created by extension. The cornerstone of God's creation is YOU,...

RAJ: What is a cornerstone? It's not only the starting point of a building, but it's also a repository of the meaning of what is being created. You are the cornerstone of God's Creation because, in effect, you are that which completes It by embodying It. And you embody It by recognizing It for What It Is. You, for lack of better words, are God recognizing Himself in His Creations. You're that inseparable from the Movement of Creation and that inseparable from God.

RAJ READING: The cornerstone of God's creation is YOU, for His thought system is light. Remember the rays that are there unseen.

RAJ: Meaning unseen while you are covering them over with your definitions.

RAJ READING: The more you approach the center of His thought system,...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...the clearer the light becomes.

RAJ: Or you could say, the more illuminated you are, the more illuminated by Truth you are.

RAJ READING: The closer you come to the ego's thought system, the darker and more obscure becomes the way. Yet even the little spark in your mind is enough to lighten it. Bring this light fearlessly with you, and hold it up to the foundation of the ego's thought system bravely. Be willing to judge it with perfect honesty. Open the dark cornerstone of terror...

RAJ: In other words, the cornerstone of the ego.

RAJ READING: Open the dark cornerstone of terror on which it rests, and bring it out into the light. There you will see that it rests on meaninglessness, and that everything of which you have been afraid was based on nothing.

My brother, you are part of God and part of me. When you have at last looked at the ego's foundation without shrinking, you will also have looked upon OURS.

RAJ: Meaning Our Foundation.

Okay, how many of you remember from last week what we described as the cornerstone, as the thing that you have hidden away out of sight which is the cornerstone of the ego's frame of reference? I'm not going to make you answer that in front of everyone. But remember that the cornerstone of the ego is—which you keep secret, keep hidden away even from yourself—is that of yourself you can do nothing. That's the bad news.

It happens to be the glorious Truth, but you have taken it as a challenge, not as a statement of fact. You have taken it as something to disprove, and you've said, "Yes, I can." And being or existence, for you, has become nothing more than attempting to come to the point where you have successfully authorized something, and you have managed to get your other dreaming Brothers and Sisters to agree with you.

It's insulting. It's humiliating. It's the most awful thing in the world to arrive at the realization that you of yourself can do nothing. You avoid it at all cost. Why? Because it leaves you feeling powerless. And if you are powerless, it means that you are helpless and vulnerable. But you must come to that awareness without resisting it. You must come to that point of awareness with a willingness to embrace it, if you are to get out of the crab barrel, if you are to escape the bondage to all of the ignorance that follows the false premise that "you of yourself can do something." You see?

RAJ READING: When you have at last looked at the ego's foundation without shrinking, you will also have looked upon OURS.

RAJ: You see, when you're willing to look at the fact, not just intellectually, but, I'm going to say, with commitment—when you're willing to look at the fact that you of yourself can do nothing and yet you exist—even if you of yourself can do nothing, you still exist—you are still experiencing Being—it means that you, because of Something Else, exist. You, because of Something Else, can act. Aha! That is the cornerstone of the Father's Thought System. "I, with my Father, can do all things." You see? That's what the words, "I of myself can do nothing," really means. It says, because you still find yourself existing, then you, because of the Father, because of your Father, because of what your Inheritance is, because of what your Birthright is by virtue of what your Father is, can do all things. You see?

But you must be willing to go into that dark hidden place where you've covered up the realization that you of yourself can do nothing, and there's nothing to be done about it, and abide with that, I said, with commitment—meaning without any desire to change that fact in any way, shape, or form.

So again because it's important.

RAJ READING: When you have at last looked at the ego's foundation without shrinking, you will also have looked upon OURS. I come to you from our Father to offer you everything again. Do not refuse it in order to keep a dark cornerstone hidden, for ITS protection will not save you. I GIVE you the lamp and I will go WITH you. You will not take this journey alone. I will lead you to your true Father, Who hath need of you, as I have.

RAJ: Well, what does that mean, "I will lead you to your true Father"? It means that I will lead you to the place in your Conscious Awareness where you are able to look at a thing and see God there, instead of your definition. It doesn't mean I'll lead you to a man in the sky with a long white beard. But I will take you to the Evidence of Creation and help you to see It for What It Is—the ongoing, ever-present Act of God being the Movement of Creation in all of Its Glory—so that you are seeing It, experiencing It, feeling It in all Its Glory, and standing in awe of It with the inescapable realization that what you are experiencing is God, and not what you had thought It was. And not only that, you seeing It as God, is a God-given Capacity that is your Nature and your Function so that your seeing It for What It Is, is part and parcel of the experience of the Godness of Everything, including yourself.

RAJ READING: Will you not answer the call of love with joy?

RAJ: [laughing] No.

Your habits are still too delicious to you. It's still too easy to apply a snap judgment. Something happens and out of your mouth comes, "She's a difficult one to deal with," or, "He just won't shut up. He's so insensitive." You just love to make those pronouncements. You just love to apply those definitions, because they express some part of your capacity to see things uniquely, different from everyone else. And that builds up your sense of yourself as an authorizer. And then if you can get enough other people to agree with you that he's very insensitive, or she's really difficult to deal with, then you become a force for changing public opinion and creating group consensus. And of course, group consensus is power, isn't it? Whew. Wow.

So:

RAJ READING: Will you not answer the call of love with joy?

RAJ: Not really.

So you've got to be alert. You've got to be willing to watch what you're doing with your mind. And bite your mind's tongue when it wants to come up with a judgment, and then when it wants to get others to join you in seeing what you mean so that there's group consensus—mutually-agreed-upon definitions. You see? Remember, every decision you make determines who you are choosing your Father/father to be—God, or your capacity, your so-called "capacity" to create yourself and be equal to God.

Now, you're not all ignorant. We've been together too long.

And so as it says here:

RAJ READING: You have learned your need of healing. Would you bring anything ELSE to the Sonship,...

RAJ: Meaning your need for healing.

Well, it is humiliating. The ego says you're supposed to be self-sufficient and without need—except of yourself you can do nothing, so you need help. You need a Father. You need a Source.

You're like a toaster with a plug that's not plugged into anything. You need to get plugged back in. "Oh gee," the toaster says, "do I really have to be plugged into that socket? There must be a way for me to fulfill my function of browning that bread without having to do that."

Yeah, you need to acknowledge your need. You need to acknowledge that of yourself you have no existence, so to speak. You have no capacity to be something. But when you plug into the Source, you have the capacity to be everything, because nothing That God Is has been withheld from you in His Self Expression.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: The Gifts of Fatherhood]

So:

RAJ READING: You have learned your need of healing. Would you bring anything ELSE to the Sonship, recognizing your need of healing for yourself? For in this lies the beginning of knowledge;...

RAJ: It's likewise not just approaching your Brothers and Sisters or the Brotherhood itself with your need, acknowledging that you need every single one of them. Bring your need to God. You've got to recognize, you've got to come to a point where you're willing to re-embrace God and annul the divorce you got, and invite God back in. Why? So that you can have the Experience of God, but also—and not feel so lonely—but also so that in having the Experience of God, you say, "Ahhh!" You see, a little bit of awe. "Ohhh!" And you recognize and acknowledge God as God. You recognize and acknowledge your Brother, or that thing, or the other thing, as the Presence of God—awesome. And in that recognition take your part in co-creation and fulfill your Function, and come back into the Fullness of your Being.

RAJ READING: Would you bring anything ELSE to the Sonship, recognizing your need of healing for yourself? For in this lies the beginning of knowledge;...

RAJ: Or, as you know, I would say, Knowing, with a capital "K".

RAJ READING: ...the foundation on which God will help you build again the thought system which you share with HIM. Not one stone you place upon it but will be blessed by Him, for you will be restoring the holy dwelling place of His Son,...

RAJ: Meaning you.

RAJ READING: ...where He wills His Son to be and where he IS.

RAJ: Again, you're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you're at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: In whatever part of the mind of God's Son you restore this reality, you restore it to YOURSELF.

RAJ: If you are engaged in restoring that awareness to your Brother, for your Brother, you restore it to yourself as well. Because what are you doing when you're looking at your Brother? Engaged in restoring it to him, you are saying, "I'm willing. I'm unwilling to do anything less than see the Presence of God there. I will persist in seeing the Presence of God there, in spite of my habitual inclination to see my best... what I think is my best definition."

RAJ READING: In whatever part of the mind of God's Son you restore this reality, you restore it to YOURSELF.

RAJ: What you give, you get to keep.

RAJ READING: For you dwell in the Mind of God WITH your brother, for God Himself did not will to be alone.

To be alone is to be separated from infinity, but how can this be if infinity has no end? No-one can be BEYOND the limitless because what has no limits must be everywhere.

RAJ: Again, we're talking about the Singularity of God. There's no outside to Infinite Unity.

RAJ READING: There are no beginnings and no endings in God, Whose universe is Himself. Can you exclude yourself from the universe, or from God Who IS the universe?

RAJ: No. I'm adding that. No.

RAJ READING: I and my Father are one...

RAJ: Now that's a statement you're all familiar with, if you've read the Bible much.

RAJ READING: I and my Father are one...

RAJ: But listen.

RAJ READING: I and my Father are one with YOU, for you are part of US. Do you really believe that part of God can be missing or lost to Him?

If you were not part of God, His Will would not be unified.

RAJ: There wouldn't be a Singularity.

RAJ READING: Is this conceivable? Can part of His Mind contain nothing?

RAJ: You know, when you got this bill of divorcement, was there suddenly a void in the middle of God where you had been—a black hole, an emptiness, a nothingness?

RAJ READING: If your place in His Mind cannot be filled by anyone EXCEPT you, and your filling it WAS your creation, WITHOUT you there would be an empty place in God's Mind.

RAJ: Now see, try to keep all of this out of the realm of theories and ideas. If there can't be an empty place in God's Mind, then there isn't an empty place in God's Mind where you were—which means that you are still there right now, today, as each of you sit there paying attention. It's happening in the Mind of God.

You as God Created You, not as you have come to define yourselves to yourselves, are unchanged from What God Set In Place As You. And that's why you must begin to consider yourself, apprehend yourself, at the Point of Perfection. Because as long as you see yourself as far off from the Point of Perfection, working toward it, that will be the definition applied on top of the You that is already Home, and blind you to the Truth about you that you're already Home, and make it seem as though it is going to take time to get there.

Now remember, last week I also mentioned that the moment you began to want to have a different perspective on Creation—one of your own—and so you began to apply a little torque to it, that act of resistance to What You Are and What Your Function Is and Whatever The Thing Is that you were applying torque to, will cause you to seem to be moving away from it—or by reverse, that it will be moving away from you, such as in the expanding universe theory where everything you look at is moving away from you, no matter where you might be in the universe. And as a result, when you look out at the universe, you're seeing the past, even though Creation is the Now Conscious Experience of Being. That act of resistance causes a sense of time to come into play. See, you're pulling back. You're slowing down. You're moving at odds with the Movement Itself, which is timeless. And so you create a sensation of time for yourselves.

RAJ READING: Extension...

RAJ: Meaning the Movement of Creation.

RAJ READING: ...cannot be blocked, and it HAS no voids. It continues forever, however much it is denied. Your denial of its reality arrests it in time,...

RAJ: In other words, as a sensation you're experiencing—a false sensation you're experiencing.

RAJ READING: ...but NOT in eternity.

RAJ: Which is another way of saying not in actuality.

RAJ READING: That is why your creations have not ceased to be extended, and why so much is waiting for your return.

RAJ: Reality hasn't stopped just because you've said, "Time out," which really meant "time in," and you gave yourself an experience of time, which means that you've given yourself the experience of watching the Movement of Creation move away from you and be unavailable to you, even though it continues to be the Only Thing Really Going On.

RAJ READING: Waiting is possible ONLY in time, but time has no meaning. You who made delay...

RAJ: Do you see now how it is you made delay? By resisting the Movement and causing this artificial sensation of time right in the middle of Eternity.

RAJ READING: You who made delay can leave time behind simply by recognizing that neither beginnings nor endings were created by the Eternal, Who placed no limits on His creation, nor upon those who create like Him. You do not know this simply because you have tried to limit what HE created,...

RAJ: And how did you try to limit it? By applying a different interpretation. By creating a definition and applying the definition, like a tail on a donkey, to some Aspect of What God Was Being.

RAJ READING: ...and so you believe that ALL creation is limited.

RAJ: You see? Whatever bias you apply to one, any small part of Creation, is going to get equally applied to all parts of Creation, as far as your perception is concerned.

If you're wearing glasses and you put a waver, you grind the glass so that it refracts light differently, then everywhere you look you will see what you're looking at affected by that waver. How you have determined things are is the way Reality will be distorted for you—all of Reality. You cannot have a selective distortion. That's why you feel vulnerable, in one way or another, under all circumstances. That's why you don't feel invulnerable ever. And yet, invulnerability is your Birthright.

So:

RAJ READING: How, then, could you know your creations, having DENIED infinity?

RAJ: You're still the Christ, even though you just say, you're saying, "No, I'm not. No, I'm not. I'm a human being enjoying the struggle of survival and relishing the opportunity of overcoming the odds. That's what I am. And I'm enjoying it too damn much to take the easy road out, you know, where it's just all given to me."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The laws of the universe do not permit contradiction. What holds for God holds for YOU. If you believe YOU are absent from God, you WILL believe that He is absent from YOU.

RAJ: But the fact is, continuing,...

RAJ READING: Infinity is meaningless WITHOUT you, and YOU are meaningless without God. There IS no end to God and His Son, for we...

RAJ: We. We.

RAJ READING: ...ARE the universe.

RAJ: Universe all turned into One. All turned into One. One being All—the Conscious Experience of Being—the Infinite Conscious Experience of Being in which All exists Infinitely.

RAJ READING: God is not incomplete, and He is not childless.

RAJ: I'm sorry. You may think that you got a divorce from Him and that you are now on your own, [laughing] but you cannot be an orphan and the Father cannot be childless. The Singularity disallows it. What Creation Is disallows for what creation isn't.

RAJ READING: God is not incomplete, and He is not childless. Because He did not will to be alone, He created a Son like Himself.

RAJ: Duh. What other materials did He have to make a Son out of other than Himself? Of course He created a Son like Himself. The Son is the Extension of Him.

RAJ READING: Do not deny Him His Son, for your unwillingness to accept His Fatherhood has denied you YOURS.

RAJ: What does that mean? It's denied you the capacity to see the creations you have been being, even while you have insisted that you are divorced from the Father, and are an orphan who is having the time of his life attempting to succeed at being an independent authority just like God.

Again.

RAJ READING: Do not deny Him His Son,...

RAJ: One, two, three, four, five—six words. And those six words are the undoing of the dream. If you would do what those words said, you would wake up.

RAJ READING: Do not deny Him His Son, for your unwillingness to accept His Fatherhood has denied you YOURS. See His creations as HIS Son,...

RAJ: Abandon your definition of the bitch next door, abandon your definition of the insensitive guy down the street, and look to see God there.

RAJ READING: See His creations as HIS Son,...

RAJ: Wow! And what would that mean? Again, it would mean that you're fulfilling your Function again, your Divine Function—the only thing you exist for—to see God and to acknowledge God for What God Is right there. The Glory of What Your Brother Is, when it dawns upon you, will uncover the Glory of You to you, which you'll also have to be willing to acknowledge and value and appreciate and enjoy. It constitutes coming back into your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: See His creations as HIS Son,...

RAJ: His Offspring. His Expression. His Self-Expression.

RAJ READING: See His creations as HIS Son, for yours were created in honor of Him.

RAJ: When you look at any thing and you see God there—and you let yourself have the experience of its awesome, awesome Godness—you, for lack of better words, are being the other half of Creation—the co-creator, the one fulfilling his or her Function of recognizing and acknowledging God there, glorifying God right there, because that's more meaningful to you than any definition you might ever have come up with. That recognition is your creation. That willingness to see the Presence of God where the bitch next door had been seen a moment ago is the Gift you give that honors God and constitutes your creation.

RAJ READING: See His creations as HIS Son, for yours were created in honor of Him. The universe of love does not stop because you do not see it, and your closed eyes have not lost the ability to see. Look upon the glory of His creation, and you will learn what God has KEPT for you.

RAJ: Is it really so important to see what's wrong with your Brother or Sister so you can't be hurt by him? Is self-protection so important, so essential, that you cannot dare to trust anything or anyone, where you must constantly be on the alert and on guard for something your Brother might do? Well, it seems reasonable. It does seem reasonable when you look around.

But you see, you're stuck out there in appearances and you're not asking, " What am I doing? How am I using my mind? Why am I feeling vulnerable? Why is a feeling of vulnerability present? Is it because my neighbor is undependable and untrustworthy, or might it be for another reason? Might it be because I have chosen to be an independent agent? And therefore I'm engaged in actively denying my Source. And in effect, I'm trying to brown toast when I'm not plugged in and the elements in the toaster can't get red. And I'm trying to do something that's impossible. And I'm trying to do it without having any innate, intelligent realization that I'm trying to do something impossible and that trying to do something impossible is not part of my Nature. Am I feeling uncomfortable because my Sanity is telling me that I'm trying to exist in a frame of mind that has a false premise, and therefore means that everything that is based upon that false premise and follows it, is going to be equally wrong? Do I really need to be on guard against my neighbor? And do I really need to treat him as though he's untrustworthy and let him know that he's not untrustworthy in my eyes? Because there's no way for me to treat him as though he's not trustworthy without conveying it in some way to him and making him feel uncomfortable." You see?

And the answer lies in the fact that your feeling of vulnerability, that seems to call for wary alertness, lies in the fact that you are trying to function in a disconnected way from your Source, that disallows you from experiencing your Birthright—one aspect of which is invulnerability, because Being is a Singularity, which means it is without conflict.

Again.

RAJ READING: The universe of love does not stop because you do not see it, and your closed eyes have not lost the ability to see.

RAJ: You see, everything is still at the Point of Perfection, and Reality is only an eyelid away. All it requires you to do is to open up your eyes. But opening up your eyes means you've got to be willing to abandon your love affair with your definitions, and your so-called "capacity" to make them up and make commitment to them and thus cause you not to see Reality.

RAJ READING: Look upon the glory of His creation,...

RAJ: Whose Creation? His Creation.

RAJ READING: Look upon the glory of His creation,...

RAJ: Acknowledge and recognize God there, and you once again fulfill your Function and come back into your Sanity.

RAJ READING: Look upon the glory of His creation, and you will learn what God has KEPT for you.

RAJ: Well, one of the things He kept for you was You unaltered by your temporary wish to try to do the impossible. And Who You Are will be returned to you as your Conscious Experience.

RAJ READING: God has given you a place in His Mind which is yours forever.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "God had given you" because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as "God has given you" as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ READING: Yet you could keep it only by GIVING it, as it was given YOU. Could YOU be alone there, if it was given you because God did not will to be alone? God's Mind cannot BE lessened. It can ONLY be increased, and everything He creates has the function of creating. Love does not limit, and what it creates is not limited. To give without limit is God's Will for you because only this can bring you the joy which is His, and which He wills to SHARE with you. Your love is as boundless as His...

RAJ: Why?

RAJ READING: ...because it IS His.

RAJ: The Love you love with is God's.

There is no little radical general store sitting just outside of Infinity where you can go and get a radical black-market packet of Love with which to Love. There's no place to go to, to find the ability to Love outside of the Presence of God, or outside of the Presence of What You Are as God Presencing Himself right there where you are.

"But, gee, my love has to be special, doesn't it? The way I love my wife has to be different from the way Joe down the street loves his wife." Well, where you gonna go to get this little bit of different kind of love? And why would you want a different kind of love when the Love That God Is, is Infinite and Awesome?

You see? Instead of trying to go and get a little bit better love from this ad in the newspaper, or this ad in the Playboy Magazine, or whatever, you need to dare to take a deep breath, and relax, and let go of the definitions, and look at your wife, or whatever it might be, with a desire to see What God Is Being there. In other words, inviting God in, so that revelation can occur, and you are put in the position of playing your part in co-creation by recognizing God there, experiencing God there, so that there is this spontaneous exclamation of pure recognition. That Gift is the Gift of God's Love in the recognition of God's Love bringing into play the Singularity that causes the so-called "independent you" who's been struggling to get to the top of the barrel to give up the ghost, replaced by You with an unaltered and unbiased Conscious Experience of What Is Real.

Now, the simple fact is that you have to rouse yourself from your dream. If you're intent upon your dream and I come and shake your shoulder, the sensation of your shoulder shaking, being shaken, will become incorporated into the dream. And the dream will go on. You must rouse yourself from the dream.

You're already rousing, because you're inquiring because there is curiosity. But I cannot do it for you. I can only tell you why it's safe to rouse yourself. I can only tell you that in the process, you may go through stages where nothing you see means anything, because now you're seeing everything minus the definitions you gave to it and momentarily it seems as though they mean nothing. But you must abide there with the curiosity, the interest, the desire to know what they do mean, and inquiring of them to reveal themselves to you. Express your need to know.

Don't busy yourself asserting knowledge that you make-up. And, I'm telling you, that every ounce of commitment you bring to this, right here, right now, without waiting till after you die, will pay off because here and now is the only place you're having a misperception of Reality, which means here is where Reality confronts you. Here is where Reality is in your face.

And it doesn't matter how many people aren't doing it. It doesn't matter how many people think all of this is nonsense. It doesn't matter whether people dislike you because you're rousing yourself from the dream. It doesn't matter how many people are distressed because you won't play their game any more.

Peace on earth. Good will toward men. It's needed here. Why? Because in Reality that is What's Going On.

I know, you can think of so-and-so and so-and-so and another so-and-so and say, "No way. The Truth couldn't possibly be going on there." There you go! [snap of the fingers] You just came up with a definition—a string of words that you can choose to honor and make commitment to and base your behavior upon. But it doesn't mean it's the Truth.

"Oh! So-and-so has cancer on his arm. I can see it. I saw it on his arm. Oh, it's there. And he's gonna die from it. The doctor said." How on earth could you possibly get past that? How on earth could you get to the experience of healing that shows nothing there except Perfection, unless you are willing to back up from that string of words, and withdraw your commitment to them, and insist upon finding God there? "If there's anything going on there at all, it must be God, in spite of what I'm seeing, else I couldn't have a false or untrue definition about It. There's an 'It' that I have a definition about. And the 'It' is God, and It is flawless."

And I'm telling you, and I don't know why I would need to tell you, but I must tell you that healing is the inevitable evidence of greater and greater inner illumination of the Truth. And there had better be evidences of healing that contradict the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that your gods, the doctors, and your fears have put into place. And I'm telling you that healing is possible right where it seems to be impossible. And I'm saying that right where there seem to be world leaders, or terrorists, or whatever it might be, right there, just as with the cancer, in spite of the appearance, God Is Being there. And here and now is where you need to cut through the definitions you've given to the appearances and your commitment to those definitions.

You need to get past them. You need to say, "Father, I've created some definitions here, and I've made commitment to them. And they are beginning to scare me. They are beginning to make me think there is no alternative to life as hell. And I don't choose to go down this road any further. Father, help me see What You Are Being right there where so-and-so, Christ so-and-so, is using his mind poorly."

You are going to have to become more aggressive. Not aggressive against the bitch next door, or the insensitive guy down the street, or the irresponsible leader of a government—you don't have to become aggressive against them. You must become aggressive in your intent to get past the definitions you have in place that keep you from seeing God there and keep you from witnessing instantaneous healing that seems to have no objective justification.

You can have the instantaneous evidence of Wholeness because God has not created anything other than that. And your Function has not changed from being that which has the capacity to recognize God there, and acknowledge God there, and experience with awe the Goodness, the Godness of God there, knowing that the Mind you are seeing God with, right there, is God also.

Remember, it all boils down to something rather simple—projection or Extension. Either you are going to project a definition you have made-up, or one that you have endorsed and adopted, out there on your world—which is a loveless act; an act, an empty act that doesn't actually accomplish anything at all except an ongoing experience of distress for you—there's either that choice or there's the choice of Extension.

Extension meaning what? Your willingness to give something. Your willingness to give your attention to the Presence of God that has to be there, with more commitment than you have given to your definitions, with a desire to see the Good that is there. That's an Extension. That is an Act of Care. Not an act of caring for a poor, awful, misguided this, that, or the other thing, but a Love for What Has To Be There behind the definition that's been applied to it. Underneath the definition that's been applied to it, you make that Gift of the desire to see it, no matter what seems to be going on. You invite in the Experience of God there, of Good there. That's Extension. You see?

Oh, you say, "Well, projection, extension. You know, projection, I'm giving. You know, I'm, you know, I'm plastering my definition right over their face. You know, I'm giving something. And I'm giving them the best definition I can come up with. They ought to be grateful." That's not a Gift. That's a demand. That's a taking away of something. It's insisting upon a lesser experience than the God Presence that's there.

Projection is when you apply [small laugh] not only something that's not wanted, but something that isn't even real, on top of something that's Real. That is projection.

Now this week, pay attention and watch how many times you project a hateful thought. Watch how many times you project a thought onto somebody—a cute, little, sneaky and mean definition. Watch it, so that you may withdraw it immediately. Because it's that empty act that keeps you from seeing God, glorifying God, and experiencing instantaneous healings of situations. It keeps you in a constant state of vulnerability, because you're trying to make toast without being plugged in. And you are delaying. You are creating this sense of time. You are delaying your Peace and your Joy. You are holding your Good at arm's length.

And so, with that, I will say good night for tonight. And I look forward to being with you next week.

You know, it could sound like I've said a lot of things that you should feel bad about. But, no. You know, you can use your mind poorly, and you can use your mind well. When you're using your mind poorly, you're doing nothing. And when you're using your mind well, you're co-creating with God. So, although it will be an uncomfortable experience when you're using your mind poorly, rather than applying another definition of judgment against yourself, just see that, well, you can do things this way and it doesn't feel good, and you can do things another way and at least Raj says it'll feel better. "I can do it this way, or I can do it that way. And so, you know what? I'm going to apply myself a little bit to doing it a different way this week." You see? Just realize you can do it and be uncomfortable, or you can try something that will lead to everything and more, that you had been striving for, all by yourself.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Why do you think we have these quiet times before we begin? I mean, after all, Paul could wait in another room of the house before we start, and get centered, and come out loaded for bear, ready to go. We have the quiet time so that it's easier for everyone to shift gears from the use to which they have been putting their mind to.

I mean, after all, let's look at the first sentence.

RAJ READING: Could any part of God be WITHOUT His Love, and could any part of His Love be contained?

RAJ: Now I'm pretty sure that what that is asking and the context of the question is probably just about as far away from anything you've been doing this past week as anything could be. And we can't just jump into this infinite wading pool, so to speak.

Let me ask this: How many of you remembered during this past week to pay attention to the times in which you used your mind to think a mean-spirited thought about someone, so that you could stop in mid-stride and not pursue that thought to its end conclusion?

And then, you know, we can look at this first sentence and say, "This is wonderful. I'm sure that what it means must be wonderful. [laughing] But it doesn't really relate to my life." And the reason I hang in here with everyone is because it does relate to your life, and you just don't know it. It isn't that this sort of thing doesn't relate to your life. It's that it doesn't relate to the use to which you put your mind.

You are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it. Now you all think that you are. And you all think that life is a matter of moving toward your Perfection—refining yourself, perfecting yourself. But you aren't behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you're at that Point. But you don't use your mind as though that's the Truth. You don't let that be the foundation and the context from which you engage in your everyday activities. And you don't engage in your everyday activities as though that must, that just must be the Truth about everyone else I'm dealing with. And as a result, because you are not using your mind on that basis, you see no evidence of the Truth and the practical relevance of that statement.

And you keep yourself from having revelations. Revelations: sudden shifts of perception in which your definitions get lost in light of the view you are now seeing. Why? Because you put yourself into alignment to see Everything As It Is by using your mind in a way that didn't cover up What Everything Was. Nothing that we're doing is being done so that you can be the maker of better definitions; more loving definitions; definitions that are more like What The Father Is Being; definitions that are more like What Love Must Really Be.

You must shift gears. You must shift from becoming to Being. "Well, how do I do that? What do you mean "Being"—shifting to Being? How do you do Being?" You see? [laughing] Well, you don't do Being. You're already doing Being. You're conscious, aren't you? You've never had an experience of not being conscious. So you exist, you are. Being is what is happening as you.

So, instead of becoming, it's a matter of learning to relax and just be. Just be what? Just be conscious. Just be attentive. Just be curious. Just be open. "Well, that doesn't work in the everyday world, Raj." It may not work in the everyday world, but it is the Actuality Of What Is Happening in the everyday world. Every single one of you is Being. And the Being that you are Being is not something you are doing.

It's because you are already Being that you have the opportunity to imagine that you can make-up definitions. What's making up the definitions? You are. Well, what is this "you"? Well, it's what has been called "the observing self." It's me experiencing Being.

So waking up really is a matter of slowly, or quickly, abandoning all of the effort to do, to become, to make definitions, to be creative, to introduce a better concept into the world, to introduce a better idea, to come up with a better mousetrap. As the saying is, "Build another better mousetrap and the world will beat a path to your door."

"Oh, that sounds good. And I hope they bring in money in their wallet. After all, why would I want them to come to my door if it wasn't gonna be a benefit to me because I came up with a better mousetrap?"

Well, I'm sorry, but I'm not going to tell you how to build a better mousetrap. I'm not going to help you become a better definer of things, a better author, an authorizer of better things. I'm going to help you abandon the desire, the intent, and the commitment to be personally, privately creative. Why? Because in the absence of all that effort, you will find that you are inseparable from Creation Itself. And you will wake up. You will see, because there will not be in your range of vision all of the static of things and processes of becoming that you have inserted by the use of what I'm going to call "creative imagination."

In all deference to Mr. Disney, imagineering is not the key to the future, at least not the future you want. Because when you abandon that, and you let yourself abide in the void, in the emptiness—the absence of thoughts and concepts and theories—suddenly Creation that seems to be moving away from you so fast that all you can see is What Creation Was, will be present with you in the Now. And you will be inseparable from Creation—the action of "Behold, I make all things new" that God Is Being. And you will experience yourself as One with It, therefore Being Yourself the Movement of Creation and recognizing It for What It Is, and the part you play in It for What It Is. And suddenly All of Creation will be in the Now—not moving away from you so that all you see is your best interpretation of What It Was.

You've got to start finding a connection between what I'm going to call "Ultimate Truth" and your everyday life, because there isn't a separation between them, or a distinction between them. And so it means, that instead of running your mind on automatic where all that comes out are boilerplate responses to stimuli that you receive in your day, you actually pay attention. You get off of automatic pilot. And you don't bother to engage the boilerplate responses, the knee-jerk reactions.

And because you're paying attention, you can respond to What Is Really Going On—which will be pertinent, not impertinent. Not impertinent. Your boilerplate, knee-jerk responses are impertinent. They're not pertinent to What's Happening. They're pertinent to a way of interacting with another so as not to have to pay attention enough to know What's Really Going On so that your responses can be pertinent. Now that's not really convoluted, and you really do understand what I said.

You want to be able to be Real here and now. And in order to be Real, you're going to have to be in touch with What's Going On. You're going to have to be willing to be present with your Brothers and Sisters, and neglect to let these mean-spirited, but ever so delicious, negative thoughts cross your mind and lick your experiences with ugliness that doesn't kill and only hurts a little bit.

It's time to shift gears and stay shifted during the week.

Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: Could any part of God be WITHOUT His Love...

RAJ: Could any part of All That Is, could any part of all that you're experiencing be without His Love?

RAJ READING: ...and could any part of His Love be contained?

RAJ: You know, boiled down to a nice, neat, little definition.

RAJ READING: God is your heritage...

RAJ: Your Birthright, your Inheritance is from the Father. And your Father is your Heritage.

RAJ READING: ...because His one gift is...

RAJ: Not a capacity to love. Not exceptional beauty. Not a quick wit. Not things that work well in social settings or get you ahead.

RAJ READING: ...His one gift is Himself.

RAJ: His One Gift is What He Is.

Well, you know, the big question is, "What is God?" Right? Well, you don't have to look any further than Yourself for the Answer. But I must qualify that, because as long as you hold yourself as separate, independent—an orphan, somebody on his or her own—you cannot experience What You Really Are. And so, What The Father Is will escape you.

But again, here's the Truth.

RAJ READING: God is your heritage because His one gift is Himself. How can you give except like Him, if you would know His gift to YOU?

RAJ: So you must become like Him.

Well, how do you become like Him? Well, remember, we've been talking about the fact that your attention is God's Treasure. Your attention is like a key. And you give your attention to a thousand things a day. But when you give your attention to the Father by saying, "Father, or Holy Spirit, what is the Truth here? What is the Ultimate Truth here? What does the Presence of God look like right here where there seems to be a difficult situation to my perception?"—when you bring your attention to the Father, it's like aligning the key with the keyhole, so that the key can slip in.

It's the way you practice fitting in. You see, your normal, everyday experience is never a matter of trying to fit in with some Universal Order. It's always a matter of independent activity, assertive activity—activity that declares your difference from everyone else because, of course, you're unique. And I've said before, "God never stops to repeat Himself"—so you can't be someone else, and someone else can't be you. But Life isn't about demonstrating the difference. Life isn't about asserting the difference. Life/Existence/Being is about fitting in with Infinitely Individualized God—which is what all of your Brothers and Sisters and All of Creation is.

And so, although God and the consideration of God seems not to be particularly relevant to your daily life, you've got to come to the point of acknowledging that It has to be, that God has to be relevant. And then become curious to see it, so that you align your attention with the keyhole, so that you align your attention with the Order of Things. Because that's the way you prime yourself for a miracle—a sudden shift of perception that casts everything in a new and truer Light, so that you behave relative to everything in a new way that doesn't continue to reaffirm and reestablish a false sense of you that keeps your Heritage just out of reach in the past.

Again.

RAJ READING: How can you give except like Him, if you would know His gift to YOU? Give, then, without limit and without end, to learn how much HE has given YOU.

RAJ: You must become like Him in order to experience Him being What He Is relative to you. You must learn to fit in with Reality.

RAJ READING: Your ability to ACCEPT Him depends on...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...your willingness to give as He gives.

RAJ: Oh, I know, you all give a lot—some of you give kindness, some of you give love, and some of you give hell to each other. You give 'em hell, you know. For their own good, you give 'em hell. Yeah, you make the gift. But that's not a Gift like God gives.

God gives/extends the acknowledgement of What You Are to you, in the recognition that He is All There Is to you. God sees Himself in you, and that's the Gift He gives to you. And you must learn to give like Him.

RAJ READING: Your fatherhood and your...

RAJ: Capital "F".

RAJ READING: ...Father ARE One.

RAJ: You see? But, of course, as long as you're behind the Point of Perfection and advancing toward it, well, you can't see how you could possibly be One. Nor can you see it could be much benefit to you in your struggle of becoming a successful orphan. And, of course, the reason you can't see how it's relevant, is because it's not relevant. You will never get God's help in proving to you that you are actually not His Son or Daughter—that you're actually an orphan.

RAJ READING: Your fatherhood and your Father ARE One.

RAJ: You're already at the Point of Perfection.

RAJ READING: God willed to create, and your will is His.

RAJ: Because, again, there's no place to go out and get some black-market will. If you've got will, it's His. You might be using it poorly, unlike Him, and causing yourself distress by it, but nevertheless, your will is His.

That doesn't mean your will belongs to Him. It means that His Will is the only Will you have available to you, and the nature of your will is identical to the Father's. And it is what demonstrates your Sonhood or Daughterhood, and returns you to your Right Mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It follows, then, that YOU will to create, since your will follows from His. And being an extension of His Will, yours must be the same.

RAJ: You see, again, you're at the Point of Perfection and you must understand yourself therefrom.

You must stop trying to use the Truth, or connect with God, so that you can be less behind the Point of Perfection, or so that you can advance toward it better and faster. You must stop trying to connect with the Truth so that you will be a better prodigal son or daughter—or, let's say, a prodigal son or daughter who is doing better at coming Home—because the key emphasis is on "being a prodigal." And if you're going to say that you're not already at Home, if you're going to believe that you're not already at Home and that you're working to get Home, you will maintain the lie, the deception, that covers up the fact that you're already Home. And you will continue to wander... lost.

RAJ READING: ...being an extension of His Will, yours must be the same.

Yet what you will you do not know.

RAJ: In other words, what you truly will, you do not know.

RAJ READING: This is not strange when you realize that to deny is to...

RAJ: Quote.

RAJ READING: ... “NOT know.”

RAJ: Unquote.

Oh, I know that you can't really ask this question seriously anymore, but the ego would say, "What do you mean, deny? Why, I'm not denying anything. I want to wake up. I want to know the Truth. What do you mean?"

RAJ READING: ...to deny is to “NOT know.”

RAJ: Well, see, you know enough now to know that the minute you make a definition of your own about something, you've denied God. You've said, "I prefer my definition to What God Is Really Being there." That's denial.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God's Will is that you are His Son.

RAJ: I will add: Daughter or Offspring. Expression.

RAJ READING: By denying this you denied your OWN will, and therefore do NOT know what it is.

RAJ: Well, how do you deny that you are His Son or Daughter? By saying, "Father, I'd rather see it myself. But, Father, this is what I'm going to call it, and the way I say it works is the way it works." And in that, you are denying your own will—your Divine Will—the only will that you have. And therefore, you do not know what it is.

Now here's the key.

RAJ READING: The reason you must ask what God's Will is in everything...

RAJ: And I'm going to interrupt and say, the reason you must pay attention in every aspect of your day, the reason you must put forth the effort to see What's There, and to respond to What's There, instead of just providing knee-jerk responses.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...is merely because It IS yours.

[Re-reading the sentence.]

RAJ READING: The reason you must ask what God's Will is in everything is merely because It IS yours.

RAJ: The reason you must ask what God's Will is in everything is because your asking that, brings the key into alignment with the keyhole. It brings your attention into a different context than the dog-eat-dog, competitive, everyday characteristics of your life, and primes you to make a shift that allows you to operate at an entirely new level, or different level.

The reason you must ask what God's Will is, not once in a while, but in everything, is merely because It is yours. And if you're not asking, if there's no curiosity, if there's no effort put forth, you'll continue to be ignorant of the fact that It is yours. And you'll continue to struggle, sin, get sick, and die—or seem to.

For context, I'll read it again.

RAJ READING: The reason you must ask what God's Will is in everything is merely because It IS yours. You do not know what it is, but the Holy Spirit remembers it FOR you.

RAJ: And again, what is the Holy Spirit? Nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...the Holy Spirit remembers it FOR you. Ask Him, therefore, what God's Will is for you, and...

RAJ: What? [laughing] The Holy Spirit won't tell you what God's Will is for you.

RAJ READING: ...He will tell you YOURS.

RAJ: And in telling you what your True Will is, you will be learning what God's Will is for you.

RAJ READING: Ask Him, therefore, what God's Will is for you, and He will tell you YOURS.

RAJ: Oooh. That's a little bit different from getting information, isn't it? You know. "Oh, well," the Holy Spirit says, "God's Will is for you to be prosperous. God's Will is for you to do this. God's Will is for you to be that." "Oh, wow! This is interesting information. I'm gonna go tell Henry, or I'm gonna go tell so-and-so. I'm gonna spread this news, this interesting information." But, no.

RAJ READING: Ask Him, therefore, what God's Will is for you, and He will tell you YOURS.

RAJ: He will connect you with the direct experience of what your True Will is. And that's an experience, not an idea. It's not information.

RAJ READING: It cannot be too often repeated that you do NOT know it.

RAJ: Well, that's a bummer, isn't it?

Holy Spirit to do something you don't want to do—not knowing that not doing what the Holy Spirit encourages you to do, keeps you from being awake.

RAJ READING: Whenever what the Holy Spirit tells you...

RAJ: Whenever what “that which is nothing more than your Right Mind” tells you.

RAJ READING: ...appears to be coercive, it is only because you do not RECOGNIZE your own will.

RAJ: You know, I hear the phrase now and then, “Well, it's very difficult for me to wrap my mind around that concept.” Well, you know what? I don't want you to wrap your mind around it. I don't want you to do anything with it. It's not a piece of information. It's the Truth, which, if it's simply accepted, if you will simply abide with it, instead of manipulating it and trying to make something out of it, and just letting it be What It Is, you will once again be primed for a miracle—a sudden shift of perception.

A sudden shift of perception cannot occur when the new view is required by you to fit through the sieve of your current perceptions.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The projection of the ego makes it appear as if God's Will is OUTSIDE yourself, and therefore NOT yours. In this interpretation, it IS possible for God's Will and yours to conflict.

RAJ: [laughing] Of course, that's God's fault, right? I mean, you're never going to say it's your fault that there's a conflict. I mean, after all, you are standing up for your independence. You're standing up for your God-given right to be the unique individuality that you are.

RAJ READING: God, then, may SEEM to demand of you what you do not want to give, and thus deprive you of what you want. Would God, Who wants ONLY your will, be capable of this?

RAJ: God wants your will to be What It Is—His. God wants you to be experiencing your will as What It Is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your will is His Life, which He has given to you. Even in time...

RAJ: This sensation of time that we've been talking about.

RAJ READING: ...you cannot live apart from Him, for sleep is not death. What He created can sleep, but it CANNOT die. Immortality is His Will for His Son, and His Son's will for HIMSELF.

RAJ: Again, immortality is His Will for you and your will for yourself. See, there's the Singularity again.

RAJ READING: God's Son cannot will death for himself because His Father is Life, and His Son is like Him. Creation is your will BECAUSE it is His.

RAJ: So, you see, when you ask the Holy Spirit what the Father's Will is, the Holy Spirit will disclose to you yours. So it's about you.

RAJ READING: You cannot be happy unless you do what you will truly,...

RAJ: Or I would say, well instead of poorly.

RAJ READING: You cannot be happy unless you do what you will truly, and you cannot change this because it is immutable.

RAJ: Again, there's just no place you can go to get some black-market will. It's immutable because it's All There Is. It's the only Way It Is.

And the minute the idea that your will is the Father's, the minute you begin to let that mean something, you're bringing your attention (the key) into alignment with the keyhole. And the keyhole is in the door, on the other side of which is your experience of your Birthright, and You in your Sanity. And the door is nothing other than the use of your will by which you make commitment to the definitions you have made-up that you have interposed between you and Reality—the Kingdom of Heaven—the Christ that your Brother is and your Sister is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is immutable by God's Will AND YOURS, for otherwise His Will would not have been extended.

RAJ: You see that? The Father has extended Himself by being you.

I'm going to fudge a little bit, and you have to be careful not to take this as something to repeat as a Truth—but God has extended Himself by being you into existence. I use those last two words just to clarify and to give a feeling for what I'm saying. But God did not be you into existence. God simply be's Himself right there where you are, and It's called you. And you are as Eternal as God, as timeless as God.

I'm going to back up.

RAJ READING: You cannot be happy unless you do what you will truly, and you cannot change this because it is immutable. It is immutable by God's Will AND YOURS, for otherwise His Will would not have been extended.

RAJ: Because God was successful at extending His Will, His Will is yours. Your will is His.

RAJ READING: You are afraid to know God's Will because you believe it is NOT yours.

RAJ: Yeah. You not only believe that it is not yours, you're convicted in the idea, convicted in the belief that it is not yours. You're absolutely convinced, and you know that your existence depends upon the absolute correctness of that belief. Why? Because His Will wouldn't let you continue to suffer, get sick, die, experience injury, stress, frustration, jealousy, hate, be involved in wars—all in the name of perfecting the self that you have made-up that you think you are.

RAJ READING: You are afraid to know God's Will because you believe it is NOT yours.

RAJ: You believe it's not yours because you are real sure of what yours is. And what you are being told His Will is, is not compatible with yours. And you are dedicated to yours.

You're only ignorantly dedicated to it, though. And therefore, Truth, presented in a way that gets your attention, will allow you to see the ignorance of your stance in a way that doesn't judge you and convict you, and thereby allows you to freely and without guilt, change your mind and use your mind in a different way.

Nevertheless:

RAJ READING: You are afraid to know God's Will because you believe it is NOT yours. This belief is your whole sickness and your whole fear. Every symptom of sickness and fear arises here because this is the belief that makes you WANT not to know. Believing this, you hide in darkness, denying that the Light is in you.

RAJ: Except, you see, you don't think it's darkness. You think it's just the way things are and that you must make the best of it. And you all are doing the best you can of making the best of it.

But now I'm coming along and saying there's a flaw in the premise upon which you're using your mind. There's a flaw in the premise in the way you're looking at life, at your day, at your Brothers and Sisters. There's a fundamental misperception, which if it's corrected, will transform your vision.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are asked to trust the Holy Spirit only because He speaks for YOU.

RAJ: He speaks for you. He speaks for you truly. He expresses your will to you, for you, to help you recover What It Is, to help you rediscover What You Are. The Holy Spirit's whole purpose is to uncover to you—being nothing more than your Right Mind—the Truth About You so that you will no longer be insane.

And...

RAJ READING: You are asked to trust the Holy Spirit only because He speaks for YOU. He is the Voice for God, but never forget that God did not will to be alone. He SHARES His Will with you;...

RAJ: Shares His Will with you.

RAJ READING: ...He does not thrust It UPON you.

RAJ: And this is where you all must learn something in the way you deal with each other. You're not here to thrust the Truth upon another. But you are here to share it.

RAJ READING: Always remember that what He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...gives He holds,...

RAJ: Oooh. "You mean there's a tether? Oh, you mean like I'm a dog on a leash, and He gives me a little room to play?"

Well, yes, but He doesn't give you a little room to play. He gives you Infinity to experience as your Presence. He gives you Infinity as that which is available for you to experience entirely in the present, in the now, with no limitations whatsoever.

But He does not give to you the right to think and to successfully act out a different point of view than that.

RAJ READING: Always remember that what He gives He holds, so that nothing He gives can contradict Him.

RAJ: Well, that makes it sound like God has an egomaniacal problem, doesn't it? He holds.

RAJ READING: ...remember that what He gives He holds, so that nothing He gives can contradict Him.

RAJ: No. [laughing] God is Infinite and Singular. Pure, in other words. And the Purity, the absolute Purity of God means that there cannot be one, single, microscopic element present, not one tiniest thing present, that is inconsistent with What God Is. And because of that, conflict, polarities, confusion, chaos cannot exist—thank God—because their absence is your Birthright, if you're willing to be God's Son or Daughter.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You who share His Life...

RAJ: It doesn't say, "You who are the recipient of His capital 'L' Life."

RAJ READING: You who share His Life...

RAJ: You, who are in forever relationship with Him, share His Life.

RAJ READING: You who share His Life must share it to know it, for sharing IS knowing.

RAJ: What you share, what you give, you get to keep. What you extend becomes yours, because you only extend what you would be known by.

RAJ READING: Blessed are you who learn that to hear the Will of your Father is to know your OWN.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "of the Father" instead of "of your Father."]

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: Blessed are you who learn that to hear the Will of your Father is to know your OWN.

RAJ: Is to come back into Singularity. Is to come out of the experience of polarity and conflict.

RAJ READING: For it is YOUR will to be like Him, Whose Will it is that it be so. God's Will is that His Son be one,...

RAJ: Not split up. Not broken down into parts—good and bad. Not split up into polarities. Not capable of confusion.

RAJ READING: God's Will is that His Son be one, and united with Him in His Oneness. That is why healing is the beginning of the recognition that your will IS His.

RAJ: Now, last week I spent quite a bit of time talking about healing, and talking about the fact that there needs to be more expectation of the experience of healing. If you're going to wake up, you cannot afford to let one speck of doubt remain, or any theory that says, "Actual correction of disease, of a physical problem, actual correction of injury doesn't have to happen, because it's all in my mind. It's my mind that needs to change. And my mind can be healed without my body or my world evidencing it." That can only seem reasonable if you insist upon calling the world, "an illusion." It can only happen if you call Creation, "an illusion."

I promise you that the moment you abandon your definitions about Creation, What Creation Really Is will become experienceable. You will see it. Everyone will be able to see it. You will be able to photograph it. You will be able to touch the Perfection where imperfection seemed not to be. You cannot have a corrected mind without a corrected experience.

Again, you cannot have a corrected mind without having a corrected experience.

Now, I want to leave you with that tonight, because next week we're starting a new section that says, that is entitled, "The Willingness For Healing."

And I want this to ring in your ears. I really do want you to write it down. I want you to contemplate it. Don't think about it. Don't reason it out. Don't turn it over and manipulate it, like it's a thing. It's not a bit of information. It's just the Truth. You cannot have a corrected mind without having a corrected experience. And waking up is about having a corrected mind.

I love you all—everyone. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 10 – GOD AND THE EGO
Section: THE WILLINGNESS FOR HEALING
Sparkly Book – p.237 / JCIM – p.99
Chapter 11 – GOD OR THE EGO
Section – THE INVITATION TO HEALING
First Edition – p. 182 / Second Edition – p. 197

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

It is my intent to help promote a shift in your attitudes, specifically about healing. Whether you're a student of the Course or not, one thing that, generally speaking, isn't associated in people's minds about A Course In Miracles is healing. If you hear the words "Christian Science," immediately in your mind, you associate that with healings, physical healings among others. If you're a student of the Course, because of the title, "A Course In Miracles," you do immediately think of the word "miracles," but that's not even a traditional definition since a miracle is a sudden shift of perception. Obviously, then, a miracle is something that goes on in your mind. It is an experience of enlightenment, an "Aha!", where you see something that you hadn't seen before that is more closely in alignment with the Father's Point of View, and you're healed of an ancient hatred, we'll say, or you're healed of jealousy. But again these are, I'm going to say, psychological. They're mental.

And I'm going to tell you something. The developing belief that A Course In Miracles doesn't have anything to do with physical healing is exactly what keeps you from experiencing physical healing. Not only is the idea being expressed that it's not essential for there to be a physical healing if there is a mental regeneration around the issue embodied in the disease or the injury, it is becoming a strong belief that physical healing should not be associated in your minds with what A Course In Miracles is about. Wrong!

What I want to express very clearly tonight is stop blocking the experience of healing, physically speaking, by adopting an attitude that such a thing has no relevance to what A Course In Miracles is teaching. You can block the experience of healing, but you cannot make it a fact that physical healing has nothing to do with sudden shifts of perception, miracles, and everything that the Course is illuminating. Begin to embrace the expectation of actual improvement, physically speaking, in your lives.

Let's go into the book.

If you're in the Sparkly Book, which is simply the Course as it was finished, we'll say, by Bill Thetford, the subheading is:

RAJ READING: The Willingness for Healing

RAJ: And in the edited form of it, the First or Second Edition, it's called:

RAJ READING: The Invitation to Healing

RAJ: When you hear that or read that, "The Willingness," or, "The Invitation to Healing," are you thinking the invitation to a changed mind? Well, let it be a little bit broader than that.

RAJ READING: The Willingness for Healing

RAJ: The willingness to experience the correction of whatever suggests or embodies imperfection.

It starts out:

RAJ READING: If sickness...

RAJ: Sickness. Well, you don't usually think in terms of the sickness of the mind. It means whooping cough, and measles, and polio, and cancer, and a long list of things.

RAJ READING: If sickness is separation, the will to heal and be healed is the first step toward RECOGNIZING what you truly want.

RAJ: "Oh. Well, I don't want healing. I mean, so what if cancer kills me. I know that I'm eternal and I know that this body that the cancer killed isn't real anyway." [small laugh]

RAJ READING: If sickness is separation, the will to heal...

RAJ: In other words, be an agent for change.

RAJ READING: ...and...

RAJ: ...to...

RAJ READING: ...be healed...

RAJ: Of what? Of cancer, and diphtheria, and whooping cough, and so on.

RAJ READING: ...is the first step toward RECOGNIZING what you truly want. Every attack is a step away from this, and every healing thought brings it closer.

RAJ: Now I've been making it very clear in the last few weeks that when the word "attack" is used, it is with reference to your providing a definition of something out of whole cloth, out of pure imagination, and devoting yourself to your definition, rather than the direct Experience of What That Thing Truly Is as God Is Being It right there. And so, when you give preference to your definition, it is an attack on God. It is a denial of a direct Experience of What God Is Being there. That's why it's called "an attack."

Mind you, it affects God not in the least that you've shaken your fist and denied Him. But it affects you, not just a little bit, but absolutely, because your commitment to any definition you have made-up about a thing, constitutes a withdrawal of your attention from What It Is, and it puts you into a spinning, little, private place that nobody else can get into and where you're all alone, isolated from What Everything Is. It affects you absolutely.

RAJ READING: Every attack...

RAJ: In other words, every act of devotion to your definition of What God Is Being there.

RAJ READING: ...is a step away from this, and every healing thought...

RAJ: Which means every willingness to abandon the definition you've had, with a desire to see What God Is Really Being there.

RAJ READING: ...brings it closer.

RAJ: What? Brings what closer? Your recognition of what you truly want. You truly want to be and fulfill What You Truly Are. That's what you really want.

But right now you've gotten caught up in a commitment to be what you think you are, what you have made yourself up to be, and so you're going after what you don't truly want. You're going after what you are not Divinely Designed to be experiencing.

This makes it really rather simple, doesn't it? Sickness is the result of your devotion to your imagination and your commitment to definitions you have made-up about everything. And healing is when that devotion shifts from your own made-up definitions to a desire to see What God Is Being right there where you have given a different meaning.

What I want to affirm again is that when you begin to have a devotion to seeing What God Is Being there, you will experience an influx of inspiration and understanding provided from the level of Perfection, provided by the Father. And the part that has been neglected is that you will also experience the scales falling from your eyes, and you will see and be able to touch and feel and experience What God Is Being there in Perfectness, in Perfection. And as I said, you will be able to photograph it. You will be able to see it. You will be able to feel it.

RAJ READING: The Son of God...

RAJ: Meaning one who is not an orphan.

RAJ READING: ...HAS both Father...

RAJ: With a capital "F", because God's Fatherhood isn't being denied.

RAJ READING: ...and Son...

RAJ: Meaning the true realization of your, I'm going to say in quotes, "position," because when you acknowledge your Father as your Father, you are acknowledging your Sonship. So your Sonship is no longer unavailable to you, shoved out of sight. And you're not claiming to be something else—something you've defined yourself as.

RAJ READING: The Son of God HAS both Father and Son because he IS both Father and Son.

RAJ: God's Gift to you is Himself, is What He Is. You are the Father embodied. And you are the Son because you are the Father embodied.

RAJ READING: To unite having and being is only to unite your will with His, for He wills you Himself. And...

RAJ: And this is the part you're having to learn to be, to play.

RAJ READING: And you will yourself to Him...

RAJ: Instead of to your definition of yourself.

RAJ READING: ...you will yourself to Him because, in your perfect understanding of Him, you KNOW there is but One Will.

RAJ: You see, a Singularity. And you're not attempting to act at odds with It any longer.

RAJ READING: Yet...

RAJ: On the other hand.

RAJ READING: ...when you attack any part of God and His Kingdom,...

RAJ: By creating a definition of your own.

RAJ READING: ...your understanding is not perfect, and what you will is therefore lost to you.

RAJ: You see, what you will as a private, separate, independent authorizer, has no result. Because you don't exist as that and can't exist as that. And therefore, whatever you attempt to will yourself will be lost to you, because there is nothing there. And that is why you experience this intense, ongoing addiction to expressing your will better and better—because you're not getting anywhere.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Healing thus becomes a lesson in UNDERSTANDING, and the more you practice it, the better teacher AND LEARNER you become. If you have denied truth,...

RAJ: By having your own definitions.

RAJ READING: ...what better witnesses to its reality could you have than those who have been healed by it?

RAJ: Well, you could say, "Well, you know, I know a lot of students of the Course. I've even attended some of the conferences where people, students of the Course from all over the world, come and I've not heard anything about physical regeneration, healing, instantaneous healings of physical problems. So where am I going to go for a better witness?" Well, it's a good question, and it's a question that should be asked. And the answer is take the hint that I'm providing to you so that you might be the ones who allow the experience of healing to occur because you are embracing it within the context of what the Course is teaching, so that you might be the inspiration to others.

RAJ READING: If you have denied truth, what better witnesses to its reality could you have than those who have been healed by it? But be sure to count yourself among them, for in your willingness to join them is YOUR healing accomplished.

RAJ: Now, you know what? I'm going to invite students of the Course who have experienced healings that they have refrained from talking about—because it doesn't fit the current what? Definition of A Course In Miracles—to start speaking up. Express, share the healings that you have had. I don't care whether you get responses that are negative that tell you that you're missing the point of the Course if you think that a physical healing is what the Course is about. Do it anyway because the inspiration afforded by, for lack of better words, the testimonies of healing that are given, is sorely needed so that the concept and attitude toward the Course may begin to change quote "in the world."

Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: Every miracle which you accomplish...

RAJ: Which is another way of saying, which you allow to happen, which you allow to register with you.

RAJ READING: Every miracle which you accomplish speaks to you of the Fatherhood of God.

RAJ: And I'm going to give this a little more depth. It speaks to you of the fact that you have decided not to be an orphan anymore. When you decide not to be an orphan anymore, you must renew your acquaintance with the Father. Right? You must be willing to acknowledge that you have a Source, that you are not the source of yourself, and you must let yourself into active involvement with your Father as your Father, which necessarily means that you are inviting communion with your Father because you know you are His Son.

It's only as an orphan that you have created definitions that you have committed yourself to, as though that is the sole purpose of your being.

So...

RAJ READING: Every miracle which you accomplish speaks to you of the Fatherhood of God.

RAJ: Instead of your autonomous authority.

RAJ READING: Every healing thought which you accept, either from your brother or in your own mind, teaches you...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...that you are God's Son.

RAJ: You see? The realization of this, and the embrace of it, indicates that you're coming back into your Right Mind—a Sound Mind. A Sound Mind is a Singular (not fragmented) Mind.

On the other hand,...

RAJ READING: In every hurtful thought you hold, wherever you perceive it, lies the denial of God's Fatherhood and your Sonship.

RAJ: Why? Because the only place, or the only frame of mind in which that can happen, is when you are claiming to be an orphan. And that does not speak of the Fatherhood of God, and it does not speak of your Sonship. It doesn't speak of Who You Really Are.

RAJ READING: And denial is as total as love.

RAJ: When I said that your decision to see things by yourself governs your experience absolutely, I was saying the same thing.

RAJ READING: ...denial is as total as love. You cannot deny part of yourself, because the remainder will seem to be unintegrated, and therefore without meaning. And being without meaning to you, you will not understand it. To deny meaning MUST be to fail to understand.

RAJ: Now if you will pick a flower, or a paper cup, or some simple object in your house, and take the time, as I've talked about before, to be quiet and present with it, to have an intimate moment with it—a moment in which you are not projecting onto it, to the best of your ability, any beliefs you currently hold about it, and you at the same time desire to have revealed to you What It Divinely Is—you are setting yourself up for the experience, the direct experience of What That Thing Is—an Experience of Revelation.

If you let one simple thing be the thing you are willing to be completely undefended with, and you begin to experience a heightened awareness of it that goes beyond any of the definitions you've had, you will find that the, I'm going to say, blossoming, growing True Awareness of it will not be confined to that one thing. And even though you weren't asking to have a True Experience of the couch across the room, or the walls, or the ceiling, because you were just letting yourself be intimate with one little thing, you will find that just as denial is absolute, Love is absolute.

You don't have to somehow find a way to let the Meaning, the full Meaning of Everything in [finger snap] all at once. Start with something simple. Start with something you don't feel defended against, because it will be the threshold, the spontaneous threshold for more. So, it may seem like a simple and maybe inconsequential thing to start with an object that you're familiar with, but it's a very practical practice because you can't experience the intent of that object to convey to you its Meaning, with a capital "M"—What It Divinely Is—without at the same time having [finger snap] this light bulb go on that says, "Wow! Everything else must be doing this, too. Everything around me must have an intent to share What It Is with me." You see? And it will be like dominoes falling, but all you have to attend to is one domino.

RAJ READING: To deny meaning...

RAJ: By inserting in its place a definition you have made-up.

RAJ READING: To deny meaning MUST be to fail to understand. You can heal only yourself, for only God's Son NEEDS healing.

RAJ: "Oooh. Wait a minute. That must be a typographical error because only little egos need healing. Right? Only God's Son needs healing?" Oooh. Yeah, because you're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you're at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom.

RAJ READING: ...only God's Son...

RAJ: Behaving like an orphan.

RAJ READING: ...NEEDS healing.

RAJ: You see? And the way for God's Son to be healed is to abandon the claim of orphanhood.

Of course, it goes a little deeper than that, doesn't it, because you have to be willing to abandon the well-established right you think you have to think on your own and define things on your own. And you have to give up the right you think you have to be independent. And you have to be willing to let in, share, embrace, not be alone.

RAJ READING: You can heal only yourself, for only God's Son...

RAJ: Or Daughter.

RAJ READING: ...NEEDS healing. He needs it because he does not understand himself, and therefore knows not what he does. Having forgotten his will, he does not know what he wants.

Healing...

RAJ: Not just of your mind, but of the body.

RAJ READING: ...is a sign that he...

RAJ: The Son of God.

RAJ READING: ...wants...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...TO MAKE WHOLE.

RAJ: Not to further establish separation. Not to further establish difference. Difference from what? Difference from What Is.

RAJ READING: And this willingness opens...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...his OWN ears to the Voice of the Holy Spirit,...

RAJ: Which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...Whose message IS wholeness.

RAJ: Because its intent is to return you to your Right Mind, and to help you see that which is useless which it is appropriate for you to abandon so that you don't continue fragmenting your experience of your Indivisible Mind. You see?

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...will enable you to go far beyond the healing YOU would undertake, for beside your small willingness to make whole He will lay His Own COMPLETE Will and make YOURS whole.

RAJ: You see? All that's really required of you is a little willingness—just to take a little flower, or a little thing, knowing that if there's anything there at all, it has to be God Presencing Himself there, fully as What He Is in His Fullness—and then becoming undefended enough, meaning as definitionless as possible, so that you can be receptive to the natural desire of that thing to share its Meaning with you, because God's Will is in place in that thing and God's Will is to share What He Is. So, when you have that little willingness, it enables you to go far beyond the healing you would undertake, far beyond the desire to see just this one little thing in its True Meaning.

RAJ READING: ...for beside your small willingness to make whole He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...will lay His Own COMPLETE Will and make YOURS whole. What can the Son of God NOT accomplish with the Fatherhood of God in him? And yet the invitation must come from you,...

RAJ: "Well, let's see. I've got a dinner date tonight. And after that, I've got to take care of balancing the books, and then it's going to be time to get a shower. And then I've got to get up early in the morning, and if I don't get to bed early enough, I'm a wreck the next day; I can't function well. So I don't have time to make the invitation tonight." [audience laughter]

Okay. Dream on. Sleep a little longer. Don't experience your True Will, and don't experience your True Function. Oh, I agree with you. All of these devotions to all of the things that you've made-up is far more important than your Sanity, far more important than your Fulfillment.

"Oh, but I am fulfilling myself. If I don't take care of these things, I won't be a success, and people won't recognize who I am, and they won't know what my will is. I've got to do all these things so what my will is will be perfectly clear to everyone, and they will know that I am a worthwhile and real presence. I don't have time to make an invitation."

And yet it says:

RAJ READING: ...the invitation must come from you, for you have surely learned that whom you invite as your guest WILL abide with you.

RAJ: The company you're entertaining is the company you've invited.

Is the encounter a pleasant one? Are you blissful? Are you really happy? Are you free of stress? Are you free of the threat of grief?

RAJ READING: ...whom you invite as your guest WILL abide with you.

RAJ: So who are you going to send out invitations to?

Now:

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit cannot speak to an unwelcoming host because He will NOT BE HEARD.

RAJ: Do you think the Holy Spirit grieves over this? No. Because the Holy Spirit knows that you, even though you're entertaining a false guest, aren't actually accomplishing anything, and knows that because you are the Christ, you cannot dally indefinitely in ignorance of Who You Are.

But you know what? I want each of you to understand that if the Holy Spirit cannot speak to an unwelcoming host because He will not be heard, and there's nothing He can do about it, and there's nothing He needs to do about it, then you cannot speak to an unwelcoming Brother or Sister because you will not be heard. And that's just the way it is.

If you are not speaking to someone who desires to know the Truth, if you are not speaking to someone who is already in a process of abandoning his or her devotion to his commitment to his made-up sense of himself or herself, then don't grieve over it. Find those who are stirring from their dreams and imaginations. Does that constitute abandoning a Brother? Not at all.

A Brother who cannot hear, because that Brother is so committed to his or her definitions, has abandoned the Truth in favor of illusions. But—and here's the important part—they cannot abandon What They Truly Are. And so there is a point at which What They Truly Are will speak up and say, "Enough of this suffering. I wish to see the Evidence of Love, and I wish to be the Evidence of Love, and I rejoin my Father. I reach out to my Father. I reach out to the Truth that my Father is." Only then will your extension and sharing of the Truth be able to be heard.

Until that happens, stop trying. Stop trying to accomplish the impossible. When you stop trying to do the impossible, resentment, that would build up in you because you are not being able to be an agent for change, will diminish. And you will find that in the Peace that follows, you will be available when that one begins to stir and reach out and say, "Help," and mean, "Help me abandon my illusions," instead of "Help me reinforce them."

Again, take this to heart.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit cannot speak to an unwelcoming host because He will NOT BE HEARD. The Eternal Guest remains,...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit remains.

RAJ READING: ...but His Voice grows faint in alien company. He needs your protection, but only because your care is a sign that you WANT Him. Think like Him ever so slightly, and the little spark becomes a blazing light that fills your mind so that He becomes your ONLY Guest.

RAJ: But that won't happen until the invitation is extended. And the invitation won't be extended until you no longer find value in the ethic, the grand ethic that you have made-up of attempting to successfully establish yourself independent from any other Source.

Now...

RAJ READING: Whenever you ask the ego to enter, you lessen His welcome.

RAJ: Meaning the Holy Spirit's. Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: He will remain,...

RAJ: It will remain.

RAJ READING: ...but YOU have allied yourself AGAINST Him.

RAJ: And what have you allied yourself with? Imaginations! Imaginations which you have adopted and have become beliefs—beliefs that you have made commitment to.

RAJ READING: Whatever journey you choose to take, He...

RAJ: Your Right Mind. The Holy Spirit. The Eternal Guest.

RAJ READING: ...will go with you, waiting.

RAJ: But not impatiently.

And if you have to wait on a Brother or Sister who absolutely refuses, in spite of the great suffering they're experiencing, to hear what would relieve them of their suffering, you must be with them, waiting. You must be willing to wait.

When I say, "Be with them," I mean be present in the world with them, or be present in the Universal Brotherhood with them. I don't mean be with them and live every bit of the misery they're going through, because they want to tell you all about it and keep you preoccupied with it because it's so important to them. And it's important to them because it provides an incredible challenge to absolutely prove their capability to overcome it and be real, while being deluded.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You can safely trust His patience,...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...for He cannot leave a part of God.

RAJ: He can't leave you.

RAJ READING: Yet you need far more than patience. You will never rest...

RAJ: You won't find peace. You won't find success at demonstrating that you are so absolutely real that you are invulnerable.

RAJ READING: You will never rest until you know your function AND FULFILL IT,...

RAJ: You see? Not just know it, but fulfill it. It's like not just have a sudden shift of perception and say that you have had a healing about cancer, but you have the realization and the cancer is gone.

RAJ READING: You will never rest until you know your function AND FULFILL IT,...

RAJ: Another way of saying that is: And endorse it.

RAJ READING: ...for only in this can your will and your Father's be wholly joined. To HAVE Him is to be LIKE Him, and He has given...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...Himself to you.

RAJ: Not just capacities. Not just skills. He's given to you Himself, given to you What He Is.

Where you are is God Presencing Himself. And when you dare to let Him be your Source, then all of the Capacities of Creation, you might say, you find to be yours—but not yours to exercise independent from Him.

RAJ READING: You who have God MUST be as God, for HIS function became YOURS with His gift.

RAJ: His Gift of what? Of Himself.

RAJ READING: Invite this knowledge back into your minds,...

RAJ: Hear that word again, "invite"? You must make the invitation.

RAJ READING: Invite this knowledge back into your minds, and let nothing that will obscure it enter.

RAJ: That means be present with things and don't let your definitions get in the way. Be with every thing innocently, without projecting your own imaginations upon it.

RAJ READING: The Guest...

RAJ: Capital "G" Guest.

RAJ READING: ...Whom God sent you...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...will teach you how to do this, if you but recognize the little spark and are willing to LET IT GROW. YOUR willingness need not be perfect because His IS. If you will merely offer Him a little place, He will lighten it so much that you will gladly extend it. And by THIS extending,...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...you will begin to remember creation.

RAJ: Is there anything fuzzy about this, anything unclear about this? It's utterly simple.

What makes it difficult is that it's much more exciting to cope with complexity, so that you can get the hit of successfully overcoming it and bringing it into order. And you're not hurting enough yet at it, to say, "Maybe there's another way to do this. Or maybe I need to abandon doing this completely, and give my attention in a new direction." But at least, it's put so simply here that you cannot claim ignorance of it because it's too hard to understand and you can't get your mind to wrap around it. What's called for is a lot less, and I've said this before, is a lot less than anything you're currently engaged in.

The next sentence is an oft-quoted sentence from the Course.

RAJ READING: Would you be hostage to the ego or host to God?

RAJ: “Well, you mean I need to invite Him into my house for a dinner party, and host God?” No.

God is not a thing that can come into your presence that you can be host to. God is already All. And the only way you can be a host to God is to have a simple—and I mean simple—a simple desire to see Him in every thing you’re looking at. You become host to God when you wish to see Him in each and every thing—see Him in each and every thing instead of the definitions you’ve made-up. You also play host to God by being willing to say you are His Son, His Daughter, His Offspring, His Creation.

RAJ READING: Would you be hostage to the ego or host to God? You will accept only whom YOU invite.

RAJ: If you’re having a rough time, you’ve invited the ego. You’ve invited the mentality that you think you are that you think constitutes the clearest definition of your individuality that you have so far been able to express in the world.

RAJ READING: You will accept only whom YOU invite.

RAJ: If you want to have a better experience, you better invite another guest. And you only have two to choose from—God, or the voice for fear—the ego, which is just the sense of yourself that you have made-up and then committed yourself to.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are free to determine who shall be your guest, and how long he shall remain with you.

RAJ: Nobody else is. You are! No one else is free to determine for you who shall be your guest.

RAJ READING: You are free to determine who shall be your guest, and how long he shall remain with you. Yet this is not REAL freedom, for it still depends on how you see it.

RAJ: How you see it.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is THERE although He cannot help you without your invitation, and the ego is nothing whether you invite it in or not. Real freedom depends on welcoming REALITY, and of your guests only He is real.

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: Know, then, Who...

RAJ: With a capital "W".

RAJ READING: ...Who abides with you merely by recognizing what is there ALREADY,...

RAJ: Again, you're not behind the Point of Perfection or advancing toward it; you're there already.

RAJ READING: Know, then, Who abides with you merely by recognizing what is there ALREADY, and do not be satisfied with imaginary comforters, for the Comforter of God is in you.

RAJ: And the Comforter of God that is in you is nothing more than your Right Mind.

And so, by letting It in, you are integrating yourself. You're not letting in an alien. You're not letting in a stranger. You're not letting in anything that can have any other effect than integrating you, so that your experience of your Purpose and of What You Are doesn't escape you any longer.

But I'll tell you something, you've got to get sick and tired of trying to do everything by yourself for the thrill of taking the challenge and accomplishing what the challenge asks for.

Healing is of the Mind. But you know what? I've said before, there ain't no matter. Nothing, the flower, the table, the trees—all of it is Mind. Every thing that you see are ideas in Mind. And ideas are mental [clapping sound], but [clapping sounds] when Mind touches Mind, [clapping sound] it makes sound. And when Mind, as a bow, touches the strings on a viola, you can hear the sound of Mind. And you get a bunch of instruments together, all of which are Mind impinging on Mind in one form or another, and the larger Intent of Mind called "Beautiful Music," can be heard. It's all Mind.

And so when there is a healing in your mind, a sudden shift of perception, a correction of a misperception—all of Mind is going to reflect that back you. And so it's going to sound like a violist making beautiful music, instead of squawking, dissonant, shrill, difficult-to-listen-to sounds.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week. Between now and then, send out new invitations. Send out an invitation to the only other Guest there is Who can show up. And be willing to let that Guest in. Invite that Guest in. Receive that Guest warmly, thoughtfully, kindly. And in every way, expect to see healing.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

If I were to say to you that you're nothing but a bunch of conditioned responses, that there's basically nothing original about any of you as you go through your day, you might be surprised. And yet, for the most part this is true, and you don't realize it. And it's in the realization of this fact that you prime the pump, as it were, for a new experience, for an "Aha!"—for a shift of perception.

Some of the conditioned responses were provided by those who educated you. And, as a matter of fact, the majority of the conditioned responses are things you taught yourself. Conditioned responses are behaviors. As you grew up, some of you consciously practiced how to hold your hands, how to sit. You practiced various kinds of laughs and finally decided on the one that you liked best, and practiced that until you got it down. You observed other people—how they stood, how they spoke firmly, how they spoke gently—and tried out various of these different forms of vocal expression until you adopted one, or endorsed one, and made it yours.

But, you know, it's very important to understand that if you are behaving on the basis of conditioned responses, if your behavior relative to stimuli in the world are coming from adopted standards, then your responses are never genuine responses to the stimuli going on around you.

And what you may not realize is that this causes you to become a prime target of manipulation. Anyone, who can recognize your adopted preferences, can then present themselves to you or present ideas to you that you will find harmonious with you and will cause you to have trust in them and what they're presenting. And you thoughtlessly become sheep following the leader.

Now, remember, if you are constantly measuring what's going on in your experience against a memorized habit so that you might know the safest and best response under the circumstances as you have learned to define the best response, you're unconscious. You're just coming from memory. And you're not available to give a real response to the real stimuli that are happening. This means you cannot be an effective presence. You can easily be herded into a corral, or an oven, or a concentration camp, or blind obedience to an unscrupulous leader of your country, or to the profit-seeking drug companies who do studies to find out the typical responses to certain words amongst those who will see their advertisements so they can pick the words that will cause you to be the most defenseless and agree where disagreement is called for.

Now why am I saying all this? I'm saying it because waking up, learning to hesitate before you come out with a knee-jerk response and to listen within to the Holy Spirit, to that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, causes you to sidestep an unconscious response to your environment and puts you in a position to see it freshly and behave in a totally appropriate way in the moment that isn't a response of habit that is irrelevant to the moment. Waking up is going to mean your behavior is going to change. Your behavior is going to be appropriate to the moment. And it might mean speaking in a way that you've never spoken before—with authority that you've never spoken with before, or with gentleness and compassion that you've never spoken with before.

Waking up is about being made new. It's about getting out of the rut of the behavior patterns that you think are you. You smile and you don't realize that the smile you're giving was something you decided to use when you were three years old, and that the smile you're giving has nothing to do with what is called for in the moment you're in. There's nothing genuine about it because it doesn't arise out of a real connectedness with What's Really Going On in the moment.

Oh, you're a gentle person, a kind person, a thoughtful person, and so you never confront anybody. You're never rude enough to call them on their lies, or their deceit, or their bad behavior. And you know that the meek are blessed, don't you? And so, you are meek, and you get steamrollered, and you get mistreated, and you get used, and you get abused. And you say, "Well, nevertheless, the meek shall inherit the earth. So I will not say 'No' when 'No' needs to be said, because my concept is that 'No' never needs to be said. Only kind cooperation, or even kind and gentle and not well-focused disagreement." You see? And so you're never honest in the moment. You're never connected in the moment. "All we, like sheep, follow the leader." All for the sake of not violating this self you think you are that you didn't think you made-up, but you did—smile, by stance, by verbal expression that you adopted as you grew up.

That's not your Birthright. Your Birthright is to be able to be Real, to be present with What's Going On, seeing it without referring it to your memory so that you are being present with What Is Going On with innocent eyes, where you are not projecting onto What Is Going On the requirement you have to always behave according to the definition of yourself that you've made-up which constitutes your conditioned behavior, your untrue dishonest behavior.

You haven't thought of it as dishonest and you haven't thought of it as untrue, because everybody does it and everybody encourages everybody else to do it. And you've been able to have a generally pleasant experience as a result. But the fact is you have another way to be that is available to you that I'm encouraging you to be open to, to open up to, let in, and express. That's what the Course is inviting, eliciting from [small laugh] the depths of you to the level of your Conscious Awareness.

There is a Place of Excellence in you, I've said. There is an Altar in the middle of you, the Course says. And there is a Voice, with a capital "V", in you that is the Voice for Truth. It's called "the Holy Spirit"—which, to bring it into really practical terms, is nothing more than your Right Mind held in trust while you dally with your memories and your conditioned behaviors and responses. It's your Birthright to be experiencing this Mind in you that is your Right Mind. And it's your Birthright not to be a puppet of your endorsements which you gave to a limited set of behaviors that keep you locked into certain kinds of experiences.

So, when we've been talking the last few weeks about healing and the fact that it's not appropriate for you to anticipate that you could have a changed perception without having a changed experience, that means that, as well, you can't expect to have a changed perception without having a changed behavior—a behavior that is a real response to What Is Really Going On, rather than a conditioned response to what you think is going on.

What the world needs today is more conscious people—citizens who are more conscious than unconscious, who are not responding out of habit, but out of connectedness with issues, with needs, and behaving in ways that abolish the needs so that the suffering from the need ceases. So not only will a withered arm no longer be withered and no longer will broken teeth be broken, but you will be a dynamic real presence being the evidence of change yourself, which, because the change is arriving out of an experience of illumination or enlightenment, is recognizable to everyone else as of value, which causes them to be able to look at things freshly themselves and perhaps break loose of their conditioned responses. You've got to be the first domino that falls by letting the change happen in you so that your behavior is arising out of a Knowing, rather than a pre-programmed, intellectual response that you'd apply, that you apply to everything of a similar nature out of habit. Are you getting the idea or the feel?

Now you could look at what I've said as though it were an indictment on you. "You're nothing but a bunch of conditioned responses and you didn't know it, you ignorant assholes." You could take it that way, but you don't need to.

You can simply take the Truth of what I've said as a justification, if you will, for more actively pursuing what we've been talking about for months, which is to be willing to look at everything with innocent eyes, to hesitate a moment before you confirm within yourself that the way you're understanding things to be is the way it is, so that in that moment of hesitation you might say, "Father, Holy Spirit, what's really going on here? I could tell You, I could talk for a half an hour telling You exactly what's going on here, because [small laugh] I sure as hell know what's going on here and it ain't good. But, Holy Spirit, in spite of what I think and believe and have conditioned myself to see, what is really going on here and what is really needed? How do I need to be to give evidence to the Truth; to be an agent for change that uncovers the resolution of everything that I know ain't good? I'm willing to listen, rather than assert my conditioned responses."

You see, in other words, it can be used as justification for becoming curious and inquiring as to, "What is the more that is here than what I'm seeing? What is the more of God that is going on here that I am misinterpreting, and thereby seeing less of? Because I don't want to get caught up in confirming the less that I'm seeing that doesn't represent What's Really Going On." So all it is, is a justification for curiosity—which is a pleasant thing to bring into play.

To know that you are basically a blob of conditioned responses, should simply convey to you that there's a whole lot of good available to you that you're not yet experiencing because you're not looking at the Kingdom of Heaven through innocent eyes, when you could be. You see? Don't you want to see the more of What Is Here than what you're seeing? Of course you do! So give your attention to that. It's an easy thing to do all day long.

And nobody will know you're doing it. You don't have to publicize it. You don't have to carry a placard on your chest saying what you're doing. You don't have to do it out loud where everyone can hear it and wonder about you.

Curiosity, oh, curiosity is a blessing to utilize. It's a wonder to have active in you. But you now know that this practice of curiosity is significantly more than you thought it was because it's the way out of your dream, your sleep.

You can be alert during the day—not like you're on an internal witch-hunt searching out the bad in you—but you can be alert during the day to notice when conditioned responses arise. Usually it will come out as spontaneous defense. When you find yourself, without thinking, spontaneously defending yourself, you may know that you're asleep. You may know that you are relying upon conditioned responses, which means that at the very moment you're doing that, you can't possibly be aware of What Is Really Going On, and therefore you can't possibly know what a Real response would be. And you are blinded and unconscious—and that's not what you want.

Why are you defended? Why do you spontaneously defend yourself? Because of a definition you have of yourselves—a definition that you are little, puny, basically inconsequential if you do not build up a façade of strength with a strong voice, or a strong will, to save yourself from your vulnerability.

But, you know, I cannot say it often enough. Each one of you, right now, is the full Expression of God. Each one of you is right now the Ultimate Christ believing you're not, and behaving as though your belief is true. And you don't need to be doing that. You defend yourself because you don't know what your Birthright is, and so you don't let yourself feel your Birthright.

Why does the Course say that bad behavior is a call for Love instead of just bad behavior? Because it serves to remind you that there's a different response from your conditioned knee-jerk response of defense. It reminds you that there's another way to respond—a way that will heal instead of continuing to confirm the human condition that you're all suffering from. And you want the way out, you say. You want to be out of the human condition and the suffering. So you've got to do something different from reasserting your conditioning.

You've got to be willing to acknowledge there is another way to look at this. And then, don't try to figure out a new definition of how to get out of it. Be still. Go within. Inquire within. Bring your curiosity where? To your memory to see if there's any experience you've overlooked that might be helpful here that you haven't brought into play yet? No. You bring your curiosity to something beyond your memory banks—to the Holy Spirit, or the Father, where you break the isolation, as I've said so many times. And invite and create a Conscious Experience of Joining that breaks the isolation that causes you to rely upon your memory of your private experience since you got your divorce from the Father. You see?

Then you have the opportunity to have your Right Mind register with you that knows its relationship with the Father, that knows that it's the Son of the Father, but All That The Father Is has been gifted to the Son as the Son. Then you come back into your Real Power, your Real Substantiality, your Real Invulnerability that means you don't have to have Divine Power to overcome the opposition. The Divine Power that is yours, by virtue of your Invulnerability being gifted to you by the Father because the Father Is Invulnerable, constitutes the nonexistence of any experience of threat. And in the absence of the experience of threat, any call for correction can be dealt with in a way that promotes the correction smoothly, effortlessly, because there's nothing but the love of clarity of the Knowledge of Truth that finds expression in what you're saying or doing, where the call for correction occurs. You see? And so, you do not make corrections as a means of overcoming a potential threat to your well-being.

You are the agent for change or correction by virtue of understanding that the behavior that is a call for correction is based upon something that isn't even true. And you can speak from that point. If another is behaving in a way that expresses a call for correction, it doesn't change the fact that innately and fundamentally and actually they are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it either—that they are at that point and you do understand them therefrom. And so you speak to them, knowing that. You give what you know. And all that emanates from you is Singular Love—not love held up like a cross against a vampire.

Let's go to the book.

The section is called:

RAJ READING: From Darkness to Light

When you are weary, remember you have hurt yourself.

RAJ: When you're weary.

Oh, when you're wearied by the dynamics of the human condition. When you're wearied by the ongoing, excellently-thought-out effort that you've put forth to live a good life and to be honest—and things go wrong. And it seems to you that your intention to be intelligent and righteous and loving hasn't acted like the cross that would be held up against a vampire—and the vampire seems to be getting you. You see? When you are wearied by doing what doesn't work.

RAJ READING: ...remember you have hurt yourself.

RAJ: "Now here's another one of those terrible indictments against you, you sad jerks." You see? No. When you realize that you have been attempting to do something that doesn't work, it doesn't mean that you're stupid. It means that you're at a point of realization where what? You can make a new choice! You're at a threshold where change can occur. And you realize that nobody else has to change—just you. Maybe you have to adopt a new way of standing, or a new smile.

But in this case, you now know that in order to have a new behavior, you've got to have a new experience, a new conscious awareness, that isn't arising out of your memory banks. In other words, you realize that you've hurt yourself by trying to be separate from the Father, trying to be an orphan, and trying to be successful at it, instead of saying, “Father, I’m willing to have a Father again, so that I might know Who I Am, so that I might have my Real Identity back, instead of the one I made-up for myself which isn’t getting me anywhere at all.” You see? That’s all it means. You have hurt yourself by doing something that doesn’t work, and there’s another way to do it and here’s what it is. And then explore the doing of it. You see? It’s good news.

But if you think that it’s someone else that’s hurt you or circumstances that have hurt you, or the human condition that you’ve been submerged in, you poor divine soul, and that you just have to tolerate till you die out of it—when you know that nothing else is responsible for it, then you know the power you have available to you to change the situation. If it’s all because you have been doing what won’t work, then all you have to do is start doing what does work. And nothing in this Universe—no human condition, no mortal existence, no hard-hearted individual—can keep you from it. You’re sovereign.

You need to know that you’re sovereign. But as long as you think that someone else has hurt you instead of that you have hurt yourself, you won’t find that place of sovereignty, that, I’m going to call it that “right of decision” that abides with you that supercedes everything else. So, you have the right of decision to go through your day expressing curiosity to see the more of God that is present than what you’re currently seeing. And nobody can stop you from doing it. And nobody has kept you from seeing the more that is present except you saying, “Father, I’d rather see it myself. I’d rather define it myself and become a successful orphan.” It’s that simple.

Again.

RAJ READING: When you are weary,...

RAJ: And most of you are weary all the time, to one degree or another, of the anxiety of your lonely stance.

RAJ READING: When you are weary, remember you have hurt yourself. Your Comforter will rest you, but YOU cannot.

RAJ: Well, what is your Comforter? What is the Comforter? The Holy Spirit. Not something afar off. That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: Your Comforter will rest you, but YOU...

RAJ: As an orphan.

RAJ READING: ...cannot.

RAJ: You, unjoined with your Right Mind, cannot give yourself rest.

And in effect, that's what an orphan tries to do—give himself rest from the dissonance inherent in trying to be what he is not—an orphan. On your own, you try to give yourself rest from suffering, not realizing that the suffering is simply the unavoidable experience which occurs when you try to be what you're not—an orphan.

RAJ READING: Your Comforter will rest you, but YOU cannot. You do not know HOW,...

RAJ: You as an orphan.

RAJ READING: ...for if you did you could never have grown weary.

RAJ: The occasion for weariness wouldn't have happened because you wouldn't have been trying to do the impossible.

RAJ READING: Unless you have hurt yourselves you could never suffer in ANY way, for that is not God's Will for His Son.

RAJ: It's just not in the program. It's not in the Way Things Work.

RAJ READING: Pain is not of Him, for He knows no attack and His peace surrounds you silently.

RAJ: Why would it surround you silently? Because, in His Peace, there is no awareness of conflict, and no need for arrogant, loud, strenuous self-assertion against the enemy.

RAJ READING: God is very quiet, for there is no conflict in Him. Conflict is the root of all evil, for being blind it does not see whom it attacks.

PAUL: Just a moment. This is me, Paul. There's a word that's escaping me. Just a moment.

RAJ: Another way of saying this is that confusion, the absence of order, dis- or non-integrated conscious awareness is the root of all evil.

RAJ READING: ...for being blind...

RAJ: Having no cohesiveness to it.

RAJ READING: ...it does not see whom it attacks.

RAJ: I will tell you that it doesn't even know that it's attacking. And yet, because everything that comes forth from it is defense, it does constitute a lack of recognition of the benign-ness of that which it is afraid of.

RAJ READING: ...it does not see whom it attacks. Yet it ALWAYS attacks...

RAJ: The only thing that's there.

RAJ READING: ...the Son of God, and the Son of God is YOU.

RAJ: God is Singular, therefore Mind is Singular, therefore Conscious Awareness is Singular—not confused, not polarized, not disintegrated. This, therefore, is What You Are. And it is the Nature of your Being. And this is what it is your Birthright to be experiencing. And this is what you need to be curious to experience and let in.

Your reliance upon your memory always attacks you by distracting you from a truly Conscious Awareness of What Is Going On and engaging you in defending yourself against it. You go through your day in states of defense, but the only thing truly confronting you is Reality, with a capital “R”—the Kingdom of Heaven, the Infinite Presence of God called Creation.

RAJ READING: God’s Son is indeed in need of comfort, for he knows not what he does, believing his will is not his own. The Kingdom is his, and yet he wanders homelessly. At home in God...

RAJ: In other words, at the Point of Perfection—where you are.

RAJ READING: At home in God he is lonely, and amid all his brothers he is friendless.

RAJ: But [small laugh] is it any surprise? You are at Home amongst your Brothers—the Divine Ones that are God In Expression—and you don’t see it. Why? Because [small laugh] you know who that bastard really is, don’t you? And you know what a sleaze she is. And you know how undependable he is. And your definition rules supreme. You see?

Now, let me ask you something. If, based on your definition, you have treated these people according to those definitions, do you think they’re going to be happy? And when they express unhappiness at the way you are perceiving them, distressed at the way you’re seeing them, you’re going to say, “See, I told you so. She doesn’t have her peace. And, boy, when she loses her temper, loses her cool, she’s lost all ability to speak intelligently or rationally. She has provided me confirmation of my definition of her.” You see? You have promoted it, and then you blame your Brother for a natural response of distress at your not seeing them for Who They Are.

RAJ READING: At home in God he...

RAJ: God’s Son or Daughter.

RAJ READING: ...is lonely, and amid all his brothers he is friendless.

RAJ: [laugh] “I can’t let him be my friend. I can’t dare to get close to him. Never can tell what’ll happen.”

So you've said, "I won't be his friend." You see? "I won't see anything worthwhile in him. Even if he's not behaving badly, human nature isn't dependable, so therefore I still won't get close to him."

And you say, "I will not be a friend to him." You make that decision, and then you tuck it away, asserting in your mind that it's simple common sense and not a decision you have consciously made to exclude him, whether right or wrong.

And then you will say [in a weepy voice], "I don't have any friends. I am friendless."

Now back to a little Sanity.

RAJ READING: Would God LET this be real if He did not will to be alone Himself?

RAJ: Well, the answer is, "No." If He willed to be alone Himself, then he would let this be Real. You see?

RAJ READING: Would God LET this be real if He did not will to be alone Himself? And if your will is His, it cannot be true of you BECAUSE it is not true of Him.

RAJ: God is All-inclusive. And the keyword is "inclusive." All is God. And exclusiveness is an impossible concept in that which is Singularly Infinite.

RAJ READING: Oh, my children, if you knew what God wills for you your joy would be complete!

RAJ: Now, this doesn't mean, "Oh, my sweet dears, if you but knew, you poor things, what God Wills for you, your Joy would be complete." It's not a putdown.

RAJ READING: ...if you knew what God wills for you your joy would be complete!

RAJ: So, bring a little curiosity into play to see the more of What God Wills For You right here and right now, because right here and right now in what you are so sure is nothing more than a human condition, is the Kingdom of Heaven and you, the Christ—the Christ Presence that is God Presencing Himself right there as the Fullness of You. Bring a little curiosity into play, desiring to have a fuller experience of that fact. And then expect to have a shift of perception and a shift of behavior—a spontaneous impetus to disregard memory and conditioned responses.

Because the freedom to be present with What Is Real, knowing that It Is Real, allows you to be involved in what I'm going to call "an interplay of Real Things”—a spontaneous, unguarded ability to dance with Infinity—all of It—at once.

But you're very afraid to let too many things go on because you won't be able to keep control of everything to make sure that you're safe. And so you keep yourself locked up in tininess because you don't know What You Are. You are the capacity to dance with the Infinite, to be in constant interplay with all of It, without a need for control to make sure you're safe.

RAJ READING: Oh, my children, if you knew what God wills for you your joy would be complete!

RAJ: So desire to know What God's Will For You is so that your Joy may be complete.

RAJ READING: And...

RAJ: Look at this.

RAJ READING: ...what He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...wills HAS happened, for it was ALWAYS true.

Again, you're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it.

Is this getting boring and monotonous? It's so simple. And the more often you hear it, the more often you're reminded of it, the more you will be inclined to be in the moment minus the conditioned responses, minus memory, minus definitions you made-up in the past when you thought you were an orphan, so that you are present with the Light on in your mind that lets you see the Light on in the human condition that reveals to you that it's really the Kingdom of Heaven in all Its Glory.

I'm going to change the words here, so it sounds less condescending.

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: Oh, my brothers, if you know what God Wills for you, your Joy will be complete!

RAJ: So, give your attention there. Give your curiosity there.

RAJ READING: And what He wills HAS happened,...

RAJ: It's not off in the future for you. It's already happened. It's already the fact. It's something you cannot actually escape, even though you can ignore it conscientiously.

RAJ READING: ...for it was ALWAYS true.

When the light comes...

RAJ: And we are talking from, about moving from, darkness to Light—darkness meaning the unconsciousness of conditioned responses and made-up definitions of yourself—moving from that into the unguarded, unpretentious willingness to stand fluidly and flexibly in the middle of the Movement of Life, not resisting any of It and not trying to be in charge of any of It so that What Is Really Going On might register with you, cause a sudden shift of perception, an “Aha!” that lets you recognize the Divinity, the Innate Worth and Value of each and every thing, so that you can respond to It on the basis of What It Really Is, at the same time being aware that you—what is responding to What It Really Is, is in his or her Right Mind.

RAJ READING: When the light comes and you have said, “God’s Will is mine,”...

RAJ: Instead of claiming my will is mine. Unjoined me has a will of my own that is mine.

RAJ READING: ...you will see such beauty that you will KNOW it is not of you.

RAJ: Meaning the orphan.

RAJ READING: Out of your joy you will create beauty in His Name,...

RAJ: Does that mean you’re going to be a walking advertisement for God? Is that what it means, that you’re going to “create beauty in His Name”? No, it means that your going to create Beauty [whispering] without leaving Him out of it—[normal voice] without leaving God out of it by choosing to be the sole authorizer of it. You see?

RAJ READING: Out of your joy you will create beauty in His Name,...

RAJ: It’s natural for you to know that the Beauty you express is Divine. Is it Divine because of some private Divine Authority you have? No. It’s Divine because you are the Presence of God in action.

You have a Father. You have a Relationship. You’re not alone. You have a Source. And so you will create Beauty without leaving your Source out of it.

RAJ READING: ...for YOUR joy could no more be contained than His. The bleak little world will vanish into nothingness,...

RAJ: [small laugh] In other words, the world you made-up in place of What It Really Was, the definitions of it that you made-up, will vanish into nothingness.

RAJ READING: ...and your heart will be so filled with joy that it will leap into Heaven and into the Presence of God.

RAJ: In other words, you will spontaneously embrace all without requiring any of it to be the end result of some decision or definition you have privately made. You will let yourself and everything else be the Presence of God. You will be willing to find God in everything. You will be willing to find Good in everything.

And if you have trouble with the meaning of the word "God," because you cannot fathom what God would be, or what God would look like, remember the word "Good."

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: Your heart will be so filled with joy that it will leap into Heaven and into the Presence of Good.

RAJ: And it will not harbor a right to define anything as bad, and then cope with it.

To see the Presence of Good and to be the Presence of Good will be the whole ball of wax for you. It will be the alpha and the omega. And you will devote yourself to it wholly, because that's where the suffering ends, and that's where the Joy is felt.

RAJ READING: I cannot tell you what this will be like, for your hearts are not ready. Yet I CAN tell you, and remind you often, that what God wills for Himself He wills for YOU, and what He wills for you IS yours.

RAJ: Already!

And it cannot be taken away from you, and it has not been taken from you.

You ignore it by giving preference to your lesser definitions, your more limited definitions and concepts, and your attempt to have conditioned responses that clearly identify you-as-you-and-not-anyone-else behaviors that are peculiarly different from the behaviors that are peculiarly embodied in your Brother. You see?

You see, when we're talking about healing, when we're talking about illumination and transformation, we're talking about not only having your mind transformed by virtue of sudden shifts of perception, but we're also talking about your letting your behavior arise from a new place—of your behavior not arising from your conditioned responses, but arising out of the Clarity of the Truth that you're now knowing because you cared enough to inquire about What The Truth Is of a thing. And you're willing to have innocent, intimate moments with it, with a thing, so that you might experience the more of What Is There than what your current, limited concepts allow you to see.

You know, it's very easy when you move along in your life and you have a major "Aha!"—an epiphany—and nothing is the same after that, and you say to yourself, "Wow, I must have really been doing something right to have arrived at that experience of an epiphany. Therefore, there's nothing about the way I have been being prior to it that I need to call into question." No. It wasn't everything you knew before that led you, because of its great correctness, to a point of an epiphany. I will tell you, an epiphany happens because there was a weakness in your commitment to your behavior before the epiphany happened, or you arrived at a point where the way things were, because of the way you were behaving and thinking, got absolutely untenable for you, and you had a moment of openness to something better.

So just because you find yourself experiencing a transformed awareness of What Everything Is, well, it doesn't mean that everything about the way you saw yourself before can be left as it is without being challenged. You must be alert. You must care enough to watch for the spontaneous habit to re-establish old conditioned thinking.

You don't want to re-establish old conditioned thinking. You want to establish your capacity to stand innocently in the moment you're in, innocently paying attention to what is going on around you so that you may see it as you have never seen it before. Why? So that you can behave in a way you've never behaved before.

I love you all. And I love your willingness, even if you think you're not doing too well. And I love you for your capacity to hear what I am Meaning, which you are, even though your rational mind says, "I can't quite wrap my mind around it." That's the orphan talking. And you're not the orphans—not any of you.

I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

You know, always at the end of a get-together, I share with you that I love you. I'm going to begin today by saying I love you.

You get caught up in your everyday activities, and you forget that you are loved by a Love that sees you as You Truly Are, that recognizes What You Really Are, in spite of whatever definition of yourself you're employing at any given moment. And this Love that you are loved by is Divine, loving that, I'm going to say, in you which is Divine. But it isn't that there is somewhere within you some little thing that is Divine that's being loved. This Divine Love loves you in your Totality which is Divine right now, no matter how convinced you are otherwise.

This Love is transformational, which means to whatever degree you're willing to let it in, you're on the threshold of transformation, of healing, of redemption, of coming back into your Right Mind and seeing yourself and everything As It Truly Is. In other words, you could say, there is always present, with its attention fully on you, an active capital "A" Agent for Change. It isn't just passively loving you. It isn't just embracing you in a warm pink glow that can allow you to feel comfortable and at peace in spite of the circumstances you're in the middle of. It's a Love which embraces you actively in a way that I can only describe as a persistent nudge to get your attention, to prompt a sudden shift of perception, a miracle, to uncover to you perfection of all sorts, including physical perfection that you hadn't been experiencing fully.

This Divine Love has only your best interest at heart, and it therefore stands ever ready and ever actively encouraging the transformation of your mind and your experience for the better. And it never employs elements unlike Itself to try and get your attention. In other words, it never creates adverse conditions in order to get your attention.

Love is a Singularity in which there is nothing unlike Itself. Now this Love that is loving you is the Father. But that in you which is nothing more than your Right Mind, called the Holy Spirit, is the Presence of that Love as you truly loving you in your present sense of yourself with the same intent—to nudge you into [finger snap] an “Aha!”—a light bulb going on, a clarification that undoes a definition or a belief that you have employed that has kept you in the dark, kept you from experiencing your Birthright, kept you from seeing everything around you as the Kingdom of Heaven.

It's one thing to know that God, Divine Universal Love, loves you actively and Its Love is transformational in effect. It's another thing to know that there is something that you can recognize as even closer to home—[small laugh] closer to you, in other words—and that is your Real Self—the Presence of God as God Is Expressing Himself right where you are as what you call you. And this Something Else, that is right there where you are, is in fact You—unadulterated You—unbiased, untorqued You. Your Sane Self, which has gone nowhere and has been ever-present with you even though you have been ignoring it, is loving you with the intent to motivate a sudden shift of perception wherever it has the opportunity. Everything about you, divinely speaking, is on your side, with the intent to reintegrate your mind so that you might experience your undivided Wholeness, your unfragmented Wholeness.

Your very Being loves you. What does that mean? It means that your Being loves the you, you think you are at the moment—the tiny, more limited being that you think you are and that you insist on being because you think there is no other alternative. And so, your Being loves you so that you might be illuminated, so that you might experience illumination that causes the separation between your Being and your present sense of yourself to diminish, whereby you abandon your present sense of yourself and any sense of yourself for That Which You Really Are and always have been. Which means, you could say, a reuniting with your capital “B” Being—integration occurring whereby you no longer feel loved by your Essential Being, but you as the Essential Being That You Are, are now engaged in extending the Love That You Are because that's your Function—where there's Unity and Harmony—the absence of fragmentation, the absence of conflict.

I want you to understand how completely you are enveloped by transformational Love. And you know what? I want you to be aware, to be conscious of the idea at least, even if you're not having the experience, that everyone you know is likewise so loved, no matter how they are seeing themselves, and no matter how you might be seeing them. You don't have to believe their sense of being unloved. You don't have to believe their confidence that things can't get better. You don't have to believe their confidence that they're right when they're wrong. And you don't have to believe that anything—any situation, any circumstance—is hopeless.

The question is, at the bottom line, “How are you going to use your mind?” Are you going to use it to confirm your current beliefs and definitions? Are you going to use it to confirm your Brother’s beliefs and definitions? Or are you going to use it to be curious and inquire of the Love that loves you, inquire of the Holy Spirit or God, “What is the Truth here that You find so utterly Lovable? What is the Reality here of me and my Brothers and my world that You find so utterly Lovable? I want a taste of that.” When that becomes your prayer, you’re turning toward the Light; you’re turning toward the Illumination that uncovers What Is Real about you and your world and your Brother.

But when you turn toward and give your attention to your dearly-developed definitions and concepts, and rely upon them, or when you turn to your Brother to find out from your Brother what his definitions and beloved concepts are, you are turning your back on the Source of Illumination. And as a matter of experience, you all know that the more [you are] enmeshed in self-awareness—tiny, personal self-awareness—and your private, personal rights to be a creator, to be an authorizer, you become more and more uncomfortable. The height or depth of selfishness is always an experience of suffering. It is the opposite of an Experience of Illumination.

So when we’re talking about, “From Darkness to Light,” we’re talking about shifting from your orphanhood, shifting from your privacy, shifting from a tiny creature capable of authorizing things, to a State of Joining, of reaching out—of letting there be something else on your mind beside your definition of yourself, your definitions of everything else, and your great commitment to them, which constitutes a state of profound loneliness that is the exact opposite of the Nature of your Being, which is All-inclusive.

The more you burrow down into a sense of tininess, the darker your experience becomes, the darker your mind becomes. Your mind becomes filled with calls for justice. Your mind becomes involved in seeing injustices. Your mind becomes involved with noticing all the awful things that are going on. And then, in this funny, little arrogance of this private state of mind, you say, “Oh, I want to bring the light to all of this awful darkness, to all of the awfulness that is going on.” You see? “Because if I can do that, I will make me great.” And you do this, all of you do this, in one way or another, because you believe that the awfulness itself is real and the you that is seeing it is real, not realizing that the awfulness of it is a result of your adamant choice to be private—unjoined with this Infinite Love that is loving you. You see?

“Oh, I would rather express my own magnanimous love in the presence of the awfulness of the world and heal it.” You see? “No thank You, Father. I don’t need to plug into the circuit of Infinite Divine Love That You Are. I’ve got what it takes and I'm gonna prove it." You see? Which is nothing but a further confirmation, or attempt to confirm, that you can actually exist separate from God, separate from your Source.

The way out of darkness is not you overcoming the darkness you see in the world and in your experience. It's a matter of you turning around, turning your back on privacy, and beginning to embrace, first of all, the Holy Spirit, and asking for the Holy Spirit's Perspective—the Perspective of that which is nothing more than your Right Mind—which is a way of asking for God's Perspective, because it is God's Perspective that your Right Mind holds in trust for you until you're willing to turn around and embrace again, extend your attention to something more than just you and what you want and what you believe, and what you are convinced is true that you must convince everyone else is true so that you might get group consensus and achieve a position, thereby, of some substance or some reality.

So the way out of darkness into Light is the way out of privacy into embrace—embrace that invites in the fuller experience of Reality that it is yours to be experiencing. And every single moment of every day provides you with the opportunity to see the more of What Is Really There than what you're seeing.

How many of you let new things happen this week? How many of you allowed your week to proceed outside of the box you normally live in? How many of you let new behavior happen? How many of you let things happen that went beyond your traditional conditioned responses to your life? How many of you let new behavior happen? This is a way of expressing curiosity in your world. This is a way of breaking down your defenses against the more That Is There than what you're experiencing. It's not just all ethereal, mental stuff.

Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: The way is not hard,...

RAJ: And I will say, the way of redemption is not hard.

RAJ READING: ...but it IS very different. Yours is the way of pain, of which God knows nothing. THAT way is hard indeed, and very lonely. Fear and grief are your guests, and they go with you and abide with you on the way. But the dark journey is not the way of God's Son.

RAJ: That means it is not the way that's inherent in you.

It doesn't mean it is not the way of Jesus, God's Son—some other Christ. You see? The dark journey is not the way of you—of God's Son or Daughter—you. That's not your Birthright.

RAJ READING: Walk in light and do not see the dark companions, for they are not fit companions for the Son of God, who was created OF Light and IN Light.

RAJ: You see? And the Light that you have never stepped out of.

Who are the dark companions? Fear and grief, but also jealousy and self-righteousness and self-protection and anger—all of which present themselves to you as thoughts which occupy your mind, and which you ruminate about and get pleasure from. “Oh, tell me, doesn’t the call for justice feel good when it arises?” You comfort yourself with dark companions, as strange as it might sound. You use these dark companions to make you feel justified, to make you feel good.

But, it says here:

RAJ READING: Walk in light...

RAJ: Make another choice.

RAJ READING: ...and do not see the dark companions, for they are not fit companions for the Son of God...

RAJ: Do not see the dark companions.

You are an executive with an office downtown. And you have appointments scheduled for the next day, and you look down and you see, “Oh, I see a couple of dark companions here that are scheduled. Mmm. I’m not going to see them tomorrow.”

RAJ READING: ...do not see the dark companions...

RAJ: You see, it isn’t just don’t stop seeing them with your eyes. It means stop letting them in. Stop letting them have appointments. Stop giving them audience. Cancel their appointments. Do not see them. Refuse to see them anymore.

RAJ READING: Walk in light and do not see the dark companions, for they are not fit companions for the Son of God, who was created OF Light and IN Light. The Great Light...

RAJ: Well.

RAJ READING: ...Great Light...

RAJ: Capital “G”, capital “L”. Whew.

RAJ READING: ...Great Light...

RAJ: You know what “the Great Light” is? The Great Light is Living Love. Love is illumination. Love is illuminated. Love is Light, as well as affection and compassion, and an inordinate appreciation of Everything That’s Real—an appreciation that is extended and embraces everything unequivocally, without reservation, and blesses everything it falls upon.

RAJ READING: The Great Light always surrounds you and shines out FROM you.

RAJ: It’s happening at this instant. And the Radiance of It I can see. The Radiance of It every Awakened Brother can see.

It’s shining at this moment and it is illuminating the room—the space that you are in. And I’ll tell you also that the walls of the room and the floors of the rooms are all emanating Light as well, illuminating you, just as the Light of you is illuminating them. It’s a Relationship of Light.

RAJ READING: The Great Light always surrounds you and shines out FROM you. How can you see the dark companions in a Light such as this? If you see THEM it is only because you are DENYING the Light.

RAJ: It only means that you’ve turned your back from What Is Actually True in order to give preference to definitions you’ve made-up, because the making up of definitions, and the securing of them, is the way you think you’re going to achieve autonomous reality.

RAJ READING: If you see THEM...

RAJ: The dark companions.

RAJ READING: ...it is only because you are DENYING the Light. But deny THEM instead...

RAJ: Cancel their appointments.

RAJ READING: ...deny THEM instead, for the Light is here and the way is clear.

RAJ: Meaning unobstructed.

What’s being described here is the Reality that you are in at this very moment. And it’s the experience to be curious to have. And it’s an experience to be curious to have ongoingly.

You must practice ongoing curiosity. You must be willing not to lapse from being curious. “Oh, well that sounds like a lot of work.” Well, it might, and it might take some conscientious effort on your part, but if it’s the means of undoing illusion, it’s worth doing. You must do it more persistently. Because your habit of relying upon your definitions and the meanings you're giving everything, and then ruminating over the way things aren't working out and exactly why they're not working out, instead of doing that, you need to conscientiously do something else—the opposite of it. You must break the habit by actually, conscientiously, doing something else.

So, no matter what you're confronted with tomorrow, this evening, let there be an ever-present curiosity to see God there, to see the more of What God Is Being, instead of relying upon your best definitions and judgments, and mulling them over and over and over and over in your mind, preoccupying yourself, by your devotion to them, from having the slightest chance of an "Aha!" occurring.

RAJ READING: God hides nothing from His Son, even though His Son would hide himself.

RAJ: In other words, hide Who He Really Is, in favor of being the orphan who successfully proves that one doesn't have to have a Father or a Mother in order to exist and be real.

RAJ READING: Yet the Son of God...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...cannot hide his glory,...

RAJ: Cannot hide your glory.

RAJ READING: ...for God wills him...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...to be glorious, and gave him...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...the Light that shines in him.

RAJ: In you.

You see, you're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom. And you will not understand yourself therefrom... you will not understand yourself therefrom if you don't persist in letting your Ultimacy be your vantage point in the present. You will never escape your current habit of seeing less there where you are than is there.

RAJ READING: You will never lose your way for God leads you. When you wander you but undertake a journey which is not real. The dark companions, the dark way, are all illusions. Turn toward the Light, for the little spark in you is part of a...

RAJ: Capital "L".

RAJ READING: ...Light so great that It can sweep you out of all darkness forever.

RAJ: And as I said in the beginning, Its Intent is to sweep you out of darkness. It is constantly nudging you, it is constantly pressuring you, causing you not to be totally at peace in your commitment to your definitions that aren't real, so that you might be reminded, and we might say, unconsciously, that there is another way to look at things, so that you might employ enough curiosity to abandon your bondage.

RAJ READING: Turn toward the Light, for the little spark in you is part of a Light...

RAJ: Part of a Love.

RAJ READING: ...so great that It can sweep you out of all darkness forever. For your Father IS your Creator, and you ARE like Him.

RAJ: You see? There we brought everything back to the Truth. You have a Father and you are a Son.

And your healing, your Awakening, depends upon your willingness to embrace that fact and let yourself be a Son, who is the Son because you are acknowledging your Father, and not claiming orphanhood and not claiming a right to see things a little bit differently from God.

RAJ READING: The Children of Light cannot abide in darkness, for darkness is not in them.

RAJ: Well, you know what that means? It means you aren't abiding in darkness. You aren't abiding in quote "the human condition" unquote. You are right now abiding in Light, but you're imagining otherwise. And you're believing your imagination. You're abiding in your imagination. And you're constantly trying to confirm that your imagination is true.

RAJ READING: The Children of Light...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...cannot abide in darkness, for darkness is not in them. Do not be deceived by the dark comforters,...

RAJ: You know, the call for justice and self-righteousness.

RAJ READING: Do not be deceived by the dark comforters, and never let them enter the mind of God's Son,...

RAJ: Cancel their appointments.

RAJ READING: ...for they have no place in His temple.

RAJ: They have no place in your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: When you are tempted to deny Him,...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...remember that there ARE no other gods that you can place before Him,...

RAJ: Like I've said before, there simply aren't any black-market gods you can go out and get and put before God.

RAJ READING: When you are tempted to deny Him, remember that there ARE no other gods that you can place before Him, and accept His Will for you in peace.

RAJ: Give up the struggle to do something impossible. In other words, to try to attempt to find Peace when you're denying your very own Birthright. When you're denying What You Are, it is impossible to find or secure Peace in that conscious intent.

RAJ READING: When you are tempted to deny Him, remember that there ARE no other gods that you can place before Him, and accept His Will for you in peace.

RAJ: Without any further struggle.

RAJ READING: For you CANNOT accept it otherwise.

Only God's Comforter CAN comfort you. In the quiet of His temple, He waits to give you the peace that is yours.

RAJ: This Comforter, as it says in the Bible, is the Holy Spirit. And what is the Holy Spirit? Nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: Only God's Comforter...

RAJ: Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...CAN comfort you. In the quiet of His temple,...

RAJ: The Comforter's Temple. The Place of Excellence in you where the Altar in you is.

RAJ READING: ...He waits...

RAJ: Your Self waits.

RAJ READING: ...to give you the peace that is yours.

RAJ: It is yours, but you have to come to a point where you're willing to abandon the addiction to conflict and the overcoming of it.

RAJ READING: GIVE His peace that you may enter the temple and find it waiting for you.

RAJ: Well, the best way you can give His Peace, the Comforter's Peace, is to stop thinking. And one of the best means of abandoning thinking is a practice of meditation.

RAJ READING: ...He waits to give you the peace that is yours. GIVE His peace that you may enter the temple and find it waiting for you. But be holy in the Presence of God,...

RAJ: In other words, shut up and be still and stop being in charge. Stop asserting yourself. Stop being an assertive presence that gains a sense of itself out of the loudness of its assertions.

RAJ READING: ...be holy in the Presence of God,...

RAJ: Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...or you will not know that you are there. For what is unlike God cannot enter His Mind because it was not His Thought, and therefore does not belong to Him. And YOUR minds must be as pure as His, if you would know what belongs to YOU.

RAJ: Oh, that might sound like too big a challenge. How can your mind be as pure as His? Well, the moment there is silence in your mind, your mind is perfectly pure. The only impurities present in your mind are your own made-up ideas, your own self-created thoughts, and the thinking you engage in about them. So you don't have to purify your thoughts so that you're having pure thoughts all the time. The moment there is silence in your mind, your mind is pure.

This is important.

RAJ READING: Guard carefully His temple, for He Himself dwells there, and abides in peace.

RAJ: Where is this Temple? Well, it's where the Altar is, isn't it? Where is the Altar? In you. What is the Altar? The place where the Voice for Truth awaits you—the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind. Go into that place where What You Divinely Are awaits you. And go to It without carrying with you the baggage and garbage of all your attempts to be something of yourself. Go there in silence, just simple silence, coupled with attentiveness, which is another word for curiosity.

RAJ READING: You cannot enter God's Presence with the dark companions beside you, but you also cannot enter alone.

ALL your brothers must enter WITH you, for until you have accepted them YOU cannot enter.

RAJ: Well, here's a simple way to make sense out of this. As with Paul, go into the Altar for some reason outside yourself. Go in on your Brother's behalf. Go in because your Brothers have questions. Go in because your Brothers have needs. Go in because your Brothers seem to be suffering, and you don't want them to suffer. Go in because you want to know What The Truth Is so that you will stop joining with your Brothers in confirming their dilemmas. Care enough about your Brothers that you take them with you into the Presence of the Altar, so that you take them with you into the Presence of what is nothing more than your Right Mind. Let your reason for going there not be self-seeking.

RAJ READING: ALL your brothers must enter WITH you, for until you have accepted them YOU cannot enter.

RAJ: In other words, you cannot approach your Right Mind for selfish reasons, for private reasons.

RAJ READING: ...until you have accepted them YOU cannot enter. For you cannot understand Wholeness unless YOU are whole, and no part of the Son can be excluded if he would know the Wholeness of his Father.

RAJ: You see? Your reason for wanting to know the Truth is so that All of Creation can be embraced in your illuminated vision, so that you might have the opportunity to bless everything with your willingness to acknowledge God there. You can't do it to find the capacity to acknowledge God in you and you alone, so that you might be able to know the winning lottery numbers, and get the house of your dreams, and not be dependent on anybody else, and not be a burden on society, and all of the good reasons you can think of for being independently successful.

RAJ READING: In your mind you can accept the whole Sonship, and bless it with the Light your Father gave it. Then you will be worthy to dwell in the temple...

RAJ: To not just go there, but to stay there.

RAJ READING: ...WITH Him because...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...it is YOUR will not to be alone.

RAJ: That is the crux of your whole dilemma. And waking up is the abandonment of the devotion to being alone. To be privately successful, to be privately on your own real, that is your devotion.

RAJ READING: God blessed His Son forever.

RAJ: Because God is a Singularity and there is nothing unlike God in a Singularity, because the Omnipresence of God is Pure, Whatever God Is, is forever, because there's nothing to interrupt It. It is Eternal and Infinite simultaneously.

RAJ READING: If you will bless him in time, you will BE in eternity.

RAJ: You see? I keep saying the only thing confronting you is the Kingdom of Heaven. And therefore, rather than waiting until after you die, or after you have perfected your soul, to look for the experience of Reality, you need to do it right here, right now, because right here and right now is where you are experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven through a glass darkly.

It says here:

RAJ READING: If you will bless him in time, you will BE in eternity.

RAJ: If you will look for God in the world, you will be in the Kingdom of Heaven. Your vision will be transformed so that the Kingdom of Heaven, that is the only thing in your face, might suddenly be seen right where your limited and unreal definitions have stood in the way of your direct perception, your direct experience of Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven.

RAJ READING: If you will bless him...

RAJ: God's Son.

RAJ READING: ...in time,...

RAJ: In other words, right here, right now, with whatever definitions your Brother is employing about himself.

RAJ READING: ...you will BE in eternity.

RAJ: A shift will occur, right here, right now.

RAJ READING: Time cannot separate you from God if you use it on BEHALF of the eternal.

RAJ: You all used the world and its resources to gain position and money and security and authority and domination, without any sense of What The World Really Is and that your Real Function, relative to it, is not the exploitation of it, but of using it as your opportunity to acknowledge God in every aspect of it and glorify God, rather than using it to try to glorify yourself, which will always constitute depletion—depletion of you—the minimizing of you into a nothing, an orphan, that can't actually accomplish anything at all—and the Kingdom of Heaven as the world and universe governed by material laws developing according to physical...

PAUL: [pause] Just a moment. [pause]

RAJ: ...physical laws of development that arise out of fundamental conflict, and engage laws such as the survival of the fittest, which is nothing more than competition.

RAJ READING: Time cannot separate you from God if you use it on BEHALF of the eternal.

RAJ: Use your mind on behalf of the Eternal by being curious to see What's Really Going On, instead of using it for your own selfish purposes. Use your vision to find and acknowledge God, instead of using it as a means of determining whether you're safe, and if you aren't safe, to best determine what the best defense will be. Start using your eyes to find God. Start using your ears to hear the Truth so that you might express and embody Truth, instead of all of your pre-determined, pre-recorded habits that keep you from being Truly Conscious of What Is Going On as you employ them for self-defense, instead of making the Gift and extending the Light, the Love, with a capital "L", That You Are.

From darkness to Light is what we're talking about. From selfishness to embrace is what we're talking about. From privacy to inclusion is what we're talking about.

I hope that your week is full of out-of-the-box experiences that you didn't plan, but you gave permission to happen.

And again, I will tell you, I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

We'll go right into the book tonight. The section heading is:

RAJ READING: The Inheritance of God's Son

Never forget that the Sonship is your salvation for the Sonship is your Soul.

RAJ: Interesting thought.

RAJ READING: ...the Sonship is your salvation...

RAJ: It's your salvation because it's the means by which you actively and conscientiously abandon your self-imposed isolation. The only way you can break your isolation is by joining with something, and all you have to join with is the Sonship (the Brotherhood) and Creation. When you join with your Brothers and Creation, you are joining with God. That's all there is there for you to join with. And that's all there is there for you to isolate yourself from. And so the Sonship is your salvation because they are what is there for you to join with.

You say, "Well, God is there for me to join with." [laughing] Ah, yes, but the ego has a twisted sense of justice and a twisted sense of how things work. And it would suggest that all you have to do is join with God and to heck with your Brothers and Sisters. Let them join with God on their own. But it cannot work that way because God is the Movement of Creation, God is the Movement of Life—and Life is constituted of the Brotherhood of All That God Has Expressed of Himself and Embodied of Himself in everything.

"Well, can't I just, can't I approach this from the standpoint of nature, and go out and find a nice cave to be in, and meditate on the trees and on nature and become one with it?" No. That isn't sufficient, because at some point you have to reestablish your Self as part of the Brotherhood.

The moment you say, "Father, I'm willing to acknowledge You as my Source. I'm willing to acknowledge You as my Father," and you have the resulting experience of knowing that you're His Son and not an independent, autonomous agent, you also have put yourself in the position of recognizing that if you are God's Son, if you are God's Daughter, so are all of the other individuals you know, and therefore they are—and Paul cannot stand this word—they are siblings. You are their Brother; they are your Brothers and Sisters. They are your Family. So if you're going to accept God and realize your Sonship, you're going to have to accept the fact that everyone else you know is also part of the Sonship and is therefore your Brother or Sister—Family.

And you've got to embrace them. Why wouldn't you? Well, it isn't your habit to embrace them. You have defined them as different things. "They can't be... my salvation can't lie in them! They are my competitors," or, "They are my enemies," or, [laughing] "They go to a different church than I do." You see? "They are different from me. I am different from them. I'm different from them in a very special way" [small laugh]—and that act of separation, that act of rejection of them as not just like you. But, that they are part of the Infinitude of your Being, that they are essential to you in order for What You Divinely Are to be complete, you're going to have to embrace them, not just tolerate them. You're going to have to embrace them. You're going to have to abandon the labels you've given to them—the labels that you've given to them in order to set yourself up as something specially different from them.

You're going to have to take them into the status of Sonship that you are letting yourself back into. And you are going to have to come to the realization that since you have the same Father, the same Father/Mother/God as your Source, they are just like you, and they're inseparable from you in the fullest meaning of the word "Family." And you will have to take them Home with you. You will have to bring them along with you in your increasingly clear experience of yourself as the Christ, the direct Expression of God, right now.

And what you're willing to give away, you get to keep. If you can't keep something that you haven't given away, that means there has to be someone to give it away to. And whoever it is that you can give it away to will be your salvation. It's just the way it works. And that's why the Sonship is your salvation—because they are there as the agent, you might say, for your experiencing the full meaning of the fact that you're not an orphan, that you have a Father. They are the means for your breaking the isolation.

It's not enough to just let God in, as though God were one thing amongst all of the Brotherhood. All of the Brotherhood is God In Motion, including you.

RAJ READING: Never forget that the Sonship is your salvation for the Sonship is your Soul. As God's creation it is yours, and belonging to you, it is His.

RAJ: Meaning God's.

Nothing that God has created is different or separate or apart from you. It's part of the Wholeness of You.

RAJ READING: ...and belonging to you,...

RAJ: Coupled with your conscious realization that it belongs to you.

RAJ READING: ...it is His.

RAJ: God's.

Your realization that you are the Son of God, in so many words, makes God, God—confirms God, glorifies God, because it's no longer leaving God out of the equation.

RAJ READING: Your Soul does not need salvation, but your mind needs to learn what salvation IS. You are not saved FROM anything, but you are saved FOR glory.

RAJ: For all good things. For being the Presence that uninhibitedly glorifies God, because there's nothing in you denying God, nothing in you claiming a place of equality with God while separate from God.

RAJ READING: Glory is your inheritance, given your Soul by its Creator that you might EXTEND it.

RAJ: You see? That's why the Sonship is your salvation, because it is what is available to you to extend it to.

RAJ READING: Yet if you hate part of your own Soul...

RAJ: You know, your enemy, your competitor—your hateful, selfish this, that, or the other one in your life.

RAJ READING: Yet if you hate part of your own Soul ALL your understanding is lost, because you are looking on what God created as YOURSELF...

RAJ: Because every single one of your Brothers and Sisters is some part of the Infinitude of your Being.

RAJ READING: ...without love. And since what He created is part of Him, you are denying Him His place in His own altar.

RAJ: The competitor you see, the selfish child you see, the dominating mother-in-law you see, the unscrupulous father you see, is a thing you have determined in your own mind as those things, and which you hold in front of God, covering God up to you. And so you're denying the Presence of God there and giving adamant preference to your definition.

RAJ READING: And since what He created is part of Him, you are denying Him His place in His own altar.

Could you try to make God homeless and know that YOU are at home?

RAJ: You see? It all lies in how you are relating to your Brother.

You say, "Well, you know, I love A Course In Miracles. And I love to sit out on my patio and read it during the afternoon, or I love to sit in my bed in the morning before anybody is up and have my quiet time with the wonderful and beautiful and comforting Truths that I read. But then I have to become involved with somebody else, I have to relate to somebody else, and that's where all the trouble starts."

Yeah. That's because your Brother is your salvation, but you're using your Brother or your Sister for a purpose other than your salvation. You're using your Brother or your Sister to conform your own arrogant importance, your special differentness.

You're using your Brother to compete with. "He is my competitor." Well, if he is your competitor, you are his competitor. You're both in competition, and each one of you is out to best the other.

You're not treating your Brother, and your Brother is not treating you, as though your Function is to recognize God in each other, and in recognizing It and embracing It, glorifying God in each other. You each are denying God His Home right in the center of you, right as the center and circumference of What You Are. And so when you're denying God, you're denying your Sonship, your Sonhood. You are claiming to be an orphan. And so you deny God a Home, and you cannot experience being at Home yourself.

RAJ READING: Can the Son deny the Father WITHOUT believing that the Father has denied HIM?

RAJ: No.

RAJ READING: God's laws hold only for your protection, and they never hold in vain.

RAJ: In other words, they're always successful at protecting you.

RAJ READING: What you experience when you deny your Father is still for your protection,...

RAJ: You say, "Oh, when I deny the Father, [small laugh] I suffer. When I deny the Father, and I don't see Him in my world and I don't see Him in my Brother, but what I see is what I've decided they are, well, then I'm in a dog-eat-dog world. And I either have friendly competition, or I have strenuous competition that's called war where my competitors are my enemies." It's not a pleasant experience.

RAJ READING: What you experience when you deny your Father is still for your protection, for the power of your will cannot be lessened without the intervention of God AGAINST it...

RAJ: When you claim to be an orphan, then you are claiming to be less than What God Has Created You To Be. You are attempting to lessen What You Are. And...

RAJ READING: ...your will cannot be lessened without the intervention of God AGAINST it, and any limitation on your power is not the Will of God.

RAJ: Now, let's not jump to conclusions. This does not mean that God is a wrathful God. This does not mean that God is out to get you. It means simply, as I've described before, that when you are in the Movement of Being, when you are yielding to What Divine Life, Truth And Love Is Unfolding As Creation in your day, you experience no distress, no tension. You experience Harmony. You experience everything fitting together. You find everything that happens to be a blessing, not only for you, but for everyone else.

But, when you say, "But, Father, I'd rather do it my way," then it's as though there is a rubber band attached to your waist and the other end of it attached to the Movement of Being—attached to God, if you will—and when you say, "Father, I'd rather do it my way," and you attempt to not move with the Movement and dig your heels in, immediately what happens? The rubber band begins to get taut. And you have to exert a great deal of energy to hold your place, and to move to the right or the left instead of forward, or to stand still against the forward Movement. You see?

And this is what it means when it says:

RAJ READING: What you experience when you deny your Father is still for your protection, for the power of your will cannot be lessened without the intervention of God AGAINST it...

RAJ: Reality continues to be the Only Thing Going On, whether you're choosing to pay attention to it or not. And if you're choosing not to pay attention to it, then your experience of being becomes one of tension, stress, distress, discomfort, and all the rest—not because God has turned around and said a curse on you, but because Reality isn't going to stop being, just because you've decided not to go along with it. And so as it continues to be What It Perfectly Is, you experience distress until you finally say "Uncle" and yield to the Father and say, "Hey, Dad, wait up. I'm coming. I'm coming," and run forward to be with the Movement of your Being.

RAJ READING: Therefore, look ONLY to the power that God gave to save you, remembering that it is yours BECAUSE it is His, and join with your brothers in His peace.

RAJ: Is it beginning to sink in? You can't wake up alone. You can't wake up because you have an enlightened awareness of What You Are. Because until you give away what you're aware of, you won't be able to keep it. It doesn't become an endorsement on your part. It doesn't become yours as a full-fledged Conscious Experience.

And so your Brother is your salvation. And somewhere along the line, they have to become an object of your affection, where they are worth whatever energy you have to put forth to change your sorry perception of them for one that reflects the Truth About Them significantly enough for your behavior toward them to change.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The peace of your Soul lies in its limitlessness.

RAJ: You see? [small laugh] Limitlessness is the antithesis of privacy, isn't it, of littleness.

RAJ READING: Limit the peace you share,...

RAJ: You see? "I'll share it with you, but I won't share it with you, you dirty-dealing competitor!" You see?

RAJ READING: Limit the peace you share, and your own Soul MUST be unknown to you.

RAJ: Must be covered up to you.

RAJ READING: Every altar to God is part of your Soul because the Light He created is One with Him. Would you cut off a brother from the Light that is yours?

RAJ: Not if you knew that it was the Light that was yours.

You see, your Brother is your salvation because the Light that is in him—that you're denying at the moment while you're satisfied with your awful definition of him—the Light in him that is yours, won't be apparent to you as being yours until you honor it in him or her. Until you give it away, you will not have the experience of it being yours. Your Brother is your salvation.

RAJ READING: Would you cut off a brother from the Light that is yours? You would not do so if you realized that you can only darken your OWN mind. As you bring HIM back, so will YOUR mind return. That is the law of God, for the protection of the wholeness of His Son.

RAJ: You see, if you want to wake up, if you want to come back Home, you have to undo the act that caused you to seem to be separated. And the act was an act of independence. You had an independence day. And whatever you abandon your independence from, becomes your salvation. Because the act of undoing the separation, the act of abandoning independence, is what returns you to your Right Mind, is what returns you to your Sanity.

RAJ READING: ONLY YOU CAN DEPRIVE YOURSELF OF ANYTHING.

RAJ: What you don't realize is that the most effective way you have of depriving yourself of something is by depriving your Brother of something—by always putting him at a disadvantage, by always making him responsible or her responsible for the way your life is going. You take away something from your Brother, when what's called for is to give your Brother something, or your Sister.

And what is the one and only thing you can give that is Meaningful? It is the recognition and acknowledgement of God being right there where they are, and refusing to abandon that acknowledgement. That's called Love. Love is the willingness to recognize that Which Is Real in each and every thing.

RAJ READING: ONLY YOU CAN DEPRIVE YOURSELF OF ANYTHING. Do not oppose this realization, for it is truly the beginning of the dawn of light. Remember also that the denial of this simple fact takes many forms, and these you must learn to recognize, and to oppose steadfastly and WITHOUT EXCEPTION. This is a crucial step...

RAJ: And this should be underlined and not forgotten.

RAJ READING: This is a crucial step in the re-awakening. The beginning phases of this reversal are often quite painful, for as blame is withdrawn from without there is a strong tendency to harbor it within. It is difficult, at first, to realize that this is EXACTLY the same thing, for there IS no distinction between within and without.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "harbor within" because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as "harbor it within" as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: In other words, if you have been blaming everyone else for your woes and for the awful life you've been experiencing, and you realize that you are the only one that can limit yourself, then you can blame yourself and say, "I am responsible." Except that usually the ego says, "You are the one that's responsible, you stupid little thing. See how stupid you have been? You have ruined your whole life." And you're still listening to the voice for fear that at first said everyone else was responsible and which is now saying, "You are responsible. You have ruined your life." And that's even worse than the idea that you had that everyone else did—that everyone else was responsible. There is no difference because you haven't stepped outside of the ego's point of view. And it is the ego which is speaking in both cases.

RAJ READING: If your brothers are part of you and you blame THEM for your deprivation, you ARE blaming yourself.

RAJ: Because they are part of you.

RAJ READING: And you cannot blame yourself WITHOUT blaming them. That is why blame must be undone, NOT reallocated.

RAJ: Blame must be abandoned, in other words.

RAJ READING: Lay it to yourself and you cannot KNOW yourself, for ONLY the ego blames at all. Self-blame is therefore ego identification, and as strong an ego defense as blaming others.

RAJ: I've been telling you repeatedly, you are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom. And the same thing must be applied to your Brothers and Sisters as you look at them, because this is the only stance that you can take that steps out of the box, the frame of reference in which blame rules.

You have to abandon blame. And the only way to abandon blame is to step into an arena where it doesn't exist. No matter what you think you've done in your ignorance, it hasn't subverted God. It hasn't changed or altered God. It hasn't diminished God. And it hasn't changed, subverted, or diminished you. Whatever you have thought you have done in your ignorance, has accomplished nothing, and therefore there is no blame due. But, in order to escape the illusion of suffering that accompanies believing that you have accomplished something, you must... you must come to where I am and look at yourself with me. You must go where your Guide is and look at yourself with him or her.

You must step out of the arena, the box, in which guilt seems to be real and justified. And if you want to have a different experience of your Brother or Sister, you have to lift your Brother or Sister out of that box as well in your own mind, so that in your consideration of that one, you are reflecting back to that one the Truth that heals—the Father’s Point of View.

RAJ READING: YOU CANNOT ENTER GOD’S PRESENCE IF YOU ATTACK HIS SON.

RAJ: We’ve spoken of your insistence upon being an authorizer of definitions and meanings as an attack on God, but it’s also an attack on you. It’s also a denial of Who You Are. And in that state, you give definitions, apply definitions to your Brothers and Sisters and world, and that constitutes an attack on them.

RAJ READING: YOU CANNOT ENTER GOD’S PRESENCE IF YOU ATTACK HIS SON.

RAJ: This is why the Sonship is your salvation—because the Sonship is what has been attacked and you have to withdraw your attack on them. And in withdrawing your attack on the Sonship, you undo the attack. And the Sonship becomes the reason for your undoing the attack, so that your act of withdrawal of attack constitutes an Act of Love, an Act of Defenselessness, which allows the Sonship to register with you in Its True Light.

RAJ READING: When His Son...

RAJ: When God’s Son.

RAJ READING: ...lifts his voice in praise of his Creator,...

RAJ: By saying, “I see God there. I’m willing to see God there. I want to see God there.”

When God’s Son...

RAJ READING: ...lifts his voice in praise of his Creator, he WILL hear the Voice of his Father. Yet the Creator cannot be praised WITHOUT His Son,...

RAJ: You see? You can’t just join with God.

RAJ READING: Yet the Creator cannot be praised WITHOUT His Son, for their glory is shared, and they are glorified together.

RAJ: Why? Because they aren’t separate from each other. The Movement of God is the Movement of Creation that looks like all of you, all of Us, and the world and the Universe. If you glorify one part of it, you are glorifying the Whole of it, because there aren’t really parts. And your willingness to even see the Father in a part of the Universe, leads to a spontaneous recognition of the Truth of your Love everywhere. But you’ve got to get the first domino to fall before the others will fall after it. And you start with your Brother.

RAJ READING: Christ is at God's altar, waiting to welcome His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...Son.

RAJ: Your Guide waits. The Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, waits at the Altar in the center of your Being to welcome God's Son.

RAJ READING: But come wholly without condemnation,...

RAJ: Leave your definitions outside the door. Leave that which would determine that your Brother is something less than What God Is Being right there, which is a condemnation, at the door.

RAJ READING: ...for otherwise you will believe that the door is barred and you cannot enter.

RAJ: A very simple way of putting this is that if you wish to companion with or commune with the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, or with your Guide, you must manage to still your mind enough to abandon your preoccupation with your definitions, and your distresses, and your judgments, et cetera. Because if you try to bring them along with you, in effect you will not be in a state of mental peace or quiet, and you will not be able to hear the Holy Spirit or your Guide. Why? Not because They don't answer, but because you are bringing with you too much noise. Too much of your attention is preoccupied with something other than listening for the Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: Christ is at God's altar,...

RAJ: Waiting.

RAJ READING: ...waiting to welcome His Son. But come wholly without condemnation, for otherwise you will believe that the door is barred and you cannot enter. The door is NOT barred, and it is impossible for you to be unable to enter the place where God would have you be.

RAJ: That's just the simple fact. But if you have something you would rather be doing than coming in simplicity into the quietness of you where you can hear the Holy Spirit or your Guide, you will not hear anything, even though that's where God would have you be.

RAJ READING: But love yourself with the Love of Christ, for so does your Father love you. You can REFUSE to enter,...

RAJ: And I say "refuse" in the sense of choosing to do something other with your mind than giving your full attention to listening.

RAJ READING: You can REFUSE to enter, but you CANNOT bar the door which Christ holds open. Come unto me who holds it open FOR you,...

RAJ: Or come unto the Holy Spirit which holds it open for you.

RAJ READING: ...for while I live it cannot be shut, and I live forever. God is my life AND YOURS, and nothing is denied by God to His Son.

At God's altar...

RAJ: Right in the center of you.

RAJ READING: ...Christ waits for the restoration of Himself in YOU.

RAJ: I am God's Son and I wait for your realization that you are God's Son, to return to you. And I hold the door open for that realization to return to you. And that door cannot be closed, not just because I hold it open, but because the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, stands holding your Divinity in trust while you dally with an ego sense of things, and holds it for you, if need be, forever—because your Divine Self, which you are ignoring at the moment, is Eternal as well.

RAJ READING: God knows His Son...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...as wholly blameless as Himself, and He is approached through the appreciation of His Son.

RAJ: God is approached by your appreciation of your Brother. Not for what your Brother is doing, but for What Your Brother Truly Is, in spite of what he may be doing.

RAJ READING: Christ waits for your acceptance of Him as YOURSELF, and of His Wholeness as YOURS.

RAJ: You see? I am your salvation. The Sonship is your salvation. Because we wait for you to recognize us in yourself, because that's how you remember Who You Are, and that's how the Sonship becomes One again, in full Conscious Awareness of Itself, without having to wait for you to remember Who You Are while you insist upon playing at being who you aren't.

RAJ READING: For Christ is the Son of God who lives in his Creator and shines with His glory.

RAJ: You see? You've been trying to shine with glory of your own, thinking that that's all there was for you to do. But there's more for you to be, and you need to begin to take hold of it and be it more consciously.

RAJ READING: Christ...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...is the extension of the Love and the Loveliness of God, as perfect as his Creator, and at peace with Him.

RAJ: You see? You're at that Point—the Point of Perfection. And these words are describing you from that Point, which is the Reality of You at this moment.

RAJ READING: Blessed is the Son of God, whose radiance is of his Father,...

RAJ: And not at his own hand. Not of his own creation.

RAJ READING: Blessed is the Son of God, whose radiance is of his Father, and whose glory he wills to share as his Father shares it with him.

RAJ: And I will add: And by sharing, being able to keep it for yourself.

RAJ READING: There is no condemnation in the Son for there is no condemnation in the Father. Sharing the perfect Love of the Father the Son must share what belongs to Him,....

RAJ: The Father.

RAJ READING: ...for otherwise he will not know the Father OR the Son.

RAJ: In other words, until you endorse it, you won't be able to keep it. You won't have it as a Conscious Experience.

RAJ READING: Peace be unto you who rest in God...

RAJ: And not in your own private, little goals; competitive goals.

RAJ READING: Peace be unto you who rest in God and in whom the whole Sonship rests.

RAJ: If you were to go to a medical practitioner, or let's say a health practitioner, no matter what area of health-care you might consider, you would go because you needed help. Because in one way or another, you were suffering. And you would expect the health professional to provide the best that was available on your behalf. Now, whenever a Brother or a Sister comes into your experience—walks into the room, walks past your line of sight—this one has come into your experience, and is there to be in relationship with, even if it's only to notice that they are there and that they're headed for the candy counter, or the checkout stand, or wherever. But, for that time, you're in relationship with them. And you're there to bless them. You're there to bless them—not to evaluate their clothing, not to evaluate their tone of voice—but to give an acknowledgement.

You are there like the health-care professional. Every single one of you deserves the best health-care—the attitude and the behaviors that make you better than you were before the encounter. You have the option, in every encounter with a Brother, no matter how distant or intimate it might be, to bless them by remembering, to whatever degree you are able, that they are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it—no matter what they think—but they are at that Point. Everyone needs that acknowledgement to be made about them and for them, because none of you remember it consistently. And every single one of you need the blessing of that kind of mindful attention. Health-care—mindful attention.

And no matter how obnoxious they are, no matter how unkind they are, no matter how much their behavior is governed by their fear, you need to remember What The Truth Is that they've forgotten, and not indulge in spontaneous, self-righteous judgment of their behavior, but to get beneath it, even past the fear that is generating the behavior, to the acknowledgement of the Ultimate Truth about them, because that, for lack of better words, is a health-care treatment. You must dare to be persistent and consistent.

Again, we read earlier:

RAJ READING: ONLY YOU CAN DEPRIVE YOURSELF OF ANYTHING. Do not oppose this realization, for it is truly the beginning of the dawn of light. Remember also that the denial of this simple fact...

RAJ: That only you can deprive yourself of anything.

RAJ READING: ...takes many forms, and these you must learn to recognize, and to oppose steadfastly and WITHOUT EXCEPTION.

RAJ: You must become more diligent in the process of reorienting your attention. You see, you don't reallocate blame. You reorient your attention.

You must step out of the level of blaming the other person for his or her problems, because the other person is having problems because he or she is blaming himself or herself for her problems, or blaming others for their problems. But it's all in that arena in which nothing but conflict can be experienced, because there's no premise being utilized of Innocence, of being at the Point of Perfection—of the acknowledgement of the fact that you never ever could have managed to separate yourself from God, and do something awful that you must be punished for, that you are guilty of, that blame can rightly be laid at your doorstep for.

You know, last week I spoke at some length about how loved you are, so that you might remember how loved you are, or so that you might have an "Aha!" about how loved you are, so that you might be lifted up out of your poor definition of yourself, your unlovable definition of yourself, into a new arena in which your lovableness is natural. I must do this for you, and you must do this for each other. Because in doing it for each other, you do the one essential thing that's not been done—and that is the abandoning of an arrogant, private, special selfness in favor of joining with another in acknowledging the Truth About Them—and thus pushing that domino that causes the realization of your Divinity to register with you because you've endorsed it and made it your own, and demonstrated it in action with your Brother.

Now if your Brother or Sister is so damned convinced of their fearful definition of themselves and how full of blame they are—if they are so convinced of it that they can't possibly hear any verbal expression of that fact that you might put forth, if they're so convinced of it that no matter what you do, their behavior doesn't change—it just means that as the health-care practitioner that you are, you are called upon to oppose steadfastly and without exception whatever their limited belief is in your mind, and not succumb to it and move into a state of reaction yourself, so that you continue to consider them in the Peace of the understanding of What The Truth About Them Is.

You must stop giving yourself permission to indulge in reaction—emotional reaction. Why? Because the moment you do that, you're saying, "I'll be back with You in a minute, God. I have some reacting to do." And so you cut yourself off until you get your fill of hurting from reacting and you finally say, "Okay, I lost the beam. I'm going to stop this and get centered again. I'm going to get quiet, and I'm going to join with the Holy Spirit. I'm going to acknowledge God as my Father, and therefore myself as His Son or His Daughter. And then, although I haven't done that yet, I, at this point, intend, once I get to that point, to include this lousy so-and-so that I'm so upset with, in the acknowledgement of his or her Divinity. And I will withdraw my joining, I will withdraw my partnering with this one in his or her lousy self-perception, so that I do not strengthen it by confirming it by joining through reaction.

You may not be able to change someone else, but you know the saying, "Misery loves company." And if someone is miserable, and their misery makes you miserable, you join with them in their misery—and because misery loves company, it does confirm for them, and solidify further for them, their misery. That you don't want to do. And the only way not to do it, is to steadfastly choose for your Peace, listen within, remember the Truth about them that they're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it, but they're at that Point. And you stay with that. You withdraw your part in the "misery loves company" scenario. And confirmation is lessened.

And the Extension of Love, the Acknowledgement of God there where they are that occurs in your mind, does bless you. And like a gift given but unopened, it remains with that one until that one is ready to open it. And you have not done anything in vain.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Chapter 10 – GOD AND THE EGO
Section: THE “DYNAMICS” OF THE EGO
Sparkly Book – p.243 / JCIM – p.102
Chapter 11 – GOD OR THE EGO
First Edition – p. 188 / Second Edition – p. 202

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

So, last week we talked about, “The Inheritance of God’s Son.” In other words, your Birthright. Now we’re going to talk about the flip side—what you get [laughing] as an orphan, as one who has gotten a divorce from his Father—and it’s called:

RAJ READING: The “Dynamics” of the Ego

RAJ: One might think that the best thing you could do would be to constantly give your attention to the Truth about you and what your Inheritance truly is. But the fact is that if you’re not willing to look at the habits you have employed in order to remain unconscious of your Birthright, they will persist. They will spontaneously continue.

So, it begins:

RAJ READING: No-one can escape from illusions unless he looks at them, for NOT looking is the way they are PROTECTED. There is no need to shrink from illusions, for they cannot be dangerous. We are ready to look more closely at the ego’s thought system because, together, we have the lamp that will dispel it,...

RAJ: There’s a key here.

RAJ READING: ...because, together, we have the lamp that will dispel it,...

RAJ: It will do you no good to go on an internal witch-hunt, looking for the ego flaws while using the ego frame of reference to do so. Such an endeavor will be discouraging, depressing, and will further confirm your lost-ness, because there’s nothing in the frame of reference that has access to more than the ego frame of reference which you have all carefully created and developed and practiced.

RAJ READING: We are ready to look more closely at the ego's thought system because, together, we have the lamp that will dispel it, and since you realize you do not WANT it YOU must be ready.

RAJ: So, when you wish to conscientiously and constructively move out of the box you've been in, you must take the time, first of all, to establish a connection with me or with the Holy Spirit. It does not have to be a full-fledged connection. It does not have to be as well-established as it is with Paul. But you have to turn your attention away from all of your conditioned responses. You have to be willing to be less interested in what you already know, what you already think, and what you already believe, and turn to that which you at least assume has a greater vantage point to look from, and be curious to hear whatever grander view may be provided. And you must invite that provision. Don't try to do it by yourself.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Let us be very calm in doing this, for we are merely looking honestly for truth.

RAJ: You see? That's the difference. When you join with the Holy Spirit or with your Guide or with me, it is to join in, endeavor, to uncover Truth. If you look to see what the ego habits and flaws are, with the ego, it will be to uncover flaws in you, errors in you—not the Truth.

RAJ READING: The "dynamics"...

RAJ: In quotes.

RAJ READING: ...of the ego will be our lesson for a while, for we must look first at this to look beyond it since you HAVE made it real.

RAJ: Now I'm not going to ask you to answer this, but when it became obvious that we were now going to start talking about "the dynamics of the ego," how many of you felt a little uncomfortable? Like last week we were talking about the Inheritance of the Son of God which was a very pleasant thing to contemplate discussing, but now it's like we're going to get down to business. No. We were down to business last week. Now we're down to the nonsense. [some audience laughter]

So don't cast a shadow in front of you and get all uptight, as though we're going to uncover the terribleness, the ugliness, the flaws, the miserableness of you. Because remember, after all this time, are you an ego? No! So this isn't about you. You are, each of you, the Christ. You have no existence except for God Expressing Himself right where you are. And we've been talking for years now about this fact.

So now we're going to look at what isn't true about you, so that you might discover whether you're employing untruths, and so that you might see more clearly that they are untrue, and therefore there's no value for you in holding onto them, or basing your judgments and conclusions on things that aren't true about you. We're going to look at nonsense that you thought was not nonsense, so that you might see the nonsensicalness, and find the total valuelessness of it.

RAJ READING: The “dynamics” of the ego will be our lesson for a while, for we must look first at this to look beyond it since you HAVE made it real. We will UNDO this error quietly together,...

RAJ: No fanfare. No rah-rah hoop-de-doo. No contest. No conflict.

RAJ READING: We will UNDO this error quietly together,...

RAJ: We will uncover nonsense quietly. And its nonsensicalness will register with you quietly, and you will lay it to rest quietly.

RAJ READING: We will UNDO this error quietly together, and then look beyond it to truth.

RAJ: In effect, we will look beyond it to the Truth that we have been discussing for a great length of time.

RAJ READING: What is healing but the removal of all that STANDS IN THE WAY of knowledge?

RAJ: Or as I have said, Knowing, with a capital “K”.

RAJ READING: And how else can one dispel illusions EXCEPT by looking at them directly, WITHOUT protecting them?

RAJ: “Well, what does that mean? How do you look at them directly without protecting them? And what are we going to be looking at directly?” Well, let me put it this way. If somebody seeing the Truth about you says to you, “You know, today, you're really off the beam. And what you just said is an example of it. Do you see it?” Oh, boy! The hackles on the back of your neck rise and you say, “Who do you think you are? You think you're my teacher? What right do you have to approach me this way?” Wow! If that isn't protecting them instead of being willing to look at them directly, I don't know what it is.

And to tell you the truth, looking at them directly without protecting them describes something this basic: watch yourself. And I said this last week, watch yourself during this coming week and pay attention to when you become defensive. Because when you become defensive, you lose your mind. What I mean by that is that when you become defensive, you move into boilerplate responses. And you will find yourself throwing out barbs. In order to get the other one who is trying to help you see that you've gotten off the beam, you will throw out barbs that you know will hit their mark. It will be mean-spirited as a distraction to keep that person from pursuing greater clarity for you.

The moment you become defensive, you move out of being conscious into nothing more but a lot of recorded sound bites—little recorded retorts, little recorded responses. You will have gone unconscious. Why? So that you will not have to look at a need for change. Part of your habit is to think that, if change really is called for, you are doing something wrong and therefore you are guilty, and therefore there is a penalty waiting for you, and therefore you had better deny it and you had better find ways to justify not looking at it, because you don't want to experience the penalty of finding out that you're guilty.

RAJ READING: Be not afraid, therefore, for what you will be looking at IS the source of fear, but you have surely learned by now that FEAR is not real. We have accepted the fact already that its EFFECTS can be dispelled merely by denying their reality.

RAJ: You all have found that out, even though you don't practice dispelling them merely by denying their reality consistently enough.

RAJ READING: The next step is obviously to recognize that what has no effects DOES NOT EXIST.

RAJ: Fear has no reality because it finds no place in God. If it finds no place in God, it has no place in you because God is All There Is of you.

PAUL: Excuse me.

RAJ: God Being All—being actively, dynamically Being All—is the nonexistence of fear in you, and is the nonexistence of anything unlike Him in you. And that state is the State of your Being at this very moment, even if at this moment you are seeming to experience fear.

RAJ READING: Laws do not operate in a vacuum, and what leads to nothing HAS NOT HAPPENED. If reality is recognized by its EXTENSION,...

[Editor's Note: Raj read "by its Extension" because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as "by its EXTENSION" as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: Which has a capital "E".

RAJ READING: If reality is recognized by its EXTENSION, what extends to nothing cannot BE real.

RAJ: Creation is the Extension of God. God extends Himself; the Extension is Creation.

Extension is experienceable. Extension, as I've said before, is perfectly tangible to the Mind that formed it. There is Creation. It is what is meant by the word "Extension." If there were no Conscious Experience of Being as what you call Creation, there would be no God. And conversely, if there is no ego as a fact, then what it thinks it extends is nothing.

Again.

RAJ READING: If reality is recognized by its EXTENSION, what extends...

RAJ: Such as the ego.

RAJ READING: ...to nothing cannot BE real.

Do not be afraid, then, to look upon fear, for it cannot BE seen.

RAJ: That's the miracle of being willing to look at what seems to be fearful to you, because when you look at it, when you honestly look at it without trying to hide it from yourself, without trying to avoid it, you find nothing there. And that is when you experience healing of whatever the effects seemed to be of your belief that it was there and that it was real.

RAJ READING: Clarity undoes confusion by definition, and to look upon darkness through light MUST dispel it.

RAJ: You see, remember you are to look at your lack of clarity, let's say, you are to look at your fears, you are to look at your spontaneous defense with the help of the Holy Spirit or your Guide. One thing is for sure—when you do that, your Guide will help you to be honest and will not let you use your standard habits for covering up and avoiding seeing what it is that you're doing that doesn't work and that doesn't accomplish anything.

RAJ READING: Let us begin this lesson in...

RAJ: Quote.

RAJ READING: ...“ego dynamics”...

RAJ: Unquote.

RAJ READING: ...by understanding that the term itself does not mean anything.

RAJ: It's like talking about dry water.

RAJ READING: In fact, it contains exactly the contradiction in terms which MAKES it meaningless. “Dynamics” implies the power to DO something, and the whole separation FALLACY lies in the belief that the ego has the power to do ANYTHING.

RAJ: The fly in the ointment is that the ego has no power to do anything because there is no ego.

What is there to the ego? It amounts to a decision that each of you made somewhere along the way that said, “But, Father, I’d rather see it my way.” It was an act of self-assertion—an act of assertion that did not arise out of the Father’s Movement in you as you. And as we’ve said before, the moment you did that, the moment you claimed a right to be able to see things without the Father, you lost your Identity. If you lose your Identity, you don’t know Who You Are.

Anyone who is experiencing amnesia, does not remember who they are. And they have to develop a new identity based upon whatever experiences they’re having in the middle of their amnesia. And so you created a definition for yourself—a self-concept. And your Brothers and Sisters—whom we learned last week are part of the Infinitude of your Being, all of them included in the Infinite Oneness of You—all of them are now strangers to you, too, and so you have to make definitions for them. And pretty soon because they’re not asleep either and they’re making definitions for themselves, it amounts to a bunch of definitions trying to relate to each other, instead of the Real Ones That They Are knowing that they are all One because they are their Father’s Son or Daughter.

So the ego isn’t a presence. It is, for lack of better words, the Christ That You Are behaving as though you’re not the Christ, behaving as though you’re something else. You see? You lose your Inheritance and you lose Conscious Awareness of your Inheritance. You become unknown to yourself, and your Brothers and Sisters become strangers to you. And then, with all the Power of the Christ That You Are, you begin behaving on the basis of lack of information, and you have to make-up definitions of what is going on. And then you begin to think that this inadequate state of mind is what you are. And then you have the task of making something more adequate out of this inadequateness that you are. And because you are the Christ and the Power of God—the Power of Being is still in you and you can’t forget It—you think that you, in this inadequate state, have power to make things happen based upon lack of knowing, lack of knowledge. And you exist, you might say, in a state of unconsciousness, thinking that you are Conscious.

[Editor’s Note: Raj did not read the following sentences: The ego is fearful to you BECAUSE you believe this. Yet the truth is very simple; ALL POWER IS OF GOD. What is NOT of Him has no power to do ANYTHING.]

RAJ: Now...

RAJ READING: When we look at the ego, then, we are not considering dynamics, but delusions. We can surely regard a delusional system without fear, for it cannot have any effects if its source is not true. Fear becomes more obviously inappropriate if one recognizes the ego's GOAL, which is so clearly senseless that any effort exerted on its behalf is NECESSARILY expended on nothing.

RAJ: Now listen.

RAJ READING: The ego's goal is quite explicitly ego AUTONOMY.

RAJ: This little, inadequate sense of presence insists on stating that it has the power to be autonomously inadequate and become something of significance and actually accomplish things. And that is its goal—to actually accomplish things on its own, thus declaring itself and proving its presence.

RAJ READING: The ego's goal is quite explicitly ego AUTONOMY. From the beginning, then, its PURPOSE is to be separate, sufficient unto itself, and independent of any power EXCEPT its own. This is WHY it is the...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...symbol of separation.

RAJ: You see, it's not a thing. It's just a symbol.

It's a symbol representing what? An act, a decision on your part to look at and see things by yourself and determine what they are by yourself, instead of staying with the Meaning they have because of What God Is Extending or Expressing of Himself right there.

And if you think you are the ego, then you will think that is your purpose. I cannot state it too often that no matter what you think you are, you haven't stopped being the Full Representation of God, the Christ, right here and right now. And you cannot have become anything less than that, no matter how much you try to ignore It. So this ego that you may think you are, is only a symbol of a decision you made. That's all. And who is this "you" that made the decision? I will tell you it's the Christ, because that's the only thing there is sitting here right now, listening. That's the only thing that's here, right now, as you are listening.

RAJ READING: Every idea has a purpose,...

RAJ: Ideas are purpose embodied. You might say that purpose emerges, impetus emerges, and its reason for emerging is its purpose.

RAJ READING: Every idea has a purpose, and its purpose is always the natural extension of what it IS. Everything that stems from the ego is the natural outcome of its central belief, and the way to undo its RESULTS is merely to recognize that their SOURCE is not natural, being out of accord with your TRUE nature. We once said that to will contrary to God is wishful thinking, and not real willing.

RAJ: You see? It's just an imagination. And nothing is accomplished whenever any attempt is made to will contrary to God.

"Oh, but, Father, I'd rather go this way. Oh, but, Father, I don't want to go so fast. Oh, but, Father..." You see? And you dig in your heels. But, you know what? You can't delay the Movement, and you can't become unattached from the Movement, and so all you're engaged in is insane wishful thinking—that's all—and not Real Willing.

RAJ READING: His Will...

RAJ: God's Will.

RAJ READING: ...is One because the extension of His Will cannot be unlike Itself.

RAJ: That Which is One has absolute Integrity. That which is fragmented, if there could be such a thing, would be a state of disintegration.

But...

RAJ READING: His Will is One because the extension of His Will cannot be unlike Itself.

RAJ: And therefore isn't.

And so you haven't stopped being What God Is Being right there where you are. You haven't become an ego. And you haven't become the thoughts and the definitions that you have made-up while trying to imagine that you can make-up things on your own.

RAJ READING: The real conflict you experience, then, is between the ego's idle wishes and the Will of God, Which you share.

RAJ: You see? So what happens when we take a look at this awful thing called the ego, that's not your friend and that does not have your best interests at heart, and is all these awful things that we've discussed from time to time? What happens when you take a look at it directly? You find out that it's nothing more than a bunch of idle wishes. You see? We find out that everything it engages in is nothing more than wishful thinking. Well, how scary is that? Not scary at all.

And on top of it, the ego engaging in wishful thinking is not you. You are the Christ, who can't stop being the Christ, being the Presence of God, even if you're ignoring It. And that's part of the clarity that comes out of looking squarely at what the ego is. Everything we've been discussing since our first get-together has been uncovering this fact to you.

RAJ READING: The real conflict you experience, then, is between the ego's idle wishes and the Will of God, Which you share. Can this BE a real conflict?

RAJ: Can there be conflict between Something and nothing? Not really.

The problem is that the nothing, which you discover is nothing, seems to you very clearly to be something at the moment. You think you are just an organism that has a brain in its head that is nothing more than a bunch of electrical synapses that cause an experience called consciousness, and that as this "hunk of thinking meat," you have, through a process of evolution, arrived at a point of dominating your planet and on its way to expand out into the universe and embrace it, envelop it. You see? But that's not true. That's just the best definitions you've been able to come up with without experiencing a connection with your Real Source.

Now what I've just said, you're well familiar with because we've discussed it before. And that amounts to our looking at the illusion, and looking through it and beyond it and arriving at the Truth. Why? So that the Truth becomes more pronounced in your awareness, making it easier for you to shift your allegiance from your old definitions, your old well-established and habitual definitions into the Truth that will lift you out of the experiences of limits that you have been inappropriately bound by. In other words, so that you might move into the freedom that is already naturally yours, but which you haven't availed yourself of because you didn't know it existed. You thought you were just "hunks of thinking meat" doing your best, and doing incredibly well, at that.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Yours is the independence of creation, NOT of autonomy.

RAJ: Now early it says:

RAJ READING: The ego's goal is quite explicitly ego AUTONOMY.

RAJ: But yours, now that you have forgotten the act of separation, now that you have forgotten that you said, "Father, I want a divorce," and as a "hunk of thinking meat," your goal is the independence of creation. In other words, you're not busy denying the Father anymore. You have conveniently tucked out of sight that you are ignoring your bond with the Father, and you are engaged in enjoying being independently creative. Your goal is to create a better world.

Your goal is to create a better self. Your goal is to improve the situation, whatever the situation is, thinking that you have a capacity all by yourself to accomplish this.

So...

RAJ READING: Yours is the independence of creation, NOT of autonomy.

RAJ: And autonomy is the goal of the ego.

But... (And I'm adding this word "but" and then continuing.)

RAJ READING: Your whole creative function lies in your complete DEPENDENCE on God, Whose function He shares with YOU.

RAJ: You see, that's the fact that you can arrive at with clarity when you're willing to look at the illusion.

The illusion is that you have a capacity to be independently creative. And so each one of you, to one degree or another, is always trying to find creative ways to deal with situations—of course, without ever including the Father in it.

But...

RAJ READING: Your whole creative function lies in your complete DEPENDENCE on God, Whose function He shares with YOU.

RAJ: God's Function is the Movement of Being that is best described by the word "Creation." You are to be co-creators with God. You are to be present with God, not claiming any separation, not claiming any independence from being the Conscious Experience of that Movement, so that you might experience the Movement and recognize God in It, and confirm God to God by performing the Function God has placed in you to glorify Him, by recognizing Him in Creation and recognizing your part in that Movement of Creation, knowing as a result of the experience that you're inseparable from It.

RAJ READING: By HIS...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...willingness to share it, He became as dependent on you as you are on HIM.

RAJ: Now it isn't that God created you and then gave you a purpose to fulfill that fulfilled Him. It's just the way it has worked forever, because you and God are inseparable and have always engaged in being the Movement and Recognition of Creation.

But this helps. Using these words helps you to grasp that you have a Function beyond making up your own creative solutions to the “dilemma of being” that you’re faced with as a result of your having said, “But, Father, I’d rather do it my way.”

Again.

RAJ READING: By HIS willingness to share it, He became as dependent on you as you are on HIM. Do not ascribe the ego’s arrogance to Him Who wills not to be independent of YOU. He has INCLUDED you in His Autonomy.

RAJ: God is Autonomous. Yes. There is nothing He must refer back to. There is nothing He must cooperate with. He is Infinite and All-inclusive. Being is Infinite and All-inclusive. Life is Infinite and All-inclusive—a Singularity. There is nothing outside of It for It to defer to, or refer to, or get permission from.

RAJ READING: Can YOU believe that autonomy is meaningful APART from Him?

RAJ: When you look at it this way, you can’t. “Autonomy apart from Him” would mean being something not All-inclusive. It would mean Creation was divided up into parts—little autonomous parts. But Autonomy is something that can only be, is something that can only exist in a Singularity that is boundaryless.

And so if you want to experience True Autonomy, you must say, “Father, I would like to join with You and fulfill my Function of recognizing You in everything, and experiencing the Joy of seeing only What You Are and Its Perfection, instead of the awfulness that I’ve been excitedly trying to cope with as a result of my looking at everything on my own.”

RAJ READING: The belief in EGO autonomy is costing you the knowledge of your dependence on God...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...IN WHICH YOUR FREEDOM LIES. The ego sees ALL dependency as threatening, and has twisted even your longing for God into a means of establishing ITSELF. But do not be deceived by ITS interpretation of your conflict.

RAJ: Where do you think the energy and the desire comes from to improve yourself and to improve your world, and to come up with a better mousetrap, and to become a bigger success, and on, and on, and on? It comes from an inherent Knowing of your Singularity, your Infinite Wholeness, from which nothing is excluded and everything is included. And your Wholeness is Infinitely Bountiful, if I may put it that way. And that Knowing which you can't get rid of, even if you have denied its Source, it remains with you, and you seek for it at your own hand, but you seek it in the name of the ego's goal—which is to assert, to establish, and to succeed at being absolutely independent and actual.

Now if you try to consider everything that I have said in some objective, intellectual manner, you will miss the point, because the actuality of what I've been saying, and what the Course says, comes into play in the way you all relate to each other. There are only two voices—the Voice for Love and the voice for fear—or you could say, the Voice for Truth and the voice for fear. The Voice for Truth has as its motivation extension, caring. The voice for fear is always to achieve self-protection, defense. One is self-oriented; the other is other-oriented.

And you want to know something? The quickest way to uncover your ingrained habits of self-protection, that you might not be aware that you're employing, is to dare to let yourself become conscious of others' needs, as well as your own. I know, needs are messy. I've discussed them before. To get into dealing with needs is not clean and simple. But Love, compassion, enriched affections in you, find natural extension into addressing needs, not wants.

I've said it before and I'm saying it again tonight: You need to value needs more than you do. And you need to give needs your attention more than you do. And you need to be willing to address needs, rather than addressing an intellectual concept that says, "Well, your needs aren't actual. Your needs are imagined. Your needs are the result of your ignorance and they're not real."

You have an adorable little baby with snot running down its lip. What do you do? You get a Kleenex and you wipe his nose. And while you're doing it, you coo with him and play with him, and make him be at peace—comfort him. You don't say, "Well, you're not really a body, you know. [audience amused] And if you did know that you were a body, snot wouldn't be running down your lip. [audience amused] Now get with it!"

Nor would you say to someone whose house has just been blown away in a hurricane, "Well, you know, there really isn't any such thing as loss. It's just a concept you have that you possessed something in the first place, when you never possessed it at all." No. You first of all say, "Are you warm? Are you hungry? Are you thirsty? Are you dry? Do you have a place to rest? Do you have shelter of some sort?" You pay attention to the need—the needs in the moment. And you just love them enough to address the need. You don't say, "Well, you know, someday when you're awake, you're gonna look back at this and laugh"—and they're sitting there on the curb where their house used to be, with a little rag-doll that belonged to their child who they don't know where she is at the moment. You don't, you just don't do this.

Love addresses and meets needs. And God is expressed, is extended, in the Acts of Love that meet needs. And just like the child whose diapers you would change because they're wet, you help the adult whose house is gone, to get dry, to feel comfort, to feel safety. You meet the needs, because in meeting the needs, the meaning of "God with us" is extended. And when that is extended, healing occurs, and grief is assuaged, and miracles happen.

"Well, you know, the South is just, generally speaking, corrupt. It's no surprise that it was wiped out by a hurricane so that things could be addressed that needed to be addressed." That is such a hateful thought. It says that the ego is real. It says that the ego's perception of life is actual, and that it constitutes a sound basis for hateful judgment to be practiced. It says that suffering is deserved. Now you tell me where freedom lies in that?

Don't value your current ego-definitions so much that you neglect in the face of need, to say, "Father, what am I called upon to do here? What am I called upon to be here that will be recognizable as the Evidence of Love?"—the Evidence of Love that inspires in the one receiving the Love, to experience more than just another person loving them, but a connection with the fact that Love universally is actual; that there is a God; that there is something beyond little egos helping other little egos.

Every Idea has a Purpose, and its Purpose is always the natural extension of What It Is. Love's Purpose is the natural extension of What It Is.

I will say this: The Extension of Love during this last week needed to be more instant, more instantaneous than it was. And the means to do it was present. And the means for all of you to extend it to each other is always present. But if you are engaged in analyzing, psychologically and physically, all of the elements of things that are transpiring in your experience so as to come to an educated conclusion as to appropriate action, your Extension of Love that triggers an Illumination of God in the awareness of the one you're extending it to, will be delayed unnecessarily and with just as negative and harsh effects as what you saw during this past week—harsh because anything you engage in that doesn't remind your Brother of the Infiniteness of Good is an unnecessary extension of ignorance and a delay of a miracle.

So, watch how during this coming week you relate to your Brother and Sisters. Watch to see whether you recoil or politely step back so as to avoid the messy involvement of responding to a need, because it might make you late to a meeting, or for whatever reason. Watch the ways you use to keep a distance between your Brothers and Sisters where the connection would count. Watch the ways you refuse to blend. Watch the ways you refuse to fit in—because every time you do that, what you’re trying to do is to assert your independence and your autonomy and your capacity to not to be governed by circumstances—your capacity to govern yourself, first and last.

Watch and see how much of your behavior is an expression of righteousness, “goodness”—a state of being that causes you not to have to relate to your Brother, not to have to have compassion on your Brother. And then I want you to realize that what you withhold from your Brother, you withhold from yourself—and that’s not Love. That’s not the Nature of your Being and it’s not your Function, even though you absolutely believe it is.

So, what’s the wonderful Truth that we arrive at from daring to look at the illusion? The wonderful Truth is a clearer realization, hopefully, that right now you are the Christ, right now you are the Ultimate, and there are ways for you to extend it. There are ways for you to embody it quote “in the world” that everyone says doesn’t exist, in ways that cause the things in your world to remember God and to have a transformed perception.

You have capacities that you haven’t been able to enjoy because you’ve been so busy defending your self-righteousness. Self-righteousness being activities and intents that you engage in for the purpose of establishing yourself as a successful independent entity who embodies the greatest excellence possible in the world, while not including God in the picture at all. And when you become defensive, you are protecting this image of yourself, this mask that you present—when as I’ve said before, what’s underneath the mask is the Ultimate, the Christ, the Conscious Experience of Being in which All of Reality is available to you—not excluded from your Conscious Awareness, not excluded from your experience.

You don’t have to be afraid of your habits of ignorance. Just be aware that they are there and that they are nonsense, so that on the basis of their nonsensicalness you can let them go in preference to finding all of the ways that you can relate to your Brother and Sister, meeting real needs, because you’ve been defenseless enough to be sensitive to them—no longer treating them as though they are beneath you because they are so base, they are so un-lofty.

Until you’ve been without water, without electricity, without anything to provide comfort, you have no idea how Divinely Significant something as simple as a hot bath is, or even a cold one. Needs are simple. And I promise you, I cannot appreciate or validate or honor lofty, disconnected spiritual theories and thoughts that discount the call for the ability to have a bath and dry clothes and something to eat. Don’t become disconnected from needs, and the fact that your Divinity, if it is going to find expression or extension, is going to come forth in the form of humaneness meeting the needs. As I said to Paul a long time ago, keep your feet on the ground and your head not too far away. The place for God to be found, the place for Reality to be experienced, is in the simplicity of the life you are living.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you all next week, perhaps a little more sober and a little bit happier, a little more fulfilled.

The call isn't for you to somehow stand tall to some majestic proportions, but to be present, really present with each other, sensibly present with each other, taking the time to be aware of needs and doing what you can to fulfill them because you care. And because you're constantly asking the Holy Spirit or your Guide or your Father, "What can I do? What fulfills Purpose for me to do?" Do. Do.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Section: THE “DYNAMICS” OF THE EGO
Sparkly Book – p.244 / JCIM – p.102
Chapter 11 – GOD OR THE EGO
First Edition – p. 189 / Second Edition – p. 204

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

It's an interesting opening sentence tonight.

RAJ READING: The ego ALWAYS attacks on behalf of separation.

RAJ: Let's be clear on one thing. The ego never does anything but attack.

It's incapable of caring. It's incapable of being sensitive to needs. The only need that exists is the need for self-protection. Self-protection is a defense, and so every act of the ego is a defense against whatever. It's a defense against your world. It's a defense against God. It's a defense against your Brother. And, unknown to you as you practice the state of egohood or orphanhood, it's a defense against your being consciously aware of Who and What You Are. It's the means by which you keep your Birthright hidden from you.

Well, you say, "You know, I go through my week and I work with the people. I work together. I do my best to work together with the people I work with. I try to be supportive of my family. I try to be thoughtful. As a general rule, I'm not going around attacking. I'm not trying to be separate. I really do try to fit in."

Remember last week we talked a little bit about needs and how needs are always messy? Getting into the arena of needs so as to have needs met, is always uncomfortable. You all work very hard to arrive at a point where you are without need.

You raise your kids, they move out, and now you go about getting all the pretty little knick-knacks that you never could have when your kids were at home, or the hobby supplies that you need that you could never leave handy because somebody would get into it. Your need of raising the kids, and everything that went along with it, is over and now you can have things the way you want them. And so, for a while, perhaps you enjoy the freedom.

And then what happens? Oh, dear. Tsk, tsk. One of your kids gets pregnant. And after nine months or so, here's this little one who knows nothing about not touching anything. And as it grows, it becomes a threat to the order that you have finally achieved; the peace and so on that you've established. And so, unless you happen to be one who has not let go of the capacity to stay in touch with needs, if you're one who has not let go of the capacity to find that relating to each other is more important than the orderliness of things, you begin to think of this grandchild and grandchildren as a threat. When you become defensive, [you say,] "Don't touch. Don't touch. No, no. Don't do that," rather than valuing togetherness; rather than valuing being present with each member of the family in ways that are embracing and involving.

Now that's just one of the ways that you establish independence. It's just one of the ways that you reinforce separation. But there's another way you do it, too. I'm describing this so that you might understand that the statement, "The ego always attacks on behalf of separation," is not just a philosophical statement. It isn't a statement to be intellectually understood. It needs to relate to where you live. Another way in which you establish and confirm separation is by refraining from becoming involved with your Brother or Sister when there is a need.

A favorite phrase for a lot of people is, "Been there, done that."

"This is their time to work through their problems. I did it, and I moved through it, and I'm beyond it now. I don't have to go through this again with them. I don't have to be willing to take up my time and energy, when nobody took up time and energy with me when I was moving through it and growing, and developing and maturing, and becoming a more effective presence."

But there's something more fundamental than just the bother of it. Why are needs messy? Because they are where change is occurring, where things are not stable. They are a threshold. You might say they are the threshold of a miracle. And so, it requires everyone involved to be willing to stand at the threshold of what appears to be confusion. It's lack of order—meaning it is movement going beyond your present sense of what the best order of things ought to be.

When there is a need that your Brother has, if you are not going to maintain separation, you're not going to maintain distance and you're going to get involved—meaning, in so many words, you're going to put your shoulder to the same wheel they are putting their shoulder to, because it is a threshold of a miracle. You are reluctant to do it because you are afraid you will not be able to quote "pull off a miracle" unquote.

You do not want to stand at the threshold they're standing at of the unknown, looking with perseverance to see how the need is going to be met. Why? Because you say, "I don't see how the need can be met." You are afraid that the need can't be met, and you don't want to confront yourself with your fear.

Do you see what I'm saying? You do not want to place yourself at the threshold that your Brother is standing at, even though you have platitudes like, "Been there, done that." Well, if you've been there and done that, do it again. You know what it's about. You know the ropes. So go there and stand with them, and be the encouragement and be the persistence that they fear to exercise because it looks like there's no answer. You see what I'm saying?

Your reluctance to be involved is a way that you daily practice separation, which means that you are engaging in the ego's activity of always attacking—self-protection instead of caring enough to give your attention to the threshold of a miracle with your Brother, and being willing to stand there because you have been there. And you know that what it takes is persistence, even though it's not easy; even though you stand there in confidence, without anything to justify it except your past experience that miracles happen. They have happened to every single one of you. And they never happened because you were competent. They happened because you didn't give up. No matter how sloppy you engaged in moving through the miracle, you didn't give up.

So...

RAJ READING: The ego ALWAYS attacks on behalf of separation.

RAJ: Most of your days are spent, to one degree or another, confirming separation. Why? So that you might maintain the little bit of order that you've been able to achieve, and not let it be disturbed by the unpredictable. After all, you've done your work, you've lived your years, whatever—however you want to think about it—and now you deserve to have some peace, without disturbance. Well, you know what? That's called death.

The dictum of the Father is, "Behold, I make all things new." Being is a verb! Existing/Being is a Movement—a Forever Movement. Which means that in the process of Awakening, you're all going to come to the point where you are willing to never expect things to be settled, in order, orderly. You know what? There is nothing awesome about order, or orderliness of things. What is awesome is the unpredictable Movement of Being, of Life.

I mean you go to bed at night. You don't have any pets to disturb anything. And you get up in the morning and walk out of your bedroom, and do you stand in awe of the living room that hasn't changed since last night? Why would you stand in awe at the familiar? Bliss is not peace with the status quo. Got it? Bliss is not peace with the status quo. Bliss is the absence of fear in the middle of, "Behold, I make all things new." Bliss is the experience of awe and wonder. And so, is it beginning to click with you, maybe, that this awful thing that you call needs are thresholds to waking up, are thresholds to Real Experiences of Being?

And so if you have a child with a health problem that requires attention, or you have a child who for one reason or another is not up to par with the other children and needs a special help to catch up, if you have a situation in the community that is not leaving you alone, that's requiring your attention—the call is for you to see the needs and not talk the needs away. You must see the needs and address the needs by insisting upon persevering until the miracle of the need met is manifested.

"Oh, that's their problem." That's another one of everyone's favorite sayings. "That's their problem." Well, there you go, practicing separation. And actually what you're doing is you are practicing a defense against moving into a place where you don't have the answer, but you're called upon to be the place where the answer can come. This is how you practice separation daily in one way or another.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego ALWAYS attacks...

RAJ: It always attacks. It can't do anything else.

But it...

RAJ READING: ...ALWAYS attacks on behalf of...

RAJ: The only thing that means anything to it.

RAJ READING: ...separation. Believing it has the power to do this it does nothing else, because its goal of autonomy IS nothing else.

RAJ: "Oh, that's their problem." Isn't that a statement of autonomy?

"Been there, done that." Isn't that a statement of autonomy?

RAJ READING: The ego is totally confused about reality, but it does NOT lose sight of its goal. It is much more vigilant than YOU are because it is perfectly certain of its purpose. YOU are confused because you do NOT know YOURS.

RAJ: Does that not make it perfectly clear that you and what you would call "your ego" are not one? You and the ego are not one. You and the habits of thinking that you are employing are not one and the same.

RAJ READING: What you must learn to recognize is that the LAST thing the ego wishes you to realize is that YOU ARE AFRAID OF IT. For if the ego gives rise to fear it is DIMINISHING your independence and WEAKENING your power. Yet its one claim to your allegiance is that it can GIVE power to you.

RAJ: Now what I want you to understand is that very few of you, especially when you get into a spiritual or metaphysical vein, very few of you become proactive. You back off from involvement, because lack of involvement means the avoidance of messiness. It provides a sense of peace. And then, in order not to have to be involved in the correction of things that need to be corrected, you say, or many say, "The world is an illusion. You're making it real by addressing needs." And so it justifies not taking action. And it provides a sense of peace because you stay out of the messiness.

It's very easy to point at an illness, or a bad experience, and say, "It's not real," and think that you're done with it. But saying it, is a way of not doing anything about it. If you know that it's not real, you have the means of demonstrating that it's not real, so that it no longer presents itself as though it is.

And you've got to persist until you see the miracle. The Course says that a miracle is a sudden shift of perception. Oh boy, that was wonderful news for the people who wanted to be in a state of separation, who didn't want to be involved. A miracle is a sudden shift of perception. If you're not careful, it makes it sound as though a miracle has nothing to do with needs being met—with food at the moment because you need food; with shelter because your house has blown away; or as I said last week, clean diapers because the baby has pooped in them. A miracle is a sudden shift of perception that results in a changed experience, because you stuck with the miracle, you stuck with the shift in perception until, for lack of better words, it brought forth the evidence.

Gotta keep your feet on the ground! And you've got to make everything that we're reading relevant.

RAJ READING: Yet its...

RAJ: The ego's.

RAJ READING: ...one claim to your allegiance is that it can GIVE power to you.

RAJ: Well, power to what? Power to rise above the situation, the unreality.

Wow! You didn't really think that's what you wanted, but if you listen to the ego, that's what you ask for and that's what you get. And you end up not being an agent for change, because you're not being the Presence of Love that wishes to see the Evidence of Love and sticks with it until the evidence is there.

RAJ READING: ...its one claim to your allegiance is that it can GIVE power to you. Without this belief you would not listen to it at all. How, then, can its existence continue if you realize that, BY accepting it, you ARE belittling yourself and DEPRIVING yourself of power?

RAJ: Now what is this ego that you're listening to? It's not your mind. It's a set of definitions. It's a set of beliefs. It's conclusions that you have arrived at through faulty reasoning—reasoning that has been based upon factors that do not include God in the equation; that only include your definition of yourself and the definitions of everything else that you employ.

And definitions are not that which is holding the definitions. You are what is holding and employing the definitions. And the you that is holding it, holding them, is the Ultimate One—the Christ right now. But you're holding definitions of yourself at odds with What You Are. And then you are believing that you are the definition of yourself that you're employing—the foundational definition of yourself being that you are an orphan, that you have no Father, ultimately that there is no God, and that the world and universe is nothing but a fluke of material dynamics.

Now:

RAJ READING: The ego...

RAJ: Meaning all of these definitions and theories and concepts that you employ.

RAJ READING: ...can and does allow you to regard yourself as supercilious, unbelieving, "light-hearted,"...

RAJ: You don't take anything too seriously. "That's their problem." "Oh, you worry too much." Lighthearted, yeah.

RAJ READING: ...distant,...

RAJ: [small laugh] "When you've worked your problem out, come back and tell me all about it."

RAJ READING: ...emotionally shallow, callous, uninvolved, and even desperate, but NOT REALLY AFRAID. MINIMIZING fear, but NOT its undoing, is the ego's constant effort,...

RAJ: Get it?

RAJ READING: MINIMIZING fear, but NOT its undoing,...

RAJ: You see? The miracle is the undoing of the fear. The miracle is the shift of perception that undoes the fear you have of not being competent enough to participate in a Brother's miracle, and involving yourself in the resolution of his need—that awful, messy thing called need.

RAJ READING: MINIMIZING fear, but NOT its undoing, is the ego's constant effort, and is indeed the skill at which it is very ingenious.

RAJ: How many ways do you have to get out of doing things? And how many of you can express your means of not getting involved with lofty, spiritual principles?

You even say, "I have so many things to do, I don't have time to take care of myself. I've got too many things to do, too many urgent things to do, to take a nap, or go to bed early and get some needed rest. After all, I'm a spiritual being. I'm not a body. I am still free to be as God created me. And that means I don't need sleep. That means that I can push and push and push beyond endurance. I can ignore my needs." You see, when you are behaving in a way that disrespects you, you will experience more needs. But if you will acknowledge your needs and meet them by sticking with them until you have the evidence of no need, you will find perhaps that you do need less rest than most people. But not because of any autonomy and power you have of your own, but because you're willing to fit in. To be a part of what? The Way, capital "W" Way Things Work.

RAJ READING: How can it...

RAJ: The ego.

RAJ READING: ...preach separation WITHOUT upholding it through fear, and would you listen to it if you recognized this IS what it is doing?

RAJ: You see, orphanhood is an unnatural conscious experience. It's actually an aberration. And because it causes you not to remember your Father—and therefore your part in the Sonship, your involvement with something—you experience fear. You experience the unnaturalness of it, the uneasiness of it. And as I've said before, at the bottom line it's your capital "S" Sanity telling you that you are trying to do something very unnatural, and to stop, to be alert not to proceed any further in that direction.

But then what happens? As I've said before, because you're still the Son of God, you're still the Christ, you have all the power of your Christhood, and you can still feel it, even though you don't recognize it for What It Is. And so that Strength that is True Strength, is used by you, in your amnesia as to your Real Identity, as the means of addressing the fear by overcoming it, rather than abandoning what has occasioned it. And that's why the ego is described as that which causes the experience of fear, but also as that which minimizes it by suggesting that you have the power to overcome it and your power is greater than the fear. And so it gives you courage.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: YOUR recognition that whatever seems to separate you from God is ONLY fear, regardless of the form it takes and quite apart from how the EGO wants you to experience it, is therefore the basic ego threat.

RAJ: What is the basic ego threat? Your recognition that whatever seems to separate you from God is only fear.

RAJ READING: Its dream of autonomy is shaken to its foundation by this awareness. For though you may countenance a false idea of independence, you will NOT accept the cost of fear IF YOU RECOGNIZE IT.

RAJ: So, why do you not avoid needs? Why do you engage in addressing needs? Because they are the point of breakthrough, they sit there as the threshold of discovery; they sit there as the threshold of a miracle. And if you're willing to address the need, it will uncover to you the fear you have that you're not competent to meet the need. And it will also uncover the fear you have that if there is a God, maybe God won't answer you. So fear has you coming and going. And it will box you in unless you ignore it. But if you do not ignore it, the miracle will occur. The shift of perception, the sudden shift of perception will occur. And simultaneous with it, will be the evidence of needs met, so that that need no longer presents itself.

RAJ READING: ...though you may countenance a false idea of independence, you will NOT accept the cost of fear IF YOU RECOGNIZE IT. Yet this IS the cost, and the ego CANNOT minimize it.

RAJ: The ego and the fear are simultaneous and inseparable. The only way to get out of the fear is to abandon the ego. How do you abandon the ego? Very simply. In religious terms, turn to God. Invite God back into your life. Break your stupid isolation. Break your stupid rest in independence by inviting God back in.

But even more clearly, you have the means now, because you have the words now to understand that the way you abandon the ego is by abandoning the memory banks, abandoning the thinking, abandoning the reasoning processes that are based upon what is in the memory banks. You now know, because the words are being used, that there is a Place of Excellence in you, an Altar. It's the Place where what? Your Divinity is held in trust while you dally with the ego. And what is held in trust there is called the Holy Spirit.

How do you abandon the ego? By giving your attention to that Place in you where your essential God-derived Divinity awaits your attention and invitation to be involved. And then listen, rather than spout from the memory banks all of your best judgments, and opinions, and reasonings, and conclusions, and definitions... blah, blah, blah.

It's not hard, but it does require a shifting of gears, a shifting of attention, and a shift of intent. "Not my will, but Thine be done." You see?

Again.

RAJ READING: ...though you may countenance a false idea of independence, you will NOT accept the cost of fear IF YOU RECOGNIZE IT.

RAJ: Meaning if you recognize it for what it is.

RAJ READING: Yet this IS the cost,...

RAJ: Again, that's just the Way Things Work. It is the cost. No way to wiggle around it. It costs something.

RAJ READING: ...this IS the cost, and the ego CANNOT minimize it. For if you overlook...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...love...

[slight pause]

RAJ READING: ... you are overlooking YOURSELF, and you MUST fear unreality BECAUSE you have denied yourself.

RAJ: In other words, it says the state of insanity cannot be a comfortable experience.

RAJ READING: By believing that you have successfully ATTACKED truth, you are believing that attack has POWER.

RAJ: Why? Because you believe that you have successfully attacked truth.

RAJ READING: Very simply, then, you have become afraid of YOURSELF.

RAJ: The Christ That You Are.

RAJ READING: And no-one wills to learn what he believes would destroy him.

RAJ: What if you join with your Brother in a willingness to recognize needs, not for the purpose of seeing what the problems of the world are, but so that the needs can be addressed and eradicated? Wow. What if your fear that you're engaging in helping, in caring, in meeting the need, what if it results in miracles? Ah, you might become known as a miracle worker. Tsk. Bad news. Bad news. Then all the huddled masses of the world might converge on your doorstep. Well, but it's just the same suggestion in a greater magnitude. "Maybe I can't be the agent for change for the masses of the world. Maybe God will not work a miracle. Maybe I am not able." You see?

So here we moved from, on a small scale with just your neighbor or your friend who has a need, or a member of your family, that you might not be able to stand immovably on behalf of the miracle, that you wouldn't be able to be an agent for change, and then finding out that, indeed, that is the means for, not initiating a miracle, but eliciting/allowing a miracle and experiencing the wonder of it. You see, then you'll find yourself not devoting yourself to anything else, because you see that it is what promotes correction of the things that need to be corrected. And you were just willing to stand as the servant of the movement of the miracle, rather than the author of it.

But now the fear presents itself that such an outcome will cause you to be overwhelmed with needs presenting themselves to you that you may not be able to be equal to. You see? You just moved into a larger arena in your mind and reemployed the initial fear.

You are all conditioned by fear. And this is what you need to see. You need to be willing to look at what holds you back. You have a need not to be suffering. You have a need not to be suffering from the belief that you are something less than the Christ. You need... you need to no longer experience an unconsciousness of your capital "B" Birthright because of Who and What You Divinely Are.

Looking at it, is not for the purpose of saying, coming to the conclusion, "I'm really screwed up!" That's not the point. The point is to see what the belief is that keeps you from leaning further beyond it into your need not to be suffering, so that you get past the reluctance to experience a miracle, to have the clearer experience of your Divinity.

I'm here helping you persist through your fears that create reluctance and resistance, and that cause you to say, "You know, I really don't need that much. I really don't need to be wealthy. I do quite well with very little." You see? "I have learned what's really important, and things are not important."

"I've learned how to be alone. It wouldn't have been my choice, but I've learned to be alone. And you know what? In my aloneness, I've gotten closer to God." Well, I'm telling you right now, that thought is pure bullshit. It's pure ego bullshit, because the closer you get to God, the closer you will find yourself becoming with your Brother, and the more involved you will become in the addressing of needs with Divine Guidance. And as a result, experience miracles that will ripple out and bless everyone, because there never is a private miracle! Never!

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If the ego's goal of autonomy could be accomplished God's purpose could be defeated, and this IS impossible. Only by learning what fear IS can you finally learn to distinguish the possible from the impossible and the false from the true. According to the ego's teaching, ITS goal can be accomplished, and God's purpose can NOT. According to the Holy Spirit's teaching, ONLY God's purpose is accomplishment, and it is ALREADY accomplished.

RAJ: What is accomplished? The Movement of Being. The "Behold, I make all things new." That is What's Going On. It's the only Thing that's going on.

And if you are not seeing it in your daily life, which is really the only place available to you to see it, then you're having a dream. You're having a nightmare. But it is available to be seen, and that's why correction of illusions is possible. And it is why giving your attention to needs out of caring, because you are Love, elicits miracles, sudden shifts of perception.

Miracles require diligence, much of the time. Miracles require of you that you stand right in the face of the effects of a hurricane, right in the face of a family illness, right in the face of whatever, and stay Conscious. Don't lapse into your metaphysical and spiritual folderol that lets you not address with your full attention the manifestation of a miracle, because you've learned how to do with less than a miracle. [The ego says:] "You're quite happy with less. And, to tell you the truth, your ability to do with less, means you're further along the road of your enlightenment than your Brother who is experiencing need when he needn't."

Miracles are vigorous and invigorating, and it is impossible to stand in their Presence without awe. And if you're not experiencing awe, you're not involved in a miracle. And if you're not involved in a miracle, you have somehow managed to avoid experiencing need. Needs are places in you in your ego structures that are weak, and they therefore serve as thresholds for [finger snap] breakthroughs, aha's, sudden shifts of perception—sudden shifts of perception that put you in the position of acting, I'm going to say, radically, unexpectedly, uncalculatedly, being in a way that doesn't honor all of the statements of the need. You usually experience need as a clear statement of lack—of lack that you cannot escape. On the other hand, if you're looking at it as a threshold of breakthrough, of discovery and transformed experience, you will behave on that basis as you are infilled with that awareness, and you will take actions that your interpretation of “need as lack” would not allow you to take.

Now, I have shared with you a vigorous teaching that should invigorate you and cause you to have a little bit more courage to look at needs, so that your attention might be where the breakthrough can occur, and the sudden shift of perception can happen, and the correction of the suggestion of lack can be replaced by the Conscious Experience of Fulfillment that will be recordable on cameras, that will be evident through physical examination.

So where are you going to give your attention? Are you going to give your attention to wonderful, soft, spiritual platitudes? Or are you going to give your attention to real, down-to-earth, daily needs that may be uncovering limitations you’ve accepted as real, for the purpose of getting beyond that limited belief, so that you have the experience of the Fullness of your Being and have the evidence of it as well?

“Well, you know, hurricane Katrina has been a humungous disaster. I’m not wealthy. It’s so overwhelming that anything I would do would just be a drop in the bucket, and probably would be siphoned off by the executives who are administrating the contributions. So, what’s the use?” Well, there’s your first need. Address that thought. The thought is, “I can’t do anything meaningful here.” Not true. Needing to see through that thought, is the thing to give your attention to. Why? So that you can listen to find out what you can do, because you can do something.

God in His Infinite Self-Expression Looking Like You is not incompetent to the meeting of needs and the uncovering of the fact that their existence is illegitimate. And so you stick with it until you have the shift of perception that uncovers what you are capable of doing, together with the experience of its real meaningfulness, so that you may act and be that which diminishes the evidence of need.

Now, I’m talking about this because this is where we are in the book. It’s just handy that Katrina came along at the same time so I can use it as an example.

I love you all vigorously, with enthusiasm, with everything I can bring to you to encourage you not to continue, no matter what lofty reasons you might have for it or what selfish reasons you might have for it, so that you might stop maintaining distance from each other, separating yourself from addressing needs, and giving yourself a nice, little, imaginary castle that you can’t let anything disturb. I said that’s death. And the message tonight is engage in Life with Love, Extension, Caring—that which involves you with each other, instead of separating you from each other.

I look forward to being with you next week. But lean on me all week, okay?
Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Well, I hope you all had an interesting week in the sense of looking at needs as though they are a threshold of discovery, rather than some absolute statement of lack that you have to suffer from. And I also hope that you allowed for the fact that needs have a bad habit of showing up at the most inopportune times. In other words, they always interrupt your schedule. They have no sense of respect for the orderliness you would like to interpose upon your days—order that you think allows you to accomplish things in an orderly manner, and therefore, thereby, to be successful by whatever definition of success you're using. I hope that you enjoyed allowing interruptions to your schedule to occur so that you might have had the experience of flexibility that allowed the unexpected to happen, and thereby enriched you.

To interpose order, no matter how righteously you do it, to interpose order on the flow of life is always as ridiculous as, well let me ask you, how many of you have seen square watermelons in the store? If you haven't, it was thought that square watermelons would make an interesting marketing device and so watermelons as they grew were placed in a square container so that as they got larger, they ran into resistance and would grow where there was space, enlarge where there was room, and stop enlarging where it ran into order. [laughing] Now how ridiculous is that?

Now when I say that I hope that you allowed the order that you superimpose upon your day to be violated as though it were a good thing, I'm not suggesting that you're to embrace chaos. But I will tell you this: the automatic assumption is that if order is not applied to life, life will be chaotic. And that is not true. The suggestion is that life is chaos unless somebody brings intelligence to bear upon it.

How many neatniks do we have in the room? And don't raise your hand. How many of you have a place for everything, and everything in its place, and heaven help the one who moves something a half an inch? How many don't feel comfortable without having everything exactly where you want it?

Let me say this. If the way you arrange things neatly is attractive, you're happy, but what you don't realize is that the obsession with orderliness and having everything exactly where you want it, is as much an aberration of the mind as the person who never throws anything away and who keeps everything. Over here are all the daily papers for the last ten years. And over here are other knickknacks, bottle caps, whatever, that they might have a use for. And it looks like chaos, because the order and the obsession with having a place for everything and keeping it, is not pretty.

Everyone needs to loosen up. Everyone needs to become like the willow tree. Everyone needs to let the unexpected happen. And everyone needs to invite the unexpected, because as long as you approach your day allowing only for the expected, you will only have what you're already familiar with; unless, of course, you're expecting the unexpected. But none of you do that, as a general rule.

A miracle, a sudden shift of perception, goes outside the box; doesn't fit into the existing order; won't meet your expectations. If you want to wake up, if you want to experience enlightenment, if you want to experience the fulfillment of your Being, you are going to have to let something else in, other than what you're already familiar with and what you're only willing to accept. If the borders of your tent are going to be enlarged, your life is going to have to be shaken up. The boundaries are going to have to be redrawn. And hopefully you will arrive at a point where you will let your Being be boundaryless, because that's where the Reality of you will be able to register with you, and where you will not maintain a distance from yourself and your brothers, or yourself and the world. And you will cease to maintain separation.

You must understand that if you are going to allow needs to register with you, which are weaknesses in your ego structures where the pressure of your divinity has a chance to break through, that you are going to be confronted with Order, with a capital "O". If you will allow the breakthrough to occur, chaos will not be the result. I could say that if you let the breakthrough occur, a higher order of things will register with you, but it would be just as well to say a deeper order of things. A better way of saying it would be a more fundamental order of things; something utterly at one with your nature; something exhibiting the characteristics of God, which you don't have to be afraid of, but which your ego will be. Your tendency to want to hold on to the order you have established because it makes you feel safe, that will be violated. And it will be unsettling.

The word "disillusioned" is, in most people's eyes, a rather negative word. "Well, I was disillusioned about so-and-so." Or, "I was disillusioned about the government. Tsk, tsk, tsk.” What it means is that you have become free of illusion. To become disillusioned is an excellent thing. To become free of artificial structures and order that you are applying to life so as to make you feel safe while you’re still insane, is not intelligent and it won’t be healing. And it will keep you locked in to the status quo.

Want to be disillusioned. Want to be put in the position of having false, binding structures broken down, freeing you up so that you might have the wonderful opportunity to feel the divine Order of things that’s already in place and never stopped being.

Now, in experiential terms, throughout your days you are busy, as a general rule, thinking and reasoning and calculating and planning. You’re very, very busy in your mind bringing things into whatever you call orderliness. Why do you do this? Because you’re afraid of disorder. But there is something else you can do.

And the something else you can do is to become still. The something else you can do is to stop thinking. Abandon the reasoning. Abandon the calculating. Abandon the prognosticating. Abandon psyching out your neighbor, or your brother, or your friend, or your business partner, and what he or she is likely to do based on past experience and what effect that’s going to have on you, and therefore what you had better do so as not to have any more upset than is already going on in your life occurring. You see, you do all of this to protect yourself. But there is something else you can do; you can abandon that.

“Well, no, I can’t. I can’t. I’m too nervous about what might happen and I’ve got to attend to that.”

Every meditator will tell you that no matter what is occupying their mind before they meditate, no matter what is going on in their life before they sit down to take time to be still even if it’s only for twenty minutes out of their day, that no matter what is going on, when they sit down giving themselves the kindness of becoming still, they move into an experience of peace.

I’ve said before, as it says in the Course in so many words, there is a Place of Excellence in you. Well, you know what? These are not the best words, but there is a Place of Peace in you. And it always accompanies you, no matter what is going on. It is ever present. It’s not just a place in you; it is the context of your Being, of your Real Being, of the Christ That You Are.

Again, no matter what is going on, whether you seem to be dying of cancer, whether or not someone else you know is injured and needs immediate attention and you’re the only one there to deal with it, no matter whether the baby is crying because he’s hungry, no matter what, your peace is available to you. You do not have to cope with the events in your life from the frightened busyness of your mind where you are constantly calculating everything so as to bring about the best result—meaning your safety.

You can choose for your peace. But you know what? You have to break a habit in order to do that. You have to break the habit of obsessively thinking. You have to break the habit of obsessively worrying. You have to be willing to say, “I’m going to sit down for twenty minutes, and I’ll pick up and worry after the twenty minutes is over. I’ll think after the twenty minutes is over. I’ll be upset after the twenty minutes is over. But for these twenty minutes, I’m going to shut up. I’m going to become still. I’m going to give my attention to the sensation of the air as it moves through my nose as I’m breathing. And if I find myself thinking, I will gently bring my attention back to the sensation of the air moving through my nostrils while I’m breathing, and nothing else. Or I’m going to use a mantra, and when I find myself distracted by fear, or a thought, or whatever, I’m going to bring my attention back to the mantra for twenty minutes, and afterwards I’ll worry about things.”

Now, many people meditate but they think that what they’re doing is bringing their body into a state of relaxation. They think that the quietness is a body not being tense, and that it is temporary unless they maintain it by meditating frequently. But I am telling you that the peace that you arrive at isn’t a body that’s relaxed. It’s you experiencing the context of your Being. It is you experiencing the fundamental Nature of You. It’s you experiencing an utterly divine dynamic: Peace.

And you all have the choice to be conscious of everything there is for you to be conscious of from that peace. And it is equally possible for you to engage in watering your garden, or conversing with a friend, or driving to the store and being active in that peace. Peace is not immobilization. Peace is not inactivity. Peace is your Birthright from which to be.

Now the interesting thing is that when you do this and you move into your peace—fear, anxiety, anger, jealousy are nowhere to be found. If you stay in your peace and consider the circumstances that seemed to arouse those emotions, those emotions are nowhere to be found, because you are able as Mind, as Awareness, to consider all things from your peace in which there is clarity available to you with which to deal with those circumstances in a non-reactive way, in a non-defensive way, in a non-self-protective way that embraces everyone and everything involved so that, as the saying goes, the result is a win-win situation.

None of you are handicapped with a horrible life. The only thing you’re handicapped by is an intention that you have to cope with it from a context of reaction. And you have another choice.

Now we talked last week about the fact that needs are messy because they are a threshold or a process of change, and that the need is to be willing to address those needs by being present with them and being open to the miracle that they are the threshold for. Well, how do you be open to the miracle? You be open to the miracle by being present with the need from your peace; by choosing not to try to handle it all by yourself and not to try to be the authorizer of a resolution or a solution, but instead to recognize that this dynamic is a call for greater clarity which is on your immediate horizon, or on the immediate horizon of a friend who is experiencing a need, sees it as a lack, sees no other way to look at it, and finds the experience distressing. Someone who needs a mentor; someone who needs you to be willing to stand with them. How? Reacting as they are? No, but choosing instead to listen. How do you listen? You shut up. You be still. And you invite the clarity that the need is the threshold of. And you stand quietly making room for it—something you cannot do when you are being defensive, when you are being reactive.

And I've talked before about the difference between emotions and feelings. Feelings, properly identified, relate to Soul—your capacity to feel the divinity of everything. Emotions are reactions experienced by you when you are attempting to be unjoined with your Father, to be independent and autonomous, to be actively separate from everyone and everything. And emotions are the way the ego interprets the, I'm going to say, dynamic invitation of your divinity to let yourself into the larger perspective of Truth than the ego is allowing.

Harmony is the divine equivalent of order; the kind of order that you would individually like to apply to and coerce things into being. Harmony just is. It isn't applied to anything. It's the nature of everything just as peace is the nature of your Being. It already is.

All of your self-righteous, emotional reactions to situations and people and things are another way in which you practice separation. Feelings, on the other hand, are not a defense against anything. They embrace all things. They are your capacity as Soul to recognize and acknowledge and feel and experience what everything divinely is. And that capacity is ever-present with you.

So when somebody says, "How are you?", don't say, "Well, I'm not feeling too well." Instead be honest and say, "Well, to tell you the truth, I'm in a bit of a state of self-righteous reaction. I'm in an emotional twit because I'm unwilling to look at the larger picture and I'm insisting on determining what all of this means all by myself."

Emotions are of the ego. Feelings are of the Soul. It's important to make the distinction. Emotions are reactionary, always in the name of self-protection.

And self-protection is the means by which you keep a boundary around yourself and between you and everything else.

And one of the fundamental reasons for this is that you've forgotten that there's another way to look at things. There is peace in you forever with you, being the constituting nature of you that you can be from if you make the choice to give your attention there by silencing the incessant ego chatter, which you conveniently call thinking because it's not as offensive a word.

Paul is not sitting here thinking about what he is going to say. You don't have to think in order to be intelligent. You don't have to think in order to be meaningful. You don't have to think in order to do things. It's not necessary unless you think you are independent and on your own, and that it's your job to be the authorizer of things and to make things happen because if you don't, nothing will happen, or if you don't establish order, chaos will reign, just because. You don't have to think that way. You don't have to think at all in order to be meaningful, in order to be an agent for change, in order to be a presence that triggers sudden shifts of perception in others.

Let's go to the book.

Can you imagine this?

RAJ READING: God is as dependent on you as you are on Him...

RAJ: Dependency, you know, is one of those dirty words. You know, you want to be independent. You want to be self-sufficient. You do not want to have to lean on anyone. And above all, you don't want anyone to lean on you.

But:

RAJ READING: God is as dependent on you as you are on Him...

RAJ: Well, God is absolute. Therefore, if God is dependent, His dependency, His state of dependency must also be absolute. It's not variable. It's not temporary. It's just the Way things Are—the capital "W" Way things capital "A" Are.

RAJ READING: God is as dependent on you as you are on Him because His autonomy ENCOMPASSES yours, and is therefore incomplete WITHOUT it.

RAJ: Well, we've been using the word "autonomy." What does it mean? That which is autonomous is something which is not affected by anything outside itself. It is something which is not subject to anything outside itself. Well, I think that's what omnipotence means. And I think that's what omnipresence means. That which has no outside to it is infinite and is all; and is therefore a singularity; is therefore pure without a single element of anything unlike itself and therefore incapable of embodying polarities; something which is therefore eternal.

God is autonomous and...

RAJ READING: ...His autonomy ENCOMPASSES yours,...

RAJ: God has autonomy and you have autonomy? No. There's only one thing going on. There simply is only one thing going on: God. And it looks like this. [gesturing around the room] It looks like this. It looks like this. It looks like this. It looks like this. And it looks like the flower.

The daisy will always be the daisy. It won't be the daisy one moment and a chrysanthemum the next moment. It's purely what it is forever.

Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: You can only establish your autonomy by identifying WITH Him,...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...and fulfilling your function AS IT EXISTS IN TRUTH.

RAJ: In other words, you cannot establish your autonomy by acting at odds with God, by making up your own rules, by saying this is what a thing is instead of what it really is, and forcing everybody else to look at it and agree with you that it is what you say it is. Autonomy isn't gained by you or embodied by you by your exertion of force to make people and watermelons be the way you want them to be. You gain your autonomy, you establish your autonomy by letting the watermelon be the way God made it, and bringing curiosity into play so that you're willing to sit down and be intimate with that watermelon the way God is being it, and inviting the clear, uncluttered, undistorted conscious experience of what it divinely is in the absence of all the definitions you have made up about it. You can only establish your autonomy by ceasing to try to independently be creative. In other words, by dis-identifying from your concept of yourself, and identifying with Him—God.

"God, what am I? God, I'm sick and tired of the struggle of trying to be something on my own. It isn't working. And no matter how hard I've tried, it never has worked. What am I as Your Self-Expression? Please illuminate me with the clear experience of You being All There Is to me. I've heard about that, but I need... I need the experience. And I'm willing, to the best of my ability, not to defend myself against the experience." And then be willing to stand at the edge of the void because you don't know what the experience is going to be like, or what it is. And persist in standing there with a constant invitation; not a constant coercion, but a constant willingness to let it register with you, knowing that it is bound to register with you because you, unconscious of Who You Are, is not what you were created to be.

RAJ READING: You can only establish your autonomy by identifying WITH Him,...

RAJ: The Father.

RAJ READING: ...and fulfilling your function AS IT EXISTS IN TRUTH.

RAJ: What is your function? To not inhibit or distort or alter in any way by a personal act of will What God Is Being right there where you are. It's called glorifying God. You see? We've talked about it before—glorifying God. It isn't singing hosannas to God. What it is, is you not objecting to and not inhibiting the Presence of God in you as you from being all there is where you are, because you have abandoned your personal, private attempts to introduce something new into the picture. That's what glorifying God is.

And in letting that happen, well, does it just mean God is the great one and that you'll disappear? No. But you know what? You'll know what being the Presence of God presencing Himself means. And you will feel your divinity and your wholeness and your fulfillment because, for lack of better words, you're letting what God is be reflected in you as you. And you will find that you have become part of the Conscious Movement of Creation; not alongside the Father, but with and as the Father. That is the best way I can put it into words at the moment. Your fulfillment comes from letting what you were created to be, be what is right there where you are, instead of your trying to create what you are all by your little, orphaned lonesome.

Now:

RAJ READING: The ego...

RAJ: This neat, little, self-sufficient, separate bugger that you all think you are.

RAJ READING: ...believes that to accomplish ITS goal is happiness.

RAJ: You know. "Man, I'm gonna make something out of myself. And it's gonna make me happy. And I'm gonna show everybody else. And you know what? When I'm somebody, I may even help other people become somebodies."

RAJ READING: The ego believes that to accomplish ITS goal is happiness.

RAJ: And what is its goal? Autonomy. In the ego's case, autonomy means uniquely and specifically different from everything else. That isn't the definition of autonomy that I just described a few minutes ago. And it thinks that accomplishing that is happiness.

RAJ READING: But...

RAJ: In spite of that and aside from that.

RAJ READING: ...it is given YOU to know that God's function IS yours, and happiness cannot be found apart from your JOINT will.

RAJ: "Oh! Oh, you mean I get to... God's Will and my will, the two of us get to merge our wills and do something jointly willfully, but jointly in cooperation?" No. Your happiness cannot be found apart from your—I'm going to put it this way—joined will. Meaning not independent any longer; where you're not holding yourself apart, but you're letting God in and you're letting yourself into God, and you're saying, "I do not want to maintain the boundary anymore. I do not want to maintain my divorce from my Father, my Source, any longer. I wish to not hold myself aloof. I wish to not hold myself separate. I want, I long, I desire to experience togetherness. I wish not be alone." Your happiness cannot be found apart from your willingness to let something else in and to let yourself into something else.

RAJ READING: Recognize only that the ego's goal, which you have pursued quite diligently, has merely brought you FEAR, and it becomes difficult to maintain that fear IS happiness.

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: Recognize only that the ego's goal, which you have pursued quite diligently, has merely brought you FEAR,...

RAJ: Recognize that.

RAJ READING: ...and it becomes difficult...

RAJ: As a result of the recognition of that.

RAJ READING: ...to maintain that fear IS happiness.

RAJ: Now the simple fact is that as long as you have divorced yourself, separated yourself from God—your Father, your Source, the Ground of your Being—you will be uncomfortable. You will be ill at ease, because you are attempting to be at odds with What You Are, and that constitutes a dissonance; an uncomfortable dissonance. A dissonance that constitutes a warning; something a little bit more intense than a highway sign that gives you a little bit of information. It's something that lets you know that what you're attempting to do, you can't accomplish. And attempting to accomplish it, because it constitutes a state of self-denial, is not sane, is not wise; can only be fraught with confusion and dynamics that it's not your Nature or your Birthright to be experiencing. And it will be uncomfortable enough that you will not be able to deny it completely.

And so, although you minimize it, you don't deny it, and this little quirky, trippy, sleight-of-hand comes into play that says, "Ah, my purpose is to overcome this fear, and I have the capacity to do it." But the dissonance that you're experiencing is saying, "Don't try to overcome the dissonance. Stop doing what is causing it."

You may do it as long as you wish, but it will be constantly uncomfortable. And the more intently you engage in doing it, the more uncomfortable it will become, because the harder you push against your divine Self, the more profoundly your divine Self, which can't successfully be denied, lets Its presence be known. Its unyieldingness presents itself.

And so the harder you hit the immovable object, the more uncomfortable your fist is going to be. Your ego state of mind says, "There must be a way for me to develop my hand so that it will become like a jackhammer and be able to make its way through this immovable object." You see? And so you devote yourself to that which will not correct the problem.

What will correct the problem is neglecting to any further employ your will to accomplish something that can't be done, and return to the willingness to embrace yourself as What You Are, which is the Son of God, the Offspring of God, the Manifestation of God. And mind you, the Manifestation of God is not something different from God. The Manifestation of God is God. Which means that as you all sit here in your varying degrees of, let's say, a physical definition of yourself, you are the Ultimate—not being any form of a physicalness of self; not any form of the definition, the faulty definitions that you've made up because you've had lack of real information about What You Are. And everything you see that you've been called [calling] physicalness is Spirit recognizably being in a manner that identifies God's Creative Self-Expression. And there isn't any matter to it. But there is the Manifestation of God.

Again.

RAJ READING: Recognize only that the ego's goal, which you have pursued quite diligently, has merely brought you FEAR, and it becomes difficult to maintain that fear IS happiness.

RAJ: You're not so insane that you would continue to maintain that fear is happiness once you see what it is.

RAJ READING: UPHELD by fear, this IS what the ego would have you believe. Yet God's Son...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...is not insane, and CANNOT believe it.

RAJ: And you want to know something? None of you do believe it. But you're playing with imagining it. And you're playing with the fun of imagination. You're employing it for all its worth, or have been. You're exploring it to its depths. But you wouldn't be here and you wouldn't be listening to me if somewhere along the line you hadn't gotten tired of it and wanted to find your way back Home, wanted to find your way back into your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: Yet God's Son is not insane, and CANNOT believe it. Let him but RECOGNIZE it, and he will NOT accept it. For only the insane would choose fear IN PLACE of love, and only the insane could believe that love can be gained by attack.

RAJ: Okay, well, let's use some other words. [small laugh] Only the insane could believe that love can be gained by enforcing orderliness on your world. You see? That sounds pretty nice, doesn't it? Sounds constructive. But it is attack, because you are attempting to bring order where the Harmony of Being preexisted this imaginative project of yours to bring order by your own hand and by your own will.

RAJ READING: But the sane know that only attack could produce FEAR, from which the Love of God completely protects them.

RAJ: All of you to one degree or another, or another, are beginning to recognize that only attack could produce fear. And as a result of that, you are being able to look at yourselves and begin to notice where you're employing separation, divisiveness, self-protection, at the cost of your peace and joy, and at the cost of the peace and joy of everyone and everything around you. And so you're in a position to begin to change your behavior with what can only seem like a promise to you at the moment that the Love of God completely protects you from.

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: The sane know that only attack could produce FEAR, from which the Love of God completely protects you.

RAJ: I've changed the words a bit.

So, you have a promise presented to you, because you don't see it fully yet. And the promise is that when you abandon self-protection, the Love of God will uncover to you the fact that you don't need protection because you are not separate from your Father. And you and your Father, not willing in a proactive way to be separate in any way, constitute a Singularity—autonomy itself—which is utterly pure, omnipresent, eternal, unfragmented, and without opposition in any part of It. That's the promise that you are given when you are encouraged to return to your Right Mind and abandon this great ethic you have engaged in to prove your independent existence.

The Love of God does protect you similarly to the fact that your peace protects you from jealousy, anger, fear; all of the emotions that debilitate you. Your peace is ever-present with you because it is the context of your very Being. And when you move into it, you find anything opposite to you to be nowhere to be found. You're protected, you could say. But you're protected because in the unity, the indivisibility of your very Being right here today, you are not vulnerable because there is nothing unlike you present. And when you move into your peace, when you truly become still and move into your peace, you can sit in your chair fully conscious of everything that's going on, and even what the world seems to be claiming about you, and fear is not present and the feeling of threat is not present. And your ability to see clearly is not thwarted by negative energies. Your peace protects you from all threat. God's Love protects you from fear because it is the absence of fear.

As you go through the coming week, pay attention and notice when fear begins to creep in. Notice when you feel a call for defense. You will say that some person or some circumstance or some event has occasioned it, and they are justifiable reasons for the fear. But the only reason you will be experiencing fear is not because of the persons or the circumstance or the event, but the fact that you have abandoned your peace before you looked at them. Now that's a very powerful tool, you might say, that you have available to you. That awareness is very practical. Whether you employ it or not remains to be seen.

But remember, if you lose your cool, it's because you abandoned your peace before you looked at the thing that you say causes you, caused you to lose your cool. And therefore, you don't have to wait for the person, circumstance or situation to change. You can immediately make a different choice and shut up and sit down and become quiet, and find your peace before you look once again at the situation, and before you act. And the result will not be chaos if your intent is true. What you will open yourself up for is the Love of God that will demonstrate to you there is nothing to be afraid of because Love is the absence of fear. God's Love is the absence of fear. And in the absence of fear, and the clarity that there's nothing to be afraid of, you will move in your world in a way that brings forth benign-ness, not only for you, but for everyone.

Now then there's powerful words; valuable, usable. Not so that you can gain control or better order, but so that you can abandon the place where you feel like control and better order is called for in order for you to feel safe and come into your inheritance, come into the experience of your Birthright, which simply is what is and can't be changed, and therefore never was changed. And you never lost it. And you don't have to regain it and you don't have to defend it. It's immovably the Truth about you, which you're in the process of rediscovering—that's all.

But it's going to mean that the border of your tent is going to enlarge, and change will happen—a sudden shift of perception—a sudden glorious shift of perception. Don't worry about having shifts of perception that are worse than you've had before, of things that are worse. [laughing] You're pretty much at the bottom of the barrel. Miracles are sudden shifts of perception for the better; for the correction of your suffering.

And I will be with you all week. I've always been with you, but I want to say it. I will be with you, all of you, all week. I'm never absent. You're never alone.

And I'm always present to help illuminate what will cause you to let go of your compulsive attempts to control. Sometimes you don't want that kind of help. But I'm still there. And when you don't want the help, you won't get the help. Not because I'm not willing, but because you've said, "No." And I'll tell you something, your word means something. You need to know your word means something so that when you say "Yes," you can have confidence in that and the result.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

We'll go right into the book.

RAJ READING: The ego analyzes; the Holy Spirit ACCEPTS.

RAJ: The reason the ego analyzes, in other words the reason each of you thinks things through, is because the ego has no source to go to in order to know anything. The ego, really being nonexistent, just an imagination, doesn't have a capacity to know. And so it must gather data and analyze it so that it may come to what it calls an intelligent decision. And of course, what determines an intelligent decision as far as the ego is concerned is something that successfully covers up the fact that it doesn't really exist. It's something that protects it from discovery.

But:

RAJ READING: ...the Holy Spirit ACCEPTS.

RAJ: The Holy Spirit has not denied its Source. The Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind—you in your actuality—has never separated itself from its Source. And it knows that its Function is to reflect its Source. The Holy Spirit, claiming no separate actuality from its Source, yields to its Source. That is its Nature; that is its Function. That is your Nature; that is your Function.

Shifting from the ego perspective to the only True Perspective that you have available to you seems a frightening one because it means that you are giving up personal control, personal authority—the only thing that the ego sees can keep it intact; keep it safe from dissolving, from disappearing, from losing its validity. And because the ego is not an “it”—it's just a way you're using your minds—it seems to you that you will lose your identity. You will lose your actuality. You will lose that force of presence, or force of character, that makes you presentable and actual, which obviously means that you will disappear. But you are not what you imagine yourselves to be.

You are that which has imagined itself to be something different from What It Is. You are that which has the choice to imagine or not imagine. You are that which is present whether imagination is occurring or not, just as you are that which exists whether you're thinking or not. You are that Pure Awareness, Conscious Being, the Being of Consciousness that exists immovably, infinitely, eternally, with or without thought.

And so:

RAJ READING: ...the Holy Spirit ACCEPTS.

RAJ: This word "accepts" is important. It's not important when you are awake, but it's important when you're not awake and in a process of waking up, because one who wants to be an author does not want to accept; one who claims authority that he does not have, wants others to accept him. And so to engage in acceptance, to consciously engage in yielding to something other than what you presently perceive yourself to be, is essential to waking up. It is essential to abandoning your habit of trying to be and thinking that you are successfully being a personal authority, which would cause you to be separate from everything else, and which is the whole problem that all of you are wanting to wake up from.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The appreciation of wholeness comes ONLY through acceptance, for to analyze means to separate out. The attempt to understand totality by breaking it up is clearly the characteristically contradictory approach of the ego to everything.

RAJ: You're not feeling well and somebody says, "Well, what were you thinking? What was your attitude before you started not feeling well? You're responsible for what you are experiencing. What were you thinking? Well, what caused you to think that? Why were you thinking that?"—and getting all of the little details so as to have an understanding of the process by which this one arrived at a point of not feeling well. Why? So that a process of healing might be arrived at that can be used again in the future and thereby assure control so that one won't have to go through the problem again.

But the Holy Spirit would say, "Aside from what you were thinking, aside from what events happened, are you not the Son of God? Are you not God's Daughter? Aside from what you think has happened and what seems to justify your condition, are you not the manifestation, the visibility and tangibility of Love—God’s Love in His Self-Expressing right there where you are? Do you realize how loved you are? Will you open up to the experience of Love that not only surrounds you, but constitutes the essence of every little aspect of you. Every molecule, every atom, every movement of energy in what you would call your body, is the Presence and Movement of Love illuminating everything. You are the Energy of Love. The Energy of Love is all there of you. Will you take some time right now to let that experience in?” You see? “You don’t need to defend yourself against anything. You don’t need to defend yourself against your thoughts. You don’t need to defend yourself at all, because you are safely held in the arms of God because you are the embodiment of God Himself, and nothing else.” You see, the Holy Spirit accepts what’s true of you and reflects what’s true of you back to you so that you might consider what’s true of you without analysis, so that you might be able to quiet your fear enough to let the experience of Love that is you and is around you in. It invites you into a wholeness, not into bits and pieces and parts. It moves your mind into a Singularity which is perfectly in harmony with God. It invites you to accept, rather than analyze your best beliefs about yourself.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Never forget that the ego believes that power, understanding and TRUTH lie in separation, and to ESTABLISH this belief it MUST attack.

RAJ: Why must it believe that power, understanding and truth lie in separation? Because it’s a state of mind in which it sees itself as independent and needs to confirm its independence in order to ensure its so-called existence and demonstrate it to be real.

And in order...

RAJ READING: ...to ESTABLISH this belief it MUST attack.

RAJ: Well, what does that mean? It means that it must attack your capacity to remember What You Truly Are. It must cause you to become distracted from the Truth, the Real Truth that this so-called ego, this body of thoughts that you employ and concepts and mutual agreements, that they are...

PAUL: I’m sorry. I lost it. [pause]

RAJ: It must demonstrate that they are truth because they are essential to its continuing its sense of existence.

RAJ READING: Unaware that the belief cannot BE established, and obsessed with the conviction that separation IS salvation, the ego attacks everything it perceives by breaking it up into small and disconnected parts, without meaningful relationships, and thus without meaning.

RAJ: When you look at somebody who is distressing you, you never look at them in their totality. You look specifically at their bad habits, at their bad characteristics. You ignore the kindnesses that were expressed yesterday, or even this morning. You ignore, more than anything, the fact that because they exist, they are the effect of their Creator and therefore are holy. You pick them apart into little, disconnected pieces, and then you confront them with this sort of patchwork quilt of a characteristic, of a caricature of them. And you try to prove to them that they are what you are seeing, and that they should be ashamed of it, and that they should feel guilty for it, and that they owe you something for the distress it has caused you.

Always the correction of a problem with another involves first starting with the Ultimate Truth about them. For example: "This is God's Beloved Son or Daughter in whom He is well pleased. This one is not who I conceive themselves to be at the moment while I'm in my emotional twit. If this one exists at all, good or bad, he or she exists because God is being them right there. And so I choose to approach them and consider them in my mind on the basis of that ultimate fact. And I will do that in order to get through and past the bits and pieces, the bad bits and pieces of them that I have collected together to characterize them in my mind, so that I might confirm to them the Truth about them, rather than the misperception I have created of them by tearing them into bits and pieces."

RAJ READING: The ego will ALWAYS substitute chaos for meaning, for if separation is salvation,...

RAJ: In other words, if independence is so goddamned great, then...

RAJ READING: ...harmony...

RAJ: Togetherness. Yielding. Acceptance.

RAJ READING: ...is threat.

RAJ: Ah, to be the self-made man—and lately, recently, to be the self-made woman—that is the big goal.

But not one of you means anything all by yourself, because not any one of you exists all by yourself. And you certainly can't exist at the expense of everyone else. And waking up is learning how you fit in with everything else and how everything else fits in with you, and how essential you are to them and how essential they are to you. But this is threatening to the ethic of being a self-made authorizer, a self-made person.

We've discussed it before: Love is the answer. And Love is embrace. Love is inclusion. Love is the willingness to acknowledge the best in each other, instead of confirming the worst. Waking up therefore means actually changing your behavior—your mental behavior first, and then your external behavior to be consistent with it.

RAJ READING: The ego's interpretation of the laws of perception are, and would HAVE to be, the exact opposite of the Holy Spirit's. The ego focuses on ERROR, and overlooks TRUTH.

RAJ: Which means, since it's the opposite of the Holy Spirit's, that the Holy Spirit focuses on Truth and overlooks error. But the arrogance of the ego insists upon looking at a Brother and pointing out their errors so that it might get a leg up on the situation and stand taller and gain some importance by virtue of having leverage, and thereby control over the one who's been put in second place; the opposite of inclusion and the establishment of estrangement—separation.

RAJ READING: It...

RAJ: The ego.

RAJ READING: ...makes real EVERY mistake it perceives, and with characteristically circular reasoning concludes that BECAUSE of the mistake, consistent truth must be meaningless. The next step, then, is obvious. If consistent truth is meaningless, INCONSISTENCY must be true if truth...

RAJ: In its definition.

RAJ READING: ...has meaning.

RAJ: Well, the statement is quite popular, "Well, everyone creates his own reality so truth is only consistent with the current definition of reality that anyone is using."

And, of course, what is true will depend upon how much self-protection is needed at any given moment, because if one is vulnerable then what the other person doesn't know won't hurt him. And so one will refrain from being honest with his neighbor, or his friend, or his spouse, and so on. And so truth is inconsistent and it becomes that which serves the safety of one who consciously chooses to be in the world deceitfully. And if that can be practiced well and apparently successfully, it proves that inconsistency is a truth and is to be valued. It is an essential of life.

Now some practice this to the extreme, and others practice it more subtly. Most all of you practice it subtly. But you know what? As long as you have agendas of your own that you're engaged in accomplishing without ever having asked the Father or the Holy Spirit whether this identifies fulfillment for you, you are creating your own reality, living in your own concepts of what is real, and thereby living in a made-up world and sense of self that causes you not to be honest with each other, with your fellowman. And you think you're doing this for your survival, which justifies it.

Whether you are consciously aware of the subtleties of your valuing truth as that which is inconsistent, you can begin to move out of it by choosing to listen, by choosing to refer to the Holy Spirit or God, and ask, "Is this appropriate for me? Is this that I am thinking about doing in harmony with my true fulfillment? And if it isn't, what is?" Well, I know some of you say, "Been there, done that. I didn't get any answers. Doesn't work for me; maybe it worked for you. But didn't work for me. End of story." I will tell you something. It will work for you if you will persist, if you will let your intent be singular—if you will do it not as a test of God, but as an opportunity, for once, to be consistent yourself in a continuing manner.

Now you don't have to wait until the axe falls and you're truly under the gun, and you have no choice but to reach out for God or to rely on God with persistence and with consistence and with commitment. You can do it under less stressful conditions, but it will seem to be harder in a way because you will seem to have the opportunity to continue to live without doing it and not suffer too much.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Holding error clearly in mind, and protecting what it has made real, the ego proceeds to the next step in its thought system; that error is real and TRUTH IS ERROR.

RAJ: "Well, you know, God didn't really mean for me to be constantly yielding to Him. God gave me free will. And He meant for me to practice free will, and to learn how to practice it well. God gave me the capacity to be independent from Him in order to learn how to be like Him on my own." And so it makes something utterly insane a fundamental of sanity, and justifies it by saying that was what God intended.

But if you want to learn to be like God, you need to yield into God. Not so that you can by virtue of being an independent thing that yielded into your Father's arms, learned to be like Him, but because you yielded into Him by abandoning a sense of separateness from Him, and let His Mind be in you. And the question comes up again, "How do I do that?" Well, you do it by desiring to have the experience and not abandoning the desire. Persisting in it. There's no simpler way I can put it. And like I said, when it comes right down to a trial in your experience, you may finally find yourself willing to provide that kind of persistent, consistent intent with commitment.

And whenever anyone has done that, they have found themselves being transformed. They say, "I went through a catharsis. You would not believe what happened to me! I'll be glad to tell you, though." And you tell them, and everyone else catches the spirit of it and recognizes the truth of it and is inspired by it. But, oh, God, let's hope you don't have another catharsis. You see? "It was a wonderful experience, but I wouldn't want to stay in the middle of it where I was constantly being transformed." But that is what you want. And that is what you need.

Again.

RAJ READING: Holding error clearly in mind, and protecting what it has made real, the ego proceeds to the next step in its thought system; that error is real and TRUTH IS ERROR.

RAJ: Now continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego makes no attempt to understand this, and it is clearly NOT understandable, but the ego does make EVERY attempt to DEMONSTRATE it, and this it does constantly.

RAJ: You've seen people, they get their minds set on a thing—whether it makes sense or not, whether it's intelligent or not—they know it's true and they're going to push through, come hell or high water. And no matter how much intelligent reasoning is shared with them, they will not abandon their focus on their goal. And they see all expressions of help as a lack of respect of them. And they will determine that all of these other things that are being said are just your opinion—"Well, that's just your opinion"—completely overlooking the fact that they're basing their actions on their opinion, and not their experience of Truth. And if you try to point that out to them, heaven help you!

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Analyzing to attack meaning, the ego DOES succeed in overlooking it, and is left with a series of fragmented perceptions which it unifies on behalf of ITSELF.

RAJ: Somebody says to them, "What you're saying doesn't make sense."

"Oh! Well, it makes sense to me! And that's all that matters. It's my world. That it doesn't make sense to you is, well, that's your reality. So bug off!"

Now I'm speaking of those who are more aggressively into this, but you all do it in one way or another with little things, like how the office ought to be arranged, or how the files should be kept in the filing cabinet, when someone else is expressing a different idea.

“Well, that’s just your opinion. This works for me.”

“Well, but it doesn’t work for the whole office.”

“Well, nobody appreciates the filing system that I’m using. If everybody appreciated it, they would find that it really did work well for them. No one wants to understand the simplicity of the way I have it set up.” You see?

Again.

RAJ READING: Analyzing to attack meaning, the ego DOES succeed in overlooking it, and is left with a series of fragmented perceptions which it unifies on behalf of ITSELF.

RAJ: Of course, not on behalf of anyone else.

RAJ READING: This, then, becomes...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...the universe it perceives.

RAJ: “It’s my reality.”

RAJ READING: And it is this universe which, in turn, becomes its demonstration of its own reality.

RAJ: If you, or if an ego does not have its own unique thoughts which it can act out and demonstrate the so-called intelligence of, it has done nothing to make its mark in the world. It has done nothing to demonstrate its presence. And so it is essential for the ego to do something on its own and cause others to recognize it in order to secure its so-called existence as something actual.

Now mind you, this ego is just a picture you are employing about yourself. But the “you” that is employing it, is far greater than the concept of yourself. The “you” that is employing it, is the Ultimate, the Christ, having forgotten who he or she is because of the fun of trying to do the impossible—to demonstrate a self-made existence, you see, and to prove that you in your own right are something. And that’s how you are hooked. That’s how you become addicted to independence and illusion.

RAJ READING: Do not underestimate the appeal of the ego’s demonstrations to those who would listen. Selective perception chooses its witnesses carefully, and its witnesses ARE consistent. The case for insanity IS strong to the insane.

RAJ: [laughing] [pause]

RAJ READING: For reasoning ends at its beginning, and no thought system transcends its source.

[pause]

RAJ READING: ...reasoning ends at its beginning, and no thought system transcends its source.

RAJ: That's rather like saying that if you are writing out an equation on the blackboard that takes up eight or ten rows, and in the first couple of sets of equations there's an error, that error will be reflected in everything else that follows. And the equation will never be able to transcend the error. You see?

What's the fundamental error? The fundamental error is that you're something in your own right who, you say, God created that way for your own fulfillment and your own development and your own growth, and therefore.... You see? And right now what has been said so far has an error in it—is erroneous—so whatever follows after “and therefore” will not be able to transcend that.

And of course, what follows is that you are going to devote your life to fulfilling the Father's intent. You are going to be the best damned self-made person that ever existed, and you are going to make your parents proud. Because, of course, your parents taught you, “You don't want to be dependent upon society. You don't want to be on welfare. You want to be respectable, don't you?”—which, of course, the child hears as, “You want me to see you as respectable, right?” You want to be respectable so, man, oh, man, you don't waste a moment... you don't waste a moment checking in with God anymore, because that's not what God put you here for. God put you here for the purpose of ignoring Him and taking the tools that He gave you to be on your own and make something of yourself. That's the fundamental mistake in the equation.

And you correct the fundamental mistake in the equation by approaching each event in your day, every conscious awareness of things with the Father, or with the Holy Spirit, or with your Guide—with one who is Awake and will not be fooled by all the tricky, little techniques you have for finagling jewels of wisdom that you can then use to be a better independent entity. You need to choose to be together with, not alone; joined, not isolated. And to the best of your ability, maintain this as you go through the day. It's good to have a Friend. It's good not to be alone. It's good to be working with someone who constantly sees the excellence of you, and therefore is constantly confirming to you that which is in your best interest and that which, if you pay attention to it, moves you into your Sanity, which is always an impactful and awesome experience.

Again.

RAJ READING: The case for insanity IS strong to the insane. For reasoning ends at its beginning, and no thought system transcends its source. Yet reasoning without meaning CANNOT demonstrate anything, and those who are convinced by it MUST be deluded. Can the ego teach truly when it OVERLOOKS truth?

RAJ: Can you experience truly when you're looking at things without the perspective of a Companion who sees it as it truly is?

RAJ READING: Can it...

RAJ: The ego.

RAJ READING: ...perceive what it has DENIED? Its witnesses DO attest to its denial, but hardly to what it has denied!

RAJ: "Yeah, man, you're on the right track. Yeah, man, go for it. Do it. I wanna do it, too, but you do it. You do it first. Do it! Do it! Do it!" You see? "Do it, and do it successfully"—so that I won't have to look at the fact that my Good has already been done to me; my Good has already been given to me; my Good is already mine without my having to lift a finger in order to deserve it; fulfillment is the law of my Being.

"Yeah, man, but you're just being a kept person. You're not being anything yourself. How can you respect yourself?" You see the temptation? You are constantly tempted by the promise of worth that will become yours when you have done well. And if you accept that premise, whatever follows cannot transcend the flaw in that premise.

RAJ READING: The ego looks straight at the Father and does not see Him, for it...

RAJ: The ego.

RAJ READING: ...has denied His Son.

RAJ: Every practice of authority, every practice of independence is a denial of What You Are.

"No, I'm not the Son of God. I am a creation of God which God has set into place to become something. And He's given me all the tools to do it, and I'm going to do the best job anyone's ever done."

You see? It overlooks the Son of God that you are. It distracts you from the Son of God that you are. And it appeals to a perverted sense of arrogance that makes you feel like going for it, instead of saying, "Wait a minute. There is another way to look at this that's true. And I am going to choose to stay with what is true."

Or: "I am choosing to return to what is true. And I'm going to become still. And I'm going to turn within to that Place of Excellence in me. I'm going to turn within toward the Holy Spirit, my Right Mind, so that I might be reminded of my true Sonship or Daughtership as the Direct Expression of God, so that I might experience God right here where I am and the fulfillment that I am told I will experience if I do that."

Now mind you, we've been talking about the ego and the characteristics of the ego, the dynamics of the ego, and we've related it to stuff that goes on in your mind. And I've pointed out that it's stuff that doesn't need to go on in your mind, and it is stuff that it's not your Birthright to be experiencing as the daily jumble of ideas that fill your mind. So it might sound as though I'm talking about you, you really messed-up people, and I'm not. It is important to know that you are not your ego, even though you may be playing with its dynamics. And because at this moment you are the Christ, having forgotten Who You Are, because you've been distracted by this mental strategy; this means of somehow creating for yourself an experience of independence. You can abandon that strategy because you are the Christ; you are not the ego.

And so, I am speaking to that in you which is Real; that in you which is True. I'm appealing to it so that you will, perhaps, choose to be out from that vantage point; a little more consistency consistently each day so as to break the habit of isolation. And the best way to do it is to just constantly be asking, "God, what's going on right there with that lady? God, what's going on right there with that man? God, what's going on there with that child? God, what's the divine Meaning of this tree or this plant?"—constantly expressing curiosity to understand (and I'm going to use that word carefully), to have an experience of the Meaning of those things that goes beyond my best imaginations, my best concepts, and my pet theories. I want to see more than I'm seeing. I want to see without the impediments of the flaws in the beginning of my equations." You see? Because there is fulfillment in front of you that you're not seeing. And there is no justifiable reason for you not to be seeing it. The Power of the Universe, the Power of the Authority of God stands behind your experiencing it.

So bring a little willingness, but bring it consistently. Bring it persistently, even if you do it with a light touch. You don't have to do it with a vengeance. Just do it persistently, consistently, with the element of joyous curiosity.

I know this isn't really the fun part of the Course, but it's essential to look at the reality of the way the game works in order to be able to say, "I think I don't want to persist in this game. I think I do not want to persist in this strategy. I think I would like to try something else." Because the minute you begin to do that with some commitment, the Power of the Authority of God stands ready to reveal to you what you've been looking at and not seeing. God is on your side, truly. And you don't have to earn the right to have His Gift. You only have to bring a little willingness, persistently, consistently, with commitment.

Okay. I look forward to being with you next week. Thank you.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

I suppose you could say that everything we're talking about could be reduced to this statement: You all need to begin to be willing to treat each other as well as you would your dog. If your dog becomes ill or your cat— you know, it doesn't matter how exasperating they've been when they were feeling well, it doesn't matter what has happened—one thing becomes paramount in your mind and that is that you love them and that you don't want them to suffer. And so you shift gears. I'm not picking on you. You shift gears and instead of finding value in the righteous indignation that you generally are willing to express relative to this pet's behavior, it becomes far more important to you to have your mind occupied with what? Anything that will contribute to their getting better. You will devote your mind to knowing what will help, to finding out what will help. And the simple fact is that Love—the Love that you feel when you devote yourself to it—does and will heal.

Now, let's say that a stray dog or a stray cat comes to your porch—neglected, hungry, obviously not having had a good meal in many, many days—and you offer them food and warmth and clean them up, but in the process, you find that this animal is very frightened, is afraid of you, is afraid as a result of your movements. And it becomes obvious that this animal has been mistreated. Do you reject this animal? Well, if you're an animal lover, you don't. And what do you do, or what don't you do? What do you not do? What you don't do is judge them or arrive at your behavior based upon their fear of you and, let us say, any aggressiveness that they express toward you because of their fear. Again, instead of basing your behavior on their behavior, you base your behavior on the love that you feel and the fact that you know that whatever mistreatment they received was not deserved, that they are deserving of love, and that they will respond to love.

And so you take on the task of being the persistent Presence of Love, the persistent presence of reassurance, the persistent invitation to them to be willing to receive your benign and loving attention. And you know that if you will persist long enough, you will win them over, as it said. Now what I've described fulfills the direction that I've given that you all need to find an object of your affection and extend it and break your isolation.

Now, if you work with this animal persistently and lovingly, and its behavior changes, and it becomes more docile, and it becomes more relaxed and even becomes affectionate, you think you did this for this cat or this dog. You give yourself credit for having contributed to its healing. But there is something more important, and the something more important is how you were being you. You saw the animal worthy of attention that its behavior indicated it probably wasn't worthy of. And you persisted to stay in alignment with your love and your confidence that your expression of love would have a beneficial effect. And so you, relative to this animal, moved into a mode of behavior. And this mode of behavior is the one that all of you should be insisting upon operating from all day long with all of your Brothers and Sisters; with each other.

The more important thing than what you might have done for the animal is what you did for yourself, because relative to this animal you broke your habit of governing your actions based upon the actions of something outside yourself. You moved into a way of being that was true; a way of being that was truly in harmony with your Nature and your Function and your Reason for Being. Not your reason, but the Reason for Being placed in you by That which caused you to be and causes you to be.

You look at the frightened animal, you look at this mistreated animal, and you don't say, "Oh, he's been damaged. The damage is permanent. I have determined that this is a damaged animal and I will treat him according to my assessment. And so I will carefully get it into a cage and take it to the pound where it can be put to sleep and not be a distress to anyone." But you do this every day with each other. You determine what your Sister or Brother is, as we talked about last week, by ignoring the totality of that Brother or Sister, and instead of that, breaking up everything there is about that Brother and Sister into small parts, and then choosing this part and that part and another part, and bringing them together into a caricature of them. And then you behave toward them on the basis of these disparate parts that you have brought together that do not reflect them truly, and you discount them. And it's this habit that has to be broken. It's the breaking of this habit that constitutes, for lack of better words, the quote "process" unquote of Awakening. You can no longer afford to operate on the basis of your best ego-perceptions and expect to see healing or emancipation for your Brother or for yourself; emancipation from a bondage that is illegitimately governing you.

Let's go into the book. And I'm going to repeat [the last sentence in] the last paragraph from last week.

RAJ READING: The ego looks straight at the Father and does not see Him, for it has denied His Son.

RAJ: In other words, you from your independent vantage point, your imagined state of autonomy, look at your Brother, or look at your world, and you don't see God there. You see what you have determined it to be. And the reason you don't see the Father in everything that is in your experience is because you have disowned Him. You have denied Him and lost the conscious awareness of your being His Son, His Offspring—the Direct Expression of God always now. You deny your Sonship.

The ego...

RAJ READING: ...has denied...

RAJ: Capital "H".

RAJ READING: ...His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...Son.

RAJ: And so it looks straight at the Father—you look straight at Reality—and you do not see Reality. You see it because there's nothing else to see, but you are calling it something else. And you are confining yourself to the definition you have applied to it. Now you have to shift gears. And you have to treat the plant, or the lamp, or the bird, or your Brother or Sister, like a mistreated dog or cat—because a mistreated dog or cat is something that will cause you to shift gears and behave on the basis of the Love that is in you, rather than on the basis of the imaginative descriptions of everything that you have made up and applied to everything.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Would YOU remember the Father?

RAJ: That's the big question, because the answer to that question is your salvation. If you will remember the Father, you will remember Who You Are. Because the Father isn't just "The Father;" the Father is your Father. The Father is the Source and, for lack of better words, the Generator of your Being at this moment. It is the energy of the Father, it is the Omnipotence of the Father in movement that looks like you right where you are. The Father being the Father right where you are is What You Are. And so when you remember the Father, you must unavoidably have the experience of remembering your Self.

Another important statement:

RAJ READING: Accept His Son and you WILL remember Him.

RAJ: Well, who is this Son to be accepted as His Son? It's you.

Because I promise you, you won't ever really accept anybody else as His Son, because you don't want to have to experience the inadequacy of not being His Son like this other one is His Son. And you also don't want to experience the jealousy that you couldn't help but feel if you really believed that someone else in this room, or in your life, was His Son and you weren't.

The only Son that you will benefit from "remembering is the Son of God" is yourself. And that's what all of this is about; that's all that Awakening is about. And that's all that's relevant at any moment during your day. Because if you will dare to be willing to remember that you are His Son, His Offspring, His Manifestation, there will be no experience of inadequacy, and there will be nothing to be jealous of, and there will be a spontaneous recognition that everyone else is also. And you will spontaneously be able to extend the recognition of God to everyone and everything regardless of their behavior, just like the frightened and inappropriate behavior of a mistreated dog or cat.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Nothing can demonstrate that His Son is unworthy, for nothing can prove that a lie is true.

RAJ: You see, the ego is incapable of telling the truth. The ego is a liar, and the father of the lie. And it's sneaky. It says, "You know what? You may be the Son of God, you may be the Daughter of God, but..."—as we discussed last week—it says, "...God made you to be on your own and gave you all the tools you need to practice being like Him, so that you in your own right can become 'as God' and co-create shoulder-to-shoulder with God." You see, that's a sneaky lie. It sounds good, and it seems to say, "Yes, you are the Son of God, but you're not here to be His puppet; you're not here to be His clone. You're here to be something in your own right. And that's what God has placed in you—the right to be yourself—different from everyone else."

But, again.

RAJ READING: Nothing can demonstrate that His Son is unworthy, for nothing can prove that a lie is true. What you see of His Son through the eyes of the ego is a demonstration that His Son does not exist, yet where the Son is the Father MUST be.

RAJ: If any one of you exists, it must be because the Father is being the Father right there where you are. And right where you are, the Father is called John, or Joe, or Mary, or Henrietta.

RAJ READING: ...where the Son is the Father MUST be. Accept what God does NOT deny, and HE will demonstrate its truth.

RAJ: Interesting.

RAJ READING: Accept what God does NOT deny...

RAJ: God does not deny that you are His Expression. God does not deny your Sonship. God does not deny you. Accept yourself as the Presence of God being all there is of you.

And God...

RAJ READING: ...will demonstrate its truth.

RAJ: God will demonstrate the Truth of the fact that He is all there is of you. Why? Not because you asked pretty. Not because you measured up. But because you stopped introducing a disagreement with the Truth about you. You became... I'm going to say you became passive. You became a nonassertive presence from your own right to be yourself. And in the absence of the assertion of an independent autonomous will, the Truth about you that has always been the Truth about you, sits unobstructed, and you see it and you feel it and you experience it. And you could say, "Well, God has revealed Himself to me in me." But at the bottom line, your Being is and always has been God revealing Himself to you as you. The difference is you're not arguing with it anymore. You're not arguing it by asserting this right to act independent of the Father on the basis of your own concoctions, your own mental imaginativeness.

RAJ READING: The witnesses for God stand in His Light...

RAJ: The witnesses for God, instead of the witnesses for what you have imagined everything is.

RAJ READING: The witnesses for God stand in His Light...

RAJ: Which simply means you're not creating any shadows by your self-will; independent self-will.

And so:

RAJ READING: The witnesses for God stand in His Light and behold what HE created.

RAJ: And I'm adding: Instead of what you made up.

RAJ READING: Their silence...

RAJ: Meaning the silence of the witnesses for God.

RAJ READING: Their silence is the sign that they have beheld God's Son, and in the Presence of Christ they need demonstrate nothing, for Christ speaks to them of Himself and of His Father. They...

RAJ: The witnesses for God.

RAJ READING: ...are silent because Christ speaks to them, and it is His words that THEY speak.

RAJ: This means that the ego sense of yourself which in the past you have taken pride in being able to express and assert, it is silent because what comes out of your mouth when you are witnessing for God is the Holy Spirit speaking; that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. And so, you could say, the words of Christ are the words that you speak.

Let's read this again.

RAJ READING: The witnesses for God...

RAJ: Meaning you, when you shifted gears and are not attempting to assert your self-righteous will, and you have decided to stand in perfect alignment with the Love that is in you.

RAJ READING: The witnesses for God stand in His Light and behold what HE created.

RAJ: And that's why healing occurs.

RAJ READING: Their silence...

RAJ: The witnesses for God.

RAJ READING: ...is the sign that they have beheld God's Son, and in the Presence of Christ they need demonstrate nothing, for Christ speaks to them of Himself and of His Father.

RAJ: You see, the ego is always demonstrating something. It's always asserting itself to accomplish something. And what it's accomplishing is the securing of its safety so that its actual nonexistence will never be discovered, and the illusion of its existence will continue.

RAJ READING: They...

RAJ: The witnesses for God.

RAJ READING: ...are silent because Christ speaks to them, and it is His words that THEY speak.

Every brother you meet becomes a witness for Christ...

RAJ: Every mistreated, starving animal that comes to your porch, can become a witness for What It Truly Is and what its Source is.

RAJ READING: ...or for the ego, depending on what you perceive in him.

RAJ: If you are going to believe what the animal is presenting to you instead of believing what you know from the Love that is in you, you will hold yourself apart, you will hold it apart from you, and one way or another, you will dismiss it from your experience. And you will have missed God and you will have missed the experience of your Sonship. You will have missed your opportunity to be What You Are and fulfill your Function.

Now, this can get tricky here.

RAJ READING: Everyone convinces you of what you WANT to perceive, and of the reality of the kingdom you have chosen for your vigilance.

RAJ: You want to know something? The most loving person, the most principled person, the kindest person in the world, let's say me, for example, can be misperceived by any of you if you want to misperceive me. And you can also misperceive the Christ who presents himself to you as a mistreated ego who is defensive and self-protective and aggressive and threatening. You can misperceive them as what they are presenting, and miss the opportunity to see them for What They Truly Are; miss the opportunity to shift gears from your tendency to engage in self-righteous reaction, and instead hold to the fact that they can't possibly be what they are currently perceiving themselves to be, and that Love is the answer to their misperception.

RAJ READING: Everyone convinces you...

RAJ: Whether they're good or bad. Whether they're nice or not.

RAJ READING: Everyone convinces you of what you WANT to perceive, and of the reality of the kingdom you have chosen for your vigilance.

RAJ: A nice person, a loving person, comes along, and you're an ego in self-protective mode and you look at this nice, thoughtful, kind, nondefended person and you say, "Oh, boy! We've got a sucker here. Here's someone I can take advantage of. Here's someone I can use and they won't say no, because they're so kind."

And so they convince you...

RAJ READING: ...of the reality of the kingdom you have chosen for your vigilance.

RAJ: You see?

RAJ READING: Everything you perceive is a witness to...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...the thought system you WANT to be true.

RAJ: And all I'm ever doing is encouraging you to want something else to be true than what you have been wanting to be true.

RAJ READING: Every brother has the power to release you IF YOU WILL TO BE FREE.

RAJ: Every mistreated animal that comes to your door has the power to release you from your tendency in your normal everyday life to behave on the basis of behavior you're presented with, and provide you with the opportunity to shift gears and behave on the basis of the Love that is in you, which it is your Function and your Birthright and your Fulfillment to embody. So every Brother, whether pleasant or unpleasant, has this power to release you, because no matter what their presentation is, it gives you the opportunity to choose to be in alignment with your Real Nature; provides you with the opportunity to see God there, which causes you to remember that you are the Son of God, and that therefore the Brother is the Son of God, setting you on the track of Singularity, which itself is the absence of fragmentation, the absence of friction, the absence of conflict. And in the purity of the Singularity, the Light of Love has the opportunity to illuminate God to you and to them.

RAJ READING: You cannot accept false witness of HIM unless you have evoked false witnesses AGAINST him.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "evoked false witness" instead of "evoked false witnesses."]

RAJ: "Oh, here comes another sucker." You've evoked false witness against this loving person. You see?

RAJ READING: If...

RAJ: On the other hand, separate and apart from your evoking false witness against him.

RAJ READING: If HE speaks not of Christ to you, YOU spoke not of Christ to him. You hear but your OWN voice, and if Christ speaks THROUGH you, YOU will hear Him.

RAJ: Now a frightened animal does not speak by his behavior the Truth about himself. And your Brother can speak not of the Christ to you, but you do not have to hear that which is not of the Christ from him as though it's true. You can hear his distress call just like you would the stray dog, and you will not believe that it's an unalterable fact. And because you see the Christ there in spite of that one's lack of being able to see the Christ in himself, you will have the capacity to love with endurance, providing the environment of safety in which fear can vanish.

The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: Experience and Perception

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here instead: Waking to Redemption]

RAJ READING: It is impossible not to believe what you see, but it is equally impossible to see what you do NOT believe. Perceptions are built up on the basis of experience, and experience leads to beliefs. It is not until beliefs are fixed that perceptions stabilize. In effect, then, what you believe you DO see.

RAJ: Whether it's true or not.

RAJ READING: ...what you believe you DO see.

RAJ: And your belief, therefore, becomes the structure through which you experience life. It becomes your prison. It becomes that which binds you because you will see only what you believe.

Now mind you, you see only what you believe because you have chosen to see only what you believe. You have chosen what you believe. Waking up is a movement out of belief.

I'm repeating.

RAJ READING: In effect, then, what you believe you DO see. That is what I meant when I said, "Blessed are ye who have not seen and still believe," for those who believe in the resurrection WILL see it.

RAJ: Oh, I know. "You're nothing but a hunk of matter, born of woman, full of trouble for a few days, and you die." That's what you believe. 'Tain't so. But you believe it. 'Tain't so. And so (trumpets blaring) you don't have to believe it. You can abandon the belief and inquire beyond it.

RAJ READING: ...those who believe in the resurrection WILL see it.

RAJ: Well, the only resurrection worth a hill of beans today is yours. And those who believe in it, you who believe it, will see it.

RAJ READING: The resurrection is the complete triumph of Christ over the ego, not by attack, but by transcendence.

RAJ: How do you nurture a frightened and abused animal into affectionate behavior and trust? By transcending the presenting picture that it gives to you right there where it appears that there is a damaged animal. When you transcend that presentation by not honoring it, by not believing it, you leave the door of your love wide open so that it can be extended to that which is there in that animal that is capable of being unafraid, because it no longer believes that it must be afraid.

You don't bully the animal into fearlessness. You don't twist its tail or its ears to get it to sit down and realize that it doesn't have to be afraid. You see? You don't transform it. You don't transform its fear by attacking the stupidity of its fearfulness when it's not called for. Complete triumph is accomplished not by attack, not by aggressive willfulness exerted over and asserted upon that animal, no, but by transcendence.

RAJ READING: For Christ DOES rise above the ego and all its works, and ascends to the Father and HIS Kingdom.

RAJ: You stick with the animal because you know there is a capacity to experience and feel love that it has been frightened out of allowing itself to feel. Your mind ascends to the Truth about that animal, and behaves on the basis of that Truth.

RAJ READING: Would you join in the resurrection or the crucifixion?

RAJ: Now I'm going to say this: Those are really the only two choices you have, and you practice one or the other of them all day long.

Does that make you terrible? Does that render you punishable? Does that make you guilty? No, it just means that your choices have effects that are either fulfilling, or not. And when they're not fulfilling, they're no fun. And if you don't like having no fun, then you need to make a different choice.

RAJ READING: Would you join in the resurrection or the crucifixion? Would you condemn your brothers or free them?

RAJ: I know. "You'll condemn them a little while so they will know what it feels like. And then you'll free them. But you want a little justice, please!" Whew.

But, you see, as I said earlier, the most important part of what happens when you treat a mistreated dog well, with love, is that not only does it bless the dog because you cared about the dog, it brought you into perfect alignment with your Function, your Purpose, and therefore your Sanity.

So:

RAJ READING: Would you condemn your brothers or free them?

RAJ: It means, "Would you do what is in utter harmony with your Being, that causes you to wake up to the Truth of You?" or, "Would you do that which confuses you, causes a loss of memory of the Truth About You, and puts you in a place of constant suffering and strife?" You make the choice between the two, all day long. There aren't any other choices.

RAJ READING: Would you transcend YOUR prison and ascend to the Father?

RAJ: "Well, [laughing] not until Joe suffers a little bit more 'cause it just too satisfying to see him get his comeuppance. Hold on, God. I'll be there in a minute."—which means, "Hold on, me. I'm choosing to suffer and be ignorant of my Birthright a little longer."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: For these questions are all the same, and are answered together. There has been much confusion about what perception means, because the same word is used both for awareness and for the INTERPRETATION of awareness.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "for INTERPRETATION" instead of "for the INTERPRETATION."]

RAJ: "I perceive that fellow over there, I experience the presence of that fellow over there, and I perceive a really nice guy." Or, "I perceive somebody who doesn't take very good care of himself." You see? The latter are interpretations. The latter are assessments, and their difference from being aware that something is occurring there as a specific experience available to all of you to experience.

RAJ READING: Yet you cannot BE aware without interpretation, and what you perceive IS your interpretation. This course is perfectly clear.

RAJ: I know. You all laugh.

RAJ READING: This course is perfectly clear. You do not see it clearly because you are interpreting AGAINST it, and therefore do not BELIEVE it. And if belief determines perception, you do NOT perceive what it means and therefore do not ACCEPT it.

RAJ: Now let's change the words.

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: Your Brother or Sister is perfectly clear. You do not see them clearly because you are interpreting AGAINST them, and therefore do not BELIEVE them.

RAJ: The clarity, the clear Movement of Being that they are.

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: And if belief determines perception, you do NOT perceive what they mean and therefore do not ACCEPT them.

RAJ: The Christ that they are.

The ego perceives only. The Holy Spirit knows. The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. Your Right Mind knows. Why? Because it doesn't lean into the presentation the world makes to you. It doesn't lean into the presentation your Brothers and Sisters extend to you. It doesn't lean into the definitions given to the universe or to the objects in your daily life. It leans into God to learn of God what the Meaning is of each and every thing. It bypasses perception altogether. It does not engage perception in any way. It transcends perception by not engaging it in any way.

And that's why I so often say: Ask of the Holy Spirit, "What does this mean? What does that mean?" Sit and be present with things with an innocent mind—a mind innocent of past perceptions; a mind innocent of the intent to see what you've always seen before—and a desire to have that thing convey to you, by virtue of your willingness to be intimate with it, what it really is, what its capital "M" Meaning is, what God is being right there, right now, and the why of God's being it that way—the fullness of the Glory of God right there.

And I'll tell you something, "the fullness of the Glory of God," those words, is not what is being right there. So don't look at the rose and say, "Oh, I've had this wonderful realization. It's the fullness of the Glory of God." No, it's not the fullness of the Glory of God. Those are just the best words that one can come up with for an experience—an intimate experience of undiluted Meaning; undiluted divine Meaning that not only defines itself but defines you divinely, as well as the Father, and as well as everything else, so that all of it is drawn together into a unity, a Singularity, without any of it losing its distinctness.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Yet different experiences lead to different beliefs,...

RAJ: Well, they only lead to different beliefs if you are in the ego mode, the defensive mode, where you are analyzing everything so that you can come to conclusions—conclusions which will become your beliefs—beliefs which will absolutely govern what you see.

RAJ READING: ...different experiences lead to different beliefs, and experience teaches.

RAJ: I am leading you every Sunday night, and every time you listen to me in the privacy of your own mind on any given day of the week.

RAJ READING: I am leading you to a new kind of experience which you will become less and less willing to deny.

RAJ: I'm leading you to an experience that isn't being colored by your predisposition to see things according to your already existing beliefs. I am leading you to an experience that comes of unguarded, unpremeditated conscious awareness.

RAJ READING: Learning of Christ is easy, for to perceive with Him involves no strain at all.

RAJ: Now each of you has a Guide and that Guide is Awake; that Guide is therefore the Christ. And you also each have the Holy Spirit, which although at the moment it seems to be something different from you that you can lean into, it is at the bottom line nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: Learning of Christ is easy, for to perceive with Him involves no strain at all.

RAJ: What's work, is when you're trying to figure it out all by yourself, ignoring the obvious, and coming up with some fanciful imagination that somehow has a ring of solidarity to it and substance to it that others might believe when you present the idea to them so that they will join with you and help substantiate what from the beginning was nothing more than perception; not knowing.

RAJ READING: HIS perceptions...

RAJ: The Christ. The Holy Spirit which is the Christ that you are.

RAJ READING: ...are your NATURAL awareness, and it is only distortions which YOU introduce that tire you.

RAJ: Well, [small laugh] you say, "It's much more difficult to love the unlovable. How on earth can I love that bastard and not be exhausted at the end of day from the trouble?" Well, you're right. How can you love your flawed perception and not be exhausted?

Abandon your perceptions in favor of being present with that about which you have made an assessment, without making the assessment and being present with them innocently. That is your natural awareness and it will not tire you to engage in it.

RAJ READING: Let the Christ in you interpret FOR you, and do not try to limit what you see by narrow little beliefs which are unworthy of God's Son.

RAJ: Meaning which are unworthy of you and which are unworthy of the one you are having perceptions about.

RAJ READING: For until Christ comes into His Own, the Son of God WILL see himself as fatherless.

RAJ: Again, said differently.

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: For until the Holy Spirit comes into His Own, you—you the Son of God—WILL see yourself as fatherless.

RAJ: So you see, we've used a lot of words, but at the bottom line it boils down to the fact that you need to be willing to treat each other as well as you're willing to treat a dog. And you know what none of you believe? None of you believes that such a simple thing can be the turning point in your Awakening. None of you believes that such a simple thing will undo all illusion. But it will.

As you go into this week, as you go through this week, I encourage you to watch to see what it is you're wanting to see. And then be careful that you do not try to hold your Brother in bondage to what you choose to see about him, what you choose to perceive about him, what you choose to believe about him. Because what you believe, you will see, whether there's any justification for it or not. And when everyone is going through their day seeing their perception of each other rather than what's really there, everyone's behavior will, in one way or another, be obtuse. It will not be appropriate to the Reality that is going on. And the response you will get will be, in one form or another, objection because none of you likes to be seen for what you're not. And so the very context in which you all generally relate to each other is the exact thing that creates and maintains and reinforces conflict.

This week try introducing something new. Is that an admonishment, or a simple invitation? Well, I'll put it this way. For those to whom a simple invitation works, it's a simple invitation. To those to whom a simple invitation doesn't work, it is an admonishment. It is a firm demand to engage in something you're not inclined to engage in, because what you're being invited to engage in is the one thing that can change everything. And I love you all enough... I love you all enough to be very, very straight with you—because I love you and because I want for you more than you're letting yourself have.

I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Before we continue, I want to expand a little bit on what we talked about last week. And I used the example of a stray animal coming to your doorstep and varying responses. It's important to understand that there are two kinds of strays who can come to your door, and there are also two kinds of individuals to respond to the strays. And if you don't understand this, then you can become caught in a game, a power struggle, between providing help and the request for help.

Now, the pet lover to whom the stray animal comes will, as we described last week, not base his or her behavior on the presenting behavior that the animal is showing, but will base his or her responses upon the love that he or she feels, and the insight or clarity he or she has about what this animal is capable of in terms of receiving love and being blessed by it.

Now, if you notice in my example I spoke about a stray dog coming to your door, but what about those who don't wait for the stray to come to the door, but go out looking for them? Those who do that are commonly called dogcatchers. The motive is entirely different from the pet lover who is willing to stand in receipt of and be inclusive of this forlorn one who comes for help. And [laughing] it doesn't take but a moment for an animal to recognize the motivation, and when a dogcatcher is in the area, they run. Why? Because it is the intent of the dogcatcher to take possession, to enforce order into the animal's life. The dogcatcher's motivation is getting, and the pet lover's motivation is giving. Now last week I didn't talk at all about going out and finding those who need help, so that you might bless them with what you have to give. And I'm not going to talk about that this week either, because that's not what this is all about.

their rope and recognize that there must be a different way, and want to find out what it is, and are not so puffed up within themselves that they are unwilling to let something new in and change. And then there are others who come to you for help who are suffering, but the help they want is for you to help them help remove the suffering without their having to change—which is impossible. You must learn to discern the difference. Because if you don't discern the difference, you will likely continue to put yourself in the messiness of the intimacy of an unintelligent and unclear relationship—unintelligent and unclear because one in the relationship wants the impossible. They want to be relieved of their suffering without having to change the way they're living their lives, the way they are thinking, the way they are believing.

You say, "Well, my willingness to come from my love, because of its divine nature, has to have the capacity of reaching them, has to have the capacity of, I'm going to say, finessing change, even though they don't want to change." And I'm here to tell you right now that that is impossible. And if you do not recognize its impossibility, you will find yourself entangled in a power play that you won't be able to get out of, that you will find yourself sucked into the depths of, the confusion of, and the suffering of. When you recognize that the one asking for help is asking for help that can't be given because the impossible can't be done, you must stop trying to help them accomplish the impossible. And you must step back. This is an instance when two people meet only to part, because intelligence governs and what does not match, what cannot match, must not attempt to match, must not attempt to engage. Because one says the engagement can only be for one purpose: to relieve suffering without changing what is causing the suffering. Until the one coming and asking for help is hungry for actual help, you must not take the bait.

Now this does not mean that you are going to use your mind poorly. It means that when you have drawn the line, as it were, and said, "thus far and no farther," and you withdraw from the engagement, you must continue, persist in coming from the Place of Excellence in you. You must persist in coming from the love in you that you feel, so that you can continue to acknowledge What Is True about them, and do not lapse in, what we could call, your faith in them; do not lapse in your trust in What They Truly Are.

You do not engage in frustration because they won't listen to you—because then you shift into the dogcatcher mentality. You do not feel that you are somehow incompetent, because you couldn't reach them, and sit hard on yourself. You recognize that this one who is calling for help is indeed the Son of God not knowing it, not believing that they are, but using the power that they have to be devoted to their misperception, with such power that until they change their decision, there is nothing you can do. And so you recognize that until they are hungry, until there is desire to do whatever it takes to do the essential thing that it takes to be relieved of suffering, you don't engage with them. And you persist in your peace, contemplating them, or whenever they come to your mind, considering them from the standpoint of what they divinely Are, and that it is the Father's Will for them to know what they Are, and that you love what they Are, because there is nothing unlovable about what they truly Are, even though they are believing that they are something different.

And so you do not violate your function, which is to recognize the Presence of God in each and every thing, and to let in the feeling or the experience of the Truth of that. You persist in being singular, non-conflicted within yourself, extending the blessing of the recognition of their divinity to them. In other words, you continue to send out messengers of Truth. But you do not engage with them, because their conscious intent in the engagement is to be deceitful, is to be self-serving. They are in a mode of defense, seeing their world as hostile, and they are not willing to abandon that yet. And therefore, they are unable to see you as anything other than as manipulative as them, and that the simple love you are extending is a ploy to get control over them, because their means of existing is one entirely of control and manipulation, and they see what they're looking with.

Your behavior, you cannot afford to let your behavior be based upon what they are presenting, but you also express enough wisdom not to engage with them in an impossible venture. And as long as they insist upon engaging in that venture, you say "no." And you butt out from an involvement level, from an engagement level, but you do not butt out in your mind. You do not abandon your desire and your willingness to see the Presence of God there because that's the only thing that can be there. And you embrace them in that love, just as you would a stray animal.

Now this is very important. A dogcatcher, in terms of what we're talking about, is very much like a proselytizer; someone who is going to go out and change people's minds about what the truth is, so that they might be saved. It's also similar to a third party who comes into involvement with two partners who are married, and engages in his wiles, let's say, and slowly gets the affections of the wife away from the husband. This is called "alienation of affection" and is punishable by law. Now, in other words, it is recognized to be unlawful, unprincipled, and something that "no" has to be said to. When you approach someone who is devoted to the voice for fear that's governing them, and you try to forcefully change them, you're engaging in an attempt to alienate their affections from this false teacher. Correct? But this false teacher is their god. In fact, it's their own defense mechanism. It is what they think is keeping them safe, even though they're miserable. And any attempt you make to alienate their affection from their god, will cause you to be the recipient of the wrath of their god. And this will always be the case until something happens within them that causes them to withdraw their devotion, until something happens that causes them to lose their faith in their mindset.

And so, what I'm saying is understand that you cannot do the impossible. It is impossible to do the impossible. Don't let someone imploring you for help, fool you into helping because they say, "I know that you're a very spiritual person, and I know that you have a close relationship with God, and so I'm asking you because of the great faith I know you have, to help me." And then they'll leave off the last words, "Help me not have to suffer, without having to stop doing what is causing my suffering." They conveniently leave that unsaid. So be wise. Don't deal with strays who haven't come to your door.

And when strays do come to your door, be alert to find out whether they are committed to their lifestyle, and they only want for you to help alleviate them temporarily of their starvation or their uncleanness, so that they might reenergize and persist in the way they choose to live, persist in doing what causes them to suffer. Be alert for that so that you don't play into it, and then suffer the disillusionment, the discovery, that you've been played like a harp, because you weren't alert and you didn't know that some things are impossible, and that when the invitation to do the impossible is extended to you, you must, no matter how unloving the other says you are, say, "No. We cannot communicate. We cannot relate because you want me to do the impossible, and I know better than to do it. And I will not engage in argument or discussion so that you might change my mind or show me where I'm wrong. Conversation ended. Involvement ended. Period." That is wisdom, and that is love.

And as they go on their way, you embrace them from the love in you that can and does recognize their divinity, and knows that they deserve to be experiencing better than what they're allowing them[selves] to experience. And by doing so, you stay in your singularity, rather than becoming conflicted within yourself and losing your capacity to witness for God, and thereby voluntarily, but unintelligently, abandon your function.

Okay. I hope that is clarifying. More than that, I know that it is.

Last week we read:

RAJ READING: Would you join in the resurrection or the crucifixion?

RAJ: And I pointed out, that all day long, you are choosing for one or the other. And for the most part, you vacillate back and forth. You're not persistent or consistent. But you must understand that you are either joining in the Resurrection or the crucifixion, depending upon the God/god you are serving.

Now, continuing.

[Editor's Note: Raj is now reading two paragraphs down, and starting today's material.]

RAJ READING: I am YOUR resurrection and YOUR life. You live in me because you live in God. And everyone lives in YOU, as YOU live in everyone.

RAJ: You see? There is no inequity. There's no inequality. You are all Sons and Daughters of God. You are all Brothers and Sisters. You are all equal in inheritance, if you will. You are all the loveliness of capital "L" Love—the Presence of God.

And you must be willing to consider each other in that way, so as not to be introducing conflicting perceptions into the picture, and thus breaking the singularity, and separating yourself from all of your Brothers and Sisters by virtue of choosing to believe something that isn't true.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Can you, then, perceive unworthiness in a brother and NOT perceive it in yourself?

RAJ: No. Because everything is a singularity and a consistency, whatever you believe about yourself you will equally apply to everyone else. And believe or not, what you believe about everyone else you equally apply to yourself, but you conveniently tuck that way into a back corner of your mind. I will tell you something: what you do not believe you are capable of, you will not believe another is capable of. It's that simple.

Again.

RAJ READING: Can you, then, perceive unworthiness in a brother and NOT perceive it in yourself? And can you perceive it in yourself and NOT perceive it in God?

RAJ: Whatever flaws you think you have, you also think God has.

RAJ READING: Believe in the resurrection because it has BEEN accomplished, and it has been accomplished IN YOU.

RAJ: You see? So I resurrected; you say, "Well, every Easter we celebrate Jesus' Resurrection." You see?

But you also believe that existence, that being is fragmented, and therefore Jesus has experienced the resurrection, but not you. You're somebody else. You're unrelated. You aren't the same one. What is true of him is not true of you, because you're unique. You are your own person. And so you, like Jesus, must demonstrate your own resurrection. But it happens that things aren't really tough enough at the moment for you to engage in the resurrection, so [small laugh] one of these days you may tackle that. It's easier to tackle a low bank account or, you know, an angry wife than to tackle your resurrection. So you see yourself as quite independent and autonomous, but your salvation doesn't lie in that picture you have created about yourself of being separate and different.

If I demonstrated the resurrection, if I manifested or embodied the resurrection, it was embodied as a fact—not just a possibility, not just a wild pipe dream—but as a fact about everyone eternally, infinitely. At the moment of the resurrection, the belief in the impossibility of resurrection was broken forever in everyone. It was done for you.

RAJ READING: Believe in the resurrection because it has BEEN accomplished, and it has been accomplished IN YOU. This is as true now as it will ever be, for the resurrection is the Will of God, Which knows no time and no exceptions. But make no exceptions yourself,...

RAJ: Which, of course, you've already been doing.

RAJ READING: But make no exceptions yourself, or you will not perceive what has been accomplished FOR you.

RAJ: You see, because it was accomplished for you, you don't have to do it over again. You are at a point where you can move on from the Resurrection to the Ascension, if you will. You don't have to muddle 'round in finding out how to have your own resurrection. You don't have to muddle around in discovering and being the embodiment of the fact that there is no death. The problem doesn't have to be solved again. You're free to go on, letting in the experience of Eternal Life right now, right here, today. That's the territory you're now in.

But you're behaving as though you're still in the old, mortal veil, having to find a way to overcome death. It's self-defeating to try to accomplish something that's already been accomplished for you, as though it never was accomplished.

RAJ READING: ...make no exceptions yourself, or you will not perceive what has been accomplished FOR you. For we ascend unto the Father together, as it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, for such is the nature of God's Son as His Father created him.

RAJ: Such is your Nature as the Father created you.

[talking to each individual present] Not just your nature or your nature—not your nature, and your nature—and the nature of everyone listening—as though there were a whole bunch of natures. We are all one, infinite embodiment of God; of one, singular, unfragmentable Presence of Conscious Life.

What you're all waking up to is the fact that the whole human condition never happened; the whole dream of mortality never happened; that Creation—in its absolute, eternal divinity—was never altered for a second, which means none of you was altered for a second. You've just become obsessed with an idea that you have turned into a perception that causes you to define everything as something other than it is, but which hasn't accomplished changing what everything is. It's just left you demented and deceived. But you can become free of the deception, to find out that it never was real. Again, you are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and you must understand yourself therefrom.

Now continuing.

RAJ READING: Do not underestimate the power of the devotion of God's Son,...

[repeating for emphasis]

RAJ READING: Do not underestimate the power of the devotion of God's Son, nor the power of the god he worships over him.

RAJ: This is key statement:

RAJ READING: Do not underestimate the power of the devotion of God's Son,...

RAJ: Whether it's your devotion or a neighbor's devotion, do not underestimate the power of your devotion, because you are the "God's Son," nor the power of the god you worship, nor the power of the god you worship over you. Do not underestimate the power the god you worship has over you. The power your god has over you is equal to the power of the devotion you bring to that god. And because you are the Christ, unconscious of the Christhood of yourself, you, your devotion is absolute; is utterly powerful.

And that's why when a Brother comes to you and says, "Help me. I am miserable. I am on my last legs. I am suffering greatly. Help me not suffer, without making me change the behavior that's causing my suffering," you may know that that one is devoted to the behavior that is causing his suffering. And his behavior is... is the power of his devotion to it is absolute. And so you recognize this. You honor the fact that the one who is requesting you to do the impossible, and who is miserable at his own hand, is the Christ behaving in a way that's causing him suffering, and is devoted to it with all the power of the Christ that there is, and therefore there is nothing you can do.

Again.

RAJ READING: Do not underestimate the power of the devotion of God's Son, nor the power of the god he worships over him. For he places HIMSELF...

RAJ: And you all do this.

RAJ READING: ...he places HIMSELF at the altar of his god, whether it be the god he made...

RAJ: He made up.

RAJ READING: ...or the God Who...

RAJ: With a capital "W".

RAJ READING: ...created him.

RAJ: Listen to that again.

RAJ READING: For he places HIMSELF at the altar of his god, whether it be the god he made or the...

RAJ: Capital "G".

RAJ READING: ...God Who created him. That is why his slavery is as complete as his freedom, for he will obey ONLY the god he accepts.

RAJ: All of you, at one time or another, have or will need to be able to disentangle yourselves from entanglements—messy, sticky, miserable entanglements with those asking for help that cannot be given, who will expect you to try to give it anyway. And you need to understand that because their devotion to their false god is the devotion of a Christ unaware of Who He Is and that therefore the power of the devotion is absolute, means that you can do nothing to alter it until that one has arrived, for his own reasons, at a willingness to abandon that devotion. And your recognition of that is not unloving, and it is not something you can actually be faulted for, because it expresses utter intelligence.

I'm going to read this paragraph again so that it registers clearly and simply.

RAJ READING: Do not underestimate the power of the devotion of God's Son, nor the power of the god he worships over him. For he places HIMSELF at the altar of his god, whether it be the god he made or the God Who created him. That is why his slavery is as complete as his freedom, for he will obey ONLY the god he accepts. The god of the crucifixion demands that he crucify, and his worshippers obey. In his name they crucify THEMSELVES,...

RAJ: Which is, of course, why they're suffering.

RAJ READING: ...believing that the power of the Son of God...

RAJ: The true Son of God.

RAJ READING: ...is born of sacrifice and pain. The God of the resurrection...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: On the other hand.

RAJ READING: ...demands NOTHING, for He does not will to take away. He does not require obedience, for obedience implies submission.

RAJ: You see? Control, authority exercised and domination successfully exercised.

RAJ READING: He does not require obedience, for obedience implies submission. He would only have you learn your OWN will and follow it, not in the spirit of sacrifice and submission, but in the gladness of freedom.

RAJ: You see? The prisoner in his cell with a gate on the cell that's unlocked and that has never been locked, who is enjoying self-imposed incarceration, is likely to say to the one who says, "Hey, try the door. It's not locked. Come on out. Come out in the fresh air and the sunshine and be free," "Well, wait a minute. Why would I want to do that? I get three square meals a day in here. I'm able to stay clean. I don't have to be responsible for anything. I'm a pretty happy camper. I get along fairly well with most of the other prisoners. Why would I give up such a good deal?" You see? Well, don't waste your breath when someone is insisting on their incarceration. Don't try to enforce freedom on someone who diligently avoids it. The one inside the cell is the only one who can open the gate. And he won't open it until something in him wants to get out, is hungry for something other than the status quo that he's become comfortable with, even though he is in prison. You see? Again, a man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Resurrection must compel your allegiance...

RAJ: Another word for devotion. And of course, we're not to, you are not to underestimate the power of the devotion of God's Son.

RAJ READING: Resurrection must compel your allegiance gladly because it is the symbol of joy.

RAJ: Not because it's the symbol of obedience. Not because it's the symbol of your having been subjected to someone who has a louder voice, or more apparent power than you have.

RAJ READING: Resurrection must compel your allegiance gladly because it is the symbol of joy. Its whole compelling power lies in the fact that it represents what YOU want to be.

RAJ: Not what I want for you. Not what anybody else wants for you. Not what anyone else thinks you ought to have.

RAJ READING: Its whole compelling power lies in the fact that it represents what YOU want to be. The freedom to leave behind everything that hurts you and humbles you and frightens you...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: ...cannot be thrust upon you,...

RAJ: And likewise, you cannot thrust it upon anyone else.

RAJ READING: ...but...

RAJ: It can be offered through you.

RAJ READING: ...it CAN be offered you through...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...the grace of God. And you can ACCEPT it by His grace, for God IS gracious to His Son, accepting him without question as His Own.

RAJ: You see? Waking up means that you're willing to accept God without question as your Father, so that you might once again remember Who You Are—His Son, His Daughter, His Self-Expression.

Again.

RAJ READING: The freedom to leave behind everything that hurts you and humbles you and frightens you cannot be thrust upon you, but it CAN be offered you through the grace of God.

RAJ: In other words, for no good reason. Just because. Just because that's the way it is. Just because.

RAJ READING: And you can ACCEPT it by His grace, for God IS gracious to His Son, accepting him without question as His Own. Who, then, is YOUR own?

RAJ: Who are you going to accept as your own?

Are you going to accept me as your own? Or are you going to dissociate me from you, and say, "Jesus is different. Jesus is the only begotten Son of the Father. Jesus is the Wayshower. He's not like me. I'm the one being shown. I'm different. Jesus is the Teacher, and I am the student." You see? You see how all of these words provide definitions of inequality? And you use these definitions to ensure that you will not have to remember Who You Are and embrace your Good by grace, just because it's there for you, because it's the Reality of you.

What about your Brother and your Sister, even the ones who are insisting upon asking you to help them accomplish the impossible? Are they your own? Or are you going to keep them separate; distinguish them from you?

RAJ READING: The Father has given you all that is His, and He Himself is yours WITH them.

RAJ: You see, it's all a Singularity. It isn't a fragmented conglomeration of bits and pieces that maybe were once joined, but aren't anymore and aren't supposed to be anymore, but they all have something common in their background. No.

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: The Father has given you all that He is, and He Himself is yours WITH them.

RAJ: He is yours because He is your Father. He is What gives you your Identity. He is What Is Being your existence.

RAJ READING: The Father has given you all that is His, and He Himself is yours WITH them. Guard them in their resurrection,...

RAJ: Your Brothers and Sisters. Your stray dogs. The ones who want help that can't be given.

RAJ READING: Guard them in their resurrection,...

RAJ: In other words, continue to perform your function of recognizing the Presence of God in everything you see, even if those you are seeing are claiming something different about themselves.

RAJ READING: Guard them in their resurrection, for otherwise you will not awake in God, safely surrounded by what is yours forever.

You will not find peace until you have removed the nails from the hands of God's Son and taken the last thorn from his forehead.

RAJ: Remember last week I pointed out to you that you can't really dare to acknowledge that anyone else is the Son of God until you're able to acknowledge that you're the Son of God. Because otherwise all you'll be doing is giving yourself something to be jealous of and frustrated about, and you're too intelligent to do that. So it's easier to say, "no one is the Son of God," than to say, "someone else is but I'm not."

So you start by taking the thorns out of your brow and the nails from your hands that say in so many words, "You're contemptuous. You are worthless. You're a ne'er-do-well claiming to be something more than you are." No one else is saying this to you; you're saying it to yourself. And you've got to stop. And you have to start apprehending yourself more correctly. You are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point. The resurrection is already accomplished. Get on with the business of being the embodiment of the deathlessness of Life, because that's the arena you're in now. Undo the need for the crucifixion. Crucifixion is past; resurrection has occurred. Get on with Life!

RAJ READING: The Love of God surrounds His Son whom the god of the crucifixion condemns. Teach not that I died in vain. Teach rather that I did NOT die by demonstrating that I live IN YOU.

RAJ: In other words, by demonstrating that you and I are Brothers and Sisters; we are kin. We have the same Father. We have the same inheritance. The Laws of God govern both of us equally and as completely. And what I am invulnerable to, you are invulnerable to. You see? It's called being in a new way—not according to the old historical records, not according to the old past mutual agreements. You see?

RAJ READING: For the UNDOING of the crucifixion of God's Son is the work of the redemption, in which everyone has a part of equal value. God does not judge His blameless Son.

RAJ: You see? And I know, the sarcasm comes in. "Yeah, I know He loved Jesus. Yeah. My older Brother. He loves Jesus better than me. Obviously He loved Jesus but, Jesus, look at me. [laughing] Jesus, look at my mom and dad who died of this or that. Look at my grandparents who suffered this or that, you know. Yeah, I know God loved Jesus, His Son, but not me." And you use your mind in this way to push yourself further and further down into the hole.

And the only reason you're in the hole is because of the way you're using your mind. You're saying, "I am behind the Point of Perfection, and I am advancing toward it, and it's a tough row to hoe. It's hard work to advance toward perfection." You see? More words. More descriptions. "Yeah. Yeah, I'm on my way, but it's really hard, and it takes a lot of fortitude." And all the time you're doing this, all the time you're going through these contortions, you're sitting on a grassy knoll in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven, not bothering to open up your eyes to see what's really going on, because you are obsessed with your dream.

You are obsessed with your definitions, and you confirm them over, and over, and over. You see, this is your devotion to the god you made. And you know what? There ain't no such god. And if you abandon this god, everything will not collapse. And if you let there be the littlest bit of doubt in your mind regarding the validity of this god, and you let there be a little bit of inquisitiveness, a little bit of desire, a little bit of genuine hunger for something new, and a willingness to explore a new way of being, instead of rehearsing the old way of being over and over again, you will find the Movement of Awakening happening rapidly.

RAJ READING: God does not judge His blameless Son.

RAJ: So you stop blaming His blameless Son, whether it's you or your Brothers.

But again, at the same time that you stop judging His blameless Son who comes crying to you to help, to ask you to help him do the impossible, at the same time you recognize that you must refuse that request, understand that it doesn't mean that you are laying blame there. It just means that you will not join with and confirm an illusion. And you will not waste your time trying to do the impossible. And you continue to love that Brother or that Sister for what that Brother and Sister truly Are. And you maintain that conscious awareness, to the best of your ability, because it constitutes you fulfilling your function of glorifying God right where your Brother says, or your Sister says, "I am not the Presence of God. I am a self-made man, or a self-made woman, and that's my God-given right. And I expect you to help me accomplish that without my having to suffer." In the face of that and your refusal to comply, you continue to remain singular in your mind.

RAJ READING: God does not judge His blameless Son. Having given HIMSELF...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...to him,...

RAJ: His blameless Son.

RAJ READING: ...how could it be otherwise?

You have nailed YOURSELF to a cross and placed a crown of thorns upon your OWN head. Yet you CANNOT crucify God's Son, for the Will of God cannot die.

RAJ: You see? You are the expression of His Will. You are the ongoing outcome of God's Will. "Behold, I make all things new." That is God's Will, and that is what you are the Presence of, the embodiment of.

But, no.

RAJ READING: You have nailed YOURSELF to a cross...

RAJ: You've adopted this entirely different picture of yourself.

RAJ READING: ...and placed a crown of thorns upon your OWN head. Yet you CANNOT crucify God's Son,...

RAJ: You can't change What You Are. Even if you become so obsessively devoted to your self-concept that you think that is what you are, you can't accomplish the death of God's Son, and in its place the creation of an independent authorizer having successfully embodied God's Will for you by becoming "as God" on your own.

RAJ READING: His Son...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...HAS BEEN redeemed from his own crucifixion, and you cannot assign to death whom God has given eternal life.

RAJ: Now obviously you can try, and obviously you can suffer from trying, but you can't accomplish it. And the suffering can end the moment you abandon the attempt to do the impossible.

RAJ READING: The dream of crucifixion still lies heavy on your eyes, but what you see in dreams is not reality. While you perceive the Son of God as crucified you are asleep. And as long as you believe that YOU can crucify him you are only having nightmares. You who are beginning to wake are still aware of dreams and have not yet forgotten them.

RAJ: That's the reality of it. Understand that, because if you don't understand it, you will think that this process, quote "process" unquote, of Awakening is too difficult, or isn't what it's cracked up to be, or what you're trying to do in waking up isn't something that really leads you to waking up because there's so much confusion accompanying it. It's simply because:

RAJ READING: You who are beginning to wake are still aware of dreams...

RAJ: Habits don't die easily. Things which you are utterly familiar with are not abandoned quickly.

RAJ READING: You who are beginning to wake are still aware of dreams and have not yet forgotten them.

RAJ: That statement is not a criticism, but a wonderfully supportive, loving sharing of the way it is, so that you will not become discouraged.

RAJ READING: The forgetting of dreams and the awareness of Christ comes with the awakening of others to SHARE your redemption.

RAJ: So, when you persist in the willingness to look at all the stray dogs, all the stray cats, all those in need of help, and recognize there what's really true about them, else they couldn't be having a miserable misperception of it, you are being inclusive. You are embracing, unlike the dogcatcher, and in that embrace you're not trying to control and there is trust. You trust that they are capable of receiving the love you are extending. And you are patient, not controlling.

And as with a stray animal, it might take two or three years for that animal to finally show signs of having completely given up all fear of you. But you're willing to persist in being the presence of that which is not frightening, and is not projecting on that animal misperceptions of it, and then behaving on the basis of those misperceptions. And so the persistence of love heals. But the forgetting of dreams sometimes happens slowly.

RAJ READING: You will awaken to your OWN call,...

RAJ: And your Brothers and Sisters who call for your help to relieve them of their pain without their having to abandon what's causing their pain, will awaken to their own call—to their own call. And only when their own call occurs, will they be able to hear your call to them for what it is, and only then will involvement that you would call constructive and healing, can begin. Only then can it begin, but not until they've heard their own call—the call of theirs from within them.

RAJ READING: You will awaken to your OWN call, for the Call to awake is WITHIN you. If I live in you, you ARE awake. Yet you must see the works I do through you, or you will not perceive that I have done them UNTO you. Do not set limits on what you believe I can do through you, or you will not accept what I can do FOR you. For it is done ALREADY, and unless you give all that you have received, you will not know that your Redeemer liveth and that YOU have awakened WITH Him. Redemption is recognized ONLY by sharing it.

RAJ: Now again—and many of you might not like the things I'm saying tonight—it says:

RAJ READING: Redemption is recognized ONLY by sharing it.

RAJ: And the question is, "But what if I share it with somebody who refuses to accept it?" You stop trying to share it where it's unwelcome. You stop trying to share it where it's being refused. You stop sharing it and persisting in sharing it, and making an ethic out of sharing it, and turning the sharing of it with that person into a crusade—you stop that! And you withdraw. And you patiently wait for the Call to awaken to come from within them—and then you join with them, engage with them. Because until their devotion to their god is, in some form, abandoned within them, the power of the Christ that they are is absolute and you will not be let in. And so, you honor that fact.

And as I said to my disciples, when you go into a village and you're not accepted, shake off the dust from off thy feet and leave town. Leave the town; abandon the projects that you set for yourselves to change others for their own good when they haven't come to your door asking to know what they can change in their lives in order to stop creating the suffering they're experiencing. I hope this is perfectly clear. And if its clarity registers with you, you will be greatly and profoundly relieved from your own obsession of trying to be a force for good, when you think you ought to be able to be, because after all so-and-so is calling for help.

RAJ READING: God's Son...

RAJ: You. Everyone.

RAJ READING: ...IS saved.

RAJ: It's already done. And as I said, it's time to discover that you're in the arena of embodying the deathlessness of Life, because the deathlessness of Life has already been demonstrated, and the belief that death is the conclusion of life has forever been broken. It does not have the power that it did before the Resurrection, and it can never again have it.

RAJ READING: God's Son IS saved. Bring only THIS awareness to the Sonship,...

RAJ: To each other.

RAJ READING: ...and you will have a part in the redemption as valuable as mine. For your part must be LIKE mine if you learn it of me. If you believe that YOURS is limited,...

RAJ: You know, you're just not quite my equal.

RAJ READING: If you believe that YOURS is limited,...

RAJ: And you're somehow more special than me in your unique incapacity.
[laughing]

RAJ READING: If you believe that YOURS is limited, YOU are limiting MINE. There is no order of difficulty in miracles because all of God's Sons are of equal value, and their equality is their Oneness. The whole power of God is in every part of Him,...

RAJ: With a capital "H".

RAJ READING: ...and nothing contradictory to His Will is either great or small. What does not exist has NO size and NO measure. To God ALL things are possible. And to Christ it is given to be LIKE the Father.

[pause]

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: To God ALL things are possible. And to you it is given to be LIKE the Father.

RAJ: To you all things are possible.

Well, everyone can rejoice because you've all been waiting for what we're going to read about next week, "The Problem and the Answer." [audience laughter] But don't be too anxious and read ahead. Stay with what we've talked about this week. Let it... let it sink in. It is Sanity. And it's your release from unnecessary obligation to do the impossible. Enjoy the release and enjoy the relief.

And I look forward to being with you all next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

We're going to go right into the book.

RAJ READING: The Problem and the Answer

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here instead: The Condition of Reality]

RAJ READING: The world as YOU perceive it cannot have been created by the Father, for the world is NOT as you see it. God created ONLY the eternal, and everything you see is perishable.

RAJ: Hmm. Here we've been talking about, for lack of better words, the human condition. And we've been talking about the two kinds of seekers for help, and we've been talking about the two kinds of help providers, with all of its seeming complexities.

And what's this?

RAJ READING: The world as YOU perceive it cannot have been created by the Father,...

RAJ: Well, if you wish to be an agent for change, if you wish to be having a different kind of experience from the one you've been having, if you're tired of quote "the human condition" unquote, then there's something you must do. And the something that you must do is to step back from the human condition. Go back to square one, as it were, which is innocence, purity. You have to be willing to step back from the problem and its complexities.

It's very simple. Paul cannot hear me if he's not willing to set aside whatever complexities are confronting him, whatever hooks are engaging his reactions. In other words, he's learned that in order to deal with them, he must step back from them and join with me. It's the same with everyone.

If you want to be an agent for change, if you don't like the situation you're confronted with, you must first of all take care of number one—you—in the sense that you are the one observing the situation, the call for correction, the call for Love, and so you're the one who must move into the place where the call for correction can be responded to successfully. And that requires you, for lack of better words, to get your head on straight. And that's what we're doing here.

You must step back and learn, recognize, that:

RAJ READING: The world as YOU perceive it cannot have been created by the Father, for the world is NOT as you see it. God created ONLY the eternal, and everything you see is perishable.

RAJ: In order for anything to be eternal, it must be unconflicted. Conflict is disruptive and destructive of the experience of Peace, the experience of Singularity, the experience of Innocence, the experience of Purity. When you're looking unjoined with that which can provide you the experience of Singularity, you cannot help but see conflict, and you cannot help but respond to it from a conflicted place within yourself.

Again.

RAJ READING: God created ONLY the eternal, and everything you see is perishable. Therefore, there must be another world which you do NOT see.

RAJ: And we've talked extensively about this. When you look at the flowers and you see a plant, you see a product of evolution. You see something that blossoms, turns to seed, and dies. And you see a cycle occurring repetitiously over and over and over again. And you interpret it to be a material organism, a material object, subject to and governed by the laws of matter. You are not seeing God's world. Technically, you are seeing God's world, but you are insisting upon interpreting it falsely, and believing your definition. And so you do not see what is Real.

RAJ READING: ...there must be another world which you do NOT see. The Bible speaks of a NEW Heaven and a NEW earth,...

RAJ: Which all of you, in one way or another, look forward to. "There's a new Heaven and a new earth and old things shall pass away. Glory, I can't wait!"

RAJ READING: ...yet this cannot be literally true, for the eternal are not RE-created. To perceive ANEW is merely to perceive AGAIN, implying that before, or in the interval, you were not perceiving AT ALL.

RAJ: In other words, if you're going to ever see anything more than a material flower, or a material table, or a material tree, or a material sister or brother, you're going to have to look beyond the meanings you have been applying to them. You have to arrive at a point where you're willing to recognize that you haven't been perceiving anything at all but pure fantasy, pure imagination.

RAJ READING: To perceive ANEW is merely to perceive AGAIN, implying that before, or in the interval, you were not perceiving AT ALL. What, then, is the world that awaits your perception when you SEE it?

RAJ: This is one of the most beautiful questions that you can entertain. And it's one of the most pregnant questions that you can entertain, because the answer is a revelation. The answer is something that happens when you let yourself have a moment of intimacy with the flower, innocent of the meanings you have projected upon it, with a desire to have it communicate to you its God-derived divine Meaning. In that invitation, you open the door to actually perceive, in place of what you've called perception, which has been a matter of seeing what isn't there at all and therefore doesn't truly constitute perceiving at all.

The great question:

RAJ READING: What, then, is the world that awaits your perception when you SEE it?

RAJ: You will know when you genuinely and honestly become curious—curious enough to bring your attention to the place where the answer can be provided.

Now the same thing applies to a Brother who seems problematic to you. If you want to see what's really there, then you have to be willing to do whatever it takes to abandon what you've called your perception, so that the Real Meaning of your Brother can register with you and thus provide yourself the experience of perceiving what is really there; providing yourself with the experience of actual perception.

Now:

RAJ READING: Every loving thought that the Son of God...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...ever had is eternal.

RAJ: And I would tell you that every act of Love that you have engaged in is eternal, whether you've been awake or not.

RAJ READING: Every loving thought that the Son of God ever had is eternal. Those which his mind perceived in this world are the world's ONLY reality.

RAJ: In other words, as you've looked at the world, defining it on your own terms, and therefore have been unconscious of what the world really is, you, because you are still the Christ and can't ever stop being the Christ, have engaged in expressions of Love, in being the movement of Love. And so, out of everything that you're seeing that you're not seeing clearly and which therefore isn't real, those acts of Love have been and still are the only Real things that have happened. They are, relative to your experience of your perception of the world, the world's only Reality—your world's only Reality—your made-up world's only Reality. Why? Because the expression of Love, being the embodiment of Love, isn't something any of you have ever made up. It's something which you have allowed, something which you have allowed expression to, and thus introduced it into, so to speak, the fantasy world that you live in and are devoted to.

RAJ READING: Every loving thought that the Son of God ever had is eternal. Those which his mind perceived in this world are the world's ONLY reality. They are still perceptions because he still believes that he is separate. Yet they are eternal because they are loving.

RAJ: So whether you are awake or not, you are still creating. You are still being a co-creator with the Father, because when you embody and express Love, you are letting the Love That God Is find expression, be expressed, right where you are.

RAJ READING: And being loving, they are like the Father, and therefore cannot die. The real world can ACTUALLY BE PERCEIVED.

RAJ: This is why I tell you to bring your curiosity to what is in your face. Because the Real World that is there that you're not perceiving, can be perceived without your having to die and go somewhere else. And so keep your attention where the opportunity to experience the Real World, to actually perceive the Real World, can happen.

RAJ READING: All that is necessary is a willingness to perceive nothing ELSE.

RAJ: You see? You don't realize that you intend not to see the Real World. But when you look at a flower, or you look at your Brother and Sister, and you use the definitions that your doctors and your scientists and your philosophers have taught you, you are choosing to look without innocent eyes. You're choosing to look through a sieve, a filter, that alters your perception so that you don't see exactly what is there. And the inexact experience you're having becomes for you an exact experience, and you trust it as though it's valid.

RAJ READING: The real world can ACTUALLY BE PERCEIVED. All that is necessary is a willingness to perceive nothing ELSE.

RAJ: Now a willingness to perceive nothing else is what you bring into play when you look at the flower, or you look at anything, and you desire to have a moment or a time of intimacy with it without preconceptions; with an intellectual acceptance of the idea that it just might be God presencing Himself, and therefore that it has divine Meaning that is worth experiencing. That is the way you bring a willingness to perceive nothing else but what is there, what is Real.

RAJ READING: All that is necessary is a willingness to perceive nothing ELSE. For if you perceive both good AND evil, you are accepting both the false AND the true AND MAKING NO DISTINCTION BETWEEN THEM.

RAJ: If you accept what is false and you accept what is true and you make no distinction between them, the state of mind you're in can only be described as insanity. It is a state of mind which is incapable of being clear. It is a state of mind called confusion. And yet, although that's what you experience everyday, you call it normal. And you think that you have found ways to successfully live in this state of confusion.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego sees SOME good, but never ONLY good. That is why its perceptions are so variable. It does not reject goodness entirely for that you could not accept,...

RAJ: And I will say, it does not reject goodness entirely because it can't.

RAJ READING: ...that you could not accept,...

RAJ: Why? Because you aren't that insane. You know the Truth. You know what Love is. You know what Principle is. You know what Life is. And if the effort was made to convince you that death is life, that hate is love, and there is no Life and there is no Love, [small laugh] you wouldn't buy it. So the ego is never quite that stark. It suggests something far less than the extreme position, and that you can live with. And so you do.

RAJ READING: It does not reject goodness entirely for that you could not accept, but...

RAJ: What does it do?

RAJ READING: ...it always adds something that is NOT real to the real,...

RAJ: And what is it, the little something that it adds? It adds a bias to the perception. It adds a twist. It just biases what's Real.

RAJ READING: It does not reject goodness entirely for that you could not accept, but it always adds something that is NOT real to the real, THUS CONFUSING ILLUSION AND REALITY. For perceptions cannot be partly true. If you believe in truth AND illusion you cannot tell WHICH is true. To establish your PERSONAL autonomy...

RAJ: In other words, when you got your bill of divorcement.

RAJ READING: ...you tried to create unlike your Father,...

RAJ: You see? You provided that little bit of bias, that little bit of torque we've talked about before; that little bit of twist that makes the energy and the experience of a thing not quite what it was as the Father had made it. It causes an experience, for each of you individually, that distorts What It Really Is.

RAJ READING: To establish your PERSONAL autonomy you tried to create unlike your Father, believing what you made to be capable of BEING unlike Him.

RAJ: You see? You say, "The Father gave me free will. Why did He give me free will? Because He wanted me to learn how to be like Him and become like Him alongside Him. I have free will to learn how to bring all of my skills as a divine Son of God into play and to a level of excellence on my own." That's an interesting little bit of torque.

And you believe that as you develop these skills and become excellent at it, that you will actually have succeeded at creating unlike Him, and thus added your gift of originality to His. And so you're all very busy developing your skills, honing your skills to be a better and better independent autonomous authority.

RAJ READING: Yet everything in what you have made that IS true...

RAJ: And of course that only happened when you weren't paying attention.

RAJ READING: Yet everything in what you have made that IS true...

RAJ: Like every act of Love, every expression of Love. Every loving, mindful embrace of a Brother or a Sister or your world, is true. And:

RAJ READING: ...IS like Him.

RAJ: And is eternal.

RAJ READING: Only this...

RAJ: In your fantasy world.

RAJ READING: ...is the real world, and perceiving ONLY this will lead you to the real Heaven because it will make you capable of UNDERSTANDING it.

RAJ: So here we've backed off from trying to respond to the call for correction, or trying to respond to the call for Love that presents itself as objectionable or unkind or hateful behavior. We're stepping back to consider what we are doing in terms of how we're using our mind. That's what each of you is called upon to do if you wish to be an agent for change, if you wish to be helpful. You must be willing to bring your attention to the only things that are the Real World right here in your experience, and devote yourself by perceiving only these, and this will lead you to the Real Heaven, because it will make you capable of understanding it. The wish to see what is Real is what opens the door for the Real Meaning of the flower or a Brother to be communicated to you so that you understand it.

Now:

RAJ READING: The perception of goodness is not knowledge, but the denial of the OPPOSITE of goodness enables you to perceive...

RAJ: Or have.

RAJ READING: ...a condition in which opposites do not exist.

RAJ: When Paul is joined with me, he's not experiencing opposites. And in this place where opposites don't exist, he can be the reflection of God. He can be fulfilling the purpose of Being. And it's the same with all of you. But, in order to have this experience, he has to be willing to set aside his inclination to seek justice; the inclination to react to egos with a better retort than what they've dished out so far. He has to be willing to abandon the satisfaction of being a successful ego. He has to abandon the great satisfaction that he and all of you get from conflict, because at the bottom line you all thrive on conflict. You feel invigorated when you're in the middle of it. And you feel that you're called upon to bring a certain amount of excellence, even though it can only be ego excellence, into the picture so as to be coercive enough to bring about a solution. But what? A solution by force. And that's not healing.

RAJ READING: The perception of goodness is not knowledge, but the denial of the OPPOSITE of goodness...

RAJ: Going on a diet in which the opposite of goodness isn't present.

RAJ READING: ...enables you to perceive a condition in which opposites do not exist. And this IS the condition of knowledge.

RAJ: This is when the experience of Truth can register with you because you have provided the condition under which, for lack of better words, the transfer of Knowledge can occur.

RAJ READING: WITHOUT this awareness you have not met its conditions, and until you do you will not know that it is yours already.

RAJ: Now Paul can tell you that when he has this experience, he's not yet realizing that he's always had it, and he had it already before each time he chooses to set aside his independent right to be reactive or self-righteous, and joins with me.

RAJ READING: You...

RAJ: All of you.

RAJ READING: ...have made many ideas which you have placed between yourselves and your Creator,...

RAJ: And I would add: Between yourselves and your Creator's Creations.

These are the mutual definitions that you've all made up and agreed to validate and stand by and reinforce, if you have to die to do it—even if you have to die to do it.

RAJ READING: You have made many ideas which you have placed between yourselves and your Creator, and these beliefs are the world as you perceive it.

RAJ: That sentence, if it were made into a work of art, would be a large frame in which there was printing that said, "You have made many ideas which you have placed between yourselves and your Creator, and these beliefs are..."—and the rest of the printing would be in flashing neon tubing—"...the world as you perceive it."

Right now, right here in this room, right here where any of you are, right there where any of you are, you're seeing your definitions. You're seeing what you have been trained to see. You're seeing what you've been talked into seeing. And so you're seeing what you've been educated to see and not what is really there.

And heaven help you if any of you have a slightly different perception of everything, because if you say it out loud, you're likely to be carted off to the loony bin. And certainly if you're a child who hasn't yet been totally trained as to how you're supposed to see, you will be talked out of what you're seeing. You will be corrected. "No. Those flowers aren't shimmering, Johnny. No, you can't really see through the railing. You're misunderstanding what you're seeing." You see?

Now this is important.

RAJ READING: Truth is not absent here,...

RAJ: Meaning here in the world.

RAJ READING: Truth is not absent here, but it IS obscure.

RAJ: And like I've said, you're only ever confronted with Reality. The only thing confronting you is Reality. The only thing confronting you is the Kingdom of Heaven. But because you're choosing to validate the definitions you've applied to Reality, you call it a physical universe that came from a big bang; what you might call a confluence of physical forces that had a universal effect because it was so powerful.

RAJ READING: Truth is not absent here,...

RAJ: Reality is what's confronting you.

RAJ READING: ...but it IS obscure. You do not know the difference between what you have made...

RAJ: The definitions you've applied to everything and which you use in order not to see what's really there.

RAJ READING: ...and what God created,...

RAJ: Which is the only thing that is there.

RAJ READING: ...and so you do not know the difference between what you have made and what YOU have created.

RAJ: Again, what you have created have been voluntary or involuntary expressions of Love, voluntary or involuntary embodiments of Truth, embodiments of Life, that wiped out a cancer, or the measles, or the chicken pox, or the whooping cough, when you experienced healing. Those embodiments of Truth and Life and Love remain eternally.

But:

RAJ READING: ...you do not know the difference between what you have made and what YOU have created.

To believe that you can perceive the real world is to believe that you can know yourself.

RAJ: But you know what? There are many who don't even know there is a Real World to experience right here. They think the world is exactly what they've been taught it is, and so there's no occasion for them to try to see beyond it, to try to free themselves from the bondage of it. But to those of you who are aware that there's another way to look at this, who will dare to believe that you can perceive the Real World, you will discover means that you're willing to believe that you can know yourself, because they will go hand and hand.

RAJ READING: You can know God...

RAJ: What does that mean? It means that when you have the moment of intimacy with the flower, and you become undefended against its communication of its divine Meaning to you because that's its purpose—is to express, to communicate its divinity, its Meaning—that experience of its Meaning is the equivalent of knowing God. It is the experience of knowing God. And in the acknowledgement of it, you are then glorifying God.

RAJ READING: You can know God because it is His Will to BE known.

RAJ: It's the will of everything God has created, everything that God is being, to be known. It is your purpose to be known for What You Are. It is the flower's purpose to be known for What It Is. And the unobstructed experience of knowing the Meaning of everything, is best described as communion. And it's an infinite Knowing, because no part of the infinity of Creation is obscured from you. It's a large experience.

Now:

RAJ READING: The real world is all that the Holy Spirit has saved for you out of what you have made,...

RAJ: Again, what you have made up.

RAJ READING: ...and to perceive only this is salvation because it is the recognition that reality is ONLY what is true.

RAJ: That's why you stop often during the day, or should, to say, "Holy Spirit, what is the Meaning of this? What is the Meaning of that?"—so that what is true about it can be conveyed to you, because you truly are interested in experiencing what is true, and for that moment you are willing to abandon what you believe is true, so that you might become free of the entanglement of the state of confusion that a mind that cannot tell the difference between what is Real and what isn't real, is subject to.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: The Problem and Answer]

RAJ: Don't laugh.

RAJ READING: This is a very simple course. Perhaps you do not feel that a course which, in the end, teaches nothing more than that only reality is true is necessary.

RAJ: That is what it teaches.

RAJ READING: ...only reality is true...

RAJ: Why does it teach it? So that you will be curious to experience it. So that you will invite the experience of it in. So that you will abandon your habit of trudging along repeating the old paradigms.

RAJ READING: This is a very simple course. Perhaps you do not feel that a course which, in the end, teaches nothing more than that only reality is true is necessary. BUT DO YOU BELIEVE IT?

RAJ: That's the question. Do you believe that only Reality is true?

[laughing] If you believed that only Reality was true and that you weren't experiencing it yet, if you believed that only Reality was true, why you would be busy everyday doing what is essential to letting it in.

Now, we're talking in a larger picture here about Reality universally, but we can apply this to the Reality of specific things, like a Brother or a Sister, who is in a state of fear, listening to the voice for fear and acting out their fear, which is a call for Love. What do you do? You come back to the point of remembering that only Reality is true, and that at the moment you're not seeing it, and therefore you really do want to see it, so that you shift your own use of your mind into an abandonment of the pleasure or fascination with conflict. And you move from that into a devotion to Peace, Singularity, where the purity of Love and Life can register with you so that you're not confused, so that you can tell the difference between what is Real and what is unreal, and in that clarity automatically abandon any devotion whatsoever to what is unreal, and thus move into a state of Singular-Mindedness.

Only Reality is true.

RAJ READING: BUT DO YOU BELIEVE IT? When you have perceived the real world, you will recognize that you did NOT believe it. Yet the swiftness with which your new and ONLY real perception will be translated into knowledge will leave you only an instant to realize that this judgment is true.

RAJ: In other words, when you have the experience that only the Real is true, when you have the experience of God in a thing, you will realize that your experience of it had been an interpretation, and the interpretation wasn't true. And that realization will only last a moment, because you will be consumed with and interested only in having the experience of What Is True.

RAJ READING: And then everything you made...

RAJ: Everything you made up.

RAJ READING: ...will be forgotten, the good and bad,...

RAJ: The good stuff you made up as well as the bad stuff.

RAJ READING: ...the false and the true.

RAJ: It will be forgotten.

RAJ READING: For as Heaven and earth become one, even the real world will vanish from your sight.

RAJ: The believers in quote "the world doesn't exist" unquote love that statement. They say, "It says right in the Course, 'even the real world will vanish from your sight.'"

It's simple. As you wake up, as you move through this awakening process, as enlightenment registers with you, you will begin to learn that the world as you've been seeing it, is not the way the world really is. And there is a world that really is, that is available for you to see. And so it would seem that there are two things going on, when there is really only one thing going on called a Real World that is being misperceived. And the misperception seems to suggest a second world. So we talk then about a Real World and an unreal world. The unreal one is made up of all the definitions you've applied to the Real World.

You see, like pin the tail on the donkey, if you have the donkey on the wall and you pin a peacock's tail to it, you could call it a "pea-mule" or a "pea-donkey." Does that mean there's such a thing as a pea-donkey? No. But you could become committed to that idea, and you could draw pictures and paintings of pea-donkeys. And everybody could become familiar with a pea-donkey. And everybody could say, "Yes. Yes. There are pea-donkeys. We've never seen one. We heard that there were some sightings up in the Northwest. We've found some strange tail feathers where you wouldn't expect to find them. But, no, we've never seen a pea-donkey. But they do exist. And we found some strange footprints that probably could only have been made by a pea-donkey. And we can tell that it probably weighs about 250 pounds." And blah, blah, blah.

So we talk as though there's a Real World and an unreal world. When you abandon your commitment to your definitions and your beliefs so there is an innocent mind that's unguarded, Reality can register with you. And as it registers with you and causes you to become aware that the world you have been seeing hasn't been real, you're in a position of shifting your allegiance from the unreal world to the Real World. The moment you shift your allegiance to the Real World, which is your experience of Reality, the unreal disappears and you could say that you're momentarily left with the illusion that you're in the Real World that was in contrast to the unreal world. But the moment that full unguarded embrace of the Real World happens, it ceases to be the Real World and you are experiencing Heaven.

Now:

RAJ READING: ...as Heaven and earth become one, even the real world will vanish from your sight. The end of the world is not its destruction but its TRANSLATION into Heaven. The reinterpretation of the world is the transfer of ALL perception to knowledge.

RAJ: Which I referred to in the past as Knowing, with a capital "K". It is the experience of Truth that could be called Knowing, or Knowledge, that hasn't been arrived at through intellectual processes, that hasn't been arrived at through reasoning, that hasn't been arrived at through discussion and mutual agreement. It's something that is, before you could have a single thought about it.

RAJ READING: The reinterpretation of the world is the transfer of ALL perception to knowledge. The Bible tells you to become as little children.

RAJ: You see? Remember that we're backing off from the human condition that we've been discussing for the last few weeks, we're backing off from that in order to consider the use you as a possible agent for change need to bring into play in order to truly be an agent for change. So we're abandoning the ones calling for help in order to get our mind into that place of clarity where you can extend the awareness of Truth that has arisen out of an experience of What It Is.

RAJ READING: The Bible tells you to become as little children. Little children recognize that they do not understand what they perceive, and so they ASK what it means. Do not make the mistake of believing that YOU understand what you perceive, for its meaning is lost to you.

RAJ: You look at the flower and you say, "I perceive a flower." But I'm telling you, you don't perceive its Meaning. You don't see God there. And if you're not seeing God there, you're seeing a perception, a misperception. You're seeing a nothingness which you are devoted to, to the exclusion of the experience of What It Really Is.

RAJ READING: Do not make the mistake of believing that YOU understand what you perceive, for its meaning is lost to you. Yet the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind. It's not something far off and very different, radically different from you. It's the very core of you. It's the very essential Being of you.

RAJ READING: Yet the Holy Spirit has saved its meaning FOR you, and if you will LET Him interpret it for you, He will restore what you have thrown away. As long as you think YOU know its meaning, you will see no need to ask it of Him.

You do not know the meaning of ANYTHING you perceive. NOT ONE THOUGHT YOU HOLD IS WHOLLY TRUE. The recognition of this is your firm beginning.

RAJ: So when you are confronted with a Brother or a situation that calls for correction, or that is a call for Love, you must be careful not to suddenly jump into the fray, thinking you have the answer without first acknowledging that you don't have the answer, and because at the moment you're not seeing it with the Holy Spirit, or with me, that you are not in a position of responding constructively. And so you back off and ask, "What is the Meaning here? What am I to be here?"—without bringing into your question a dance of all the little concepts that you have stored up for such an emergency, to be used in an emergency, and trying to fit them into the answer that the Holy Spirit will give you. You really need to want to go into this place of asking, this place of inquiry about what Truth is, with total innocence.

RAJ READING: You are not misguided; you have accepted no guide at all.

RAJ: Well, now if you were misguided, then you could be guilty. You could feel shame. You could feel guilt.

But you're not misguided; you simply have accepted no guide at all. So that knowledge means that it's very easy for you to say, "Holy Spirit, guide me here. Father, guide me here. Jesus, guide me here. I will yield to your help. I will yield to your guidance. I will yield to the revelation of clarity that you hold in trust for me; that you have been holding in trust for me until I got tired of doing everything by myself."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Instruction in perception is your great need, for you understand nothing.

RAJ: Now:

RAJ READING: Recognize this but do not ACCEPT it, for understanding is your inheritance.

RAJ: In other words, you need to recognize that you understand nothing, but don't accept that as the truth about you. It is, at the moment, what you're experiencing, but understanding is your inheritance. And it is there in you at every moment awaiting your welcome of it, and it's called the Holy Spirit. It's called your Right Mind. Another way of saying it is that you must recognize that you understand nothing because you're not utilizing your Right Mind at the moment. But do not accept that as a permanent fact, because you can choose to look another way. You can choose to ask for the guidance. You can do something new.

Now:

RAJ READING: Perceptions are learned, and you are not without a...

RAJ: Capital "T".

RAJ READING: ...Teacher. Yet your willingness to learn of Him depends on your willingness to question EVERYTHING you have learned of yourself, for you who have learned amiss should not be your own teachers.

RAJ: Well, I don't need to explain that, do I? That's easy to understand. The key point is you are not without a Teacher, with a capital "T". A capital "T" Teacher you can depend upon, you can lean into completely, you can lean into without reservation, because that Teacher's purpose is to remind you of Who You Are, to return your Right Mind to you, if you're willing to let it in once again.

RAJ READING: No-one can withhold truth except from himself. Yet God will not refuse the answer He GAVE you. Ask, then, for what is yours but which you did not make, and do not defend yourself AGAINST truth. YOU made the problem which God has answered.

RAJ: How did you make the problem? "Father, I'd rather see it my way. Father, I want a divorce." "Hey guys, I got a divorce. Would you believe it? Believe it! Let me tell you about it. You may want to get a divorce yourself. Come on. Let's have a little get-together here and discuss this new way of being."

RAJ READING: YOU made the problem which God has answered.

RAJ: How did God answer the problem? [small laugh] By causing you to be nothing different from Him, and therefore incapable of becoming something you're not—which means that when you thought you became something you were not, when you thought you were successful at it, you had accomplished nothing at all, except to move yourself into a state of delusion temporarily, to abide there until you got tired of it.

RAJ READING: YOU made the problem which God has answered. Ask yourselves, therefore, but one simple question, "Do I want the problem or do I want the answer?" Decide for the answer and you will have it, for you will see it as it is, and it is yours already.

RAJ: There's a saying, "Order is Heaven's first law." And many people who are very, very orderly in their life take pride in the fact that "Order is Heaven's first law," and they are expressing Heaven's first law by the orderliness of their things and their life. And they try to help other people be orderly. [small laugh]

But the key word is missing from that sentence. God's Order is Heaven's first law, not your concept of order. God's Order is Heaven's first law.

And so when you decide for the answer which you will have, it's going to be God's answer. God isn't going to help you be more orderly according to your concepts of order. God's answer is going to be the uncovering in you, the revealing in you of what Reality is, of what is Real. And you can thank your lucky stars that for the most part it isn't going to have anything to do with what you thought everything had to do with. It's going to be a most wonderful surprise. So when you ask for the answer, don't try to drag your preconceptions into it, else you're not asking with innocence.

Now we've spent a great deal of time here this evening describing in somewhat great detail the act of stepping back from a call for Love to attend to the use you're putting your mind to, so that you might put it to the use that reflects God's Purpose in you, rather than any purpose you've made up for yourself, so that you can respond to the call for Love and actually be an agent for change. I've used a lot of words, but the simple, the simplicity of it all, lies in at any given moment your saying, "Father, or Holy Spirit, what is the capital 'M' Meaning here? What do I need to know?"—and listening. It took all those words to embellish the simple act of sitting for a moment or an hour with a flower, desiring to know what its capital "M" Meaning is, and not introducing anything extra into the mix. It's something that simple, something that peaceful, something that uncomplicated.

The key to its success is the devotion you bring to the intent in the moment, because you could sit there for an hour with the flower, without any impetus, without any motivation to actually have the experience, and sit there pleased with yourself because you have been willing to take a whole hour for this holy exercise of being willing to experience the Meaning of the flower. You've got, as I said last week, to be hungry for the experience. There has to be desire there. And the desire will not come from your ego frame of reference. The desire will come from the Christ in you that you are.

I look forward to being with you next week, and I love you.

And I invite you to enter into this simple act that we've talked about at some length. Do I want the problem, or do I want the answer? Decide for the answer, and you will have it, for you will see it as it is, and it is yours already.

That is enough.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

So we ended up last time with the question, "Do I want the problem or do I want the answer?" And mind you, this question follows a part in the book where we were discussing the call for Love, where the human condition with all of its psychological complexities were being discussed, and then suddenly the book apparently changes course, changes subject. And the change demonstrated the appropriate response to the call for Love, which we could call bad behavior, because it brought the attention back to how you are seeing things, instead of saying, "Okay. Here's how you treat this person. Here's how you treat that person. Here's how you treat the other person. Here's the solution to changing other people, for the better, of course." And then the question was posed, "Do I want the problem or do I want the answer?"

It's very simple. If you want the problem, you will try to deal with people out there. You will try to change circumstances. You will try to take charge beneficently. But, nevertheless, it will be you taking charge; you coercing order out of chaos. And if you want to have the problem, that's the way to do it.

But if you want the answer, you're going to have to step back from the presenting presence that your Brother or your world is putting in your face, to see how it is that you are using your own mind. Why? Because until you're using your mind rightly, you will spontaneously respond out of habit from your memory and from the definitions you have applied to your Brothers, your Sisters, and your world.

If you want the answer, you have to step back to a point prior to your definitions, and you do that by inquiring of the Holy Spirit, or the Father, "What is the Meaning here? What is the Truth here? What is the answer?" And then you have to shut up. You have to be still so that you might listen and experience the revelation, the revealing of what the Truth is so that in that place and from that perspective, you may act well and be able to respond to the call for Love with that which answers the call for Love. Period.

Now, let's continue.

RAJ READING: You complain that this course is not sufficiently specific for you to understand it and USE it. Yet it has been VERY specific, and you have NOT done what it specifically advocates. This is not a course in the play of ideas, but in their PRACTICAL APPLICATION.

RAJ: In other words, [small laugh] this Course isn't about the words you're reading. It isn't about the ideas that they engender that you can work around and manipulate and come to better conclusions with. No, it's not a Course in the play of ideas, but in their practical application.

RAJ READING: Nothing could be more specific than to be told very clearly that if you ask you WILL receive.

RAJ: You will receive.

"Oh yeah, but it would be so much easier if I could just respond because I know what the answer is. I know that if they would just do this, it would change their lives. Why take the time? Why waste the time to ask, and then do this thing that I'm not really familiar with doing well—listen? The problem might be... [small laugh] the problem might be gone by the time I get the answer." Indeed.

RAJ READING: Nothing could be more specific than to be told very clearly that if you ask you WILL receive. The Holy Spirit will answer EVERY specific problem as long as you believe that problems ARE specific. His answer is both many and one, as long as you believe that the...

RAJ: Capital "O".

RAJ READING: ...One IS many. Realize that you are AFRAID of His...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...specificity,...

RAJ: Which is another way of saying realize that you are afraid of the specificity of that which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...for fear of what you think it will DEMAND of you.

RAJ: Strange words. You would probably say, "Well, I never thought it would demand anything of me." And maybe you haven't actually thought it through. But the simple fact is that if you're asking for guidance, you're abandoning your free will, aren't you, whether you're thinking about it or not. When you ask of the Holy Spirit what to do, you're introducing a willingness to yield to an authority other than your own. And so you think that if you listen to the Holy Spirit, it's going to require of you to sacrifice your autonomy, your independence; that which makes you unique and special and different, appropriately different from everyone else.

RAJ READING: Realize that you are AFRAID of His specificity, for fear of what you think it will DEMAND of you. Yet only by asking will you learn that nothing that is of God demands ANYTHING of you. God GIVES; He does NOT take.

RAJ: That's true.

At the bottom line, what you are afraid of is really clear thinking. You are afraid that you're going to lose your independent authority. It won't happen because it will be taken away from you. The only way it will happen is if you give it up voluntarily, willingly, because you would rather put your mind to a different use. You would like to put your mind to the use of standing in receipt of what God gives, which is All. God withholds nothing of what He is from His Creation. So you will have to abandon your independence, your autonomy, in order to re-embrace All That Is. But that's your Birthright; that is what you're supposed to be experiencing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are refusing to ask because you believe that asking is TAKING, and you do NOT perceive it as sharing. The Holy Spirit will give you only what is yours, and will take NOTHING in return. For what is yours IS everything, and you share it with God.

RAJ: In other words, you have it together with God. You have it together with all of your Brothers and Sisters. Because it is shared, there is no withholding, and none of you are in an unequal or inequitable state.

RAJ READING: This IS its reality. Would the Holy Spirit,...

RAJ: Which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...Who wills only to RESTORE, be capable of misinterpreting the question you must ask to learn His answer?

RAJ: And that's an important question because it means that you don't have to ask a perfect question. The intent, the meaning will not be misunderstood by what is nothing more than your Right Mind. No matter what you ask, no matter how it's worded, when you ask, you introduce something new into the picture that hasn't been there. It's an attitude of inclusion, instead of staunch independence. And that cannot be misunderstood, no matter how poorly you ask the question.

RAJ READING: You HAVE heard the answer, but you have misunderstand the QUESTION.

RAJ: Meaning the nature of a question.

RAJ READING: You have believed that to ask for guidance of the Holy Spirit is to ask for DEPRIVATION.

RAJ: Again, because you are afraid you're going to have to give up your independence; that knowing God's Truth will constitute a significant loss for you, not the least of which is the freedom to see things your own way. Because if you don't have the freedom to see things your own way, you have no means of introducing anything original into life, into the human condition. But you know what? None of you is required to be able to provide something uniquely original to the human condition in order to improve it, because the human condition is nothing more than the result of having attempted to look at Reality independently. And the minute you abandon that independent stance, you will find that no uniquely original idea is called for, because you're no longer suffering from a biased perception of Reality that calls for a uniquely original response. You see, any uniquely original response you feel is needed can only be needed to help correct something in the human condition. But there wouldn't be any human condition calling for correction if you abandoned your independent autonomy and joined with your Source.

[Editor's Note: Raj backed up to the second sentence in the previous paragraph.]

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit will give you only what is yours,...

RAJ: Which is everything.

RAJ READING: ...and will take NOTHING in return. For what is yours IS everything, and you share it with God. This IS its reality. Would the Holy Spirit, Who wills only to RESTORE, be capable of misinterpreting the question you must ask to learn His answer?

You HAVE heard the answer, but you have misunderstand the QUESTION. You have believed that to ask for guidance of the Holy Spirit is to ask for DEPRIVATION. Little children of God, you do not understand your Father. You believe in a world that takes because you believe that you can GET by taking. And BY that perception you have lost sight of the real world. You are afraid of the world as YOU see it, but the real world is still yours for the asking. Do not deny it to yourself, for it can ONLY free you. Nothing of God...

RAJ: And I will say: Nothing of Reality will enslave you.

RAJ READING: Nothing of God will enslave His Son, whom He created free and whose freedom is protected by...

RAJ: Capital "H".

RAJ READING: ...His...

RAJ: Capital "B".

RAJ READING: ...Being.

Blessed are you who will ask the truth of God without fear, for only thus can you learn that His answer IS the release from fear. Beautiful Child of God, you are asking only for what I promised you. Do you believe I would deceive you? The Kingdom of Heaven IS within you. Believe that the truth is in me, for I KNOW that it is in YOU.

RAJ: Do you see what I'm saying here? I'm saying lean on me. Lean on my Vision of you, because that is the way you can claim it for yourself. You doubt that it's in you, but I know that it's in you. And you can lean on me as a most practical and loving means of claiming it for yourself, having it for yourself.

RAJ READING: God's Sons have nothing which they do not share. Ask for truth of any Son of God, and you have asked it of me.

RAJ: That's a little hard for you to believe when you see the way some of the Sons of God are behaving. But you know what? I'm not asking you to ask of your Brother's behavior to know the Truth. I'm asking you to ask of your Brother who is the Christ whether he knows it or not, what the Truth is. And this does not mean that you have to go up to him face-to-face and in words say, "Tell me the Truth about me." But it means, in your mind—and we're talking about not what you do with the Brother, with your Brother, but the use to which you are putting your mind. You ask of the Christ that you know your Brother is, what the Truth is. You ask that your encounter with your Brother, regardless of his behavior and regardless of what he thinks he is or what he thinks you are, you ask that your encounter with your Brother be one that illuminates Truth to you more clearly than ever before.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: No-one of us but has the answer in him, to give to anyone who asks it of him. Ask anything of God's Son...

RAJ: You see, it says, "Ask anything of God's Son"—not the bastard you think he is, not the bastard he thinks he is.

RAJ READING: Ask anything of God's Son...

RAJ: Because that is the only thing that's really there.

RAJ READING: ...and...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...His Father will answer you, for Christ...

RAJ: The one he truly is.

RAJ READING: ...is not deceived in His Father and His Father is not deceived in Him.

RAJ: You see, you will not see the answer for your Brother until you see that your Brother is no different from yourself and that you are both the Christ. And in the realization that both of you are the Christ, conscious of it or not, you are apprehending both of yourselves correctly—which means that the healing is available for both of you, and you are not holding him to his poor behavior and seeing him as unworthy of the answer, and thereby you are not withholding the answer from yourself. As long as you think you are worthy of the answer but your Brother is not, neither one of you will have the answer together.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Do not, then, be deceived in your brother, and see only his loving thoughts as his reality, for by denying that HIS mind is split you will heal YOURS.

RAJ: These are the things you will find out at an experiential level when you turn to the Father or the Holy Spirit to ask, "What needs to be known here? What do I need to be here in the face of a call for Love?"

So don't take these words and say, "Oh, now I know what the answer is. I'm not to be deceived in my Brother. And I'm to see only his loving thoughts as his Reality, for by denying that his mind is split, I will heal mine. Whoop-de-do!" That's not experience. That's mental masturbation. Don't do it. Don't avoid the becoming quiet part of it, where you abandon what you're confident of to ask of the Holy Spirit, "What is the Truth here that will answer the call for Love, that will really answer the call for Love?"

RAJ READING: Accept him...

RAJ: Your Brother.

RAJ READING: ...as his Father accepts him and heal him unto Christ...

RAJ: Well, what does that mean? In a way it means lift him up unto his Christhood, instead of holding him to your lesser definition of him and your self-righteous, emotional reactions to your lesser definition of him.

RAJ READING: Accept him as his Father accepts him and heal him unto Christ, for Christ is his healing AND yours.

RAJ: Your Christhood and his Christhood are his healing and yours.

RAJ READING: Christ is the Son of God Who is in no way separate from His Father,...

RAJ: And you have the experience of this when you abandon your separation from your Father by inquiring of your Father, "What is the Truth here? What is the Truth that I need to be aware of about him and about me? What is the Truth about him that goes beyond what my poor conception of him does?"

RAJ READING: Christ is the Son of God Who is in no way separate from His Father, Whose EVERY thought is as loving as the Thought of His Father by which He was created. Be not deceived in God's Son,...

RAJ: You get it? Be not deceived.

Be not deceived. Don't deceive yourselves through the use of your own poor definitions of each other. You've got to abandon them if you're going to see healing in your own mind and in your Brother's mind.

RAJ READING: Be not deceived in God's Son, for thereby you MUST be deceived in yourself. And being deceived in yourself you ARE deceived in your Father, in Whom no deceit is possible.

RAJ: If you want to be an agent for change, if you want to successfully respond to the call for Love, you're going to have to operate outside of whatever your current mindsets are. Because if you weren't in your current mindsets, you would be seeing Reality, and you would not be inappropriate, and healing would surround you wherever you went.

So, mind you, we're still talking here about the use you're putting your mind to. We're not talking about changing your Brothers or Sisters. We're not talking about a better means of control. We're talking about stepping back from that practice and exercise of control, and stepping into the not-knowing place where you lack confidence, ego confidence, and where you're innocent enough in your mind to let the Truth in. Again, we're talking here about the use you're putting your mind to, and as I said last week getting your own head on straight.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: In the real world there is no sickness, for there is no separation and no division. Only loving thoughts are recognized, and because no-one is WITHOUT your help the...

RAJ: Capital "H".

RAJ READING: ...Help of God goes with YOU everywhere.

RAJ: You see, that's what I said. And everywhere you went, healing would surround you; the revealing of Reality would occur, and life would be a delight.

RAJ READING: As you become willing to ACCEPT this...

RAJ: Capital "H".

RAJ READING: ...Help by ASKING for it, you will give it because you WANT it. Nothing will be beyond your healing power because nothing will be denied your simple request.

RAJ: Well, what are you requesting? You're requesting for your mind to be clear; for your mind not to be biasing Reality and providing you with a distorted experience of it.

And once again, does this mean that your Brother's call for Love and his bad behavior is entirely a result of your lack of Vision? No. It simply means that healing isn't occurring there because of your lack of Vision. And the temptation is for you to respond to, react to, retaliate against the bad behavior, instead of clearing your vision, instead of clearing your mind, so that you have the capital "V" Vision that's transformational.

RAJ READING: What problems will not disappear in the presence of God's answer? Ask, then, to learn of the reality of your brother because this is what you WILL perceive in him, and you will see YOUR beauty reflected in him.

RAJ: Why? Because you have it and he doesn't? No. Because in the experience of your beauty, it's obvious to you that it's the fundamental Truth of everything that exists. It's shared—shared wholly, unequivocally. And so you see in him what is true of you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Do not accept your brother's variable perception of himself, for his split mind is yours, and you will not accept YOUR healing without his.

RAJ: Again, we're talking about the use to which you're putting your mind; getting your head straight.

When it says, "Do not accept your brother's variable perception of himself," it doesn't mean go out and correct him, go out and change his mind so he stops having this variable perception of himself. It says you stop accepting your Brother's variable perception of himself that you're seeing and believing is real. For if you're seeing it, your mind is as split as his.

RAJ READING: ...and you will not accept YOUR healing without his.

RAJ: You'll both be blind, and you'll both fall in the ditch—the ditch called the human condition.

RAJ READING: For you share the real world as you share Heaven, and his healing IS yours. To love yourself is to HEAL yourself, and you cannot perceive part of you as sick and achieve your OWN goal. Brother, we heal together as we live together and love together.

RAJ: "Together" is the key word there.

How many of you get on an elevator and put an imaginary cocoon around yourself? And you don't say anything to anyone else. And if someone else says something to you, you are brief and uninvolved. You don't ride elevators "together" with anyone these days. You ride elevators separate from everyone else in the same little cubicle.

"Oh, boy. Involvement. Who knows why... why did he say good morning? What's he got up his sleeve? What's his agenda?" Or, "Hmm. Wonder what she has on her mind?" But it's not togetherness.

RAJ READING: Brother,...

RAJ: Well, now there's an inclusive word. Right? Not a separative word.

RAJ READING: Brother, we heal together as we live together and love together. Be not deceived in God's Son,...

RAJ: Is that getting through to you? It's repeated often enough in these pages.

RAJ READING: Be not deceived in God's Son, for he is one with himself and One with his Father. Love him who is beloved of His Father, and you will learn of the Father's Love for YOU.

RAJ: Again, we're talking about the way you're choosing to use your mind to apprehend your Brother.

RAJ READING: If you perceive offense in a brother pluck the offense from your mind,...

RAJ: Let's be very careful here. That is not the same as saying, "If you perceive a Brother behaving badly, pluck the bad behavior from your mind." You can observe a Brother's bad behavior—meaning behavior that is based upon his ignorance of his worth; behavior that's based upon the fear that he can't help feeling because he's separated himself from his Father, and thinks he's alone—you can perceive a Brother's bad behavior without taking offense. Offense is an ego response. It's an emotional and always self-righteous response. It's a judgmental response.

RAJ READING: If you perceive offense in a brother pluck the offense from your mind,...

RAJ: Again, you do not have to be offended even though you recognize a call for correction.

But you say, "Well, that poor bastard is behaving badly because he's not bothered to take the time to know who he truly is. And I have. And I have many constructive things to do today. And why the hell should I have to interrupt my constructive things to do to respond to the call for Love, and maybe be the agent for change here because it's my function not to have a split mind and not to see an intrusion here and not to see an intruder here, but rather an opportunity to be together with someone in Love?" You see? Why should you have to be bothered by the call this makes upon you? Well, if that isn't taking offense, I don't know what it is. It is taking offense, but it's not called for.

RAJ READING: If you perceive offense in a brother pluck the offense from your mind, for you are offended by Christ,...

RAJ: You're offended by your Brother who is the Christ.

But of course if you choose to forget that he's the Christ and you think he's just an ego, just a hunk of flesh, a material being, well, then you're going to be offended. But you've missed the fact that he's the Christ, which is the key element that allows you to look at it a different way.

RAJ READING: If you perceive offense in a brother pluck the offense from your mind, for you are offended by Christ, and are deceived in Him.

RAJ: You're deceived in him because you're using your definition of him in place of What He Is.

You...

RAJ READING: ...are deceived in Him.

RAJ: That means you are confused about him. You are not able to make a distinction between Truth and illusion, Truth and error. If you can't make that distinction, you are deceived.

RAJ READING: HEAL in Christ and be not offended by Him, for there IS no offense in Him. If what you perceive offends you, you are offended in YOURSELF and are condemning God's Son whom God condemneth not.

RAJ: Now this—I must reiterate—has to do with your stepping back from the call for help, the call for Love, in order to see that you are using your mind well.

You can take these words and you can manipulate them around through the use of logic and reason, and you can say, "Well, there's this individual who is very obtuse, very unloving, behaves in a very threatening manner, does not have anybody's well-being or interest at heart, and takes advantage of everyone. And this one doesn't want to hear about the Truth about himself or herself. This one objects strenuously if any intelligent Love is extended toward them. So everything you're saying here is just so much bullshit. Where is its practicality? How can I apply it?" And the problem is that you have your attention incorrectly placed, because we're not talking about coercing someone else. We're talking about the use you're putting your mind to, and whether the use you are putting it to is causing it to be conflicted or Singular.

Because no matter what your Brother is doing, if you are using your mind to create conflict within it, you absolutely blind yourself to the wholeness of the Singularity of your Being, and you are incapable of fulfilling your function, which is to be able to see God everywhere, and acknowledge God, and glorify God by that recognition. When the recognition dawns in you, you will know what to say and what to be, or what not to say, or when not to say anything. And you will be able to be utterly appropriate in terms that will definitely contribute to the correction that the call for Love represents. But that's not where we are in the process, in what we're reading about right now. We're still talking about how you're choosing to use your mind and what the elements are that you are willing to employ.

RAJ READING: If what you perceive offends you, you are offended in YOURSELF...

RAJ: You are creating a conflicted mental state.

RAJ READING: ...and are condemning God's Son whom God condemneth not. Let the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...remove ALL offense of God's Son against himself...

RAJ: Let your Right Mind remove all of the conflict that you are generating in your mind against yourself.

RAJ READING: ...and perceive no-one but through His guidance, for He would save you from ALL condemnation.

RAJ: Now all of you are so conditioned to project things and think out there that this sounds like, through the Holy Spirit's guidance, He will save you from the condemnation of the world, the condemnation of those that don't like you. But that's not what we're talking about. That's not the subject matter here. We're talking about the use to which you're putting your own mind.

And so, the Holy Spirit's guidance, the guidance of your Right Mind will...

RAJ READING: ...save you from ALL condemnation.

RAJ: From all of the conflict that you subject yourself to by engaging in condemnation. And it saves you from it, the Holy Spirit saves you from it by helping you to let it go, so that your mind arrives at peace, absent the conflicting dynamic of condemnation, returning you to a state of Singularity which is the proper use of your mind.

RAJ READING: Accept His...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...healing power and use it for all He sends you, for He wills to heal the Son of God in whom He is not deceived.

RAJ: Now, let's back up here.

RAJ READING: Accept His healing power...

RAJ: For yourself.

RAJ READING: ...and...

RAJ: Secondarily.

RAJ READING: ...use it for all He sends you,...

RAJ: In other words, use it for the strays that He sends to your door. Don't use it to go out and hunt down the strays that you've picked to bless.

RAJ READING: Accept His healing power...

RAJ: For yourself.

RAJ READING: ...and use it for all He sends you, for He wills to heal the Son of God in whom He is not deceived.

RAJ: And that has to mean you and the Brother who is sent to you, because the healing will always be a shared healing.

“Now, is it reasonable...”—you see this is the way reasoning works—“...is it reasonable to assume that if someone’s in my experience, that one has been sent to me by the Holy Spirit, and so therefore is fair game for my beneficent gifts?” No. As I said, there are some strays who come for refurbishment, [small laugh] to gain strength, so that they can go on their way without changing, without ceasing to do the thing that is causing their suffering. Those ones are not sent to you by Him for healing—it’s the ones who are hungry for healing. Remember this, else you will find yourself in a tug-of-war that will be nothing but depleting for you.

If someone is in your experience, you ask, “Holy Spirit, Father, have You sent this one to me, to engage with, to be involved with, from whatever clarity You provide me with?” And don’t assume that the answer will automatically be “yes,” because many times, the answer is “no.” And when the answer is “no,” I will tell you, it is part of the healing of that one, who wants to use you unkindly, use you illegally, use you maliciously, because there is so much fear there and so much commitment to it. To not get from you what they want, which is relief without having to change, is part of their healing. Now, if that sounds hard-nosed, it means that you’re a little bit of a wimpy practitioner of cotton-candy spirituality that has nothing to do with Truth, but has to do with concepts, definitions, made up about what a good person is, and what a spiritual person is, and what one who is on his or her way to awakening is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Children perceive terrifying ghosts and monsters and dragons and they are terrified. Yet if they ask someone they trust...

RAJ: Here’s the key.

RAJ READING: ...if they ask someone they trust for the REAL meaning of what they perceive, and are willing to let their interpretations go in FAVOR of reality, their fear goes with them. When a child is helped to translate his “ghost” into a curtain, his “monster” into a shadow and his “dragon” into a dream he is no longer afraid, and laughs happily at his own fear. You, my children, are afraid of your brothers and of your Father and...

RAJ: Most significantly.

RAJ READING: ...of YOURSELVES. But you are merely DECEIVED in them.

RAJ: That’s all. You are deceived because your definitions are getting in the way of your seeing what’s truly there.

RAJ READING: Ask what they ARE of the...

RAJ: Capital "T".

RAJ READING: ...Teacher of Reality,...

RAJ: Ask what they are. Lean on someone you can trust.

Now, you say, "Maybe. Well, I'm not even really sure of if there are capital 'T' Teachers. I'm not even sure that you are who you say you are, Raj. I'm not sure that you're nothing more than a figment of Paul's imagination. I'm not sure that my guide is anything more than a figment of my imagination. Who should I trust? How can I trust?" Well, that's a good way to keep yourselves in limbo.

You're going to have to invest trust somewhere. And so you might as well dare to invest trust in that which says it is there to restore to you your Right Mind, to restore to you your Sanity. You must dare to invest trust where at the moment you do not have sufficient proof to believe that you're being wise. And so you do it, but you don't do it foolishly. You pay attention as you're doing it. As it's said, "You test the spirits." But you start somewhere investing trust.

"Why, I don't even know if there really is a God." Well, risk the chance that there is a God, and ask God, and dare to listen for an answer. And when you get the answer, dare to trust it. And if the answer isn't totally clear to you so that you are able to trust it implicitly, ask more questions, because that which has the intent of restoring your Sanity to you, will have a way to share with you what convinces you, not coerces you, but convinces you at an experiential level, and thus allows your trust to increase as you cautiously and carefully extend more and more trust. At some point you have to make an investment of yourself in the process of your awakening. And it always feels risky, because it has you operate outside of the definitions and the rules that you have made up, that make you feel secure.

Again.

RAJ READING: Ask what they ARE...

RAJ: Your Brothers and Sisters, or anything.

RAJ READING: Ask what they ARE of the...

RAJ: Capital "T".

RAJ READING: ...Teacher of Reality, and hearing His answer, you too will laugh at your fears and replace them with peace. For fear lies not in reality, but in the minds of children who do not understand reality.

RAJ: You see, this gives you permission to not kick yourself in the seat of the pants because you're afraid. Of course, you're going to feel afraid because you're leaning into the unknown. You're making an investment in that which is beyond your current parameters for being. But without throwing your anchor beyond the parameters you're presently using, you will have no means of enlarging the borders of your tent, enlarging the borders of your consciousness, to have a more whole experience that will encourage you to have enough trust to throw your anchor a really long way.

RAJ READING: It is only their LACK of understanding...

RAJ: Children's.

RAJ READING: ...which frightens them,...

RAJ: It's only your lack of understanding which frightens you.

RAJ READING: ...and when they learn to perceive truly they are not afraid.

RAJ: And neither are you.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the following sentence: And because of this they will ask for truth again when they are frightened.]

RAJ READING: It is not the REALITY of your brothers or your Father or yourself which frightens you. You do not know what they ARE, and so you perceive them as...

RAJ: Whatever you've made them up to be.

RAJ READING: ...ghosts and monsters and dragons. ASK of their reality from the...

RAJ: Capital "O".

RAJ READING: ...One Who knows it, and He will TELL you what they are. For you do not understand them, and because you are deceived by what you see, you NEED reality to dispel your fears.

RAJ: You say, "Oh, I really want to be a healer. I have this vision of having a healing center. And I know I have a God-given purpose." But, you know that, that usually occurs to those who see being a healer as something one, unlike his patient, does for and to the patient.

But healing happens with involvement. Healing is an experience of sharing. And your immediate thought is, "That's going to take effort. And that's going to take time. That's going to take a degree of involvement which isn't really that delectable to me." [small laugh] Ah, but that's what it takes.

The saying is that infinite patience brings immediate results. When you realize that your Brother and you are worth the experience of fulfillment that follows involvement, that follows the allowing of sharing—not sharing mutually-agreed-upon definitions, but sharing the Truth that's revealed—without reservation to be willing to take all the time you think it's going to take if you're looking at it from your best definitions, you will find that the prolonged element of time that you were afraid it would take because of how deep-seated the other one's problems were, that time [finger snap] will be cut short. Why? Because you were being willing, because you were willing to be with that one for as long as it might take. Because your desire to function within the Singularity of Mind, your proper use of your mind, was more important to you than the amount of labor you conceived it would take and the amount of time that you imagined it would take.

As long as you are trying to determine whether it's worth it to you or not, to be involved, you are keeping yourself separate, you are not entering into sharing, and you are using your mind poorly. And you are denying yourself the very thing you want—the joy of sharing healing—the joy of quote “being a healer” unquote. Healing simply cannot occur by remote control, or the exertion of power over something else different and separate.

RAJ READING: Would you not exchange your fears for truth if the exchange is yours for the asking? For if God is not deceived in you, you can be deceived only in YOURSELF. Yet you can learn the truth of yourself of the Holy Spirit, Who will teach you that, as part of God, deceit in YOU is impossible. When you perceive yourself without deceit, you will accept the real world in place of the false one you have made. And then your Father will lean down to you and take the last step for you by raising you unto Himself.

RAJ: If you want to see your world transformed, you've got to back off from your conditioned tendency to manipulate it into better order. You've got to be willing to step back from it, and turn your attention to the source of Truth. You've got to want to know what the Truth is, and reach for it beyond your conditioned thinking. And you've got to abandon your fears about your world or your Brother. And you've got to abandon all the rules of etiquette or proper behavior that everyone must abide by if they're to get your respect.

And you've got to abandon all the little small-minded criteria that you hold your world to and yourself, and inquire of that which knows the larger picture. Why? Because you're tired of suffering, and you're tired of not being able to respond to the calls for Love in the ways that resolve them. And because you finally know that the only way you're going to be able to see these transformations is when you bring your mind into a singular state that's not confused by your fears, that's not confused by your inability to distinguish between Truth and error, that's not terrorized by a lack of a choice for peace.

And then you've got to let in the experience that follows that kind of an inner commitment to that which is beyond your present frame of mind, so that you might be blessed with Sanity again. Sanity that makes you happy all-day-long, and anticipate the next all-day-long that's coming along.

Now I'm telling you that when you do this, you will find that whatever involvement, whatever intimacy you are required to become involved in with your Brother, the motivation for it will be there. And the ability to not be discouraged will be there, once you decide not to judge according to appearances, according to their presentations, or according to your best assessment of their presentations, your best judgments. And you're willing to say, "If there's anything at all right there where my Brother is, it has to be the Christ and nothing less. And that is where I'm going to hold my attention. That is the standard by which I insist upon apprehending, conceiving, of my Brother whether he sees it or not, whether she sees it or not. Because anything less that I engage in will constitute my hell, my ongoing ignorance, my lack of inspiration. And I'm not willing to sacrifice that for anything."

And we're going to go back to where we began.

RAJ READING: You complain that this course is not sufficiently specific for you to understand it and USE it. Yet it has been VERY specific, and you have NOT done what it specifically advocates. This is not a course in the play of ideas, but in their PRACTICAL APPLICATION. Nothing could be more specific than to be told very clearly that if you ask you WILL receive.

RAJ: I promise you something. The practical application of what the Course teaches is a lot less work than what you're currently engaged in.

And with love, I leave you with that. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Well, big subject:

RAJ READING: [Chapter 11] GOD'S PLAN FOR SALVATION

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the chapter heading is: Chapter 12 THE HOLY SPIRIT'S CURRICULUM]

RAJ: Well, first of all, it might be a good idea to consider what the word "salvation" means. You throw it around a lot.

RAJ READING: GOD'S PLAN FOR SALVATION

RAJ: Well, salvation is going to mean something to you, right? It's not salvation hanging out in the ethers. It's something that will be an experience. And at the bottom line, salvation means you never having to strive to become anything anymore. It means you not being behind the eight ball anymore. It means you never having to try to be right. It means you never having to prove anything.

Salvation is the experience of you being in your Right Mind and knowing it. It means you being in your Right Mind, never again subject to doubt or the invitation to discouragement. It means you at peace and being able to be from your peace in all respects.

Salvation is the absence of fear—the total, complete absence of fear. It's you being able to be whole, to be wholly involved in being, where there's no reservation of any part of yourself that you're keeping safe from threat, where the saying is really true, "What you see is what you get," because what everyone will see will be you wholly present, without reservation, without withholding yourself in any way. Salvation is the unobscured experience of safety—which is another way of saying it is the direct experience of omnipotence, not power over anything, but the presence of wholeness that finds no threat, no suggestion of threat, nothing unlike itself. It is the experience of utter peace and utter safety.

So what is God's Plan for this experience for you? Is it a plan He had to come up with? Or is the plan for your salvation simply the Way things are, the Way things unalterably are that you are simply going to let yourselves back into the experience of?

Remember, you're not advancing toward your salvation; you're not advancing toward your perfection; you're not improving yourselves in order to earn salvation. But you have these imaginative ideas that you have come up with and that others have provided to you that you are not already there; you're not already at the Point of Perfection. And so you operate not on the basis of the Way things are, but on the basis of the way you think things are. Period. Your salvation lies in abandoning the way you think things are, so that you might yield into the Way things are—in other words, the Way God has set it up, the Way God is being it/you at every moment—so that you let go of the something extra that you've added to the equation.

Salvation is yours. Salvation is already yours. And what all of this is that we've been talking about amounts to your yielding to It, your yielding into It, your relaxing into It. God's Plan for salvation is utter simplicity.

Let's go into the book.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: The Judgment of the Holy Spirit]

RAJ READING: You have been told not to make error real, and the way to do this is very simple. If you WANT to believe in error, you would HAVE to make it real, because it is not true.

RAJ: In other words, because it is not real.

So:

RAJ READING: If you WANT to believe in error, you would HAVE to make it real, because it is not true. But truth is real in its own right, and to believe in truth, YOU DO NOT HAVE TO DO ANYTHING.

RAJ: If you want to believe in error, you would have to do something. You would have to engage in acts that attempt to make it real so that you would have something to believe in. And the reason is that it doesn't exist in its own right.

Now:

RAJ READING: Understand that you do not respond to stimuli, but to stimuli AS YOU INTERPRET THEM. Your interpretation thus becomes the justification for the response.

RAJ: Whatever that response might be.

RAJ READING: ...you do not respond to stimuli, but to stimuli AS YOU INTERPRET THEM.

RAJ: Well, that's what all of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions are—the interpretations of Reality that you've come up with. And the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you operate according to, become the justifications for your responses. And so as a result, you are very seldom original with a Brother or a Sister, with each other. You're always doing this two-step, bouncing off of each other so as to be able to do things but not violate the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, the interpretations that have been placed between you and Reality itself.

RAJ READING: That is why analyzing the motives of others is hazardous to YOU.

RAJ: Naturally, [laughing] it's not the most comfortable thing for the ones you're analyzing.

But:

RAJ READING: ...analyzing the motives of others is hazardous to YOU. If you decide that someone is really trying to attack you or desert you or enslave you, you will respond AS IF he had actually done so, because you have made his error REAL to you. To interpret error is to give it power, and having done this, you WILL overlook truth.

RAJ: This is really quite obvious, and really quite simple. However you perceive your Brother, however you interpret his actions and him, will govern how you're going to behave toward him. And if your interpretation of your Brother, or of his actions, takes precedence over an actual connection with him, then you are operating in a fantasy. You are in imagination land, and you're out of touch. You're not connected. You're unable to be real, appropriate, pertinent. And you're going to trip and fall flat on your face, and you're going to wonder why.

You don't usually run into problems until you have to relate to your Brothers and Sisters, right? If you're on a mountaintop all by yourself, or on a deserted beach all by yourself, you can be there without any problems. But let there be one other person who comes along, and there is the potential for them to behave in a way that is offensive to you, or distracting to you, or bothersome to you, and the problem begins. Why? Because you must be involved, and you don't know how to be involved with your Brothers and Sisters.

Now, you may argue with me and say, "I sure do. And I get along with them well and I have good working relationships. I am, along with others, able to be quite productive and am able to help others be productive." But what you don't understand is that if you are not gathering your perception of your Brother from a prior connectedness with Truth, you are operating in the realm of imagination land. And so although all of you are being able to function together with very little friction, you are not in touch with the Truth, and you haven't learned how to be with your Brother rightly. You haven't learned how to be with your Brother from your Right Mind—a real connection with what is really there where your Brother is.

RAJ READING: The analysis of ego-motivation...

RAJ: Which is what all of you do when you look at your Brothers and Sisters. You evaluate where they're coming [from]. "I wonder where she's coming from? Mm. She's behaving in such-and-such a way. She must have blah, blah, blah, blah, blah." And you come up with an imaginary assessment. And then you approach her on the basis of that assessment.

RAJ READING: The analysis of ego-motivation is very complicated, very obscuring,...

RAJ: Obscuring of what? Of the Truth. Your imagination obscures the Truth when you give preference to what you have imagined.

RAJ READING: The analysis of ego-motivation is very complicated, very obscuring, and NEVER without the risk of your own ego-involvement. The whole process represents a clear-cut attempt to demonstrate your OWN ability to understand what you perceive.

RAJ: You see? Instead of a joint understanding of what you perceive, which you have when you abandon your independence, your autonomy, and you say, "Father, or Holy Spirit, what's really going on here? What do I need to know here? What is really going on?" so that you might respond on the basis of a joined clarity.

RAJ READING: The whole process represents a clear-cut attempt to demonstrate your OWN...

RAJ: And I'm going to say, independent.

RAJ READING: ...ability to understand what you perceive. This is shown by the fact that you react to your interpretations AS IF they were correct, and control your reactions behaviorally, but not emotionally.

RAJ: What does that mean? [small laugh] It means that even though you come up with your own conclusions and they're false and they are disturbing to you, you, for the most part, control your behavior and you don't behave consistent with the perception you have. But when it comes to your emotions, oh boy! Do they go wild! And in your head, you concoct stories, you concoct scenarios about your Brother's behavior and what you can expect and what they're likely to do. And the longer you do this, the angrier you get. And you know what? You haven't even had your first word with this person for the day.

So you...

RAJ READING: ...control your reactions behaviorally, but not emotionally. This is quite evidently a mental split, in which you have attacked the integrity of your mind, and pitted one level within it against another.

RAJ: You see? You're going to control yourself properly here, but you're not going to control yourself at all here, and so you're attempting to be inconsistent within yourself. And that's called the human condition.

You also do this with the world. You do this with spiders and snakes and centipedes, and butterflies and hummingbirds. A hummingbird comes along and there's no fear in you. And you stand very still in hopes that it will stay in your vicinity and maybe get really close so you can get a good look at it. But you see a spider or a wasp or a snake, and whether it's going to do anything to you or not, whether it even cares whether you're there or not, you go through great fear, and a sweat will break out. Fear will reign. Why? Because of the interpretation you have about the spider, or the snake, or the wasp. So you're reacting to your own interpretation. You're off in la-la-land again—imagination land.

But you know what? You're putting your body through all of the responses that would be called for, we'll say, if indeed there was a threat. And you know what? When you live your life this way, you wear yourself out unconsciously, simply because you're constantly on guard, one way or another, all day long.

Now the next section is called:

RAJ READING: The Judgment of the Holy Spirit

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, this heading is earlier (see above).]

RAJ READING: There is but one interpretation of all motivation that makes any sense.

RAJ: See, we're talking about simplicity.

RAJ READING: And because it is the Holy Spirit's judgment, it requires no effort at all on your part.

RAJ: Here it is. Here's the Holy Spirit's judgment.

RAJ READING: Every loving thought is true. Everything else is an appeal for healing and help. That is what it is, regardless of the form it takes.

RAJ: There are only two things going on in your behavior or in your Brother's behavior.

RAJ READING: Every loving thought is true.

RAJ: Every loving thought you have is Real and eternal.

RAJ READING: Everything else...

RAJ: You or your Brother engages in is an appeal for help.

RAJ READING: ...is an appeal for healing and help.

RAJ: That's why it's said that everything is either Love or a call for Love.

RAJ READING: Can anyone be justified in responding with anger to a plea for help? No response can be appropriate except the willingness to give it to him, for this and ONLY this is what he is asking for.

RAJ: So if your Brother is behaving, or Sister, in a way that isn't obviously love, then they're engaging in what you can imaginatively call bad behavior—a call for correction. And you, at that point, are faced with a choice. Are you going to react to your perception of them and of their behavior? "Oh, they're in a shitty mood. I had better steer clear of them if I don't want to get caught up in a big mess." Or are you going to see it for what it truly is—a call for Love, a call for help—and not react angrily?

It makes all the difference in the world how you interpret everything you see. And you're going to interpret it in one of those two ways. You're going to recognize it to be the Presence of Love, something to be grateful for, or a call for Love, which is something to be grateful for.

RAJ READING: Offer him anything else, and you are assuming the right to attack his reality by interpreting it as YOU see fit.

RAJ: You see? You make your own definition up, and then you behave according to that definition as you see fit. And there's been no connection with that Brother. You've inserted between your Brother and yourself a picture of him, and then you're reacting to that picture of him. And then you're coming to conclusions as to what is required in order for your picture of him to be pacified, settled down, dealt with. You see? And the problem is that you carry out this response to your very own picture, not where something can be done about it which is in your own mind, but you attempt to deal with the Brother who has made a call for Love, as though he hasn't made a call for Love. And your behavior is recognized to be attack, an absence of communication, an absence of connection, and yet a coercive response from you that doesn't make sense to the one calling for help.

RAJ READING: Perhaps the danger of this to your own mind is not yet fully apparent to you,...

RAJ: What does that mean, "the danger of this to your own mind"? The danger of it is that your mind is itself in a conflicted state. And you don't even know it because it's second nature to you to deal with your interpretations of things, instead of with the things themselves. And that's a form of insanity. It's certainly a concrete evidence of ignorance.

RAJ READING: Perhaps the danger of this to your own mind is not yet fully apparent to you, but this by no means signifies that it is not perfectly clear.

RAJ: The danger.

RAJ READING: If you maintain that an appeal for help is something else...

RAJ: Meaning an expression of hate. If you determine that the call for help is aggressive lack of respect directed toward you.

RAJ READING: ...you will REACT to something else,...

RAJ: And I'm going to put it this way.

RAJ READING: If you maintain that an appeal for help is something else you will REACT to...

RAJ: ...the...

RAJ READING: ...something else, and your response will be inappropriate to reality as IT is, but NOT to your perception of it.

RAJ: [small laugh] Your response will be perfectly appropriate in your mind when it's a response to your perception of what's going on.

RAJ READING: This is poor reality testing by definition. There is nothing to prevent you from recognizing ALL calls for help as exactly what they are except your own perceived NEED to attack.

RAJ: [small laugh] You hear that?

RAJ READING: ...except your own perceived NEED to attack.

RAJ: "What are you talking about? I'm not going around feeling a need to attack. I never think about attacking. I never engage in anything that comes anywhere near attack unless I'm really, really, really upset. What are you talking about?"

RAJ READING: There is nothing to prevent you from recognizing ALL calls for help as exactly what they are except your own perceived NEED to attack.

RAJ: Well, you can understand it a little bit better if we change the words to, "your own perceived need to defend yourselves."

And every day, in one way or another, you get up ready to defend yourself. Ready to defend yourself against traffic jams—inconsiderate drivers that are behaving poorly and causing slow-ups that will make you be late to work, and perhaps threaten your job security because you've been late three times already. You get up careful to see that you run into the least obstacles to having a successful day, which means that you expect obstacles, that you believe that you live in a hostile world—one that you have to be on guard for so that it won't trip you up and leave you at a loss at the end of the day.

This attitude of being ready to defend yourself by all the means you use—having a good plan, thinking things through ahead of time so that you're prepared, and so on—these defenses, even though you describe them in glowing terms of respect, constitute an approach to your day and your world as though it is against you, and you are prepared for it not to take you down. And so, that is an attitude of attack. It is not a state of mind that can be described as Love. Your very approach to your days is a call for Love. Your very own approaches are calls for Love.

Again, because it's important.

RAJ READING: There is nothing to prevent you from recognizing ALL calls for help as exactly what they are...

RAJ: Calls for help.

RAJ READING: ...except your own perceived NEED to attack. It is only THIS that makes you willing to engage in endless "battles" with reality, in which you DENY the reality of the need for healing by making IT unreal.

RAJ: How do you make it unreal? You make the need for healing and you make the call for help unreal by naming it something else.

"What can you expect? She's a bitch."

"What else can you expect? He's a chronically dishonest person."

You've made their behavior, which is a call for help, unreal/invalid by naming it something else, and then acting on the basis of what you have named it.

And do you see that every time you do this, you miss connection, even though on a camera it might appear that there's involvement? And if you are missing the connection with your Brother, but are still having a mutual activity with him, what is going on? How would you describe what's happening? Nonsense. Meaninglessness. And you know what? That's what most of you see on the evening news.

RAJ READING: You would not do this...

RAJ: In other words, change the need for healing into something unreal.

RAJ READING: You would not do this except for your UNWILLINGNESS to perceive reality,...

RAJ: Your unwillingness to perceive Reality.

RAJ READING: ...which you withhold from YOURSELF.

RAJ: [small laugh] You see? The truth sort of hits under the belt. It uncovers things that you're doing that you didn't know you were doing and that you would say you weren't doing. "What do you mean, I have an unwillingness to perceive Reality?" Well, if you give preference to your definitions of everything in place of Reality—the thing you're giving definitions to—you're withholding the experience of Reality from yourself.

And of course, there's a reason you're doing it. And the reason is—which goes back to our initial problem—the reason is that it's your task to practice the skill, which you believe your Father gave you, to be like your Father alongside Him. And so you engage in making up these definitions, and then behaving toward everything on the basis of these definitions because that is the way you are going to ultimately—you think—prove that you're just like God, prove that you are an authority, and prove that you're right, not wrong. And so it's an emotionally-charged situation.

You all withhold Reality from yourself by trying to create an alternate reality right where Reality is and right with the stuff of Reality. And that's why I keep talking about the need to look at everything with innocent eyes. You haven't realized you've been doing this, but you have been doing it and you must break the cycle. And you break the cycle by being willing to assume that maybe you're not seeing everything as it is, and that maybe you're not seeing everything as it is, is what is causing discomfort, distress, suffering, and all the negatives that seem to be part of life.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is surely good advice to tell you not to judge what you do not understand.

RAJ: "Oh, but I do understand. I know Joe so well. I grew up with him. I know all his idiosyncrasies. I understand him perfectly. You know, he came from a deprived home life, and he's done really well in the face of it. Lifted himself up by his own bootstraps." And blah, blah, blah. Got the whole picture down.

But wait a minute. Is he a product of his environment? Is his behavior predictable and understandable because of everything you know about all the physical aspects of his growing up? Or might there be more to him that he's not aware of? Might there not be something divine about him? Might there not be another way to look at him besides through your perception, your definitions? Yes. You've got to dare to break the habit of perception. Or put another way, you've got to do whatever it takes to break your habits of misperception by being willing to look with new eyes, look with a willingness to see what is there that you have been overlooking.

You must be willing to risk the chance that there might be some benefit in looking at things that you're sure of and saying to yourself, "I may not understand all there is to understand about this. There may be a lot more for me to understand." Your scientists are doing that in spite of the power with which they declare what they already know. They are still digging or reaching beyond what they acknowledge is their present limited perception.

RAJ READING: It is surely good advice to tell you not to judge what you do not understand. No-one with a personal investment is a reliable witness, for truth to him has become what he WANTS it to be.

RAJ: "Well, you know, I don't want Joe to be in the situation he's in. I don't want to be unhappy because of what I see is going on with Joe." But the question is, "Do you want to let go of the perceptions you have developed, the concepts, the definitions you have developed?" Are you willing to let your mind be changed—that's the real question—so that Truth can be more than you want it to be from whatever your limited level of perception is?

RAJ READING: If you are unwilling to perceive an appeal for help as what it IS, it is because you are unwilling to GIVE help AND TO RECEIVE IT.

RAJ: Because the two are one and the same thing.

RAJ READING: The analysis of the ego's "real" motivation is the modern equivalent of the inquisition, for in both a brother's errors are "uncovered" and he is then attacked FOR HIS OWN GOOD. What can this be BUT projection?

For HIS errors lay in the minds of his interpreters, for which they punished HIM.

RAJ: You see? They didn't handle the problem where it lay, which was in their own mind in the criteria they were using to define the one they determined to be at fault—the one making a call for help who is being interpreted to be a malicious, law-breaking citizen calling for justice—punishment, in other words—instead of healing. And in this procedure, those analyzing him and then judging him according to their analysis and punishing him for what they analyzed him to be, saved themselves from having to become involved, I'm going to say, involved at a heart level, involved at a level where real connection occurred. It saved them the effort and the trouble. And so they could stand and look down on the poor soul, and come to their judgment, and send them on their way for their punishment, and not be disturbed.

RAJ READING: Whenever you fail to recognize a call for help...

RAJ: As a call for help.

RAJ READING: ...you are REFUSING help. Would you maintain that you do not NEED it? Yet this IS what you are maintaining when you refuse to recognize a brother's appeal, for only by ANSWERING his appeal can YOU be helped. Deny him your help and you will not perceive God's answer to YOU.

RAJ: Healing is a together thing. Healing is not something one does to another.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit does not need your help in interpreting motivation, but you DO need HIS. Only APPRECIATION is an appropriate response to your brother. Gratitude is due him for both his loving thoughts...

RAJ: Which are real.

RAJ READING: ...and his appeals for help, for both are capable of bringing love into YOUR awareness if you perceive them truly. And ALL your sense of strain comes from your attempts NOT to do just this.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "to do this" instead of "to do just this."]

PAUL: [pause] Just a moment. [pause]

RAJ: Paul is getting hung up because what's being said and what I'm sharing creates a dilemma when someone who is expressing a call for help does not want to receive the help. When this happens and a response of love is not received, what happens? The temptation is provided by the ignorant behavior of the Brother not wanting to receive the love offered, the healing or the help offered, to... it provides the opportunity for the one offering the help to come to a judgment. "Wow, he (or she) really is a difficult person." You see? The temptation is to succumb to creating a definition, even though originally a refusal to make a definition and operate according to it had been successfully accomplished. The refusal to accept the love provides the opportunity and truly the demand not to abandon staying with innocent Vision—not to formulate a definition and then make commitment to it and then behave toward that person as though the definition you've made up is true.

This is part of the involvement. This is part of giving the answer of Love. It is, you might say, part of what you would call the stickiness of involvement. Why? Because it appears then that a war is going on, a tug-of-war where you are being invited to abandon your innocent Vision in favor of making up a definition and behaving according to it, and thus moving into la-la-land, imagination land, where you're lost. What it does is, this invitation to a tug-of-war, what it does is it gives you the opportunity to make commitment to seeing with innocence just because. In other words, not because there's a payoff for you, not because there's a quick payoff, but because it is what represents your Sane Mind. You see?

Making commitment to being Sane seems like hard work because you've been so used to doing something else. [laughing] And so you look for alternatives to the hard work, not realizing that to see with innocence is natural to you and is not the hard work it appears to be. There is a point at which you have to stand behind a commitment to see what's Real, and not be distracted from it by another's behavior or your very own inclination to move into the realm of imagination and live there where you cannot be conscious of Reality.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: How simple, then, is God's plan for salvation. There is but ONE response to reality, for reality evokes no conflict at all. There is but ONE Teacher of reality, Who understands what it IS.

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: He does not change His Mind about reality because REALITY does not change. Although YOUR interpretations of reality are meaningless in your divided state, His remain consistently true. He GIVES them to you because they are FOR you. Do not attempt to "help" a brother in YOUR way, for you cannot help yourselves. But hear his call for the help of God...

RAJ: Your Brother's. But hear your Brother's call for the Help of God...

RAJ READING: ...and you will recognize your OWN need for the Father.

RAJ: Unless, of course, you decide you are going to get back into your old habit of making definitions and behaving on the basis of them. But if you're not going to make up a new definition that justifies your uninvolvedness and makes you better than him, then you're going to find yourself feeling at a loss because you don't know what the answer is. And so you're going to recognize you need God as much as the one calling for help recognizes that he or she needs something, even though it's probably not God as far as they're concerned, but just something that will reconfirm for them the rightness of what they're doing, and that they shouldn't be suffering for doing it the way they're doing it. So this is very important.

RAJ READING: Your interpretations of your brother's need is your interpretation of YOURS. By GIVING help you are ASKING for it,...

RAJ: And I would say if you haven't asked for it, you won't have anything to give. So the two are inseparable.

RAJ READING: By GIVING help you are ASKING for it, and if you perceive but one need in yourself you WILL be healed. For you will recognize God's answer as you want it to be,...

RAJ: Meaning truly want it to be as God's Answer.

RAJ READING: ...and if you want it in truth it will be truly yours.

RAJ: You see? So the question is, "Do you want to be able to make up a definition of a Brother who is calling for help by behaving badly, do you want to be able to make up a definition about it that provides you with a handy way to resolve it through judgment and no involvement, and continue to be ignorant of your own Place of Excellence—the Place of Excellence in you—and remain unconscious of your access to it, and continue on with your Brother where both of you are missing each other, where both of you are not connecting with each other, even though it appears that there is involvement? Do you want that? Or do you want what really heals?"

RAJ READING: Every appeal you answer in the Name of Christ brings the remembrance of your Father closer to YOUR awareness.

RAJ READING: Every appeal you answer in the Name of Christ...

RAJ: In the Name of your True Nature. In the Name of the Place of Excellence in you.

RAJ READING: ...brings the remembrance of your Father closer to YOUR awareness.

RAJ: Why? Because you're breaking the isolation, the bill of divorcement. And when you break it, the experience of family connection with your Father, your Source, immediately, it would seem, resurges in you and fills you up because you're no longer blocking it.

RAJ READING: For the sake of YOUR need, then, hear every call for help as what it is,...

RAJ: Why?

RAJ READING: ...so God can answer YOU.

RAJ: Complicated? No. Simple to understand? Yes. Happifying? No. Relieving? No. Why? It's a question you all need to ask yourselves. [pause]

Well, I'm going to tell you, it's because you don't think you can rise to the occasion. You don't think you can really be this way. You don't think you have what it takes. It will be too much work. Why? Because it's not natural to you, you don't think. And so, someone else's definition of you has settled in you, and you've taken it to heart and you believe it. And so you never even begin to wriggle inside of the chrysalis you're in, or stretch inside of the egg and peck away at it, when that's what's absolutely essential. Why? Because although you can manage to put up with the distresses of your daily life, the human condition, they're not bad enough to motivate you to peck at the shell or strain at the confinement of the chrysalis so that the chrysalis might snap, so that your definitions might break and you can see that they had not the strength to confine the Christ that you are, the divine one that you are.

RAJ READING: By applying the Holy Spirit's interpretation of the reactions of others more and more consistently, you will gain an increasing awareness that HIS criteria are equally applicable to YOU. For to RECOGNIZE fear is not enough to escape from it, although the recognition is necessary to demonstrate the need for escape. The Holy Spirit must still TRANSLATE it into truth. If you were LEFT with the fear, having recognized it, you would have taken a step AWAY from reality,...

RAJ: Away from Reality.

RAJ READING: ...not TOWARDS it. Yet we have repeatedly emphasized the need to recognize fear and face it WITHOUT disguise as a crucial step in the undoing of the ego.

RAJ READING: ...in the undoing of the ego.

RAJ: In the undoing of the habit pattern that you have adopted as your identity and the reason for your behavior and the justifications for your behavior, including your habit of giving definitions and evaluations to everyone else about them and using them as your criteria for behaving the way you do toward them.

RAJ READING: Consider how well the Holy Spirit's interpretation of the motives of others will serve you then.

RAJ: Well, they will serve you very well.

This is not a spot, in terms of the unfoldment of the things needing to be understood, for me to tell you sweet things and to give you words of encouragement that would allow you to relax. Because the moment you feel relaxed, you'll stop paying attention with earnestness at what you need to pay attention to. Which is, first of all, your inclination to approach your day as though it's a hostile world with things you need to be guarded against so that you are in a dull mode of self-defense, which is really attack. And second, where you don't just give preference to, but you make commitment to your defining everything without ever connecting with what it really is. And thirdly, and perhaps most importantly, your habit of defining your Brother's, I'm just going to say, behavior, because none of you consistently express love so that it's the predominant thing that everyone recognizes about you as they observe you as you go through your day.

Your behavior is a call for Love. That means anyone you look at, their behavior, for the most part, is a call for Love, a request for help, because so much of their day is approached from a feeling of ignorance that must somehow become equal to the demands of the day so as not to cause that one to feel depressed at the end of the day because everything went so badly. And so their behavior is not inspired with Love. Your behavior, for the most part, isn't inspired with Love. But that's your Birthright, for it to be inspired with Love.

So, you've got to be alert to your very definite inclination to interpret what a Brother is and what he is being as you are in relation to him, and your reluctance to step past the definition you create so as to perhaps really connect with that one and have the opportunity to find out whether their behavior truly is a call for Love, a call for help; or whether it was an expression of Love perhaps that pushed you beyond the limits you wanted to be pushed, and therefore you said, "That one is behaving badly," and then you proceeded to treat that individual on the basis of the definition you gave.

We're talking about being more conscious. You could say we're talking about using a little more discipline of your mind. Oh, oh. Work, work, work, work. Discipline, discipline. You know what? [small laugh] What would you call it if you sat down one day and you neglected to worry? You just neglected to worry? Well, you would find you were in your peace the whole day. Were you in your peace because you used self-discipline? Yes, but not in terms of work. You expressed discipline by consistently neglecting to do what doesn't work.

It's simple. You aren't going to abandon what doesn't work without a conscious choice to do it. There's going to have to be focus. The rewards are great. The rewards are your unchangeable Birthright, divine Birthright, beginning to register with you, because you're neglecting to obscure it with your personal effort to be something on your own.

So, this week I invite you to conscientiously—which means consistently and persistently—observe how quickly, how spontaneously you bring definitions into play about your fellowman. And then watch how long it takes you to abandon them. Notice whether or not you spend an hour building on that definition, as I said, fabricating a scenario of events in your mind. Notice how much valuable conscious experience—I'm not going to say how much time—how much valuable conscious experience you've wasted in imagination land, so that you might see just how effectively you're keeping yourself unconscious of Reality. Because once you see that, it will be much easier for you to make a choice for using your mind well.

And it will be that much easier to recognize that you don't want to choose for what doesn't work, so that you might more easily choose for God's Plan for salvation, which is choosing for [small laugh] what works. Choosing for what works because that's the way it's been set up; it's the setup that's already in place unchangeably.

So, I love you. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Before we move on, it’s important and necessary to pause and get some things clear. For the last couple of weeks, we’ve been talking about God’s Plan, we’ve been talking about answering the call for help, answering the call for love. And in order not to be confused, I want it to be clearly understood that what we’ve been discussing, especially in the current chapter, is—whether you’ve thought about it or not—the question of whether you’re going to be honest. Whether you’re going to be honest. In other words, the subject has been each of you, not the one you would help.

Now, all of you in one way or another as you go through your day are trying to fulfill a concept you have of yourself. You have a goal for yourself. You have a certain thing you want to be in the world. And for the most part, you do everything you can to be consistent with the manifestation of that picture or concept you have of yourselves. And to be very blunt with you, when you’re doing that you’re not being honest, because a picture of who you are, a concept of who you are, what you want everyone else to see you as, isn’t you. You know, we can get all caught up in flowery, wonderful spiritual words, but if they’re going to mean anything, they’ve got to relate to you and to where you are, and to what is really true about you, so that you are able to abandon the pictures of yourselves that you’re trying to present, and can be yourself honestly.

And so what we’ve been reading about, although it relates to your Brother and your capacity to be an agent for change and to respond to a call for help, the focus has been on whether before you respond you’ve moved into a place of honesty within yourselves where you have abandoned concepts you have built up about the one who is calling for help. Are you coming from a place of innocence within you?—which is another way of saying a place of genuineness in you where you are not violating your own Integrity, your own already-existing absolute divine Integrity by inserting a picture of yourself between that and your Brothers and Sisters, that you emphasize and thereby cover up who you genuinely are.

Now the ego will use everything that the Course says for its own purposes, and will use everything I say for its own purposes, if you're not alert, if you're not honest, if you're not more interested in the Truth than in anything else. And so when I say that you want to be able to come from a place of genuineness and honesty, I'm not talking about honestly expressing exactly what you feel. I'm not talking about how you as an ego, as a concept, as a product of your family's and your society's upbringing; I'm talking about something prior to that. I'm talking about something more fundamental than that. I'm talking about the Integrity you have that is inseparable from you, that is, I'm going to say, at the root of the Act of God that appears as you, as your experience of being conscious.

You all know the Truth. You all know the Ultimate. But you think that you have to cooperate with everyone, and that everyone has to cooperate with you according to interpretations and definitions that all of you have made up together; interpretations and definitions that allow you to create an image of yourself. But you know what? The image isn't what has created the image; you are what has created the image. But once having created the image and giving preference to it, that which made up the image fades into the background. And the image cooperates with all of the other images, and abides by all of the structures and rules that all of these images have created together so that they can seem to exist in relative harmony.

The honesty that is being called for here in the Course, has to do with your being willing to abandon the image and the goals you have for that image, so that you might get to the bottom-line of you, where it's ultimately easy for you to express yourself without violating yourself, without abandoning your Integrity. From that place, everything you say and everything you do will be constructive and will be healing.

What you need to be clear on so that you don't become confused, is that what we have been discussing so far in this chapter, has nothing to do with anyone else. It has to do with the necessity of your doing something before you get involved in a healing fashion with someone else, and that is get behind and underneath the images you're trying to portray. It also means abandoning concepts other people have of you; abandoning an intent you have to live up to another's expectations that fulfill their concept of you. Because as long as you're doing that, you are ingenuine, deceitful, dishonest because it's all a manipulative game, and nothing more. And healing cannot be the result, and your awakening can't be the result, and your peace cannot be the result of that.

And an even more remote form of this is where you are not trying to live up to a concept someone else has of you, where you're not trying to fulfill a concept someone else has of you, but where you're not trying to fulfill a concept someone else has of themselves. Now what do I mean? I mean, for example, as a parent or a teacher that you might have expectations of a child or a pupil. And that expectation of them is to fulfill your concept of yourself as a teacher, as a parent. You are relying upon your child or your pupil to provide proof of your value as a parent or a teacher. And if you're the child or if you're the student who is trying to fulfill your parent's or your teacher's concept of themselves, you're even less honest, and you're even more confused, and you're even more buried in illusion. And what we've been talking about for the last two weeks has to do with stepping back, getting behind, getting underneath all of that, so that you're coming from that place in you which puts up with no bullshit, because it itself isn't interested in bullshitting with everyone else, even though all of you know how to do this real well and do it every day.

So, when it says (the Course) that it's essential for you to see a call for help or a call for love as a call for love, even though the call for love comes forth as negative or abusive or unkind behavior, even though it apparently comes forth as attack, or comes forth as an invitation for you to become frightened on behalf of the one with the problem, when it says that you are to see it as a call for love instead of what it appears to be, instead of what the one calling for love hopes you will see it as, it means that it is essential for you, before you respond, to be unwilling to abandon your commitment to seeing them from where? From the bottom-line genuine honesty of your Being, with a capital "B". And I say that so that you might understand clearly that I'm talking about your coming from that place of divine excellence in you that is not confused, because it insists upon seeing nothing but the Truth—God's Truth, if you will—the Real Truth, and not be sucked into a judgment about that person, that would interpret the call for help as something else, such as an act of aggression by an ungodly presence that doesn't deserve your respect.

You see, we have been talking about the use you, as the one hearing the call for love, are putting your mind to, so that you might remain steadfastly anchored in your unwillingness to see anything other than the Truth, even though you've been invited to see something else there and react to it. We have not, as yet, been talking about what happens after that. We have not yet been talking about how to be an agent for change, but how to use your mind so that what follows the right use of your mind, can be that which heals, that which helps. So again, we have been emphasizing the necessity of honesty on your part.

with love, and because it is so easy for the ego to twist the meaning of what is being said, we need to become clear on some other points. The first thing is you must be willing to wonder what the words mean that we're using, "a call for love." What does that mean? In practical terms, what is love?

There's a call for love—in other words, unlovely behavior occurring, ignorant behavior occurring—and you say, "Oh, I can see she needs love. Oh, love is what's needed here with him." And then perhaps you sort of conjure up rosy, soft, pinkish feelings of softness and affection, and you sort of whirl it out around them and let it embrace them, and you consider them in this sweet fog of love. You know what? It's time for everybody to grow up spiritually or metaphysically.

There was a day when everybody was thoroughly enjoying the statement, "Every day in every way I am getting better and better," and people walked around saying this like a mantra and allowing themselves to embrace the feeling of that. But you know what? If you're not breaking the habits of bad behavior and you're not changing, you can't get better and better just because you're saying, "Every day in every way I am getting better and better." You can't get better if ignorance hasn't been replaced with understanding. You can't be getting better if you're still having the same old problems, but they're not bothering you like they used to. Let's not be caught up in spiritual vagueness. It's all relevant and it's all practical.

Somebody says, "Well, you know, if so-and-so is behaving in this bad way and they don't want to accept the help that's being offered, they just need more love." Well, what in the hell does that mean? If you ask that person what that means, you're either going to get an honest answer that says, "You know, I really don't know what that means," or they're going to give you some of this soft, pink, foggy, vague nonsense.

If you want to know what "a call for love" means, change the word "love" to "intelligence"—it's a call for intelligence. Change the word to "understanding"—it's a call for understanding. It's a call for the one receiving the call, to express intelligence where there has been confusion, an apparent lack of intelligence operating, so that the intelligence replaces the ignorance with that which is meaningful—with directions that are practical, that solve the problem, that bring about the necessary change from the behavior that was creating a bad experience into intelligent behavior that manifests as healing, as miracles, as problems disappearing.

But oh, the word "love" is such a catchword for nebulous nonsense. "Just wrap them up in love and hold them there in your mind. See their perfection." Bullshit! If you want to see their perfection, see it and then express it and make a demand for it to be expressed by them. Be the push, as it were, that motivates them to behave according to the perfection of themselves that hasn't gone anywhere, but which they've abandoned for whatever reason.

And if you express intelligence in response to the call for intelligence/love and they say, "I won't have anything to do with it," then you express a little bit more intelligence/love, even though it's not sweet nebulous pink fluff, and you say, "You know, if you're not willing to change the way you're thinking, if you're not willing to change your behavior, you are going to have exactly the experience you're having now that you're complaining about. I can't make that change in behavior for you. I cannot decide to abandon the uses you've put your mind to for you. But I can tell you that nothing is going to change until you do that." That's love because that's intelligence. And that doesn't take the power away from them, and it doesn't allow them to continue to think that something outside of their own decision to behave differently will solve their problem. And so you have been the presence of clarifying Truth—clarifying Truth that doesn't mislead them in any way away from where the solution lies and what the solution is.

"Know the Truth about them. Know the Truth about them. Remember God's Truth about them, and project it toward them and embrace them in it because minds are joined." Well, what kind of truth are you talking about projecting toward them? What kind of truth are you talking about embracing them in, if it isn't the truth that clearly points them to where the problem lies, and how it can be corrected there, and that you can't do it for them, and therefore they must stop looking to you to do it for them, and they must stop blaming you for not doing it for them, and they must know that you're not fooled in any way into believing that you must somehow be able to do it?

We just read last week that whether a Brother is expressing love, which is real, or a call for love, your only correct response can be appreciation. Oh boy, can the ego have fun with that, because the one who is behaving badly and suffering from their bad behavior, that's their favorite song, that's their favorite mantra—"If you would just accept me for who I am. If you would just appreciate me as I am."—and so they glom on to that.

The only appropriate response to them, whether they're making a call for love or an expression of love, is appreciation. But you see, this is where it can be confusing if you don't understand that what we've been reading has to do only with you—the one standing in receipt of the call for love—and the necessity for you to be clear in your own mind, absent your own agendas for that person, or that kind of person. Yes. Appreciate your Brother, whether they're expressing love or extending a call for love. Why? Because it provides you with the opportunity to reaffirm or confirm your willingness to only come from the bottom-line honesty of your Being. You appreciate them for the opportunity it provides you not to join them in their point of view, through reaction or empathy, and to stay with the Truth because, as I said last week, that is what constitutes your Sanity—not because that’s what will heal them, but because that’s what constitutes your Sanity.

And so, one appropriate response might be, “You know what? I really appreciate the opportunity you’re providing me by means of your bad behavior, your obtuse behavior, your attacking behavior, to be able to clearly say to you your suffering is not because I’m not appreciating you as you are. Your suffering is not because you’re not loved by me.”—which is a favorite refrain also—“I appreciate you because you’re giving me the opportunity to point out to you that you, and you alone, are responsible for the experience you’re having by virtue of the choices you are making. And I can tell you that if you will make different choices, you will have a different experience.”

“Oh, but I’m not doing anything wrong. I’m not out of line. I’m not... You just have this poor concept of me.”

“No. You are unemployed, aren’t you? You seem, at the present time, to be unable to secure and keep unemployment [employment] because of habits and behaviors that you’re choosing to practice and indulge in that make you unable to work together with others. You are not being able to support yourself. You are not being able to function constructively in your own life or with others. There is a reason for this. And I will tell you, because I know the Truth about you, I will tell you that not to have these things is not your Birthright. But you’re going to have to be willing to look at the fact that what you’re doing doesn’t work, isn’t constructive, and is increasing your despair. But, this is work you have to do.”

That’s the way you appreciate, in action, the opportunity provided to you by the one calling for help. It doesn’t sound like nearly as much fun or joy as the soft, cotton-candy, vague atmosphere of loving thoughts and kindness and affection that you would rather embrace them with. But you know what? At the bottom line, because you each have Integrity, bottom-line actual capital “I” Integrity, all the time you’re into this cotton-candy, nebulous, formless, embrace of loving thoughts is insincere, because you have feelings that you can’t get rid of entirely. And there is an indignance in you when you see a Brother suffering. There is a knowing that it is not right, it is not Truth. And you’re overriding it in favor of some spiritual practice of nebulousness, loving nebulousness. You are being deceitful. You are moving into la-la-land. You are not being grounded.

Now you know what? Truth is not licentious. Truth is Truth. Truth, for lack of better words, is white in the sense that with Truth everything is black or white, except that being Truth, it's all white and there is no black. Truth does not allow for untruth. There is that which works and there is that which doesn't work. And which one works and which one doesn't work is not a matter of opinion. That which doesn't work never works, never will work. And as long as someone engages in what doesn't work, their life is going to be a void, and it is going to be an experience of stress and misery, because they are attempting to do the impossible. When you are being honest, you know this and you experience the freedom of being free of the susceptibility to the idea that what can't work, might work. And in the absence of that susceptibility, you feel your strength, which simply means you feel integrated, cohesive, solid, immovable.

"Well, why don't you just appreciate me? I'm on my way home just like you are. And how dare you tell me that where I am on my path home is wrong?" Truth is not licentious. Black is black, and white is white.

Do you realize that "being on your way home" can be a lifetime's career, like being a professional college student who just never finishes the learning process and thereby just never gets out into the living of life and the practicing of what's been learned? Be careful that you are not making a career of waking up, a career of progressing spiritually in your study of the Course. I'll tell you something, the more you force yourself to force the Course to be relevant and practical, the shorter your trip home will be, because it will put you in the position of self-honesty, and it will help you abandon the bullshitting. And your abandoning the bullshitting, will help others abandon it, too.

Now this is something we've talked about before, but it needs to be reiterated because we are talking about the fact that the awakening process involves your breaking your isolation from the Father, but also from your Brother. And so you seem to unavoidably have to relate to your Brother; this Brother who is either expressing love or a call for love.

Those who are making a call for love make the call for love from two fundamental positions. One fundamental position is where they are suffering and they feel their suffering and they do not want to suffer, and they're willing to abandon whatever it might be, whatever ignorance or confusion might be present that is supporting their suffering. These individuals as a general rule are not engaged in relating to others at the expense of the others they're relating to.

The other fundamental requester for help is one who is engaging in sin. And again, what do I mean by the word "sin"? I mean that they are consciously engaged in relating to themselves, or their Brothers and Sisters, in a way that uses them at their expense, manipulates them, attempts to control them, and who will use whatever means they can—fear, threat, false promises. Sin is the expression of whatever tends to demoralize a Brother or whatever tends to demoralize you. And the essential clincher of the definition of sin is that the one practicing it, takes pleasure in engaging in this dynamic, such pleasure that they become committed to it, and it becomes the self-image they wish to reinforce, the picture they wish to present and substantiate in the world. In other words, they consciously take pleasure in and make commitment to doing that which disturbs or takes advantage of a Brother at the Brother's expense.

Now the first one is susceptible to healing. The first one will be able to hear the response of love, the response of intelligence, that is provided to the call for love, the call for help, the call for healing. But the second one is not susceptible. And you must learn to distinguish the difference. Because if you're in a Pollyanna, cotton-candy spirituality that is just going to shower whoever comes to you, no matter what they do to you or how they behave, with appreciation, you're going to be mowed down, because your naiveté is not going to prepare you for, for lack of better words, the meanness of the mental state that is making the apparent call for help. You must learn to distinguish the difference so that you will come back to that request for help, that call for help, with the Truth that I expressed earlier.

“What you are asking for, the help you are asking for, the request to get relief without changing your behavior, is a request that cannot be fulfilled by anyone, not even God. And therefore, what you are inviting is to get me involved in an entanglement, a tug-of-war. And I'm not available for that because I know better. And you know what? I'm telling you that you know better. So, as long as you know better, stay away from me. And don't invite me into something that we both know I'm not going to play into. And you sit... you sit in your suffering, unless you can find another patsy, until you're tired of it, and are willing to be accountable to yourself, and look at the changes that need to be made, accept the changes that need to be made, and make them. And when you are ready to make the change, I'll be glad to talk to you.”

The call for love has been responded to as though it were a call for intelligence. And you have not lost your Integrity. You have not abandoned your Integrity. And you have not abandoned the bottom-line divinity of you.

It's said that everybody lives lives of quiet desperation. And in a way everyone does, making the best of it. But you wouldn't be living lives of quiet desperation if you dared to be honest with yourselves, deeply connected with the Truth that you know, and lived and expressed yourself from there. And that's what this chapter that we're in has been talking about. It's been talking about nothing else but arriving at a place of being honest within yourself by not relying upon the picture you have of yourself, the concept you have of yourself, or the concepts others have of you—not trying to live up to them, but abandoning that struggle to be something other than What You Are, and giving up into What You Are. Giving up into What You Are is another way of saying turning to the Holy Spirit.

You know, when you finally hit the bottom of the barrel and you actually give up—and the giving up is not another ploy, it's actual—everything becomes utterly clear. You know what you can do and you know what you can't do. And you don't feel bad about it. You don't feel bad about what you can't do. And suddenly you're free to do what you can do. And because at that point you're in harmony with the bottom-line of your capital "B" Being, your life turns around.

We're talking about becoming real. And the only answer there is for anyone else calling for help is to become real. And when one becomes real, when many become real—there aren't a bunch of different realities, there are not different realnesses—there's perfect harmony, there's perfect fitting together, because the Integrity of each one of you is the Integrity of God.

And then what happens? Well, you don't disappear. You don't get blended into some wholeness. But this genuine one that you are, this honest one that you are, who no longer has the energy to pretend to be anything else, finds himself or herself to be not in the movement of Creation, but the Movement of Creation itself surfacing, if I may, bursting forth as you. And you have a gift to make that doesn't impinge upon anyone else, that doesn't depend upon anyone else's appreciation or acknowledgment, although it will be there. And your wholeness, the relief of the experience of your wholeness, consumes you, fills you full and overflowing so that there is nothing else there.

But what I'm trying to say to you is that that experience, rather than being some lifted-up lofty place, is something you find at, what you currently call, the bottom of your barrel—the place where you are forced by your innate intelligence [small laugh] to give up what is causing you suffering, because you're too tired. You do not have the willingness or the energy to pursue what was causing your suffering any longer. The bottom-line of you, the place of excellence in you, the Holy Spirit, is what is left at the bottom of the barrel when all of the concepts you have laid upon yourself, and all the concepts everyone else has laid upon you, no longer tempt you to respond to them or to live up to them. It's the you, you are right now at your most base, if I may put it that way, at your most fundamental, at this place in you of utter honesty where there is no deceit any longer.

Now do you see how conscious you have to be? Do you see how un-nebulous you need to be? Do you see how insane it is to become spiritually nebulous?

"Oh, they just need more love. Love them more. Are you doing this? Are you doing that?"

“No, I’m not doing this and I’m not doing that because that’s not going to help. I’m not going to give them more hugs.”

“They want to be loved as they are.”

“If I give them a hug, they will think I am accepting them as they are—accepting them not as They Truly Are, but as they perceive themselves to be—loving them as the collection of habits that they’re engaged in and saying, ‘Dear, you’re all right. I love you with all of your bad habits. I love you even though you are trying to embezzle money from me. I love you even though you’re stealing from me right under my nose. I love you even though, every chance you get, you take advantage of me. I love you even though you get angry at me at the drop of a hat. I love you even though you say you do not want to hear any of the good I have to share with you.’”

You see? “I love you as you are” is what they want to hear—which means, “I am loved as I am, and therefore there is no call for change.” And so you have confirmed their illusion to them. And you cannot call that love. You might be able to call it sweetness, but it is not love because it does not call forth in them that which would uncover to them their freedom from suffering. The provision of love that is not the provision of intelligence as well, is an expression of hate. Is an expression of hate. Because when a Brother is suffering and you do that which substantiates their suffering, what are you doing? You are engaging in consciously hurting them. And if you think that you can express love without intelligence, then you’re joining on the side of destruction, you’re joining on the side of unintelligence.

Now we could go on and on. “Oh, but I don’t want to make waves. If I do this, it will aggravate that person even more.” Right. So be a silent accomplice. Right. And ignore the fact that while you’re doing it, your ass is griped, because you are going against your own Integrity. You are going against what you know is right and you are mad at yourself for dishonoring yourself. So it’s much easier not to have to put forth the effort and the energy. It’s much easier to get nebulously sweet and spiritual.

Now I know, at one time or another, all of you have felt the pull, the emotional pull of those who are addicted to their bad habits, of those who are addicted to their insistence upon doing what doesn’t work, and who suffer in the process, and who seek consolation, who seek inspiration—inspiration to feel better without having to change. And I know, at one time or another, you have felt the pull whether you’re in the presence of that individual or not, when you know that in the night they are wailing within themselves and reaching out with all their might for someone or something that will inspire them without their having to change.

If you don't understand the difference between the two kinds of requests for help, if you are unwilling to recognize sin where it is being embodied or practiced, you will not know what to do when you experience the pull—the emotional and mental pull. And you will be inclined, because of your kindness, to try to help, and engage energetically in seeing the Truth about them, in helping them. And because the help that's wanted is that which will relieve them without them having to change what causes their suffering, you will not find an exit point from the experience of the pull.

And so I'm going to tell everyone a very spiritual response when that kind of a call comes, and you say it in your mind: "Fuck off!" I use the word very purposely because it's very difficult for anyone to misunderstand the meaning of those words. You must extend to them a clear message that you're not available for the invitation to an everlasting tug-of-war, an everlasting involvement of manipulation, in which you are going to end up trying to extricate yourself because you do have enough common sense not to stay in it. You do not say it... hopefully you say it early enough that you do not end up saying it out of anger. But if you have to say it out of anger, say it with the force that comes with your anger. You say it so that it makes it utterly clear that you are not a good mark; you are not an available patsy; that seeking help that won't help is useless with you.

When this happens, I would in very practical terms suggest to you that you not engage, immediately after that dismissal, [in] becoming conscious of the Truth about them. In other words, do not go into prayer on their behalf. You stay in the clarity of the dismissal from your presence of that which presents itself as something it is not; that you are not available for an interaction of deceit. And know within yourself that when they're ready for change, you will be happy to interact with them. You must be willing to slam the door in the face of deceit.

And then five minutes later, do not go to the door and open it up a crack and be curious to see if deceit is still waiting there for you. You dismiss them, and stand in the substance of that dismissal, in the strength of that dismissal.

Are you dismissing them, the Real One that they are? No, you're dismissing deceit and that which is identifying, in itself, entirely with deceit. And until the Real One that is there who is employing deceit, finds no payoff in the expression of deceit, the Real One that's there will not show up at your door as a stray who really wants to change, who's hungry for change.

I'm going to read the first paragraph that we were to cover tonight to end with. And next week we will begin with it again. I am not going to go into an explanation of it.

RAJ READING: Having taught you to accept only loving thoughts in others and to regard everything else as an appeal for help, He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...has taught you that FEAR is an appeal for help. This is what recognizing it REALLY means. If you do not PROTECT it,...

RAJ: Fear, by covering it up or calling it something else.

RAJ READING: ...HE...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...will re-interpret it. That is the ultimate value TO YOU in learning to perceive attack as a call for love. We have learned surely that fear and attack are inevitably associated. If ONLY attack produces fear, and if you see attack as the call for help that it IS, the unreality of fear MUST dawn upon you.

RAJ: Mind you, once again we are reading here about how the use you are putting your mind to and how you stay at the bottom-line Integrity of you, how you choose to go for it, whether attack is being used for the purpose of eliciting fear in you and causing you to be off-balance and react, having lost your perspective.

RAJ READING: If ONLY attack produces fear, and if you see attack as the call for help that it IS, the unreality of fear MUST dawn upon you. For fear IS a call for love,...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: ...in unconscious recognition of what has been denied.

RAJ: The...

RAJ READING: ...fear...

RAJ: That others express. Fear as a means of controlling.

RAJ READING: ...IS a call for love, in unconscious recognition...

RAJ: Where? The person making the call for love.

RAJ READING: ...in unconscious recognition of what has been denied.

RAJ: The one calling for help employs it, employs fear, employs aggression, employs attack, in unconscious recognition of what has been denied. In other words, that one has arrived at a point where the something they are overlooking in themselves is registering with them enough to make them say, "I don't deserve what I'm experiencing." But since they are still committed to it (their goals), they project... they project the source of their emptiness out there and vent their feeling out there. In their unwillingness to acknowledge that they are doing what doesn't work, so that they might change, they hold on to their right to continue to do what they're doing, believing that they ought to be able to do it without suffering, and therefore what is causing their suffering can't be them. It must be you; it must be someone out there.

And so when they extend it to you, when they direct their frustration out there and it is really a call for love, this is when you must remember that a call for love is a call for intelligence. And this is when you must remember that if that one is committed to bad behavior, behavior that doesn't work, and they are getting pleasure and payoff in it, you cannot help. And you must shut the door as an expression of simple, utter intelligence, so that they find no payoff that continues to fuel their intent to proceed without changing.

If someone is expressing fear as a result of an unconscious recognition within themselves of what they have been denying, do not relieve them of that unconscious recognition with Pollyanna spirituality, and behave in a way that leaves them sitting clearly with what they are doing, without being a distraction from it. That is responding to the call for love with love/intelligence. And you thereby will be being an active agent for change.

I hope all of you have more of a desire to know the Truth than to understand A Course in Miracles. You're here to serve Truth, not a teaching. When you read the Course, don't just try to understand what it is saying; desire to let it illuminate Truth for you. And if you don't understand something in the Course, go to Truth for the answer. Go to Truth and say, "What is the Truth, Truth, of what I'm reading here?" Let the Course serve to point you to the Truth. If you lost your copy of the Course and you were in a place where you couldn't obtain another copy for five years, you wouldn't be lost because Truth is available to you directly.

Keep it clear that whatever books you read, if they are to serve you well, will point you in the direction of Truth so that you might rely on it more completely. And I will tell you something. Truth with a capital "T", God's Truth, the essential Reality of each and every thing, is right in the middle of you at the bottom-line Integrity of you. That's what is left after you have abandoned attempting to fulfill concepts.

I love you. I love each of you for the inherent capacity you have to be honest. I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Well, I mentioned last week that the ego will take whatever the Course says and use it for its purposes, and it will take things I have to say and use it for its purposes. And, indeed, this has happened. [laughing] And so there are a couple of things I want to be very clear about again.

First off, when I gave these very spiritual words to be used to dismiss the invitation received (and I will not make Paul say the words again, but the words were "f--- off"), many of you after having heard it and then remembering back to what I said, remembered me saying "f--- you." And there's a great difference between "f--- you" and "f--- off." "F--- you" is a curse that you are specifically directing toward a person. Whereas "f--- off" is a dismissal—and that was the pure and simple intent of the statement.

Misunderstanding it though and thinking it was a statement "f--- you," many have thought that I was giving permission, especially in light of all I said about honesty, that it gave you license to call each other on each other's shit—point out their flaws, point out their errors, and clearly express how you felt about it. Now this is nothing more than careless and sloppy thinking, and careless listening.

And I invite you to listen more attentively to what I'm saying, because I am speaking very clearly. And I am saying exactly what I mean.

The statement, the dismissal "f--- off" was a dismissal to an invitation. In other words, I was speaking in very narrow terms here. It was a dismissal of an invitation extended to you mentally. In other words, where you can feel the pull, whether the person is in your presence or not. You can feel the invitation to be drawn in to help them feel better without having to change the behavior they are expressing which is occasioning their suffering—and very specifically, an invitation from someone who is taking pleasure in keeping you, and anyone else they can, at a disadvantage. I referred to it as "sin." One—and let's listen carefully—one who takes pleasure in putting another at a disadvantage for the purposes of usury, for the purposes of manipulation, for the purposes of control—one who takes pleasure in this, and is committed to this kind behavior, is not suffering from sickness; they are suffering from sin.

When an invitation, or a ploy, or a pull, is extended toward you by someone who is wanting to engage you in a position of deception which will put you at a disadvantage, you must decline the invitation. I did not say you should curse them. You must decline the invitation. You must say, "I am not available for this tug-of-war. I am not available for this state of conflict you would invite me into. And it would be a state of conflict because what you're inviting me into has a motive behind it different from what you are saying to me. I am not available for this." Accept that you must decline the invitation in as absolute terms as you can muster. And that is why I used the dismissal "f--- off" (a decline of the invitation, not a curse on the person).

Now I also made it very clear that in the last couple of chapters or sections that we've been reading, we have not arrived at a point yet where it is telling you how to effect a change in another, even though we are discussing how to be an agent for change, how to respond to a call for love, how to respond to a call for help that actually helps. We have not arrived yet at a point of extension toward the other. We are still talking about what you, within your own mind, are going to do in order to be an effective agent for change.

Now, most of you are familiar with Shakespeare's statement: "To thine own self be true, and it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man." Okay, so we're reading about responding to a call for love. And in effect, we're talking about how you can respond without being false in any way. That's what we're talking about. And the question is, "How do you manage to talk to your fellowman and not be false in any way?" Well, it isn't from book-learning. It isn't from theories. It's from a simple practice: Be true to yourself.

Know where you're coming from. Be conscious enough of your own behavior to know whether you're coming from a manipulative place, whether you're coming from a controlling place, whether in your attempt to help, you have an agenda, a personal agenda of your own, which you would engage your Brother or Sister in so that their getting better is to your advantage, for example. You see? Or so that their healing has a reasonable amount of justice included in it so that they pay a "reasonable penalty." You see? That's not innocence on your part. That's being unconscious yourself of what your real motive must be if you are the direct expression of God and nothing less.

As I said last week, last time, we're talking about, at this point, getting your own head on straight. And so we aren't discussing in any way, shape, or form, looking out there at another and calling him on his shit, or uncovering his flaws and proving his deceit. We're not talking about acts on your part effecting a change on a Brother. We'll get to that part, but that's not where we're at right now.

And what I said had nothing to do with giving you license to express your best perception of what's going on, and to do an analysis of your Brother's psyche, and come to conclusions, and then attack him or her on the basis of your assessment. Before you open your mouth when you are talking to a Brother or a Sister, ask yourself, "Would God be saying this to them? Would the Christ be saying this to them? Would the Holy Spirit say what I'm about to say?"

If you don't ask that question, then all you're doing is coming from your own best judgments. And you are doing it unjoined and unconscious of your inseparable unity with God, with the Christ, with the Holy Spirit. And so you are behaving, I'm going to say, in a state of denial of What You Divinely Are, blocking completely your capacity to reflect God, to reflect Love that heals. You're covering yourself up and giving preference to the picture you have of yourself that is replacing What You Divinely Are. And you are being dishonest.

So when I'm talking about expressing yourself honestly, I'm talking about you expressing your Self, with a capital "S", honestly; not you, who you think you are, expressing the way you think you feel from a separated place truly, straightforwardly, bluntly. That will never heal, because what comes from you does not come from a union. It does not come from a communion. It comes from a separate private place, from something that exists only in your imagination. And the only thing that will ever do is cause and promote and confirm confusion, for you and those around you, unless they are really alert in your presence.

So let's be very clear on this. Being honest means behaving, acting out from that which is truly you underneath and behind any concepts, any pictures, you have of yourself. It's you speaking from your connectedness with What You Divinely Are. And so, we're still talking about, we're still reading about consciously giving your attention in that direction, and then listening to see what the response would be.

And the response will never be a curse on your Brother or your Sister. On the other hand, you can count on it that it will be a dismissal, in your own mind, of any temptation that comes your way, inviting you to acknowledge in your Brother and Sister something that is not representative of what they truly are, and which invites you to participate in trying to accomplish what can't be accomplished. When that is done from the very center of your Being, to the best of your ability, I'm going to say, the one whose invitation is being dismissed will have to work real hard to feel personally dismissed or snubbed in the process, because it will be impossible for him to find in you an edge, a hurtfulness, or even a satisfaction in being able to deliver hurt, which is another way of describing “extracting justice out of the situation.”

Okay, let’s go into the book.

[Editor’s Note: Raj begins by going over the same paragraph briefly mentioned in the last meeting.]

RAJ READING: Having taught you to accept only loving thoughts in others and to regard everything else as an appeal for help, He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit .

RAJ READING: ...has taught you that FEAR is an appeal for help. This is what recognizing it REALLY means. If you do not PROTECT it,...

RAJ: The fear.

RAJ READING: ...HE will re-interpret it. That is the ultimate value TO YOU in learning to perceive attack as a call for love.

RAJ: And again, to be perfectly clear: If you having experienced a call for love that has come forth as that which invites fear,...

RAJ READING: If you do not PROTECT it, HE...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...will re-interpret it.

RAJ: To you.

To help you not take the bait (to see it as something other than a call for help).
To help you not take the bait (to see it as attack and respond in a like manner with defense).

RAJ READING: ...HE will re-interpret it.

RAJ: To you, in your own mind.

RAJ READING: That is the ultimate value...

RAJ: To who?

RAJ READING: ...TO YOU...

RAJ: Not the one who’s making the call for help.

RAJ READING: That is the ultimate value TO YOU in learning to perceive attack as a call for love.

RAJ: You see? We're talking about what's going on in your mind.

RAJ READING: We have learned surely that fear and attack are inevitably associated. If ONLY attack produces fear, and if you see attack as the call for help that it IS, the unreality of fear MUST dawn upon you.

RAJ: You see? Someone expresses himself in a frightful way, expressing a great deal of fear, or expressing ideas that invite you to become fearful. If you listen to what is said, and you choose to believe that something fearful is happening, you will completely forget that there is another way to look at this, and to see it as a call for love from one who has forgotten Who He Is and forgotten what his connections are—his unchangeable oneness with God, Who loves him with a Perfect Love that casts out fear.

RAJ READING: ...if you see attack as the call for help that it IS, the unreality of fear MUST dawn upon you.

RAJ: Why? Because you can see that there is delusion going on here, not something real. And you can see that the one who is deluded, is really the Christ, really the Son of God, having forgotten who he or she is, and in the lapse of memory, feels the loss of Identity, which is frightening, is unsettling. And when you see that, then whatever that one is presenting, becomes meaningless in light of what the Truth is about them. You see?

RAJ READING: For fear IS a call for love, in unconscious recognition of what has been denied.

RAJ: Tell me, why would any of you ever feel afraid? Well, because you're attempting to be something you cannot be. You're attempting to be an orphan. You're attempting to be independent. You're attempting to be as a sole (s-o-l-e) operator, which isn't What You Are. You're attempting to be something you cannot be. You are part of the Brotherhood. You are part of everything, and everything is part of you. You are a wholeness, and a part of wholeness, you might say. You have the capacity to experience yourself infinitely and specifically simultaneously.

But if you try to experience yourself specifically at the expense of your infiniteness, which is an impossibility, you will feel uncomfortable at the attempt, uneasy at the attempt. Why? Because the Truth of you, the Wholeness of you—that can't be excluded even if you try to give your attention so specifically to one small aspect of the infinity of you—confronts you. The infinitude of you confronts you even in your attempt to be tiny. It pushes for, it calls for your conscious re-embrace of the rest of you. It calls you, with insistence, to abandon your denial of all the rest of you, to abandon your attempt to narrow your attention down to the miniscule. Why? Because you cannot successfully become insane.

And so, What You Divinely Are pressures you in your highly focused attentiveness, to abandon the high focus, the narrowed focus. The greater part of you says, "You can't forget me." And because you are whole and you can't forget your wholeness, you will experience your wholeness right in the middle of your tiny focus as a pressure, as something that does not feel natural to you, to get your attention.

RAJ READING: ...fear IS a call for love, in unconscious recognition...

RAJ: In other words, in the presence of the pressure of your wholeness that you have repressed from your awareness, which is called an unconscious recognition. It's felt, but you can't quite identify it because you have repressed it so successfully.

RAJ READING: ...fear IS a call for love, in unconscious recognition of what has been denied.

RAJ: In unconscious recognition of the rest of the infinitude of you that you are denying by giving preference to the highly-focused, tiny attention which you are occupying your mind with.

You see, when an event happens in your day and you respond to it based upon your memory and your best judgments, without ever tapping into the rest of you that is present, without ever inquiring of the Holy Spirit, "What is the Truth here?"—your private response is an active denial of your divinity, of the wholeness of you, that it's really your Birthright to be experiencing and expressing. You're leaving God out—which is another way of saying you're leaving the Holy Spirit out—which is another way of saying you're leaving out that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. But when you do, you never feel totally at peace. Why? Because the pressure of What You Divinely Are will not let you be totally comfortable. It is impossible for you to be totally comfortable in your own private perception of the Kingdom of Heaven.

The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Mechanism of Miracles

[Editor's Note: This heading is not in the first and second editions.]

RAJ READING: Fear is a symptom of your deep sense of loss.

RAJ: Loss of what? The rest of you. The other ninety-eight percent of you that you are ignoring by giving preference to the two percent you're choosing to look at and validate and define. You see?

RAJ READING: Fear is a symptom of your deep sense of loss. If when you perceive it in others...

RAJ: In other words, when you perceive in others, fear—which is a deep sense of their loss.

RAJ READING: ...you learn to SUPPLY the loss,...

RAJ READING: If when you perceive it in others you learn to SUPPLY the loss, the basic CAUSE of fear is removed.

RAJ: Let's turn this around. If when I perceive in you a deep sense of loss because you've forgotten Who You Are or you're denying Who You Are, I know to supply the loss, and the basic cause of your fear is removed.

I remind you of Who You Are. I don't confirm who you think you are. I remind you of the other ninety-eight percent of you. I remind you of your connection with God. I remind you that the Holy Spirit is not part of the trinity off in the ethers, but is nothing more than your Right Mind, so that you realize that there is more to you than you've been availing yourselves of, so that you might be inspired to avail yourself of it by giving your attention in that direction, rather than relying entirely upon your knee-jerk, habitual responses to everything out of your memory. And as I do that, your fear is reduced.

Now, again, with reference to your behavior toward your Brother.

RAJ READING: If when you perceive it in others you learn to SUPPLY the loss, the basic CAUSE of fear is removed.

RAJ: Where? In your Brother. But first, it's got to be removed in you.

RAJ READING: Thereby you teach yourself that fear does not exist IN YOU, for you have IN YOURSELF the means for removing it, and have demonstrated this by GIVING it.

RAJ: Now if you're willing to see your Brother's behavior as a call for love, as a call for help, and you're willing to give that help to your Brother, even if you don't know exactly how you're going to accomplish it, you have abandoned any prejudgments you have about that Brother that would block you from caring enough to want to extend love. And that opens the door for the influx of Love from the Father, in you, through you, to your Brother.

RAJ READING: Fear and love are the only emotions of which you are capable. One is false for it was made out of denial, and denial depends on the real belief in what is denied for its OWN existence.

RAJ: Of the two—fear and Love—one is false. And the one that's false is fear.

RAJ READING: One is false for it was made out of denial,...

RAJ: Denial of what? Who You Are. What you divinely are, what you really are, in spite of what you've been educated to believe you are. The divine one. The Christ.

RAJ READING: One is false for it was made out of denial, and denial depends on the real belief in what is denied for its OWN existence.

RAJ: You see, you can't deny nothing. The only thing any of you go around denying is something Real.

Fear is what we're talking about, remember. If you are experiencing fear, it is because you have forgotten Who You Are, and are giving preference to something else. And in giving preference to something else, you are denying What You Really Are, and you are denying something that is Real. What You Truly Are is Real, What You Infinitely Are is Real, even though you think you are finite.

RAJ READING: One is false for it was made out of denial, and denial depends...

RAJ: I'm going to say:

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: ...on the Reality of that which is denied for its own existence.

RAJ: In other words, for an act of denial to exist, you have to be opposing something that is Real. Therefore, if you are in a state of denial, the very practice of denial, by reversal, is a statement of the presence of What Is Truly True—Real, with a capital "R". You have to be willing to practice the art of contrary thinking here.

RAJ READING: One is false for it was made out of denial, and denial depends on the real belief in what is denied for its OWN existence.

RAJ: Now listen to this using the art of contrary thinking.

RAJ READING: By interpreting fear correctly AS A POSITIVE AFFIRMATION OF THE UNDERLYING BELIEF IT MASKS, you are undermining its perceived usefulness by rendering it useless.

RAJ: You see, you, in spite of yourselves, believe that you are divine. In spite of your habitual thinking habits, you believe that you are Real, with a capital "R", that you are eternal, and that you are, therefore, incapable of conflict of any kind. That is what you believe.

And because you believe it, you argue against your suffering. You do everything you can to avoid your suffering. Why? Because you believe you do not deserve it. And the reason you believe you don't deserve it, is because you know, at the very roots of your Being, that conflict and suffering is not your Birthright.

Again.

RAJ READING: By interpreting fear correctly AS A POSITIVE AFFIRMATION OF THE UNDERLYING BELIEF IT MASKS, you are undermining its perceived usefulness by rendering it useless.

RAJ: "I am afraid because there's an underlying Reality of me that it's my Birthright to experience, and therefore I know that the suffering I'm experiencing cannot be valid. Therefore, I can use the experience of fear as a confirmation, as an affirmation, as a concrete conscious experience of my divinity, by using the art of contrary thinking. And I can choose to weigh, to place my anchor in that truth, and let it be dominant because it is dominant truly."

And as that awareness goes through your mind, your fear diminishes. You are undermining the fear's perceived usefulness by rendering it useless.

RAJ READING: Defenses which do not work at all are AUTOMATICALLY discarded.

RAJ: You automatically discard them when you see that they aren't needed or they are a useless waste of energy.

RAJ READING: If you raise what fear conceals...

RAJ: If you bring to the surface what's behind the fear.

RAJ READING: If you raise what fear conceals to CLEAR-CUT, UNEQUIVOCAL PREDOMINANCE, fear becomes meaningless.

RAJ: What's behind fear?

What's behind fear? You see, the ego would say, "Okay, what has gone on in your background? What are the foolish beliefs you've been employing that seem to make fear reasonable and justifiable? Let's get behind the fear. [small laugh] Let's get down to the root of the fear." But you will always look within the confines, the context of a separated mind where the fear is going on.

When you get behind the fear, you discover what? You discover the Truth about you. You discover your omnipresence. You discover the Birthright of your omnipotence. You discover the actuality of Singularity as your Birthright, in which nothing conflicted can occur, and which therefore makes utterly, experientially clear to you that there is no cause for fear. When you get behind the fear, when you get to what the fear is covering up, you get to the Truth of you that says you are a divine Being, incapable of fear; needing not to exercise fear because you are invulnerable.

And what happens then? You simply abandon the fear because it serves no purpose. It is a useless activity. That's what happens when you raise what fear conceals to clear-cut, unequivocal predominance. Fear becomes meaningless then.

RAJ READING: You have denied its power to conceal...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...love, which was its only purpose.

RAJ: Fear's only purpose was to conceal love. But you all think that fear has the purpose of protecting you; that it's useful, that it's essential, if you're going to survive in this dog-eat-dog world.

But, no.

RAJ READING: You have denied its power to conceal love, which was its only purpose. The mask which YOU have drawn across the face of love has disappeared.

RAJ: Now, if "the mask which you have drawn across the face of love has disappeared," it must mean that you have followed the direction quote, "To thine own self be true." You see? Honest. You've gotten down to bedrock. You've gotten down to the foundation of your Being. You've gotten down to the Truth about you, which is that you're not this little piss-ant mortal that you have thought you were, that you have been convicted in your belief about, and neither are any of your Brothers or Sisters, who have been suffering from the same belief.

RAJ READING: If you would look upon love, which IS the world's reality,...

RAJ: You see? No more of this, "The world is an illusion. The world isn't real."

RAJ READING: If you would look upon love, which IS the world's reality, how could you do better than to recognize, in every defense AGAINST it,...

RAJ: Here's the art of contrary thinking.

RAJ READING: ...the underlying appeal FOR it? And how could you better learn of its reality than by answering the appeal for it by GIVING it?

[Editor's Note: Raj said "an underlying appeal" instead of "the underlying appeal."]

RAJ: Well, you certainly won't be able to give it if you are going to call "the call for love" something else, like hateful behavior, or, you know, the expected behavior from someone like that. You see? If you're going to call "the call for love" an expression of hate that you better protect yourself against, you're not going to be [in] any position to answer "the call for love" by giving it, because you're going to withhold it. Why? Because you have decided to call "the call for love" something else.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit's interpretation of fear DOES dispel it,...

RAJ: And you can't say, "Oh, well, that's fine and dandy. Yeah. I would imagine the Holy Spirit... the Holy Spirit's interpretation would dispel it." Well, remember, [laughing] the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. So don't just blow it off, else you're blowing your Self off, with a capital "S".

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit's interpretation...

RAJ: The interpretation of that which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit's interpretation of fear DOES dispel it, for the AWARENESS of truth cannot BE denied. Thus does the Holy Spirit replace fear with love and translate error into truth. And thus will YOU learn of Him how to replace your dream of separation with the fact of unity. For the separation is only the DENIAL of union, and...

RAJ: Here's our art of contrary thinking.

RAJ READING: ...correctly interpreted, attests to your eternal knowledge that union is true.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: The Way to Remember God]

RAJ READING: Miracles are merely the translation of denial into truth.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "into the truth" instead of "into truth."]

RAJ: Shakespeare in Macbeth wrote the line, "Methinks thou doth protest too much!" And the point of the statement is that when one is going around protesting something obsessively, unreasonably, it usually implies that whatever that one is defending himself against is probably the truth about them, else they wouldn't be going overboard denying it.

Well, likewise, if you're going around every day relying entirely upon your best judgments, you are in a constant state of denial of What You Are. You are constantly protesting your Birthright. You're constantly protesting your divinity. And by virtue of the art of contrary thinking, you are demonstrating the fact that you believe that you are divine, that the Truth about you that you are denying really is the Truth about you, and therefore, isn't unavailable to you; it's just being ignored by you.

And as I've now repeated many times, where we are in this book and in the explanation of God's Plan for salvation and your process of awakening, we are giving our attention entirely to your honesty, to your willingness not to be denying the Truth about you. Because as long as you are denying the Truth about you, you are as caught up and engaged in the practice of mutual defense as everyone else is. And you, therefore, are completely inhibited from responding to a call for love with the love that will make fear a useless and meaningless element of your existence or of your Brother's, so that transformation of mind can occur.

RAJ READING: Miracles are merely the translation of denial into truth. If to love oneself is to HEAL oneself, those who are sick do NOT love themselves. Therefore, they are asking for the love that would heal them, but which they are denying to themselves.

RAJ: Mind you now, I want you to remain aware of the fact that there's a difference between sickness and sin. One does not take pleasure and make commitment to being sick. But one does take pleasure in and make commitment to indulging in sin. Therefore, what we're reading right now does not apply to those who are indulging in sin. Those who are indulging in commitment to harming others and who take pleasure in it, will not hear the expression of love until they arrive at a point of recognizing exactly the mechanism they are using, and abandon it. But those who are sick are not committed to being sick, and do not have a defensive shell around them that keeps them protected from feeling love that the one who engages in sin does. Those who are taking pleasure in hurting others, do it from a highly-defended place, because they intend not to be swerved from their commitment. They intend not to be swerved from the high they get from succeeding at making someone else hurt.

Now let's continue here, keeping in mind that we're talking about the sick, not the sinner. And I'm going to back up.

RAJ READING: Miracles are merely the translation of denial into truth. If to love oneself is to HEAL oneself, those who are sick do NOT love themselves. Therefore, they are asking for the love that would heal them, but which they are denying to themselves.

RAJ: How are they denying it? With simple, stupid beliefs. "Well, I'm a mortal. I'm just a physical organism. I'm part of an evolutionary process. I function within the limits of that process. I function within the limits of the normal processes of matter." And on and on. "What can I expect? That's just the way it is." But none of that's true about them. But what is true about them, they're denying to themselves.

So:

RAJ READING: Therefore, they are asking for the love that would heal them, but which they are denying to themselves.

RAJ: Here we are talking about a stray animal that comes to your door that's truly hungry for change. That's what the sick are.

The sinners that come to your door are looking to be strengthened so that they might continue in their life commitment. And in the process of your helping them, they will screw you, if they can, as well. Until they see their behavior pattern, and until they recognize that it is not getting them fulfillment, and until after recognizing it, they abandon the practice, the shell, the well-reinforced shell will not dissolve and become permeable so as [to allow them] to feel their hunger for what they are denying—love; until they feel hunger for peace. Then they will be able to hear the response of love to the call for love.

RAJ READING: Therefore, they...

RAJ: The sick.

RAJ READING: ...are asking for the love that would heal them, but which they are denying to themselves. If they knew the truth about themselves they could not BE sick. The task of the miracle-worker thus becomes TO DENY THE DENIAL OF TRUTH.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "they would not BE sick" instead of "they could not BE sick."]

RAJ: The task of the miracle worker is to be able to stand there and say, "You know, what you're believing isn't true. And you're not, you're really not under threat. And you're really not subject to physical processes that can leave you at a disadvantage, because you are the Child of God. And I see your loveliness. And it is perfectly clear to me that you are not in an environment of actual threat. And I will stand here with you as long as I need to and confirm to you the Truth about you until you can see it."

That's called "denying the denial of Truth." Everything I'm doing with you is denying your denial of Truth.

RAJ READING: The sick must heal THEMSELVES, for the truth is in them. Yet, having OBSCURED it, the light in ANOTHER mind must shine into theirs because that light IS theirs.

RAJ: You see, you need me to remind you of what is true about you. And I can remind you of what is true about you because it's true about me—and I haven't forgotten it.

RAJ READING: The sick must heal THEMSELVES,...

RAJ: You see, you've still got to do the work. You've still got to take the apparently risky step of believing something that's hard for you to believe.

RAJ READING: The sick must heal THEMSELVES, for the truth is in them. Yet, having OBSCURED it, the light in ANOTHER mind must shine into theirs because that light IS theirs.

The light in them shines as brightly REGARDLESS of the density of the fog that obscures it. If YOU give no power to the fog to obscure the light it HAS none, for it has power only because the Son of God gave power to it.

RAJ: "Oh, but the fog is so thick! The fog is so thick I can't see! The fog is so thick!" No. No. Take a deep breath. [breathing deeply] Take another deep breath. [again breathing deeply]

Just stand with me. Give your attention to me. Forget about the fog for the moment. Even if you can't see me through the fog, you can hear my voice and you can hear my tone and you can feel my meaning. Let your mind and attention be with me. And be aware of the Love with which I'm embracing you.

Now these are not words for you to write down and repeat, because your own clarity about the unrealness of the fog will provide you with the utterly appropriate words at the moment when you're standing with your Brother and dispelling the fear by giving the love.

RAJ READING: He must HIMSELF withdraw that power,...

RAJ: The power he's given to the fog.

RAJ READING: ...remembering that ALL power is of God.

RAJ: And we could say: Remembering that all power is of Love.

That's why, in the words I used, I invited that one to be aware of the Love that I was expressing and being with him.

RAJ READING: YOU CAN REMEMBER THIS FOR ALL THE SONSHIP.

RAJ: But you know what? You can't remember it for any of the Sonship if you haven't first been true to yourself. And again, that is the step we're on at this point in the book. "To thine own self be true, and it must follow as the night the day," you can remember this for all the Sonship. But that's the second step. That's the result, not the act you engage in. You don't engage in an act of remembering it for all the Sonship. You engage in the act of being true to yourself, and the result is that you will remember it for all the Sonship.

RAJ READING: Do not allow your brother not to remember, for his forgetfulness is YOURS.

RAJ: If you're not remembering together, you're not remembering fully, and it's your loss.

RAJ READING: Do not allow your brother not to remember, for his forgetfulness is YOURS. But YOUR remembering is HIS, for God cannot be remembered alone. THIS IS WHAT YOU HAVE FORGOTTEN. To perceive the healing of your brother as the healing of yourself is thus the way to remember God.

[Pause]

RAJ READING: To perceive the healing of your brother as the healing of yourself is thus the way to remember God.

RAJ: If you wish to respond to the call for love that your Brother has expressed, you must, for lack of better words, prepare yourself for the task first, and you can do this in a moment. I'm not talking about a lifetime practice. You can prepare yourself by saying, "Okay, here is a serious call for love." What I mean by that is, here is a legitimate call for love. "Therefore, I will honor it by not being frivolous and responding off the top of my head." You don't have to go through all these words. Instead of all those words, you can say, "Holy Spirit, what is the Truth here?" And in doing that, you abandon your memory banks and your conditioned reflexes, and you listen. You abandon your own thinking and you listen, so that the Truth about your Brother can dawn in your thought and inspire the words that will not confirm what he is ignorantly believing, but will inspire the release of them in favor of the much more desirable awareness of Truth that is being illuminated in their mind in a manner that is perfectly reasonable to them. So, bear with the process here of waking up, of becoming clear.

And do not be impatient to get to the part you are imagining is coming, where you will have learned something and now you can say, "Shazam!" and the person will be healed. And you will have been able to act authoritatively, but from a spiritual standpoint, from a divinely authorized standpoint, and will have become an effective healer in the world, in the horrible world that is in such need of healing. You see? We're talking about the use you're putting your mind to, and preparing your mind, what? To authorize something? No. To be the place that can be infilled with redemptive truth that redeems your Brother and you at the same time.

Speed over this, get through it quickly so you can get on to the good part, and you might as well put the book down, and you might as well abandon your awakening. This is very important.

I love you all. Be at peace. Having received a full meal, be at peace and let it digest, and let it move you. Let it mature you. Let it expand you. And don't be wondering what you're going to have for your next meal.

I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

December 11, 2005 -- A Course In Miracles Study Group with Raj/Jesus

Discussion Today Topic: Language

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

This past week Paul received an interesting email in which objection was taken to my language during the past two gatherings (study groups). And a request was made that Paul delete the offending words from the audio tapes, with a strong suggestion that if I didn't, that probably support for the work he and I (Paul and I) are engaged in, would diminish.

Well, I'm not surprised. Two thousand years ago people quibbled about my words. When I healed someone in the name of God, I was challenged because I did not have "the authority" to do that--meaning I didn't have the credentials that honored me with the right to do it. I was accused of consorting with publicans and sinners. In other words, not the upper spiritual crust of society. And the accusations were made with much judgment, if I may put it this way, much self-righteous judgment.

I might suggest that a worse word, than the one I used, is actually two words: self righteousness. [repeated after slight pause] Self righteousness.

Yes, I associate with publicans and sinners, and not the spiritual hoi polloi. And why? Because the publicans and sinners don't have the mutually-accepted definitions well developed that define what makes one acceptable or not. They see you; they speak to you; you respond to them. And they're very real, right where they are, and with you. It doesn't matter what your background is. It matters how you're being with them in the moment. And the other thing is that because they are not puffed up with self-pride, it doesn't get in the way of communication. And they know that they don't know. And so their curiosity is genuine; their openness is genuine.

A year or two ago, Paul and Sue pulled into a little hole-in-the-wall pizza parlor. And they were in a rush, so they picked this place which they had never been to before. And they pulled up in front and there were about ten Harley-Davidsons parked out, heavy with leather and silver, and you knew these weren't casual cyclists. And they went in and here were ten or twelve leather-jacketed, bearded, gruff-looking, rough-looking men sitting around a table. And Paul and Susan sat down nearby; placed their order. And while they were sitting there, they couldn't help but overhear the conversation. And needless to say, it wasn't exactly what they were expecting. They heard the words "Jesus" and "God" and other Christian terminology. And they surreptitiously glanced over at the table, and here each of the men had a Bible in front of them on the table, and they were having their church service. And in fact, when they noticed that Paul and Susan were curious, they invited them over to join them.

Now, do you really think that I only talk to the people with "clean" minds? I mean, let's be real. And do you think the language of these bikers when they're out on the road, is not worse than the word I used, on a more consistent basis? And when they get mad, do you not think that they curse me, with a longer string of obscenities that express anger rather than a point? And do you think I'm offended? Do you think I'm shocked by the language?

I'm going to tell all of you something: Whatever you take offense to is something which you hold yourself apart from. And generally you hold yourself apart from it with a haughty, superior, self-righteous attitude. What I want you to know is that the call for being the Christ may well come from someone who is behaving toward you in an offensive manner. And if your ego is going to go into hissy-fits over the language, you are going to be totally sidetracked from the call for love and your capacity to respond to it if your goddamned ego weren't so important to you. [said in a feigned apologetic tone] Oh, I'm sorry. More bad language.

But you know what? This language isn't foreign to you, and you know that that language right there wasn't really a curse on God. It's a phrase that's used. And you know what? I used it well there. I used it well, because there is absolutely no cause for respect to be given to such immature, ungrounded spirituality. I hate to even use the word "spirituality" relative to it.

When my Brothers, who were having their church service, have a problem and in asking for help they curse or they use foul language, [it is] because to them it simply expresses with strength the degree of their hurting. You know what? If they listen and if they can hear me, they may well hear me respond with some of the words they've used. Why? Because I know how to be appropriate in the moment and speak in language that will be understood and interpreted as intimate, even though it's not the language I usually use.

But it's time for those of you, who might have been offended by what I said, to be willing to become a little more real, a little more down-to-earth, a little bit less willing to be so easily offended. Because in the moments in which you're indulging in offense, you are incapable of being the presence of love for your Brother.

The question was put to Paul in the email: Ask yourself, "What came out of your very lips, is this something God would say?" You know what? Divine Love meets the need in the language of your present perception. I am responding to you, I am inspiring you in the language of your present perception. And the language of your present perception, although it may not be filled with profanity, is filled with ignorance, and many times is offensive--without your even being aware that what you're expressing is insensitivity--distancing yourself from another by conveying a superiority, but doing it anyway and hurting your Brother.

So, Paul very perfectly expressed exactly what I was saying, exactly what I was meaning--and not one word will be changed in the audio tapes or the transcript. And again, for those who might have been offended, I encourage you to approach me directly in your own mind, and ask me--why it is that you're offended?--what is there in you that took offense?

Now, some of you try to be pure as part of your advancement in your spiritual growth. But you know what? Purity isn't about the language you use; it's about the motive behind the language you use. Is the language you use arising out of your peace? Is the language you're using arising out of singularity within you, minus all reaction, minus all self-righteousness, minus all judgment? If it is, then no matter what the words are, it carries the unction of God, it carries the tone of God in ways that are specifically healing, even though they may surprise you and those who hear them. Purity has to do with the singularity or the unconflictedness of your mind when you are using whatever words you're using. Spiritual purity has nothing to do with manners--socially accepted spiritual manners. It has to do with your being able to hit the mark in the moment, because you're in touch with the need, and you feel/know exactly what will meet the need.

Now I will tell you something: it will take a long time for you to hear the Holy Spirit or me if you say, "Holy Spirit, Jesus, please speak to me, but promise you won't offend me." I promise you that I will offend you. I will offend artificial boundaries, unreal bondages, that you are committed to. And I will stretch your mind beyond the limits of reasonability--according to your definitions of reasonability--because it is not my task to leave any of you in the midst of the status quo that you're suffering from. And so I will always be offending the artificial boundaries that you are binding yourself with. You had best listen for me, or the Holy Spirit, unconditionally.

And when we surprise you, ask what we mean--how could we say that? But let us speak first, before you object. Give us a chance to elaborate before you interrupt with your shock. Your shock--"Oh, tsk, tsk, tsk." Like women from two hundred years ago suffering from the vapors, "Oh, tsk, tsk. The delicate sensibilities. Oh, you have shocked me." Swoon.

You know, there are three steps: listen to me, listen to the Holy Spirit, learn, and do. And the "do" part means act in a way consistent with what you heard and learned, whether it abides by the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that everyone is operating under. If indeed you are going to be an agent for change, if indeed you're going to wake up, you are going to begin to behave in ways that are inconsistent with the status quo; that violate and offend whatever the current sensibilities are of the group you're in, with its mutually-agreed-upon definitions and meanings that everyone must abide by if there is going to be any kind of sane order to life.

If you're going to be willing to say, "Thy Will be done, not mine," you're going to have to be willing to set aside your delicate sensibilities. And you're going to have to be willing to embrace an experience of Christliness that puts you in touch with the publicans and sinners; that puts you, so to speak, in the workplace where the work can be done, and the changes can be effected. And the contribution can be made where the contribution will be received. And even then, there will be a little bit of dissonance.

You know, you are all good, without a façade of spirituality, without a façade or mannerisms of purity, without language that because it has no dirty words in it, denotes the level of advancement you're at. This is all ego "camel dung"? [some audience laughter] What word should I use? [pause] Bullshit. [pause] No one misunderstands the meaning.

We've just spoken in the last three weeks about the fact that you can listen to a call for love without taking offense. Right? You don't have to be offended by, you don't have to go into a state of reaction because of a call for love. You can recognize that the call for love is presented as an attack or bad behavior, but you don't have to take offense. And because you don't take offense, you're in a position to still be in touch with your Brother, the one who made the call for love.

But I promise you, you move into a state of "being offended" and go into your own internal state of reaction, and you've lost connection with your Brother and you've lost the ability to relate to him. And anything that follows will be you bouncing off of your own reactions, and letting the response to your own reactions be directed out there toward the Brother, who has nothing to do with what's going on in you. And your Brother will recognize the lack of connection and will stop listening to you, unless he cares to become offended too, and join you. And the blind leading the blind, both will fall into the ditch.

Being offended by what I've said, is a bunch of nonsense that you don't need to expend any energy on. Being offended by anyone's behavior is an activity that is useless, and absolutely keeps you from being able to be a truly spiritual, relevant agent for change, who is able to stay connected with his Brother using whatever language is appropriate at the moment, so that the connection isn't lost and the communication of love isn't interrupted, and the reason for being together, the reason for the communion can stand clear and be healing.

Nothing under the sun can offend me. And nothing under the sun should offend any of you.

And if it does, get to work on it. Get to work on it in terms of, for lack of better words, being willing to not distance yourself from it. Let yourself be with it, so that you might find that whatever "it" is, isn't what is offending you, but your own reactions, your own definitions, your own mindset, which constitutes your own bondage. Be with it until its offensiveness leaves, dissolves.

It doesn't mean that the language will be adopted by you so that every other word is profane, but it means that when you hear it, you can still be in your peace. And if a call comes for it to be appropriately used, you can use it without reaction so that it does not carry with it to the one you're using it with, anything other than the purest meaning that you are conveying, which will never be hate or self-righteousness, but will connote a realism--you speaking from your Soul.

Oh, I know. "But your Soul wouldn't use that word." Well, I'm telling you that your Soul would use that word with a particular individual, in a particular circumstance. And because it is used, it will have its healing effect. Now, you all have to be willing to abandon what you're so goddamned confident about.

Now mind you, the suggestion was made that if I used the word I used before, all support would be lost. And I haven't used it, have I? Fuck. Just call me the Lenny Bruce of the new spiritual community. [some audience laughter]

What does all this have to do with A Course in Miracles? No, the question is, "What does A Course in Miracles have to do with all of this?" A Course in Miracles has to do with you all engaging in abandoning mutually-agreed definitions and concepts that you have used to keep yourself unconscious of God, to keep yourself in a state of mind in which you have sovereign independence over yourselves--except that it's not really sovereign, because you all have to cooperate with each other to be sure you're abiding by these mutually-agreed-upon definitions, which, of course, includes using certain language, associating with certain people, and certainly not honoring the lowlife.

You know what? You walk around today and you see women with ducktails. They're not called that anymore, but it's short hair, cut down to the nape of the neck. How many of you realize that fifty years ago when the first girls did that, they were the lowlife, and they were looked down upon and sneered at? And now: "Why, that's a perky hairdo. Don't you look cute? Boy, I think I'll get one of those. It just does wonders for you."

What does A Course in Miracles have to do with all of this? It has to do with your beginning to take a closer look at the use you're putting your own mind to, and discovering the ways in which you are using righteousness, or any other topic, as a means of keeping yourself separate from your Brother--your Brothers and your Sisters. It has to do with looking at your world with innocent eyes and innocent ears, so that you might hear and see the meaning, without the meaning being distorted by "your taking offense," without your indulging in righteous reaction.

Because whatever measuring stick you're using for your righteousness, as long as it is holding you separate from and above another, it's pure ego shit. Or shall I say, it's pure ego illusion? Well, it's far less effective to say "pure ego illusion," because, "illusion," yeah, that's a word you use and no big deal. But I say "pure ego shit," and you pay attention. And you know that it's something more than just "a casual illusion." If it's "pure ego shit," you know ya better clean it up. You know something needs to be done about it.

"But 'pure ego illusion,' yeah, well, who knows what that really means? And so for the time being, I'll just use the word 'pure ego illusion' and I won't have to do anything about it. I won't have to... see I've listened, but I don't have to learn. And if I don't have to learn, then I don't have to do. And if I don't have to do, well, nobody can be upset with me. And I won't have to face whatever fulfillment really means. [laughing] I won't have to face whatever waking up means. I love the idea of waking. I love the idea of awakening, but don't make me do it yet. Okay? Because I don't know what it will involve, and I don't know what it will turn me into. And so I would just as soon 'think about' bliss. Oh, yes, I know." You don't know anything. But you say, "I know. It will mean eternal bliss. I'll think about that for a while. But don't rush me on the learning part where I actually am different because I've learned. And don't make me move on to the next step of doing, where I have to behave consistent with what I've learned. Because I know that when I do that, it's going to make waves. It's going to offend someone's sensibilities." That's what this book is about!

So we talked a couple of weeks ago about not taking offense, not having to take offense when a call for love, that is a form of ugliness, presents itself. And then I used a simple word. And everybody--not everybody--but many took offense. And no... no bells went off in their head that said, "Oh, this is what Raj was talking about. This is what the Course was talking about. A real experiential thing. Something that I really need to take a look at because obviously this is what the Course was saying I don't need to do." You see?

Ah, you listened and you heard, and now if the bells went off, or even if they didn't go off, but if they're go off tonight, you're in a position of learning. You're in a position of being able to make a shift, a real change, so that the next time you hear the word "fuck," it will not bother you, because you have something better to do than to be in a feminine--I apologize to the women--but it's been characterized as a weak, feminine characteristic-- which isn't true about women. And men express it equally, except they don't swoon or faint. They say, "This is unacceptable! This... this is unacceptable!" You see? And they try to bring all their masculinity into it. They try to bring the wholeness of the meaning of the word "no" into it--which is exactly, and only, the thing I was setting the example for when I used the words two weeks ago. But these men, instead of swooning, try to bring the force of their human masculinity into expression to effect a change. The woman swoons and she's out of it. She changed everything by leaving the scene. But the man tries to change everything by being authoritative from an unjoined place. Both of them are responding, the women and the men are responding from "their offendedness," not from their Being.

Now it's absolutely useless for us to go through this book and bask in the beauty of the words, and think that somehow we're on the spiritual beam. Because until change is effected in each of you, and learning actually occurs, nothing is happening and there's not the slightest presence of spirituality, real spirituality to what's going on. Real spirituality occurs when you can sit down with a group of bikers who are using foul language, and not being offended by it, and actually perhaps being able to grasp the meaninglessness of their use of the words, or the meaning that they're giving to it that is entirely different from what your educated mind has determined those words mean. And if you can be with them and respond to them with understanding, because you're connected with them without judgment, communication can occur and you can be an agent for change.

You know what? When you're offended by something, the one who has offended you knows they own you. They've gotcha. They know they're in control, and they know you're out of control.

You're walking down the street. You're dressed nicely: decently at least. Some raunchy-looking guy is leaning against the lamp post. He says, "Hey, motherfucker, get over here!" And of course, you--all clean and spiffy and pure--cringe. You immediately are filled with fear. You immediately feel that you're being confronted with [or] by something that you're unequal to. And the fellow at the post knows he has the power. But if when he said that, you said back to him, "Hey, motherfucker, smile when you say that!" [some audience laughter] What do you think?

Your ability to say those words may save your life one of these days. But it won't save your life, if you're offended by it. Do you see what I'm saying? Are you learning something tonight?

Are you trying to tell me that God, that the Holy Spirit, that divine Intelligence, is not--when you lean into it--going to prepare you and facilitate the way for you to be utterly appropriate in any given moment? How do you think you're going to cast out devils if you don't cast them out, if you don't dismiss them?

[said in a wimpy voice] "Pretty please, Satan, would you get behind me?"

You don't ask the devil to get behind you. You don't ask an illusion to depart. You dismiss it, as has been said, with the abiding conviction that it is illegitimate. In other words, having no capacity to stand in its own right and object to your dismissal.

"Well, I didn't really know that the Course meant that I would have to change the way I behave. Oh, I didn't really know that the Course, what the Course teaches meant that I would have to change."

What the Course means to convey to you is that your experience is reflecting exactly what your current beliefs are, and that if you want your experience to change, you've got to change your beliefs, you've got to change your mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and you've got to change the criteria by which you are offended, among other things. But we're not just talking about shifting from these definitions to some new definitions you make up. We're talking about shifting from definitions that you have been using as a shield between you and what Reality is so that you're not experiencing Reality for what it is; we're talking about abandoning the definitions so that you're in an unshielded, intimate relationship with What Everything Really Is.

Now I'm speaking very definitely tonight, aren't I? Am I hollering? No. Am I angry? No. But you know what? When you know the Truth, you can speak it clearly, and you can speak it distinctly, and you can speak it without apology. And you can speak it without guilt. And you can be the clarity that transforms without manipulating, without attempting to control everything around you.

And the clarity with which you speak might be heard by another as a clarity they would only ever allow to come out of their mouth when they were upset. And so the assumption is that when someone is speaking with clarity, they must be upset. And it's not true.

Now if anyone would like me to go back to mouthing the pretty words in A Course in Miracles, tough shit. Go somewhere else. Take your support somewhere else. Because you know what? What you're interested in supporting is not the Truth. What you're interested in supporting is your own ego. What you're interested in supporting is something that at least some group of people recognizes to be a "holy" thing. And because you all agree that it's a "holy" thing, and you all agree to have reverence for it, you're actually accomplishing something; you're actually being something. But you're not. You're just hovering in pink clouds. And sure as hell, some motherfucker's gonna come and knock you out of those clouds. And I'm willing to be that motherfucker, because I love you. And because if you don't do it, none of this means shit!

Am I angry? No. But I can be straight with you. I can even be gay with you. But I'll tell you something. I'm not here to cater to your egos. I'm here to cater to the Father. I'm here to cater to the Truth. And I'm here to express it in whatever way gets you out of your ivory towers, and off of your marble pedestals, into a practical grounded spirituality, a practical grounded connectedness with where you are, so that as you abandon your being offended by where you are, What It Really Is can begin to register with you, because your way of looking at things has changed.

Now, I'm going to stop now. I have been talking pure Course in Miracles tonight. It doesn't all have to be in the words that we've been reading. And if the words that we've been reading do not lead you to this kind of practical groundedness, the book isn't worth a hill of beans. Is "beans" a bad word? Somewhere it probably is.

Every week when we finish, I say I love you. Tonight I'm going to say I love you enough not to allow any of you to continue in a fanciful concept of what the Christ is, and how the Christ behaves, and how the Christ functions.

I have conveyed to you that you never have to worry that you could do anything that would offend me. And that however you approach me--angry, sad, grief stricken, pleasantly, offensively--it's not going to get in the way of my being with you, and my being appropriate with you, and my conveying to you your Integrity--whether you've been expressing it well or not--so that your Integrity might be confirmed to you and allow you to abandon the grotesque or obtuse way in which you've been expressing the divine one that you are; so that you know there's a way out; so that you know that there is no way you can be trapped.

And I encourage everyone who has the tendency to be easily offended to take a look at this habit, like a garment that you're wrapped up in, so that you might take it off, because it isn't what you thought it was, and it isn't what you want. What you want is to be able to be unoffendedly real and appropriate in any given moment, under any given circumstance, so that the clarity of the excellence of you can find expression no matter what the words, and hit their mark in a way that confirms to your Brother or Sister that he or she has Integrity, and that he or she is not stuck.

[Raj speaking to each person] I love you... and I love you, motherfucker... and I love you... and I love you.

And I look forward to being with you next week. And you know what? I trust that you'll be back, because I know you can learn. And I know learning has occurred.

Okay.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Well, I think everyone’s had a good opportunity this last couple of weeks to take a look at the characteristics of taking offense, and have had the opportunity to see how each of you employs being offended, and what purpose it serves for you to employ it. And this is excellent.

I would invite you if you still feel tinges of offendedness at what I’ve had to say and the words that I’ve used, do not shove it on the back shelf as we move on. Continue to let yourselves be present with the experience of offense. If you are not at peace with it yet, you will find yourself still subject to the power that others would attempt to exercise over you by means of offending you.

When you are offended, you are in a state of self-defense. You are in a mindset in which you’re seeing your Brother as different from you in an incompatible way, as someone who is not your ally, as someone who doesn’t have your interests at heart and who is therefore, in one way or another, an enemy. And this is why the need for self-defense.

But I will tell you something. What are we talking about currently? We’re talking about how to be an agent for change; how to be with and for your Brother in a healing capacity, or simply in a capacity of being so benign, but if I may put it this way, so filled with the Spirit that the involvement is a blessing for you and your Brother. And if you are offended by or at your Brother, you will not be able to say within yourself, “Father, I wish to be the evidence of Love with my Brother.” You will not be able to say, “Father, what’s the Truth here? Father, how can I be with my Brother in a helpful way, in a real way, in a substantial way, in a way that blesses us both?” No, you will not be able to be open to that because it will be more important to protect yourself.

You can take being offended as just a little quirk of the moment in your mind, and prefer to get on with something more positive; turn your attention elsewhere from where the call for love has come. But it's more serious than that, because it's a place where you're covering up your unity with your Brother. It's a place where you're covering up the potential and the capacity for union, for the experience of Brotherhood.

If his clothing offends you, if her clothing offends you, if his or her language offends you, if the color of his or her skin offends you—it comes in all different forms—well, it brings you right to the point that we're discussing in this part of the book, which is how you are putting your mind to use; the use you are putting your mind to. Of course, in being offended, the use you're putting your mind to is not on your mind. "He/she" is what's on your mind, and what you might need to do to keep yourself safe will be on your mind. That's why we can't move too quickly through this portion of the book. Because in order to answer the call for love, you have to be in a place of balance, of equilibrium in your own mind. You have to choose, first of all, before anything else, to do whatever it takes to release whatever conflict is going on in your minds so that you come to a place of balance where you are not charged positively or negatively, because in that levelness, there is enough quiet for you to move into that place of excellence in you that knows how to be excellently in the situation because it can hear the Truth, because it can hear the Father.

So, as I said, if you still find yourself somewhat offended, if you are somehow willing to sort of discount the last two get-togethers as though they were slightly off track, be wary of the suggestion that it's so. Be wary of the confidence you have that either I'm not who I say I am, or Paul is too caught up in personal dynamics in his life to be able to hear me clearly, and therefore you don't really have to pay attention to what I've said. But I promise you, you do need to pay attention to what I said, because you need to become free of taking offense, as we've said and we've read.

It is possible for you to hear a call for love without being offended, without being reactionary. In fact it's essential for you to arrive at the point where you can hear a call for love as a call for love, rather than the obtuse behavior that it's being expressed through. And this has to do with the preparation of your mind, if indeed you want to be an agent for change, if indeed you want to be the evidence of love in your Brother's life.

Let's go into the book. And I'm going to go back one sentence prior.

RAJ READING: To perceive the healing of your brother as the healing of yourself is thus the way to remember God. For you forgot your brothers WITH Him,...

RAJ: In other words, when you got your bill of divorcement from the Father and you decided to see yourself as an independent agent, you caused yourself to forget who you were: God's Son, God's Daughter. You lost your Father. You became an orphan. And in forgetting your Father, you forgot not only that you were His Son or Daughter, you forgot that your Brothers and Sisters were his Sons and Daughters, so you forgot them in their Reality as well. This is why you can't wake up alone—because when you remember who you are, you will remember who your Brothers and Sisters are. And one of the most effective means of remembering who you are is to be willing to look at your Brother or Sister and remember who they are, even though they're behaving in a manner opposite to what they truly are. You will be healed together by virtue of your abandoning whatever shield you have put up between yourself and your Brother, including the shield of offendedness.

RAJ READING: To perceive the healing of your brother as the healing of yourself is thus the way to remember God. For you forgot your brothers WITH Him, and God's answer to your forgetting is but the way to remember.

Perceive in sickness...

RAJ: Whether yours or another's.

RAJ READING: ...but another call for love, and offer your brother what he believes he cannot offer himself.

RAJ: You see? Your Brother can't offer himself the perspective that it's impossible for him to be ill because he's the Son or Daughter of God; because he is the direct expression of God, including all eternal characteristics of God, and nothing else. He thinks he's just a mortal. He thinks he's just a body. He thinks he is an organism that sprang from a sperm and an egg. He's forgotten who he is. And so, he doesn't know of his Birthright. He doesn't know of his incapacity to be sick. And therefore, he has no means of challenging what he's experiencing; no means of disagreeing with it; no means of authoritatively dismissing it from his experience.

RAJ READING: Perceive in sickness but another call for love,...

RAJ: In other words, a call for an understanding of what your Brother truly is.

RAJ READING: ...and offer your brother what he believes he cannot offer himself. Whatever the sickness, there is but ONE remedy. You will be made whole as you MAKE whole, for to perceive in sickness the appeal for health...

RAJ: And there we are with our art of contrary thinking again.

RAJ READING: ...for to perceive in sickness the appeal for health is to recognize in hatred the call for love.

RAJ: You see the behavior, you see the apparent physical condition, and instead of believing the behavior and the appearance, you recognize that it is a direct statement of the opposite. It's not an expression of hate; it's a call for love. It's not illness; it's a demonstration of the fact that the incapacity to be ill is that one's Birthright—and at some level he's feeling it, he's feeling the Truth about himself, but he's not able to embrace it—and so he's resisting it and suffering in the process.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: And to give a brother what he REALLY wants is to offer it unto yourself,...

RAJ: You get to keep what you give.

RAJ READING: ...for your Father wills you to know your brother AS yourself.

RAJ: Well, I'll tell you something. There's just no way you can know your Brother as yourself when you're offended with him, or when you stand in self-righteous judgment of him, or you have all of the explanations as to why his experience is so miserable—the poor, stupid bastard. There's no way for you to know your Brother as yourself, and so somewhere in this picture, you have to be able to set aside your offendedness and your judgments and your clear explanations of why he's in the dilemma he's in, and be willing to look at him and say, "Father, I want to see You there. Help me to see You there. Help me not to succumb to or be enticed into believing the picture that this one is presenting of his ignorance." You see? Somewhere you have to be willing to switch gears in your own mind so that your own mind is being put to a better use than you would spontaneously be inclined to put it.

RAJ READING: Answer HIS call for love...

RAJ: Your Brother's.

RAJ READING: ...and YOURS is answered.

RAJ: Because you will be able to see yourself in him, and him in yourself—not the puny little self-righteous ego that you seem to be, but the divine one that you are—and in that, both of you are confirmed in the Truth about you and blessed.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the following sentence: Healing is the love of Christ for His Father and for HIMSELF.]

RAJ READING: Remember what we said about the frightening perceptions of little children, which terrify them because they do not understand them.

RAJ: We could say, remember what we said about the frightening perceptions of the neatly-dressed person walking down the street last week and seeing this street-person leaning against the light post—which terrified you or terrified the person in the neatly-dressed demeanor.

RAJ READING: ...which terrify them because they do not understand them.

RAJ: You see? When you read this book, don't just read the words that are there. Find a way to make them relevant.

RAJ READING: Remember what we said about the frightening perceptions of little children,...

RAJ: "Oh, yes. Yes. I'm well aware. My children did it. And I remember when I was scared of the bogeyman, too."

"Well, what in the heck does that mean? How is that helpful?"

But hey, let's talk about you walking in downtown San Francisco, or downtown Los Angeles, or downtown anywhere in a big city where there seem to be rough elements—oh, now you can relate to what we said about the frightening perceptions of childlike adults, which terrify them because they don't understand them. You see? You put yourself in an element that you're not familiar with, and the unfamiliar can be frightening when it doesn't need to be. And you need to be careful not to be offended just because you're in unfamiliar circumstances, because the moment you do, you put yourself at a disadvantage and you put the circumstance you're in, whether it's benign or not, in a position of superiority over you, and you can't help but intend to be defended. And if you behave in a defended manner, your behavior will be inappropriate, and it will be recognized as inappropriate, and you will have laid yourself out as an easy mark.

RAJ READING: Remember what we said about the frightening perceptions of little children, which terrify them because they do not understand them. If they ask for enlightenment and ACCEPT it their fears vanish,...

RAJ: Well, now, you know, everyone who participates in these study groups every Sunday night is asking for enlightenment, and I shared enlightenment over the last few weeks. And some of you didn't accept it, and your fears didn't vanish. The state of offense didn't melt, when it could have and should have.

RAJ READING: If they ask...

RAJ: The little children.

RAJ READING: ...for enlightenment and ACCEPT it their fears vanish, but if they HIDE their nightmares they will KEEP them.

RAJ: "Oh, let's move on to something more pleasant. Do we have to continue discussing this unpleasant subject?" That's called hiding it; covering it up. Covering it up, covering it up, and moving on to greener pastures. But it will remain there as something that hasn't been, shall I say, "defanged," and remains there to strike and confuse you.

RAJ READING: If they ask for enlightenment and ACCEPT it their fears vanish, but if they HIDE their nightmares they will KEEP them. It is easy to help an uncertain child, for he recognizes that he does not know what his perceptions mean. Yet you believe that you DO know.

RAJ: "Yeah, I know this guy leaning against the light post. Yeah, I know all I need to know. And I'm scared shitless. And I better just straighten up my neat-and-tidy, tidily-clothed body and just ignore him as I walk past, scared shitless. And hopefully he won't bother me again." And let's say the guy doesn't bother you and you get past and you get down to the next corner, and you let out a huge sigh and you say, "Thank You, God! That was a miracle. Thank You, God. Thank You, God. Thank You, God. Now I will have something to give testimony about as to the proof of God's Love. Thank You, God."

That wasn't a miracle. That was you hiding your fear really well. That was you offended by the words you heard and gave your own meaning to, that disallowed you from being able to be in the presence of your Brother from a place of serene wholeness within you, who would have been able without fear to be utterly appropriate so that perhaps a moment of intimacy might have occurred in which both of you knew that you were safe in each other's presence, in which both of you experienced the blessing of being in each other's experience.

Now, last week I mentioned that if you are able to be in your peace where your mind is singular, not conflicted, and you're in the presence of people whose behavior and language is uncomfortable for you, that you can be an agent for change because of being in your peace. And you know what? I'm sure a number of your egos thought, "Yeah. That's right. That sounds pretty good. It would be worth it to me. It would be worth it to me to be able to have that kind of inner balance so that even under those awful circumstances I could still be an agent for change and bring blessing." You see? But you know what? [laughing] When you're in that place, your Brother—the one using language that offends you—might be the agent of change for you by uncovering to you a perspective on life that you had been afraid to look at, and one which your self-righteousness kept you blind to, which caused you to see awfulness where awfulness wasn't going on at all, except by your definitions. Your Brother might be able to be an agent for change for you where you can see his wholeness, his love, his reasonableness, even though his language offends you.

“That’s asking too much,” you say.

Well, I want to ask you this. You with your good language—and I’m speaking specifically to those of you who are in the United States listening, speaking English and not using any four-letter offensive words—do you realize that every word that comes out of your mouth is absolutely offensive to some? Not just a few—a majority of a whole religious group of people. You are the infidels.

You are the infidels. Now, you hear the word “infidel,” it doesn’t have much emotional impact on you. But I promise you, the word “infidel” describes someone of gross character; someone who in self-righteousness from the other side of the fence, sees as despicable and worthy of being killed, worthy of being wiped out. You see?

“Well, I’m an American; even feel pretty proud of it. I’m an American. America stands for wonderful things. And I speak English. And I don’t say any four-letter words. I don’t say any words to offend anybody, because I’m on my spiritual path and I’m learning how to always express love.”

And those words come “out of the mouths of infidels,” according to a large portion of the population of your planet. “I shouldn’t even be speaking to you, you know.”

Somewhere along the line, you’re going to have to realize that there are those who see you as infidels. And somewhere along the line, you’re going to have to finally stop and find out, learn how to communicate with those who see you this way, so that the misunderstanding can be rectified and replaced with brotherly communication. They are going to have to be willing to abandon their firm conviction about you, and be willing to talk to you, even though every fiber of their being says not to get near you, not to associate with you, so that they can stay pure. They’re having their nightmare about you. Do you see what I’m saying? Bring this home to roost right where you live.

RAJ READING: It is easy to help an uncertain child, for he recognizes that he does not know what his perceptions mean. Yet you believe that you DO know.

RAJ: And I’m going to add: That is your downfall. That is where you are caught. That’s where you’re trapped.

That’s where you’re bound, without even knowing you’re bound until somebody who isn’t even making a call for love, but is expressing love: “Hey, motherfucker, how ya doin’? Join me for a cup of coffee?”

That's not a call for love. That's an invitation. But watch you recoil, and think maybe not twice but maybe fifty times before you finally dare to agree to risk the chance and sit down and have a cup of coffee with this motherfucker. You wouldn't use the word, but that's what the meaning is when you reject the invitation, based upon a self-righteous judgment you're entertaining because you feel superior. You see a call for love when an expression of love was happening—and you're out of touch.

But you think you're spiritually correct. And you can say with feigned kindness, "No, I've really got some things I've got to attend to. Maybe another time." Bullshit! You wouldn't do it another time. You're just making your escape. You're making your escape from an overture of love, because his choice of words offended you and frightened you because you have defined that language and that behavior as something that couldn't possibly be an expression of caring.

RAJ READING: Little children, you are hiding your heads under the covers of the heavy blankets you have laid upon yourselves.

RAJ: Now before I said this, this evening, and you had read that, or even if you've read it before, well, it's a really nice image, isn't it?

RAJ READING: Little children, you are hiding your heads under the covers of the heavy blankets you have laid upon yourselves.

RAJ: Well, now you know what in the hell that means, don't you? It's not an image. It has to do with the way you misuse your mind. And it said that so that you might find relevancy in it; so that you actually begin to use your mind in a different way so that you're not bound by your nightmares.

RAJ READING: You are hiding your nightmares in the darkness of your own certainty,...

RAJ: In the darkness of your own certainty. The darkness of your own confidence that you've got things pegged. And you've got things pegged because you're pretty far along your spiritual path, and you've been refining yourselves, and you've made progress.

RAJ READING: You are hiding your nightmares in the darkness of your own certainty, and refusing...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...to open your eyes AND LOOK AT THEM.

RAJ: You're refusing to sit down at that table and have that cup of coffee, and perhaps find that this is a really interesting person. You might even find out that he works at Microsoft, or that he's a research chemist—highly educated, who doesn't mind at all using that kind of language. You might find it's somebody really worth knowing. You might find that he has been the agent for change for you—you self-righteous prick. And your world may open up, and your heart might be bigger than you thought it was, and your capacity to love will embrace more than you ever thought it could.

RAJ READING: Let us not save nightmares, for they are not fitting offerings for Christ, and so they are not fit gifts for YOU. Take off the covers and look at what you are afraid of.

RAJ: "Birds of a feather flock together," they say. And so you can go to any large city and you'll find a community of the Irish, and a community of the Norwegian, and a community of the gays, and a community of the straights. And you say, "Oh. Well, see. Birds of a feather flock together." And you never step back to look at San Francisco as a whole. And you see mankind, regardless of how they've identified themselves, "Here is a flock that is gathered together."

A whole flock separated by mutually-agreed-upon definitions of what's important. "It's important for me to have Irish friends. It reminds me of home and helps me feel not as much a stranger in this land." You see? But there's no brotherhood there. It's just a group with mutually-agreed-upon definitions of what is important. And so they are bound by a boundary that they have created by deciding that what keeps them separate from everything else is what's important.

And as I said, I'm here to help break down false boundaries so that you don't become imprisoned by and incapacitated in your divine wholeness from embracing everything and finding God there; finding someone just like you there that you don't have to be afraid of.

RAJ READING: Take off the covers and look at what you are afraid of. Only the ANTICIPATION will frighten you,...

RAJ: Thinking about doing it is mighty scary. Thinking about sitting down with this guy who's invited you for a cup of coffee is what frightens you.

RAJ READING: Only the ANTICIPATION will frighten you, for the reality of nothingness cannot BE frightening. Let us not delay this, for your dream of hatred will not leave you without help, and help is here.

RAJ: Do you realize that self-righteous spirituality is hateful? Self-righteous spirituality that discounts someone because of his language, or because of his dress, or because he actually is making a call for love and is attempting to be obtuse. Whatever you use to keep yourself separate, especially in the name of spirituality, is hateful.

And if you haven't realized how you have been being hateful, you need to become aware of it now. And that is why I am speaking bluntly, clearly, fundamentally, so that you might not suffer from your self-righteousness, and find it worthy of abandoning so that you might find it in your heart to dare to be the presence of love and confirm to yourself and your Brother, your inviolable Integrity—your (plural) inviolable Integrity.

RAJ READING: Let us not delay this, for your dream of hatred will not leave you without help, and help is here. Learn to be quiet in the midst of turmoil,...

RAJ: What turmoil? The turmoil of the gutter people? The turmoil of the people who are dressed differently because they're not buying into the mainstream clothing-designers' concept of "what's in"—who apparently, therefore, don't give a shit about what they look like?

RAJ READING: Learn to be quiet in the midst of turmoil,...

RAJ: The turmoil in your own mind that sees what isn't there because it's using measuring sticks that don't arise out of an awareness of God everywhere, but arise out of self-righteous, superior definitions of self, with which anyone can justify any kind of behavior they damn well please.

RAJ READING: Learn to be quiet in the midst of turmoil, for quietness is the end of strife and this is the journey to peace.

RAJ: See? We are still talking about the use to which you're putting your mind, and the journey to peace in your own mind before you ever do anything to be an agent for change on behalf of your Brother. Before you open your mouth up in response to a call for love, get your own head on straight.

RAJ READING: Learn to be quiet in the midst of turmoil, for quietness is the end of strife...

RAJ: In you.

RAJ READING: ...and this is the journey to peace. Look straight at every image that rises to delay you,...

RAJ: "Oh, yeah." And don't think I'm talking about the way someone else is dressed, or the fact that they haven't shaved, or the fact that they're using certain language. These aren't the images that rise to delay you. The images that rise to delay you are the determinations you have made in your mind about these behaviors and these characteristics. They will delay you from being in your peace. They will cause you to be fearful when fear is not called for.

And even if some aggressive situation is occurring, your freedom from fear will allow you to have the presence of mind to know how to respond appropriately so that all are blessed and no one's integrity is called into question.

RAJ READING: Look straight at every image that rises to delay you,...

RAJ: Arises in your own mind.

RAJ READING: ...for the goal is inevitable because it is eternal.

RAJ: What is the goal?

RAJ READING: The goal of love is but your right, and it belongs to you DESPITE your preference.

RAJ: "Oh, I would prefer for him not to use that language! I would prefer for him to take a bath more often. I would prefer for him to, well, you know, dress a little bit better. I mean, purple and orange, and purple and blue, and chartreuse just don't go together! They would offend..."—Oh, there's that word again—"They would offend anyone's sensibilities. Of course, anyone who's developed sensibilities. You know, anyone cultured." You see?

That's why I only talked to the publicans and sinners, you know. They haven't refined their sensibilities. They aren't spiritual dilettantes. I do talk to them, yes, but they're not the only ones I talk to. They're just a little bit harder of hearing.

RAJ READING: The goal of love is but your right, and it belongs to you DESPITE your preference.

RAJ: And I will say: Despite your acquired preferences.

Do you see that? The goal of love, the capacity to be the presence of love, belongs to you. No matter how you have covered it up with irrelevant crap, it's there with you. It is there for you to be. It is what you have been created to be and express, no matter what preferences you might have, or someone else might have. And we're talking about your coming to a place of equilibrium in you where your intent to be the evidence of Love is more important to you than your conditioned responses, your egotistical conditioned responses. It's there. And it's got to be more important to you than your dearly-loved capacity "to be offended."

RAJ READING: YOU STILL WANT...

RAJ: You really do.

RAJ READING: YOU STILL WANT WHAT GOD WILLS, and no nightmare can defeat a Child of God in his purpose. For your purpose was given you by God, and you must accomplish it BECAUSE it is His Will.

RAJ: It's not like that's a command: You must accomplish it.

You must accomplish it because you have no capacity to do anything else. It's what is utterly natural to you. It's what is utterly normal to you. It's what your function is.

And it will be what you find yourself doing and being when you get over self-righteousness; when you let the right "to be offended" gently slip through your fingers and out of your grasp and out of your repertoire of behaviors.

RAJ READING: Awake...

RAJ: Wake up! Wake up!

RAJ READING: ...and remember your purpose,...

RAJ: Your purpose isn't to be offended.

RAJ READING: Awake and remember your purpose, for it is YOUR will to do so.

RAJ: Of course, you don't think it is. But that's what I'm here for—to remind you that it is.

RAJ READING: What has been accomplished for you MUST be yours. Do not let your hatred...

RAJ: Quote "self-righteousness" unquote. Your capacity "to be offended."

Do not let it...

RAJ READING: ...stand in the way of love, for NOTHING can withstand the love of Christ for His Father, or His Father's Love for Him.

RAJ: You've got to remember to love your Father again. In other words, you've got to learn to love not being an orphan any longer, so that then you can learn how to love your Brother because of what he really is, whether he rides Harley-Davidsons, whether he uses good language, whether he dresses well.

RAJ READING: ...NOTHING can withstand the love of Christ for His Father, or His Father's Love for Him.

A little while and you WILL see me, for I am not hidden because YOU are hiding.

RAJ: [laughing] Just 'cause you have your head stuck in the sand, doesn't mean I'm hiding. I'm right out in the open here.

RAJ READING: A little while and you WILL see me,...

RAJ: Of course, if you were offended last week at my language, well, you didn't see me.

So:

RAJ READING: A little while and you WILL see me, for I am not hidden because YOU are hiding. I will awaken you as surely as I awakened myself, for I awoke FOR you. In MY resurrection is YOUR release. Our mission is to escape CRUCIFIXION, not redemption.

RAJ: Well, you want to know something? Your mission with your Brothers and Sisters is to escape crucifixion, not redemption. But that's going to mean that you're going to have to be willing to look your Brother in the eyes, and not recoil because you're seeing your definition. You've got to try to look in your Brother's eyes and remember God—can't do that if you're in a state of self-defense.

RAJ READING: Our mission...

RAJ: Your mission.

RAJ READING: ...is to escape CRUCIFIXION,...

RAJ: Crucifixion is a result of lack of communication.

So don't avoid communication with your Brother because of his dress code, or lack of it, or poor language, or because he surprised you, like I did last week and the week before, and didn't behave—didn't behave the way you expected. "Not the way the Christ would behave." Well, there you are in one of your little nightmares, seeing something that you weren't expecting that didn't fit your protocols, and therefore what happened must have been incorrect, wrong, faulty; cause for you to withdraw trust. See? See how each thing builds a defense, a wall, a little bit sturdier?

You've got to abandon your nightmares that separate you by being willing to be with your Brothers innocently, with a willingness to discover what you're not familiar with yet; with a willingness to discover the wholeness that is there that you haven't discovered yet; the intelligence that is there that you haven't discovered yet.

RAJ READING: In MY resurrection is YOUR release.

RAJ: In your resurrection is your Brother's release. In your resurrection, in your getting your head on straight, is your Brother's release. This is God's Plan for salvation. This is what it's all about.

RAJ READING: Trust in my help for I did not walk alone, and I will walk with you as our Father walked with me. Did you not know that I walked with Him in peace?

[Editor's Note: Raj said "Did you know" instead of "Did you not know."]

RAJ: Can't put it much more squarely than that. That's the way you must do it too: in peace. And getting in your peace is you getting your head on straight before you get messed up in any aspects of being an agent for change for your Brother in response to his call for love.

RAJ READING: Did you not know that I walked with Him in peace? And does not that mean that peace goes with US on the journey?

RAJ: Peace is pretty scary. Peace is balance. Peace is equilibrium. And the misinterpretation that can be applied to it is that peace is vulnerability, because in peace you're not in a state of defense; you are not prepared to defend yourself. In your peace, you are defenseless. And so it's not worth it to you to abandon the conflict, because at all costs, you must maintain your defense.

What I must reiterate over and over again with you is that although you may be defenseless because you are not in a conflicted frame of mind that sees opposition that must be prepared for, intelligence and love don't go out the window, but are more solidly available to you than you've ever experienced them before.

But you're not going to find that out until you risk the chance and find the peace, and relate to your Brothers from there, and Sisters. And when you do that, you will find either that a call for love that you thought you heard was not a call for love but an expression of love for you to embrace, or you will find that the call for love was a call for love which calls for a different response from you, but a response that will come from your immediate on-the-spot experience of integrity and invulnerability. Invulnerability [that is] invulnerable because of the presence of mind, the presence of intelligence, the perspicacity to know exactly how to be to the benefit of yourself and your Brother. You won't find this out until you dare to risk the chance and turn your own head around so that you're putting your mind to the use it was made for.

So don't... don't think that it's just a really cute thing.

[Editor's Note: Raj now reads from an earlier paragraph.]

RAJ READING: Remember what we said about the frightening perceptions of little children, which terrify them because they...

RAJ: As I read this, do you not have images of a child in a bedroom at night seeing images and being frightened?

"Why how irrelevant could that be?"

"That's nice."

But it doesn't mean much if you can't relate it to you as an adult who believes that he does know what everything is, and therefore is not amenable to "Aha's," discoveries of what he doesn't know, and a capacity to see love where he thought it was absent. So as we go through this coming week, pay more attention, continue to pay attention to when you're offended, and how you employ offense, and why you employ offense, and ultimately how it keeps you separate and superior relative to your Brother—which you will now be able to see rather clearly constitutes your being in exactly the opposite way of what you want to be.

It's important for you not to carelessly let what's in this book become a means for you to further establish your separation from your Brothers, and to cause you to continue to be uncommunicative with your Brother, separate from your Brother, alone, and ultimately lonely, which it is not your Birthright or your purpose to be.

I love you all, and I look forward to being with you not next week and not the week after—Christmas and New Year's—but the week after that.

You will have plenty of time to be offended. And with the holidays you'll have plenty of opportunities to be offended, or to be with others who are offended, which means you'll have the opportunity to find the value of what we're discussing, and ultimately what a blessing it is for you not to be sidetracked from your capacity to glorify God, recognize God in your Brother, and not be fooled by your Brother's presentations, and not to be fooled by your already-established definitions of things. To not be offended is to remain in your Sanity. And that's a blessing for you and your Brother. Give yourself half a chance to experience the benefit.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution

Chapter 11 -- The Mechanism of Miracles (Part 4) [Chapter 12 -- The Way to Remember God (Part 3)]

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Well, I'm not going to harp indefinitely on the subject of offense and being offended, but I'm going to invite you again during this coming week to pay attention to the times in which you become offended. I don't want you to pay attention to what it is you're offended at, but the fact that you're engaging in being offended. Being offended is serving some purpose for you. It's not a useful purpose, and that's what you all need to become aware of.

You need to become aware of the fact that the act of being offended is a choice you are making. It is not a choice that the circumstances are calling for. Whenever you're offended, there is another way to look at the situation and there is another way to respond. So you are using the act of offense on purpose.

And I want you to become aware of why you're doing it. You will always find that when you are offended, you have become defensive. And the offense that you are experiencing is a means of self-protection. But why? The simple fact is that if you indulge in taking offense, you are incapacitating yourself. You are incapacitating your capital "S" Self. You are incapacitating your ability to be an agent for change. You are incapacitating your ability to make a contribution that uncovers God, that uncovers Good.

I want you to pay attention so that you may find out why you are choosing to do that which incapacitates you, rather than that which enlarges your capacities. What purpose is it serving? What is it you're protecting yourself against? And this is an examination that each of you needs to engage in by yourself with the greatest degree of honesty that you can bring to bear upon the situation. Why? So that you may find out how stupid you are? No. So that you might understand from an experiential place in you that you don't want to do this anymore, because you do not want to be incapacitated, you do not want to become ineffective, and because you want to wake up.

Taking offense is never justified. It is a use to which you are putting your mind. A use to which you're putting your mind. And there's nothing real or genuine about it. It's so much tinkling brass, even though it feels like you are engaging in something with strength, and being a forceful presence. It is nonsense. It is nothingness. Nothing is happening, all the while you're offended.

When you're offended, you've lost your peace. Peace is your most valuable asset, because in your peace none of your Good is distanced from you because you are not distancing it from you by withdrawing from it so that you might engage in the private, personal pleasure of being offended. Peace is your most valuable asset. And it's not an asset like an asset that you acquire. It's the fundamental ground of your very Being. Peace is that which is utterly natural to you. You can't get rid of it. You can preoccupy yourself with other things, but you cannot get rid of it.

And in your willingness to abandon reaction, offendedness of any sort--in your abandonment of that--what is left is the peace that was there all along, the undifferentiated Wholeness of you, the Integratedness of you or the Integrity of you, which when you have chosen for it, allows the Love that you are to find spontaneous expression and bless whatever circumstance appears to have occurred that occasioned your offense.

In your peace there is nothing standing between you and your capacity to look at your Brother in the eyes and remember God, or to look at the flower and remember God; to look at whatever you're conscious of and find Ultimate Good there. And this is your goal. If you are on a so-called spiritual path, this must be your goal. You want to see things truly. You want to experience things as they truly are. You do not want to be befuddled, ignorant, confused.

So you've got to stop doing the things that cause befuddledness and confusion. That's all you have to do is to stop doing those things. You don't have to start doing something radically different from your very nature, or something so radically different that you couldn't possibly achieve it. Being awake and experiencing everything as it truly is, is the experience you're left with when you stop doing all this irrelevant crap: reactions, self-righteousness, offense, jealousy, and on and on and on.

So please, for your own enlightenment, pay attention this coming week. Let it be your project to take note of when you are offended. And mostly I want you to start your inquiry about it with the question, "In what way is my being offended at this moment serving me? Why am I using this response right now?" It's a key question, and it will help to uncover wonderful "aha's" for you. And the reason for engaging in this practice is so that you can more easily set aside the practice of offense in the future, because it's so obvious to you that it is nonproductive.

Defense is always an act of isolating yourself from something else. And well, that's the name of the game, isn't it, since you got your divorce from your Father. You separated yourself. The nature of existence, the nature of being, the nature of relationships is one of being different from, separate from everything; not like anything else really. And therefore, foreign to, alien to everything else; and everything else is alien to you. And life becomes a matter of somehow making a truce, an uneasy truce with all of this that is alien to you and that you are alien to.

And it's a silly thing to be doing in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven with your fellow Christs, your Brothers who are the Sons and Daughters of God. It's a silly thing. And you can afford to look at it in that light-hearted way. "It's a silly thing to be doing." The only problem is that it seems to have devastating effects on you and on relationships. It turns Heaven into hell, all because you're engaging in a silly thing to do. The fact that the effects are so devastating to you doesn't mean you're doing something terribly wrong. It just means that you're doing something silly that has devastating effects until you stop doing it. That's all.

So become conscious enough during this coming week to actively practice paying attention to when you are offended, so that through this conscious practice of paying attention, you might arrive at a point where you can willingly abandon reacting, being offended. And of course, if you hesitate before you act out your offense each time you recognize that you've started to employ it, the immediate experience that you're in will change.

Remember, all we're talking about, all we have been talking about for months as we've been going through the Course, is experiencing a miracle, a sudden shift of perception, in which, because of the shift, your behavior changes--not just your mind, while your behavior continues. Not where your mind is healed, but your body continues to be sick. Not where you feel love for your fellowman, and yet stand offensively against him because his behavior is calling for it. We're talking about, well, in biblical terms, becoming a new man, becoming a new woman--which really means [laughing] becoming something refreshingly different from what you have been being; refreshingly different, like the smell of the air after a rain.

This isn't a head trip. It's about actually being conscious enough to experience a sudden shift of perception, and then letting your behavior follow and embody the new perception, the clearer experience of Truth, so that you are not repeating yesterday's behavior today, or your parents' or your grandparents' behavior in your lifetime. We're talking about changing--being in a new way.

Again, when you find yourself being offended, immediately ask yourself, "Why am I employing this response?" Not, "Why is he or she making me respond this way?"--but, "Why am I choosing to respond this way instead of some other way? What selfish motive or purpose is my reacting in this way serving?"

Okay. Let's go to the book.

I'm going to back up just a little bit for continuity.

RAJ READING: Our mission... (H-#285)

RAJ: Yours and mine.

RAJ READING: ...is to escape CRUCIFIXION, not redemption. (H-#285)

RAJ: We're not at all interested in escaping redemption. That's what getting your divorce from your Father was.

RAJ READING: Our mission is to escape CRUCIFIXION, not redemption. Trust in my help for I did not walk alone, and I will walk with you as our Father walked with me. Did you not know that I walked with Him in peace? (H-#285)

[Editor's Note: Raj said "Did you know, did you not know that" instead of "Did you not know that."]

RAJ: There's that word, "peace." I want you to walk with me in peace. And I am here to help you walk through your day, and the apparent booby traps that you see, with peace so that you find it unnecessary to engage in taking offense.

RAJ READING: Did you not know that I walked with Him in peace? And does not that mean that peace goes with US on the journey? (H-#285)

RAJ: What journey? The journey back to your Right Mind.

Not a journey in time, not a journey back to Heaven, but a journey of beginning to behave in a way that is not a constant denial of your Right Mind and a constant assertion of an imaginary mind that has purposes that you have made up for it.

Peace has to go with us on the journey, because we're not on a journey together when you're not in your peace. That's how valuable and important your peace is. You're not on a journey at all when you're not choosing for your peace.

Peace is like a greased slide in an amusement park in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven. And when you choose for your peace, you're in for the ride of your life that takes no effort from you because it spontaneously and naturally leads you to "Aha!" after "Aha!" after "Aha!"--light bulbs going on all over the place, and greater and greater pleasure in every event of your day.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: There is no fear in perfect love. (H-#285)

RAJ: True. But love escapes you if you're not in your peace. Why? Because if you're not in your peace, you're in a state of self-defense, self-protection. You are anti- "all that is out there that's going to get you." And of course, "all that's out there that's going to get you" are your Brothers and Sisters and all of the Kingdom of Heaven which you don't recognize because you've said, "It's all foreign to me. [slight pause] It's all foreign to me. It's not like me. It can't be like me, because if it were like me, I wouldn't be anything in my own right--and life for me is about being something in my own right." Well, I will tell you that there can't be one iota of Love embodied in you when you're in that frame of mind.

There is no Love without peace. With peace, Love is inseparable from you, and fear is nonexistent. So if you want to be the Presence of Love, you are going to have to choose for your peace in every circumstance where your conditioned thinking tells you that you must be defensive. You must begin to devalue defense, because it is keeping you absolutely ignorant of, it absolutely obscures to you the fundamental ground of your Being, which is peace, which is inseparable from the movement of Love.

Okay.

RAJ READING: There is no fear in perfect love. We will but be making perfect to you what is ALREADY perfect IN you. (H-#285)

RAJ: We're going to whole-ize you. Whole-ize you. We're going to integrate you so that you might experience the "all of you" that has always been present, that couldn't have been changed--in which the capacity to be afraid is nonexistent.

RAJ READING: You do not fear the UNKNOWN but the KNOWN. You will not fail in your mission because I failed not in mine. (H-#285)

RAJ: Because I did not fail, I did for you and for everyone the only thing that needed to be done. Because once it was done once, it was done for all time. And it was done for you. Therefore, you will not fail in your mission, because all you will be doing is uncovering what has already been done and what has always been true about you. You're not in some great project of creating a "new you" and of causing some great leap in evolution that lifts you and all of mankind out of some caterpillar level into a butterfly level. You see? We're not wreaking, wroughting (w-r-e-a-k-i-n-g, w-r-o-u-g-h-t-i-n-g) some great new thing. Rather we're relaxing back into the simple Originality of you and of Being and of God.

So do not conceive of this, even though there's a very long book here that seems at times to be complex, we're not engaging in some complex project. We're yielding to the way things work. We're yielding to the way things already are. We're yielding to the Divine One that you never ever stopped being, even though you took an imaginative vacation in fantasyland.

RAJ READING: Give me but a little trust in the name of the COMPLETE trust I have in you, and we will easily accomplish the goal of perfection together. (H-#285)

RAJ: This is not a place for you to take pride in struggling your way through this "all by yourself" and achieving the fantastic goal without help from anyone. [laughing] That's a little, standoffish position, wouldn't you say? Off-putting to all of Creation that stands one with you, and in support of your knowing who you are and what you are and what your purpose is, so that you might find your inseparability from it.

RAJ READING: Give me but a little trust in the name of the COMPLETE trust I have in you, and we will easily accomplish the goal of perfection together. For perfection IS, and cannot BE denied. To deny the denial of perfection is not so difficult as the denial of truth, and what we can accomplish together MUST be believed when you SEE it as accomplished. (H-#285)

RAJ: Well, I can promise you one thing. You won't see it as accomplished until you break down the defenses that stand between you and me, or you and your Brother; until you abandon your isolation. And I encourage you to abandon it in the presence of one who is Awake--your Guide, or the Holy Spirit. You will see it as accomplished because your Oneness with all things was never broken, never interrupted. So, stop trying to do this all by yourself--as long as you do, you're maintaining the isolation that's causing you to have a dream.

RAJ READING: You who have tried to banish love have not succeeded, but you who choose to banish fear WILL succeed. (H-#285)

RAJ: Why will you succeed? Because fear is not actual. Fear is not a creation of the Father, else it would be eternal. Fear is not eternal because it's the absence of the experience of Love. And it's the absence of the experience of Love because you have been willing to abandon peace for the so-called invigorating excitement of doing things all by yourself.

RAJ READING: The Lord is with you, but you know it not. (H-#285)

RAJ: "Ooh. Whoop-de-do. The Lord is with you! The Lord is with me! Yeah." And what is the Lord that is with you? Your Right Mind. The Holy Spirit. That of you which you have not been paying any attention to while you're having so much fun pretending to be an independent authorizer.

RAJ READING: The Lord is with you... (H-#285)

RAJ: So you don't have to be offended because the Mighty Lord, the one who is so far ahead of you and so different from you, is with you to--out of His Beneficence--give you a wonderful, new experience of yourself. No, it's simpler than that. It's your own Sanity. "The Lord that is with you" is your own capital "S" Sanity which hasn't gone anywhere, and simply awaits your interest, your curiosity, to embrace it once again. When you're willing to acknowledge "the Lord that is with you," it will appear that reintegration will occur in which you come into your Whole Mind, in which you come into the state of being Totally Awakened.

Well, now, that takes a lot of the excitement out of it, doesn't it? I mean, after all, you like to kick against "the Lord that is with you," the Great Lord that is with you. But, on the other hand, you like the prestige that comes along with "having the Great Lord with you." And now I've just told you that "the Great Lord that is with you" is nothing more than your Right Mind. What's exciting about that? What's egotistically boosting to you about that? No, it's something simpler, something less exciting, something so utterly natural that, to your ego, it doesn't look at all interesting.

Thank God it isn't. Thank God it isn't any more complicated than that. Remember this so that you don't project out in front of you on your path of Awakening some humungous effort that you're going to have to put forth.

And then, simply because your experience of life right now isn't too much fun, try it. Try yielding into your Right Mind. Try letting in the Lord that is with you.

The Lord is the Lord. The Lord is meaningful. The Lord is significant. The Lord is your Savior. But what is so wonderful about the Truth is--Truth with a capital "T"--is that the Lord that you are to yield to, is your very own Being, with a capital "B". And therefore, once you grasp this fact, you can see that you're not yielding to anything foreign.

And in fact, you are yielding to that which has apparently been artificially split apart, creating an unreal experience that isn't the happiest experience. And you can see that all it takes, at least intellectually to begin with, you can see that all it takes is a simple reintegration with your very own Being--which is an utterly intelligent thing to do and costs you nothing. Any of you can do it at any time, without money, without possessions, without anything outside of your mind.

RAJ READING: The Lord is with you, but you know it not. Yet... (H-#285)

RAJ: Here it is.

RAJ READING: ...your Redeemer... (H-#285)

RAJ: The Lord is significant. Your Right Mind is significant.

RAJ READING: ...your Redeemer liveth... (H-#285)

RAJ: Oh, yes, the oratorios and the Christmas music. "I know that my Redeemer liveth." And you all look off to me; off into the place where the Redeemer will return through the skies. No.

Yes, your Redeemer liveth right in the middle of you. And your Redeemer is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: Yet your Redeemer liveth, and abideth in you in the peace out of which He was created. (H-#285)

RAJ: He who? He you in your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...your Redeemer liveth, and abideth in you in the peace out of which He was created. Would you not exchange THIS awareness for the awareness of your fear? (H-#285)

RAJ: You have to stop and think about it, don't you? "Well, what's in it for me? Will it give me the advantage? What's it going to mean? Well, I'm not really sure. I think I want it. I like the idea of Awakening, but do I have to exchange my awareness of fear and the exhilaration I get from employing it?" 'Cause you employ fear just as you employ offense. "Do I have to give that up? The excitement of it, the not-knowing of it, the unnerving aspect of it that keeps the adrenalin flowing and makes me feel like I'm alive? You mean, you're asking me whether I would be willing to exchange all of that for the boredom of peace and the sweetness of love, and nothing else?" You see?

RAJ READING: Would you not exchange THIS awareness for the awareness of your fear? (H-#285)

RAJ: Well, the simple fact is that you're so familiar with dealing with your fear without letting go of it. See? Wanting to change without having to stop doing what is causing you your suffering. You're familiar with it. And it doesn't call for you to embrace anything new and unsettling. [laughing] You already embraced something imaginatively new and unsettling--and you call it "the human condition," which is a hell of an experience.

You've got to arrive, you will arrive at some point at making the choice to exchange this awareness for the awareness of your fear. You will. But you don't have to delay.

RAJ READING: When we have overcome fear, not by hiding it, not by minimizing it, and not by denying its full import in any way, this IS what you will really see. (H-#285)

[Editor's Note: Raj said "it, not by denying its full import" because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as "it, and not by denying its full import" as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: So you not only have to realize that your Right Mind is your Redeemer and is significant, you've got to realize that the fear and the offense that you employ also is significant; not significant because it's a real oppositional force in the context of Creation, but because it seems to absolutely blind you to the Truth.

So you're not going to be able to awaken by denying the full import of fear. You're going to have to take a look at it so that you might see that it is devastating; so that you might see that employing it is costing you dearly. Not so that you may see it as an evil oppositional force, but so that you may see it as an unintelligent, ignorant practice of imagination that isn't really getting you anything or anywhere at all--that it's a useless, meaningless activity--so that you will see it as useless to continue to employ it. When you see that it serves you not at all, you stop doing it, whatever it is. This is important.

RAJ READING: You cannot lay aside the obstacle to real vision without looking upon it,... (H-#285)

RAJ: That's why I've said, during this coming week, continue to pay attention to when you employ taking offense. Look at it squarely and ask yourself, "What am I getting out of employing it? What selfish, self-seeking purpose is it accomplishing?"

RAJ READING: You cannot lay aside the obstacle to real vision without looking upon it, for to lay aside means to judge AGAINST. (H-#285)

RAJ: I put out a bowl of apples and oranges on the table between us, and I say, "Would you please give me all the apples?" And you go through, and it's called "sorting out." You don't call it "judging against." You "sort out" and you hand me the apples.

And there is something left in the bowl: oranges. "They didn't make the cut, poor things; they got judged against and left behind." But they were simply recognized as not being apples, and what was asked for were apples.

RAJ READING: You cannot lay aside the obstacle to real vision without looking upon it, for to lay aside means to judge AGAINST. (H-#285)

RAJ: It means to discern the difference between and not select. It's called "perspicacity." It's called the capacity to distinguish and see what fits where. And if you're going to make apple juice, you don't squeeze oranges.

Again.

RAJ READING: You cannot lay aside the obstacle to real vision without looking upon it, for to lay aside means to judge AGAINST. (H-#285)

RAJ: Distinguish.

RAJ READING: If YOU will look the Holy Spirit will judge, and will judge truly. (H-#285)

RAJ: If you will look. And the essential thing is for you to look with the Holy Spirit. Look at what is offensive to you. Look at the reaction you're having and ask yourself, "What self-serving, selfish purpose is my employment of taking offense serving?" Now don't ask yourself that question; ask the Holy Spirit. Stand there and invite the Holy Spirit to answer that question for you.

RAJ READING: If YOU will look the Holy Spirit will judge, and will judge truly. (H-#285)

RAJ: We could say: If you look by yourself, you will judge, and you will judge falsely.

RAJ READING: He... (H-#285)

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...cannot shine away what YOU keep hidden, for you have not offered it to Him, and He cannot take it FROM you. (H-#285)

RAJ: Your Right Mind cannot take from you your ignorance until you show your ignorance to your Right Mind for the purpose of having your ignorance about whatever it is, taken from you because the Holy Spirit has uncovered what is true there where you were having a false perception.

RAJ READING: We are therefore embarking on an organized, well-structured and carefully planned program aimed at learning how to offer to the Holy Spirit everything you do NOT want. (H-#286)

RAJ: Well, you didn't know that "being offended" was something you didn't want. [small laugh] "Being offended" was a handy tool to use to confirm your righteousness, which is essential to your becoming a divine being. You didn't know that it was an inappropriate use of your mind, and that you didn't want it.

And so the Holy Spirit, like me, works with you to uncover to you what you don't want, but which you didn't know you didn't want. And that's why you can't wake up by yourself--because you don't know what you don't want. You don't realize what isn't working, because in your twisted perception, you think that the dissonance of life is really a divinely-placed catalyst for you to learn to practice how to be divine and gain dominion over it so that it is no longer threatening to you. And as a result, you lock yourself into an ongoing tension and conflict which you value highly because you've come to the conclusion that it's refining your soul. That's how caught you are, and that's the kind of darkness you're caught in. And you need help to be able to disentangle yourself from such convoluted thinking.

Now the way I just described it might cause you to think that there's no way you're ever going to get out of this kind of complexity. But, as I said, I have done it. And I have done it for you. And none of you has to break new ground in order to wake up. The breaking of new ground has been done, and it doesn't have to be done again. The path is unobstructed.

Ask for help from me. Ask for help from the Holy Spirit; that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, but which is your Redeemer. And let in the help.

Again.

RAJ READING: We are therefore embarking on an organized, well-structured and carefully planned program aimed at learning how to offer to the Holy Spirit everything you do NOT want. HE knows what to do with it. You do NOT know how to use what He knows. Whatever is revealed to Him that is not of God is gone. (H-#286)

RAJ: That means it is gone from you.

RAJ READING: Yet you must reveal it to YOURSELF... (H-#286)

RAJ: You must be willing to look at what you do not want. You must be willing to look at the motive you have for your reactions.

RAJ READING: ...you must reveal it to YOURSELF in perfect willingness, for otherwise His knowledge remains useless to you. (H-#286)

RAJ: This is like a child. If a child doesn't say:

"Daddy, what's that?"

"Well, that's a cow, son."

If the child doesn't say, "Daddy, what is that?"--there's not going to be an answer that causes the question to disappear, replaced by knowledge; never needing to be asked again.

So you must reveal it to yourself in perfect willingness. You must be willing to say, "I don't know what this is for. Dad, Holy Spirit, Jesus, what's it for?" Because if you don't, His knowledge remains useless to you.

RAJ READING: Surely He will not fail to help you, since help is His ONLY purpose. (H-#286)

RAJ: What? The help of the Great Lord? The help of your Redeemer as someone greater than thou? No. Your Redeemer, the Lord, yes, but not something greater than you. Your very own Being. That which is nothing more than your ever-present, ever-cohesive, ever-one Right Mind that is inseparable from all of Creation.

RAJ READING: Do you not have greater reason for fearing the world as YOU perceive it than for looking at the cause of fear, and letting it go forever? (H-#286)

RAJ: Only you can answer that question.

And I would encourage you to answer it to yourself, and take a position. Take a stand within yourself so that you get off the tack, and so that you open the door for sudden shifts of perception that will change your behavior; that will change your responses; that will cause you to respond to a "call for love" with the love that's being called for, rather than an ego-response responding to the obtuse way in which the call for love was made--so that you become, you be an agent for change, rather than that which confirms and solidifies and freezes the illusion into greater apparent solidity and immovability.

"The greatest fear" you all have is that when you ask to know the Truth, that the Truth will convict you. When the fact is that the Truth revealed to you uncovers what was illusionary in your way of perceiving that caused you to see yourself as guilty of something that you never could have done, so that it exonerates you by lifting you up in your awareness to a clearer experience of what you divinely Are--that in whom your Father is well pleased.

So the help you have is truly help. It helps you because it brings you into an awareness that penalty and crucifixion is not part of the Kingdom of Heaven or of Reality. It helps because it removes any imagined call for penance, for penalty having to be paid, for time having to be spent suffering from the awfulness of the sinful one you've been told you are. The help is recognizably helpful and does not extract from you suffering of any sort, but relieves you of the suffering you have been experiencing from your ignorance. So don't be afraid of the help because help is relieving.

And remember that the help is coming from your Redeemer, "the Lord that is in you," called the Holy Spirit; called that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. And therefore, your invitation to it, causes reintegration to occur--which every single one of you can comprehend at this moment is a desirable thing; one which, because it is whole-izing, instead of disintegrating, will be an experience of harmony, and therefore nothing that you need be afraid of.

They used to say, "Let the games begin." And I'm saying, "Let the help begin." Invite it in. And know that to the degree that you don't resist it, it will be a wonderful experience.

To the degree that you resist it, it won't extract any penalty from you. It won't react to your resistance. But your resistance will simply continue to keep you "in the human condition" that isn't too happy an experience, and no movement will occur. Nothing will be happening.

Let... let us in. Let the help begin. Abandon the fierce pride that you employ in attempting to do everything all by yourself. Abandon it. The help will flood in, because it's always confronting you. It's always nurturing you. It's always finessing--in any way it can--you into a recognition, a defenseless recognition of it. And so when you abandon the defense voluntarily, you will feel it washing in on you, infusing you, clarifying you to you.

Mind you, we're still not tackling problems. We're still getting your heads on straight before tackling quote "being an agent for change" unquote.

I look forward to being with you all next week, and I love you.

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Well, I hope you didn't have too offensive a week, you know, having to take a look at when you were taking offense at things. It was a worthy endeavor, and it will continue to be a worthy endeavor.

I'm sure you found that there were many, many different kinds of occasions which gave rise to offense, and not all of them really bad. I mean, if a mate or a lover comes up feeling truly affectionate, extending love, but he or she does it just as you sat down to do something you had been waiting all week to do, it can be offensive. "This is not the time. Don't you care about me?" [laughing] Even though "caring about you" is what's being expressed. "Don't you care about my wants? I've been waiting to do this. I've been putting this off all week because I have been being loving to you." You see? So not all occasions for offense arise out of calls for love—meaning behavior that isn't loving but at the bottom line is a call for love.

So it boils down to, as I said, the question, "Why are you choosing to employ offense at that particular moment? What is the self-serving benefit you are trying to achieve?"

Well, you may have noticed that there are some days where something offends you that wouldn't offend you at all on another day. And you chalk it up to, "Well, I've had more sleep. I'm more rested. I was a little on edge and exhausted yesterday, or the day before." You find some reason for the difference, except it's never the real reason. The real reason that you're less offended or not offended at all on certain days is because on those days you have chosen for and valued your peace more than anything else. And having valued it, you have placed yourself in it. You have allowed it to be the presence, the underlying spectrum of the way you're looking at everything.

Now I'm going to carry it a bit further. You always are only faced with two choices, two apparent ways to be. One choice is to choose to listen to the Voice for Truth, and the other is to choose to listen to the voice for fear. Okay, now we can take that and redefine it—because that's still very general—and we can redefine the Voice for Truth as the Holy Spirit, and we can redefine the voice for fear as the ego. This can still be confusing though, because you can envision them as "things" different from you, and you can either listen to this thing or you can listen to that thing, and you are something separate from both.

But the fact is, as we've been discussing, the Voice for Truth, which is the Holy Spirit, is what? Nothing more than your Right Mind. Well, likewise the voice for fear, which is the ego, is nothing more than the sense of mind you have made up and identified as yourself, constituted with definitions that you likewise have made up, and agreements about definitions that you have entered into with others who are choosing to operate from the standpoint of a made-up mind themselves.

So the ego is you, you might say, in your wrong mind, and the Holy Spirit is you in your Right Mind, except—let's be clear—the "wrong mind" isn't really a mind at all. It's just a collection of ideas that you say, "Well, these ideas..."—which it happens aren't true at all or real, but—"...these ideas I am experiencing, and therefore they must be going on in a mind, because I'm conscious of them and they are going on, and therefore they must be going on in my private, personal mind." You see? So you've made this up and you believe it; except that it's all nonsense. The fact that you believe it, however, means that you make an investment in everything that you've made up. And your investment you work diligently at, so as to make this sense of mind more and more real. And you have to work at making it real because it is pure fantasy and never will be anything more.

So, if things get confusing to you as you're thinking about all of the things we've discussed and everything that the Course has to say, if things seem to get too complex and too overwhelming, remind yourself, remember, you only have two choices available to you in the state of Being. And these two choices are the Voice for Truth, or the voice for fear.

The Voice for Truth is your Right Mind, which is perfectly cohesive, perfectly integrated, perfectly singular, perfectly indivisible, but all-inclusive. And the voice for fear is a conglomeration of definitions that you have put together which is no mind at all, but with the investment of your faith in it, it seems to be real. The Voice for Truth, which is you minus the appendage of an imagined mind, are perfectly clear, are perfectly at peace, are perfectly able to see everything that is going on, everything that confronts you as God appearing, and nothing less. But when you're giving your allegiance to this appendage, this imagined appendage, it causes everything that you experience to be offensive, to be that which calls for you to constantly be in a state of defense, ready to be offended, ready to magnify the differences between you and everything else.

So we're still talking about getting your own mind straight, getting your own head on straight, before entering into the, let's say, arena of being an agent for change for your Brother. Being aware of when you are offended and examining why it is you're choosing to be offended, is a form of mental discipline that will enable you to catch yourself before you express the offensiveness and choose for the other voice, choose for the other teacher, so as not to seem to reinforce the appendage, but to, rather, allow that which is your Real Mind to fulfill itself as you right where you are, in that moment, in that place, in that circumstance.

Okay, let's go to the book. The next section is called:

RAJ READING: The Investment in Reality

RAJ: Hmm. [flipping through pages in the book] I don't see anything here coming up that talks about... [flipping through more pages in the book] note we have "The Sane Curriculum" coming up, that sounds pretty good—nothing here though about the investment in offense; nothing about investment in all the wonderful things you've made up. Hmm. Interesting.

Okay.

RAJ READING: I once asked if you were willing to sell all you have and give to the poor and follow me.

RAJ: Now we really could put these in a different order that would reflect the truth a little bit better. And indeed, it is what I meant when I said it the first time, but I've been saying it over and over in every encounter I've had with any of you. It could say:

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: I once asked if you were willing to follow me...

RAJ: In other words, abandon your independence and yield to something other than your so-called private authority.

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: ...and sell all you have,...

RAJ: Meaning abandon all of the definitions you've made up, all the confidences you have about what everything is and what it's for and who you are.

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: ...and, thirdly, give to the poor.

RAJ: In other words, shift from getting to giving.

And indeed, all of you, I know, would love to get to the “giving to the poor” part. That’s the fun part, right? Selling all you have, following me, that’s not the fun part, but, oh boy, giving to the poor. See, the ego, the way you’re conditioned, the way you have conditioned yourself to think, and the way everyone else has helped condition you to think, is that you and someone else are different. And of course, it’s better if you’re in a position to “give to the others” than to “have to receive from others.” Right? Nothing quite so insulting as to be the one who is “in need.”

Well, it’s going to be disappointing for you, because in the process of getting your head on straight, you’re going to arrive at the awareness that “there aren’t really any poor.” And the recognition that “there aren’t any poor” is the gift you give.

But it’s already given in the recognition. You don’t have a recognition that then allows you to still have poor to give to. The reason you arrive at a point of recognizing there aren’t any poor to give—out of your great beneficence—to, is because you discover that you and your Brother are both the Christ already, and you insist upon operating from that standpoint. And so you end up being in a position of relating to your Brother in acknowledgment of What He Is—not in illuminating What He Is to what he isn’t. In other words, the transaction, the communion is complete in the recognition of What He Is, the acknowledgment of What He Is, because you had no other agenda on your mind for yourself, or for him, than to see God there from God’s eyes.

So don’t jump to the conclusion that, oh boy, now we’re coming to the part here about helping the poor, about being agent for change for my Brother. No, we’re still at the point of getting your heads on straight.

RAJ READING: I once asked if you were willing to sell all you have and give to the poor and follow me. This is what I meant: If you had no investment in anything in this world, you could teach the poor where their treasure IS.

RAJ: What’s that mean, “if you had no investment in anything in this world”? The only thing you could have investment in, in this world, are the definitions that you have made up about it which have caused you to be quote “like God” unquote, and given you in your independence a credibility that you don’t really have. If you had no investment in any of the definitions you applied to this world, what? You would be free of your bondage to those definitions. And that would free you up from the definition you have of yourself. And what? A miracle could happen. A sudden shift of perception could happen in you.

RAJ READING: If you had no investment in anything in this world, you could teach the poor where their treasure IS.

RAJ: Why? Because you would have found where your treasure was.

RAJ READING: The poor are merely those who have invested wrongly, and they are poor indeed!

RAJ: They're without a Birthright, aren't they? Every one of you is experiencing existing minus your Birthright. Why? Because you do not believe you are the direct expression of God. You do not believe that you have a Source outside of yourself, I'll put that way, a Source other than your own best ideas about yourself or a source that is purely physical and organismic, like coming from a sperm and an egg. And not knowing who your Father is, not knowing what your Source is, you don't know what your Birthright is and you don't know What You Are. And that is, indeed, poor. Without your Birthright, you are nothing.

RAJ READING: The poor are merely those who have invested wrongly, and they are poor indeed!

RAJ: The orphans, [said in a pitying voice] new orphans are merely those who have no Father and are without a Birthright.

Okay.

RAJ READING: Because they are in need it is given you to help them, since YOU are among them.

RAJ: Now it is given you to help them as you are abandoning your devotion to your orphanhood and are letting God back in, and are choosing to join with the Holy Spirit and to abandon your absolute, but imaginary, authority over your life and over your world. Because those who confront you who don't know of their Birthright are in need, it is given you to help them since you are among them. You see, don't leave it up to God. Don't leave it up to the Holy Spirit. Don't leave it up to somebody else. You're here. You're here to make the gift of the clarity you are letting in. You're here to be what you will be when you aren't finding value in offense.

RAJ READING: Consider how perfectly your lesson would be learned if you were unwilling to SHARE their poverty.

RAJ: Let me give you an example. Every time Paul sits down at a Gathering, he turns to me. He doesn't turn to you. He doesn't look to you to learn of you or of life. He turns to me. He doesn't turn to himself. He abandons this one he thinks he is; this one with all the definitions that he uses when he's not joined, when he thinks he's alone, and when he thinks he's in that marvelous egotistical position of authority. You see? And so he turns to me, and with me he is present with you. When any of you asks a question, he does not assume that he is supposed to answer it. He doesn't assume that you're asking him. And he listens to me respond.

Now when you turn to your Right Mind and ask, you get the same answers. And you're not making them up. You see? And you're more interested, you're more devoted to the unity of awareness that you experience when you are listening for the Truth from your Right Mind. And if you can't quite make that come together and happen, then go ahead and say that you are listening to the Holy Spirit, because you do not place any limits conceptually on the Holy Spirit.

No matter what words any of you use to ask your questions, your words express your ignorance. They do not express clarity, no matter how clearly you express them, no matter how intelligently you put together the meaning you're trying to convey so that you might get out of a problem. So it would be foolish for Paul to listen to you and the words you are saying in order to grasp what you're trying to mean. But your meaning is there. You are expressing words about a distress you're having. But at the bottom line what you're saying is, "Here is the way it is looking to me, and I do not know how to look at it or see it differently. Can you help me see it differently?" You don't say that because you want the answer to specifically address the problem "as you see it" and what the solution will have to be in order to be a solution. And so you're still caught in the tininess of your mindset. You see?

So, is Paul going to shift his devotion, his attention, to what you're saying, and his best interpretation of what you're meaning? Is he going to honor you enough to be so present with you that he doesn't bother to join with me? No. That's not the way Paul works. The devotion has to remain with That which is Singular, That which is Awake, That which knows the Truth, in order to speak/communicate/extend the awareness that undoes the confusion that "you asking the question" have expressed, so that you are no longer confused.

Now let's say that Paul has done a weekend workshop, been active for two full days participating in the "question and answer" process that goes on. And at the end of the second day, it's over, but early the next morning someone who is attending the Gathering is still there and comes up and says, "Can I just ask one more question? I have a really, really important question." And Paul says in his mind, "God, give a break. I mean, don't you have any respect for me? Don't you think I deserve any time for myself?" You see? Uh, oh. Offense! Offense! Offense!

Paul obviously is not joined any longer. Paul is there in his own full-blown right. And what is he engaged in? Self-protection. "Oh, don't get too close and don't ask too much of me. Give me a break. Don't ask for me to be fully conscious. Don't ask for me to be in that place where [small laugh] everything flows and everything is wonderful, and transformation occurs and healing occurs. Don't ask me to be there. Stand back, you who are different from me but weren't different from me yesterday."

You see? When he does that or when you do it with each other, you're both coming from the place of poverty. You're both coming from the place where you're minus your Birthright. And you confirm your poverty to each other.

RAJ READING: Consider...

RAJ: Again...

RAJ READING: Consider how perfectly your lesson would be learned if you were unwilling to SHARE their poverty.

RAJ: And by sharing it, confirm it.

Consider how perfectly your lesson would be learned if you were willing to find no occasion to not fulfill your function, which is to recognize God there, and not suffer from seeing less than God there.

See, again...

RAJ READING: Consider how perfectly...

RAJ: Whose lesson?

RAJ READING: ...your lesson...

RAJ: We're talking about someone else seeming to have a problem and needing help and asking for help, expressing their poverty.

But it says:

RAJ READING: Consider how perfectly your lesson...

RAJ: You see, we're still talking about getting your own head on straight.

RAJ READING: Consider how perfectly your lesson would be learned if you were unwilling to SHARE their poverty.

RAJ: In other words, if you were unwilling to abandon your union with the Voice for Truth. How beautifully would your lesson be learned if you found no occasion worthy of shutting your ears to the Voice for Truth, to your Right Mind. That would be a grand lesson because it would mean you would be moving into the Integrity of your Being, the Wholeness of your Being, the Holiness of your Being, and finding no reason to be fascinated with anything less.

RAJ READING: For poverty is lack, and there is but ONE lack...

RAJ: [laughing] It's the absence of your Birthright. That's the only lack there is. And what is your Birthright? It's your inheritance from your Source.

"Oh. But I've spent lifetimes developing my capacity to be my source. And you want me to abandon all of that? You're telling me it's nothing but a bunch of illusions? You want me to abandon that? You're going to have to give me a pretty good reason." Well, the only reason I can give you is your experience of life right now. Is it full of glory? Is it full of peace? Is it full of abundance, wholeness, invulnerability? Or is it far less than that? Now if it being far less than that, is of no concern to you, fine. Okay. But I'll be here once you find it to be less than you want.

RAJ READING: For poverty is lack, and there is but ONE lack since there is but ONE need.

RAJ: What's the one need? It's for the phone to ring, and God to pick up the phone and hear you say, "Hello. Dad? Hi, Dad. I remember You. I know who You are and I know Who I am, and I'm yours. And I know I'm not You, but I know that You are All There Is of me. And I want to be the way things are with You from now on." That's the one need. Annul the divorce. That's the one need.

Now:

RAJ READING: Suppose a brother insists on having you do something you think you do not want to do.

RAJ: "Hi, sweetheart. Give me a hug. I just love you so much."

"Oh, come on. I just sat down to get to work on this thing I haven't attended to for a week because I was taking care of you so much."

RAJ READING: Suppose a brother insists on having you do something you think you do not want to do.

RAJ: "Oh, come on, honey. You can do it later. Just spend ten or fifteen minutes with me."

"Come on. You can't get blood from a turnip. You can't get water from a stone. Let me just do this. I've been waiting and waiting and waiting."

"Oh, come on, honey. Come on. I promise if you spend fifteen or twenty minutes with me, I won't bother you."

RAJ READING: Suppose a brother insists on having you do something you think you do not want to do. The very fact of his insistence should tell you that he believes salvation lies in it.

RAJ: In other words, if there is inflexibility there, it means that there's a strong intent and that in some way salvation or real good will come of it.

Now:

RAJ READING: If you insist on refusing...

RAJ: If you insist on refusing.

RAJ READING: ...and experience a quick response of opposition,...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: Within yourself.

RAJ READING: ...you are believing that YOUR salvation lies in NOT doing it.

RAJ: And you can understand, at that moment you think your salvation lies in getting to do this thing you've been waiting to do all week. And there's more good in that for you to experience than the alternative that's being offered.

RAJ READING: You, then, are making the same mistake that he is, and are making his error real to BOTH of you.

RAJ: Now, what's the error that you're making real? The error that you're making real is that you not in your Right Mind, you not in a joined place, have agendas that are real, and which if they are fulfilled or if they are brought to completion, will constitute fulfillment for you as an independent agent. And so you are by your act confirming your independence, your orphanhood, and also confirming the independence and orphanhood of the one who's inviting you to spend a little time engaging in affection.

RAJ READING: You, then, are making the same mistake that he is, and are making his error real to BOTH of you. Insistence means investment, and what you invest in is ALWAYS related to your notion of salvation. The question is always two-fold; first, WHAT is to be saved, and second, HOW can it be saved?

RAJ: Now again, to simplify things, remember that you only have two apparent ways in which to be; two choices. One is to listen for, to listen to, to join with the Voice for Truth, or to listen to the voice for fear. The answer to "What is to be saved, and how can it be saved?" will be different depending upon which of the two voices you're choosing to listen to.

If you're listening to the voice for fear, what is to be saved is your pride. What is to be saved is your ass. What is to be saved is your face. What is to be saved is your position—the position you have defined for yourself and that you have spent your life trying to get other people to agree to and cooperate with. And how can it be saved? By asserting this so-called private authority with superiority so as to overcome the other's attempt to meet his or her need, and save his or her face, his or her pride, his or her feelings of worthiness.

But if you're listening to the Voice for Truth, what is to be saved? What is to be confirmed? The endless, uninterrupted movement and expression of Love that is not self-seeking, but embraces all forever without hesitation or reservation. What is to be saved is the infinite way things work, the beautiful way things work, that do not fit definitions, but are themselves that which give meaning to God; that which embody meanings that God is expressing and being; that which discloses, uncovers and illuminates the glory of what God is, what Good is.

So the answers are different depending upon the voice you are choosing to listen to.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Whenever you become angry with a brother,...

RAJ: Oh, wait a minute. Who is this you? Well, if the word "angry" is in there, it is obviously the independent one, the so-called independent one; the one who authorizes things with glee.

RAJ READING: Whenever you become angry with a brother, for WHATEVER reason, you are believing that the EGO is to be saved,...

RAJ: And specifically your ego.

RAJ READING: ...and to be saved by ATTACK.

RAJ: In other words, by means of offense. Wow.

RAJ READING: If HE...

RAJ: Your brother.

RAJ READING: ...attacks you are agreeing with this belief, and if YOU attack you are reinforcing it.

RAJ: And you're both caught in the illusion and you're both confirming a lie. You're both confirming a dream. And you're both stuck in it, even though "you" are not really in it at all, because you haven't stopped being the Christ. You've just forgotten that you are the Christ.

RAJ READING: REMEMBER THAT THOSE WHO ATTACK ARE POOR.

RAJ: In other words, minus their Birthright, minus the conscious awareness of who and what they are because of what their Source, their Father is.

RAJ READING: Their poverty asks for gifts, NOT for further impoverishment.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "not further" instead of "not for further."]

RAJ: Their poverty asks for you not to come from the same place they're coming from which will confirm their poorness, their poverty. That's why you're taught, you're told, that you're faced with one of two things—Love, or the call for love—so that you might remember that poor behavior is not something for you to personally react to, but for you to be able to, from a joined place, respond with love for. You're to remember that the poor behavior is not an attempt to control private, personal, authoritative, little you, or to hurt your feelings, but it is a call for release from the misunderstanding, the misperceptions that are causing the poor behavior to be expressed.

RAJ READING: Their poverty asks for gifts,...

RAJ: That which will replace the poverty, that which will uncover the fact that the poverty is illegitimate; which they can't see at the moment and which they're being crushed by.

RAJ READING: Their poverty asks for gifts, NOT for further impoverishment. You who could help them are surely acting destructively if you accept their poverty as YOURS.

RAJ: Like the Monday morning after a weekend Gathering, somebody walks up and asks for one extra question of me through Paul. They're expressing a need. They are sharing their experience of poverty. And if Paul says, "I'm sorry, but I deserve some time off," he's responding from his poverty, and both are impoverished more.

You are surely...

RAJ READING: You who could help them are surely acting destructively if you accept their poverty as YOURS. If you had not invested as THEY had, it would never occur to you to overlook their need.

RAJ: Well, the ego's retort is, "What do you mean, overlook their need? What about me overlooking my need? I need some rest from being on the ball. I need some rest from being clear. I need some time to do things I want to do, like sleep in, not be at the beck and call of everything."

Why, friends, the whole Universe, all of Creation calls to you at this moment to see it for what it is. And from your tininess, you think, "Oh. Overwhelming. Universal demands are being made upon me." Yes, to come back into your Right Mind and enjoy the effortless, natural experience of being able to recognize God in everything, and rejoice in the experience, without reservation, without limitation, as your daily conscious experience.

Now we come to a sentence that is greatly misinterpreted.

RAJ READING: Recognize WHAT DOES NOT MATTER, and if your brothers ask you for something “outrageous,” do it BECAUSE it does not matter.

RAJ: And I'll tell you that very often that sentence is taken and responded with, “Well, of course, the whole world is an illusion. If my Brother asks me to do something outrageous, like sit in the car outside the Seven Eleven with the engine running while he goes in and picks up a little extra cash. Hey, of course, it's outrageous but, hey, the whole world is an illusion anyway. It doesn't matter.”

I'm going to come back to our illustration of when Paul is as he is right now with you, but being with you from his union with me. When you say something like, “Sit in the car outside the Seven Eleven while I pick up a little extra cash,” which is another way of saying, “Help me find a way to screw my fellowman out of a few extra dollars by striking a really good deal, a really good business deal here, Raj,” [small laugh] Paul has to make a distinction between what matters and what doesn't matter.

And what doesn't matter is what you're saying. What doesn't matter is how you're saying it. What doesn't matter is whether what you're saying makes any sense or not. What matters is that you're feeling a need and you need to be free of it, and for him not to be fazed by the experience of need that you're talking about, and to stay with me where the answer is—whatever it might be, however unexpected it might be to you, however far from the subject “the answer that relieves” might seem to be from the question that was asked. You see?

So Paul has to recognize what does not matter. And if you ask for something outrageous, do it. Do what? Respond from the place of Wholeness, respond from the union with me, respond from the union with the Holy Spirit, because that's what does matter, because what's happening is not what appears to be happening. What's happening is a call for love.

It seems to say, “Please recognize the seriousness and the reality of my dilemma. And please give me the answer within the context of my dilemma and within the context of the mutually-agreed definitions about how things work in this particular arena of activity that I'm engaged in.” In other words, “Answer my question from within the box I'm in.”

That question doesn't matter. If Paul tries to make it matter, he will not be able to hear me, and he will not be able to hear the answer that negates the question by replacing it with what works, by replacing it with the way things are, in which the experience of need is not real and doesn't actually exist, so that a shift of perception can occur. And "you who are asking the question" find yourself free of the dilemma because you have clarity from Wholeness.

RAJ READING: Recognize WHAT DOES NOT MATTER, and if your brothers ask you for something "outrageous," do it BECAUSE it does not matter. Refuse, and your opposition establishes that it DOES matter to you.

RAJ: Now who would refuse? Not someone joined. The one who would refuse is one who is likewise caught up in his or her own sense of independence and authority, and thereby, necessarily a need for self-protection.

RAJ READING: Refuse, and your opposition establishes that it DOES matter to you.

RAJ: In other words, that "what doesn't matter" does matter to you.

The moment Paul begins to feel empathy for "the person" asking the question, "the person" experiencing the dilemma, he loses the connection with me and immediately feels his own personal incapacity to respond, and as a result, goes into a state of self-protection. And usually the state of self-protection involves a string of judgments that can explain just exactly to the person with the problem why they're having the problem. But this solves nothing. It's not an answer. It's a way of dealing with the situation so as to bring the interaction to an end swiftly, so that the discomfort of being confronted with an inability to have the answer can come to an end, and Paul, or you, or anyone else, can get on with something a little more pleasant than the close-up awareness of an incapacity to be the answer all by yourself. And thus, Paul or you, and whoever else is involved, are further impoverished, because a declaration, an insistence has been expressed that seals the problem, solidifies it more solidly.

RAJ READING: It is only YOU, therefore, who have made the request outrageous,...

RAJ: You see? The fellow who's been being loving all week and is finally getting to the thing he's been looking forward to doing for himself all week, finds his partner's request for a little loving attention and for him to be the recipient of affection, he finds that to be outrageous. Outrageous. Offensive.

RAJ READING: It is only YOU, therefore, who have made the request outrageous,...

RAJ: You see? But not the Divine One that you are. The one listening to the voice for fear—the ego—and who is engaged in selfishness.

RAJ READING: It is only YOU, therefore, who have made the request outrageous, for nothing can BE asked of you,...

RAJ: What does that mean? You might understand it better, because I know you can see that Paul does not think anything is being asked “of him” by virtue of your being here eager to hear. But if things go normally, ten minutes after this meeting is over, if you come to ask Paul a question, he will think you’re asking it of him, and he may or may not be happy about answering it. But nothing can be asked of him, even though all of you find yourself appearing to be “asked of.” But it will only look that way and be experienced that way by you if you are not joined, if you’re not connecting with your Birthright.

Again.

RAJ READING: It is only YOU, therefore, who have made the request outrageous, for nothing can BE asked of you, and every request of a brother is for YOU.

RAJ: I just told you a moment ago that everything in Creation looks to you for the recognition of God in it. All your Brother can be is present “for” you, whether he’s whining or whether he’s laughing with joy. Because what’s really there is part of Creation inviting you to see what it really is—to find God there—which you have to make a choice to see. And you make the choice to see it by choosing which teacher, which voice, you’re listening to. “Holy Spirit, what is really happening here? What is God’s Truth here? What is God being here?”

Again.

RAJ READING: It is only YOU, therefore, who have made the request...

RAJ: Any request.

RAJ READING: ...outrageous, for nothing can BE asked of you, and every request of a brother is for YOU.

RAJ: It’s on your behalf. It’s asking you to reflect back what they aren’t able to see yet that is causing them to feel lack.

Have you ever heard anyone who says, “Well, I know this is exactly the way things are,” or who speaks in declarative sentences, who later you find out was using that form of speech as a question—which had never occurred to you was a question until perhaps someone else says, “Well, you know, this is the way I have experienced what you’re talking about, and it’s a little bit different from what you’re saying,” and after this different view has been expressed, the person who had made this declarative pronouncement says, “I really appreciate that because it never occurred to me to look at it that way before. Thank you.” You had come to the conclusion that the declaration was a final pronouncement, a firm position. And it wasn't. It was a way of opening up a conversation that lacked any invitation to it because it was made as a statement, as a declaration. You see?

Again.

RAJ READING: It is only YOU, therefore, who have made the request outrageous, for nothing can BE asked of you, and every request of a brother is for YOU. Why would you insist in DENYING him? For to do so is to deny yourself and impoverish both.

RAJ: Now I've gone over that so many times, it's got to be clear to you.

RAJ READING: HE...

RAJ: Here it is.

RAJ READING: HE is asking for salvation, as YOU are.

RAJ: "Well, it sure didn't sound like he was asking for salvation to me. Sounded to me like he was making an absolute pronouncement of the immovability of a problem he was in that there was no way out of." No. Gotta use the art of contrary thinking. It's either love or a call for love.

RAJ READING: HE is asking for salvation, as YOU are. Poverty is of the ego,...

RAJ: Something which doesn't even exist, and none of you should be laboring under the domination of.

RAJ READING: Poverty is of the ego, and NEVER of God.

RAJ: In other words, poverty is of the voice for fear, and never of the Voice for Truth.

RAJ READING: No "outrageous" requests can be made of one who recognizes what is valuable and wants to accept nothing else.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "request" because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as "requests" as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: Now there are times in Gatherings when people speak to me in a challenging or obtuse way, and Paul may cringe a little bit and have to take a moment to once again join with me, because that's the only thing that matters; not the manner in which the question was asked; not the challenging words that were used in the way the question was asked. That doesn't matter. And he takes the time to get back to what matters, and then that which clarifies comes forth. He recognizes what is valuable and wants to accept nothing else.

RAJ READING: Salvation...

RAJ: Why are we talking about salvation? Because your Brother is asking for salvation, no matter what he says or how he behaves, just as you are.

RAJ READING: Salvation is for the mind, and it is attained through...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...peace.

RAJ: The ego is incapable of being at peace or of experiencing peace. The only peace it can ever seem to arrive at is drug-induced—or ultimately unconsciousness—or ultra-ultimately death.

RAJ READING: Salvation is for the mind, and it is attained through peace. This is the ONLY thing that can be saved...

RAJ: See, we had up at the top of the page here:

RAJ READING: The question is always two-fold; first, WHAT is to be saved, and second, HOW can it be saved?

[Returning to original place and continuing forward.]

RAJ READING: Salvation is for the mind, and it is attained through peace. This is the ONLY thing that can be saved and the ONLY way to save it. Any response OTHER than love arises from a confusion about the “what” and the “how” of salvation, and this is the ONLY answer. Never lose sight of this,...

RAJ: You see? Still talking about getting your own head on straight.

You!

RAJ READING: Never lose sight of this, and never allow yourself to believe, even for an instant, that there IS another answer.

RAJ: Well, you already do believe there is another answer, but you've got to start disbelieving it. And the other answer you think there is, is the one you can come with all by yourself. And sometimes the answer is to shut your Brother up and be relieved of the problem, so that you can have some peace to do some irrelevant thing you want to do. Irrelevant because it's private; it's exclusive; it doesn't embrace; it doesn't involve.

RAJ READING: Never lose sight of this, and never allow yourself to believe, even for an instant, that there IS another answer.

RAJ: And so when I've said, during the week, watch for the times when you are offended, it's to help you see that here is an instant—where offense is not an appropriate "other answer"—to be enjoined and to be in your peace.

RAJ READING: For you will surely place yourself among the poor, who do not understand that they dwell in abundance and that salvation is come.

RAJ: You can't teach what you haven't learned. You can't grace your Brother with help that you haven't incorporated. And I promise you that every bit of work you do, so to speak, every bit of diligence you bring to your week of watching the use to which you're putting your mind so that it isn't willy-nilly running in consonance with the voice for fear, will bring you into better alignment with your Real Nature and your Real Mind and your Real Being. And as you do that, you lessen the density of the mutual agreement, you lessen the density of the dream, and it does help your Brother.

But for now, helping your Brother starts with you. And it starts with you doing that which spontaneously precipitates sudden shifts of perception that change you forever.

Another "meat and potatoes" evening.

I have enjoyed being with you. And I look forward to being with you all next week. Have an unoffended week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet. Well, as I said last week, we’re sort of in a “meat and potatoes” section—takes a little more effort to digest. And so we’re not going to move through this rapidly, and we will do a little bit of review.

It is helpful not to read this like a two-dimensional creature which can only move backward and forward on a line. Don’t read it with such focused attention that you’re only letting the sentence you’re reading register with you. As a three-dimensional creature, you have the capacity to stand back and get an overview. And so from time to time, it’s helpful to take a look at what chapter you’re reading in—what’s the subject of the chapter?—because it will help you put into context the sentence you’re reading at the moment.

Now in the paragraph before the one I said we would start with, we have this difficult sentence that people have trouble with, and which I spent some time talking about last week. It says:

RAJ READING: Recognize WHAT DOES NOT MATTER, and if your brothers ask you for something “outrageous,” do it BECAUSE it does not matter.

RAJ: What’s confusing is, what is the “it” referring to? And so I’m going back to in the Sparkly Book, page 258, the first full paragraph.

And I want to remind you that the chapter we’re in is called, “GOD’S PLAN FOR SALVATION.” That’s what everything we’re reading about is relevant to. It says here:

RAJ READING: How simple, then, is God's plan for salvation. There is but ONE response to reality, for reality evokes no conflict at all. There is but ONE Teacher of reality, Who understands what it...

RAJ: Reality.

RAJ READING: ...IS. He does not change His Mind about reality because REALITY does not change.

RAJ: Now mind you, this "ONE Teacher of reality" is the Holy Spirit. Again, and I cannot say this too often and I will repeat it over and over, that "ONE Teacher" is the Holy Spirit, and the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind; you in your innate, fundamental clarity.

Continuing

RAJ READING: Although YOUR...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...interpretations of reality are meaningless in your divided state, His remain consistently true. He GIVES them to you because they are FOR you.

RAJ: In other words, it's your Birthright to not only include them, but to be fully conscious of them.

Now:

RAJ READING: Do not attempt to "help" a brother in YOUR way, for you...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: All by yourself.

RAJ READING: ...cannot help yourselves. But hear his call...

RAJ: Your Brother's call.

RAJ READING: ...for the help of God, and you will recognize your OWN need for the Father.

RAJ: Now your Brother and your world are always presenting to you the opportunity to recognize God there. That's the only thing that's ever being presented to you.

If the Brother, perhaps like yourself, is unconscious of his Birthright, is unconscious of his Source, and therefore unaware of who and what he truly is, behaves in an obtuse way, or in a way that calls for confirmation of what he ignorantly believes, it is still a call for you to recognize God there. It's still a call for Love.

There is never an occasion for you to function in any other way than finding God in the middle of what is happening; to find God to be the center and circumference of what is happening—no matter what mumbo-jumbo is coming out of your Brother's mouth. That's the only thing you're being called upon to do. And interestingly enough, that's your divine function; that's your Birthright to be able to do. That's what you should find yourself doing all the time, and that is what you will find yourself doing all the time as you forget less and less that that's your function.

Again.

RAJ READING: Do not attempt to “help” a brother in YOUR way, for you cannot help yourselves. But hear his call for the help of God, and you will recognize your OWN need for the Father.

RAJ: When you recognize your own need for the Father, you will turn to the Father, instead of your opinions, your best judgments; all the definitions you have already created for everything you're experiencing. And so you will turn to the Father, instead of your memory and your beliefs. That's what's being called for.

Now let's go back to page 263.

RAJ READING: Recognize WHAT DOES NOT MATTER, and if your brothers ask you for something “outrageous,” do it BECAUSE it does not matter.

RAJ: If the only thing you're being called upon to do is to be willing to recognize God right there where something ungodlike seems to be presenting itself, then you have to recognize that the mumbo-jumbo that's coming out of your Brother's mouth doesn't matter. The mumbo-jumbo that's comes out of your Brother's mouth is inevitably going to be an invitation to you “as an independent authority” to respond to him from the same place of ignorance of your Birthright that he is suffering from. That's what's “outrageous.” And that's what doesn't matter. That is what doesn't mean anything at all. And so you must recognize that the mumbo-jumbo doesn't matter, and you must not take the bait and come from your best limited place in order to respond.

Now if when your Brother comes on to you with something, with an “outrageous” request to join him in the belief of “lack” of any kind, he usually will do it in a manipulative and coersive way, and usually in a way that calls your integrity into question. He will not be treating you well, at least not according to the agreed-upon definitions of politeness and manners. And if you take offense at his manner of approaching you, you are then likely to find that the idea that what is happening is a “call for love” is outrageous. “How can I respond to this as a call for love? How on earth can I possibly justify being loving, being in my peace, in the face of this attack?” You see?

And then you must realize that the mumbo-jumbo going on in your mind doesn't matter, because that is not your function. And you must make the choice to turn to the Altar, to turn to the Holy Spirit, to turn to the place of excellence in you in which your inheritance, your God-derived Birthright is waiting for you to embrace, so that it may find expression through you because “you are letting it through you” is your ultimate divine function, and you must do that. And you do that because what your Brother is asking for which is different from that, doesn't matter. That isn't what matters.

[Editor's Note: Backing up to the previous paragraph.]

Your Brother's...

RAJ READING: ...poverty asks for gifts, NOT for further impoverishment.

RAJ: Not for confirmation of his bad situation. His poverty asks for that which will uncover his wholeness. You see? It asks for gifts.

RAJ READING: You who could help them are surely acting destructively if you accept their poverty as YOURS. If you had not invested as THEY had, it would never occur to you to overlook their need.

RAJ: You see, something is going on there. There is an experience of need.

What is the need for? The need is for clarity, for understanding, for the Truth that replaces the belief that he or she is suffering from, that causes the belief to become so nonsensical and meaningless that it is immediately dropped in favor for what is meaningful.

RAJ READING: Recognize WHAT DOES NOT MATTER,...

RAJ: What does not matter is how he's perceiving himself at the moment. And what does not matter is how “you unjoined” might be perceiving him as well.

RAJ READING: Recognize WHAT DOES NOT MATTER,...

RAJ: And do what does.

[Editor's Note: Again repeating part of a sentence from way back.]

RAJ READING: ...hear his call for the help of God, and you will recognize your OWN need for the Father.

RAJ: And recognizing it, you will lean into the Father. And what will result will be the expression of the answer that heals. Okay.

Don't be tempted by niggling thoughts that say, "Well, why was that written in such an unclear way when it could have been said clearly?" And don't let niggling thoughts come in that say, "Oh, well, because it's difficult to understand, maybe there is more to understand." No. I have expressed it with perfect clarity, what the need is. And you will have to agree with me that it is consistent with everything else we've been reading as we have been going through the Course. So be at rest with the Truth. Be at rest with the answer. Embrace it. And when the temptation comes to practice doubt or to still remain somewhat ill at ease, dismiss it! [slight pause] Dismiss it! And don't entertain it further.

I'm going to read the whole paragraph that we ended with last week.

RAJ READING: Recognize WHAT DOES NOT MATTER, and if your brothers ask you for something "outrageous," do it BECAUSE it does not matter. Refuse, and your opposition establishes that it DOES matter to you. It is only YOU, therefore, who have made the request outrageous, for nothing can BE asked of you,...

RAJ: In all your little tininess.

RAJ READING: ...and every request of a brother is for YOU.

RAJ: Just as every aspect of the Universe elicits from you the recognition of God in it. It is for you. It is for you coming back into your Right Mind where you're not seeing your interposed imaginations, instead of Reality, instead of Creation as it is.

RAJ READING: Why would you insist in DENYING him? For to do so is to deny yourself and impoverish both. HE is asking for...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...salvation...

RAJ: Now that may not be what's coming out of his mouth. What's coming out of his mouth is most likely to be a request for you to see the reality of his dilemma and to join him in confirming its reality. That's what will come out of his mouth. But...

RAJ READING: HE is asking for salvation, as YOU are. Poverty is of the ego, and NEVER of God. No "outrageous" requests can be made of one who recognizes what is valuable and wants to accept nothing else.

RAJ: Now if you don't want to accept as valuable the fact that it's your Birthright to be in a constant state of recognizing and acknowledging God in everything—meaning actually having the experience of God in everything—then it means that you want to accept something else. Don't! Stop wanting to accept something else, and abandon it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Salvation is for the mind, and it is attained through peace. This is the ONLY thing that can be saved and the ONLY way to save it.

RAJ: In other words, peace is the only thing that can be saved. And the decision for peace, and the letting of yourself into it, is the only way it can be saved. It's the only way that you can find that it has been ever-present with you and is the foundation of your Being—or expressed more perfectly, the foundation of Being, of Existing.

RAJ READING: Any response OTHER than love arises from a confusion about the “what” and the “how” of salvation,...

RAJ: You see? The only appropriate response is love—no matter what is presented to you, no matter how your Brother is behaving. Love is the willingness to recognize that which is Real, with a capital “R”, in each and every thing. Not only is it the willingness to recognize it, it's the recognition of it. And the recognition of it always spontaneously occurs when nothing else is more important to you.

RAJ READING: Any response OTHER than love arises from a confusion about the “what” and the “how” of salvation, and this is the ONLY answer.

RAJ: You see how simple it is. It's easy to be devoted to that. It really is easy to be devoted to wanting to see the evidence of Love and wanting to be the evidence of Love. You just have to dare to abandon all other goals, all other intents, and just do the one thing, and to do it as consistently as you can through the day.

RAJ READING: Never...

RAJ: Strong word.

RAJ READING: Never lose sight of this,...

RAJ: In other words, don't lose track of singularity of purpose.

RAJ READING: Never lose sight of this, and never allow yourself to believe, even for an instant, that there IS another answer.

RAJ: You see? Your Brother approaches you with a sense of lack, and mostly likely with some sort of grievance because he can't help but take offense at life when he's unconscious of his Birthright and doesn't recognize himself in each and every thing. And when he approaches you this way, out of habit you think there is another answer than the only answer there is. You think the answer is defense, and so you employ it. And you've got to begin to be disciplined enough to recognize when you're doing it so that you can stop, realize that there is another way to look at this, and then ask for the experience of how to look at it otherwise. And ask it of One who knows, not of one who doesn't. Ask of the Holy Spirit. Ask of the Father.

RAJ READING: Never lose sight of this, and never allow yourself to believe, even for an instant, that there IS another answer. For you will surely place yourself among the poor, who do not understand that they dwell in abundance and that salvation is come.

RAJ: Now, as usual, the ego, the private sense of self that has figured out everything to the best of its ability without having any connection to what everything really is, and who, which because it has separated itself from the Father, sees itself in a state of lack, turns all of the experiences of lack into something positive—something that, if dealt with, will refine your soul; something that, if dealt with, will strengthen you; something which, if dealt with successfully, will move you closer to the ultimate of what “you on your own” can be. And it has done this with lack, with poverty.

And it has suggested that poverty is valuable. It has suggested, in fact, that one who devotes his life to poverty, can become so valuable that he is elevated to sainthood. Many of the great ones in your past were those who had taken a “vow of poverty.” And so as a result of this belief, it becomes difficult for you to justify experiencing abundance, because you have few people in recent history who were abundant who were significant in elevating the human condition, in elevating human thought; in getting past the significant beliefs that actually block each of you from reconnecting with your Father.

Now poverty and abundance are almost always associated with dollars and cents. But abundance should be equated with wholeness—not accumulations of lots—but wholeness itself from which nothing is excluded. Poverty, on the other hand, should be equated with incompleteness, partialness; not being able to be in your Right Mind wholly aware of everything in all of its infiniteness, in all of its unlimitedness. Poverty—in other words, ignorance—is not your Birthright.

Now those who took “vows of poverty” made a decision as to what they were going to serve—God, as it's put, or mammon—the dollar, the wallet, the bank account, the CD's [certificates of deposit], the stocks and bonds, and most of all, position that all the accumulation of these things seem to substantiate. Those who took a “vow of poverty” decided not to serve that. They decided to serve a vision of God that they experienced within themselves. They devoted themselves to service, not accumulation; giving, not getting. And they were willing to do that and let the chips fall where they may, rather than trying to behave in such a way to get the chips to fall in a certain order, so as to give them a sense of security, because money means power, money means ability to control, money means the ability to govern your circumstances. You see? A “vow of poverty” has nothing to do with lacking what is needed. It has nothing to do with having nothing. It has to do with being devoted to something other than accumulating things so as to substantiate one’s own substance, position, authority and power.

Those who cannot embrace their Brothers with a desire what?—to be the evidence of Love, on behalf of his Brother or Sister—blocks the flow of the movement of All That God Is that would move through him in extension to everything. And blocking that flow constitutes an impoverishment. In doing it, it causes each one of you to forget Who You Are; to suffer from amnesia. That’s “the poverty” that we’re talking about. It has nothing to do with dollars and cents, or clean fabric to wrap around your body, or beautiful fabric to cover your body with, or a comfortable bed to sleep in, and so on.

So, understand that “the poverty” that’s being talked about here is the poverty of your ignorance of understanding Who You Are; the poverty that causes you not to reach for, or be open to, or desire the influx of a clearer understanding of What You Divinely Are. The poverty is one that disallows you from recognizing or even conceiving the possibility of the fact that you are the Christ, that you are the immaculate expression of God right now, and you have never been anything else. That is “poverty.” Do not take a vow of that kind of poverty! But do understand that when you value the ego, you are taking a vow of that kind of poverty.

Be black and white enough, be clear enough to recognize that so that you can more easily say, “Wow. That’s not what I want to do,” so that a change of behavior can occur. So that what? All that we’re reading about ceases to be interesting and stimulating ideas about the Truth About You, and becomes something that you allow to transform into actual experience, so that your mental and physical behavior changes.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: To identify with the ego is to attack yourself...

RAJ: Why is that? Well, we just said it. Because when you’re devoted to the ego, you are devoted to your ignorance—mental and experiential ignorance of the Truth.

RAJ READING: To identify with the ego is to attack yourself and MAKE yourself poor. That is why everyone who identifies with the ego feels deprived.

RAJ: If you're going through the day feeling deprived of whatever—freedom, health, peace—know that it's because of one reason only: you have identified with the ego. You haven't identified with the Truth of You. You haven't identified with the place of excellence in you that is you in your fullness.

RAJ READING: What...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...he EXPERIENCES then is depression or anger, but what he DID is to exchange his self-love for self-hate, making him AFRAID of himself. He does NOT realize this.

RAJ: You do not realize this.

RAJ READING: Even if he is fully aware of anxiety he does not perceive its source as his own...

RAJ: What? Ego? No.

RAJ READING: ...he does not perceive its source as his own EGO IDENTIFICATION,...

RAJ: It exists because you have become devoted to the ego. You have become the worshipper of the ego. It's because you have chosen poorly. And on top of it, you've chosen for something that's purely imaginary.

RAJ READING: Even if he is fully aware of anxiety he does not perceive its source as his own EGO IDENTIFICATION, and he ALWAYS tries to handle it by making some sort of insane "arrangement" with the world.

RAJ: What does that mean? He tries to manipulate his world. He tries to get his world to behave in a way that will provide him with a sense of security and safety that he lacks, that will allow him to release the anxiety; not realizing that the only thing that will relieve him of the anxiety is to switch his allegiance from the ego to that which is nothing more than his Right Mind; to switch his allegiance from his much-revered independence to a "state of dependence"—immutable union with the Father, with his Source.

RAJ READING: He always perceives this world...

RAJ: That he's going to make insane "arrangements" with, through manipulation.

RAJ READING: ...as OUTSIDE himself, for this is crucial to his adjustment.

RAJ: His adjustment to what? His adjustment to his insanity. His adjustment to wrong devotion.

RAJ READING: He does not realize that he MAKES this world, for there IS no world outside of him.

RAJ: You see, the fact is that as the Christ, your mind is the Mind of God not divided up into bits and pieces, and therefore all that exists is some aspect of the infinitude of your Being. And none of it is “outside” of you. And all that is quote “inside you” is unlimited, infinite, unbounded.

Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: If only the loving thoughts of God’s Son are the world’s reality, the real world MUST be in his mind.

RAJ: Does it say there that, “If only the loving thoughts of God’s Son are the world’s reality, the real world must be an illusion; the real world must not exist at all”? No, it says that, “the real world must be in his mind.” The distinction here is that it is not “out there” in space as you’re experiencing it at the moment. It is a conscious experience going on in your own infinite Mind.

RAJ READING: His insane thoughts, too, must be in his mind,...

RAJ: You see? There just isn’t any “out there” for any of it to be the illusion or the truth.

RAJ READING: His insane thoughts, too, must be in his mind, but an internal conflict of this magnitude he cannot tolerate.

RAJ: You cannot tolerate.

RAJ READING: A split mind IS endangered,...

RAJ: What’s the saying? “A house divided against itself cannot stand.” That which is fragmented lacks integrity, and it must fall. And that’s why so much of your existence is taken up with fixing up that which is falling apart, because you’re trying to hold together something that doesn’t really exist.

RAJ READING: A split mind IS endangered,...

RAJ: Glory hallelujah! And I’m encouraging you to let it go ahead and collapse so that in it’s absence, you will experience what’s left—which is nothing more than your Right Mind, and you “fully conscious” of your eternal Oneness with God, and therefore with the Conscious Awareness of Being that is characteristic of the divine (capital “M”) Mind, in which no illusion is going on at all; in which your experience of your Birthright is not obscured.

RAJ READING: A split mind IS endangered, and the recognition that it encompasses completely opposed thoughts within itself IS intolerable. Therefore the mind projects the split, NOT the reality.

RAJ: The Reality remains untouched, unaffected. Nothing happens to it.

Because it's only the misperception occasioned by fear that is occasioned by your orphanhood [which] constitutes the conflict that's intolerable and that must be projected "out there," so that something "out there" may be blamed, and then turned into an ethic of overcoming so as to gain a sense of your own autonomous worth.

RAJ READING: Everything you perceive as the outside world is merely your attempt to maintain your ego...

RAJ: Your ego? No.

RAJ READING: ...your ego identification, for everyone believes that identification is salvation.

RAJ: Well, if identification, if a self-image isn't your self, isn't your salvation, what is? If identification is not, what is? Identity.

"Identity," for purposes of illustration, is that which preexists any conscious thought you can possibly have. Identity is unalterable, permanent, eternal and unbounded. Identity includes within itself all of Creation, with nothing left outside of itself, and without conflict of any kind.

Again if identification is not salvation, what is? Identity.

RAJ READING: Yet consider what has happened, for thoughts DO have consequences to the thinker.

RAJ: Important. Not... not what's going on "out there" in the world; that isn't what has consequences for you. The thoughts, which you embrace and invest with meaning in your own mind, have consequences. And it works both ways. Consequences aren't negative.

When the thought is illuminated in your mind that God is infinite Love which emanates from you and around you and to you from everything, and you feel loved, there's a consequence. Fear cannot exist in that conscious experience. Vulnerability cannot exist in that conscious experience. The consequence of that idea allowed to be experienced is Heaven; very simply, it is Creation experienced without distortion.

On the other hand, if you wish to have "created ideas" that are pure fantasy—in other words, having no basis in fact—and you wish to make commit to them, devotion to them, there are going to be consequences. Devotion to "that which isn't true" is uncomfortable, because it's you trying to act as though you're out of your Mind. And yet, you can't actually violate your divine Sanity. And so, the Sanity of your Being, which is unalterable, will constantly remind you that your foray into illusion is not natural, is not Real, is not your Birthright, and that you, therefore, cannot be comfortable employing that frame of mind. The discomfort is there to remind you to come back Home into your Sanity.

RAJ READING: You are AT ODDS with the world...

RAJ: This is important.

RAJ READING: ...as you perceive it because you think IT is antagonistic to YOU.

RAJ: Why do you think that? Because you projected it “out there” because it was too hard for you to embrace the full conscious awareness that you were believing, fully believing opposites. You were fully believing the possibility of absolute conflict—which, of course, is an absolute impossibility.

So...

RAJ READING: You are AT ODDS with the world as you perceive it...

RAJ: You say, “This is me. That’s not me. This is me. That flower is not me.” Well, that’s not true. All conscious experiences, all true ideas, are some aspect of the infinitude of your infinite Mind. It is all you. It is all a Singularity. And none of it is antagonistic to you.

RAJ READING: You are AT ODDS with the world as you perceive it...

RAJ: As you have given it definition.

RAJ READING: ...because you think IT is antagonistic to YOU. This is a necessary consequence of what you have done. You have projected outward what IS antagonistic to what is inward, and therefore you would HAVE to perceive it this way. That is why you must realize that your hatred is IN your mind and NOT outside it before you can get rid of it; and why you must get rid of it BEFORE you can perceive the world as it really is.

RAJ: Now in many spiritual or metaphysical teachings, the idea is expressed that you must raise every human condition to the mental level, you must translate it into ideas, in order for the true idea to be able to, let us say, have an effect on the false idea. It still posits the idea that the false idea is something that can be affected by a true idea. That is not the case.

What happens is that, as it’s said, when you bring the darkness to the Light, or you bring the Light to the darkness, the darkness disappears. By taking every manifestation of imperfection and bringing it to the mental level, recognizing that it has to be and can be nothing other than “an idea that is false,” you take it out of the realm of physical cause and effect—you know, a “physical universe out there" that you're in the middle of. You bring it right into the middle of you "as Mind" so that you can look at it as an idea and, we'll say, compare it with the True Idea, so that in the recognition of what the True Idea is, it becomes perfectly logical to you to accept that the false idea will simply dissolve because there's nothing to support it anymore. And you will not have manipulated matter. You will not have manipulated a faulty world "out there." But your world will no longer reflect your mental confusion, because you have become unconfused.

RAJ READING: That is why you must realize that your hatred...

RAJ: Or your ignorance. Your being offended, and the thing you're offended at.

RAJ READING: ...is IN your mind and NOT outside it before you can get rid of it; and why you must get rid of it BEFORE you can perceive the world as it really is.

RAJ: Creation as the Father is being it.

RAJ READING: We once said that God so loved the world that He gave it to His only-begotten Son. God DOES love the real world,...

RAJ: It's the expression, it's the embodiment, it's the rendering visible and tangible the Love, the movement of the Love of God. And that's why in moments of illumination, you have the experience of seeing everything, all that you have called "physical form," in movement radiating/emanating/extending toward you, Love that you actually feel embraced by and one with. And then comes the almost instantaneous inevitable realization that the Love that you're embraced by is the Love that you Are; that it is a Singularity.

RAJ READING: God DOES love the real world, and those who perceive ITS reality cannot SEE the world of death.

RAJ: Not being able to "see the world of death" is the consequence of your having no other conscious intent but to see the evidence of God, to see the evidence of Love, and to be the evidence of Love.

It's a consequence that you don't have to enact. It isn't a penalty that is laid down. In the presence of Love, in the presence of a Singular Mind, in a presence of a Mind that is Sane, conflict doesn't exist. Conflict is nonexistent. In the process of Awakening, it appears to disappear. And so the word "consequence" can be used.

RAJ READING: God DOES love the real world, and those who perceive ITS reality cannot SEE the world of death. For death is NOT of the real world, in which everything is eternal.

RAJ: Conflict is not "of" Singularity. You see?

RAJ READING: God gave you the real world in exchange for the one you made out of your split mind, and which IS the symbol of death. For if you could REALLY separate yourselves...

RAJ: By virtue of divorce.

RAJ READING: ...from the Mind of God you WOULD die, and the world you perceive IS a world of separation.

RAJ: But you can't die, and therefore the world is not truly a world of separation. It is still the Presence of God, the Movement of God called Creation, which embodies the meaning of the words, "Behold!..."—in other words, be alert, be conscious, watch—"...I make all things new."

Now:

RAJ READING: You were willing to accept even death to deny your Father.

RAJ: The temptation to be an independent thinker, an independent authorizer, was pretty tempting, was pretty seductive. And of course, as I've said before, at that point you were feeling your omnipotence. And so you felt no fear around venturing into this experience of autonomy, and so you did it with gusto.
[laughing]

RAJ READING: You were willing to accept even death to deny your Father. Yet He would not have it so, and so it is NOT so. You still could not will against Him,...

RAJ: You couldn't change the way things work.

RAJ READING: You still could not will against Him, and that is why you have no control over the world you made. It is not a world of will because it is governed by the desire to be unlike Him,...

RAJ: God.

You see? You wanted your independence. You got yourself an imaginary divorce. Why? Because you desired to be unlike Him. You desired to be like whatever you wanted to create yourself to be. It was a tantalizing and fun experiment.

RAJ READING: It is not a world of will because it is governed by the desire to be unlike Him, and this desire is NOT will.

RAJ: This is very important. Many people think they can coerce others and coerce life into a different track if they simply desire strongly enough. But desire is not will. You want a perfect example of the truth of this? You say, "I desire to wake up." And you're not awake yet. Why? Because you haven't actually made the decision to do it, and you haven't done it yet. That is an act of will.

RAJ READING: The world you made is therefore totally chaotic, governed by arbitrary and senseless "laws,"...

RAJ: In quotes.

RAJ READING: ...and without meaning of ANY kind. For it was made out of what you do NOT want, projected from your mind because you were afraid of it.

Yet this world is ONLY in the mind of its maker, along with his REAL salvation.

RAJ: It's all Mind. And I've been saying this for a long time, and it will keep coming up until it finally clicks with you that everything you're experiencing is an experience of Mind. It is going on in the state of being Conscious, which is Life. And ideas are perfectly tangible and experienceable to that which formed them.

But that doesn't mean that they exist in time and space as "physical energy," which as you all know is polarized energy. You see, the energy of Spirit which is Singular is caused to be experienced as polarized energy called "matter" when you dissociate yourself from all of Creation, and find it to be different from you, and you different from it, and therefore, not necessarily in harmony with each other, even though Really, with capital "R", all of Creation is necessarily in harmony with every other aspect of Creation.

So your foray into the imagination and the realm of insanity causes the Kingdom of Heaven to appear to you to be polarized, conflicted—all because of one thing. You have devoted your attention poorly. You've devoted it to your independence, instead of devoting it to your real and only function, which is to recognize God in every thing, recognize Good, unconditional, singular, unconflicted Good in every thing.

"Oh, yeah. Unconditional Good and unconditional Love. Wow." That can mean that you are supposed to unconditionally love everything, even illusions. Now you tell me where the intelligence is in that. Because if you're willing to unconditionally love illusions, if you're willing to unconditionally love poverty, you're never going to have the presence of mind to distinguish between what is Real and what is unreal, so that you may set aside that which isn't Real. And this maintains your insanity. This maintains and confirms your ignorance.

And I'm telling you this is not your Birthright. Stop doing it. Start devoting yourself to the Truth. Start devoting yourself to the willingness to at any moment you think of it during the day, looking to find God right there, no matter what you're looking at.

RAJ READING: Yet this world is ONLY in the mind of its maker...

RAJ: The one you've made up.

RAJ READING: ...along with his REAL salvation. Do not believe it is outside of yourself, for only by recognizing WHERE it is will you gain control over it. For you DO have control over your mind, since the mind is the mechanism of decision. If you will recognize that ALL attack which you perceive is in your own mind AND NOWHERE ELSE, you will at last have placed its source, and where it began it must end.

RAJ: But it can't end as long as you are leaving it "out there," believing that it is separate from your Mind. It is out of your reach by virtue of your decision to hold it "out there" and see it as different from you.

RAJ READING: ...where it began it must end. For in this same place also lies...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...salvation.

RAJ: Your peace. Your capacity to recognize Truth. Your Birthright to be experiencing Truth, not as a head trip, but as actual experience.

RAJ READING: The altar of God where Christ abideth is there.

You have defiled the altar but NOT the world.

RAJ: You see, the Kingdom of Heaven, Reality, Creation has not been affected by your getting a few cans of paint and drawing distracting designs all over the Altar so that it isn't recognizable.

RAJ READING: You have defiled the altar but NOT the world. Yet Christ has placed the Atonement on the altar FOR you. Bring your perceptions...

RAJ: Your perceptions.

RAJ READING: ...of the world to this altar, for it is the altar to truth.

RAJ: Every time I suggest to you that you have a moment of intimacy with a flower, a moment of undefended intimacy, a moment of willingness to look at it with innocent eyes, I'm asking you to bring that flower to the Altar.

RAJ READING: Bring your perceptions of the world to this altar, for it is the altar to truth. There you will see your vision changed, and there you will learn to see truly.

RAJ: Meaning without distortion, without the interference of your wanting to see what you've made up right where what really exists is sitting inviting you to recognize what it truly is.

RAJ READING: From this place, where God and His Son dwell in peace and where you are welcome, you will look out in peace and behold the world truly. Yet to find the place, you must relinquish your investment in the world...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...as YOU have projected it, allowing the Holy Spirit to project the real world to you from the altar of God.

RAJ: From your undefiable, unchangeable Sanity that is right there, the place of excellence in the middle of you.

No matter what kind of "outrageous" request your Brother places upon you, recognize what doesn't matter, and do this:

RAJ READING: ...to find the place, you must relinquish your investment in the world as YOU have projected it,...

RAJ: Or the world as your Brother is projecting it to you.

RAJ READING: ...allowing the Holy Spirit to project the real world to you from the altar of God.

RAJ: You see, God's Plan of salvation is your reintegration, so that no part of your mind is split off, so that no false sense of conflict can find any abiding place, and, for lack of better words, so that you might find Existence/Being joyful, peaceful, full of Life. And I'm going to say, stimulating Life, but not stimulation arising out of conflict. That's what we're talking about. And as you can see, we're still talking about getting your own head on straight.

I love you all. And you are getting it. Whether you're getting it fully or not, you are getting it. I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Well, is everyone being offended less and less? If you aren't, I trust that you are beginning to find that taking offense is a reaction that you don't have to employ, and that there is an option to it. Because the more clear you become on that fact, the less you will be governed by the very thing that keeps you from being a truly effective presence in your world; the more you will find yourself able to be a practical, concrete agent for change.

And I encourage you to continue to pay attention, because whenever you find yourself in a state of reaction—which is another way of saying “taking offense”—you may know that you are not functioning on all cylinders. And you want to be functioning on all cylinders; you really do.

I trust that you will more conscientiously make the choice to abandon the knee-jerk response of taking offense, and replace it with the wish to see the Truth right there where “that which is offensive” appears to be going on. This will, in very practical terms, bring each of you back into harmony, Singularity of Mind, with a capability of having singleness of purpose as you pay attention to your conscious experience of friends, neighbors, world, and so on.

It's very simple. And any of you who are watching television are aware that there's a great need for what? Peacemakers. But those who are engaged in reaction can't possibly be peacemakers, because the experience of peace isn't available within them to convey, to extend, to put into the air, in terms that will make the possibility of changing from conflict to peace real. You see, what's needed is not just people thinking peaceful thoughts, keeping their mind peaceful. What's needed is those who are willing to abandon reaction in favor of choosing for their peace. Why? So that they might express it. So that as it infills you, it spills over into your behavior, so that it spills over into your words, so that it spills over into the direction you're taking, and spills over as your ability to encourage others to take a different direction.

Let's go into the book. This section is called:

RAJ READING: Seeking and Finding

RAJ: Sounds good, doesn't it?

RAJ READING: Seeking and Finding

Now:

RAJ READING: The ego is certain that love is dangerous, and this is always its central teaching. It never PUTS it this way; on the contrary, everyone who believes that the ego is salvation...

RAJ: In other words, that their point of view constitutes their salvation.

RAJ READING: ...is intensely engaged in the search for love. Yet the ego, though encouraging the search very actively, makes one proviso; do not FIND it. Its dictates, then, can be summed up simply as: "Seek and do NOT find." This is the one promise the ego holds out to you, and the one promise it will KEEP. For the ego pursues its goal with fanatic insistence, and its reality testing, though severely impaired, is completely consistent.

RAJ: Anybody understand what that meant?

Let's go back.

RAJ READING: The ego is certain that love is dangerous,...

RAJ: Even humanly speaking, you would have to say that if you dare to become involved with another with love, that it causes you to be vulnerable. Right? Love is unprotected. Love is the willingness to simply be genuine. Love is the willingness to express your deepest feelings. Love is your comfort level that allows you to honestly share yourself. But, again, that's interpreted to mean that you are putting yourself in a position of being vulnerable. So even at a human level, the ego is certain that love is dangerous.

What you're not aware of is that...

RAJ READING: ...this is always its central teaching.

RAJ: And why? Well, what is the ego? The ego is the ideas, the theories, the definitions of your world and yourself that you have given yourself after you got a divorce from the Father and said, "I'm just a human being. There may or may not be a God, but I exist." You see? And when you got this divorce from your Father, you abandoned your Birthright. You didn't know that was going to happen, but that is what happened.

So you're now poverty-stricken. You're now an orphan without an inheritance. You are a presence without a source other than what you perceive to be your very own mind. You're private, in other words. And you're separate from everything else. Now you're not experiencing yourself as you truly are.

And, in that frame of mind as we've said before, you have taken this new situation, this new experience of being, with its vulnerability, with its loneliness, with its isolation—even though you're in the middle of an infinite Universe and millions of Brothers and Sisters—and you have taken this sense of life as a challenge to succeed on your own and to build up a sense of yourself, a picture of yourself, a definition of yourself; one that has increasing, ever increasing substance and ever increasing respectability. And you engage in proving to your Brothers and Sisters who are all unlike you, because they're orphans as well, having no Father, having no relationship with you other than by association. And you live life totally alone, totally isolated.

And you have developed theories. You have developed explanations. You have developed what you could call "programs of behavior" and "programs of thought;" some of them you called manners—ways to relate to your Brother that will get the maximum out of the relationship. And you have found that if you're relatively kind, you will be met "in kind" by your Brothers.

And so you have developed a "theory of love." But always what love means, at the bottom line, is whether you're getting stroked by your Brother; what you're getting from your Brother. "Is my Brother confirming my value? Is he confirming my value enough? Am I getting enough nourishment from my Brother? And if not, why not?" And all of this develops into what is called "social behavior." You see, that's not love.

And even though you say, "Well, what really works well is for me to be genuine and honest and open and vulnerable, and for the most part that tends to work well," but what is the reason? The reason is so that your behavior elicits a confirming response from out there. To the degree that you develop this skill well, you're able to credit yourself more and more with being a reasonable and contributive social creature. And so you are building and substantiating your sense of who you are. And of course, this is the number one goal, because in your divorced state, in your orphanhood, you don't experience any self worth independent of the feedback you get from your world—because, of course, your "Birthright box" is empty.

Now, the fact is, and what all of you are at the threshold of making sense out of—I mean I know you know all the words, you know the theory, and you like it—but making sense out of it so that it becomes incorporated into your experience is what you're still on the threshold of.

At the bottom line, love is when you abandon the ethic of being an independent authorizer, an independent agent, and you say, "I dare to acknowledge that I am nothing on my own because I did not create me. And the only way for me to know what I am in the fullness of what I am is to remember my Creator, and is to invite Him back in; to bring God back into the picture." But in order to do that, you've got to make room for more than numero uno. You've got to make room for God as well. And the minute you do that, you are undermining all the work you've been doing to create a self that's creditable and respectable, that has substance and power. That is frightening to the ego.

True Love is frightening to the ego because it undermines everything about the ego. In order to truly let love in and through you as a gift to your world instead of something to get from your world, you are invalidating this ego creature that you have imagined yourself to be, and maybe spent lifetimes building up into something significant.

That is why...

RAJ READING: The ego is certain that love is dangerous...

RAJ: On the packs of cigarettes it says, "Smoking is dangerous to your health." And in the ego's book it says that, "Love is dangerous to the ego's existence"—because it undoes it.

So:

RAJ READING: The ego is certain that love is dangerous, and this is always its central teaching.

RAJ: Why is it "its central teaching"? Because it's what must be reasserted and reestablished consistently in order for the ego not to go up in a puff of smoke.

RAJ READING: It never PUTS it this way; on the contrary, everyone who believes that the ego is salvation...

RAJ: Is the way it goes. Is the way it works. Is what makes life interesting and stimulating and worth living.

RAJ READING: ...is intensely engaged in the search for love. Yet the ego, though encouraging the search very actively, makes one proviso; do not FIND it.

RAJ: Now, it isn't that the ego as an entity, as a consciousness capable of mental movement, decides to give you a proviso. It's just that the ego itself is the absence of Love. You see? It is the incapacity to be permeable enough for the Love of the Father to enter it. And so what the ego is, is the incapacity to find love.

RAJ READING: Its dictates, then, can be summed up simply as: "Seek and do NOT find." This is the one promise the ego holds out to you,...

RAJ: It's the nature and way of being in the realm of the ego, in the realm of orphanhood.

RAJ READING: ...and the one promise it will KEEP.

RAJ: And it will keep it because it's incapable of being any different.

RAJ READING: For the ego pursues its goal with fanatic insistence, and its reality testing, though severely impaired, is completely consistent.

RAJ: Its "reality testing" is a matter of constantly checking "out there" with your world, with the people you work with, with your employers, with your mates, with your children, your neighbors, your friends—you're constantly looking "out there" for confirmation of your worth. That's the only way it can work.

Because heaven help the ego if for a moment you softened and you let yourself be filled with God's Love for you so that you felt it—which occasionally in moments of weakness you do—and then, feeling the Truth of it, couldn't help but extend it to your Brothers and Sisters and employers, and on, and on, so that you were in a gift-giving mode; the experience of which, of the gift flowing through you, demonstrated that you are loved, and that your function is the capacity to be the Presence of Love that gets given away. And in that is your Fulfillment—not fulfillment as a head trip, as nice ideas—but as an experience that causes you, at least for the amount of time you're able to entertain it, to experience your Wholeness that isn't dependent upon anything anyone else does, or doesn't do. Ah, an experience of your invulnerability.

RAJ READING: The search which the ego undertakes is therefore bound to be defeated.

RAJ: It can't succeed because love isn't "out there" for you to obtain from your world—which is exactly where your ignorance directs your attention.

So, this is important.

RAJ READING: The search which the ego undertakes...

RAJ: Which you undertake from the premise of your ignorance of Who You Are.

RAJ READING: ...is therefore bound to be defeated. And since it also teaches that it is YOUR identification,...

RAJ: The ego.

RAJ READING: ...its guidance leads you to a journey which must end in perceived SELF-defeat.

RAJ: Now this looks and sounds very bleak. And it is. But it's not the Truth about you because you're not the ego. The ego is nothing more than current ignorance which you are validating as true. That's all. But it's not the totality of your mind, and it's not the totality of you.

Remember we mentioned last week the difference between "identification" and "Identity." The ego is the definition you have created about yourself, and it's also the definition that other people have managed to finesse you into taking on as the definition of yourself. So the "definition of yourself" is that which identifies you to yourself and others. It's just identification. It's like an identification tag. But the identification tag is on something Real—and that's you. And the proper word for that is "Identity," and Identity is God-derived.

But the ego...

RAJ READING: ...teaches that it is YOUR identification...

RAJ: ...and...

RAJ READING: ...its guidance leads you to a journey which must end in perceived SELF-defeat.

RAJ: "Oh, yeah." How many of you have arrived at a point where you say, "Man, nobody loves me, nobody appreciates me"? And how many of you have experienced it seriously enough that you feel completely broken, broken down, invalidated, inconsequential, and enduring great grief and suffering because of it? That's called "self-defeat." "Nobody is validating me. I must be worthless." You see? The ego has sent you on a journey looking for something Real, but in a place where it doesn't exist.

And you have thought that it was a valid journey to be sent on. And, in fact, even in the depths of your despair, you are not likely to say, "Uncle." You're not likely to say, "Yes, I have been on a futile journey. Yes, I of myself, can do nothing. Yes, I of myself, all by myself, am nothing. And I'm going stop trying to be something, become something, and demonstrate it to everyone else and get their agreement. I'm going to go into the emptiness that I'm feeling. And because even without everyone else's approval or anyone else's approval, I'm still here. And I'm not busy creating myself. In fact I don't have enough gumption or energy to even try to make something of myself. But nevertheless, here I am, talking to myself. Here I am, conscious. Here I am, experiencing being. So evidently I'm not responsible for myself. Something is. I'm going to reach out to It. I'm going to risk the chance that, indeed, this Something that is responsible for my being in this deplorable state that I'm in with no gumption or courage to take on the fight any longer, I'm going to risk the chance that It's there and that It will respond."

Ah, now you're at the first stage of prayer. You're at the threshold of really not giving your total allegiance to your ego. You're at the point of inviting something else in and breaking the isolation. This is exactly why "the ego is certain that love is dangerous."

So, the ego...

RAJ READING: ...teaches that it is YOUR identification...

RAJ: ...and...

RAJ READING: ...its guidance leads you to a journey which must end in perceived SELF-defeat.

RAJ: And you've got to let that defeat be defeat.

What happens though is, generally somewhere from some reserve way, way deep inside of you, you say, "I'm just exhausted. All I need is a little bit of rest and I can take on the challenge again. And I will behave a little bit differently. And maybe I'll be a little bit nicer. And maybe I won't be so overbearing. And I will have a new modus operandi to operate according to. And we'll see if this works this time." And you get right back on the ego bandwagon. And not having given up, not having said "Uncle," not having been willing to step into the emptiness of not being anything all by yourself, you missed the opportunity for a sudden shift of perception to occur in which your opportunity to come back into your Right Mind slips through your fingers.

If you understand that in this process of returning Home to the Father, returning back to your Right Mind, is going to feel like defeat to this independent, self-authorizing entity that you have been creating, creating, creating—if you know that, then you will not take the bait, and you will not get back on the bandwagon, and your sense of failure will not be interpreted by you as your being on the wrong track. You will be able, at least intellectually, to say, "Wow. If it feels this bad, I must really be on the right track. And I'm not going to abandon this grievous feeling of self-defeat and being nothing."

So the ego's...

RAJ READING: ...guidance leads you to a journey which must end in perceived...

RAJ: Perceived.

RAJ READING: ...SELF-defeat. For the ego CANNOT love,...

RAJ: Well, how could it? It can't embrace. It holds everything at arm's length. "Nothing is like me. Everything is different. I am unique. I stand alone in my own right." Then it says, "And it's a God-given right. God gave me the right to stand alone. God created me to be independent and refine my soul." Blah, blah, blah, blah, blah.

But:

RAJ READING: ...the ego CANNOT love, and in its frantic search for love, it is seeking what it is AFRAID to find.

RAJ: Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: The search is inevitable...

RAJ: The search for love is inevitable.

RAJ READING: ...because the ego is part of your mind, and because of its source, the ego is not wholly split off, or it could not be believed at all.

RAJ: Now what does this mean? I've mentioned before that you are all the Christ; you are all at this very moment what God is presencing Himself as, right there where you are. But you're not believing it. You are giving preference to your "much more limited" perception of yourself. And you are valuing that limited perception of yourself because it gives you something to build upon and create a better self out of yourself, all by yourself. That's why you value it: because in the end you will be able to credit yourself for having made yourself better "all by yourself." And that's the ego hit that keeps you hooked.

Nevertheless, in spite of your ignorance of what you are, you are What You Truly Are and Love is the nature of your Being, and so the draw of Love registers with you. It's just that the ego takes that and turns it to its own use, and does it in a way that ensures that you will never become unguarded enough and undefended enough for the Love of the Father to infuse you as it is its nature to do, and inspire you to the point where it spills over and you give love, whether you're getting it or not! You see?

RAJ READING: The search is inevitable because the ego is part of your mind, and because of its source,...

RAJ: Your Mind. The Source of your Mind which is God.

RAJ READING: ...because of its source, the ego is not wholly split off, or it could not be believed at all. For it is YOUR mind that believes in it, and...

RAJ: And.

RAJ READING: ...gives existence to it. Yet it is also your mind that has the power to DENY the ego's existence, and you will surely do so...

RAJ: By the time I get finished talking to ya. No.

RAJ READING: ...and you will surely do so when you realize exactly what the journey is on which the ego sets you.

RAJ: Well, that's why we must talk about this so that you must see the idiocy of what the ego is suggesting to you, so that you may see that it is a faulty trip, that it is a trip that cannot be successfully made, that it is a dead end, and that as part of the dead end you will have to find out that you "on your own" are a failure. Why? Not because you didn't have what it took, but because you don't exist on your own, and so you should not be being, as you go through your day, on that basis. It's a faulty basis that you can't help but suffer failure from.

Now, another way of saying "suffer failure from" is to recognize that what doesn't work, doesn't work. You see? That's what it means: to become aware that what doesn't work, doesn't work. That doesn't attack your integrity. It allows you in your integrity to say, "Wow! Yeah. What doesn't work, doesn't work. And this doesn't work. Therefore, I'm going to stop doing what doesn't work. I'm going to do something else." It empowers you.

RAJ READING: It is surely obvious that no-one wants to find what would UTTERLY defeat him. Being unable to love, the ego would be totally inadequate in love's presence, for it could not respond at all. You would HAVE to abandon the ego's guidance, for it would be quite apparent that it had not taught you the response pattern you NEED. The ego will therefore DISTORT love, and teach you that love calls forth the responses which the ego CAN teach.

RAJ: Like a better psychological approach to finessing your good out of your fellowman. A new set of manners to be taught and to educate the population with so that their spontaneous, habitual behavior will be recognizably more harmonious. You see? All of this [is] nothing more than rules and definitions to abide by that don't cause you to connect with what Love is at all. Just better behavior that keeps the ego in place and keeps everybody still ignorant of What They Divinely Are and of this incredible place every one is in, that is actually Heaven, but which they're missing because they're busy finessing love from their Brothers and Sisters, from memory, from habit, but not from feeling, not from Soul.

So...

RAJ READING: The ego will therefore DISTORT love, and teach you that love calls forth the responses which the ego CAN teach. Follow its teaching, then, and you will SEARCH...

RAJ: Endlessly search.

RAJ READING: ...for love, but will not RECOGNIZE it.

RAJ: The ego cannot recognize love, because in its busyness to find it "out there," it is defended against letting it in "in here"—in your heart, in your Soul, in your Mind.

RAJ READING: DO you realize that the ego must set you on a journey which cannot BUT lead to a sense of futility and depression?

RAJ: If you don't realize it, give it a little bit of your attention this week. Just contemplate this sentence:

RAJ READING: DO you realize that the ego must set you on a journey which cannot BUT lead to a sense of futility and depression?

RAJ: Now, I'm going to tell you [small laugh] that it's already been leading you on a journey which has led you to a sense of futility and depression, and it's called "the human condition." Because the ego, that private little sense of self that you created for yourself by saying, "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way," it has been causing you to be conscious in the middle of Kingdom of Heaven, without being conscious of it as the Kingdom of Heaven. And it has caused you to see yourself as an orphan, when you are the full-fledged, fully-empowered Son of God, direct expression of God, in every moment.

And as long as you insist upon going through your day unconscious of God being in it and unconscious of your true divine nature, you cannot possibly recognize yourself or the Kingdom of Heaven for what they truly are. And so you're already in a sense of futility and depression. You may not believe it fully, but you cannot say that you are in any ongoing way experiencing bliss, invulnerability, peace, harmony, joy. So you're already on this journey, and you want to abandon it.

RAJ READING: To seek and NOT to find is hardly joyous. Is this the promise YOU would keep?

RAJ: Now we've talked in the past about the fact that you only have two choices available to you. You could say one of the choices is to behave as though you are independent, a self-authorized presence having creative power of your own, or, you are the offspring of God, you are the embodiment of what capital "S" Source is being right there as you. Another way of saying it, is that you can listen to the voice for fear, or you can listen to the Voice for Truth. There are only two options: unreality or Reality.

We've just talked about what "seeking and finding" looks like and means from the ego's vantage point; what you will see and hear in your world if you're listening to the voice for fear, which is the voice of the ego. Now we're going to talk about what "seeking and finding" means when you're aligned with the Voice for Truth, which is the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit offers you another promise, and one that will lead to joy. For HIS promise is always, "Seek and you will FIND,"...

RAJ: And I'm going to put another phrase in here for you to abide with: Be, and you will have. Become, and you will lack.

If you're engaged in becoming something more, then you are moving forward on the basis of an absence of something that you must obtain. Emptiness is the motive. Emptiness is the justification. And the overcoming of emptiness is the goal. But that's what the orphan feels. And the orphan is just the Christ unconscious of his divinity.

So:

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit offers you another promise, and one that will lead to joy. For HIS promise is always, "Seek and you will FIND,"...

RAJ: Abandon becoming. That's what happens when you get to the depths of the pits where you realize that you "on your own" are a failure. When you get to that point, you have the option to stop trying to become. And when you abandon becoming, you find, as I said, that you don't disappear. You still are. And if you will dare to just be, instead of becoming, you will begin to have revealed to you all that is yours. And so, by being, you will have. You will be filled with what is already and eternally yours.

RAJ READING: ...HIS promise is always, "Seek and you will FIND," and under His guidance you cannot BE defeated.

RAJ: Now why is that? Again, the beautiful integrity of Reality is that if the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind, then your aligning with it as you abandon your sense of privacy, means you are aligning yourself with your Self, which is an integrating event which illuminates to you at an experiential level the unity of you, the indivisibility of you, and the complete incapacity you have to experience conflict because of what you really Are.

So under the Guidance of the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind, you cannot be defeated. You can't be defeated in waking up.

RAJ READING: His is the journey to ACCOMPLISHMENT, and the goal He sets before you He will GIVE you.

RAJ: If the goal that your Right Mind puts before you is for you to experience your Right Mind, then it's the intent of your Right Mind to give your Right Mind back to you and, you could say, give yourself back to your Self.

RAJ READING: For He will never deceive God's Son, whom He loves with the Love of the Father.

You WILL undertake a journey because you are NOT at home in this world.

RAJ: This world that you have made up. This world of orphanhood among orphans.

RAJ READING: And you WILL search for your home...

RAJ: Why? Why would you have a longing, a yearning? Why does everybody have a longing and a yearning to go Home, whatever those words mean? Because your divine Being hasn't forgotten Home. Your divine Being hasn't forgotten what it is. And it is too wonderful to be able to completely forget.

And so the very Truth about you, the eternal Truth about you, isn't some spiritual thing out in the ethers. It's right in the very being of your consciousness every day. The desire is there because you are there; the True One that you are is there. And this effect can be described as the Holy Spirit reminding you of the Truth about you, and inviting you to pay attention to it, and to abandon the distractions that you entertain and validate all day long.

RAJ READING: You WILL undertake a journey because you are NOT at home in this world. And you WILL search for your home whether you know where it is or not.

RAJ: The difference is that you're going to stop looking for it "out there." You're going to stop looking for that which validates you out there in your Brother's approval, and you're going to stop judging your competence by, or incompetence by the lack of approval you get from out there.

RAJ READING: If you believe it is outside yourself the search will be futile, for you will be seeking it where it is not. You do not know how to look within yourself, for you do not BELIEVE your home is there.

RAJ: Now many of you have heard the phrase, "You see what you're looking with." And if you're looking from an orphan's mentality, you will see disassociation; you will see aloneness; you will see sourcelessness; you will see independent entities struggling on their own. And you will not be able to see that these individuals are really the Christ as the Father is being them right there, just as you are the Christ as the Father is being you right there. You see what you're looking with. It's all in the center of you, so to speak.

RAJ READING: You do not know how to look within yourself, for you do not BELIEVE your home is there.

RAJ: But I've just helped you to understand a little bit better how it could be that your Home is there within you.

RAJ READING: Yet the Holy Spirit knows it FOR you, and He will guide you TO your home because that is His mission.

RAJ: You can rely upon that which is nothing more than your Right Mind to lead you into a more and more solid Sanity, a greater and greater integrity, a clearer and clearer experience of your invulnerability.

RAJ READING: As He fulfills HIS mission He will teach you YOURS, for your mission is the same as His.

RAJ: Ah. As you experience the influx of the Truth about you and the Love that you experience in it, you will discover that it will be almost impossible not to let it overflow and spill over into your sharing with your Brothers and Sisters. Oh, what did I just say? Your sharing with your Brothers and Sisters, instead of your getting from your Brothers and Sisters—your gifting them.

RAJ READING: ...your mission is the same as His.

RAJ: To gift them with the acknowledgement of the Truth about them by remembering it for them, and reflecting it back to them, reminding them, so that they can't possibly think that the only way there is to look at things is the ignorant way they're currently looking at it, at everything; the limited way in which they're looking at everything.

RAJ READING: By guiding your BROTHERS home you are but following Him.

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: Behold the Guide your Father gave you that you might learn you have eternal life.

RAJ: So that you might learn that indeed you never were an orphan. You never were limited. You never were tiny. You never were all by yourself any kind of authority. And any satisfaction that you had been fooled into believing you would get by being a successful, independent authority, was nothing but a bunch of hot air, pure illusion, that never could have satisfied you and can't possibly trick you into going after it again.

RAJ READING: Behold the Guide your Father gave you that you might learn you have eternal life. For death is not your Father's Will nor yours, and whatever is true IS the Will of the Father. You pay no price for life for that was given you, but you DO pay a price for death, and a very heavy one. If death is your treasure, you will sell everything else to purchase it.

RAJ: If being unconscious of your Birthright is what you treasure, you will sell your Birthright. And you will commit yourself to this other thing. And you could say that your unconsciousness of What You Are is a "living death," because it's a "living unconsciousness" of What You Are right now.

RAJ READING: If death is your treasure, you will sell everything else to purchase it. And you will believe that you HAVE purchased it BECAUSE you have sold everything else.

RAJ: Because you've sold everything else, you're impoverished. You are empty. The fullness of life is not yours. And so you can be sure that you actually have purchased death. You actually have purchased unconsciousness.

RAJ READING: Yet you CANNOT sell the Kingdom of Heaven.

RAJ: And I'm going to add: You can't sell your divinity. You can't sell your Identity.

RAJ READING: Your inheritance can neither be bought NOR sold. There can BE no disinherited parts of the Sonship,...

RAJ: No orphans.

RAJ READING: ...for God is whole, and all his extensions are like Him.

*The Atonement was not the price of your wholeness, but it WAS the price of your AWARENESS of your wholeness. For what you chose to "sell" had to be kept for you, since you could not "buy" it back. (H-#291*292)*

[Editor's Note: Raj said "the price of our wholeness" because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as "the price of your wholeness" as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: I've reminded you before that the Holy Spirit is your Right Mind held in trust while you dally with the ego.

RAJ READING: *...what you chose to "sell" had to be kept for you, since you could not "buy" it back. Yet YOU must invest in it, not with money, but WITH YOUR SPIRIT. (H-#291*292)*

RAJ: With enthusiasm! With a real willingness to embrace it.

And how do you do that? With conscientiousness you lean into it, even though you haven't experienced it for a long time, and you begin to rely upon it and ask of it, "What is the Truth here?" before you jump to your well-defined conclusions and your mutually-agreed-upon definitions of manners, or proper behavior, or how to finesse the most out of your Brother.

RAJ READING: ...*YOU must invest in it, not with money, but WITH YOUR SPIRIT. For Spirit is will, and will IS the "price" of the Kingdom. Your inheritance awaits only the recognition that you have BEEN redeemed. (H-#291*292)*

RAJ: And I could say: Your inheritance awaits only your recognition that you never were unredeemed.

You never actually succeeded in becoming less than the fullness of what God is being right there, because nothing you could imagine, could diminish what God is being.

RAJ READING: *Your inheritance awaits only the recognition that you have BEEN redeemed. The Holy Spirit guides you into life eternal, but YOU must relinquish your investment in death, or you will not SEE life though it is all around you. (H-#291*292)*

RAJ: You seek death. You engage in seeking for something that cannot possibly be where you're looking for it. And so you're committed to behaving in a way that will always result in defeat.

You know, I'm sure that you've observed people, not just people who aren't experiencing incredible success and fullness in their life because they're not doing it joined with the Father, but people who, I'm going to say, literally seek for love where it cannot be found. In other words, how many women or how many men look to get love from someone who cannot give it? How many look for love from someone who is so self-centered and so self-preoccupied, or so committed to what they want to do, that they don't even recognize the presence of anyone else to extend to?

Now, this touches too close to home for almost everyone. Just because you happen to do it in more subtle ways yourself, or now as opposed to back when you did it in the grosser way, doesn't mean that you can be happier with yourself. Because you still need to wake up. You still need to abandon looking for love where it doesn't exist; trying to get your sense of your worth from others' acceptance of you, from others' praise of you, from others acknowledging that they feel you are worth a great deal to them. That's not where your worth lies. What they're appreciating is not what your worth is.

Your worth lies in What You Are, whether anyone is acknowledging you or not. It lies in your divine relationship with the Source of Being. It's ever-present with you. It's the inviolable state of your Being.

Seek and find. Stop becoming, and start being. Become, and find lack. Be, and find Wholeness. Be, and find. Be, and have. And start today.

And don't get hung up on what others are, or are not, doing. Don't get hung up on what that says or means about you. And do what you have to do to be able to be the presence of a gift that will bless your Brothers and Sisters by illuminating what is true about them because they can see it in you.

Remember, we're talking about a simple thing: the choice between the voices you are listening to, the two voices, and the radical difference between the two ways of experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven are, depending upon which of the two voices you are listening to. All this should have done tonight is to make the difference clear enough that it's easier for you to make a choice as to which way you are going to be.

Still, we're talking about getting your head on straight. We're still not talking about being an effective agent for change for someone else.

Okay.

I love you all.

And I want you to find a little joy this week from what we've discussed, and not further difficulty or tension. If you're feeling incompetent, if you're feeling like nothing you do does any good, take a look and see what you're using as the measuring stick. Is it other people? Is it the way they're behaving, or not behaving? If it is, you may know which voice you're listening to. And you may know that if you're listening to that voice, you cannot help but end up failing, having the experience of failing, having the perception of failing, even though it's a false perception.

If you catch that, if you recognize it, you can turn to the other Voice—the Voice for Truth—so that you might have clearer experiences of what I'm going to call "reintegration within you," where you are less flustered, where you are less discombobulated; experiencing less chaos, more peace, more harmony, more integrity.

Decide which voice you're going to listen to and do it. Make a point... make a point one or two or three times a day to remember to lean into the Voice for Truth, even if at the moment you don't know what that's going to mean. Have the intent. Let there be the conscious awareness that it's your desire to let in something other than what you've already imagined. Let there be moments where you are desiring a mutual joining, a partnership, where you're not doing this alone and you are willing to give deference to the Voice of Wisdom, because you want to experience the Wisdom of your Being.

Okay. I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

RAJ READING: The Sane Curriculum

RAJ: Well, before we start reading about “The Sane Curriculum,” let’s refresh ourselves about what the “insane curriculum” is. The insane curriculum is the ego’s curriculum which, as we found last week, is summed up in the words, “Seek and do not find.” Seek and do not find by looking for what you’re looking for where it can’t be found.

And although that does mean that if you’re looking for love from someone who is so self-centered and preoccupied with him- or herself that he or she is incapable of responding for love, the real meaning of “looking for love where it cannot be found” is if you’re looking for it in your own separated sense of being, your own independent sense of self. If you are looking for it in a state of isolation and aloneness because you have divorced yourself from your Source, you are looking where it can’t be found. It can’t be found in your very own isolation from the Wholeness of Existence, the Wholeness of Being.

The only place you can “look for love” is from your union with your Source. The only place you can “look for love” is, not out there somewhere, but from the place of excellence in you—your Right Mind. When you are not looking from the unity of your Being, of your essential Consciousness, when you’re looking for love not from the excellence of you, you will not be able to find it.

Now:

RAJ READING: The Sane Curriculum

Only love is strong because it is UNDIVIDED.

RAJ: It isn't that it's strong because it has a lot of power. It's strong because it's not fragmented. It's strong because in its singularity, in its indivisibility, there is the conscious experience of invulnerability.

In the absence of chaos, there is peace. Why? Because peace is the fundamental nature of Being. It is what is Real. And when you have no other preference on your mind, no other preferred way of looking at Reality, and you are introducing nothing extraneous to it, your mind is at peace, and your mind is singular, and the experience of invulnerability is patently obvious to you.

It is strong because in its presence there is no opposite to exercise itself upon.

RAJ READING: Only love is strong because it is UNDIVIDED. The strong do not attack because they see no need to do so. BEFORE the idea of attack can enter your mind you must have PERCEIVED yourself as weak.

RAJ: Happens to you everyday.

When you are roused to attack, or another way of putting it is, when you are roused to defend yourself, when you are roused to take control, it is because you are feeling vulnerable—vulnerable to an assertive friend, vulnerable to an angry employer—vulnerable to an assertion of will that puts you at a disadvantage that you believe is real.

When you feel weak, is it your first spontaneous response to say, "I better get back in my peace, I better get back in my Right Mind as quickly as I can so that I can respond to what is going on intelligently, without bringing up my habitual use of force"? No. When you feel confronted, you slip back into your habit of doing whatever it takes to get control of the situation again, so that you will not feel vulnerable.

It's important to understand this. Your habit of exercising control is connected to your feeling of weakness, which you inevitably feel because you have gotten a divorce from your Father. You've said, "I want to see things my way. I want to give the definitions. I want to give the meaning." That arena of being, is one in which you are weak because, as we've discussed in the last couple of weeks, your Birthright box is empty. You do not feel your Birthright. Existence itself is an ever-present statement of your weakness—which is, of course, the challenge you've taken on to rise above. And of course, the attempt to achieve the equivalent of a Birthright is one of the processes of "seeking and not finding."

RAJ READING: BEFORE the idea of attack can enter your mind you must have PERCEIVED yourself as weak. Because you had attacked yourself and believed that the attack was EFFECTIVE, you behold yourself as weakened.

RAJ: Again, because you had attacked yourself by deciding to get a divorce from your Source and you believe that you actually accomplished it, you behold yourself as weakened.

RAJ READING: No longer perceiving yourself and all your brothers as equal, and regarding yourself as WEAKER, you attempt to “equalize” the situation YOU have made. You use attack to do so because you believe that attack was successful in weakening YOU.

RAJ: Some time back we were talking about the fact that, “you are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom.” Now I want to point out something about the ego: it does the same thing.

You—the ego—you when you’re not experiencing your union with the Father—create a definition of yourself. You say, “I, on my own, am worthwhile. I have substance. I have character. I have strength. And if I develop a collection of ideas that reflect excellent logic so that the truth of the collection of ideas stands clearly forth as reasonable, I can demonstrate the fact that I have integrity all by myself.” You claim something ultimate about yourself, and you let that be the bottom line of everything else that comes forth from you. And then you proceed to nudge and coerce, browbeat, and enforce your Brothers and Sisters in whatever way you can to arrive at agreement with you.

You start, the ego starts, with a concept of integrity and then lets all further actions embody that, in the attempt to make it so, when it isn’t so. I’m bringing this out because if you can begin to see that when I have said, “you are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; that you are at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom,” this is nothing really foreign to you. You’re already employing it, we’ll say, in the negative. You’re already employing it within the domain of “seek and do not find.”

Now you know what? When you behave on this basis, you have gotten into righteousness, self-righteousness. You claim righteousness for yourself, and then you force your Brothers to agree with you in order to make it so when it isn’t so, all by yourself. Righteousness, because it is ego-satisfying, is what hooks you when you are attacked or when you perceive attack, or you experience strong confrontation from a Brother. Righteousness is what causes you to say, “I can handle this. I don’t need to go outside myself. I don’t have to join with something else. In my state of independence, I can handle it.”

And so out of spontaneous habit, you respond with attack. You respond with an expression of force, with an expression of coercion. You become confrontational so as to bring about equalization between you and the apparent source of the confrontation.

This is why, even as we are talking about the need to break the isolation, you find yourselves during the day when stress occurs, immediately resorting to quote "what has worked for you before," or what you have confidence has worked for you before, and so you slip right back into "being offended" and retaliating through the use of force that you bring up from the bottom of the puniness of you, instead of doing what will work. Understand that this is the dynamic, so that you might recognize it and not be caught off guard so easily, or recover when you've been caught off guard more easily, so that you might say, "Oop! There I am choosing to work within the fundamental 'insane curriculum' of 'seeking and not finding.'"

RAJ READING: You use attack to do so...

RAJ: To equalize the situation.

RAJ READING: ...because you believe that attack was successful in weakening YOU.

That is why the recognition of your OWN invulnerability is so important in the restoration of your sanity.

RAJ: That's why it's so important to remember that, "you're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it."

RAJ READING: For if you accept your invulnerability, you are recognizing that attack HAS no effect.

RAJ: If you are really divine and you have never lost your divine status, and your Birthright is still there in your Birthright box, so to speak, then any attempt to see things in a confused way has not succeeded in changing you from what you are right at this moment. It has had no effect on you. And attack that you feel like employing against your Brother can have no effect, and the confrontation from your Brother can have had no effect, because neither you nor your Brother are who you have imagined yourself to be, and you in your present unalterable perfection stand with each other in the Truth of What You Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Although you have attacked yourself, and very brutally, you will demonstrate that NOTHING HAPPENED.

RAJ: Of course, when you're offended, when you're blown away by someone else's aggressive confrontation, or expressed unkindness toward you, you think that something has happened. And it is an ignorant perception that's not the truth, but you believe it.

It's just absolutely essential for you, in the process of your waking up, to constantly remind yourselves during your everyday activities, that you have never stopped being what God is being right there where you are, and your Brother has never stopped being what God is being right there where he is. And desire to have the experience of that, rather than the experience you are having by virtue of looking at what's happening through your sense of your own orphanhood, which is not true either.

RAJ READING: Although you have attacked yourself, and very brutally, you will demonstrate that NOTHING HAPPENED. Therefore, by attacking you have not done ANYTHING. Once you realize this there is no longer any SENSE in attack, for it manifestly DOES NOT WORK,...

RAJ: When you're in the thick of it, it's very difficult to shift gears. It's very difficult to let another perception in because you're so gosh darned convinced that you really are under threat, and that someone else is responsible for it. And you must remind yourselves that the threat you're seeing, the feeling of vulnerability you're having, is not because of what your Brother is doing, but the fact that you are looking at it and experiencing it without the calm perspective that your Birthright, embraced and embodied by you, would reveal to you.

Then you might still see your Brother acting as though he doesn't know Who He Is, where a shift of perception is needed for him, but you will not see it as threatening to you. You will not see it as something that in any way would call for defense, or return attack.

RAJ READING: Once you realize this there is no longer any SENSE in attack, for it manifestly DOES NOT WORK, and CANNOT protect you.

RAJ: Why can't it protect you? Because no protection is called for. You are invulnerable. What is happening is not threatening to your very Being.

RAJ READING: Yet the recognition of your invulnerability has more than negative value.

RAJ: In other words, it does more than show you that attack never worked and that attack never has caused anything.

RAJ READING: If your attacks on yourself have FAILED to weaken you...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...YOU ARE STILL STRONG.

RAJ: If your abandonment of your Birthright has not caused you to become less than what you truly divinely Are, less than what God is being right there where you are, then you're not the poor, little, piss-ant mortal that you everyday believe you are, in one way or another. In other words, you are not the weak one needing to become strong enough to equalize the situation. You are still at the Point of Perfection. The Ultimate is the only thing happening right here, right now. And It is being you in Ultimacy in all that can ultimately find expression and experience right there where you are.

You've got to remember you're not working your way back up the ladder.

RAJ READING: If your attacks on yourself have FAILED to weaken you YOU ARE STILL STRONG.

RAJ: So there's a positive value in it.

RAJ READING: You therefore have no need to "equalize" the situation to establish your strength.

You will never realize the utter uselessness of attack EXCEPT by recognizing that your attack on YOURSELF had no effects.

RAJ: So you see, before you start straightening out your Brother, you've got to get your own head on straight. And you've got to find out what you did and didn't do; what you thought you did but didn't actually accomplish.

You've got to come to a point where you're willing to consider yourself as absolutely divine right now, unaltered from what God is being right there where you are. And you have to let your sense of yourself be replaced by an infilling awareness of the Wholeness of you that will happen spontaneously when you are willing to let go of the idea that you can handle things yourself. And that your self-righteousness is one of the biggest traps that faces you at any time during your day, and that your valuing of it and your reinforcing of it does nothing but keep you blinded to the already existing perfection of you.

This is the only way shifts of perception are going to begin to be experienced by you, because you bring a conscientious choice to bear upon the way you relate to your world, where you are choosing to come from as you observe everything that is going on. You have to start with yourself.

RAJ READING: You will never realize the utter uselessness of attack EXCEPT by recognizing that your attack on YOURSELF had no effects.

RAJ: Why?

RAJ READING: For others DO react to attack if they perceive it, and if you are trying to attack THEM you will be unable to avoid interpreting this...

RAJ: Their reaction to your attack.

RAJ READING: ...as reinforcement.

RAJ: Reinforcement of what? Reinforcement of the idea that taking control through the use of force, through the sheer use of will, is valuable and does accomplish something—does accomplish something while you are still a dedicated orphan. You see?

RAJ READING: The ONLY place where you can cancel out all reinforcement is in YOURSELF. For YOU are always the first point of your attack,...

RAJ: Like a pilot of a plane once said to a potential passenger who was afraid of crashing, "Don't worry. I'm always, the pilot is always the first one at the scene of the accident."

RAJ READING: The ONLY place where you can cancel out all reinforcement is in YOURSELF. For YOU are always the first point of your attack,...

RAJ: Whatever mess occurs, you're the first one to arrive in the mess.

RAJ READING: For YOU are always the first point of your attack, and if THIS has never been it HAS no consequences.

The Holy Spirit's love is your strength,...

RAJ: Why? Because it's singular, and it is you in your Right Mind experiencing the Truth. And so there is no confusion in you when you let that register with you—which won't happen until you abandon your so-called "right" to be an independent agent for change, an independent creator.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit's love is your strength, for yours...

RAJ: As an orphan.

RAJ READING: ...is divided and therefore not real. You could not trust your own love when you have ATTACKED it. You cannot learn of perfect love with a split mind because a split mind had MADE itself a poor learner. You tried to make the separation eternal...

[Editor's Note: Raj said "has MADE" because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as "had MADE" as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: In other words, your intending getting the divorce was for it to be permanent.

RAJ READING: You tried to make the separation eternal because you wanted to retain the characteristics of creation with your own CONTENT.

RAJ: [laughing] In other words, with everything you made up, and everything you would in the future make up.

The nature of Creation is eternal. Creation is eternal. And you want to maintain that with your own creations.

RAJ READING: Yet creation...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: ...creation is NOT of you,...

RAJ: You're not God.

RAJ READING: Yet creation is NOT of you, and poor learners need special teaching. You have learning handicaps in a very literal sense.

There are areas in your learning skills which are so impaired that you can progress only under constant, clear-cut direction, provided by a...

RAJ: Capital "T".

RAJ READING: ...Teacher Who can TRANSCEND your limited resources.

RAJ: Transcend your tiny sense of orphanhood.

RAJ READING: He BECOMES your Resource, because of YOURSELF you CANNOT learn.

RAJ: You as a tiny, little, piss-ant orphan—poor little you—of yourself cannot learn, because the state of mind which sees itself as weak and little, cannot look where the Truth can be found, because it insists on looking and can only look within the narrow confines...

PAUL: Just a moment.

RAJ: ...of isolation and aloneness.

RAJ READING: The learning situation in which you placed yourself...

RAJ: When you got your divorce.

RAJ READING: ...IS impossible, and in this situation you clearly require a special...

RAJ: Capital "T".

RAJ READING: ...Teacher and a special curriculum. Poor learners are not good choices for teachers, either for themselves or for anyone else.

RAJ: Which is one of the reasons that it's not a good idea to take on your Brother as a student when you have no resource from which to teach him that's any better than the resource he already has. And if his resource is tiny, isolated aloneness, and yours is tiny, isolated aloneness, neither of you can learn anything new from each other. That's why we're getting our own heads on straight first.

RAJ READING: Poor learners are not good choices for teachers, either for themselves or for anyone else. You would hardly turn to THEM to establish the curriculum by which they can ESCAPE from their limitations. If they understood what is beyond them they would not BE handicapped.

RAJ: Now as we read this, it sounds like a rather bleak picture of you. But it's only a clear picture of the absurd, of the absurdity of the tiny way in which you're looking at yourself, when you have another option available to you. And so it is not bleak because you're not stuck in it.

And it's my task to remind you that there is a larger picture, that there is Reality, and that you are not what you believe you are. You are at the Point of Perfection and you must understand yourself therefrom. And my constant encouragement to you is not to believe this bleak picture, and not to believe the definitions that you have come up with on your own, because there is something far greater for you to be experiencing, which it is your Birthright to be experiencing.

And any of the self-righteousness that you feel as a result of all of the great effort you put forth in being the best damned independent orphan that existed, means nothing, accomplishes nothing, has accomplished nothing. And therefore, you can afford to abandon it, and question the hit you get from the feeling of self-righteousness.

Now I've been asking you to be alert for when you are offended. Next week I want you to give your attention to when you feel self-righteous. Whether it's offense or whether it's self-righteousness, there's always inequity in the picture. Any [in]equality—someone is less than you; you're more than some else; you're better than someone else, or someone else is more offensive than you; someone else is stronger than you therefore you're weaker—self-righteously, though, you are better and greater and stronger than they are. You see? There's always inequity.

And always you engage in activities of equalizing, which simply means that the two of you end up in a struggle whereby you arrive at a point where you're worn out and you abandon the struggle in mutual agreement to take a rest—not abandon the struggle, but to take a rest. Like arm wrestling, so you rest till you get your second wind, and then you get back to your offendedness or your self-righteousness.

And all the time you're functioning in the orphanage, when you're not an orphan at all. And you don't need to continue to be caught in the exhilarating drama of the overcoming of inequity.

RAJ READING: You do not know the meaning of love, and that IS your handicap. Do not attempt to teach yourselves what you do not understand, and do not try to set up curriculum goals where yours have clearly failed. YOUR learning goal has been NOT to learn,...

RAJ: I realize you didn't think that was the case.

But:

RAJ READING: YOUR learning goal has been NOT to learn, and this CANNOT lead to successful learning.

RAJ: The moment you saw yourself as an orphan, you began to experience yourself as a collection of thoughts, a streaming of ideas, that can be identified as the ego. And the ego's insane curriculum is, "Seek and do not find."

Therefore:

RAJ READING: YOUR learning goal has been NOT to learn,...

RAJ: When you're identified as an orphan.

RAJ READING: ...and this CANNOT lead to successful learning.

RAJ: You see, an orphan can never become a legitimate son or daughter of anything.

The only thing that will be meaningful will be the realization that you are not, cannot have been, and never have been an orphan. That is the answer. And that answer comes from outside the arena of the concept of orphanhood.

RAJ READING: YOUR learning goal has been NOT to learn, and this CANNOT lead to successful learning. You cannot transfer what you have not learned, and the impairment of the ability to generalize is a crucial learning failure. Would you ask those who have FAILED to learn what learning aids are...

RAJ: [laughing]

RAJ READING: ...what learning aids are FOR? THEY DO NOT KNOW. For if they could interpret the aids correctly they would have learned from them.

We have said that the ego's rule is, "Seek and do NOT find." Translated into curricular terms, this is the same as saying, "TRY to learn but do NOT succeed." The result of this curriculum goal is obvious. Every legitimate teaching aid, every real instruction, and every sensible guide to learning WILL BE MISINTERPRETED.

RAJ: You know what that means? It means that whatever insight might be experienced, whatever sense might be made out of what's being taught, will immediately be translated into the language of orphanhood in orphanland, and will be put to use for the purposes that orphans employ—which is not to get out of the orphanage. You see?

So:

RAJ READING: Every legitimate teaching aid, every real instruction, and every sensible guide to learning WILL BE MISINTERPRETED.

RAJ: And misused.

It happens everyday with the Course. Something is read, a little light bulb goes on, and then it gets turned to the advantage of the so-called ego reading it, and that one believes that now he has some leverage of a higher nature and a more spiritual quality with which to coerce his Brother into behavior that is more acceptable to the Course, or than what it was before.

The purpose of the Course is not to teach you how to be a better orphan, and how to have a more fulfilling experience of being in an orphanage. The purpose is to get you out of the orphanage. The purpose is to reveal to you that the very concept of an orphanage is meaningless, because there are no orphans.

RAJ READING: Every legitimate teaching aid, every real instruction, and every sensible guide to learning WILL BE MISINTERPRETED. For they are all for learning facilitation, which this strange curriculum goal...

RAJ: The ego's.

RAJ READING: ...is AGAINST. If you are trying to learn how NOT to learn, and are using the aim of teaching to DEFEAT itself, what can you expect BUT confusion? The curriculum does not make SENSE.

This kind of "learning" has so weakened your mind that you CANNOT love, for the curriculum you have chosen is AGAINST love, and amounts to a course in HOW TO ATTACK YOURSELF.

RAJ: What is love? Love is what happens when you abandon your isolation and join with something else; become intimate and with and undefended against something else, where you share without defense.

But the ego's insane curriculum is intent upon maintaining boundaries. It is intent upon not joining. It is intent upon constantly reinforcing and re-substantiating isolation.

Be sure that as you learn from the Course and your association with it, that you do not take what you are learning to be a better tool for a higher level of enforcing isolation.

RAJ READING: This kind of "learning" has so weakened your mind that you CANNOT love, for the curriculum you have chosen is AGAINST love, and amounts to a course in HOW TO ATTACK YOURSELF.

RAJ: Now:

RAJ READING: A necessary minor, supplementing this major curriculum goal, is learning how NOT to overcome the split which made this goal believable.

RAJ: In other words, the goal of the ego is, "Seek and do not find." See separation, see isolation, and learn how to make it a better and better experience, a less and less uncomfortable experience—which, of course, is impossible.

Now that's what the ego's course teaches. The minor that needs to be added to that for purpose of explanation is that, "You will never look to the real problem to correct it." In other words, you will stay constantly preoccupied with tension, and offense against your Brother, and self-righteousness against your Brother, without ever looking to see the fundamental postulate from which all of these behaviors arise—which is that you, which you've conveniently forgotten, have a Father that you got a divorce from.

And of course, that's what we're undoing by virtue of bringing it right out on the table and shining the light on it, so that even if you don't see how it is that that could have happened, how you could have done that, at least the idea is there registering with you for you to explore further, because that's the beginning of the undoing of the basic mistaken postulate.

Again.

RAJ READING: A necessary minor,...

RAJ: Like a major and a minor in college.

RAJ READING: A necessary minor, supplementing this major curriculum goal, is learning how NOT to overcome the split...

RAJ: The divorce from your Father.

RAJ READING: ...which made this goal believable. And you can NOT overcome it, for all YOUR learning is on its BEHALF.

RAJ: Or it all has been on that; on its behalf. Now you're beginning to weaken it by considering another option.

RAJ READING: Yet your will speaks against your learning as your learning speaks against your will, and so you fight AGAINST learning and succeed, for that IS your will. But you do not realize, even yet, that there IS something you DO will to learn, and that you can learn it because it IS your will to do so.

RAJ: See, it's not all bad. I'll give you a few strokes.

You need to remember that you're not behind the Point of Perfection. And so there is a will in you to be what you divinely Are, no matter how you've altered your perception of your will to serve this false goal of "seeking and not finding;" of being, for lack of better words, of royal birth but ignoring your Birthright.

RAJ READING: You who have tried to learn what you do NOT will should take heart, for although the curriculum you set yourself is depressing indeed, it is merely ridiculous,...

RAJ: You see, it's really inconsequential. It is not something to take so seriously. It's merely ridiculous. It's pure nonsense. And you need to lighten up regarding your assessment of the curriculum you've involved yourself in, and the coursework you've done and the hours and lifetimes of lab work you've done. You see?

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the rest of the sentence. Here is the complete sentence: You who have tried to learn what you do NOT will should take heart, for although the curriculum you set yourself is depressing indeed, it is merely ridiculous, if you look at it.]

RAJ READING: Is it POSSIBLE that the way to achieve a goal is NOT to attain it? Resign NOW as your own teachers.

RAJ: Oh, but that'll put you out of a job! Oh, but that'll you put out of an identity.

No, it'll put you out of an identification.

Remember we talked about the difference between an identification and Identity. Identification is a concept; a picture you've drawn about yourself. And your Identity is what is, unchangeably.

RAJ READING: Resign NOW as your own teachers. THIS resignation will NOT lead to depression.

RAJ: And I'm going to qualify that. This resignation, if it's genuine, will not lead to depression.

But if you're going to toy with it, if you're going to resign as your teacher to test the waters, or to look good, and you do approach it with halfway decent sincerity, your ego is going to become very depressed, because why? Because it will bring to your experience the perception of failure that we talked about last week.

RAJ READING: THIS resignation...

RAJ: If it is genuine.

RAJ READING: ...will NOT lead to depression. It is merely the result of an honest appraisal of what you have taught yourselves, and of the learning outcomes which have resulted.

RAJ: But you see, it doesn't need to be depressing, because it's merely ridiculous. You took a lot of time and you had a lot of fun doing the ridiculous. It caused no actual consequences. It didn't cause your Father to disown you. So there has been no cost to it, except the cost of being ignorant of the Truth about you, and believing that your ignorance was an unpleasant experience that was real, that seemed to cause you actual suffering. But all that happened was a ridiculous endeavor.

RAJ READING: Under the proper learning conditions, which you can neither provide nor understand, you will become excellent learners AND teachers.

RAJ: Let's read that again.

RAJ READING: Under the proper learning conditions, which you...

RAJ: As an orphan.

RAJ READING: ...can neither provide nor understand, you will become excellent learners AND teachers. But it is not so yet, and will not BE so until the whole learning situation, as YOU have set it up, is reversed.

RAJ: Whew. Oh, boy, big project, huh? Until the whole learning situation is reversed.

To reverse the learning situation is the equivalent of neglecting to look through the large end of the binoculars, and turning them around to look through the small end of the binoculars. The reversal of the learning situation has entirely to do with something real simple: no longer approaching everything as an independent, tiny, little entity, all by yourself, isolated and alone.

Abandoning that in favor of doing everything that you were doing alone joined, so that the isolation is broken that causes your ignorance to constantly be reinforced. And instead, having the experience of that which is nothing more than your Right Mind—the Holy Spirit—guiding you and teaching you how to see Reality as it really is, instead of how it looks through the lens of orphanhood. You see?

A miracle is sudden shift of perception. Not a sudden shift of activity. Not a sudden shift of endeavors. Not a new way of being with your Brothers through mutual agreements. Not hard work. But a willingness to look with innocent eyes; a willingness to look with fresh eyes that are led in what they see by the loving support of guidance of one who knows what is really there, who stands on behalf of your seeing what is really there because it's your Birthright, and who therefore stands in total support of you—you who you truly Are.

RAJ READING: Your learning POTENTIAL, properly understood, is limitless because it will lead you to God.

RAJ: It will lead you to the conscious experience of That which is infinite.

RAJ READING: You can TEACH the way to Him AND learn it, if you follow the...

RAJ: Capital "T".

RAJ READING: ...Teacher Who knows it, and His curriculum for learning it. The curriculum is totally unambiguous because the goal is NOT divided, and the means and the end are in COMPLETE accord.

RAJ: In other words, "seek and you will find" is an endeavor [in which] the goal and the result are in complete accord with each other. But to "seek something and not find it," is for the goal and the end result to not be in accord. You see?

RAJ READING: The curriculum is totally unambiguous because the goal is NOT divided, and the means and the end are in COMPLETE accord. You need offer only...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...UNDIVIDED ATTENTION.

RAJ: Your attention is God's treasure. So to reverse the whole learning situation that you're caught in is accomplished by a very simple thing: your undivided attention.

Your attention that is given to your encounter with your Brother or your Sister, or you're cleaning your house, or you're working on your car, you're engaging with everything with undivided attention. A willingness to be totally present, and to be present with it with whatever you're experiencing "hand-in-hand," we'll say, or we could say, "mind-in-mind" with your Teacher, so that you are not spending a single moment interpreting what's happening.

For your mind to no longer be divided into consciousness and the interpretation of what you're conscious of, constitutes a singularity that allows what everything is, to be experienced directly by you, because you are not exercising a right or a preference to see it in any way different from what it is; to see it without inserting your own little bias or torque to it. You see? Where you're willing to be with something without thinking that you, because of your unique separateness, can bring something extra to bear upon it that will "add to it" in any way.

And when you arrive at that simplicity, you're left with what a thing really is. You will call it an experience of illumination. You will call it something of the equivalent of divine illumination. It will be an obviously holy experience to you; very different from the ones you had while you're making everything up and you are devoted to your own righteousness.

RAJ READING: You need offer only UNDIVIDED ATTENTION. Everything else will be...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...GIVEN you.

RAJ: Damn. Brings you right back to that insulting position of finding that you're a kept man or a kept woman. Nobody in your own right. Everything is given to you, with no ability to earn it for yourself. It's insulting, isn't it?

RAJ READING: Everything else will be GIVEN you. For it is YOUR will to learn aright, and nothing can oppose the will of God's Son. His learning is as unlimited as HE is.

RAJ: It's as unlimited as the one whose neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it.

You know, another simple way of talking about bringing your undivided attention—which is really the key to becoming free of the baggage of misperceptions—is to say, "Be curious." This is not heavy-duty, hard work that's going to take heavy machinery to blast you out of your rut. To bring undivided attention is to be willing to give up your "feeling offended," or your "need for defense," long enough to just simply be really curious. Curiosity means an invitation to be aware of what you haven't been aware of before. It's an act of faith with confidence that lets you dare to be undefended enough to have an experience of delight. And that's what this is all about.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week.

Two things. Be alert this week for when you employ righteousness. And also remember to be curious frequently. Abandon all the self-preservation, abandon the need to be serious, abandon the need to defend yourself, even if it's just for moments during your day. But maybe a hundred moments where you just say, "Okay, for a moment I'm going to be curious"—'cause that's the key.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Well, I hope everyone took the occasion of the last week to watch to see when self-righteousness came into play, because if you did, it provided you with the opportunity to learn more about it. It seems to be a positive thing, but at the bottom line, it is vicious; it is demeaning. It is demoralizing to the one employing it.

And if one pays close attention to the experience of it, it becomes perfectly obvious that it absolutely inhibits and is the absolute opposite of miracle-mindedness. The reason is that it is a statement that miracles can't happen. It is a statement that life is not fertile soil for miracles. It's fertile soil for inequity. It's fertile soil for sacrifice. It's fertile soil for the worst to come to pass.

Self-righteousness only rears its head in the face of threat. It only rears its head in the face of what I'll call an overt expression or an overt event of inequity that puts the one who is going to use self-righteousness at a disadvantage, at a real disadvantage. Now, such a perception of being, such a perception of life only happens to orphans, and it's always coupled with the unrighteous.

Self-righteousness. I know you'd love to drop the word "self" from the front of "righteousness." But I'm going to tell you something: only orphans are interested in righteousness of any kind—self-righteousness or pure righteousness. One who is Awake doesn't conceptualize such a thing as righteousness, and value it and revere it and nourish it and practice it.

Righteousness is half of a conflicted pair: righteousness and unrighteousness. When you feel called upon to employ righteousness, it's because someone unrighteous is behaving in a way that's putting you to a real disadvantage; one in which actual harm can occur. Well, think about it. To whom can harm come?

It can only seem to come to one who's forgotten his Birthright. It can only seem to occur to an orphan. And yet, none of you are orphans.

If you want a miracle, you've got to abandon the idea that a miracle can't happen. And in order to abandon the idea that a miracle can't happen, you've got to abandon your employment of self-righteousness. You have to put down both sides of conflict.

Now I'm going to give you something new to be with, during this coming week. It's a statement: God is in His Holy Place and all is well. Again: God is in His Holy Place and all is well.

This is what orphans have forgotten. And when threat arises—and threat can be anything that causes you in your ego state of mind to be thrown for a curve, thrown off-balance—the tendency, the knee-jerk response is to stand in opposition to it; to use force and will power to bring about equality, still within the orphanage, of course.

And because everyone has forgotten that God is in His Holy Place and all is well and therefore no real threat has occurred, it is essential to remember that there is a different arena in which to be; a larger arena than the orphanage. That is the only thing that will lay the groundwork for miracle-mindedness. The conviction that each of you has—and each of you does have it if your employing self-righteousness—is that you are vulnerable, and if you don't stand up for yourself through the application of will, you will suffer actual damage, whether it's mental or psychological or physical. That conviction is what absolutely disallows for a miracle.

Now, there's another aspect to self-righteousness, and that is that it is mesmeric. Once you get into a self-righteous mode, your mind when it determines that there is justification for fear because there is actual threat because you're actually vulnerable, your mind coming to that conclusion, immediately calls into play in your body, sensations that support it. Ripping in the solar plexus. Tension. Muscular tension. And you say, "Oh, yes. I'm feeling afraid. Ah, fight or flight is what is called for." And you move right into it.

And if you move into it and you're not successful in equalizing things, your physical sensations will increase, occupying other areas of your body. And you will be convinced that if it weren't for the unrighteous one who's causing you to be defended, you wouldn't be feeling this. You're feeling it, you say, you're feeling the physical sensations because your body's natural instinctive intelligence is telling you a truth. And you get hooked into a self-fulfilling negative loop. That's what I mean by "mesmerizing."

And you build the case against yourself. But you know what you build it on? You build it on the sensation that has occurred because, first of all, you made a mental decision to be committed to the idea that you are actually a mortal and that you are actually vulnerable; capable of experiencing irrevocable damage, or damage so severe that it will be very difficult to recover. And you are committed to that sense of inability to be whole.

As long as you are committed to an inability to be whole, miracles cannot happen. That should be very clear and very easy to understand.

And you, if you're going to get out of the trap when it occurs, if you're going to break free of the mesmerism, you're going to have to do something like remember that God is in His Holy Place and all is well. God is in His Holy Place—place of Wholeness, place of infinite all-inclusive presence as Wholeness, which you cannot be outside of. God being in His Holy Place means that every aspect of your Being is embraced by God being in His Holy Place. And therefore if all is well because God is in His Holy Place, all is well for you. And the suggestion that you are vulnerable and susceptible to damage is not true, and you do not have to validate it. And you do not have to, thereby, start a mesmeric loop in which you get trapped until something finally happens where you come back into your Right Mind.

Self-righteousness is not your friend. Self-righteousness has no benefit for you. As with any form of mesmerism, it narrows your attention down to a very fine point, excluding everything else. And in the absence of the perspective that whole vision provides, it becomes easy to believe lies. And to believe them so completely that you cannot see any way out of it, and therefore it is justifiable to you to bring into play every ounce of force you can muster up to save yourself, while still being in the orphanage. And that's the key point.

Okay, let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: The Vision of Christ

The ego...

RAJ: The orphan mindset, in other words.

RAJ READING: ...is trying to teach you how to gain the whole world and lose your own Soul.

RAJ: It isn't that it's really teaching you how to lose your Soul. The "orphan mentality" is a denial of Soul itself.

When you said, "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way," and you got a divorce, you abandoned your experience of your connection with your Father and therefore the essential—and I'm using the word "essential" there in the context of the word "essence"—the essential Awareness of your inseparability from the Whole, your inseparability from God, your inseparability from your Brothers and Sisters, your inseparability from every aspect of Creation. You could say that your Soul is your innate capacity to be consciously one with all; recognizing all as inseparable from your Identity, inseparable from your Being, and you inseparable from all of it.

When you said you'd rather see it your way, you'd rather make up the definitions, you abandoned that. And as long as you stay in the orphanage, you're in a constant state of denial of it. You're not letting it in.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit teaches that you CANNOT lose your Soul and there IS no gain in the world, for OF ITSELF it profits nothing.

RAJ: Well, there is no "world of itself," but that's the way you've defined it as an orphan.

There's no "world of itself." There's no independent universe. There's Creation. And Creation is inseparable from That which is being It forever.

So:

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit teaches that you CANNOT lose your Soul and there IS no gain in the world, for OF ITSELF it profits nothing. To invest in something without profit is surely to impoverish yourself, and the overhead is high. Not only is there no profit in the investment, but the cost to YOU is enormous. For this investment costs you the world's reality by denying YOURS, and gives you nothing in return.

RAJ: You could reverse this. By your denying your Reality by saying, "Father, I'd rather get a divorce and be an orphan," it costs you the world's Reality. It costs you the experience of the Reality of Creation. When you deny your Reality by claiming to be an independent authorizer, you lose the conscious experience of the world's Reality as the Kingdom of Heaven. It's that simple.

RAJ READING: ...this investment costs you the world's reality by denying YOURS, and gives you nothing in return.

RAJ: Except the nothing... [laughing] the nothing that you get in return, you haven't had enough sense to realize is nothing. And you've decided to make something out of it by making up all kinds of definitions and mutual agreements.

Now:

RAJ READING: You CANNOT sell your Soul, but you CAN sell your AWARENESS of it.

RAJ: You cannot change What You Are, but you can ignore What You Are. You cannot change What You Are, but you can believe that you're something else.

But you can't become something else—and that's the whole point. Because you can't become something else, you haven't become something else. And that's why you're still neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it.

Now:

RAJ READING: You cannot perceive your Soul, but you will not KNOW it while you perceive anything ELSE as more valuable.

RAJ: Now the reason you can't perceive your Soul is because Soul is not perceptible. It is not capable of being turned into a perception. Soul is a direct experience of the nature and substance of your Being, when you're not preoccupied with anything else.

It's like you can say, "I am a man," or "I am a woman," or "I am an attorney," or "I'm a schoolteacher," or "I'm a parent," or "I'm old," or "I'm young"—those are all perceptions. But when you abandon perceptions that are always the result of thinking, and you go into the void, when you become still and go into the silence, in that silence there's one thing that you're perfectly aware of, even if you don't put words to it.

You find that the experience of Being means "I am." That is not a perception. That's a Knowing, with a capital "K". That is Knowing. Likewise, you cannot perceive your Soul, but you can "Know" it in the absence of all thoughts and all other perceptions.

You see, in the process of waking up, you have a tendency to think that enlightenment is going to give you new information, new strings of words, that you can use to think about, or think with, or base your evaluations and judgments upon through intellectual processes. But when you take the time to still the "thinking mind," to abandon the opinions and the theories and all the unique little characteristics of your orphan mindset, and you move into the silence, you don't find yourself provided with bits of information. You find yourself provided with experiences that seem to you to be nonspecific. And they only seem to be nonspecific because there aren't any words breaking the experience down into bits and pieces that are definable and usable.

And because it's [the] little bits of and pieces of information that you have found to be of ultimate value to you, it seems like the nonspecific experience of, let's say, Peace and Love and Joy are not valuable and are not particularly meaningful. In other words, they're relatively useless. And so you don't hang out there very much, and you don't abide just paying attention to the experience of Knowing that you're having. You don't pay attention as though what you're experiencing is, for the first time, a true experience of you, holding—within all of its apparent nonspecificity—infinite, substantial, meaningful, and illuminating experiences of Reality.

You like little rests from the trials of the day, and so you'll meditate and enjoy a little bit of this peace and quiet. "Oh, yes. I'm worth twenty minutes a day, taking time out. I will justify setting everything aside for twenty minutes. After all, I've been told that it will reduce my blood pressure and there will be other physical benefits from it. Therefore, I can afford not to attend to the emergencies and the real demands of my life, to have a little bit of quietness." But you have to justify it in your own mind as though what you're doing is an aside to what's real; something irrelevant to the "real" demands of your day.

And yet what I'm telling you is that what you're calling the "relevant demands of your day" are what are irrelevant to your conscious experience of What You Truly Are—so that if you value the experience, you will opt for the experience more often, paying closer attention to it without conceptualizing it—so that the experience of what Love is and Peace is and Joy is, and so on, might reveal themselves to you more and more clearly so that what you experience in that conscious Awareness becomes "the means" by which you live in this world.

It's only in this way that the real world is going to be uncovered to you more and more clearly. It's only in this way that you will find that the orphanage doesn't exist, and that there's a larger, unlimited arena of Being that it's your Birthright to be experiencing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...is your strength...

RAJ: It is your strength because It is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is your strength because He perceives nothing BUT your Soul as you. He is perfectly aware that you do NOT know yourselves, and perfectly aware of how to teach you what you are. BECAUSE He loves you, He will gladly teach you what He loves, for He wills to share it. Remembering you always, He cannot let you forget your worth. For the Father never ceases to remind Him of His Son,...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...and He never ceases to remind His Son...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...of the Father. God is in your memory BECAUSE of Him.

RAJ: Because of the Holy Spirit. And because the Holy Spirit is, bottom line, nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: You chose to forget your Father...

RAJ: "I'd rather do it my way. I want a divorce."

RAJ READING: You chose to forget your Father but you did not WILL to do so, and therefore you can decide otherwise. As it was MY decision, so is it YOURS.

RAJ: You see, you couldn't possibly will to forget your Father. You can't use the only Will there is, which is God's, to actually successfully deny God. So all you could do was decide to camouflage your awareness with God by/through the use of your own definitions, your own fascinations, your own resulting fears. And so you have forgotten that God is in His Holy Place and all is well.

RAJ READING: You do not WANT the world.

RAJ: You do not want what is illusion. You do not want what is illusory. You do not want what you have made up, if what you have made up is nonsense, meaningless.

RAJ READING: The only thing of value in it...

RAJ: The world.

RAJ READING: ...is whatever part of it you look upon with love.

RAJ: Why is that? Because what you're calling "creation" by using the words "the world," is Creation. And any moment you choose to look upon what you're calling "the world" with love, Creation will light up and be reflected back to you, because you've said, "I wish to see the evidence of Love."

RAJ READING: The only thing of value in it is whatever part of it you look upon with love.

RAJ: You're the key.

The ego says, "Seek and do not find." And the reason is, that from that orphan mindset you are not looking from the place of your Wholeness with a desire to see Love; you're looking from a place where you desire to see the definition you have made.

Now it doesn't mean that in the world there is nothing of value. It means that when you are looking... [laughing] when you are looking with your eyes shut, you're not going to see anything there. But when you say, "I wish to see the evidence of Love," whatever part of Creation you're looking at that you had called "the world," will reveal itself to you because you will not be blocking what it is from your sight.

Again, you are the key.

RAJ READING: This gives it the only reality it will ever have.

RAJ: Why? Not because you're "giving it" the only reality it will ever have, but because you're not blocking from your experience the only Reality it ever had, which was that it is the evidence of the movement of God. It's Creation.

RAJ READING: Its value is NOT in itself, but yours IS in you. As self-value comes from self-EXTENSION,...

RAJ: Making the gift.

RAJ READING: ...so does the PERCEPTION of self-value come from the projection of loving thoughts outward. Make the world real unto YOURSELF, for the real world is the gift of the Holy Spirit, and so it BELONGS to you.

RAJ: For you to be seeing the Kingdom of Heaven right here and right now, is your Birthright. It is what is supposed to be being experienced.

Again, this is another reason it's so important not to say, "There is no world. It's all an illusion." No. What the orphan has "defined it as" is an illusion, but what the orphan has been looking at and defining incorrectly is Creation.

RAJ READING: Make the world real unto YOURSELF,...

RAJ: By looking at it with love and wishing to see the evidence of Love.

RAJ READING: ...for the real world is the gift of the Holy Spirit, and so it BELONGS to you.

Correction is for all who cannot see. To open the eyes of the blind...

RAJ: To open the eyes of the orphans.

RAJ READING: ...is the Holy Spirit's mission, for He knows that they have not lost their vision, but merely sleep.

RAJ: What does that mean? It just means that all the while you are experiencing being conscious, you are, because of the biases you have applied to your perceptions, unconscious of what everything really is—which is why I keep saying that the essential element to waking up is curiosity; not great deep intellectual studies, but momentary curiosity brought into play daily. The wish to see more of what is really there than what you're seeing. That's the way you break it. That's the way you break the slumber, the ignorance.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...would awaken them from the sleep of forgetting to the remembering of God.

RAJ: And again, let's keep all of this grounded. The "remembering of God" amounts to seeing the trees and the flowers and the buds that are about to spring forth in a context of divinity, rather than one of materiality.

"Remembering God" is to look and see Creation, the actual alive Presence of God in everything you are confronted by every day.

You are constantly confronted with the opportunity to see God. It isn't as though once a year on the third Thursday of February there is a ten-minute opportunity to see God and wake up—where if you miss your chance, you don't have another opportunity for another year, and even then you'll only have ten minutes in which to accomplish it. Absolutely anything that your eyes fall upon at any moment is the Presence of God, and the opportunity to experience God right there is what you are confronted with, and the opportunity doesn't go away. And so you're never at a loss. And every moment can offer you the promise of delight.

But you need to start taking advantage of it. And you will not take advantage of it if you "love" to be self-righteous. Because at the bottom line, self-righteousness says, "I am a vulnerable mortal who has developed some significant power to survive in this awful state. And I am committed to existing this way and continuing to overcome the odds." That is an absolute statement of unwillingness to recognize God anywhere. No, you need to recognize the simplicity and the truth of that.

I understand completely that when you are feeling threatened, it seems absolutely clear to you that there's no redemption [laughing] possible for this unrighteous one who's causing you the problem. They are guilty of what they are doing, and you cannot afford to think any better of them than to acknowledge their mean-spiritedness and their intent to do you harm. That's why I said that self-righteousness is mesmeric. I am aware that it seems totally unreasonable to you to make a shift, to remember that here is one more opportunity, amongst thousands of opportunities in that very moment with all of the other things that are there to experience, to be willing to acknowledge the Presence of God there. I know it seems difficult.

But, you know what? The truth we're talking about is not irrelevant to your daily lives. It isn't something wonderful to mull over in your mind and soothe yourself with, while you're suffering through this existence. It calls for you to be decisive.

To "be decisive" is not the same as being willful. To "be decisive" is to recognize what works and what doesn't, and to do what works. And if you have been doing what doesn't work, and something new comes to your attention, try it. Do the something new, test the spirits, if you will, and find out. Be willing to abandon the negative loop that you've created—by introducing a new thought, a new idea.

"Oh, God is in His Holy Place and all is well."

"Oh, I'm neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it."

"Oh, my Brother isn't behind the Point of Perfection or advancing toward it. We're at that Point, and that's where I must be looking from."

You've got to do it.

The Holy Spirit...

RAJ READING: ...would awaken them...

RAJ: You. The orphans.

RAJ READING: ...from the sleep of forgetting to the remembering of God. Christ's eyes are open, and He will look upon whatever you see with love if you accept His vision as yours.

RAJ: It's important, what I just read.

Some of you might have not understood fully what it means that, "you are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; that you are at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom." You might have thought that I meant that that was to be the new postulate in your mind, and that you were to think up a new understanding of yourself based upon that truth that, "you're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it."

But this has nothing to do with your thinking. The experience of "not being behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it," is something that you will not experience until you abandon orphanhood. It is something you will not experience until you abandon your independence. In order to have the experience and the illumination and the transformation associated with the truth of that statement, you will have to quiet "your own thinking." You will have to devalue it and set it aside. And what? Join with one who knows: the Holy Spirit, or me, or the Father. And your capacity, your divine capacity to experience the truth of that statement, the meaning of that statement so that you are “understanding yourself therefrom,” will be revealed to you in the partnership you have established by virtue of having abandoned your independence.

So I am not saying that now, instead of saying that you are a mortal, you’re a physical body that came through physical processes in a physical universe, blah, blah, blah—I’m not saying that instead of that, you’re now to say, “I am a divine Idea. And I’m neither behind the Point of Perfection and I’m not advancing toward it; I’m at that Point and from now on I’m going to begin to understand myself therefrom. Let’s see now. If I’m not behind the Point of Perfection and not advancing toward it, well, it must mean this, and this, and this, and this, and this.”—and listen to the running stream of thoughts, of thinking. Well, you’re still an orphan doing your own good thinking and your own good reasoning, so that you without ever having to join, you still firmly ensconced in your independence, can now embody what I’ve been saying and the truth of what the Course is saying, all by yourself. No. No.

That’s what this means.

RAJ READING: Christ’s eyes are open, and He will look upon whatever you see with love if you accept His vision as yours.

RAJ: If you will invite my Vision in, if you will invite the Holy Spirit’s Vision in, so that you are filled with, for you, a new experience of Being, different from being an orphan.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit keeps the vision of Christ...

RAJ: Keeps it. Keeps it intact. Holds it secure for you while you dally with the ego.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit keeps the vision of Christ for every Son of God who sleeps. In His sight the Son of God is perfect,...

[repeating part of it again]

RAJ READING: ...the Son of God...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...is perfect, and He longs to share His vision with you.

RAJ: Your Right Mind longs to share itself with you because it’s yours, and it is actually impossible for you not to be including it, for it not to be your full conscious experience of Being. And because it’s impossible, then every attempt you make to do the impossible will end up not working, because What You Are—since it can’t be annihilated—will constantly presence itself as you until you finally let it in, until you finally stop denying it, until you finally find no value in independent self-righteousness.

This is so important. And it should be encouraging, and it should give you faith to have enough trust to let go and invite in help.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit keeps the vision of Christ for every Son of God who sleeps. In His sight the Son of God is perfect, and He longs to share His vision with you. He will show you the real world because God gave you Heaven. Through Him your Father calls His Son to remember. The awakening of His Son begins with his investment in the REAL world, and by this he will learn to re-invest in HIMSELF.

RAJ: What could that mean, “re-invest in HIMSELF”? What would it mean for you to reinvest in yourself? It would mean to give your energy and attention and fascination and love to the Real One that you are, to the Holy Spirit in you, to that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, which is the Presence of the Mind of God.

RAJ READING: For reality is one with the Father AND the Son, and the Holy Spirit blesses the real world in Their Name.

When you have seen this real world,...

RAJ: Mind you, [laughing] this “real world” that you’re going to see is going to look like the community you live in. That’s where it’s going to become illuminated. We’re not talking la-la-land. We’re talking about transformed experience right here and right now.

RAJ READING: When you have seen this real world, as you will surely do, you WILL remember us.

RAJ: And conversely, when you remember us and invite us in, you will begin to see the real world.

RAJ READING: Yet you must learn the cost of sleeping, and REFUSE to pay it.

RAJ: This exercise this past week of observing when self-righteousness comes into play, and observing the detrimental effects it has on you, and observing how it causes your awareness to shut down, excluding almost everything except the one offensive thing you’ve become fascinated with, you can’t help but realize how much it’s costing you, and that it is not useful at all. And that you have an alternative, and you can decide for the alternative, no matter how unintelligent it seems, no matter how irrational it seems from within your mesmerized state of seeing things, to change your mind, to abandon the self-protection that you’re engaged in.

Now, continue to be alert for the occasions of self-righteousness, because it's really essential for you to find out just how much it's costing you. You can end up immobilized in your living room where the TV is playing, with the sun shining outside, life going on in your community, everyone else you know going on about their business—and you, mesmerized by the offensiveness of what's happening and how unfair it is. It keeps you so focused that you do nothing, except sit in the middle of what seems to you to be a self-satisfying expression of disgust at the situation and how unfair it is. It costs you your capacity to go about your daily activities that you really want to do. And it costs you your capacity to feel joy. It costs you your capacity to feel light and buoyant. It costs you your freedom to even just live a normal, in quotes "human life" unquote. That's what it cost you.

But even more, it costs you your capacity to experience miracle-mindedness. And so, it's completely self-defeating to everything you say you're interested in, which is to wake up.

RAJ READING: ...you must learn the cost of sleeping, and REFUSE to pay it. Only then will you decide to awaken. And then the real world will spring to your sight, for Christ has never slept. He is waiting to be seen, for He has never lost sight of YOU. He looks quietly on the real world, which He would share with you because He knows of the Father's Love for Him. And knowing this, He would give you what is yours. In perfect peace He...

RAJ: I.

RAJ READING: ...waits for you at His Father's altar,...

RAJ: Where is that? Right in the middle of you.

RAJ READING: ...holding out the Father's Love to you in the quiet light of the Holy Spirit's blessing. For the Holy Spirit will lead everyone home to his Father, where Christ waits as his Self.

RAJ: Everything about you really, everything about what you really are, is, at this very moment and at every moment, geared for, for lack of better words, the reunification of you, the singularizing of you, the defragmenting of you—not the defragmenting of the poor little orphan you are, but the defragmenting of the you that you really are so that you're experiencing What You Really Are totally, and therefore without confusion and without conflict.

We've talked in the past about the fact that you walk with mighty companions. Being itself, at this moment, has one goal for all orphans, and that is that they realize there ain't no orphanage, there ain't no orphans, and you are not alone. You never could be alone. There's no value in trying to be alone. You're accomplishing nothing by believing that you are and that you can survive that way. And that a lot of nothing has been happening. And you've been missing out on the real thing, while you've been in the middle of the real thing, not seeing it because you've decided to see it a little bit differently from the way it really is.

Again, you walk with mighty companions. You are constantly supported in realization. You are constantly supported in light bulbs going on, aha's occurring, right here and right now. And it's not impossible. It's not even hard.

To make commitment to the impossibility of a miracle is silly. But until you abandon the employment of it, it will seem to be absolutely real, and it will seem to be frightening, and it will seem to be limiting.

So this week, let there be a little bit of buoyancy, a little bit of willingness to be curious. Refresh... refresh your mind with the intent to be curious to see the more of God that is right here in front of you, knowing that you have, well, universal support for it. Let the support in.

Be willing to acknowledge, "I am not an orphan who has to lift himself up by his own bootstraps. And so I'm going to abandon that endeavor, and I'm going to invite my Brothers and the Holy Spirit and all those who are Awake to help me. I'm going to let you in. I'm willing to not be so private anymore." And keep this intent alive in your mind. It will provide you with a brand-new week—I mean by that, with new things that haven't happened before.

I look forward to being with you all next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

I’m going to jump right in with a question. Where do you go to get information about how you are? The simple fact is that few of you go to the right spot. Where you do go is to your body. “How am I today? Any aches or pains? Anything acting up?” And you give yourself a little physical exam in order to find out how you are. And how many of you have felt stuck this week with the information you got when you went to that source?

Before I continue I want to point out something else. You tend to give your body a personality, or the parts of your body a personality. Generally speaking, you might find yourself saying, “Oh, I’m afraid my body is giving up on me.” Or if you have a rash, you say, “My, that’s a very angry rash,” as though your body is expressing emotion, capable of feeling emotion and expressing it on itself. And when you do that, you make it sound as though your body “in and of itself” is something intelligent, just like you’re intelligent. This other thing called your body is intelligent. And it can, oh, how many of you said, “My stomach is objecting to the meal I just ate”? You see? And you create a picture in your mind of your body having a life and a mind of its own, capable of making decisions and coming to conclusions, and acting out its feelings. This is not wise, because you have everything 180 degrees out of sync.

The fact is, as I’ve said before, your body is the visibility and tangibility of your Individuality. Your individuality, for lack of better words, is mental, is Mind. Your body reflects whatever word you’re giving. It’s always been this way. And so you give a word, even before you have a physical complaint.

Oh, there’s another word: complaint. “My body has a complaint. It’s complaining.” You see? I mean, you’re very familiar with these words that seem to portray it as having a life of its own.

But before your body offers a complaint, you have a mindset. Your mindset might be one of anger. Your mindset might be one of jealousy. It might be one of self-righteousness. It might be one of offense. And in that hurt mental frame of mind, what are you doing? You're sending out messages which, because the body is the visibility and tangibility of your Individuality, will reflect back to you exactly what you are embodying by means of the words you are choosing to use in your mind and the conceptualizations you have built in your mind.

And then, you stupidly say, "Why, I don't know what happened but all of a sudden my body is falling apart," or, "All of a sudden, I have this headache," as though [laughing] wonder of wonders, it happened without your participation. The fact is that whatever you're experiencing physically is always secondary to an originating thought, an originating attitude which you have chosen to embrace, and by embracing it you have embodied it. You have made it your own. You have possessed it. And what? It's going to show up. And so you say, "I think my body may be giving up on me"—like, "I did something wrong and I must have really hurt its feelings, and it's giving up on me."

If you don't remember the order of things—that the idea comes first; that you are Mind, not matter; that you are Mind, not body; and that body is just the visibility and tangibility of your mental presence, if I may put it that way—if you don't remember that, and then you go to your body to find out how you are, you are going to be fooled, you are going to be confused, and you're going to believe what you're confused about.

Now truth is useless if it isn't relevant. Everything that we're reading about is useless if it isn't relevant to your health. You know that I keep saying that you're the Christ, that you are the Presence of God, that you are what God is being right there where you are, and that you're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it. And yet you will abandon that truth in favor of an ache or a pain, and the characterization you apply to that ache or pain, or whatever physical symptoms you might be experiencing. And so you don't catch "the thought," and correct it. And you don't have healing. You don't have a reversal, because you have not reversed the thought.

Now when you seem to be faced with a physical condition that is persisting, you must remember what the solution is. And the solution does not lie in believing the symptom. The solution lies in remembering Who You Are. "I am my Father's Son. I am my Father's Daughter. I am the direct expression of God. And His Expression is perfect. I cannot afford to continue to pay attention to my best assessment of the situation, based upon the data I have gathered from my body."

What happens when you have a child running around who is out of sorts, cranky, whose every act is one that doesn't fit, one that causes disturbance? You don't just let the child continue. You tell the child, "Go sit down. Sit down and be quiet. And I want you to think about whether what you're doing is making you happy or not. And if it's not making you happy, I want you to think about what you're going to do to change your behavior so that what you do does make you happy." You need to sit yourself down. You need to hogtie yourself, to remember—when you're running away with the data that your body supplied you—to remember to shut up, to shut up your mind, to stop putting it to the use you're putting it to, and to choose for your peace.

"No, I've done that. I did that for about ten minutes an hour ago. And I did it for about fifteen minutes the hour before that. And nothing has happened. There is no use." Again, that's not miracle-mindedness. And all it is, is a call for you to practice a little bit of self discipline, and stay with the Truth about yourself longer than ten minutes. If you have to stay in your peace by engaging in meditation for four hours, do it!

Because once you change your mind, once the decision as to what source you're going to be using to gather information about how well you are, once you make a new decision, you will see the evidence. Not because you have marvelous control over this "physical body," but because your body and your Mind are inseparable, and the moment you come into singularity in your Mind, you will have the evidence of harmony. And whatever the symptom is of distress, will fade, either rapidly or instantaneously, but it will fade.

Until you're awake, don't go to "the effect" of your Mind to find out how you are. Go directly to your Mind and bring it into alignment, bring it into Peace. And do it with diligence. Persist in it. Persist in it until you have the evidence. And each time you do this and you have evidence, each successive time you do it, will take less and less time, because part of your mind will not as strongly be saying, "This isn't going to work."

Your body can't give up on you, but it can reflect back to you whether you're giving up on yourself. But then, because you're eternal, you're giving up on yourself doesn't really mean much, because it's impossible for you to totally give up on yourself. So you're really not under any kind of threat, even if you have given up on yourself.

God is in His Holy Place and all is well. It is impossible for you to be anywhere else than in that Holy Place, because God is All There Is of you. God is All There Is to you. And that is the transformational fact. That is the fact that corrects illusions, delusions, ignorance, misunderstanding, and all suffering. That fact is what you need to turn to, to gather information about how well you are.

It is a very simple thing. It is not too simple. And it is not so simple that you can't possibly grasp the transformational experience that will come from it. You are each capable of doing what it is your Birthright to do—which is to glorify God, which is to embody God, or allow God to embody Himself right there where you are.

And it doesn't matter how impossible the circumstance seems to be. The impossibility of the circumstance is nothing more than an idea that you are postulating in your mind, and then substantiating by whatever means you can, or discrediting by whatever means you can. So get about the business of discrediting authorizations you have been providing that are contrary to the perfect nature of your Being and of your existence, including your body and everything in your world.

Stop "the thought" you are entertaining in its tracks by replacing it with the idea that is True. If you're experiencing some physical condition that is not expressing or embodying health, stop! Stop immediately and say, "God, are You creating this?" The answer, of course, will be, "No," because God is not conflicted, God is not fragmented, and the indivisible Nature of God's Being must be reflected in the indivisible and perfect harmony of all Creation, because there is nothing else to be manifest from That which is Pure.

And then, stay in dialogue with God. And if you can't stay in dialogue with God, then sit down and meditate until you have come into your peace. And honor that peace of your Being enough to abide with it and not find the physical symptoms to be more worthy of your attention than your peace. And of course, out of that peace, your desire, your natural desire to see the evidence of Love, and to be the evidence of Love.

So use some discipline. And don't settle for ongoing niggling or overt distresses. And if you are noticing physical symptoms, say, "Oop! I've gotten off the track. Where? In my mind." And then ask for help in coming back into your peace, back into your capacity to feel and recognize Love, rather than fear.

I know there are those this week who were very happy to consider the statement, "God is in His Holy Place and all is well," and then found themselves not to be in a place of wonder and amazement and harmony and peace. "Well, maybe God is in His Holy Place and wherever that is, all is well—but not here." Why? Because you went to your body to find out how you were. You went to "the effect," while ignoring the cause, while ignoring the source.

If God is infinite Mind and God is embodying Himself right there where you are, then you are infinite Mind. And if God's Mind is not conflicted or fragmented or divided, then neither is yours, although you can think in conflicted ways, but your Mind is singular.

And the avenue out of the suffering that is the result of conflicted thinking, is what? To abandon thinking. To take time to, with diligence, meditate and move back into your natural peace, which hasn't been affected in any way by the conflicted thoughts you were thinking, and the fear you engendered in yourself as a result. And then honor that peace enough not to abandon it until the evidence, the visibility and tangibility of your Individuality begins to reflect the Singularity of what your Individuality is when you're not thinking and when you're not characterizing your body as though it has a personality or a life of its own.

Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: Every Child of God is one in Christ, for his Being is in Christ as Christ's is in God.

RAJ: We could read it this way:

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: Every little orphan is one in Christ, for his Being is in Christ as Christ's is in God.

RAJ: This is how you begin to remember Who You Are in spite of the fact that you have believed that you're an orphan.

RAJ READING: Christ's love for you is His love for His Father, which He knows because He knows His Father's Love for Him.

RAJ: Now this can just as easily be read about me being the Christ as it can be read about you truly being the Christ in spite of your belief in orphanhood.

RAJ READING: Christ's love for you is His love for His Father, which He knows because He knows His Father's Love for Him. When the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Which you could call your Christhood held in trust while you dally with the ego.

RAJ READING: When the Holy Spirit has at last led you to Christ...

RAJ: To your Self.

RAJ READING: ...at the altar to His Father,...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: ...perception fuses into knowledge because perception has become so holy that its transfer to holiness is merely its natural extension.

RAJ: As you yield to the influx of Truth that dawns in your thought, in your mind, and it becomes clearer and clearer to you so that it becomes second nature to you—and this doesn't have to take a long time—there is a resulting "Aha!" of realization. And that's when the fusion occurs.

RAJ READING: When the Holy Spirit has at last led you to Christ at the altar to His Father, perception fuses into knowledge because perception has become so holy that its transfer to holiness is merely its natural extension.

RAJ: "Oh! I see!" That's the experience of the natural extension. "I see! And now I don't see any differently from the way things Are."

RAJ READING: Love transfers to love without any interference, for the situations are identical. As you perceive more and more common elements in ALL situations, the transfer of your training under the Holy Spirit's guidance increases and becomes generalized.

RAJ: Now there's an important point here.

RAJ READING: As you perceive more and more common elements in ALL situations,...

RAJ: That means all the situations you run into every day of your life. It means that spiritual understanding is not an exclusive experience that draws you further and further away from daily mundane experiences.

And this is very important, because you do not want to become spiritually... well, let's put it this way, you don't want to become dysfunctional by virtue of your growing spiritual awareness. And if you think that spiritual awareness has very little to do with your daily life, then you are going to arrive at a point where you're trying to separate or be separate from your daily life so that you may abide in your spiritual awareness. And that will cause you to be dysfunctional and you will not perceive more and more common elements in all situations. As a result, the transfer of your training under the Holy Spirit's guidance will not increase and will not become generalized.

RAJ READING: Gradually you learn to apply it to everyone and everything, for its applicability IS universal. When this has been accomplished, perception and knowledge...

RAJ: Or, as I have called it, Knowing, with a capital "K".

RAJ READING: ...have become so similar that they share the unification of the laws of God.

RAJ: This is very important. Most people die because they believe that their Spirit and their body are two different things existing in two different or as two different modes of being; one which reflects the truth and one which does not. And as a result, they see their body as able to act on its own; a temporary host to that of you which is spiritual. But not a permanent host, because after all, all it is, is a host. You see? Now that's the word that you give.

That's the perception that the orphan has of the visibility and tangibility of Individuality. It's sees it as something different from visibility and tangibility. As a result, the belief is that there can never really be a true reconciliation of Mind and body, because they are two opposing things, fundamentally. Stop letting the Truth, stop letting God's Truth, stop letting the nature of Reality be something different from and fundamentally at odds with everything in your human experience, including your body, including your world.

It is inevitable for you to perceive more and more common elements in all situations. It's essential for you to.

RAJ READING: What is one...

RAJ: Not separated. Indivisible.

RAJ READING: What is one cannot be perceived as separate, and the denial of the separation IS the re-instatement of knowledge.

RAJ: Of Knowing, with a capital "K".

RAJ READING: At the altar of God,...

RAJ: Which is where? Right in the center of your Being.

RAJ READING: At the altar of God, the holy perception of God's Son...

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: ...becomes so enlightened that light streams into it,...

RAJ: The infilling of the awareness of Truth streams in, illuminating your awareness and uncovering to you that this tiny sense of orphanhood is absolute sheer nonsense, meaningless, and that it has been foolish for you to have been laboring under the idea that it's real and true.

RAJ READING: ...and the Spirit of God's Son shines in the Mind of the Father...

RAJ: Why? Why does it shine in the Mind of the Father? It shines in the Mind of the Father because suddenly you are no longer claiming to be an orphan. You're no longer claiming a right to be an authority in your own right. You're no longer wanting to make up all the definitions yourself and to have disowned your Source.

RAJ READING: ...and the Spirit of God's Son shines in the Mind of the Father and becomes One with It.

RAJ: You might say that the illumination is a two-way street. You're blessed, but the Father is blessed because you have decided to glorify God again.

RAJ READING: Very gently does God shine upon Himself, loving the extension of Himself which is His Son.

RAJ: You.

RAJ READING: The world has no purpose...

RAJ: On its own.

RAJ READING: The world has no purpose as it blends into the...

RAJ: Capital "P".

RAJ READING: ...Purpose of God.

RAJ: All the meanings that you've applied to the world as this authoritative little orphan fades, dissolves because you're no longer energizing them. And the world which was Creation all along becomes illuminated for what it is. And the world you made up that has no purpose, blends into the Purpose of God. That which you were applying false purpose to blends back into the Purpose of God.

RAJ READING: For the real world has slipped quietly into Heaven, where everything eternal in it has always been.

RAJ: Redemption is the uncovering of that which has always been. The redemption of your body will be the uncovering of what has always perfectly been. It's not a manipulation of "bad matter" into "good matter." It's not the manipulation of "matter" into Spirit. Redemption is the remembering and the unobstructed conscious experience of what has always been.

RAJ READING: There the Redeemer and the redeemed join in perfect love of God and of each other.

RAJ: Very important:

RAJ READING: ...and of each other.

RAJ: Again.

[Repeating the last part of the previous paragraph.]

RAJ READING: As you perceive more and more common elements in ALL situations,...

RAJ: And we could say, all Brothers. All people, places, and things.

RAJ READING: ...the transfer of your training under the Holy Spirit's guidance increases and becomes generalized. Gradually you learn to apply it to everyone and everything, for its applicability IS universal. When this has been accomplished, perception and knowledge have become so similar that they share the unification of the laws of God.

RAJ: It is very important for you to not continue to make differences between the things you see.

"This is me, and that is not me. That is him, and that is not him. This is real, and this is unreal. This is matter, and this is Spirit. This is acceptable, and that is unacceptable. This eyeball is acceptable; that eyeball is not. This eyeball has something wrong with it; that one does not. This hip is acceptable; that hip is not. This knee is acceptable; that one is not. That one needs surgery because something is wrong with it; it is not acceptable."

You must stop making differentiations. And then you must bring all of the things which you have made differentiations between under the purvue of God. You must bring it back into the acknowledgment that God is in His Holy Place and all is well, and nothing is outside Him. Not this knee; not that knee. Not this hip; not that hip. Not this eye; not that eye. None of them are outside the Omnipotent Authority of God being All, without conflict, without dissonance of any kind, because God is Single, God is Singular. Creation is Pure.

[Skipping down to the middle of the current paragraph but still repeating.]

RAJ READING: The world...

RAJ: Of itself.

RAJ READING: ...has no purpose as it blends into the...

RAJ: Capital "P".

RAJ READING: ...Purpose of God. For the real world has slipped quietly...

RAJ: Where?

RAJ READING: ...into Heaven,...

RAJ: Into what it was all along.

RAJ READING: ...where everything eternal in it has always been. There the Redeemer and the redeemed join in perfect love of God and of each other.

[Continuing with a new sentence, which is the last sentence in the paragraph and the section.]

RAJ READING: Heaven is your home, and being in God it must ALSO be in you.

RAJ: The point tonight is for all of you to come back into your simplicity, and to withdraw the temptation to characterize your body or your world as though it had a personality, capable of providing self-direction to it that might not be in your best interest. To remember that the use to which you put your Mind governs what you experience, either distorting your perception of what perfectly is, or undistorting it by virtue of your returning to the proper Sane use of your Mind.

And remember, as I said, when you're experiencing an ache or a pain, ask God, "Are You creating this?" And please, don't indulge in this really insane and perverse question, "God, are You creating this for my benefit?" If God isn't creating it, it isn't happening except in your imagination—your troubled imagination. The troubled imagination that all of you have as long as you believe that you're orphans, that you're on your own, and it's up to you.

Remember that so that you can pinpoint what it is that you need to abandon and stop doing. And then ask the Holy Spirit, or ask God, to correct your mind by causing an infilling of the awareness of Truth that renders your thinking nonsensical enough to you that you willingly lay it down. As we said last week, you walk with mighty Companions. Everything... everything in its true Light as What It Truly Is, stands with you in support of and confirmation of your being in your Right Mind. Help is available to you, but you must invite it in instead of continuing to energize your right to have your own thoughts and believe them.

Now I trust that you will all have a better week this week than you had this last week. And if you don't, don't believe your doubt. Ask yourself, "What source are you going to, to gather your information from?" And if it isn't the Holy Spirit, if it isn't me, if it isn't the Father, then stop going to that source, and get back into your peace.

I know many of you might be saying, "Well, why is he stopping here? We've just arrived at the point where it says, 'The Guide for Miracles.' That's just exactly what I need." What you need is what I've shared. Without a grasp of what I've shared, "The Guide for Miracles" is not going to make sense. And I don't want you grasping for a means to make a miracle happen. I'm never ever going to tell you how to make a miracle happen, but I am always going to tell you what you need to do to let a miracle in.

Okay.

I love you all. I love you all, every one of you. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet. We'll go right into the book.

RAJ READING: The Guide for Miracles

Miracles demonstrate that learning has occurred under the right guidance, for learning is invisible, and what has been learned can be recognized only by its RESULTS.

RAJ: Miracles are sudden shifts of perception. They occur when a willingness to learn has been present, and the teacher you have sought for the learning, has been one who can teach you truly. The ego as a teacher cannot teach you truly, but the Holy Spirit can. And those are the only two teachers you have available to you.

You can tell whether you have learned or not, when? When you have results. When you have the evidence of learning. In other words, when you have healing. When correction of an illusion has occurred. When correction of a misperception has occurred. When correction of anything false has occurred.

RAJ READING: Its generalization is demonstrated as you use it in more and more situations.

RAJ: Use what? Well, I'm going to say "miracle-mindedness," or, we could call it "miracle-readiness."

And what is that? It's when you abandon your confidences about the fact that a miracle can't occur. Miracle-readiness is the frame of mind you're in when you're willing to abandon the definitions you've given to something so that you might look at it with fresh or, as I've called it, "innocent eyes," and see it anew; letting it, whatever it is, communicate to you its meaning; to shine forth to you its act of glorifying God. Miracle-readiness is something that needs to be brought into play more and more of the time.

And I've described miracle-readiness as your active curiosity to see the more of God that is there wherever you're looking than what you're presently seeing. And of course, in many instances, you are looking, and what you're seeing is something that you can't identify as God at all, because you're absolutely confident that it isn't God. That it's your enemy; not your ally. And that there's nothing that can be done about it.

I said last week that in every single moment of your day—no matter what is in your face—what is in your face is the Presence of God inviting you to see It for what It really is. Every single thing you encounter is a companion whose intent it is for you to see it as it truly is; whose intent it is to have you see it glorifying God, exhibiting God, manifesting God, instead of what you imagine it is. And so you are constantly confronted with this ever-present help, this ever-present encouragement to recognize God.

Now what if you were recognizing God all day long? What kind of meaning would it have for you? How would it make life different for you? Well, right off the bat, you would find that there was no call for fear. And so you would be experiencing being, fearlessly—free of all fear. That's the potential in every single moment, because that's the invitation from absolutely everything that confronts you. And the only reason you don't see it is because you are convinced, you have convinced yourself that God is not there; that something else is. That is the only reason. I cannot emphasize it enough. That is the only reason. And if that's the only reason, the answer is equally simple. The answer isn't complicated.

And miracle-readiness is what lets in the discovery of God right there in your world, changing your apparent need to be in a constant state of self-defense, replacing it with peace and the opportunity for spontaneous joy, and an ability to deal with your Brothers and Sisters without a façade and without games, and enjoy the pleasure of just truly and simply being yourself. And finding that being yourself is valuable for everyone.

RAJ READING: You will recognize that you have learned there is no order of difficulty in miracles when you have applied them to ALL situations.

RAJ: You see, as long as you think some situations are more difficult than others, then you will not make the gift of miracle-readiness in the more difficult situations. You will justify not giving that willingness because, "The situation is too difficult," or, "That fellow's ego is so full of itself that it couldn't possibly yield to any gift I might make of an acknowledgment of what is true, or a willingness to see what is true right there. And so there is no use. And I will go and find an easier situation to make the gift of miracle-readiness." And so you make distinctions between this and that.

And you suffer from the distinctions, not from what is confronting you. You suffer from the distinction because there are places where you withhold your willingness to see God, and thus deprive yourself of the opportunity to see God. And so you suffer from this self-imposed blindness to the Presence of God. It's that simple.

RAJ READING: There IS no situation to which miracles do not apply, and by applying them to all situations you will gain the real world.

RAJ: If you're looking with a conflicted mind, one where you have made divisions in your definitions of everything into good and bad, right and wrong, real and unreal, worthy and unworthy, and on and on and on—you, by virtue of your conflictedness, will see conflict; not because it's there, but because that is what you're wishing to see, that is what you're insisting on seeing. And you insist on it by an unwillingness to be miracle-minded. You do it by simply withholding your willingness to see God there.

RAJ READING: There IS no situation to which miracles do not apply, and by applying them to all situations you will gain the real world.

RAJ: That means the daffodil that's blooming this morning, or the slugs that will come shortly, or the traffic on the freeway. Stop making the distinctions, and where you had been making the distinctions, difference will disappear, and God will appear. What a thing divinely is and what its divine intent is will begin to register with you, because you have neglected to make distinctions. And so the real world will begin to become illuminated to you. That's the way it works.

RAJ READING: ...you will gain the real world. For in this holy perception you will be made whole...

RAJ: Why? Because you're not keeping yourself fragmented with your capacity to see differences; a supposed capacity you have to see differences where they do not actually exist.

RAJ READING: For in this holy perception you will be made whole, and the Atonement will radiate from YOUR acceptance of it for YOURSELF to everyone...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: Everything.

...and everything...

RAJ READING: ...the Holy Spirit sends you for your blessing.

RAJ: What blessing? Your miracle-readiness. Your willingness to see God where your conditioned thinking said God was absent. A willingness to see God where you had neglected to see God before.

Again, because it's so important.

RAJ READING: ...in this holy perception you will be made whole,...

RAJ: You will see through the lens of singularity.

RAJ READING: ...and the Atonement will radiate from YOUR acceptance of it for YOURSELF to everyone...

RAJ: And I'm adding: And everything.

RAJ READING: ...the Holy Spirit sends you for your blessing. In every Child of God...

RAJ: And every Creation of God, I'm adding.

RAJ READING: ...His blessing lies, and in YOUR blessing of the Children of God is His blessing to YOU.

RAJ: Remember? What you give, you get to keep. What you are willing to pass on to your Brother, or Sister, or daffodil, or slug, as it moves through you by virtue of your willingness to make the gift, it blesses you and becomes yours as well. You see?

"Well, it would be must easier if I could get it for myself first. You know, I wouldn't have to deal with the bitch over there, or the bastard over there, or the stinginess over here. I wouldn't have to deal with that. Let me get it first so that I'm very clear and not bothered by those things, and then it will be very easy for me to make the gift of it to my Brother." No.

You see, you can't insist on maintaining the distinctions between a good place to do it and a bad place to do it, or the right place to do it or the wrong place to do it, or the best condition to do it or the worst condition to do it. Because as long as you do that, you withhold the gift. And when you withhold the gift, it doesn't infill you and by virtue of its extension become yours.

So you're going to have to work with the situations that confront you. And you know what? You can say, "Well, the Holy Spirit must have picked this situation for me because there was so much for me to learn." No. It just happens that God happens to be presenting Himself right there in front of you, and you're entertaining a rather lousy perception of Him that is absolutely unnecessary for you to employ. And all that's called for is for you to abandon its employment.

Stop having the misperception—the biased, unkind perception of the situation—and say, or become curious enough to say, “I would love to see the more of God that is here than I’m presently seeing. I would love to see it. I am willing to stop doing whatever is blocking me from seeing it. And I ask for the Father’s Help to let it go.”

RAJ READING: Everyone...

RAJ: Everyone.

RAJ READING: ...in the world must play his part in the redemption of the world,...

RAJ: Why? Because the world is such a god-awful place, and it needs your help? No. Because you’re the one who’s looking at the Kingdom of Heaven and claiming that it’s something else and believing yourself. You must play your part in the redemption of the world by withdrawing the overlay of your definitions upon it.

RAJ READING: Everyone in the world must play his part in the redemption of the world, to recognize that the world HAS BEEN redeemed.

RAJ: Which really means, to recognize that the world never became what you imagined it became. It’s always been the Kingdom of Heaven.

So be careful about the word “redemption” and be careful about how you conceptualize the part you play in redeeming the world, because you will never be transforming an unredeemed, an actual unredeemed world into a redeemed world. You will not be coercing an illusion or an unreality into a clear manifestation of Reality, because there simply is no such world for you to apply your power to, to bless it and change it from its awfulness.

RAJ READING: ...the world HAS BEEN redeemed.

RAJ: It’s already redeemed because from the beginning, it was the Kingdom of Heaven and nothing else.

RAJ READING: You cannot see the invisible.

RAJ: And we’re not talking here about the world, the real world. We’re talking about the sudden shift of perception. That is what a miracle is.

RAJ READING: You cannot see the invisible.

RAJ: You cannot see the sudden shift of perception in you when it occurs.

RAJ READING: Yet if you see its effects you KNOW it must be there. By perceiving what it DOES, you recognize its being.

RAJ: When correction of an illusion occurs, when a disease disappears, when an injury heals very rapidly or instantaneously, and you stand in awe of it because you know of nothing you did to make it happen, you will in retrospect discover that there was something you hadn't been doing that you had been doing before. You will realize that for some reason you were willing to look with innocent eyes; for some reason you were willing to be miracle-ready; for some reason you were willing to let something beyond your confidences about the way things work, happen. And so you realize that you did play a part in it. But it wasn't a part of authority and it wasn't a part of personal power. You will realize that there was a point at which you, for whatever unknown reason, became humble enough to stand in receipt of a miracle. You were unguarded enough to let in something other than your awful perception that you were so sure of.

RAJ READING: By perceiving what it DOES,...

RAJ: Miracle-readiness. Miracle-mindedness. The miracle itself.

RAJ READING: ...you recognize its being. And by WHAT it does, you learn what it IS.

RAJ: What does that mean? Well, it means you realize that it isn't the result of negative thinking. It isn't the result of your personal confidence. And it isn't the result of any personal power you have. But you recognize, you learn that it is what presences itself when you stand down from the podium of authority, when you stand down from self-righteousness.

RAJ READING: You cannot SEE your abilities, but you gain confidence in their existence as they enable you to...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...ACT.

RAJ: Not just walk around in dreamy bliss, but to act. To behave in perfect concordance with the Singularity of Being, the fundamental nature of your Mind.

Again.

RAJ READING: You cannot SEE your abilities, but you gain confidence in their existence as they enable you to ACT. And the RESULTS of your actions you CAN see.

RAJ: Well, after a miracle has happened, you can look back and you can say, "Wow! For whatever reason, I didn't behave in this circumstance the way I usually behaved in the past. I didn't respond with fear like I normally would have in the past. I wasn't overcome with a sense of aggressive power confronting me where I would have in the past. And as a result, the ultra-simple answer was clear to me, and that's what I acted upon. I didn't even figure it out. I can't even credit myself with superior reasoning power that brought me to this awareness. Oh! Do you suppose there must be a God?"

There is learning. And with that realization, you're able to go into the next situation or circumstance, or the rest of your day or the rest of your week, from an entirely new vantage point, so that the learning from that situation becomes part of the context of your being present with your life. And thus your miracle-readiness begins to be applied to everything much more easily.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is invisible, but you can see the RESULTS of His Presence, and through them...

RAJ: The results.

RAJ READING: ...you will learn that He is there.

RAJ: Well, come on. Who is this "He" that is there? That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

And so the experience of the Presence of the Holy Spirit begins to register with you as the Presence of your Right Mind—which once again significantly defragments your concept of yourself, bringing your mind into a greater singularity; less conflict. And again, this will begin to color with new colors, with bright colors, joyful colors, peaceful colors, all the experiences that follow—which constitute again increased miracle-readiness, increased undefendedness against the sudden influx of a sudden shift of perception.

RAJ READING: What He...

RAJ: Your Right Mind. The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...enables you to do is clearly NOT of this world, for miracles violate every law of reality as this world judges it. Every law of time and space, of magnitude and mass, of prediction and control is transcended,...

RAJ: How else could there be an instantaneous healing, let's say, of a broken bone? And don't think that such a thing hasn't already happened multiple times, many times. What do you think has happened when you've been in a traffic situation that there was no way through, and you came through and there was no impact of any kind? What do you think it is that happens when something you have been conditioned to experience great fear about occurred, and you didn't experience the fear and there was no suffering from it?

Well, every law of time and space, of magnitude and mass, of prediction and control has been transcended in the littlest miracle. They are transcended because they aren't what governs. The miracle is what governs them.

RAJ READING: Every law of time and space, of magnitude and mass, of prediction and control is transcended...

RAJ: We'll get to the end of the sentence.

This is what you have to look forward to. This is what you should be standing in expectation of in every moment you're experiencing.

No, but you're just so damn sure that it takes a certain amount of time to get to work, and you're going to be late, and in all likelihood all of the lights will be red that you will run into, delaying you even further, and blah, blah, blah, blah, on and on you go. And so you're looking at the Kingdom of Heaven with the potential of experiencing it with the Holy Spirit in which every law of time and space, of magnitude and mass, of prediction and control can be transcended, and you're stuck with what you are confident is true.

Well, stop being so confident, so that your trip to work in the morning can be miraculous, and so that your perspective and perception of life might be transformed significantly. Because if that isn't what all of this is about, then go home and throw this book in the fireplace and make do with what you have. And stop complaining about what you have; accept it, and find happiness to the best of your ability.

But if you're going to be reading these things and if you're going to be claiming to be actually interested in waking up, then start expecting the laws of time and space, of magnitude and mass, of prediction and control to be transcended. Start expecting to see matter behave like Spirit, because you're willing to actually consider the possibility that it never was matter, that it always has been Spirit, and that it is always at, I'm going to say, the mercy of the beneficent Movement of God called Creation.

When you wake up tomorrow morning, you wake up to the opportunity to see the Kingdom of Heaven, because it's the Kingdom of Heaven you're waking up in. You know, let this sink in. Let this register with you, so that a truly genuine curiosity begins to come into play. Why? Because a truly genuine curiosity constitutes miracle-readiness and miracle-mindedness, and releases you from every confidence you have employed that this or that situation or circumstance is not amenable to a miracle, including the cancer you seem to be experiencing, including the headache you seem to be experiencing, including the awful relationship that you have with your Brother or Sister because of uncontrollable jealousy.

Let miracle-readiness, let miracle-mindedness be available to every single experience that presents itself to you during the day, else all you will experience will be what you expect to happen, and you will remain bound by your expectation until you abandon it. Again, it's that simple. That is the crux of the matter.

Now we'll finish the sentence.

RAJ READING: Every law of time and space, of magnitude and mass,...

RAJ: These are all the laws of physics.

RAJ READING: ...of prediction and control is transcended, for what the Holy Spirit enables you to do is clearly beyond ALL of them. Perceiving His results, you will understand WHERE He must be, and finally KNOW what He is.

RAJ: That's the wonder of it.

RAJ READING: Perceiving His results, you will understand WHERE He must be,...

RAJ: Well, where must He be? Right there in you, because it's your Right Mind. And you will...

RAJ READING: ...finally KNOW what He is.

RAJ: You in your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: Perceiving His results,...

RAJ: What would that mean? Perceiving or experiencing the miracle that you realize you played a part in even though you were not behaving as an orphan, even though you were not behaving with imagined authority, even though you were behaving without utilizing reason and logic impeccably. That's how you come back into Singularity. That's how you come back into clarity. That's how you come back into Sanity.

Now:

RAJ READING: You cannot see the Holy Spirit, but you can see His manifestations. And unless you do, you will not realize He is there.

RAJ: Well, what's a manifestation of a Holy Spirit? It's a blessing that you are blessed with that you weren't personally responsible for, and apparently no other ego was responsible for it either. One of those blessings that make you think, "Hmm. There must be a God. There must be something in charge here beside me. And there must be something in charge here beside some other ego."

RAJ READING: You cannot see the Holy Spirit, but you can see His manifestations. And unless you do, you will not realize He is there. Miracles are His witnesses, and speak for His Presence.

RAJ: Miracles are the witnesses of your Right Mind, and speak for the Presence, the capital "P" Presence of your Right Mind. And you should be having more and more of these experiences every day and every week.

"Oh, yeah. Should. Oh, yeah, you should be having. And what's wrong with you for not having them?"

Bullshit! You should be having it because it's your Birthright to be having it. It doesn't matter why you aren't having it. It matters that it's your Birthright to be having it. It matters that it's the Gift of God to you, that no one and no thing can actually take away. And so it's actually present with you. It's actually functional in you. And you've just been so busy with your little imaginations that it has been escaping your attention. You should be experiencing them more and more frequently, because every situation is primed for the event of a miracle registering with you.

RAJ READING: What you cannot see becomes real to you only through the witnesses who speak for it.

RAJ: An undeserved blessing speaks for something. A real blessing is one that you feel truly blessed by; a little bit in awe of. It's an out of the ordinary experience that doesn't escape your attention, and automatically points you in the direction of asking, "Where did that come from?"—which automatically points you in the direction of some Ultimate Power or Presence, because the experience of it is so out of the ordinary. And all of you have these experiences, even if they're very small.

RAJ READING: What you cannot see becomes real to you only through the witnesses who speak for it. For you can be AWARE of what you cannot see, and it can become compellingly real to you as its presence becomes manifest THROUGH you.

RAJ: How many of you have been with a friend or an acquaintance who is in the middle of a problem, and you had no idea what the answer was and you were willing just to be present with that person without judgment—vulnerable, genuine and simply there with them, for them—and things came out of your mouth that afterwards you say, "Where did that come from?" And what comes out of your mouth causes the friend or the acquaintance afterwards to say, "I don't know what came over you, but everything you said was absolutely perfect for me. And I'm free of the distress that I was experiencing. Thank you."

And you sit there and you say, "Thank you for what? Ask me to do it again and I couldn't possibly do it because I don't know what I did." Well, that's the orphan talking. That's the one who thinks he has no connection with a Source. No. From that standpoint, you don't know what happened.

And you know what? From the standpoint of the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind, you don't know what happened either, in this sense: what happened wasn't reasoned out; what happened wasn't calculated; what happened involved no control—all of the things which you as an orphan value because they are what cause you to seem to have value and valid presence.

But the experience that occurred that you couldn't duplicate if you wanted to and which blessed your Brother, or your acquaintance, is one that you can count on happening again and again and again, when you get out of the way, as you discover you had gotten out of the way at the time. And so there is a confidence that begins to accompany you. A confidence that there is a God; that there is something greater than this little, tiny, orphan mentality that you thought you were, which knows how to be perfectly in any given situation.

A way of being that blesses—blesses the one you're with and blesses you. And how does it bless you most? It blesses you most by uncovering the fact that the apparent need to be personally competent begins to dissolve. What a relief.

What a relief to discover that it never was a part of the true experience of Being for you in your own right to be competent, and to have to be competent in order to be respectable and valid. If you stop and think about it, you'll discover just how much fear you experience as a result of this apparently absolute need for you to be competent in your own right, all by yourself—meaning without any underlying justification for it; a competence that comes from you lifting yourself up by your bootstraps. You see, [laughing] it's a wonderful picture. The only thing that's going to give you a feeling of security and confidence is if you're standing on solid ground. But no, the orphan in you says, "I've got to lift myself up by my own bootstraps." You know, it's saying, "I have to become ungrounded. I've got to lift myself up." Off of what? The ground. Up, up, and away from the immovable, infinite Presence of you that is what God is being right there where you are, because you're not an orphan.

Here we come to talk about actions again; the capacity to act.

RAJ READING: Do...

RAJ: Do.

RAJ READING: Do the Holy Spirit's work,...

RAJ: Not the orphan's work. Stop doing the orphan's work. Stop playing the orphan role. And stop trying to get charge of the orphanage.

RAJ READING: Do the Holy Spirit's work, for you SHARE in His function.

RAJ: That sentence was written to orphans who might be able to hear that there is no orphanage and there's no orphanhood.

You don't really share in the Holy Spirit's function. The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. So the Holy Spirit's function is your real function. But, you know, we don't have to blast you with it right off the bat, and so gently it is said:

RAJ READING: ...you SHARE in His function.

RAJ: Well, that's a pabulum; meat and potatoes is. His function is your function. And it's not shared at all. And it's time for you to own up to it. Claim it and be that way.

RAJ READING: As your function in Heaven...

RAJ: Meaning in Reality.

RAJ READING: ...is creation, so your function on earth is healing.

RAJ: As your function in Heaven is creation, so your function in the orphanage is healing.

RAJ READING: God shares His function with you in Heaven, and the Holy Spirit shares His with you on earth.

RAJ: Until you stop dallying with the ego, the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind, is held in trust for you. And it seems to be something different from the orphan you think you are. It isn't, but it seems to be.

And as long as you think you're an orphan, I have to talk to you in the language that you're familiar with. And of course, when I'm talking to you in that language, I'm undoing the language and I'm undoing the commitment you have to the language, and I'm challenging the confidences you have in the way you're looking at things. But until you let the Holy Spirit, which is your Right Mind, in and don't hold yourself separate from it, and let the unification or singularity occur, then you're going to have to behave as better orphans. You are going to have to behave as though you are orphans graduating from orphanhood; coming back into your Right Mind.

And so this process, as long as you spread it out on a timeline, will involve your engaging in healing. What? Correction. Correction of illusion. The willing abandonment on your part of misunderstandings that you've thought were real and true. The disciplined willingness to give your attention to the Truth instead of the illusion. Period.

RAJ READING: ...your function in Heaven is creation,...

RAJ: Well, even if you think you're in an orphanage, you're still in the Kingdom of Heaven. And you're still the Christ, and so your function is still creation. Until you let go of the confidence you have that you're an orphan, that divine behavior, that "function of creation" is going to consistently and increasingly be manifest as evidences of healing in the world as you're perceiving it, because that's the way the scales begin to fall from your eyes; the scales which color and distort your perception of the Kingdom of Heaven that you're looking at all the time.

And so this is the sense of the sentence that says:

RAJ READING: As your function in Heaven is creation, so your function on earth is healing.

RAJ: It isn't that you're on the earth, and you have a function while you're on the earth. It's that as long as you're defining the Kingdom of Heaven as "the world and universe"—a physical entity—you are going to be constantly engaged in having your perceptions healed. And therefore, healing is going to be the name of the game for you and your Brothers, because whatever healing you allow within yourself is going to be reflected in the way you treat your Brothers—which is going to inspire your Brothers and Sisters to let that in themselves because they're going to have a new model. They're going to have new evidences of something invisible to them: their divinity.

RAJ READING: God shares His function with you in Heaven, and the Holy Spirit shares His with you on earth.

Now:

RAJ READING: As long as you believe you have two functions, so long will you need correction.

RAJ: You hear that word "correction"? We hear that word "correction" over and over and over again. Correction means the undoing of something false. It means change.

Spiritual awakening and bliss can be conceived of as something which you can experience without change actually occurring. And supposedly you can be in your bliss while your body is ravaged by cancer and you won't be bothered a bit. Bullshit! Crap! And all of the other words that could be used, which I won't make Paul use. But you can use those words and he can use it in his mind. But call it for what it is. Something that doesn't deserve your recognition or honor.

"Correction"—it is the most wonderful word in this book. Why talk about correction if correction is impossible? Why talk about correction if correction isn't inevitable? Why talk about correction if it isn't the most important thing? To not affect the status quo and to be happy in the misery of the status quo, is absolute insanity. Have greater expectations than that. I encourage you to even dare to be demanding of the evidence of correction, because correction is what you want; not stupid bliss.

You want those teeth that are falling out of your mouth to be whole again, not subject to decay. You want that heart that's weak or irregular to embody singularity; perfect harmony of its function of identifying God and God's Purpose. And you want the evidence of it. And so you're going to dare to be miracle-minded enough to let it happen instead of arguing against it with your confidence that here is a place where God does not reign supreme—meaning your heart, or your mouth, or any other part of your body.

Now, it sounds as though I'm talking about being assertive. But I'm not talking about engaging will. I'm talking about engaging in an impassioned willingness; not an impassioned willfulness.

RAJ READING: As long as you believe you have two functions, so long will you need correction.

RAJ: Well, what are the two functions? There's only two functions you could have. One is to glorify God by listening for the Holy Spirit. Or, to glorify orphanhood by glorifying the private mind that you think you have and the private state of being that is truly yours to be. The latter is a constant state of fear, and the former is a constant state of Love. Which function is yours? Fear or Love.

RAJ READING: As long as you believe you have two functions, so long will you need correction. For this belief...

RAJ: It's just a belief. Remember? A belief is something you made up. It's a string of words or ideas that you've hung together, and then at the end of it you put an exclamation point. And it constituted a declaration of independence; a declaration of personal private authority of your own. A belief is just an imagination.

RAJ READING: ...this belief is...

RAJ: However.

RAJ READING: ...the DESTRUCTION of peace,...

RAJ: Your peace.

RAJ READING: ...a goal in direct opposition to the Holy Spirit's purpose.

RAJ: The purpose of that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. That means that for you, it's a state of inner conflict in which there can be no peace and no real capacity to love, because what you're committed to is that which is the absence of the capacity to join with and be present with and involved with someone else.

In this state of mind, in any state of mind:

RAJ READING: You see what you EXPECT, and you expect what you INVITE.

RAJ: Listen to that again.

RAJ READING: You see what you EXPECT, and you expect what you INVITE.

RAJ: It doesn't matter whether you're expecting and inviting disaster. It doesn't matter whether you're expecting and inviting death or disease. You will see what you expect, and you expect what you invite. It also doesn't matter if what you are expecting and inviting is a miracle. The results of the two are different, but you must understand that whatever you're expecting and inviting, you're going to get. No. Whatever you're expecting and inviting, you have. Always.

RAJ READING: You see what you EXPECT, and you expect what you INVITE.

RAJ: You get up in the morning and you give yourself a quick physical to see how you are, expecting to find out. Right? Well, your expectation is the invitation to what you're looking for.

RAJ READING: Your perception is the result of your invitation, coming to you as you sent for it. Whose manifestations would you see? Of whose presence would you be convinced? For you will believe in what you MANIFEST, and as you look out so will you see in. Two ways of looking at the world are in your mind, and your perception will reflect the guidance you chose.

[Repeating.]

RAJ READING: Two ways of looking at the world are in your mind, and your perception will reflect the guidance you chose.

RAJ: What did you choose to look at the world with? What are you choosing to look at your body with? Are you choosing to look at it with the Holy Spirit, inviting God's Perspective of what He's being right there where you are? Or are you asking the orphan's mentality—which sees itself as Sourceless and therefore incompetent and invalid—which is left with the eternal task of trying to make something out of the nothing that it is?

RAJ READING: ...your perception will reflect the guidance you chose.

RAJ: Your perception does reflect the guidance you choose.

Now what I want all of you to know is that this skill of expecting and inviting is one that is well-developed in you. It's absolutely perfectly developed in you. You are exercising it with perfect skill. So, what does this mean? It means you aren't lost and you aren't convicted in and by whatever circumstance you're in. It means that the circumstance you're in is one you expected and invited. And because the skill of expecting and inviting is one perfectly honed in you and perfectly developed in you, you can expect and invite something else with absolute assurance that you will have what you expect and invite.

So there's no need for any sense of guilt, because you've never gotten beyond the simple practicality of the fact that what you expect, you invite, and what you invite, you get. And if you want sour lemons, you can have sour lemons. But if you want sweet lemonade, you can have sweet lemonade—just expect and invite sweet lemonade. Just start doing something new. And ask the Holy Spirit what the something new might be. And ask the Holy Spirit to stand with you in your willingness to be miracle-ready, miracle-minded.

You've already been practicing the answer for a very long time perfectly. You've just been practicing it in the negative. Now just flip it over and start doing something new with your mind every day.

And where you might have found, especially after I brought it up last week, that you give a character to your body and you say, "It's giving up on me," or "It's an angry cut," you probably have found that you characterize nature the same way. Why, just the other day the forecaster said, "Winter is having a hard time giving up." Absolutely asinine. You see, you've simply got to be alert and stop using your mind the way you've been using it and start using it a new way.

"My body is the visibility and tangibility of my Individuality. And my Individuality is God presencing Himself right where I am. Therefore, whatever God is being must be that which my body is intent upon rendering visible and tangible, in glory, in glorification of what God is being and intending right where I am."

You see? Give a new word, but listen to the Holy Spirit for what the words will be, because they will be a declaration of the Truth about your body, which you will then expect to have the experience of. And the expectation will constitute the invitation. And the invitation will necessitate your having what's been invited.

Now you've already been doing this—these steps—but you've been doing them negatively. You've been doing them with confidence that your body is a temporary host for your soul—which isn't going to last forever, and which is inevitably going to begin to break down and collapse, and finally abandon you and stop being a host for your soul. Now that's just another expectation and invitation which, if you have that expectation and make that invitation, you will surely have as an experience—until you die and discover that, "Oh! Oh! I'm all still here! I thought something was happening and it wasn't." And you have the opportunity... [laughing] you have the opportunity to abandon the way the orphan mentality chose to look at the Christ that you were and the Kingdom of Heaven that everything was.

So, we're talking about making that shift of choice now. You're bound to succeed because you're already succeeding. You're already succeeding by creating sour lemon juice. You can do it if you want. But want something else. Okay? And just do it without engaging in guilt and self-criticism and all of the rest of the "orphan mentality" crap that you use to reinforce the lie about you; an orphanhood that couldn't possibly be the truth about you.

I love you, every one of you.

And I hope you are feeling invigorated in your willingness to be miracle-ready, miracle-minded. Willing... willing to have what your limited perceptions don't allow for. Willing to have what your limited perceptions don't allow for.

I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

AND WILL BE UPDATED

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet. We'll go right into the book.

RAJ READING: I am the manifestation of the Holy Spirit, and when you see me it will be because you have invited Him.

[Pause.]

RAJ READING: I am the manifestation of the Holy Spirit,...

RAJ: That doesn't mean that I'm a product of the Holy Spirit; a tool that is being used for your benefit.

We can turn it around the other way:

RAJ READING IT DIFFERENTLY: When you see me, it will be because you have invited in the Holy Spirit.

RAJ: If you haven't happened to ask to be in touch with the Holy Spirit but you have reached out to me—in other words, when you have decided to break your isolation and draw upon a Source beyond your best thinking, best reasoning, best judgments—and I respond, it means that you have also connected with the Holy Spirit; that which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: I am the manifestation of the Holy Spirit, and when you see me it will be because you have invited Him. For He WILL send you His witnesses if you will but look upon them.

RAJ: If you seek the Holy Spirit, you get me. It is my task, it is my function to guide you Home when you have decided to abandon the orphanage.

RAJ READING: Remember always that you see what you seek, for what you seek you WILL find.

RAJ: And I will add: And you do find it's the way it works.

As we discussed last week:

RAJ READING: The ego finds what IT seeks,...

RAJ: Or, for clarity, the orphan mentality finds what it seeks.

RAJ READING: ...and ONLY that. It does not find love, for that is NOT what it is seeking.

RAJ: "Whoa!" you say. "Even if I am ignorant, I still do seek love. I look for love everywhere."

But the simple fact is that the orphan mentality is an unjoined, independent, unconnected mentality or thing—imagination actually. It doesn't seek for joining because its premise, as we've been discussing all along, is that its task is to make something out of itself on its own. Its success can only be the result of independently validating itself and proving itself to be real even though it has no Source.

Now, love, on the other hand, is what? Love is the willingness to let in. Love is the willingness to be undefended, unguarded. Love is the willingness to not be independent; to not be a sole authority. It's a willingness to be joined.

You know, the one thing that the orphan mentality, or the ego—whichever you want to call it—is outstanding at is being independent. Everything it does, it does for the purpose of confirming its independence and that its independence can be accomplished successfully. It avoids being in a state of need. In other words, it avoids being dependent.

And as we've discussed before, it does it with pride. It is proud not to have to lean on anyone. It is proud to promote the ethic of independent success. It takes what the Course says and points out to its "brother" or its "sister"—and of course, those words are very loosely used by an orphan, because, of course, an orphan can't really have an actual brother or sister—but it's a friendly choice of words to use to cover up the solitariness of being an orphan; to make it sound like there is "family." It takes pride in pointing out to a brother or a sister that that brother or sister is creating his or her own circumstances, and that that brother or sister can make a different decision, but it's up to that other brother. And there's a willingness to stand and observe the brother, and report back to the brother how well or poorly he or she might be doing.

But you see, there's never a joining with that brother or sister, because the minute joining occurs, independence becomes, or, shall I say, the lines, the boundaries of independence become fuzzy, and that's very threatening. That's very threatening to the orphan mentality. If the boundaries of independent selfhood become fuzzy, then the potential for successfully demonstrating independence and validity becomes fuzzy. And the purpose of being—from the orphan's standpoint—becomes unclear, unfocused, and therefore dangerous to its health.

So the orphan mentality is never looking for love, because it disallows for joining, for being present with and for a Brother.

RAJ READING: The ego finds what IT seeks, and ONLY that. It does not find love, for that is NOT what it is seeking. Yet seeking and finding are the same, and if you seek for two goals you will find them, but you will RECOGNIZE NEITHER.

RAJ: You will not find yourself at one with them. Recognition always means the experience of finding yourself in what you're recognizing; finding unity where difference had been experienced.

RAJ READING: Yet seeking and finding are the same, and if you seek for two goals you will find them, but you will RECOGNIZE NEITHER. For you will think they are the same because you WANT them both. The mind always strives for integration, and if it is split and wants to KEEP the split, it will believe it has one goal by MAKING it one.

RAJ: As an orphan, as a solitary alone authorizer, entity, or whatever you want to call it, you can want something more than what you're experiencing. The dissonance and the discomfort of orphanhood drives the orphan to want more.

And that orphan can arrive at a point where it realizes that maybe there is another option besides its own struggle to establish its good for itself. It hears others talk about a God. It even hears others talk about A Course in Miracles. And so it says, "Ah, I'll look into that. Maybe there is some way I can use that too." But it's always used that in addition to "what I'm already employing;" to use it to make the attempt to be successfully and validly independent easier. And so it says, "I'll look into this." And it reads the ideas, it considers the ideas, and then incorporates it into the state of orphanhood.

And now where it had talked in the past about "brothers" and "sisters"—as I said using the terms loosely because there cannot be any such thing between orphans—it now talks about "fellow Christs," but still sees his fellow Christs—just using new words for "brothers" and "sisters"—but still sees his fellow Christs as quite independent; capable of being more successful independent agents because of who they really are—the Christs.

And so this one can get on an elevator, or be in an audience with many other people, and be there all alone, along with all of the other Christs who are there all alone, creating their experiences all alone but together. And so there is an artificial sense of family which never bears fruit because no one ever really joins with any other one in the audience or on the elevator. No one ever really lets the other in. Sometimes one will appear to let another in, but ultimately it will only be so that he can pontificate to that brother to help set him straight in his independent task of validating himself because really he's the Christ. Still there is no union. Still there is no communion. Still there is no joining of any sort.

And so this orphan who seems to have two goals—one, to authorize everything for himself; and the other, to let in some divine wisdom from apparently outside himself—this represents a split mind, a split purpose, a split want. But in the orphan's mind, in your mind, you can fool yourself into believing that it is one desire, that it is one want, and that it represents the integrity, the integratedness of you. Because of this, you never see that the results you get from your attempting to authorize things on your own, and the things that you get when you try to incorporate letting in something bigger than you—you don't see that those two things are actually different. And you feel that you are engaging in this split activity from your integrity, from your singularity.

RAJ READING: The mind always strives for integration, and if it is split and wants to KEEP the split, it will believe it has one goal by MAKING it one.

We said before that WHAT you project is up to you, but it is NOT up to you WHETHER to project, for projection is a law of mind. Perception IS projection, and you look in BEFORE you look out. As you look in you choose the guide for seeing,...

RAJ: See, that's how actually independent the orphan is. No matter which guide it chooses, it always seeks for a guide.

RAJ READING: As you look in you choose the guide for seeing, and THEN you look out and behold his witnesses.

RAJ: You look out and you see the messengers returning to you that you sent out to gather information to tell you how you are, to tell you how your world is, so that you might better be prepared to defend yourself against it, or utilize it to your advantage and to the disadvantage of everyone else, while at the same time attempting to fool the others into believing that they haven't been screwed.

RAJ READING: As you look in you choose the guide for seeing, and THEN you look out and behold his witnesses. This is WHY you find what you seek. What you want in YOURSELF you will make manifest by projection,...

RAJ: That's a fact. That's a law.

RAJ READING: What you want in YOURSELF you will make manifest by projection, and you will accept it FROM the world because you put it there BY wanting it.

RAJ: Whether you like to acknowledge it or not, you have rules of conduct by which or according to which you behave, and according to which you interpret the world you're looking at. And whatever the rules are that you hold yourself to in the process of attempting to turn yourself into a valid independent authority, you will have that experience. Those rules will govern what you see, whether what you're seeing is what is really there or not.

You do not realize to what degree you are bound by your thoughts, your reasoning, and your justifications. You may not even think you're bound. But I'm here to tell you that you are experiencing unjustifiable discomfort, unjustifiable suffering, and there's a way out from it.

RAJ READING: When you think you are projecting what you do NOT want, it is still because you DO want it.

RAJ: Now it's not necessary to get into heavy psychology here. You say, "I do not want to suffer," and yet you drive down the road and somebody screams past you at high speed, driving dangerously—and you look around for the cop that going to correct the situation, and there is none there. "Injustice! Injustice!" flashes in your mind. Red letters: "Injustice! Injustice!" A little further on the road, you happen to go five miles over the speed limit and "Whoa!!!"—red lights flashing behind you. Again, "Injustice! Injustice! How come he can get away with it and I can't?"

You see, you don't want, you don't really want to be able to get away with it. You don't really want to break the law. You don't really want to drive in a way that's unsafe or hazardous for others on the road. It's not really in your nature.

But you give yourself misery, because you are choosing to look at your world through the lenses of conflict, through the lenses of polarity, opposition, opposition which calls for correction. You're seeing through the lens of righteousness, ready to see "Injustice! Injustice! Injustice!" before the event occurs that seems to validate the cry for justice because injustice has just occurred. And so you have projected injustice into your world. You've sent out the messenger, and a messenger has come back to you confirming to you your righteous state, of which you are quite proud. And so you create for yourself suffering, when you say, "I don't want to suffer."

RAJ READING: When you think you are projecting what you do NOT want, it is still because you DO want it.

RAJ: Many times you are suffering from something occurring in your world that your clear reasoning does not allow you to engage in. I'm not just talking about breaking the law. Sometimes you suffer because other people are experiencing more freedom and joy than you are, and it's because they don't hold themselves to the same principles you hold yourself. Ooh! Reeks of righteousness again.

You see, someone else is doing something that your mindset does not give you permission to do. And some of the things that your mindset does not give you permission to do, constitute illegitimate bondage—but you are bound to stay true to your rules, because staying true to your rules is the way you get to the point of successfully validating yourself as an independent authorizer.

And so you create for yourself experiences that you don't want, but you really do want them—because if you didn't experience the bondage, you would have to invalidate some of your pet rules, you would have to invalidate some of the mindset that you are using—and you don't want to do that. You want to continue to see things the way you see them, even if they bring you experiences of conflict. And so you have experiences of conflict because you want them, or, below that is the fact, because you don't want to release what brings them to you, because what brings them to you is part of the infrastructure of the successful independent authorizer that you are striving to become.

Again:

RAJ READING: When you think you are projecting what you do NOT want, it is still because you DO want it. This leads directly to dissociation, for it represents the acceptance of two goals, each perceived in a DIFFERENT place, separated from each other BECAUSE you made them different. The mind then sees a divided world OUTSIDE itself, but not WITHIN.

RAJ: You see? You say, "My mind is perfectly aligned. My mind is perfectly consistent. My mind is singular. And I know I have integrity. And I value myself. I love myself. But it's a pretty lousy world out there."

RAJ READING: The mind then sees a divided world OUTSIDE itself, but not WITHIN. This gives it...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...an illusion of integrity, and enables it to believe that it is pursuing one goal.

RAJ: Singular, in other words.

RAJ READING: As long as you perceive the world as split, YOU are not healed. For to be healed is to pursue one goal because you have ACCEPTED only one, and WANT but one.

RAJ: Now the important thing to understand is that, as an orphan engaged in the orphan mentality, you really don't know the difference between what is true and what is not. You don't know the difference between Creation or Reality that is as it really is and confronts you, and the world you have made up by applying different definitions to Creation than what it really is. You don't know the difference. And so you can't make a true choice between them as long as you continue to rely upon the orphan mentality that you have nurtured and built and continue to strive to establish as real in its own right.

It doesn't mean you're lost because you can't tell the difference. It simply means that you have to be willing to accept the idea that what I'm telling you is true, and that there is indeed a different way of experiencing everything than the way you're experiencing it. And then drum up enough curiosity, enough genuine curiosity to explore what it might really be by inviting in a perspective greater than the one you're currently employing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you want ONLY love you will see nothing else.

RAJ: Now that is not something that the orphan mentality is capable of. It sees love as skillfully manipulating your Brother to get him to do what builds you up, and hopefully doing it in such a skillful way that he doesn't realize you've taken advantage of him and demeaned him in the process. That's what the orphan mentality designates. That is what the orphan mentality practices, calling it "love."

RAJ READING: When you want ONLY love you will see nothing else.

RAJ: But I'm telling you that you won't want only love until you have arrived at a point where you're willing to abandon the artificial boundary that you have placed around your mind, saying, "This little part of the infinitude of me, is all there is of me." You won't abandon love, you won't abandon what blocks you from the experience of love until you're willing to reach out beyond your current mental state and invite something greater than you in.

However, when you do that, when that is what you want, that is what you will have. And the messengers will come back to you confirming what love is, and confirming your capacity to feel it, and to know that you are feeling it because you are included in something bigger than just tiny, little, authoritative you. And when you feel it, you can't help but extend it to your Brother and Sister. How? Not in beautiful words, but in actual involvement.

RAJ READING: When you want ONLY love you will see nothing else. The contradictory nature of the witnesses you perceive is merely the reflection of your conflicting invitations. You have looked upon your minds and accepted opposition there,...

RAJ: Conflict. Polarization.

And you say, "Conflict's normal. Polarization... oh, the universe runs on polarity." You see?

RAJ READING: You have looked upon your minds and accepted opposition there, having SOUGHT it there.

RAJ: You say, "I didn't think a thing about it. I just looked out at the world, and it's a mess. It's totally polarized. It's totally threatening." But you've forgotten that something comes before what you see. And because you have forgotten that something comes before what you see, you end up bouncing around off of all of the high points of conflict that your world presents to you, like a ball in a pinball machine.

And what do you do to solve the problem of being bounced around? Why you learn to apply a little torque to the roll of the ball that you are, so that you can get down to the bottom end of the machine without bouncing off of high points of conflict. Or you learn to say, "Oh, I'm going to learn how to stay in my peace while I'm being bounced around. Peace is the nature of my Being, I'm told. And so I must be able to experience bliss no matter how many times I'm being bounced off high points of conflict." No. You don't learn how to skillfully not suffer while you're still being bounced around by the high points of conflict. You do it by remembering that there is something that comes before your looking out at the world and seeing conflict. It is a choice you are making.

You have forgotten you made the choice. And you need to be reminded that you have made a choice. Why? So that you can feel guilty? No. So that you might recognize the power you have that you're already employing negatively; the power you have to do something different; to send out different messengers; to want something different.

RAJ READING: You have looked upon your minds and accepted opposition there, having SOUGHT it there. But do not then believe that the witnesses for opposition are true, for they attest only to YOUR decision about reality, returning to you the message you GAVE them. Love is recognized by its messengers. If you make love manifest,...

RAJ: Because what love really is, is what you want, and you demonstrate that love is what you really want by becoming undefended against your Brother and Sister.

RAJ READING: ...its messengers will come to you because you INVITED them.

RAJ: Because you invited them.

You always get what you want. And so the key is to start wanting something different from what you have been wanting, either consciously or unconsciously.

If [you're] wanting to be a better and better independent authority, a more and more successful orphan, then you are going to get what comes along with it. You are going to get what is embedded in the very concept of being alone. And your world will reflect back to you that you are alone and, indeed, you are as vulnerable as you believe you are.

But all you need to do is ask yourself: "Do I really want to pursue this course that I have been committed to, to demonstrate that I am a valid orphan; that not having a Father and a Mother, not having a Source, does not mean I'm invalid? Do I want to remain committed to that course, knowing, as I'm now told, that it is what results in my interminable experience of polarities in my environment that I must constantly be on guard against, that for survival I must be able to be afraid of? Do I want to remain committed to this course, as respectable a course as I believe it is, when I don't like the results?"

"Or, shall I set a new course? Shall I abandon the orphan mentality? Shall I let in a perspective greater than mine, which at the bottom line you all know there is because you know you didn't create all of this Universe and all of Creation? Shall I let that in? Shall I let my boundary become permeable? Shall I become actually undefended, even though all of my conditioning says it will make me vulnerable to the worst? Shall I dare to find a way to be fully present with my Brother, not based upon my best judgments about his character and his personality and what kind of person he really is? Shall I be undefended against a better perception of him? Shall I dare to be undefended and let in what God is being right there?"

See? You have to ask yourselves these questions, because whichever one you want, you will get. And aren't you tired of what you've been getting? A new choice is called for.

RAJ READING: The power of decision is your one remaining freedom as a prisoner of this world. YOU CAN DECIDE TO SEE IT RIGHT. What YOU made of it is NOT its reality, for its reality...

RAJ: To you, at this moment, from the orphan mentality.

RAJ READING: ...is only what you GAVE it. You cannot really give anything but love to anyone or anything...

RAJ: Your Brother or Sister. The daffodil or the slug.

RAJ READING: You cannot really give anything but love to anyone or anything, nor can you really RECEIVE anything else from them.

RAJ: Why? Because of what they really Are, and what they always have been, in spite of your misperception of them.

RAJ READING: If you think you have received anything else, it is because you have looked within and thought you saw the power...

RAJ: Where? In you.

RAJ READING: ...to give something else...

RAJ: "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way. But, Father, I would rather say what a thing is. But, Father, I'd rather... I'd rather be Fatherless."

RAJ READING: If you think you have received anything else, it is because you have looked within and thought you saw the power to give something else WITHIN YOURSELF. It was only this decision that determined what you found...

RAJ: Out there.

RAJ READING: ...for it was the decision of what you SOUGHT.

RAJ: "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way."

That was what you wanted. And that is what you have at the moment. And your world as you're experiencing it, is the result of that choice. It will change in a twinkling of an eye when you change what you want. But the tough part of it is that you'll have to give up everything that you've been taking pride in. And you have been taking pride in more and more clearly demonstrating the validity of your existence without a Source; made up entirely by you.

RAJ READING: You are afraid of me because you looked within and are afraid of what you saw. Yet you could not have seen reality, for the reality of your mind is the loveliest of God's creations. Coming only from God, its power and grandeur could only bring you peace IF YOU REALLY LOOKED UPON IT. If you are afraid, it is because you saw something THAT IS NOT THERE.

RAJ: You see, as an orphan without a parent, there's really nothing there. And as long as you insist that you are an orphan—just the effect of a sperm and an egg joining; a physical process—you have no reason to see anything beautiful there. You have no capacity to see anything beautiful there, because Creation is not what backs up your existence, for you. And so you look blindly. And what you see is your blindness.

I'm going to read this again.

RAJ READING: You are afraid of me because you looked within and are afraid of what you saw. Yet you could not have seen reality, for the reality of your mind is the loveliest of God's creations.

RAJ: Of your Father's presencing of Himself, which you can't see as long as you've disowned your Father.

RAJ READING: Coming only from God, its power and grandeur...

RAJ: Its present power and grandeur, because your blindness to what it is, hasn't caused what it really is to go away.

RAJ READING: Coming only from God, its power and grandeur could only bring you peace IF YOU REALLY LOOKED UPON IT. If you are afraid, it is because you saw something THAT IS NOT THERE.

RAJ: You think you see polarity, because you think you have a personal private capacity to see polarity.

RAJ READING: Yet in that same place you could have looked upon me and all your brothers, in the perfect safety of the Mind Which created us. For we are there in the peace of the Father, who wills to project His peace through YOU.

When you have accepted your mission to PROJECT peace you will FIND it, for by MAKING IT MANIFEST you will SEE it. Its holy witnesses will surround you because you CALLED upon them and they will come to you. I have heard your call and I have answered it, but you will not look upon me nor HEAR the answer which you sought. That is because you do not yet want ONLY that. Yet as I become more real to you, you will learn that you DO want only that. And you will see me as you look within, and we will look upon the world as God created it together. Through the eyes of Christ...

RAJ: That which I am, and that which you are.

RAJ READING: Through the eyes of Christ ONLY the real world exists and can BE seen. As you decide so will you see. And all that you see but witnesses to...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...your decision.

RAJ: I'm going to come back to the simple point that your Brother is your savior.

Your Brother is your savior. The daffodil and the slug could be your savior, but life doesn't invite you to be involved with slugs and daffodils quite as overtly as it calls upon you to relate to your Brother and Sisters. Your Brothers and Sisters need peace. Your Brothers and Sisters need not to be afraid. Your Brothers and Sisters need not to be suffering. And you know what? Your Brothers and Sisters need not to have to present a good face to the world in order to be embraced.

You need not to be afraid and you need not to be suffering. You need sin, sickness, and death to be rendered unreal; dissolved from the experience of Being because they are not valid parts of Being.

You are here to be Brothers and Sisters, not using each other to build yourselves up independently, but to communicate the embrace of love that wipes out the sense of threat; that doesn't confirm threat that your Brother or Sister has sent messengers out to retrieve news about. Your Brothers and Sisters are your saviors because they give you the opportunity to be the Christ. They give you the opportunity, they actually present a demand upon you to be what you really Are, what you truly Are.

They demand of you involvement. They demand of you that you care enough to be present with them in their delusions, in their misunderstandings, in their misapprehensions, so that you might, without platitudes and boilerplate, recognize the crux of their misunderstanding so that you might be in a position to illustrate it so that it can be seen for the nonsense that it is, and so that that Brother can abandon it. It means having pitiful patience with your Brother or your Sister, and standing with them, whether it's for a long time or for a short time, until the love that you are expressing registers with them enough to allow them to abandon the infrastructure of their attempts to be a successful and valid, independent authority.

It doesn't mean standing at a distance "knowing the Truth about them." Do you see me standing at a distance, "knowing the Truth about you"? The way you see me be with you, in this fashion is the way I am with each of you within yourselves when you reach out to me there.

And I'm being facetious here, but talk about "pitiful patience," I've been with you for two thousand years. It is my joy to be here with you. It is my joy not to engage in self-righteousness, and wonder if it's all worth it because you are so stuck in the love of your current reasonings that you don't let go. I witness for you. I will witness for you forever.

And you know what? When you wake up, I will still witness for you forever, because it's my function to see the glory of God right there where you are. When you wake up, it isn't as though a job I had will be over; it's just that we will join together in the activity, and you will be happy because you are no longer suffering.

Your willingness to be present with and for your Brother, wishing to see, wanting to see the Presence of God there, will inevitably cause the messengers to come back to you confirming what you want to see. Not because it will make you great, but because you've performed your function of wanting to glorify God, not yourself, and glorify It right there where your Brother is.

Do I sit back and not interfere or not, I'm going to say, coerce? No, I definitely coerce. I definitely brother you—like mother you. I am constantly there for you, presenting to you whatever illuminates your capacity to become free of whatever is binding you. I do not leave you to your own devices, because your own devices are "orphan" devices and they will not get you anywhere.

I must be involved with you. And you must be involved with your Brothers and Sisters.

And you will be influential. I am influential. I am influencing you. I am presenting ideas that cause you to reconsider things. I present ideas that you're not anticipating. I present ideas that are outside of the box—the box you very carefully created to separate off the "little part of you that you're identifying as yourself" from the Infiniteness of You that is unbounded because it is the Presence of God being All right there where you are.

But the one thing I'm not (and the one thing you dare not be) is someone helping you (is your helping someone) on the basis of your very best, most highly-developed, orphan mentality, because I promise you that in every act you engage in, it will be a self-serving act and not a gift at all. And it will be an act that takes away from your Brother, and depletes him and keeps you depleted.

Want something new. Decide to want something new. And then abandon self-reliance. Because I tell you that whatever your sense of self is at the moment, is not the whole of you. Reach out and invite that which is True and that which is Real in. Invite God in. Invite the Holy Spirit in. Invite me in. Invite your guide in. Invite in anyone who is Awake. And decide never to make any decisions by yourself, alone, again. And when you're tempted to, catch yourself and say, "Father, Jesus, Holy Spirit, help me to see what is really needed here," so that the joining occurs. So that the joining occurs.

It's time to stop pretending... it's time to stop pretending that you're well on your spiritual path. It's time to stop presenting a picture of yourself as successful, but still aloof from your Brother. You're not managing to abandon thinking entirely, and you're not always comfortable, and you're not always in your peace. But even so, you persist in letting God in.

And you need to be more real with each other, because you all need each other's support. Again, not your pontificating, not your repeating of biblical or spiritual boilerplate, but actually being present enough with your Brother or Sister that he or she can share his or her pain or hurt so that you, because you have experienced pain and hurt yourself, can recognize them, recognize yourself in them, and be with them in full expression of encouragement, because there will be days when you can encourage, where you are not so discouraged that you can't muster up anything in you to encourage with. And there will be days when they are able to encourage when you are discouraged.

Being willing to genuinely be present with your Brother and Sister means being willing to be with them when they're unstable, and not be frightened by it because you haven't forgotten when you were unstable. You all need each other, but you will not be able to be present for each other until you can abandon this façade of perfection, this façade of stability, as though you never experienced instability before, and therefore you have no capacity to really understand them and be compassionate with them.

Why? Why do any of you get into that place? Because becoming involved with them in this way will take time—time that someone as “spiritually advanced as you” should no longer have to take, because you need to be about your Father's business of glorifying Him in everything, and being an inspiration to everyone because you are an example of how well things can work when you love God. So you must decide what you want, and you must take a look at whether what you are presently wanting is the very thing that is keeping you in a state of lack, limitation, suffering, and on and on, because you're getting what you're asking for. And I'm inviting everyone to come off their high horse and acknowledge that you're getting what you don't want, no matter how easy it might be to pass off the picture of success to your Brothers or Sisters, Brothers and Sisters. It's time to give your Brothers and Sisters your time.

A child can learn to ride a bicycle all by himself, or he can learn a little more easily with a little bit of help from someone who takes the time to steady the bike while the child grasps the experience of balance, because it's the experience of balance that has to be discovered in order for him to ride without help. Don't be too busy being so spiritual that, like the Pharisee, you pass by on the other side of the road and you miss out on what the experience is you could have if you were the Good Samaritan. I said the experience you could have, because the one the Good Samaritan helped was blessed, but it wasn't a one-way street. The Good Samaritan was blessed, because he recognized himself in his Brother, and he was not employing a façade of superiority, of uppity-ness, snobbery. Let's put it straight: self-righteousness. And humanity was embodied. And humanity always involves a joining, a unity.

If this world that you see that appears to be so chaotic is going to change, you/everyone is going to have to participate in its healing. By what? As we read last week, withdrawing the definitions you have overlaid upon it, by abandoning the boundary you have created around yourself making you separate and special, and taking the time to walk your Brother out of the cave he's walked himself into; not because you're so great, but because on that particular day you can do it. And on another particular day, someone will do it for you, because you're not there yet. And there's nothing to be proud of yet. There's nothing to feed the orphan mentality.

Am I scolding you? No. I'm just being so clear with you, so down-to-earth clear, so feet-on-the-ground clear with you that it has to become obvious to you what you need to do to have a better experience, at the same time that I'm telling you that you're totally responsible for what you're experiencing, and because you are totally responsible for it, you are doing something skillfully. I've just said that the skill is being practiced in the negative, but the skill is there. It's a well-practiced skill. And you can make a new decision and use the skill for waking up with your Brothers and Sisters.

I love you all very much.

Be with what I've said. Be less self-righteous. Be more genuine. Take the time to be humane in your actions. [said to each individual present] In your actions... and in your actions, all of you. It will take humility.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

April 1, 2006 -- A Course In Miracles Study Group with Raj/Jesus

Discussion Today

Topic: Healing, sowing, and feeling virtue go out from you

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

During the past week somebody commented that here we had been talking about healing for three or four weeks, and then suddenly last week we moved in an entirely new direction because suddenly we were talking about your Brother being your savior, and the necessity for involvement, the necessity of letting down the defenses, the barriers, the boundaries that keep each of you separate from each other in your mind and cause you along with everyone else to feel alone even in the midst of a large crowd. Well, this is part and parcel of the subject of healing. Your Brother is your savior because he provides you with the opportunity or, as I said last week, the demand to be What You Truly Are; to perform the function that it is your purpose to perform, to be.

Well, as I also discussed last week, doing this takes time. Involvement is messy. Involvement is more than just the experience of lofty platitudes. It is a dynamic connection between you and your Brother. And if your Brother finds himself bound by justifications in his own "mindset about existing" and is suffering, you must be willing to not cringe in the presence of that, but to be at peace enough within yourself to be able to be present with your Brother or your Sister right there in the muddle, so that you in your non-reaction to what he's reacting to might gently be the presence that leads the way out of the muddle.

Now there is an experience that's related in the Bible about a day when I and my disciples were out in the city, and it was a busy day in the marketplace and there were lots of people, and I sensed, as I said, that virtue had gone out from me and I said, "Who touched me?" And one of my disciples said, "The people throng you and you're asking who touched you?" And I said, "Yes, because I perceive that virtue has gone out from me." I knew I felt that a connection had occurred in which a union or a unity gelled where I was present with someone who experienced being present with me. In other words, the two of us experienced being boundaryless. And as it turned out, it was a woman who, as the Bible says, was suffering from an issue of blood. Contemporarily you could say that it was a hemorrhaging. And in that moment of communion she was healed.

Now it's my intent tonight to encourage you to find ways to get over the hurdle you feel that keeps you from connecting with your Brother in a transforming way. You just can't continue being so lofty in your spirituality that you begin to see it as beneath you to muck around with those who are still involved in the muddle. The need is not for more distance, more separation between you and your Brother, but less, where your defenses dissolve.

Now someone else this week was sharing joy at the discovery of some literature about healing that went into quite some detail about actual healings that occurred, and was quite impressed and excited at hearing of actual experiences of healing. And indeed, hearing of healing, actual healing, is inspiring. But in the same conversation, this person also shared that she had received a phone call from someone who shared that they were going through a problem having discovered that they have an unhealable disease, and said, "I feel so sorry for her."

As you look at what I've just described, can you see the disparity between the experience of joy and excitement about healing, and the fact that in the same time period that this joy was being experienced, she was experiencing sadness at this friend's predicament? That's like having, as we discussed last week, two different wants and being split, but not recognizing that it's split, because in both cases, I will tell you, that there's an underlying caring, an underlying love of Truth, an underlying love that is extended both to the new news about healing as well as the new news about the unhealable. And this person did not recognize the difference, did not recognize the polarity between the two views.

And I must ask you all, when you are relating to your Brothers and Sisters, are you in a place in your mind where you feel virtue going out from you? To say, "I feel so sad about this person," does not allow virtue to go out because virtue, the consciousness of Truth, and the unreserved sharing of it, extending of it, cannot occur while feeling sorry for this friend's predicament prevails or takes up room in one's mind. Virtue can't possibly go out.

Now the saying is, "As ye sow so shall ye reap." In other words, the messengers you send out are the messengers that will come back confirming what they were sent out to find. Well, it's not that simple because the messengers you send out, the seeds you plant, what you sow in your relationship with others, doesn't just come back to you, reporting back to you what they were planted to blossom into or grow into; they affect others as well.

It's sort of like the craziness of biologically changing plants and fruits and vegetables so that, for instance, they might grow in an easily packagable size. Because there's no way to keep what you've done private, you plant it somewhere, even in a greenhouse, and try to keep the new strain separate from everything else, and you cannot guarantee that some ant, or bug, or bee, won't find its way to the blossom, and then find its way out and spread the new strain until perhaps the original is no longer available.

You know from reading the Course that there are no private thoughts. There are no seeds planted that are exclusively yours. "Oh, I sent out my messengers, and my messengers came back to me. It was a private deal." You see? No, you send out your messengers and they meet the world, and the world is affected, and indeed they come back to you.

Now there's a new way of being, there's a new way of being in your minds that you need to wrap your mind around, if I may say so, so that you might see that more discipline is necessary if indeed you want to be miracle-minded, and if indeed you want to be an agent for change, if indeed you wish to glorify God and have that glorification manifest.

We've talked for a great length of time, years, about healing, but how many of you know anything about healing? In other words, what do you do when healing is needed? Could you sit down and write a ten page explanation? Or have you let the information that I have shared register with you, inspire you with a little bit of a high and a little bit of excitement, but have never let it move you to a point of involvement with your Brother where virtue goes out from you?

To have virtue go out from you means that you have to have an intent to not be the presence of something else, to not be the planter of the seeds of disease. How do you plant the seeds for disease? Well, you can be sure and tell everybody about the bird flu, and what the latest news is about it, and how afraid they ought to be about it. You can do that. Or when others are talking about their concerns about the bird flu or an incurable problem that they're having, you can perhaps not be the initiator, the planter of the seed, but you can be the one who waters the seed by neglecting to do anything to correct it. "Oh, I feel so sorry for her, as though I have great compassion for her." Well, compassion... that's nothing but bullshit, because it's a meaningless act of quote "caring."

Did this person, in response to the one sharing the bad news, say: "Well, you know what? No matter what the doctors say, here's where I stand on it and I don't go along with them because I know, and I know you know, that this is an illegitimate imposition upon you, and that it is a result of a misunderstanding, a belief that you're entertaining, and nothing else. And I am going to ask the Holy Spirit to help you recognize what this belief is, so that you might release it. In fact, I'm going to be willing to be present with you, listening myself for what that element is, or what it is that it will take to break the mesmerism of the belief structures you're bound by. And I will do that until I feel virtue go out from me."

"Oh, there's this thing of taking time." And actually caring enough to be involved, to be present with that person until an involvement occurs where virtue goes out from you. That's how you be an agent for change. That's how you embody miracle-readiness, and that's how you inspire miracle-readiness in another.

You know, the computer is a wonderful thing, and the internet is repository of humongous amounts of information. And you can go online and every ailment that has ever been experienced can be looked up, and you can find out its description, its stages of development, and whether it's curable or incurable. You can find out all about it so that you may know exactly what to expect if you seem to be experiencing that particular ailment. Well, the gestation period is such-and-such, the recuperative period is such-and-such, and here are the symptoms that you will experience at each stage.

Now what if you're the one saying this to another who is having a problem? You're planting the seeds. You're watering the belief structure. You're watering, nurturing, confirming the disease to be real, so real that it can be mapped out. There is a blueprint for every human ailment.

"Oh. Well, here's this blueprint, and you know what? I read this blueprint under a medical search program, and people who know what they're talking about and who have examined and researched these things, have found this is the way it is." And what happens? You read it and you say, "The educated perspective that has been presented here is justification for me to accept what's being said."

And I will tell you that whatever you can justify, you will have. And whatever you justify to another is likely to be taken as justification and applied to that one's situation, and because it's justified, it is what that person will have. But it's all crap! There is another way, always, to look at the situation.

And there are only two ways to look at the situation: one is through the eyes of the Voice for Truth, and the other is through the eyes of the voice for fear. One reports the Truth. And one reports illusion; one reports lies; one reports what is not true.

Be careful, because if you justify a certain period of time from the beginning to the end of an episode of a virus, and you say, "This is the way it is. And by my telling you the way it is, you can relax a little bit, knowing what you're going to have to endure and that you won't have to endure it forever." You know, this wonderful saying of encouragement, "This too shall pass." The statement initiates or inspires no correction. It just says, "You can count on it being endurable."

"This too shall pass." Well, isn't all of human life made up of, "This too shall come to pass, including you. You, too, will pass, you know." And in fact, don't many of you use [small laugh] your "confidence in passing on" to help you have the strength to live today, because you won't have to be here forever. "Oh, I, you know, reasonably only have five more years, six more years to live. And it's a little bit rough but, you know, it's not going to last forever." No, it's going to end when you end. And where's the enlightenment? Where's the healing? Where's the correction of the problem now?

You see, the way you think--"this too shall pass, this can be endured because this too shall pass"--is a frame of mind that gets applied to everything you look at. It's, you know, the end of spring, the beginning of summer, the plants are growing beautifully and the slugs are eating away at it all, and you say, "Yep, well, fall's coming. It's gonna get cold, and this too shall pass." You see? "This won't go on forever." Or it's a really hot summer, you say, "Well, this too shall pass. Winter's going to come." And then it's really cold, and you say, "Well, this too shall pass, because spring is going to come and it's going to warm up." You see? Where's redemption in that? Where's regeneration in that? Where's healing? Where's correction? Where's waking up in that?

And are you not by your very words justifying the situation as it is, plus the cyclical nature of it? Oh, interesting. S-i-c-k-l-i-c-a-l. Sicklical. The sicklical nature of problems. "But fortunately none of them last too long to be unendurable and to keep your spirits completely down." You think like this thoughtlessly. In other words, not much thought is given to your thinking.

You're not thinking much about what you're thinking about. You're not paying much attention to the use to which you're putting your mind. And so since no change is called for, no change is had. Since nothing new is justified, nothing new is experienced because what you can justify, you will have. What you justify, you have.

When Paul was in his early twenties, there was a day that he happened to notice a rash developing which he recognized as measles. Well, he knew that there was a blueprint to the development and disappearance of measles. But that isn't what he gave his attention to. He immediately gave his attention to the fact that it was illegitimate; that it wasn't the Truth; that it wasn't God-derived. Well, someone else could have said to him, "Well, you know, it's going to go through this stage and it will take a certain number of days. And then it'll go through another uncomfortable stage and that will take a few days. Blah, blah, blah." But within two hours all evidence of it was gone.

Now I just reported to you an instance of healing where the blueprint became meaningless. You have got to begin to let the blueprints become meaningless to you, because all they are, are a collection of thoughts or beliefs that had been put together [in] which you have said, "Why, that's completely justifiable to me." And because you've justified it, you have it. But you don't have to justify what isn't true. You don't have to justify beliefs.

You've really got to want to begin to know the Truth. And Truth isn't a collection of beliefs. And after all the time we've been together, you know how to get to the Truth. You know that you must stop thinking, that you must become still, and you must be willing to devote yourself to hearing God's Truth about you. Not the doctor's best opinions, but God's Truth about you.

You have to become a devotee of Love and its unalterable movement into expression everywhere, including right where you are, including right where the problem seems to be. And you've got to be willing to hang out there, perhaps like a monk in a monastery, but as a seeker of Truth in your own mind, where there's a holy devotion, the purpose of which is to hear God, to hear the Truth, to experience the Truth, to experience virtue coming out to you that fragments the justification, that fragments whatever it was that you were holding on to that said, "Not only is what's happening to me possible, it's inevitable. And I have no choice about it."

And likewise for your Brother. You see, the Truth or the illusion that you hold yourself to, is the Truth or illusion that you will hold your Brother to. Whichever it is, the messengers accompanying it are what you will send out to your Brother.

Are you going to dare to be in the world in a new way, and stop planting or watering the seeds of messages of death? Because disease is a message of death; it's just that some diseases don't get you all the way to the grave. And if you don't know by now that what I'm talking about with all of you is that which undoes your ever getting to a grave, well, then I will persist in sharing that with you until it registers with you, until I experience virtue going out from me and touching you, and changing you because it's helped uncover a bondage that, if you had seen it for what it is, you never would have engaged in.

Your Brother is your savior because he gives you, presents you with the opportunity to abandon your isolation, and to be present with him honestly enough...

PAUL: [pause] Just a moment. [pause]

RAJ: ...and vulnerable enough to let a Love connection occur, because it's your goal to see the evidence of Love and to be the evidence of Love. Anything less than that involvement, that connection with your Brother, anything other than that is going to amount to a head trip.

"Oh, I'm holding you in a ball of light."

"Okay, if you want to. I'd much rather connect with you. I'd much rather experience your presence here with me. But, hey, if you want to imagine a ball of light around me, oh, go ahead."

You see? Anything other than "the connection" becomes nothing but some form of a mental incantation, like saying "Shazam!" and that's supposed to make everything all right. Well, [laughing] you can sit on a desert island all by yourself, where nobody knows where you are because you told no one where you were going, and you can sit there and say "Shazam! Shazam! Shazam!" all day long and all night long for days and weeks, and the incantation will do nothing. Why? Because you're all by yourself, and you're all by yourself on purpose. With great resolve, you're all by yourself. You went to a great deal of trouble to be all by yourself. You went to a great deal of trouble to be absolutely sure there would be no involvement.

Well, why do you suppose the idea found form in the words, "No man is an island"? Because every single one of you are living as though you were "an island" with a very definite boundary around you--and everything inside the boundary, you say, is "me" and everything outside of the boundary is "not me." It's very distinct. It's very absolute. And it's not true!

Everything you experience is some aspect of the infinitude of your Being, of your Infinite Being. And the boundary you hold so close to you, that you separate yourself from your Brothers with, is absolutely nothing more than a figment of your imagination. But it is a figment which you have reinforced so solidly that you believe it's true. It is, however, nothing more than a belief.

"Oh," you say, "there's not enough time in eternity for me to be significantly present with all of my Brothers going through all of their shit with them and helping them become free of it. It's an impossible task."

Fortunately, it just takes your dealing with the few people that are in your experience. To be the one, or the one of many ones who are pushing the first domino and who, because of the plants you're seeding, because of the seeds you're planting, are causing the simple gift of attention and communion to spread without your having to plant every seed, because the seed that's planted grows and flowers and puts forth seeds that you don't have to cultivate, and it goes on and on and on. There are people in your immediate experience who need your love, who need your willingness to be in the place within yourself where you're not rehearsing the justifications for death, or near death, or slight physical inconvenience.

Mind you, that the justifications for illness that you sow by communicating them to your friends--which if they're not alert, will cause them bondage--you are bound by. Whatever the gift is that you give, you receive; you get to keep.

Now we have an anesthesiologist in the room who has knowledge about the blueprint of disease and physical abnormalities, let's say, whose task is to work with those who are in surgery for the correction of the problem. Now you are faced with this on a daily basis. But you know what? If there's someone who's come in because there's a melanoma on his face and it's going to be surgically removed, you by virtue of not finding the justification for the disease that the physicians find and that the patient himself finds, could very well be the trigger that causes the melanoma to dissolve before the surgery can begin. "Oh, dear! That might put you out of a job!" Well, it might, but what a wonderful thing.

But that's the kind of changing of one's mind that will occur. This is the kind of transformation that will occur when instead of accepting the generally accepted justifications for things, you are willing to be in that place where virtue may go out from you, because the justifications everyone else finds valid are nonsense to you, because you're willing to entertain a different perspective gathered from the Peace of your Being and your connection with the Holy Spirit, or me, or the Father--that which will always and only be reflecting your Right Mind. There needs to be more expectation of instantaneous healing that occurs without abiding by the physical laws of matter that seem to justify a particular time period of illness after which wellness returns, or a particular period of time of illness after which death occurs.

You've got to be radical. Otherwise what's the point? What's the point if actual complete correction of the problem can't be experienced? Then you're just using this book to make it a little bit easier to endure the inevitable.

And you may well become very familiar with the words in the book and be able to espouse them, while at the same time, so to speak, out of the other side of your mouth say, "Well, of course you're feeling bad. You were exposed to some very potent chemicals." You see? Wow, what a seed to plant! And if the person hearing that can seem to justify that in their mind, well, [small laugh] there went miracle-mindedness! Because what you can justify, you have.

Do you realize the dynamic powerfulness of that statement, "What you can justify, you will have"? "Well, I can't justify instantaneous healing. Look at the damage!" Oh, okay, now the damage, the injury has become the justification for not expecting instantaneous healing. That's not miracle-mindedness. And that is not the frame of mind in which a sudden shift of perception can occur, and therefore no shift of perception, no shift of the conscious experience of Being can occur. And it won't! What you can justify, you will have.

You know, somebody says to you, "Oh, I'm having this condition," and instead of saying, "Well, you know, the gestation period is three days," you say, "You know, I know what everybody says about this, but I can't justify that in my mind, because the only thing that makes sense to me is that you're a divine idea. You're the direct expression of God. You are the presencing that God is making of Himself right there where you stand. And I can't justify having a conscious experience different from or less than that. And that's where I'm going to stand. And if you'd care to stand there with me on it, that would be great." And if that one doesn't stand with you on it, that's okay, because you've planted a different seed, instead of planting one that confirms the problem together with its blueprint, or watering and nurturing the blueprint that that person is holding in their mind.

You are either planting seeds of destruction, or you are watering them by neglecting to do anything that will correct them. And the key point is that each of you "in you" has the capacity to be that trigger that undoes the mindset, the belief system that holds the problem in place.

And if you have that capacity, well, I could throw a guilt trip on you by saying, "How can you go to bed at night without having engaged that capacity? When you have that gift to give, how can you go to bed at night and sleep peacefully if you have withheld that gift?"

But there's a better way to put it; one that doesn't instill guilt. "If you have the capacity to make that gift and making that gift brings your mind into greater Singularity that is more reflective of the Father's Mind, which is what truly constitutes your Mind, and if you have the capacity to do this and more clearly express your Birthright, and be able to come back into the truer experience of your Being in which all of your suffering can disappear, and fulfillment beyond your comprehension can register with you, then..." You see, I'm not going to say, "Why aren't you engaging in it?" Because then that'll send you on a search for the flaw in you--the "Why is it? Why is it, what is there in me that keeps me from my Good?" You see?

My question is, "If you have the capacity to give this gift, to make this gift,..." No, it can't be a question at all. "If you have the capacity to make this gift, then make the gift."

I encourage you to be willing to be the oddball. I encourage you to be one who no longer continues to pass the justifications for sin, disease, and death on to each successive generation. I encourage you to break the line of history. You see, part of the justification for illness is that "historically" this is the way this disease behaves. So not only is there a "learned one" making the statement, it's being tied in with "historical evidence."

"Whoa! How can you fight historical evidence. Historical evidence is even more binding than brand-new evidence that was just discovered yesterday. At least there you can say, well, I'm gonna wait before I accept that justification because tomorrow somebody may come up with a different interpretation. I mean, after all, last week they said, 'Coffee was bad for you,' and this week they say, 'Coffee is good for you. Tests have proven it.'" You see? Quote: "If it's 'historically provable,' therefore as far back as recorded history is available, this disease function, this functions this way, well, what can you do?"

What you can do is remember that you see what you're looking with. You see what you're looking with, what you are looking for. The impetus for the inquiry that causes the messengers to be sent out sets in motion what the news is that the messengers will bring back. That's what you must remember. And that has nothing to do with a history more than a [snap of the fingers] split second long from the moment the curiosity was there to the moment the confirmation comes back. That's all the history there is to consider.

I wish to see the evidence of Love in my Brother. I see, I wish to see the evidence of Love, with a capital "L". We're talking about Divine Love. I wish to see the evidence of Love on my skin in spite of what history says about what appears to be on my skin. That's the way you get off the wheel of history. That's the way you get in the venue, if I may put it that way, of instantaneous healing. Healing that's not bound by physical laws, or time, or edified explanations.

Where are you going to go to gather your information about how you are? To medical documentation on the internet? To your own body? To your memories about similar conditions or situations in the past? In other words, [small laugh] are you going to look for what you're already familiar with? What has already been? Or are you going to inquire of a more expansive source--the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind? And your Right Mind is the presence of Mind that is God being All There Is, and so you're absolutely and totally divine in your actuality right now.

And I'm inviting you to shift from the voice for fear--which is the voice of history, which is the voice of your beliefs which have been built around a premise that you're an orphan, isolated, alone, solitary, and having to demonstrate your validity--or are you going to inquire, I'm asking you to shift from that to the arena of your true Birthright where you ask of your Source what the Truth is. To ask for inspiration that lifts your capacity to perceive beyond the level of perception you have been currently employing, so that you might see the world from a different vantage point, and find that it's the Kingdom of Heaven, and find no evidence of anything unlike the Kingdom of Heaven, which would be called healing.

Now I'm going to suggest something else. If you're in need of healing, find someone else that you know who is in need of healing, and be willing to be present for them from that place in you that is guided and nourished by the Father's Point of View, by the Father's capital "L" Love. And be willing to let virtue go out from you in spite of your condition, because remember what you give, you get to keep.

Now this coming week, I want all of you to read the next three or four paragraphs that we would have read tonight, because you will find them illuminating what I've talked about. We will still read them with fresh eyes next week.

But it is truly important for you all to stop thinking that you can read the Course or hear what I'm having to say and still straddle the fence; still walk with one foot in one camp and the other foot in the other camp, and not recognize that you are expressing two different wants simultaneously that are contradictory of each other, and you're making it one. You see it... you do not see it as an evidence of lack of integrity in you. You do not see it as the confusion it is. And you do not see, as we read last week, that when you make the two one, you recognize neither one of them. If you recognize neither one of them, you don't have either one of them. Healing is when you have one or the other.

Now if you try to have the illusion, you can't succeed, so I'm going to give you a little helpful advice. If you want to have the illusion, go for it! Try to possess it, try to make it your own, so that you find out that you can't sooner than if you have this intent, this want that's contrary to this want and you're going to maintain them both and think that there is perfect consistency in you.

Somebody who's an alcoholic, or has been an alcoholic but is trying to break the habit, might say, "I cannot conceive of, let's say, living for five years without having a drink. That would be an incredibly difficult task." And all of you, like alcoholics, or addicts, let's say, might say, "Wow, it would really be difficult for me to neglect to reinforce the old justifications, the old explanations of the physical processes of sin, disease, and death and to always be free, empty of those justifications and all the ramifications that they had for me." But I'm telling you it's your Birthright to be empty of those.

And I'm encouraging you this week to watch to see what the seeds are you're planting, and to watch to see when you're shifting from one opposing side to the other opposing side. And you'll find, generally speaking, that you'll do the shifting when it fits the occasion. So if you're with your spiritual friends, you say it one way. And with your non-spiritual friends, you'll talk about the inevitability of disease and the stages of its process, and the process of death. "I mean, after all, life is a terminable disease, isn't it?" No, it's not.

And what you're all faced with is the delight of discovering that. And the discovery of that is "the correction" of the problem, in which all evidence of disease, of "sin, disease and death" will disappear. So now you are, I hope, a little bit clearer about what the word "healing" means and what's involved.

One additional thing, and it's for you to look at--and not for you to report to anyone--each night when you go to bed this coming week, ask yourself whether at any point during the day you felt virtue go out from you. If you didn't, then know that you have another opportunity another day in which to bring your mind into that kind of attentiveness where there's a more ever-present willingness to be the presence of Love in a way with your Brother that will allow virtue to go out from you with the potential of healing occurring, because that kind of attentiveness, or self-discipline, is what will move you out of your old habits, and allow a gradual and graceful movement into, what I'll call, a new arena of consciousness, a new arena of being conscious which embodies more of the Truth of What You Are, which embodies more of and glorifies more of what God is being right there where you are.

Love each other as I love you.

Now, that sound like hard work? Well, I'll tell you what hard work would be. If I told you this week, "Get out there and be a bad-ass motherfucker," now that would be hard. So if you're inclined to complain or feel that I'm... you're being put upon to do something not really easy, change your mind 'cause otherwise I just might arrive at a day where I tell you.

I love you. I look forward to being with you next week.

Okay.

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Well, everyone had an extra week of going to bed at night with the opportunity to ask, "Did virtue go out from me today?" And let me just suggest that because we're now moving on in the book, it doesn't mean that it's not an excellent idea to continue to ask yourself that question each night, because I'll tell you something, this is what's going to make a difference for you, for your Brother, for the world.

For you to keep a conscious intent alive in you daily to be willing to really connect with your Brothers and Sisters, to really be present with them with the willingness to recognize God there, and to be willing to be receptive of God's Perspective of them within you, is exactly what will bring about not only a shift of perception—a sudden shift of perception—it will bring about probably a gradual, rather than sudden, shift in your Being; a shift in the way you be present in the world; a shift in which you are not constantly coming from your memory with knee-jerk responses out of habit. It will remind you that each moment is the opportunity to be fresh; freshly; in a way you've never been before. You see?

If we are going to talk about a goal, what's the goal? The goal is to not be the way you've been being; to not be subject to sin, sickness and death; to not be subject to fear; to not behave out of fear. You're right in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven right now. You're not perceiving it as what it is. It's your Birthright to be experiencing it exactly as it is. And so the call is for literally "something new" to happen in you that allows you, as I said, to be in a new way so that you begin to neglect to energize your old habits of thinking, your old habits of perceiving, and thereby make room for insight, even revelation.

Every day is your opportunity to have this experience. Every day is not the opportunity to have the experience you had yesterday. So like Captain Kirk and all those on the spaceship The Starship Enterprise, "Every day is the opportunity for you to go where no man has gone before." I mean that literally. And I mean that you should expect to have experiences you haven't had before, and to accept what I'm telling you is the fact that you have the capacity, and you have the capacity because you're far more than you think you are.

You're not this little piss-ant mortal, this little, physical, inconsequentially-small, physical body in the middle of a huge universe, physical universe. You are the Mind, the Conscious Awareness, in which all of these experiences of body, world and universe are going on. And this Mind that you are has no boundaries. At this moment, it has no boundaries.

But you know what? We talked last week about the blueprints for disease. You have blueprints in your mind that have become like a sieve through which you look at the Kingdom of Heaven and you see it in the configuration caused by the blueprint—the confident concepts you entertain about what everything is and how everything must work. And you know what? It's time for you to become released from those blueprints.

And every time we talk I am helping you realize that you don't have to abide by the blueprints. And I am reminding you to be curious beyond them, which means that you necessarily must be willing to invalidate them. At least to say to yourself, "Maybe the way I'm perceiving everything isn't exactly right."

I don't require you to say to yourself that they are totally wrong or that you must do this all in one giant leap. But I am encouraging you not to be so damn sure that you know tomorrow basically how everything is going to be and how everything is going to behave—and that if certain events happen, certain consequent events will have to happen—so that you might be in each moment of tomorrow with innocent eyes; with a willingness to see what you're not expecting; to see something that functions outside the blueprint you have established in your mind as the basis for perceiving correctly.

So please, continue to ask yourself each night, "Has virtue gone out from me?" And if it hasn't, then avail yourself of the opportunity tomorrow so that you begin to be—not think about, not reason about—but you have reason to be a transformational presence in your world.

Your world is in need of healing, and the healing isn't going to arise out of already-established blueprints. And your various countries are attempting, to the best of their ability, to correct problems according to existing blueprints—certain principles of law, certain principles of order, certain agreed-upon principles of behavior, even rules of war. You see? Blueprints.

How do you get free of blueprints? You get free of blueprints by being willing to be present with needs.

Are needs intellectual? Well, you can imagine needs like, "I want to become a successful person in the world. I want to become a millionaire. I want to be somebody who has enough money to do truly good works in the world." You'll say, "Well, these are wonderful ideas." But it's a head trip.

How do you do good things in the world? Well, you pay attention to needs.

For example: You're in the army and you're a potato peeler. And you realize that there needs to be a more effective way of peeling potatoes, and so you open yourself up to what the possibilities are. And in the act of inviting something more than the historical pattern [small laugh] through decades of military protocols of how to peel potatoes, you get an idea. And it's a good idea and it meets the need, and you have been a transformational presence because for one thing “whatever you realized” is one day going to end up in the supermarket for the housewife to use. So it will reach far. It’s the little things that make the difference if you are willing to be present with the need.

The word “need” doesn’t really mean lack. It doesn’t mean “needy,” which is something you can have judgments about. “Oh, I don’t want to be a needy person.” You see? “Needy people are not respectable. Nobody respects a needy person.” And now we’ve gotten into ego dynamics about personality, and your picture of yourself and how you want the world to see you, and so on. We’re not in touch with need at all anymore.

Need is when you experience an inconvenience, we’ll say, that you don’t enjoy, that doesn’t need to be. Need can appear as lack presenting itself to you as a fact to be accepted, and accepting it is the way to deal with it. That’s one way it can be looked at. But need is always a form of pregnancy, if I can put it that way. Need is a pregnancy about to be fulfilled—which means it is an experience that brings to light the fact that something is incomplete, but the reason the awareness of its incompleteness occurs to you is because something is coming to fill it that is new.

So you’ve got to stop being afraid of the experience of need and the willingness to address needs, the willingness to be with a Brother or a Sister who is in need—who is interpreting the need as a lack and something that reflects poorly on him or her—and to be able to be with that Brother or Sister in a way that facilitates the birth, rather than confirming their perception of lack and what it has to say about them.

Transition from one mode of operation to an improved mode of operation is a movement of pregnancy and birth. And each day you want to be able to be present in your day with that kind of frame of mind in which you are willing to be, for lack of better words,... [pause] the word has escaped Paul. What is the name of a woman attending a mother delivering a child? [audience responses] A midwife. Yes. You have the opportunity to be the midwife of, in the delivery, the coming forth of clarification in you.

Some women on a delivery table behave in a way that certainly looks like there’s an emergency happening; that there’s a dire need. A dire need. [laughing] Well, there is, but it’s not dire. It’s wonderful. It’s birth. And if the mother can become unafraid of what’s happening, if she can relax to the best of her ability and not tense up, even though the delivery may be strenuous, it will be more comfortable. It will be more graceful. And I understand that the majority of the women listening who have given birth will say, “There ain’t nothing graceful about it at all!” But you do know what I mean.

Now as a mother, you have no choice but to hang in there with the movement, right? And what we’ve been talking about last week in terms of healing is that each of you has to be willing to hang in with the “movement of healing,” even though in the process, those you’re working with may be gnashing their teeth and may not at the moment be seeing what is happening as different from the way they’re perceiving it, with a different outcome than the one they’re expecting.

So it’s when you’re willing to be present with the needs, the simple human needs; not lofty ones. “I need to spiritualize myself.” Well, good luck. But if you want to have the experience of spiritualization then come down to earth and pay attention to the human needs. And be willing to be present with them with the Father at your side, or the Holy Spirit at your side, or me at your side, so that together we may look upon the need and watch the coming forth of the meeting of the need—which because of the perspective that is available with the Father or the Holy Spirit or me, the movement of need being met will be so obviously divine that you will feel the divinity of it and the extension of it, and you will know that virtue has gone out from you.

You will know that virtue has gone out from you because the experience will be recognizably holy. And this in itself will be confirmation for you that, indeed, there is really a God. And you're not Him, and yet you're inseparable from Him. And your partnership, if I may put it that way, with Him is enhanced. Your experience of your inseparability from Him is confirmed to you more firmly than ever before, which will inspire you the next day to, with more confidence, be willing to be present with your Brother and your world with actually the hope, the anticipation of experiencing virtue going out from you again.

The world's needs might seem to you to be something you couldn't possibly address, but I promise you that each time virtue goes out from you in your day where simple human needs have been successfully addressed, no matter how small they are, it is like the leaven that leavens the whole lump. It makes a difference.

Put a little, yellow sticky-note on your refrigerator with the word "leaven" on it. Just remind yourself that that's what you're here to be: the leaven. The little, inconsequential leaven that leavens the whole thing, not because it's trying to, but because what? It does its job in this particular place in the dough. Give yourself reminders. Ask yourself at night, "Did I feel virtue go out from me today?" And in the morning when you get up and you go in the kitchen and you see the word "leaven," it will be a reminder to you that you're here to be "the leaven" during the day.

Keep reminders like this handy, because it's so easy for you to get caught up in the old blueprints. They are such habits. And the habits need to be broken. They need to be broken because they constitute illegitimate bondages that it is not appropriate or fair for you to be experiencing. When it's not your habit to be present in the world with the desire for virtue to go out from you, you won't spontaneously think to do it. So provide yourself with reminders. Because it's only by doing it—even if it's only the intent brought into play many times a day whether there seems to be success or not—it's only that act of bringing it into play consciously everyday that the habit that had been governing you, can begin to weaken and dissolve and make room for the new experience.

So, yes, use a little self-discipline. Be willing to be conscientious about it. You close the drawer on your finger real hard and it swells up and it's very uncomfortable. I bet none of you have any trouble "being conscientious" about not banging that finger on anything. Now if you can be conscientious like that so that you don't hurt, you can be conscientious in terms of an intent to be that which brings peace, that which brings transformation. The only thing is that you don't have pain to drive your conscientiousness. So it takes a little bit more conscious direction.

You can do it. And I just encourage you to begin to do it. And bring all of this A Course in Miracles theory, or religious theory, or spiritual theory, out of your head and into your actions.

Now lots of Christian preachers have said much the same thing to their congregations. But you know what the difference is? I'm telling you that you're doing this in "the here and now" not only meets the human needs that are part of the human experience, what I'm encouraging you to do has the ultimate purpose of moving you out of the frame of mind you are currently in, into a new one in which the Kingdom of Heaven can begin to appear to you right here, right now, today, tomorrow—not after you die, not for future generations.

Because as I've said, you've been behaving as though you're orphans and you're not. Now you have to bring some of your own gumption into play and actually begin to do this, because it's in the doing of it and experiencing the actual healing, the actual transformation that results, that awakens you to the fact that what is divinely True about you, is true now, and is experientiable now, and is worth the effort that you have to bring into play.

Again none of what we're talking about is a means of your finding bliss that allows you to endure the human condition without it changing. Correction isn't punishment for wrongdoing. Correction is to become free of that which was false, but which you had been bound by.

Okay, let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: When you look within and see me, it will be because you have decided to manifest truth.

RAJ: Very simply, if you look within and don't see me, it's because you've gone within to see yourself, to see what you think, to see what you're confident about, to see what your skills are, so that you can see what you can do to make things better in the world, or even at times to make things worse for someone in your world. If you've gone in and you've gone in to see yourself, you haven't decided to manifest Truth. You've decided to manifest your arrogance. You've gone within because you've decided to be the authority here and to do it well.

And yet this one who's going to be an authority and do things well, thinks it's an orphan; thinks it has no connection with God; thinks it has no divine Source. It just thinks it is an organism, a body. "Here today, gone tomorrow. While you're here, make the best of everything that you can." You see?

So:

RAJ READING: When you look within and see me, it will be because you have decided to manifest truth. And as you manifest it you will see it both without AND within, for you will see it without...

RAJ: In other words, out there.

RAJ READING: ...BECAUSE you saw it first within.

RAJ: The messengers you send out “by your intent” will always come back confirming to you what you sent them out to find, whether there is something else there or not. It’s called “self-deception.”

But if your desire is to see Truth, and the messengers you send out are a willingness to see Truth—what is Really True—they will come back confirming to you what is True, because you saw it first within, because that was your desire first within.

RAJ READING: Everything you behold...

RAJ: Out there, without having seen it first within.

RAJ READING: Everything you behold without is a judgment of what you beheld within.

[Editor’s Note: Raj said “what you had beheld within” instead of “what you beheld within.”]

RAJ: If you haven’t gone within to ask of God what a thing is, you’ve gone within to ask what your best judgments say a thing is, or what the educated say a thing is, or what history says a thing is. And that can only constitute a judgment; an appraisal of what a thing is; the best appraisal that history or the educated ones or you have come to. You see?

RAJ READING: If it is YOUR judgment it will be wrong, for judgment is not your function.

RAJ: See, judgment is not your function. It’s not your function to assess and come to conclusions about things.

But if you think you’re an orphan, you think that is your primary function, because if you don’t get a handle on your world and if you don’t get a handle on your Brother’s behavior or his attitude or what’s making him tick, you will be at a disadvantage because you have no natural safety, you have no inherent invulnerability. And so your basic function is to engage in constant judgments to stay abreast of things in this hostile world that this “poor little orphan that you are” lives in.

RAJ READING: If it is YOUR judgment it will be wrong, for judgment is not your function.

RAJ: Before we go on, what is your function if judgment isn’t your function? Your function is to be conscious. Your function is to be aware. Your function is to experience what is happening and recognize God in it. Your function is to recognize God in it and experience the natural awe that spontaneously arises out of the clear awareness of the movement of Creation. That’s your function.

It is your function to joy in the conscious experience of Reality right here in Kingston, Washington, right there in Bellingham, Washington, right there on the east coast, and right there in Iraq. You see? That’s your function and your Birthright—to have the joy of recognizing it, truly seeing it, and having it truly represent the Presence of God in movement.

Again.

RAJ READING: If it is YOUR judgment it will be wrong, for judgment is not your function. If it is the judgment of the Holy Spirit it will be right, for judgment IS His function.

RAJ: The Holy Spirit looks and sees God. The Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind, sees everything and recognizes God in it, and joys in the awesome experience of it. That's what your Right Mind actually is doing right now, even though you are conscientiously ignoring it because you're giving preference to this little "blueprint of a mind" that you've concocted that's part of an organism that's here today and gone tomorrow, and better make the best of everything. You see? Okay.

RAJ READING: You share His...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...function only by judging as HE does,...

RAJ: Well, you can only judge as He does by choosing not to validate your own judgments anymore or to engage in making them anymore.

RAJ READING: You share His function only by judging as HE does, reserving no judgment at all unto yourselves.

RAJ: Meaning neglecting to bother to exercise a right you think you have to come to your own conclusions.

Now the way I said that, makes it sound like your right to come to your own conclusions is, you know, not that big a deal. But as an orphan, your right to make, to come to your conclusions is your primary function. It's what ultimately makes you stand out from someone else. It's what makes you valid—you think.

So your right to make judgments for yourself is something you place a very high value on, and you work constantly to increase its value. And so, to say, "Abandon your right to come to your own conclusions," well, we're talking about abandoning something that is seemingly of ultimate importance to you. It's like abandoning yourself. It's like letting yourself slip through the cracks.

It's like annihilation of you—when all it is, is a letting go of "a blueprint" that you put into place overlaying what you Really Are, which is therefore covered up to you—what you Really Are. It therefore doesn't constitute any real loss at all, but it does constitute true gain.

RAJ READING: You share His function only by judging as HE does,...

RAJ: Which means only as you let Him do it, and let His doing of it register with you as your own doing of it truly.

RAJ READING: ...reserving no judgment at all unto yourselves.

RAJ: Again, abandoning any right you think you have to come to judgments on your own.

RAJ READING: For you will judge AGAINST yourselves, but HE will judge FOR you.

RAJ: The truth of this and the value of it become apparent to you every time you manage to have even the smallest experience of virtue going out from you. It confirms you to yourself in a new light, and you begin to apparently change—which means you experience healing. You experience being lifted out of the orphan blueprint, out of the orphanage—beginning to realize you have a Birthright that you don't have to create for yourselves, and it's a wonderful Birthright, more awesome than anything you could have imagined. You see?

RAJ READING: Remember, then, that whenever you look without and react unfavorably to what you see, you have judged yourself unworthy and have condemned yourself to death.

RAJ: Wow. Where did that come from? This is heavy stuff, right?

RAJ READING: ...you have judged yourself unworthy and have condemned yourself to death.

RAJ: [small laugh] You say, "I never did that!" No, you did it but you've covered up the fact that you did it. And now the fact that you did it, comes to you in very oblique ways, like in the saying:

"There are only two sure things."

"What?"

"Death and taxes. Right?"

"Oh, wow!"

That's deeply ingrained. Everybody, whether they are familiar with that phrase or not, there is some other phrase or some feeling that conveys that meaning.

"There's only one sure thing and that's death."

And you don't challenge it. You accept and you await it, don't you? You don't like it, but you think you know that there's nothing you can do about it.

You see, the minute you pull the cord out of the wall that's connected to the light bulb, the light goes out. Right? The minute you unplug yourself from the Father, the Light of the Father apparently goes out and what's left has no means of supporting itself or of performing its function. And so, no matter what you imagine you're doing while you are unplugged, if you aren't doing anything to become plugged in again, nothing will come of the effort. Zero will be the result. That's death. Nothing will work. And the fact that "nothing is working" will ultimately become apparent. That's all it means.

So when you've claimed that "you're an orphan"—and I know you say, "I never claimed that"—but you have claimed that "you're just a physical organism that arose out of physical evolution." That blueprint, that idea, that concept with all of its ramifications and your confirmation of them, constitutes an active disconnection from the plug. And so you are, thereby, making the choice for death, making the choice for the experience of nothing working, of everything coming to nothing.

RAJ READING: The death penalty is the ego's ultimate goal,...

RAJ: And remember I've referred to the ego as the "orphan mentality" in the last few weeks. So the orphan mentality, the unplugged light bulb has "its incapacity to light up" as its ultimate goal to be finally realized—[laugh] which means that "that which finally realizes it" realizes that "its capacity to realize it" is nonexistent, and therefore, even that "seeming capacity" will be acknowledged, accepted, and it will be snuffed out—if such a thing were possible.

So:

RAJ READING: The death penalty is the ego's...

RAJ: Or the orphan's.

RAJ READING: ...ultimate goal, for it fully believes that you...

RAJ: It.

RAJ READING: ...are a criminal, as deserving of death as God knows you are deserving of life.

RAJ: You all know, in other words, that you cannot ultimately succeed at being independent of the Father. The only thing is that while you're still trying, that's bad news. Once you've stopped trying and you're willing to re-embrace your Father, it's the good news and it supports you in your walk Home.

RAJ READING: The death penalty never leaves the ego's mind,...

RAJ: You know, if you had no concept of the things we've been talking about, you would walk around and although you wouldn't think about it, the fact that "one day you're going to die" would be present in your sense of your existence today. When you're eighteen years old or twenty-five years old, or fifty or sixty years old, and if you don't die a...—isn't it a funny word?—a "natural" death... if you don't die a "natural" death, well, there could be tomorrow an "accidental" death. Right? That's how devoted you are "to death," or that's how devoted to "things not working" the orphan mentality is (or the ego).

RAJ READING: The death penalty never leaves the ego's mind, for that is what it always reserves for you in the end. Wanting to kill you as the final expression of its feeling for you, it lets you live but to await death.

RAJ: To endure the experience of living until the inevitable happens.

RAJ READING: It will torment you while you live,....

RAJ: What if you woke up in the morning aware that you couldn't die—literally truly aware that you couldn't die—and the experience of invulnerability was yours? I promise you your sense of the coming day would be entirely different. And the way you got out of bed might be [laughing] that you would leap out of bed, instead of cautiously and sleepily putting your feet on the floor with your hands still on the bed hoping that maybe you can lie back down and not face the inevitable. You see?

So that's the torment. When you don't know and you don't seem to have the experience of invulnerability available to you, the way you live your days is in torment. It might not be overwhelming, but it's a drudge. It's not fulfilling. You are tormented.

RAJ READING: It will torment you...

RAJ: You will live in a tormented state.

RAJ READING: ...while you live, but its hatred is not satisfied until you die. For your destruction is the one end toward which it works, and the only end with which it will be satisfied.

RAJ: I tell you that right now your life is eternal. Now it's eternal whether you seem to put yourself through an experience called "death," or not. But I'm saying that you are eternal and there does not have to be any form of the experience of death. And remember last week I pointed out that "sickness in its various degrees of seriousness" are just "lesser degrees of death." It's your Birthright not to be experiencing any of that.

You don't have to play the ego's game. You don't have to play the game of being an orphan. And you no longer have to be confident, excruciatingly confident that you will die. You don't have to do it. You hear that? You don't have to do it. You don't have to be devoted to that idea.

Now why am I saying this? I'm saying this because in my telling you that there's a way for you to experience your eternity and your invulnerability, you are inclined to say: "That's going to be far too hard for me. You are asking me to stand taller than I can possibly stand. You're asking me to be something I can't possibly be without a great deal of energy and effort. And you know what? I probably don't have enough years left in which to succeed. I think I would rather stick with my present conviction and let the process of death come upon me, because that I can make commitment to, that I can justify." [Raj is laughing] "I can't justify being in the world in a way that no one but you, Jesus, have managed to be. I can't justify it. I can't fathom it. I don't believe that I can be only the second one ever to do it."

You see? And what are you saying? You're saying, "It's easier for me to stay committed to death, and just let this terminal disease called 'life' play itself out." So you've taken the ego's bait, hook, line and sinker.

Again, earlier I said:

RAJ READING: ...you have judged yourself unworthy and have condemned yourself to death.

RAJ: And at that point I said, well, you would say, "I haven't done that!" But now you can see that at this very moment you're willing to do that. You're willing to say, "I can't justify being only the second person in history, ever, to not die. I can't believe it. It's just too impossible for me to wrap my mind around." And so you're still condemning yourself to death right this minute.

And so I encourage you this Easter morning to be willing to embrace the impossible, to embrace the thing that you have thought was impossible, and begin to let it in with some conscious, self-disciplined intent. And renew that intent every morning by looking at the yellow sticky-note on your refrigerator: leaven. And by asking when you go to bed at night, "Was there any point in the day where I experienced virtue go out from me, where I was present in the world in a way that I didn't use to be present in the world, in which a communion, a transactional energetic involvement, movement of Love occurred, which blessed them and blessed me and confirmed to me the divinity of Being?" Because if you have just one incident like that, you've begun to move mountains. You have begun to be the leaven that makes a much bigger transformation than just the little one that it seemed it was for you. And you begin to topple the first domino.

Happy Easter!

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Before Paul learned how to meditate he thought that to be conscious meant to be thinking, and that the only time that thinking wouldn't happen would be if he were unconscious, under anesthesia, or asleep. Not having had any other kind of experience beside constantly thinking while awake, he made the assumption that they were equivalent. And he had never had any contrary experience. And then he learned how mediate. And meditation, the practice of meditation took him into a place where he was perfectly conscious but there wasn't a single thought streaming through his mind. And so he became free of the idea that being conscious was identical with thinking; that they were inseparable and inextricably bound, if not one and the same thing.

Now in a similar manner Paul, along with everyone else, has grown up having the experience of consciousness being a private experience. After all, you each are the only ones occupying the experience of awareness that you call "being conscious." You think your thoughts. No one else knows them. You have your feelings. Unless you express them verbally, no one else knows what they are. And you never have an experience, generally speaking, of feeling or experiencing another presence in this arena of awareness that you're experiencing. And so you have all assumed that this "private experience of being conscious" is normal and is the totality of being conscious.

Now, we've been discussing for a number of weeks now, the state of being an orphan, of orphanhood—the experience of being independent and private—and that, in effect, this state of orphanhood is quote "the problem of being" unquote, and that the answer to the problem is to break the privacy, to break the autonomy, to invite something else in—the Holy Spirit, me, the Father—to break the act of independence that none of you knew you were engaging in. And we talked also about the experience of having virtue go out from you, and that the only way you will have virtue go out from you is when you have broken the independence. You've negated the independence from your Father that you set into place, and said, "Father, what's the Truth here? Fill me with what needs to be extended to my Brother. Help me to care enough to be present with my Brother in ways that allow virtue to go out from me."

Now all of you have your moments, we'll say, where you can be really, really sweet and very kind and very thoughtful. And you can relate to someone else with great care, and the caring is received and felt by the person you're extending it to and they're happier for it. But that does not necessarily constitute virtue going out from you, because you as a well-developed little ego who has learned exceptionally good manners and how to wrap people around your little finger and how to cajole them into cooperation and feeling good even, you can do all of this without abandoning your private state of independence from the Father. You just are a really skilled, well, P.R. orphan—really good at public relations. It's one of those skills you've gotten under your belt that makes you feel like you are doing much better, and you are overcoming the negatives of orphanhood, and establishing so that everyone else can recognize it that you're a good person, that you have substance to you, that your presence is meaningful.

So be alert when you go to bed at night and ask yourself whether virtue has gone out from you, because if there have been apparently beneficial interchanges with others during your day in which blessing seems to have occurred and you had no experience of communion or joining with the Father, virtue did not go out from you. And you need not to be fooled by the harmony and sweetness and apparent benefit that occurred during your day. It's important for you to know that virtue has not gone out from you if virtue has not gone out from you, even though circumstances may seem to reflect back to you that something wonderful happened. You can get caught in behaviors of kindness and thoughtfulness and of virtuousness that are acts, that are part of your repertoire as an expanding and growing orphan. You see?

If the Father never came to your mind, if the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your Right Mind—never came to your mind during the daytime when all of these things were happening, virtue could not have gone out from you. If you're not plugged in, nothing can come through.

Now, before Paul learned how to meditate, if somebody had said to him, "You know, you can be conscious without thinking," [laughing] he would have said, "That's interesting news, but it doesn't mean anything because I have never had the experience, and I don't know how to have the experience of being conscious without thinking."

And likewise you could all say: "Well, it's very interesting news that I have an eternal link with my Father in which there is forever communion occurring and that I never have to experience being alone. It's very interesting news that I have a Guide who is Awake and therefore fully Christed. It's interesting news to know that you, Jesus, are available to me and everyone else simultaneously, and that I can experience you as a presence distinct from me, in the same space that I experience and have always experienced me being. But I've never had the experience. And I don't know how to have the experience. And I don't know if I want to have the experience because it means that a lot of my fundamental premises for understanding my life and the world will have to change. If I let you in, will you leave? Or are you going to be there when I'm sitting on the toilet? Are you going to be there when I'm making love with my partner? You know, just how undefended, just how far do I have to go in letting go of my autonomy and my independence and my right to the privacy that I thought was... [small laugh] I thought it was a given. I thought it was the way life is. My mind is private."

You see? Yes, to let the Father in as an experience in the space, for lack of better words, in which you are conscious—in other words, in your mind—to let the Father in, to let the Holy Spirit in, to let me in, has significant “life changing meaning;” as much meaning as someone who thought they were an orphan and had been raised in an orphanage, as much meaning as it would have for an orphan who had grown up in an orphanage to suddenly be confronted by a man who says that he is that child’s father.

“But you can’t be my father. I don’t have a father. I have been an orphan my whole life.”

“Yes. But I am your father. And circumstances caused us to become separated, and I was told that you were dead, and I didn’t know that my son was living, and so I didn’t search. But then I discovered that, indeed, I had a son and he was alive, and so I’ve come.”

That kind of news that the aloneness and the isolation of orphanhood involved, that kind of news causes great reorientation to have to happen.

“Well, you know, I didn’t like not having a father, but now having a father introduces a whole new set of circumstances that I haven’t had to deal with, and now I’m going to have to deal with them. And I’m not sure if I’m ready to have a father. What are you going to expect of me? Are you going to want to talk three or four times a week? Are you going to want to get together and go to baseball games when I don’t like to play baseball? Are you going to expect me to call you? You know, you’re showing up is throwing my life topsy-turvy.”

Well, certainly there is a certain amount of inconvenience at discovering that you’re not an orphan, but the experience, the natural experience of family is returned to you, is returned to the orphan. Connections that it was appropriate for him to have all of his life, but which he had learned how to cope without having, are now present for him. And part of the inconvenience of the adjustment is going to involve letting that in; embracing it and being willing to engage in communication, togetherness, relationship. You see?

Now what all of this is leading up to, there is a method to my... there is a method afoot here. You hear the word “self-righteousness” and “self-righteous,” and you also hear the word “righteous”—“Oh, he’s a self-righteous bastard” or “He’s a very righteous person”—and I want you to become clearer about the meaning of those words.

When you as a competent orphan, who is becoming increasingly competent by the day, acts, makes decisions, authorizes things without ever once having any conscious awareness of connection with his Source, not even thinking that he has a Source, he is an unplugged light bulb pretending to be illuminated. And so he is pretending to be something he isn’t. You are all pretending to be something that you aren’t when you are having no experience of union with your Source, and are running around this planet with your cord and plug hanging from your posterior, dragging behind you, thinking that you’re actually running around and doing things, when actually nothing can be happening because the plug isn’t plugged into the socket. That’s “self-righteousness.” You see? It’s a righteousness that is relative to capacities that you, as a independent self, are engaged in.

Every act of an orphan who doesn’t know of his Birthright, because he doesn’t know of his Father or of his Source, is engaged in acts of self-preservation. Acts of self-preservation rather than just living life, because not experiencing any Birthright, not having an experience of a Father, there is automatically a feeling of vulnerability. An unplugged light bulb can't help being bothered by the fact that there's no light coming forth.

And so his experience is seen as one that is hostile, one that is polarized—"good" and "bad" warring against each other—and him learning how to be a better and better "good orphan" having to battle against the "bad orphans." And as a result [small laugh] every act is an act of defense.

If every act is an act of defense whether it's called for or not, that is offensive, isn't it? It's an expression of arrogance based upon incomplete information that will not necessarily fit the circumstances. And there will always be a willingness for everyone that orphan deals with to be used in a way that puts them at a disadvantage if it serves the ego, the orphan, who is arrogantly trying to illuminate himself without being plugged in.

Self-righteousness is unpleasant because it's an act of defense. Self-righteousness is unpleasant because, at the bottom line, it's an act of hate. I'm putting it strongly. But if it isn't love, it has to be "not love." It has to be the opposite of love. Now it can't be love because the orphan is incapable of embrace, because if he were to embrace and include and truly let in and relate to valuably, he would have to break his isolation. He would have to abandon his orphanhood.

So, let's go to the word "righteous." One might say that Saint Francis of Assisi was a righteous man, or that Mother Theresa was a righteous woman.

When one abandons the privacy and the autonomy and the arrogance of being a self-authorizing presence, and does not lean unto his own understanding, and does not lean unto his own memory, and does not lean unto his own personally-developed skills—and he lets out a sigh and relaxes, and allows his mind to go silent because he doesn't want to be filled with himself—he doesn't want to be filled with his best thoughts or his best judgments; he wants to be in the silence so that he can listen because he is interested in letting in something else, and the something else he wants to let in is the Father, or his Guide, or the Holy Spirit, or me—he has or she has provided the environment in which something new can be experienced. In the arena of conscious awareness called "being alive" that each one experiences, the Father can register with you. The Holy Spirit can register with you. I can register with you. We can talk. We can relate to each other.

In the absence of your assertive use of your mind—to fill it with activity that covers up what can occur in the silence—the silence, if you're willing to let yourself experience it, you will find is very full. And it's very full of a new way of being with your world and with your Brothers and Sisters. Paul is doing it right now. When you do that, you are "a righteous man" or "a righteous woman," because there is no self-righteousness in it. There is nothing present as an independent, authoritative, self-determined agent that can accomplish anything.

And when righteousness occurs, virtue goes out from you and everyone is truly blessed. Everyone. Not just you. Not just those who can hear my voice on the internet, or eventually on a recording. Everyone. Everyone everywhere. Virtue, when it goes out, touches everyone. Love allowed to move is an infinite movement, and those who are Awake experience it, are consciously aware of it.

Now, you might say: "God, what hope is there for me? Obviously, I have been taught everything wrong! My whole basis for perceiving everything is a result of false teaching, incorrect teaching. And it is so much a part of me that the very idea of actually experiencing someone else in the same space I'm in, in my mind, is inconceivable to me. And yet you're telling me that that's what is normal, and that the privacy I've been experiencing is unnatural, and that the effort I put to "being private well" is an attack on God and is an attack on myself. I have reason to be eternally depressed. How can I possibly... how can I possibly overturn everything I've ever learned? How can I possibly overturn everything about the way I experience everything? You have presented me with a real problem. If I'm not going to be mad at myself for being led into this, I'm going to be mad at those who led me into it."

Yeah, you could do that. Or you could say, "Wow! If I'm seeing everything incorrectly, if I'm not perceiving anything as it is, that means I have a lot of discoveries in front of me. It means I have a lot of opportunities to see things in a new way. And every time there's an improved shift of perception, my experience is going to change for the better. And I'm going to get feedback that confirms to me that my Birthright really was to be joined, and that what Raj has been saying is True."

As bad as the news might be, if someone doesn't tell you you're off the track, you will forever be off the track. And you won't know it. That's hell.

So the way out of the dilemma of having been taught "how to perceive everything wrong" is simple. Remember that there is a God. Be willing to consider that there is actually a God, and that God is the Source of your Being. God is what is presencing you right now. You are not the source of your Being. You are not the creator of you. You, through your skills, are not what can refine you into something better. You are not alone and you're not responsible for yourself. You're not responsible for your existence. You are responsible for the quality of your existence.

And the quality of your existence will be governed by the degree to which you are attempting to be an illuminated light bulb without the plug being plugged in, or the degree to which you are illuminated because you said, "Arhh! Even though I will obviously have a tether if I plug that plug in, I am going to choose to pull it in so that I may become illuminated, and therefore fulfill my Purpose for Being." Because the fact is that when you fulfill your Purpose for Being, there will be so much more illuminated to you of the infinite nature of your Being, and that to be joined doesn't constitute a tethering, but a grounding in the infinite, if I may put it that way. A grounding in your Wholeness. A grounding in knowing who and what you Are.

And who and what you Are is that which is one with the Father, and we can use the word "co-creator" in the sense that once you're plugged in, you stand with God, on behalf of what God is being, without any longer attempting to introduce anything original, different from what the Father is being, into the Movement of Creation. Then "All that Creation is" becomes your conscious experience, down to the smallest detail, so much so that if you were Awake right now experiencing yourself infinitely, you would feel the virtue going out from Paul at this moment. Everyone who is Awake is experiencing it. That's how untethered you will become if you dare to plug the plug in. You will be anchored in the Truth of your Being. You will be anchored in your Sanity.

And that's the good news. And that's why I'm going to suggest that you all keep that little, yellow, sticky paper on your refrigerator that has the word "leaven." I know, you forgot to put it up. Put it up! You might even put it on the dashboard of your car, and have it in two places. And you might put it on the wall next to your toilet, and have it in three places to remind you that you have a function and that is to glorify God.

And if you are willing to let God in so that many times during the day you remember not to pick up the glass of water or not to drive down the road without consciously saying, "Hi, Father. Hi, God. Hi, Raj. Hi, Jesus," and remind yourself that at that moment you're not alone, and you are acknowledging that you are being companioned with whether you're having a direct experience of it or not. That's a good way to begin, with the reminder that, literally, you are not alone and that a living, active Presence is present with you for the purpose of loving you out of your illusions, for the purpose of loving you out of the misperception of you being a little, mortal, physical body sitting inside of a hunk of rather-interestingly-designed metal traveling down a road to get some place where you aren't, even though you are omnipresent. You see?

Those who are companioning with you are there to help you see everything in a new way. But in order to have the transformation of your mind in which you are experiencing everything—the world—in a new way that is a closer approximation of the Kingdom of Heaven, you are going to have to stop valuing your authority and your confidence to handle this by yourself. Because maybe you can get from here to there with a fair amount of safety by using your acquired skills and intelligence, but you are still going to think you are an orphan moving from one point in space to another point in space. And you will continue not to have the experience of both points of space being embraced in you, and you could move from one to the other by a simple shift of attention, because you are infinite, you are divine, you are invulnerable. You aren't what you thought you've been.

As you do this, as you make a point of conscientiously doing this many times a day, ongoingly, just because, you will find yourself in the place where I, or the Father, or the Holy Spirit, can address you directly and guide you through a circumstance or a situation that you're in where help is needed, or you will find us able to convey to you a perspective that will help you relate to your Brother in a more truly helpful way than anything you might have thought up by yourself. And you will know that you were not alone in the receipt and delivery of the answer or the remarks you make to your Brother in the middle of that situation. And in that conscious awareness of union, virtue will be going out from you and you will feel it. You will feel the holiness of it. You will feel the wholeness of it. You will feel the way every part of what happened fit together exquisitely. And you will know that you are in the flow of the movement of Love—a co-creator with God.

So don't be depressed because you've been so badly in the dark. There is a simple way out and that is to undo the bill of divorcement that started it all where you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way." And you undo that, as I've said before, by inviting the Father in. And now I've made it clear that you can do it by reminding yourself while you're driving, or engaging in any activity, that you're not alone.

Remind yourself that there are those who are companioning with you, who have your ultimate welfare and interest in mind for you. This will help break down the confidence you have that you are alone, just like meditating and having moments of silence, where you are perfectly and exquisitely conscious without any thoughts, causes the undoing of your confidence that consciousness and thinking are one and the same thing; inseparable. And so there is a movement in your Being, you could say—an undoing.

You don't have to tackle every single misperception. All you have to do is undo the one thing that started it all, which was where you said, "Father, I'm going this way and doing it my way, and seeing it the way I want, and calling it what I say it is." You see? And inviting the Father back in, inviting these Awake Companions back in.

Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: The ego is not a traitor to God to Whom treachery is impossible, but it IS a traitor to you who believe YOU have been treacherous to your Father.

RAJ: Well, again, what's the ego? The orphan mentality.

It's not a traitor to God to Whom treachery is impossible, but it is a traitor to you who believe you have been treacherous to your Father, even though you may not remember having said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way," and that you had engaged in a denial of God and His Fatherhood of you. You do experience being an orphan, together with all the vulnerabilities that accompany it. And you don't like it. And the reason you don't like it, is because down deep you know this is not your Birthright. You know it is not natural to you, and therefore you cannot embrace it totally.

But, nevertheless, the orphan mentality is a traitor to you, because it keeps you—you keep yourself—distracted from the Truth about you by continually reinforcing the orphan state of mind. And it always has a willing ear in you, because you know something is wrong and you don't know what it is, and the ego says, "I know how to make you feel better. What you need is more power. What you need is more authority. What you need is more skill. What you need is the ability to finesse your Brother into behaving in a way that serves you, even if it costs him everything."

RAJ READING: The ego is not a traitor to God to Whom treachery is impossible, but it IS a traitor to you who believe YOU have been treacherous to your Father. That is why the UNDOING of guilt is an essential part of the Holy Spirit's teaching. For as long as you feel guilty you are listening to the voice of the ego, which tells you that you HAVE been treacherous to God and therefore DESERVE death.

RAJ: Now as I said last week, the ego isn't always that forthright. It doesn't say, "You deserve death." It says, [whispering at first] "Listen to me. It's impossible for you to believe that you won't die. You hear that. It's impossible for you to believe that you won't die. It's impossible for you to believe that you are eternal and will live forever. It's impossible for you to believe that you will be only the second one in all of history who will not die." You see? [small laugh] It doesn't say, "You deserve death!" [laughing] But it convinces you that you don't deserve anything else, so that you don't resist, you don't resist death. That slippery character.

RAJ READING: You will think that death comes from God and NOT from the ego because, by confusing yourself WITH the ego, you believe that YOU want death.

RAJ: You see? "I and my ego are one. I and my ego are one. I are my ego. My ego are me. We're one and the same, like thinking and consciousness are one and the same. I and my ego are one." You see? You're confused. That's all that means. You're confused.

RAJ READING: You will think that death comes from God and NOT from the ego because, by confusing yourself WITH the ego, you believe that YOU want death.

RAJ: Well, [laughing] you also believe that you can't live forever. That's the flip side of the coin that you believe you want death. But you don't like to look at it square in the face and see that the belief says, "You want death." It says something a little bit more pointed and more awful than you can't believe that you will live forever.

RAJ READING: And from what you want God does NOT save you.

When you are tempted to yield to the desire for death...

RAJ: When you are tempted to yield to the idea that you can't live forever. When you are tempted to yield to the idea that you can't possibly be only the second one in all of history that doesn't die.

RAJ READING: ...REMEMBER THAT I DID NOT DIE.

RAJ: It doesn't matter what all the justifications are that your ego or your orphan mentality can come up with for not embracing the Truth.

RAJ READING: ...REMEMBER THAT I DID NOT DIE.

RAJ: You see? And as I've said before, if you want to look at it this way, think of the odds I had to overcome when no one had ever done it before. You see? It is rather nonsensical, but you need to see, you need to see it with a light heart so that you can just go ahead and dare to say, "I dare to be willing to believe that I can be and will be the second person not to die."

Now:

RAJ READING: When you are tempted to yield to the desire for death REMEMBER THAT I DID NOT DIE. You will realize that this is true when you look within and SEE me.

RAJ: Ah! You see, when you're willing to plug your plug back in, something more than you expected comes. You get to have, for example, a direct experience of me—not some idea about some figure in history that was written about in the Bible that now you can talk about and think about—but a direct experience of me.

You get a direct experience of me, and thereby you get a direct experience of the fact that life is eternal, because I still am, and I am with you, and I can relate to you and you can relate to me, which means that whatever this dividing line is between where you think you are and where you think I am—having passed on or whatever—is not as solid as you thought, is not as valid as you thought.

You see, dominoes are beginning to fall. Other aha's are beginning to happen. You get more than you bargained for. You get more good than you were asking for, because all you were willing to do was to say, "I'm willing to plug the plug back in and let God back in, change my behavior enough to invite Him, or Jesus, or my Guide, into my conscious experience of Being numerous times during the day." Just a simple willingness to invite them in and you get so much more, that grounds you for even more.

RAJ READING: Would I have overcome death for myself alone? And would eternal life have been given me of the Father UNLESS he had also given it to you? When you learn to make ME manifest YOU will never see death.

RAJ: How do you make me manifest? You make me manifest in the space that you thought "you alone" were occupying. You invite me in. And you let me respond to you where you have believed no one else could ever respond because you were the only one occupying that territory, and you thought that was normal. And so you actually have blocked there being any experience of any of the rest of the Brotherhood who it is your Birthright to be experiencing intimately constantly and fully and wholly.

RAJ READING: When you learn to make ME manifest YOU will never see death. For you will have looked upon the deathless...

RAJ: Where?

RAJ READING: ...in YOURSELF...

RAJ: In yourself—meaning in that place where you thought you were the only one occupying that place. You are full... [laughing] you are full of the infiniteness of the Creation of God, including all of the Brotherhood, and each of the Brothers in the Brotherhood is full of the fullness of God, including you.

Again.

RAJ READING: When you learn to make ME manifest YOU will never see death. For you will have looked upon the deathless in YOURSELF, and you will see only the eternal as you look out upon a world that CANNOT die.

RAJ: Wow! Something else you hadn't bargained for gets added in there.

RAJ READING: ...you will see only the eternal as you look out upon...

RAJ: What? The world.

RAJ READING: ...a world...

RAJ: Everything. The world and universe. Everything that has been included in your conscious awareness.

You will...

RAJ READING: ...look out upon a world that CANNOT die.

RAJ: And it cannot die because you're going to be recognizing it as Creation, with a capital "C"—the visibility and tangibility of the Movement of God as Mind, that you are not separate from, and that, therefore, is the Truth about you in your totality, your infinite totality that is all-inclusive and not the least bit private.

Again, how do you undo all of this false training that has lead you to [laughing] almost total misperception of what's really going on? By breaking the isolation that brought it all on in the beginning. And you break the isolation by inviting God, or me, or the Holy Spirit, or your Guide, in. In where? Into the space you thought you had been occupying totally and exclusively.

You know the saying, "I stand at the door and knock. Let me in." Let your Right Mind in. Let God in. Invite us in. Make room for us. Being willing to entertain us. Being willing to host us in your space—in you. You see? And I mean, literally, let us be with you and converse with you. Let us relate to you in all of the ways that you already understand relating to another. You know, we can argue. And I know we will. We can agree. We can discuss. You can tell me the way you see it, and I'll tell you the way it is. And you can say, "Yes, but..." and I will say, "Well, yes, but, let's look at it this way." And I, we, all of those who stand in your service, will do this until you are satisfied with the Truth. Let's begin a conversation. Let's begin a relationship, or let us continue our relationship with a little more consistency and little more frequency.

This is the way you overcome death. This is the way you avoid the ultimate realization that, as a light bulb that is not plugged in, you have no function, and if you have no function, you don't exist. What a final revelation that is. Snuff! There ya went—if that could happen. But that's where self-righteousness and that's where the orphan mentality and that's where the ego would lead you.

I'm going to tell you something; I'm going to tell all of you something. Your skill—and I say it with a broad smile—your skill at being a "better and better ego" is going to begin to fail. We're getting closer to the time of Awakening. More and more Brothers are Awakening. The ease with which you continue to dream is diminishing. And where things used to work real well because you were so skilled at being the best damn orphan there ever was, will not work like it used to. And of course, if you persist, it will get worse, because the ability to maintain a viable, workable, functional sense of orphanhood won't be able to withstand the loss in the ranks of orphans that used to hold it together because of group consensus.

In the absence of power that you thought you had and that you used to be able to successfully exercise, you will find yourself coming closer and closer to the point of saying, "Help! Is there anyone at the door? Is there anyone out there? Help! I'm willing to try not doing it all by myself." And some righteousness will have crept into the picture. And self-righteousness will have diminished. And in the presence of righteousness, the inflow of God's Love will occur, and you will receive it and it will overflow from you and virtue will go out from you and everyone will be blessed.

Righteousness and humility go hand in hand. And humility, true humility cannot be feigned. It has to be allowed. It cannot be authorized. It must be allowed.

So, I must add one more thing. You can go to the store and buy yeast and you can end up with a package that is too old. And you make a loaf of bread with it and the bread just sogs in the bottom of the pan, because there is no life. The yeast, the leaven has nothing to... no capacity to fulfill a function.

What I want you to know is that those of you who have been listening to me and who have attempted— whether you have felt it has been totally successful or not—to be the leaven in your day, your successes have been felt. And I must feed back to you that even though you, most of you, feel that you failed miserably, you did not fail miserably. Keep that yellow sticky-note on your refrigerator and persist, because the way you undo an old habit is to persist, persist, persist in the motions of a new habit.

Okay.

I love you all. I am persisting with you. And I will forever persist with you until we can just be together, without your being on your way Home, because you will know that you are Home and won't be arguing against it any longer. So, I look forward to being with all of you next week. And I love you.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

May 6th 2006

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I am—as I think you're all well aware—making a point of bringing what we find in the Course into and relative to everyone's daily experience; getting it out of the realm of theory and platitudes and wonderful, blissful thoughts. We talked last week about the difference between righteousness and self-righteousness. And so we're going to consider self-righteousness a little bit further tonight.

Usually when you think of self-righteousness or a self-righteous person, you think of someone with their nose stuck up in the air, haughty, self-assured, behaving as though he or she is superior to everyone else, and letting everyone else know. It is arrogance personified. It is the orphan attempting to behave as though he or she is not an orphan, with gusto.

But there's another kind of self-righteousness. And I will say, first of all, that maybe none of you walk around with your nose up in the air all the time, but there are many moments when your nose suddenly comes to attention and struts itself. And so you can relate to what I'm talking about. There's another kind of self-righteousness that you might not associate with the word "self-righteous" and it's depression.

Depression doesn't seem to be arrogant. It doesn't parade itself like the first examples. It feels like a lack of energy. And buoyant or active or aggressive actions don't come forth from you when you're feeling depressed. Sometimes you don't even identify it as depression. You just say, "I'm having a down day," and you don't give it a name. Or you're going through your day and suddenly it's like all the wind goes out of your sails and something just came over you; the blues hit you. And you just sort of flow with it without identifying it. But the fact is that it is depression. And also the fact is that it is self-righteousness in action. Just be with that for a minute.

You are never blue for no reason. You're never depressed for no reason. In one way or another, you are depressed because things aren't working out the way you want them to work out and you are pissed. Always accompanying depression is anger. Always.

Now you can be depressed, or you can become depressed, if you've been trying to get touch with your Guide and you haven't been able to. You can be sorry, you can be sad, you can be depressed, because something that I've been telling you, you need to do and that all of you have the capacity to do, you aren't finding the truth of. You aren't having the experience. And you are frustrated. Frustration is a lesser form of anger, a more delicate form of anger, but it is anger nevertheless.

And when you become depressed, what happens? Well, because depression/anger is a form of defense, you become more private, don't you? You are willing to extend almost nothing to anyone or anything. "Well, I'm feeling so blue I just don't have the gumption to extend. Nothing seems worth it." And there you are embodying pure orphanhood. What you don't see is that this is arrogance also, because you are aggressively defensive by being ultra-passive, by not being available to extend, by not being available to participate.

You make a statement of privacy that everyone can feel. And so a statement has been made. An act has been expressed. In what way is it self-righteous? It is self-righteous because it is perhaps one of the purest forms of separation, not just from God, but from your world and from your fellowman. It is an almost pure act of independence. Again, it is almost a pure act of independence.

What happens when you're depressed? Nothing looks good; not even a tree or a bird singing registers with you and makes your heart sing. You might even want the bird to shut up. The sun shining depresses you further, because you can't relate to it. Someone calls on the phone. "Oh, I don't want to talk to anybody right now. I'm not going to let them disturb my misery. I refuse to be distracted from my devotion to my suffering." You see? You see how private, how independent it is? And how aggressive it is, because it takes every single stimulus from your world and rejects it; flat out rejects it? And it's not sloppy about the manner in which it rejects it; it rejects it all. That is far from passive.

When you are depressed, there is something that goes out of the window in you, and that something is generosity. There is not only an unwillingness to be generous, the word doesn't even come to your mind. You are not willing to be generous in the sense of extending the benefit of the doubt to a Brother or Sister. You're not willing to be generous and to acknowledge what a beautiful day it is. You are not willing to be generous enough to appreciate the generosity of a Brother or a Sister. In fact, if while you're in this frame of mind somebody close to you is busy being magnanimously generous, it depresses you even more. It actually angers you more, because the contrast is sitting there staring you in the face, emphasizing the awfulness of where you are.

Now, I'm not going to ask you to answer this question out loud, but I want you to think for a moment and think of one word that epitomizes the word "generous," other than the word "generous." I will say I want you to think of a word that maximally, totally epitomizes the meaning of the word "generous." It's probably a word you've never thought to associate with the word "generous." [pause] Okay, the word is "God."

What do you think Creation is? An act of generosity. An extension of what God is, infinitely, without reservation. An act of generosity that is eternal, and asks for nothing in return, because the making of the extension is the fullness of the fulfillment of Being. Creation is generosity embodied. "God being" is generosity moving. So now let's bring it home. If God is generosity moving and if you are the expression of God, then the fulfillment of your Being is found in your generosity.

For... I was going to say months. For years we've been reading this book, and the word "extension" comes up, like I will extend it to you, I will extend it to you, extension, extension. You know what? You can pass a glass of water to somebody and extend a thirst-quencher to them without being generous.

Ah, but you're with someone and you notice them clearing their throat or behaving in a manner that indicates that perhaps a glass of water would be helpful. Generosity has already been expressed, because you've been willing to pay attention to them and notice the need, before you even walk to the tap and fill a glass of water and bring it to them. You have engaged in the act of caring. That's a generous act. And then you've noticed a need and then you've said, "Would you like a glass of water?" as you get up to go get one and bring one. Generosity has occurred because Love has been embodied in the caring that caused you to notice the need before they even asked.

On the other hand, if you haven't noticed and they do ask for a glass of water, you can get it for them and give it to them generously. Or you can think, "Can't he see that I'm busy doing something right now? He could get it himself. But I'll go get it." And you get it for him and there's nothing generous about any of it.

Generosity embodies Love. Generosity involves getting outside of your self. Generosity means getting out of self-righteousness.

You see, self-righteous says, "He can get it himself. Can't he see he's disturbing me. Important me doing important things, and him having an unimportant need that he could take care of himself." You see? Well, there's depression for you. Whether it's recognized or not, there's depression and self-righteousness.

Now as you think back over the past weeks and months, we have been talking about shifting your attention outside of your present sense of yourself; the present boundaries that you think identify you. We've talked about stepping outside, reaching beyond those boundaries, and inviting something else in. This is the beginning of generosity, because it's the willingness to abandon your privacy, your autonomy. It expresses your willingness to be inclusive. And in the willingness to be inclusive, you are extending an invitation to be joined by something else. And that extension is an act of generosity. It is a generous, rather than a selfish, thing to do.

And so I want you to give some attention this week to the word "generous." And now when you go to bed at night, instead of asking whether virtue has gone out from you, I want you to ask, "Has generosity characterized my day? Have I engaged in being truly generous? Have I let someone else be on my mind? Have I extended care, caring? And have I responded when a need was recognized?"

Sounds like work, huh? It's going to require more attention than you're used to giving, because it's so easy just to be private and sort of go through your day on automatic with appropriate responses that don't really require you to come out of your privacy; certainly not to the degree where when you are present with others, you are actively engaged in recognizing their presence, recognizing what's going on with them, seeing if there is a need, and fulfilling it to the best of your ability. You're not used to doing that. You are all much more self-centered. And I promise you that it is to the degree that you are self-centered that you are miserable. It's very simple.

"Oh, but look at what's happened in my life. Look at the circumstances I'm in. I have reason to be miserable. I have reason to be depressed." Oh, well, there you are, acting out self-centeredness, aren't you? "I, I, I." But what you're overlooking is the fact that your misery is inseparable from your preoccupation with yourself, and your circumstances and how unfair everything is. And you, in your private silence, are going to hold the world and everyone in it hostage by not joining with them, by not being with them, by not participating with them. The epitome of orphanhood.

If you want to be happy, find that in you which is generous whether you feel like it or not. Because I promise you, you will not feel like being generous until you abandon your devotion to your self-righteous privacy.

This is all we've been talking about as we've gone through the Course. Where are we? We're in a chapter called, "God's Plan For Salvation." Whose salvation? Your salvation. And what is God's Plan for your salvation? God's Plan for your salvation is that you say, "Father, help!" Simple. Invite something in that is beyond your best reasoning, your best judgments, your pet theories, and your favorite definitions of everything. God's Plan for your salvation is that you reach out to the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind, and let in the "more of you" than you have been allowing to register with you; the infiniteness of you that you have been ignoring in favor of your very tiny well-developed definitions of yourselves that you have created. That's God's Plan for salvation.

God's Plan for salvation is for you to open up to the generosity of Being, the generosity of God, and claim God to be your Father, your Source, so that you might, in letting Him in, find the Truth about you, which is your generousness that you find yourself infilled with and that you can't hold on to, that will overflow and be extended because Love is alive in you.

You see, each week I'm turning your attention to your fellowman, I'm turning your attention to the Father, and I'm saying bring the Father and your fellowman into the picture, and let the Father infill you with that which He would reveal to you about Himself as it relates to you, which is totally, so that you might thereby have a spontaneous unwithholdable gift to extend to your Brother in the acknowledgment of what's True about him to him. We're breaking the isolation, but it's got to happen right where you are, with the people you're dealing with. They are your workspace, you might say, or, in happier terms, they are your playground in which to play divinity, in which to play what is True, so that it might register with you and illuminate you so that your illumination illuminates things for others. Breaking the isolation is what it's all about.

So this week, the word is "generous." Not generosity. You can talk about generosity, but you must be generous. You get it? Don't waste a moment contemplating and thinking about generosity. That's thinking about "what it means" to be generous. It doesn't "mean" anything to be generous because the focus there is on the meaning. "What does it mean?" "Mmm. Well, let me see here. I think it means this, or I think it means that." And you're off the beam. You've lost the point.

I want you to be with the word “generous” relative to you. “Am I being generous? Do I feel generous right now?”

And if you don’t, you may know that you are engaged in something that is causing you to be depressed. You are engaged in something that is at odds with your nature. And you need to get out of it, because you need to shift into being generous, feeling generous, and engaging in—not generosity—in being, engaging in being generous. And if you simply find it too difficult to do—which means if you find that it is much more satisfying to be pissed off and therefore depressed than to let in the littlest bit of generosity—ask the Holy Spirit for help, ask the Father for help to get you over the hump, to illuminate in you some little point of light of generosity so that you may take hold of it and let it be in you and find expression.

Don’t go through your days being unable to be generous. Generous doesn’t mean handing out money. Generous means acknowledging the person that is in front of you or the person that is next to you. Be aware they are there. You can walk through a grocery store or a checkout line, where people are all around you, and you don’t have the faintest idea who is next to you, whether they’re male or female, because your blinders are on. And you are thinking about what you’ve got to do after you leave the store, and you’re watching the cashier, and maybe you’re watching the person ahead of you to see if they’re delaying you, but that’s about it.

To be truly generous means to be experiencing what I’m going to call “full open consciousness”—not closed-down consciousness—full open, letting it all register with you. Letting yourself be present with it all. That’s being generous.

Being generous is giving the benefit of the doubt. Being generous is noticing when it is sunny and bright, and a beautiful spring day with all of the flowers blossoming, and all of the leaves coming out on the trees, and all of the wonderful subtle shades of green that are there in fresh spring colors. And letting your heart respond. That’s being generous.

Let’s go to the book.

Reality and Redemption

[Editor’s Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here instead: The Attraction of Love for Love]

It’s a good choice of words. Reality and redemption are inseparable from each other.

When something is redeemed, it's brought back to its original state, its original perfect state. Your willingness to see Reality as it is, means that you are being generous enough to be undefended against the experience of what Reality is. You are extending an invitation to experience it "as it is," in spite of what you have believed it was.

Reality and redemption are inseparable. Not just your redemption, but the redemption of everything in your experience. Why is it redeemed? Because it had to go through a redemptive process? No. It is redeemed because you are allowing "what it has always been" to register with you.

Continuing.

Do you REALLY believe that you can kill the Son of God?

More of these stark terms.

Do you really believe that you can be an orphan? If you do, then, in effect, you are snuffing out the Son of God by saying, "I'm no Son of God. I'm an orphan." And apparently then, the Son of God has been killed because you're so damned determined to be an orphan, and to be it better and better and better.

Do you really believe that you can do away with or kill the Son of God?

The Father has hidden His Son safely within Himself and kept him far away from your destructive thoughts,...

Your determination to be the best damned orphan there ever was.

...but YOU know neither the Father nor the Son...

With a capital "S", that you really Are.

...because of them.

Now let me read that again.

The Father has hidden His Son safely within Himself and kept him far away from your destructive thoughts, but YOU know neither the Father nor the Son because of them.

Because of your determination to see things your way, you've lost your awareness of Who your Father is, and you've lost the awareness of what you truly Are. And so the Father and the Son are unknown to you, because you are going to be the best damned orphan there ever was.

You attack the real world every day and every hour and every minute, and yet you are surprised that you cannot see it.
[Editor's Note: Raj said "the world" instead of "the real world."]

Well, how do you attack the world? You know. By providing your own definitions of it, and believing your definitions, and choosing to ignore what it really is. It's that simple. And yet you are surprised that you cannot see the real world. "Oh, well. In the sweet bye and bye after you die, you'll see it." Bullshit! You won't see it until you're willing to see it whether it's now or after you die. You won't see it until you are willing to see it.

Now:

If you seek love in order to attack it you will NEVER find it. For if love is sharing,...

Oh, generousness.

...if love is sharing,...

Extension.

...how can you find it except through ITSELF?

You can't find it until you're being it, in other words. You can't find love until you're embodying love. You can't find love until you are willing to be generous.

Offer it and it will come to you because it is drawn to itself. But offer attack and it will remain hidden, for it can live only in peace.

Meaning it can live only in an unconflicted mind. It can live only in a mind which is not insisting on introducing a secondary plan to stand in its own right along with the Father's Plan; side by side; equal but different. That's the introduction of conflict. That's the introduction of polarity. That's the introduction of difference. You see? Twoness. Duality. Which is impossible.

God's Son...

The one that you really Are.

...is as safe as his Father, for the Son...

The one that you really Are.

...knows his Father's protection and CANNOT fear.

Why does he know his Father's protection? Because he's not engaging in behaving in a way that causes him to seem to be separate from the Father, and therefore unavailable to the perfect order of Being that his Father is embodying right where the Son is.

His Father's Love holds him in perfect peace, and needing nothing, he ASKS for nothing. Yet he is far from you whose...

Capital "S".

...Self he is,...

In other words:

Yet he...

The one that you truly Are. The Christ.

...is far from you...

The orphan that you think you are.

...whose...

Capital "S".

...Self...

The Real You is.

You may be acting like an orphan and you may be ignoring everything that makes you not an orphan, but you don't ever stop being what you really Are. And so what you really Are is the Self, the Real Self of the orphan. Right now in your sense of separateness and lostness, you are absolutely divine. And this divine one that you Are is the only Self there is. And so it is the Self—which we're going to capitalize to identify the Real You—it is the Self of the you, you think you are. In other words, you are the Christ, each one of you, behaving as though you are not the Christ and believing your behavior.

Again.

Yet he...

God's Son.

...is far from you whose Self he is, for you chose to attack him,...

You chose to dispute him by taking on another character, and giving preference to the character you took on.

...he is far from you whose Self he is, for you chose to attack him, and he disappeared from your sight into his Father.

The Real You disappeared from your sight into your Father.

HE...

The Real You.

...did not change, but YOU...

The orphan mentality that you're so damned sure of and so proud of.

...did.

The Real You did not change, but you did.

For a split mind and all its works were not created by the Father, and could not live in the knowledge of Him.

You see, you have to disown your Father, you have to divorce your Father in order to have a sense of yourself that is original and different from your Father, different from your Father's Son. And so if you're going to maintain this state of orphanhood, it (the orphan) cannot live in the knowledge of his Father, in the awareness that he has a Father, because if he lived in that awareness, he would know that he wasn't an orphan. They're mutually exclusive.

When you made what is NOT true visible, what IS true became invisible.

When you became devoted to a lie, Truth became invisible, because if you let any of the Truth in, it would undo the lie that you're committed to. And so you cannot let the Truth in and still maintain the lie; which is another way of saying, "and still maintain the façade."

When you made what is NOT true visible, what IS true became invisible. Yet it cannot be invisible in ITSELF,...

What God has made cannot be rendered null and void. It can't become invisible. It can't actually disappear.

...for the Holy Spirit sees it with perfect clarity.

Your Right Mind sees it with perfect clarity, because your Right Mind is It, held in trust while you're having this little drama, this little playacting episode, pretending to be an orphan.

It is invisible to you...

As an orphan.

...because you are looking at something ELSE.

And what are you looking at? You're looking at your definitions, or you're looking at the definitions others have provided to you and you're not questioning them at all.
