Chapter 31 – Walking with Christ

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: This is perfect. Just the right size. And it's no accident that you are the ones who are here. And I am including Paul and Sue in that.

We will continue where we left off last week and read one paragraph and then pass it on. And if as we're reading, something really sticks in your mind or sticks in your craw, don't hesitate to interrupt and ask about it.

So we will start with section two of chapter 31 called:

RAJ READING: Walking with Christ (T-#603/648)

READER: Walking with Christ (T-#603/648)

An ancient lesson is not overcome by the opposing of the new and old. It is not vanquished that the truth be known, nor fought against to lose to truth's appeal. There is no battle that must be prepared; no time to be expended, and no plans that need be laid for bringing in the new. There is an ancient battle being waged against the truth, but truth does not respond. Who could be hurt in such a war, unless he hurts himself? He has no enemy in truth. And can he be assailed by dreams? (T-#603/648)

READER: Let us review again what seems to stand between you and the truth of what you are. For there are steps in its relinquishment. The first is a decision that you make. But afterwards, the truth is given you. You would establish truth. And by your wish you set two choices to be made, each time you think you must decide on anything. Neither is true. Nor are they different. Yet must we see them both, before you can look past them to the one alternative that is a different choice. But not in dreams you made, that this might be obscured to you. (T-#603/648)

RAJ: Before we continue...

RAJ READING: Let us review again what seems to stand between you and the truth of what you are. For there are steps in its relinquishment. The first is a decision that you make. But afterwards, the truth is given you. You would establish truth. (T-#603/648)

RAJ: In other words, left to your own devices you would establish truth.

RAJ READING: And by your wish you set two choices to be made,... (T-#603/648)

RAJ: By your wish to be able to establish truth.

RAJ READING: And by your wish you set two choices to be made, each time you think... (T-#603/648)

RAJ: Keyword "think."

RAJ READING: ...each time you think you must decide on anything. Neither is true. (T-#603/648)

RAJ: In other words, whenever you think you must decide on anything, you set two choices and neither one of them is going to be true.

RAJ READING: Nor are they different. (T-#603/648)

RAJ: Whenever you decide, whenever you decide what truth is, whenever you think for the purpose of deciding anything, you can always count on it that the purpose of the decision is to cover your ass. In other words, the purpose of your decision is to make yourself safe. Is a defense, in other words.

So...

RAJ READING: You would establish truth. And by your wish you set two choices to be made, each time you think you must decide on anything. Neither is true. Nor are they different. (T-#603/648)

RAJ: They're not different because they have the same goal and that is defense.

RAJ READING: Yet must we see them both, before you can look past them to the one alternative that is a different choice. But not in dreams you made, that this might be obscured to you. (T-#603/648)

RAJ: Okay. We'll let you go next. Did she show you where?

SEEKER: She just went like that. [probably someone pointed to where to read next]

RAJ READING: What you would choose between... (T-#603/648)

READER: What you would choose between is not a choice and gives but the illusion it is free, for it will have one outcome either way. Thus is it really not a choice at all. The leader and the follower emerge as separate roles, each seeming to possess advantages you would not want to lose. So in their fusion there appears to be the hope of satisfaction and of peace. You see yourself divided into both these roles, forever split between the two. And every friend or enemy becomes a means to help you save yourself from this. (T-#603/648)

READER: Perhaps you call it love. Perhaps you think that it is murder justified at last. You hate the one you gave the leader's role when you would have it, and you hate as well his not assuming it at times you want to let the follower in you arise, and give away the role of leadership. And this is what you made your brother for, and learned to think that this his purpose is. (T-#603/649)

RAJ: Ah. And learned to think that this his purpose is.

Continue.

READER: Unless he serves it, he has not fulfilled the function that was given him by you. And thus he merits death, because he has no purpose and no usefulness to you. (T-#603/649)

READER: And what of him? What does he want of you? (T-#604/649)

RAJ: And who is him?

SEEKER (reader): Your Brother.

RAJ: Yes.

READER: What could he want, but what you want of him? Herein is life as easily as death, for what you choose you choose as well for him. Two calls you make to him, as he to you. Between these two is choice, because from them there is a different outcome. If he be the leader or the follower to you it matters not, for you have chosen death. But if he calls for death or calls for life, for hate or for forgiveness and for help, is not the same in outcome. Hear the one, and you are separate from him and are lost. But hear the other, and you join with him and in your answer is salvation found. The voice you hear in him is but your own. What does he ask you for? And listen well! For he is asking what will come to you, because you see an image of yourself and hear your voice requesting what you want. (T-#604/649)

Before you answer, pause to think of this:

RAJ: Go ahead and pass it on.

READER: Before you answer, pause to think of this:

The answer that I give my brother is what I am asking for.

And what I learn of him is what I learn about myself.

Then let us wait an instant and be still, forgetting everything we thought we heard; remembering how much we do not know. This brother neither leads nor follows us, but walks beside us on the selfsame road. He is like us, as near or far away from what we want as we will let him be. We make no gains he does not make with us, and we fall back if he does not advance. Take not his hand in anger but in love, for in his progress do you count your own. And we go separately along the way unless you keep him safely by your side. (T-#604/649)

RAJ: As we continue reading this, I want to emphasize again the impossibility of being alone, the impossibility of independence, the impossibility of sovereignty in which no one else matters to you. This is impossible. And so as we're reading, I want you to read it with the awareness that you need your Brother. You need your Sister. You need your... you need companions. You need companions because you have adopted an unnatural attitude that says that somehow you can be happy and you can be whole all by yourself. This is a lie. You can't. And you also can't adopt an attitude of inclusion or an attitude of embrace; it will be meaningless if you don't feel the need.

It's very easy to behave in a friendly way. It's very easy to go to a social gathering and find ways to fit in and appear to be gregarious and friendly and inclusive, and yet not have touched anyone at all, and not have let yourself be touched at all. It's possible to go and be lonely before you got there, and be lonely while you were there, and be lonely after you left.

No one is going to get past the flawed experience of reality until they're willing to feel their neediness--their needing their fellowman. And until you feel the need, you won't know where the door is to open to let your fellowman in. You won't know where your door is if you're not feeling the need. So, as we continue, keep this in mind.

SEEKER: Raj, how is that connected to the idea of the two... of two choices and that there's a decision to be made? There's two choices and neither one of them is right. How is that related to... I can see where we give our Brother... either... we look at our Brother two ways--either as someone to be defended against, or someone who deserves our forgiveness. And that... that forgiveness is actually us forgiving ourselves. But I'm not sure about the first part... the first part of the [concept.]

RAJ: The two ways, neither of which is true, are when you would use your fellowman for positive or negative reasons.

When you would be friendly to make a gain, or when you are friendly because this one fits your concept of what a decent person is or what a lovable person is--when the fact is you haven't connected with Who They Really Are at all. All you are doing is responding to those criteria that tell you in your concept of things that this is a worthwhile person to know, or to get to know. On the other hand, if this person does not meet the criteria--in other words, she's not a blond--because you like brunettes--you automatically categorize her as one unworthy of your getting to know.

When you are using others to fulfill your purposes, for positive or negative reasons, you are making the same choice, which is not to connect at all with her, or with him, but to stay safely secluded in your sieve through which you determine who is worthy or unworthy of your love or attention.

Do you understand now?

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Okay.

Let us continue.

READER: Because he is your equal in God's Love, you will be saved from all appearances and answer to the Christ Who calls to you. (T-#604/650)

RAJ: Ah.

RAJ READING: ...you will be saved from all appearances... (T-#604/650)

RAJ: You will be saved from the appearances that you have been using as criteria.

SEEKER: And when will we be saved?

RAJ: Very simply, when you recognize that he is your equal. Because he is your equal in God's Love.

SEEKER: Then there is no greater or lesser than he is your equal.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: No judging to be desirable and non-desirable.

RAJ: That is correct.

Continue.

READER: Be still and listen. Think not ancient thoughts. Forget the dismal lessons that you learned about this Son of God who calls to you. Christ calls to all with equal tenderness, seeing no leaders and no followers, and hearing but one answer to them all. Because He hears one Voice, He cannot hear a different answer from the one He gave when God appointed Him His only Son. (T-#604/650)

RAJ: So this Brother who is your equal is not just your equal, let us say, on the way Home. He is not just your equal as a fellow human being. But he is equal as the Christ. Which tells you that you right here right now are the Christ, that you are the fullness of what the Father set into motion that looks like you, and you had been that from the beginning. And this could never be altered, except in the imagination.

And so when the Course asks you, or suggests to you, that when you look at your fellowman you recognize the Christ, it isn't to say, "That one is ahead of you. That one is better than you." But it calls upon you to recognize that what you see about your Brother is the Truth about you so that you might conceive of yourself more Truly, and thus lift the potential for the relationship much higher than, as someone else has said, your poor thought models would allow.

Continue.

READER: Be very still an instant. Come without all thought of what you ever learned before, and put aside all images you made. The old will fall away before the new without your opposition or intent. (T-#604/650)

RAJ: Hmmmm. Read that sentence again.

READER: The old will fall away before the new without your opposition or intent. (T-#604/650)

RAJ: Interesting. Without any willfulness expressed on your part, positively or negatively.

RAJ READING: The old will fall away before the new without your opposition or intent. (T-#604/650)

RAJ: Continue.

READER: There will be no attack upon the things you thought were precious and in need of care. There will be no assault upon your wish to hear a call that never has been made. (T-#604/650)

RAJ: What might that be? A call that never has been made that you might hear?

SEEKER (reader): You're asking me?

RAJ: I am.

SEEKER: Well...

RAJ: And you are free to say, "I do not know."

SEEKER: Well, I'll give it my best. I believe it means, first of all, that I... that, first of all, it's my wish to see whatever I'm seeing. And so if I hear a call that never has been made, that would be my wish to see something that would give me the justification for defense or attack. Is that correct?

RAJ: Indeed. A call that has never been made might be when it appears that someone has thought poorly of you, or become unjustifiably angry with you, that colors your subsequent perceptions of them so that when they are not saying anything derogatory, you tend to hear it derogatorily, because that is what you expect to hear. And by translation, you might say, that is what you wish to hear, because that is what you are convinced about, about them.

But as the healing of relationships occur, the process brings no assault upon your wish to hear a call that never has been made. It won't argue with you. It won't try to coerce you. It will melt you. It will melt your resistance. It will melt your commitment to the way you had been seeing things. But it won't argue with you. It won't fight with you about the way you had been seeing things and how wrong it was and how false it was.

When there is the willingness to see the Christ in each other, because somewhere you have heard and then you have come to feel that the essential being of your fellowman is the very Presence of God, and therefore the Christ, that opens the door for spontaneous dissolving of the wishes you had to see them differently.

Sometimes you wish to see another untruly because they seem to have something you don't have and you're jealous, and so you get angry at them for your lack, and you hold them in that vision. It is your wish to see them as terrible, because you think you can't have what they have. And the problem isn't with what they have, but with your belief that you are not the Christ, that you are not as worthy as they are, and that therefore God has short-changed you. But rather than being mad at God, you get mad at them and hold it against them. I'm not singling you out and I'm not illustrating an actual example that's true in your life.

But the key here is that as the willingness to recognize the Christ in your fellowman occurs, the means by which you held a distance between them, between yourself and them, melts spontaneously without coercion being applied. And you know what? That always feels like being loved. When your thought is transformed without coercion and without making you feel stupid, when it happens for no good reason and you have come into a new point of view that blesses you and blesses them, you always feel loved. You will always feel honored, you might say, honored by the process. And that tells you something of the Nature of God. And it tells you something of the Nature of Awakening. At every point you will find that it confirms your dignity, confirms your value, in a way that doesn't escape your attention.

Continue.

READER: Nothing will hurt you in this holy place, to which you come to listen silently and learn the truth of what you really want. No more than this will you be asked to learn. But as you hear it, you will understand you need but come away without the thoughts you did not want, and that were never true. (T-#604/650)

RAJ: Indeed.

READER: Forgive your brother all appearances, that are but ancient lessons you have taught yourself about the sinfulness in you. Hear but his call for mercy and release from all the fearful images he holds of what he is and of what you must be. He is afraid to walk with you, and thinks perhaps a bit behind, a bit ahead would be a safer place for him to be. Can you make progress if you think the same, advancing only when he would step back, and falling back when he would go ahead? For so do you forget the journey's goal, which is but to decide to walk with him, so neither leads nor follows. Thus it is a way you go together, not alone. And in this choice is learning's outcome changed, for Christ has been reborn to both of you. (T-#605/650)

RAJ: Wow. Such a sentence.

RAJ READING: And in this choice is learning's outcome changed, for Christ has been reborn to both of you. (T-#605/650)

RAJ: So, how has the Christ been reborn to both of you? It is reborn to both of you when you choose to walk together. This is very important. It can't be reborn to you as long as you are maintaining any degree of separation, of distance. It can't be reborn as long as you are practicing defense, self-protection. And so if you would find the Christ reborn in you as your conscious experience of yourself, you're going to have to find a way to dare to be innocent with your Brother, or your Sister. I do not mean innocent of bad behavior. I mean being present with them innocently. Being with them without preconceptions. Being with them without ancient hatreds. Being with them without holding the past between yourself and them.

The Christ can't be reborn in both of you until you feel the need for each other and let it happen-- meaning let the need be felt. And then proceed together, giving each other the benefit of the doubt constantly. Caring enough to hang in there through whatever might come up in the process of both of your finding out even more clearly how completely you are the Christ.

But, you see, it's interesting, you can't be the Christ independently. There is no way to stand up and say, "I am the Christ."

ANOTHER SEEKER: I alone.

RAJ: Exactly. I alone.

Because, you know, what it means to be the Christ isn't at all special. It isn't glorious. It's experienced at a much more fundamental level. It's experienced as the ability to be unafraid with your Brother, as the ability to be genuinely present with, and on behalf of, your Brother. Being the Christ is experienced not as a high, but rather as a deep calm out of which an unimaginable Love can come forth and be expressed, no matter what has gone on before, no matter what even might be going on in the moment that this extension of Christhood is being made.

Sometimes when you see and feel the Christ in another, that other one may not yet be feeling it, and may not be behaving consistently with the peace and the calm and the genuineness and the love that's coming forth from you and which you have no doubt whatsoever is the same fundamental Truth about them. But because the Christ in you has been awakened, their behavior doesn't push the buttons that it used to when you were not coming from that place of the Christ reborn in you. And so whether it's seen by them as something that allows them instantaneously to give them permission to give themselves permission to feel the Christ of themselves, you are a benign presence--a benign but meaningful presence--that, you might say, fertilizes the territory, nurtures the territory in which the other one is feeling uncomfortable, and makes it viable, makes it liable to the discovery of their Christhood for themselves.

Let us continue.

READER: An instant spent without your old ideas of who your great companion is and what he should be asking for, will be enough to let this happen. And you will perceive his purpose... (T-#605/650)

RAJ: Ah. So simple. An instant. Not an hour. Not a month. An instant spent what? Absent your old ideas. Absent your old concepts. An instant of having abandoned your convictions about who your great companion is and what he should be asking for, will be enough to let this happen.

Continue.

READER: And you will perceive his purpose is the same as yours. He asks for what you want, and needs the same as you. It takes, perhaps, a different form in him, but it is not the form you answer to. He asks and you receive, for you have come with but one purpose; that you both may learn you love each other with a brother's love. And as a brother, must his Father be the same as yours, as he is like yourself. (T-#605/650)

READER: Together is your joint inheritance remembered and accepted by you both. Alone it is denied to both of you. Is it not clear that while you still insist on leading or on following, you think you walk alone, with no one by your side? This is the road to nowhere, for the light cannot be given while you walk alone, and so you cannot see which way you go. And thus there is confusion, and a sense of endless doubting as you stagger back and forward in the darkness and alone. Yet these are but appearances of what the journey is, and how it must be made. For next to you is One Who holds the light before you, so that every step is made in certainty and sureness of the road. A blindfold can indeed obscure your sight, but cannot make the way itself grow dark. And He Who travels with you has the light. (T-#605/651)

RAJ: It would be well to write that on a piece of paper and hang it on your refrigerator door.

RAJ READING: ...He Who travels with you has the light. (T-#605/651)

RAJ: That's not what you believe. That's not what you are conditioned to think. That's not what everyone's bad behavior which occurs as a result of their being ignorant of the fact that they have the Light, teaches you. And so it is well to have a reminder that you can see every day. You might even put it on the wall across from your toilet so that you will be sure to encounter it at least once a day.

So that you can remind yourself that there is something more going on in your fellowman than his conditionings and his firm convictions that he has come to based upon inadequate information about you, or about people in his life. So that you might be reminded that no matter how another presents himself or herself, the presentation is probably not coming from a place of groundedness in What Is True about them, and therefore you would be foolish to treat their presentation as though it were true, even if they're firmly convinced of it.

Because until someone begins to dare to have a vision different from the status quo, there is no way for a clearer light to penetrate the beliefs and the conditionings; there is no way for you to be an agent for change in another's life. So you must be willing to take the unusual, and perhaps radical, stance that not only is your Brother the Christ, and your Sister the Christ, but he or she has the Light. What Light? What Light does he or she have?

SEEKER: The Christ Light.

RAJ: And what difference would that make to you?

ANOTHER SEEKER: If you were the only Christ, I mean if there was not some other Christ to be looking at, boy, that would be pretty dull. You know, that would be an empty thing.

I mean even if these gurus, these self-professed gurus that say... that are talking about how "they are the ones that know" and everybody else had better listen to them, they must be having a pretty bad time of it, because they don't get to enjoy all this reflection that could be coming back to them. I think about that a lot, you know.

RAJ: That is exactly the point that the Light your Brother has is the Light that illuminates you. The Light they have is the Light that blesses you and helps you realize your Christhood. The Light they have is the Light that shines the way for you.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Whether they recognize it or not.

RAJ: That is absolutely correct.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: 'Cause there could really be such a thing as lack if somebody had it and somebody else didn't.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And that's the whole imbalance that we're dealing with is that there could be something or someone that didn't have the Truth about it, even though it may be shrouded by an ignorance currently held.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: To see through the ignorance is seeing through the veil, isn't it?

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: And not believe it. That's the hard thing is if they're believing it and throwing it up. And it can look real interesting even. And that's been holding us all in check here--playing with that.

RAJ: Yes.

You see no matter how you perceive yourselves, no matter how ugly your determinations have become about yourself, you still can't stop being the Christ. You cannot alter what God has set in place as you. You cannot alter it from His Intent. And so, in spite of the imaginations everyone gets involved in, all of you continue to be the Light for each other.

And so, even in your ignorances, you bring into play exactly the things that illuminate the points at which you're ready to grow. And so when someone is in a particularly morose or critical or depressed state, and they express themselves in an ugly manner, you have the option to take what they're saying as though it's the gospel truth and respond to them as though they actually are their behavior. And, in so doing, not grow at all yourself and remain stuck in the same place they are.

Or you have the opportunity to recognize that they are shining the Light on a capacity you have to express more love and compassion than you ever thought you could bring to bear upon an ugly situation. That you have the capacity not to react from the hip, from habit. It provides you with the opportunity to discover your capacity to stand with them in their dark moment, without confirming their dark moment to them. And by virtue of not confirming it to them, providing them with a face-to-face provision of the fact that there is another way to look at what they're looking at, whether they opt for it at that moment or not.

You see, every single fight, every single argument, every single testy relationship is really two Christs being the Christ with each other, even though both of them are seeing themselves and what is happening through a twisted dark glass, you might say. But because they are the Christ, and because they have the Light, and because that Light is shining on both of them, you might say from opposite directions, there is always the opportunity for a breakthrough in one's perception to discover the opportunity to be the Christ That You Are. And that's why you must always approach your relationships from the standpoint of there being a need to feel needy, that you need your Brother. Because if you need your Brother, your Brother needs you.

And if your Brother needs you like you need your Brother, then his or her obtuse behavior is a call for that which isn't being experienced at the moment. And if you know you need your Brother as much as your Brother needs you, then you know at the moment that what is called for is the willingness to hang in there with him, or with her, with an unwillingness to judge on the basis of incomplete information, on the basis of an assessment of him or her that is anything less than that they're the Christ, that they are at that moment the Direct Expression of God, just as you are.

Until there is an experience of this need, there won't be the willingness to help, to be there for them, stand there for them, witness for them, even when they're arguing against your witnessing for them. It is so important because, in the choice to go together, learning's outcome is changed, for the Christ has been reborn to both of you. It's so important to discover that a realization of the Truth in your own mind will not whisk you off into the Kingdom of Heaven. You can't come Home alone. You can't come Home without connecting with your Brother, and not only remembering God, but remembering Who You Are and Who They Are, the Christ.

SEEKER: May I say something?

RAJ: You may.

SEEKER: That statement you just made about it's not going to... realizing the Truth, or something like that, is not going to whisk you off into Heaven, it made me think about the fact that maybe that's why a lot of us have waited, have hedged on however waking up happens because it's not a high. I mean you don't get high from just the acceptance of your Brother and this thing you call a deep calm that comes from it. And it's just coming to me now that that experience is something that we so often, you know, fall away from because we go about the experience of continuing these highs and lows that we're so used to that don't give us that deep calm. But they make us somehow feel like something is going on.

RAJ: Hmm. Or seeking for a further high. Or a...

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: ...more potent truth.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Or a better guru. Or a better teaching.

SEEKER: So it's easy to decide, "Well, it's just not worth it to me," whatever is going on with that other person, or the dilemma possibly where there's a thought, "Well, I can make a choice here." I can choose to say, "Well, it's just not worth it to me," and then what I'm really proving is that I'm really not worth it. [small laugh] And that's... that's the kind of hidden thing that's going on that we just stay just blinded, just blindsided to.

RAJ: And...

SEEKER: And it always seems like it's somebody else.

RAJ: And when you... when the message that you're not worth it registers with you, then you get mad at them for uncovering this to you.

SEEKER: Right. Because it's very humiliating. And it dare not be exposed.

RAJ: Which still keeps you distracted from the discovery that there is a different way for you to look at this. And that you have the choice to look with love. And you have a choice to consider the possibility that there's more to this other one than you are giving him or her credit for. And that this Something More to them is God-derived, and not derived from their prior experience, from their upbringing, from the conditions of the world, or from their simple human beingness. That the Something More is derived from God, just as yours is.

You know, it is impossible for you to treat another differently from how you treat yourself. And so what you do not allow for another, you do not allow for yourself. On the other hand, what you are firmly convinced about for yourself, you will fight tooth and nail to convince another is true for them.

SEEKER: And so often it is worthlessness.

RAJ: So often...

SEEKER: It's worthlessness.

RAJ: What is?

SEEKER: What you're proving. Yeah. [Truth?] acts to yourself.

RAJ: It is worthlessness. But also the truth you have become aware of about yourself, you will hold them to as well, because you do not want them to believe anything less about themselves...

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: ...than you know is true about them. So you cannot believe that you are being mean to someone else, but being kind to yourself.

SEEKER: Umm hmmm.

RAJ: That you would never treat yourself the way you're treating them. It's absolute.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: However you treat your Brother you are, you do treat yourself that way. And if you will not let them off the hook for something, it is because you will not let yourself off the hook for that same thing under other circumstances. And you will not let them off the hook if you're going to be held accountable because that's not fair.

So, how do you get out of the bind of holding another to your best and worst concepts of yourself? By conceiving the possibility that there's more to you and them than your poor thought models will allow, and that the more there is of both of you is God-derived, and therefore has an entirely different set of criteria than those you've been using. You see? Once that is entertained as a possibility, a pretty desirable possibility by all standards, it becomes easier to be a little bit curious and ask God, "How do You see us? What is it You are being here according to an entirely different set of criteria than the ones I've been using?" And that's prayer. And then caring enough about yourself and your fellowman to listen for the influx of inspired new awareness that involve the criteria God is using.

Okay, I will open it up to you.

SEEKER: So it's the need that establishes the desire for the connection with the other one. And there... and the desire for the connection with the other, with the communion with the other, is the dynamic by which we recognize Who We Really Are. And without the need, there's no trigger to do that. We stay with the old criteria without the need.

RAJ: That is correct. However, as you described it, you left off the initial factor. And that is, because you never were separate from your Brother really, you, in having adopted an attitude that you could be separate and who have come to believe that you are separate, must of necessity feel a lack. Because it's your Birthright to be feeling the Unity, and you have denied It and believed your denial.

So it is because you are inseparable that you feel, and you must feel, a need for each other, if you have adopted autonomy. And in feeling the need, it opens the door for connection to occur and for both of you to remember Who You Are. The reason you must feel the need is because your inseparability is the fact that has never changed.

And in order to come back into your Sanity where that Unity is consciously experienced, you must go through what the independent autonomous one finds intolerable, and that is feeling a need for another, which means failure at being successfully autonomous. So, the fact that you are inseparable from one another is the reason that one, who has successfully fooled himself or herself into believing that he or she is independent and autonomous, must feel in order to have the Christ reborn, to have the... well, to be very frank with you, to have the element of Real Love come into play once again. Love--undefended, unpretentious, uncontrolling togetherness that occurs because one would withhold absolutely nothing of himself or herself from anything else.

SEEKER: So this need that we speak of, it comes from the root of the fact that we're all one.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: But as one steeped in his own delusion of sovereignty and autonomy, I might interpret that as the desire for communication, the desire for companionship, the desire for help. Is that the misinterpretation or the...

Chapter 31 -- Choose Once Again

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: We will jump right in, starting with the section, "Choose Once Again."

And for those who haven't been here before, what we're doing is reading one paragraph and then passing the microphone on to the next person. And I will jump in and offer remarks from time to time. And if you have questions about what has been read, speak up. It's a group participation Gathering. So let's start here. And for those who haven't been here before, if you will kiss the mic, hold it about this far from your mouth.

READER: Choose Once Again (T-#619/666)

Temptation has one lesson it would teach, in all its forms, wherever it occurs. (T-#619/666)

RAJ: Excuse me.

Considering what we have discussed in the last four or five get-togethers, what would you say the word "temptation" means? Or shall I say, what was the first temptation?

SEEKER: Separation?

ANOTHER SEEKER: How about believing that we were separated? Taking the ego standpoint, or looking at things from an ego standpoint.

RAJ: Well what had to happen in order for separation to seem to have occur?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Mutual agreement.

RAJ: Indeed.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I don't think the microphone's on.

RAJ: Yes. The speakers aren't on.

SEEKER: Oh, okay.

RAJ: But the microphone is. Yes.

You might say that the tempter was the first Son of God who turned to a second Son or Daughter of God and said, "Suppose the meaning of this tree is such-and-such. Wouldn't it be interesting to look at everything, at all trees with this meaning given to them, instead of what God has made it as instead of what we're seeing it as?" And when the second Son or Daughter of God said, "This sounds like an interesting activity. I'll join you in it, and we will conduct ourselves as though this is the truth about trees.", that is when the experience of separation occurred. That is when they moved into a fantasy, a daydream. You see? And their daydream distracted them from Reality As Reality Is.

Continue.

ANOTHER SEEKER: If I may?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Was it when we became aware of free will, that through that realization that's when we mutually agreed with someone?

RAJ: Let's put it this way. What is called "free will" didn't come into play until two decided to have a point of view different from the Father's. That, then, seemed to create the illusion of a will different from the Father's, which was free of the Father, and therefore free to imagine any delusion it wanted.

READER: Temptation has one lesson it would teach, in all its forms, wherever it occurs. It would persuade the holy Son of God he is a body, born in what must die, unable to escape its frailty, and bound by what it orders him to feel. It sets the limits on what he can do; its power is the only strength he has; his grasp cannot exceed its tiny reach. Would you be this, if Christ appeared to you in all His glory, asking you but this:

Choose once again if you would take your place among the saviors of the world, or would remain in hell, and hold your brothers there.

RAJ: You see, a choice was made to indulge in a mutual fantasy. And so, in order to reverse the effects of that choice, a new choice has to be made. The last line of your paragraph is:

READER: For He has come, and He is asking this. (T-#619/666)

RAJ READING: Choose once again if you would take your place among the saviors of the world, or would remain in hell, and hold your brothers there. (T-#619/666)

RAJ: So that is what all of you are being asked to do. Which really means you're being asked to regain your Sanity, to embrace it, to snap out of the daydream, to be willing to abandon the "excitement" (in quotes), the thrill of always being out-of-sync with God. And as I said before, all of you have been awake. You didn't start out somewhere down at the bottom of the scale going through stages of evolution to finally arrive at a spiritual selfhood.

If you're not experiencing Reality, or the Kingdom of Heaven, as it is, then at some point you as one who was fully awake and, I will say, fully-Christed, made a choice together with another Christ, and the choice took you into a fantasy, a daydream, an illusory experience of Reality, and lost your Sane Experience of Reality.

Now, the moment that happened, what has come to be called the Holy Spirit became defined, I will put it that way. And I have said before that the Holy Spirit is your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the daydream, while you dally with this illusory experience of being an ego.

Now, the call is coming to you, it has always been coming to you from that of you called the Holy Spirit, which could never stop being What God Is Expressing as you. It is calling and has been calling to you, but also I am calling to you. I am calling to you through the Course. I am calling to you through many forms of media, and I am also calling to you from the withinness of you so that you can hear me as directly as Paul is hearing me. And I and your Guides are calling you to wake up, to come Home, to abandon preoccupation with the daydream. You are being called to choose again.

Okay. Let's continue.

EARLIER SEEKER: Question.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Once the two came to agreement, then that established what was previously called "the world," and then...

RAJ: Well, it established... it "established" (in quotes) 'cause it couldn't really do it,...

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: ...but it "established" the Kingdom of Heaven as "the world" instead.

SEEKER: Right. And then you can... then individuals could choose to participate in that, not necessarily paired up with some other person. I mean they could be in agreement with the group that had already established the illusion.

RAJ: You could say that. Yes.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: As all of you are aware, it is an interesting experience. And it is an experience that is available. You know, even in your experience here, touching a hot stove is an interesting experience, but why do it? You see?

Okay. Continue.

READER: How do you make the choice? How easily is this explained! You always choose between your weakness and the strength of Christ in you. And what you choose is what you think is real. Simply... (T-#620/666)

RAJ: Excuse me.

Let's reverse that. And what you think is real is what you choose. So if it is hard for you to believe that you are the Son or Daughter of God, that you are the Christ, that you are exactly as God created you, or exactly as God Is Being You at this moment, if you don't believe that and you do believe that you're just a physical body that came from a sperm and an egg, you will go with your belief. You will choose what you believe. And so, waking up is a matter of changing what you believe.

Waking up amounts to considering the possibility that you are the unbelievable, that you are what you can't yet believe. And you must be willing to embrace that possibility and explore it with vigor and enthusiasm, if for no other reason than there is the possibility that that might be an even more interesting experience than the dream you're dreaming.

Continue.

READER: Simply by never using weakness to direct your actions, you have given it no power. (T-#620/666)

RAJ: And I'm going to interrupt again.

Almost the same thing as saying the only thing the ego cannot defend itself against is disregard. When you stop coming from the place of your definition of yourself that you and someone else have mutually-agreed-upon as the definition of you, the definition begins to cease governing the way you experience yourself and the Kingdom of Heaven which you're calling "the world." And it begins to change spontaneously because the mutually-agreed-upon definition is not being reinforced.

Continue.

READER: And the light of Christ in you is given charge of everything you do. For you have brought your weakness unto Him, and He has given you His strength instead. (T-#620/666)

RAJ: It could as easily say that you have brought your weakness unto the Holy Spirit, or you have brought your weakness unto God, or you have brought your weakness unto your Guide. The point is that you have reached out beyond your current definition of yourself. You have abandoned self-reliance on your current definition of yourself, and you have abandoned isolation by reaching out.

Continue.

READER: Trials are but lessons that you failed to learn presented once again, so where you made a faulty choice before you now can make a better one, and thus escape all pain that what you chose before has brought to you. (T-#620/666)

RAJ: Yes. Now, before you continue.

Trials, difficulties, stresses, anxieties, et cetera, are but lessons that you failed to learn. Well there's really only one lesson to be learned, no matter what form these trials take. If you in your dream are experiencing trials, no matter what the form is, and you try to deal with the trials within the dream, you're doing absolutely nothing. Even if you succeed in rearranging things so that that trial no longer happens, you still have learned nothing.

Because the only learning that you can arrive at, no matter what the trials are, is that the trials are a result of a mutual agreement that you've given commitment to, and you're neglecting to pay attention to the Kingdom of Heaven. In other words, like a student in a classroom who's looking out the window thinking about what he's going to do after school and is not hearing what's going on in the classroom, who imagines what he would like to do, and then thinks about the fact that, oh, his mother's probably going say "No," and she always says "No," and he really doesn't like his mother, and so on, you see, is manufacturing in his daydream a distress. And for him to try to resolve the distress about his mother by thinking better thoughts about her, still doesn't get him to the point where he is noticing what's going on in the classroom. You see?

So, the only learning that can come from the distresses, no matter what they're called or what their meanings are, the only learning that can occur from them is, "Oh, I'm not paying attention to God. Oh, I'm not paying attention to What's Really Going On. Oh, I'm no longer being curious to see the Kingdom of Heaven right here." And then shifting your attention. Then learning occurs.

Continue.

READER: In every difficulty, all distress, and each perplexity Christ calls to you and gently says, "My brother, choose again." He would not leave one source of pain unhealed, nor any image left to veil the truth. He would remove all misery from you whom God created altar unto joy. He would not leave you comfortless, alone in dreams of hell, but would release your mind from everything that hides His face from you. His holiness is yours because He is the only Power that is real in you. His strength is yours because He is the Self That God created as His only Son. (T-#620/666)

RAJ: Yes. I present myself to you with no illusions about what I am. And I present myself to you, knowing that you are like me, that we are, I'm going to say, identifiably family, that we can recognize ourselves in each other as families can.

And because I approach you without reinforcing mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you've been suffering from, my Presence with you either as I am with you right now, or as I am speaking to you from the withinness of you, I am a dynamic, you might say, that not only doesn't reinforce the mutually-agreed-upon definition, but also provides illumination of you as You Really Are at an experiential level, whether you were expecting it or not. And this makes it easier for you to be curious in a direction other than the definitions you have been operating under. And it opens up your curiosity in a manner that allows inspiration and insight to more easily occur.

SEEKER: Experiential level?

RAJ: Microphone.

SEEKER: Experiential level of What We Really Are?

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Can you just maybe elaborate a little on that? I'm kind of having some experiences that I can relate to that.

RAJ: I just want you to trust those experiences without confirmation. Part of waking up is learning to invest trust in insights and illuminations that are occurring within you, because in the investment of trust, you are joining... you are joining from a place in you that involves commitment to something other than the already existing definitions that have been governing you, and that is essential.

Confirmation is sometimes weakening because you might say, "Well, Jesus said such-and-such that... and so now I can just believe it without trusting it."

SEEKER: Keep my concepts away from this experience. Don't try to lay concepts over this experience I'm having. Just...

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: ...experience it. Exactly. I see.

RAJ: Your concepts are all forms of the definitions you are familiar with.

Continue.

READER: The images you make cannot prevail against what God Himself would have you be. Be never fearful of temptation, then, but see it as it is; another chance to choose again, and let Christ's strength prevail in every circumstance and every place you raised an image of yourself before. (T-#620/667)

RAJ: Yes. Now...

RAJ READING: ...let Christ's strength prevail... (T-#620/667)

RAJ: You know what? That means yielding to Christ's Will. It means yielding up your imaginary free will and yielding to the Christ, the Christ Who is inserting nothing other than What God Is Being right there as the Christ, introducing nothing foreign to What God Is Being right there as the Christ, and therefore providing you with the opportunity to be inspired with an experience of yourself where nothing has been introduced but What God Is Being there.

So, this is why trust is required, because you don't know what to do if you're not exercising your will. And if you're not practicing your will, and you are yielding to something beyond your present sense of yourself, this takes trust. And this is absolutely essential to awakening, that you are willing to join with another, not in the process of forming a new definition at odds with What God Is Being, but in terms of being in harmony with, not being at odds with, What Reality Really Is, with What God's Perspective Truly Is.

Okay, continue.

READER: For what appears to hide the face of Christ is powerless before His majesty, and disappears before His holy sight. The saviors of the world, who see like Him, are merely those who choose His strength instead of their own weakness, seen apart from Him. They will redeem the world, for they are joined in all the power of the Will of God. And what they will is only what He wills. (T-#620/667)

RAJ: You see? How can you arrive at a point of willing only for What God Will if you haven't abandoned what you call your right to express free will, a so-called God-given right? It's a real sneaky part of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you govern yourself under, according to. Your right to free will is derived from God, you say. You are here to co-create with God in the sense of independently behaving in harmony with God, you see, without ever communing with God, without ever connecting with God, without ever yielding to God.

So, the experience you will have as you are consciously choosing to wake up will be an experience of risk. It will seem that way to you because you have so greatly valued your free will and the idea that in expressing your free will you come into the fullest of your character and the fullest representation of you as an independent creation of God. And not to practice this free will is experienced as a great loss, and also a great risk, because there is no way to practice control. But this "risk" must be moved through with the same sort of confidence that you express when you ride through a scary funhouse. It is scary but you have trust that you will come out the other end, and a unscathed.

So, in this sense it's not easy because the mutually-agreed-upon definitions have caused you to value the very thing that keeps you from being Sane, the very thing that keeps you from joining with those whose Sanity will reflect yours back to you and heal you.

Okay. Next.

EARLIER SEEKER: I have a question about... it's quite clear to me about the Will of the Father, the Will of Christ, being the only Will there is, the only True Will that there is. And oftentimes, I can hear Guidance, and usually that comes almost without me asking sometimes. The question will barely be formed in my mind when the answer suddenly appears. And I know by the feeling of it what it is, whose will it is.

However, there are other times when, for lack of a better expression, I'm freaked out by something or emotional about something, and then all I can do is consciously say, "Father, what is Your Will?" I've been able to, thanks to these sessions on Wednesday night of the Course, I've at least come to that juncture of being able to go, "I know I'm freaked out so and I know I'm not getting the answer automatically," so I'm saying, "Father, how do You see this?" And then I wait. And does that... do I just wait? I mean stay... become immobilized and just... until something clears? Is that... is that the prescribed behavior here?

I must say that when that has happened, oftentimes, in 24 hours, things do... and an answer does come, but it's not a snap. It's not something that just [poof sound] appears. There is a delay here.

RAJ: The delay is caused by the fact that you're freaked out. You're freaked out because circumstances have suggested to your conditioned thinking that you are in danger of some sort, or you are at a point of experiencing loss of some sort, and habit causes you to immediately do whatever it takes to take control. When you're freaked out, you must know that you have become a control freak. You have shifted into an apparently justified call for control. And that willfulness blocks your being able to hear. At those times, persistence in hearing the Voice for Truth is the only answer, whether it takes 24 hours, or whether it takes 3 minutes. But anything less won't result in anything other than a rearrangement of the dream.

SEEKER: Yes. I've been there ruminating, "Oh, what about if I do this? What if I do that?" And it becomes obvious to me that you can't solve the problem at that level.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Or you can't face the challenge. There's really no problem. It's just the trial. So I've recognized that. And to date it's not like, you know, there was a loss of anything by delaying. You know, the old expression, "Time is money," or, you know, "Poop or get off the pot." You know, that kind of thing. That has not presented itself strangely enough. It's never been a life or death situation to have to make up my mind. There's always time to let the air clear of my own concepts.

RAJ: There's always time to do that. The suggestion is that there isn't time, and that's why you panic.

SEEKER: Exactly. Yes. Yes. That there isn't time because... and that's... it's a strange thing. There really is time, but it's like oftentimes the time is evaporated by the feeling that I've been wronged, so it's, you know, so it's kind of like a knee-jerk reaction that makes the... makes it seem like, "Well, I'm justified in doing this."

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And there, and of course, if I had jumped at the... at whatever it was that I had... the concept suggested, then it would have been a terrible situation. I mean, it would have been a big mistake.

RAJ: It would have reinforced the dream.

SEEKER: Exactly. But, I mean even in consequences in the dream, it would have been sorry.

RAJ: But you see, if you kick against Reality, which will not budge the harder you kick, the sorer your toe will be. The amount of willfulness you bring into play in the denial of God or the denial of Reality, the more uncomfortable the experience will be.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: But it's because of the amount of willfulness you're bringing into play, not the circumstance you are conditioned to think you're kicking against.

SEEKER: Yes. I see.

RAJ: Okay.

READER: Learn, then, the happy habit of response to all temptation to perceive yourself as weak and miserable with these words:

I am as God created me.
His Son can suffer nothing.
And I am His Son.

Thus is Christ's strength invited to prevail, replacing all your weakness with the strength that comes from God and that can never fail. And thus are miracles as natural as fear and agony appeared to be before the choice for holiness was made. For in that choice are false distinctions gone, illusory alternatives laid by, and nothing left to interfere with truth. (T-#620/667)

RAJ: The choice for holiness, the choice for wholeness, the choice that no longer supports, or nourishes, or affirms, or confirms separation, tininess, littleness. So, the answer is always, when you're freaking out, and now you know that when you're freaking out you have become a control freak, the answer to that lies not in the practice of control or the better practice of control, but of turning your attention to Me, or God, or the Holy Spirit, acknowledging what you have learned you are, in other words, you are as God created you, and His Son can suffer nothing, and You are His Son, and invite in that which supports that fact in you at an experiential level. That's the way you do it, by breaking the isolation.

Okay.

SEEKER: Just one more comment, and that is, having worked with people who are ill, who are in great pain, this would be a phenomenal proposal to them. In other words, to say to them that they are the Son and Daughter of God and can suffer nothing.

RAJ: It would be unbelievable.

SEEKER: Exactly. Exactly.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Exactly.

RAJ: But are you going to keep your mouth closed and not express the unbelievable, so that they remain stuck in their belief because no one dared to provide an alternative point of view, especially one that is True, and therefore carries with it the weight of Truth, you might say, that is capable of transforming.

SEEKER: Well I think I... what I've found was to... that to drop gentle hints. For instance, "Well I have this pain and this ailment, and my mother has it, and my father had it, and my brother had it, and therefore, I have it. And I will always have it." Dih-dah-dih-dah. And I've come back and I've said, "Well, I've seen this before, and it can be overcome. I've seen it overcome. I've helped people overcome it. They have overcome it. It can be overcome.", rather than state this. Because, initially, when I was learning the Course, I've stated this and seen people walk out the door. So I've chosen through experience to drop subtle hints. To say things in ways that get people questioning their own concepts.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: As opposed to hitting them with a two-by-four.

RAJ: Indeed. That is the way I work, as well.

SEEKER: [laughing] Yes, it is, isn't it? [audience laughter] And thank you.

READER: You are as God created you, and so is every living thing you look upon, regardless of the images you see. (T-#620/667)

RAJ: Excuse me.

Regardless of the images you see because you have chosen to look at mutually-agreed-upon definitions of things, rather than the things themselves.

Continue.

READER: What you behold as sickness and as pain, as weakness and as suffering and loss, is but temptation to perceive yourself defenseless and in hell. (T-#620/667)

RAJ: Right in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven.

Continue.

READER: Yield not to this, and you will see all pain, in every form, wherever it occurs, but disappear as mists before the sun. A miracle has come to heal God's Son, and close the door upon his dreams of weakness, opening the way to his salvation and release. Choose once again what you would have him be, remembering that every choice you make establishes your own identity as you will see it and believe it is. (T-#620/667)

RAJ: From here on, I want you to read this to gather its meaning as words you would say. Because if you stop and think about it, this section is classifying you as saviors of the world. You may have no difficulty in thinking of me as your savior, but the call is for you to treat each other as I treat you. And as we continue through the end here, you will find that it's easy to relate these words to me, but what I am asking and what I am saying from here to the end of this section need to become what you say to each other.

You see, choose once again what you would have him be--your Brother--because up 'til now what you would have him be is what the two of you have mutually-agreed-upon that you are going to be to each other. So...

RAJ READING: Choose once again what you would have him be, remembering that every choice you make establishes your own identity as you will see it and believe it is. (T-#620/667)

RAJ: So, you see, I am teaching you Who You Are, Who You Truly Are because I'm not interested in introducing into the mix anything that is going to darken, or mystify, or alter in any way, my experience of Who I am. And so I reflect you as God Is Being You to yourselves, because that is what insures my remaining awake. And as you do this to each other, it is what insures your waking up.

Now you will notice in the next paragraph it starts out:

RAJ READING: Deny me not the little gift I ask,... (T-#621/667)

RAJ: Well, again, that makes sense if you attribute the statement to me. But, this must become your attitude when you are relating to each other so that you are coming from a place of Clarity and Love that implies and communicates to whoever you are speaking to:

RAJ READING: Deny me not the little gift I ask, when in exchange I lay before your feet the peace of God,... (T-#621/667)

RAJ: Whether it's a gentle prodding, like you were saying a moment ago, or whether it's a bold statement that is God-infused, you might say.

Okay. Let's continue with this paragraph. If you'll start at the beginning of it.

READER: Deny me not the little gift I ask, when in exchange I lay before your feet the peace of God, and power to bring this peace to everyone who wanders in the world uncertain, lonely, and in constant fear. For it is given you to join with him, and through the Christ in you unveil his eyes, and let him look upon the Christ in him. (T-#621/667)

RAJ: You see? Obviously I am saying this to you to help improve your poor thought models about yourselves.

But you must turn around and Love your Brother enough, whether it's George Bush or not, and extend this same invitation, this same confidence in What They Are. Not everyone will be as an extreme a case as George Bush, but he cannot be excluded, nor can anyone else whom you might have extremely strong negative feelings about.

You must realize that as long as you are thinking and conveying negative attitudes and opinions and definitions of someone else, or about someone else, in the world, these are the very dynamics that you are introducing into your experience of yourself. And this blocks you absolutely from having any clearer experience of yourself than you're willing to allow another to have from the beneficence of your love. You see?

It doesn't mean that you don't recognize when something is incompatible, or that something that doesn't embody intelligence or embody the Love of Being. But it means that you will go to God to find out What The Truth Is about the situation, or the individual who is embodying unprincipled activities, rather than formulating your own new awful definitions about that person which will end up defining you as well.

You see [laughing], you will do and have what you believe. So be careful what you believe about George Bush, or whoever else is on your list. You must be willing to embrace at times what is unbelievable to you in order to get past the bondage involved in the already-existing mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

EARLIER SEEKER: I have a question.

RAJ: Microphone.

SEEKER: So we have this special person that's... that we're wanting to judge. Do you just put him out of your mind and let it be, you know, blank about him? Or I mean...

RAJ: Is that Love? How can you Love something that isn't there? How can you be involved with something you have put out of sight and out of mind?

SEEKER: So you got to go all the way with it, or you're not doing anything?

RAJ: No. You're not only... you are... you aren't doing nothing, you are confirming and reaffirming the dream. You are reconfirming isolation, separation. There is something very active going on there. It is not a passive ignorance. It's an active exclusion, isn't it? It's an active exclusion from actually engaging in loving that one, in one form or another.

SEEKER: So is that like...

RAJ: And the key is...

SEEKER: ...the best opportunities you got? I mean the people that you have or the situations that you find that you're judging the most? Is that the... is that your best opportunity to change your mind?

RAJ: Well, whether they're the best opportunity or not, they are the ones, or your definitions about them, are the ones that are blocking you from waking up, from being savior to the world.

You see, it was just said, "For it is given you to join with him." It's given you. The capacity is yours, and it's given you by my having acknowledged it out loud with you.

RAJ READING: ...it is given you to join with him, and through the Christ in you unveil his eyes, and let him look upon the Christ in him. (T-#621/667)

RAJ: Well, that capacity is given you. It's yours. If you are deciding not to use it, then you are confirming and further establishing your inability to see the Christ in him, and you are... you are neglecting to be the presence that allows him the opportunity to see the Christ in him.

SEEKER: So if I'm seeing this thing as a special problem, that person or situation is not special...

RAJ: It's not a special problem. It's a stupid problem.

SEEKER: Right. And it's my...

RAJ: To be sitting in the classroom thinking about what's going to go on after school, and what problems might show up, or what you might encounter because you know how people are going to react, this is a stupid problem because it amounts to nothing more than not paying attention to what is going on. Do you see what I'm saying? In the classroom, what wonderful information might be being extended by the teacher, or by involvement with the other students. All of this is being lost in favor of a stupid preoccupation with nothing!

SEEKER: Well, that's kind of what I was thinking when I was thinking just sort of, you know, put this aside and don't... don't create a struggle.

RAJ: But you talked about putting a Brother aside!

SEEKER: Maybe I need to put the concept of my Brother aside.

RAJ: Oh, you think so?

SEEKER: Just... I mean not like I'm going sit here and necessarily try to see this person as the Christ.

RAJ: Oh, but you're going to be thinking something. You can't just put a concept aside. You are incapable of having a void. So when you talk about setting the concept aside and not replacing it with an active Conscious Expression of Love, or a Conscious Acknowledgement of What Is True about that one, then you are... you are, you might say, you are like Superman encasing that one in a lead box. You are imprisoning that one. There is an active ignorance of him, and that is hate.

SEEKER: Okay, so I'm going to need some help when these situations arise to be more clear on what I'm doing and what's the right thing to think in this situation.

RAJ: You will get the help if there is commitment on your part, if there is willingness to persist in the face of not being clear, a willingness to persist in not playing into your habitual way of thinking, and asking God, "What is the Truth here? What is the Truth here?" And persisting because you know that until you see the Truth there, you are as locked into the dream as the one you are judging.

SEEKER: That's what motivated me to ask the question, realizing that, and also understanding that I'm not really able to make that shift every time like I would like to.

RAJ: Indeed. Practice, practice, practice.

SEEKER: Lots of opportunity to practice.

RAJ: If you're in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven calling it "the world," then absolutely everything you are confronted with is opportunity for practice at desiring to see What Everything Truly Is.

Okay. Okay.

READER: My brothers in salvation, do not fail to hear my voice and listen to my words. (T-#621/668)

RAJ: Ken, could you hold it closer to your mouth?

SEEKER: Yes. I'll repeat the sentence?

RAJ: Yes.

READER: My brothers in salvation, do not fail to hear my voice and listen to my words. I ask for nothing but your own release. There is no place for hell within a world whose loveliness can yet be so intense and so inclusive it is but a step from there to Heaven. (T-#621/668)

RAJ: I'm going to interrupt here.

Keeping in mind that these are words you need to be saying, or the meaning of the words you need to be feeling when you're engaging with your Brother, it could sound like arrogance.

RAJ READING: My brothers in salvation, do not... (T-#621/668)

RAJ: This is you speaking.

RAJ READING: My brothers in salvation, do not fail to hear my voice and listen to my words. (T-#621/668)

RAJ: Now, what's the point here? Is it that you're now in a position to make demands on your Brother, or is it to convey to you that your presence joined with the Christ is significant, meaningful and transformational? That you're not a Casper Milquetoast. You're not a wimpy weakling. You're not a benign absence of threat. But you're the actual Presence of that which transforms because you have let that which transforms in to you.

You are here to be a significant other to your Brothers and Sisters, not just an unchallenging, pleasant nitwit to live with. You see? You need to know that whether you're thinking well of your Brother or thinking poorly of your Brother, you are having an effect. You do not exist in isolation. You cannot have a single thought by yourself. You are being meaningful for good or bad right now. So realize that you are of consequence right now.

And in your willingness to say, “Well, I’m not trying to change anybody and I’m not trying to make anybody be a certain way. I prescribe to ‘Live and Let Live’ philosophy, and therefore nobody can come back at me and be mad at me.” Well, there’s no way for you to be an inconsequential, ineffective presence.

You are having impact. And you are either contributing to the ongoing establishment of the dream, or there’s only one other thing you can be, and that is that which helps to break down the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that make the Kingdom of Heaven look like “the world,” and contributing to the awakening of everyone who’s suffering needlessly from these stupid mutually-agreed-upon definitions that deny Reality.

So, don’t think as you read this, these final paragraphs, that these express authority and power you will have over others. They’re to be reminders that you already have power that at the moment you’re using mostly poorly. And in the realization that you have power, in other words, you are not able to exist without affecting your Brother, make a conscious choice to express the power of the Presence of You on behalf of Reality, and on behalf of that which will awaken your Brother, and therefore you as well.

Okay. Let’s start that paragraph over.

READER: My brothers in salvation, do not fail to hear my voice and listen to my words. I ask for nothing but your own release. There is no place for hell within a world whose loveliness can yet be so intense and so inclusive it is but a step from there to Heaven. To your tired eyes I bring a vision of a different world, so new and clean and fresh you will forget the pain and sorrow that you saw before. Yet this a vision is which you must share with everyone you see, for otherwise you will behold it not. (T-#621/668)

RAJ: A key point. What you’re unwilling to share with your Brother, you will not see. And conversely, what you do see, you won’t be able to wait to share with your Brother. You always share what you see.

SEEKER: So when I eventually awake to the happy dream, then I will see What They Really Are?

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: And the only thing I’ve been wanting to do...

RAJ: But I want to point out to you that awakening comes in... how can I put it? Awakening... revelation, you might say, comes in packages that aren’t any bigger than you can tolerate. Your willingness, your commitment to follow through on hearing what the Father’s Will is, or the Father’s Perspective is, that commitment and that willingness to trust into what is unknown to you at the moment governs how big the package is that you will receive, even though the totality of being awake is being given you at every moment and is your prior experience.

So, my point is that as you get each succeeding glimpse, you have something to share. So don’t think about the ultimate. “When I’m totally awake, I will have something to share.” Because you have things to share almost on a daily basis.

Continue.

SEEKER: Thank you, Raj.

READER: To give this gift is how to make it yours. And God ordained, in loving kindness, that it be for you. (T-#621/668)

RAJ: Okay.

READER: Let us be glad that we can walk the world, and find so many chances to perceive another situation where God’s gift can once again be recognized as ours! And thus will all the vestiges of hell, the secret sins and hidden hates be gone. And all the loveliness which they concealed appear like lawns of Heaven to our sight, to lift us high above the thorny roads we travelled on before the Christ appeared. Hear me, my brothers, hear and join with me. God has ordained I cannot call in vain, and in His certainty I rest content. For you will hear, and you will choose again. And in this choice is everyone made free. (T-#621/668)

RAJ: Yes. Continue.

READER: I thank You, Father, for these holy ones who are my brothers as they are Your Sons. My faith in them is Yours. I am as sure that they will come to me as You are sure of what they are, and will forever be. They will accept the gift I offer them, because You gave it me on their behalf. And as I would but do Your holy Will, so will they choose. And I give thanks for them. Salvation’s song will echo through the world with every choice they make. For we are one in purpose, and the end of hell is near. (T-#621/668)

RAJ: You might think it wonderful to have such conviction. But if you think of it that way, it means that you are still... it is still unbelievable to you that you could have that conviction that they will accept the gift you offer them.

But you know what? We’re talking about is, first of all, inviting God, inviting the Holy Spirit, inviting Me, inviting your Guide, to disclose to you, to reveal to you in the withinness of yourself where it can be deeply felt What The Truth Is. And when you do that and you see and feel the Truth of it, you can approach your Brother with that kind of confidence. Not confidence that you have some personal power to be his savior, but confidence that the simple unified Truth that you are experiencing is so utterly True that it is True about your Brother. And there is no question in your mind. And there is no question in your mind that he will receive it and recognize it because you did. And you will have no doubt that he has the capacity to receive it and experience it because you did. And before you did, you were one of the sorry bastards along with him. And that's how come you know that if you could let it in and you are experiencing it, he will.

Continue.

READER: In joyous welcome is my hand outstretched to every brother who would join with me in reaching past temptation, and who looks with fixed determination toward the light that shines beyond in perfect constancy. (T-#622/668)

RAJ: Ahh. That's another way of putting it besides commitment and persistence. Fixed determination.

Continue.

READER: Give me my own, for they belong to You. And can You fail in what is but Your Will? I give You thanks for what my brothers are. And as each one elects... (T-#622/668)

RAJ: Ah.

RAJ READING: I give You thanks for what my brothers are. (T-#622/668)

RAJ: Not for what they are presenting themselves to be. Not what I have been conditioned to think they are.

RAJ READING: I give You thanks for what my brothers are. (T-#622/668)

RAJ: And you can give thanks when you can forgive your Brothers that you cannot like enough benefit of the doubt that you can set aside your hatred for them, and talk to God about them, and truly want to know What The Truth Is about them. Your despising everything that they seem to stand for, and your enjoying the experience of despising him or her, constitutes your choice of what you want to give your attention to, and it absolutely keeps you from really being curious enough to ask God what's the Truth about them. Because if He would tell you what the Truth about them is, you would have to give up this great satisfaction you are getting from hating him so well. You see? And so you do not receive the gift of the Father's Perspective, and therefore you don't have it available to embrace your Brother with, and in embracing him, release yourself. You see?

Continue.

READER: And as each one elects to join with me, the song of thanks from earth to Heaven grows from tiny scattered threads of melody to one inclusive chorus from a world redeemed from hell, and giving thanks to You. (T-#622/668)

RAJ: And let's stop there for a moment.

You might say in the beginning, it's tiny scattered threads of melody. Have you ever noticed how difficult it is to sing a hymn in church when there are only three other people in the church singing? But when the church is full, it is the easiest thing in the world to let your voice sing out.

So, when it seems to be only tiny scattered threads of melody, and it seems like your voice is standing out like a sore and unwelcome thumb, don't let that discourage you. Because each of you that does it, each of you who does it, because of the Love with which it is done, and because of the purity with which it is done, is a transformational Presence that reaches others and increases quote "the congregation" unquote. And that's how it can come to be "one inclusive chorus." But you have to be willing to persist when there isn't the support of a thousand other voices glorifying God in the most practical of ways. You see? That's where the persistence and the steadfastness comes in.

Okay. Continue.

READER: And now we say "Amen." For Christ has come to dwell in the abode You set for Him before time was, in calm eternity. The journey closes, ending at the place where it began. (T-#622/669)

RAJ: Now there you go. The journey ends where it began, which is at Home. And if any of you still are not clear, you started out this, I'm going to call it an escapade from Home. You have all been awake. You were initially and forever the Direct Expression of God, the Christ fully, fully awakened, until you chose to have it indulge in a daydream.

And so your journey Home is a journey from back from where you left. And it's very valuable to be aware of this because what you think you're moving toward is not something you have to achieve. It's something you have to let yourself back into. It's a Natural, Eternal State of Your Being. And what you're doing is letting yourself back into it. It's like the daydreamer in the schoolroom letting his attention come back to the schoolroom, a place he never left.

So, this is not unachievable. If you really... if you really totally gave up and collapsed every expression of willfulness that you might ever utilize, and succumbed to never being willful again, you would immediately [finger snap] come back into your Right Mind. It's not an achievement. It's a fundamental fact that never changed, that you will find you will fall into when you stop trying to hold yourself up as a separate, independent entity.

Continue.

READER: No trace of it remains. Not one illusion is accorded faith, and not one spot of darkness still remains to hide the face of Christ from anyone. (T-#622/669)

RAJ: I'm going to interrupt again.

Not one mutually-agreed-upon definition is accorded attention or faith and not one spot of darkness that was a result of those mutually-agreed-upon definitions still remains to hide the face of Christ from anyone.

Continue.

SEEKER: Thy Will be done.

READER: Thy Will is done, complete and perfectly,... (T-#622/669)

RAJ: Which it was from the beginning and never stopped being. His Will is done, complete and perfectly.

READER: ...and all creation recognizes You, and knows You as the only Source it has. Clear in Your likeness does the Light shine forth from everything that lives and moves in You. For we have reached where all of us are one, and we are home, where You would have us be. (T-#622/669)

RAJ: I know this. And you are coming to know the meaning of these words, “on your behalf and your Brother’s behalf.” I know these things, and I attend to you, I am present with you, absolutely clear about these things that I might convey to you an absolute clarity about them so that you can dare to risk the chance that there is a God, and that you can dare to risk the chance that if you let go of control, and so that you can dare to risk the chance that if you abandon your mutually-agreed-upon definitions, everything will not go to hell, but everything will be illuminated as Heaven.

And this is what I am embracing you in the request to join with me in, by daring to embrace it for yourselves, daring to embrace my confidence in you for yourselves, so that the unbelievable becomes believable, and you can thereby do what I am doing for you for your Brothers and Sisters, so that you will dare to be involved, whether it seems easy or not, rather than stepping away from the awful opportunity your Brother provides you with to witness for God on his behalf.

Now, I started with the last chapter so that you might have a context in which to appreciate the book from the beginning. And next week we will start with Chapter 1.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

EARLIER SEEKER: May I ask a question? What would happen if everybody loved George Bush? [some audience amusement]

RAJ: Miracles.

Don’t just limit it to him. You can include Saddam Hussein. You can include any other individuals it’s difficult to embrace.

What has the clear Expression of the Power of Love, what effect has the clear Expression of the Power of Love had in your lives when they have appeared from time to time? What effect has it had on you? Find those times and remember so that you recognize the power of the Gift of Love that you do have to give if you will refrain from energizing your right to free will and the capacity to enjoy delicious hate. You see? Don’t waste much time trying to figure out what would happen. Do it and find out. Do it and be surprised. Because whoever you release, releases you. And that’s the only way you get back Home. The first choice was to leave Home by virtue of two mutually-agreeing-upon definitions of things different from What The Father Was Being.

When you choose again, it’s something you choose with another. It constitutes a joining with another for the Purpose of Expressing Love, rather than the unlovely and unloving characteristics of meanings given to the Creations of God that are at odds with What God Created, and therefore are at odds with God.

Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Fully.

RAJ: Very well. We will call it a night.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

August 7th 2002

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. Well, after having started this book with the last chapter, we will go to the beginning, having a basis for understanding the book from the beginning.

And we'll start here. Ordinarily we read one paragraph at a time, and pass the book on, but since that page is so short, if you'll just read the whole page starting there.

This is a course in miracles. It is a required course. Only the time you take it is voluntary. Free will does not mean that you can establish the curriculum. It means only that you can elect what you want to take at a given time. The course does not aim at teaching the meaning of love, for that is beyond what can be taught. It does aim, however, at removing the blocks to the awareness of love's presence, which is your natural inheritance. The opposite of love is fear, but what is all-encompassing can have no opposite.

This course can therefore be summed up very simply in this way:

Nothing real can be threatened.
Nothing unreal exists.

Herein lies the peace of God.

*[Note: Quotes from A Course In Miracles]

Thank you. I am not going to comment on that but will allow it just to sit with each of you.

You will find that the meaning of the word "miracles" in the book, A Course in Miracles, does not mean the practice of spiritual control over your experience that results in the correction of the human condition through spiritual power. It is not an act of great wonder, like walking on water or raising the dead or healing the sick, although those are the things you are likely to see. But those are not what constitute the miracle.

The miracle has to do with what we've been talking about while we were reading Chapter 31. The miracle is the shift in consciousness that occurs when you abandon the agreed-upon definitions, and you assume nothing, and you listen deeply within after having inquired of God or the Holy Spirit or your Guide, to know what is the truth here or the truth in a particular situation and letting the clarity of the true answer in. This causes a shift, an inner shift, a shift of perception. And as the perception shifts, your experience shifts and you notice that there's been a healing or you notice that a relationship has been inspired with love once again, where it seemed to have been absent, and so on.

So as we begin the first section here:

Chapter 1 THE MEANING OF MIRACLES

. . . and the . . .

Principles of Miracles

I want you to keep this in mind: That a miracle is a shift in consciousness, in your consciousness that occurs as a result of being defenseless against, having no defenses against the experience of God's point of view. This can happen on purpose as a result of becoming still, as a result of meditating, as a result of consciously setting aside your best ideas, your best opinions, and so on, and consciously listening for clarity. Or it can happen spontaneously in what would be called an unguarded moment, which again is one of those moments when there is no defense present, and then you have a sudden inspiration, a sudden insight, a sudden shift of perception. And it is that shift of perception that changes the way you see things that is the miracle.

So, let us begin with Principle Number 1.

[Principle #1] There is no order of difficulty in miracles. One is not "harder" or "bigger" than another. They are all the same. All expressions of love are maximal.

Ah-h . . . so a miracle is a shift of perception in which you see something truly, and the seeing of it as it is constitutes Love expressed. And Love is always maximal. Love is always uninhibited.

A miracle is a light bulb going on. It's an, "Aha!" that occurs within you. An, "Aha!" that is a response to an experience of clarification that reveals the divinity of something in your world so that it transforms your perception of the thing you're looking at. And it also links it as an inner experience with God, so that you know there's an absolute relationship there, and that the thing you are looking at about which you have a transformed perception has no capacity to be there except as the expression of God—and that therefore it is holy.

Okay. Continue.

[Principle #2] Miracles as such do not matter. The only thing that matters is their Source, Which is far beyond evaluation.

In other words, the transformation that you experience occurring in your world because of your transformed vision is not what is significant, that Lazarus came forth from the tomb was not what was significant. What was significant was that Love revealed that he never died and simply uncovered that fact, so that no one was having a lingering illusion going on in their mind blinding them to his presence. What was significant was that it did in fact demonstrate that there is a God, and it demonstrated that Lazarus was not separate from Him. And my Love of the Father and of Lazarus was all it took in order for the illusion of death to fade from everyone's mind and therefore, from their vision so that they saw him.

Continue.

[Principle #3] Miracles occur naturally as expressions of love. The real miracle is the love that inspires them. In this sense everything that comes from love is a miracle.

Indeed. You know that I'm constantly encouraging you to not join with each other in your mutually-agreed-upon definitions of everything. And the reason is, because when you are caught up in this mutual agreement, you have blocked yourself from what I'm going to call the ever-present communication of God to you. You're in an ongoing state of ignoring that communication. And that communication to you is a communication of Love because that is what God is. And when that Love is not resisted or ignored by you, it fills you and blesses you, transforming your vision, which therefore causes your world to look more like the Kingdom of Heaven, because that's what it's been all along.

I invite Paul to let me respond to everything, which really means I invite him to be joined with me constantly so that there will not only be miracles at gatherings, and so that he won't suffer the frustration of feeling separate between gatherings, and mostly because doing so gives him practice at being normal, divinely normal, which will speed up his remembrance of being Awake so that he might own it once again. And the same thing applies to all of you.

To be stuck in the mutual agreements turns your existence into a uselessness, and you miss the Joy of what is confronting you. You miss the Joy of the Kingdom of Heaven that you're right in the middle of. And you miss the experience of your integrity because of what you Are and can never stop being—the Presence of God in expression.

When you are joined, all that you can be is Love. And all that can follow that are miracles.

Okay. Continue.

[Principle #4] All miracles mean life, and God is the Giver of life. His Voice will direct you very specifically.

Oh, I'm going to interrupt you.

All miracles mean life! . . . not an approximation of life . . . not 50% of life . . . not just a little bit of life . . . not a rugged experience of life . . . but life!

All miracles mean life, and God is the Giver of life.

Again, it's what I was just saying, that when the shift in your awareness occurs and you see something as it truly is, you recognize its inseparability from God, which is, as I said, another way of recognizing or knowing, having an experience of its holiness. And when I say "holiness," I mean it is something that inspires awe. It isn't just something extra wonderful.

Okay. Continue.

You will be told all you need to know.

His Voice will direct you very specifically, just as I do with Paul. And you will be told all you need to know. Wow, what a support. What a thing to miss out on just for the thrill of being able to make your own decisions without having to check in with Daddy.

Continue.

[Principle #5] Miracles are habits, and should be involuntary. They should not be under conscious control. Consciously selected miracles can be misguided.

Indeed. And so this is one reason for often asking God or your Guide or the Holy Spirit, "What do I need to know here?" . . . without assuming that you know what you need to know or that you know what really needs to be addressed.

When you genuinely and undefendedly listen within for God to reveal His perspective, you don't know what in your consciousness is going to shift, which is part of the wonderfulness of it, except that if you've been used to enjoying a sense of control and a pride at having control, then the feeling is that if you let the shift happen wherever it will, that it deprives you of something. It deprives you of being able to say afterwards, "I made that happen."

Miracles are never under your control because the shift in consciousness only occurs when you are yielding to the Father's will, when you are listening beyond your habitual thought processes.

I'm going to read the next one.

[Principle #6] Miracles are natural. When they do not occur something has gone wrong.

Well, first of all, that means that miracles aren't special and miracles won't make you special. Miracles are, you might say, automatic. The shifts in perception, the shifts in consciousness naturally and spontaneously occur when you have an unguarded moment, an undefended moment. It is really that simple.

And when they do not occur and it says, "something has gone wrong," it means that they're not occurring because you're putting your mind to a use that is not natural to it. And you're attempting to be something that's not natural to you—an independent authorizer—instead of the willing observer of what God is being, so that you might be able to be the acknowledgement of what God is being and thereby glorify God. And by virtue of that experience of the revelation of God to you, having who you Are truly revealed to you as well.

Continue.

Yes, yes, yes. Pur-if-i-ca-tion. Um-m, how many lifetimes have you been pur-i-fy-ing yourselves? [audience laughter] And how many of you know that it's going to yet be a long time before you're purified because that's what your spiritual book says, and because there are—as in this book—365 lessons. "Wow! Well it's at least going to take 365 days for my purification. So I won't look for it on the second day. I won't allow it because I've got to have my Pur-if-i-ca-tion."

Purification is necessary. What does purification mean? It just means letting go of that which isn't a part of you. When you have a glass of pure water, you have a glass of water that has nothing extraneous—to what water is—in it. Well, all you need to do to purify yourself or your mind, is to abandon thinking . . . is to stop thinking and start listening, to stop being an authority and asking for help from some place other than your experience. You see?

Purification is what happens when you reach out to God, and therefore your presence isn't so filled with your definition of yourself. It's that simple. So, when you see that . . .

. . . but purification is necessary first.

. . . don't think, "Oh, my God! I won't be able to do it" or, "I know it will take a long time!"

Don't let that word scare you. It just means . . . it means taking off the thing you need the least. That's all. Letting go of the thing that isn't useful. Letting go of what gets in the way of your experience of what you could never have stopped being—which is the Presence of God—though, you might say that you are the capacity to recognize, and therefore acknowledge God and what God is Being, in other words, Creation and thereby glorify God, which is an act of gratitude. Because when you see the truth, you are filled with gratitude for it being true. Not true as opposed to false, but sheer truth, simple truth, elicits gratitude. And in that gratitude, you are infilled with what God is Being and you Wake up, meaning you see things as they Are. You see the Kingdom of Heaven where you had been looking and saying, "It's just the world."

Okay.

[Principle #8] Miracles are healing because they supply a lack; they are performed by those who temporarily have more for those who temporarily have less.

Isn't that interesting? They're supplied by those who temporarily have more, except that the one who temporarily has more from his standpoint has less, because there's purification. And so there's less of his definition of himself in the way. There's less of an authority present. There's less of an independent, causative agent present. And the supply of the lack to the one who temporarily has less is actually going to one who thinks he has more, because he still thinks he's in charge. You see what I'm saying?

He still has himself on his mind as an authority, as someone to be in control, as someone to practice defense against a polarized world that will get him if he's not prepared. He's encumbered with definitions and concepts about himself and about the world, which means he apparently has more there where he is than what God is Being. You see? So it's a paradox.

Miracles are healing because they supply a lack; they are performed by those who temporarily have more . . .

. . . but actually have less, personally speaking . . .

. . . for those who temporarily have less.

. . . but have more encumbrances, personally speaking. You see?

Waking up is really a discovery that you're a lot less than you thought you were. In fact, that everything that you thought you were isn't part of you at all. But, even though losing that may seem to be a significant loss, it's just a matter of discarding the thing you need the least. And what's left uncovered, what's left revealed by the absence of the encumbrances, the extras, is the Christ—You in your actuality, You in your reality, You in your innocence, You in your purity that was never soiled, no matter what you thought, You in your inviolability that's incapable of being threatened and You inseparable from the Whole, outside of which there is nothing that could oppose you because there is no outside to Wholeness.

Continue.

*I thought I understood it until I saw you before you were baptized . . . that you were teaching, and so you were having less than the people that you were teaching?

*[Note: Students – commenting or asking a question.]

Anyone who is truly teaching because they have the Vision of God have less personality, have less ego, you might say, and they are giving to those who seem to still have a lot of ego. You see?

So, by your standards from your present frame of view, you can understand that one who is standing with God has more than you have—more that matters—but really has less than you have because he or she is not encumbered by the ego beliefs and structures and concepts and mutual agreements and laws that the commitment to those agreements are held to. You see?

Okay.

[Principle #9] Miracles are a kind of exchange.

Ah, why do you think that is?

Give me a minute.

Anyone else, either?

Exchanging old ideas for new?

You said exchanging old ideas for new?

It's just the way that it works.

Joining.

Joining. Thank you.

Indeed. Love is always an involvement. Love is always the recognition of the reality of another—a brother, a sister, a tree, a dog, a cat, a bird. It's an exchange because there's a recognition of what is Real in each other. You see? It can't happen in a vacuum. You can't be the Presence of Love all by yourself. A miracle cannot occur without involvement. How can Love find expression if there is no object of your affection? So miracles are a kind of exchange. "A kind of exchange?" Yes. It's a kind of exchange because it's not really an exchange at all it's really a recognition of Oneness. You recognize yourself in your brother.

And that's what you... when we're in touch with our Guidance, that's the Communion, that's the Oneness.

That's right.

And that's what we're to do with each other, is find the Oneness. And we do. And we know when we're right on the beam with each other.

That's right.

And it's a good thing.

Continue.

Like all expressions of love, which are always miraculous in the true sense, the exchange reverses the physical laws.

Because it's Spirit?

They bring more love both to the giver and the receiver.

[Raj Repeat] They bring more love both to the giver and the receiver.

It reverses what you would call physical laws because in the giving away, the giver doesn't lose.

You benefited when your friend Lazarus was raised from the dead. Lazarus benefited. And that's what we're talking about.

That's correct. That's correct . . . Just a moment . . . You will sometimes hear it said that someone who is a psychic or who has a spiritual gift, if they make the gift it will shorten their human life. You see? It takes something which is expressing oneness and unity and blessing and saying that in making that gift, it depletes the giver. You see? And it doesn't. And it is very important to see this.

All miracles mean Life! Not its opposite, a form of which would be called depletion that opposes the nature of physical law, which is that if Paul gives you a dollar, you are a dollar richer and he is a dollar poorer. If he gives you his car, you now have the car and he doesn't. You see? Now what were you going to say?

You were obviously moved by the Father to connect your Love. You said your Love was all it took to raise Lazarus . . . I mean that wasn't coming from any sense of lack in you, like you missed your friend.

No. Remember I said it was my love for God and my love for Lazarus. My love for God . . . my attentiveness was to God first. That provided me with His Vision. And His Vision was an experience of the fact that Lazarus was not dead. And that realization couldn't help but be extended to Lazarus as he appeared to be to everyone else, because that's what the knowing was about. That's who the knowing or the clarity was about.

And so, it wasn't because I missed him. It was because in not having any other perspective than the Father's, there was nothing else for me to see or experience but Lazarus' uninterrupted Life, which blessed him because he was not at a point of gathering his vision about himself from his Father. So my clear vision provided the environment in which Lazarus could recognize the truth about himself as well, so that Lazarus came forth. I did not have to go in there and bring him out, which I could have done. I could have helped him further in the realization by going in and bringing him out. But he recognized my vision of him and he came forth even though he was still wrapped up. It did not inhibit him from moving out, behaving or being in a way inconsistent with being dead. [laughter in voice] You see?

Missing someone states an already existing attitude or sense of loss, and there's no way there could be a miracle from a sense of loss.

That's why whenever you are wanting to be a healing presence for another, you cannot start with the way they appear to be at the moment. Because if you do that, you're lost yourself, or your loss [laugh] . . . your loss is established for you. So no, never agree with the appearance and never agree with what a brother or a sister says to you about their condition. You go to God, "What is the truth here?" And, as well as listening for words—all of you—I encourage you to be open to an experience of the truth about them.

I can see how the thread is weaving into everything with Gift. And I was contemplating on what Raj said at the Leiston Abbey—which I mentioned to Paul earlier today—about the purpose of sex, which was to identify the other's Wholeness to them. And it occurred to me that every interaction that we have to expand on, that is to identify the other's Wholeness to them. And that, if that be the case, then there is nothing lacking in that moment between us. And it said here that we temporarily give to those who temporarily have less, those who temporarily have more, but the established bond, or the established realization, is that we have it. We're coming from a place of having, not a place of not having.

Anyway, I mean I can see how this is really bringing all this . . . I mean it's not just in a certain situation. It applies to everything! When we interact with each other, we are there to be . . . to identify the other's Wholeness. And that's . . . that's not money, marbles, to everything from what I'm getting from this.

That is absolutely correct. Yes.

And it's really thrilling because what it does is it establishes trust, a deep knowing, a joy, safety. If I give, I know that I have and that you have, and there's no loss or there's no maneuvering for a position, "Am I gonna get a deal?" or "I'm going to have an advantage over you." I mean, all that is gone.

Of course.

Anyway, I just wanted to share that. Thank you.

Yes. That, of course, will throw a great monkey wrench in business. We won't go there today.

Next.

[Principle #10] The use of miracles as spectacles to induce belief is a misunderstanding of their purpose.

Yes. You see belief isn't what's wanted anyway. You are suffering from beliefs. You believe it's just the world. You believe you are a mortal. You believe that physical bodies ultimately decay and die. These are all beliefs which you frighten or comfort yourselves with. But all of your beliefs are what are distracting you from the experience of Reality, from the experience of what you really Are and what your brother or your sister really Is.

So, I'm not going around rendering great miracles to get you to believe something, because that's shifting one belief for another belief. Belief is irrelevant. Experience is relevant. And experience comes when you manage to one degree or another to set your beliefs aside. And it's an inside job.

That's why you can't just keep raising the dead.

Microphone.

I was just thinking when you were talking earlier, but you didn't keep raising more and more dead. You raised Lazarus, or that happened, and that was enough. It didn't need to keep happening, like you were trying to prove something.

There were a couple of other indications . . . I mean a couple of other situations where I did.

But not dramatically.

But mind you it wasn't for . . .

Proving it.

It wasn't for . . . it wasn't for the purpose of raising the dead. It was always for the purpose of glorifying God. It was always for the purpose of, I will say, impressing others with an awareness of God, not my capacity to perform miracles. Always it was to inspire the clearer consciousness of the actuality of God, because only that could change the lives of the observers. You see?

Okay.

[Principle #11] Prayer is the medium of miracles. It is a means of communication of the created with the Creator. Through prayer love is received, and through miracles love is expressed.

There you go. Prayer is not asking something of God, but opening up to God so that you might be filled with whatever He would reveal to you. Prayer, as I've said before, is really a matter of saying "Yes" to God, not making demands of God.

And when you say "Help," when you reach out to God, when you temporarily abandon self-reliance, when you abandon relying upon the self you think you are and you say "Help" to God, you are saying, "You are welcome in here, God. You are welcome to come in to me. I am saying 'Yes' to You. Not 'Yes' to what I want from You. I am saying 'Yes' to You."

And the shift of awareness, the shift of consciousness occurs, and your experience and perception of the situation, or your brother or sister, changes and healing transpires. Love is expressed. Love is impelled by your recognition of the truth of your brother. So your receipt of what the Father gives that causes the shift of perception causes a spontaneous impulse of Love from you to your brother in the clear acknowledgement of the truth about him that has just been revealed to you. You see, that's what it means.

[Principle #12] Miracles are thoughts. Thoughts can represent the lower or bodily level of experience, or the higher or spiritual level of experience. One makes the physical, and the other creates the spiritual.

Thoughts can represent the beliefs and concepts associated with the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that all of you have committed yourselves to, and it makes the Kingdom of Heaven look like nothing more than "the world."

When, on the other hand, you abandon the mutually-agreed-upon definitions and you relinquish your commitment or manage somehow to weaken your commitment to it by reaching out beyond it, I'm going to say, it apparently creates the spiritual. In actuality, it reveals the Kingdom of Heaven that has always been there. It uncovers and reveals the spiritual. I want you to be clear on that because this is not meant to imply that you are going to acquire a capacity to create. That is very appealing to your ego, which you are not free of at the moment, and we do not want to reinforce your ego.

Continue.

[Principle #13] Miracles are both beginnings and endings, and so they alter the temporal order. They are always affirmations of rebirth, which seem to go back but really go forward. They undo the past in the present, and thus release the future.

That might seem complicated but it is simplified in the last sentence.

They undo the past in the present, and thus release the future.

And what that means is, it releases the future from the framework of your mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you otherwise would have held the future to. Beginnings and endings, in the same sense that for every door that closes, a door opens. It's the ending of a belief and the beginning of clarity. It's the ending of being subject to the distress of being out of your mind and the pleasure of experiencing your Sanity. You see?

So it's about beginnings and endings. Endings of things that weren't real, and beginnings of things that always have been Real, but which you had been ignoring. And so, the beginnings are really a return to what you knew before you joined in this exciting experience of mutually-agreed-upon definitions and the distortions of the Kingdom of Heaven that they subjected you to.

Continue.

[Principle #14] Miracles bear witness to truth.

Stop there.

Wow. That means they're meaningful.

Miracles bear witness to truth.

You see Lazarus came forth. The truth that it bore witness to, was that life is deathless. But the most significant truth of all was that it demonstrated to those there that there really is a God, because these people knew me like you know each other. And they did not have the belief that I, like them, had a capacity to raise the dead—they knew it wasn't a talent I had, because I was just like them. Lazarus and his sisters were lifelong friends—we grew up together.

So, the miracle points to something bigger, they bear witness to the truth.

Continue.

They are convincing because they arise from conviction.

And how is conviction arrived at? It's arrived at by having set aside any personal capacity you might think you have to accomplish something, and saying, "Father, help. Father, show me the truth here." And when you do that and stay out of the way and don't block the influx, the shift of perception occurs. And what you find yourself experiencing, you can only describe as something that you know from the tips of your toes. It is a knowing that is unalterable, because truth recognized as truth is a recognition also of its unalterability. And so, you find yourself spontaneously experiencing conviction about the truth that you know.

So, miracles arise from conviction. Not conviction that you've drummed up with great emotion. Not conviction that you have generated by being intense or creating a sense of the strength of your physical presence. But conviction that comes from actual experience, which is available to every single one of you if you will just let God reveal the truth to you, by being curious in the most mundane daily situations, about the most mundane things.

Continue.

Without conviction they deteriorate into magic, which is mindless and therefore destructive; or rather, the uncreative use of mind.

Yes. And all that means is, what happens when you're engaged in the practice of and the modification of the updating of your mutually-agreed-upon definitions. It is a...

Like shamans. That shamanism stuff, too.

Yes. However, don't misunderstand. There are those who truly are shaman because they truly are listening beyond their best judgments and their best concepts. And it is because of them that the word "shaman" came into existence. It is meant to identify conscious Christs.

But, if conviction is not arrived at through the experience of revelation, then, as it says, the miracle of it deteriorates into magic. And so, there are what are called shamans, who think they caught the gist of a holy experience and without the conviction that accompanied the actual recognition of the Holiness of something, they began to practice a way of looking at things, a way of thinking about things, but it is all coming from the head.

Same with the gurus and the Baba's.

Sure.

I remember that they had to be registered finally. And then they [laugh]... they had to go and register.

Yes.

And the Geishas in Japan, too.

Yes. So...

Without conviction they deteriorate into magic, which is mindless and therefore destructive; or rather, the uncreative use of mind.

Which is actually . . . the uncreative use of mind is the non-use of mind. When you are using your mind to indulge in a daydream, you are using your mind to ignore what's really going on. That is the uncreative use of mind.

And that's what most of us are doing most of the time.

Yes. But discovering that you have another choice.

This is a perfect breaking point. This is a long section, and we will continue with this next week. This is good.

Thanks.

You are welcome.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

August 28th 2002

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Now, before we begin I would like to make a simple point. We are in the process of reading a rather interesting book—a book whose intent is to be transformational. But I want everyone to know that the greatest disservice you can do to yourselves is to try to find a book or a teaching or a thought system, that is so precise and consistent and tight in its explanation of things that you might feel that all you had to do was to learn how to be as precise as the book is, or to live the principles of the thought system precisely in order to Wake up. Why? Because in doing that you would neglect to be open to the conscious experience of the Living Presence of God and the Movement of Creation Itself.

This is a very important point. It's ultimately important. Whatever you read in this book should, if nothing else, be causing you to become open to the intimate and immediate experience of God, which I promise you is not going to conform to any thought system, because what God is being is forever new. Those who would look for a thought system, precise and consistent in the layout of its principles, who grab onto it, are in an act of self-protection against the actual experience of God, because they are looking for something unchangeable, something absolutely dependably unchanging. And that's not what the experience of Creation is. And to become open to the Living experience of the Living God is going to be, as far as the ego is concerned, an insecure experience. Undependable because unpredictable.

Now, we've been reading about miracles and we've been finding out that miracles are a sudden shift of perception, which occurs when you are not reinforcing your current mindsets, your current mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and in a sense, are not reinforcing your defenses. And in the absence of those defenses, [snaps fingers] a light bulb can go on, an "Aha!" can occur, a realization that constitutes a shift of perception that changes the way you are seeing and experiencing everything.

A miracle isn't something you arrive at through reason or the intellect. It is as though a new way of seeing things is inserted into your awareness, which transforms your awareness. And it's unexpected.

Now, if anyone thinks they know what a miracle is going to look like or how it ought to appear, it's going to be a long time before they experience one. Because when the actual miracle occurs they'll say, "That wasn't a miracle," or their confidence as to what a miracle is, will cause them not even to see it when it occurs.

You have to be willing to let yourself become vulnerable, undefended, unprotected if anything new is going to penetrate your preconceptions. It's simple.

So, with that in mind, let's begin with Principle #33.

And I'm going to invite everyone not to fiddle with this end of the microphone, since it got turned off halfway through the gathering last meeting. [audience dismay] So hold the mic up here and don't fiddle down here.

*[Principle #33] Miracles honor you because you are lovable. They dispel illusions about yourself and perceive the light in you. They thus atone for your errors by freeing you from your nightmares. By releasing your mind from the imprisonment of your illusions, they restore your sanity.

*[Note: Quotes from A Course In Miracles]

That pretty well restates everything that we have been learning so far.

Miracles honor you because you are lovable.

The interesting thing is that miracles reveal your lovableness to you. And in uncovering your lovableness to you, they honor you. In a way that statement is sort of like saying, "water is wet." Miracles honor you because you are lovable. Miracles honor you because they uncover what you really Are, when you didn't know that's what you really Were. That's what dispels the illusions about yourself.

Let us go on to the next Principle.

[Principle #34] Miracles restore the mind to its fullness. By atoning for lack they establish perfect protection. The spirit's strength leaves no room for intrusions.

[Repeats] The spirit's strength . . .

Spirit is substance. Substance is spirit. The substance of everything you see in this room is spirit. The substance of you is spirit. The substance of your very Being is spirit.

Miracles restore the mind to its fullness.

They reveal its indivisibility. They reveal its innocence. They reveal its all-inclusiveness.

By uncovering the absence of lack, they establish perfect protection. Not in the sense of encircling you with tanks and enemy aircraft guns and a better wall of defense, but they establish perfect protection by uncovering to you that you're naturally invulnerable—that vulnerability is nonexistent. So they establish perfect protection by uncovering the fact that you are not in need of protection, because there is nothing unlike you to be defended against.

And the spirit's strength . . . the strength of the substance of your Being leaves no room for intrusions. When the miracle establishes in you the truth of you as your conscious experience, there simply is no room for the intrusion of anything and there is the conscious realization that there is nothing unlike you that can intrude upon you. And so you can be at perfect peace.

Continue.

[Principle #35] Miracles are expressions of love, but they may not always have observable effects.

They may not always have observable effects, but they will always have effects. Love is always transformational, but the transformation isn't always visible. When the miracle is a shift of perception about the Kingdom of Heaven, that you are calling "the world," then you are going to find what you would call visible evidence of a miracle. You will find visible, tangible transformation—the disappearance of the evidence of disease or injury, the disappearance of a blight on a complete forest, the closing of the holes in the ozone, the purification of your water systems without a mechanical process being employed.

Because no matter how screwed up your world appears to have become through thoughtlessness, Creation hasn't for a moment been altered. And when a shift in perception occurs, the changes to Creation that it looked like man created, will no longer appear to be present to be disturbed by. And it can happen instantaneously. You can't have a sudden shift of perception without perception being changed. So be careful not to argue against, for any reason, the manifest, evident, tangible embodiment, we'll say, of the Kingdom of Heaven where "the world" seemed to be. This is very important.

*May I ask a question about the practicability of manifesting? For instance, if there's . . . right now I'm confronted with a soft spot in my driveway, okay, that I'm talking about digging up and reworking. Okay. Is it practical for me to expect a miracle—for me to wake up one morning and go out there and the driveway to be totally repaired all by itself?

It's very practical to have that expectation. But, you're not here to designate what the miracle is going to be.

Ah, I see. I see. I see. So . . .

The miracle may be someone coming up to your door saying, "I've lost my . . . I have a family. I'm not able to find work. Do you have anything I can help you with?"

I see. So my job is to see God expressing Love in the form of Creation. And then as I experience that in what I see all around me, things begin to happen.

That is correct.

And I don't . . . I don't choose if it's my teeth, or a driveway, or whatever, that are healed.

That is correct.

I see. I see.

You cannot be the manifestor of a miracle.

However, something that all of you hate to look at are your needs. You are insulted by being needy. And so you do everything you can—create employment for yourselves, create a roof over your head—so that your needs are apparently met and you don't have to be conscious of the fact that the needs are still present. Do you see what I'm saying? You cover up the fact that you need things by arranging your experience so that you're not confronted by the need. In other words, you need to eat, so you get a job so you can buy the groceries so you can eat, and you eat well every day and you become unconscious of the fact that you need to eat.

The ego insists upon your being unconscious of your needs, because if you were conscious of your needs, you would know that you needed help in order for them to be met and you would reach out to God.

What was the dynamics with Virginia as far as her healing was concerned?

There was a need. There was discomfort. There was decay in her teeth. And she could not ignore it. And she decided not to go to the dentist, which some people would say was ignoring the situation. But that isn't all she did. She prayed. She had no idea how the answer might come, but she prayed humbly, and she didn't fret about it. She prayed and she let it be. And she prayed and let it be. And in the absence of manipulation, but the presence of her awareness of the need so that she continued to ask, the need was met—or up to this point, partially met. And I encourage you to expect more.

I'm trying to.

Indeed.

Now my point is that although you cannot determine what the miracle will be, if you will pay attention to your needs, you will find your needs always bringing your attention to the point where Movement is going to occur. And in honoring the need and acknowledging it, and knowing that there can be no unmet need, your attention is where the miracle is about to happen, if I may put it that way. And by having your attention there, without conscious intent to make something happen, to know exactly what it is you need to ask for help about, you bring yourself into alignment for a miracle, which you will discover shortly is referred to as miracle-readiness.

In places where they're starving, like Africa, Asia, there's definitely the need and those folks definitely have their attention on that need. But they . . . there's not expectation and consciousness. Is that why that situation continues?

The problem is that they think that they are physical beings living in a physical world where abundance and lack are determined by physical forces—weather conditions, conditions of the land, and politics. And they have convinced themselves that these are the factors that govern their situation and their lack. And they have a mutually-agreed-upon definition that they're all binding each other with by continuing to energize it through reaffirming it specifically by mutually complaining about the injustice of it and never for a moment saying, “God, help.”

It's more, “Why is God doing this to me?” which doesn't help at all.

That is right. And the “Why is God doing this to me?” is part of the liturgy of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that they are committed to.

Thank you.

Did you have a question?

In my own activity that I conduct, would it be . . . Remember I used to have a prayer list and I used to work off of that. I always prayed to Jesus. But is that . . . some way should I integrate acknowledging my needs as part of what I do, as part of when I become still and conscious and open up to guidance and awareness? Should I make that a part of that activity? Consciously going through, like I know I need this and . . .

It would be an excellent thing to do. If you did it well, you would find that a lot of what you think are your needs are wants, or are things that you have determined are what will answer the problem. Needs themselves are very basic—like not hurting . . . not being hungry . . . not being ill . . . not suffering . . . like having an object of your affection is a need . . . being able to extend affection is a need.

You will usually be able to find out what your needs are by paying attention to where you're uncomfortable. Because where you're uncomfortable are the places where you're blocking or resisting being conscious of the truth, because you have a preference of your own. So your needs—your need not to hurt—when you pay attention to it, brings you to a realization of what you need in order not to hurt. And when you find where you are uncomfortable, and you ask for help—without trying to figure out the answer for yourself—the Father or the Holy Spirit or your Guide or myself will help you realize what will answer the need so that you can choose again. Choose again, instead of what you had committed to.

So, if someone were to ask you right now, “What do you need?” you would list off all the things that you don't have. But you wouldn't list all the things that you do have. You would not see them as a need because you have them. And yet there is need there that is met.

And so, I guess what I'm trying to convey to you is that you are always needy. As I also said, that is humiliating to the ego. But in the realization that you are needy, you realize that you cannot afford to be alone. And if you can't afford to be alone, then your bottom line need is to reach out and say, “Help.” Why? Because at the bottom line that's what breaks the isolation, and at the bottom line that is what begins to disintegrate the dream—the illusion of separation.

It's very difficult to be haughty when you're needy. Humility is recognizing that you're needy and not objecting to it, not resisting it.

“In my defenselessness my safety lies.” In my neediness my fulfillment lies. In my humility God can reach me. In the absence of arrogance, the Father's will for me cannot help but register with me. And when it registers with me and I Wake up, I will realize that being Awake does not annihilate or do away with my neediness, and does not raise me up into a position equal with God as a co-creator. But rather what it does is it makes me realize that I of myself can do nothing.

And the way I become co-creator with God is by letting Him move through me. It's only in this way that you can discover that the Presence of God moving as Creation is not an arrogant act, is not a willful act. It's not an act of power. It's just God Being. And every aspect of the Infinite Being of God is full of integrity just because God is indivisible. And His Movement of Creation is inseparable from you because you are no longer claiming some personal, private position in some imagined divine organization chart.

Okay.

Are you needy? I mean as a . . .

Absolutely. I have said to Paul that he must stand as the door. You will find references in the Bible where it says, “Lift up your heads all ye gates, and lift up your heads all ye doors.” Paul stands as the door, you might say, letting me through. I am standing as the door letting God through. I am not standing here in some position of authority. I’m standing here in an act of obedience and cooperation without the insertion of any personal willfulness on my part, and letting God be Love expressed, extended, embracing, including you and everything that exists.

Over here.

Is that where we each experience Joy in the Movement of Love?

Absolutely. And you all have those experiences now and then. It is not necessary for you to become absolutely totally defenseless in order for God’s Love to find expression through you and bless your fellowman. It’s just that it doesn’t happen very often because there’s an immediate reassertion of your right to be yourself on your own, on your terms, for your purposes against someone else.

I’m certainly familiar with that.

I am not picking on you here.

I understand.

Yes.

Thank you. Thank you very much

You are welcome.

Let us continue.

[Miracle Principle #36] Miracles are examples of right thinking, aligning your perceptions with truth as God created it.

This is pretty obvious at this point, isn’t it? And it happens [snaps fingers] spontaneously, not by design, not as a result of effort on your part. It happens in the absence of effort. It happens in the moment of defenselessness. It even happens in a moment of preoccupation with something outside yourself. You see?

Let us continue.

[Miracle Principle #37] A miracle is a correction introduced into false thinking by me. It acts as a catalyst, breaking up erroneous perception and reorganizing it properly. This places you under the Atonement principle, where perception is healed. Until this has occurred, knowledge of the Divine Order is impossible.

Well, let me make something perfectly clear. One of the most valuable elements that can precipitate your ability to let the penetration of the miracle occur, is the experience of need recognized together with the acceptance of your incapacity to meet the need while the need yet remains to be met—while the need still needs to be met. In other words, in the recognition of the need and an acknowledgement that you can't meet the need, the need does not disappear. It remains pressing upon you the requirement for change to occur.

But when you acknowledge the presence of the need—stop denying it, stop glossing it over and acknowledge the need, you might say, feel the pain—and then fully realize that this is something you cannot deal with and you accept that incapacity, the arrogance of thinking you do have the capacity to deal with it fades and now you're in a state of humility. And in the state of humility, the absence of arrogance, the Father can reach you, I can reach you, the Holy Spirit can reach you and uncover what is needed for correction, through a shift of perception which you are quite capable of making—a shift that you're quite capable of making and one, which you do make because the revelation of it is so clearly true to you. And then the pain is gone. The distress is gone. The experience of need unmet is replaced by need met, but not need annihilated.

Are you beginning to glimpse what I'm getting at? When need is met, it doesn't mean you're no longer needy. It simply means that you as the direct Expression of God can only be the full Expression of God when you're not attempting to be the expression of your will, of your best sense of yourself, of who you've been taught you ought to be, and so on. As the direct Expression of God, all that you are is derived from God. And when you yield to that, you find all your needs met. The only need that you thought you had that isn't met is that in the act of yielding to God, you are not moved into a place of independence from God where now you're able to be independent perfectly. And so the need is met without the need going away.

Arrogance . . . so arrogance is blocking this connection. And I come up against it and I can't quite see it. And I, of course, ask for help, but I don't really hear this fluttering of angel wings and all at once filled with good feelings and connections, so I, you know, maybe I can't even get in touch with, you know, a real good solid connection.

So I'll listen to a tape and then maybe, you know, sometimes there'll be like rage creep in and I just have to just go and follow my breath and calm myself down. Is this, I mean when this is going on, is this appropriate way to work with this? Just like tenaciously stay after my peace the best that I can find it—listening to a tape when I can't hear you inside—every time I remember, remember and go back, and I mean just stay at it. When it's not working just stay at it the best I can.

That is correct.

And I am receiving help, even though it's not exactly in the terms that I would . . . there's help all the time that I'm doing this. There's support.

Always.

Always.

In fact when you are headed in the wrong direction with great determination, you are helped to get to the most difficult place the fastest. In other words, you are helped for your illusion to be as uncomfortable as possible as quickly as possible so that you will get to the point of choosing again more quickly.

Yeah. Yeah, that's it, isn't it? The puppet strings are short.

That is correct.

When you really allow yourself to feel the need, you will naturally find within you the determination to sit with the need, rather than gloss it over, and give your attention to the answer to the need without distraction, no matter how long it takes.

Steadfast.

Indeed. Most of you say, "Well, I don't really have time to give that kind of attention to this or that." And then you find yourself suddenly flat on your back in bed, apparently ill. Now you say, "I can't do anything else. I'm unable to get up and go to work. I'm unable to attend to all of these other things that I gave priority to. And you know what? Considering how I feel, my getting clear about myself is about the most important thing I can think of. My becoming clear about what my needs really are, is something I'm not going to begin to be distracted from, because at the bottom line I need not to be faced with the apparent option of ceasing to exist." Of dying, in other words. Ah, so here's a need that's ever present.

Your wants and your needs are getting clarified.

That's right. And mostly they'll be getting clarified because you're not able to justify all of the usual distractions that keep you from being aware of your need.

Now your need not to die is a misunderstanding. It's a distortion of your need to be aware that your Life is unalterable. It's unalterable. It's eternal. It's uninterrupted. Why or how? Because, God is being you, you're not being yourself. God is being you.

A sperm and an egg setting into motion a body is not what is keeping you in existence, or making you. And most often when one arrives at basic moments like this where one's need is looked at squarely, when that happens one tends to ask God for help. One tends to reach out. One tends to break the isolation.

And when there is humility in that, when your personal helplessness is felt and accepted, you don't cease to exist. You don't disappear. You are inspired by the infilling of the Spirit of God. And boy, are you grateful. And you cry. You cry because it's all so simple and you see it. You cry because there is joy. You cry because there is relief. And miraculously you get better. And the better you get, the more you say, “Now I can get back to the things that took precedence over my being aware of my need,” instead of staying in that holy place of need and need met being inseparable.

I'm getting a lot of help to stay there without needing to get put in my deathbed. I mean there's . . . I just see now a lot of what's been going on the last week is just getting a lot of help.

Indeed.

Not letting me get it. I don't have to go to my deathbed to get that serious about it. To get . . . just caring about getting back in touch.

That is wonderfully true.

Yeah.

And all of these things I am saying are for you, but they are for all of you as well.

This is me, Paul. Did you complete your . . . Who is reading?

I did and more. [talking to next reader] So you're reading right there.

Had you completed that? Okay.

[Miracle Principle #38] The Holy Spirit is the mechanism of miracles. He recognizes both God's creations and your illusions. He separates the true from the false by His ability to perceive totally rather than selectively.

Indeed. You know the saying is you can't solve the problem from the level of the problem. And yet that's all the ego does. By asking for help, you open yourself up to the Holy Spirit. And what did I say the Holy Spirit was? The Holy is your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego.

That's the table being what the table really is now. Right?

Microphone.

The Holy Spirit is the table being what the table is really now beyond my perception of it, and the glass being what the glass is right now beyond my perception of it.

Well, the table and the glass being what they divinely Are right now, they are being right now regardless of the Holy Spirit. They are what they are because God is what is being It. The Holy Spirit is that which recognizes what it really is as God is being It, and recognizes how you are perceiving it, and then begins to close the gap between your misperception of it and what it really Is by introducing the sudden shift of perception in your mind.

The Holy Spirit's doing my job while I'm asleep.

The Holy Spirit is your divinity.

I mean, to recognize that Which Is Real, that's what the Holy Spirit is . . . that's that activity.

That is correct.

And that's my job. That's what I'm suppose to be doing is acknowledging What's Real in everything.

Absolutely. But you can't do it without asking for help. You can't do it without reaching outside of the boundaries of your current definition of yourself, and therefore the boundaries of your current capabilities as you have defined them or believe them to be.

Mind you, the table, the glass, the chairs, it's all Reality going on as it divinely is right now, but there is a gap between what It is and the way you're experiencing it, because of the conscious choice to determine on your own what a thing means and stand in mutual agreement with another as to that definition. That's why I keep saying, the simplest way to break the illusion is to have curiosity. Curiosity to see what a thing really Is, because that's what disentangles you—disengages you from your commitment.

Okay.

[Miracle Principle #39] The miracle dissolves error because the Holy Spirit identifies error as false or unreal. This is the same as saying that by perceiving light, darkness automatically disappears.

Yes. What is unreal has no presence. What's unreal is imagined, but has no actual presence, any more than darkness is the presence of something measurable. Light is the presence of something measurable. Darkness is the absence of something measurable. So, in the shift of perception that occurs that causes something that is unreal to be seen as actually unreal, it's obvious to you that's there's nothing there to occasion reaction, or defense, or even any distraction from Reality.

It isn't that it uncovers what is unreal so that then you can dispose of what is unreal. It is not like the difference between the tares and the wheat, which are two different kinds of Real things that are indistinguishable from each other until a certain point in their development. Your commitment to your determination to see things biased by your will causes you to see aspects of the Kingdom of Heaven as different from what they are to you. But when the involuntary shift of perception occurs where the unrealness of your creation, of your biased perception of Reality is uncovered to you as not real, you're free of the misperception. You're simply free of the misperception. And there's nothing there to deal with or dispose of, because where you were looking and seeing a distortion of Reality, Reality now is uncovered and it gets your attention. You see?

[Miracle Principle #40] The miracle acknowledges everyone as your brother and mine. It is a way of perceiving the universal mark of God.

This we have already elaborated on for quite a few weeks. We will continue on to the next.

[Miracle Principle #41] Wholeness is the perceptual content of miracles. They thus correct, or atone for, the faulty perception of lack.

When the shift of perception occurs and you see something as it truly is, you discover that it's far more than the simple object you thought it was, whether it's a wall, or whether it's a toe, because you recognize the Presence of God in it. You recognize God as the source and the substance of it.

The simplest thing then becomes awesome, literally, and as I have said before you realize that the substance of it is Love and that it is radiating Love—radiating Love that embraces you. And you also realize that this Love is the very substance of you, and that you and it are engaged in what you might call a mutual appreciation society, in a relationship of mutual Love. A Love, which is not exclusively owned by either one of you, but is itself the clear experience and the deep knowing that You and It are One. This is wholeness. And it is a blissful experience beyond anything you might imagine.

I tell you this so that you might realize that when you're being curious to see what a thing really is, because you realize that you don't know what it really is, and you express this curiosity, you are priming yourself for an awesome experience. Not just an intellectual "Aha!"

I have a little bit of confusion here about wholeness and neediness. If we're always needy, then there's the feeling that you're not whole, that something's missing. So am I mixing terminology here?

When the choice was made to have a point of view different from the Father's—just for the heck of it, just for the fun of it—you abandoned a union in which the experience of wholeness that I just described was the experience of Being. The fact that you weren't God but that God was all there was of you was not an experience of neediness, because there was no thought of having a different perception of Being. But nevertheless you were not God. You were God's Expression of Himself.

Neediness and wholeness were indistinguishable and indescribable because there was no will but the Father's in effect.

In Reality we would not even need to talk about your being the Expression of God and therefore being in need of Him, because in the absence of a separate will being exercised, your wholeness, the Allness of God constituting you, was inseparable from the fact that you are His Expression. In other words, the need was inseparable from the inviolable experience of wholeness. Are you with me so far?

When you say the need is part of the wholeness, you still have a need.

If you are the Expression of God, then that means God is your Source. And that means that you are not self-assertive. You cannot be self-realized. You are . . .

So that's the need.

That's the need.

To be joined. And then that's where the wholeness comes from.

Exactly.

I'm with ya. Now . . .

And when that wholeness is being experienced, there is no experience available to describe through the use of the words "neediness" and "wholeness."

I gotcha. Now it sounds like we went from color, living color to black-and-white. Even what we see in the sense of all that . . . were there some of us who went, "Whoa! I don't want to be in black-and-white," and they immediately switched back into the . . .

Oh, yes.

We didn't do that. [laughing] [audience laughter] What a dummy!

[audience comments which were too hard to hear]

And be stuck in stupid rest.

But you are still safe. You are still safe even though you're scaring yourselves to death. You're still safe.

Well when I momentarily switched back from black-and-white to color, you know, just at that moment of experience that I asked for and got, it frightened me to be there. It was like too much. I couldn't handle it. I had, you know, I mean [laughing] it scared the hell out of me.

Indeed.

So all this is about getting comfortable with being there.

Indeed.

Thank you.

And the miracles, the shifts of perception, which I introduce or the Holy Spirit introduces, are always as much as you can bear without being overwhelmed. Because the road back into your Sanity must occur in the context of Love if you are to dare taking each step.

I want to make sure I've got this right because you're giving us another way of looking at neediness. We tend to associate neediness with lack. The starving children in Africa are very needy because they lack food.

Indeed.

You seem to be saying that it's important for us to have needs because by having needs then those needs are filled.

No, it's not important for you to have needs. You have them whether you're acknowledging them or not.

Yes. Well, and if we do have them, that must mean it's important.

Yes.

In order . . . and we have them in order that they may be filled? And that neediness being filled is the Movement of Love?

It is. Because in their being filled by the Movement of Love, rather than your personal, separate, private skill at manipulating the world, leads you into an experience, an awareness of God being part of the need met.

Okay, I'd like to put this on a practical level. I have this need to house my family and my landlord asks me that I pay rent every month.

Yes.

Okay. Now I work in a way where I make my living off what people give me out of the goodness of their heart. I'm a clown. I make balloons. I give them to the kids. People put money in my bucket. My family, we live on a day-to-day basis with what comes in and we've gotten pretty good at doing that. And we enjoy it.

And every time I've been in a tough spot with like needing the rent, to not knowing where rent is going to come from, I pray and God always comes through. Sometimes maybe a couple of days later than I wanted, but the money always shows up. Not always as much as I wanted but always as much as I need. And so even though I've taken this big step to trust that the money will always appear without knowing where it's coming from each time, and it always does appear, it's still a very awkward place to be. There are times when it seems very wearying.

It's only awkward when the pull of the status quo, of the mutually-agreed-upon ways of things working that everyone else is embodying in their lives tempts you or invites you to abandon trust for the apparent security of controlling your good into your experience.

It's a big temptation.

It is.

But I'm much happier now than when I did it all on my own by getting a big paycheck.

Yes. It constantly keeps alive in you the awareness that there is a God and you have a partnership. And in that partnership your safety lies.

And so you are also breaking the agreement, the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and not acting independently and thus being part of the leaven that leavens the whole lump—the whole mental condition which really is better called the whole mental conditioning that everyone is suffering from. It's not easy because there is little support from it. There is little support for it from your peers. And it is also difficult because your habit, your prior participation in the mutually-agreed-upon definitions has not dissolved completely. But you get help in persisting in this apparently radical stance.

So I should be thankful that I have this financial need each month?

Yes, because it keeps God square in your face.

Yes, it does. [laughing] Okay. Yes. Alright. Thank you.

You are welcome.

I find it curious that our friend over here who's so serious is a professional clown. [laughing] [audience laughter]

I have a little different take on this. Maybe I'm seeing my part or what's before me is not struggling with this dialogue about neediness and wholeness and not being caught up on a deathbed or paying the rent, but I can find bliss in being curious about what a leaf is. And that's going to also leaven the whole lump. Correct?

To whatever degree you look at a leaf and find the Presence of God revealed to you, yes.

Bliss.

Yes.

Wholeness.

Yes. But, don't neglect the needs. Don't let the blissful experience of what a leaf really is cause you to neglect a hungry child, or an angry or grieving wife, or an unresolved hatred that's eating away inside you.

Or homeless clown.

Yeah. I'm just hearing all this dialogue about it and I see this like a . . . this invitation to engage all of these concepts and struggle with all this. And I remember you sitting up there saying, you know, just . . . it's right here in this leaf. And Buddha under the Bodha tree, and I mean everywhere. Everywhere there's this opportunity to join with this and see more than what we thought there was and to experience bliss outside of this concept of starving children.

But he didn't sit under the tree forever after the realization. He became involved.

He was transformed.

He was transformed and became involved with his fellowman.

Right. Where he wasn't . . . traditionally his position [was] he wasn't involved.

That is correct.

Right.

And he could have chosen to sit under that tree in bliss indefinitely and be stuck, as you said, in stupid rest. And that is not what it's about.

And not be stuck in stupid trauma either.

That is correct. If there are children starving in Africa, and starving adults, starving tribes, starving communities, and it is because they have their mutually-agreed-upon definitions of the situations and circumstances. And part of the mutually-agreed-upon definition is that it's bigger than they are and they can't do anything about it.

Now any one of them could reach out to God and experience the miracle of a sudden shift of perception that allows him to be a blessing in terms of breaking up the current mutually-agreed-upon definition that is binding everyone.

But, it's not appropriate for you . . . or you . . . any of you, to sit here and say, "That's going on over there and I don't need to be involved." If you can't do anything about it because you don't have the means to gather food together and take it over . . . give it to them . . . you can at least be conscious of the need so that each night before you go to sleep you can ask the Holy Spirit, and you can ask the Guides of each one of those people, to help inspire them to hear the answer to their need which they are feeling and to realize that it is unnecessary for them to be bound to it.

Their need is my need.

Their need is their need, and your need is to be willing to be the conscious Presence of Love that embraces them in the desire for realization to occur that at the moment they can't conceive could happen.

Every night before Paul goes to sleep, he says a prayer. He asks for those who are the Guides and the Supporters, you might say, of those who have asked for healing . . . where the words he says are, "May we please have a healing session for everyone who has asked for healing, even if it was only expressed as hope with little faith." Even if it was only expressed as hope with little faith, because Paul can ask with faith, you can ask with faith for those who have little faith, but still hope. You see?

I can't willfully determine to get my enlightenment from a leaf. I mean I have to be lead to this place where this bliss is going to come from. I mean I can't, like you said, I can't decide about the miracle, or I can't decide about that place. That's given to me. Not from something I can choose.

Yes. Why are you talking about the leaf when I was just talking about . . .

It's just not my choice, whether it's a . . . I mean I can't choose to make the starving child displace either. I can't . . . I mean it's . . . what I'm saying is it's not . . . it's not my choice where that joining and bliss is going to come from. Whether it's, you know, the bodha tree, or the child, or the angry wife, or the starving clown. I mean, it's where it comes to me is not something I can choose.

You know where the need is, and the need is where the miracle is present to occur, and so you can ask for the miracle where the need is.

Yeah. Yeah. It's obvious.

You do not know what the miracle is going to look like, but you have the capacity to care and ask for the miracle where the need is.

There is a need in America for all Americans to be able to sleep peacefully and fly peacefully and be without anxiety. But you know what? There are other countries in the world who are living each day under the same threat compounded 5,000 times and they deserve your prayer for them as well as your prayer for the Holy Spirit to help uncover to you your capacity to feel your peace, and not be threatened by what can't actually harm you.

You can't break the isolation without having an object of your affection and without expressing affection toward that object. And then let your attentiveness be to the needs so that you may then be open to the realization of how the needs can be met, and not leave your brother until the need is met, anymore than you end up leaving yourself on your sickbed until you're no longer dying—because you're willing to stay with the need until the meaning of the need is revealed to you.

Is this the source of invention?

No, inventions are of the intellect. Miracles are of Love.

There is much to sit with tonight . . . abide with. Do not let my discussion about need be perceived as a heavy subject. The experience of need is an experience of a point at which need met is ready and waiting to emerge in your conscious awareness. Need is where an unconsciousness of your wholeness is the particular unconsciousness of wholeness that you are ready to release and have replaced by greater clarity. Need is where the miracle is pressing against a very thin spot in your current defenses.

You have many needs that you are not conscious of, but they are not needs that you are at this moment capable of penetrating or seeing through. Where you are uncomfortable is where your ego has gotten real weak and the miracle is just under the surface. So I have been talking about something positive, affirming, and you don't need to be afraid of looking at your needs. Looking at the needs of your fellowman will cause you to behave compassionately if your willingness to look at their needs arises out of Love. And that is what is needed.

With that I will say, "Good evening."

[Audience] Thank you.

You are welcome.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 1 – THE MEANING OF MIRACLES
Section – PRINCIPLES OF MIRACLES (Miracle 43)
First Edition – p. 4 / Second Edition – p. 6

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: I want you to notice your Mind and your Being at the moment. And I want you to pay attention to what you've done. You stepped out of your daily activity to come over here. In effect, you set aside the things you are normally concerned with, involved with. And then you socialized for a bit. And then we began by having a quiet time, and during the quiet time you stepped out of the social realm and chose to become quiet, contemplative, in one form or another, and you did it with the intention of being ready to listen, give your attention to the contents of the Course and to me. Again I want you to just pay attention to the atmosphere within you at this moment—what is present and what is absent that is normally present most of the rest of the time.

I encourage you to find it valuable at odd times when you're at home or at the office, wherever, to go through exactly the process you've gone through this evening, because it is the way you prepare yourself for being able to hear. You must, through whatever means you find helpful, become still. And then you must express a desire to know something, to have an answer, to have a clarity revealed. And then be still and listen. It's not any harder to do at home than it has been to do it here tonight. And it's worth doing at least once a day, if you're not already in touch with your guidance, just to get into the habit of becoming, of being willing to set aside your conscious intent to attend to your concerns, and instead let your intent be to reach out, to invite, and to let in whatever is needed. Don't work at it any more than you worked at it tonight.

If you aren't in touch with your guidance solidly, the frequent process that I have just described will enhance the quality of your attentiveness, the quality of your quietness, and therefore your ability to hear. If you wish to connect with your Guide rather than me, by all means let that be where you give your attention, because your Guide is just as awake as I am. And your Guide will answer you as I would answer you. We all have your best interest at heart. And our intent is to convey to you what the Father would have you know, not what we think you ought to know, but what the Father would have you know so that your connection with the Father may begin to be established as your Conscious Experience. And we all know how to do this equally well.

Okay. We will begin with Miracle Principle 42. And let us begin.

READER: [Miracle Principle #42] A major contribution of miracles is their strength in releasing you from your false sense of isolation, deprivation and lack.

RAJ: It's inevitable when you experience the sudden shift of perception that you can't account for, that you realize that if you can't account for it and you didn't provide it to yourself, it must have come from somewhere. And therefore, the event of the penetration of your awareness of something you are not accountable for is inescapable proof that you are not alone and that the one (or ones) you are with relate to you in a way that is utterly beneficial, and therefore utterly trustworthy. Not trustworthy because I've told you it's trustworthy, but because the experience of it demonstrates itself to be trustworthy, so it breaks the isolation.

Continue.

READER: [Miracle Principle #43] Miracles arise from a miraculous state of mind, or a state of miracle-readiness.

RAJ: Well, I'm going to ask a question. Who would like to describe to me something that is definitely not a state of miracle-readiness?

SEEKER: When we're in the throes of a mutually-agreed-upon concept.

RAJ: Pretty smart.

SEEKER: [audience laughter] Uh oh, that scares me. [more laughter]

RAJ: That's the quote "right answer." Yes. But I want a personal... tell me a way that you, tell me something that you have done that constitutes a state of the absence of miracle-readiness.

SEEKER: Oh. Oh. That's easy. [laughter] Worrying about things that seem that... that are going awry. In other words, being totally engrossed in worry and fear and saying, “Oh, it’s all coming apart. This is going all wrong. Oh, woe is me. How did I ever get into this? I’m a real jerk.”

RAJ: Well, I think you used up all the reasons. [audience laughter, Raj laughing] You’re correct. A state of mind that is not miracle-ready is one that is confident that the worst will happen, or that something less than the best will happen, that the situation is hopeless, and so on. Yes.

So a state of miracle-readiness would be?

SEEKER: Enjoying your object of affection.

RAJ: Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I think a state of mind that is not miracle-ready is when I think that I’m alone and in a hostile universe.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: The opposite of which is remembering that I’m at One with God and every... which is the miracle state of Mind.

RAJ: Yes.

Anyone else?

ANOTHER SEEKER: When someone, and I’ve noticed myself actually many times during the day feel so confident that all my defenses are all in order, I’m ready to defend all my... my little fort and I’m able to. And if something goes awry, either I’ve failed myself or else I just wasn’t strong enough.

RAJ: These are examples of a mind not miracle-ready.

SEEKER: That was it.

RAJ: Yes. Now what would be an example of miracle-readiness?

SEEKER: I think a oneness, a willingness to release. A very frank willingness to release my sense of my own will as being all that there is. And to listen to perhaps... for the Truth.

RAJ: For the unexpected.

SEEKER: Just listen.

RAJ: Yes, for the unexpected.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Yes.

Another way of putting it is that a miracle-ready state of mind is one in which faithlessness is not being practiced. And I do want to point out that faith does not have to be practiced in order for one to be miracle-ready. One simply has to be neglecting to practice faithlessness. And faithlessness is when you say, “Everything is going wrong and it’s not going to change,” or “My situation is awful and I’m stuck.” You see?

ANOTHER SEEKER: I was just going to say having curiosity, wondering how your need is going to be met next, but not knowing how that might... and being curious to see how it’s going to happen. That’s kind of a miracle-readiness.

RAJ: That is correct.

Anyone else?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Practicing to recognize Spirit rather than the body can just immediately make the person that you want to... the moment before you had all these concepts about, it can just flip it, and suddenly all there is, is just this sense of love for this beautiful person. It’s just so amazing. And I don’t know why I don’t do that more often. [small laugh]

RAJ: Anyone else? Just a moment.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Lately it feels like... I’m just watching my screen... that I’m willing to wait, to like even just stand somewhere and not know whether I should walk into the store, whether I should turn right, whether I should turn left. And the other day it kind of felt like when I was a little kid and when you go in somewhere and it’s really your parents that are in charge and so you just kind of like wait to be told like, “Okay, go sit there. Okay, do this. Do that.” Right? Instead of just thinking I know and rushing in with my plan, even if it’s to get a cup of coffee. Like just everything sort of slows down.

RAJ: So you might say that a miracle-ready mind is one which is attentive, without designs in place. Attention is a form of curiosity. And when you know what you’re going to do, you’re not paying attention.

SEEKER: Ah, yeah.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: Adults unfortunately have taken on this stance that was expected of them to take on that you’re supposed to...

RAJ: You thought I asked you...

SEEKER: ...know by the time you’re a certain age...

RAJ: That’s right.

SEEKER: ...what you're doing.

RAJ: [That's] what you are taught. Yes.

SEEKER: And I wasn't ever very good at that and so my father still treats me like I'm seventeen, because I'm acting like that to him, you know. So I have to forgive him for that a lot.

RAJ: The majority of the tension that everyone feels comes from that fact that they are behaving as though they know when they don't. And they know they don't and so they...

SEEKER: They hope you don't notice. [audience laughter]

RAJ: That is correct. And the likelihood that you're... the fact that you're being a fake is likely to be discovered, that causes ongoing tension.

So why not accept what you've known all along? The one thing you've known is that you don't know. Trying to know, and you stop behaving as though you do know, and you find your peace with.... What happens? That's when you become attentive, because you abandoned your plans. You abandoned the techniques that you use to appear to know when you don't know. And that's when you become receptive. That's when your mind is available for the penetration of Truth to occur, or insight to occur, or a sudden shift of perception to occur.

SEEKER: I think that a lot of people have felt that they didn't fit in because they weren't following the adult stance of knowing. And that was a mistake. That's a mistake too because not fitting...

RAJ: But that's the mutually-agreed-upon definitions. If you have mutually agreed to the definitions and meanings of things, then you must not break that contract, else you'll be on the outside and everyone will let you know that you're not in the group anymore and that you are not accepted. And that what you have become by virtue of not honoring the mutual agreement is unacceptable, despicable, insane,...

SEEKER: Irresponsible.

RAJ: That you are no longer worthy of respect. And these are the ways that those who are abiding by the mutually-agreed-upon definitions try to cause you to feel shame in order to coerce you back in to the group. But, mind you, as long as you're in the group, as long as you're committed to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, you're not paying attention.

SEEKER: Recently I had a résumé go online and the girl who was helping me do this and I were discussing whether or not, I mean how do we get around the age factor. Because something such as that where they're just looking at a piece of paper and they're studying whether you're worthy of a position, and then not knowing you and not knowing your vitality or your ability, you know, by virtue of where you really are at that point in your life, not by the numbers, but by... again by virtue of what you are in fact. And so there was no way to get around, you know, the numbers 'cause you can't really lie, ...really, you know, do it either. So it's a very interesting position to be in for me because I've never tried this angle before of online résumé. So it really kind of opened my eyes up to the fact that I really am at the mercy of the Will of the Father. More so now than ever before I recognize that and it's not an imposition on me. I realize that... I really did surrender at that moment of recognition that I can trust because... not because it's an interesting spiritual practice, [there's] nothing left for me to do.

RAJ: It's an essential practice.

SEEKER: It's essential. Yes.

RAJ: Exactly. Yes.

SEEKER: And that I really can't get around it anymore, even if I wanted to play at the game of manipulation, manipulating my good into my experience. It's no fun anymore, to whatever degree I had been doing it. It's nice to get there.

RAJ: So to not be miracle-ready would be to devote yourself to assumptions.

SEEKER: But nobody will hire you because of your age.

RAJ: Exactly. Exactly.

To be miracle-ready then means to abandon all assumptions, to set all assumptions aside for a moment even, and say, "Aside from all of my assumptions, Father, what is the Truth here? Or aside from all of my assumptions of what will work and what won't work, what's my, what's the appropriate next step for me?" You see? You must be willing for a moment to abandon your habitual assumptions, because, again, your assumptions are an active form of practicing faithlessness. Faithlessness isn't just hopelessness. Faithlessness is aggressive. Faithlessness is assertive. There's nothing passive about faithlessness. And it's the... in other words, it's willful.

SEEKER: It's exhausting.

RAJ: Yes, it is.

So to set aside faithlessness means to set aside willfulness, to set aside your confidences in good or bad. If you are confident as to how a healing is going to occur, your confidence may well blind you to the way the healing is really going to happen the way God is unfolding it. You see? So confidence, positive or negative, constitute a shield that protects you against the direct spontaneous experience of the Experience of God, which is going to be utterly original, unexpected. But always not shocking. It will always be comprehensible to you. The influx of insight, the sudden shift of perception won't be a shift into the unbelievable. It won't be a shift into incomprehensible. That would be an experience of chaos for you. It will always be a shift into that which is so utterly comprehensible and so utterly simple that you will say, "Why didn't I see that before?" You see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: I was asking you recently to help me to see my Brothers and Sisters as the Christ That They Are. And I don't know if this is part of how you are helping me, but I had a dream and in that dream.... I mean a sleeping... I went to sleep and had a dream. And in that dream I experienced someone I know in a way that I wasn't expecting and it was really a dramatic feeling that went along with it. Normally I don't pay that much attention to my dreams but I just wondered if that was an answer, part of the answer you... that I was receiving.

RAJ: Yes, indeed.

SEEKER: 'Cause in that experience I really did... I experienced that person in a way that they have not shown up in the human condition around...

RAJ: In quote "in real life" unquote.

SEEKER: Right, quote. ...at all. It was very different. And it was rather shocking in a way. And it hasn't left me since. And I hope that I can actually begin to see everyone like that.

RAJ: Now, before having the dream, whenever you thought of this person, you thought of him the way he has always been.

SEEKER: The way he behaved.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: And when you do that, you are practicing faithlessness. You are experiencing a spontaneous confidence in your perception of him, your current...

SEEKER: And I didn't want to do that anymore.

RAJ: Right.

SEEKER: I knew it was not the way... I knew it was hurting me to do that.

RAJ: Yes.

I just want you to [understand whatever] perceptions are of another that are not being gathered on the spot connection with that person constitutes a practiced resistance to seeing him with fresh eyes. And there's no innocence in that. I do not mean that there is guilt in that, but there's no innocence in it. In other words, when I speak of looking with innocent eyes, I mean to look with eyes that aren't being colored by anything—your past experience of him, that fact that you happen to be thinking of him at quote “that time of the month” unquote when everything looks bad, or whatever. You see what I mean?

Looking with innocence means being willing for a moment to look with curiosity to see the unexpected, to see what you haven't been seeing, and specifically to see what God would have you see. If you are not looking with curiosity, you are looking with some confidence at what you choose to see. And whatever it is you are choosing to see, whether it's pleasant or unpleasant, does not constitute being attentive to the unknown, the unexpected. You see?

SEEKER: Um hmm.

RAJ: And this is the way you keep others bound to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions. Not just you. Every single one of you. Because you may all see yourselves as starting to crawl out of the crab barrel and, you know, abandon the status quo.

SEEKER: Like we're free.

RAJ: Yes. And yet as you climb out, you continue to see that guy as a bastard, or that woman as a whatever, and because she always has been and I.... You see? And you continue to hold others to the rules of the mutually-agreed-upon.

SEEKER: Well, like they're different from you, something wrong right away.

RAJ: That's correct. So just be aware that as the Bobos comic strip says, “I've seen the enemy and....”

SEEKER: I have been knowing that I need, my mind needs to be changed in this way for a while now. I just was surprised. And this is part of why I shared this that it came about in a dream, because again I don't normally, you know, pay a lot of attention to my dreams. You know, I think most of it's pretty wild and crazy.

RAJ: If things need to change, instead of trying to change your mind, just start practicing curiosity. That in itself will be the change that breaks the habit. You break the habit by doing something new, not by working on the habit. You see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: Um hmmm.

RAJ: Okay. Let's continue.

EARLIER SEEKER: Sometimes I'm in the state that where I say, "I don't know what anything is for. I am totally lost and confused." Is that a state of miracle-readiness? Or do you have to move into the next stage which now thankfully I am doing where I say, "I am lost and totally confused. I don't know what anything is for." And I look up and say, "God, help."

RAJ: It all depends on how honest the statement is. If it's a truly honest statement, you say it and it's not part of a ploy. It's not part of a manipulation. It's not a justification for being pissed off. It's not a justification for being frustrated. It's a simple honest acknowledgment of the truth that you are willing to abide with and be with without the acknowledgment being a step toward a goal you're seeking.

SEEKER: It's... oftentimes it's not a good feeling. Do you know what I mean? It's not like a pleasing feeling, or feeling of fulfillment, or.... It's a feeling of emptiness, a feeling of like being at the bottom of the barrel type feeling.

RAJ: Yes. But if you are in effect saying, "I'm at the bottom of the barrel. I'm acknowledging I'm at the bottom of the barrel. I don't like being at the bottom of the barrel." Even if you aren't trying to get out of the... even if you have abandoned trying to get out of the barrel but are sitting in the bottom of the barrel grousing about it, you haven't accepted being at the bottom of the barrel. When you accept being at the bottom of the barrel, that indeed you don't know, and you stop fighting against it, and you let yourself be at peace in it, that's when the bottom of the barrel drops out.

SEEKER: So it's like sometimes...

RAJ: Insight occurs.

SEEKER: It's like sometimes I feel, not only in this instance do I not know what anything is for and I'm lost and confused, but my God, there's a realization it's always been like this. My whole life has been like this. And how many other lifetimes have been like this? Wow, what a... I have been really spinning my wheels all this time. Wow.

RAJ: Yes. The other thing is that when... well, first of all, being at the bottom of the barrel is just a definition. Your bottom of the barrel is not someone else's bottom of the barrel. And what makes it the bottom of the barrel for you is that you are in a [situation/circumstance] that you have done everything to avoid being in.

SEEKER: That's why you go to school. [laughing]

RAJ: The bottom of the barrel is in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven. And when you stop resisting being in the bottom of the barrel, new definition can occur to you so that you can begin to see the God in the things that you had been avoiding, because you had been taught to avoid them. The bottom of the barrel is always your leading edge. What you have been taught constitutes success is everything that will keep you from the bottom of the barrel, and therefore will keep you from the threshold of enlightenment.

SEEKER: But it... does the leading edge, does the bottom of the barrel always have to be so unpleasant, so distasteful, such a feeling of hell?

RAJ: It all depends on how disgusting you have been taught that that place is.

SEEKER: Well, it's kind of like you've been conditioned, that we've all been taught that the bottom of the barrel and disgusting are like synonymous.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: So does the leading edge at some point shift to be a feeling of freedom and release, and wow, you know, it's okay to be here?

RAJ: Again, it depends on what the threshold of discovery is violating. And if a threshold of discovery is violating something that you have been severely taught is the road to hell, or the epitome of un-respectability, then that threshold will be uncomfortable. But once you move through it, you experience the freedom that you are asking about right now.

SEEKER: So maybe being at the bottom of the barrel long enough, you kind of get used to it and say, "This isn't so bad after all," or, "I like it here." [laughing]

RAJ: Well, let's put it this way. Some thresholds are like your moving up here and having raccoons that were a pain in the "you-know-what." They were a pain in the "you-know-what" because of the definitions and meanings you were giving the situation. And your being present where they were in your experience long enough, being present with them long enough, provided you with the opportunity, was another way to look at this. But until you look at it differently, you were miserable, and they were pesky. And once you saw that there was another way to look at this, because you were around it long enough to have a slow shift of perception, rather than a sudden shift of perception, and you made the shift based off being pesky. They didn't go away, but they stopped being pesky. So that was a gentle form of being at the bottom of the barrel.

There are other forms of being at the bottom of the barrel that are more dramatic and the "Aha!" is more abrupt, an... of perception. But understand that every crossing of a threshold is going to constitute a violation of a concept that you have been holding with commitment. How difficult that crossing of the threshold is for you depends upon how strenuously you resist moving over the threshold.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Miracle-readiness involves a willingness to look at the unlovable, the unforgivable, the disgusting, with a willingness to see with new eyes, a curiosity to see what on earth of the Kingdom of Heaven this particular thing is, instead of what you've been conditioned to believe it is. That's miracle-readiness.

If there's only one thing that confronts you because there's only one thing going on and it's the Kingdom of Heaven, or Reality, with a capital "R", or Creation Itself, the Presence of God manifest, then there truly is nothing else for you to do than to look at it with curiosity, positive curiosity, not fear, and an inquisitiveness to see just how on earth this could possibly be the Kingdom of Heaven, or some Aspect of the Kingdom of Heaven. Let there be a little genuine curiosity to hear an answer that violates whatever it is you're so confident about that makes what you're looking at appear to obviously not be the Kingdom of Heaven. That's an example of miracle-readiness. You see?

So it's a practice. You all practice not being miracle-ready by your commitment to how you think things are. And it's, as I said, it's very assertive and aggressive. Okay. Miracle-readiness is the abandoning of that, even momentarily. That's why sudden shifts of consciousness or of perception occur. They occur many times because in a moment you were momentarily distracted from your commitments. You were for a moment inattentive to the reinforcement of your beliefs. And in that little moment, there was a chink in your armor, in your defense, and it could get through. That's why I said you don't have to practice faith-full-ness. All you have to do is for a moment stop practice faith-less-ness.

That doesn't mean that the act of faithfulness that you described is not meaningful. But it must be understood that it's not essential to the experience of the miracle. What the one thing that is essential is the momentary abandonment of the practice of faithlessness. That is essential. Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Can I say one thing about miracle-readiness?

RAJ: Sure.

SEEKER: Well, you talked about when we first started about how being still and listening and then the experience of fellowship with you and my Guide, Father, that experience, to me, seemed to be a miracle. And that's when I felt the faith. That's when I have glimpses of how I really am. That's when I'm curious. That's what prepares me, I think, for miracle-readiness more than anything else is stopping, being still, listening.

RAJ: Indeed. Indeed that's another way of describing exactly what we have been speaking about.

EARLIER SEEKER: It's seems to me that the abandoning of faithlessness and the act of faith-full-ness are in essence the same thing. Because you only abandon your faithlessness to what? Trust or desperation. Desperation, I guess, being hitting the bottom of the barrel, and from then on, I would imagine, climbing out of the barrel. Or going through the bottom of the barrel is the trust. I guess I see them as the same thing.

RAJ: Well, another way of putting it is that the human condition is the result of trying to climb out of the barrel.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: That's the practicing of faithlessness. To allow oneself to be at the bottom of the barrel is the abandonment of the practice of faithlessness.

SEEKER: And redefining the bottom of the barrel.

RAJ: Well, but be careful that you are not providing the new definition.

SEEKER: Or allowing God to redefine.

RAJ: Exactly. Which happens spontaneously when you abandon attempting to get out of the barrel. Yes. So indeed the faith-full-ness isn't a form of confidence in something yet to happen, but is an expression of trust in allowing yourself to be fully present in the bottom of the barrel without any further attempt to get out. And without using the apparent awfulness of being at the bottom of the barrel as a way of pointing to someone else and saying, "See what you have made of me." That is... in other words, you don't use being at the bottom of the barrel for any purpose, else you're still not paying attention. You're busy carrying out some act of will for some self-seeking purpose.

So faithfulness involves allowing yourself to abide with peace in the bottom of the barrel. Abiding in peace at the bottom of the barrel constitutes the relinquishment of self-assertion, or willfulness. In the absence of willfulness, humility is the state of mind. In the state of mind of humility, penetration of the Father's Will can occur, and transformation follows. The miracle occurs.

So I'm describing a fine point. Faithfulness does not mean faithfulness in something, in a goal, or faithfulness in what God will be, or faithfulness in what you have been told the nature of things is. It's a faithfulness in the value of no longer asserting self-will.

SEEKER: I see it as allowing that the Universe has my best interest at heart.

RAJ: This is very good. But, the miracle can occur whether that conscious acknowledgment occurs or not.

SEEKER: And thank God for that.

RAJ: Yes. So I am not contradicting you, but I do want it to be clear that the person who doesn't... to whom it doesn't occur to think that is not lost.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: He doesn't have to know that it's the Nature of the Universe to have his best interest at heart. But in the fighting against being where he is and in the presence of humility, that realization can occur to him, or the experience of the miracle can occur that in itself reveals what you just said.

SEEKER: Yes, and after a few of such experiences you build upon that from just a lack of faithlessness to an overt faith-full-ness.

RAJ: That is correct. That is correct.

SEEKER: The faith works spiral I referred to.

RAJ: And then what happens is that your thresholds, you move over your thresholds, or through the bottoms of your barrels, more gracefully.

SEEKER: Yes. Thanks.

RAJ: You are welcome.

Okay. Number 44.

READER: [Miracle Principle #44] The miracle is an expression of an inner awareness of Christ and the acceptance of His Atonement.

RAJ: Now the question is does one have to have an inner awareness of Christ before he can experience the miracle? The answer is no.

But there is one essential thing. Whether one even knows of the existence of the Christ or not, if one is at the bottom of his barrel and gives up the attempt to get out of the barrel, and in the experience of his discomfort reaches out to the unknown, whether he calls it God, or whether he just reaches out to a generalized point that in his mind he feels must have been responsible for the Creation of the Universe, the fact that he reaches outside of any supposed capacity he thinks he has to solve the problem does express an awareness of something to reach out to that's bigger than him. And that is enough to do the trick. And when the experience comes of healing and regeneration and insight that allows his life to turn around, whether he yet knows that it's the Christ that was responsible, and whether he yet knows that his improved sense of himself is an improved awareness of himself as the Christ, whether he's aware of this or not, he's aware perhaps wordlessly and without concepts of an essential Divinity to everything that he was unaware of before.

Now the fact is that one domino had to fall before other dominoes could fall. And it is because I, while we'll say incarnated, while in the same experience you are in, chose consciously not to embellish the Presence of God that my Being is by adding to it a lot of personality and adding to it a willingness to join in mutually-agreed-upon definitions. In my unwillingness, let's put it this way, in my unwillingness to pretend that there was more present where I was, was being, while in the same experience that every one of you are in, that constituted the toppling of the first domino. And therefore, any other dominoes that fall—do not take this wrong—have me to thank. In other words, someone started the ball rolling, someone started the dominoes falling.

And so the experience of the domino, that they are, falling is a demonstration of my connection with him, or her. And it's also a demonstration of the Atonement, whether that individual has any words or concepts of the sort that we're talking about right now.

What you've got to understand is that we're not learning about A Course in Miracles. What if you went somewhere in the Amazon where there were a tribe of Indians who you couldn't communicate with at all because you didn't know their language, are you at a loss to be the Christ? Are you at a loss to be the presence that triggers illumination?

Again though, let's say you go there and you do know the language and they know nothing of the principles of the Course, is it necessary for you to, first of all, teach them Christianity so that they might understand what the words in the Course are relating to, or referring to, before you can start teaching the words of the Course? And is that what it's about? No.

What this is about, what we're reading here is about learning to become miracle-ready, we'll say. Which means learning with the least amount of folderol and language and concepts to accept a basic premise that you didn't create yourself and Something did, and that you can't be responsible for yourself and Something is. And to cause you to have enough curiosity to devalue what you think and believe and are committed to enough to be curious to know if there's another point of view which you desire to know of from Whatever This Is that is responsible for you so that you might stand at the threshold of the unknown and begin to have a natural relationship with God.

And if you are doing that, then you can relate wordlessly with your Brother, or you can relate without the necessity of, let's say, creating new mutually-agreed-upon definitions of what this book means before they can wake up or be blessed by an immediate and intimate Experience of God themselves, whatever that means to them. You see? Okay.

Let's continue.

READER: [Miracle Principle #45] A miracle is never lost. It may touch many people you have not even met, and produce undreamed of changes in situations of which you are not even aware.

RAJ: Yes. This really doesn't need to be discussed. It simply says the Truth. That is a simple fact. I will say one thing. Even if you experience the miracle and three weeks later you have re-entrenched yourselves in the position you took before the miracle happened, the benefit to everyone is not undone. The realization which you may have covered up once again nevertheless blessed everyone because minds are joined.

Okay.

READER: [Miracle Principle #46] The Holy Spirit is the highest communication medium. Miracles do not involve this type of communication, because they are temporary communication devices. When you return to your original form of communication with God by direct revelation, the need for miracles is over.

RAJ: Miracles are shifts of perception which I introduce when you [are] defenseless. Well, I very often introduce them when you are defensive, but when you are defensive they cannot penetrate. The introduction of miracles is forever constant, I will put it that way, but they promote shifts of consciousness.... How shall I put it? They promote shifts of consciousness that are not greater than you can bear, that are not greater than you can stand in receipt of without having to change so radically that you wouldn't recognize yourself anymore. They are not meant to wake you up in one great miracle act. They honor you where you are by stretching you as much as you can bear to be stretched until you can bear to be stretched more. That is all I will say at the moment about this.

Yes, you may.

EARLIER SEEKER: It says that the Holy Spirit is the highest communication device and the miracle...

RAJ: Medium.

SEEKER: Medium rather. And miracles are temporary forms. Does that mean that when we're in the revelatory experience that it talks about in the last sentence that that is the Holy Spirit working with us constantly? Do you see where I... what I mean? There's a little confusion there for me.

RAJ: Revelation comes directly from God.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Not...

SEEKER: So it says, "The Holy Spirit is the highest communication medium. Miracles do not involve this type of communication." So apparently there's three different communications that we're talking about here. The miracle, direct communication from God which is direct revelation, and then there's another highest communication medium. See, so there's a confusion there. If... so God by direct revelation seems to me would be a higher form of communication than the Holy Spirit's highest communication medium. Do you see what I'm getting at?

RAJ: Yes, I do.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: And you must remember that I have said the Holy Spirit is your very own Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego.

SEEKER: Oh. Okay.

RAJ: The communication of the Holy Spirit is the conveyance to you of the remembrance of Who You Are. The miracle promotes shifts of perception that reveal to you the Nature of Being and promote your defenseless involvement with your Brothers and Sisters so that you as the Expression of Love might find the willingness to abandon your stance as a defense mechanism against a hostile world and brothers who are out to get everything they can from you at your expense. As you make this shift from a defense mechanism to one [who] is willing to look with innocent eyes, and therefore be Love embodied, you become defenseless against the remembrance of Who You Are. And in that defenselessness, Who You Divinely Are, in other words, the Holy Spirit, can introduce the deep remembrance of Who You Are so that that becomes embodied, re-embodied as your Identity.

SEEKER: Fully remembered.

RAJ: No. It is gradual. But the more defenseless you become, the less of a defense mechanism you enact in your experience, the more innocent you become, the softer you become, the more receptive you become. And you could say that this provides an ambiance in your Being that allows the Holy Spirit to illuminate to you What You Divinely Are in a manner that you can reincorporate and own as you. And so less of What You Divinely Are remains disowned. That is the simplest way I can put it at the moment.

SEEKER: Then at some point as this owning/ownership takes place, is there a critical mass or something that's reached? Or is that just a mystery on how that takes place?

RAJ: Yes, that's a good way of putting it. There is a point at which the rest of the journey is precipitated suddenly, but that comes as you have repeated experience of miracles that cause there to be a little greater confidence in the fact that the Universe is intent upon blessing you so that you move over your thresholds more gracefully.

SEEKER: Can you reveal to us if many of us in this generation or in this time are due to make this shift while still in body? Or do we all have to kick? [small laugh]

RAJ: I certainly hope so. I have the greatest confidence. And I am being facetious here. The fact is the answer to your question is yes.

SEEKER: And this is like the first time in history that this is going to take place, because I remember you saying before that it's so much easier...

RAJ: Well, let's put it this way. It's the only time in history it's going to happen.

EARLIER SEEKER: Is he being ser-... No, not you, him.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: No, I'm curious.

EARLIER SEEKER AGAIN: I mean it reminded me of when you said that to Mark like you already knew it.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: Well, actually, you know it's almost like there's an egoic thing about oh yeah, we're gonna do it. This is the generation. And that's the thing I was trying to dispel.

EARLIER SEEKER AGAIN: Well, maybe there's some more egoic things there. Maybe there's a stronger urge to believe it's not possible. I'm only guessing here. But it's just like we started out this whole conversation talking about, you know, what was the very beginning thing we were talking about? It relates to this. And now I'm not even sure what that is. [laughing] But it connects. I can feel it. [laughing] I can feel it. My mind went blank; that's what happened. But it was what we've.... Yeah.

RAJ: The simple fact is that there is a precipitous movement already happening. Just don't become preoccupied with it, because what will cause the precipitousness of it to accelerate is the actual practice of attentiveness that each of you brings into play today.

And you know what? Don't any of you waste your time being attentive so that you can bring about the end of the illusion for all mankind, because then you will be busy on your commitment to your project. And the only thing that will do it is going to be a curiosity to know What God Is Being right where this petal on the rose is, right where the rose is, right where your Sister is next to you, right where your Brother is next to you, and abandoning your old habitual ways of dealing with each other in the here and now. You're going to have to do the work. You see what I'm saying?

You're going to have care enough to look with fresh eyes at everybody so that you are miracle-ready. Why? So that the end of the illusion can come for all of mankind? No. So that you might remember your Divine Function. So that you might no longer suffer from insanity. So that you might find every conscious moment a moment of joy and bliss, because you deserve nothing less. And you will have nothing less when you stop presenting more than What God Is Being right where you are.

EARLIER SEEKER AGAIN: So being faithless would be to look at your Brother and believe what he's thinking about himself.

RAJ: Yes. Or believing what you are thinking about him.

EARLIER SEEKER AGAIN: Yes. Either way. Because I was just thinking how we break the habit. And that's what you mean by doing the work.

RAJ: That's what I mean. And persisting no matter how much they might resist. And persisting no matter how hard it seems to you for you to overcome your commitment to seeing him as less than What God Is Being.

You would be amazed at how many people are upset because I said that Hitler is awake. "Well, he can't possibly have paid enough. He cannot possibly have suffered enough to atone for the awfulness of what he did."

And each of you have people in your experience that you look at and say, "I will not be their friend because they did me dirt. And until I feel that they have paid enough for it, I refuse to love them." In other words, I refuse to fulfill my Function as the Presence of Love. And in that act separate yourself from your full experience of your Divinity and your inseparableness from God and your capacity to be awake. So all of you still hold someone responsible for something and you are demanding justice. And until justice is gotten, you will refuse to be the Divine One That You Are and fulfill your Function as Love. You will refuse to hang in with them insisting upon being willing to have the Father infuse you with the inspiration it takes to find your capacity to love them renewed, which would bless them and which would bless you, because you're no longer standing on your jugular vein, if I may put it this way, through which your capacity to be the Son or Daughter of God flows. You get it?

ANOTHER EARLIER SEEKER: So in feeling this infusing though, like it kind of feels out of control. Like I feel like it's just going to render me ridiculous or something. I mean there's a like a membrane that I feel like I'm... that I come up against in feeling like a great love. And I just feel like if I just let it go I'll just like... it's not like...

RAJ: You're much better to keep it under control. Um hmm.

SEEKER: [laughing] I know. I know it sounds so stupid. But it's like I'm afraid.

RAJ: I understand.

SEEKER: Yeah. You know there's just a fear...

RAJ: I'm not minimizing it.

SEEKER: No, it's okay.

RAJ: That's why the shift of perception, even the sudden shift of perception, doesn't take you further than you can bear. You are all conditioned to believe that control is needed or chaos will result. But what you don't understand is that the state you're in when you are keeping everything under control is what is called the human condition that you're all suffering from. You're all... you're in the chaos.

So what happens is that little punctures in the wall of the membrane that all of this Love is behind occur so that you can be bathed in little bits of it that don't overwhelm you and that convey to you experientially that the experience of this Love flowing is safe, is nurturing to you, is stabilizing to you, and actually ends up blessing everyone, so that you relax a little bit more, and more punctures can occur.

But I promise you one thing. We can't override your will. We can encourage you to lessen the intensity with which you exercise it. You will never be overwhelmed with your Divinity. But, it's absolutely essential that someone encourage you firmly and consistently and repetitively to dare to entrust yourself to the Love that's behind the membrane. Else you would go on indefinitely keeping yourself protected against it, and therefore against your Conscious Experience of your Wholeness and the Harmony and the Beauty and the Bliss of the Totality of Being, of All of Creation.

When that uncontrollable, humungous Presence of Love... it may come out in a gush, but the stream will slow down once it's not having to move against the pressure of your resistance, and there will be such Order and such Harmony that it will be awesome. Or let's put it this way. It would be awesome if it weren't for the fact that in the experience of it, you'll say, "Ah. Yeah. This is me. This is who I've always been. I'm at Home. I'm not at odds with myself anymore. I'm not at odds with my world anymore. Everywhere I look I see me. Everywhere I look I see my Wholeness. My Brothers and my Sisters and all of God's Creation really is some part of me. It's the Infinitude of the Totality of What I Am because I am the Totality of What God Is, because in God expressing Himself He held nothing back. And so All Of What God Is is What I Am."

Well, it really isn't chaos that you're afraid of. It is really the fear of the loss of control. Because control is what the ego sense of self has used to ensure that its insane frame of mind cannot be violated.

So miracle-mindedness, or miracle-readiness, is a state in which you become curious about and you invite experiences that go beyond the boundaries that your ego has set. As I've said before, it's asking for help. And you can ask for help in the midst of great distress, or you can ask for help in the midst of peace while you're sitting in the garden saying, "God, what is... what must be the incredible beauty and Divine Meaning of this ladybug I see crawling on the rosebush? What is it? What is the more that has to be infinitely more than I'm perceiving about this ladybug?"

Okay.

You might think we're never going to get through these fifty miracles principles. [audience laughter] But we are going to call it a night for tonight. And we will continue next week, 48, 49, 50, and we'll see whether we can finish those up in one evening.

I love you.

EARLIER SEEKER: Thank you for tonight.

RAJ: Okay.

*A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 1 – THE MEANING OF MIRACLES
Section – PRINCIPLES OF MIRACLES (Principle 47)
And Section – REVELATION, TIME AND MIRACLES
First Edition – p. 4 / Second Edition – p. 6*

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: For the sake of those who are not familiar with the Course, I would ask someone who has been coming on Wednesday evenings if they would share the meaning of the word “miracles” as the Course uses it, because it is a rather specific use of the word. Is there anyone who would like to...

Okay.

SEEKER: A miracle is a shift in consciousness, a shift in the way you look at things.

RAJ: A sudden shift. Yes. It is a shift of awareness that happens, you might say, spontaneously. It happens when you are, I’m going to say, mentally undefended. It happens in moments when you are not sure of what anything means, or you are not confident and you have let yourself into a neutral space. And when that happens, the penetration of clarity can occur and will occur, because that’s the nature of the way your mind works.

It is not your Birthright to be, I’m going to say, solidified into a clear-cut unequivocal definition of the meaning of life, or the meaning of anything in your experience, in terms that you have provided, because then you are bound to the definitions you have given. And the fact that everything you are experiencing is the Presence of God constantly in the Act of Creation, escapes your attention to the degree that you are absolutely confident that you know what everything means.

When there is a moment where your consciousness is free of your constant reinforcement of your definitions, the penetration of the Conscious Experience of the Movement of Creation that God Is Being has the opportunity to occur. When that happens, that is what the Course refers to as a miracle. When this sudden shift of perception occurs, you see everything differently. And there are two characteristics to it, to the experience.

One is that you experience in one form or another the Divinity, the fact that there is a Divinity to whatever is occupying your attention, whether it is your fellowman, or an animal, or nature, or the universe, so that whatever lesser definitions you were holding about your fellowman, or whatever your attention is on, is suddenly replaced by a clarity about it that you didn't have before.

The second thing, the second characteristic of this experience is that it becomes obvious to you that the Divinity of this person or thing is directly derived from God, and that therefore your experience of this thing is some aspect of the Experience of God.

Now you know, this sudden shift of perception may be very subtle. It may be you working with a client and suddenly experiencing a complete shift of awareness relative to this one that allows you to open up your mouth and say something utterly appropriate that isn't the least bit shocking, or other worldly, that touches this other one and promotes a shift in them, a release of something they had been binding themselves with.

Sometimes the experience is more, you might say, dramatic. But the word "miracle" as it's being used here is not to be construed to mean something, I'm going to say, something more special than being able to relate with your world with more gentleness, with more kindness, with more thoughtfulness, with more compassion, with more love. So let miracles be that simple, even though you are likely to find that in that simplicity, it will have a ripple out effect that far exceeds the current simplicity that you were expressing.

Okay. Let us continue from where we left off which was with Miracle Principal 47.

READER: [Miracle Principle #47] The miracle is a learning device that lessens the need for time. It establishes an out-of-pattern time interval not under the usual laws of time. In this sense it is timeless.

RAJ: Now we're not going to make anything out of the ordinary here relative to the term "out-of-pattern time interval." I will simply say that when a choice was made to give things definitions, meanings, that God is not intending in His Manifestation of those things, you move into an intellectual function of the mind that can only be experienced in a linear fashion. And anything that happens in a linear fashion involves the experience that you call time.

And it's sort of like being on a road that winds its way through the mountains that is relatively level where you can't see what's around the next bend. And so you must wait until you get around the bend to see what's there, and that takes time. But, if you had the means of moving vertically, you could see around the next bend. You could see in the distance. And in the larger grasp, you would know what it would have taken a long time to know by progressing on the road.

An “out-of-pattern time interval” means that you simply step out of, or lift above, the linear track. In that raised or elevated position you may be able to see, that where you thought going in this direction would get you where you were wanting to go, it in fact will not, that you actually need to go east. And so the perspective that you are experiencing will save you time, time to learn what moving in a linear fashion would require time to learn.

Now, another way I'll put it is this. When you're absolutely sure of something, when you're absolutely sure that things are not going well, that everything is going down the tubes, and when your absolutely sure that circumstances are such that there's no alternative to this track that things are on, you lock yourselves in to not seeing it any other way.

But, if you are willing to consciously stop and become still with a curiosity to see things differently, to see a way that you can't see at the moment, when you are willing even momentarily to consciously abandon your confidence in how terminal your experience is going to be, then there is a space into which clarity can penetrate. And that clarity, for lack of better words, moves you ahead [snap of the fingers] instantly into the realization of what to do to have a different experience without your having to go through a linear thinking process of reasoning to arrive at a different way of looking at it. And so [snap of the fingers] there is an instantaneous clarity that didn't take time. You stepped out of the time sense which is inherent in thinking processes.

That's it in a nutshell.

Let's continue on.

READER: [Miracle Principle #48] The miracle is the only device at your immediate disposal for controlling time. Only revelation transcends it, having nothing to do with time at all.

RAJ: It's an interesting choice of words, “controlling time.” The only thing it really allows you to control is the apparent inevitability of having to take time to learn. Because it literally puts you out of time, it controls time in the respect that it causes time to stop controlling you.

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: May I ask a question?

RAJ: You may.

SEEKER: Could you... what's the difference between miracle and revelation?

RAJ: Ah. That's coming soon. [audience laughter]

SEEKER: Okay.

READER: [Miracle Principle #49] The miracle makes no distinction among degrees of misperception. It is a device for perception-correction, effective quite apart from either the degree or the direction of the error. This is its true indiscriminateness.

RAJ: Yes. A misperception is a misperception. It's the consequences of a misperception that seem to be consequential, big or little. But a misperception is just a misperception. And there is not a big misperception and a little misperception, any more than the life expressed in a gnat is any less life than the life expressed in an elephant. You see what I'm saying? There are not degrees of life. It is whole. It is fully life, whether it's a flea or an elephant that you're talking about.

A misperception is simply a misperception, and a miracle is simply a correction of it. Because misperceptions have no degrees of size, we will say, then it doesn't take a bigger miracle to correct one misperception than it takes to correct another. And this is very important. It's important to understand, because if you understand it, you will realize how beneficial it is to do nothing more than to stop in your tracks when you're dead sure that everything is going wrong and you'd better brace yourself for it, and express a little bit of, I'm going to say, innocent curiosity. And by that I mean curiosity that isn't colored by your confidence that everything is actually going to collapse.

With that little bit of willingness, it allows the little bit of clarity [snap of the fingers] that spontaneously corrects the misperception which has no size. You see? So the problem, or truly the consequences to the problem you perceive are not any more difficult to correct by insider clarification than another which you would deem to be a little problem. So it's very important to understand this because it will give you a sense of the ease with which the problem can be solved. Because the solving of the problem will come with the correction of a misperception and corrections of misperception are utterly simple.

Okay, let's continue. I know many of you thought we would never get to Miracle Principle Number 50, but we have.

READER: [Miracle Principle #50] The miracle compares what you have made with creation, accepting what is in accord with it as true, and rejecting what is out of accord as false.

RAJ: For those of you who aren't familiar with the language, or the use of language, in the Course, this says:

RAJ READING: The miracle compares what you have made...

RAJ: What you have made, meaning the definitions that you have given to everything that you're absolutely sure of and which you would stake your life on, as opposed to What It Is Actually as God Is Being It right now, which is Creation. So it compares what you, we will say, what you have made-up in your own mind, it compares what you have made-up with What Creation Actually Is, accepting what is in accord with it as True. Because you don't misperceive everything totally, and so some of what you experience is a true apprehension of What It Really Is. So it compares this [snap of the fingers] sudden shift of awareness, compares what is in accord with Creation as True and rejecting what is out of accord as false. And mind you this happens within you as an experience, not really as an intellectual process.

You experience a new way of looking at it in which you just suddenly see that the way you had been interpreting it was false, and because it's obviously false to you at an experiential level within you, you discard it, because it's obviously not useful to you anymore. So you see, you can instantaneously experience... you can have an instantaneous experience that suddenly puts you in a new place without there having been any process to it. And that's the nature of a miracle.

Now once again I will share with you that a shift of perception always has an effect. Not just on the way you're looking at things, but it has an effect on the way you behave in the world. It has an effect on the way you behave toward your Brother. And whether you put into words the clarification that has happened in you, that clarification, that truer perception of your Brother, or of your world, is felt. And it truly instigates, or gives impetus to, change from your world. Some of the changes might be termed "miraculous," like an instantaneous healing of a disease, or an instantaneous harmonizing of a relationship without having to go through psychological processes called therapy.

There may be effects which others would call miraculous, but those aren't the miracle. The miracle is you having allowed, one way or another, a moment of defenselessness within yourself, a moment where you weren't reinforcing your confidences in your definitions about everything, so that there was a space where What's Really Going On could register with you. That's the meaning of the word "miracle" as it's used in the Course. That is the miracle.

And that is utterly simple, isn't it? You don't have to go to college and get a degree to arrive at this. You don't have to effort at all. In fact, the miracle happens in the absence of personal effort. It happens in... it happens in a moment of humility. It happens in a moment of peace. It happens in a moment of effortlessness. It happens in a moment when you are not putting effort forth. That's how simple it. And I say this so that you might recognize the extreme value of moments in which you have abandoned willfulness.

Before we leave this list of the Miracle Principles, does anyone have any comments or questions, besides Michael? [audience laughter]

Michael.

SEEKER: I was listening to a September 15th CD of these meetings, and there was one of the numbered articles here that talked about confusion of levels of perception. No. Confusion of levels, it talked about. And you said that there was no reason to go into that at that time. And the interesting thing about it was that in order to... say for instance, we live in the third dimension, and...

RAJ: Continue.

SEEKER: Okay. We're living in a three dimensional frame of reference, and there's over top of this there's a fourth dimensional frame of reference. And so I got the impression what when it talked about a confusion of levels, is that we're mistaking a fourth dimensional experience for a three dimensional experience, and vice versa. And so, I don't know which article it was, but this... I have... my question is about this confusion of levels. And if you could at this time explain to us what it meant by confusion of levels.

RAJ: Well, it still is not time to discuss it.

SEEKER: But you'll let me know when it's time...

RAJ: But don't worry. We will discuss it.

SEEKER: ...so I can be here?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Okay. Thank you.

RAJ: I will tell you that you're not far off track but we simply won't go into it further at this time.

Any other...

ANOTHER SEEKER: You wanted me to have the microphone? [couldn't hear voice replying in the audience] Okay. Where are we? Okay.

READER: Revelation, Time and Miracles

RAJ: Section II.

SEEKER: Section II. And do I start at revelation?

RAJ: Indeed. Yes.

SEEKER: Okay.

READER: Revelation induces complete but temporary suspension of doubt and fear. It reflects the original form of communication between God and His creations, involving the extremely personal sense of creation sometimes sought in physical relationships. Physical closeness cannot achieve it. Miracles, however, are genuinely interpersonal, and result in true closeness to others. Revelation unites you directly with God.

RAJ: I'm going to interrupt you here.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: You asked, Michael, what the difference was between miracles and revelation. Revelation unites you directly with God, and miracles unite you directly with your Brother. And I would add that they connect you directly with your world as well, because miracles are the experience you have of being relieved of a misperception of your Brother that causes you to behave toward him in a way that is inconsistent with the behavior you would have toward a Son or Daughter of God. A miracle causes you, as I said earlier, to recognize the Divinity of your Brother. In other words, he's not the bastard you thought he was, or he's not the one who cheated you out of something. You see him, you experience in an undeniable fashion his Divinity. And as I've also pointed out, when that clarity is uncovered in your mind, there is a simultaneous clarity that this is true of you as well, and you see your Innocence and you see your Divinity.

Now, you suddenly find yourself considering this person defenselessly. And when you are relating to someone defenselessly, you are experiencing the true meaning of intimacy. This is very important. It's the same with God. Revelations connect you with God, because you are not defended against the Experience of God. You are in a state of humility in order to have the experience, to have revelation. And, it is, for lack of better words, a very intimate experience, absolutely intimate, because there's nothing separating you. You are holding no definitions. You're holding no personal right to have your own take on everything. And in the absence of the dissonance that having a different point of view introduces, you find yourself inseparably one with God, even though you find yourself yielding to and cooperating with Him.

And that's the kind of intimacy that everyone does look for in their relationship with their fellow man or fellow woman. They look for that undefended intimacy that occurs when each of them yield to each other. See? Most everyone literally gets screwed up when they try to either get or give something to another in the expression of intimate lovemaking, when what they're after is to be found in yielding to each other. Another very important point. And in truly yielding to each other, instead of trying to give or get, it is a taste of Heaven, because it is a taste of Reality, and it can be a threshold, or the threshold of a miracle.

And that's all I'll say about that at the moment.

Continue:

SEEKER: So let's see. We said:

READER: Revelation unites you directly with God. Miracles unite you directly with your brother. Neither emanates from consciousness, but both are experienced there.

RAJ: Let's stop there.

In the New Age there is so much thought given and expression given to the idea that you create your world, that your consciousness is creative, and so on. Well let's be very clear. Your consciousness... your consciousness only seems to have the capacity to create a misperception of Reality. But it doesn't have the capacity to actually create anything. It can only create confusion by allowing you to come to a conclusion that is not true, and then allowing you to believe your untrue conclusion. Consciousness is not unreal, it just isn't the seat of creativity. It is like a field of awareness in which revelation is experienced, and where miracles are experienced as long as they are needed.

Continue.

READER: Consciousness is the state that induces action, though it does not inspire it.

RAJ: And I want you to stop there because this is very important. You will find as we continue through the Course that there is a sentence that everyone loves to use and doesn't have the slightest understanding of. And the statement is, "You need do nothing." Consciousness is the state that induces what? Action! It's a small word in this sentence, and it isn't said in a way that gives it emphasis, but I want to take the opportunity here to point out that action is a necessary and appropriate and Divine element of Being.

And you know what? When you experience revelation or a miracle in which you see your Brother or your world more truly as it is in its Divine aspect, what did I say happens? Your behavior toward your world, or your Brother, changes. The way you act changes. It inspires new action.

Continue.

No, let her finish the next sentence.

READER: You are free to believe what you choose, and what you do attests to what you believe.

RAJ: There you go. You are free to believe what you choose. What you choose. And if you choose to create definitions that are at odds with the Meaning God is giving everything, then that is what you will believe and what you do will carry out your belief. So you're free to believe what you choose. You're also free to believe what you haven't chosen. In other words, you are free to believe what is revealed to you when you have dared to be inquisitive to know of God, "What is the Truth here? What is really going on here? Who is this Brother that, at the moment, I can't help but define as a real pain in the ass?" You see?

And then if you believe what is revealed to you, what you do will attest to that. So either you're going to act on the basis of what you have made, what you have made-up, about what the world is, or you will do what attests to your willing allegiance to the Truth that has been revealed to you, because you were curious enough to look beyond your best definitions.

Okay. Yes, Michael.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: Previously we talked about involvement, and I was curious as to how involvement fits in here. Do miracles... is involvement the field in which miracles take place, or do miracles induce involvement with your Brother or Sister, or are both true, are both possibilities?

RAJ: Please ask the question again.

SEEKER: Okay. We had previously talked about involvement and how it's necessary and important to become involved with one another. And I was curious. You had mentioned consciousness as a field where action takes place. And I was curious is... in other words, when we become involved with others, you know, through saying, "I want to be involved with others," does that set the field where miracles can take place? Or do miracles induce spontaneous desire to become involved? Or are both possibilities?

RAJ: Both are possibilities. Miracles, the shift of perception that causes you to see your Brother differently, causes you to be willing to be involved because you see their True Nature. And their True Nature is one of Innocence and Lovableness and Beauty and Integrity, and so on. And when you see that, you are attracted toward it and you can't help but be involved.

On the other hand, if you haven't had that insight and you nevertheless desire to be involved with your Brother, the involvement... well I am going to put it this way. The involvement will uncover whatever subtle resistances you have to being in relationship with them. It will cover up your idiosyncratic concepts about what a relationship ought to be, for example. And your partner's unwillingness to fit into the definitions you have, will uncover a call for a new point of view. And either you will become curious as to What The Truth Is here in this relationship, in spite of the fact that it's not matching up with your definition of what a relationship ought to be. That will set the stage for [snap of fingers] the miracle to occur, the sudden shift of perception to occur. And then, of course, once that occurs involvement shifts onto a new basis. You understand?

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Okay.

READER: Revelation is intensely personal and cannot be meaningfully translated.

RAJ: And I am going to interrupt you.

Usually the word “personal” refers to one's ego, one's personality. Revelation is intensely personal. It would be better understood as intensely intimate. You might even say intensely private.

Continue.

READER: That is why any attempt to describe it in words is impossible. Revelation induces only experience. Miracles, on the other hand, induce action. They are more useful now because of their interpersonal nature. In this phase of learning, working miracles is important because freedom from fear cannot be thrust upon you. Revelation is literally unspeakable because it is an experience of unspeakable love.

RAJ: That last sentence is absolutely true, and cannot be explained.

Working miracles is important because freedom from fear cannot be thrust upon you. You cling to fear. You cling to fear whether you've thought about it or not, because you believe that fear keeps you safe from the devil. You believe that fear keeps you safe from your enemy. You believe that fear keeps you from taking a wrong step. You believe that fear is an essential part of your makeup. And you feel that if you did not have fear, you would behave foolishly and in all likelihood would end up being irresponsible.

You don't realize how much you value fear. You say, "I don't want to be afraid," but you would not leave your house without having it in your hip pocket. Because fear is what will keep you alert at the intersection. Fear is what will keep your eyes on the alert for someone driving carelessly. Fear is what will cause you to be sensible when you have a deadline to meet and you might be inclined to drive too fast. You value fear so incredibly that if you were to take a look at it, you would be shocked.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj.

RAJ: Just a moment.

So the release of fear cannot be thrust upon you. You must set it aside. You must dare to choose for your peace. And I encourage you always to do this kind of experiment when you are not under the gun, when you're not in a situation that does engender great fear, so that you might find that in your peace and in the absence of fear, you are more able to be intelligent, you are more capable of embracing a perspective that allows you to be utterly appropriate.

It is in the practice of setting fear aside and choosing for your peace that you begin to have experiences that prove to you that the practice and embodiment of fear is a total waste of time. But it is a waste of time that utterly blocks you from the simple expression and embodiment of intelligence that it is your Birthright to be experiencing, to be experiencing because it's your very Nature.

Continue.

SEEKER: Raj.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Is there such a thing as of value to be found in fear, fear reactions, to just simple everyday living? Is there something in that that can teach us?

RAJ: Was there something that?

SEEKER: Something in our reactions. Something about our fearful reactions that we experience that may have a value in... may have a teaching value for us?

[perhaps Raj was shaking his head “No” here] There’s no value at all.
[laughing]

RAJ: It can only have one value. And that is ultimately to teach you that to practice and embody fear, blocks you absolutely from hearing God, blocks you absolutely from the experience of a miracle. That it is the exact opposite of what we were discussing last week about miracle-readiness.

Fear is a willful act. You think fear comes upon you. But you have determined what are fearful conditions before the occasion for fear arises. And when the definition of that which is fearful occurs, you then spontaneously and willfully bring fear into play. And when you’re being willful, there is no humility. There is no form of willfulness that has any effect other than covering up and hiding from you your humility and the blessing that your humility brings you.

SEEKER: I can say that I’m familiar with that experience

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And I don’t like it. I simply do not like it. And it’s... I’ve grown weary of it. I don’t want it around my psyche, my surroundings, myself at all.

RAJ: Well just think about it. The experience of fear is debilitating. It’s enervating. It will reduce you to you a heap, incapable of any form of action, intelligent or otherwise. And it is never reasonable. It may be reasonable according to the criteria you created about what is fearful. But ultimately it is not reasonable. And that is the reason that fear cannot be dealt with through reason.

If you are afraid of flying, people can talk ‘til they’re blue in the face explaining to you and reasoning why you don’t need to be afraid. But fear is unreasonable. And there is only one solution to it. You have to be willing to be abandon it. Now, you say, “Well, how can I abandon something I’m not creating? Fear comes upon me the closer I get to the plane.” And when you’re sitting in your seat gripping the arm rails, there’s no way you can be convinced that you are practicing and embodying fear. But, if someone points out to you right there while you’re sitting with white knuckles holding the arms of your seat in that plane that there’s something that you might be able to do to help reduce the fear, see, without trying to invalidate the fear, present an option.

That option being to meditate, to find some way to become still, to give your attention in a direction other than the fear that seems to be consuming you. And if you can find a little willingness to dishonor the fear enough to try to become still, and you persist, because you don't want to be consumed by fear, and it's not your Birthright to be consumed by fear. And ultimately you know that the fear will deprive you of the freedom of flying, or of anything, and you choose, through whatever form of meditation, to become still, you will find the fear fading. And when the fear fades, you will see that it wasn't... it wasn't for your safety that you were experiencing it, that it did not have a valuable message for you, and that it wasn't utterly real as you had believed it to be. Because in the willingness to become still within yourself, this seemingly unavoidable real thing faded.

And that's the beginning of the undoing of fear. That's the beginning of the realization that it's what you're choosing to do with your mind that governs whether you're experiencing peace or fear.

Now, Peace, on the other hand, does not debilitate you, does not enervate you, does not reduce you to a heap incapable of any action of any sort. It rather is an experience of balance, and of inner integrity, and stability and security, and an enhanced capacity to act intelligently. It therefore has all the elements of that Which Is Real.

Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Yes, it most certainly does. Thank you very much.

RAJ: You are welcome.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: So the flight or fight response which is said to be a basic biological response is a learned response?

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: Years ago I had a near death experience.

RAJ: Whether it was in the caveman days, if there were actually any caveman days... and now children, newborns do not have a built-in flight or fight response. And when you go to different cultures today, you will find that the flight or flight responses are different because of the conditioning, because of the education. It is absolutely learned.

SEEKER: Years ago I had a near death experience, and where I actually thought that I was going to die, and became curious when all hope was lost, I became curious as to what the transition would be like. And that's where my curiosity became fixed. And then through a simple twist of fate, or so it seemed at the time, I was snatched from the jaws of death. And what I found had happened is because I no longer feared death, or had set my fear of death aside, I became what felt to me like literally fearless. And it was such a feeling of relief, like a weight had been lifted off of me, and everything in my life was joyful and beautiful and I was the happiest I'd ever been. And that lasted for about a week, and then just... it seemed like I drifted back into fear. Could I have done something to preserve that feeling, or was it just like a revelation that just comes and goes as it will?

RAJ: The experience you had was one you had no control over. And at the time you didn't realize the degree to which you are controlled by your conditioned responses, and so life itself presented you with circumstances that brought your conditioned responses back into play.

SEEKER: It was so subtle. I mean it was... why would... I mean I... no way in the world would I ever consciously choose to go back to a fear state. I mean it was such a... life was... was... it's unexplainable. I mean it was just a totally different way of being.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And it gave me the recognition of how everyone is under this tremendous burden of fear. I mean it's crushing. And it's like being in a room with a strong smell, and after a while you don't even know that you're in the room with a strong smell.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And so you don't even know you're being crushed until the weight's lifted off and you go, "Oh my God, how different it is!"

RAJ: Yes. But you had two realizations. One was what you described. How terribly burdened everyone is by fear. But you had another realization too, and that was that there's another experience available. A blissful experience that's available. A grounded blissful experience. And that the fear was illegitimate. That you had been boundless. Now why aren't you holding onto that awareness, rather than the burden that everyone is laboring under?

There's another factor here. You will never forget that experience. You will never forget the feel of it, even though you're not feeling it at the moment. Because you will never forget it, you have forever been changed, and you are not as available to be totally confused about fear again. You will forever be less confused. So you're in a new place and I encourage you to remember the experience frequently. It would be well for you to remind yourself of the experience and pause a moment to experience the memory of the feel of it, because that in itself will contribute to the precipitation of another influx of the experience. Invite it by not denying it. And stop denying it by remembering it.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You're welcome.

Would you pass it to Chris?

CHRIS: Yeah, there's a question from someone online who wanted to ask it, so I'll just go ahead and ask the question here. He says, "My question is about the use of the term "in the end." And he was wondering what was the intention behind "in the end," like "in the end of what", or "as an end to the learning of the lesson at hand"? And so that was from the original dictation of the section that we're reading. He says that it said, "in the end miracles are more useful than revelation," rather than "miracles are more useful now."

RAJ: Another way of putting that is "ultimately," instead of "in the end." Or "for all practical purposes." But there is also an end to the dream. There's an end to the call for miracles. When there is an end on everyone's part to be able to creatively define what the world means without asking God for the Meaning of what it means, then you will come back into your Right Mind. You will awaken. You will have come Home, and there will be no further apparent process of coming back into your Right Mind.

Okay.

READER: Awe should be reserved for revelation, to which it is perfectly and correctly applicable. It is not appropriate for miracles because a state of awe is worshipful, implying that one of a lesser order stands before his Creator.

RAJ: Do you see what this means? Revelation is a Direct Experience of God, and there you are in the Presence of your Creator. And that is where awe is appropriate. And I will tell you that awe is spontaneous. [audience laughter] There is no thought one gives. It... awe is inevitable and spontaneous. Miracles, again, constitute a direct connectedness with your Brother as the Divine One That He Is, and consequently the awareness of the Divine One That You Are. And in that mutual awareness of one's Godness, I'm going to say, or Divinity, it constitutes an intimacy, an undefended closeness with your Brother who is not God. And although the experience is one of pure Love, it is not awesome.

You, when you have the experience for the first time, are likely to describe it as awesome, but I will tell you that you will not be experiencing awe. You will be experiencing Love clearly for the first time, which is an incredible experience, when for God knows how long you haven't been experiencing What Love Truly Is.

Okay, continue.

READER: You are a perfect creation, and should experience awe only in the presence of the Creator of perfection. The miracle is therefore a sign of love among equals. Equals should not be in awe of one another because awe implies inequality.

RAJ: I will tell you this. When the clarity about the Divinity of your Brother dawns in your thought, it's impossible to perceive any sense of inequality between you. That's why it's so easy to be defenseless with this Brother. And this is why your newly found ability to be defenseless with your Brother is transformational to your experience. It is the practice of defense that causes relationships to be tense and to proceed to inevitably deteriorate.

Continue.

READER: It is therefore an inappropriate reaction to me.

RAJ: Ahhh!

RAJ READING: Equals should not be in awe of one another because awe implies inequality. It is therefore an inappropriate reaction to me.

RAJ: Indeed. The me is the Christ.

I'm going to read the next sentence.

RAJ READING: An elder brother is entitled to respect for his greater experience, and obedience for his greater wisdom. He is also entitled to love because he is a brother, and to devotion if he is devote. It is only my devotion that entitles me to yours.

RAJ: I will share again that someone who spoke with me frequently had in her living room on a pedestal a bust of me. And I told her she needed to put a sign on the pedestal that said, "If you have not seen yourself in me, you haven't seen me."

This is so important. Because to whatever degree you make a difference between yourself and me, you distance yourself. You create a wall. You disallow for... well you disallow for yourself to feel my Love for you. Because if you're less than me, you're less worthy than me and you're less worthy of my Love. And by your definition of yourself being somehow different from me, you imprison yourself in a state of lack that isn't true about yourself. And you imprison yourself in a lack of ability to bond with me and to experience my Love for you.

And if you would let yourself experience it for just a moment, you would realize that you have to be, for lack of better words, sinless, and that therefore that must be the Truth about you, in spite of how you've defined yourself. And by allowing this to happen by not insisting upon seeing a differentness about us, you open the door for change within yourself. You open the door for you to experience yourself as the Father Is Being You. To experience yourself as You Truly Are and always have been, even though your self-created definition of yourself has gotten your full allegiance for who knows how long.

So, this is what I would say. “If you are seeing a difference between Me and Thee, cut it out. It’s not true. I am not more special than you, which either means I am as un-special as you see yourself to be, or you are as special as I am. But if you’re as special as I am, then there’s no contrast. And there’s nothing special about either one of us, except that we are simply Brother and Sister, Brother and Brother, Sister and Brother, who are the immediate in the moment Expression of God, which isn’t special either, except that it is an Experience of Being that is unflawed, that has nothing extraneous to it, and therefore is utterly pure, infinitely utterly pure.”

And the experience of purity is awesome. Is awesome. And so the experience is blissful and the experience is available at every single moment and what I keep saying is that the only thing that keeps you from your experiencing it is the really shitty definitions that you’ve given yourself and made complete commitment to. And if you’re willing to let there be just a little chink in your definition, if there’s a willingness to just slightly doubt it, or even if there is the willingness to say, “Well, I am positive about what I believe about myself, but, God, if you can get through my confidence, I would like to hear. I would like to experience from you something about the Truth of me that would begin to dissolve my confidence in my definition.”

All you have to do is be willing to reach out and ask. You may not be willing to hear, right away, but if you continue to ask, the willingness to hear will increase. And it’s just that little willingness that constitutes the little chink in your defense, in your confidence, that lets the experience penetrate.

Okay.

READER: There is nothing about me that you cannot attain. I have nothing that does not come from God.

RAJ: I’m going to interrupt again. The use of the word “attain” there is good, but the reason you can attain it is because you already have it. The reason you can attain it is because no matter how poorly you define yourself, God never stops defining you on His Terms. And therefore what you... what you ultimately will experience as your Self is the Self that is present at this moment but you’re ignoring in favor of the lousy definition you’ve made commitment to about yourself. So you can attain it because you already are it. It already is you. And so, the attainment isn't progressive.

It's not...

PAUL: This is me, Paul. Just a moment. This is me, Paul. Darwin's theory talks about evolution.

RAJ: It's not a process of...

PAUL: This is Raj.

RAJ: It's not a process of evolution where you're going from less to more, or primitive to ultimate. It's why "the journey" (in quotes) has been referred to as "a journey without distance," because what it amounts to is You, the only one You could ever possibly be, which is the Presence of God in Action, having experienced a mild form of insanity, coming back into his or her Right Mind. That's the journey without distance.

And the reason you can come back into your Right Mind is because you have a Right Mind that you abandoned in favor of some peculiar and interesting and stimulating definitions of things that made life somewhat scary for you, and therefore exciting and thrilling, as well as disturbing, because it wasn't as boring as blissful peace.

So, there is nothing about me that you cannot attain because you never lost it. You've just chosen to ignore it. That's important. Otherwise you will creatively envision a great distance that it probably will be impossible for you to surmount in order to attain what I have attained. Well that's crap.

Okay. Continue.

READER: I have nothing that does not come from God. The difference between us now is that I have nothing else.

RAJ: Ahhh. In other words, nothing extraneous, no embellishments. Your egos are all embellishments. Your personality is an embellishment draped around and frilled around the Christ that you are. And it is done with such interesting design and folderol and color and outline, and distracting busy-ness that even you have forgotten that it's a covering, and that it's extraneous and it's added. And the amazing thing is that you don't realize that the added frills are pure nonsense that you're treating as though it were real.

So unlike the Emperor who's strutting his new clothes, who's naked, you are...

PAUL: Just a moment. I'm sorry I lost it. It's me, Paul. I lost it.

RAJ: Well, the point is that you need to arrive at a point of being satisfied with the Essential You without all the frills added. Because the Essential You without the frills is the Ultimate You, the Christ, the immaculate Expression of God. And you must understand that that is What You Are at this very moment in what appears to be this living room, on these pieces of furniture and chairs and sofas, et cetera, and that we're not talking about pie in the sky after you die, as it's been said. And the miracle, the sudden shift of perception that would uncover to you the Christ, the Christs, that are right here is available to you right now. And because misperceptions have no degree of severity to them, or magnitude to them, the correction of the perception that's called for is also little.

And so what we're talking about is utterly easy in this moment. And the call is for you to accept that it's something utterly simple, and let yourself become simple, instead of complex. And yield into it, instead of trying to improve yourself, or refine your soul, or attain something that you are not yet. And as I've said, you don't have to go to college. You can allow yourself to have innocent moments on the freeway, in your bathroom, at your desk at work, while you're changing a diaper. You can allow yourself to be innocent of your confidences and curious to see beyond what you're currently seeing without any process, or ritual, or ceremony. This is an excellent point to stop for the evening.

Thank you.

First Edition – p. 5 / Second Edition – p. 7

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: Last week we didn't quite finish the paragraph. At the end of it, it says:

RAJ READING: There is nothing about me that you cannot attain.

RAJ: And I made it quite clear that it is not a matter of attaining something that you do not now have, or that you are not yet, because you in your Totality are always totally present, whether you're ignoring part of yourself or not. And it's important to understand this so that you or your ego does not project a picture in front of you of a great distance to go full of difficulty before you can attain enlightenment.

Enlightenment isn't knowledge that you will acquire. Enlightenment is you being in your Right Mind. It is you not being unconscious of any aspect of your Infinite Self, an Infinite Self that is present and is what you are experiencing through squinted eyes, and therefore through a partial perception of What You Are at this very moment in your Totality.

RAJ READING: I have nothing that does not come from God.

RAJ: And I would say you who have nothing that does not come God, although you seem to have extra frills that you have added to yourself imaginatively through the use of imagination.

RAJ READING: The difference between us now is that I have nothing else. This leaves me in a state which is only potential in you.

RAJ: And I will say it's potential and actual at the same time. It's only potential in you at the moment because you are conscientiously engaged in interposing definitions of everything which you prefer to What God Is Actually Being there, because you get an ego hit from being apparently and deludedly capable of having a private creation of your own. The hit you get from this very real seeming fantasy that you can create something is what addicts you to your attachment to illusion rather than desiring to know What Is Real. What I want you to know is that the shift from potential to actual is a simple shift facilitated by a curiosity to experience the Reality of everything you're experiencing. So you will hear me harping on the simplicity of awakening, the simplicity of shifting from potential to actual. In a way it's the simplicity of a miracle, which is a sudden shift of perception.

Okay. Let us continue with the next paragraph.

READER: "No man cometh unto the Father but by me" does not mean that I am in any way separate or different from you except in time, and time does not really exist. The statement is more meaningful in terms of a vertical rather than a horizontal axis.

RAJ: Which we discussed last week.

Continue.

READER: You stand below me and I stand below God. In the process of "rising up," I am higher because without me the distance between God and man would be too great for you to encompass. I bridge the distance as an elder brother to you on the one hand, and as a Son of God on the other. My devotion to my brothers has placed me in charge of the Sonship, which I render complete because I share it.

RAJ: I'm going to stop you there.

RAJ READING: ...which I render complete because I share it.

RAJ: Keep in mind that ultimately it is your job to also render it complete by sharing it. In other words, as you let in the clearer experience of Reality, as you let the Father's Love in because you desire to extend it, you, for lack of better words, complete the circuit. The key lies in the willingness to share it. You see?

You will never be in charge of the Sonship, but beginning to have a devotion to your Brothers and sharing it, is like bringing both poles of a battery into play, where there is power, where there is a completed circuit.

Continue.

SEEKER: Okay, I'm a little unclear so for all of us people who are unclear, what's the "it" exactly that you're...?

RAJ: The "it" is my devotion to my Brothers.

SEEKER: So I shared my devotion?

RAJ: Indeed, I extend it.

SEEKER: Not yours.

RAJ: Pardon.

SEEKER: Not yours. Mine. So, like that's something that I think people get really confused. They share your devotion and not theirs.

RAJ: Ah. Ultimately your devotion to your Brothers is expressed by your turning to the Father and asking, "What is appropriate for me to be in this circumstance or this situation? Show me what to do." And the Father shows you what to do and Love finds expression in you that is extended to your Brothers, uncovering your Brothers' innocence, and yours as well. But, as I've said before, you have to have an object of your affection. And that is what your devotion to your Brothers is. It's you having an object of your affection.

SEEKER: Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: You're in charge of the Sonship, is that something like what's described in the Urantia Book in Michael in charge of the Sonship?

RAJ: You could say that. Yes. I am in charge of the Sonship in the sense that it is my Function to facilitate the Sonship coming back into full Conscious Awareness of its Divinity so that no part of the Sonship seems to be separated off from another not experiencing its Unity and inseparability.

SEEKER: I'm appreciating how I'm beginning to experience you being there for us.

RAJ: Then you are beginning to understand your real value to your Brothers. Exactly.

You have an example so that you may, shall I say, reproduce the example. You do not have the example so that you can say, "Wow. I am significantly loved and blessed, and I know that my Brother is significantly loved and blessed by Jesus as well," and then go along your way doing your things without having a conscious, committed, intimate relationship with your Brother where you extend it because you have a devotion to him, or her. You see?

This isn't about everyone realizing how wonderful I am, or how significantly blessed you are because I exist and haven't shirked the opportunity to be devoted to you. That's not what it's about. It's about you having that experience and realizing that indeed this is your Function as well—to be devoted to your Brothers and Sisters, to begin to be involved in a brand-new way, not at the level of manipulation for self-protection, but at a level of relating to your Brother for the sole purpose of mentoring, being a blessing to your Brother or Sister.

If you are Love embodied because that is what the Father is embodying as you, then your Function is to be consciously experiencing being Love. It's an interesting thing, when you let Love, when you let the Father's Love through you so that it illuminates the Truth about your Brother, the illumination that illuminates your Brother casts back on you.

And if you are not devoted to your Brother and you are not extending Love, the darkness that is there is the darkness that is where you are. Once you all get this, you will with diligence and commitment and seriousness and reverence address your Brother consciously in a mentoring fashion. And you will catch yourself and squelch any old habits that attempt to surface that would have you stand in judgment of your Brother, because in doing that, you withdraw the Light from him and from you. What I'm trying to convey here is that you cannot have the Love of God register with you until you have extended it to your Brother. And don't think you can.

You can't have a private blessing. Privacy is the derivation of the human condition which all of you profess to want to escape. And because you have... because you are escaping from privacy, it seems logical to you that you can wake up privately, that waking up is just a new but glorified way of being independent. And it's not true.

Let's continue.

READER: This may appear to contradict the statement "I and my Father are one," but there are two parts to the statement in recognition that the Father is greater.

RAJ: Ah yes, humbling words.

I'm going to put it this way. If you will imagine that you're a puppet hanging from the strings that the Father is holding, you will know exactly where you stand in Reality. But when you let yourself be the puppet of God, the Expression of God, and you're not attempting to introduce any original movements as a puppet without strings, then you will find that your cooperation with the way the Father is moving you amounts to what is called co-creation. When you are yielding to What The Father Is Being right where you are, you are joined with the Father in His Being of you. And His Being of you, be-ing of you, is always relative to every Aspect of the Infinity of Creation, which means that you're yielding to His Being All There Is of you will bring you into a full Conscious Awareness of Creation Infinitely and your absolute inseparability from It—an Experience of Wholeness.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I can see where this could be an area of a lot of confusion, and even resentment, in that the confusion lies in authorship. For example, here I am living my life and I say that I'm following this feeling inside me that I need to go and do this, or accomplish, or whatever it is, a career, or a relationship, or whatever we do, and the confusion about the authorship of that, of saying, “Well, it’s God moving me into it.” And the other area of resentment is we are so... I mean... I’ve heard this statement before, but when I first heard it, oooh. I’m a puppet on string? I mean the very thought is just... how I should I say it, almost as if aliens took my body over, or I’m no longer in control, or.... You see what I mean?

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And I am coalescing to these concepts, but nevertheless when I hear them I still feel that confusion of saying, “How can I be sure who/where the authorship comes from?” And the second thing, of course, is the whole concept of being in control.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: I just wanted to make that statement.

RAJ: Yes. It is exactly the reason I use the illustration of the puppet, because it cuts to the chase. It addresses the specific issue that every one of you needs to look at.

“Our Father who art in Heaven,” you say. And if you go to church you say it every Sunday.

“Hallowed be Thy Name.”

“Thy Kingdom come.” Oh, that’s wonderful isn’t it? The thought of it, “Thy Kingdom come.”

“Thy Will be done in earth as it is in Heaven.” You say that, but you never stop to really think about what it means.

“Thy Will be done, not mine.” Thy Will—if that doesn’t mean being a puppet, what does it mean? If yielding to the Father’s Will is your Function, then what are you but a puppet of the Father?

You don’t mind using the words, “Well, I’m an Expression of God.” But an Expression of God is God expressing Himself. It isn’t something separate from God expressing itself. You see?

SEEKER: And you are a puppet, too?

RAJ: Absolutely. At this moment I am yielding to the Father, Paul is yielding to me, Paul is yielding to the Father.

He doesn’t have the fullness of the experience of it yet, but the more he’s willing to allow this to happen, the sooner there will be a spontaneous remembering of when he wasn't adding frills, when he wasn't trying to do independent movements as a puppet without strings. And as you can see, what causes him to do it is that he cares about you. He has an object of his affection.

Today he had a very, very, strenuous, emotional day—almost overwhelming. But being willing to be devoted to you took higher priority tonight than hitting the sack, or submerging himself in a movie on TV. So, he could have tried to engage in independent movements. He also could have found that upon his willingness to be devoted to you and turning to me, he could have found, and you could have found, that I might have said there will be no meeting tonight because under the circumstances it doesn't fulfill purpose.

You see, when you yield, you don't know what will happen, one way or the other. What you can count on happening here is that when he yields to me, when Paul yields to me, and I am yielding to the Father, everyone will be blessed, because that's the Nature of Love.

Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: In dealing with what you were just talking about, I've often used the construct that by yielding into the Father's Will, what I'm doing is yielding into a larger me, which takes away some of the fear part of that whole issue of yielding into the Father's Will, being the Father's puppet essentially. And my question to you is...

RAJ: But where did that image come from or that concept come from?

SEEKER: It came from knowing that I'm much larger than I allow myself to see.

RAJ: But where did that knowing come from?

SEEKER: Mmm. It came from somewhere inside.

RAJ: Before or after you got in touch with your Guide?

SEEKER: Mmm. It may have been before. I'm not... I can't place the time.

RAJ: The knowing came after. After you consciously let in help. Let in, allow for joining.

SEEKER: Oh, I see what you're saying. Yes. Because I was wrestling with the issue before that and didn't know what to do with it.

RAJ: Before that it would just have been an idea, not a knowing.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: But you feel it. And the feeling comes when someone joins with you who is aware of his bigness, if I may put it that way. Continue.

SEEKER: And I guess my question is am I avoiding, by using that construct, am I avoiding some little step here in terms of yielding fully to the Father. Because it's helpful, it's comforting to think of it in that way. Yet, there's... I'm not seeing how large I am, and so if I yield, then I become larger, and I recognize the comfort and the security of that. But I'm wondering if that isn't at the same time holding back and saying, "Okay, Father, here I am totally naked. I accept I'm your puppet and let's go from there."

RAJ: Well, the larger you is still a puppet.

SEEKER: Mmm. [laughing] [audience laughter] Bingo. [laughing] Okay.

RAJ: You see the Father is greater, and always will be greater.

You are not your source, and never will be. But when you are no longer claiming a sense of self separate from and independent from your Source, then your Source will be your constituting Presence. God will be the Presence, and the only Presence, right where you are.

And it is not possible for you to grasp experientially at this point the fact that you can still be you, and Paul can still be Paul, and you can experience each other distinctly while at the same time experiencing the fact that you are inseparably one. But that is what the fact will be. That is what the experience will be.

Then you might say the two of you will do the dance God is dancing, and you will appear to cooperate with each other, you will appear to move intelligently with each other, you will be with each other in exquisitely beautiful ways, but not because you're expressing any independence from each other at all, or from God.

I know, the ego says, "Well, then you're just going to be some sort of automaton or robot." But you know what? As long as you buy into that and as long as you have the intent of expressing an independent will, thereby "proving" (in quotes) that you have independent existence, you will continue to experience the human condition, which, as I said earlier, you all profess you want to escape.

I have done it and I have not come back to you and said, "I am miserable," and your Guides have not said to you they are miserable. And the way they relate to you, because it blesses you, demonstrates the fact that there is not misery in them, because if there were, it would be reflected and embodied in their guidance, and it would become your experience as well. Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So no person that's awake is asking you any questions. No Guide asks you any questions.

RAJ: No. No. We all together know (k-n-o-w). We all together know that we know. And we rejoice, we joy in the knowing. We joy in the communion of our knowing.

SEEKER: So in the dance no one ever misses a step.

RAJ: That is correct.

Let us continue.

READER: Revelations are indirectly inspired by me because I am close to the Holy Spirit, and alert to the revelation-readiness of my brothers. I can thus bring down to them more than they can draw down to themselves. The Holy Spirit mediates higher to lower communication, keeping the direct channel from God to you open for revelation. Revelation is not reciprocal. It proceeds from God to you, but not from you to God.

RAJ: And it never will. Revelation will never be reciprocal. It will always proceed from God to you. And it will never be from you to God.

You see that's where you goof up when it comes to prayer, because you say here I am, an independent mind, and you stand over somewhere in infinity and you say, "Hey, God, I'm over here. Hey, God, may I have your attention please." The communication doesn't actually work in that direction.

Prayer, as I've said before, is you saying, "Father, what is Your Will?" It isn't saying, "Please give me this. Please make my marriage... please save my marriage. Hey, God, I'm over here. Here's what I need. Here's what I want."

You say, "Father, what do I need?" and then you shut up and listen and be receptive and stop resisting. How do you resist? By saying, "I should be able to figure this out for myself," or "I should be able to determine the manner in which God will answer me." Prayer is saying "Help," listening, being receptive, letting in, so that revelation can occur, and you can more clearly be the Conscious Presence of God being All There Is right there where you are.

When you are awake, revelation, God expressing Himself, God expressing His Will, God being All, will be your Conscious Experience of Being You. Not of you being all, but of you being God consciously being All There Is. Your Conscious Experience of Being will be God's Conscious Experience of Being All. Revelation will not then seem to come to you. It will be your Conscious Experience of Being. Period.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So we stop for a moment to pray, “Father, what is Your Will?” and then we listen.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: If we’ve gone through those steps, is it possible not to hear the response?

RAJ: Only... Yes, it is possible not to hear the response if there is still willfulness present. If you say I want to hear God’s Will so that I can make a killing in the stock market, or so that I can really do my wife a special favor and gain her favor, or so that you can supposedly do something independently with the gift the Father has given you, you will not hear the answer.

SEEKER: It’s just a lot of people seem to be asking and taking the time to listen, but even fewer have a conscious experience of hearing the response.

On Sunday Robbie asked if... why she wasn’t able to hear, or “I can’t hear,” and your reply was “Yes, you do,” which she accepted readily. “Oh, yeah, I guess I do.”

People ask me about that and they say, “Well, I don’t hear God’s Voice.” And I don’t understand how it’s possible not to when you put yourself in that position.

RAJ: First of all, you don’t know what God’s Voice sounds like. And that in itself causes you not to hear It because It’s new. And so that’s why it’s important to persist in asking and listening, because there is always a response. Your Guides are available to you constantly. Your Guides speak to you often. And you don’t hear, first of all, because usually you’re not listening. You’re taking care of everything yourself. But, once you learn that you have Guidance available to you, then you begin to listen as though there is going to be a response.

You’ve got to be willing to abide in the listening mode, so that you can begin to make sense out of that space, so that the characteristics of silence, as opposed to your busyness of thinking, can begin to register with you as something other than just emptiness. The key is persistence. It’s as simple as that.

Understand that every time you ask, you are responded to. Understand that your Guide has ways to find effective means for registering with you. But, understand that beginning to listen is the breaking up of long-standing habit of active independence; an independence which is geared for being sustained by not allowing anything to interfere with it. So don't be surprised if you don't hear quickly.

And persist in the gentle desire to hear. When you ask a question, it helps to ask it softly. Don't yell it out into the universe. Don't say it with vehemence. Don't say it with determination. It's almost like homoeopathy—the less there is of the substance, the more powerful it becomes. The gentler and quieter your question, the easier it will be to hear because you are bringing less willfulness into the act of asking.

SEEKER: So then even in the act of asking, we're yielding to God's Will.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Thanks.

RAJ: You are welcome.

Let us continue.

READER: The miracle minimizes the need for time. In the longitudinal or horizontal plane the recognition of the equality of the members of the Sonship appears to involve almost endless time.

RAJ: Well, let's just think about it for a moment. If you're looking in a horizontal plane, and let's say in the horizontal plane you could see the tops of the heads of all of the Brotherhood, it would extend to infinity. And for you to manage to connect with each one of them would take an eternity to move to the other end of infinity, so to speak, and to just say "Hi" to each one.

Continue.

READER: However, the miracle entails a sudden shift from horizontal to vertical perception. This introduces an interval from which the giver and receiver both emerge farther along in time than they would otherwise have been.

RAJ: I will stop you there.

We talked about this a couple of weeks ago that if you are in a valley and you cannot see which way it's going to twist and turn, you seem to be at the mercy of time and space because it will take time to move through the space of the valley to arrive at a point where you can see whether or not the distance you have travelled is actually helping you get to your destination. Whereas if you were to climb to the top of the mountain and had the larger view, you could from there see whether indeed that trail was going to get you to your destination, or whether the opposite direction would get you there quicker. And so by having the vertical viewpoint, it saves you time.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Is this principle represented by the axis mandali in shamanism, is that what that's talking about?

RAJ: Say that again.

SEEKER: In shamanism the idea of the horizontal axis and the vertical axis intersecting each other, is that what that principle is talking about, the same thing we're talking about here?

RAJ: You could say that. Yes. However, this example of horizontal and vertical should not be relied upon in terms of physical definition. What it represents is what happens when you have a problem that needs resolving, or something that doesn't work well, and suddenly one day [snap of the fingers] a light bulb goes on, [snap of the fingers] an "Aha!" occurs, and suddenly you see a solution to the problem. It is as though you were suddenly experiencing an overview. You were able to look at it from a point outside of the problem itself, or outside of the limitations you were experiencing when you were looking at the situation. The "Aha!" you have may take a while to express or explain to someone else. But the experience of the "Aha!" took place [snap of the fingers] in an instant of time.

Now, when you desire of God to know the Truth about a Brother or about a situation, and your reason for asking is because you have made that one an object of your affection and you care and you are expressing a devotion, and you want to be a mentor in this situation, you will find yourself because of your quietly expressed desire, your gently expressed desire, you will find yourself infilled with a new perspective, a sudden shift of perception that will reveal your Brother or Sister to you in a new light, as I've said before. His or her Divinity will be obvious to you, along with the realization of yours as well.

There will be an intimacy whether you expressed the miracle, the sudden shift of perception, or not. And the potential is there for your Brother or Sister to experience instantaneous and sudden transformation as well in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. And the situation will be harmonized/resolved instantly which otherwise might have taken days or weeks or months of therapy, or of reasoning one's way through the maze. You see?

There are no private thoughts. There are not only no private thoughts, there are no private experiences. There is no private Love.

SEEKER: I see something that... habitually I look for meaning in symbols and concepts, and now I see even more clearly that this is talking about my experience that I'm having. And I just clutter the experience and clutter the clarity by trying to relate it to some mystical symbol, or some concept I got out of a book, or et cetera, et cetera.

RAJ: Absolutely. Besides in the sudden influx of shifted perception, you may find new symbols to use in talking or sharing with others that will be more effective than the old symbols were for triggering a new idea. Or you may, as I have done tonight, use an old symbol for a new reason, like all of you are puppets. And you're all familiar with Pinocchio and being a puppet without strings. So let symbols serve the revelation, rather than trying to start with the symbol and have revelation work through it. Okay.

Continue.

READER: The miracle thus has the unique property of abolishing time to the extent that it renders the interval of time it spans unnecessary. There is no relationship between the time a miracle takes and the time it covers. The miracle substitutes for learning that might have taken thousands of years. It does so by the underlying recognition of perfect equality of giver and receiver on which the miracle rests. The miracle shortens time by collapsing it, thus eliminating certain intervals within it. It does this, however, within the larger temporal sequence.

RAJ: Every single time you have the experience of the miracle, of a sudden shift of perception, that causes you by virtue of an unplanned clarity to be in a place that you otherwise know it would have taken a great deal of time for you to get to through reasoning and working on yourself, et cetera, every time you have that kind of experience, it tells you that you don't have to depend on time for anything. In other words, it helps weaken your reliance on time as the solution to your problems.

And it relieves you of the idea that it must necessarily take you a long time to accomplish a lot. Because to whatever degree you have a commitment to it taking a long time because you believe it must take a long time, you are providing resistance [snap of the fingers] to an instantaneous healing, to a [snap of the fingers] sudden shift of perception, to the miracle. You see?

So every time you have this experience of the miracle, it weakens your reliance on time, your faith in time, and your bondage to time. And this in itself helps precipitate the further breakdown of the idea that you exist in time and that time governs your progress. And this is wonderful.

Alright, let us continue into section III:

RAJ READING: Atonement and Miracles

RAJ: That's okay. Someone has asked me to comment on quote "the larger temporal sequence" unquote. You know what? That simply means that the miracle occurs within your present frame of reference. In other words, Love meets the human need. It meets you right where you are, while you still believe you are not awake, while you still believe you are a body. It meets you right where you are without frightening you to death by your having an experience of such radical transformation that it would be nonsensical to you.

And so you seem to have experiences of collapsed time within a still ongoing experience of time, but as I said that in itself begins to weaken your faith in time, your commitment to it, and your bondage to it. And in that weakening of the apparent validity of time, you will arrive at a point where time will cease and everything will still make sense to you. So it does it within the larger temporal sequence, because that's the only way your return to Sanity can happen without increasing your insanity because great fear has been brought into play. And so it is a kindness. Okay.

Continue.

READER: I am in charge of the process of Atonement, which I undertook to begin. When you offer a miracle to any of my brothers, you do it to yourself and me. The reason you come before me is that I do not need miracles for my own Atonement, but I stand at the end in case you fail temporarily. My part in the Atonement is the cancelling out of all errors that you could not otherwise correct.

RAJ: And it's simply that as an older Brother, you might say, someone who has been down the road already, I can see the pitfalls that you cannot see, and because I care and because I am devoted to you, I will point out the pitfalls that you can't see before you fall into them, so that now you will be able to recognize them and point them out to another Brother whom you have become devoted to and are willing to mentor.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Just for a point of clarity, when we speak of errors here, we're not talking like I put in the drainage system wrong [audience laughter] or I made a bad investment in the stock market. We're talking about the error of...

RAJ: Errors of perception.

SEEKER: Of, well, the error of not being miracle-ready. Is that...

RAJ: That is one of them. Yes.

SEEKER: Is that what that... So in other words, if temporarily I'm not miracle-ready, then you step in. That's the kind of errors that we're talking about, correct? Okay.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: I'm just for some reason this evening I'm able to perceive my ego's interpretation of what you're saying and yet see the other meaning as well, so that why I'm commenting. Also for reaffirmation as well.

RAJ: Indeed. Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Well, you say you can help us because you walked the road before, but that was two thousand years ago and the world's a lot different since then and the problems are...

RAJ: Oh, it isn't the world. It isn't the world. It's the mind and the mind is the same. The ego frame of reference is the same today as it was yesterday as it was two thousand years ago, and the way out of the ego frame of reference will always be the same. Today the ego has high-tech means of screwing you out of your Birthright that it didn't have two thousand years ago, but it's still the same mental error. It's still the same mental aberration.

Let us say that a hundred years ago you wanted to scam your brother who... you live in Europe and your brother has moved to the States and has become wealthy, and you want to scam him for some of his money. Well, you must sit down and write a letter, and you must post it, it must go on a ship to the Americas, and it must reach its destination perhaps two months later. You must wait for your brother to respond. It'll take another two months to come back. Today you can accomplish the same scam in perhaps an hour over the Internet. But the process of scamming is identical to what it was. The dynamic of scamming is identical today to what it was a hundred years ago, or two thousand years ago.

You see, the one thing that can't change is Mind with a capital "M". And therefore, in the human condition, the one thing that can't change is mind with a small "m". And awakening is the undoing of the mind with a small "m"—the ego. You get the picture. Okay.

READER: When you have been restored to the recognition of your original state, you naturally become part of the Atonement yourself. As you share my unwillingness to accept error in yourself and others, you must join the great crusade to correct it; listen to my voice, learn to undo error and act to correct it. The power to work miracles belongs to you. I will provide the opportunities to do them, but you must be ready and willing.

RAJ: And I'm going to interrupt here.

Let us say a situation is occurring which requires correction and there are two of you present who are asking God, "What is appropriate here?" In other words, the two are willing to listen to my voice, willing to learn to undo the error, and willing to act to correct it. And one of them finds that the action to correct it involves extensive one-on-one communication with a Brother taking hours of time. And the other having listened and having been willing to learn what was appropriate and is willing to act, finds that it is not appropriate to be involved in that way. That can seem to be confusing if one is looking for consistency; that, in other words, this kind of a situation calls for this kind of appropriate response. But the one who's being still may be holding a tone that makes it easier for the one engaged in the ongoing interaction to be successful. We're not talking about coming to an awareness of a correct action that will always be that action, or will even be that action for another one involved at the same time in the same circumstance.

The only other thing I want to say at this point is that your devotion to your Brother or Sister, your willingness to have an object of your affection doesn't just involve a willingness to let Love through and to become imbued yourself with a clearer experience of your Brother's Divinity. It does involve what I called mentoring. It does mean involvement.

It does mean being willing to act in terms of witnessing for your Brother, or witnessing for your Sister. Witnessing on your Brother's behalf may mean speaking up and disagreeing vehemently with actions he's engaged in that are governed by his own limited perception and misunderstanding of what the Truth is. It may involve not arguing with him about what he's doing wrong, but instead talking about what is true, what is right, what will work, rather than focusing on what isn't working. But mentoring means being involved in a way that has a beneficial outcome. It is not about sitting there and bathing him or her in your beneficent love without involvement.

I want all of you to let the word "mentor" and "mentoring" stay with you during this coming week. All of you would love to have a mentor. Why are you here tonight? Extend that to your Brother. Be willing to look at your Brother this coming week with a concept of yourself as a potential mentor, rather than a harried housewife, or a tired mother, or a busy businesswoman who's got to stay aware of brass tacks and not mess around with any nonsense. Remember that every encounter you have can be a mentoring encounter. And then try and embody that to the best of your ability. And remember that mentoring does not mean enabling your Brother to not be disturbed because you're behaving outside of his concept of what's right. That's not mentoring.

Continue.

READER: Doing them will bring conviction in the ability, because conviction comes through accomplishment.

RAJ: Them being miracles.

SEEKER (reader): Yes.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: Doing them will bring conviction in the ability, because conviction comes through accomplishment. The ability is the potential, the achievement is its expression, and the Atonement, which is the natural profession of the children of God, is the purpose.

RAJ: I want you to look at the word “profession” as expression. What is Atonement? It is the expression of forgiveness. And what that means is that Atonement is the Expression of Love expressing the Truth that is absent all judgment. Do not look at the word there, do not look at the word “profession” there as an activity.

“Oh, what profession are you in?”

“Oh, I’m into Atonement.”

You want to know what Atonement is? It’s what’s embodied in the words “praising God.” And when you look at your Brother or Sister acknowledging the Truth of them that’s been revealed to you, you’re praising God. And there is no judgment present. No criticism. No ego ploys. You are glorifying God. That’s what Atonement is.

That’s what a mentor does as I’m using the word tonight. A mentor glorifies God where someone else is seeing something less than God where He is. A mentor inspires new vision, new Self-awareness. A mentor inspires the experience of innocence where it seemed that innocence had been lost forever.

The ability to work miracles is the potential of one who is willing to approach his Brother consciously from a mentoring place. The achievement of the miracle is its expression. And the Atonement is the purpose. Because you know what? When you succeed in glorifying God where it seemed that God was absent, the one in that place where it seemed that God was absent cannot help but glorify God himself and extend the glorification of God further. And another domino falls.

This is where we will end for tonight. This is all good news.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So mentoring is what you're talking about when you were talking about witnessing.

RAJ: Yes. Which brings a new element into the picture regarding witnessing, because one could say that witnessing was simply the recounting of what is true, but mentoring involves in its definition the element of actual caring. One can witness to the Truth like an expression of a laundry list, which can be quite impersonal and uninvolved and not bring into play the conscious act of caring. And so that is one of the reasons I'm using the word "mentor."

SEEKER: And the mentor is an ongoing or long-term relationship.

RAJ: Humanly speaking that is correct. And ultimately speaking it's a forever way of being together.

SEEKER: Brilliant use of symbolism.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: But I am not bound by it. And three weeks from now I may well use something else even more triggering. Yes.

SEEKER: So you don't cling to the old rugged cross. [some audience laughter]

RAJ: You are quite correct. [audience laughter]

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj, not too long ago I had an experience too of them just like you talked about. My day started out I invited the Holy Spirit to be with me during my day, and I had two experiences just like you're talking about. And it was... it was incredible. And my whole day was like that. But I started by inviting the Holy Spirit to be with me that day, and it was just like what you're talking about. People stopped in their tracks and for a moment were transformed and I know that. And it was... I felt great doing it.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And they did. So I know what you're saying. I experienced that.

RAJ: You end up spontaneously engaged in random acts of kindness, unpremeditated acts of kindness. What a wonderful thing to be engaged in.

SEEKER: It was. And it was like we experienced something Real*. That's how I can describe it.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: It felt Real. And it was wonderful. And it's a great... I wish I could be that every moment.

RAJ: Well, just gently persist. Gently persist. Okay.

I thank you for being with me.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 1 – THE MEANING OF MIRACLES
Section – ATONEMENT AND MIRACLES
First Edition – p. 6 / Second Edition – p. 9

RAJ: Before we begin I want to say something specifically to everyone who is hearing my voice at the moment. I love you. [pause] I love you. [pause] Now, I did not say this to make a point, but, don't take this love that I have embraced you with and, shall I say, deposit it in your heart like you would deposit money in a savings account to hold on to and to feel privately. When you are loved and you feel it, the purpose of the experience, you might say, the meaning of the experience is to inspire you to extend love yourself. So you don't want to hold on to it and save it and savor it for yourself. If you let the inspiration that comes from it cause you to extend it to another, that is what will keep it alive, that is what... it will keep it with you, that is what will enliven it in you and thereby enliven you. Share it. Let it be something that causes you to embrace your Brother or your Sister. Okay.

We will start with paragraph two and we will start over on the couch. And we will pass the mic in this direction.

SEEKER (reader): Alright.

READER: “Heaven and earth shall pass away” means that they will not continue to exist as separate states. My word...

RAJ: No, let's stop there.

RAJ READING: “Heaven and earth shall pass away” means that they will not continue to exist as separate states.

RAJ: Well, we've been talking at quite some length about the fact that the only thing you're ever confronted with is Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven. And the fact that you are interpreting the Kingdom of Heaven as earth does not mean that you have created a second or alternate reality. You're just misinterpreting the only Reality there is and causing it to be experienced by yourself as something unlike the Kingdom of Heaven.

So as you wake up, what you have called Heaven and earth won't pass away. The only thing that will pass away is the misperception of Reality that you had been entertaining. They will not continue to exist as separate states. Everything that you had been seeing incorrectly, misinterpreted, will in effect apparently become one with What It Really Is. Everything that you are seeing presently through a glass darkly will seem to merge with Reality as Reality Itself. And so they will not continue to exist as apparently separate states. Again the reason is that there never were two to begin with.

I want to stress this because it is so easy, as I've said before, to say, "The world is an illusion." Well, the kingdom as you are perceiving it is an illusion, but the illusion is that you are seeing Reality as though it were something else. It is very important to understand this point, because if you are not careful in calling the world an illusion, you will be likely to deny the world. You will be likely to withdraw your attention from it, instead of keeping your attention right there with the curiosity to see What It Really Is.

Continue.

READER: My word, which is the resurrection and the life, shall not pass away because life is eternal.

RAJ: Now why would my word—my word—be the resurrection and the life? Because my word is Truth expressed. My word is Love embodied. My word which isn't a personal possession of mine, my word is the Voice for Truth. That which expresses the Father's Will. That which does not play into or reinforce illusions, and therefore weakens them. My word is that which when extended to you uncovers in you the Truth about you and doesn't reinforce your false sense of yourself, so that your false sense of yourself becomes weakened as that which is Real in you becomes strengthened by virtue of the fact that I am addressing the Real You, the only you there is, the Divine One That You Are.

Your word can be the resurrection and the life. The resurrection and the life—that which lifts up the poor concepts you have of yourselves and reveals a truer picture of What You Are. So it resurrects you and uncovers the Eternal Life that must be present right where you are in order for you to have a fantastic idea that you exist independently, self-authorized, separate, and alone.

In order for you to have a false concept, in order for you to have a misperception, there must be something essentially Real about you in the first place. Because I promise you, if all you are is the current perception you have of yourself, then you are an illusion. And the simple fact is that you aren't. Right as you sit here, right as you hear my voice, right now the Real One That You Are is listening, is present, and is in actuality the only thing present.

My word is the resurrection and the life, and my word shall not pass away because why? Life is eternal. What You Are is inviolable, unalterable, and eternal. And as you begin to recognize this about yourself, as I've said before, you can't help but realize that it's the Truth about your neighbor and your brother and your sister; everyone you come in contact with. And as you begin to feel that fact about everyone, your behavior, your attitude, your words will begin to change, and will begin to automatically substantiate and reinforce the Truth about them. And in that way, your word will become the resurrection and the life.

Unfortunately the words "the resurrection and the life" have taken on religious connotations so that they sound at once severe and lofty, but somehow beyond the human experience. And so it's hard to feel connected to what those words mean. And it's very easy to think that it's only my word that is the resurrection and the life. But when any of you are feeling God's Truth about your fellowman, your words become the resurrection and the life, because they become that which uncovers and illuminates Reality, the fact that there is more to everything than what you're experiencing. It's love extended to your Brother illuminating What Is Real, and not reinforcing fear, and not reinforcing false concepts.

It's not that your words become something magnificent, but they become so genuine, and so simple, and so grounded, and so real, that the Truth of them feels inescapable to those who hear your words. And because they're inescapable, their hearing the words causes them to change.

That's the way in which my word or your word is the resurrection and the life. The meaning is really very down to earth.

Okay, let's continue.

READER: You are the work of God, and His work is wholly lovable and wholly loving. This is how a man must think of himself in his heart, because this is what he is.

RAJ: Wow. How much simpler can you get?

RAJ READING: This is how a man must think of himself in his heart,...

RAJ: Why? Because that's how he'll get ten gold stars? Or because that will refine his soul? Or so that he can become worthy of entering the Kingdom of Heaven? No. Because this is What He Is. This is What You Are. It's simply a matter of becoming consistent with What's Already True.

Okay, let's continue.

READER: The forgiven are the means of the Atonement. Being filled with spirit, they forgive in return. Those who are released must join in releasing their brothers, for this is the plan of the Atonement.

RAJ: And those who are released will join in releasing their Brothers. It's a spontaneous response. If you're suddenly filled with joy, everyone else will know it; not because you must share it with others, [laughing] but because it's very difficult to keep it a secret. Have you ever seen someone who has discovered that a surprise they were planning for someone else is actually going to work, the plan they had is actually going to work and they find out that it's going to work right in front of the person it's supposed to be a surprise for? And how difficult it is, actually how impossible it is for the person who is going to be surprised not to notice that something unusual is going on, and begin to ask about it?

Those who are released will join in releasing their Brothers for this is the plan of the Atonement, for this is the Way It Works. You see, the plan of the Atonement is... [laughing] the plan of the Atonement is that what works, works. You get it? The plan isn't some special plot or design for a special circumstance. The plan of the Atonement is that the Way Things Are elicit the experience of the Way Things Are. The plan of the Atonement is that when you begin to engage in the Atonement you come into alignment with the Way Things Work, divinely speaking. And when you come into alignment with the Way Things Work, things begin to work that way; not because it's a plan, but because Truth embodies Itself, Love embodies Itself. The way Being be's becomes obvious when you let yourself into the Atonement.

So when you let yourself feel forgiven because someone has uncovered your innocence to you, you cannot help but feel joy. And you cannot help but release your Brother or Sister from grievances you have held against them, because it's obvious to you that without having done anything to deserve it, you are innocent, guiltless. And your guiltlessness honors you fully, illuminates you in your perfection fully.

And because you know you did nothing to earn it, you paid no penance, but the Truth About You has been illumined within you to you and you feel it, you know inescapably that this is utterly true about those you were holding grievances against. In discovering your innocence, you feel Whole. And you realize that any grievance you have been holding against another for something they took away from you, you realize that the grievance is invalid, because in this experience of your innocent Wholeness, it's clear to you that they took nothing away from you, and therefore no grievance is justified. The grievance is silly.

So when you let the Atonement in, things begin to work the Way They Work. The plan of the Atonement is implemented.

RAJ READING: Those who are released must...

RAJ: Will.

RAJ READING: ...join in releasing their brothers, for this is the plan of the Atonement.

RAJ: And the plan of the Atonement is a spontaneous happening. It is the Way Things Work Divinely, happening and being experienced consciously by you as a spontaneous event; not the result of a devised plan. You see what I'm saying now?

Okay. Let us continue.

READER: Miracles are the way in which minds that serve the Holy Spirit unite with me for the salvation or release of all of God's creations.

RAJ: Indeed.

Let's continue.

READER: I am the only one who can perform miracles indiscriminately, because I am the Atonement. You have a role in the Atonement which I will dictate to you. Ask me which miracles you should perform. This spares you needless effort, because you will be acting under direct communication.

RAJ: You will also not be influenced by preexisting concepts of how things work, or what a miracle ought to be, or who it ought to happen to. You are not likely to be misguided by the habits of your limited self perceptions.

Continue.

READER: The impersonal nature of the miracle is an essential ingredient, because it enables me to direct its application, and under my guidance miracles lead to the highly personal experience of revelation.

RAJ: Now, the impersonal nature of the miracle. What? Here would be a personal nature of a miracle: that would be where you said, "Oh, that poor soul needs help. I select that poor soul to be the recipient of the Father's Love." A miracle of a personal nature would be a miracle that you authorize.

When you are the medium of a miracle then you are the one extending it, but not the one who decided where it was to be extended. Therefore, you cannot experience any sense of authorship. Now you become involved in a miracle which you can claim no personal responsibility for. And to be involved in a miracle that you're not responsible for is what an impersonal miracle feels like.

It's one where you are involved but you can't take credit for it. This is one of the reasons there aren't a lot of miracles [audience laughter], because it leaves the ego entirely out of the picture. The ego says, "Can't get no satisfaction."

RAJ READING: The impersonal nature of the miracle is an essential ingredient,...

RAJ: One of the reasons it is essential is because it is... because a miracle can't happen until you join with something other than yourself. A miracle can't happen until you stop insisting upon being an independent authorizer, which is exactly the cause of what you call the human condition—all the suffering and all the excitement. But awakening begins when you arrive at a point of reaching out beyond your best judgments and your best theories, and so on, and you ask for help. You reach out and open up to join with something else.

So it's an essential ingredient of the miracle. Why?

RAJ READING: ...because it enables me to direct its application,...

RAJ: Because it enables a joint effort, a mutual commitment.

RAJ READING: ...and under my guidance miracles lead to the highly personal experience of revelation.

RAJ: Revelation being the direct communication of God with you, and you alone, except that in the experience of that quote "private communication" unquote you become joined with the whole Brotherhood and privacy ceases.

Continue.

READER: A guide does not control but he does direct, leaving it up to you to follow.

RAJ: Yes. Willingness, cooperation on your part. Things that do not happen in isolation. In isolation there is never willingness. There is only will-fullness. And certainly you would never follow anything. You would be the leader.

RAJ READING: A guide does not control but he does direct, leaving it up to you to follow.

RAJ: In other words, the joining has to be an expression of willingness on your part, together with an investment on your part of commitment for your reasons. You will never be able to be dragged into the Kingdom of Heaven. You will have to walk into it consciously for your own reasons. But in order to find the way there, you're going to have to ask for help, because you cannot find what willfulness blocks you from experiencing. It's that simple.

SEEKER: In the preceding sentence it says, "under my guidance miracles lead to the highly personal experience of revelation." Does that mean that the person who... through whom the miracle passes experiences the revelation, the recipient experiences the revelation, or both joined experience the revelation?

RAJ: All of the above.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Or any of the above.

SEEKER: I understand.

RAJ: Continue.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Could I ask a question?

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: That experience that I had with the drunk man, where I was I felt like I was asking you for direction, would that be a miracle? I mean I experienced revelation in that.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: And I did have willingness. And I do understand what you mean about the commitment, because, like in the moment where I asked you for the direction, what I should do with this person that I was afraid of that was across from me, I heard that if I didn't believe what he believed about himself that he couldn't hurt me. And I felt this willingness to completely believe that, which surprised me a little bit. But it felt supernatural.

RAJ: It's called a sudden shift of perception.

SEEKER: Yes. [laughing] And I felt like I just had to wholly commit to that, and then as you like spoke to me and I sat there with him, and I knew as soon as I saw him come up the street that we were going to do something together. And I did not want to and I told you that. And [laughing] it was like one of those big "oh, shit" moments. It was the snarling drunk guy that was coming up the street and I knew that he was going to sit right across from me, and he did. And he wasn't snarling really at me.

But I had a little bookmark of Jesus coming out of the tomb and Mary Magdalene sitting at your feet, right, and when I looked at the picture, it gave me like instant peace. And so that's when I, you know, asked you for direction and that's what you told me, is not to be afraid, and that if I was willing to stay there that you could give me a new experience, but that if I left, that I would not have that experience.

And actually I was afraid to leave because I figured he would follow me. [laughing] So I thought, well, you know, I've got to do this, and I wasn't, you know, there were other people around and stuff.

And then you continued to explain to me that, you know, despite his appearance, he wasn't what he seemed and that, you know, that like my own son that other people are afraid of who has a funny appearance sometimes, that I know he's just my child, and that you wanted me to see him as just your... a child, you know.

And so as I sat there you just gave me this totally different experience of this person. And he began to actually speak coherent sentences and explain himself, even though he wasn't even talking to me. I mean he was just talking. And then he calmed down, and then he sat there for a while. And then when they called me for my table and I got up and left, he got up and left. So as soon as I had sat down, he sat down. As soon as I got up and left, he got up and left.

But I was moved to tears by the presence of him. And it took me like a year to figure out that what you were doing, it's like the resurrection and the life, which I figured out tonight.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: You were showing me that he was the risen Christ, and it was the picture. But I didn't get that for a whole year later. So it's kind of... so that's what the miracle is, kind of.

RAJ: It is indeed. It is indeed.

SEEKER: Let's see. I lost my place.

RAJ READING: “Lead us...

SEEKER: Okay.

READER: “Lead us not into temptation” means “Recognize your errors and choose to abandon them by following my guidance.”

RAJ: And if you read it one way, “recognize your errors,” it could sound like it's a call for an ongoing internal witch hunt to uncover every single error that might be lurking there. But you could say recognize your error and choose to abandon it, if you mean your choice to think alone. Recognize the error of choosing to think independently of the Father, and choose to abandon it by following my Guidance, by yielding to something outside yourself, and thus break the isolation.

You see, then it doesn't become a matter of yielding to my authority. It amounts to abandoning the very thing that is keeping you from experiencing fulfillment. And it's not all the different things you are thinking incorrectly. It is the very fact that you are choosing to think at all. Do you see?

Okay, let's continue.

READER: Error cannot really threaten truth, which can always withstand it. Only the error is actually vulnerable.

RAJ: Well, now, if only the error is actually vulnerable, then whenever you are feeling vulnerable, it can't be you that's feeling vulnerable, because you're not an error, you're not an illusion. So when you are feeling vulnerable, you can dare to not honor the apparent call for action to protect yourself, which is defense. You can dare to say, "Ahhh. Something Real must be happening here because my ego is afraid, so I choose to give my attention to whatever this Something Real is that's scaring my ego so badly. I choose to align myself with the Truth that's uncovering some falsity about my ego that's scaring my ego to death." Interesting choice of words, "scaring my ego to death."

By aligning yourself with the Truth that is causing your ego to feel vulnerable, you do not strengthen the ego in that moment of its weakness, and it can fade more easily and you will become free of its grasp and its call for you to act defensively on its behalf. Aligning yourself with Whatever It Is that is frightening your ego, will bring you your peace.

Continue.

READER: *You are free to establish your kingdom where you see fit, but the right choice is inevitable if you remember this: Spirit is in a state of grace forever. Your reality is only spirit. Therefore you are in a state of grace forever.

RAJ: Oh, wow. [small laugh] That is what you discovered; that you are in a State of Grace when you neglect to feed the wild animal, when you neglect to feed and nurture the ego by witnessing on its behalf and defending it. In defenselessness your safety lies. And that becomes obvious when you choose for your peace at exactly the moment that the ego is screaming the loudest that defense and attack are called for.

Grace. You know what grace is? Unearned fulfillment. Unearned bliss. Undeserved joy. Unearned innocence. That's grace. And it's your Birthright. It's your Birthright.

Let's continue.

READER: Atonement undoes all errors in this respect, and thus uproots the source of fear.

RAJ: By not feeding it.

Continue.

READER: Whenever you experience God's reassurances as threat, it is always because you are defending misplaced or misdirected loyalty.

RAJ: In other words, you are witnessing for the ego. The ego experiences God's reassurance as threat.

Continue.

RAJ READING: When you project this to others you imprison them, but only to the extent to which you reinforce errors they have already made. This makes them vulnerable to the distortions of others, since their own perception of themselves is distorted. The miracle worker can only bless them, and this undoes their distortions and frees them from prison.

RAJ: If your misperceptions make others vulnerable to their own misperceptions, then your clear experience of What They Divinely Are makes What They Divinely Are vulnerable to clarification. Vulnerable means susceptible to... I'm going to say susceptible to a clarity, whether the clarity is a clarity about falsehood or a clarity about Truth.

Remember that all of you are presenting your best concept of yourself to the world. All of you are not presenting the Total Truth about yourselves to the world. But the Divine One That You Are is present right now as you present a more limited form of who you are to the world. I am addressing the Divine One That You Are. And you could say that the Divine One That You Are that sits there right now that you are not experiencing consciously becomes vulnerable to the reinforcement that I am providing that allows for a sudden shift of perception to occur.

You can be vulnerable to good, in other words. Don't think of vulnerability as a negative. Vulnerability means that you're not well defended against what's coming toward you. You see? And in effect everything that I'm doing with all of you is to help you feel undefended against the Conscious Experience of the Truth About You.

Continue.

READER: You respond to what you perceive, and as you perceive so shall you behave.

RAJ: This is an absolute fact. You respond to what you perceive. And if you're not perceiving What's Really Going On, then you respond in a way that is inconsistent with Reality, and you will bump your knee or your shins or stub your toe against Reality. But if you are experiencing the Truth, then you could say you are perceiving Reality and you will respond to it as What It Is, and, as I said earlier, the Way Things Work begin to be what works in your life.

Read the sentence over.

READER: You respond to what you perceive, and as you perceive so shall you behave.

RAJ: Indeed.

READER: The Golden Rule asks you to do unto others as you would have them do unto you. This means that the perception of both must be accurate. The Golden Rule is the rule for appropriate behavior. You cannot behave appropriately unless you perceive correctly. Since you and your neighbor are equal members of one family, as you perceive both so you will do to both.

RAJ READING: ...as you perceive both so you will do to both.

RAJ: Who are "both" do you think? They are you and your neighbor.

As I said, when you are willing to let the Father's View register with you about your Brother, and you see your Brother... and a miracle occurs, a shift in perception occurs so you see your Brother truly, you learn that the Truth About Them is the Truth About Yourself. And so your perception about them that you have extended to them becomes your perception of yourself. You are not a benefactor better than your Brother extending to your Brother something he doesn't have. You are both equal, and you are both equal in your Conscious Experience of What You Both Really Are.

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: When I hear you and when I read the Course I sometimes find myself just falling in line with what you're saying and just falling in line with what the Course is saying. And on the other hand, I see myself as so full of defense and so full of attack, that it's just driving me crazy. It's like there's... I'm on a fence and I've got one foot in ego-land and the other foot in the Course, as what the Course is telling me about myself. And I'm quite upset right now as you can see.

RAJ: Well, do you realize that there used to be a time when you couldn't tell the difference at all?

SEEKER: I do remember that. [laughing]

RAJ: Yes. So you are in a greatly improved place, because now you can tell the difference between the tares and the wheat.

SEEKER: The difference is driving me crazy.

RAJ: But the difference allows you to make the choice more easily and more accurately. So what you're really faced with is not confusion, because of the stark contrast. It's a clarity that calls for commitment from you that you're reluctant to make, and that's what's distressing you. Now I encourage you to see the blessing in the contrast that now is so blatant in your mind. And then realize that what you're being asked to give up is valueless, because it's keeping you in misery.

SEEKER: Because it is keeping me in misery. Enough said.

RAJ: Yes. And don't let the ego distract you by getting you to focus your attention on your unwillingness to make commitment, and what a slob that must mean you are.

SEEKER: Wow.

RAJ: Because that will keep... that can keep you busy for years. That can keep you from making the choice.

So what I suggest to you is that you notice the difference, because of the contrast that's so clear to you now, and that you also notice when the ego would have you become self-demeaning, and just notice it but don't react to it. Like doing a meditation and you realize that you've started to think, and you just notice it without reacting and you come back to whatever the focus is of your meditation. Notice the ego's ploy, don't react to it, and bring your attention back to what is going to uncover to you the Way Things Work and the fact that they work that way spontaneously when you let go of control.

Again, the ego will say, "Can't get no satisfaction."

SEEKER: You got that right.

RAJ: But when it's satisfied, you're miserable.

SEEKER: Yes, I've been there, done that.

RAJ: So let the ego not be satisfied, because that's the way out of your misery. And if you can't do it successfully 100% of the time, I'm going to say if you can't manage do it successfully 15% of the time, it's no justification for being hard on yourself. You see?

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you, Raj.

READER: You should look out from the perception of your own holiness to the holiness of others.

RAJ: And the reason you should is because that's your Birthright, that's what's normal, that's what's natural to you. It's not you should look out from the perception of your own holiness. It's not a command. You should look out from the perception of your own holiness to the holiness of others, because that's the Truth about you and about them. And anything else you engage in is an embellishment, is what I referred to earlier about as the frills you add to a costume or to your presence. Okay.

READER: Miracles arise from a mind that is ready for them. By being united this mind goes out to everyone, even without the awareness of the miracle worker himself.

RAJ: What does it mean by "being united"?

SEEKER (reader): Being united with the Brotherhood.

RAJ: And let's be real specific. Being united with One Who Is Awake.

Having been willing to break the willful isolation and to have said, "I want to be with someone. I want to exist with someone, instead of by myself. I want to cooperate with someone, instead of always doing things alone. And I want to cooperate with someone...." Let me put it this way. "If indeed there is a Reality beyond what I'm currently experiencing, or more of Reality than I'm currently experiencing, then I want to be with and I want to cooperate with and I want to join with One who sees it and can help uncover it to me. I choose to be willing to yield to One who knows more. I am willing to acknowledge that I don't know at all. I'm willing to be the underdog and say, 'I need help,' and mean it and not be insulted by it."

Now read that sentence again.

READER: By being united this mind goes out to everyone, even without the awareness of the miracle worker himself.

RAJ: Indeed.

READER: The impersonal nature of miracles is because the Atonement itself is one, uniting all creations with their Creator. As an expression of what you truly are, the miracle places the mind in a state of grace. The mind then naturally welcomes the Host within and the stranger without.

RAJ: Indeed.

READER: When you bring in the stranger, he becomes your brother.

RAJ: This is the good news. This is quote "The Way It Works" unquote. And this is the way it works spontaneously.

Continue.

READER: That the miracle may have effects on your brothers that you may not recognize is not your concern.

RAJ: And the only time it would concern you is if you were wanting to be able to take credit for it; if you wanted this to be a personal miracle, or a miracle at your personal hand.

Continue.

READER: The miracle will always bless you.

RAJ: Ah, yes. But you won't discover that until you extend the miracle. And you cannot extend a miracle so that you can get a blessing. It's not give to get. It's give because that's your Function. And when you are fulfilling your Function, you feel Whole. And that's what you get, is the experience of feeling Whole. You get fulfillment when unselfishness is practiced. When you're not on your mind anymore, then you fulfilled will be on your mind.

Continue.

Oh, I'm sorry. Question over here.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I just wanted to ask if, many years ago before I knew anything about the Course or miracles or that sort of thing, when I functioned as a nurse...

RAJ: Well, let me say this. The Way Things Work is the way things have always worked, whether there was a Course or not. Yes. Continue.

SEEKER: There were...

RAJ: I'm really saying that for everyone else. [audience laughter] [Raj laughing]

SEEKER: There were several times when working as a nurse that I felt like what you're describing here but I didn't have a word for it. I just felt like I all of a sudden knew what the right thing to do was, only it didn't come from me.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: It came from Guidance. And the most... I was watching to see what was going to happen every bit as much as anybody else because I didn't... it wasn't coming from me. And I understand about that feeling Wholeness, because I can vividly remember every time that happened.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: So many of them. And so that is what you're talking about.

RAJ: That is exactly what I'm talking about.

SEEKER: Those are really quite wonderful.

RAJ: Yes.

READER: Miracles you are not asked to perform have not lost their value. They are still expressions of your own state of grace, but the action aspect of the miracle should be controlled by me because of my complete awareness of the whole plan.

RAJ: Now what this is saying is that miracles that you perform that I did not ask you to perform have not lost their value. They are still expressions of your own state of grace. But the action aspect of the miracle should be controlled by me because of my complete awareness of the whole plan.

Continue.

READER: The impersonal nature of miracle-mindedness ensures your grace, but only I am in a position to know where they can be bestowed.

RAJ: As you allow me to select the place for miracles to happen, you will as if by osmosis begin to feel why the selection was made. But it is only through a continued yielding to my Guidance where the opportunity for this experience to occur can happen over and over and over again, only in this way can you learn how to distinguish where the miracle is to be extended. So I encourage you not to decide where a miracle is needed very often, because that will deprive you of the opportunity to wordlessly and thoughtlessly feel, begin to feel and thereby learn when and where a miracle is to occur.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Decision and spontaneity would be exclusive of each other. I couldn't have the miracle be spontaneous if I was making any kind of a decision about it.

RAJ: That is correct. A miracle would not be impersonal if a personal decision were employed.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So therefore does it follow that when you are... when a miracle happens spontaneously, it comes from you?

RAJ: No. But it will have come from one of the Brotherhood who is likewise not interposing a personal sense of authority, or self, into the process. In other words, one of the Brotherhood Who Is Awake, and who himself or herself is yielding to the Father's Will. Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: I can't even imagine a miracle coming through my own decision. I may not... I think just meandering into it with a decision negates the possibility of a miracle happening.

RAJ: This is excellent.

SEEKER: Do you see what I mean?

RAJ: That is Sanity.

SEEKER: Well, I mean it's... I mean being in the healing arts, every time something happens where somebody spontaneously has a remission, I mean it's as big a surprise to me...

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: ...as it is to them.

And they look at me like, "Wow, you really did something!" You know.

"No, I didn't."

"Oh yes you did."

"Oh no I didn't."

RAJ: Exactly. And yet you know you were involved.

SEEKER: In some way. It was like I was the conduit through which it flowed, but that's it. It's just like the road is the highway which the car moves in.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: But not anything more than that.

So when you're talking about, "when you decide," that to me isn't even plausible. So what do you mean when you say, "when you decide where a miracle is to happen"?

RAJ: If you have a loved one who is ill, or who has suffered an injury, you will pray for them. You will ask for a miracle.

SEEKER: I see.

RAJ: You will provide a guideline, you might say, for where the miracle is to occur...

SEEKER: I see.

RAJ: ...and who deserves it.

SEEKER: I see. I see.

RAJ: You can ask for what you want, but I would end your prayer with, "Nevertheless, Father, Thy Will be done."

SEEKER: You can't always get what you want. If you try real, real hard, you get what you need.

RAJ: [Raj laughing] [Seeker laughing]

ANOTHER SEEKER: I have a question?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Okay, so from the past weeks I'm getting the idea of seeing a need in my Brother and responding, but that response has to be spontaneous. It can't be a decision—I mean the subtle distinction in our experience from where we are now between a decision and a realization.

RAJ: Well, what is your response to your Brother's need? Your response is to be, "Father,...." You momentarily step aside from the Brother in need. You turn to the Father.

"Father, what is the Truth here?"

"Father, what is needed here?"

"Holy Spirit, is there anything I am to do?"

"Father, what is my appropriate response?"

You can ask any of these questions. You turn to God and inquire, wanting to know the Truth, wanting to know the Truth that will heal, wanting your mind to be infilled with purity and clarity. Then you are miracle-ready. And then you will learn what to say or what to do. Then the response will be revealed to you.

SEEKER: You and the Awakened Brotherhood don't have a moment of stopping and asking. I mean you just know each moment, because you're not in a process of shifting out of decision-making.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Sometimes that happens to me where there'll be time where I know step to step what to do without needing to stop and, you know, specifically ask. It's all just apparent for a while.

RAJ: That is correct. Okay.

Continue.

READER: Miracles are selective only in the sense that they are directed towards those who can use them for themselves.

RAJ: Mmm. This is a very key point. It's like if you have a telephone, you're likely to get a telephone call. Does that make sense? When Paul is willing to listen, I speak to him and he hears me. When Paul is not choosing to listen, I speak to him and he doesn't hear me. So, when there is a willingness to hear, you are likely to hear something.

RAJ READING: Miracles are selective only in the sense that they are directed towards those who can use them for themselves.

RAJ: You might say, those who are receptive to the experience.

Continue.

READER: Since this makes it inevitable that they will extend them to others, a strong chain of Atonement is welded.

RAJ: You see, it's called a... just a moment... it's called conservation of energy. What works, the Way Things Work is always utterly simple, but it always has maximum results. If you are receptive, if you are listening, you are likely to hear. When you hear, you are likely to be moved. A shift of perception is likely to occur. And when that happens, you are naturally inclined not keep your mouth shut about it, and you are inclined to share it. And so the Way Things Work uses a minimum of energy with a maximum of benefit, and it's utterly simple.

So...

RAJ READING: Since this makes it inevitable that they will extend them to others,...

RAJ: And the others will respond in the same way and extend it on.

RAJ READING: ...a strong chain of Atonement is welded.

RAJ: It's utter simple common sense. And the Way Things Work Divinely is utter simple common sense. It's not otherworldly. It's not miraculous. And it's because it's such utter simple common sense that it's easy for each of you to abandon your commitments to your misperceptions. You see what I'm saying? What I'm saying is that none of this is set up difficultly. Okay.

Continue.

READER: However, this selectivity takes no account of the magnitude of the miracle itself, because the concept of size exists on a plane that is itself unreal.

RAJ: Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: May I ask a....

Is that like what Judy was talking about? She had this encounter with a drunk, and it seemed like just a little thing but the repercussions of that encounter may reverberate through the Universe. Is that...

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Is that what we mean by... so we see it as, "well, that was no big deal," but the ramifications could be... could change the world. So is that what this talks about as far as size is concerned?

RAJ: That is exactly correct.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: And let me just say that if you're not seeing the Kingdom of Heaven because you're sitting in the middle of it with your eyes all squinched up, it obviously isn't going to take much to wake up, in the sense that opening your eyes up is not a laborious act. So the act of opening up your eyes will not seem miraculous even though it will transform your entire experience of being. Period.

You might say, it will change you forever. But the magnitude of the act of opening up your eyes is inconsequential.

Continue.

READER: Since the miracle aims at restoring the awareness of reality, it would not be useful if it were bound by laws that govern the error it aims to correct.

RAJ: Indeed. Simple again. The rules, the structures of your misperceptions are as illusory as your misperceptions and cannot govern the event of the miracle or its outcome.

You have a question?

ANOTHER SEEKER: So I can't choose to love someone. I can't make a decision to love someone. That has to happen spontaneously.

RAJ: Loving someone is not a miracle. It a Function. It's your Function. You cannot choose or decide what a miracle is going to be, or where it needs to happen. You must choose to love, because not loving is an act of Self-denial and self-hate that you will unavoidably suffer from. The only way you will love is to choose to be Love.

When you are awake, it will not be a choice. But right now when you are engaged, all of you, when you are engaged in having a private separate experience, separated experience of being where the Meaning of Love has been lost to you, you do have to make a choice. Just like you have to make a choice between the voice for fear, or the Voice for God. You have to make choices, and then make commitment to those choices, so that you undo established habits that keep you blinded to your Function and keep you blinded to Who You Are, and keep you blinded to the fact that you're sitting right in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven calling it quote "the world," the place where the human condition is experienced.

SEEKER: When the choice seems to be a struggle, then there's reason for joy because we know we're close to breaking through some habit or barrier that's been there for a while, like Ken was describing and...

RAJ: Yes. It means that you are engaging in that which is truly weakening to the ego and your bondage to it. Yes.

SEEKER: Commitment and consistently requesting help from you and my Guide and the Father, those are the best ways to approach that problem.

RAJ: Absolutely. Yes.

Okay. Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: You just mentioned structures that we believe in. I see that as the way we define in our minds everything out there and how we should behave toward it.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And where I'm going is I want to know the best way out of that. Is that just not to know? I've been reading Glenda Greene's book, so just not really to know anything and just keep trying to get in touch with our own heart, the Real part of us.

RAJ: You must be willing to invalidate what you think you know so that there is an empty space in which the Father can insert the Truth. And the best way to make the space invitingly empty is to say, "Father, what is the Truth here?" When you do that, you are providing a space that you're not filling up before the Father can fill it up.

SEEKER: [small laugh] Okay.

RAJ: Now this has nothing to do with saying, "I am really stupid." It's not a statement about yourself at all, other than that you are choosing to join with someone other than yourself and partner with that other one from here on.

SEEKER: Right. Good.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

This is where we will end tonight.

I want to say once again—Virginia, let me see the whites of your eyes [audience laughter]—that I love all of you. Pass it on.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 1 – THE MEANING OF MIRACLES
Section – THE ESCAPE FROM DARKNESS
First Edition – p. 8 / Second Edition – p. 11

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: We will step right in and we'll let Judy read first. And if everyone will remember to hold the microphone up near the top. Thank you.

READER: The Escape from Darkness

The escape from darkness involves two stages: First, the recognition that darkness cannot hide.

RAJ: Let's stop right there.

Suddenly we're talking about darkness and escaping without any preamble, but it is intelligent because darkness is the place from which you begin your journey Home.

But what is darkness? Darkness is the place where you hide... darkness is the place where you hide your most fearful secret from yourself and everyone else. And what you've hidden there is what you discover when you arrive at the bottom of the barrel in your life experience. It's called darkness because it is the place you have chosen to ignore. It is the place where you have refused to bring your attention and, you could say, therefore, the Light of you.

And what is this most fearful secret that you hide from yourself and everyone else? It is that you're not in charge of anything. It is that you don't have the answer. It is, most succinctly put, the awareness that you are truly incompetent. Now it happens that this is the utter Truth. You, on your own, separated from your Source, are absolutely incompetent.

Now the barrel that you finally end up finding yourself at the bottom of, is filled with all of the techniques you have developed to cover up the fact that you are incompetent. You have filled it up with wild imaginations as to your ability and your skill and your capacity to think intelligently and reasonably, and therefore demonstrate that you do have control, that you are competent. The reason you all ultimately end up at the end of the... at the bottom of the barrel is because you can't really pull off the lie. You can't really prove your competence.

And as time goes by, as your life passes by, you could say, you lose the rev for proving your capacity. You lose the vigor that you had so easily brought to proving your competency and making your mark in the world. And you have had successive experiences that have demonstrated to you that no matter how hard you've tried, you haven't succeeded at really demonstrating your competency. Mind you, all of what you filled the barrel with to cover up your incompetency involved mutually-agreed-upon definitions with others, who were also engaged in filling their barrel with their competencies and their skills. And the reason there was so much sparring that went on, so much warring that went on, was because part of what was involved in demonstrating your competency was in proving your superiority to others who were trying to demonstrate their competency. You see?

Well, sooner or later, and it's better if it's sooner, you come to the point where the war gets tiring, the lack of fulfillment of expectations dampens your spirit, your will to be independent. And a little bit of honesty begins to percolate into your awareness. You decide that struggle isn't worth it. And as you let go of the struggle and sink toward the bottom of the barrel deeper into the darkness, you finally come to the point where you recognize that you're powerless, that you are incompetent, that you can't control anything.

And since you have come to the bottom of the barrel through all of the ego structures you have created, the ego looks at your realization and says, "You're a failure." It says, "There's no reason to live." And if you stay in the ego perspective for very long as you are observing the Truth about you, the ego will distract you from succumbing to the Truth about yourself and accepting it. And it will say, "There's one last thing you can do to demonstrate that you have control, even though you're a total failure. And that is you can do yourself in by your own hand. You can kill yourself, instead of dying naturally into the blessing..." It [the ego] doesn't say this, but the blessing that awaits you in your acceptance of the Truth of this deep dark secret that you on your own are totally incompetent.

This last act that the ego suggests is a last attempt at control—which you have to be willing to dishonor, because when you arrive at the point of feeling the fact that you are not competent on your own, and you accept it and don't fight against it by engaging in a final act of suicide, you discover an incredible thing. Peace. Why? Because now you don't have to go to all the effort you had been going to present this false front of competency. There is great peace in being able to say, "I can't do this. I can't do that. I can't live up to your expectations. I can't live up to the expectations I have placed upon myself that I accepted from my parents. I can't be something I'm not. I don't even want to be something I'm not any longer." This constitutes a great release.

And in that release comes a joy welling up together with an awareness about yourself that in your incompetency as a separated independent individuality, you're quite Holy, you're quite Whole. This is the Truth that was hidden in the darkness, hidden out of sight in that place you chose to ignore. And this is the beginning of Awakening. This is the beginning of the return to your Sanity, your Whole-Mindedness, you might say; not fractured by insane attempts to prove that you are independent and competent in your independence.

Let's continue.

SEEKER: May I ask [a question]?

I missed the part about how your ego justifies suicide as avoiding recognizing your incompetency. In other words, having come up against suicide, it's... the feeling for me was, "All was lost. I was a total failure."

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Just like when you're at the bottom of the barrel.

RAJ: You were at the bottom of the barrel.

SEEKER: Right. Right. And I was saved from that.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: That act. The interesting thing that I recognize is that suicide is... I don't know what the statistics are, but it's a very low percentage of the people in the world commit suicide.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And so that's almost like saying that people don't feel like failures, or they're too afraid to take their own lives. Do you see what I mean? If that's... when you say the ego—and the ego is not original—it tries this with everyone. Okay, because I don't know... I mean I'm guessing that most people have entertained the question of suicide at one time or another.

RAJ: Yes. Mind you, I said, "If you stay too long in the ego's frame of reference observing this Truth, the ego will...."

SEEKER: So, you're saying that if you recognize your incompetency from the ego frame of reference for too long of a period, this suicide thing is the way... what the ego suggests to you to cut it short.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: To stop it.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: So that it can preserve itself.

RAJ: Exactly.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] Be in control.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: So the ego actually knows that there's life beyond death, that it is not extinguishing itself. Or is it kind of like a Kamikaze thing?

RAJ: No, no, no. It's that the ego recognizes that you're getting close to honesty.

PREVIOUS SEEKER AGAIN: I see. And it would rather extinguish itself than have you....

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] [maintain??] control.

RAJ: No, no. It is an act that keeps it alive.

PREVIOUS SEEKER AGAIN: I see. So the ego knows that death is not... there's nothing final about death. It even recognizes that. Or else it would be asking for its own extinction.

RAJ: No. It has nothing to do with the ego recognizing anything about life or death. It has to do with the fact that the ego's existence depends upon the secret remaining a secret.

SEEKER: So we'd rather sacrifice everything rather than give that secret up?

RAJ: It elicits a consummate act of independence as a means of securing its existence. It is its nonexistence that it will not tolerate.

SEEKER: I see.

RAJ: But it has no sense of life or death, of the here or the hereafter.

SEEKER: So again it's just another.... it's just another insane thing.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: It's just another insane... I mean, "I'll extinguish myself rather than give up control and face the Truth."

RAJ: No. It isn't even a matter of the focus being on extinguishing oneself. It is a focus on an overt act as though action based on ignorance constitutes life.

SEEKER: I see. I see. I see. It never gets to thinking, "What about what happens after?" It just... it is gonna....

RAJ: The ego has no capacity to think, per se.

SEEKER: I see.

RAJ: It doesn't reason. It is a....

SEEKER: Program.

RAJ: It is a defense mechanism.

SEEKER: I see.

RAJ: And it defends itself. That's all it ever does.

SEEKER: I see. Okay. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I guess I was thinking that we all commit suicide. I mean, we all, that's what we've been doing—we haven't been dying normally.

RAJ: In a...

SEEKER: In a sense.

RAJ: In a broader sense, that is correct.

SEEKER: So I could see that as giving up. You know, being disgusted and just giving up and not thinking in terms of trying to keep taking care of yourself and going on with life.

But, anyway, never mind.

RAJ: Every death is a suicide. It is a decision not to face life.

But what we're talking about here is what darkness is. And that it is the place where you have hidden the Truth About You that will undo all of your mutually-agreed-upon definitions and the bondages associated with them, and which will serve as the stepping stone to the return of your Sanity.

Simply dying from an illness, or old age, or whatever description you want to give it, is not the same thing as coming to this place where you've hidden the Truth About Yourself from yourself.

Continue.

EARLIER SEEKER (reader): Where did I leave off? I'm incompetent.

RAJ READING: This step....

SEEKER: Oh, I see. Okay.

READER: This step usually entails fear. Second, the recognition that there is nothing you want to hide even if you could. This step brings escape from fear.

RAJ: Yes. You see, when you arrive at that point of recognizing that you're incompetent, and you're looking at it from the ego's vantage point, it is experienced with fear. But then, as it begins to dawn on you that you really can't solve the problem yourself—whatever it is, or you really can't pay the bill because you really don't have the money—a realization occurs that you can't get blood from a turnip, or you can't get water from a rock. And therefore, if you don't have the answer, it isn't necessary for you to have the answer. And you have been suffering from a self-imposed requirement that you always have the answer to everything—which you don't ever have. You see?

So when you realize that the realization that you're incompetent, that you don't have the answer, is itself the answer, and that it means that you're not supposed to have the answer, then you can see that there can be no penalty for not having an answer that you were incapable of having. And you realize, "My God, all this time I've been trying to do something that's impossible." In that realization, you can abandon trying to do the impossible, because it's clear to you that it is impossible.

So it says, second, there is...

RAJ READING: ...the recognition that there is nothing you want to hide even if you could.

RAJ: You no longer want to hide your incompetence, because it's a jewel of a blessing to you.

RAJ READING: This step brings escape from fear.

RAJ: Again, because it's utterly clear to you that there can be no penalty for your not being able to do something that you were never created to be able to do.

Continue.

READER: When you have become willing to hide nothing, you will not only be willing to enter into communion but will also understand peace and joy.

RAJ: Yes. You cannot stay long in the realization of your incompetence without discovering that in your peace and your joy and your newfound awareness of your Holiness, you still exist. In other words, the world and you did not come to an end.

What you have experienced as need, which you now realize you are incompetent to meet and that you were never meant to meet on your own, you find yourself wondering, "How is this need going to be met?"—not, "How am I going to figure out how this need is going to be met?"—but, "How is this need going to be met?" It's just a simple response and it constitutes prayer, because you're asking the question but you're not asking it of yourself. And when that happens, the Holy Spirit responds, your Guide responds. Communion occurs. Realization happens. Isolation has been broken.

This is one of the reasons that I'm constantly pointing you in the direction of paying attention to your needs—not so that you can figure out how to solve them—but because needs are the threshold of clarification. Needs are the threshold of further enlightenment when you recognize their existence and honor them by not ignoring them and ask for help without quote "leaning unto your own understanding" unquote.

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: The less drastic path to Awakening that involves more willingness and less plummeting to the bottom of the barrel, I'm seeing this is the same process of realizing my incompetence, and in that I'm seeing that that's where I can see my Innocence. Because I really can't do anything so I am innocent; I'm not responsible. And that connects me to the curiosity, when seeing this exact same activity going on, only not bringing me to the brink of suicide, and not looking really whole. Happening in an everyday activity and not being unbearable.

RAJ: Yes, it is certainly possible to do this more gracefully by consciously choosing for it, instead of letting circumstances force you into the corner where it's so dark and the Truth About You awaits you. You can invite the Consciousness of the Truth About You. Yes.

SEEKER: The key is to have help from the Awakened Ones.

RAJ: Indeed.

But Life Itself is Divine. And the Divinity of It is what constantly insinuates itself into your conscious awareness and causes all of your attempts to be competent to fail, and ultimately bring great discouragement to you. It is the Divinity of Being that brings discouragement to the false sense of self that's trying to proclaim its competence. So what drives you to the bottom of the barrel is Reality exerting Itself, you might say, being What's Real. It is your Divinity disallowing you to be comfortably insane. So no matter how you arrive at the jewel that was hidden in the darkness, no matter how you arrive at it, whether it seems to be circumstances or a spiritual desire to wake up, it's still the Divinity of Being which brings you to that point.

SEEKER: The Way Things Work.

RAJ: Exactly. Yes.

SEEKER: Just simply not resisting that is why it's not excruciating.

RAJ: That is exactly correct. Yes.

Okay.

READER: Holiness can never be really hidden in darkness, but you can deceive yourself about it. This deception makes you fearful because you realize in your heart it is a deception, and you exert enormous efforts to establish its reality.

RAJ: Indeed. You understand the meaning of that.

SEEKER (reader): Yes.

READER: The miracle sets reality where it belongs. Reality belongs only to spirit, and the miracle acknowledges only truth.

RAJ: Ah. And the miracle acknowledges only Truth right where the ego was saying failure lay; right where the ego said catastrophe awaited you.

SEEKER (reader): The darkness.

RAJ: Yes.

Go on.

READER: It thus dispels illusions about yourself, and puts you in communion with yourself and God.

RAJ: Exactly.

READER: The miracle joins in the Atonement by placing the mind in the service of the Holy Spirit.

RAJ: Instead of in the service of the ego. Instead of in the service of that which would cause you to once again try to climb to the top of the barrel. Continue.

READER: This establishes the proper function of the mind and corrects its errors, which are merely lacks of love.

RAJ: Indeed. Do you see that all of your attempts to be competent, all of your attempts to prove your competency, all of your attempts to be in control, all of them are expressions of lack of love. Because all of them are in the service of your denying your Conscious Awareness of Yourself—Who You Really Are. It is an act of aggression against Yourself. Ultimately it's an act of aggression against God, because what's being covered up in the darkness is the Presence of God being All There Is of you. Now it doesn't mean that God is being abused, because all of this is going on in the imagination. It's not really happening. And no matter how long you have spent attempting to get to the top of the barrel and stay there, you never for a moment had any competency or any existence as a separated entity capable of rising to the top of the barrel and staying there.

SEEKER (reader): So that's why, in the world, no one ever really stays at the top of the barrel, whether it be a movie star, or an athletic hero, or a CEO [Chief Executive Officer of a company], or on and on and on.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And then once like, for instance, with boxers or football players, there's always comebacks—trying to come back, make a comeback to the top of the barrel.

RAJ: Indeed.

And then there are those who were successful, apparently, who got bored with their success and moved to another venue, another arena of...

SEEKER: Proving their competency.

RAJ: Exactly. Of excelling, because it never truly satisfies.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] Because it's lonely at the top. Yeah. [barely audible]

RAJ: It is. Someone said the phrase is, "It's lonely at the top." It's actually lonely from the moment you have established a mutually-agreed-upon definition with someone else to be independent. So it's, you might say, lonely from the bottom up. As long as there is an attempt to move vertically, it is lonely, no matter where you are between the bottom and the top of the barrel. It's lonely by definition because you have said, in so many words, "I'd rather see it my way. I choose to fool myself into believing that I can be independent and have an independent viewpoint." That's the definition of being alone. Therefore, everything that follows will be imbued with loneliness.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Some people that make it to the top find their bottom of the barrel there and turn within and move in an intelligent direction from there.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: What I wanted to ask you was....

RAJ: Mainly because when they arrive at the top and they recognize that it is the top, they see that it truly is the topmost point that they have been fighting for and working for, and they find that they are still unfulfilled. It's a very depressing realization because it means that all of the sacrifice and all of the work that they did was for nothing, and therefore they've spent their whole life on the wrong track. And there they are, at the top, which is the bottom of the barrel. They had no competency to create what they had been fooled into believing could be created and did await them.

SEEKER: I wanted to ask you about....

RAJ: In other words, as a total success, they were complete failures.

SEEKER: The imagination that we're living in, and there's been these hints dropped—a lot of conversation about time being an illusion, and you said there wasn't any evolution, and I remember you saying, "the cavemen, if there was such a thing"—am I living in this imaginary world pretending that there was this fast history of evolution, etc. I mean ancient... a lot of times in the Course it talks about ancient in a seeming almost sarcastic way. I mean is this all just an illusion? History.

RAJ: You are living in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven. You are living in the middle of Eternity. There's no time occurring right now, right here. But through the use of your imagination, you are seeing and experiencing time and the conceptualization of infinity as being on a timeline that is infinite, with an infinite future and an infinite past. And so you are experiencing a misperception of Eternity, right here, right now, in the middle of Eternity.

SEEKER: So the T. Rex [Tyrannosaurus Rex] bones they dug up are our image that we're holding in our mind of this enlightened being that's passed on. I mean I don't... I can't really conceptualize not having history from where I am now. But I'm beginning to see that it's not going to work, as I'm moving forward, to keep thinking of things in the past, of this vast past that's brought us to this point. That's....

RAJ: Well, it is impossible for you to conceive of the Meaning of the word "Eternity." The closest you could come to it would be Wholeness—infininitely all-inclusive Wholeness in the now. The reason you must let go of the past, and the reason you must stop anticipating the future, is because until you let go of that conceptualized timeline, you will be unable to experience the eternal presences of T. Rexes, and anything else that it seems existed in the past but no longer exist. I've said before that by releasing the future and the past from your consideration, and letting your awareness be brought to the moment you're in, and then letting that moment be snuffed out, that's where the transition into the Conscious Experience of Eternity occurs.

SEEKER: Eternity is kind of being found in the stillness, in the void.

RAJ: Yes, but also I want you to grasp that Reality is not off at a distance. Right now, right here in this room, you're experiencing Eternity. Right now, right here in this room, you are experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven. But you are experiencing it through a sieve. You are experiencing it through a filter—a highly complex filter of definitions which you have applied to the Kingdom of Heaven and Eternity, including this concept of life being a timeline moving from the past to the future.

What I want you to understand is that Reality, Eternity, the Divinity of everything, the Divinity of you, all of this is just a shift of perception away right here. And it will be a shift of perception about everything that is right here—[tap on the glass of the table] the glass top table, the chair, your hands, the microphone, the red color of the word on your shirt, the color itself. This is why I say be curious about every single thing you're experiencing, because in a moment of defenselessness, in a moment of looking with innocent eyes innocent of preconceptions, it can all change. Not that it will change, but what you're allowing it to be in your experience will change and more truly represent Reality.

But let the curiosity be present here and now, because it's not off in the future that you're going wake up. It's going to be in the moment that you look defenselessly at the orchid, or the glass of water—like, "What in the world does that mean? What in the world is that?" You see? And then shutting up and allowing the answer to be revealed. More than that. Letting the answer be revealed by the very thing you've asked the question about. You don't have to ask your Guide, "What's the Meaning of that orchid?" Ask the orchid. Be open to it because it has the full means of conveying to you what its Meaning is. That is its gift—to convey its Meaning.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Let's continue.

READER: This establishes the proper function of the mind and corrects its errors, which are merely lacks of love.

RAJ: We will back up one sentence.

RAJ READING: The miracle...

READER: The miracle joins in the Atonement by placing the mind in the service of the Holy Spirit. This establishes the proper function of the mind and corrects its errors, which are merely lacks of love. Your mind can...

RAJ: Oh, that's another important point.

RAJ READING: This establishes the proper function of the mind and corrects its errors,...

RAJ: It doesn't say you have to correct its errors. The errors are corrected spontaneously as Truth dawns in your awareness. As you see the Truth, what isn't true becomes obvious. And once what isn't true is obvious to you, you naturally no longer invest any trust or commitment to them. And correction is complete just because you were paying attention; not because you managed to find some way on your own to correct the error. You see? Do you see what I'm trying to say? I'm trying to say that everything that exists that is Real is insisting upon your return to Sanity. Your return to Sanity, Whole-Mindedness, is inevitable. And everything that is going on is geared toward supporting your letting yourself into that deep, dark corner where the Truth About You is hidden.

You say, "My mind is all screwed up. I've got to straighten out my mind so that I can move forward on my spiritual path." Or "I've got to straighten out my mind so I can have healing." [single audience laugh] See, that's part of the exercise of control. And the spiritual exercise of control for spiritual benefit is one of the most noble means of getting to the top of the barrel. [mild audience laughter]

If your mind is all screwed up, all you have to do is stop trying to unscrew it and say "Help" to God. You don't have to be able to get into the right frame of mind to have a healing of your mind. You've got to ask for help. You see?

So you don't have to be at a certain level of perfection before the benefits of What You Perfectly And Divinely Are can register with you. That's why in your worst moments miracles can happen, because it's not up to you to manage your mind in such a way as to create a healing. The only management of your mind that you have to employ is to say "Help," instead of trying to do it yourself. That's the only discipline that you can actually bring to bear on the problem of being, in order to get out of the problem.

SEEKER: I can't stop it.

RAJ: Pardon?

SEEKER: I can't stop it. My mind. I can't stop it.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And that's why this next sentence is so fascinating.

READER: Your mind can be possessed by illusions,...

SEEKER: Sometimes I really feel like, I mean, run by my life. In other words, it runs me. Because there's the next thing to do, and the next thing, and I'm always in a hurry to do this thing, and that thing, and that thing, and the mind's spinning about thinking and planning. And I can't stop it. I mean I use the best techniques and studied with the, you know, studied the masters and all these techniques of meditation. I can't stop it. Can't do it.

RAJ: There's your realization.

SEEKER: Hallelujah. [some laughing in the audience]

RAJ: Now succumb to it. Yield to it. Don't resist it any longer. Accept it.

SEEKER: How about tomorrow? I'll do that tomorrow. [more laughing in the audience]

RAJ: Exactly.

READER: Your mind can be possessed by illusions, but spirit is eternally free. If a mind perceives without love, it perceives an empty shell and is unaware of the spirit within.

RAJ: In other words, if a mind perceives without Love, it perceives... it perceives a soap bubble. It perceives a boundary. It perceives only limits and is unaware of the Spirit within. I have said before that the ego is like the sphere of a soap bubble—fragile, thin, insubstantial, but very visible, very definite. Your present sense of yourself is this space inside the bubble. And you in your Totality are the space inside the bubble and all of the space outside the bubble.

But if a mind perceives without love, it perceives an empty shell. It doesn't perceive that it's a full shell, because it's preoccupied with the finiteness of the boundary, and either protecting itself against it, or enlarging the boundary.

RAJ READING: But...

Continue.

READER: But the Atonement restores spirit to its proper place. The mind that serves spirit is invulnerable.

RAJ: Because it is boundary-less. It has no outside and it has no inside. There is no means of conflict.

SEEKER: There's no walls to defend.

RAJ: Exactly. Without the bubble.

SEEKER: There's nothing to defend against.

RAJ: And again, if the bubble represents the ego, the bubble itself is a defense mechanism. It is the only element, and I use that term very loosely, it is the only element in existence that implies, or suggests, the need for defense, the existence of defense. When the bubble pops, there is nowhere to be found, anything which gives meaning to the word "defense."

SEEKER: And the bubble can't be put back together again, as far as us.

RAJ: That is correct. The bubble isn't even really there.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Just for purposes of illustration.

RAJ: Just for purposes of illustration. [pause] What do you mean?

SEEKER: I mean that's the reason that you use that example.

RAJ: Yes, I use that example for that purpose.

SEEKER: When I read this after talking about the past, and it said, "without love, you see an empty shell instead of the Spirit," and then I got it how my definitions make me look at the dinosaur bones instead of experiencing the Living Christ that is really what's there; the empty shell of a dead body instead of the Living Christ that's really there.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And then I also could see how I have this network of definitions that wraps that empty shell around every Living Christ, all of the Living Love that's all around me, but that's not what I'm seeing. I'm seeing it all as an empty shell.

RAJ: Exactly. Yes. Yes.

SEEKER: For purposes of illustration.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: Darkness is lack of light as sin is lack of love. It has no unique properties of its own.

RAJ: Isn't that interesting? The subject is darkness—but you can see that darkness is lack of light, or the absence of light—but isn't it interesting that sin is lack of love? Sin therefore is not a presence, is it? It's just an absence of something. And if sin is not a presence, then you cannot be guilty of sin.

You may suffer from withholding Love, because extending Love is your Function. You may suffer from that, because it is impossible for you to be in a state of Self-denial and be comfortable. But you cannot suffer for sins, because there is no presence of something that can be identified as sin, anymore than there is a presence of something called darkness.

So, this is a very valuable thing to contemplate. All sin is a lack of love. If you are suffering, it is not because you are being penalized for your sins. It is because you are neglecting to fulfill your Function, which is to be Love. You are withholding the only True Self-Expression you can engage in, and that cannot be comfortable. But because that is what you're suffering from, you can correct it.

If your suffering were the result of your sins, you would have no means of getting out from underneath that suffering. But it's the fact that sin is nothing more and nothing less than lack of love, it is because sin is nothing more and nothing less than the lack of love that you cannot possibly be bound to suffering. And a new decision on your part to let Love flow through you, will release you from the suffering.

Continue.

SEEKER: May I?

And this not fulfilling your Function, or withholding Love, is the root cause of all suffering. All suffering.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: Okay. There's not any suffering, whether it be from disease, or guilt, or... that does not come from this not fulfilling of one's Function.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: So the human condition is that.

RAJ: Is the experience of withholding the Love That You Are.

SEEKER: So business is a suffering place. [laughing] Your place of business is your place of suffering. [laughing]

ANOTHER SEEKER: But we have a choice.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: That's true, yes. But I mean in the purely economic sense of supply-and-demand, competition, win and lose. In that sense. Yes, we have a choice of making the place of business a place to extend Love.

ANOTHER SEEKER AGAIN: Or a choice for Love.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: Right. Exactly

RAJ: So...

RAJ READING: Darkness is lack of light as sin is lack of love.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: It has no unique properties of its own. It is an example of the "scarcity" belief, from which only error can proceed. Truth is always abundant. Those who perceive and acknowledge that they have everything have no needs of any kind. The purpose of the Atonement is to restore everything to you; or rather, to restore it to your awareness.

RAJ: Ah. Because it never went anywhere and you never stopped being Whole-Minded. So all that happens is that it is restored to your awareness because you're no longer consciously and conscientiously ignoring it, keeping it hidden.

Continue.

READER: You were given everything when you were created, just as everyone was.

RAJ: Now, why do you suppose it was put that way? Why not just say, "You were given everything when you were created." Why add, "just as everyone was"?

SEEKER: The story of the whole book—joining with our Brothers.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I have it and you don't. Ha ha.

RAJ: Just a moment.

Because having it is nothing special—you weren't left out, and no one else was left out.

The whole reason for mutually-agreed-upon definitions is for the purpose of demonstrating competency as we have been talking about, so that you might rise to the top of the barrel, which obviously not everyone can be at, and so that you might feel a purpose to life and the fulfillment of it. The result is a loss of compassion for, and involvement with, your Brothers, your fellowman. Equality, involvement, witnessing for your Brother—these things are disallowed when you are claiming independent ability to be competent.

RAJ READING: You were given everything when you were created, just as everyone was.

RAJ: You could say that levels the playing field. And if you all have everything, then no one has to struggle at the expense of another to get, or to experience having.

RAJ READING: You were given everything when you were created, just as everyone was.

RAJ: That statement triggers a Unity, a unifying energy in your mind which is essential to abandoning the barrel existence. No one stands above or out from anyone else. And because you all have everything, you all share everything equally. And in that sharing, you bless each other equally, infinitely.

Continue.

READER: The emptiness engendered by fear must be replaced by forgiveness. That is what the Bible means by “There is no death,” and why I could demonstrate that death does not exist.

RAJ: Now what emptiness is this referring to?

SEEKER (reader): I don't understand.

RAJ: It's the emptiness which the ego suggests is in the deep, dark corner at the bottom of the barrel.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Incompetence.

RAJ: Incompetence is one being empty of competence.

ANOTHER SEEKER AGAIN: Yeah.

RAJ: Empty of success.

RAJ READING: The emptiness engendered by fear must be replaced by forgiveness.

RAJ: Now what does that mean? It means the withdrawal of the ego's definition of what's in that dark corner. And in the forgiveness of your preconception about it, your abandonment of your preconception about it, you can begin to recognize that the fact that you don't have the answer and that you don't have control, is truly the answer that you need to yield into so that the acknowledgement of it might bless you with relief and peace and joy and spontaneous clarity that allows for the correction of the need that brought you to your point of desperation.

RAJ READING: That is what the Bible means by "There is no death,"...

RAJ: Well, this, you could say, is my way in the Course of pointing out that the ego, left to its devices, would call for suicide. If forgiveness doesn't occur, and you don't embrace the horrible answer that you are incompetent, and the blessing of the realization that because you're incompetent you must never have been meant to be competent, and therefore it is useless to try any longer to do the impossible. You see? And in that recognition and embrace that it's useless to do what's impossible, you are ripe for communion to occur, for connection to occur to replace the isolation that you had fought so dearly for, so that you could get to the top of the barrel on your own and make your mark and prove that you really are something.

SEEKER (reader): And the way that we do that is by asking for help.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER (reader): Why is it that we are in need?

RAJ: [small laugh] Why are you in need?

ANOTHER SEEKER: [inaudible]

RAJ: When you are looking at God and saying, "That isn't God," you are denying your Source. And when you deny your Source, it is like strangling yourself. You need your Source. You need the Conscious Experience of your Connection, because there is no way to exist without it.

SEEKER (reader): So it's not because we separated from God.

RAJ: Absolutely not.

SEEKER (reader): Even when we are fully Awake with God, we're still going to be in need. Okay.

RAJ: Absolutely correct.

SEEKER (reader): So when....

RAJ: Except that when you yield to the fact that Being Itself is a state of need, and you yield to the Father, and you experience your Oneness with the Father, and you don't cease to be needy because you can't ever become not needy, your defenselessness in the Presence of God allows you to be filled by the Presence of God. Now actually it allows the Conscious Awareness that you have always been filled by the Presence of God to register with you. And now—in your Experience of Wholeness—enlightenment, fulfillment, need, and fulfillment of the need are inseparable and simultaneous. And because you're experiencing utter Fulfillment, and no sense of lack, there is no experience of need to succumb to, or think that you have to overcome.

But it is important for you to understand, as you are letting go of the ego frame of reference and the ego definitions, that you will never arrive at a point of not being in need. And you must yield to that Truth, knowing that it's the Truth, so that you don't bring any vestige of ego, or attempt to bring any vestige of ego, along with you saved in your hip pocket so that when you arrive at the point where there's no need, you can really assert control. You see? I see that you see.

SEEKER (reader): Thank you.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: I came to fulfill the law by reinterpreting it. The law itself, if properly understood, offers only protection.

RAJ: And another way of referring to the law is quote "The Way Things Work" unquote. The Way Things Work meaning as God has set, and is setting, everything into motion at every moment.

READER: It is those who have not yet changed their minds who brought the "hell-fire" concept into it. I assure you that I will witness for anyone who lets me, and to whatever extent he permits it.

RAJ: Ah.

SEEKER (reader): That's good news.

RAJ: I will witness for every one who lets me, and to whatever extent he permits it. You must give permission. You can't be dragged into the Kingdom of Heaven. You must invite clarification. You must invite the companionship, and you must let it in.

Continue.

READER: Your witnessing demonstrates your belief, and thus strengthens it. Those who witness for me are expressing, through their miracles, that they have abandoned the belief in deprivation in favor of the abundance they have learned belongs to them.

RAJ: Yes. Nothing more needs to be said about that.

Don't be afraid of the darkness—the darkness within you. It seems a scary place. The ego needs for you to be frightened of the place where you've hidden the Truth About Yourself. But don't be frightened of it. And don't be afraid to go there. And don't be afraid to let yourself be present in it, because the darkness is not a presence. It's just a place where you are consciously refusing to let the Light of your Awareness shine on the Essential Truth that is your salvation. And the Essential Truth that is your salvation that the ego insists upon covering up is that you have no personal, private, independent competence of any kind.

And with that utter clarity, we will end for tonight.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 1 – THE MEANING OF MIRACLES
Section – WHOLENESS AND SPIRIT
First Edition – p. 9 / Second Edition – p. 12

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: Before we begin tonight, we spoke about some rather significant things last week, and I'm wondering whether anyone went home and thought about it and had some "yes, buts," or some further questions. And so I want you to have time to address those, if there are any.

SEEKER: So I asked the flower what it is and it says it's thirsty. It says my leaves are dusty. And I get it a drink of water and I don't spill any. And I dust its leaves and I don't break any. Something is going on there and it's not competence. When you said that we were incompetent, it rang so true, but I walk, I drive. There's this apparent activity of successful living. Can you tell me what that experience is?

RAJ: Let me ask you, first of all, whether as you're having this experience, you are conscious of being joined?

SEEKER: That's what came to me, was that this was activity that I wasn't doing alone. So a lot of what we're all experiencing is somewhat undistorted experience of the Kingdom of Heaven?

RAJ: Oh, that is correct. You are not experiencing total distortion.

What I want everyone to be clear on is that this subject of incompetence is not something for the ego to take and say, "Oh, yeah. Yeah. I'm incompetent. I accept that. And I realize that everything I'm doing doesn't express any competence I have. Yep. Got that under my belt."

So, we are talking about not only recognizing your incompetence, but what naturally follows if you believe what that really means, because you can't stay in the state of incompetence long without asking for help. It's impossible. So all I'm saying is that if you're driving along, or you're conducting activities, you might say, daily activities, and there's no clear sense of being joined and of being guided, then what we talked about last week hasn't registered with you yet in its full meaning.

SEEKER: For a long time I've kept Reality at bay and maybe what you called a void or the silence. And then, you know, there would be outburst as the pressure had built up. But I started communicating more consistently with you, and with my Guide, and you know, the circle expanded a little bit. And then what you said about Reality being Divine, and to ask the flower its Meaning, and that all of life is Divine and is conspiring to keep us from being comfortably in our ignorance. I opened up and what I found was that quickly the void filled up. And there was companionship from, not just from you, and not just from my Guide, but from everything around me, and the silence started to be filled up with harmony. And that was a... it was good to realize I'm in a friendly universe.

RAJ: Yes, indeed.

Just as a fine tuning of this point regarding the flower, when you are in communion with the flower, you certainly will know what its needs are. In other words, whether it is thirsty, whether it needs fertilizer, and so on. But that does not express its Meaning. Its Meaning is Eternal. And when you are Awake, you will recognize and not be deluded by... you will recognize that it doesn't need water and it doesn't need fertilizer because it is an Eternal Idea in the Mind of God.

And so, as a fine tuning, as I say, when you're communing, you will be able to hear what the apparent needs are, but I want you to go further than that in asking the flower its Meaning, so that you are asking to experience its Divine Meaning, its capital "M" Meaning—the Intent set into motion by the Father that appears as the flower that will forever be its Meaning. You see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: And it's the same... it's the same with your fellowman, because when you are listening for the Truth about him or her, you are listening for the Ultimate Reality, the Divine Meaning that is changeless, but at the same time you will be able to recognize the human need and meet it, even though that is not part of the Eternal Meaning.

SEEKER: That's what the Course means when it says we have to correct things the way we see them now in order to not see them that way at all. We correct on the level that we think we're experiencing at in order to not see levels at all.

RAJ: Oh, certainly the correction will be at the level where the mistake is occurring. But you're not going to correct them. You're going to let them be corrected. And the correction will come in the realization that follows your asking, "What is the Truth here?"

Okay. Any other [questions]?

Sure.

ANOTHER SEEKER: There's someone who is, that I know of that, who is close to me; in fact it's a family member who I believed to be for a second time and recently at the bottom of his barrel. And he's not asking for help that I know of directly, like of another person. I'm not even really sure how he's dealing with it. But when does one know, other than I guess you're going to say just to listen? I've tried to listen in regard to this. But because it's a close family member, it's sort of hard to feel comfortable with doing nothing. But I believe that's how I'm being directed right now.

You spoke to me about this when it was occurring some time ago. And at that time you mentioned, "Well, he's gone really down under." He got way down there. But at that time he was starting to come up again—meaning that he was starting to not listen to that voice that was giving him the final option. So, I'm trying not to be concerned about it because I know that doesn't help. But at the same time I can be honest in saying I'm not really sure if I've heard correctly in regard to there being nothing more for me to do other than what I've already done.

RAJ: You have been hearing absolutely correctly. And you must understand that because Reality is the only thing going on, even though you look at it and call it "the world," everything will conspire to stand in support of this family member's realization and healing. And therefore, you will know when it is time. And circumstances will provide you with the opportunity, without your trying to create the opportunity. Even, you might say, in the illusion, Divine Order still operates, because the illusion is only a distortion, or a distorted perception, of Reality, with a capital "R"—God being All. You see?

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Okay.

SEEKER: So, the more relaxed I am about it, that's the best way I can be of help now.

RAJ: Yes, because that is what will allow you to be undistracted when the Divine Impulse to act occurs.

SEEKER: And I am under the impression that he would not appreciate hearing anything I have to say right now, at all.

RAJ: Not at the moment. That is correct.

SEEKER: Right. Because of his definitions of how he sees me.

RAJ: No. Because he is absorbed in his own issues.

SEEKER: I see.

RAJ: It wouldn't matter who it came from at this time.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Okay.

Any other questions with reference to last week's discussion?

ANOTHER SEEKER: I want to talk about raccoons. [laughing] [audience laughter]

Today in modern psychology, there's a new buzz word going around called "flow." And actually several authors have written about it. And what it talks about... obviously there's a... in this paradigm shift that we're involved in, a lot of people are saying that all the depression, all of the dissatisfaction, all of the unfulfillment is upsetting a lot of people so that the old paradigm of psychology no longer seems to be working. So this term "flow" now has come in where it's linked with happiness—looking forward to going to your job, being happy with your life, feeling like you're in the flow—to put it... to expand on the catch phrase.

The question that I have, and athletes have the same thing you know, like certain athletes know that they're going to win that race that day, because they're just in an altered state of mind, so to speak. The dynamic there... and, of course, some psychologists are more in the spiritual, in the spiritual bent, where they're saying there is a Divine Connection going on. Okay.

But this catch phrase, "being in the flow," is so bandied about. I'm wondering if you can be in the flow and not be conscious of being connected with your Guide, or with God, or with.... You see what I mean? Or is there always some subliminal realization that something else is going on? Do you see what I'm getting at? Is it not... is it another ego dynamic that we're talking about? Or is there an actual thing that these people are experiencing where they're, at some level, they're recognizing that they're not alone, that there is Divine Guidance happening, and that's what's responsible for their superlative experience?

RAJ: The latter. Yes.

SEEKER: So it's not like what we're doing here. But at some level they recognize that's it's just not them being responsible for being in the flow. Is that what you mean by...

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Okay. So I take it...

RAJ: What is different about that from being here?

SEEKER: Well, in other words, the difference I see is that we acknowledge that we're... that this level of incompetence—ego incompetence, okay—is there. Okay? And that we need help. "Help." Where these guys, they train hard, they.... You know what I mean? And then one day they wake up and they go, "I can feel it. I'm in the flow. I'm going to win this event." That's what I mean. It's just that we're conscious of the mechanism that's going on. Or at least we're see-... you know, we have the ability to be conscious.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Whether we practice it, or not, is another thing. Where these guys aren't...

RAJ: And what I'm after is not only to be conscious of the mechanism, but for each of you to actually engage in it, like the athlete you're talking about. He's really doing it. And it has nothing to do with understanding the mechanism. Understanding the mechanism has nothing to do with actually engaging in it; it's just a thought about engaging in it.

SEEKER: I see.

RAJ: So, the athlete that engages in it, if you want to put it this way, is further ahead than those of you who understand the mechanism but haven't engaged it.

SEEKER: I see. I see. Okay, thank you.

RAJ: The Truth has nothing to do with words. It has nothing to do with grasping concepts. It has nothing to do with understanding mechanisms.

SEEKER: It's experiential.

RAJ: It's what happens when you abandon yourself to the void. It's what happens when you abandon yourself to the unknown, and allow yourself to be there willingly, without reluctance. Then you feel the flow and you find yourself in it, and your behavior expresses it—not your idea about it, not your thought about it, not your understanding of it. And the fact is that the point of it all is to get the hang of being in the flow where you find that you don't have to mess around with words and concepts and ideas anymore.

SEEKER: You can feel the flow.

RAJ: Because the point is not to have the experience so that then you can abandon the experience and intellectualize with everybody about the experience. It is to succumb to the experience.

SEEKER: And this is akin to the creative process great artists are able to get into. They get into an altered state by abandoning their personality, and then they're taken over by something, and then they create.

RAJ: They get in the movement. Yes.

SEEKER: So that's another aspect.

RAJ: And yet their getting into the movement is highly focused with oils, or watercolor, or whatever a medium might be. But then it has nothing to do with when they're cooking their dinner.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: You see? And we're talking about being all-inclusive.

SEEKER: Yes. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So you're saying we should just let go?

RAJ: Well, at the bottom line, All There Is, is God.

And whatever you think you are that would let go, doesn't even really exist. And this is a very important point. If the Ultimate Conscious Experience of Being is for there to be no Conscious Experience of Being other than What God Is Being, then whatever conscious experience of being you're having at the moment that's different, isn't Real, and the one that's having it, doesn't exist. Because it's just a concept of yourself that you are focusing on and identifying as you.

The reason this is important is that, although we tread a fine line, sort of straddling Reality and unreality, the fact is, that because God is All and the one who thinks he's waking up doesn't exist, it is important not to value too highly the processes of awakening that you're going through. Do you see what I mean? It would be well for you to take time each day to contemplate the fact that the Reality is that God Is All, and therefore God is All There Is to you. And that's a done deal. In other words, the Ultimate you're going to arrive at is already the Ultimate right now. The accomplishment, you might say, has already been accomplished. And all that you're doing in your process of awakening is letting yourself into the Conscious Experience of the fact that it's always been the fact. It's always been the Truth. You've always been the exact, perfect, Holy Expression of God.

And again the Expression of God is God expressed. Do you get it? The Expression of God is not you expressed by God. [pointing to people in the audience] God, God, God, God, God, God, God, [tapping on the glass upon the table] the table, the glass—it's God.

That's why it's called a journey without distance. Because all you're going to do is in a moment of defenselessness realize that you never were what you thought you were and you never were an entity going through a process of purification to arrive at some evolutionary end point. "Evolutionary" meaning that you started out as something and become more, and more, and more, until at the end, what is there is hardly recognizable compared to the beginning of the journey. You are not going through an evolutionary process. You are simply coming out of insanity. You're simply coming out of misunderstanding. And it's you, the absolutely Divine Presence of God, coming out of a misunderstanding of What You Are and What The World Is—which, as I've said over and over, is the Kingdom of Heaven.

If you grasp this, you will not value your process of awakening so much that you miss waking up. You see? Because the one who's apparently in a process of waking up is part of the illusion. Now, because the one who is in a process of waking up is really the only one there is—in other words, God did not create His Self-expression that's you, and then you through your imagination created a second creation. If anyone is deluded, it's the Son of God—the Divine One That You Are right now—because you are right now the very one God created, the very one God Is Being in this very moment as His Self-expression. You, in your misinterpretation of yourself, identifying yourself by means of definitions you have created, will seem to be in a process of letting go of what has nothing to do with you—the Divine You That You Are. And so this is where walking the fine line occurs, because Clarity, or Sanity, regarding yourself is going to be experienced right where you are at the moment in terms of the definition you're holding of yourself in the moment, and the undoing of it.

But mind you, even though there seems to be this process of letting go of distorted perceptions of yourself, you can become preoccupied with that process. And that's what... that is why it's important to remember that the Ultimate About You is present right now—never was altered, even though you have imagined it was, and you believe your imagination—so that you might understand that although there will seem to be a process, the process isn't necessary. The process isn't the focal point. And that will speed up the return of your Sanity.

SEEKER: Wow.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So what's the focal point then?

RAJ: The fact that the Ultimate is already the fact. The end of the journey is where you are experiencing this sense of a journey that is no journey at all.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So all of this you're not talking...

RAJ: I'm sorry.

The question was, "So what is the focal point?" And that's what I was responding to.

Continue.

SEEKER: So, in all of this, you are not responding to Michael, the man sitting over there on the chair, and you are not responding to Judy, the woman sitting over there on the couch, and you're not responding to Ryan, the man sitting here, all coming as individuals.

RAJ: Nor is the chair you're sitting on "wood," or the couch she's sitting on "fabric." It's all God and it is Meaning that expresses incredible Divine Intelligence and Love and Truth and Life, even though it seems to be inanimate, and so on. All of this that could be defined as you were defining it, is not the way I'm experiencing it.

SEEKER: And so what seems like all of us coming from disparate places tonight and for different reasons, that's all the illusion, and we are the One Mind Son of God, present right here, right now, for ever and ever, waiting to wake up to the fact that the...

RAJ: That you're already there. [audience laughter]

SEEKER: ...many is the illusion, and that we are One right now.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: And right here.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: And we all love each other to a very deep and incredible degree.

RAJ: Indeed.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] And that doesn't blow us away.

RAJ: So...

PREVIOUS SEEKER: So Michael can't wake up without everybody else waking up. It's not an individual thing. It's the wholeness awakening.

RAJ: I'm going to put it this way. There are those of the Brotherhood who are Awake, but the simplest way I can put it is that our being Awake is not completed until you are Awake.

SEEKER: Because it is not separate from the Oneness that is here present with us now.

RAJ: That is correct.

But until you are consciously experiencing it, you cannot join in the communion that is Unity. And so part of our Conscious Experience of Union is held up from being experienced because you are distracted by your processes, and your commitment to your perceptions. And so, you could say, we are not experiencing our Wholeness completely, because part of our Wholeness being experienced is your experiencing yours/ours. Yours which is inseparably part of ours. Yours which is inseparable from you experiencing yourself and all of us together as ours.

There are those who would say that if you're Awake, if one is Awake, why would he bother with you? Well, because you are part of me. You are part of the infiniteness of me. And as long as that part of the infiniteness of me is insisting on isolating himself to his own private, personal interpretations of things, I can't enjoy full conscious communion with him. And so, you could say, well, it's self-serving for me to help. But it's not a selfish self-serving. It's because although you don't recognize your Unity with me, I do. And you are embraced, consciously embraced by every one of Us Who Are Awake; not just me. You are consciously embraced—supportively, but not manipulatively—in your, you might say, being distracted from your distraction long enough to let something else register with you, because that's where the communion can occur. And that's where the beginning of Unity occurs.

Now we had better get into the book. And we might as well start with you.

[Editor's Note: The section heading is: Wholeness and Spirit]

READER: The miracle is much like the body in that both are learning aids for facilitating a state in which they become unnecessary.

RAJ: Yes. And we're going to stop right there. [some audience laughter]

They become unnecessary as learning-tools. If you were looking at God and saying, "That isn't God," then that which you are looking at and denying the Truth of becomes the point where clarification needs to occur. Therefore, that which you are calling "not God" becomes a learning-tool. And once the learning has occurred and it is recognized for what it is, it ceases to be a learning-tool. But it doesn't disappear.

SEEKER: So there is no sacrifice involved?

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: I don't have to wake up and lose my family and friends and all the people I love and everything that has ever meant anything to me.

RAJ: Or what you call your body.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: Exactly. Exactly. The fact is you won't lose anything. You will have it more completely.

Continue.

READER: When spirit's original state of direct communication is reached, neither the body nor the miracle serves any purpose. While you believe you are in a body, however, you can choose between loveless and miraculous channels of expression. You can make an empty shell, but you cannot express nothing at all. You can wait, delay, paralyze yourself, or reduce your creativity almost to nothing.

RAJ: Just a moment.

And you may do it by becoming preoccupied with your process of awakening.

Continue.

READER: But you cannot abolish it. You can destroy your medium of communication, but not your potential. You did not create yourself.

RAJ: And it's because you did not create yourself that you do not have the capacity to un-create yourself. And it is because you did not create yourself that you do not have the capacity to successfully think that you have created yourself and can creatively modify that creation indefinitely.

Continue.

SEEKER: May I [say something]?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And then, therefore, I take it that we can't screw it up either.

RAJ: Of course not.

SEEKER: We can delay it. We can delay it, but we can't screw it up.

RAJ: You can sidetrack yourself, as in a daydream in a school classroom, but you can't make the classroom go away, and you can't make the education that is occurring there stop. That is right.

SEEKER: Hallelujah.

RAJ: But you can miss the learning for a while.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] That's stupid rest.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: The basic decision of the miracle-minded is not to wait on time any longer than is necessary. Time can waste as well as be wasted. The miracle worker, therefore, accepts the time-control factor gladly. He recognizes that every collapse of time brings everyone closer to the ultimate release from time, in which the Son and the Father are one.

RAJ: This is important.

RAJ READING: He recognizes that every collapse of time that he experiences individually by virtue of the miracle, brings everyone else as well, closer to the ultimate release from time. Just as there are no private thoughts, there is no private enlightenment.

Continue.

READER: Equality does not imply equality now. When everyone recognizes that he has everything, individual contributions to the Sonship will no longer be necessary.

RAJ: What do you think that means?

RAJ READING: ...individual contributions to the Sonship will no longer be necessary.

SEEKER (reader): There never have been individual contributions to the Sonship.

RAJ: Yes, there have. Every time... every time you have allowed a miracle to occur and you have become clearer, you have made a contribution to the Sonship, because what I'm going to call the absence of illumination which seems to be present in the Sonship who is having dreams becomes more illuminated. And so you have made a contribution, an individual contribution to the increased Conscious Experience of Oneness of the Whole Sonship.

SEEKER: 'Cause I let my Light shine. I get it. I...

RAJ: Yeah, that's right.

SEEKER: Then when I was working with what I was talking about...

RAJ: But it's interesting... it's interesting to be aware that the individual contribution you give in that instance is not because you initiated it, but because you set aside your sense of authoritative-self and let God be you more clearly.

SEEKER: Yeah. Being clueless brought me there, but I had to let go of being clueless as, you know, that's not something I can hang on to and go into that experience.

RAJ: That's correct.

SEEKER: And when I was asking I got the... which I'm finding that you are very willing to work with concepts, and work with me in concepts, whereas I'm finding that my Guide is not very willing to work with me conceptually. But, and I don't know where it came from, but I got the idea that what we're talking about was Zen. That when I was joining with the flower, or with the wood that I was working on...

RAJ: I can understand why your Guide doesn't. And I'm not going to join you right now in conceptualizing it as being like Zen. [some audience laughter] Stop it.

SEEKER: That was a concept?

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: But it's talking and somebody had an experience.

RAJ: Ah. Somebody had an experience.

SEEKER: And then they conceptualized it.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And then somebody wrote it down. And somebody fixed their motorcycle using that concept. [some audience laughter]

RAJ: Yes. And...

SEEKER: And get over it.

RAJ: But let's... but talk to me about the one who had the experience. And talk to me about the experience. And talk to me about you're having the experience. And to hell with the letters "z-e-n," or a concept. We've been talking for a number of weeks based on what we're reading in A Course In Miracles. Tonight I told you that the athlete who actually let's himself into the experience is further along than you are, further along than what we've been talking about. What we're talking about, we're talking about for the purpose of leading you to a point of curiosity great enough to let yourself abandon yourself to the Flow, to the Movement. And so to hell with the word "Zen." To hell with the words, "a course in miracles." If it doesn't register with you that we're at the bottom line talking about your abandoning your present sense of yourself and not getting hung up on the process by which this sense of yourself apparently yields to What You Truly Are,...

PAUL: I'm sorry this is me, Paul. I lost it. [pause] He's continuing.

RAJ: ...you will not begin to be engaged in the movement, the transformational movement of coming back into your Right Mind.

SEEKER: I won't be engaged in it?

RAJ: No, because you'll be too self-satisfied.

SEEKER: Well, it felt good when I, you know, had this experience of harmony and I saw life as good. And, you know, I mean this week that felt good.

RAJ: Okay. Put simply, until you realize that it's all about an experience, and you're willing to abandon making a great deal out of your process, you won't yield into the experience, you won't engage in the experience, and therefore you will not take... you will not take the first essential step which constitutes the return of your Sanity.

SEEKER: Damn. All them big books I read screwed me right up.

RAJ: What you let them do to you, what you made them do to you, screwed you up. If they had managed to inspire you to abandon any sense of self-confidence that you thought you had, then you would not be screwed up, because you would have let yourself into that place where God can register with you and reveal to you that He is All There Is of you, and that you are not anything of what you had been imagining you were.

SEEKER: And that happened, too. I mean that happened, too. That was part of the experience of some places in some books.

RAJ: Yes. But what the books did to you that wasn't helpful is the use you put the books to.

SEEKER: Yeah. The metaphysical models and the conceptualizing everything.

RAJ: Indeed.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So we should let go to the Flow, realizing that All There Is is God, and we're in Heaven, and there is nothing bad that can happen to us. But that gets pretty hard 'cause sometimes things look pretty scary and that knocks us right out of this Flow.

RAJ: It can tempt you to get out of the Flow.

SEEKER: So even when it's scary, we should push right ahead and say...

RAJ: No. You should.... Pushing ahead is willfulness.

SEEKER: [laughing] Just let it come on. Come on, bring it on?

RAJ: No. Because what's scaring you is not What The It Really Is, but your misperception of It. And so you've got to stop right there where the scariness is occurring and reach beyond your spontaneous definitions based on your past experience to say, "Father, what is the Meaning here? Father, how do I see the Wholeness of Being identified here where I am afraid that lack or loss is going to occur?" You must persist in substantiating the connection. Because when you become afraid, scared, it means you have already withdrawn into a private perception.

SEEKER: Scared is just a sign that we're out of the Flow.

RAJ: And out of the communion. And out of your connectedness, your connected experience of the Allness of God. And therefore, not connected where the uncovering of the Movement of God that has to be happening there, can be revealed to you as What It Really Is. Yes, it gets scary. But it only gets scary to your ego.

SEEKER: Because we can't be harmed at all in Truth because of Where We Are and What We Are.

RAJ: But it's scary to your ego because it means that it can't be in control. And you are not honoring your ego, and that scares your ego, because the one thing, as I've said, that the ego cannot defend itself against is disregard. So, yes. Yes, it can seem to get scary. That's not inevitable. But when it does, it means that you have been willing to distance yourself from the communion and look at it all by yourself. And you've got to reverse that.

SEEKER: But that's what we think everybody else here is doing. Because we think there is an "everybody else" here, and so it's hard to take the step acknowledging that there is no "everybody else" here, but only the Son of God.

RAJ: The Infinite One That I Am.

SEEKER: The Infinite One That I Am.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Expressing as...

RAJ: And so the ego throws out this fantastic suggestion that you may be able to experience clarity and be in your peace in this situation, but that doesn't mean that everyone else will. And everyone else still has their mutually-agreed-upon definitions of everything with which they try to govern you, and that will put you at risk. And therefore, it may not be wise for you to continue to yield to the Flow, because it will cause you to be vulnerable.

Now, the fact is that conflict cannot be experienced in Unity Consciousness. Conflict can only be experienced by one who is choosing to look at things by himself. And so the one who is afraid that he could be at a disadvantage—even if he is clear, because others aren't—is seeing the inevitable conflict, or is experiencing the inevitable inner conflicted-ness that is inseparable from having been willing to look at things privately. And therefore, has lost his peace, which is the fundamental element of Unity Consciousness in which, if he had chosen to stay there, he would find himself able to be utterly appropriate, whether others seemed to have seen the Truth or not, and that resolution will occur and vulnerability will not. But that takes trust. And that takes willingness. And it takes Someone Who Is Awake to tell you what is happening so that you can recognize it, and dare to trust, where you couldn't have mustered up the courage to do it based on the insufficient information you currently had. Okay.

Let's continue.

READER: When the Atonement has been completed, all talents will be shared by all the Sons of God. God is not partial. All His children have His total Love, and all His gifts are freely given to everyone alike.

RAJ: It is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom—All of Himself.

Continue.

READER: “Except ye become as little children” means that unless you fully recognize your complete dependence on God...

RAJ: Oh, there it is. [audience laughter] There’s the deep, dark secret that’s hidden in the darkness. There it is bold as life. “Except ye become as little children” means that unless you fully recognize—fully—fully without reserve—fully recognize your complete dependence on God.

Continue.

READER: ...you cannot know the real power of the Son in his true relationship with the Father.

RAJ: And I won’t tell you, and no one will tell you what that means ahead of time, [small laugh] because your ego will grab hold of it and see it as its ultimate potential if it shuts up until you get to that realization. And to whatever degree your ego can be slipped into your back pocket so that it can get into the Kingdom of Heaven, you will not get there, because you will not fully recognize your complete dependence on God. And that’s why I mentioned last week that once you realize your complete dependence on God, and joining occurs fully, you will still be completely dependant on God because you were never created as an independent anything.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Hallelujah.

RAJ: That’s how absolute this is.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Always be a part of God.

RAJ: Now...

RAJ READING: “Except ye become as little children” means that unless you fully recognize your complete dependence on God, you cannot know the real power of the Son in his true relationship with the Father.

RAJ: That’s as far as one can go in encouraging you, because your ego says that to be completely dependant means to have no power. But this is telling you that when you do acknowledge your complete dependence, your total personal incompetence, you will know the real power of the Son in his true relationship with the Father. It is not going to be a loss of any kind.

Continue.

READER: The specialness of God’s Sons does not stem from exclusion but from inclusion.

RAJ: Indeed.

READER: All my brothers are special. If they believe they are deprived of anything, their perception becomes distorted. When this occurs the whole family of God, or the Sonship, is impaired in its relationships.

RAJ: The whole family.

If just two, because one can't do it by himself, if just two move into distorted perception, the Whole Sonship becomes impaired in its relationships. Impaired only this far, in that those two who mutually joined in a definition at odds with What The Father Was Being are unavailable to the rest, and out of all of the Sonship there are two whose relationship is impaired with the rest. But everyone, all of the Brotherhood—and I put this in quote[s]—“suffers an impairment of relationship when just two decide to become independent and behave as though they are and ignore the rest of the Brotherhood.” It does not cause all of the rest of the Brotherhood that has not indulged in these mutual definitions to have impaired relationships with each other.

SEEKER: Is it ever been that there's no one not Awake?

RAJ: Of course. You might say in the beginning.

SEEKER: Ancient times.

RAJ: No. It would be better to think that it was in this very moment. You're not having an accumulated experience of ignorance. You're having a current experience of ignorance. [audience laughter] It's at this very moment [audience laughter] that you're choosing to not be Awake.

So there, see there's another concept. Tonight I'm not going to go with you there anymore than your Guide will. Stop conceptualizing. You can see that it gets you into trouble. Because you can paint a picture of ancient times, oh, my God, and the dinosaur bones. [audience laughter] And the caveman if there really was a caveman.

SEEKER: I just get so excited.

RAJ: But the point is that when you draw this very creative picture of time, ancient pillars and...

SEEKER: You're better at it than I am.

RAJ: Indeed. [audience laughter.] Indeed. And submerged civilizations...

SEEKER: Wow.

RAJ: ...with the fish swimming around.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Atlantis.

RAJ: And you create these marvelous images.

Well, for one thing, you can come to the conclusion that because your ignorance was so long in developing, it must be going to take an equally long time for it to be gotten out of. But the fact is that it was at this very moment that you created a picture of the past. And it's in this very moment that you're choosing not to be Awake. And it's in this very moment that you are already the Ultimate Divine Being that God Is Being right there where I see you. That is what is here at this very moment.

So stop conceptualizing. Stop making it hard for yourself by having these incredible pictures. And begin to be curious in this moment to see the Ultimate that's going on right now. I said last week, you are experiencing Eternity right now. There is nothing else to be experienced. And you are experiencing Reality at this moment. There is nothing else to be experienced. It's not off in the future. And it's not unavailable in the moment. But you've got to start being curious. As I've said before, you've got to be willing to look with innocent eyes—eyes that are not looking through preconceptions where you see what you expect to see.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: I had some experiences this week of letting my Light shine.

RAJ: Yes. But don't slip back into the old habits. Do your best not to get into concepts.

SEEKER: That's been what's the conversation's been going on.

RAJ: Indeed. Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: We have the Brotherhood. We have Awakened Brothers. We have unawakened Brothers. And all of them also are fully present right here, right now.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: Because there is no other place, there is no off in China for all those Brothers to be, except in our conceptualization, because those Brothers also are right here, right now, with us as present as each of the bodies I see sitting here in this particular expression of the Sonship.

RAJ: That is correct. And every single one of them is completely aware of everything that is happening here, right now, and also aware of what is happening at other places in the Universe that have nothing to do with A Course In Miracles, or anything to do with those who are in a process of awakening. There is nothing unavailable to the mind that is not insisting upon having a separate, private perception of things. All that is going on is being experienced simultaneously. You are correct.

EARLIER SEEKER: Or a concept.

RAJ: No. It is not a concept. [lots of audience laughter]. Turn it into a concept and [snap of the fingers] lose the learning.

SEEKER: Indeed. [audience laughter]

RAJ: Now continue.

READER: Ultimately, every member of the family of God must return.

RAJ: Because they never left. [single audience laugh] They... ultimately everyone is bound to realize where they are.

EARLIER SEEKER: Without a map.

RAJ: Indeed.

Continue.

READER: The miracle calls him to return because it blesses and honors him, even though he may be absent in spirit.

RAJ: Yes.

READER: “God is not mocked” is not a warning but a reassurance. God would be mocked if any of His creations lacked holiness.

RAJ: Or lacked Ultimate-ness. Or lacked what He had created, what He had expressed of Himself right there, which was All of Himself.

Continue.

READER: The creation is whole, and the mark of wholeness is holiness. Miracles are affirmations of Sonship, which is a state of completion and abundance.

RAJ: Pretty simple. Miracles are un-coverings of What You Already Are. And What You Already Are is complete and abundant. Miracles are like glimpses that afford you a truer sense of yourself, which naturally leads to further glimpses.

Continue.

READER: Whatever is true is eternal, and cannot change or be changed. Spirit is therefore unalterable because it is already perfect, but the mind can elect what it chooses to serve. The only limit put on its choice is that it cannot serve two masters. If it elects to do so, the mind can become the medium by which spirit creates along the line of its own creation. If it does not freely elect to do so, it retains its creative potential but places itself under tyrannous rather than Authoritative control.

RAJ: Yes. Because if it chooses for the voice for fear—there are only two voices—the Voice for Truth and the voice for fear—if it chooses for the voice for fear, then everything that follows will be one form of defense or another. And defense is always attack. And so it becomes tyrannical in its attempts to control life so that the threat it perceives doesn't harm it. In the process, it harms others, apparently.

Continue. It says it right here.

READER: As a result it imprisons, because such are the dictates of tyrants.

RAJ: Yes. However, it only imprisons those who have also mutually agreed to these terms.

I don't agree to them, so whenever any of you gets tyrannical, I just smile. It doesn't strike fear in my heart, because I haven't joined you in your mutually-agreed-upon definition that causes you to see everything in a polarized state, that causes you to see Unity as polarity. And which automatically calls for defense.

Continue.

READER: To change your mind means to place it at the disposal of true Authority.

RAJ: Yes. To change your mind initially appears to be you abandoning your mind, because you think that thinking is the indication of the presence of a mind. You think that if there is a mind present, or if mind is functioning, it is functioning as thinking. But it isn't true.

To change your mind means to choose again. You have only two choices. To listen to and obey the voice for fear, or to listen to and obey the Voice for Truth. This does mean abandoning your thinking. But when you have abandoned your thinking, you find you are still conscious. And when you're not thinking, there is no voice for fear speaking, ever. And in the silence you can hear the Voice for Truth and place your mind at the disposal of it.

Continue.

READER: The miracle is a sign that the mind has chosen to be led by me in Christ's service.

RAJ: Oh, darn it. There's that word "led" again. [audience laughter] Led like sheep. Don't you have a lot of derogatory phrases relative to being led? Led around by the nose.

Well, if you're not led by me, if you are not led by an Awakened Brother in Christ's service, then you're still choosing to hold onto a supposed capacity that you think you have to be authoritative on your own. And the fact is that you're being duped. Because if you're not listening to me, if you're not listening to the Voice for Truth, you are listening to the voice for fear and you're not succeeding in being a self on your own that has a capacity to think on its own and be creative on its own.

You have only two choices. To be led around by the Voice for Truth, or to be led around by the voice for fear. Either way you're going to be led. I don't mean you specifically. The only thing is that when you're led around by the voice for fear, the voice for fear lets you believe that you're doing it yourself. And doesn't that feel good?

Continue.

READER: The abundance of Christ is the natural result of choosing to follow Him. All shallow roots must be uprooted, because they are not deep enough to sustain you. The illusion that shallow roots can be deepened, and thus made to hold, is one of the distortions on which the reverse of the Golden Rule rests. As these false underpinnings are given up, the equilibrium is temporarily experienced as unstable.

RAJ: Yes. You all had that experience.

Continue.

READER: However, nothing is less stable than an upside-down orientation. Nor can anything that holds it upside down be conducive to increased stability.

SEEKER: So the Golden Rule is do unto others as you would have them do unto you. And the reverse of the Golden Rule is do it to others before they do it to you? Is that...

RAJ: That is a fair rendition, yes.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Do it to others before they do what you think they're going to do to you. Powerful, isn't it?

SEEKER: It's big business.

RAJ: You create a picture of another through the use of your imagination without checking in with God first to see if that's the Truth. And then you act toward them, based on the picture you have created. And you do to them whatever you pictured them doing to you. Yes.

It's upside-down thinking to think that you have any authority separate and apart from your Source, any capacity for creativity on your own, any apparent capacity to actually be reasonable, or to express reason that is valuable. It is upside-down thinking to think that you are an original thinker. It is upside-down thinking to think that you can be a leader. It's all the insulting things that you really are—helpless, incompetent, incapable, unable, and unreal...

PAUL: I'm sorry. Just that I... that's me, Paul, [who] said I'm sorry. Just a moment.

RAJ: ...and unreal—in the sense of being a presence which is refining itself and engaged in actual real processes of awakening. You see? It's so insulting. But it's all true. And if the Truth of it can register with you, it will cause you to withdraw your intensity and your investment and your commitment to furthering all of the things that are not insulting to you, which the ego tells you is true about you, and actually beginning to reach out and say "Help." Knowing that in the act of genuinely saying "Help," you provide the environment and the occasion for a miracle, a sudden shift in perception. And any one of those miracles can be the first domino that causes a spontaneous and total awakening [snap of the fingers] now into the awareness of What You Truly Are and were, the moment before when the domino... when the first domino fell. And that it's only a blink of an eye, time wise, between your ignorance and your Ultimate Total Clarity. I can't say it any more clearly than that.

And with that good news we will end for the evening.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

You will be Awake before we get to the end of this book [a lot of laughter by everyone] at this rate.

SEEKER: Is that a promise? [a lot of laughter by everyone] Who said that, Paul or Raj?

RAJ: Not Paul.

SEEKER: Is that a promise?

ANOTHER SEEKER: We are kind of taking our time.

ANOTHER SEEKER: We'll be dead before we get to the end of this book.
[more laughter]

ANOTHER SEEKER: 'Cause I always heard that we couldn't take it all at once. Like this business of a half of a blink, well, I... boy, that's everything to me. But then I've heard other comments that it wouldn't be fair to us if we got it that fast. You know, we couldn't take it.

RAJ: It will happen... it will happen at the fastest rate it can without your experiencing a loss of identity in the process, because there is only One You, and that identicalness, you might say, that inseparable Oneness of You must remain intact as your experience of what you are grows into Wholeness. And if you can bear it, you might say, it can happen in an instant.

SEEKER: What's the likelihood of that at this point in time?

RAJ: It doesn't matter. That isn't where your attention should be.

SEEKER: I know. I know that. I just thought I might get lucky. [laughter]
[with the mic now] I just thought I might get lucky. [laughing]

RAJ: I understand.

SEEKER: Well, because you surprise me all the time, you know. Every time I think I've got it figured out, you know, where you're coming from, then you throw a curveball in, you know. So I might as well...

RAJ: That's because it doesn't work to conceptualize and think you have it pegged.

SEEKER: Right. Right.

RAJ: The minute you think you have it pegged, you have yourself like a butterfly mounted on an exhibit board. You are pegged, and you are stabilized, and you are stuck, and you are immobilized.

SEEKER: Or I can't take it all at once, so I better not expect it to happen in half a blink.

RAJ: Indeed. Indeed.

SEEKER: Well, I'm happy to hear that.

RAJ: Okay.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 1 – THE MEANING OF MIRACLES
Section – THE ILLUSION OF NEEDS
And Section – DISTORTIONS OF MIRACLE IMPULSES
First Edition – p. 11 / Second Edition – p. 13

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: Welcome, and welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.
We will start right here.

READER: The Illusion of Needs

You who want peace can find it only by complete forgiveness. No learning is acquired by anyone unless he wants to learn it and believes in some way that he needs it.

RAJ: Let's... let's stop there.

RAJ READING: You who want peace can find it only by complete forgiveness.

RAJ: So obviously something held as unforgiven in your consciousness is what deprives you of your peace. What is something that is unforgiven? You often think that it is something someone else has done that has caused you to be upset with them and you have yet to forgive them for what they did.

But I will tell you that what needs to be forgiven is that of the Presence of God which you have decided to define as something other than God. And that could be a leaf, or a rock. It could be something, anything, that you say, "Oh, [taps on the table] it's just matter." The moment you say, "Oh, it is just matter," you have decided not to see God there.

If you're going to see God there, you will say, "Oh, [taps on the table] Spirit," and you will be curious to experience the fullness of Spirit that is embodied there. But as long as you say, "Oh, [taps on the table] it's just matter," you've denied What It Is, you are holding it to be something different, and you have separated yourself from the Conscious Experience of God. And so forgiveness needs to be given to whatever it is that you have defined as something other than God.

And forgiveness amounts to the abandonment of your commitment to your personal definition of the Presence of God as something other than the Presence of God. Forgiveness is the abandonment of the definitions you have given to everything. The Presence of God doesn't need to be given a definition. It simply needs to be embraced and experienced. So whatever you have given a definition to needs to be forgiven. Not for what it did. It needs to be abandoned, the definition needs to be abandoned by you so that there is a space within you for What It Really Is to register with you.

RAJ READING: You who want peace can find it only by complete forgiveness.

RAJ: By being completely willing not to energize and be convinced of any definition you have made-up and applied to the Presence of God that makes the Presence of God appear to you to be something other than God. You see?

RAJ READING: No learning is acquired by anyone unless he wants to learn it and believes in some way that he needs it.

RAJ: Well, I'll tell you something. You guys learn a whole lot by virtue of being very creative in the definitions you give to everything, and then memorizing your definition and making commitment to it. That's learning.

RAJ READING: No learning is acquired by anyone unless he wants to learn it and believes in some way that he needs it.

RAJ: And I'll tell you that literally, waking up, coming back into your Right Mind is not really a process of learning. It's a process of unlearning. You don't need to learn about Reality. The Experience of Reality is utterly natural to you. And you'll find that it's what's present as your Conscious Experience of Being when you willingly abandon your cherished definitions of everything, and each other, and yourselves.

Continue.

Okay.

SEEKER: Could you explain the relationship of a miracle to forgiveness?

RAJ: Well, a miracle is a sudden shift of perception which occurs in an undefended moment. An undefended moment is a moment which isn't full of your consciously defining something. However, you can experience an influx of insight voluntarily. A miracle happens involuntarily.

And you can choose to look at the Sweet Peas, or the glass on the table, and desire to experience What It Truly Is, with a willingness to invalidate any definition whatsoever you might have of it, and have the influx of clarity come. And that wouldn't be defined as a miracle.

SEEKER: Right. It's forgiveness.

RAJ: Yes.

READER: While lack does not exist in the creation of God, it is very apparent in what you have made. It is, in fact, the essential difference between them. Lack implies that you would be better off in a state somehow different from the one you are in.

RAJ: Isn't it interesting? The minute you take, let us say, the Sweet Pea and you say, "Oh, it's part of the plant kingdom. It arrived in my experience through a process of evolution; a physical evolution through chance and natural selection. It's part of the physical universe which originated with the big bang. And God has nothing to do with it." Well, you know what? The moment you define anything in your experience as something other than God, you have deprived yourself of the Conscious Experience of What It Is and you're in a state of need.

Now, although you might enjoy the Sweet Peas as what you have defined them to be, it's like there's a hole in you. There's an emptiness in you, because the Experience of What It Divinely Is should be naturally and unavoidably available to you, and it's not, because you've got that space filled with your definition. And so there is an emptiness that you cannot identify. You can't identify what's missing because you're in an act of denying What It Is.

So this state of need impels you to improve your situation. It impels you to get out of the need. And it tells you to look for the fulfillment of that emptiness in the world of your own definitions. And that's why you're constantly trying to improve yourself, and that's why you're constantly trying to improve your world, and so on, and so forth. When the only thing that will remove the need is for you to abandon your definitions and leave... leave an empty space where your definition had been so that the Presence of God that was always there might register with you.

The dissatisfaction which accompanies lack causes you to look in the wrong place for fulfillment. It implies that you would be better off in a state somehow different from the one you are in. And this is why I keep homing in on the fact that the only thing confronting you, the only thing in your face is the Kingdom of Heaven, and right here, right now, right with the Sweet Peas, right with the glass table top, the carpeting, your fingernails, whatever. Right there is, right here is where your attention needs to be given with the curiosity to see the more of What Reality Is than your definition is allowing you to see. The answer is not a state somehow different from the one you are in, or a place different from the one you are in.

READER: Until the “separation,” which is the meaning of the “fall,” nothing was lacking. There were no needs at all. Needs arise only when you deprive yourself.

RAJ: And the only thing, the only thing you can deprive yourself of is the Conscious Experience of God, because there isn't anything else available for you to deny.

Continue.

READER: You act according to the particular order of needs you establish.

RAJ: You establish. Yes.

READER: This, in turn, depends on your perception of what you are.

RAJ: Yes. And if you perceive yourself to be an independent authorizer, you will have all that comes from a conscious intent to be separate and on your own, with lots to forgive—meaning lots to abandon, lots to stop investing your commitment to/in.

Continue. There it is, next sentence.

READER: A sense of separation from God is the only lack you really need correct. This sense of separation would never have arisen if you had not distorted your perception of truth, and had thus perceived yourself as lacking. The idea of order of needs arose because, having made this fundamental error, you had already fragmented yourself into levels with different needs. As you integrate you become one, and your needs become one accordingly. Unified needs lead to unified action, because this produces a lack of conflict.

SEEKER: So there's two things here I would like clarification on. One is it says, “as you integrate.” Okay, what does it mean by “integrate”?

RAJ: As you become less fragmented. As you have fewer parts of you warring with each other within yourself. You can have arguments in your mind, can't you? Well, how many of you are there? [some mild audience amusement] Just one. But as long as you can have arguments, as long as a number of points of view can be entertained and discussed, you are experiencing fragmentation.

SEEKER: So, oftentimes when I'm doing things, I'll say... I'll feel like I'm struggling with what I'm doing and I'll say, “Why does everything seem so difficult? Why does everything seem so difficult to do?" Is that, is that akin to being in conflict with oneself?

RAJ: Indeed.

You're not here to have questions or answers. You only have questions and you only try to answer them yourself when you are experiencing an unconsciousness of Truth, an unconsciousness of Reality, an unconsciousness of the Kingdom of Heaven that's the only thing going on.

That's why Unity occurs when you are willing to yield to the Holy Spirit. Because when you're willing to yield to the Holy Spirit, you are withdrawing investment of energy and faith and trust in the various parts of you that can argue with each other, and that can have various perceptions of reality. You're one person. You're one. Let's just put it that way. You're one. You are single.

And you can look at this person and say, "I love him," and you can look at someone else and say "I can't stand his guts." Well, there's conflict right there. And someone else, you'll say, "Hmm, they're a pretty good friend." And another one, "They're a friend, but I wouldn't trust my life to them." And you place value judgements of varying kinds on various people, or various environments, and so on. And what this is expressing is an inconsistency within you of your capacity to be Love at all times. You see? And this is called fragmentation. And depending upon the amount of love you are willing to extend and embrace another with, will govern how you experience that individual. And it will be conflicted.

Now, but the point is this. That you, as God Is Being you, are the Presence of Love, which constantly looks with Love, and consistently sees the Christ and the Truth in everything your eyes fall upon. Now how do you get from a fragmented/conflicted lover to the state of being that God is manifesting there as you? You do it by finding another Source for evaluating everything than your own fragmented mind, which is the Holy Spirit, or your Guide, or Anyone Who Is Awake. And then you lean heavily on their judgement. And you stay with it so that you might get the feel of it, so that you might remember that this state of being, this state of mind is your natural state of mind and represents you most truly, so that you never abandon it again for an evaluated love. You see?

SEEKER: So this is what it refers to when it says, "unified needs lead to unified action"?

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: So the unified need is we recognize that the only real need that we have is the separation from God.

RAJ: Say that again.

SEEKER: Okay. In the first sentence, it said, "A sense of separation from God is the only lack you really need to correct."

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And so that... this unified... that is the unified... that's when your needs are unified, then you recognize that you have... that that's the only thing that you're lacking.

RAJ: Yes, that your only need is to be...

SEEKER: Joined again.

RAJ: ...joined with God.

SEEKER: Yes. And this unified action that it speaks of is when you say, like for instance in the struggle example I used of Holy Spirit, or my Guide, or God, "How do you... how should I do this? You tell me how this should be done."

RAJ: Indeed. Indeed. Indeed. And then you act upon the revelation. You act upon the insight, the clarification.

SEEKER: Just like you would say, "Father, how would you have me see this person?"

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: "How do I protect myself?" That's an expression of a conflicted need. And the way you protect yourself is through defense, which is a conflicted action, which will generate conflict. You see?

A unified need, the acknowledgement that you need God's Perspective, that you need not to be functioning anymore at odds with God because the conflict is too uncomfortable, that promotes a unified response, a unified answer, a unity in your experience. And that's the only way it's going to come. There are no alternatives.

The only alternative there seems to be is the one you're employing, and it's hell, isn't it? It's not that pleasant. It's a constant struggle, whether it's a harsh one or a gentle one. It's still a struggle.

Okay.

READER: The idea of orders of need, which follows from the original error that one can be separated from God, requires correction at its own level before the error of perceiving levels at all can be corrected. You cannot behave effectively while you function on different levels. However, while you do, correction must be introduced vertically from the bottom up.

RAJ: Ah, yes. And here we are back in the barrel. And it works from the bottom up.

The starting place is the bottom, as we've discussed a couple of weeks ago. When you hit the bottom of the barrel, that is where you have the best chance of a breakthrough, because that's where you feel the least competent.

But I'll tell you something else. When you get to the bottom of the barrel, if you yield, the bottom will fall out, and you will find yourself not in the barrel. And there will be no need to work yourself up from the bottom to the top of the barrel. And this is important to understand.

It says:

RAJ READING: You cannot behave effectively while you function on different levels. However, while you do, correction must be introduced vertically from the bottom up.

RAJ: This was said so that you might understand that the starting point is at the bottom. That is its main purpose—this image of bottom and top, from the bottom up.

RAJ READING: This is because you think you live in space, where concepts such as “up” and “down” are meaningful.

RAJ: The problem is being in the barrel in the first place. And whether you're at the top, or the bottom, is important to you while you value your definitions of reality more than the True Meaning of Reality. And the answer lies in escape, if you will, from the barrel. And if you get to the bottom of the barrel where you have no more energy available to you to try to succeed as an independent entity, and you truly give up, you will fall through the bottom of the barrel and be out of it.

And what I'm stating demonstrates the next sentence.

RAJ READING: Ultimately, space is as meaningless as time. Both are merely beliefs.

RAJ: Let's continue.

READER: The real purpose of this world is to use it to correct your unbelief.

RAJ: Okay. We talked last week about learning-tools. The minute you take one small part of the Kingdom of Heaven and define it as something other than the Kingdom of Heaven, that thing becomes a learning-tool, because that thing stands there representing a requirement upon you to revisit its Real Meaning so that you might not be confused and conflicted within yourself. Whatever you take of God and give another definition to becomes a learning-tool for you, because it is something which you have to bring your attention to with a conscious desire to see it for What It Is in order to return to your Sanity. It's always the things that you have denied the Reality of by giving your own unreal definition to, that becomes the place where correction is required. Thus, it becomes a learning-tool. And once correction has occurred, it ceases to have that function as a learning-tool, because it is no longer a place where you're making an error of judgment. You see?

The real purpose of this world—and this world right now as far as you're all concerned is exactly what you're defining it as, even though it's actually the Kingdom of Heaven—the real purpose of this world is to use it to correct your unbelief. "I don't believe it's God. I believe it's a physical world that started from a big bang." Well, that's your belief. That's your belief. Your belief causes you not to be able to believe What It Truly Is, and thus your belief is an unbelief. Does that make sense?

So as long as you're looking at the Kingdom of Heaven and calling it "the world," it becomes a learning-tool because it sits there calling for correction. The Kingdom of Heaven sits there calling for correction of your mind.

And once you let your mind be changed by abandoning your interpretation, or your definition, and you let the Kingdom of Heaven register with you, which is What It Is, then it's no longer a learning-tool. It doesn't serve that purpose anymore. But it doesn't disappear. You see it for What It Is—the Kingdom of Heaven. And you rejoice. And you're not preoccupied with it anymore, because you aren't in a state of conflict. And you're not in need of protection or defense, so you don't have to watch it to see what it's going to do to you next. And in the freedom from not having to be on guard, you might say, you can get on with enjoying Reality, enjoying communion with all of the Brotherhood simultaneously, experiencing bliss, because you're no longer engaged in surviving the odds, in surviving from the terror that awaits you around the corner, and so on. You see?

Continue.

READER: You can never control the effects of fear yourself, because you made fear, and you believe in what you made. In attitude, then, though not in content, you resemble your Creator, Who has perfect faith in His creations because He created them. Belief produces the acceptance of existence. That is why you can believe what no one else thinks is true. It is true for you because it was made by you.

RAJ: I'm going to make a fine distinction here.

RAJ READING: Belief produces the acceptance of existence.

RAJ: Knowing produces the acceptance of Being. I am indicating thereby that the word "existence" refers to what you are experiencing in a separated state. The word "existence" has an opposite—nonexistence. The word "Being" does not have an opposite.

Now, as you invite clarity, as you invite clarification, as you are willing to say, "Not my will, but Thine be done," and then listen for it, and then be congruent with it, your beliefs improve. And you experience the results of your improved belief, but the goal is not an "ultimate belief." The goal is to completely abandon belief in favor of the Direct Experience of Knowing that is present as your Conscious Experience of Being when you are not thinking.

And so the void that one arrives in as a result of abandoning thinking is pregnant with Reality, is pregnant with Infinity, is pregnant with Eternity, is pregnant with the Conscious Experience of Everything from God's Point Of View. And that is the Conscious Experience of, "It is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom."

You can believe what no one else thinks is true and it is true for you because it was made by you, but that doesn't mean it's desirable.

Let's continue.

READER: All aspects of fear are untrue because they do not exist at the creative level, and therefore do not exist at all. To whatever extent you are willing to submit your beliefs to this test, to that extent are your perceptions corrected. In sorting out the false from the true, the miracle proceeds along these lines:

*Perfect love casts out fear.
If fear exists,
Then there is not perfect love.*

But,

*Only perfect love exists.
If there is fear,
It produces a state that does not exist.*

Believe this and you will be free. Only God can establish this solution, and this faith is His gift.

RAJ: So the answer to the dilemma of the human condition only God can establish. Whew, such simplicity. Let it sink in. It's not up to you. You can't do it. You never were supposed to be able to do it. And you can't do the impossible. Accept it.

And let go of the false sense responsibility that somehow you are supposed to be able to do the impossible. That is the suggestion that the ego provides you with. It's the taunt. It's the tease. It's the bait. "Of course, you can do the impossible. God gave you a mind of your own. God gave you the ability to think. God gave you the ability to reason. There must have been a reason that he gave you this." Well, God didn't give you a mind. God didn't even create you separate from Himself.

You are Mind—you're not a body with a mind. You're a Mind in which there is the experience of body, and glass-topped table [taps on table], and Sweat Peas, and trees, and fingernails, and everything—a universe. You are Mind—you don't have a mind. You are Consciousness—you don't have a consciousness. You are Mind. You aren't something separate from Mind that can use Mind for purposes of your own. You are Mind.

Only God can establish the solution. So the only task you have in front of you is to yield to God. That's the only intelligent act that you can engage in as long as you are in an illusory experience which has been caused by your decision to act on your own, or to attempt to act on your own, or to fool yourself into believing that you can. Again, this is where the utter simplicity of the answer lies.

I keep saying to Paul, "Let me respond to everything." You might say, "Well, obviously Paul hasn't managed to do that yet. What chance do I have?" Well, I'll tell you something. It's the only answer. And so whether Paul has managed to do it or not, get on with it yourselves, and maybe you will do it before Paul does. But when you do it, it will make it easier for Paul, and when Paul does it, it will make it easier for you. But there isn't any other option. And the option is utterly simple.

Stop trying to be something. Give up! Because when you give up, the capital "S" Something that you are, That Which You Divinely Are will fill you up. Your memory will return of What You Divinely Are, and you will come into the fullness of your Being and the Joy of Being. And the only difference there will be is that you will not be able to say, "I'm a self-made, wonderful being. I'm a self-made, incredibly divine being." But when you are an incredibly wonderful Divine Being, it doesn't make any difference whether you're able to claim personal responsibility for it or not, because you're Sane once again.

RAJ READING: Only God can establish this solution, and this faith is His gift.

RAJ: Let's continue.

SEEKER: May I ask a question?

RAJ: You may.

SEEKER: These last two sentences I find are confusing to me. It says, "Believe this and you will be free." And then it says, "Only God can establish this solution." So, what I'm getting out of this is the solution is to believe this fact.

RAJ: That only Perfect Love exists.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: If there is fear, it produces a state that does not exist.

SEEKER: Right. If you believe that, you will be free.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: However, it says, "Only God can establish this solution." So, what it's saying is that God has already established that only Perfect Love exists?

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Okay.

And then it says, "This faith is His gift to you." So, is what it's saying is that if you open to God, then you take in the faith which allows you to have the belief.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Good. Okay. Thank you.

RAJ: Because you cannot generate the faith from...

SEEKER: What you see.

RAJ: ...a stance of independence.

SEEKER: Right. From what you see in the world. What you see in the world conflicts constantly with what this says.

RAJ: Exactly. Exactly.

SEEKER: So you just have to yield, and the yielding allows the faith to come in.

RAJ: That is correct. Yes.

SEEKER: I see.

RAJ: Let's continue.

READER: Distortions of Miracle Impulses

Your distorted perceptions produce a dense cover over miracle impulses, making it hard for them to reach your own awareness.

RAJ: Oh wow, miracle impulses. Miracle impulses. I said before that the Holy Spirit is your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego. In other words, the Holy Spirit is that part of your Self which you have denied in favor of a tiny definition of yourself that you wish to limit yourself to. Now, the fact that you can never be less than Whole means that the Wholeness of You that has been denied will constantly be asserting Itself against the boundary you are using to hold it back. You see? And this constant insinuation into your conscious awareness of the Wholeness of You is a miracle impulse.

And miracle impulses are constant. Because in spite of the limited area out of the Totality of your Being that you are using to define yourself with, you are Whole all the time. Your limited definition of yourself and your commitment to it, makes it hard for miracle impulses to reach your awareness. That's why it's so helpful to, at least occasionally, be willing to become still, and set them aside, and be curious beyond whatever the limits are of your present sense of yourself. Because that curiosity is an invitation for That Of Yourself which you have denied to come into the territory that you have roped off and said, "Only that which is inside of this rope is me."

Continue.

READER: The confusion of miracle impulses with physical impulses is a major perceptual distortion. Physical impulses are misdirected miracle impulses. All real pleasure comes from doing God's Will.

RAJ: Now, although it isn't said here, we are talking about pleasurable physical impulses are misdirected miracle impulses. Whether it's orgasm, whether it's sexuality, whether it's a hug, whether it's a smile directed toward another—these are conscious attempts to bring into your awareness the unseparated Wholeness of Yourself that you have denied, that you are holding away from yourself.

SEEKER (reader): Do pleasurable physical impulses help us or hinder us towards our own being in the present moment with...

RAJ: It all depends on the motive. If the pleasurable impulse is for self-satisfaction, it doesn't help you.

SEEKER: Could it hinder you, taken from that aspect?

RAJ: Absolutely, because it's selfish. Because although it might be extended toward another, it is not as a gift to another.

SEEKER: It's narcissistic, to use, you know, a pop psychology term.

RAJ: That is correct.

It also, because it lacks consideration for another, is a form of abuse, whether it's mild or intense. An act that is pleasurable for you may be done so as to influence another, or control another. Again, a form of abuse. And it's all aimed at you. So, absolutely, the giving of, the expressing of a pleasurable impulse can be to your disadvantage.

SEEKER: Maybe the opposite of that would be our inviting another one to join us with a moment of mutual joy, or pleasure. Would that be a positive use of it, or a constructive...

RAJ: That would be a positive use of it, but you don't need to go that far. It doesn't have to be dependant on what another does. It has to do with, again, the motive—whether it's to get, or to give. And as long as the Expression of Love physically is in the form, truly the form of a gift, where the reason you are giving it is because you love, where the reason you are giving it is because you honor the one you are giving it to, that's all the further you have to take it in order for it to be beneficial for you in terms of your awakening and not keeping you in the dream.

And it really does amount to a matter of growing up. A child stands always ready to receive. But when the child grows up, he stands (she stands) as a servant to give.

SEEKER: But when...

RAJ: To give genuinely as a gift with no strings, a gift that is not given in order to get. You see?

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: This is because not doing it is a...

RAJ: No. I'm sorry. Start with, "All real pleasure," the sentence before.

READER: All real pleasure comes from doing God's Will.

RAJ: Yes.

Continue.

READER: This is because not doing it is a denial of Self.

SEEKER (reader): Capital "S".

RAJ: Yes.

READER: Denial of Self results in illusions, while correction of the error brings release from it. Do not deceive yourself into believing that you can relate in peace to God or to your brothers with anything external.

RAJ: Indeed. Is anyone not clear on that?

Continue.

READER: Child of God, you were created to create the good, the beautiful and the holy. Do not forget this.

RAJ: Oh, phew. A breath of fresh air. Something pleasant to read. This is certainly encouraging, isn't it?

RAJ READING: Child of God, you were created to create the good, the beautiful and the holy. Do not forget this.

RAJ: And then don't forget how to do it.

Or let's put it this way: don't forget how not to do it. And how not to do it is to indulge in making definitions, committing to them, acting upon them, and then requiring everyone else to act upon them, where you are relating to everyone and everything without joining with One Who Is Awake, or with the Holy Spirit, or with the Father, with a curiosity to see things As They Are so that you might love them truly.

And again I have to bring home the point. When you succeed in being still, when you succeed in abandoning thinking, even if it's momentary or for five minutes or ten minutes, during that period of time in the absence of the busyness of your mind, God's Mind registers with you. Maybe not in Its Totality, maybe only as much as you will allow, which might not be very much. But the experience will be a radically different experience, especially in that it will be absent of fear entirely—which is not an insignificant difference.

Continue.

READER: The Love of God, for a little while, must still be expressed through one body to another, because vision is still so dim.

RAJ: Yes. You're going to have to express it to each other. Why? Well, because the minute you looked at your Brother and Sister and you defined them, gave them a definition of your own, you turned them into a learning-tool. [audience laughter] So you've got to start where the correction is needed.

You see, you... is this making more sense?

AUDIENCE: Yes.

RAJ: Yes.

Continue.

READER: You can use your body best to help you enlarge your perception so you can achieve real vision, of which the physical eye is incapable.

RAJ: Yes. There's just no way to sidestep this. There's just no way to somehow jump from inappropriately expressed miracle impulses to the full blown Conscious Experience of the Mind of God as your own without undoing the very things that took you away from your clear Presence as the Mind of God. And so you must make the correction where the correction is needed. It can't be avoided. Because you can't get back into Sanity while there are still bits of insanity present. And so where you withdrew love, because you preferred to have a slightly twisted perception of your Sister, you've got to slightly untwist that perception. You've got to undo it. And there's no way to sidestep it.

And you say, "Well, she is such a bitch. She is not worth it." Well, there's your definition! You mean to tell me that there really is some place where it is worth it to you to block the Presence of Love that you are? That's what you're saying. Stop it.

RAJ READING: You can use your body best to help you enlarge your perception so you can achieve real vision, of which the physical eye is incapable. Learning to do this is the body's only true usefulness.

RAJ: Just a moment.

And I will say learning to do this is the body's only true usefulness at the moment. When you are no longer holding your Brother, or your Sister, or your whole world, hostage to the definitions you have superimposed upon them, then the body will not need to be used for any purpose relative to regaining your Sanity, because your Sanity will have been regained, and now you won't use your body anymore than you will use any part of the Universe. You will instead stand in awe of the Glory of the Infiniteness of Creation that God Is Being, and your Whole Being will be glorifying God, rather than any single part of the Infinite Manifestation of God.

Yes.

SEEKER: The difficulty is getting from here to there. The way out is to express our love, which from the point where we think of ourselves as bodies we need to express through the body, but that's also our greatest fear, because somebody who just jumps out and starts hugging strangers and going out of their way to being loving is the insane one within this world we've constructed.

RAJ: Indeed. But hugs are not the only means—a smile, a twinkle in your eye, a wave, body language that is not defensive. There are many ways to use the body. Even the use of words is a use of the body. And when the motive is Love and the extension of It, and you were listening to know how to be Love, you will always on the spot know how to be appropriate in any given circumstance so that the one you extend Love to is not overwhelmed by sudden hugs. Whereas someone else will be given a sudden hug because it will fit perfectly.

Continue.

SEEKER: Yes. I understand that. But sometimes the impulse when it's appropriate to give a hug is met within myself with resistance because of the conditioning of the environment which I think I find myself in.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And it seems to be getting more difficult to—well, I'm not sure that's right—to be the Expression of Love as the environment more becomes what my Brothers want to share are their feelings of terror, and their anxieties of war, and their worries of the financial markets, and all of the anxieties coming into the world. It seems to be, I guess maybe it always has been a face off between fear and love.

RAJ: Always. There are no other options.

SEEKER: But it's scary to step across the line, or it appears like it should be scary.

RAJ: That's no excuse not to step across the line, however. It never has been. Either at the bottom line you're going to block your very own Function, your very own Divine Function, and continue to be miserable, or you're going to find a way to be What You Are and express it in the world, and care enough about your fellowman to listen carefully for how to extend it so that it has the best chance of being received without any perception of threat being felt by the one extended to.

SEEKER: And if Guidance asks to do something which seems scary or impossible, we should remember Who It Is that is asking us to do this.

RAJ: You must indeed. And if it is too scary, you must go back to the Source and ask, "Why must I do it? How can I do it without being frightened?" You see? But you don't throw in the towel. And as a general rule, you don't do something that is overwhelmingly scary to you. It is not intelligent. And it's not generally required.

SEEKER: Well, it's not the overwhelmingly scary things that are a problem. Those are, you know, we tend to keep those far away. It's the stuff that comes right up to the line.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And each time maybe, you know, the line is a little further along to the side of love. But each time we approach the line, we're dealing with the fear again.

RAJ: That is correct. And each time you do it, it allows for the next time to not be quite so fearful.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Because you've learned that the fear that you felt was unjustified, even though you couldn't see it before hand. And as you begin to have multiple experiences of the invalidity of the fear that you felt controlled by, the easier it becomes to withhold a spontaneous investment of faith in fear when it presents itself. In other words, the easier it is to be fear less, because you have found that the suggestion of fear was just that—only a suggestion, as a hypnotist uses suggestion.

SEEKER: That sounds an awful lot like saying then moving toward our fears is the way out of our fears.

RAJ: The problem there is that one could go into his head and say, "Okay, I'm going to find all my fears and move toward them," and then you're in charge and off beam. If you just pay attention to life, life will present you with the fear that is your next threshold to discover is not a valid boundary.

SEEKER: So don't move towards anything. Just take what comes without fear, realizing that you are forever within your Father's Loving Embrace.

RAJ: Well, take what comes, and where it elicits fear, you may know you are at a threshold that you're ready to move over, instead of be bound by. You don't overcome fear fearlessly. You overcome fear by not validating it and persisting in spite of it. You persist without energizing it.

SEEKER: Well, I usually, I notice I'm usually pretty scared when I'm being fearless.

RAJ: Indeed. I see what you mean. It is a fearless...

SEEKER: I notice the scare but I move on because I'm being, you know, for whatever inspiration moves me beyond that.

RAJ: Indeed. That isn't correctly identified as being fearless. It is correctly identified as being courageous. When you do something fearlessly, there is no experience of being scared at all, because you are truly fearless—fear is not present. So when you are not being governed by fear that is being felt, because you are inspired by a connection with Love, or a connection with Truth, to move through it, that is courageous.

SEEKER: And does courage lead to fearlessness?

RAJ: Courage expressed, because there is Divine Inspiration for moving past fear, provides you with a real experience of the fact that the fear that you felt held back by was not valid. That experience, which is not at all intellectual, but is now a knowing, puts you in a new place relative to the next boundary that you're going to move through that allows you to move through it with less fear, even though fear will still be present. So it doesn't lead to fearlessness. It leads to a mental clarity, we'll say, that recognizes fear to be not only "not your ally," but useless. And as that begins to dawn on you through successive experiences, it helps bring you to a place where fear does not present itself to you, and you meet needs fearlessly. Not as a result of courage, but because now you are freed up to respond to needs with love and intelligence that is not diluted by, or undermined by, fear and doubt.

You see?

SEEKER: Because the fear is a misperception of the situation through the definitions I have given things that are not their true definition.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: I think I got it.

RAJ: Therefore, the fear is not valid and is not essential to your survival.

SEEKER: So any response where... any response as if the fear was valid will likely be an incorrect response.

RAJ: Exactly.

And when fear is no longer seen by you to be valuable in any way, you will meet every situation, as I said, with more intelligence, more love, and the ability to be utterly appropriate will be much easier.

And I'm telling you all, right now, that this experience of not being confronted by fear is available to you without your having to wake up too much. This is not a monumental feat to arrive at this experience. It's not way down the road in terms of your spiritual growth.

You want to know what the key is? You feel fear when you feel personally responsible. When you begin to consciously ask for help, because you refuse to take personal responsibility, and you begin to get the help, and you establish that habit of joining, and experience the quote "success of being in this fashion," you will find fear dropping out of the picture, because you've found something more useful than fear—Real Help.

What will happen is that it is as though your threshold of fear will become less, and less, and less, so that it takes something humongous to get a little bit of reaction from you. And this is available to all of you in this world, in this workaday world, today.

And the key is not trying to do everything all by yourself, not jumping at the chance to take personal responsibility, but jumping at the chance, jumping at the opportunity to join with me, with the Holy Spirit, with the Father so that you might know how to be utterly appropriate. And the more you do this and the more you hear answers, the more you experience the influx of clarity that makes a difference, the more you will begin to trust your relationship with the Father, or the Holy Spirit, or me, and the less you will value the supposed benefit of being independent and responsible all by yourself. Community, communion, relationship, and commitment to them, is the beginning of the answer, is the beginning of the solution. The breaking of the isolation.

And once again Paul feels that we've had a somber evening [some audience laughter]—heavy duty, no fun—but there was this one high point.

RAJ READING: Child of God, you were created to create the good, the beautiful and the holy. Do not forget this.

RAJ: The somber information, the serious information that I shared was simply an amplification of those two sentences. So I was talking about happy things and how to have happiness. And Paul will have to forgive his perception of what happened this evening.

I love you all and I look forward to next week.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

And Chapter 2 – THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT
Section – THE ORIGINS OF SEPARATION
First Edition – p. 12 / Second Edition – p. 15

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And good evening to everyone listening on the internet as well.

Okay. Start right in.

READER: Fantasy is a distorted form of vision.

RAJ: Yes.

READER: Fantasies of any kind are distortions, because they always involve twisting perception into unreality.

RAJ: Yes. I'm going to interrupt you now.

RAJ READING: Fantasy is a distorted form of vision.

RAJ: In other words, it's a distorted form of Something Real. It isn't a separate independent phenomenon. This is important to understand. It's as I've said before, you can't have a counterfeit of nothing.

RAJ READING: Fantasy is a distorted form of vision.

RAJ: And Vision is Real.

RAJ READING: Fantasies of any kind are distortions, because they always involve twisting perception into unreality.

RAJ: In other words, they always involve twisting the experience of Something Real in a manner that causes it to be perceived as different from What It Really Is. Therefore, you cannot look at anything and say, "This doesn't exist." All you can say is, "The way I'm perceiving it is not valid." And when this is clear, you will understand why I keep saying to give your attention to where you are, give your attention to anything you see, with curiosity to see more than the bias you have applied to Reality causing you to see what you think you see, instead of What Is Really There.

The moment you say, "This is an illusion. This does not exist," it is logical to assume that to give any further attention to it, is a waste of time. And as a result, you withdraw your attention from the very place that Vision would reveal to you the Kingdom of Heaven. This is so important to understand, so that you don't become ungrounded in your metaphysics. So that you don't become ungrounded in your spirituality. So that you don't become ungrounded in your miracle-readiness. Because if you're denying the place where the miracle is going to occur for you, you can't hardly say you're miracle-ready. So it's your brother, it's your sister, it's your husband, your wife, your child, your friend, as I keep saying, the glass top on the table, the leaf, the blossom—each is the threshold of your abandonment of the bias you have given to the way you're looking at them, and the opportunity to have Vision restored, so that you can see What Is Really There.

Continue.

READER: Actions that stem from distortions are literally the reactions of those who know not what they do.

RAJ: Yes. When you have a misunderstanding and act on the basis of it, your actions bear no relation to Reality.

Continue.

READER: Fantasy is an attempt to control reality according to false needs.

RAJ: Yes. But where did the false needs come from? The false needs came after the initiation of the fantasy, because until you formulated this fantasy, you were in complete connection with and unity with All of Reality. It wasn't until the fantasy, the bias, was applied, and you stopped seeing Reality and experiencing your Oneness with it, that a sense of isolation came into the picture; a sense of aloneness, a sense of tininess in the face of infinity. And it wasn't until then that fear entered and a call for defense to protect yourself against the humongous allness of everything that wasn't you any longer. You see? And so then, you began to practice control of everything you saw, to keep you safe, which constituted an even greater denial of Reality, because now you've not only separated yourself from it, you are seeing it as your enemy and actively defending yourself against it.

Continue.

READER: Twist reality in any way and you are perceiving destructively.

RAJ: Now it's important to understand here that this isn't a judgment on you. "You are perceiving destructively. Shame on you." That's not what it's about.

When you twist Reality in any way...

RAJ READING: Twist reality in any way and you are perceiving destructively.

RAJ: You are perceiving in a way that doesn't work. You are perceiving in a way that doesn't allow you to be in harmony with Reality. You're perceiving in a way that causes you to be defended against what in the final analysis is All The Rest Of You, and so you are in a constant state of Self-denial. Destructive... it's not destructive in the sense that anything can be destroyed, because what God has created is unalterable, but it's destructive in the sense that what it accomplishes is not relieving... it contributes nothing to your being Sane.

Continue.

READER: Fantasies are a means of making false associations and attempting to obtain pleasure from them. But although you can perceive false associations, you can never make them real except to yourself. You believe in what you make. If you offer miracles, you will be equally strong in your belief in them. The strength of your conviction will then sustain the belief of the miracle receiver.

RAJ: Yes. But likewise, the strength of your conviction will also sustain the belief of the receiver of your twisted perception of them. So you must be careful how you think about your Brother. You have a responsibility. You have a responsibility because what you think has its effect, and you cannot get away from that. So obviously, you have a choice. You can offer fantasy, or, you can offer miracles.

Make the choice. And let that be your motto everyday this next week. Make the choice for whether you're going to offer fantasy or miracles. And if you're going to offer miracles, you're going to have to abandon your best judgments, your best reasoning, your best thinking, and ask God, "What's going on here? What do I need to say? Who is this that I'm looking at?" So that you might experience insight and see more clearly yourself. So that you might offer that Vision. And the strength of your conviction in that Vision, will sustain the belief of the one receiving the Clarity in your mind.

Continue.

READER: Reality is "lost" through...

RAJ: Fantasies become. The sentence before.

READER: The strength of your conviction will then sustain the belief of the miracle receiver.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: Reality is “lost” through usurpation,...

RAJ: Wow.

The next sentence in the second version, the second edition, is:

RAJ READING: Fantasies become totally unnecessary as the wholly satisfying nature of reality becomes apparent to both giver and receiver.

[Editor’s Note: Raj read the above sentence twice.]

RAJ: Now continue.

READER: Reality is “lost” through usurpation, which produces tyranny. As long as a single “slave” remains to walk the earth, your release is not complete.

RAJ: And as I told you before, as long as a single one of you is not Totally Awake, our release, my release, the release of Those Who Are Awake, is not complete. And that is why we stand on your behalf, and stand with you, and stand ready to be in support of your ever-increasing Clarity.

Continue.

READER: Complete restoration of the Sonship is the only goal of the miracle-minded.

RAJ: Yes.

It is really important for me to emphasize the fact that every one of Us Who Is Awake is devoted to your Awakening. And when the idea is expressed that Those Who Are Awake have too many wonderful things to do to be occupied with you poor souls, don’t let that sink in, don’t let that register with you, and reject it outright.

SEEKER: That’s never a thought of yours, of the Ones That Are Awake, and that they feel sorry for us.

RAJ: Never.

SEEKER: Never. I didn’t think [it was].

RAJ: Never.

But there is an emptiness that we feel, because you don’t see us. You don’t recognize our Presence. And those who have never heard what I’m sharing, experience no hope at having that—our Presence—confirmed in their lives, and don’t even reach out. So there is an emptiness that we are intent upon filling, or illuminating the fullness of, but it’s not with sadness, and there is never any lesser opinion of you than we have of ourselves. Indeed.

Continue.

READER: This is a course in mind training. All learning involves attention and study at some level. Some of the later parts of the course rest too heavily on these earlier sections not to require their careful study. You will also need them for preparation. Without this, you may become much too fearful of what is to come to make constructive use of it. However, as you study these earlier sections, you will begin to see some of the implications that will be amplified later on.

RAJ: That's perfectly clear. Not heavily loaded with spirituality. And not requiring much comment. It simply lets you know that there is much to look forward to, and that you are embarking on something that is far from a flight of fancy, that is significant, that you will be changing and growing, and that it's appropriate for it to be graceful, rather than frightening or difficult.

Okay. Continue.

READER: A solid foundation is necessary because of the confusion between fear and awe to which I have already referred, and which is often made. I have said that awe is inappropriate in connection with the Sons of God, because you should not experience awe in the presence of your equals.

RAJ: And I am your equal, and your Guides are your equals. And as long as you hold me, or any of the Brotherhood Who Are Awake, in an awe-full attitude, it constitutes a means of keeping yourself separate and unequal.

And you know what? You can't enjoy being with a superior. You can't relax in the presence of a superior. And even if the so-called superior is behaving in an utterly-simple loving way with you, you will attribute to it characteristics that are also awe-full. Feelings of not deserving it, but being grateful for it, will creep into the picture, and the relationship will lose its Reality. You see?

You need to know that our relationship is Real, that it's valid, that it is a connection heart-to-heart, and that the only thing that makes it special is that it uncovers to you that you deserve it, which makes it totally un-special, but not insignificant.

Continue.

READER: However, it was also emphasized that awe is proper in the presence of your Creator. I have been careful to clarify my role in the Atonement without either over- or understating it. I am also trying to do the same with yours. I have stressed that awe is not an appropriate reaction to me because of our inherent equality. Some of the later steps in this course, however, involve a more direct approach to God Himself. It would be unwise to start on these steps without careful preparation, or awe will be confused with fear, and the experience will be more traumatic than beatific. Healing is of God in the end. The means are being carefully explained to you. Revelation may occasionally reveal the end to you, but to reach it the means are needed.

RAJ: So now you've been given a little bit of a hint that later on a more direct approach to God is in the cards for you. It implies that that could be overwhelming, and therefore each step of the way has value in reducing your fear of your good. But nevertheless, it's the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom, and He's gifting you with it every single moment. And so, I want you to realize that a Connection with God can happen at any moment that you're undefended against it. And it doesn't have to be way down the road. And so, I ask you to be willing to allow for that to happen. And don't say, "Oh. Well, we haven't gotten to the place in the Course where we're supposed to have a directer approach [a more direct approach], or a Direct Experience of God." God is Love and you don't need to be afraid of it.

God is appearing to you right now. You might say I'm appearing to you right now. But Heaven help you if there's anything added to the mix, such as "a little bit of me." Because I am reflecting the Father, and Paul is reflecting the Father consciously, and so you're in Communion with the Father right now. How frightening is it?

Okay. So, remember that when you look at your Brother, whether your Brother is consciously allowing the Christ expression, which is the Christ allowing God expression, realize that this is, at the bottom line or at the bottom of the barrel, What Your Brother Truly Is, so that you're not fooled by the presentation of ignorance that your Brother or Sister is presenting.

Let us continue.

RAJ READING: Chapter 2

RAJ: We're making headway. [audience laughter]

RAJ READING: THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT

RAJ: That's like beginning at the beginning.

RAJ READING: I. The Origins of Separation

RAJ: How it came to pass.

Continue.

RAJ READING: To extend is a fundamental aspect of God which He gave to His Son.

RAJ: Meaning each of you.

Continue.

READER: In the creation, God extended Himself to His creations and imbued them with the same loving Will to create. You have not only been fully created, but have also been created perfect.

RAJ: That's the Ultimate Truth. That's the Fundamental Fact. And there's no way to change it.

Continue.

READER: There is no emptiness in you.

RAJ: And I would add that, in fact, there is no emptiness in the Brotherhood as a fact that we need to fill, or that we feel as a limitation upon the Wholeness of the Brotherhood. And the fact that you are hearing me right now demonstrates the fact that any emptiness that seems to exist is not a fact set in place by God, and therefore isn't a fact at all.

RAJ READING: You have not only been fully created, but have also been created perfect.

Continue.

READER: Because of your likeness to your Creator you are creative. No child of God can lose this ability because it is inherent in what he is, but he can use it inappropriately by projecting. The inappropriate use of extension, or projection, occurs when you believe that some emptiness or lack exists in you, and that you can fill it with your own ideas instead of truth. This process involves the following steps:

READER: First, you believe that what God created can be changed by your own mind.

RAJ: Ah. By providing a little twist. By squinting your eyes. Of course, you can't change what you're looking at. And if you poke your eyeball, you can make strange lights appear around everything, even though no one else sees the lights, but you can become fascinated with it, and thus provide yourself with an interesting experience, but not an Experience of Reality.

Continue.

READER: Second, you believe that what is perfect can be rendered imperfect or lacking.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: Third, you believe that you can distort the creations of God, including yourself.

Fourth, you believe that you can create yourself, and that the direction of your own creation is up to you.

RAJ: Fantastic—and completely false.

Now I want to point out one additional thing. You really can't accomplish this all by yourself. You can have a false idea, you can have a strange idea, but it doesn't become anything more than that until you join with another who agrees with your fantastic idea. It's in the joining with another with commitment to a fantasy that fantasy begins to, or that fantasy achieves a so-called "state of reality."

Let us continue.

READER: These related distortions represent a picture of what actually occurred in the separation, or the "detour into fear." None of this existed before the separation, nor does it actually exist now.

RAJ: I'm going to interrupt you.

The separation was something that two engaged in by mutual agreement to a fantasy. And the fantasy became a mutually-agreed-upon definition.

Continue.

READER: Everything God created is like Him. Extension, as undertaken by God, is similar to the inner radiance that the children of the Father inherit from Him.

RAJ: As I said some time ago, if you are experiencing joy, even without expressing a word, others can't help but notice it. It radiates.

Continue.

READER: Its real source is internal. This is as true of the Son as of the Father. In this sense the creation includes both the creation of the Son by God, and the Son's creations when his mind is healed.

RAJ: And when the Son's mind is healed, the creations that he extends are the Presence of God that he is not blocking from finding its way through him. Again, the Son never becomes an actually independent extender of anything. And that's why I have used the illustration of everyone being a puppet, either of the Voice for Truth, or, the voice for fear—the puppet of God, or, the puppet of the ego.

In an undefended moment in which revelation occurs and you experience bliss, everyone else can tell, because you extended it spontaneously; you might say automatically. You didn't say, "Oh, well, I'm going to extend a little bit of bliss here. I'm going to send a lot of it there. And I'm going to send more of it there." There's no thought to it. There's no conscious direction of the extension. When you're feeling joy, you're feeling joy. When you're feeling bliss, you're feeling bliss. And that exudes from you spontaneously, and that's your extension. But not an extension of anything you privately, personally originated.

Continue.

READER: This requires God's endowment of the Son with free will, because all loving creation is freely given in one continuous line, in which all aspects are of the same order.

RAJ: And what is that order? It's the Order of God, you might say. It's the Order of the Originator of the Extension, which is God.

And as it illuminates and exudes from every Aspect of What God Is, every Aspect is apparently extending, making the same Gift. And the Gift is Love. And so, this Extension of Love, that you could say goes on and on and on infinitely, expresses the Order, the Character, the Nature, you might say the Scent or Aroma of the Love That God Is. And this Nature and Order and Aroma that finds extension without being altered in any way, because no part of the Sonship is trying to introduce any private little bias to it, keeps the Original Intent unaltered. And so every Aspect of the Creation of God becomes a participant in expressing God.

And the fact is, that's What All Of You Are at this every instant, even though you're momentarily preoccupied with personal needs, and personal crises, and personal concerns, etc.

Well, the ego says, "Huh. Some free will that is! God has endowed you with free will to do nothing but reflect Him? [small laugh] Don't be fooled. That's not free will. But He did give you free will. You really do have the capacity to think and be, independently from What God Is." But the fact is that you didn't originate yourself, and because of that, you never have authority over what you're going to be in Reality.

And so the only choice you have is to either be the Reflection of God, or, to imagine, to indulge in a fantasy that you have some capacity to be independent. And all that amounts to is that you force yourself to become unconscious of your Function.

So, at the bottom line, you only have two choices. You have the choice to be Conscious of Reality, or, temporarily unconscious of it. That's the ultimate of your exercise of free will—to embrace or resist the Movement of God. To allow it to consume you and be you, so that you might involuntarily illuminate everyone and everything in your presence with the experience of bliss, or, block it and share with everyone your resistance to it.

SEEKER: I'd like to ask for a little clarification. I think it's pretty easy for all of us to understand that we did not create ourselves. It's afterwards that things get a little bit foggy. Because we each have our lives and the circumstances in our lives and the decisions we've made along the path that have led us to the point where we are where we think we are.

RAJ: All of which is fantasy.

SEEKER: And from the perspective of the fantasy, it appears as if we did create the situation, that we did create the place we find ourselves in this point in our existence. A doctor isn't in medical practice because he didn't choose to go to school. He did choose to go to school and become a doctor, and looks at himself as the author of his decision to be where he finds himself in this life.

RAJ: Exactly. But once again, he couldn't succeed in that if there were not others willing to join in the that mutually-agreed-upon definition of status and office. The fact is that there are many people who do not extend respect to physicians at all, because they do not see the medical practice as wholistic, as natural, and so they don't join in the mutually-agreed-upon definition. And therefore, the physician does not have the position he thinks he's gained with that part of society.

You see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: Yes. But it works for all of us, whether it's something that appears lofty in our society such as a physician, or whether just a housewife who has the nice home she wants and all the accoutrements so it looks good for a party, or...

RAJ: This is true.

SEEKER: ...the guy who's a clown bending balloons. It's all the same.

RAJ: Again, she must have friends in society that have joined in mutual agreement as to those status symbols. It still doesn't make it Real. It still just makes it, let's say, "a group insanity."

SEEKER: So then we are creators of our insane fantasy? So we're successful in that aspect then?

RAJ: You are successful to the degree that you and someone else, or you and many someone elses, have made commitment to the validation of those definitions. But that can't be counted as any kind of real success because the conclusion isn't valid. It's just a mutually-agreed-upon consensus opinion.

SEEKER: So even in the positions we find ourselves, we did not create for ourselves the circumstances to put us in these positions? Or these positions just simply don't exist, so it's fantasy on top of fantasy?

RAJ: You created them. But if you haven't created Something That Is Real, you haven't created anything. If you haven't created anything, you haven't created anything. And therefore, you haven't been a creator. But that's the difficult part for the ego. That's the difficult part in the process of awakening, because it requires a recognition that what you thought you had created, you didn't succeed in creating. And then abandoning that sense of authorship, and then asking in so many words, "What the hell is really going on?" And becoming inquisitive. So, don't get hung up on, "Well, we must have really created an illusion. We were creative in some way." Because if nothing actually was created, then the sense of being a creator is false.

And Sanity is part of the realization that one's status as a housewife in a beautiful home, or a physician doing miraculous things, can only seem to be a valid perception if there are enough people believing it. And that doesn't make it Real.

ANOTHER SEEKER: We've also read here that when we're healed, it says, "The Son's creations..." Let me back up. "This is as true of the Son as of the Father. In this sense the creation includes both the creation of the Son by God, and the Son's creations when his mind is healed."

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: So when our minds are healed, we then can create. Is this what I'm...

RAJ: No. I did address that. When your minds are healed, then your Experience of God's Extension As You, illuminates you, fills you up, and it shows all over you—not by conscious choice, not by an individual authorization coming from you—but because it overflowed you. You see?

SEEKER: I see. So this would be like a spontaneous feeling of love, or happiness, or joy, or bliss, or revelation, or something of this nature. It's not like inventing a chair, or a...

RAJ: Or being in a part of Infinity where God was moving, you might say, and God moving looked like you moving a mountain, or picking up a chair and relocating it, and being an integral, inseparable part of the Glory of the Movement of God.

SEEKER: And what about something like invention? Like Edison inventing a light bulb, or something like that? Something that the world had never seen before. Is that... you know, needless to say, we would say, "Well, that's creation." He created something that wasn't ever, you know,...

RAJ: But you see that is a process of becoming more complete and moving out of a state of less completeness. The invention of the light bulb brought light where it hadn't been before. It brought light where there was darkness, you might say. But in the Infinite Presence of What God Is Being, there is no lack and so the Movement of Creation is not a means of filling a void. It's not improvement. It's not forward movement. It's more like the hymn goes, "from glory unto glory." And that's about the best I can put it into words at the moment.

SEEKER: So if there were no separation, there would be no need for light bulbs?

RAJ: [small amused laugh] That is correct.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: In moments of illumination, an experience that awaits you is for a darkened room to be illuminated by the Light of You, literally the Body of Light that you are, and the Light that is the Substance of everything in the room. You right here in this quote "incarnation" unquote without having ascended. The Energy that you see as the form of your body is pure Light, even though you can't see it at the moment. I can see it. This room is illuminated far more brightly than the lights display at the moment, just from the Light of You. Right now it's shining. It isn't out. You haven't snuffed it, even though you are not seeing it. That's the more of you that's right here now to be experienced if you'll be curious. It's happening right now.

But you all have a nice little mutually-agreed definition of yourselves that is that you're just, you know, human beings doing the best you can, struggling along, and trying to refine your souls and spiritualize yourselves.

And you're managing to be pretty far out. I mean you're talking with Jesus. And this is excellent because to whatever degree you let yourself be far out and yet still remain grounded, you make it possible to let go even more, and have experiences of Light illumination.

And when you pray, when you ask the Father to show you something, ask Him to show you a lot. Don't ask for just a little bit. Ask Him to reveal the maximum that you can bear. Ask Him to reveal the last thing in the world you would expect to experience.

Okay. Microphone.

ANOTHER SEEKER: The invention of the light bulb, or sailing ships, or coats, aren't those all gifts from Awakened Beings through our consciousness? Aren't those Expressions of Love?

RAJ: They are fuller experiences of your Wholeness, fuller experiences of your Birthright of Freedom, fuller experiences of your right to comfort. They are not so much gifts, as they are the little bit more of good that you were willing to be undefended against; a little bit more right to dignity and comfort than you had mutually agreed upon before.

SEEKER: They're coming from outside of the agreed definitions though.

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: They're coming from Wholeness. They're coming from...

RAJ: They are coming from the Father's good pleasure to give you All Of What He Is. And they come through the sieve of your current mutually-agreed-upon definitions. It's like you're in a dark room, and there's a door in the room, and outside the room is the world and the sunlight, but the door fits the jamb perfectly, and there's no light bulb in the room, and so the room is totally dark. And then there's an earth tremor, and the room shifts, and this little crack of light across the bottom of the door comes through. And you get down and you look at it, and you stand in awe of it. "Wow! This must be a gift from beyond. I've never seen anything like it before. It's an incredible experience!" But it's just a little bit of the Totality of the World and all of the Light that extends infinitely that's outside the door.

No one said, "Let's give them a little bit of Light." The Light was being gifted in its entirety all along. You see? So it's always just as much of your good as you're willing to let in. And so coats and sailing ships and light bulbs seemed to develop, so that lighter coats kept you as warm as the heavy ones, and better means of stitching them together made them last longer, and so on. It's just a matter of your letting in more of what you felt you deserved than you did before.

SEEKER: So more of The Way Things Are, versus, angels whispering in our ears?

RAJ: Yes. And remember this. I haven't just talked about, let's say, technological improvements, or improvements in fabrics that could be used in the coat, or, let us say, the development of automobiles and airplanes that made ships obsolete as means of transporting you from one place to another. I haven't talked just about the form, because the form isn't really where the movement is.

The movement is in your increasing experience of your Integrity, of your Birthright. That's where the movement is. That's where the quote "development" is. That's where the growth is. It isn't in the inventions. The inventions always have accompanied, let us say, your belief that you didn't always have to be in the dark, or your clearer understanding that you didn't always have to be in the dark, and your clearer understanding that you didn't have to be limited to the transmission of a message that takes three months to get where it's going and another three months to bring an answer back to you.

So what all of the inventions and all of the developments of objects are, are just representations of the amount of your Birthright that you have been willing to embrace. That's where it's happening. That is the happening.

SEEKER: I like that.

RAJ: That's a practical response.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: The Garden of Eden, or the pre-separation condition, was a state of mind in which nothing was needed. When Adam listened to the "lies of the serpent," all he heard was untruth. You do not have to continue to believe what is not true unless you choose to do so.

RAJ: Now that's a very significant statement.

RAJ READING: When Adam listened to the "lies of the serpent," all he heard was untruth.

RAJ: He was not tempted. He recognized it for what it was—a lie. So he didn't become subject to... [inaudible audience background talk]... he did not become subject to the illusion that would have followed if he thought he was hearing truth and accepted it and joined.

Continue.

READER: All that can literally disappear in the twinkling of an eye because it is merely a misperception.

RAJ: Let's, let's... I want to emphasize another word here.

RAJ READING: You do not have to continue to believe what is not true unless you choose to do so. All that can literally disappear in the twinkling of an eye because it is merely a misperception.

RAJ: Meaning all that which isn't True that you had been believing, can disappear in the twinkling of an eye because it is merely a misperception. It's not an actuality.

Someone the other day said that they were experiencing a fever—Amena—and that she thought that her body was in a process of casting off something unnecessary to it. Well, she's caught in a mutually-agreed-upon definition about body and how it functions, and doesn't realize that if she envisions a process by which a certain thing is being accomplished, that she will be stuck with the fever until that time period has passed and what needed to be accomplished could be accomplished, and that the process would move forward on the basis of the manner in which matter operates. It left her with no capacity to be receptive to an instantaneous healing, because she saw a physical process occurring.

When the fact is that there's not one single physical thing there where she sees body. It's just the Visibility and Tangibility of her Individuality, which is Mind. It's her Individuality rendered perceptible. But what is perceptible about it, is still of the same Nature and Character as that which it is identifying, which is pure Mind. And not only that. It's incapable of harboring anything that it would need to go through a process to release.

Therefore, the existence of the fever and the thing that need[s] to be released, that this so-called body is going through a process of releasing, is all a fantasy. And if she realizes that it is a fantasy, then in the twinkling of an eye, it can literally disappear because it's merely a misperception. You see?

Continue.

READER: What is seen in dreams seems to be very real. Yet the Bible says that a deep sleep fell upon Adam, and nowhere is there reference to his waking up.

RAJ: Yes.

RAJ READING: What is seen in dreams seems to be very real.

RAJ: Well, all there are to dreams are limited embraces of the Totality of Reality. Important point. Dreams are not an experience of something different from Reality. Dreams are just highly-focused, limited perceptions of the Totality which is Reality. And what is seen in dreams seems to be very real because you make commitment to only seeing a little bit at a time. But it's your commitment to the limited vision that makes it seem real. It's your capacity to be focused that makes it real.

In other words, you couldn't seem to have an illusion if there wasn't Something Real engaged in observing it, and lending to it (the fantasy) "reality," you might say—but I'm putting that word "reality" in quotes—by virtue of the Something Real In You that is capable of bringing focused, committed attention to what you choose to give your attention to. So you make the illusion seem real by virtue of bringing your Very Real Divine Capacity to bear upon focusing your attention on a very limited part of Reality and holding it there, and believing that the limitation is real.

You get it?

Yes.

SEEKER: So Adam listened to the lies of the serpent, and in the face of Reality he didn't believe it because it was obvious that it was all lies. I presume also that Eve listened to the lies of the serpent and was equally unpersuaded because in the face of Reality the lies are apparent.

RAJ: No, this is not correct.

SEEKER: No. [mild audience amusement]

RAJ: She did see truth in it, but even so, it did not create an illusion. She then...

SEEKER: It was when they shared.

RAJ: ...sidled up to Adam; said, "Honey, would you consider, just consider looking at it this way?" [mild audience amusement] And he said, "Oh, well, what can it hurt?" And then there were two joined in the bias, in the fantasy.

SEEKER: And that's the deep sleep that Adam fell into?

RAJ: Yes. And Eve.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [without mic] And they're Awake now. [mild audience amusement]

RAJ: Someone said, "And they're Awake now." It's irrelevant. I'm not going to go into that at the moment.

Okay, let us continue.

READER: The world has not yet experienced any comprehensive reawakening or rebirth. Such a rebirth is impossible as long as you continue to project or miscreate.

RAJ: Okay. So we've come to a point here where, without much emphasis, you've been given a clue as to how to break the dream. As long as you continue to project, or miscreate, such a rebirth is impossible. But as soon as you stop projecting and miscreating, such a rebirth is not only possible, but inevitable.

Now you know what? That could really please your ego. But it is your Soul that responds with joy at hearing that, because you are being reminded at a deep level what your Function is. And the experience of that feels good. And I want you not to confuse it for an ego response.

RAJ READING: It still remains within you, however, to extend as God extended His Spirit to you.

RAJ: Your Function has never been lost to you. It has not shriveled up and blown away. You have not lost the capacity. Each one of you is still fully functional as God created you. You are as fully functional as God Is Being you in this moment. You should stop using the word "created." God did not create you some time in the past. God Is Being you in this instant. "Behold I make all things new." It still remains within you to extend as God extended His Spirit to you.

Now here's the zinger again about the free will.

RAJ READING: In reality this is your only choice, because your free will was given you for your joy in creating the perfect.

RAJ: By letting God be All There Is to you so that right where you are, God is finding expression; not a puny, little personality called Fred, or John, or Mary, or whatever. You see?

Wow!

And this is where we will break for tonight.

I have enjoyed being with you.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

RAJ: And you're probably going to get tired of hearing this. I haven't said it a lot but as time goes on, I will be reminding you. Paul is not the special medium through which you can hear me. Whether you're here in this room, or whether you're listening from places around the globe on the Internet, I am inseparable from each one of you, just as you are inseparable from All of Us Who Are Awake. So don't walk out of here anxious to come back next week to hear more from me. Walk out of here curious to see if I have anything to say to you on the way home. So that maybe next Thursday you're going to be so busy listening to me at home that you won't have time to come to the Gathering. Got it?

SEEKER: Got it. Yes.

RAJ: Nevertheless I will enjoy communing with you here, or, at home.

Okay. Good night.

And Section – THE ATONEMENT AS DEFENSE
First Edition – p. 15 / Second Edition – p. 18

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: I am aware that since the last Gathering some of you have had fun, oh, let us say, considering the shortcomings of women, if indeed Eve is their role model. And by the same token, jabs have been pointed at men for their gullibility. [single audience laugh]

But before we go on, I want to back up for perspective. In the Bible, there are three accounts of creation. One in The New Testament and two in The Old Testament.

The one in The New Testament is the simplest, the most straightforward, the one that is so simple that it bypasses everyone's grasp of the totality of its meaning. It says, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." [John 1:1]

In the first chapter of Genesis, that very simple rendition of creation is fleshed out wherein it says, "And God said, 'Let there be light.'" Let there be this. Let there be that. Let there be plants. And let there be cattle. And let there be whales. And so on. And then God charged all of what He created to be fruitful and multiply. And then it says that on the seventh day—because in order to flesh it out a structure had to be provided, a storyline, you might say, even though creation could not have taken time to occur—and on the seventh day God rested. There was completion. And then it says, "And God saw everything that He had made, and behold it was very good." Which really means "and it was VERY GOOD." And I have said before that a clearer understanding of that statement can be found in these words, "And God saw everything that He had made, and behold it was verily (or really) God."

So, in the beginning was the Word. And God said, "Let there be." And the Word was with God. And God saw everything that He had made. And the Word was God. And behold it was verily God. Creation is finished. Creation is complete. And creation is the Movement of the Mind of God which God sees and recognizes Himself in. It is all about God, from first to last. It is all God.

So, where is this Adam and Eve? Well, in the second chapter of Genesis it says, "But there went up a mist from the ground." Well, let me ask you this. If you are at a movie and you see the image on the screen begin to waver and shift and become mystified and unclear, and then resolve itself in a new scene, you naturally assume that you have shifted into a different reality. It is easy to assume that. And I encourage you to assume that, when you read after creation has been completed, "and a mist went up from the ground."

And then there is a key sentence. It says, "And there was no man to till the ground." Well, you know what? The way it's written sounds like the lead in to what follows, but it's really the conclusion to what has already been written. Creation does not include a man to till the ground. It does not include a man to make his mark in the world. It does not include a man to exert authority and change creation. It does not include a man to give definition to everything, because God has already defined it completely, and charged it to be fruitful and multiply, to flourish.

So, according to this second creation, God creates man from the earth and breathes into it life. And then, He causes a deep sleep to occur, because Adam is lonely and needs a helpmate. Ah! Is this beginning to sound familiar? Because we're beginning to describe the realm of mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And without a helpmate, how can there be a mutually-agreed-upon definition, right? And so, He takes a rib out of Adam's chest and from that makes woman.

And the rest is history, literally, because history is a record of time that in Eternity is an illusion. And everything that follows from there on throughout the Bible is a record of illusion. It is all based upon the trials and tribulations of being a man, or a woman, to till the soil and to suffer through and survive the quote "human condition."

The moment that mist arose in the story, everything became an example of life, of creation, being experienced through a glass darkly, through the distortion of mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and a, I'm going to say, a conscious ignorance—ignoring of Reality that doesn't require a man to till the soil, that doesn't require a woman to slave and sweat over a stove and labor. So, be careful when you have fun at the expense of women, or when you have fun at the expense of men, because there ain't no such creatures.

You see, you might have been tempted to believe that "The Fall" occurred after Eve tempted Adam, that the illusion began after Eve tempted Adam and he agreed to join her. But the illusion started where the mist rose from the ground. And it's an important thing to understand.

If you don't understand it, you can buy into the idea that you are all descendants, one way or another, of Adam and Eve, since they are the first ones capable of being parents. And even if you hadn't thought of it that way, in the more immediate present, you do see yourselves as descendants of your parents, who are descendants of their parents, who are descendants of their parents, and then you don't usually think much further back than that. But you can't be the descendants of your parents because you are the Direct Expression of God. And you embody All That God Is—Mind experiencing Itself and recognizing Itself in the experience. This is very key and I didn't want to let it escape your attention.

You see, waking up isn't about getting back into the Garden of Eden. It's about getting back before the Garden of Eden, before the mist arose from the ground, before the whole story of an existence separate from God began, or seemed to begin.

Before we start reading, I want to mention something that we discussed earlier: that you have no private thoughts. It's relatively easy to engage in the uncomplimentary assessment of women as beguilers, temptresses. In fact, if you're a man, you can make a point of looking for the best temptress you can find. But what I want to point out to you is that because none of you have any private thoughts, because you truly aren't separate from anything, every thought you have is beguiling. Every thought you have is tempting. I prefer using the word "tempting" now.

Every thought you have is an invitation that goes out from you like a messenger looking for that which confirms it. It invites a joining in agreement—every single thought—whether it's a hateful thought, whether it's a loving thought, whether it's a thought that finds its basis in the version of creation found in the second chapter of Genesis, or whether it's a thought that finds its basis in the first chapter.

And so everyone who is thinking is engaging in beguiling, or, is engaging in making an invitation to acknowledge the Truth. Your thoughts are either seductive, or they are illuminative. Either they seduce another, or they promote the illumination of another. I'm not saying this to convict anyone of anything, but to point out something that happens unconsciously if you're not aware that you're not the offspring of Adam and Eve; if you're not aware that no such form of creation ever took place at the Hand of God.

No matter what great religious books you read, you will find attempts to account for existence. And so you will find a creation story. The clearest account of creation is in these words, “In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.” So, that means the Word wasn’t you. And that means that you are the Word That Is God. It means that you are God in action, in presence, in being, right now. And that’s what waking up is the discovery of.

Now we will go to the book.

We have a question.

SEEKER: I noticed in the two creations that the name of the deity changes. First creation, like an older name for God—Elohim, or the wind, or something like that. And the second creation where Adam and the mist is happening is called the Lord God, more of a Yahweh kind of a guy. Is that, is my perception correct on that?

RAJ: That is correct. Yes.

SEEKER: Is there a significance to that?

RAJ: Only that it represents the fact that there’s a different source for each of the creations.

SEEKER: The first one is an older story.

RAJ: The first one is the truest story. It doesn’t have anything to do with time.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

READER: All fear is ultimately reducible to the basic misperception that you have the ability to usurp the power of God. Of course, you neither can nor have been able to do this.

RAJ: In other words, whatever everyone thinks happened after the mist arose from the ground did not change creation as it is represented in the first chapter. What you think you have done has never happened. It’s as simple as that.

Continue.

READER: Here is the real basis for your escape from fear.

RAJ: Ah. Why? Because it means that you cannot possibly be in the frame of mind, the mutually-agreed-upon joint frame of mind wherein mutually-agreed-upon definitions have occurred and seemed to have caused a different experience of Reality than What It Really Is.

Continue.

READER: The escape is brought about by your acceptance of the Atonement, which enables you to realize that your errors never really occurred.

RAJ: You see?

Continue.

READER: Only after the deep sleep fell upon Adam could he experience nightmares. If a light is suddenly turned on while someone is dreaming a fearful dream, he may initially interpret the light itself as part of his dream and be afraid of it. However, when he awakens, the light is correctly perceived as the release from the dream, which is then no longer accorded reality.

RAJ: Now this uses an example of light as opposed to darkness when you do your dreaming. But what I want to point out to you is that, again, [taps on the table] the glass-topped table, the carpet, your fingernails—these are all Reality seen through a glass darkly, and therefore can be misinterpreted. But because What They Truly Are has never stopped being the Presence and Expression of God, they serve just as much as light as that which can trigger your awaking up from the dream, and thus seeing them As They Truly Are.

Continue.

READER: This release does not depend on illusions. The knowledge that illuminates not only sets you free, but also shows you clearly that you are free.

RAJ: And that you always have been.

And in the discovery that you always have been, there is absolutely no occasion for entertaining guilt for all this time that you seemed to have wasted in an illusion, because the Clarity of being Awake shows you that you never were in a dream. And because you never were in a dream, and because you always were present in Reality as Who You Really Are, the memory of who you in your Right Mind were being all along is returned to you, even though you weren't paying any attention to it for all that time because you were preoccupied and committed to your definition of everything.

Continue.

READER: Whatever lies you may believe are of no concern to the miracle, which can heal any of them with equal ease.

RAJ: So whatever lies you believe can't actually, can't actually block you from waking up; can't actually cause you to be undeserving of Knowing and Experiencing the Truth. And therefore, it can't hold off your realization of the Truth in any way.

Continue.

READER: It makes no distinctions among misperceptions.

RAJ: Miracles do not. Indeed.

Continue.

READER: Its sole concern is to distinguish between truth on the one hand, and error on the other. Some miracles may seem to be of greater magnitude than others. But remember the first principle in this course; there is no order of difficulty in miracles.

RAJ: And there is no order of magnitude of illusions. A mistake is a mistake. A misperception is a misperception. That's all.

Continue.

READER: In reality you are perfectly unaffected by all expressions of lack of love. These can be from yourself and others, from yourself to others, or from others to you. Peace is an attribute in you. You cannot find it outside. Illness is some form of external searching. Health is inner peace.

RAJ: Yes. Inner peace is what you experience when you stop sending out messengers of fear; when you stop sending out messengers of hate; when you stop sending out messengers of jealousy; when you stop sending out messages of arrogance.

And when you choose to become still and you experience your peace, as I've said before, you find yourself beginning to be filled with the experience of being loved, and the result is Joy. And now you're engaged in sending out messengers of Joy which will return to you with confirmation of that which is joyous.

Continue.

READER: It enables you to remain unshaken by lack of love from without and capable, through your acceptance of miracles, of correcting the conditions proceeding from lack of love in others.

RAJ: Indeed. When another sends out a messenger of hate, or fear, to you, and finds you non-responsive because you've chosen to be in your peace where you find joy, it does not bring back confirmation of what it is looking for from you. But your expression of joy right in the face of that, your experience of joy that is sending out messengers of joy, has the opportunity to find a joyful response in the one who had been sending out a messenger of hate or fear. And your messenger of joy is an active agent for change, because it has its origin in the Movement of God Himself that you have let in.

Messengers of fear are not agents of change. You might say that they are agents of paralysis, agents of immobilization; but not agents of, not initiators of action, of response. The messengers of fear simply block, simply immobilize. This is why the messengers for fear have no power.

Okay, let's continue.

READER: The Atonement as Defense

You can do anything I ask. I have asked you to perform miracles, and have made it clear that miracles are natural, corrective, healing and universal.

RAJ: Ah. And miracles are sudden shifts of perception that happen when you're not being "man who tills the soil;" "man who makes his mark on the world." Miracles happen when you let yourself be the place where God shines through, when you let God be All There Is right where you are.

Continue.

READER: There is nothing they cannot do, but they cannot be performed in the spirit of doubt or fear. When you are afraid of anything, you are acknowledging its power to hurt you. Remember that where your heart is, there is your treasure also. You believe in what you value. If you are afraid, you will inevitably value wrongly, and by endowing all thoughts with equal power will inevitably destroy peace.

RAJ: Now because of the difference in the second edition, I'm going to read that so that everyone has it both ways.

RAJ READING: If you are afraid, you are valuing wrongly. Your understanding will then inevitably value wrongly, and by endowing all thoughts with equal power will inevitably destroy peace.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: That is why the Bible speaks of "the peace of God which passeth understanding."

RAJ: Indeed.

Understanding comes from thinking and the use of reason and logic. And that's why I make a distinction between the word, "understanding" and “knowing.” Knowing is understanding that has come from experience without a single thought occurring. When any of you has felt God’s Love, you were in a position of never doubting the existence of God again; not because you could reason it; not because you could explain it; but because the experience was an undeniable Knowing. You could call it an understanding, because it is a Knowing so deep. But it is not something that has arisen out of thinking, or logic, or reason.

It isn’t understanding any of you want. It’s the Experience of Knowing, because Knowing is undeniable and it cannot be argued away. But what logic and reason have created can be argued away through an even more skillful use of reason and logic, whether there is any truth to it or not.

Continue.

READER: This peace is totally incapable of being shaken by errors of any kind. It denies the ability of anything not of God to affect you.

RAJ: Indeed.

READER: This is the proper use of denial. It is not used to hide anything, but to correct error. It brings all error into the light, and since error and darkness are the same, it corrects error automatically.

RAJ: Indeed. In other words, it uncovers misunderstanding. It uncovers misperception for what it is, which causes it to be seen as completely valueless. And what you don’t find value in, you make no commitment to, you don’t entertain, you don’t hold onto.

Continue.

READER: True denial is a powerful protective device. You can and should deny any belief that error can hurt you. This kind of denial is not a concealment but a correction.

RAJ: You see, if someone says something to you, “2 plus 2 is 5,” and you know 2 and 2 is 4, you say, “That’s not true! 2 and 2 equals 5—that’s not true.” Stating it is not the first step of negotiation, or an argument. You see? It’s just a statement of the truth. It is a correction.

Continue.

READER: Your right mind depends on it. Denial of error is a strong defense of truth, but denial of truth results in miscreation, the projections of the ego.

RAJ: It results in miscreation. Once again that simply means a distorted perception; not a new creation that is false.

SEEKER: Is it true then that in time we may grow weary of that ego behavior?

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: And we may eventually want to be rid of it and want what I hear you describing to us?

RAJ: You're already weary of it [seeker laughs] which is why you're listening. Yes.

READER: In the service of the right mind the denial of error frees the mind, and re-establishes the freedom of the will.

RAJ: Again, when you are confronted with illusion, when you are confronted with error, when you are confronted by misperception, and it is aggressively presented, you need to deny it. Once again though, your denial of it is not the first step of a contest, or a war, but a clear acknowledgement that it's not true because truth is such-and-such and such-and-such that you know. That sends a messenger out looking for confirmation, and it will find confirmation—transformational confirmation.

Continue.

READER: When the will is really free it cannot miscreate, because it recognizes only truth.

RAJ: Yes. When the will says to God, "Thy Will be done," it's really free, even though the ego sees that as a loss of freedom.

SEEKER: And reacts fearfully. And then if I agree with that, then I've allowed myself to be grabbed once again.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: And then, which in turn, can leave me quite weary again. After a while, it's like insanity. It's like repeating the same mistake over and over again hoping for a better result. [laughs] [audience laughs]

RAJ: It isn't like insanity; it is insanity. Exactly.

RAJ READING: When the will is really free it cannot miscreate, because it recognizes only truth.

RAJ: It recognizes only Truth because that is what it has willed to see by saying, "God, Thy Will be done."

Of course, this involves shifting from the second account of creation in Genesis 2, back to the first account in Genesis 1. Because when you say, "Thy Will, not mine, be done," you're saying, "I choose not to be 'man to till the soil.' I choose not to identify myself that way. I refuse to identify myself that way because that is not the truth about me." And so you abandon the authority that being able to till the soil seems to give to you.

You see?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Now that sounds like, I'm not saying it is, but it sounds like we don't (you don't) have to work for a living. You don't have to till the soil. You don't have to make your mark in the world. So you don't have to really...

RAJ: Well, I tell you what. You just try to sit down, and be still, and yield to the Father's Will, and see if you can remain unmoving. See if you can avoid breaking into dance, if you will, because of the Joy that fills you, and the Movement of God, and the Rhythm of God, and the Beat of God, and the Movement of Creation that is what you're the Presence of, because God Is Being All There Is of you right now. And just see if you can keep from doing something.

SEEKER: But it's not toiling, you know.

RAJ: Of course not. It's a natural, effortless Flow of the Movement of Fulfillment making all things new. It's just that what you're doing isn't done for your private purposes. And it isn't done for your gain. It's a gift.

SEEKER: And it doesn't have to be repetitive, or boring, or any of that.

RAJ: It never will be repetitive or boring.

SEEKER: Because I mean this is talked, what you're speaking about is a whole paradigm shift.

RAJ: Yes!

SEEKER: But I mean...

RAJ: From "Chapter 2" to "Chapter 1."

SEEKER: Right.

It almost sounds like anarchy in a way. I mean it is anarchy in a way. You're upsetting the whole apple cart of the way things are.

RAJ: You're upsetting the mutually-agreed-upon definitions of how things are, and returning to How Things Really Are. Absolutely.

SEEKER: Because it's almost like the definition of "work" excludes the word "fun."

RAJ: The definition. Yes.

SEEKER: I mean, if it's fun, it's play. If it's work, it's no fun. [laughs]

RAJ: Indeed.

And the greatest works of art are the ones that came out of Joy; not suffering, as it is proclaimed. The greatest works of art and the greatest things that have been done were the result of Joy allowed, embraced, and embodied.

SEEKER: So this is good news. We don't have to work any more. [laughs]
Yea!

RAJ: You do not have to be in order to survive. That's what work is.

SEEKER: You mean existing for the sake, the saying, "I have to do this in order to survive."

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: I can have fun and survive, too.

RAJ: You're damn right.

SEEKER: Alright. Good news.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I just want to talk a little about personal experience, the way this feels as an experience.

I'm going along and I'm having my "Chapter 2" experience. And then I deny, I deny that. And then I guess what I'm feeling is, for a little bit, I'm going into what you could call "the void," or, you know, just sitting there kind of waiting, I guess waiting for the messenger to get back. But then that fulfillment starts, after a little period of maybe like just reorienting myself, getting my balance back after I've denied all the ruckus. And I sit there and there's quiet. There's not anything to experience. I might have to concentrate on my breath, or, you know, make an effort to not go back into the thinking and the confirming the lie.

RAJ: And the body sensations of fear, and so on.

SEEKER: Exactly. Just paying attention to something that's really going on at a primal level that's not all loaded with stimulation.

RAJ: Significance.

SEEKER: Yes. Significance, exactly. Something to—how did you say it?—to bring about a consummate act.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And so then I just sit there without anything going on for a little bit before the messenger gets back. That's what I'm experiencing. And I used to sit there for like a long time waiting for the messenger to get back 'cause I wasn't as...

RAJ: Oh, let's be clear here. When you become still, what you're doing is making room for God.

SEEKER: Exactly.

RAJ: And then there is an infilling that occurs. First is the experience of peace. And then is the experience of feeling loved. And then an accompanying Joy. Those influxes of the Presence of God experienced by you, are themselves the impulse of the messengers that are being sent out.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: And they are the messengers that will return to you with confirmation. Just being in the quietness does not send a messenger out. You're not in the quietness waiting for a messenger to return. You are in the quietness waiting upon God, waiting upon the Holy Spirit, to infill you, because it is their Purpose to uncover to you What Is True About You, which you can only recognize within yourself when you have abandoned assertive, authoritative, aggressive thinking.

You see?

SEEKER: Aggressively denied it. I mean that's the place I can apply my will; just a will not to think that thought; to stop the thought.

RAJ: To will not to think a thought is an attack on a thought. But to choose for your peace and disregard the thought, constitutes a withdrawal of your attention.

SEEKER: I know exactly what you're getting at.

RAJ: And therefore, a denial of it.

SEEKER: Paying attention to my breath, versus, attacking the thought.

RAJ: Indeed. You got it.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I feel like I'm in a "Chapter 2" experience trying to avoid a Chapter 11. [laughs] [Raj laughs]

SEEKER: Are we on, is it number three? [to someone else] Thank you.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Okay.

READER: You can defend truth as well as error. The means are easier to understand after the value of the goal is firmly established.

RAJ: The value of the goal. And what is the value of the goal that would cause you to defend Truth rather than error? The goal has to be simple. It has to be Love. And if your goal is to Love, then it is Truth that you will naturally want to defend, because error is the disturbing element that undermines the Experience of Love if it is defended and committed to.

Continue.

READER: It is a question of what it is for. Everyone defends his treasure, and will do so automatically.

RAJ: Yes. Do you treasure harmony? Do you treasure friendship? Or do you treasure not being wrong? Or do you treasure being right? Do you treasure that which unifies, or that which separates and seems to provide the opportunity for being the winner of one-upmanship? You see?

And...

RAJ READING: Everyone defends his treasure, and will do so automatically.

RAJ: In other words, you don't have to will to do it. If you treasure something, you automatically defend it. It's wonderful, because the moment you value Love, the moment you value Truth, you will automatically defend it. You will spontaneously stand on its behalf, involuntarily. It's not a struggle. You might say the struggle comes in changing what you're treasuring.

Continue.

READER: The real questions are, what do you treasure, and how much do you treasure it?

RAJ: And why do you treasure it? You always treasure it for what it's going to do for you. You always treasure something for what it's going to do for you.

So you know what? I would like you to take time this coming week to ask yourself what Love can do for you. I'm not going to ask you to report back to me next week. But why would you treasure Love? You might be surprised that you don't have a large number of responses to the question. But it's worth exploring. It's worth contemplating. What do you want Love to do for you?

And then take a look at whether or not Love can really do what you're asking it to do for you, because if it can't, then what you are asking it to do needs to be abandoned. It's a futile road. And sometimes as you whittle away the things in you, the inclination in you to try to obtain something that's not available—in other words, to get Love to do something for you that Love is incapable of doing—sometimes in the whittling away of those wasted intents, you seem to come down to only one or two things, and that can feel rather empty.

But when you come down to one or two or three things, you can recognize the consistency between them, you can recognize the similarity. And once you see those similarities, you have the capacity to recognize other areas where Love can benefit you. And then the answer to the question, the answers grow in number.

RAJ READING: The real questions are, what do you treasure, and how much do you treasure it?

RAJ: And I added, "And why?"

Continue.

READER: Once you have learned to consider these questions and to bring them into all your actions, you will have little difficulty in clarifying the means.

RAJ: Yes. And part of the reason for the fact that you will have little difficulty is because of the... because you will be spontaneously inviting them into your experience. This is the part that doesn't take work. The coming forth of the Clarity will happen automatically, spontaneously, without labor, because it's a "Chapter 1" Experience.

Continue.

READER: The means are available whenever you ask. You can, however, save time if you do not protract this step unduly.

RAJ: Wasn't that a tactful and kind way to say it?

Go on.

READER: The correct focus will shorten it immeasurably.

RAJ: Indeed. And the correct focus, again, is not on the denial of the thing you want to get rid of. You deny the thing you want to get rid of by withdrawing your attention from it. And in doing that, you stop energizing it in your experience, and it withers for lack of your attention. You see? As someone once said, "It comes to you for life, and you give it all the life it ever had." So, withdraw your attention from it. Stop giving it life by neglecting to do something, rather than fighting off the devil.

Continue.

READER: The Atonement is the only defense that cannot be used destructively because it is not a device you made.

RAJ: And because it's not a device you made, it's not a device that is there to serve your private goals. The things you make are made to serve your private goals. And your private goals are the goals of one separate from the Whole. And those goals are always to preserve the separation.

You see?

So it's wonderful.

RAJ READING: The Atonement is the only defense that cannot be used destructively because it is not a device you made.

RAJ: But that means that you have to allow the Atonement to bless you. You have to allow the Atonement to do its work for its reasons, because you're choosing to abandon your reasons—your personal, private reasons.

Continue.

READER: *The Atonement principle was in effect long before the Atonement began. The principle was love and the Atonement was an act of love.

RAJ: Aha! An act of love. An act of love.

Now this could almost sound like a "Chapter 2" thing. You know, an act of tilling the soil; an act of making your mark on the world. But the only thing is that an Act of Love is only an Act of Love if it's a Gift. Love is never a means of getting. That's why it can't be misused. A "Chapter 2" act is an act of getting. A "Chapter 1" act is a gift. An unpremeditated gift without strings. A gift without expectations attached to it. A gift that is given purely as an extension of oneself, because you no longer have a goal to do anything other than the Function God gave you by embodying Himself as Himself right where you are.

Is intercourse an act of love? It is referred to as an act of love. Well, it might be, and it might not be.

Is drinking a glass of water an act of love? It might be, and it might not be.

Continue.

READER: Acts were not necessary before the separation,...

RAJ: In "Chapter 1."

READER: ...because belief in space and time did not exist. It was only after the separation that the Atonement and the conditions necessary for its fulfillment were planned. Then a defense so splendid was needed that it could not be misused, although it could be refused. Refusal could not, however, turn it into a weapon of attack, which is the inherent characteristic of other defenses. The Atonement thus becomes the only defense that is not a two-edged sword. It can only heal.

RAJ: Those are incredible words.

SEEKER (reader): Yeah.

RAJ: The Truth is incredible.

So the real question this week in everything you do is, it needs to be, "Am I going to give expression to the Voice for Truth, or the voice for fear?"

If you're going to give expression to the Voice for Truth, you will not engage in self-defense, because that's not a gift. And it's not Love. And it sends no messengers out for confirmation of that which causes your gift to be an agent for change and transformation and healing in the world.

If you feel inclined to become defended, and thus engage in retaliatory attack, you will find yourself bound to a "Chapter 2" experience—the struggle of the human condition. And you will be saying that you are descendants of Adam and Eve, and that such a world as existed after the mist arose is real, and it's your domain, and it's your environment.

But if you want to break that illusion, you've got to make the choice for the Voice for Truth. You've got to make the choice for Love, which means becoming undefended, because you can't make a gift from a standpoint of defense. A defensive hand is a fist, and there's no way to give away what is inside your hand when it is closed up in a fist. It's that simple. And there's no way that your hand can be a weapon when it's extended in an open position. Oh, I realize that it can be used to slap with, but you understand my point.

Continue.

READER: The Atonement was built into the space-time belief to set a limit on the need for the belief itself, and ultimately to make learning complete. The Atonement is the final lesson. Learning itself, like the classrooms in which it occurs, is temporary. The ability to learn has no value when change is no longer necessary. The eternally creative have nothing to learn. You can learn to improve your perceptions, and can become a better and better learner. This will bring you into closer and closer accord with the Sonship; but the Sonship itself is a perfect Creation and perfection is not a matter of degree.

RAJ: This is why it is a good idea not to engage in evaluating your skill as a learner, and not to make commitment to the process of learning. Learning is unavoidable. But don't make commitment to learning. Be willing to abandon learning [snap of the fingers] at any moment. Because to the degree that you have not locked yourself into a learning process, you are a prime target for an inspiration, and an insight, and a direct penetration of your Divinity, because it's in the unguarded moments that this happens. So don't place too high a value on learning. Place your value on being receptive, and then to the best of your ability, be defenseless against the influx of that which you haven't entertained before, of that which you haven't allowed to be in your presence before.

Continue.

READER: Only while there is a belief in differences is learning meaningful.

RAJ: Indeed.

Continue.

READER: Evolution is a process in which you seem to proceed from one degree to the next.

RAJ: Important word not to let escape your attention—the word “seem.” Evolution is a process in which you SEEM to proceed from one degree to the next.

Continue.

READER: You correct your previous missteps by stepping forward. This process is actually incomprehensible in temporal terms, because you return as you go forward.

RAJ: And this is because each step toward Home is an undoing of a step you took away from Home. And so it is indeed a return.

Continue.

READER: The Atonement is the device by which you can free yourself from the past as you go ahead. It undoes your past errors, thus making it unnecessary for you to keep retracing your steps without advancing to your return. In this sense the Atonement saves time, but like the miracle it serves, does not abolish it. As long as there is need for Atonement, there is need for time.

RAJ: And as long as there is time, or seems to be time, there is need for the Atonement. As long as you seem to be able to justify not extending Love, the call for expressing Love will confront you; the call for returning to your Function will confront you. As long as you don't get the message, you will have time to get the message. And once you get the message, you won't need time to get the message, and time will no longer be an experience.

Continue.

Microphone.

SEEKER: So last week we were talking about light bulbs and sailing ships, and you clarified that that was us just embracing God's Willingness to give us the Kingdom through our sieve. And it'd be reasonable to look at evolution as that same process of embracing our Wholeness through our sieve?

RAJ: There is a correspondence there. Yes. And at the bottom line, the learning in that is, that it is valueless to employ a sieve at all.

Continue.

READER: But the Atonement as a completed plan has a unique relationship to time. Until the Atonement is complete, its various phases will proceed in time, but the whole Atonement stands at time's end. At that point the bridge of return has been built.

RAJ: Indeed.

You see, it's just a matter of a return from a misperception to a correct perception. It's arriving at a point where you abandon commitment to the so-called "fun" of looking at everything with just a little bit of skew added to it. You see?

It's like the new frames for glasses that have the memory of their shape built into them so that when you twist them, they immediately pop back into their original shape. What You Divinely Are, and which you can't alter in any way, is the same as this built-in memory in these frames of the glasses. And so, no matter how much you twist yourself and contort yourself to look funny or different from yourself, What You Are is implanted there and when either you get tired from the effort to hold the contorted position, or you just decide to stop, [snap of the fingers] the return to your normal shape, the return to what you never could stop being, is spontaneous and automatic and effortless. You see?

So the last step is in the plan from the beginning. The shape of those glasses is in them from the beginning, even before they were twisted. And when the twist is released, without effort, without work, without labor, without toil, you will find yourself experiencing Yourself Truly and Everything Else Truly. It's inevitable. It doesn't take work. You don't have to refine yourself. It's not an evolutionary process.

And you will find that the hardest work you ever did, was trying not to be Who You Are. Becoming Who You Are happens spontaneously when the effort that you were applying upon yourself to be different simply ceases; when you stop wanting to be "man who tills the soil" and "make your mark" and have authority. When you abandon that, "Chapter 1" comes to view. The simplicity of it. The wholeness of it. The bliss of it. The purity of it. The Right Mindedness of it. And the conscious harmony with every Aspect of Creation Infinitely is yours, is returned to you. And what opens that door, what promotes the spontaneous shift, is the embrace and embodiment of the Atonement Principle, which is Love, and embodying it in Acts of Love, rather than acts of defense.

And on that we will call it a night.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

RAJ: Thank you. I enjoy being with you.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: I welcome all of you, as well as those who are joining us on the Internet.

And I'm going to ask a question. Can anyone think of a way if you're in a room all by yourself... let's start over. If you are in a room all by yourself, can you think of a way to express affection?

SEEKER: I would say just feel it, or believe that it's just a real thing. And then just go with that. Just have belief in it. Believe that affection is something that's good and that comes from the Divine Source. And have trust in that.

RAJ: But how would you express it?

SEEKER: I suppose by feeling it, by... I would feel affection for myself being there in that room. I suppose affection for the room itself, or for whatever I could see.

RAJ: Anyone else?

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'm finding that I can't feel alone in a room anymore. It's not something that I feel anymore. I feel like I'm always accompanied.

RAJ: But the question was, "How would you express affection?"

SEEKER: How can you be in a room alone? [some audience laughter]

[pause] If you express affection in a room that you're experiencing yourself alone in, you're doing it in your imagination, just like the experience of being alone in the room.

RAJ: So, you are in a room that no one else is in. You are alone in a room, but you're not alone. How do you express affection?

SEEKER: With you, a lot of the time.

RAJ: That is Love.

How do you express affection?

ANOTHER SEEKER: How 'bout since really we are Mind but we're not Awake yet, and we experience thinking still. And I have a feeling that you're maybe driving at the fact that not to entertain thoughts about any other that wouldn't support the highest good about that other, no matter what. No matter what the temptation might be to think of others, because we're all experiencing something, you know, in terms of relationships with each other that sometimes goes smoothly and sometimes don't.

And if you're in a room alone, you're probably somehow experiencing either thinking, or a meditative state where you're trying not to think. And in that, thoughts are going to be coming and going, more than likely. And when they might arise in the form of anything that doesn't support the best in a Brother or Sister, no matter what you're experiencing, you know, and so-called "illusion," the struggle of life, you know, the unawakened state, and the temptation to buy into fear-driven motivation that might, you know, arise out of difficulties or conflicts that, whether they're yours, or, you know, thoughts coming from you from another, not to be tempted to believe anything that wouldn't suggest what would be reminiscent or representational of the Christ. Because that's what we would want to have being known about our self. So how could you expect to have that if you weren't willing to extend that?

RAJ: And how would you extend it in a room all by yourself?

SEEKER: Yeah. Well, again it... I'm talking about Mind, because I don't know any other way you mean if you're by yourself.

If you are by yourself, he's saying.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] It won't work.

RAJ: Yes.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: If you are by yourself.

SEEKER: Yes.

EARLIER SEEKER: [in the background] You can't express affection.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: Well, I believe in our Mind we hold thoughts, you know. And to exercise utilizing the Mind, good use of the Mind, you know, proper use of the Mind, would not be to think and, you know, of another in any way that did not support the Truth about them. And you've given us enough information to know that the Truth about everyone is that they are the Christ, no matter what it looks like, or no matter what their behavior might suggest otherwise. So...

EARLIER SEEKER: [in the background] It's all a matter if they're in the room or not.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: So no matter if they're in the room with you or not, whoever it might be that you might be having relationships with, you are connected to them, even though they don't seem to be in the room with you.

So when you say "in the room by yourself," Mark is saying that's impossible, right? But in fact we experience ourselves that way, and we experience the thing of separation, which is what the Atonement was there to heal, which we haven't caught up with yet.

RAJ: I will say something that everyone else won't have an understanding of. But tonight you sound just like Matt. Do you catch the similarity?

SEEKER: Right. So are you meaning that... yeah, I know what you mean by that. So, but I'm trying to express something, and I think you know what I'm trying to say, Raj. Don't you?

RAJ: Oh, I do indeed.

SEEKER: But you're telling me now that I'm not saying it very well [audience laughter] because of what you just said, you know.

RAJ: I will come back to this.

SEEKER: It sounds like a correction.

RAJ: You will understand.

SEEKER: I'm willing to be corrected.

RAJ: You will understand more in just a moment.

[to someone else] You had your hand up? Wait for the microphone.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Okay. My first impulse was singing came to mind. [Someone in the background said, "Yes."] And that's all. [laughing] I don't have any way to analyze it. But that's what came to my mind was just singing as an expression of affection.

RAJ: [to someone else] And did... you had your hand up?

ANOTHER SEEKER: That's it. That's simple. I love to be alone in the room, because then I can express my affection for what I'm feeling. I sing. I dance. It's simple for me. And sometimes it's easier to express affection alone in that room.

RAJ: Well, without any judgment in what I'm going to say, I will say, is there any wonder that Atonement hasn't occurred? [some audience laughter]

Does anyone remember from last week what the Atonement principle is?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Correction of errors.

RAJ: No.

The Atonement principle is Love. And Atonement is an Act of Love—an ACT. Not a thought, but an act.

So affection is love acted out, you might say. And there's no way to act out love when you are in isolation. And there is no way to engage in an Act of Love in your Mind. In your Mind, you are being Love. Do you see the difference?

Again, Atonement is meaningless without involvement. One-on-one, one-to-another, back and forth in acts of affection.

EARLIER SEEKER: [in the background] So are you saying that we leave the room?

RAJ: Whoops.

SEEKER: [with the mic now] So you're saying that you should leave the room.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] Or bring someone in.

EARLIER SEEKER: Or bring some, or let... yeah. Yeah. Yeah.

RAJ: Ah! Indeed. Yes.

SEEKER: Or leave the isolation.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: Open the door and invite someone in, or go out where others are, where you can engage in acts of affection, where you can engage in an Act of Love.

There's something that Paul learned early on as part of the teaching of Christian Science which he continues to use, or remind himself of, at the beginning of every Gathering, or every conversation, with Raj. It says this: "Thy Will be done."

What follows is an explanation of the meaning of that sentence in the Lord's Prayer.

"Thy Will be done. Let the reign r-e-i-g-n) of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in me and rule out of me all self-will. And may Thy Word enrich the affections of all mankind and govern them."

So the first part of that statement says it's an invitation that each one of you can make—an invitation, you might say, to let the Atonement principle in.

"Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love..."—not the ego's sense of truth, life, truth, and love—"...be established in me and rule out of me all self-will."—all that is the ego.

But in a way that would be selfish only to consider yourself. To make it whole, the last part needs to be added. "And may Thy Word enrich the affections..."—of everyone else—"...of all mankind and govern them."

So, what we're doing here whenever we gather together is going through a process of enriching our affections, so that in so doing you are in a position to bless all mankind.

So, I will keep saying it over and over and over, as long as it takes for you to really grasp the fact that none of what we're talking about is a head-trip. It's not intellectual. It's got to be translated into actions, one-to-another.

Yes, in the privacy of your room, you can be the Presence of Love that blesses others. But if when you're with others, you haven't learned how to be the Presence of Love, it won't mean diddly shit. It's very easy when you're in the privacy of your room, and you're not confronted with a Brother and whatever his behavior might be at the moment, to listen for the Voice for Truth within, to learn What Is True About Your Brother, and hold him or her in that esteem. But it's when you're face-to-face with your Brother, or your Sister, that the call for being the Presence of Love in terms of your behavior comes into play. And that's where the world changes. You see?

So, let's not get too lofty. Let's not get so lofty and spiritual and metaphysical and intellectual that we forget where all of this is at; where it is that the transformation will occur. It's in the willingness to have your vision transformed right while your Brother, or Sister, is in your face, so that you can behave expressing real acts of love, that affection is embodied. And that's where you see the effect of the miracle.

So, let's start in the book. And we'll start here.

READER: The Atonement is a total commitment.

RAJ: Okay. I will put it this way. In its fulfilled form, it is total commitment. Your acts of love become uninterruptedly constant.

Continue.

READER: You may still think this is associated with loss, a mistake all the separated Sons of God make in one way or another. It is hard to believe a defense that cannot attack is the best defense.

RAJ: Now, let's remember that this section that we're reading is called, "The Atonement as Defense." So that's why we're talking about defense here.

Continue.

READER: This is what is meant by "the meek shall inherit the earth." They will literally take it over because of their strength.

RAJ: It's sort of like "Silly Putty." If you've ever had "Silly Putty," you can roll it into a ball and then you can set it on a flat surface, and because it doesn't have much of the memory of form that I was talking about last week with the glasses that have frames that the memory of its shape is an integral part of it. When you twist it [the frames], it [the frames] comes back into its shape because it doesn't forget. "Silly Putty" has no memory. And so you form it into a ball and you set it there, and you come back the next day and it's flattened out like a pancake.

"The meek will inherit the earth" in that way. In their defenselessness, in their willingness to, I'm going to say, employ the Atonement as the governing principle of their life, they will simply relax so completely, you might say, that they cover the earth, embracing it totally.

Continue.

READER: A two-way defense is inherently weak precisely because it has two edges, and can be turned against you very unexpectedly. This possibility cannot be...

RAJ: Let me interrupt.

SEEKER (reader): Okay.

RAJ: Whenever you have two edges, two points of view, it constitutes prime soil for argument, and disagreement, and attempts to influence. But that which has no defense whatsoever, can't be attacked and can't see attack. It can't be harmed.

It's like being the loop side of two pieces of Velcro with all of its loops cut. It doesn't matter how many other strips come by that are the hooks, there's no way to engage the loops that have been cut, and therefore there can't be any tension, there can't be any dissonance between the two.

Continue.

READER: This possibility cannot be controlled except by miracles.

RAJ: That is the possibility of having two opposing sides that can engage with each other with some potential for success at manipulation or control.

Start that sentence over. This possibility.

READER: This possibility cannot be controlled except by miracles.

RAJ: The sudden shift of perception that causes you to be able to be the Presence of Love and see with Love, and therefore act with Love, so that your behavior is an expression of affection.

Continue.

READER: The miracle turns the defense of Atonement to your real protection, and as you become more and more secure you assume your natural talent of protecting others, knowing yourself as both a brother and a Son.

RAJ: So, Atonement is a defense against what? Just think about it for a moment. [pause]

When you... I did use the word "against." But when you think of the word "defense," you naturally think of it as defense against something. But you can stand in defense of Truth. You can stand in defense of Love. When the temptation comes for you to become reactive and angry, or jealous, or hateful, or whatever, you can stand in defense of Love, and choose for It, and engage with It, and let It fill you with enriched affection that you are able to express, instead of becoming the mouthpiece for the ego. You see?

So Atonement stands in defense of What's Real. It does not stand defended against what is unreal. And because it stands in defense of What Is Real, it doesn't occasion conflict. If you stand in defense against what is unreal, you will have conflict.

If your prayer is, "Thy Will be done. Let the reign of Divine Truth, Divine Life, and Divine Love be established in me," what are you doing? You are standing in defense of Divine Truth, Life and Love. And you are standing in defense of your capacity to experience and honor it, and nothing else.

"Let it be established in me." Of course, it's already established in you, because you're nothing less than God Expressed, and All That God Is, is already established in you right at this moment. But you're saying, your prayer is acknowledging that and saying, "Let it be established in me." It's like let it be established in me to me, so that I'm more fully aware of it than I have been.

Let it be established in me and rule out of me my inclination to use self-will; my inclination to think; my inclination to reason; my inclination to become angry; my inclination to interpret everything according to my present sense of things, regardless of What God Is Being There. You see?

"Let it be established in me and rule out of me all self-will." Why? So that my affections might be enriched, and therefore be transformational, rather than my willy-nilly running down my habitual road of reaction, and willfulness, and the right I think I have to interpret everything the way I want to interpret it. You see?

So Atonement is not a defense against something. It stands in defense of Reality. It's a choice each of you has to consciously make and then act out. You have to let it take form in action, which is affection. Again, no matter how loving, how truly connected with the Father you might be so that you are perceiving truly about everything and everyone, if you cannot engage face-to-face with a Brother with affection, there is no Atonement.

So, now you know where it's at. And because you do, your participation in the Atonement will be easier for you, because you won't sit in a room by yourself being the Presence of Love, thinking that's all there is to it, and neglecting to bring it into your actions. Once you begin to bring it into your actions, and your desire is to act it out more and more consistently, the world is going to see more evidence of Atonement.

And this book that we're reading and what's in it, has been around long enough for there to be more evidence of Atonement. I am not chastising anyone. I'm saying that what is needed for transformation is present, and the means of embodying it—good choice of words—the means of embodying it are present. [walking around the room to each person] Right there. Right there. Embody. Body. Body. Two together expressing affection. Embodiment. And I'm not talking about sex. Body. Body. Embodiment. Body. Body. It's not an illusion. Love it. Use it. Body. Affection. Affection. Not a slap, but a caress. Caring. You know, take the time to touch, to care, to express thoughtfulness with your bodies. With your bodies. With your bodies. Embody it.

Take the time to mean it. It can't be done at a distance. Acts of Love. Acts of getting close enough, defenselessly enough, that hearts can touch, because the goal is for hearts to touch. You see?

The words here don't mean anything until you catch the spirit of it, of them, and extend them to each other. And where it needs to be expressed and embodied most is where a hatred seems to be active, whether it's a brand-new hatred, or an ancient hatred. And like I pointed out last week, an ancient hatred is a current ignorance clothed in the idea that it's ancient. [laughs]

You're all watching, everyone on the globe is watching aggressive sparring going on—the embodiments of ancient hatreds by a brand-new people. There's nothing ancient about it, except that the current generation has been told by the one just behind it, how they should currently think. And they have justified the current thinking on what the generation before thought, and the generation before thought, and the generation before thought. And yet, what's being embodied in the world today is nothing less than a brand-new generation, and one that's just behind it, and maybe a few left over from the one just behind that, acting out a current willfulness; not a current love.

"I hate your guts because your great, great, great, great, great grandfather did something horrible to my great, great, great, great, great grandfather. And I won't forgive you for what he did." So we have an obvious circumstance where enrichment of affection is called for.

Now if you don't like what you see going on in the world, then stop doing it in your individual experience, because that, you can do something about. And the acts of affection that you engage in will become the leaven that leavens the whole lump.

Again, affection is an act of love. An act of love is an embodiment of Love. And you will have to use your bodies, and not just your mind. Let your bodies become the brush that paints loveliness upon your relationships. Let your bodies be the brushes that paint healing in your relationships. And remember that if your bodies are not being used, you will not have the concrete evidence of Atonement, no matter how blissed-out you are all alone in your room being "the presence of love."

Do you know that I love you, all of you? And so I talk straight with you so that you won't suffer from confusion, and won't think you're doing everything that needs to be done when you're only doing half of what needs to be done.

Was there a hand?

SEEKER: Are you talking like Mother Theresa? Or more sublime than that? Or more sublime working towards like Mother Theresa?

RAJ: I'm not sure how much more sublime one can get than Mother Theresa.

SEEKER: So we should make that as our goal?

RAJ: No. That's a concept. So if you're going to make that your goal, then you're probably going to have to find as many videos of Mother Theresa as you can, because you can't go and observe her directly and see what it was that she did, and how did it look, and so that you can maybe get a feeling for what it was she was about.

SEEKER: Well, I mean the full immersion of herself into her world—caring for the sick, caring for the down-trodden, almost... well, to what we rate as a very high degree, which is why we hold her in high esteem and high regard.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: I guess that goes back to the first sentence: The Atonement is total commitment.

RAJ: Yes. Total commitment to what?

SEEKER: To the giving of acts of love.

RAJ: But what is it that you have to be committed to in order to be in a position to engage in acts of love?

SEEKER: Interaction. Relationship.

RAJ: No.

Each of you, without your connection with God, do not know how to Love. You don't know What Love Is.

So, because I've used a phrase that is a part of the teaching of Christian Science, I'm going to use another statement that Mary Baker Eddy used. She said, "Follow me only in so far as I follow Christ." Now what does that mean? It means, how are you going to know whether she's following Christ unless you go within yourself like she did, or like she was doing when she was here, let us say. You won't know whether she's following Christ if you are not following her example and going within and asking the Christ, "What is the Truth? What should I do? What's the next appropriate step?"

So, if you're going to follow somebody, like Mother Theresa, you'd better do what she did, and that was she talked with God all day long. Her commitment was to let God shine through—not a human being, not an ego—so that her human being became illuminated with God.

The Atonement is a total commitment. Yes. And Atonement... and Atonement means an Act of Love. So Atonement means commitment to Eternal Acts of Love.

So, you've got to love your Brother and your Sister enough to not honor who they are presenting themselves as, but with them in mind specifically, one-on-one, go within and ask God, "What is the Truth here about my friend? Reveal to me the Divine Presence that has to be here in order for me to see something less because my vision isn't complete."

You must use each other as your reason for turning to God, so that in turning to God you are blessed with Vision that causes your experience of your Brother or Sister who drove you to God [audience amused] and be able to give back the Gift that God has given you. And now we have an Act of Love that came from God, that was started by your willingness to have an object of your affection. And use that object of your affection, even if he or she has been a real bitch or bastard, to use that one as a reason for asking to see the Truth and turning to God, so that you might have the influx of the Gift of Vision that is imbued with Love, and which, because it has infilled you, causes you to send out Messengers of Love spontaneously, without a single thought of premeditation, that will go out to your Brother or Sister, who is your reason to turn to God, who you are caring enough to ask God about, and bring back to you confirmation of the Loveliness, the Divinity, the Innocence, the Perfection of your Brother or Sister.

Do you see? Now you understand what I mean.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: The commitment to your Brother or Sister to engage in an Act of Love means that you are going to turn to God to learn of your Brother or Sister.

SEEKER: And not decide what the Act of Love is before it occurs.

RAJ: Absolutely. Because until you are connected with God, you don't have the foggiest idea of What Love Is. Because you and everyone else are operating on the basis of your mutually-agreed-upon definitions of love, and those mutually-agreed-upon definitions of love have nothing to do with doing something for someone else. They have only to do with getting something yourself—security where it doesn't exist to be had; safety where it doesn't exist to be had; success where it doesn't exist to be had.

Right?

SEEKER: So just allow these Acts of Love to manifest wherever we find ourselves in our own lives at all times.

RAJ: Yes. Making sure, having a deep commitment to not engage in those Acts of Love frivolously, haphazardly, offhandedly. There must be a deep commitment to connecting securely and solidly with the Holy Spirit, or with Me, or with your Guide, or with God, so that you can feel the utter appropriateness of whatever the act turns out to be; so that you can feel the Divinity of it; not the rightness of it.

SEEKER: Giving up our own accountability for the Act of Love.

RAJ: Absolutely. Because that which feels accountable is not the Divine One You Are, but the ego. Absolutely.

SEEKER: So we're back to just letting go. Letting God.

RAJ: Right.

SEEKER: Not fighting the impulses.

RAJ: That's right.

ANOTHER SEEKER: When it says here, "the miracle turns the defense of Atonement to your real protection," is what that means, by following Guidance, then you're not hooked by the ego, and that is your real protection?

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: And then it says, "and as you become more and more secure, you assume your natural talent of protecting others," that's witnessing?

RAJ: That's witnessing. And that's engaging in affection.

SEEKER: Affection.

RAJ: Acts of Love.

SEEKER: And so by doing that, you're also bringing the energy there which helps protect them from getting hooked by their ego.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: And it also [laughing] protects them from you.

SEEKER: From trying to Mother Theresa them.

RAJ: That's right. [audience laughter] That's right.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Last week you talked about the treasures, and what we value, what we treasured, and how much we treasured it. And then you threw in the “why.” That’s what this is about. That’s the connectedness to the Atonement, to the affection. That’s why.

RAJ: That is a good way of putting it. Yes.

SEEKER: And it was amazing to me as I worked with that over and over again, how I found I consistently would go to something I could get out of it. It just amazed me that I was still so rooted in the idea of getting. And when you put it like you did, it just bring me right up to the startling-ness of that, over and over again. How it would start to come in as some cozy little concept, and then when you got it right down, there it was—trying to get something again.

And when you first asked that about reaching out in the room, what came to me the first thing, was really clear, was like reach for my cell phone, which I thought was a smart-assed answer, but it really was the only answer. You’ve got to reach out to somebody else.

And when I’m sitting there and feeling comfortable, connected to the Love that you and what I get connected with provides, you’ve been over and over clarifying that that’s... that’s not where it ends.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: This is really good stuff.

RAJ: Well, it’s Reality. And Reality is good stuff. The Way It Works is good stuff, even though, as it says, to the ego it seems to be a loss.

Let us continue.

READER: The Altar of God

The Atonement can be accepted within you only by the releasing of the inner light.

RAJ: We really have discussed this. The question is, “Where are you going to get the inner Light?”

Continue.

READER: Since the separation, defenses have been used almost entirely to defend against the Atonement, and thus maintain the separation. This is generally seen as a need to protect the body. The many body fantasies in which minds engage arise from the distorted belief that the body can be used as a means for attaining “atonement.”

RAJ: Yes.

Now, do you think that’s what I was describing? No.

The body cannot be used as a means for attaining the Atonement. The Atonement principle is Love, and Atonement is an Act of Love arising out of the Living Presence of the principle in you. Thus, the body does not become a means of attaining the Atonement, but as a means of expressing it, as a means of giving it.

Do you see the difference?

Continue.

READER: Perceiving the body as a temple is only the first step in correcting this distortion, because it alters only part of it. It does recognize that Atonement in physical terms is impossible. The next step, however, is to realize that a temple is not a structure at all. Its true holiness lies at the inner altar around which the structure is built. The emphasis on beautiful structures is a sign of the fear of Atonement, and an unwillingness to reach the altar itself.

RAJ: Now this is a metaphor. And you need to know it. And once you see the metaphor, it will be utterly clear.

RAJ READING: The emphasis on beautiful structures...

RAJ: Well, when you read those words, "beautiful structures," and you have just been talking about temples, immediately gothic cathedrals, modern cathedrals, stained-glass windows, exquisite pipe organ pipes come to mind. When it's like, hmmm, how can that be a sign of the fear of Atonement? But, if the body—and I'm not going to come around and tap everyone's knee again—it's a temple. Well, it makes a lot more sense if you say the emphasis on beautiful bodies is a sign of the fear of Atonement, and an unwillingness to reach the Altar itself. It's easier to see that a preoccupation with presenting a good human form is a good way of covering up your heart. If you're connected to your heart, you will be the Presence of Love unshaven, hair unkempt; not caring at all about a beautiful structure, a beautiful presentation. You see?

The next sentence says:

RAJ READING: The real beauty of the temple cannot be seen with the physical eye.

RAJ: So preoccupation with the form, preoccupation with the exterior, is indeed the way you cover up and make safe, make safely hidden the Love That You Are, the Love that it is your Function to be embodying.

Continue.

READER: Spiritual sight, on the other hand, cannot see the structure at all because it is perfect vision. It can, however, see the altar with perfect clarity.

RAJ: I'm going to alter that slightly. It may see the structure, but that is not where its attention is drawn. Its attention is drawn to the reason it's there, which is to embrace the Altar.

Let me put it this way. It's a rainy day. You've agreed to meet someone on the corner of an intersection. The corner has no awnings. The buildings have no awnings. And so you're standing there under your umbrella. And your friend comes hurriedly walking down the street, sees you on the corner, is glad to know that you are dry, but other than that, could care less about the umbrella, because you are who your friend came to see. In effect, your friend wouldn't see the umbrella, because the umbrella isn't what he came to meet.

Likewise, spiritual sight comes to be in communion with the Altar in the temple, and therefore doesn't notice the temple, because the temple isn't what it came to see. You see?

Continue.

READER: For perfect effectiveness the Atonement belongs at the center of the inner altar, where it undoes the separation and restores the wholeness of the mind. Before the separation the mind was invulnerable to fear, because fear did not exist. T-#18/21)

RAJ: Interesting. Because fear did not exist, it was invulnerable to fear. How can you be invulnerable to something that doesn't exist?

RAJ READING: Before the separation the mind was invulnerable to fear, because fear did not exist. T-#18/21)

RAJ: It is put this way so that you might grasp that invulnerability regained, will not be some ultimate form of defense that nothing can stand up to successfully. The invulnerability that your willingness to become defenseless will uncover to you, will be an invulnerability that doesn't require power to keep you safe.

We must talk about invulnerability, because from your present frame of reference, you feel vulnerable. And you feel that the vulnerability is part of the human condition and is unavoidable. From the ego's vantage point, invulnerability must be the result of a good defense, of armaments, of moats, and castle walls, and so on. And so it's natural to assume that as you move forward in your Awakening, your Divine Invulnerability will be some form of ultimate defense, but it isn't.

You are invulnerable, because in the absence of the choice for defense, that which you appeared to need defense against, undergoes an alteration in your mind, a sudden shift of perception, that allows you to see What Is Truly There and be infilled with appreciation for What Is Truly There, and thus engage in the Atonement, which will transform the world. And you will come to an experiential appreciation of the meaning of the statement, "In my defenselessness my safety lies."

In my defenselessness, my invulnerability lies. In my defenselessness, I am refusing to be in a polarized state of mind. And in the absence of polarities, I am unable to see conflict. And in my inability to see conflict, the Presence of God can become obvious to me. And I can rejoice at the Saint, who I thought was my irritating brother.

And you know what? When you're not seeing an irritating brother there because you truly are seeing the Saint that he is, the Presence of God that he is, your bristles, your hackles, your quills, lay down. And you are no longer threatening to your Brother. And the genuineness of your benignness can be recognized by your Brother, so that he can say, "Wow. I never thought he would relax so that we could just relate with each other." And he will dare to relate with you in a new way, because you dared to let your affections be enriched.

Spiritual Sight cannot see the structure at all because it is Perfect Vision. Spiritual Sight is.

RAJ READING: It can, however, see the altar with perfect clarity.

RAJ: And seeing the Altar in your Brother, seeing your Brother's heart allows you to watch with him a moment, be with him a moment, while he thinks he is on his way to the crucifixion. The Bible says, I said, "Could you not watch with me?" You need to stand with each other. You need to be with others affectionately—with warmth, with defenselessness. And the only thing that will allow you to do that is if you're willing to look at your Brother with Someone Who Is Awake, who can illuminate to you the loveliness of the bitch, or the loveliness of the bastard, and the lovableness of them both, and illuminate your capacity to love them right then and there, so that it is embodied.

We will let things rest there for tonight—a wonderful resting place.

I thank you for wanting to have your affections enriched. It makes it a downright pleasure to be with you.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

November 21, 2002 -- A Course In Miracles Study Group with Raj/Jesus

Discussion Today

Everyone will have to participate in the fact that it's all about Gift.

When fear enters the picture.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: I am going to take a moment here, perhaps many moments. I am going to speak on Paul's behalf and for Paul at the moment, because he knows that if he spoke to you, he would lose his cool. He wishes to apologize to everyone for the delay this evening. But the fact is that he is experiencing a great deal of fear, and has been for the last week to week-and-a-half, and it is making it difficult for him to hear me and let what I am saying flow smoothly and freely. Part of my talking here is to help him feel being on the beam with me and to relax so that the flow can smooth out, and so that he can find himself disentangled from the fear.

Very simply, the fear revolves around a significant decrease in the flow of financial support, which his ego insists on turning in on him. You see, I will not go where his ego wants to take this. Needless to say, it has caused him to feel increasingly responsible personally for that which he cannot be responsible. And this has been overwhelming.

It is important for all of you to know that he really is no different from you. And when fear enters the picture, it is still necessary for him, as it is necessary for every one of you, to make a conscious choice as to whether he is going to listen to the voice for fear, or to the Voice for Truth. If he had listened to the voice for fear tonight he would have come out and said he's at the end of his rope and cannot be present for the Gathering this evening. That was not his choice, however, even though he was, and still is, far from the Place of Peace that he finds normal under these circumstances.

Although he feels like he is no example whatsoever, I am saying that in front of you, he is being an example of what one must do when fear runs rampant through you and every fiber of your body says hide. And what it means is hide from the Truth that would be the answer. It means hide in and feel the fear, and send out messengers of fear to find confirmation of the justification for fear. A different choice has to be made, even though it isn't what one feels naturally and spontaneously like doing. One has to choose for Love. One has to choose for Truth. And one has to choose for extending it right in the face of the fear; not against the fear, but instead of the fear.

You can't battle fear. All you can ever do is have another point to give your attention to and persist in giving your attention there--the Voice for Truth, the God within you, the Holy Spirit, your capacity to be the Presence of Love and persist in the face of fear, whether the circumstances that have occasioned the fear, or that seem to justify the fear, have changed or not.

What I'm saying is as good as anything we could be reading from the book tonight, and in fact is supported by what is in the book.

[pause] I have assured Paul that he is not blocking me at this moment. I simply am not saying anything. [long pause]

Paul wishes to convey a commitment to you, and everyone, who finds value in the work, the activity, that he and I are engaged in. And that commitment is that no matter what happens, he's not going to stop listening to me and he is not going to stop finding a way, or allowing for a way, for it to be extended. Nothing will stop him from that. That is his commitment. You might think it's a commitment to me, but it's a commitment to you. That is the way it has worked. That is the way it will work. That is only way it will work.

And although it might mean that things are not easy, he is in complete agreement with me that there will never be a charge placed on any aspect of the extension of his union with me. And his commitment to that is not an intellectual commitment. He knows that this is the only way it will work. And he is in harmony with the fact that that's the only way it will work. Not that that's the only way it will work for him, but that's the only way it will work for everyone.

Everyone will have to participate in the fact that it's all about Gift. It's all about giving. It's all about extending. It's the Father's good pleasure to give you, extend to you, the Kingdom--All That Is. If that's the way the Father works, that's the way Being works. If that's the way Being/existing works, that's the way each of you works. That is the Nature of your Being.

When one tries to act on one's own, one spontaneously behaves defensively. And one gets into the mode of getting, acquiring, possessing. And then protecting one's possessions. The exact opposite of Gift. The exact opposite of Extension. The exact opposite of Love. The exact opposite of Caring.

I am talking about this tonight because this is what needs to be addressed. Not because those of you here do not reciprocate. Not because those of you who are here are not giving. Not because you're not supporting enough. This isn't directed at you. But I am addressing a general attitude, because my words will reach further than just you. It addresses a basic attitude that is immobilizing to the experience of the influx of Wholeness for absolutely everyone who isn't Awake.

And I'm not addressing the problem; I'm addressing the solution. I'm giving voice to the answer; the answer for everyone. Because the simple fact is that as each of you take the essential step of shifting from getting to giving, you do two things. You become, first of all, an agent for change in the world, and contribute significantly thereby to the Evidence of Atonement in the world. And the second thing is that that change which you become the agent of, is a result of your fulfilling your Function to glorify God by being like Him, instead of trying so hard to be different from Him. And this brings you back into the fulfillment of your Function.

And this is what the Course is about. This is what Awakening is about in practical nitty-gritty down-to-earth terms, where what's down-to-earth becomes transformed before your eyes, and you begin to see the Evidence of Heaven where your sense of separation had created a distorted experience called "the world and universe that has nothing to do with God at all."

This, we--Paul and I--will continue to give voice to, come hell or high water, because it is the only answer, and because it is the only thing that will dissolve the experience of hell and high water.

And you know what? I've said it before this evening, but I'm going to say it again. Don't think that because you are consciously engaged in an apparent process of Awakening which is an endeavor that is to your credit, [it] is going to be easy. Do not misunderstand. I am not saying it is going to be, or it has to be, hard. But the very practical fact is that you are used to being governed by your ego and its perceptions. And you have valued them. You have built a security system based on those ego perceptions. And you have great commitment to ensuring your safety through the maintenance of that security system. And in your process of Awakening, that security system will be dismantled.

And you will dismantle it peace by peace. That's interesting, isn't it? P-e-a-c-e by p-e-a-c-e. Little by little, you will increase your Peace by dismantling another p-i-e-c-e of your defense system, your defense mechanism, which is what the ego is. And as you do it, you will find moments where you are dismantling a part of your defense system that you have felt was particularly essential to your safety, and fear will rear its head. Not for the first time, but for the millionth time. And it has reared its head so many times that you are very familiar with every aspect of and every detail of that fear, and every justification for it, so that when it rears its head, it's easy to feel the fear fully, even though the dismantling you have engaged in has actually weakened it.

And you will have to do what Paul is doing this evening. And that is continue with the dismantling in spite of the fear, because you know that in the dismantling of the defense system, you will feel your inviolability, your innocence, and your absolute safety that requires no defense system. And because there is somewhere in you that you know that you are absolutely and utterly safe, no matter what. And therefore, it is becoming more and more apparent to you that what is called for when fear raises its head is to not energize it by giving your attention to it and being distracted from the dismantling of the defense system.

That is what I mean when I say that it isn't easy. But you must understand that just because it isn't easy, doesn't mean what you're doing is wrong. It doesn't mean that you must be dismantling it wrong. It doesn't mean that you must not really be engaged in Awakening, else everything would be smooth and hunky-dory. If you understand this, you will be able to face the suggestion that fear is justified and that there is reason to disengage from dismantling the defense system. And you will persist, whether it is comfortable, or not. You will persist, whether it is comfortable or not. Go into this with your eyes wide open. I'm disillusioning you now. I am removing illusions that you might carry with you in this apparent process of Awakening, of coming back into your Right Mind.

"Onward Christian soldiers." Well, that's not what I'm talking about. We're not doing battle with the ego. You are learning to recognize what it actually takes to become free of an illegitimate imposition upon you that has kept you from experiencing your Birthright. And that illegitimate imposition upon you is a defense mechanism, a defense system, a barrier, a wall, encircling you that protects you against experiencing God actually. The wall isn't real. And it's not your Birthright to be imprisoned inside the wall that encircles you. So persist, when the rules that say, "don't tear down that wall," try to cause you to stop energizing and validating the wall, and distract you from persisting in your intent to move through it. And the only way to move through it without finding it resisting you, is that by disregarding it, and persisting in wanting to have the Experience of Truth in which the illusion of a wall not only can't stand, but must be shown to be nonexistent so that you may fall through it effortlessly.

[Editor's Note: In the above paragraph, it would seem more appropriate in terms of the meaning of the sentence to instead say: So persist, when the rules that say, "don't tear down that wall," try to cause you to keep energizing and validating the wall, and distract you from persisting in your intent to move through it.]

I'm walking Paul through his wall right now. And you will find that when you insist upon getting past the wall of immobilizing fear that gets hold of you from time to time, you will have Help. You will have Support. You will have inner clarifications available to you of the sort Paul is getting right now to help you recognize what you don't need to be responsive to, so that you don't make it more difficult for yourself by energizing the wall more through harboring the fear; giving it a place of safety in you to reside by feeling it in all the different ways it's possible to feel it. You see?

Fear is not natural to your mind. Fear is not natural to your mind. Therefore, to whatever degree you honor fear, you are behaving in an extremely abnormal way. You are using your mind in a totally abnormal way. You've got to make the choice not to use your mind that way. And choose not to use your mind in that way with persistence until the invitation to fear has subsided in you, and that which is not natural to your mind, seems no longer to be presenting itself as part of your mind.

Once it is no longer presenting itself as part of your mind, your Mind is available to fully represent God, to fully represent your Clarity and your Peace, to fully represent your capacity to be appropriate in every moment, and to be an agent for change, to shift into giving, into extending, which the wall of fear absolutely prohibited you from being and doing. And the world is blessed by your willingness to bless it. And you are blessed by your willingness to bless the world, instead of protecting yourself against the world.

Now, you and Paul will find that he and I have participated in being a living example of what's on the next couple of pages of the Course which we would have covered if we had read them. This has been very healing for Paul and for every single one of you.

For those of you on the Internet who may not know where the next two pages are, for those of you who are reading the first edition, it starts on page 18, the second paragraph. And for those using the second edition, it starts on page 21, paragraph 2. We will not actually read from the Course this evening, but at the next evening we will start with those two pages.

And because next Thursday is Thanksgiving Day, we will not be having the Thursday evening Gathering. And we will resume two weeks from tonight.

Paul feels that the tone of voice has been somber this evening. He misses the lilt. But it has been perfect under the circumstances. I have shared what I have shared out of Love. And Paul has let me share what I have shared as an Act of Love, because even in the face of his fear, he refused to succumb to the very strong invitation to engage in defense and not hold the Gathering at all. And I thank him for that. And he has grown. And I thank you all for being part of it, sharing it with us.

I love you all. And when Paul's mouth moves and forms those words, they are a statement about him as well. He loves you all.

Paul is not feeling buoyant yet, but he is not consumed with fear, and is experiencing significant, if not total, Peace.

And we will call it a night. Thank you.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

Chapter 2 – THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT
Section – THE ALTAR OF GOD
First Edition – p. 18 / Second Edition – p. 21

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And good evening to everyone on the Internet as well.

The chapter we're on is called "The Altar of God."

And the last time we were discussing this chapter, we discussed the tendency when one has attempted to function independent of the Father, to become preoccupied with the beauty of the temple that the Altar is in. And that in so doing, one causes the Altar to recede in one's mind until it becomes forgotten.

But there is another thing you all do with the temple that isn't so beautiful, and that is that because you have your back turned to the Altar, and because you are experiencing separateness, aloneness, which isn't natural to you to be feeling, the unnaturalness that you feel, you identify as fear. And then, out of fear, you transform the temple into a fortress, a defense, a defense against whatever's out there that is responsible for your being afraid. You see? And if you find the fortress not protecting you well, you strengthen it. You develop it. You find a bigger and better way to be safe. And all the time, your back is turned to the Altar.

Now, you must understand that the Altar is the Presence of God that is the very Presence of You. And there is an Effulgence to it, an Illumination to it. A Glow, if you will. And the Glow is what you might call the temple that surrounds the Illumination of the Presence of God that is the actual center and circumference of you.

When you imagine that you can step back from the Light that is you and observe it, you find that you can also imagine a capacity to turn your back on it and notice the Glow without seeing the Altar, without seeing the Source of the Glow. And then you can become preoccupied with it, because it is the only thing in your view. And so you can beautify it, or you can strengthen it, or you can do whatever your imagination can come up with, except that because your back is turned on your Essential Being, and you cannot avoid but feel the unnaturalness of that stance, everything you do, whether it's beautifying the temple or creating a fortress out of it, will be done out of fear, and as a defense.

Now, your body is the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality. Your Individuality is Spirit; not matter; not solid form. Therefore, the Visibility and Tangibility of you has to also be utter Spirit; not tangible matter.

But the moment you begin to use the temple as a means of defense, you densify it, as I've said before. You tighten it up. Indeed, I know that almost all of you, at this particular time, with all of the invitations you have through the media to feel fear, are experiencing physical tension, are experiencing queasiness in the pit of your stomach, are generally not feeling at ease in your body. And the reason is because you are preparing it to defend yourself.

Now, I'm going to ask you a trick question. Which came first, the invitation to fear, or, the physical sensation of fear? I'm not going to have you answer that question. Some of you are likely to say, "I was feeling uneasy before I got any indication from my world that there was a need for it." And others of you will say, "I wasn't feeling anything until I started watching the news." Well, what came first wasn't the call for fear, or, the uneasy feeling within you. What came first was turning your back on the Altar. If this is clear to you, then you will be able to understand easily and clearly that the answer to the call for fear and the physical sensation of uneasiness, is to give your attention back to the Altar, so that you don't engage in defense beautifully, or by having a strong fortress.

"Oh, let's defend ourselves through reason and compassion. Let's defend ourselves through prayer. Let's defend ourselves through a positive attitude. Let's defend ourselves by consciously embracing our enemy with love." You see, that's a beautiful way of defending yourself, but it's still defense.

You've got to stop keeping your back to the Altar. You've got to abandon looking at effects, and turn within to the place where your Peace is available to you. And you must choose for your Peace first, before you look out there, so that when you access your Peace, you may feel the Presence of God's Love that is there growing brighter and illuminating you with the Gift of Love, so that all you are impelled to do, or be, is the uncomplicated Presence of Love that sees What God Would Have You See where you had seen an enemy that you needed to defend yourself against. And that is the only thing that is going to transform whatever situation you're confronted by that seems to be a justifiable call for fear.

Now I want you to understand also that as long as you engage in the habit of using your body as a shield, as a fortress, as a presence of that which has the capacity to exert force, you will find yourself experiencing your body trying to accommodate your intent to use it as a defense. And you will be uncomfortable. You will become ill. You will find dis-eases, simply because your decision to act and be a forceful presence for your defense causes you to use the Glow of the Altar as a means of being unconscious of the Altar. And your ever-present Sanity, with a capital "S", does not allow you to become more powerful as an independent agent for change without your experiencing an equal amount of distress.

Your Sanity, the ever-present Balance of Being, causes every single one of you, when you are attempting to act at odds with Being, to be met with an equal force in the opposite direction, you might say. In other words, if you tried to stretch into a position, or a shape, that God didn't give you the ability to move into, your attempt will be met with an awareness that you can't do it. And it will also be met with an awareness of the unnaturalness of it, because even though you tried to act and think insanely, you haven't been given the capacity to do it.

And so you say, "I am going to protect myself against my enemy. And I am going to use my body, because it's the only thing I have to use, as the fortress and the weapon. And I am going to do whatever I have to do to protect myself, no matter how aggressive my enemy gets." And the more intense you become, the more at odds with the nature of the temple of the Glow of the Altar, you become. And you squeeze the Life, you squeeze the Glow, you squeeze the Light out of it. Not that you can actually do that, but you squeeze it out of your range of vision. And ultimately, you may find that your so-called "enemy" has killed you, when actually you have turned the Light out by insisting on attempting to solve the problem that you have misperceived as existing by getting rid of it, and using the Glow of your Being as the means of doing it. And the only result you can seem to have is to find yourself snuffed out.

So when you attack your enemy, you're attacking yourself, because the whole scenario has arisen out of a fantastic imagination that you could actually turn your back on the Light of your Being, the Altar that is in the very center of you, and engage in anything, beautiful or ugly, loving or hateful, healing or killing, without being connected with your Source. And so the enemy you see, because you have your back to the Altar, seems to kill you because that is the scenario you have set in place by becoming defended against this imaginary entity.

Now it doesn't have to be Saddam Hussein. It can be your child. It can be your lover. It can be your mate. It can be an employer, or an employee. You're getting constant invitations to feel vulnerable these days. And it's very easy for whatever vulnerability you activate within yourself to rub off, or color, your experience of everyone else. And anyone and everyone can become the object of your suspicion and very creative, imaginative ideas about just how they are being terrible and operating to your detriment.

So this is really a time to remember what your Function is, which is to be the Presence of Love. And to remember that the Atonement Principle, because Atonement is what this is all about, the Atonement Principle is Love, and the Atonement is an Act of Love.

And as long as your attention is on the temple, I'll put it this way, as long as your attention is on the Glow from the Altar, and whether you make it into a temple or a fortress, you're ultimately going to have to realize that the answer to any form of defense is to turn around so that your back isn't to the Altar. And so that you can see the Altar, and in your imagined distance from it, feel yourself being loved by the Love That Is Really You, That Is Really God Being The Presence That Is You, so that your decision to stand apart from It and observe It might melt in the Presence Of That Love. And you will find yourself slipping back into being It, rather than standing apart from It and observing It, and apparently giving yourself a vantage point where you can turn your back on It and look out there and see a world that you must be defended against.

Maybe it isn't another country. Maybe it isn't a mate, or a child, or a parent, or an employer, or an employee. Maybe it's your body that you are finding yourself needing to defend yourself against, because it is not behaving properly and threatening your life. You see? Maybe it is what is causing you to be vulnerable to the worst.

You see, even the Glow from the Altar that you look at, which is really the temple, but which you look at with your back turned to the Altar, can become that which you have to defend yourself against. And so, here you are, using your body as a defense against It, further compounding the densifying of Pure Light, Pure Glow, the Pure Energy of Spirit that never was matter, and never was governed by the laws of matter, the laws of physics.

So, with that in mind, let's begin. Again, it's the second paragraph on page 21, for those who are in the second edition. And for those who are in the first edition, it's page 18, the second paragraph.

Okay.

READER: For perfect effectiveness the Atonement belongs at the center of the inner altar, where it undoes the separation and restores the wholeness of the mind.

RAJ: Now, it is already there. For perfect effectiveness, it is already there. The point is that that's where you need to bring your attention. Your attention needs to be brought to the center of your Being, the inner quietness.

Continue.

READER: Before the separation the mind was invulnerable to fear, because fear did not exist.

RAJ: And after the separation, the mind is invulnerable to fear, because fear does not exist.

So, it's not like the separation happened a long time ago and now you're stuck in it. All you have to do is be willing to not be separate any more. And the moment you make that joining with the Presence of God in the middle of you, then you will find you're invulnerable, and that there is no fear, and that there never was. So again, it's not something that happened in the past. It's a change of mind that occurred which can be unchanged at any moment.

Continue.

READER: Both the separation and the fear are miscreations that must be undone for the restoration of the temple, and for the opening of the altar to receive the Atonement. This heals the separation by placing within you the one effective defense against all separation thoughts and making you perfectly invulnerable.

RAJ: The one effective defense against all separation thoughts is to abandon your imagined capacity to stand separate and objectively view the Subjective Experience of Being Love Itself. The only effective defense against an illusion is to stop indulging in the illusion. And because you can't actually become something you are not, you never did become something that had that capacity. And so that fact that you have never changed one iota for one second from What God Created You To Be is the answer that's already in place in the middle of you because it was never undone.

Okay.

SEEKER (reader): I have a question about when you were talking about turning our backs to the Altar. Every time we do that, is that always an attack on the body?

RAJ: It's always an attack on God, you might say. It's always an attack on your Essential Being. And because you are using your body in order to... ummm...

SEEKER: Wake up.

RAJ: No.

Because you are using your body as the means of attacking God, you are causing it to try to do something that it cannot actually do. When you do that, it doesn't change your body. Your body doesn't actually become diseased. And your body cannot ultimately die, because the Glow will always be there. And it will forever be the Illumination of Light, and not matter. But you can seem to create an experience of density in your body that you could call an attack on your body. But remember that in order to become preoccupied with the Glow, you must already have turned your back to the Altar.

SEEKER: Hence my question. And it's not valuable to look at it that way. That it is an attack on the body, but it kind of... that's what I thought when you said that.

RAJ: Well, let me put it this way. When you take your fist and attack the wall by punching it, which one do you think hurts?

SEEKER: Your hand. [laughing]

RAJ: Yeah. Not the wall.

So when you use your body as a means of attack, you find it suffering. But the moment you turn around and give your attention to the Altar, and you abandon the attack-mode so that you might be infilled with the Father's Love that illuminates that It, the Father's Love, is the very Presence of your Being, then all injury that seemed to occur in your little fantasy disappears.

You see?

SEEKER: I see.

RAJ: And the Glow doesn't go away, but it isn't the center of your attention any more.

Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: The acceptance of the Atonement by everyone is only a matter of time. This may appear to contradict free will because of the inevitability of the final decision, but this is not so. You can temporize and you are capable of enormous procrastination, but you cannot depart entirely from your Creator, Who set the limits on your ability to miscreate.

RAJ: Yes. Now...

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] You can't avoid it. [audience laughter]

ANOTHER SEEKER: [inaudible] [more audience laughter] [Raj laughing]

ANOTHER SEEKER: That horrible word. [audience laughter]

RAJ: You see, in order to act at odds with the Father, you must attempt to stretch the Father, or compress the Father, or in some way twist What The Father Is, because you are given no other material to work with but What God Is Being.

And so you might imagine that God is a giant rubber band that is Eternal and Inviolable, and therefore cannot be damaged or broken, but which, because it is a rubber band, can be stretched. And so, you attach one end of it to an immovable rock, and you start stretching it. Well, you can't stop it from being What It Is, and you can't make it become something else, but what you find happening is that as you walk further and further away from the rock, it becomes more and more difficult because you are trying with more and more force to accomplish something that is impossible—to stretch God out of shape.

So, you could say that you have free will to try to stretch God, or twist Him into something He isn't, but because He can't be twisted into something He isn't, you will inevitably come to the realization that what you're attempting to do is impossible. And with understanding, and with comprehension, and with willingness, you'll stop trying to do the impossible.

So, the end is inevitable. Free will means that you have the right to cooperate with The Way Things Work. But it also means that you have to cooperate with The Way Things Work because it's your choice. The ultimate choice that you're faced with is that you have decided to co-operate with The Way Things Work. And the word "co-operate" is very close in meaning to the word "co-creation."

Continue.

READER: An imprisoned will engenders a situation which, in the extreme, becomes altogether intolerable.

RAJ: That's the really stretched rubber band.

READER: Tolerance for pain may be high, but it is not without limit.

RAJ: You see, you never totally lose your Sanity, and so when something becomes obviously unreasonable, you have the capacity to recognize it.

Continue.

READER: Eventually everyone begins to recognize, however dimly, that there must be a better way. As this recognition becomes more firmly established, it becomes a turning-point.

RAJ: Yes.

READER: This ultimately reawakens spiritual vision, simultaneously weakening the investment in physical sight.

RAJ: And I'm going to put it this way. Spiritual Vision arises out of the decision to turn toward the Altar. Physical vision results from the decision to turn your back on the Altar. The decision to turn your back to the Altar is an abandonment of Wisdom. And the decision to turn back toward the Altar is an Expression of Wisdom.

READER: The alternating investment in the two levels of perception is usually experienced as conflict, which can become very acute. But the outcome is as certain as God.

RAJ: And the more acute a situation gets, the closer you are, I'm going to put it this way, to having your will broken—your will to operate at odds with God. And so the more acute the situation is, you might say the more miracle-ready you are. Because the Sanity in you that you cannot get rid of, even though you can try to ignore it, stands ready in that state of acuteness to register with you.

It stands ready for you to recognize once again, so that you say, "Ah! I get it! I've been making it difficult for myself by doing it the way I wanted to do it without being curious to know What Really Works. And so I'm going to ask for Help. I'm going to turn around where I can see the Altar. I am going to re-embrace that in me which holds the answer which I rejected at some point."

You see, Wisdom is something more than just an intellectual "Aha!" It's something that comes from very deep within you, because it's part of your innate Sanity. And so you feel it.

Continue.

READER: Spiritual vision literally cannot see error, and merely looks for Atonement. All solutions the physical eye seeks dissolve. Spiritual vision looks within and recognizes immediately that the altar has been defiled and needs to be repaired and protected. Perfectly aware of the right defense it passes over all others, looking past error to truth.

RAJ: Yes.

You see, the whole reason that one doesn't turn toward the Altar is because one is preoccupied with the error, and defense against it, out of self-righteousness. You see? And so one is committed to exposing the error, and demonstrating its horribleness, and proving that it must be annihilated—instead of stopping a moment, and going within, and becoming still, which is the equivalent of turning around so that your back isn't to the Altar, and letting in the Perspective that is naturally and eternally yours, so that you can with Love reassess your choice of how to perceive what you're seeing. And make a new choice colored by, supported by, and illuminated by, the Love That You Are, that you have become reacquainted with once again, by virtue of abandoning your commitment to the error and its eradication, and instead yielding into the Love in the center of your Being that is the Presence of God and His Perspective. And that's what heals.

Continue.

READER: Because of the strength of its vision, it brings the mind into its service.

RAJ: Ah, yes! You thought, you all have thought that your mind is the authorizer. That it's not there to be in service to anything. It is something for everyone else and everything else to be in service to.

"Let's move this mountain. Let's clear this forest. Let's transform the land. Let's do what will damage the ozone layer, just because we want to do it. After all, we won't be here to suffer the consequences. Let's make our mark on the earth. Let's make our mark on each other. Let's coerce each other into being what we want them to be, or stop them from being what we don't want them to be."

And so everything must become subject and in service to the mind that has conceived the idea of how things ought to be. But that's not the Function of the Mind. And as long as one insists upon employing it that way, one is at odds with The Way Things Work. And you are going to exist in an ongoing state of suffering, which will be more, or less, intense depending upon whether you are more, or less, in harmony with The Way Things Work.

It is insulting to the ego to let the Mind be in service to the Atonement, to be in service to the Father's Will, to be in service to Love.

Continue.

SEEKER: May I ask a question with regards to what you said just now?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: When you said, you know, the mind says, "let's move the mountain, and make people do this," or whatever, it seems to me that the underlying driving force in this world seems to be seeking money, the accumulation of wealth.

RAJ: No. Let's be clearer than that.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: The driving force in the world isn't that. The driving force in those who are conceptualizing how things are to be in the world is that.

SEEKER: Yes. Yes.

RAJ: The world is the Manifestation of God. Never more. Never less. So be careful how you use your words.

Because, likewise, the body can't function at odds with you, because it doesn't have a capacity to act on its own. But when you say, "My body is killing me," or "My body is letting me down," you create an image that simply isn't true. And if you believe that image, then undoing that belief becomes the first step before you can actually get down to the realization that you are using your body as a defense, trying to make it function in a way it wasn't meant to, by following instructions you are giving to it that you weren't meant to give to it. You see? And once that realization occurs, you can address the problem by changing your mind.

Continue, though.

SEEKER: The... it... would it be...

RAJ: The current mindset in the world is.

SEEKER: The current mindset in the world is to accumulate wealth. This to me seems like...

RAJ: The current mindset in the world is to accumulate power.

SEEKER: Power.

RAJ: And wealth seems to be one of the most effective... ummm... one of the most effective means of influencing others to allow power to be exercised over them.

Continue.

SEEKER: Even people who have great wealth still seem to be motivated to—not all, but many—to accumulate more power, and more power, and more power, and more power. So, is this another way of saying defense? Having power, therefore you can defend against whatever you perceive to be a threat?

RAJ: Absolutely. Now that doesn't have to be the only motivation for wealth.

SEEKER: The reason I'm delving into this is because it seems that while the majority of people in the world are in the mode of thinking that we need to accumulate more power to protect ourselves, or whatever, then it really slows down any way of shifting into another way of being.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: Here's an example. For instance, we know that governments are basically corrupt in the world, but yet, but yet we... it's not like we're incensed by it any longer, or we say, "Well, let's get rid of those guys and bring in some honest people." It's almost we accept it because we're trying to do the same thing, or the majority of people are trying to do the same thing, and that is accumulate power. So how can I fault those who are accumulating power more successfully, apparently, than I am, because I'm trying to do the same thing? So therefore, I'm going to accept the way things are and just get the money and run, so to speak, which seems like that's where the world would... the world in... I mean in terms of the illusion, is stuck right now.

RAJ: That's where the current mindset is. Exactly.

SEEKER: Exactly.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Exactly.

RAJ: Ah.

SEEKER: So...

RAJ: But so what. It may be currently immobilized, but not incapable of movement. And so, someone, somewhere, like maybe you, or anyone else in this room, can abandon that game, abandon that mindset, and start being the Presence of Love, the gifter, instead of the getter. And let everything that is done with money be done for reasons other than self-protection. Let what is done with money embrace and gift with no strings. Let everything that is done with money bless, not you, but those to whom you would extend your Love. Not your Love, but the Love that arises in you when you have turned your... when you have turned around toward the Altar and been filled by the Love that is in It.

Now, you might say, "Well, that's going to be a hard row to hoe, because I'm going against the whole world!"

Well, you've got to remember the only one whose misperceptions are distressing you are yours. And when you turn around, your distress will dissolve. And you'll see that you're not going against the stream, you're not going against the world's mindset, because you don't need them to change in order for your distress to dissolve. And you don't need them to see it your way in order for your Wholeness to be experienced by you. But by being Love, you will be part of the leaven that leavens the whole lump, and allows someone else to say (who still thinks they're caught in the world), "Ah! Well, he did it. And she did it. And I understand that over in Idaho there's a whole group of people who did it. It's not as hard as... it is not as hard. I don't think it's going to be as hard as Michael did, when he did it." You start the domino falling.

SEEKER: So it's like when you're filled up by turning around the other way and being filled by the Love that's coming from the Altar, then when you're filled up, you cannot but give.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Which is the only legitimate reason for giving—because you are filled.

RAJ: Exactly! Because you can't hold it all!

SEEKER: And there's no reason to want to hold it all.

RAJ: That's correct.

Continue.

READER: This re-establishes the power of the mind and makes it increasingly unable to tolerate delay, realizing that it only adds unnecessary pain. As a result, the mind becomes increasingly sensitive to what it would once have regarded as very minor intrusions of discomfort.

RAJ: Yes. Oh, and that increased sensitivity. [reader laughs] It makes it so easy to get pissed off at everyone else's ignorance, which makes it very easy for you to become defended again, and turn your back on the Altar.

"My God, these are my friends. I had no idea they didn't grasp what they said they were grasping. I had no idea how far back in the dark ages they actually were!" You see? As you see more clearly, things that hadn't bothered you before, didn't register with you before. And as you become clearer, it's easier to see how unclear others still are, which means that you didn't assess them well before you became enlightened. And you were really associating with, oh, people you shouldn't have been associating with. And you also find yourself with the feeling that, because you thought they knew better, and now you see that they don't know better, they must have been misrepresenting themselves, and therefore are not worthy of your putting up with their ignorance.

There are many ways the ego can come in, in the face of greater Clarity and a greater willingness to Love, to show you just how unworthy those who you liked, are of the Pure Love that you now have to give, because they had misled you. So you must be very careful that as your greater capacity to be the Presence of Love because you've opened yourself up to it...

PAUL: I'm sorry. I lost it.

RAJ: You must be very careful that because of your increased capacity to be the Presence of Love because you opened up to it, does not become sidetracked by judgments resulting from seeing that your buddies, your friends, your kindred spirits, are more ignorant than you thought they were.

Hey, if they're more ignorant than you thought they were, and you see that they're really committed to their ignorances, my God, here they were ones you thought were on their spiritual path and more enlightened, and they're less enlightened than you thought, what must this mean about the whole world? The whole world must be in a bigger mess than I thought, and it's going to be impossible to be an agent for change.

That's what the ego does when you are infilled with the willingness to be the Presence of Love more fully. And so, you find yourself faced with the requirement to examine your commitment to be the Presence of Love, to find out if this is now the new level of what it will take to cause you to abandon being the Presence of Love, because it's either hopeless, or it's not worth it, or they're not worth it. You see? Greater clarity and the willingness to be the fuller Presence of Love will uncover to you just how much Love is needed.

And the temptation will be to turn your back on the Altar, and be bothered, disgusted, depressed, by how great the ignorance is. And then, once again, all by yourself, unconnected from your Source, feel like giving up and forgetting that all you have to do is turn around again and make commitment to the Light in the middle of the Altar, which ultimately you're going to find out is You yourself.

Okay. Continue.

READER: The children of God are entitled to the perfect comfort that comes from perfect trust.

RAJ: You're entitled to it. It's a Birthright. It doesn't have to be earned. It's yours.

Continue.

READER: Until they achieve this, they waste themselves and their true creative powers on useless attempts to make themselves more comfortable by inappropriate means.

RAJ: Yes. By creating a better, more beautiful temple, or creating a better, bigger, stronger fortress, or trying as a separate private force to make good happen. These are all attempts to make themselves more comfortable by inappropriate means.

Continue.

READER: But the real means are already provided, and do not involve any effort at all on their part.

RAJ: "Oh, no!" the ego says. [some audience laughter] "It doesn't involve any effort? Well, where can willfulness come into play? When can intent come into play? Where can purposefulness come into play?" You see? Well, purposefulness can't come into play, but Purpose can. And it's already present. And it's already the very Presence of You. You see?

Continue.

READER: The Atonement is the only gift that is worthy of being offered at the altar of God, because of the value of the altar itself. It was created perfect and is entirely worthy of receiving perfection.

RAJ: Yes.

READER: God and His creations are completely dependent on each other. He depends on them because He created them perfect.

RAJ: You see? [laughing] If He hadn't created them perfect, He wouldn't dare depend on them. [mild audience laughter]

RAJ READING: He depends on them because He created them perfect.

RAJ: Continue.

SEEKER: Can I make a comment?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: A few years ago at a Gathering, someone asked you how you awakened, and you said, "By getting in touch with my innermost feelings." And, it seems to me that you were looking at the Altar. And correct me if I'm wrong. I certainly don't want to lapse into an intellectual, you know, discourse. I want to try and stay with what we're seeing tonight.

RAJ: Indeed. You're correct.

SEEKER: So you were being honest with yourself?

RAJ: I was being honest with my capital "S" Self.

SEEKER: And you just...

RAJ: Not honest with my ego. That's for sure.

SEEKER: What did you do next? In other words, how did you stay with what you saw without turning your back? Is that a question that's a little bit, you know, misleading to, you know,... umm... in denial?

RAJ: I made commitment to it. And nothing less. Nothing else.

SEEKER: Just simply that.

RAJ: Yes. That is the only option you have available to you.

SEEKER: And you maintained your integrity all through that?

RAJ: Well, my Integrity maintained me. [seeker laughs] Your Integrity will maintain you. You don't have any private integrity to keep you on an even keel through this process. You see? You have... you have an inherent Integrity that is the Flame, the Light, the Illuminate Love, that's in the center of the Altar. That's your Integrity. And it will see you through as long as you keep your vision there; as long as that is where you give your attention.

SEEKER: My ego says that's impossible.

RAJ: Of course, it does. But it always lies. So just because your ego says, "It's impossible," hey, consider the source. And, if your ego is incapable of anything except lies, then it must be telling you that it is utterly possible.

SEEKER: It's not telling me Who and What I Am.

RAJ: Never.

SEEKER: And what everyone in this room is.

RAJ: Never.

[to another seeker] Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: This past couple of weeks have been very intense, and very much what this whole night has been about. And I just, I want to ask you, is that what's happening to me?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: I'm not imagining, or making something out of something. I've been extremely peaceful, and been able to walk into situations that I joined the other person in arguments and long-standing years and years of fighting, and I was able to sit there and be completely in my Peace, and not feel overwhelmed by what was going on, and still love that other person, and walk away still in my Peace. Is that... was that this experience?

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: It was.

RAJ: Yes. It was not you experiencing being irresponsible or being insane.

SEEKER: And it did make a huge difference in that situation.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: It really did move some other people, too.

RAJ: It did indeed.

SEEKER: Okay.

And I've kept... that feeling didn't go away. And I don't ever want it to go away. I really, I understand this. That's the first time I've ever understood anything at one of these things. That's just so cool.

Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

SEEKER (reader): Where was I?

[Raj started reading about 5 sentences back.]

RAJ READING: ...and do not involve any effort at all on their part.

[Raj then started at the beginning of the sentence.]

RAJ READING: But the real means are already provided, and do not involve any effort at all on their part.

SEEKER (reader): Is that from the first edition?

RAJ: Just a moment. [pause] I'm sorry.

You were at:

RAJ READING: He depends on them because He created them perfect.

READER: He gave them His peace so they could not be shaken and could not be deceived. Whenever you are afraid you are deceived, and your mind cannot serve the Holy Spirit.

RAJ: And last week, the last meeting, Paul demonstrated his willingness, in the presence of fear, of continuing to give his attention to the Altar, and persisting, no matter how much his ego was clamoring for his attention and his allegiance. And that is what each one of you must do, because it's the answer.

Continue.

READER: This starves you by denying you your daily bread. God is lonely without His Sons, and they are lonely without Him.

RAJ: What on earth could that mean? How could God be lonely?

SEEKER (reader): Because of the separation.

RAJ: I have used the word that... the word "sad." I have indicated that those of Us Who Are Awake are sad at not being in full communion with all of you. And yet, you might say, that's inconsistent for One Who Is "supposedly" Awake.

If you have a 100-watt light bulb, and you have a dimmer switch, and you have it turned down so that only 50 watts is being used, the light is less full. It is dimmer. And because the light was created to function at 100 watts at full illumination, when its full potential isn't being used, something is missing. And there's an experience of the something-ness missing.

And so when so many are caught in a fantasy-dream and are blocking themselves from full communion with all of Us Who Are Awake, the difference between Fullness and the degree of communion that exists now is felt. It feels like something. And it is clear to those of Us Who Are Awake that the feeling represents something not natural. And so, there is an involuntary and spontaneous desire to help dissolve, to get rid of, this inequity, this imbalance, so that the Feeling of Wholeness which is our Birthright—ours—those of Us Who Are Awake and yours—it is our Birthright to be all together experiencing that Fullness and Wholeness.

And so to say that "God is lonely," or for me to say that "we are sad," is simply a means of conveying that we can feel your absence. We can feel your unconsciousness of us. And so it is as though there is a hole, even though you are totally available to us. If you are not totally available, even though we are totally available to you, until you are totally available to us and experiencing yourselves and us fully, the experience of the Meaning of the word "Natural" is missing. You see? And so, we long to be with you fully, as your Essential Being longs to be with us fully. You see?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Could you tell us what "daily bread" is? It says, "daily bread," in this paragraph.

RAJ: [laughing] Your daily bread is the Gift of God that God makes of Himself called Creation, called Mind being aware of Its Infinity, and experiencing every subtle nuance of What It Is Infinitely in every Aspect of What It Is Being Infinitely, including You. Your daily bread is the unending Gift of Being that God gives You by being You, anew, forever.

And that daily bread, that Eternal Sustenance, if you will, that is God expressing Himself forever fully as You, is what you find will infill you when you stop having your back to the Altar, and turn around to give your attention and interest to, so that you might be infilled with It. And, then, as I said, find that your vantage point apart from the Altar is something you don't want to energize any more. So that you are, like a back-in-the-body experience, it's like a back-into-the-Spirit experience where you are snapped back in, and the Light is You, and You are the Light. And You are the Light That God Is Being right there. You see?

SEEKER: In certain cultures there is a word, like in Hawaiian, "Mana;" in Chinese, "chi;" in Vedic or Indian philosophy, "Prana;" which is considered an ambient energy that's everywhere, that we can absorb, and we feed on it. It's very subtle energy. Is this an interpretation of that same concept?

RAJ: Those are interpretations of what I am saying. The problem is that in many ways Prana, and Mana, and so on, nurture the physical body that is still seen as matter. And that is not what we are talking about.

Okay.

So...

RAJ READING: God is lonely without His Sons, and they are lonely without Him.

RAJ: And, of course, you all know that you're lonely. You're miserable. [some audience laughter] I mean, you're not... you know you're not experiencing your Joy, even though you're generally happy.

Okay. Continue.

READER: God is lonely without His Sons, and they are lonely without Him. They must learn to look upon the world as a means of healing the separation. The Atonement is the guarantee that they will ultimately succeed.

RAJ READING: They must learn to look upon the world as a means of healing the separation.

RAJ: Let that statement ring in your mind. I encourage you to write it down and put it on your refrigerator to see for this coming week. The world that you are living in is the means of healing the separation. It is the place where you must bring your willingness to see God.

And it is a step that cannot be sidestepped. You cannot wake up without blessing this world first. So stop calling it an illusion. Stop thinking that there's some way to jump ahead, you know, and avoid looking at anything and everything that you're experiencing with the desire to see it through God's Eyes, so that it becomes blessed by your willingness to return to your Original Function of being the Presence of Love without ever again holding out for another option; a backup.

SEEKER (reader): Raj.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Is this what the Course means when it says that when... somewhere in the Course I think I remember reading it said, "when you look into the eyes of your brother, you're looking into the eyes of your savior"?

RAJ: Looking into the eyes of your Brother and remembering God. Yes.

SEEKER: Thank you very much.

RAJ: You're welcome.

As I said earlier, the only thing that you are provided with that you can attempt to distort into something else is the Presence of God. The only material given to you to imagine that you can manipulate is the Infinite Presence of God. So look at your brother; look at the leaf; look at the tree; look at the water; look at the carpet; the glass, whatever; the burned candle wick—with an interest and curiosity to see God there, to have God revealed.

You know, you don't have an ugly material world to overcome. You have a perception of the world that you need to abandon. You have a perception of the Kingdom of Heaven that you need to abandon. And I will keep saying that so that you will grasp that we're not talking about a project of major proportions. It all lies in a change of mind; a sudden shift of perception; a miracle. And the miracle isn't complicated or difficult. It's as simple as a shift of attention. Whether it happens to you tonight, or this week, or a month from now, it doesn't change the fact that all we're talking about is [snap of the fingers] a light bulb going on, an "Aha!" A shift of perspective. Not an overcoming of a lie, of an illusion.

SEEKER: Does forgiveness aid us in this?

RAJ: Well, what do you think?

SEEKER: Duhhhh. [laughing] [audience laughter]

RAJ: What are you doing when you look at the candle wick that is black because it's already been lit before, and you're curious to see God there, you're curious to see the Divinity that has to be there? Aren't you abandoning whatever thoughts you have about it being a material candle that probably was made for celebration of Christmas; and the flame, you know, burns the wick but the wax makes the wick last longer; and it's pretty; and but, you know, eventually it's all going to burn down and disappear, deteriorate, and so on? Aren't you forgiving it your perception that you're casting upon it when you look at it and say, "Wow. Maybe there's actual Divine Meaning there; an experience, an inner Experience of Pure Love. And I want to be undefended enough to feel the Love and to feel what the Meaning of Love is right there in that particular configuration." That is forgiving it your misperceptions, or whatever your... whatever you think your current, correct perceptions are. You see?

That's forgiveness. Being willing to abandon the perceptions you would hold it to based upon your education, and all the peculiar little beliefs that you have made commitment to that surround it. Yes. Forgiveness is involved. And forgiveness is simply saying, "I'd like to see What's Really There." That's not hard. That's a pleasant occupation.

SEEKER: Just a little willingness.

RAJ: Yes. Not only a willingness to open up, but a willingness to conceive the possibility that there's more there than matter, more there than an illusion, and that What's There will speak of Wholeness, and Bliss, and Fullness. Not just of Its Wholeness and Fullness and Bliss, but yours as well. Yes.

Okay. This is a wonderful place to stop for the evening.

And it's good to be back together.

SEEKER: It certainly is.

AUDIENCE: [in the background] [inaudible]

RAJ: You are welcome.

A Course In Miracles reference pages)
Chapter 2 – THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT
Section – HEALING AS RELEASE FROM FEAR
First Edition – p. 19 / Second Edition – p. 23

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: It is good to have all of you here. And I welcome everyone who is also listening on the Internet.

Last week we were talking about the Altar and that the problems that are experienced are a result of having one's back turned to the Altar, and becoming distracted by the Glow, the Effulgence, that surrounds the Altar. And then, because one is in a consciously disconnected... in a conscious disconnectedness with his Divinity, the Altar, there is an experience of fear—an inevitable, unavoidable experience of fear, anxiety, concern, vulnerability. And that one then begins to manipulate the Glow as a defense.

It is inevitable that all of you will find that as you turn back to the Altar where the opportunity of becoming connected once again with the very Essence of You, which is the Flame, if you will, the Illumination of Love that's in the center of the Altar, that healing will be the result. Healing will be what you will have increasing evidence of.

And so it's utterly natural that the next chapter is entitled:

RAJ READING: Healing as Release from Fear

RAJ: Remember that fear is occasioned by having consciously disconnected yourself from your capital "S" Self, the Altar, which is the Presence of God. And remember also, that to try to defend yourself, or save yourself, from what you find yourself fearing, you must not try to manipulate the Glow more efficiently. You must turn around toward the Altar. So let's keep this in mind as we proceed through this next section.

We'll start right here.

READER: Our emphasis is now on healing. The miracle is the means, the Atonement is the principle, and healing is the result.

RAJ: Healing is the result. Let's not forget that.

It's too easy to get into a metaphysical mishmash of confusion where one can say, "I am waking up and I don't have evidence of healing, but evidence of healing is not the point." It isn't the point, but if you don't have the evidence of it, you don't have Evidence of Atonement. Healing is the result. Expect it. Demand it. And if you aren't experiencing it yet, persist in turning back to the Altar, giving your attention to It so that you might be infilled with the capital "L" Love That You Are, that helps remind you that it's senseless for you to be standing apart from It observing It. And so that you might have a back-into-the-Love experience, like a back-into-the-body experience.

Continue.

READER: To speak of "a miracle of healing" is to combine two orders of reality inappropriately. Healing is not a miracle. The Atonement, or the final miracle, is a remedy and any type of healing is a result. The kind of error to which Atonement is applied is irrelevant. All healing is essentially the release from fear.

RAJ: Say that again.

READER: All healing is essentially the release from fear.

RAJ: Again more slowly.

READER: All healing is essentially the release from fear.

RAJ: Indeed.

Continue.

READER: To undertake this you cannot be fearful yourself. You do not understand healing because of your own fear.

RAJ: Now you will not understand healing as long as you have your back to the Altar.

But the moment you turn toward the Altar and you are not giving your attention to your fearful establishment of defense, you will find yourself feeling loved by the Light of the Altar, which is your Essential Being and is the Presence of God In You As You. And as that Love infills you, fear will leave, and the evidence of fear will leave, and perfection is what you will find yourself experiencing. And you will understand what has happened.

But it is not as though the understanding is what brought about the healing. And you will know that as well. You will know that the Love you have been embraced by from the Altar, is the very Love That You Are. And in the absence of any sense of separation from It, you will feel the Wholeness of your Being that has always been available for you to experience. And what you will understand is Love is the Answer. What you will understand is that giving your attention to the Love That You Are, the Altar in the center of you, rather than to that which you would defend yourself against, demonstrates the fact that what you were afraid of was an illusion. This I call a Knowing rather than an understanding. It's the Truth experienced by you consciously—not over and against anything—but as the only thing That Is Real. And right now when you are feeling defended in any aspect, Truth is still the only thing That Is Real about you.

Continue.

READER: A major step in the Atonement plan is to undo error at all levels. Sickness or “not-right-mindedness” is the result of level confusion,...

RAJ: Let's stop right there.

Sickness has here been defined as “not-right-mindedness.” It hasn't been defined as not-right-physicalness, or not-right-relationships, or not-right-governmental-leaders. Sickness is defined as “not-right-mindedness.”

Continue. Sickness.

READER: Sickness or “not-right-mindedness” is the result of level confusion, because it always entails the belief that what is amiss on one level can adversely affect another.

RAJ: You see, here it is in simple language. When you turn your back on the Altar and you consciously dissociate yourself from your connection with your Source, you become preoccupied, as I said, with the Glow, with the evidence of the Presence of the Altar. And fear is immediately present.

You don't know what it is you are fearful of, because you don't know why you're afraid. You don't realize that you're afraid because you've turned your back on your very Being. Now, you're looking at the effect of the Presence of the Altar—the Glow. And you decide to use the Glow to defend yourself with. And you can defend it with beauty, or you can defend it, as I said last week, as an armament, as armor.

And... just a moment... and what are you going to use to beautify or strengthen armament? To beautify, to provide a beautiful façade that constitutes a distraction from the Essential You, or to strengthen a fortress? Well, the only thing for you to do anything with, the only thing you are ever confronted with is Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven, the Infinite Manifestation of God. And so you will have to take some of the Infinite Manifestation of God to strengthen your fortress. Or you will have to take some of the Infinite Manifestation of God to create more exquisite distracting beauty. In other words, you will start using effects, manifestations, to strengthen the manifestation of your defense; the evidence of your defense.

This is called level confusion. It's confusion because you have two choices. The real choice of turning around and facing the Altar and feeling into the Presence of Love that is at its center, Which Is God Being All There Is Of You. Or, you have the option to keep your back to It and use more of the Manifestation of God to keep you safe against other Aspects of the Infinite Manifestation of God that you are going to defend yourself against. You see what I'm saying?

Continue.

READER: We have referred to miracles as the means of correcting level confusion, for all mistakes must be corrected at the level on which they occur. Only the mind is capable of error.

RAJ: And what causes it to experience error is by giving its attention in the wrong place.

Continue.

READER: The body can act wrongly only when it is responding to misthought.

RAJ: And we'll say that the Glow, the Effulgence, around the Altar, can only respond to, let us say, the manipulations that a Son of God applies to it when the Son of God has forgotten that he is the Son of God and that to use some part of God as a defense against some other part of God is utter foolishness.

Continue.

READER: The body cannot create,...

RAJ: The Infinite Manifestation of God cannot create. Yes.

Let's not confine this just to what you call the physical body. It's to all evidence of existence. All Evidence of Being. Creation Itself.

Continue.

READER: ...and the belief that it can, a fundamental error, produces all physical symptoms. Physical illness represents a belief in magic. The whole distortion that made magic rests on the belief that there is a creative ability in matter which the mind cannot control.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER (reader): Interesting.

RAJ: When you look at Creation with your back to the Altar, and therefore disconnected from the Father's Perspective about Creation, because Creation is alive, because it is manifesting life, it appears to be able to be aggressive, and therefore a formidable enemy to protect yourself against. It doesn't just sit there in a static state, because it's the Evidence of God Himself. And so, one can come to the conclusion that the foe is aggressive, intelligent, and able to direct its attention toward you negatively—which is why, you assume, you must be ready to defend yourself against this active, aggressive foe. And yet, the only Life the foe seems to have is the Life that Creation Itself is perfectly expressing in a God-directed Way.

Continue.

READER: This error can take two forms; it can be believed that the mind can miscreate in the body, or that the body can miscreate in the mind.

RAJ: Yes.

READER: When it is understood that the mind, the only level of creation, cannot create beyond itself, neither type of confusion need occur.

RAJ: That is correct.

There isn't anything but Mind. And that is why I keep saying that everything you are seeing is an Idea in the Mind of God. And that all Ideas are perfectly Tangible and Experiential/Experienceable to the Mind which formed them. But just because they are Tangible to the Mind that forms them, doesn't mean they are matter. They are Pure Spirit.

ANOTHER SEEKER: In that first form of error where the mind miscreates the body. Okay?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: I'm not quite clear on the disease, or illness, or sickness, can be created by... it... I mean for instance, if you worry, if there's worry or defensiveness, or I mean I think everybody has had the experience of making themselves sick with worry. So, is that not the mind causing disturbance in the body?

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: Okay.

So what does this mean where it says the mind miscreates the... the mind... the first error is that the mind miscreates the body? Is that not a miscreation in the body? For instance, you know, having an upsettendness so bad that you create an ulcer, or a tumor, or something like that. Isn't that a miscreation in the body?

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: So I thought that that was an error. It says, "The error can take two forms. It can be believed that the mind can miscreate the body."

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: So what you're saying is that that manifestation is an error? Or is it saying...

RAJ: Absolutely. It is not the Truth. It is a misperception.

SEEKER: Okay. I see what you're saying. I see.

So it actually is happening. But it's because of an error that the mind is...

RAJ: The mind actually... the mind believes it's actually happening.

SEEKER: But in Reality, it's not?

RAJ: That's correct.

That is the only way you could experience an instantaneous healing.

SEEKER: I see what you're saying. It is the recognition that it doesn't exist. That that's not happening.

RAJ: The miracle is a sudden shift of perception.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: One cannot possibly have a sudden shift of perception without seeing a sudden shift in the manifestation of his experience; a shift that cannot be accommodated by the laws of physics.

SEEKER: Well, so, in other words, you see what you believe.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Then that, then that to me, it's like then what is Reality?

RAJ: Ah.

SEEKER: I mean if you see what you believe. [laughs]

RAJ: That's the best question you could ask. [seeker laughs] And when you ask that question and don't try to figure it out yourself, you are in effect turning toward the Altar.

SEEKER: Okay. Okay.

So, not having the answer to that question, that's okay? I can relax?
[laughs] [audience laughs]

RAJ: Not having the answer to that question can't help but trigger curiosity the next time you experience a discomfort. It can't help but trigger curiosity even if there is no complaint, because it means that what you are experiencing right there as your body at this moment is not the Ultimate Truth; is actually flawed. Your perception and experience of it is flawed by the fact that you are not giving your attention to it WITH GOD, so that God might reveal to you What He Is Being right there.

No miscreation ever becomes Real. You see what you believe, but the corker of it is that you believe what you see. That locks you in until you have the curiosity to see What It Really Is. It will take something to distract you from your conviction, from the conviction of your belief. And what it will take is curiosity.

SEEKER: May I? I'd like to have one more quick [question].

So, say, I haven't seen someone, a friend, in a long time. And they have misperceived themselves as being ill. And I haven't heard about it or anything. And then I see them and I go, "Oh, my God! They don't look well at all." That is obviously...

RAJ: Thank God, I didn't do that with Lazarus. And he looked pretty bad.
[much audience laughter]

SEEKER: So that... so what's happening there is it is a mutually-agreed-upon concept. What's happening there.

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: In other words, I didn't know they were sick. So how did I see them as sick? It was... there's a communication taking part on a whole different... another level, other than speech. Or it's like I didn't know they were going to be looking sick, but as soon as I look at them, they don't even have to say anything, and I'm perceiving that. And that's because all minds are joined? And...

RAJ: And the fact that you already have mutually-agreed-upon definitions to various kinds of appearances.

SEEKER: So, because they are feeling bad, they present this image, and then automatically I buy into it?

RAJ: Unfortunately, you do it automatically. Yes.

You have another option.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: And that's what you all have to realize. [snap of the fingers] On the spot, you have another option...

SEEKER: Okay. Thank you.

RAJ: ...so that you don't join them further in confirming what they are believing about themselves.

And as long as you are joining with them and confirming it, you are incapable of being an agent for change, or the precipitator of a miracle.

And mind you, what you believe about them is whatever you believe about yourself.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I was just reminded of a song. The title of it is, "One Belief Away." And that that's why a miracle is always spontaneous, because if we realized it was the mutual... that this is where the mutual agreement fits in. You know, when we release that belief. A simple thought. We're one belief away from a miracle every moment. That that's... the potential is so great every moment, that I could think even in this room tonight.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Because.

RAJ: Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: To make this simple again. We have this whirlwind of body misperceiving mind, mind misperceiving body, mutual agreements, ya diddy ya. And all the time, all of Reality is in the Altar, and all I need to do is turn and look at that. Simply.

RAJ: Yes. And all the time, Reality, unperturbed by all of these imaginings, awaits your discovery of it As It Is.

SEEKER: And then the activity of the Atonement becomes obvious to me by looking at the Altar. The way to change the world becomes obvious to me simply by looking at the Altar.

RAJ: Yes.

Because when you are looking at the Altar, its Illumination illuminates you, and renders your committed beliefs invalid effortlessly. And once they are seen as invalid, they are seen as not useful. And none of you holds on to anything that you don't find useful. You don't even have to throw away an un-useful belief once it is recognized to be not useful. It is abandoned effortlessly.

Be aware that you see what you believe. And so, you believe you're vulnerable. And you get tense; experience chronic anxiety. You say that your body tenses up, but you are tensing it up. That's where level confusion comes in. You say, "My body is doing something. It is tensing up." But it is not. You, experiencing anxiety, tense your body up to give it more density, to fool yourself into believing that it is more impervious by virtue of the tension, the tightness. And then, because you believe that your body is doing this, you then begin to believe what you are seeing, and you see your body as an enemy which you must bring under control. You see? Then you say, "My body has an actual disease, an ulcer, or a cancer." See, that's when you are believing what you are seeing. And that will lock you in to the experience of cancer and whatever your associated beliefs are about it.

I will tell you all something. You could have much more creative beliefs about cancer. Your creative beliefs about cancer could involve the restructuring and rebuilding of a lost limb. That will give you something to contemplate. A different set of beliefs about it would have a different effect.

So, it is dangerous to believe what you see, and say, "My mind has created an actual disease." It's still as illusory and intangible as the confused thought that caused you to use your body in that way. You see?

So, indeed, you must dare to look at whatever the dis-ease is and recognize, be willing to recognize that it is an illusion caused by seeing what you have believed in your mind first, and then believing the result, as though it's separate and different from your mind. Because until you realize that only mind has the capacity to be creative, you won't be able to get free of believing what you're seeing, and changing your mind by being willing to turn around to the Altar and say, "God, what is this really? What is this thing I call 'body' really? What is this thing I call 'world and universe' really?" If it's the Effulgence, the Manifestation of God being the Movement of Creation constantly, then you are all in store for the wonderful experience of having it revealed to you as What It Really Is.

If you realize that the cancer, or whatever it might be, whatever dis-ease it might be, is nothing more than a mental distortion that was caused by the adopting of certain ideas, and a commitment to those ideas, you will then have the means of being miracle-ready, because you won't fight the cancer, or the dis-ease. You will turn around to God and say, "What's the Real Meaning?" And you will ask it with a conscious desire to have your belief replaced with the Conscious Experience of What It Really Is, the Direct Experience of What It Really Is. You see?

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Okay. The body is a very cherished and long-held idea, as are sicknesses and the cause of sicknesses. Yet, the Bible talks of you walking along with the multitudes and healing the people there.

RAJ: Instantaneously, by the way.

SEEKER: Instantaneously. So you are seeing, when you see them, you see what you believe so you don't see them as sick. Yet somehow this belief is able to shine from out of your mind and into theirs so that they can adopt the belief that you presented as well, and experience the instantaneous healing.

RAJ: There's one key point. They had to be willing. Miriam was not willing, and so she remained lame.

SEEKER: So the healing was only to those who came to you for seeking healing?

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: And in doing so, it was easier for them to accept your vision as their own?

RAJ: They had to have their eyes turned toward the Altar as well. Otherwise, all I would be doing would be creating a further illusion.

SEEKER: So it was a... so the healings are choreographed.

RAJ: You might say that they are choreographed by the desire and willingness of the one wanting to be healed.

SEEKER: Which would be you as well as the blind man joined in that desire.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Yes. As I've said before, your good cannot be inflicted upon you. And knowing that is a step of empowerment for each of you. You say, "Oh, my God! You mean it's all up to me?" Well, I'll tell you something. If it was up to someone else, you would be at their mercy. What if they didn't choose to service you today? "Oh, I'm busy today. Come back tomorrow." [audience amused] You see?

SEEKER: But when you say, "It's up to you," the You That You Are is more than this body we think we are, which is part of the problem, which is part of the wrong-mindedness.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Because the you... the Me that I am or the I Am that I am is inclusive of all of us here.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: So Virginia's healing is also my healing.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: And I guess I can see that shining by the effect that her... that witnessing her healing has upon me or anyone else's.

RAJ: And even those who haven't seen it and don't know it has happened.

SEEKER: Because it'll be there when their awareness is ready to.

RAJ: Whether they like it or not, the density of the dream has lessened with every little insight that any one experiences. And any instantaneous healing that occurs that cannot be attributed to any physical cause, causes such a shift in the experience and the mind of the one who had the healing, that it touches everyone else as well. And it becomes easier for that to happen for everyone else. But it can't make anyone accept the Truth.

ANOTHER SEEKER: The thing that was not necessarily confusing me, but, when I was thinking about the correction of the mistake at the level that it's occurring on, I was getting this little, uh, you know, here's a chance to go back in and mess with it on my own, kind of a thing, which instantly I knew that wasn't right. But that was sort of what was going on. It's like is this an option for me to go back in and mess with this stuff on my own? And now I see, from what you were saying, that all that's going to be is the lesson. And I take that mistake at the level it appears to be and that's what I turn to God. That's when I turn to the Altar. And that's just the lesson for today. All it is, is a trigger. The action is still the same.

RAJ: Yes.

Let's say that with your back to the Altar, you have taken on the persona of a warrior. And so you have your armor, and you have your behavior as a warrior, as a retaliator against the attack coming from the world. And then, you get a little bit of illumination, and you try to incorporate it into your experience, and so you say, "Ah! Maybe the answer is not to be so warlike, but to express love. Oh. Okay. Well, then I'm going to dismantle my fortress. And I am going to make it lovelier. I'm going to make it less aggressive appearing, more benign appearing, more attractive so people won't be afraid of me. And I will behave in a new way that is loving, because something in me tells me that loving kindness is more powerful than hate and attack." And so this person makes the appearance more lovely, but his back is still to the Altar. You see? It is ultimately still a defense against being in one's Right Mind. It's still succumbing to the idea that the world separate from God actually does exist, but needs to be treated in a new way.

SEEKER: Feng Shui.

RAJ: Pardon.

SEEKER: Feng Shui, or whatever, you know. I mean redecorate your life.

RAJ: Indeed. Indeed.

SEEKER: Make it more user-friendlier.

RAJ: And so one joins with others in a new set of mutually-agreed-upon definitions of behavior. And so you have, let us say, the United States, or western civilization, and they join together on a basis of justice, on a basis of respect for human rights. And they believe that their integrity and their high-minded values are a more worthy power or force in the world, which can cause those who don't yet understand it, to knuckle under and get it, whether they've asked for it or not.

Whereas, if they turned to the Altar, they would be filled with the Experience of Love that would illuminate them and their behavior. And there would be no occasion to force others to recognize Love. But by being the Presence of Love which has no ulterior motive to it, it would tend to melt the fear that would cause terrorism, or that would cause retaliation. The behavior would be different, but the actual healing element would be the benign Love at the center of it, radiating out and embracing everything, without having a card up its sleeve, without having an ulterior motive of coercion. You see?

SEEKER: The redecorating your life, and Feng Shui, and making everything nice though seems...

RAJ: Or redecorating the world according to high principles.

SEEKER: But it seems better than overwhelming force using all our options. I mean that's a long way from Feng Shui. That's... but you're saying there's no difference between having an overwhelming force using all our options, and just trying to tidy the place up a little bit and make it a little more... same stuff.

RAJ: Ignorance is ignorance, whether it is expressed beautifully or harshly. Get this clear and you will attend to what will actually heal, what will actually transform.

And you won't spontaneously give support to those who are rearranging the world from "high principles." Do you see what I'm saying? And without support they won't be able to remain quote "in power" unquote.

Let's continue.

READER: Only the mind can create because spirit has already been created, and the body is a learning device of the mind. Learning devices are not lessons in themselves.

RAJ: I'm going to repeat something here that I have said in the past. Whenever you look at the Presence of God and say that it's something other than the Presence of God, that particular Presence of God becomes a learning-device for you. When you look at the Presence of God and say, "That's not the Presence of God," the fact that it is the Presence of God and can't stop being the Presence of God, will constitute, I'm going to call, an ever-present assertion in your experience of What It Really Is, because it can't stop being What It Is. And your denial of What It Is, is going to cause a friction, you might say, a discomfort in you, because you can't be out of your Mind and be comfortable. And so, Whatever Of Reality you look at and you say, "It's unreal," will become a learning-tool; not because that's its actual function, but because What It Really Is cannot escape you.

And so, What It Really Is will constantly nudge you, bug you, irritate you—not because it's trying to be irritable—but because it will constantly insist upon registering with you as What It Is. And so, it will grab your attention, and hold your attention until you bless it by saying, "What are you really? In spite of what I believe you are, what are you really?" And once What It Is registers with you, you experience It As It Is for What It Is, and it is no longer a learning-tool, because there is no learning for you to experience about it.

Here's another way of putting it. When you look at some Aspect of the Presence of God and say, "It isn't God," you have created ignorance of What It Is within yourself, and thereby an opportunity to learn. And therefore, that thing becomes a learning-device.

I want this brought out so that you don't demean your bodies by calling it a learning-device that will disappear when you don't need to learn anything anymore. It's a learning-device because it isn't what you have determined it is, and What It Really Is, with a capital "R", not only awaits your discovery, but insists upon being recognized by you, because It's God declaring Himself as Himself. And for you to recognize It, is something you ultimately have no choice about, even though you can resist recognizing It for What It Is for a period of time through a private, personal use of will.

You see?

SEEKER: The whole Holy Spirit is a learning-tool. I mean all of our Nature that we're denying being held in trust, that whole thing is a learning-tool?

RAJ: Absolutely. Absolutely.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: Their purpose is merely to facilitate learning. The worst a faulty use of a learning device can do is to fail to facilitate learning. It has no power in itself to introduce actual learning errors. The body, if properly understood, shares the invulnerability of the Atonement to two-edged application.

RAJ: Yes. In other words, it's not available to be used positively or negatively, not truly.

Continue.

READER: This is not because the body is a miracle, but because it is not inherently open to misinterpretation.

RAJ: It's utterly simple. It's utterly simple and doesn't require interpretation. It only requires that you allow yourself to be present with it with a willingness to experience it as It Truly Is. In other words, to experience the Presence of God there with the Meaning God is expressing of Himself right there.

Continue.

READER: The body is merely part of your experience in the physical world. Its abilities can be and frequently are overevaluated.

RAJ: Well, yes, they are, because just like the Glow, the Effulgence around the Altar, if you are distracted from the Altar, and all you can see is the Glow, then you give it much more value and much more meaning than it actually has. All it is, is the Glow. The Glow indicating the Presence of a Source of Light. The Light is what's significant.

READER: However, it is almost impossible to deny its existence in this world. Those who do so are engaging in a particularly unworthy form of denial. The term "unworthy" here implies only that it is not necessary to protect the mind by denying the unmindful.

RAJ: Yes.

READER: If one denies this unfortunate aspect of the mind's power, one is also denying the power itself.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: All material means that you accept as remedies for bodily ills are restatements of magic principles.

RAJ: And let's look at this another way. Let us say that with your back to the Altar, you have built a fortress, and you have built it with rock and mortar. And you find that it will not withstand the ravages of time, much less a bold assault on it. And so, you decide that it needs to have some steel reinforcement. In other words, the remedy for the weakness of the structure is to be achieved by using a stronger physical structure to support it. That's the use of magic. You try to correct the problem by using a stronger belief in strength, rather than solving the problem itself, which is that you have your back to the Altar.

Continue.

READER: This is the first step in believing that the body makes its own illness. It is a second misstep to heal it through non-creative agents. It does not follow, however, that the use of such agents for corrective purposes is evil.

RAJ: Now this, the rest of this paragraph is extremely important. And I'm going to let you read it without interrupting.

READER: Sometimes the illness has a sufficiently strong hold over the mind to render a person temporarily inaccessible to the Atonement. In this case it may be wise to utilize a compromise approach to mind and body, in which something from the outside is temporarily given healing belief. This is because the last thing that can help the non-right-minded, or the sick, is an increase in fear. They are already in a fear-weakened state. If they are prematurely exposed to a miracle, they may be precipitated into panic. This is likely to occur when upside-down perception has induced the belief that miracles are frightening.

RAJ: Indeed. This is perhaps one of the most practical statements you will find anywhere in the Course. It's grounding, and means that no one has to go off the deep end, no one has to actually face more danger or more sense of danger than they can bear in order to experience healing, in order to experience relief, in order to experience clarification.

Divine Love always appears to you in the language of your present awareness. It does not require you to stand taller than you feel capable of. The Holy Spirit, your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego, has the means of disclosing to you that which will reduce fear and promote healing, even if it's not the Ultimate Truth. This is also very important for you to understand.

There are times that I have been accused of not being consistent from a conversation with one person at one time, and a conversation with someone else at another time, apparently talking about the same subject. But the fact is that the Truth was presented to each of them in language that allowed for the greatest inner movement to occur, because it didn't raise their level of fear, but reduced it.

Let's continue.

READER: The value of the Atonement does not lie in the manner in which it is expressed. In fact, if it is used truly, it will inevitably be expressed in whatever way is most helpful to the receiver. This means that a miracle, to attain its full efficacy, must be expressed in a language that the recipient can understand without fear.

RAJ: I'm going to stop you there.

And how are you going to know what that is, without going through a full psychological evaluation of the person you're speaking to? You're going to have to assume that you don't know. You are going to have to even acknowledge that you don't know. And you're going to have to be willing to allow for the fact that you personally don't need to know, so that you might abandon all attempts to know on your own, and take the time to become still within yourself and ask, "What do I need to say? What is the appropriate response? What would You say, Father?" Or ask the Holy Spirit, or ask your Guide, or ask Me. And then, because you don't know what the appropriate response should be, you share the response you get.

And what you get in one circumstance might be, "Sit down, close your mouth, and be still for a moment," which might not sound gentle, or loving, or pacifying. But for that individual it will be perfect, because that individual is feeling very scattered, very disconnected, very unstable, and needs direction at that very moment; clear, simple direction to follow so that that individual can become disentangled from all of the confusion. Oh, somebody else might look at that and say, "Oh, you're being very controlling. How can that be healing?" You see? When the fact is, that it's not control at all. It's the presentation of that which meets the need for someone who at the moment doesn't have the inner strength and discipline to provide those simple directions for themselves.

So sometimes what you end up saying won't sound sweet. And other times where the circumstances might seem to be quite the same and you are dealing with an unruly individual, what you might find yourself saying is, "I love you," and walking up and giving a hug, even though the individual has been displaying aggressive physical characteristics. And that will be what helps that one to soften, settle down, become quiet, and accomplish or end up doing what the words, "sit down, shut up," [mean]. You see?

And this takes trust. But if you don't dare to inquire, if you don't dare to turn to the Altar and make your connection there, then firmness or softness expressed is just a manipulation arising out of ignorance and one's best assumption of what will work. And without the unction of Love, there will be no transformation. You will not be a real agent for change.

Continue.

READER: This does not necessarily mean that this is the highest level of communication of which he is capable. It does mean, however, that it is the highest level of communication of which he is capable now. The whole aim of the miracle is to raise the level of communication, not to lower it by increasing fear.

RAJ: Now, watch the ego, because the ego will come in there and say, "Oh, here's a way to improve your presence while your back is to the Altar. Now you have a little tidbit of information. The whole aim of the miracle is to raise the level of communication. Ah! Ah! I can grasp that. We're going to raise the level of communication." And now you set out to "bless" your Brothers with your best idea of raising the level of communication, when what will actually raise the level of communication is not the words that you end up saying, but the Love from which those words arise. And the only way Love will give rise to words, is if you have abandoned your independence and turned toward the Altar and said, "Help. What is appropriate here? What fulfills capital "P" Purpose? What will uncover God more clearly right here?"

The only way any of you can be effective teachers, effective agents for change is when you realize that you... none of you have a personal capacity on your own to do good. Period. That as long as you claim the right of independence from God, with the very strong belief that God has created you to be independent, you're just going to be rearranging the world. And you are going to further and extenuate the ignorance that you're already all suffering from.

To be an effective teacher is to not attempt to be a teacher at all, but to be a humble servant; from the ego's standpoint a humiliated servant. Humility is a state in which there is no tension. Humility is a state in which the capacity to be forceful doesn't exist. Humility is where willfulness has been laid aside for willingness—willingness to say, “Thy Will be done.” Why? Not so that you can be controlled, but so that in the absence of your trying to be controlling, the Divine Way Things Work can register with you, and you can be in harmony with it, and thus be a presence who is constantly glorifying God by not glorifying anything else. In the absence of the attempt to glorify anything else, God is the only thing that can show up.

Microphone.

SEEKER: When we first started talking about the body, it’s talking about the beautiful temple, and then you talked about reinforcing the armament with steel, and it’s... is that the same activity, pretty much? I mean whether we’re making it a beautiful temple or whether we’re reinforcing it with steel, it’s the same activity.

RAJ: As long as it’s being done with your back to the Altar, it can’t be anything else.

SEEKER: Exactly. So it’s just sort of giving us different options of the way that we turn our back to the Altar.

RAJ: And in all cases, it will be a form of defense.

And if you get more holy and more spiritual so that you are creating a beautiful temple, it’s because you have found others to join with in the belief that such activity will protect you against something. It will protect you against violence. It will protect you against your ego. By thinking loving thoughts and expressing loving thoughts, it will protect you against the baser motives that are natural to human beings. And it might even cause...
[pause]

PAUL: I’m sorry. This is me, Paul. Oh.

RAJ: ...an evolutionary shift where mankind will start to move in a new direction, physically, of course, as part of the physical universe, as part of actual physical evolution. You see?

This is still occurring in the realm of ignorance. It’s still occurring without having even thought of, or brought up, the idea that there is a relationship between you and God, and there is a connection for you to be experiencing. And that when you turn around toward God and open up to that experience, that that’s going to bring you back into your Right Mind, where evolutionary jumps are nonsense, and where behaving nicely doesn’t mean a heck of a lot more than behaving badly, except that it’s a little bit more comfortable for you in your ignorance.

I will tell you something. If everyone on this planet managed to find a mutually-agreed-upon way to work together harmoniously, everyone would be very grateful. And if given the opportunity to have ten thousand years to experience it, they would find ultimately that it would be an empty experience, because the connection with the Altar would not have occurred yet, even though everyone worked together beautifully. And Awakening, the Evidence of Atonement would still be awaiting everyone. So at least tonight, everyone is a little bit clearer about what Atonement isn't. And that's wonderful.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj, something that you don't... that has occurred to me about what you're saying here this evening about what you did when you washed the feet of [the disciples] indicating that we must be servants to each other, that ego can't wash the feet of another with love.

RAJ: No. But it can feign love and wash the feet of others.

Yes. You are right. You are here to serve others, but you won't be able to serve each other transformationally until you yourselves ask God how to serve each other transformationally. It's that simple.

SEEKER: What I meant when I brought this up is the feeling that comes when I turn to God and we do this together. It's the Love.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Of that expression, "I'm here to serve you."

RAJ: That is truly benign, and therefore provides the best opportunity for the one you are serving to feel non-threatened, and for his or her fear to be reduced, and for confusion to fade, and for intelligence to come to the fore, and for learning to actually occur. Yes.

SEEKER: So it really becomes "We," and no longer "I"?

RAJ: Absolutely.

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: The experience of these shifts going on in me, and the balance of... I can... the miracle scaring me. It's like right over here. I mean it's like right at the edge of it. It's like if I was any more miracle going on, it would frighten me. And yet I can... you know. And I got it. I read in the book. And you say it. And we share our experiences. I mean that's a lot... the feelings that come with this Love that comes through us. Like Wow! It catches your attention. Almost frightens you. I mean we're all like right there on the edge of all we can stand. Shifting as fast as we can right now.

RAJ: Indeed. Indeed.

SEEKER: Judging everything less.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: More and more looks at the Altar. It's working.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] It takes trust. [with the mic] We can't do any of this without trust.

RAJ: Right.

And trust comes from leaning into the miracle, and letting it transform you, and convey your safety, so that you relax a little bit more. There's a little less fear. And you can let in.

SEEKER: I have been privileged to be experiencing this of late.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And it's just totally amazing!

RAJ: Just don't be too amazed. [seeker laughs] That's a wonderful block to more. Amazed, to stand in amazement is to say, in so many words, "This is unbelievable." And that's a nice way to keep the unbelievable that's beyond what you've experienced from being let in and being believable.

SEEKER: That brings up a good point, because it's the next level of recognition of all these definitions or these habits of describing things.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: I mean that's a very, very good point. [laughs] Unbelievable. That declares it exactly what it is, which is not something I want to entertain.

RAJ: Right.

SEEKER: Anyway.

RAJ: Yes.

We will call it an evening. We actually got through a whole section.
[audience laughter]

[Raj rereads the heading of the section which has just been covered this evening.]

RAJ READING: Healing as Release from Fear

RAJ: And release from fear occurs as you turn away from that which is fearsome and engages your ego responses, and turning toward the Altar, so that you might reconnect with the Father's Love that's at the center of the Altar being All There Is of you. And by turning toward It, you provide yourself with the opportunity of remembering your Self. And in remembering your Self and embracing It, you become the Presence that transforms, and you come back into your Right Mind. Maybe only little by little. But the only reason it's little by little, is because more will scare you shitless. [mild audience laughter]

I love you all.

A Course In Miracles reference pages)
Chapter 2 – THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT
Section – THE FUNCTION OF THE MIRACLE WORKER
First Edition – p. 21 / Second Edition – p. 24

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone on the Internet as well. And for those of you who might have just logged in, nothing is wrong with your computer. The chat page is not functioning tonight. And the picture is not functioning tonight, just the sound. So you won't be able to distract yourselves with chatter. That is not the reason. The reason is that Chris is not with us this evening, and he ordinarily takes care of that.

Now, before we begin in the Text, I want to ask everyone a question. How many of you think that you are comfortable tonight, and that you feel safe tonight, and you feel strong tonight, because at this very moment you are engaged in participation in mutually-agreed-upon definitions? And this doesn't apply to those of you who are sitting here in this room, but to everyone who is listening in their own homes. How many of you realize that you are feeling comfortable, safe, and actually strong, because at this very moment you're engaged in mutually-agreed-upon definitions? It's not a question I'm going to ask you to respond to. But for the most part, you go through your days, and perhaps you don't even engage with others particularly, and you have a happy day. And nothing in particular has happened that you could designate as a practice of being involved in mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

Now this time I am going to ask you to give a show of hands. How many of you have gone to another country where the people in that country were not hostile, but they were not particularly friendly toward Americans, and you felt in the minority? How many have had that experience? And was it a comfortable experience? Right. No, it wasn't. And why wasn't it comfortable? Because, with those people, you didn't have any mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

Now, let's say, how many of you have had occasion to drive through a neighborhood in a city, where the people living in that neighborhood were not of the same race, or were living their life in a style that was rough, where argumentativeness and just rough living, as a general rule, was the style, and did you feel comfortable? Again, it was because you didn't have any mutually-agreed-upon definitions with those people. So you can see that when you're feeling comfortable, and when you're feeling personally strong and not vulnerable, it is for the most part because you are, you know unconsciously without even thinking about it that you are with those who are of like mind. And that really means they are those who are employing the same definitions that you are. And so you are engaged in mutually-agreed-upon definitions, even though until last June when we started going through the Course, you probably never gave much thought to the phrase, "mutually-agreed-upon definitions," at all.

Now, how many of you have had the experience of having a circle of friends, and for one reason or another, the friends began to see things differently from you, and you find that the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that made the relationship the friendship) work, were absent? How many of you have had that experience and found that your sense of your worth was challenged? Or, your inclination to doubt yourself came into play where you felt vulnerable, again where you were in the minority and the majority's opinion was different, or even at odds with yours? In a situation like this, you find that your sense of your integrity had been derived from something that wasn't solid, something that wasn't stable, because it could be challenged by the whim or the instability of those around you, and their inability to stay consistently with the agreed-upon definitions that made the relationships work. You see?

It's important to realize the degree to which you are unconsciously governed by mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And it's important for you to realize how much your sense of your own integrity is derived from those mutually-agreed-upon definitions, even though you think that your integrity is being felt by you because it is something absolute, that has nothing to do with anyone else. When this happens, you find that your sense of integrity does have something to do with everyone else. As long as they're in agreement with your having integrity, you feel good. And if the majority think you lack integrity, your feeling of inner stability and strength suffers. And you're even willing to say, "Well, maybe they're all right. They can't all be wrong. Therefore, maybe I need to take another look and see where I have fallen short." You see?

As long your experience of your integrity is being derived from others' agreements about your having integrity, you are not experiencing your Integrity. Because you do have Integrity that is derived from the Source of your Being, which isn't everyone else's current ego-perception of you.

And part of waking up is getting in touch with that Integrity. And I won't say that part of your getting in touch with that Integrity is involved in turning around to the Altar. All of your getting in touch with your Experience of your Integrity has to do with turning again within to the Altar within you, where the Flame of your Essential Being is burning, because God has lit it and keeps it lit at every moment. And that's why your Integrity is unchangeable. And that's where you will find it not changing. And that's where you will find yourself able to feel it without it being blown about, disturbed, by everyone else's opinions, thoughts, comments, gossip to the contrary. You see?

The hard part of Awakening is, and the hard part of facing the Truth is, in realizing that you are getting your sense of your well-being from the wrong places. But if you don't find out that you are getting it from the wrong places, you will go along blindly and unconscious of the Integrity of your Being that's unwavering and that is constantly available to you to experience. You see?

You're not here, none of you are here, to please anyone else. You could say you are here to please God, but it's more than that. You are here to glorify God. You are here to represent God, because that's your Function. You don't have a function to represent yourself, because you don't have a self that isn't God-derived. And as long as you think you do, you will constantly be in a process of negotiating agreed-upon definitions, or new agreed-upon definitions, with all of the other egos around you who are tending to their own integrity that is self-derived, rather than God-derived.

Again, for clarity, self-derived integrity is other-derived integrity. Understand that clearly, because without acknowledged agreement of everyone else as to your integrity, you will find yourself at a loss, without any sense of integrity. And you will scramble mightily to change the minds of the others who express that you lack integrity. Or if you don't choose to change their mind, you will choose to acquiesce to them. Just for peace. Just for the sake of not being in the middle of turmoil. And there's still no integrity there. It's misery. Self-derived integrity is really other-derived integrity. And you're the puppet of the mutual agreement of the majority. And you're lucky if the majority thinks well of you. At least, humanly speaking, you are lucky if the majority agree with you. You're still up shit creek if the majority agree with you and that's why you feel your integrity, because you're not in touch with the Essential Substance and Divinity of your Being that's unvarying and unyielding.

Okay. Section Five.

RAJ READING: The Function of the Miracle Worker

RAJ: Well, do you suppose that the miracle worker is, or can possibly be, one who is preoccupied with mutually-agreed-upon definitions of his integrity, or her integrity? I just want to throw that in there as we enter into a consideration of the miracle worker.

So let's start here.

SEEKER: May I ask a question?

RAJ: You are the official question-asker. [some audience laughter]

SEEKER: Is that which is referred to as the Altar in the Course in Miracles, that which is referred to as the thought-adjuster in The Urantia Book?

RAJ: No, indeed. The Altar is the Living, Active Presence of God being All There Is of You. And God is not a thought-adjuster. If there is any thought-adjuster, it's the Holy Spirit.

SEEKER: Or maybe my Guide?

RAJ: Well, your Guide and the Holy Spirit have the same Function. And everyone who is Awake who works with you has that Function—to help you give permission to have a new idea that is a closer approximation of the Truth.

A thought-adjuster cannot actually make an adjustment, like a chiropractor. A thought-adjuster, or the Holy Spirit, can make it inviting to you, can make it desirable to you to make a shift, to allow a shift, to abandon a bad definition, or to abandon your commitment to a definition that doesn't embody Truth. But that's all a thought-adjuster can do. It's like grease the way so that you might even slip, but you can't be pushed. You can't be coerced. You can't be forced. You can be finessed.

Okay.

READER: The Function of the Miracle Worker

Before miracle workers are ready to undertake their function in this world, it is essential that they fully understand the fear of release. Otherwise...

RAJ: Oh, I wonder what that would be the release from? Might it be the release from the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that gave you such a sense of wonderful security and well-being? And why would you fear that? Why would you fear the release from that?

SEEKER (reader): I'm used to it. I'm familiar with it.

RAJ: Yes. But might you not also find yourself standing all alone? With everybody else not understanding you?

SEEKER: Just me, the Altar, and my thought-adjuster? [slight audience laughter]

RAJ: That's a pretty scary thing when you have gathered your sense of your well-being from everyone else's good thoughts about you, because that's where your sense of strength had come from.

None of you are used to the Experience of Strength that is derived from being perfectly in sync with The Way Things Work, perfectly in sync with the Father, perfectly in sync with that which is fundamentally Divine about you, in sync with your Function.

So, it is a fearful thing to be released from everyone's well wishes for you, everyone else's positive assessment of you—positive because you weren't challenging their point of view by functioning in any way unique, or in any way at odds with their assessment of the behavior that makes them feel safe and strong. You see? You're afraid because you end up on the outside of the group—ostracized—not included, in other words. In the minority. And again, anyone who has been in the middle of a group and you are in the minority, and that group does not think particularly kindly of the group you are from, you feel alone, tiny, vulnerable. And if, on top of this, they all speak a language you can't understand, and they're all speaking that language around you, it's easy to become paranoid and suspicious. "What are they saying about me?" Because... because your sense of your security, safety, and inner strength, and integrity, has been, in the past, derived from mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you were not out of sync with.

Continue.

Oh.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Can I ask one question first?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: I just, the idea of being out of the group, out of sync, if that's all you know, and you've never experienced your Brothers being one with you, and you with one with God, it's such a huge leap to go from... even being afraid can be safer than making that leap, because I don't know what that feels like. It's something that I want. It's something I think about. But it's such an incredible mindset different, that the fear almost looks good. Or you can kind of cope with it.

RAJ: Indeed. Or, in addition to abiding in the fear, ultimately deciding to crawl back into the crab barrel and not even attempt the shift at all. Yes.

To be in sync with yourself is inseparable from an incredible, awesome Experience of Peace, Invulnerability, and Joy. That's the Fact. And so, what do I do? I finesse all of you by letting you know that over, and over, and over again, so that you might begin to consider the possibility that what I'm saying is True. And that therefore, there just might be justification for letting go and doing this fearful thing.

That's why it says here:

RAJ READING: Before miracle workers are ready to undertake their function in this world, it is essential that they fully understand the fear of release.

RAJ: And I think most everyone reads that and says, "That's interesting. What does it mean?" And now you have a clearer idea of what it can mean from your very own experience of being in the minority, and having to, if you cannot leave that setting, having to arrive at a point where regardless of what others are thinking, regardless of whether they like you, you are valid and you are valuable. You have to hang in there and shift, one way or another, to a level of comfort within you that isn't derived from others whose minds you can't change, because you don't speak their language, and they don't want to converse with you in yours. You see.

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj, you've said this in a very gentle way. But what I've discovered is what the fear is about goes even deeper than that. And that's the surface, or the underlying, hostility that we're afraid of facing when we don't agree with everyone's mutual definitions. Because when the boat is rocked a little bit, out comes the hostility. I mean, it ripples forth. And I think there is a... that has to learn to be dealt with also.

RAJ: Yes. That fear has to be dealt with.

SEEKER: Of what's underneath that. [laughs]

RAJ: Of course, that's part of the already-established, mutually-agreed-upon definitions. The first rule is don't rock the boat. Don't push my limits. And underneath that is a sub-rule that says, if you do rock my boat, you're going to pay for it.

SEEKER: You're going to have hell to pay.

RAJ: Exactly. And, so, that is a fear that has been trained into you by the structure of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

But, we're not talking about being so unique that you utterly don't fit in. To be in touch with your Integrity, to have turned around to the Altar to gather the Facts of your Being from the Flame in the middle of the Altar that is the Energy and Spirit of God being All There Is of you right now, you end up not so much going against the grain of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions. You end up being in a way that doesn't provide challenge, but does provide illumination of new potentialities and new possibilities that can engage the attention of those who are themselves bound by and miserable in the middle of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

You will really only run into attack, let us say, retaliation, from those who feel that they have some God-given right to exercise control over you. But the majority of people in your daily life do not feel that they have that right, and so they look more with curiosity, than anything else. It's those who, well, are family, who think they are living in agreed-upon definitions of what a family is, and what rights family members have, et cetera, who will perhaps attempt to exert authority against you. Or it could be an employer.

But truly, the only place you're going to run into retaliation is from those who feel they have a right to tell you how to be. And that's not the majority of the world. And for the majority of the world, your being in sync with your Divine Function will be more a presence of interesting potentials than threat to those you engage with. In the first place, you will be being in a more benign way, because you aren't trying to cram your particular new point of view down their throats. Because that's not what you do when you're in touch with your Function.

Continue. Start at the beginning of the first sentence.

READER: Before miracle workers are ready to undertake their function in this world, it is essential that they fully understand the fear of release. Otherwise they may unwittingly foster the belief that release is imprisonment, a belief that is already very prevalent.

RAJ: And let me just say that when you are ostracized and standing alone, that is like being imprisoned.

SEEKER reader): I remember you using the phrase, "in the aloneness of your Being." Now it's more clear what you were talking about.

RAJ: And in the aloneness of your Being, of your Being with a capital "B", you are, you experience the All-Oneness of It, the Wholeness of It, when you don't resist It.

Hunger for appreciation and acknowledgement from others, keeps you small, because feeling appreciated is something you cannot have without everyone else giving it to you. To feel loved is something you can't have without everyone else giving it to you. And yet, you are the Expression at this moment and every moment, the ongoing, uninterrupted, brand-new Expression of God, which is an Expression of Love. Your very Being is Love. Your very Being is imbued with the Love the Father is imbuing it with. And literally, the only Real Experience you have available to you is the Experience of Being Loved and of Being Love. Of being Loved as well as being Love.

Continue.

READER: This misperception arises in turn from the belief that harm can be limited to the body. That is because of the underlying fear that the mind can hurt itself. None of these errors is meaningful, because the miscreations of the mind do not really exist. This recognition...

RAJ: Are not the mutually-agreed-upon definitions miscreations of the mind?

SEEKER reader): Yes.

RAJ: Yes.

Continue.

READER: This recognition is a far better protective device than any form of level confusion, because it introduces correction at the level of the error.

RAJ: Indeed.

READER: It is essential to remember that only the mind...

RAJ: Where it introduces correction at the level of the error.

What I have said to you tonight brings your attention to your inclination to address the problem of your Divinity by either not embracing and embodying it and thus breaking the trust of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, or trying to change everyone else's mind so that they can recognize, let us say, your Divinity. That is not where you address the problem. You see? That doesn't introduce correction where the problem lies.

You introduce correction at that point where you are seeking your comfort, and security, and safety, and integrity from everyone else. That's where the mistake is made. And that's where the correction must be made. And so the correction involves not giving a damn what everyone else thinks. Not as an opposition to them, but as a relinquishment of faith in their perspective. A relinquishment of your faith in their ability to give you peace, safety, security, and integrity. And turning around to the Altar.

Go on.

READER: It is essential to remember that only the mind can create, and that correction belongs at the thought level.

RAJ: At the thought level and the result of thought—which is a determination, a decision. And then a commitment to the decision. But again, the correction has to be introduced where the mistake is made. And the mistake is made at the level of thought.

Continue.

READER: To amplify an earlier statement, spirit is already perfect and therefore does not require correction.

RAJ: The Flame in the Altar is already perfect. And the Flame in the Altar is You. The Flame in the Altar is God Being You there. The Flame in the Altar is God Being God there.

Continue.

SEEKER reader): If I may? Then I'm seeing that the Altar is more of what's referred to as survival in The Urantia Book.

RAJ: No. Survival... survival means nothing without its opposite. And the Altar is Life Itself—Immutable, Unalterable Life without an opposite.

Continue.

READER: The body does not exist except as a learning device for the mind. This learning device is not subject to errors of its own, because it cannot create. It is obvious, then, that inducing the mind to give up its miscreations is the only application of creative ability that is truly meaningful.

RAJ: Wow. Yes.

It is obvious then that finessing the mind to give up its miscreations is the only application of creative ability that is truly meaningful. It's the only one that will work. Inducing the mind is to present an idea so attractive, that the mind it is addressed to, finds it almost impossible not to explore.

But the impulse to explore it, the intent to explore it, has to come to you for your reasons. Else it's not you taking the step; it's not you making the shift. It's someone else coming up behind you and picking you up and moving you to a new spot. And if you didn't end up at that new spot willingly, you will get back to the old spot as quickly as you can with great, self-righteous indignation.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Can you make those shifts of correction within the context of the ego? Or do you have to go face the Altar, as you say, and do it from the Holy Spirit?

RAJ: Let me put it this way. When you are induced by an utterly brilliant idea that gets your attention, and you give your attention to it, you are turning toward the Altar. When you turn, when you give your attention with intrigue toward a new idea that is at odds with the status quo, the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, you are turning away from them and turning toward the Altar.

SEEKER: Is that my agenda, or the Holy Spirit's agenda?

RAJ: It's the Holy Spirit's agenda to make turning around inviting.

It's your agenda to turn around and explore/fulfill your curiosity.

And you must realize that no matter how much you might identify yourself as your ego, you are not the ego-sense of yourself that you have so strongly identified with. You've never stopped being the Presence of God, the Christ. And so That Which finds Itself curious to give Its attention to the Truth and fulfill Its curiosity is the Divine One That You Are, already in the process of Coming Home by having been successfully enticed into looking at things a different way, having been finessed into abandoning your commitment to the way you've always seen things. You see?

SEEKER: Yeah. And what I'm learning now is when you... to really change your perceptions of someone is actually to see them without error. I mean, no penalty, no foul. It's not like I see them doing something wrong, and then forgiving them. It's like you just don't see it.

RAJ: That's correct.

ANOTHER SEEKER: It looks like here's the first place where you introduced the idea, "the body does not exist." Would you insert the phrase, "as you perceive it," after that?

RAJ: Actually it has been in the previous couple of sections.

SEEKER: Oh, I missed that. But it's standing out right here.

RAJ: But...

RAJ READING: The body does not exist except as a learning device for the mind.

RAJ: I brought out that the body is like the Effulgence, or Glow, around the Altar.

SEEKER: I missed that.

RAJ: And when one turns one's back on the Altar, and one does not see that the Glow is from the Altar, and one denies Its Divinity, that very thing becomes a learning-device.

SEEKER: I know.

RAJ: Whatever of the Infinite Presence of God you are denying becomes a learning-device, because it becomes the specific opportunity to remember God. And once you have remembered God and seen it for What It Truly Is, it ceases to be a learning-device, because you aren't suffering from ignorance needing to be corrected.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: Magic is the mindless or the miscreative use of mind. Physical medications are forms of "spells," but if you are afraid to use the mind to heal, you should not attempt to do so. The very fact that you are afraid makes your mind vulnerable to miscreation. You are therefore likely to misunderstand any healing that might occur, and because egocentricity and fear usually occur together, you may be unable to accept the real Source of the healing. Under these conditions, it is safer for you to rely temporarily on physical healing devices, because you cannot misperceive them as your own creations. As long as your sense of vulnerability persists, you should not attempt to perform miracles.

RAJ: Whew. The scariest part of a miracle is that it proves there is a God—something none of you really wants to find out for sure. It's much easier to believe that there is a God, and hope there is a God, and give lip-service to this God that you believe in and have hope about, than it is to have the actual Experience of God.

For any of a number of reasons, but the most significant reason you don't want to know that there really is a God is because you will know unequivocally that you're not in charge. That you have no authority of your own. That you therefore do not have any of the characteristics of strength and integrity that have been defined by the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and to which you have brought full commitment.

You are afraid that if there really is a God, and you are incapable of defending yourself because you have no authority, that you will die, because survival requires you to be able to defend yourself.

And the problem here is that you are looking at the approach to God as though you really are the mortal you believe you are. And as the one who participated in "The Fall" by saying, "My will be done, not Thine," and therefore, there will be punishment.

But all of this conflicted, penalty-ridden fear of facing God arises out of the fact that when you are not experiencing God, All That God Is will appear to be polarized. Therefore, capable of providing you with some good, but also with a lot of bad—omnipotent bad. When the fact is that when you yield to God, and you dare to let God to be glorified in you by not presenting any other presence than What God Is Being there, there will be no experience of vulnerability, no experience of judgment, no experience of penalty having to be paid.

The only reason the approach to God appears to be fraught with distress is because you are still looking through your distress glasses. Because you're still identified with your commitment to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And you're still committed to the value that everyone around you that you are joined in these mutually-agreed-upon definitions with, are what provide you with your strength and integrity. You have more trust in everyone else's opinions, than you do risking the chance that maybe there really is a God. And this God is Love. And you are His Offspring. You are Him. You are God Expressed. And therefore, incapable of experiencing polarity. And therefore, safe. And therefore, Pure. And therefore, the Presence of Integrity. And therefore, invulnerable, because there is no other Presence.

Continue.

READER: I have already said that miracles are expressions of miracle-mindedness, and miracle-mindedness means right-mindedness. The right-minded neither exalt nor...

RAJ: And right-mindedness is the opposite of illness/sickness, because sickness is nothing more than wrong-mindedness.

Continue.

READER: The right-minded neither exalt nor depreciate the mind of the miracle worker or the miracle receiver. However, as a correction, the miracle need not await the right-mindedness of the receiver. In fact, its purpose is to restore him to his right mind. It is essential, however, that the miracle worker be in his right mind, however briefly, or he will be unable to re-establish right-mindedness in someone else.

RAJ: So, the miracle worker is not an authorizer of the miracle. Where did I see that?

RAJ READING: It is essential, however, that the miracle worker be in his right mind, however briefly,...

RAJ: In his Right Mind, however briefly.

RAJ READING: ...or he will be unable to re-establish right-mindedness in someone else.

RAJ: What I mean to say is that the only one who would like to be able to say to this disease or that disease, "Get thee hence," and have it be gone, is an ego. Only an ego wants the power to banish disease. Wanting to be a miracle worker and to be able to banish disease is not an expression of right-mindedness. It's an expression of willfulness for excellent reasons. And of course, the meaning of the word "excellent reasons" is arrived at through mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

The miracle happens when the miracle worker, who happens to just be a guy like you, or a gal like you, happens to get out of the way for a moment. Happens to be in a place where he, or she, isn't reaffirming the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and there is an opportunity for the Holy Spirit to connect. And then, if you bring your attention to it, to the connection, and allow the connection to occur, that's the meaning of turning toward the Altar. And then, God's Love, through the Holy Spirit, and through you, blesses someone else, and healing occurs.

And then if that moment of right-mindedness suddenly abruptly stops, and you're just like you, and you, and you, again, you say, "My God! What happened? It's a miracle!" And what you mean is that something has happened that you don't understand the happening of. And you stand as much in awe of it as everyone else. Do you see what I'm saying?

The miracle worker is what you end up being when you've allowed yourself to be out of the way, not trying to be anything in particular. And in that moment of the absence of assertive self-will, the Father can be glorified in you, because you're not interfering with your Real Function, which is to glorify God, to let God be All That Is There where you see and experience yourself.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So for that one moment you see that person as Perfect and Whole as God created him.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And in that moment in your right-mindedness, he gets that message, he connects with that, and he sees himself as Perfect and Whole. And because that happens, you can only receive what you give, you see yourself as Perfect and Whole.

RAJ: Indeed. Indeed. Exactly.

READER: The healer who relies on his own readiness is endangering his understanding.

RAJ: Let that sink in.

With what measuring stick are you going to assess your readiness? It isn't about you being ready to be a healer. It's more about you letting God use you, or the Holy Spirit to use you. Your readiness is epitomized in the phrase, "Thy Will be done." Readiness is when there is enough humility to get out of the way as a healer. You see?

Your willfulness is the opaqueness that doesn't let God through. The more humility infuses itself into you, and the more allowing you are of it, the less opaque your Mind becomes and the more Light that can shine through.

Continue.

READER: You are perfectly safe as long as you are completely unconcerned about your readiness,...

RAJ: Not mostly unconcerned. Not unconcerned a little bit. Completely unconcerned. It's irrelevant.

Start the sentence again.

READER: You are perfectly safe as long as you are completely unconcerned about your readiness, but maintain a consistent trust in mine.

RAJ: Now this is what Paul does every time he sits down for a Gathering like this. Sometimes we can't start for quite a while because he's concerned about his readiness. He has himself on his mind. He knows that he must get past that, and that is what he attends to by giving his attention more fully to me and entrusting himself to me.

Continue.

READER: If your miracle working inclinations are not functioning properly, it is always because fear has intruded on your right-mindedness and has turned it upside down. All forms of not-right-mindedness are the result of refusal to accept the Atonement for yourself.

RAJ: And what is the Atonement?

ANOTHER SEEKER: An Act of Love.

RAJ: Yes. The Act of Love.

And as we've said, the only way an act of capital "L" Love can occur is when you desire to have the Father's Love come through you. Not through you as you, but through you as the Father's Love still, and extending it. Especially extending it to one who seems to you your ego-sense) to be unworthy of it. And in that willingness, that one is blessed, and you are blessed.

Continue.

READER: If you do accept it, you are in a position to recognize that those who need healing are simply those who have not realized that right-mindedness is healing.

RAJ: Is healing. Yes.

Continue.

READER: The sole responsibility of the miracle worker is to accept the Atonement for himself.

RAJ: Now this can be a little tricky, because the only way you can accept the Atonement for yourself is to extend it to your Brother. You cannot sit in a room all by yourself and be bathed in the Light of God so that you, and you alone, can soak up the Rays and be blessed and tanned beautifully.

The way you receive the Atonement is by finding an object of your affection, because it's your Function to be the Presence of Love, and then say, "Father, show this one to me. Let me see Your Vision. Infill me with the True Perception of him, or her, so that I might always behave in a way that honors his Divinity. And so that I might never again behave toward him, or her, on the basis of mutually-agreed-upon definitions, or the avoidance of penalties for breaking those definitions."

Continue.

Our official questioner has a question. [some audience laughter]

ANOTHER SEEKER: Why did you spend a lot of time alone in the wilderness and up on the mountains and in Gethsemane? Why did you spend so much time alone when you were here?

RAJ: If you want to look at it in terms of time, out of thirty-three years, those accounted for a very small part of my life.

But you know what? You do have to go on fasts. You have to be willing to fast from the mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And is that not a withdrawal from the group that you have chosen to be identified with who has those mutually-agreed-upon definitions? Does not Paul, when he sits down at the beginning of each Gathering, in effect, withdraw from you? What that actually means is that he withdraws from being concerned about what you might think about him if he turns toward the Altar.

SEEKER: We have to go through the aloneness of our Being to get to that place where we join with.

RAJ: Where you're already One with everything.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Yeah. Thank you.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] Even you had to do that.

RAJ: That is correct.

READER: This means you recognize that mind is the only creative level, and that its errors are healed by the Atonement. Once you accept this, your mind can only heal. By denying your mind any destructive potential and reinstating its purely constructive powers, you place yourself in a position to undo the level confusion of others. The message you then give to them is the truth that their minds are similarly constructive, and their miscreations cannot hurt them. By affirming this you release the mind from overevaluating its own learning device, and restore the mind to its true position as the learner.

RAJ: If you travel a lot and take a lot of vacations, and in the process of doing this, you find a hideaway that is exquisite and something that no one should miss, you do not hesitate to tell your friends about it. And they cannot help but see the light in you of your enthusiasm, and feel the invitation—not your invitation—but the invitation of the beauty and the exquisiteness and the wonderfulness of this place.

When you abandon the mutually-agreed-upon definitions because you have become curious to look in a new direction that you have been finessed into checking out, and you abandon the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and have a new experience, as I've said before, you can't help but share it. But more than anything, you realize that you've experienced a bit of the Kingdom of Heaven without having done anything to deserve it. Discovery does not happen as the result of personal effort. It only happens because you are paying attention, and you are willing to look where you haven't looked before.

So, if you have a taste of the Kingdom of Heaven and it causes you to have a whole new perspective, and you didn't deserve it, and the experience has shown you that it takes no skill to have the experience, only a certain undefendedness, no matter what a terrible person you were before it happened, it becomes obvious to you that your friend, your neighbor, your sister, your mother, your son, whoever, can have the same experience, too, because it doesn't have to be deserved. Absolutely everyone is susceptible to this kind of experience without qualifications.

Wow. Now, all of a sudden you're seeing them in a new way. You're seeing that they don't have to measure up to some standard in order to have insight. And that, because you had the experience, and therefore were evidently deserving of having the experience, then, in spite of the way you've been looking at your neighbor, and how negatively you've been judging him or her to be, they deserve it, too. And in that clarification, you find that you've abandoned your judgment, because suddenly you realize that your judgment meant nothing. And now you can stand with them on their behalf, without even saying a word, you can stand with them on behalf of their having the very same wonderful revelation, because you had it without deserving it, and they deserve to have it without deserving it also.

And there is Love in you that you embrace them with. You see? The message you then give to them is the Truth that their Minds are similarly constructive. You know, the bitch or bastard that you saw a few minutes ago, now you're saying, "Their Mind is similarly constructive, like mine is!" You see? And there's joy!

And I'll tell you, your presence is inspiring to everyone, because you are more benign yourself. You can't help but embrace them with the Love that you found yourself embraced by. You have a vision about them that they might not be having about themselves.

So, this section is called "The Function of the Miracle Worker." And we've all found out that the miracle worker isn't you, but that it's who you end up being when you don't have yourself on your mind as a something at all. And who you turn out to be, the miracle worker, is that because you have dared, with help, to abandon your fear of facing God, abandoning your fear of no longer committing to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions. You have abandoned your allegiance to everyone else's opinion of you, so that you might stand alone in the void. Because in the void, you can be curious to know What Everything Is separate and apart from the mess of existence in the middle of mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

Now, this is not something other-worldly. And it's not something impossible. It's not something difficult. Every time any of you ask me a question, Paul turns toward me—not his own best judgments—and listens, and hears, and shares the answer. That's all the more other-worldly it is.

And every time any one of you simply chooses to become still within yourself and say, "Father, help me to see the Truth," you are turning toward the Altar. You are relinquishing your allegiance to all of the agreed-upon definitions that have been given to everything, so that another way of seeing this might be presented to you—not be figured out by you. And the answer... the answers come. They come every day. Most of the time you don't hear them, but sometimes you do. And that's all the more other-worldly it is. That's all the more difficult it is.

And the point is to do this, and do it, and do it, and do it, more frequently, more frequently, more frequently, until you're not doing anything else, so that you might always experience being in perfect harmony with It. Ultimately, the experience of being perfectly in harmony with It will, for lack of better words, go through a blur. The distinction between you cooperating with It as something different from you that you're cooperating with, will blur, and you will experience yourself as It—not as an observer of It.

So, it's a wonderful adventure. And it's not complicated. And it only has to do with your bringing your willingness to invite a new Perspective that you haven't created, and that others around you who are still dreaming dreams haven't created for you either.

It can come as easily as your saying throughout the day, "What should I do now that will be in harmony with the Father's Will for me?"

It's time to eat. [Editor's Note: The following is an example simulated dialogue with one's Guide.]

What's the most appropriate thing for me to do regarding eating?

Oh, I'm to go out to dinner tonight?

Okay. What place best expresses fulfillment of God's Purpose?

A French restaurant?

But that's not reasonable. My wallet says no.

Mmm. You say do it anyway?

Is this really my Guide, or is this my ego?

Oh. You're my Guide, and I am hearing you clearly.

But it doesn't make sense.

Oh, it's because Sense, what fulfills the Father's Purpose, goes beyond my definition of what makes sense. And so you're encouraging me to risk the chance that being unwise, as far as I'm concerned, and going to a restaurant that costs more than I can afford might actually be appropriate? You are. You are saying that.

You see? You keep inquiring. And you must always know that you can refuse, if what you're told stretches you too much. You can refuse. You can be stubborn and say, "Explain more." But the point is to be constantly turned toward the Altar, constantly wanting to know what fulfills the Father's Purpose here.

Oh, you say I am worth even more than the French restaurant. But it fulfills the Father's Purpose for it to just be the French restaurant tonight. You say this isn't going to put me into a financial jeopardy.

Oh.

You say that I am hearing you perfectly clearly, and it fulfills Purpose for me to go out to eat tonight to the French restaurant, and enjoy myself.

Okay.

Now, I'm not going to go on, and on, because, of course, now one has to get ready, and get into the car, and say:

Okay. Shall I take the freeway? Or shall I... which way shall I go?

So that you are staying in touch the whole way.

Now, it takes trust. And the blessing is greater than anything you can imagine. And I will tell you this. When you listen deeply and in effect turn toward the Altar, your coming into harmony with the Father's Will, will not bring any of you to any kind of ruin, financial or otherwise. And by God, be glad that Guidance is given you that doesn't hold you to your poor, teeny thought-models of what is acceptable and appropriate for someone of your station, or status, or financial makeup.

Next Thursday is the day after Christmas, and we will not have a Gathering next Thursday evening. We will resume the follow Thursday; the first Thursday of what you call a "new year." Same old Eternity. [audience laughter]

And I really encourage all of you, during the next two weeks, to try to find some delight in being open to that which hasn't been included in the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you've been binding yourselves by, by withdrawing your allegiance to them enough to have some curiosity to say, "Father, I really would like to experience the Truth." And it doesn't have to be Ultimate Truth. It can be, "What's the Truth here? How can I be utterly on the beam about which blouse to wear?" You see? Ultimate... Ultimacy can be found in simplicity. Don't make it complicated for yourselves.

Over the next two weeks, dare to enjoy all of the opportunities you will be provided with in order for you to be miracle-ready. Because I will tell you that those are the things that are being prepared for you every moment, of every day, of every year. And to be miracle-ready means to be willing in the most unexpected places to extend Love. Miracles, the Revelation of What Is Real, are constantly being presented to you by the Experience of Being Itself, because Being is God In Action. But with the allegiances you have to your mutually-agreed-upon definitions, you usually only leave a little crack for the miracle to come through. So, this Christmas, don't just let a baby through. Don't just let a little miracle through. You see? Be willing to let big miracles happen, because big miracles are being given. Don't be stingy this Christmas. Don't be teeny this Christmas. Don't let through just a little bit of Love. Ask for Love in Its Fullness to find an avenue through you.

I love you.

Okay.

Section – THE FUNCTION OF THE MIRACLE WORKER
First Edition – p. 22 / Second Edition – p. 26

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: To everyone.

How many of you have had the experience of being asleep and dreaming and having someone come in and touch you on the shoulder or shake you gently, and experience that as an element of your dream where someone in your dream took you by the shoulder and shook it? In other words, if you've had that experience, something happening outside of the dream is experienced, but is immediately translated into the dream itself, which keeps you from recognizing the option to have a shift of consciousness from the dream to real life.

The reason I'm using this example is that I could have begun by saying, "Welcome to everyone from the rainy, blustery Pacific Northwest." And most of you, those of you who aren't here would have said, "Oh, it's nice to have a little perspective on what's going on where everyone in the living room is experiencing." And none of you probably would have thought, "Wait a minute. Raj is speaking to us from the Kingdom of Heaven. And he isn't really welcoming us from our current perception of the Kingdom of Heaven, which we call the Pacific Northwest, or any other part of the planet."

And so, what I want you to realize is that I am speaking to you from the Conscious Experience of Reality. I am speaking to you from Reality. And the fact is that every single one of you is right here with me in the middle of Reality dreaming a dream, but hearing me from the Kingdom of Heaven yourselves. That doesn't mean you're someplace other than where you're experiencing yourself at the moment. What it means is that what you're experiencing at the moment and calling planet Earth, and certain weather conditions, is the Kingdom of Heaven perceived that way. You're already at Home. You're having your dream from Home. There isn't any place to go. There's just the constant opportunity to get the point, to have the flash of insight that says, "This Voice I'm hearing, the shake on the shoulder, is coming from a different level of perception than the one I'm currently employing," so that then you can rouse yourself, and greet Reality right where you are and see it for What It Is.

Again, I'm speaking from Home. You're hearing me from Home. And this reminder is a trigger to you to stop assuming that the way you're perceiving everything at the moment is true, reliable, dependable. Period. There's more to it.

And in hearing my Voice, you are hearing an event that is Real, with a capital "R", and is occurring independent of and separate from the definitions of everything that you are currently giving everything. And you are hearing my Voice from a place outside the dream. You are hearing my Voice from a place outside of your mutually-agreed-upon definitions of everything. You might say, you have Real ears. And your Real ears are hearing my Voice.

And even though the experience is being translated into the current terms of your perceptions of the Kingdom of Heaven, it isn't changing the fact that the Divine You is hearing my Voice from Home and my Voice is being extended to you from Home. And there's no further to go. All that needs to happen is a moment in which you relinquish your commitment to the way you're seeing everything. When you're sleeping and having a dream, and it's time to wake up, the alarm clock goes off or someone shakes your shoulder, it's time to make a commitment to something other than what's attracting your attention, the dream you're having, so that you might step, for lack of better words, into a different order of Reality.

The chair you're sitting in, the bed you're lying on, the room you're in—all of it is some Aspect of the Kingdom of Heaven, and you are in the middle of it, preoccupied though you may be. But this event of our being together and your hearing my Voice and my recognizing you, is absolutely, totally Divine and Real, with a capital "R". And What Is Real About You is what is hearing What Is Real About Me. And to some degree, this mutual experience of communion is everyone's, including mine, everyone's Experience of the Presence of God being All There Is to everything.

So, Reality isn't afar off. It's happening at this instant. And it is what you are experiencing, no matter how it's being interpreted. And Awakening is simply a matter of abandoning the interpretation so that it doesn't get in the way of the clear Experience of What Is Real.

When you are listening to my words as Paul speaks them, you are turning your attention toward the Altar. Why? Because Paul has turned his attention toward the Altar, so that he might experience his Brother, me, reflecting the Father.

Okay, let's begin.

READER: It should be emphasized again that the body does not learn any more than it creates. As a learning device it merely follows the learner, but if it is falsely endowed with self-initiative, it becomes a serious obstruction to the very learning it should facilitate.

RAJ: When you talk about it having self-initiative, it means, "Oh. You know, my body just isn't cooperating with me today. My body just isn't doing what I want it to." That kind of a thought endows it with a capacity, a supposed capacity to be something on its own. And your poor use of words creates for you a picture that you then believe and make commitment to. And how do you make commitment to it? You may become afraid of your body. You may engage fear, because it's not cooperating with you. Because if it's not cooperating with you, it can act to your detriment.

So your fear is the demonstration of the fact that you believed your poor use of language and the picture it created. And by reacting to the picture you've employed, but thinking you're reacting to your body, you have made commitment to your belief, and you suffer from your belief.

The moment you become afraid and defended against your body, afraid of and defended against your body, your body begins to cooperate with your decision about it. And it begins to tense up, to densify even more, and to begin to provide further complaints that increase your fear, increase your defense, and thus increase even more the density with which you hold your body. You see?

Your body has no capacity to act on its own whatsoever, because it's just the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality. It's the Visibility and Tangibility of You.

Continue.

[Editor's Note: The following sentence was not read: Only the mind is capable of illumination.]

READER: Spirit is already illuminated and the body in itself is too dense. The mind, however,...

RAJ: Why is it too dense? Because through your fear and your commitment to your fear, you densify it further, and further, and further.

Do not assume that this statement means that the body on its own in itself is dense. There is no body on its own that of itself can be anything. All it is, is Visibility and Tangibility—the Glow caused by the Altar.

Continue.

READER: The mind, however, can bring its illumination to the body by recognizing that it is not the learner, and is therefore unamenable to learning.

RAJ: Ah.

RAJ READING: The mind, however, can bring its illumination to the body...

RAJ: Why? Because that's the Source of the illumination of the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality. It isn't that your Mind, or the Mind, can or cannot, will or might not, bring its illumination to the body. That is just the way it is. Your Individuality is what is rendered Visible and Tangible as the body, which ultimately you will discover is a Body of Light, a Glow, as I've been saying.

Continue.

READER: The body is, however, easily brought into alignment with a mind that has learned to look beyond it toward the light.

RAJ: Yes. And the image I have been using has not been to look beyond the Glow, but rather to turn around so your back isn't toward the Altar where the Light is—the Light of your Essential Being, which is the Presence of God.

Continue.

READER: Corrective learning always begins with the awakening of spirit...

RAJ: Well, let's stop right there.

Corrective learning. Wow!

I am sure all of you treat that word "corrective" like a grace note in music. You play it and get off of it as fast as you can. Or, you think of it as a mechanical effect brought about by a splint, or something of that sort, where correction occurs and it's no big deal.

But I want you to take the word "corrective" and the word "correction" seriously, because it is exactly like being corrected as a child. Correction means that something occurs which causes you to actually change the way you behave. Corrective learning is learning that causes you to behave differently, in an improved manner.

RAJ READING: Corrective learning always begins with the awakening of spirit...

RAJ: And I'm going to use the word, "Spiritual Sight." The influx of revelation. The influx of a new perspective that actually causes you to see things differently, because it connects you with an Experience of the Divine. Not just the Experience of God, The Divine, but also the Experience of your Self as Divine.

RAJ READING: ...and...

RAJ: Therefore.

RAJ READING: ...the turning away from the belief in physical sight.

RAJ: Whenever you have what I'm going to call "Insight," an event of Spiritual Sight, it moves you to a new level of clarity about yourself and everything else, in a context of a Divinity that is All-Inclusive so that you feel not only specifically Real, with a capital "R", but you feel grounded in a Reality that is far more Infinite than what you had been embracing in your conscious awareness up to that point.

Continue.

SEEKER (reader): Where was I? Should I start at, "This often"?

RAJ: Yes.

READER: This often entails fear, because you are afraid of what your spiritual sight will show you.

RAJ: That's another way of saying that it creates a spontaneous feeling of guilt. If there is a Light that has been turned on that is... that even slightly smacks of Divinity, you automatically feel as though your guilt... that your flaws are going to be uncovered, that your lack of Divinity is going to be exposed, and your guilt is going to be demonstrated by the Illumination of Divine Light.

Continue.

READER: I said before that the Holy Spirit cannot see error, and is capable only of looking beyond it to the defense of Atonement. There is no doubt that this may produce discomfort, yet the discomfort is not the final outcome of the perception. When the Holy Spirit is permitted to look upon the defilement of the altar, He also looks immediately toward the Atonement.

RAJ: Ah. He doesn't become fixated on the problem. He doesn't become fixated upon the flaw. He recognizes that the flaw is a misperception. And so, He goes beyond it. He goes to what it is a misperception of and illuminates that. And illuminates that in you. And therefore, you are not judged guilty. You are judged not guilty, because the Reality that you had a misperception about is uncovered to you, confirming your Innocence.

Now this is important, because when you look at a Brother, or a Sister, or even when you tend to look at yourself, you are likely to see the flaw, and get hung up on the flaw, instead of asking, "What is this flaw a misperception of? What is this flaw a lie about? What is it a misinterpretation of?" so that you can move beyond it to recognize the Truth, that is ultimately the Truth about yourself and your Brother. And that... that is the fertile soil for healing.

Continue.

READER: Nothing He perceives can induce fear. Everything that results from spiritual awareness is merely channelized toward correction.

RAJ: It is merely channelized toward correction. What a wonderful thing to be aware of. When the Holy Spirit looks at you, its whole Function is to bring you into an understanding and experience of yourself that goes beyond your current misperception, so that your misperception is corrected, and you can be in a new way.

And I have said before that the Holy Spirit is your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego. Do you see how whole-izing that awareness is? Because it's your Divinity that is willing to look beyond your current misperception to uncover the Truth that it's a misperception of, so that you might come into a truer experience of yourself: and correction can successfully occur.

You often think of the word "correction" as chastisement. But correction is, to be changed, to be made new. That's what correction is. It's not punishment. It's healing.

RAJ READING: Everything that results from spiritual awareness is merely channelized toward correction.

Continue.

READER: Discomfort is aroused only to bring the need for correction into awareness.

RAJ: Yes. And discomfort occurs because of the unchangeable Sanity of your Being, so that when you are attempting to act at odds with your Being, you get feedback. Without the feedback, you could become totally insane, without hope for healing.

No one makes you uncomfortable. God does not set up circumstances for you to be uncomfortable. The Holy Spirit doesn't make you uncomfortable. I do not make you uncomfortable. None of us need to.

It's like if you take your finger and bend it backwards, the harder you press, the more uncomfortable it is, because you're trying to make it do something that it doesn't do, that it's not made to do, that it can't do. No one has to set the experience up for you. It's just The Way Things Work.

If you try to be at odds with your Being, you will be uncomfortable. Discomfort will be aroused, because of the simple Sanity of your Being.

RAJ READING: Discomfort is aroused only to bring the need for correction into awareness.

RAJ: Which means to bring into your awareness that it's sensible to stop pressing your finger back in a position it doesn't go in, so that you stop. You don't say, "Oh. My goodness. My finger is giving me a hard time. I wonder what... is this karma? [audience amused] Umm. Maybe I'm picking up on someone hating me." No. It's nothing so far fetched. It's much more immediate than that.

If you are uncomfortable, it means that you are acting/behaving in some way at odds with the Wonderfully Divine Way Your Being Works, with the Wonderfully Perfect Way that God's Expression expresses.

Let us continue.

READER: The fear of healing arises in the end from an unwillingness to accept unequivocally that healing is necessary.

RAJ: Now, one might say, "Well, gee whiz, if something is wrong, who wouldn't think that healing is necessary?" But part of the problem is that some things you don't know are wrong. When you find yourself experiencing fear, you don't know that the experience of fear itself is wrong. Why? Because you say that, "What so-and-so out there is doing, is causing me to be afraid justifiably." You see?

You get up in the morning and some mornings you say, "God, do I have to get out of bed?" Except that you're not really asking God. Because if you really asked God, you would get an answer that would inspire you out of bed. And when you ask that question, you don't realize that there's something wrong with asking that question; that correction is needed. You've had months of getting up in the morning and not experiencing anything superb. "So what's the point this morning?" You think you don't have an alternative. So you don't know that correction is needed. And when you don't know that correction is needed, you'll just have another day like the day before. If you don't know that there's another way to look at this, you'll just keep looking at it the way you've been looking at it.

Continue.

READER: What the physical eye sees is not corrective, nor can error be corrected by any device that can be seen physically.

RAJ: Okay.

This refers to the physical eye as opposed to Spiritual Sight, Insight. It refers to what you see when you are not joined with the Father, or the Holy Spirit, or your Guide, or Me, before you look.

What you call your physical eyes see only what you believe that you can see; only what you have determined there is for you to see. And so, you look at a leaf, or a table, and it doesn't occur to you that it's Spirit. And that because it's the Energy of Spirit, the Presence of God, it is Light. And therefore, there is Light emanating from it. And there is Light as the Substance of it. And not only that, the Light is Living Love, so it is loving you, as I've said before; embracing you with an incredible Infinite, Divine Love. And so, because you haven't thought that that might be the possibility, your physical eyes see only what you believe there is there to see.

Now, I will tell you this. As Spiritual Sight, as the perception of things As They Really Are increases, because you are choosing to look at everything with your Guide, or with the Father, desiring to experience Their Perspective, your eyes, what you call your physical eyes, will begin to see Spirit. And you will also begin to realize that your very eyeballs, what you have called your eyeballs, are not matter, but are Spirit as well, and that they simply identify Consciousness in one aspect.

So when it says:

RAJ: It means that the physical eye—your eyeball that's not connected to Insight, but only your mutually-agreed-upon-definitions and your memory—that what it sees cannot be corrective. Of course, it can't be corrective. It's feeding back to you the past. It's feeding back to you memory. It's boxed in. It isn't open to see outside of the box determined by your very specific definitions that you've already given to everything. And of course, from that standpoint from within the box, error cannot be corrected by any device that can be seen physically.

And I'll tell you something else. When Spiritual Sight infills you with the Experience of What A Thing Really Is, meaning the Substance of Spirit which is Love loving you, now everything you see is capable of being corrective, because Love, loving you, corrects your misperception—not only about what you were looking at, but about yourself because your lovability is inescapable to you. These are important distinctions here.

Continue.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] I have a question.

RAJ: We have a question.

SEEKER: The other day you were talking about this, and it's about magic and the remedies for the body ills. And down here it says something like give temporary belief, temporary given... oh, here it is... temporary given healing belief, this is because the last thing that can help the not-right-minded...

PAUL: I'm sorry. This is me, Paul. I'm having a hard time understanding what you're saying.

SEEKER: We were talking about this the other day. And at that point it said... [pause]... it said... I'm just going to paraphrase it instead of reading it. It might make it clearer.

PAUL: Okay.

SEEKER: It just said go ahead and take your vitamins. Go ahead and take your medicine. The last thing you need is to get really freaked out. But there's no correction in that. It's just... we're not getting anything corrected by... we're just not freaking out more. That's all.

I mean at that point I was thinking, well, you know, temporary belief that these things are healing me. But the only correction is going to come from facing the Altar. The only thing that it was telling us back then is if you really feel like you need to go to work, or you really feel like you need to keep doing these things, just keep doing it so that you don't get more afraid.

RAJ: Exactly. You do it to reduce fear. Because in the absence of fear, it's much easier to hear; it's much easier to turn toward the Altar.

SEEKER: They are already in a fear-weakened state, you know.

RAJ: Exactly.

Somebody said, "Is it correcting something?"

The tablet you take, or whatever, doesn't actually cause correction to occur. But it might... it might reduce your fear enough, or the pain enough, that you have peace of mind sufficient to then turn to Something beyond your present sense of things and your present sense of limitations to inquire of, to ask for help from. And that's the equivalent of turning toward the Altar. And in that place of reduced fear, you can dare to stand in the void, and let yourself be infilled by Divine Love, by what is there to come forth. And that will always be corrective. And what is corrective can never become uncorrected. What is corrected is corrected forever.

Okay.

READER: As long as you believe in what your physical sight tells you,...

RAJ: Okay.

Here's a little bit of the double talk that can get you confused.

RAJ READING: As long as you believe in what your physical sight tells you,...

RAJ: That's like saying, as I said, "Oh, my body isn't cooperating with me today," as though it could do something. Your physical sight can't tell you anything. You tell it what it's providing you with. You give the definitions to what your physical sight is presenting to you.

[Editor's Note: The complete sentence in the book reads as follows: As long as you believe in what your physical sight tells you, your attempts at correction will be misdirected.]

So, it should say: As long as you believe in what YOU ARE DETERMINING your physical sight IS TELLING YOU, your attempts at correction will be misdirected.

And that's magic. That's the definition of magic.

Continue.

READER: The real vision is obscured, because you cannot endure to see your own defiled altar.

RAJ: Yes. Strong words. It's another way of saying that you don't want to dare to look squarely at the fact that you have chosen to look away from your Essential Self, your Essential Being; that you have chosen to dishonor It by turning your back upon It, so that you might employ your imagination to imagine things that God never dreamed of, and would never dream of.

Not being able to endure seeing your own defiled Altar means that you are unwilling to be honest with yourself, or you are unwilling to be honest with yourself easily, so that you might say, "Yes, I did this really foolish thing. I did this really impractical thing. I did this thing that I can't really do. And you know what? I believed that I did it." You don't want to take a look at and take responsibility for having done something unintelligent. Why? Because from your separated vantage point, the only appropriate result of doing that would be to have a penalty applied to you.

And yet, it's only when you are willing to look squarely at the fact that you have done something, not something wrong, but that you have done something that you couldn't actually do, and you believed that you did something you couldn't actually do, it becomes clear to you that you never actually accomplished it. And therefore, you're not guilty of anything. And what you thought happened, isn't what happened at all. And what really did happen while you were having this distorted experience of What Was Really Happening, is now available for you to see for What It Really Was, for its incredible Beauty, for its incredible Perfection, because Something Real was going on the whole time that you were bending [it] out of shape so it looked like something else to you, but it never actually was altered in any way.

And when the misperception and the memory of the misperception evaporates, because you've been willing to look squarely at what you've done, or what you never could have actually done, then you become clear. And you are relieved not only of the memory of the misperception, but you are relieved of being vulnerable to judgment, guilt and penalty.

Continue.

READER: But since the altar has been defiled, your state becomes doubly dangerous unless it is perceived.

RAJ: Yes. Unless it is perceived.

You think it's dangerous to own up to what you did, but it's doubly dangerous to believe that you actually did it. Do you see that?

Microphone.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'm not quite clear. And let me put it this way. What are we... what are we afraid of that we actually did? Most people don't even know they did anything. They think they're... I mean...

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Until I came to this, I didn't think... I thought everything that was in the world was the way things were. And that's it. And...

RAJ: Yes, but no one is happy. No one is at peace. Everyone is suffering in one way or another.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: Either in their relationships, or in their personal relationships, or in their perceptions of themselves, et cetera, et cetera. And they are suffering thinking this is life. And so they don't challenge the suffering.

SEEKER: And so, do we actually think that part of it's our fault?

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: So that's where we... what we think we... we're doing something wrong and that's why we're getting this negative stuff coming back at us.

RAJ: You see, no matter how insane you can behave, you cannot override your Fundamental Divine Sanity, with a capital "S". It knows / you know that there was a point at which you said, "Father, I'd rather do it myself." You all know that. You all know that you chose to try an experiment, and to do things quote "on your own" unquote. You can't forget that, even though you might not remember the specifics of it because now you're... [small laugh] now you're preoccupied with defending yourself against the horrible effect of that decision. But you know what you did, because you're still lying on a grassy knoll in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven never having left. You see?

SEEKER: So when you say, "you know what you did," it's on a subconscious level?

RAJ: Well, yeah, that's a nice cop-out. [said in funny voice] "It's on a subconscious level."

SEEKER: I didn't say it that way. [laughs] [audience laughter]

RAJ: What it is, it's held out of sight by you 'cause you don't want to look at it. It's not on some unavailable lower level. [audience laughter]

SEEKER: Well, we know it now, because we come together every week and recognize... I mean the book is telling us about it.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: So we're going, "Oh. Oh. Oh. Oh. Gosh. Gee. Wow." But, you know, I mean you're saying...

RAJ: And what's... all that's happening is that the book is helping you, gently helping you to find ways to look at what you did without eliciting emotion and fear and guilt. It's finessing you to be willing to look at what you have been adamantly holding out of sight. Because now that you're in this god-awful frame of mind, you're in a state of survival. And survival is defense against what can get you. And so, you defend yourself against seeing what you did, because it's inevitable that judgment, guilt and penalty will be forthcoming, because that's what your current frame of mind has decided is the way things are.

So, you are being finessed into taking a look at what you did and being able to say, "Oh. I did this and it's not the way I was made to be. And therefore, I couldn't actually have succeeded in doing it. Therefore, I am deluded." So here's a bit of the honesty that's hard to look at, but has to be looked at or correction can't occur. So you recognize, even just intellectually, that you are deluded.

If you are deluded, you are deluded about something. And once you say, "Okay. I conceive of the possibility that I, at this moment, might be deluded." In doing that, you are then put in a position of being able to be curious to say, "What is it I'm deluded about?" Ah! The minute that you say, "What is it that I'm deluded about?" you're having to step outside of the box of mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And whether you know it or not, you've asked God a question. You've reached outside of what you currently believe you know.

SEEKER: Does a small child have a recognition of this as well? I mean is it innate that we recognize this?

RAJ: It is. It's utterly natural because it's inseparable from your capital "S" Sanity.

So, you see, the very way in which you've been asking your questions demonstrates the doubly dangerous aspect of not wanting to look at the way in which the Altar was defiled, because you're holding the fact that you defiled it absolutely out of sight. And so you think no correction is called for. And so you do not seek what would be corrective. You see? It's the blind leading the blind, except that you are both of them.

Okay.

READER: Healing is an ability that developed after the separation, before which it was unnecessary. Like all aspects of the belief in space and time, it is temporary.

RAJ: That simply means that once you wake up, the word "healing" will not exist anymore because Perfection will be the Forever State of your Conscious Experience. So it will be unnecessary.

Continue.

READER: However, as long as time persists, healing is needed as a means of protection. This is because healing rests on charity, and charity is a way of perceiving the perfection of another even if you cannot perceive it in yourself.

RAJ: Oh, Boy! Now we're getting down to the meat and potatoes. And this is part of what you don't want to look at. This is part of the reason that you keep the fact that you've defiled the Altar well hidden from yourself. Because when you bring it out into the open, it's going to call for something from you—[whispered] charity. [regular voice] You're going to have to give something that isn't deserved. Or you're going to have to give something that you shouldn't have to give because your Brother should have handled his, or her, life a little bit better so that she, or he, didn't need charity. And you can even fool yourself into believing that you're really being the Christ by refusing to give them charity and making them become self-responsible. Whew!

RAJ READING: ...healing rests on charity, and charity is a way of perceiving the perfection of another even if you cannot perceive it in yourself.

RAJ: You might have thought it would say that it was a way of perceiving the Perfection of another even if that other cannot perceive it in himself. But at the bottom line, it means that you've got to give something to another that you haven't been willing to give to yourself, because you won't receive it for yourself until it's given away.

Sounds harsh maybe. But, of course, that's the way it would look coming from the ego frame of reference. To give something away that... to give something to another that you haven't given to yourself is utterly simple if you don't make a mountain out of a molehill. If you don't make a big deal out of it, it's easy to be thoughtful. It really is. But, of course, in order to be thoughtful, you'll have to get past the judgments you've been holding about that other one that say to you, "It's not principled for me to do this. He doesn't deserve it, she doesn't deserve it, until he, or she, changes." And what are you doing? You're not holding them to themselves; you're holding them to your definition of them.

And although it doesn't say it right here, charity is a way of perceiving the Perfection of another, even if he cannot perceive it in himself. It is a Gift.

Continue.

READER: Most of the loftier concepts of which you are capable now are time-dependent. Charity is really a weaker reflection of a much more powerful love-encompassment that is far beyond any form of charity you can conceive of as yet.

RAJ: Does everyone understand that? I see some nodding. And can I see some shaking? Is there anyone shaking their head? Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Can I offer just as a curiosity?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Is it true that it means that ultimately we are living in a State of Grace at all times? It means that God's Love is constantly uninterrupted, like a bestowal of a Gift of His Love constantly.

RAJ: Indeed.

Charity. If charity is something that you cannot give if you haven't asked the Father, or the Holy Spirit, or your Guide, One Who Is Awake, to share with you His Vision, His True Vision. And when that Vision is provided to you, as I've said before, it is so moving that you spontaneously extend it to your Brother. And what you are extending is bigger than anything you could have extended through a process of thought and reasoning, no matter how lofty those thoughts and reasonings were, because it's a Gift from God. And when you extend it to your Brother, you are embraced with it as well.

If you feel it but don't extend it, you have not provided the opportunity for correction to occur, and therefore correction will not happen in you, even though the feeling of Love might be a quite blissful experience for you. Do you see what I am saying?

Charity is a weaker reflection because your willingness to extend it, is a willingness to extend something you don't yet grasp the significance of, the hugeness of. And so your extension of it is done on faith, rather than from conviction. You see? And it's in that sense that it's a weaker reflection than your lofty reasonings and ideas might be which you have great confidence in, even though there's no way for you to experience them as huge and all-inclusive because they are not. They are intellectual.

Continue.

READER: Charity is essential to right-mindedness in the limited sense in which it can now be attained.

RAJ: Yes.

Continue.

READER: Charity is a way of looking at another as if he had already gone far beyond his actual accomplishments in time.

RAJ: Indeed.

If you don't have available to you anything greater than your current perception of things, your current mindsets, change cannot occur. Correction cannot occur. Healing cannot occur. Redemption cannot occur.

Charity is a way of looking at another as a result of going beyond your best assessment of your Brother. And the simple fact is that in your willingness to let yourself be infilled with the experience of a Brother that goes beyond your best assessment of him, you receive, by virtue of the influx, justification for looking at yourself beyond those very same limits. Because I promise you, you don't extend to your Brother any better judgments than you extend to yourself.

Continue.

READER: Since his own thinking is faulty he cannot see the Atonement for himself, or he would have no need of charity.

RAJ: Indeed.

Continue.

READER: The charity that is accorded him is both an acknowledgment that he needs help, and a recognition that he will accept it.

RAJ: Okay. The last part of that sentence is key.

RAJ READING: ...and a recognition that he will accept it.

[Raj now reads the sentence from the beginning.]

RAJ READING: The charity that is accorded him is both an acknowledgment that he needs help, and a recognition that he will accept it.

RAJ: Now this might sound as though there is some degree of mental coercion here, and that is not what is meant. Because your experience of your Brother that has been revealed to you, and provided you the opportunity to extend it to him, which is what charity is, you also know as part of the whole package of the Gift you are extending, that it is natural and inevitable that he will recognize it for himself because it is the Truth about him, and he cannot forever remain unconscious of it. More than that, it's the awareness that his capacity to recognize it is full blown in the moment that the Gift is being made, and that it is impossible for him not to be blessed by the Gift that has been given in the moment that it is being given.

That doesn't mean that your Brother may not reject it, but it does mean that it's harder for him to reject it successfully. And it means that the Gift having been made, makes it easier for him to receive it.

You will find in the experience of the influx of the Gift that you are going to give, will be a confidence in the outcome of the Gift. And there will be no aspect of the Gift that will say, or intimate, or insinuate, "he'll never get it." His getting it is part and parcel of the extension of the Gift. And so you can expect to see a miracle.

Continue.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Can I make a comment?

RAJ: Microphone.

Virginia. [probably indicating to Virginia to give the microphone to someone else]

SEEKER: Raj, in light of what you just said, when the Gift is given, it's becoming my experience that the attitude that prevails is that you are honoring the Dignity of your Brother. His worth.

RAJ: Absolutely. A Dignity derived from the Fact that God is All There Is to him.

SEEKER: I really feel that's important aspect of the feeling of honoring his Dignity, whatever is being presented.

RAJ: Yes. But, you do not want to approach it intellectually. You do not want to think, "I am confirming his Dignity."

That confirmation happens spontaneously in the movement of your having turned toward the Altar, having stood in receipt of the Father's Point of View that illuminates your mind about your Brother, causing you to spontaneously and thoughtlessly, without any thought process or thoughtful evaluation, embracing your Brother fully in the Clarity you're experiencing. That stands in full support of his Dignity.

Afterwards, you might talk about how you realized that what you were doing stood in full support of his Dignity. But I just don't want you to get hung up on thinking about it, or bringing thoughts about it into the process. Because inner illumination happens when you get out of the way, and are not disallowing it. And that Movement of Illumination has a life of its own that does it all.

SEEKER: It's a feeling.

RAJ: It is a feeling that is.

SEEKER: It derives from the feeling so it wouldn't be a thought.

RAJ: That's correct. Yes.

SEEKER: Well, I just want to confirm that feeling is honoring their Dignity.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: That's what I'm...

RAJ: Indeed.

ANOTHER SEEKER: May I? So we're relying on the spontaneity of the moment.

RAJ: Well, when you're not relying on yourself, spontaneity is what happens. So, no, you're not relying on something else called "spontaneity." When you stop blocking the Movement, it spontaneously happens because the Movement of God is Spontaneity Itself.

SEEKER: So this is different than being triggered by something and saying... and turning to the Altar and saying, "Father, how should I see this?" Or, "What is called for here?" And then listening. And then hearing what the proper response is. And then responding in that way. This is a different process that we're speaking of.

RAJ: It is...

SEEKER: The same thing.

RAJ: It is exactly that process.

SEEKER: Because see in the other one, there's thought involved. You're saying, "Uh oh. I'm triggered here." And I'm not going to fall into the ego's way of looking at it, so I'm going to turn to the Altar and just be quiet until I hear... and ask the Father, "Father, how should I respond here?" And then...

RAJ: How else could you approach the healing of a Brother?

SEEKER: Well, I'll give you an example. Tonight a fellow came up to me and paid me for the yoga class. And spontaneously I said, "If you can't afford this class, you just come. We're not going to be concerned with money here." And I have no idea where that came from. I mean it's like the guy's employed, you know, and he pulled out a twenty dollar bill. And it was just... it came... I don't know where it came from. It just came out. And afterwards I thought, "Where did that come from? What was that about?" There was no thinking about turning to the Altar and... it just came out of me.

So there's two different processes that I'm experiencing here.

Other times I run into a situation where I go “Yuck.” And I go wait a minute. And I go, “Father, how should I see this?” And then I can feel an infilling of Peace. And then either a response happens, or it doesn’t. It’s not like something has to be done. Sometimes nothing has to be done.

RAJ: Tonight you were in a state of undefendedness, and the movement occurred spontaneously. Yes.

SEEKER: All right. And the other time I’m defended and I have to...

RAJ: But the undefendedness is the same as facing the Altar.

SEEKER: I see.

RAJ: You see, the more willful you become, you might imagine that you’re standing on a circular piece of wood that has ball bearings underneath it so that the circular piece of wood can turn in a circular motion. And, when you are not being willful, you are facing the Altar. But when you become willful, the ball bearings begin to turn and your back starts turning toward the Altar. The more willful you are, the more your back is toward the Altar. And, of course, there is no opportunity for spontaneity.

SEEKER: So in the second example, I’m defended and that’s what makes me go “yuck.” And then so I turn to the Altar purposefully to release the defensiveness, and then I wait for the answer.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: There it goes. Okay. Thank you.

RAJ: Or if you are undefended, even momentarily, without any choice on your part to turn toward the Altar, you turn toward the Altar. And you are in a mode of receptivity. You are available, even though you’re not thinking of it consciously. Yes.

SEEKER: And that’s where charity is not necessary ‘cause then when you’re infilled completely by Love from the Altar, it just spontaneously comes out of you. And there’s... it’s not just... you don’t think of it as charity. It’s just... it’s just an...

RAJ: What we’re talking about has nothing to do with thinking at all. It doesn’t have anything to do about thinking about dignity. It isn’t about thinking about charity. But the extension of the Gift that you are infilled with because you were undefended is charity. And it is given to one that the ego would say is unworthy of the Gift, or one that the intellect would say is a gift beyond that one’s capacity to receive. But it’s all charity. And it’s not about thinking about charity at all.

SEEKER: Okay. Thank you.

READER: Both of these perceptions clearly imply their dependence on time, making it apparent that charity still lies within the limitations of this world.

RAJ: It's an accommodation, in other words, to the current mindsets, the current conditionings. But it's Love appearing in the language in which it can be recognized. It's still Real, even though the way it is appearing is an accommodation, we'll say, to the current ignorances.

Continue.

READER: I said before that only revelation transcends time.

RAJ: Indeed.

READER: The miracle, as an expression of charity, can only shorten it.

RAJ: Exactly. And the miracle will appear to occur in time. Let me put it this way. It will appear to occur in your dream without waking you up totally. But each time the miracle occurs, like the shake on the shoulder, it's possible that that shake is the one [snap of the fingers] that will get your attention away from your commitment to the dream enough to open up your eyes, and wonder where you are. And then realize where you are, and be so glad. You're Awake.

Continue.

READER: It must be understood, however, that whenever you offer a miracle to another, you are shortening the suffering of both of you.

RAJ: Indeed. In other words, you must realize that something has actually happened, that correction of some sort has occurred. And this is another reason that it's important not to think that you can be healed without the evidence of healing, or that you can become more Awake without having evidence of not being as asleep.

Continue.

READER: This corrects retroactively as well as progressively.

RAJ: Yes. That's what I meant when I said earlier that when you discover that what you thought you had done in your independence from the Father, you never did succeed in doing, and therefore you're not guilty of it, you will then become privy to What Really Was Going On all the time that you thought you were successfully distorting it into something else for which you probably will end up being guilty. So, as someone else said, "It expunges the material record." In other words, retroactively. It undoes your misperceptions. It undoes the misperceptions which you were committed to that kept you from seeing Reality/Creation occurring in your past. And What Was Really Occurring becomes immediately available to you unclouded by the misperceptions that you have held in memory.

Microphone.

ANOTHER SEEKER: This is how the dream disappears.

RAJ: Yes. You said, "And so it all dissolves."

SEEKER: They... it all dissolves from...

RAJ: But it doesn't dissolve. It's like having on a pair of glasses that have red lenses and looking at the page in your book here and seeing red paper. And you take the glasses off and you say, "Oh, my goodness! The paper isn't red anymore. It changed to white." No. It didn't. It never was red. It was in the perception. So, what dissolves is the misperception. The illusion doesn't dissolve because the illusion never was quote "physically present" unquote.

The only thing that is ever physically present is the Energy of Spirit identifying perfectly Creation as God Is Being It. That's the only thing that is ever quote "physically present" unquote. I say it that way so that you might understand that what you're calling "physical" isn't physical. It's purely Spiritual right now. It's purely the Energy of Spirit, which is the Presence of Love loving, and identified as that which causes God to be recognizable to Himself, and therefore to you.

So a material world isn't going to dissolve. The scales are going to fall from your eyes that caused you to see a material world right where the Kingdom of Heaven was, and filled with the Energy of Spirit, which is Love, identifying the Mind of God Infinitely and exquisitely and perfectly in identifiable form—meaning identifiable to the Mind that formed them, without ever ceasing to be the Energy of Spirit configured in a way that is recognizable and experienceable.

You have a dream at night and you wake up in the morning right in the middle of a dream. Did the dream dissolve? No. It wasn't a presence to dissolve.

Yes, you're getting it.

SEEKER: Because I, in reflecting in my life when I dream, when I wake up I can't remember what I dreamed. So if that's happening on a small scale here, [small laugh] this will be the big scale.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Indeed. You're getting it.

Well, this is where we will end for tonight. And we will meet again next Thursday.

And I will accommodate you, even though it's still the same old Eternity, and say to all of you, "Happy New Year."

AUDIENCE: [laughing] Happy New Year to you, too. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

A Course In Miracles reference pages)
Chapter 2 – THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT
Section – FEAR AND CONFLICT
First Edition – p. 25 / Second Edition – p. 29

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome.

The subject of the section we're in is "Fear and Conflict." And I just want to refresh everyone's mind about what we spoke of last week, and that is that when you turned your back to the Altar, when you looked outside of yourself rather than within, that act of turning your back on the Altar caused a disconnection from your Essential Being and your Sanity, with a capital "S". And that act itself was what caused every succeeding experience to be colored by fear.

Having conveniently forgotten that you turned your back on the Altar, you think that your fear is occasioned by what you are seeing. And so then, in order to get rid of the fear, you engage in trying to change the world out there, to change what you are seeing, when that won't negate the fear at all. The only thing that will negate the fear is what caused it. And what caused it was to turn your back on the Altar. So, let's keep this in mind as we proceed.

And we will start here.

READER: Fear is always a sign of strain, arising whenever what you want conflicts with what you do.

RAJ: Anybody not clear on what that means? I'm sure everyone has experienced the conflict between what they want and what they do. And many times you sacrifice your integrity by doing what you think you need to do, let us say, to survive, and then you live with the disturbance within you.

Continue.

READER: This situation arises in two ways: First, you can choose to do conflicting things, either simultaneously or successively. This produces conflicted behavior, which is intolerable to you because the part of the mind that wants to do something else is outraged. Second, you can behave as you think you should, but without entirely wanting to do so. This produces consistent behavior, but entails great strain.

RAJ: I'm not commenting here because this is utterly and simply, clear English.

Continue.

READER: In both cases, the mind and the behavior are out of accord, resulting in a situation in which you are doing what you do not wholly want to do. This arouses a sense of coercion that usually produces rage, and projection is likely to follow.

RAJ: Mind you, at the bottom line, what you are doing that is not consistent with what you want is being done because you have chosen to do it. That simple fact needs to be very clear. You haven't done it because of circumstances, even though you might project your decision and your action out there in order not to have to take responsibility for it.

But the fact is that you have said, you have defined the situation in such a way that you say to yourself, "I have no choice but to do what I don't want to do, and so I am going to do what I don't want to do." And many times, what you choose to do is not principled. And so, you're going against your very own principles and you feel coerced. Naturally you feel coerced by the circumstances to act inconsistently with your own integrity. And then, once you blame your circumstances, that is where you let your fear erupt and be expressed.

But you must not forget that the reason you are behaving the way you are behaving is because you have defined the situation such that, you say, "I have no other choice. My circumstances require me to be unprincipled. My circumstances require me to break the law. My circumstances require me to behave, let us say, in an ugly way because I am so frustrated by my circumstances." When the fact is that you are frustrated because you have defined the situation, and believed your definition, and said you have no other choice than to behave in a way that is upsetting to you.

If you remember that it's your definition and your choice, and that there are other definitions of what's going on available to you, then you will be empowered to make a change, and not be required to blame circumstances.

Continue.

READER: Whenever there is fear, it is because you have not made up your mind. Your mind is therefore split, and your behavior inevitably becomes erratic.

RAJ: That's called sitting on the fence.

Continue.

READER: Correcting at the behavioral level can shift the error from the first to the second type, but will not obliterate the fear.

RAJ: Why? Because the only thing that will obliterate the fear is to stop looking at everything all by yourself and giving it all the definitions you're giving it. Again, the only thing that will correct the fear is turning back to the Altar.

Continue.

READER: It is possible to reach a state in which you bring your mind under my guidance...

RAJ: Oh no! There it is again. Bring your thoughts under my Guidance. It's getting monotonous, isn't it? But what is getting monotonous is pure simplicity. It's reminding you that the answer isn't complicated. And when you reach for my Guidance, you are, in effect, turning back to the Altar. You are choosing not to be independent. You are choosing to join. Joining occurs as a result of your connection with the Altar in the middle of you.

Continue. Start the sentence over.

READER: It is possible to reach a state in which you bring your mind under my guidance without conscious effort, but this implies a willingness that you have not developed as yet. The Holy Spirit cannot ask more than you are willing to do. The strength to do comes from your undivided decision. There is no strain in doing God's Will as soon as you recognize that it is also your own.

RAJ: Now, the recognition that it is also your own, might not come until your distress caused by your insistence to look at everything by yourself has become so uncomfortable that you arrive at a point where you experience the meaning of the words, "There must be another way." You might not have the slightest idea what the other way is. But, when you arrive at that point, you face the option of abandoning your convictions and your willfulness, and reach out for help, which again is turning toward the Altar to break the isolation. There must be another way and you don't know what it is, but you know that you cannot persist in your commitment to looking at everything by yourself.

Continue.

READER: The lesson here is quite simple, but particularly apt to be overlooked. I will therefore repeat it, urging you to listen. Only your mind can produce fear.

RAJ: Let's emphasize the word "your." Only your mind can produce fear.

Continue.

READER: It does so whenever it is conflicted in what it wants, producing inevitable strain because wanting and doing are discordant. This can be corrected only by accepting a unified goal.

RAJ: Yes.

Continue.

READER: The first corrective step in undoing the error is to know first that the conflict is an expression of fear.

RAJ: Now this applies to any conflict of any kind.

Continue.

READER: Say to yourself that you must somehow have chosen not to love, or the fear could not have arisen. Then the whole process of correction becomes nothing more than a series of pragmatic steps in the larger process of accepting the Atonement as the remedy. These steps may be summarized in this way:

1. Know first that this is fear.

2. Fear arises from lack of love.

3. The only remedy for lack of love is perfect love.

4. Perfect love is the Atonement.

RAJ: And the Atonement is only available to you as an experience when you are willing to abandon what you are seeing as the world out there, and going within into the silence, and asking for help of God, of the Holy Spirit, of Me, of your Guide. It is one simple answer.

The biggest aspect of it is that you must be willing to set aside what seemed so all-fired important to you to be afraid of, to set aside all of the thoughts you have about it, to set aside all of the hurt feelings that you have about it, and to let your mind become still so that when you say "help" and you reach out and break the disconnection, you can hear and feel the response, the embrace, the Clarity, the Love that will infill you and re-inspire you to Love.

Continue.

READER: I have emphasized that the miracle, or the expression of Atonement, is always a sign of respect from the worthy to the worthy.

RAJ: Now, I would suggest that you not start this with you and someone else quote "in the world," but that you start this with yourself and with your Guide; yourself and with Me; yourself and with the Holy Spirit; yourself and with God. There will be less argument, less resistance from you if you will do this.

And the response you get will acknowledge your worthiness, and inspire the experience of your worthiness in you, and will then prepare you to turn to your Brother or Sister looking for, sending out the messengers for, that will come back to you and confirm to you your Brother's or Sister's worthiness, which will then set into motion the circumstances, the dynamics, that will allow your Brother or Sister to be inspired experientially with an experience of their own worth, and thereby have the capacity to recognize and acknowledge in you, your worth.

Continue.

READER: The recognition of this worth is re-established by the Atonement. It is obvious, then, that when you are afraid, you have placed yourself in a position where you need Atonement.

RAJ: That position is with your back to the Altar.

Continue.

READER: You have done something loveless, having chosen without love. This is precisely the situation for which the Atonement was offered. The need for the remedy inspired its establishment.

RAJ: Even more than that, the fact that it is impossible for you to become something you are not, established the fact that you must, sooner or later, remember that fact, so that everything that follows your having turned your back on the Altar, will serve to be that which will lead you to turn around once again. It's inevitable because What God Has Made cannot be undone.

Continue.

READER: The need for the remedy inspired its establishment. As long as you recognize only the need for the remedy, you will remain fearful. However, as soon as you accept the remedy, you have abolished the fear. This is how true healing occurs.

RAJ: Yes.

Pardon.

SEEKER: [in the background] Let's speak to that one moment.

RAJ: Someone has asked me to speak to that.

RAJ READING: As long as you recognize only the need for the remedy, you will remain fearful. However, as soon as you accept the remedy, you have abolished the fear.

RAJ: How many of you have had the experience of having a serious, frightening, upsetting, disturbing problem, and you do turn to God, or you do turn to your Guide or the Holy Spirit, and you pour out your heart, and you tell them what your problem is, and you go on, and on, and on, describing just how bad the situation is, what the dynamics are, what your best perception of the situation is, and you don't shut up long enough to hear the answer because you are so preoccupied with the problem and all of its multiplicity of dynamics? That's it in a nutshell. As long as you recognize only the need, as long as you will let only the need fill your mind even when you're asking for help, you will not be in a receptive mode to hear the answer.

So, be aware of the need, express the need briefly, and then shut up and listen. And listen as long as it takes to hear the answer. And if it doesn't come tonight, then your next free moment or your next free hour continue, and persist listening for the answer without rehearsing, and rehearsing, and rehearsing the problem. Devote yourself to the joining with the Father, or the Holy Spirit, expecting the answer.

Microphone.

SEEKER: With that in mind, the recommendation that you just gave to start with yourself rather than other individuals.

RAJ: Start with yourself and the Holy Spirit.

SEEKER: And the Holy Spirit.

RAJ: Rather than yourself and your fellowman.

SEEKER: I see. Right.

Whereas so much of conflict can come from a result of relationship. Someone else pushing your button. Holy Spirit using your Brother to push your button. And you're trying to understand it, or one is trying to understand it. The need is there, but the complexity... I'm not sure I'm being clear. When in relationship, conflict can be more prevalent, appropriately dealt with, or brought to surface. To back away from that and just look at your own fears. The fear of attack. The fear of lack of love.

RAJ: No! No! No! I didn't say to bring your attention to yourself and your psychology. I told you to bring your attention to the Father, bring your attention to the Holy Spirit. Bring your attention to someone other than the one you're having problem with. In other words, bring your attention to someone whom you do not have to be defended against so that you might become defenseless.

SEEKER: It's that separation, that dividing.

RAJ: Pardon.

SEEKER: That being in conflict. The stopping and saying, "I need to turn to my Guide."

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: And not engage in the rhetoric, as you explain it. It's that fear of attack which I know the Course... or the experience of perceived attack that I believe makes this simple thing not easy.

RAJ: That is correct. But perceived attack is the only way you can see any part of the Kingdom of Heaven when you are looking at it all by yourself.

SEEKER: Because if you are facing the Altar, in touch, then you will not misperceive the misperceived attack.

RAJ: You will not misperceive an attack where there is none. And you will see What Is Really There. And the Vision of What Is Really There that is provided to you, will cause you to behave with Love in that direction, which is the Atonement.

SEEKER: I'm working with the perceived attack.

RAJ: That's the problem.

SEEKER: I'm trying to separate from that. Is there any...

RAJ: You separate from it by withdrawing your attention from it, and redirecting your attention to the Altar within, to the Holy Spirit, to Me. You arrive at a point where you say to yourself, "It is less important to me to defend myself against the attack than to be in communion with a Brother whose Spirit and Presence will fill me with the experience of my Invulnerability, the experience of my Divinity, the experience of my utter safety, so that I might completely abandon the use of fear. And so that I might completely abandon any inclination to attack in defense of myself." You see? So that then you might be in a spontaneous, inspired frame of mind to behave in a new way with this one you had seen as attacking you.

And if indeed this Brother or Sister who you had seen as attacking you, if indeed he or she was behaving out of fear as well, your benign Presence and the Gift of Love that you bring to him or her, will lay the groundwork for them to feel safe enough to abandon their fear as well, and have the situation transformed.

SEEKER: And that's Reality. That is the purpose of the moment.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Is that correct?

RAJ: That is correct.

It is utterly simple. It only seems difficult because you are so convinced of the way you are perceiving things, having forgotten that everything you perceive will be perceived improperly as long as you are looking at it all alone, having your back to the Altar. So, no apparent threat that you experience is valid. It is the inevitable result of having said, "Father, I'd rather look at it myself. Father, I would rather look at it all by myself. Father, I'd rather look at and determine for myself what it is." You see?

SEEKER: I understand. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

ANOTHER SEEKER: That's a big statement that shocks the sensibilities: No apparent threat is valid.

RAJ: Thank God someone is saying it.

SEEKER: So in any situation where I think I'm being attacked, I'm wrong? In any situation...

RAJ: Lets put it this way. In any situation where you think hate is being expressed, you are wrong. As the Course says, everything that's happening is either Love, or a call for Love. So when you see attack, what you... What Is Really Going On is a call for Love.

What Is Really Going On is a request for someone to see that the fear that is motivating the attack is invalid, and the desire to feel and know that it is invalid. The behavior seems to call for defense, but what will solve the problem of the apparent attack is a Presence of fearlessness, a Presence of Peace, the Presence of Love that conveys one way or another that the behavior is not frightening. And therefore, your Brother is not frightening, even though he is behaving in a way that is attempting to engender fear.

SEEKER: So the proper response to an apparent threat is to deny the validity of that apparent threat.

RAJ: Indeed. You deny it and you go within and ask to be filled with the appropriate response... the appropriate response to the call for Love. In other words, the form of Love that will completely obliterate the fear that has engendered an aggressive act, a show of hate.

Anyone who is expressing hate is experiencing a severe lack of self-appreciation, of self-worth, a complete lack of his or her being lovable. And the attack is a completely distorted way of saying, "Look at me. I am better than I think I am. I am better than I think the world thinks I am. I do not deserve to be suffering like this." But those kinds of intelligent words aren't what come out. What comes out is hateful words expressed toward you, distress with you, slanders on your character.

But if you are able to stand there recognizing, because you've turned toward the Altar, that this is a call for Love, and you are at the very least unmoved by the behavior, still in your peace, you have conveyed silently something extremely important to the person in such a great state of fear that he would ask for help through an act of hate. And that is that who he is, and how he is feeling, and how he is behaving, is not disturbing to you, and therefore maybe, because you aren't confirming his awfulness to him, maybe there's another way to look at himself in which he isn't awful. And the moment [snap of the fingers] a glimmer of that occurs within him, he is able to abandon his commitment to his conviction that he has justification for fear, and communication can open. And when you continue to be the Presence of calm Intelligence and Love, and he feels your benign-ness, he is able to relax and, you might say, warm up to you.

So, does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So, taking this just a little bit further, so okay, we're like we're doing it with the Holy Spirit, and we're doing it one-on-one with people who want to attack us. Let's say you're in a group of people and they are attacking one another, or that's what it's looking like to me, so I have to go and turn toward the Altar and try to, you know, be in my Peace. Right? [laughing] That's really hard to do.

And even when I do that, sometimes it really feels like I'm not making any difference, or contributing in any way to these people that I care about a lot, who I'm seeing having distress with one another.

RAJ: Well, one way in which you are helping is that out of the group of people, there is one fewer of that group contributing to the insanity. And by your withdrawal of your participation, it's that much more difficult for everyone else to maintain the chaos.

Now, you don't do this so that you can have control and make a healing happen. You do it because you are remembering your Function, even if everyone else has not remembered theirs. It's that simple.

SEEKER: It's a really different way to be with people than we've been with people, though. I mean I feel like it's kind of like to be like with you first, and like receiving your tone, kind of. And, but, sometimes to people it looks like you don't give a shit, or, you know, you're withdrawing, or, you know, you're not playing with them the way you used to, or...

RAJ: That is correct. And you must...

SEEKER: [laughing] And then they really try to get you in.

RAJ: Yes. And you must... you must understand what's happening and let them go through their withdrawal pains, if you want to call it that—the experience of not having you as their drug of choice that continues their misperceptions.

SEEKER: I guess I... I guess it brings up a lot of feelings of inadequacy of how to answer the call for Love, I guess.

RAJ: That's because everyone who is engaged in attacking each other is feeling a sense of potential power in converting and changing the other. And what you are doing is not being done for the purpose of changing anyone. And so, because you've just stepped out of that arena of the exertion of power for the purpose of changing each other, it feels like you have moved into a place of powerlessness.

But you have moved into a place of what I'm going to call Infinite Groundedness. And as each one of you makes that choice to be in that place of Infinite Groundedness, you provide what I'm going to call a leverage against the dream that far exceeds the little bit of willingness that you were able to bring to the process. Because what you find yourself joined with is Infinite.

SEEKER: I think sometimes I have wanted them to change, though.

RAJ: Pardon.

SEEKER: I think sometimes I have wanted them to change, and that's probably what I'm wrestling with it. Right? It's kind of like you turn toward the Altar and you feel that kind of Groundedness and Infinite... like you're saying. And then you turn back and see all this chaos. So, try to muck around in it, change them, say a few good things. That doesn't work. You know, it's kind of this...

RAJ: And since you're moving out of an arena in which changing each other is the modus operandi, it's easy to think that turning to the Altar is a new and better way to change everyone.

SEEKER: [laughs] Right.

RAJ: And when that doesn't happen, you wonder what has gone wrong.

Remember, the more who are Awake, the more difficult it is for those who are asleep to continue dreaming dreams. And so it might not seem immediately rewarding in the larger picture to have made the choice for your Peace, to have returned to your Function, and to do it because it simply is your Divine Function, and not because of some power it gives you to be a force for good in the illusion. You see?

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj, turning to the Altar also means surrendering in that moment. And in surrendering, we join. And then by joining...

RAJ: Well, joining is you surrendering your autonomy. Yes.

SEEKER: Okay. Okay. Right. But I mean, they are one and the same?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And in the Course it also says, and this really hit me hard, is that anything that we perceive lacking in any situation is what we haven't brought to the situation. And so that goes along with what we're talking about here. And so joining, or turning to the Altar, means that not only do we surrender, but that we trust that God is in charge of the situation.

RAJ: Surrender doesn't occur without trust.

SEEKER: Okay. All right. That's a good point because they have to be all combined here.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And I also remember you stating that if—and I think it was last week—but I wasn't here to hear it, but I heard it, but I read it—that if we would allow you to control, to guide us in all that is meaningful, you will take care of all that is meaningless.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: So that would apply in this kind of a situation.

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: And so trusting that the Holy Spirit is in charge also means that the Holy Spirit is in charge in the other person, too.

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: Well, I'm just clarifying how this works.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: So it's very important to trust. Surrender.

RAJ: Yes. That is the element of charity that was discussed last week. Because charity acknowledges that another is further ahead than where their behavior indicates they are.

SEEKER: Ah. You are appealing to the best in them. Or you're addressing the highest in them.

RAJ: You are acknowledging the highest in them. When you acknowledge that the Holy Spirit is in charge of them as well, you are acknowledging something that is apparently beyond their present sense of themselves, and beyond what their behavior is indicating their point of growth is. So yes.

Now mind you, we're not talking about an intellectual acknowledgement of the Holy Spirit being in charge. Because when you turn to the Altar and you are infilled with the Father's Love, you know that the Holy Spirit is in charge of them, that the Father's Love is embracing them as well. What you find yourself knowing about yourself, you know is utterly True about your Brother, and so you are acknowledging a point they don't seem to have grown to yet. And that is charity.

SEEKER: So what they observe is you in your Peace, in your unruffled attitude, and in your confidence in them.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And then you take care of all that's meaningless.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Okay. Thank you.

RAJ: And you won't know what is meaningless until you've taken these steps.

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Okay, I took some of the things you said last week and kind of twisted them all around. But it seems to be really working for me. So I was thinking that what I'm doing here is taking the world of form, these things I'm seeing with my eyes, and I'm substituting those things for What's Real. And by thinking that that's what's real—this person attacking me, all this stuff—I'm giving life to it with my mind.

Now have I wandered down off the track again?

RAJ: No. That is quite correct.

SEEKER: Okay. So...

RAJ: What you've given life to is your misperception.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Right, by believing this hideous person is being an idiot.

Because I've been stopping some of that and noticing some of these people are really nice after all. [laughing] So it's really working for me. And I can see from what you're saying that I really need to spend more time asking to see What Is Real. I'm kind of stuck. Part of me is really, really glad to just let go, and know that what I'm not seeing What's Real. But then, like you said, I want to see something really great happen. And sometimes nothing really happens, and it's like, "Oh, well." I don't know what my question is. Never mind.

RAJ: Well, it's a wonderful starting point to say, "what I'm seeing isn't Real," because that makes it clear to you that you don't know What It Is.

SEEKER: Exactly.

RAJ: And if you don't know What It Is, you can't help but have a curiosity begin to form as to What It Is. And so, sooner or later, you are going to arrive at the point where that curiosity has grown enough for it to be felt by you, and you'll say, "Oh, well okay. I got a certain amount of relief from existing in a world that I was seeing that isn't Real. And I have a certain amount of peace from no longer reacting to it. But I'm sort of in a limbo here. I'm not being terribly disturbed by anything anymore, but everything is still rather meaningless. And if it isn't Real, if the way I'm seeing it is not True, then what is really going on?" And that's where the invitation for an infilling from a Source beyond your best judgments occurs, and you are no longer isolated. And that's where the shift in perception begins to happen; the miracle. So take it all the way.

SEEKER: Yeah. I'll work on that part, 'cause the other part has been kind of fun.

RAJ: Play with that part. Don't work on it. Have fun with that part.

SEEKER: I'm too serious.

RAJ: Have fun with both parts. Do them lightly, but do them.

SEEKER: [laughs] Yes sir. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

Okay, let's... one more question.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I just want to try and bring this all full circle for me. Fear originates in my mind, as you said the emphasis being upon your mind here.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: That is where fear originates.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Now, and feeling fearful is never valid, and seeing threat is never valid.

Now, I usually think I see threat when I presume that my Brother is acting fearful. So I think I see fear in my Brother and I interpret that as threat to myself, but the fear cannot be in my Brother because the fear is within my mind. And by assuming that my Brother is acting fearfully, instead of acting as a result of his Guidance of the Holy Spirit, is what makes the invalid image of threat seem real to me?

RAJ: No. Your Brother may well be feeling fear. And his behavior may well be stemming from the fear he is experiencing, because he has his back to the Altar. Whether or not his behavior based on his fear creates fear in you, depends on whether you have your back to the Altar.

SEEKER: And not acknowledging that he and I are both just puppets, and there is no will that opposes God that would be threatening to me?

RAJ: What I want everyone to be careful of is theoretical or intellectual acknowledgements.

You can make that educated acknowledgement about your Brother, but it will lack the unction of Love that comes from having turned toward the Altar yourself, and having been infilled with the Father's Love yourself that constitutes the Gift that you will spontaneously extend to your Brother, because you can't contain it yourself. And thereby, you might say, declare that the two of you are incapable of being governed by fear. You see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: At this point, yes. I think we'll go further when we have a chance.

RAJ: Your employment of fear cannot cause your Brother to behave in an attack mode. Your Brothers and Sisters are not the puppet of your misperception.

SEEKER: And there is no will in opposition to God's.

RAJ: That is absolutely correct.

SEEKER: And when I presume threat, I'm thinking that there is a will in opposition to God's that is obviously guiding my Brother in his threat towards me.

RAJ: And you wouldn't do that if you were not asserting a will of your own by not being connected to the Altar.

SEEKER: Yes. And so again, feeling threat or seeing fear should be utilized as a reminder that I have turned away from the Altar. And if I utilize the reminder to turn back to the Altar, the feeling of threat and the fear will disappear into the vaporous nothingness that it ever was.

RAJ: Yes. And you will look at your Brother who may still be behaving on the basis of his severe fear, and you will know how to be the presence that alleviates it.

SEEKER: Respond appropriately because I did turn to the Altar to see what would be appropriate.

RAJ: Exactly. Exactly.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: It's very important to understand that no one and no thing in your world becomes the puppet of your misperceptions. So when someone else is behaving poorly, you cannot say, "Well. It's my fault. I'm perceiving it." No.

When you turn to the Altar and you are warmed by the Glow of Love that is the Father's Love being the very Fire of You—because ultimately the Fire in the Altar, the Light in the Altar, is your Essential Being—in turning to that, it doesn't eradicate your Brother's ignorance. And you will still see a call for Love. But you will see it as a call for Love, and you will respond with Love. And the response with Love is what will be transformational, is what will be the trigger for the miracle.

So your Brothers and Sisters are never acting out your dream. You are not responsible for your Brother's poor behavior. But your poor response to his poor behavior is your responsibility to correct. Because your poor response will confirm his poor response. And it will be the blind leading the blind and falling into the ditch.

SEEKER: So if I react fearful to my perception of his fearful threat to me, then what we have just done is created a mutually-agreed-upon definition.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: I got it.

RAJ: And then you will defend yourselves against each other, and confirm that mutually-agreed-upon definition even more completely.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: You have it.

Okay, let's continue.

Oh.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Okay, we've got I'm going to assume that, if we could, we chose to always face the Altar and we are calling for this infilling Love and Peace. And we're going through our day, and a Brother comes up with what we perceive as an attack, and we're hooked. We're turned from the Altar. That's the dynamics.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Could we talk...

RAJ: That's one of the possibilities. Yes.

SEEKER: Okay. But, you know, providing that we all have a little willingness, and we all want to do what we're asked to do, and we're.... okay so we're mind set, body set, you know. We're going through our day peaceful, and all of a sudden "bam!" You know, we're hooked. And we're obviously jerked from the Altar. Help us at that moment.

RAJ: Remember you jerk yourself away from the Altar.

SEEKER: Well, okay. All right. Yes. Is that... but we have the willingness. We have the intent. We have the knowing. And we're still pulled. Okay.

RAJ: That's okay.

SEEKER: Or we're hooked or something. But what I'm trying to say...

RAJ: It is a well established habit.

SEEKER: I understand.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: But most of us are hooked faster than we can count to ten.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Okay. Before we can realize it, because of our ignorance, or our habit, or whatever you...

RAJ: Yes [??].

SEEKER: So, and we don't have time to sit down and listen right at that moment. We could take time if we didn't get hooked, you know. So help us with that moment. That the willingness has not gone away. The wanting has not gone away. The behavior has not gone away. It's that we're hooked! So is there some insight you can give to us to say, "Respond I love you." Or respond, you know, is there a way we can see it another way faster than we are now?

RAJ: Only through practice.

It's like doing a meditation and you say your mantra, and somewhere along the line you start thinking a thought. And at some point you realize, "Oh, I'm not saying my mantra." And you go back to your mantra. You let the thought go 'til after your meditation and you get back to your mantra. The more you meditate, the less frequently thoughts arise, and when they do arise, the more quickly you recognize that you've lost the mantra and return to it. Through practice, the length of time it takes from when you are suddenly caught off-guard to the point where you recognize that you are caught off-guard, that will shorten.

There's no way to get around the fact that the call for a change in your experience will require you to stop and take a moment, or take a few moments, to choose for your Peace again. There is some point in the vigorous interchange where you are actually going to have to stop participating in it, even if you have to say, "Excuse me. I've got to go to the lavatory."

SEEKER: That's the shortening.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: The engagement. We may continue the engagement. We're going to recognize it sooner. We shouldn't start from the expectation that we're going to recognize it and therefore it's not going to happen.

RAJ: Yes. You're going to have to break the pattern somehow. And another way it might be is that you will say right to the person you're in this vigorous interchange with, "Wait a minute. I've lost my perspective here. Just a moment, because I don't choose to proceed in this fashion because it's not getting us to the solution."

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] That'll mess up a good fight.
[audience laughter]

RAJ: Someone said, "Ah, that'll mess up a good fight." [audience laughter]
Ah, yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] May I just say one more thing?

RAJ: You will have to... you will have to. I don't mean... you will have to almost physically take the moment to stop what you're engaged in, to become still enough to make a new choice, and proceed with what is really going to contribute to resolution.

EARLIER SEEKER: [in the background] I was trying to do it before I got hooked, but getting hooked and then not pursuing it seems a little more valuable.

RAJ: Oh. Say it one more time.

SEEKER: [with the mic now] Okay. I was trying to not get hooked. But what you've said is I'm going to get hooked, but I don't have to maintain that hookedness. That's where the diminished effort... the destructive will diminish.

RAJ: That's correct.

SEEKER: Okay. I think that's very important that...

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: We come as...

RAJ: If you are used to thinking, which all of you are, when you start meditating, when you start learning meditation, you find that it's very hard to not think for any length of time, just because that's the prevailing habit. But in your persistence in meditating, you arrive at a point where you have longer and longer periods of silence—something you never dreamed was a possible experience.

SEEKER: I think... yeah. Thank you.

RAJ: In the process of learning, you can't afford to criticize yourself for thinking. Thinking is going to happen because it's the prevailing habit.

Getting hooked is going to happen because defense is the prevailing habit. It's the inevitable habit of being when your back is turned toward the Altar, and the Kingdom of Heaven looks as though it has no Source and is all happenstance. And because it's happenstance, it's not dependable. And because it's not dependable, it's potentially threatening to your well-being. Therefore, existence is an ongoing state of defense. You see?

So it's the prevailing habit. And as you begin to break it, it's going to hook you. So you say, "Okay." And then you take each time you're hooked as the opportunity to choose once again, instead of just playing it out to the bitter end. And then you take whatever moments it takes to actually shift gears. And you do it because you know, and you will know more and more clearly as you do this, because you know that in not playing out the old habit of defense, you actually come to resolutions. It's productive, you might say. And it's therefore totally reasonable to engage in what is productive where everyone benefits.

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj, I want to point out something that as I've experienced. And that is if I meditate, I have noticed if and after, if an attack comes, it doesn't penetrate. It's like there's an invisible shield. But if I hesitate too long and think about what I think I'm perceiving, then, oh, I'm hooked. But there is a moment there where there is a shield.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Where it bounces off.

RAJ: It's similar to if you've had a lack of sleep, your temper is shorter than when you're well rested. Yes.

SEEKER: So I found that is really vitally important in helping break these habits.

RAJ: And so, the practice of meditation on a regular basis can enhance your restedness, your...

SEEKER: The pause.

RAJ: ...your centeredness, so that the shield, as it were, the decreased inclination to react can be enjoyed more. Yes.

SEEKER: Yeah. I think that's really important. A really important point. Thanks.

RAJ: It is a valuable tool. Yes.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Taking five or ten minutes to be with your Guide has the same wonderful benefit.

Okay. Let us continue.

READER: Everyone experiences fear. Yet it would take very little right-thinking to realize why fear occurs. Few appreciate the real power of the mind, and no one remains fully aware of it all the time. However, if you hope to spare yourself from fear there are some things you must realize, and realize fully. The mind is very powerful, and never loses its creative force. It never sleeps. Every instant it is creating. It is hard to recognize that thought and belief combine into a power surge that can literally move mountains.

RAJ: Now let's stop there.

RAJ READING: The mind is very powerful, and never loses its creative force.

RAJ: What I want you not to get hooked on is the word "creative," because creative is so closely aligned with Creation, and all of you, your egos, love the idea of becoming co-creators with God.

As you read this:

RAJ READING: The mind is very powerful, and never loses its creative force.

RAJ: Think of "creative" in terms of there being a manifestation. So, you become fearful and your heart begins to race. Ah! Something physical. Something measurable. Your Mind has had an effect that is measurable. There has been a manifestation of the fear.

I'll tell you something though. Fear cannot create for its defense. Let's put it this way. The use of fear in your mind for the purpose of defense, cannot cause a gun or a knife to manifest on the table in front of you for you to protect yourself with. So, creativeness, creation, which would be the case if a gun or a knife appeared on the table that hadn't been there before, creation of that sort is not what this is referring to.

Understand that your Mind is always having an effect. What you're thinking is always having an effect.

And, when you choose for your Peace and you let it in and you feel it, your heart beat slows down. Your blood pressure drops. Physically your body begins to function more efficiently. There is an effect. In that sense it is creative. We're talking about that there is always a Manifestation of your Mind.

Continue.

READER: It appears at first glance that to believe such power about yourself is arrogant, but that is not the real reason you do not believe it. You prefer to believe that your thoughts cannot exert real influence because you are actually afraid of them. This may allay awareness of the guilt, but at the cost of perceiving the mind as impotent. If you believe that what you think is ineffectual you may cease to be afraid of it, but you are hardly likely to respect it. There are no idle thoughts. All thinking produces form at some level.

RAJ: Indeed. It produces form by affecting form.

RAJ READING: If you believe that what you think is ineffectual you may cease to be afraid of it, but you are hardly likely to respect it.

Nevertheless, he is afraid of being of what it would mean to be the focal point for that kind of meaningfulness. So in effect, he is afraid of joining with me completely because it would constitute a joining with all of you completely that would have a profound effect, which would naturally be an Experience of the Atonement and would therefore be utterly beneficial for everyone involved. But then, as his ego perceives it, that would be a matter of being extremely influential. And he is not totally aware of the devotion which is part of his mutually-agreed-upon definitions to everyone's right to make their own discoveries for themselves without help.

And yet, inconsistent as it is, he is willing to do it from time to time, for an hour and a half every Thursday night, and perhaps six hours two days in a row once a month, knowing that there is blessing involved. But I will tell you... and I am sharing this with you because this isn't so different from everyone's fear, and one of the reasons every single one of you choose to remain tiny and never really know the Truth. Because discussing what the truth might be and debating it and rolling all of the possibilities over in your mind is so invigorating, and saves you from having to be significant yourselves. He doesn't mind doing it occasionally, but he knows that if he makes commitment to me, to the Altar, totally, it will be like going from one cylinder on a 16-cylinder engine to all sixteen cylinders. [audience amused] So I use him as an example for his elucidation as well as yours.

You really do all use fear as a way of avoiding being the significant Presence of God that you are, if you would just let God in completely. And that's what the Atonement is about.

Yes. Microphone.

SEEKER: Just for the benefit of all of us about being at the Altar all the time, or Paul making commitment, or any of us making commitment, isn't it a lie though that we would be the focal point? Isn't it that really the Kingdom would be the focal point? We'd just be the space where it happens.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: 'Cause that's the fear. It's going to be all about me, or I'm going to get it, or I don't know, you know. But it's personal.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And that the devotion itself undoes that whole personal issue. It's just not where my focus would be anymore.

RAJ: That is correct. Again, it's because the personal sense each of you has of yourself is the prevailing habit that you will be emerging from. And so your feelings about your tininess tend to be carried over in your imagination about the Experience of being Whole. All of you have your little places you get hooked. The necessity is to persist anyway. And that Paul does.

And this is where we will end for tonight. Thank you.

AUDIENCE: Thank you. Thank you very much.

RAJ: You are welcome.

Chapter 2 – THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT
Section – FEAR AND CONFLICT
First Edition – p. 25 / Second Edition – p. 29

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome.

The subject of the section we're in is "Fear and Conflict." And I just want to refresh everyone's mind about what we spoke of last week, and that is that when you turned your back to the Altar, when you looked outside of yourself rather than within, that act of turning your back on the Altar caused a disconnection from your Essential Being and your Sanity, with a capital "S". And that act itself was what caused every succeeding experience to be colored by fear.

Having conveniently forgotten that you turned your back on the Altar, you think that your fear is occasioned by what you are seeing. And so then, in order to get rid of the fear, you engage in trying to change the world out there, to change what you are seeing, when that won't negate the fear at all. The only thing that will negate the fear is what caused it. And what caused it was to turn your back on the Altar. So, let's keep this in mind as we proceed.

And we will start here.

READER: Fear is always a sign of strain, arising whenever what you want conflicts with what you do.

RAJ: Anybody not clear on what that means? I'm sure everyone has experienced the conflict between what they want and what they do. And many times you sacrifice your integrity by doing what you think you need to do, let us say, to survive, and then you live with the disturbance within you.

Continue.

READER: This situation arises in two ways: First, you can choose to do conflicting things, either simultaneously or successively. This produces conflicted behavior, which is intolerable to you because the part of the mind that wants to do something else is outraged. Second, you can behave as you think you should, but without entirely wanting to do so. This produces consistent behavior, but entails great strain.

RAJ: I'm not commenting here because this is utterly and simply, clear English.

Continue.

READER: In both cases, the mind and the behavior are out of accord, resulting in a situation in which you are doing what you do not wholly want to do. This arouses a sense of coercion that usually produces rage, and projection is likely to follow.

RAJ: Mind you, at the bottom line, what you are doing that is not consistent with what you want is being done because you have chosen to do it. That simple fact needs to be very clear. You haven't done it because of circumstances, even though you might project your decision and your action out there in order not to have to take responsibility for it.

But the fact is that you have said, you have defined the situation in such a way that you say to yourself, "I have no choice but to do what I don't want to do, and so I am going to do what I don't want to do." And many times, what you choose to do is not principled. And so, you're going against your very own principles and you feel coerced. Naturally you feel coerced by the circumstances to act inconsistently with your own integrity. And then, once you blame your circumstances, that is where you let your fear erupt and be expressed.

But you must not forget that the reason you are behaving the way you are behaving is because you have defined the situation such that, you say, "I have no other choice. My circumstances require me to be unprincipled. My circumstances require me to break the law. My circumstances require me to behave, let us say, in an ugly way because I am so frustrated by my circumstances." When the fact is that you are frustrated because you have defined the situation, and believed your definition, and said you have no other choice than to behave in a way that is upsetting to you.

If you remember that it's your definition and your choice, and that there are other definitions of what's going on available to you, then you will be empowered to make a change, and not be required to blame circumstances.

Continue.

READER: Whenever there is fear, it is because you have not made up your mind. Your mind is therefore split, and your behavior inevitably becomes erratic.

RAJ: That's called sitting on the fence.

Continue.

READER: Correcting at the behavioral level can shift the error from the first to the second type, but will not obliterate the fear.

RAJ: Why? Because the only thing that will obliterate the fear is to stop looking at everything all by yourself and giving it all the definitions you're giving it. Again, the only thing that will correct the fear is turning back to the Altar.

Continue.

READER: It is possible to reach a state in which you bring your mind under my guidance...

RAJ: Oh no! There it is again. Bring your thoughts under my Guidance. It's getting monotonous, isn't it? But what is getting monotonous is pure simplicity. It's reminding you that the answer isn't complicated. And when you reach for my Guidance, you are, in effect, turning back to the Altar. You are choosing not to be independent. You are choosing to join. Joining occurs as a result of your connection with the Altar in the middle of you.

Continue. Start the sentence over.

READER: It is possible to reach a state in which you bring your mind under my guidance without conscious effort, but this implies a willingness that you have not developed as yet. The Holy Spirit cannot ask more than you are willing to do. The strength to do comes from your undivided decision. There is no strain in doing God's Will as soon as you recognize that it is also your own.

RAJ: Now, the recognition that it is also your own, might not come until your distress caused by your insistence to look at everything by yourself has become so uncomfortable that you arrive at a point where you experience the meaning of the words, "There must be another way." You might not have the slightest idea what the other way is. But, when you arrive at that point, you face the option of abandoning your convictions and your willfulness, and reach out for help, which again is turning toward the Altar to break the isolation. There must be another way and you don't know what it is, but you know that you cannot persist in your commitment to looking at everything by yourself.

Continue.

READER: The lesson here is quite simple, but particularly apt to be overlooked. I will therefore repeat it, urging you to listen. Only your mind can produce fear.

RAJ: Let's emphasize the word "your." Only your mind can produce fear.

Continue.

READER: It does so whenever it is conflicted in what it wants, producing inevitable strain because wanting and doing are discordant. This can be corrected only by accepting a unified goal.

RAJ: Yes.

Continue.

READER: The first corrective step in undoing the error is to know first that the conflict is an expression of fear.

RAJ: Now this applies to any conflict of any kind.

Continue.

READER: Say to yourself that you must somehow have chosen not to love, or the fear could not have arisen. Then the whole process of correction becomes nothing more than a series of pragmatic steps in the larger process of accepting the Atonement as the remedy. These steps may be summarized in this way:

1. Know first that this is fear.

2. Fear arises from lack of love.

3. The only remedy for lack of love is perfect love.

4. Perfect love is the Atonement.

RAJ: And the Atonement is only available to you as an experience when you are willing to abandon what you are seeing as the world out there, and going within into the silence, and asking for help of God, of the Holy Spirit, of Me, of your Guide. It is one simple answer.

The biggest aspect of it is that you must be willing to set aside what seemed so all-fired important to you to be afraid of, to set aside all of the thoughts you have about it, to set aside all of the hurt feelings that you have about it, and to let your mind become still so that when you say "help" and you reach out and break the disconnection, you can hear and feel the response, the embrace, the Clarity, the Love that will infill you and re-inspire you to Love.

Continue.

READER: I have emphasized that the miracle, or the expression of Atonement, is always a sign of respect from the worthy to the worthy.

RAJ: Now, I would suggest that you not start this with you and someone else quote "in the world," but that you start this with yourself and with your Guide; yourself and with Me; yourself and with the Holy Spirit; yourself and with God. There will be less argument, less resistance from you if you will do this.

And the response you get will acknowledge your worthiness, and inspire the experience of your worthiness in you, and will then prepare you to turn to your Brother or Sister looking for, sending out the messengers for, that will come back to you and confirm to you your Brother's or Sister's worthiness, which will then set into motion the circumstances, the dynamics, that will allow your Brother or Sister to be inspired experientially with an experience of their own worth, and thereby have the capacity to recognize and acknowledge in you, your worth.

Continue.

READER: The recognition of this worth is re-established by the Atonement. It is obvious, then, that when you are afraid, you have placed yourself in a position where you need Atonement.

RAJ: That position is with your back to the Altar.

Continue.

READER: You have done something loveless, having chosen without love. This is precisely the situation for which the Atonement was offered. The need for the remedy inspired its establishment.

RAJ: Even more than that, the fact that it is impossible for you to become something you are not, established the fact that you must, sooner or later, remember that fact, so that everything that follows your having turned your back on the Altar, will serve to be that which will lead you to turn around once again. It's inevitable because What God Has Made cannot be undone.

Continue.

READER: The need for the remedy inspired its establishment. As long as you recognize only the need for the remedy, you will remain fearful. However, as soon as you accept the remedy, you have abolished the fear. This is how true healing occurs.

RAJ: Yes.

Pardon.

SEEKER: [in the background] Let's speak to that one moment.

RAJ: Someone has asked me to speak to that.

RAJ READING: As long as you recognize only the need for the remedy, you will remain fearful. However, as soon as you accept the remedy, you have abolished the fear.

RAJ: How many of you have had the experience of having a serious, frightening, upsetting, disturbing problem, and you do turn to God, or you do turn to your Guide or the Holy Spirit, and you pour out your heart, and you tell them what your problem is, and you go on, and on, and on, describing just how bad the situation is, what the dynamics are, what your best perception of the situation is, and you don't shut up long enough to hear the answer because you are so preoccupied with the problem and all of its multiplicity of dynamics? That's it in a nutshell. As long as you recognize only the need, as long as you will let only the need fill your mind even when you're asking for help, you will not be in a receptive mode to hear the answer.

So, be aware of the need, express the need briefly, and then shut up and listen. And listen as long as it takes to hear the answer. And if it doesn't come tonight, then your next free moment or your next free hour continue, and persist listening for the answer without rehearsing, and rehearsing, and rehearsing the problem. Devote yourself to the joining with the Father, or the Holy Spirit, expecting the answer.

Microphone.

SEEKER: With that in mind, the recommendation that you just gave to start with yourself rather than other individuals.

RAJ: Start with yourself and the Holy Spirit.

SEEKER: And the Holy Spirit.

RAJ: Rather than yourself and your fellowman.

SEEKER: I see. Right.

Whereas so much of conflict can come from a result of relationship. Someone else pushing your button. Holy Spirit using your Brother to push your button. And you're trying to understand it, or one is trying to understand it. The need is there, but the complexity... I'm not sure I'm being clear. When in relationship, conflict can be more prevalent, appropriately dealt with, or brought to surface. To back away from that and just look at your own fears. The fear of attack. The fear of lack of love.

RAJ: No! No! No! I didn't say to bring your attention to yourself and your psychology. I told you to bring your attention to the Father, bring your attention to the Holy Spirit. Bring your attention to someone other than the one you're having problem with. In other words, bring your attention to someone whom you do not have to be defended against so that you might become defenseless.

SEEKER: It's that separation, that dividing.

RAJ: Pardon.

SEEKER: That being in conflict. The stopping and saying, "I need to turn to my Guide."

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: And not engage in the rhetoric, as you explain it. It's that fear of attack which I know the Course... or the experience of perceived attack that I believe makes this simple thing not easy.

RAJ: That is correct. But perceived attack is the only way you can see any part of the Kingdom of Heaven when you are looking at it all by yourself.

SEEKER: Because if you are facing the Altar, in touch, then you will not misperceive the misperceived attack.

RAJ: You will not misperceive an attack where there is none. And you will see What Is Really There. And the Vision of What Is Really There that is provided to you, will cause you to behave with Love in that direction, which is the Atonement.

SEEKER: I'm working with the perceived attack.

RAJ: That's the problem.

SEEKER: I'm trying to separate from that. Is there any...

RAJ: You separate from it by withdrawing your attention from it, and redirecting your attention to the Altar within, to the Holy Spirit, to Me. You arrive at a point where you say to yourself, "It is less important to me to defend myself against the attack than to be in communion with a Brother whose Spirit and Presence will fill me with the experience of my Invulnerability, the experience of my Divinity, the experience of my utter safety, so that I might completely abandon the use of fear. And so that I might completely abandon any inclination to attack in defense of myself." You see? So that then you might be in a spontaneous, inspired frame of mind to behave in a new way with this one you had seen as attacking you.

And if indeed this Brother or Sister who you had seen as attacking you, if indeed he or she was behaving out of fear as well, your benign Presence and the Gift of Love that you bring to him or her, will lay the groundwork for them to feel safe enough to abandon their fear as well, and have the situation transformed.

SEEKER: And that's Reality. That is the purpose of the moment.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Is that correct?

RAJ: That is correct.

It is utterly simple. It only seems difficult because you are so convinced of the way you are perceiving things, having forgotten that everything you perceive will be perceived improperly as long as you are looking at it all alone, having your back to the Altar. So, no apparent threat that you experience is valid. It is the inevitable result of having said, "Father, I'd rather look at it myself. Father, I would rather look at it all by myself. Father, I'd rather look at and determine for myself what it is." You see?

SEEKER: I understand. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

ANOTHER SEEKER: That's a big statement that shocks the sensibilities: No apparent threat is valid.

RAJ: Thank God someone is saying it.

SEEKER: So in any situation where I think I'm being attacked, I'm wrong? In any situation...

RAJ: Lets put it this way. In any situation where you think hate is being expressed, you are wrong. As the Course says, everything that's happening is either Love, or a call for Love. So when you see attack, what you... What Is Really Going On is a call for Love.

What Is Really Going On is a request for someone to see that the fear that is motivating the attack is invalid, and the desire to feel and know that it is invalid. The behavior seems to call for defense, but what will solve the problem of the apparent attack is a Presence of fearlessness, a Presence of Peace, the Presence of Love that conveys one way or another that the behavior is not frightening. And therefore, your Brother is not frightening, even though he is behaving in a way that is attempting to engender fear.

SEEKER: So the proper response to an apparent threat is to deny the validity of that apparent threat.

RAJ: Indeed. You deny it and you go within and ask to be filled with the appropriate response... the appropriate response to the call for Love. In other words, the form of Love that will completely obliterate the fear that has engendered an aggressive act, a show of hate.

Anyone who is expressing hate is experiencing a severe lack of self-appreciation, of self-worth, a complete lack of his or her being lovable. And the attack is a completely distorted way of saying, "Look at me. I am better than I think I am. I am better than I think the world thinks I am. I do not deserve to be suffering like this." But those kinds of intelligent words aren't what come out. What comes out is hateful words expressed toward you, distress with you, slanders on your character.

But if you are able to stand there recognizing, because you've turned toward the Altar, that this is a call for Love, and you are at the very least unmoved by the behavior, still in your peace, you have conveyed silently something extremely important to the person in such a great state of fear that he would ask for help through an act of hate. And that is that who he is, and how he is feeling, and how he is behaving, is not disturbing to you, and therefore maybe, because you aren't confirming his awfulness to him, maybe there's another way to look at himself in which he isn't awful. And the moment [snap of the fingers] a glimmer of that occurs within him, he is able to abandon his commitment to his conviction that he has justification for fear, and communication can open. And when you continue to be the Presence of calm Intelligence and Love, and he feels your benign-ness, he is able to relax and, you might say, warm up to you.

So, does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So, taking this just a little bit further, so okay, we're like we're doing it with the Holy Spirit, and we're doing it one-on-one with people who want to attack us. Let's say you're in a group of people and they are attacking one another, or that's what it's looking like to me, so I have to go and turn toward the Altar and try to, you know, be in my Peace. Right? [laughing] That's really hard to do.

And even when I do that, sometimes it really feels like I'm not making any difference, or contributing in any way to these people that I care about a lot, who I'm seeing having distress with one another.

RAJ: Well, one way in which you are helping is that out of the group of people, there is one fewer of that group contributing to the insanity. And by your withdrawal of your participation, it's that much more difficult for everyone else to maintain the chaos.

Now, you don't do this so that you can have control and make a healing happen. You do it because you are remembering your Function, even if everyone else has not remembered theirs. It's that simple.

SEEKER: It's a really different way to be with people than we've been with people, though. I mean I feel like it's kind of like to be like with you first, and like receiving your tone, kind of. And, but, sometimes to people it looks like you don't give a shit, or, you know, you're withdrawing, or, you know, you're not playing with them the way you used to, or...

RAJ: That is correct. And you must...

SEEKER: [laughing] And then they really try to get you in.

RAJ: Yes. And you must... you must understand what's happening and let them go through their withdrawal pains, if you want to call it that—the experience of not having you as their drug of choice that continues their misperceptions.

SEEKER: I guess I... I guess it brings up a lot of feelings of inadequacy of how to answer the call for Love, I guess.

RAJ: That's because everyone who is engaged in attacking each other is feeling a sense of potential power in converting and changing the other. And what you are doing is not being done for the purpose of changing anyone. And so, because you've just stepped out of that arena of the exertion of power for the purpose of changing each other, it feels like you have moved into a place of powerlessness.

But you have moved into a place of what I'm going to call Infinite Groundedness. And as each one of you makes that choice to be in that place of Infinite Groundedness, you provide what I'm going to call a leverage against the dream that far exceeds the little bit of willingness that you were able to bring to the process. Because what you find yourself joined with is Infinite.

SEEKER: I think sometimes I have wanted them to change, though.

RAJ: Pardon.

SEEKER: I think sometimes I have wanted them to change, and that's probably what I'm wrestling with it. Right? It's kind of like you turn toward the Altar and you feel that kind of Groundedness and Infinite... like you're saying. And then you turn back and see all this chaos. So, try to muck around in it, change them, say a few good things. That doesn't work. You know, it's kind of this...

RAJ: And since you're moving out of an arena in which changing each other is the modus operandi, it's easy to think that turning to the Altar is a new and better way to change everyone.

SEEKER: [laughs] Right.

RAJ: And when that doesn't happen, you wonder what has gone wrong.

Remember, the more who are Awake, the more difficult it is for those who are asleep to continue dreaming dreams. And so it might not seem immediately rewarding in the larger picture to have made the choice for your Peace, to have returned to your Function, and to do it because it simply is your Divine Function, and not because of some power it gives you to be a force for good in the illusion. You see?

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj, turning to the Altar also means surrendering in that moment. And in surrendering, we join. And then by joining...

RAJ: Well, joining is you surrendering your autonomy. Yes.

SEEKER: Okay. Okay. Right. But I mean, they are one and the same?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And in the Course it also says, and this really hit me hard, is that anything that we perceive lacking in any situation is what we haven't brought to the situation. And so that goes along with what we're talking about here. And so joining, or turning to the Altar, means that not only do we surrender, but that we trust that God is in charge of the situation.

RAJ: Surrender doesn't occur without trust.

SEEKER: Okay. All right. That's a good point because they have to be all combined here.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And I also remember you stating that if—and I think it was last week—but I wasn't here to hear it, but I heard it, but I read it—that if we would allow you to control, to guide us in all that is meaningful, you will take care of all that is meaningless.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: So that would apply in this kind of a situation.

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: And so trusting that the Holy Spirit is in charge also means that the Holy Spirit is in charge in the other person, too.

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: Well, I'm just clarifying how this works.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: So it's very important to trust. Surrender.

RAJ: Yes. That is the element of charity that was discussed last week. Because charity acknowledges that another is further ahead than where their behavior indicates they are.

SEEKER: Ah. You are appealing to the best in them. Or you're addressing the highest in them.

RAJ: You are acknowledging the highest in them. When you acknowledge that the Holy Spirit is in charge of them as well, you are acknowledging something that is apparently beyond their present sense of themselves, and beyond what their behavior is indicating their point of growth is. So yes.

Now mind you, we're not talking about an intellectual acknowledgement of the Holy Spirit being in charge. Because when you turn to the Altar and you are infilled with the Father's Love, you know that the Holy Spirit is in charge of them, that the Father's Love is embracing them as well. What you find yourself knowing about yourself, you know is utterly True about your Brother, and so you are acknowledging a point they don't seem to have grown to yet. And that is charity.

SEEKER: So what they observe is you in your Peace, in your unruffled attitude, and in your confidence in them.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And then you take care of all that's meaningless.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Okay. Thank you.

RAJ: And you won't know what is meaningless until you've taken these steps.

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Okay, I took some of the things you said last week and kind of twisted them all around. But it seems to be really working for me. So I was thinking that what I'm doing here is taking the world of form, these things I'm seeing with my eyes, and I'm substituting those things for What's Real. And by thinking that that's what's real—this person attacking me, all this stuff—I'm giving life to it with my mind.

Now have I wandered down off the track again?

RAJ: No. That is quite correct.

SEEKER: Okay. So...

RAJ: What you've given life to is your misperception.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Right, by believing this hideous person is being an idiot.

Because I've been stopping some of that and noticing some of these people are really nice after all. [laughing] So it's really working for me. And I can see from what you're saying that I really need to spend more time asking to see What Is Real. I'm kind of stuck. Part of me is really, really glad to just let go, and know that what I'm not seeing What's Real. But then, like you said, I want to see something really great happen. And sometimes nothing really happens, and it's like, "Oh, well." I don't know what my question is. Never mind.

RAJ: Well, it's a wonderful starting point to say, "what I'm seeing isn't Real," because that makes it clear to you that you don't know What It Is.

SEEKER: Exactly.

RAJ: And if you don't know What It Is, you can't help but have a curiosity begin to form as to What It Is. And so, sooner or later, you are going to arrive at the point where that curiosity has grown enough for it to be felt by you, and you'll say, "Oh, well okay. I got a certain amount of relief from existing in a world that I was seeing that isn't Real. And I have a certain amount of peace from no longer reacting to it. But I'm sort of in a limbo here. I'm not being terribly disturbed by anything anymore, but everything is still rather meaningless. And if it isn't Real, if the way I'm seeing it is not True, then what is really going on?" And that's where the invitation for an infilling from a Source beyond your best judgments occurs, and you are no longer isolated. And that's where the shift in perception begins to happen; the miracle. So take it all the way.

SEEKER: Yeah. I'll work on that part, 'cause the other part has been kind of fun.

RAJ: Play with that part. Don't work on it. Have fun with that part.

SEEKER: I'm too serious.

RAJ: Have fun with both parts. Do them lightly, but do them.

SEEKER: [laughs] Yes sir. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

Okay, let's... one more question.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I just want to try and bring this all full circle for me. Fear originates in my mind, as you said the emphasis being upon your mind here.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: That is where fear originates.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Now, and feeling fearful is never valid, and seeing threat is never valid.

Now, I usually think I see threat when I presume that my Brother is acting fearful. So I think I see fear in my Brother and I interpret that as threat to myself, but the fear cannot be in my Brother because the fear is within my mind. And by assuming that my Brother is acting fearfully, instead of acting as a result of his Guidance of the Holy Spirit, is what makes the invalid image of threat seem real to me?

RAJ: No. Your Brother may well be feeling fear. And his behavior may well be stemming from the fear he is experiencing, because he has his back to the Altar. Whether or not his behavior based on his fear creates fear in you, depends on whether you have your back to the Altar.

SEEKER: And not acknowledging that he and I are both just puppets, and there is no will that opposes God that would be threatening to me?

RAJ: What I want everyone to be careful of is theoretical or intellectual acknowledgements.

You can make that educated acknowledgement about your Brother, but it will lack the unction of Love that comes from having turned toward the Altar yourself, and having been infilled with the Father's Love yourself that constitutes the Gift that you will spontaneously extend to your Brother, because you can't contain it yourself. And thereby, you might say, declare that the two of you are incapable of being governed by fear. You see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: At this point, yes. I think we'll go further when we have a chance.

RAJ: Your employment of fear cannot cause your Brother to behave in an attack mode. Your Brothers and Sisters are not the puppet of your misperception.

SEEKER: And there is no will in opposition to God's.

RAJ: That is absolutely correct.

SEEKER: And when I presume threat, I'm thinking that there is a will in opposition to God's that is obviously guiding my Brother in his threat towards me.

RAJ: And you wouldn't do that if you were not asserting a will of your own by not being connected to the Altar.

SEEKER: Yes. And so again, feeling threat or seeing fear should be utilized as a reminder that I have turned away from the Altar. And if I utilize the reminder to turn back to the Altar, the feeling of threat and the fear will disappear into the vaporous nothingness that it ever was.

RAJ: Yes. And you will look at your Brother who may still be behaving on the basis of his severe fear, and you will know how to be the presence that alleviates it.

SEEKER: Respond appropriately because I did turn to the Altar to see what would be appropriate.

RAJ: Exactly. Exactly.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: It's very important to understand that no one and no thing in your world becomes the puppet of your misperceptions. So when someone else is behaving poorly, you cannot say, "Well. It's my fault. I'm perceiving it." No.

When you turn to the Altar and you are warmed by the Glow of Love that is the Father's Love being the very Fire of You—because ultimately the Fire in the Altar, the Light in the Altar, is your Essential Being—in turning to that, it doesn't eradicate your Brother's ignorance. And you will still see a call for Love. But you will see it as a call for Love, and you will respond with Love. And the response with Love is what will be transformational, is what will be the trigger for the miracle.

So your Brothers and Sisters are never acting out your dream. You are not responsible for your Brother's poor behavior. But your poor response to his poor behavior is your responsibility to correct. Because your poor response will confirm his poor response. And it will be the blind leading the blind and falling into the ditch.

SEEKER: So if I react fearful to my perception of his fearful threat to me, then what we have just done is created a mutually-agreed-upon definition.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: I got it.

RAJ: And then you will defend yourselves against each other, and confirm that mutually-agreed-upon definition even more completely.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: You have it.

Okay, let's continue.

Oh.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Okay, we've got I'm going to assume that, if we could, we chose to always face the Altar and we are calling for this infilling Love and Peace. And we're going through our day, and a Brother comes up with what we perceive as an attack, and we're hooked. We're turned from the Altar. That's the dynamics.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Could we talk...

RAJ: That's one of the possibilities. Yes.

SEEKER: Okay. But, you know, providing that we all have a little willingness, and we all want to do what we're asked to do, and we're.... okay so we're mind set, body set, you know. We're going through our day peaceful, and all of a sudden "bam!" You know, we're hooked. And we're obviously jerked from the Altar. Help us at that moment.

RAJ: Remember you jerk yourself away from the Altar.

SEEKER: Well, okay. All right. Yes. Is that... but we have the willingness. We have the intent. We have the knowing. And we're still pulled. Okay.

RAJ: That's okay.

SEEKER: Or we're hooked or something. But what I'm trying to say...

RAJ: It is a well established habit.

SEEKER: I understand.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: But most of us are hooked faster than we can count to ten.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Okay. Before we can realize it, because of our ignorance, or our habit, or whatever you...

RAJ: Yes [??].

SEEKER: So, and we don't have time to sit down and listen right at that moment. We could take time if we didn't get hooked, you know. So help us with that moment. That the willingness has not gone away. The wanting has not gone away. The behavior has not gone away. It's that we're hooked! So is there some insight you can give to us to say, "Respond I love you." Or respond, you know, is there a way we can see it another way faster than we are now?

RAJ: Only through practice.

It's like doing a meditation and you say your mantra, and somewhere along the line you start thinking a thought. And at some point you realize, "Oh, I'm not saying my mantra." And you go back to your mantra. You let the thought go 'til after your meditation and you get back to your mantra. The more you meditate, the less frequently thoughts arise, and when they do arise, the more quickly you recognize that you've lost the mantra and return to it. Through practice, the length of time it takes from when you are suddenly caught off-guard to the point where you recognize that you are caught off-guard, that will shorten.

There's no way to get around the fact that the call for a change in your experience will require you to stop and take a moment, or take a few moments, to choose for your Peace again. There is some point in the vigorous interchange where you are actually going to have to stop participating in it, even if you have to say, "Excuse me. I've got to go to the lavatory."

SEEKER: That's the shortening.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: The engagement. We may continue the engagement. We're going to recognize it sooner. We shouldn't start from the expectation that we're going to recognize it and therefore it's not going to happen.

RAJ: Yes. You're going to have to break the pattern somehow. And another way it might be is that you will say right to the person you're in this vigorous interchange with, "Wait a minute. I've lost my perspective here. Just a moment, because I don't choose to proceed in this fashion because it's not getting us to the solution."

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] That'll mess up a good fight.
[audience laughter]

RAJ: Someone said, "Ah, that'll mess up a good fight." [audience laughter]
Ah, yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] May I just say one more thing?

RAJ: You will have to... you will have to. I don't mean... you will have to almost physically take the moment to stop what you're engaged in, to become still enough to make a new choice, and proceed with what is really going to contribute to resolution.

EARLIER SEEKER: [in the background] I was trying to do it before I got hooked, but getting hooked and then not pursuing it seems a little more valuable.

RAJ: Oh. Say it one more time.

SEEKER: [with the mic now] Okay. I was trying to not get hooked. But what you've said is I'm going to get hooked, but I don't have to maintain that hookedness. That's where the diminished effort... the destructive will diminish.

RAJ: That's correct.

SEEKER: Okay. I think that's very important that...

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: We come as...

RAJ: If you are used to thinking, which all of you are, when you start meditating, when you start learning meditation, you find that it's very hard to not think for any length of time, just because that's the prevailing habit. But in your persistence in meditating, you arrive at a point where you have longer and longer periods of silence—something you never dreamed was a possible experience.

SEEKER: I think... yeah. Thank you.

RAJ: In the process of learning, you can't afford to criticize yourself for thinking. Thinking is going to happen because it's the prevailing habit.

Getting hooked is going to happen because defense is the prevailing habit. It's the inevitable habit of being when your back is turned toward the Altar, and the Kingdom of Heaven looks as though it has no Source and is all happenstance. And because it's happenstance, it's not dependable. And because it's not dependable, it's potentially threatening to your well-being. Therefore, existence is an ongoing state of defense. You see?

So it's the prevailing habit. And as you begin to break it, it's going to hook you. So you say, "Okay." And then you take each time you're hooked as the opportunity to choose once again, instead of just playing it out to the bitter end. And then you take whatever moments it takes to actually shift gears. And you do it because you know, and you will know more and more clearly as you do this, because you know that in not playing out the old habit of defense, you actually come to resolutions. It's productive, you might say. And it's therefore totally reasonable to engage in what is productive where everyone benefits.

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj, I want to point out something that as I've experienced. And that is if I meditate, I have noticed if and after, if an attack comes, it doesn't penetrate. It's like there's an invisible shield. But if I hesitate too long and think about what I think I'm perceiving, then, oh, I'm hooked. But there is a moment there where there is a shield.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Where it bounces off.

RAJ: It's similar to if you've had a lack of sleep, your temper is shorter than when you're well rested. Yes.

SEEKER: So I found that is really vitally important in helping break these habits.

RAJ: And so, the practice of meditation on a regular basis can enhance your restedness, your...

SEEKER: The pause.

RAJ: ...your centeredness, so that the shield, as it were, the decreased inclination to react can be enjoyed more. Yes.

SEEKER: Yeah. I think that's really important. A really important point. Thanks.

RAJ: It is a valuable tool. Yes.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Taking five or ten minutes to be with your Guide has the same wonderful benefit.

Okay. Let us continue.

READER: Everyone experiences fear. Yet it would take very little right-thinking to realize why fear occurs. Few appreciate the real power of the mind, and no one remains fully aware of it all the time. However, if you hope to spare yourself from fear there are some things you must realize, and realize fully. The mind is very powerful, and never loses its creative force. It never sleeps. Every instant it is creating. It is hard to recognize that thought and belief combine into a power surge that can literally move mountains.

RAJ: Now let's stop there.

RAJ READING: The mind is very powerful, and never loses its creative force.

RAJ: What I want you not to get hooked on is the word "creative," because creative is so closely aligned with Creation, and all of you, your egos, love the idea of becoming co-creators with God.

As you read this:

RAJ READING: The mind is very powerful, and never loses its creative force.

RAJ: Think of "creative" in terms of there being a manifestation. So, you become fearful and your heart begins to race. Ah! Something physical. Something measurable. Your Mind has had an effect that is measurable. There has been a manifestation of the fear.

I'll tell you something though. Fear cannot create for its defense. Let's put it this way. The use of fear in your mind for the purpose of defense, cannot cause a gun or a knife to manifest on the table in front of you for you to protect yourself with. So, creativeness, creation, which would be the case if a gun or a knife appeared on the table that hadn't been there before, creation of that sort is not what this is referring to.

Understand that your Mind is always having an effect. What you're thinking is always having an effect.

And, when you choose for your Peace and you let it in and you feel it, your heart beat slows down. Your blood pressure drops. Physically your body begins to function more efficiently. There is an effect. In that sense it is creative. We're talking about that there is always a Manifestation of your Mind.

Continue.

READER: It appears at first glance that to believe such power about yourself is arrogant, but that is not the real reason you do not believe it. You prefer to believe that your thoughts cannot exert real influence because you are actually afraid of them. This may allay awareness of the guilt, but at the cost of perceiving the mind as impotent. If you believe that what you think is ineffectual you may cease to be afraid of it, but you are hardly likely to respect it. There are no idle thoughts. All thinking produces form at some level.

RAJ: Indeed. It produces form by affecting form.

RAJ READING: If you believe that what you think is ineffectual you may cease to be afraid of it, but you are hardly likely to respect it.

Nevertheless, he is afraid of being of what it would mean to be the focal point for that kind of meaningfulness. So in effect, he is afraid of joining with me completely because it would constitute a joining with all of you completely that would have a profound effect, which would naturally be an Experience of the Atonement and would therefore be utterly beneficial for everyone involved. But then, as his ego perceives it, that would be a matter of being extremely influential. And he is not totally aware of the devotion which is part of his mutually-agreed-upon definitions to everyone's right to make their own discoveries for themselves without help.

And yet, inconsistent as it is, he is willing to do it from time to time, for an hour and a half every Thursday night, and perhaps six hours two days in a row once a month, knowing that there is blessing involved. But I will tell you... and I am sharing this with you because this isn't so different from everyone's fear, and one of the reasons every single one of you choose to remain tiny and never really know the Truth. Because discussing what the truth might be and debating it and rolling all of the possibilities over in your mind is so invigorating, and saves you from having to be significant yourselves. He doesn't mind doing it occasionally, but he knows that if he makes commitment to me, to the Altar, totally, it will be like going from one cylinder on a 16-cylinder engine to all sixteen cylinders. [audience amused] So I use him as an example for his elucidation as well as yours.

You really do all use fear as a way of avoiding being the significant Presence of God that you are, if you would just let God in completely. And that's what the Atonement is about.

Yes. Microphone.

SEEKER: Just for the benefit of all of us about being at the Altar all the time, or Paul making commitment, or any of us making commitment, isn't it a lie though that we would be the focal point? Isn't it that really the Kingdom would be the focal point? We'd just be the space where it happens.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: 'Cause that's the fear. It's going to be all about me, or I'm going to get it, or I don't know, you know. But it's personal.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And that the devotion itself undoes that whole personal issue. It's just not where my focus would be anymore.

RAJ: That is correct. Again, it's because the personal sense each of you has of yourself is the prevailing habit that you will be emerging from. And so your feelings about your tininess tend to be carried over in your imagination about the Experience of being Whole. All of you have your little places you get hooked. The necessity is to persist anyway. And that Paul does.

And this is where we will end for tonight. Thank you.

AUDIENCE: Thank you. Thank you very much.

RAJ: You are welcome.

Chapter 2 – THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT
Section –CAUSE AND EFFECT
First Edition – p. 27 / Second Edition – p. 31

RAJ: Good Evening.

AUDIENCE: Good Evening

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

This evening we're beginning for those in the Second Edition on page 31, Section VII:

RAJ READING: Cause and Effect

RAJ: And for those who are in the First Edition, it is on page 27.

For those of you who are new, we are going... we go around the room and each person reads one paragraph, and then passes the microphone on to the next person. Anyone who would prefer not to read, just freely pass the microphone on to the next person.

SEEKER: Thank you, Raj.

RAJ: You are welcome.

READER: You may still complain about fear, but you nevertheless persist in making yourself fearful.

RAJ: Let's... this is a good point to stop at.

ANOTHER SEEKER: A whole sentence. [audience laughter]

RAJ: I understand that some of you have cast lots to see who, in the evening, will get to read the most sentences without being interrupted. [audience laughter] That leaves you out, Michael. [audience laughter]

RAJ READING: ...you nevertheless persist in making yourself fearful.

RAJ: I just want to point out that even when you think you're not afraid, you are. If your back is turned toward the Altar, if you have said in so many words to the Father, "I would rather look at this by myself and determine what it is I am looking at," then you have engaged in what has been called "The Fall." You have separated yourself from the Father to have a point of view of your own.

And the moment that intention is acted upon and you do engage in having an independent viewpoint, you immediately feel the dissonance of having divided yourself off from the Wholeness of your Self, and you get feedback. It's called your capital "S" Sanity. Your Sanity says to you, "You're in dangerous territory. You're in dangerous territory." Or it says to you, "You are choosing to look at things in an unnatural way. It is not wise to act unnaturally. It is not wise to act unnaturally." And this warning, this ever-present awareness that you have stepped out of what is natural to you, and that it therefore constitutes less than Sanity, you feel as an undercurrent of uneasiness.

And it should feel uneasy to you. If it felt totally comfortable to you, it would mean that you could actually become insane. If you can act at odds with the Source of your Being, and succeed at it, and be comfortable with it, it would mean that you had actually severed yourself from your Source, which you can't do.

So, from that point on, once you are looking at everything from an independent vantage point, there is this undercurrent of uneasiness. And it's a brand-new experience. It's not natural. And the uneasy experience, the uneasy energy that you feel, rather than reminding you to return to what is normal to you, can begin to seem to you to be something to overcome. And you can begin to think that existence is a matter of successfully overcoming this feeling which you know isn't natural to you. And so you engage in attacking the feeling. You engage in trying to overcome the feeling, rather than recognizing that it is a signal to go back Home, or that it is an ever-present signal that you are not at Home and that it is essential for you to be careful not to be sucked into any distraction from returning Home. In other words, that you must be careful not to forget what the undercurrent is calling for, and forget to go Home.

So, everything that follows that act of independence is experienced as fear and a feeling of vulnerability. So, until you all awaken, until you all come Home again, please understand that every moment of your existence is imbued with fear.

Now, we talked a few weeks ago about the fact that if you go to a foreign country, or you go into an area where the majority of the people there are not of your nationality and you're in the minority, and they all have a different way of looking at things, you find yourself feeling uncomfortable—the reason being that you have no agreed-upon definitions with that group of people. And this tells you that when you are feeling comfortable, part of the comfort comes from having established agreed-upon definitions with everybody that you're associating with. And as a result of that, you feel able to relax and not be on the defense. But that isn't because fear is absent. It's because you have found a substitute for fear—mutually-agreed-upon definitions that all of you are willing to abide by, and thereby, not rock each other's boats. You see?

But that's not peace, really. And that's not an experience of the absence of fear. And it's important for you to understand that.

So...

RAJ READING: You may still complain about fear, but you nevertheless persist in making yourself fearful.

ANOTHER SEEKER: That's the distinction between fulfillment and satisfaction you made a while back? Mutually-agreed-upon definitions you have satisfaction, and when you get and turn to the Altar and get in touch with One that's awake, that's the fulfillment?

RAJ: That is correct. Yes.

READER: I have already indicated that you cannot ask me to release you from fear. I know it does not exist, ...

RAJ: I know it does not exist.

READER: ...but you do not. If I intervened between your thoughts and their results, I would be tampering with a basic law of cause and effect; the most fundamental law there is. I would hardly help you if I depreciated the power of your own thinking.

RAJ: Yes. If someone relieves you of the discovery that your thoughts absolutely govern the way you experience Reality, you would become disempowered, and you would not find the occasion for recognizing the authority you exercise over your particular biased experience of Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven. And if you do not find the absolute relationship between your thoughts and your experience, you, first of all, will feel that you exist without any authority. And that therefore, you are like a leaf in the wind to be blown about hither, thither, and yond by whatever currents there are. And you will become depressed. And you will become even more dysfunctional. And you will become even more afraid.

You have to find out the absolute relationship between your thoughts and your experience; the authority you do have. Why? First of all, so that you can feel your power, even though it's an ego power. You must discover your power so that you can demonstrate to yourself by a more constructive use of your mind that you can have a more constructive and harmonious experience. In this way, you learn that you are not subject to chance, or fate, or the way the wind is blowing, but you are subject only to the thoughts, the ideas, the definitions, the meanings that you are choosing to give everything.

Now, when you learn this, and how absolute the relationship is, and that therefore you are never the innocent victim of any circumstance, or anyone you know, you have experience that allows you to look at God and say, "If God is Infinite Intelligence, and if God, if the Mind of God is the Cause of Existence, the Cause of Being for everything that be's, and if—no, not "and if"—then I have now the ability to acknowledge the possibility that the Thoughts of God absolutely govern Creation. And because God is indivisible and undivided, there can be no conflict in His Thought. And therefore, there cannot be any conflict in Creation. Therefore, since I have been learning that the call is to turn around to the Altar and yield to God, I can do it without being afraid that God is a whimsical God and that I will become subject to whatever whimsical thing He might choose for me that might place me at a disadvantage. I don't have to be afraid that He's a wrathful God. I know from my experience of the absolute connection between my thoughts and my experience, that God coming from an indivisible and undivided place is an absolutely secure Presence for me to yield into completely."

Conversely, if you do not see the absolute connection, the absolute authoritative connection between your thoughts and your experience, and you feel vulnerable to life itself, you will not be able to bring yourself to yield willingly and completely into God. Because your God will be to you a reflection of the way you're seeing life, and you will see Him as whimsical, even divided within Himself, and sometimes angry at you, and sometimes loving of you. And you will not be able to find the courage to yield to God.

Now, I've also pointed out before that even though you have chosen to look at things independently, and you have created your own definitions for everything, you cannot stop being the Son or Daughter of God that you are. You can't stop being What God Is Being right there where you are. You do have intelligence, and you are able to have thoughts. And your thoughts ultimately do have power and authority. But you won't find out the Truth of that power and authority until you've abandoned it by yielding to God and making the connection once again with your Source so that your thoughts might be derived from the Father, and therein have authority, but not an independent authority.

Your capacity to think, your capacity to experience ideas, is a Divine Capacity. But when you are experiencing that Divine Capacity from a vantage point you have chosen in which you have decided to relinquish your connection to the Father's Point of View so that you might have one of your own, that authority becomes distorted. And because you are, as I said before, automatically in a state of fear when you turn your back to your Source, all of your ideas and all of your thoughts will be, will arise out of fear and will always be an act of defense.

Now, this is not an indictment on you. It's something that every single one of the Sons and Daughters of God is capable of. Because you are capable of it, you are not doing something wrong that is punishable. It is like you, humanly speaking, having the capacity to put your hand under the faucet of hot water. It's something that's not practical to do, but the water that's coming out of your faucet normally won't harm you. It will just hurt; burn like hell. The point is... [crackling, popping noise and audience laughter]

So, the fact that you're in a state of fear because you chose to experiment with looking at the Kingdom of Heaven independent of the Father's Point of View, is not something wrong. It's not something you will be punished for. And you're not actually being punished for it right now. But you have chosen for a way of being in the Kingdom of Heaven that is unnatural, and so it will be uncomfortable. So don't feel indicted. Don't feel bad. Just understand what you're doing, so that you can make an intelligent choice to stop doing it.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I want to try to see this in some practical terms, because I think we're all working on, at least I am, I'm learning to notice the Movement of God. And I'm learning to yield to this Movement when I see where it's going, because I figure it's a lot easier on me to yield to it and go where it's going, rather than resist it when it's still going to go where it's going, whether I resist or not.

RAJ: I just want to interject that there is also value in yielding to it whether you can see where it's going or not. That is another aspect to be included.

SEEKER: Well, and that's ultimately it. Because we think we see where it's going, but yielding usually shows us it's going somewhere completely different, because if we saw where it was going, we probably would not even think of resisting it, or think we were able to resist it.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: But it gets hard to yield at... sometimes the yielding is very painful.

RAJ: No. It's the resistance to the flow that's painful.

SEEKER: But I think back to your manifestation, and at the end of the passion play, the Movement of God is pretty evident in that case. And even through yielding because they were powerless to do anything else, Mary (your mother), and Mary (your disciple), and John (your disciple) would look up on the cross and see you, and feel that you're being torn away from them. And they can trust in the Movement of God at that point, but that doesn't change the pain or the tearing. Now that's an extreme example. But in our lives there are things we grow comfortable with, and the movement of change sometimes seems very painful.

RAJ: Yes. Indeed.

SEEKER: There's supposed to be a remedy for that now.

RAJ: Indeed.

The reason for the pain is the desire to hold onto the familiar, to hold onto the current form of good that is existing, when it is changing. And that is why I said that the discomfort comes from resisting the change.

The remedy is to let go of the definition of good that has, let us say, remained in the picture, endured for a long enough time for you to feel comfortable with it and begin to think that there won't be further unfoldment; more change. It's at exactly those moments that the remedy is to turn back to the Altar. It's a reminder.

"Father, what is going on here?"

"My Guide, what... what is the Reality that is going on here? How do I behave appropriately to the Movement that is occurring that was unanticipated, and which I really would rather not have occur? How do I stay in touch with the Movement gracefully?"

And then you listen and you expect an answer. Why? Because you want to be dead center in the Movement of Fulfillment that God Is Being. Why? Because you want to fulfill your Function, which is to glorify God, to be the full-blown Presence of His Will right there in what apparently is nothing more than a human circumstance, at least as far as the ego is concerned.

You hold onto what you're familiar with because you feel that it's loss will constitute a loss, rather than a gain.

"Oh, but I like it down here in the valley."

"No. We're going to go up to the mountaintop."

"But it's moist, and it's verdant. And it's... and there is a river. And it is enjoyable. And it's going to be hard work to climb to the top of the mountain!"

"It will be worth it."

"Aw, I don't know. Please. Can we do it tomorrow?"

But when you yield, and you say "yes," and you go to the top of the mountain, you find that the view is more expansive. You find that you have more than you had, because the valley is still available to you, but more has been added to it.

You are afraid of loss, and yet the gain of more than you already have will require you to let go of the little you have, to let go of your tight clutch on it that is so tight that nothing else can be embraced. You have to be willing to let it go so that more can be added to it.

SEEKER: Amen.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Question.

RAJ: Go ahead.

SEEKER: A while back you made a distinction, and I think I'm seeing it now as a... you... when... when I'm thinking alone, that's cause and effect. And three weeks ago, you said that that effect would be it could make my blood pressure rise, but I couldn't manifest a gun, or a knife, which would be creation. A few years ago, you used the phrase, "cause and event," and that's the Father's Thoughts... that... the Cause and Event.

RAJ: The Movement of God is the Cause and the Event.

SEEKER: And my thoughts, isolated, just make me uptight and fearful and squirmy.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: No creation.

RAJ: And then, you have a caricature of cause and a caricature of event that is called effect.

SEEKER: Yeah. In less than a decade that became clear to me. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

RAJ: That is an improvement for you.

SEEKER: Yes. Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] Before you go on, can I ask a pointed question about these mutually...

[with the mic now] Good evening, Raj. Thank you.

We were talking earlier this evening about mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and I'm giving this a lot of consideration because of the brevity of what this really means. Whenever we open our mouth in agreement with anything, are we really being conscious of what we're agreeing to? And what I'm wondering is how do...

RAJ: Or, sometimes, when you are not opening your mouth, what might you be agreeing to.

SEEKER: Right.

Now my question here is I know we are to join with the [Father] and to ask the Father's Point of View with whatever it is we are finding in front of us.

RAJ: And why do you do that?

[aside] I'll let you continue.

You do that so that your act might arise out of Love, rather than out of fear.

SEEKER: Ah. Okay.

RAJ: Continue.

SEEKER: That... that... yes.

What I'm trying to ascertain here is the definitions that have densified everything. What are these definitions? What are these agreements we've made? I mean in our everyday conversation, if I really contemplate this, it's really overwhelming.

RAJ: Yes. It is.

SEEKER: I mean it's really overwhelming because everything is a lie, based on what we're learning.

RAJ: Yes, but it's a lie about the Truth.

SEEKER: Yeah. No, I agree.

RAJ: And if you give your attention to the lie, and study it, and see how humungous it is, it can be overwhelming. The point is not to examine the lie, anymore than it would be for you all now to go home after this evening and examine just how completely your life is governed by fear, even though you didn't know it. That's not the point.

The point is to grasp and understand the fact that until your attention has returned to the Father, and you are inquiring of the Father to know what anything means, you will be in fear. But you have the solution. You know to turn to the Father to inquire as to what the Truth is, so that you might experience Real Peace. And so that you might find yourself knowing exactly how to look, how to speak, how to be appropriately in the Flow of What God Is Being, and thus become an agent for change in the dream.

SEEKER: I see. I got... I see what you're saying. This is why we can't have any agendas during... starting with each day.

RAJ: Exactly.

That doesn't mean that there aren't things that will need to be done, like eating, or going to work, or whatever, but you don't want to do any of those things out of the habit of fear. You want to do them joined with One Who Is Awake so that you are constantly alert for what any of these activities have to do with Reality, and how they are fitting into What's Really Going On in the Kingdom of Heaven right there where you're eating and going to work, and so on.

SEEKER: The reason I brought this up is I don't find that I follow through anymore with what I think I'm going to do.

RAJ: I understand.

SEEKER: I mean I have a light outline, let's put it that way, [laughing] but I can't... the word "discipline" is no longer applicable.

RAJ: Yes. Yes.

When you are letting the Father lead, you will be where you need to be, and you will do what you need to do. And that, the fact that it is not predictable and that you cannot make it happen the way your ego thinks it ought to happen, means that you are now in a place where life is becoming delightful.

Now your ego will argue against that. It will say you're being irresponsible, that you are going to fail, that disaster will result.

SEEKER: Right. That you're going to make waves and nobody's going to like you.

RAJ: Or that because you're not acting according to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that are in place, you will... you will find yourself at odds with quote "the system."

SEEKER: The rules.

RAJ: The rules. Yes.

SEEKER: Okay. I want to get clear on what...

RAJ: And that is not what happens.

SEEKER: I want to get clear on mutually-agreed-upon definitions 'cause it seems to be a vague term to me. What does that mean? Only in the moment can we see that, I'm assuming.

RAJ: Well, that... that is... we've been talking about the mutually-agreed-upon definitions since we started going through the Course. And as we continue, I will uncover them further.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: But as I mentioned, all of you feel relatively comfortable here with each other this evening. That is a result of a mutually-agreed-upon definition. You all have a code of conduct. You have a code of conduct with each other here that you don't have with the people you work with. You have a way to behave. You have words that you can use. You have things you can talk about with each other that you can't with another group of friends. And you have, therefore, what you might call codes of conduct with new people you've met, as opposed to acquaintances that you have, as opposed to friends that you've had for a long time. You conduct yourself differently with them.

You grasp the idea of a code of conduct. That is another way of speaking of mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

SEEKER: I got it. Thank you.

RAJ: So you have many agreed-upon definitions, depending upon the circle you're moving in, or the circles you move in, in your life. It's not just one. But whatever they are, if you're willing to look at it straight, any of them that you look at are not genuine. You get it? They're not genuine because they vacillate. They are different from situation to situation. What's genuine would remain the same no matter what circle of friends you were, or circle of associates you were, dealing with. You see?

SEEKER: Yeah. I see that.

RAJ: So all of you, daily, live your lives presenting an appropriate picture for the setting you're in. And if it works, it works because there are mutually-agreed-upon definitions there already in place. None of you might have ever sat down and discussed what they were, but by trial and error, you found out where the boundaries were. What you could...

SEEKER: What works and what doesn't.

RAJ: Exactly.

And so you non-verbally taught each other what the mutually-agreed-upon definitions were. And the whole point of the Course, the whole point of everything I'm doing with you, is to help bring you to a place of genuineness. A place of genuineness that comes from reuniting with your Source, and not acting at odds with it. And therefore, not acting at odds with your Essential Being, which is constituted of nothing more, nor less, than All Of What God Is Being right there where you are.

Let us continue.

ANOTHER SEEKER (reader): [being funny] Wha-feedo! Wha! Wha! Oh!

Wrong code of conduct. [audience laughter]

[begins reading in wrong place]

READER: It is much more helpful to remind you...

SEEKER (reader): Excuse me.

READER: I would hardly help you if I depreciated the power of your own thinking. This would be in direct opposition to the purpose of this course. It is much more helpful to remind you that you do not guard your thoughts carefully enough. You may feel that at this point it would take a miracle to enable you to do this, which is perfectly true. You are not used to miracle-minded thinking, but you can be trained to think that way. All miracle workers need that kind of training.

RAJ: Wow. This sounds pretty great, doesn't it?

RAJ READING: All miracle workers need that kind of training.

RAJ: Mmm. Let's keep our feet on the ground. You need that kind of training so that you won't suffer any more from fear. So that you might bask in, relax in, the Joy that is inherent in the Movement of Being.

When you choose not to engender fear in yourself, and you do say, "Father, what is really going on here? Help me to see What Is True so that I can move and act appropriately," when you do that... [pause]

PAUL: Just a moment. I lost it. [pause]

RAJ: When you do that, you abandon your independence, and you get back in the Flow of the Movement. And you become a miracle worker. What I mean by that is that you become an agent for change. Your Presence no longer supports the continuance of the dream for many others. It lessens it. And your Presence becomes a dynamic focus of energy that blesses and heals others.

And you know what? It's a side effect. And that's what I'm trying to get across here. This isn't about becoming miracle workers. It's about learning how not to be at odds with the Source of your Being, so that you come back into the clearer Experience of Who and What You Are, so that you are not acting on the basis of fear, and therefore, not engendering fear. And because you are not supporting the ongoingness of the dream, you spontaneously and effortlessly become that which undoes the dream. Not because you've decided to undo the dream, but because you have withdrawn participation in it, and you have joined with the Father, so that His Will is finding expression through you, and that is what is transformational.

So, you may know that as you move forward in your Awakening, you will... you will be identifiable as miracle workers. But you let everyone else give you that definition, and don't get caught up in giving it to yourself.

Continue.

SEEKER: Is miracle-minded thinking, when challenged, turning to the Altar and saying, "Father, how do You see this?" Is that what is meant by miracle-minded thinking? I think of a miracle as a Love, a feeling of Love, as opposed to a thinking thing. That's why I ask.

RAJ: Well, the miracle is a sudden shift of perception. Miracle-minded thinking is, indeed, whatever thoughts you use to justify turning toward the Altar, so that you allow yourself to become subject to It. And once becoming subject to It, you find the experience of being loved that you can't hold in, and so it gets... it spills over and blesses everyone else as well.

And in the process, because you've abandoned the voice for fear as your teacher, you find that you've also abandoned the perceptions that were inseparable from it. And new perception is given. And so there's a sudden shift of perception. And there is healing for you and blessing for everyone the spillover reaches.

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: You said our motives could be sloppy a few weeks ago. You said, you know, we could be doing it for a reasonable unreasonable reason. You said we could do it for a selfish reason apparently. That's miracle-mindedness. I mean...

RAJ: As a matter of fact, whatever causes you to justify turning toward the Altar, whether it's clear or unclear thinking, identifies miracle-mindedness, and it primes you for the miracle. Yes.

SEEKER: That's... that commitment can be wrapped up in any kind of clumsy wrapper, habit.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: An alarm clock. Whatever we... [pause] just do it, however you can.

RAJ: Indeed.

It could be a New Year's resolution that you followed through on. A New Year's resolution is a stupid reason to yield to the Father, but if it works, it's a good reason.

Clarification. What would not be a stupid reason? It would be you in touch with yourself enough to know that you're not happy, or to know that you are afraid, or to know that you're hurting, and realizing that you don't want to be experiencing that, and that there has to be some alternative to it. A good reason is not wanting to suffer, and therefore finding justification to reach out beyond your best definitions and your best thoughts, and saying, "Help." Or, seeing that a Brother is in pain, or is sad, or is hurting, suffering, and caring enough to reach out to the Father to say, "Help," for your Brother.

Those are good reasons because they come from an honest connection, a genuine connection with yourself in the moment and the ever-present awareness that it's your Birthright to be experiencing something other than suffering, and opting for whatever it is by asking for help from a Source outside your best thinking. You see the difference?

SEEKER: It's spontaneous.

RAJ: But if a New Year's resolution gets you to do it, [finger snap] doesn't make a bit of difference.

Okay.

READER: I cannot let you leave your mind unguarded, or you will not be able to help me. Miracle working entails a full realization of the power of thought in order to avoid miscreation.

RAJ: Actually you're going to get to read for quite a while, because we have already talked about this in some detail.

Continue.

READER: Otherwise a miracle will be necessary to set the mind itself straight,...

RAJ: Oh. I will interrupt here. [audience laughter]

SEEKER (reader): That's a half a sentence.

RAJ: Read the rest of the sentence. [amused]

SEEKER (reader): No, it's... [audience laughter]

RAJ: Read the rest of the sentence.

READER: Otherwise a miracle will be necessary to set the mind itself straight, a circular process that would not foster the time collapse for which the miracle was intended.

RAJ: Yes. The purpose of the miracle isn't to set your mind straight, but to cause a shift of perception. It's... it's like with your car. The miracle, the purpose of the miracle is to set your car in the right direction. The function of the miracle is not to fix the engine. The purpose of the miracle is not to set your mind straight, but to undo the false perceptions entertained in your mind. You see what I'm saying? So if the miracle is one of constantly setting your mind straight, getting to miracle-mindedness and the manifestation of miracles will never be arrived at.

Continue.

READER: The miracle worker must have genuine respect for true cause and effect as a necessary condition for the miracle to occur.

RAJ: Indeed.

READER: Both miracles and fear come from thoughts. If you are not free to choose one, you would also not be free to choose the other. By choosing the miracle you have rejected fear, if only temporarily. You have been fearful of everyone and everything. You are afraid of God, of me and of yourself. You have misperceived or miscreated us, and believe in what you have made. You would not have done this if you were not afraid of your own thoughts. The fearful must miscreate, because they misperceive creation.

RAJ: Is that not interesting?

RAJ READING: The fearful must miscreate, because they misperceive creation.

RAJ: In misperceiving creation, your acts arise out of ignorance, and so they will reflect your ignorance. What I want to emphasize here is that the miscreation constitutes a modification of Creation Itself, not a new creation. Like the increased heart rate, the ulcers, and so on. It's a modification of What Is Real.

Continue.

READER: The fearful must miscreate, because they misperceive creation. When you miscreate you are in pain. The cause and effect principle now becomes a real expediter, though only temporarily. Actually, "Cause" is a term properly belonging to God, and His "Effect" is His Son. This entails a set of Cause and Effect relationships totally different from those you introduce into miscreation. The fundamental conflict in this world, then, is between creation and miscreation.

RAJ: And we could say: Creation and modification of Creation.

READER: All fear is implicit in the second, and all love in the first. The conflict is therefore one between love and fear.

RAJ: Indeed.

So, the process of Awakening is one in which you learn to Love again. And you don't know how to Love because you are in fear, and therefore always on defense. And so, in order to learn how to Love, you must turn away from what you have been relying upon to give meaning to everything, which are the mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And since that is where your total focus has been, it is going to seem to you that you're going to have to turn to a point completely outside anything you are familiar with, even though you are turning back toward Home, and laying the groundwork for the "Aha," [finger snap] the light bulb that will go on in your Mind, illuminating that your Mind is Whole, and never became less than Whole, even though your act of independence caused your attention to become focused only, we might say, in a very narrow bandwidth of the capacity of your Mind.

So, it's all about Love. And Love can't be explained to you. You can only be pointed in the direction where the experience awaits you, which is the direction I am consistently pointing all of you in, and which became even more clearly expressed at the last meeting, that it had to do with involvement with each other. And that it involved getting off the fence and no longer thinking that you had a safe place where you could hide by not determining something as needing correction, or not needing correction. And that it's necessary to get off the fence and be hot or cold, but not in some neutral, safe spot.

That's not always comfortable. But you know what? Whatever level of comfort you all have arrived at through finding a group that all have the same mutually-agreed-upon definitions so that you don't have to be nervous and you can feel safe, that has never illuminated to you What Love Is. And because it has never illuminated to you What Love Is, you haven't been able to move to the point of casting your vote and being the Presence of Love in the process of discovering What It Is, because you faced the uncomfortable situation that required you to get off the fence and vote. Do you see what I'm saying?

Your comfort zone, your personal ego comfort zone is not the place where Insight and Inspiration will occur. That's where the so-called "safe zone" is, where God does not find expression. And you continue to be stuck, ignorant of What Love Is, ignorant of feeling the Love you are loved by, because the center and circumference of You is entirely the Totality of God, and thereby not having the experience of being Love and experiencing the refreshment that comes from fulfilling your Function and discovering what that Function is, not as a definition, but as an Act.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [in the background] I have a question.

RAJ: Yes. Microphone.

SEEKER: [with mic now] That... that concept troubled me the last time I was here. And, uh, because I cast my vote a lot, and it's coming from judgment. But and on the other half, I'm saying when I look at a situation, I really don't know what to do about it, or what the best outcome is.

RAJ: Yes. When I talked about casting your vote, I didn't mean... umm...

SEEKER: My opinion.

RAJ: That's right.

SEEKER: Well, so... so what I... so what you do, you have to turn to the Altar and ask the question.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: And get the answer. And then you don't sit on the answer.

RAJ: That's right.

SEEKER: You participate.

RAJ: That's right. You act. You embody it in behavior.

SEEKER: You mean I can't just sit around and, "oh, that's a nice thought"?

RAJ: Indeed.

You put your neck on the line. At least that's the way the ego would look at it. But you know what? The ego calls it putting your neck on the line because you are being genuine from your Soul, with a capital "S." And you and what you feel become joined. What you feel doesn't remain hidden while you share what you think. Your thought and your action becomes one, and that constitutes within you an experience of indivisibleness.

And I'll tell you that that indivisibleness feels like power. And it feels normal. And you feel integrated. And therefore, you feel your Integrity. The power you feel isn't a power over anything. It is... it is what purity feels like.

If you have a glass of water from which all impurities have been removed, there are no little spaces in the water, no little holes filled by the impurities where the water is not able to touch itself. When the impurities are removed, every molecule of water is in total connection with every other part of the water.

That is Unity. That is Integrity. And well, in it, it is absolutely impossible to experience fear. That's why it feels like strength. That's why it feels like power. And that is part of the Experience of What Love Is.

When what you know, when what you find yourself knowing as a result of turning to the Altar, is acted upon, you could say that your knowing and your will have joined for the purpose of expressing Integrity, Indivisibility, Wholeness. Your will has become the servant of what the Father has revealed to you. It therefore has become the servant of the Father, and not an ego from a separated vantage point. And yet, there is no experience of willfulness in it. It's just an experience of being a Presence, an utterly True Presence where everything that is True About You is being embodied in that act. Do you see what I'm saying?

I can't give you the feeling. I can give you a hint of the feeling. And I can try to inspire you to let yourself have that experience. And of course, letting yourself have the experience means getting off the fence, getting involved, and not letting pain and suffering continue without objection, either in yourself or in a Brother. Involvement, in other words.

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: The water all touching itself, that's what you referred to when you used the phrase, "Infinite Groundedness."

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: The things that I'm realizing, they're spontaneous. But... and I related spontaneous to a[n] amount of time. But I'm seeing now that spontaneous is not contrived and genuine, in that it can take some time to soak in. A spontaneous realization can take a decade to soak in.

RAJ: Well, yeah. But why not say it could take three months? Why put that word in the air? That... that can become your new definition. It could take three seconds. You can... you can afford to not feel guilty if it doesn't happen instantaneously, but don't mess around with giving unreasonably long periods of time to yourself to get it. Because you may, with the power of your thought, cause it to take ten years, because that's when New Year's Day for you was set. You see? And...

SEEKER: The value was for me to see that it was genuineness, and not a length of time.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: That.. and the time, the time is getting shorter between being curious about the phrases, and the fullness of the meaning coming.

RAJ: Yes.

But understand, and let's... let's go back here.

RAJ READING: Otherwise a miracle will be necessary to set the mind itself straight, a circular process that would not foster the time collapse for which the miracle was intended.

RAJ: Now you must understand that right now as you're talking about a process of Awakening, for lack of better words, I use this image. You are lying on a grassy knoll in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven dreaming a dream of human existence. You're already there. You're already Home. And you're already the fully endowed Presence of God called the Christ. Your dream says that existence happens slowly in time.

The only reason there can be an instantaneous healing, where physical evidence one moment is replaced with new physical evidence a moment later, is evidence of a time collapse. And the only reason it can change is because the injury was an illusion; was the result of some very specific authoritative thoughts that you held as fact for yourself that caused a distorted experience of what could not at any moment have become distorted.

You create distortion by modifying Reality in your experience, and then you say, "It could take ten years for me to get past the experience of this distortion." You see? And you therefore, you thereby, add to the... you add to the difficulty of there being a time collapse.

SEEKER: Then the other side of that is when Paul had a sore hand and he was going to you for healing. And he became impatient after a week, and you encouraged him to persist. And after three months the hand stopped hurting. And he realized, well, that was... so impatience isn't a part of this either.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: I mean that was another side of that same lesson.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And that was part of what I was learning. That was...

RAJ: That was willfulness as well.

SEEKER: Exactly. And I'm just learning now that the spontaneous awakening comes as fast as I let it come. And I'm thankful for it coming over a period of a few weeks or a few months.

RAJ: That is correct

SEEKER: And I'm ready for the instant shifts.

RAJ: Yes.

We are going to stop here for this evening.

Things are becoming really interesting, aren't they?

AUDIENCE: [agreement]

RAJ: The Course is not meant to be difficult to understand. And from page to page, it stands in support of your having and experiencing discovery and an increasing enthusiasm for watching misperceptions break down, dissolve, and disappear, leaving right there in its place the undistorted view of What God Is Being. And this isn't something meant for a future time, but for now. And the mental climate on your globe is such that these things can be shared in a way that does support your increasing vital interest and curiosity to wake up now.

So we will end there for this evening.

AUDIENCE: Thank you, Raj.

RAJ: Thank you.

Discussion Today

Learning when to say "Yes" and when to say "No." Learning what to say "Yes" to and what to say "No" to.

RAJ: Good Evening.

AUDIENCE: Good Evening.

RAJ: Before we begin, I just want to remind all of you of something. It's easy to forget when times seem to be stressful, or situations on the home front seem to be stressful, and you get up in the morning and you are instantly on guard, or prepared for what may come, you're inclined, because of the spiritual path you're on, to do your best to look at everything with a balanced eye and to cope with everything to the best of your ability, forgetting that any anxiety you're feeling is a choice. And what will help you to remember that it's a choice rather than a given circumstance is that if you will choose to become still and meditate, you will find yourself moving into a Place of Peace. And having moved into the Place of Peace, you say, "Wow! I forgot that my peace is independent of any situation or circumstance." It's so easy to forget it because circumstances seem to grab your attention before you think to choose for your peace.

Once having chosen for your peace, you are in a position to look at the circumstances with innocent eyes, with an ability to respond to the circumstances with a "Yes" or a "No" from a centered place of real balance. And at this time, it's essential to remember this, so that you make the choice for your peace before you look at and attempt to deal with the situations or circumstances.

I just wanted to remind you of that. It is so easy to access your peace, but it's easier to forget to.

SEEKER: So we access our peace. We're in this centered place and we're looking at this problem that concerns us, from this Place of Peace are there times when war is justified or even necessary?

RAJ: There are times when the word "No" must be used and embodied, used and actualized, used and expressed into manifestation. It doesn't become a war unless somebody objects to the assertion of the meaning of the word "No."

SEEKER: When we wake up and we choose for our peace, at what point does, I'm going to say the past, prior to asking for our peace, prior to waking up, the circumstances of "No" being said, the circumstances of being in relationship during a difficult time, will the claiming of peace, choosing for peace change the circumstances as we had left them? Meaning that someone's not understanding the word "No," or someone... there is dispute. What is the change from the state of peace that changes the circumstance as it was left prior to claiming your peace the night before, the day before, the months before?

So we wake up, we choose for peace, but the circumstances may not have changed, but the way we see it may have changed. Could you clarify what will be different? If I'm being clear.

RAJ: I'm going to ask you to try to rephrase the question. It is confusing to Paul and it, the confusion, has his attention.

SEEKER: Making it very simple. We go to bed in either... in some level of dispute, whether it's internationally, or in conflict with self, or with relationship one-on-one. We wake up in the morning, maybe with chatter of and the fear of waking up to this same difficult situation. As you've said, we choose then for peace, and walk into the circumstance again. What has changed? What will be different? Or is it just the way we see it? Will we have changed our minds? Will we...

RAJ: Well, simply, the thing that will have changed from the night before is that where the night before, you were not in your peace, now in the morning after having arisen, you have chosen for your peace and you are in it. That's the fundamental change. Now comes "the work," if you will, because in your peace you are primed for experiencing balance in your perspective. What causes fear is the busyness of your imagination coupled with your thinking. In the silence of peace, your imagination and your thinking are not introducing distraction and confusion.

In the silence of your peace, your capacity to know what needs to be known is increased. And, literally, you are able to see what is called for, which means what you are called upon to be in the circumstance. If you are called to say "No," if you are called to withdraw support for unintelligent, unloving, unprincipled, unkind behavior, then you must get off the fence and cast your vote. Embody your part to play. When you do that, it will call for agreement, but it may get disagreement. If it gets disagreement, you cannot afford to let this have any effect on the vote you have cast. You cannot let it dissuade you from standing on the side of humanity as opposed to inhumanity--globally, nationally, or in your one-on-one relationships.

Depending upon the intensity of the disagreement you receive, certain responses will be appropriate. If the disagreement is violent, if the disagreement constitutes an intent to harm, then your saying "No" must be firm enough, must be felt by you strongly enough from the tips of your toes to let it be an absolute "No" that does not allow for negotiation, but calls for obedience. That does not call for discussion but requires obedience, because the harmful behavior cannot be justified any further. It cannot be allowed any further. The power of "No" is what we're talking about here.

If you say "No" and it doesn't come from the tips of your toes, if you are not feeling it fully, if commitment to it, if identification with it is not total, the egos of those around you will recognize it and know that you are open for negotiation, and they will not respect the “No” and but will engage you in negotiation while continuing to behave inappropriately. You must learn to say “No” and “Yes” with your Whole Being. Anything less and you are playing a game. And those you say “Yes” or “No” to weakly (w-e-a-k-l-y) will know that you have opened the door for argument, negotiation, discussion, anything but resolve because your “Yes” and your “No” didn’t call for resolve.

You all get yourselves into ongoing, strenuous, negotiative--if that is a word--relationships by being neither hot nor cold, being neither “Yes” or “No.”

And you know what? Most of you find that to be an interesting and vigorous form of existing, as though the vigor of the negotiation is what constitutes the fullness of life, as though you’re really doing something, when all along you’re avoiding doing something, and ultimately suffering the results of being neither hot nor cold.

It is dangerous to your experience of Divine Life, of Life full of the Integrity of God, when you use your spirituality as a way of doing nothing. It is very dangerous to say, “Oh, it’s all a perception anyway. Therefore, there’s no reason for me to make any requirement on my Brother or my Sister to be humane, to be principled, to be loving, because it’s all a matter of perception.”

You know what? The Course is a course in mind-training. What do you think mind-training is? It’s learning to use discipline with and in your mind. Using discipline means you say “No” and you say “Yes” to certain things. And I’ve made it clear that without that discipline, you are unavailable to me to help in the process of awakening.

Discipline: Learning when to say “Yes” and when to say “No.” Learning what to say “Yes” to and what to say “No” to.

If you have a horse that has been trained, or a dog like a seeing-eye dog that has been trained, these animals have learned how to not do what is irrelevant to their function. And so, in an emergency the guide dog doesn’t go wild in the excitement of the commotion. It says “No” to its inclination to react and says “Yes” to giving its full attention to its owner to see that its owner is gotten out of the situation quickly and safely.

Do not let irrational metaphysical or spiritual logic cause you to become lukewarm and immobilize you when action is called for. How foolish you will feel if after the situation that called for your clarity is over, you discover that if you hadn’t moved into this safety zone of being non-committal, you participated in a result that could have been avoided--a negative result. Now if you are going to have to let your mind be trained to distinguish between essential and non-essential things in order to wake up, then grasp the transfer value of it so that you do not remain mute, immobile, immobilized and ineffective, where the call had been for you to be hot or cold, to be the Presence of God that says “No” to that which is unlike God and to say “Yes” to that which supports fundamental quality of life, fundamental humanity, fundamental--I’ll use the catch phrase--human rights, and honors them enough to bring them into fuller view.

If your mind is going to need to be trained, the minds of others are going to need to be trained. And someone is going to have to have enough guts to provide the training, which means standing in the face of objection to your “No” and saying “Yes” and here is why... , “Yes” and the reason is..., and continuing to provide the clarifying and transformational perspective as I do over and over and over again until the one objecting to it grasps it, until the light bulb goes on.

But let’s not be spiritually... no, let us not be spiritual imbeciles and not restrain the willful expression of hate and harm by anyone, whether it’s an abusive husband, or an abusive wife, or an abusive child, or an abusive parent, or an abusive head of state. You say “No” and obedience must come into play to the extent that acts of hate, acts of harm, and the development of better and better ways to harm others is obediently stopped without negotiation, discussion, or argument.

There is no intelligence and there is no Love in allowing harm to be engaged in. If the individual is not in a frame of mind to learn something new and insists on continuing to act hatefully, you stop the actions in whatever way works. Once you have their attention and they are distracted from engaging in acts of harm, reason with them, reason with them, reason with them from your peace and re-educate. Re-educate by presenting intelligence in such a wonderfully desirable way that it’s hard to object to.

Now, you might say, “Well, that would mean I’m acting as their friend.” Yes, that’s true. You act as their friend by forcibly stopping acts of harm. In other words, going completely against their will, which would make you seem not to be a friend because you’re not considering all the reasons and justifications they’re using to back up their behavior.

But, once having stopped it, you do not treat them as though they are hateful; you treat them as though they are one who is capable of recognizing the value of humaneness, and you educate them over, and over, and over, and over again; not as a form of brainwashing, but as an act of Love coming from Love, so that the light bulbs can come on in their mind and they finally say, “Oh, I see. I’m sorry. And I won’t ever do it again.” And transformation occurs because the full spectrum of Love has been provided--the “No” and the “Yes.”

But, again, don’t be immobilized into a lukewarm space of noncommittal un-involvement. Because you are here for a reason. It’s to glorify God which means to embody God. Not just sort of list in the bliss of wonderful thoughts that never get brought out into manifestation and embodied in the world with such love by you, the one embodying it, that others cannot help to find it of interest and express their curiosity, and want to know more about it, and thereby be changed by it.

Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Yes, and if I may, at what point does the perceived attack become an issue of... when I feel attacked, it is my issue, but when I need to take a stand against an attack or an aggression or a type of behavior, at what point will I know that it is not an illusion--it is an attack to which I must say "No"?

RAJ: The moment you get into your peace. The next morning when you get up and you make the choice for your peace, you will know that it's not an attack. It's a call for Love awkwardly and inappropriately embodied. You will recognize that the inappropriate and awkward embodiment of Love being called for needs to be contained, but not because it's attack, but because that's what Love does when an inappropriate call for Love is sent out.

SEEKER: So the inappropriate call for Love, if not seen clearly...

RAJ: By?

SEEKER: By me, or one who is perceiving it...

RAJ: As a call for Love.

SEEKER: As a call for Love, will perceive it as an attack.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And that is why attacks are our own issues because we're not able to see it as a call for Love.

RAJ: And the reason you cannot see it as a call for Love is because you are not in your peace, and when you are not in your peace, you yourself are in an ongoing state of defense. And so you will see behavior as an attack.

Yes, even good behavior, apparently good behavior, will be seen as something to be suspicious of.

What's behind their niceness? What are they really wanting? There is a lack of trust about friendly behavior as well.

SEEKER: When we are not in our peace.

RAJ: That is correct. Which is all the time. You were not here last week, but you are always in fear until you turn back to the Altar and give your commitment there, because the moment you have chosen not to see with the Father, and you have chosen to see on your own, you are inevitably and unalterably and unequivocally in a state of fear, and therefore, a constant readiness for defense.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'm wondering about illness. I just found out that a very close friend is also undergoing cancer problems. It seems to me a lot of what we're seeing relates to illness.

RAJ: Absolutely. Absolutely.

SEEKER: Then this, in my mind, to say "No" to this, "You are an idea of God. You are absolutely perfect, and this is a call for Love, not fear."

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Because I know my friend would like to have been here tonight. This is her second bout with cancer, so I'm scared. It's so scary. Thank you.

RAJ: It is scary until you are able to feel your peace so that the true perspective may be available to you felt to the tips of your toes, so that you might see the absurdity of the suggestion that you can be subject to something called cancer that somehow is real and can pose a real threat. In your peace and with the Father's Perspective, you will see that it is just a suggestion; the same sort as any hypnotist who says, "You have an apple stuck to your nose."

ANOTHER SEEKER: [not clear, no mike] _____

RAJ: It is a suggestion. And when it is seen as a suggestion, it then becomes easy to say "No" to your inclination to react in fear and abandon your peace and your capacity to be the Presence of Love that dissolves any tiny bit of manifestation that suggests that the threat is real.

You see, the healing doesn't come, and the resolution in a conflict with another doesn't come until the meaning of the word "No" is embodied fully. Not as a defense, but as a realization that the seeming substance of the harmful or hateful behavior is unreal, and doesn't require strength, but does require you to be unequivocally pure in your expression of the meaning of "No" so that there are no weak spots for the ego to engage.

When you say "No" and mean it from the tips of your toes, it doesn't come out as an act of aggression. In other words, it doesn't come out as an act of opposition. It just comes out, even when spoken softly and with peace, as an undeniable declaration of total inner unity, even humanly speaking.

But you know what? When you encounter someone who says "No" with complete integrity, you know that you're in touch with someone who's in touch with the universe. You know that you're in touch with someone who's grounded in something greater than some personal strength.

So the "No" you say from your peace is not a counter-attack. This is important to understand. It's an expression of pure integrity that is undeniable.

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: May I add a clarification? When a call for Love is perceived, I can't see...

RAJ: Is recognized.

SEEKER: Is recognized.

RAJ: I say that because...

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: ...it is attack that is perceived.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: The Truth you can recognize.

SEEKER: When would I be saying “No” or “Yes” to the call for Love as opposed to our war situation which is, “No, you can’t do these things or we will enforce our ‘No’”?

Taking it from the global or the international to the individual, one-on-one, what would you be saying “No” to if it is recognized as a call for Love? I’m having trouble...

RAJ: The moment you recognize it as a call for Love, you will respond.

SEEKER: But as a “Yes” or “No.”

RAJ: You will respond with what addresses the need and sometimes it will be a “No.”

No, I will not participate in a game of... I will not engage in a pissing contest. I will not engage in argument. I will not engage in negotiating what degree of hurt is going to be acceptable. I will not negotiate whether I deserve to be hurt. I will not participate, you see, but here’s what I will do.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: If you will cease to act in hateful or harmful ways, I will sit down with you, and we can discuss without argument how to be together, whether we want to be together, in a friendly manner.

You are welcome.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Swear not by the mountain. Swear not by the temple. Swear not by the Course in Miracles. Let your yays be yays, and your nays be nays. Cut the crap. Put your ass on the line. The discipline and the commitment bring me to this Place of Peace, and then my “Yes” and my “No” is the Atonement.

RAJ: Exactly. Next week we will switch places. [audience laughter]

SEEKER: You know, you’re just so good at that, lovingly expressing it so that it invites you in. You’re just really good at that.

RAJ: And you are all being invited to do the same thing. Circumstances make the invitation a little more pointed. [Slight audience laughter] Circumstances in the world are calling for you to be the Presence of Love; not in nice flowery thoughts, but in practical expression, practical embodiment. There is NO healing without the world being transformed whether you want to call the world an illusion or not.

Transformation and healing is NOT a head trip. Transformation and healing is going to be evidenced in the ever-improving ways you relate with your Brother, and in the embodiment of your intent to leave no stone unturned in the process of uncovering joy in existing and in existing with each other, and where all of you are agents, you might say, for the contribution of the uncovering of the Kingdom of Heaven right where you thought “the world” was.

I’ve said before, and it’s important to know, until you can say “No,” you can’t really say “Yes.” Until you find your authority to say “No,” your “Yes” means nothing. When you can’t say “No,” you become the subject of terrorism, the subject of dictatorship, because all you’re allowed to do is to say “Yes.” And so your “Yes” makes you a mealy-mouthed wimp--a nothing. It causes you to behave as though you are not the Presence of God embodied, because you’re not glorifying God. You are covering up the fact that you exist for a reason, a divine reason, an utterly valuable reason, a reason that reeks with dignity, a reason that has as its purpose the glorification of all that is ultimately meaningful and good.

Until you can say “No,” your “Yes” is meaningless because there’s no integrity to it. And there’s no integrity to it because you don’t feel your very own Presence. One who can only say “Yes” is never expressing himself or herself, but is always expressing the will of the one who gave you the direction or the order to which you said “Yes.” Do you get that? Not being able to say “No” is a sure way to keep yourself in the dream, and it will constitute an absolute block to waking up, because it means that you haven’t arrived at a point of using any self-discipline yet.

Of course, one who doesn’t have a right to say “No” obviously doesn’t have enough substance to bring about a decisiveness, or enough decisiveness, to make a commitment to “Yes” or “No.” When you don’t know you have the right to say “No,” and you never use the word and you never mean the word, you are confirming, confirming, confirming, confirming the dream.

So I say it’s time to get some guts. And I say it’s time to get some guts to announce to you that you have guts, that you have what it takes to become decisive in determining the difference between Truth and what is untrue, between a call for Love and what is not a call for Love.

Again it is very dangerous to say, “It’s all a matter of opinion, or it’s all a matter of perception.”

Of course, if you’re going to engage your guts and become decisive, you’re obviously going to have gotten off a fence that you were on, and you’re going to be involved. You’re going to let your voice be heard. Not so that you can express power, but so that in doing it you disengage from the very elements that keep the dream going, that keep everyone sleeping. Sleeping is an indecisive place, isn’t it? You don’t accomplish anything in your sleep. You don’t get anything done. Nothing becomes embodied. Sleeping is being zoned out.

A Course in Miracles is not about being zoned out. Waking up is not about being zoned out. It's about being more conscious. Conscious of more than your limited ego perceptions have been including. More than your habit of relying on memory and your past concepts have allowed you to experience. So, it's time to put your shoulder to the wheel, get your ass in gear. It's time to stop playing metaphysical ego games, or spiritual ego games, and get down to the business of your connection with the Father. Why? So that you can do the scary thing of discovering What Is Real and What Is True so that you might stand behind it with every fiber of your being and embody it so that it shows up in the world.

Now, this can be a most enjoyable experience. It can be done at any time. And the enjoyableness of the expansiveness will be yours. But you're at a point where there's a very strong call for Love going on in the world. It looks like an expression of hate that needs to be dealt with, and so you find yourself uncomfortable. Well, I will happily use this situation as an opportunity to light a fire under your derrières so that you might go ahead and do this enjoyable thing. I'm about finished talking about this subject and so I want to bring in the fact that what we're talking about is supposed to be an enjoyable thing. But, you have a current stress going on in the world that is a good enough reason for giving the focus and the discipline to your mind, so that you do get off the fence and you do find out What Is True, and you do dare to embody it. There's a need for it to be embodied, but remember what I'm inviting you to engage in is simply what has been your function all along. And if the stressful situation weren't here, we would be talking about it as though it were a totally enjoyable thing.

So, remember, using discipline, training your mind so that you can distinguish between Truth and illusion, so that you can withdraw your support from illusion and lend yourself fully and committedly to What Is The Truth so that you are not in the limbo of indecision and confusion, or the apparent safety of non-commitment. You lay the groundwork for the very transformation that you're all looking for and that you all find encouragement to believe in when you study the Course.

The Course is all about embodying God. Aren't you glad you have a wonderful nudge in your experience?

ANOTHER SEEKER: I don't know if it's appropriate right now so I'm asking if it is or not, to share a story that keeps coming to me about a time we were traveling and there was a call to say "No" suddenly. So I'm asking Raj if it's appropriate to share it. It's about the night we were on our way traveling and we had gotten off the ferry at midnight in Seattle.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: It just kept repeating itself in my mind tonight. And it was such a powerful moment and it was certainly unpremeditated. We had left late and we were going down to the airport to stay overnight, and we had caught maybe the midnight ferry into Seattle. And as we got off the ferry, one of us, whoever was driving, had pulled onto the sidewalk to look both ways before we got onto the main road, and as we turned to the left, there had suddenly come a car that had jumped the middle divider and had landed on the sidewalk and was traveling toward our door at about 40 mph, and all of a sudden there was nothing to do. We were like frozen in the moment and suddenly this welled up in me, the windows were up, no one could hear us, but what welled up in me all of sudden was a "NO!" And the moment that that came out, the car jumped off the sidewalk and went... well, it didn't exactly go straight. It went way over in the other direction, but it altered its course immediately although there was no physical contact or evidence that could have possibly changed the situation. But it was a sudden inner conviction that this was not to be and it did alter it in a split second.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: So that was one of the miracles that I've encountered when you just know that you have to say "No."

RAJ: Yes. The "No" was not an expression of fear like "Oh, no!" It was a declaration of fact. That's the simplest way it can be put. And when you say "No" from your peace, from the tips of your toes, you are stating a fact, not a topic for negotiation.

ANOTHER SEEKER: When such decisiveness is stated as a fact and not a topic for negotiation, it sounds like it could divide an awful lot of houses where two people are saying "No" to different things and each coming from their integrity. My son and I disagree about this current stressful situation. We each feel strongly and have gotten off the fence to say "No," but we disagree as to which is the out-of-control and harmful government.

RAJ: I understand. Mind you, we're not talking about coming from personal integrity. We're not talking about clear expressions of each one's best-expressed ego-orientation. What I'm talking about is coming from your peace and giving expression to the Truth that you find revealed to you there.

SEEKER: So the "No" you are speaking of would change both governments?

RAJ: The "No" I am speaking of is not actually being addressed to governments. The "No" you will find yourself expressing is an unwillingness, an absolute unwillingness to join in substantiating the illusion.

The "No" isn't against governments. The "No" isn't against individuals. The "No" is a statement of refusal to participate and support and thereby substantiate inhumanity, anything less than love, which transforms human relationships and therefore constitutes a blessing for all concerned.

SEEKER: But it doesn't seem that simple from this perspective because, within our view from the world, the harm and the harmfulness can be done by Saddam Hussein and what he's doing to his people, and how their human rights are being oppressed, if we believe what our media and government leaders tell us. Some would say that is the harm that needs to be stopped. And others will say, "Well, no. The harm is when we send in our airplanes to bomb those people there living in Iraq. That's where the harm is."

And now maybe there's a path in between those two that works out, but it isn't looking that way in the world situation. It's almost like we're picking between which is the greater harm, or the lesser harm.

RAJ: There are times when that is the case in the human experience.

SEEKER: Well, that was my original question. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

If a seriously disturbed man is holding a family hostage at gunpoint and threatening harm to them, and very likely to harm them because he is so upset, it is appropriate to bring the threat of harm to a stop immediately. If you have a sharpshooter who can disable the man without killing him, you would use the sharpshooter. If you do not have a sharpshooter, but someone that has a clear shot that's likely to kill the man, you use that man, that man's gun and his capability. But you do what is necessary to bring the state of harm to an abrupt end. If your police force had an empath who could connect with the deranged fellow with the gun and cause him to forget to want to harm, then you would use that person and no harm would come to anyone.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I think that's a TV show.

SEEKER (previous): I think I've lost my perspective.

RAJ: My point is this: You do whatever works and you do it with the least amount of harm possible, but you don't neglect to act and bring the state of harm to a halt.

SEEKER: So make the hard decisions.

RAJ: Get off the fence. Cast your vote. Not as an ego, not expressing your best opinion, but after having become still, after having turned toward the Altar, after having heard the clearest Word of God you can hear and that you can feel, and then embodying it, embodying it, embodying it.

If a person steps out in the street and a truck is bearing down on them that they don't see, and you're standing right on the curb, do you stand there and say, "Oh. Wait a minute now. This is all an illusion. The truck is Spirit. The man is Spirit. No harm can come to him."? Or do you run out and grab him or push him and yourself out of the path of the oncoming truck, and do what will cause no harm to occur?

If touching a hot iron to your arm will burn you, you don't do it. You don't do it until you have arrived at a point in your spiritual growth where touching it to your arm will not hurt you. So in the process of your being ever more perfect in your being the transformational Presence of Love, you always remain practical. And you do not neglect from acting practically, while at the same time you hold yourself open for the increasing transformation of your mind that allows you to be practical with less and less harm, if I may put it that way, being involved in the process.

I've talked about this before but I will finish up tonight by pointing out that there has to be a balance between radical idealism and practical realism. And you do not become so radically ideal that you abandon being practically real. You explore and open yourself up expansively into radical idealism while requiring that radical idealism to find expression in a new and ever-improving practical realism. And nothing, nothing will inhibit waking up more than thinking you can move into radical idealism and that's all there is to it, because you will think you are getting somewhere when you're getting nowhere. And you will not be a transformational agent for change in the world because you won't be engaging in the act-- that's the key word "act"--of Love which constitutes the Atonement. The Atonement is not a thought of Love. It's an act of Love. Nothing like the human experience to bring the Truth to life and to make a difficult book easier to understand.

Well, no one can say we indulged in airy-fairy talk tonight. And yet all of it has been absolutely relevant to the Course and the undisturbable connection between God and His Creation which at the moment you're calling just the world and the universe and a bunch of egos running around like chickens with their head cut off.

I love you all, but I'll say "No" to you. And you can Love every Brother on this planet, but you've got to be able to say "No." And avoiding saying "No" will just keep the distress going longer. Enough said.

A Course In Miracles reference pages)
Chapter 2 – THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT
Section –CAUSE AND EFFECT
First Edition – p. 28 / Second Edition – p. 32

RAJ: Good evening and again welcome to everyone who has joined with us on the Internet. Okay. Will you read the first sentence only.

READER: It has already been said that you believe you cannot control fear because you yourself made it, and your belief in it seems to render it out of your control.

RAJ: Okay. I'm going to suggest that when you're reading the Course, you not treat these words as though they are a topic of consideration. So when we're talking about fear, we're not talking about a generic fear. We're talking about an inner dynamic that every single one of you experiences. If you will keep this in mind, it will make the words you're reading more relevant. We're not just talking about fear generally speaking.

Now, at the bottom line fear, as I've said before, is the uneasiness that you inevitably and unavoidably feel when you have decided to determine what everything means for yourself, by yourself. Which means that you have in effect separated yourself from the Father. You've separated yourself from the ground of your Being, and the effect is ungroundedness. Instead of recognizing that the uneasiness that you're feeling is the result of an attempt to look at everything by yourself and knowing immediately that the answer to the uneasiness is to abandon the declaration of independence that you have asserted, you make the assumption that your uneasiness is caused by everything you're seeing, by your environment, by circumstances, by those in your experience. And it seems then that your task is to make peace with all of these objects and things that are foreign to you.

Now, the mistake you make is in assuming that peace will be the result of agreements, that peace will be the result of mutually-agreed-upon definitions, that peace will be the result of cooperation between separate and different parts and in the process of forming definitions which will be mutually-agreed-upon, and thereby seem to provide the appearance of peace and the apparent lack of need for fear. You all end up feeling each other out in order to find the place where there's the least amount of resistance, the least amount of dissonance.

And so, your mutually-agreed-upon definition ends up not reflecting the integrity, the innate integrity of each member of the group, but rather the laziest, least strenuous...

PAUL: Just a moment.

RAJ: ...elements that are characteristic of the group as a whole. In other words, it's the way the group arrives at consensus while no member of the group declares himself or herself, and every member of the group stays in the safe zone without any need for commitment to anything definite.

Mutually-agreed-upon definitions are by definition indefinite. Again, mutually-agreed-upon definitions are indefinite by definition. They represent the lowest common denominator of the group, because that's what you get when you don't step on each other's egos. I'll tell you something. Wars are the result of the attempt of the group to squelch anyone who begins to be definite and introduce a call for definiteness.

So, now anyone who might have an insight or a recognition of the value of not being uncommitted, of not being indefinite, who speaks up and makes waves, disturbs the status quo. That one is attacked. That one is immediately met with all form of arguments which have as their goal to cause this one to settle down and abandon any call for definiteness and to come back into what I have called a false sense of peace.

And so everyone in the group watches this and realizes that there is something to fear. And the something to fear is being the oddball. The something to fear is standing out in the group. Does that make sense to everyone? Okay.

Now what I want you to realize is that the effort of the group to squelch any original or focused idea...

PAUL: I'm sorry. I'm going... just a moment.

RAJ: What I want you to see most clearly is that as everyone observes this happen and learns to keep still, they are operating under a system of terrorism. You are hearing a lot about terrorism and you tend still to think of it as a generic term; something to think about. And you need to feel inside yourself what terrorism means. Well, many of you would say you've never been in a circumstance where you're terrorized. But I want you to consider what we've talked about in that last two or three weeks and what you have felt when I have talked about casting your vote, not being uninvolved, not being uncommitted.

I have been calling you out of this stupid safe zone that you all thought you have had available to you. I have called upon you to go within, turn toward the Altar, ask to Know the Truth, to let yourself be filled with it so that you might Experience Knowing What The Truth Is at an experiential level so that you might be able to cast your vote and act, act not think, but act on what you know, to embody it in the world. In other words, to make it visible.

Any of you who have given any thought, any consideration to what I've said, have found yourself feeling more vulnerable by virtue of casting a vote and for your vote not to be some secret you are holding in a holy atmosphere, h-o-l-y, a holy atmosphere in your mind. If you're going to act, if you are going to embody in the world the Truth that you Know, it's going to be visible. It's going to be noticeable. Your vote will have been cast and it will be public.

And when you get down to the point of realizing that this is what Atonement is about, I know that every single one of you have experienced some fear around doing that. Because you will what? Stick out like a sore thumb.

The tendency is to think that when I say "cast your vote," I am asking you to be for or against something. To be for or against something, you've got to have your back to the Altar. And your for-or-against definitions have to relate to everything you see without the Father's Perspective available to you.

There's a third alternative. You can either be for or against something, or you can be with God, with the Father. Now we're not talking about for or against. And when you're standing with the Father, everything you be will never be able to be successfully defined as attack, even though those with their backs still to their Altars will see your definiteness as a judgment upon them.

Awakening is fulfilling and satisfying, but it's not fun. The reason it's not fun is because you're approaching being Sane from an insane perspective, and you are therefore unable to truly judge the divine dynamics of your Sanity. Truly you're not able to judge them truly. And so you automatically think you're being asked to be for or against something, when it's all about being with God in Unity.

In the realm of mutually-agreed-upon definitions, the majority rules. But one with God is a majority. And that majority makes, and this is not a play on words, makes all the difference in the world. And your world will change because you have come into a place of alignment within yourself relative to God, and this experience does not include within itself fear or vulnerability.

The reason I said, "this is not fun," is because it requires you to make commitment to something other than the lowest common denominator of the group. And the group has been your god. And you're not used to being in a way other than honoring the god called group consensus. You have to arrive at a point of being willing to make commitment to Truth, commitment to Love. A Truth and a Love that at the moment you don't comprehend the Real Meaning of. And so you have to lean into what is for you the unknown. You have to lean into what for you is a void, and become defenseless so that you might be infilled with insight and revelation. So that you actually change and stop operating on the old basis of mutually-agreed-upon definitions, meaning the group consensus.

You're afraid to cast your vote because you think that casting your vote means being for or against something. And what I want to register with you tonight is that being willing to cast your vote, as I'm speaking of it, means being willing to stand with the Father, In Whom All Creation Exists.

It has already been said that you believe you cannot control fear. Why? Because you yourself made it and your belief in it seems to render it out of your control. See, your belief in it. The attributes, the definitions, the meanings you have given it, cause it to seem to be out of your control.

Continue.

SEEKER: May I ask a...

RAJ: Not yet.

READER: Yet any attempt to resolve the error through attempting the mastery of fear is useless. In fact, it asserts the power of fear by the very assumption that it need be mastered. The true resolution rests entirely on mastery through love. In the interim, however, the sense of conflict is inevitable,...

RAJ: You see. It's not going to be easy. It's not going to be fun.

Continue.

READER: ...since you have placed yourself in a position where you believe in the power of what does not exist.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: I'm gonna bring this to a personal level. I'm having fun. Does that mean that I'm in a doldrum of stupid rest, or have I reached some sense of what the "happy dream" is?

RAJ: Let me ask this: Is the "happy dream" a private dream?

SEEKER: No, I don't think so. I don't think it's a private dream. I think it's the way you see the world and so what you're doing is you're seeing everything in the world being in perfect accord with God's Plan.

RAJ: And are you seeing a suffering world?

SEEKER: I'm seeing confusion, but I'm seeing progress. And I don't see suffering in my world, in what I'm seeing. I mean, I see it, I read about it in the newspapers, but in my experience I'm not experiencing seeing suffering. I'm seeing people doing the best they can and moving forward in God's Plan. I lose it once in a while.

RAJ: Either you are creating a cocoon for yourself that you are unwilling to look outside of, or you are giving benign definitions to suffering that calls for correction. You read about it in the newspaper or on the news. Is that not going on in your world?

SEEKER: To be perfectly honest, I think there's great exaggeration. And I think that in the press, that's the way they sell newspapers. So, for instance,...

RAJ: You think there are no people starving?

SEEKER: Oh, absolutely. I do.

RAJ: Is that not suffering?

SEEKER: That is. That is.

RAJ: Does that not call for correction?

SEEKER: Yes, it does.

RAJ: Does that not call for involvement?

SEEKER: Yes, it does. So this "happy dream" that the Course talks about can never be achieved until everyone is in the "happy dream." Is that correct?

RAJ: The happy dream is children not starving. The happy dream is harmony between countries, between governments, between people. The happy dream is a world that someone from another planet could discover and recognize that there is Intelligence governing. That Love, the Meaning of Love has been discovered and embodied.

It will not look like a world where injury and hurt and starvation and suffering of all kinds is going on but everyone is walking around with a smile on their face experiencing this intangible something that they're calling the happy dream. The happy dream is going to look like a world in harmony where no form of suffering is even seeming to occur.

SEEKER: How did you wake up? Did you see the happy dream? Do you see what I'm getting at here? I understood that what happens is you enter the happy dream and then you exist in the happy dream until God's Plan, okay, causes you to wake up, to become enlightened. So as long as there's any suffering in the world, you can't be in the happy dream, therefore no one can wake up. You see the conundrum that I'm getting here. So therefore no one has ever awakened because as long as one of the Brotherhood is suffering, then no one can awaken. That's what I'm hearing. And that's my problem.

RAJ: Until everyone is awake, the Brotherhood as a whole is not totally awake, and in that sense, I am not totally awake because there are those of my Brothers and Sisters who are insisting on their dreams.

SEEKER: So you're not having any fun either.

RAJ: I will tell you that once you begin to recognize the Divine Character and Nature of embodying God in acts in your world, whether such intent and action is easy for you or not because of your prior state of mind, your separated state of mind, you begin to enjoy casting your vote and you begin to feel the joy of the Brotherhood that is awake as they rejoice in every act of embodying the Father's Will that every single one of you engages in, no matter how tiny it is.

When I say it's not fun, I am saying it so that you will understand that the fear you feel when you dare to cast your vote is an integral part of shifting out of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, out of the group consensus, and that that is not justification from refraining from casting your vote.

SEEKER: But don't you reach a point somewhere along the line where you just don't care? You don't care if it rocks the boat. You don't care if it... you just want to do the right thing, so to speak, and cast the vote and say this is what I stand for and the chips fall where they may. And it becomes less of a fearful thing through the practice.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: But, mind you, the happy dream is not going to be an inner bliss that you experience through giving some ethereal definition to the suffering that is going on so that you somehow arrive at the insane idea that the suffering that's going on isn't really suffering but some part of the development and refinement of the souls who appear to be suffering that is absolutely essential to their waking up and therefore is fulfilling God's purpose and it doesn't need to be addressed. It doesn't call for correction. It doesn't call for you or you or anyone else to somehow get food into their mouth, or somehow hug that little girl or that little boy, dirty little girl and dirty little boy living in a hovel who has tears streaming down his or her face and comforting him or comforting her, and embodying Love and embodying the elements of the happy dream so that the situation can be transformed because Truth and Love has been illuminated to them by your actions. And as their tears are wiped away and as there are fewer and fewer occasions for them to have tears, the happy dream is coming into view. But the happy dream is not private and isn't something you can engage in all by yourself. Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Well, I was having a lot more fun before you answered my question, I'll tell ya that. See there's a thing about... that I'm feeling is that I'm feeling like I'm right where I'm supposed to be, doing what I'm supposed to be doing, and I feel guided to do that.

RAJ: You are and you're here and you're hearing me say what I'm saying.

SEEKER: Right, but then there's another thing, for instance, is that where I think that what you focus on expands and so if I'm spending my time, okay, thinking about all the people that are starving and suffering in the world and how I should be out helping them.

RAJ: Okay, remember though, we're not talking about generic suffering, all the people in the world who are suffering. You see suffering and there is suffering going on in your immediate vicinity.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: And you can find those places where you can embody God. You see?

SEEKER: It's like saying, "Love the world." Well, that's incomprehensible to me. But I can love the guy standing in front of me who's wasting everyone's time in line because he fumbling around or not organized or whatever, and I can say I'm not gonna, you know, become irate about this. I going to, you know, "Father, you know, help me see this in another way," or you know. Or smile at somebody and say hello when you know they're down.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: What's on your plate in front of you.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: So, but when you see transformation occur, that's a heart lifting thing to see that.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And so that makes me happy.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: So I relish it.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And so...

RAJ: And it should inspire you to enlarge your circle so that you are thinking about the starving children in Africa or...

SEEKER: We can have some fun, right? I'm not being cocky here or anything. But what I'm getting at is taking things too seriously really gets depressing. Do you see what I'm getting at? And can really... it's difficult to be in that state of mind and impart a hugging, loving attitude towards the next person who needs a little goose.

RAJ: But this is where it's needed. This is where the call is. What can I say? It's time to sober up. It's time to abandon the value of giddy fun, irrelevant fun. It's time to find a way to engage with each other in a way that is truly helpful and truly transforms, and in the process of doing that, being provided with the experience of your true Function which will bring you joy, not fun. And joy is far deeper and far more infinite than fun.

AUDIENCE: [audience laughter] [too faint to hear what was said]

SEEKER: Well, I've certainly had enough so I'll pass the mic. I'm gonna let it settle.

ANOTHER SEEKER: You said one word that caught my ear. You said when one stands out, war, if I understood you correctly of course, you said war starts when an individual deviates from the agreed-upon definitions. And you went on to say it is the seeing it as God would have us see it, see it with God as one, which not necessarily says "Yes" or "No." In today's world...

RAJ: No, no, no. Let's remain clear as we move along. It will necessarily mean saying a "Yes" or a "No" but not as for or against. The "Yes" or "No" when it arises out of your union with God...

SEEKER: That would be a "Yes."

RAJ: That will be a "Yes" or it will be a "No," but it will not be a "Yes" for or against some group, and it will not be a "No" for or against a group. In other words, the "Yes" or the "No" will not be part of a conflict. It will be a simple acknowledgment of fact like, "No, two plus two is not five. Yes, two plus two is four."

SEEKER: Okay. But if the question of the individual who's causing the war says, "I have independence. I will do what I want with my world and the rest of the world can take a flying leap." So now we have a group, we have an individual who sees it another way by defined definition that the world should be at peace, and that's gonna cause a war. Or at least we're told by someone else in the group that says, "I see it differently and therefore I'm going to war."

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And then you compound that by war is justified when people are being harmed. I'm confused.

RAJ: When I am speaking of casting your vote, I am not speaking of asserting a "Yes" or a "No" from an unjoined place. The group consensus is a given element of the unjoined place. Therefore, everything that goes on is a tension that shifts according to the majority consensus of the group. When someone stands up with an original idea or with a new definition that he wants to introduce for agreement, that one is immediately met with resistance and that's where wars get started. When an individual who has been part of a group consensus decides to give his attention to the Altar once again, to connect with the Father, desiring to be filled with Truth and what Love is so that he might embody it, that one introduces a new idea not from an unjoined place. And that one's introduction of the idea will not arouse great resistance because it will be done with Love, and it will be done in language that can be understood by those involved in group consensus so that shift of perception can occur without arousing the ire of the egos that had been governing the group consensus. Does that clarify things for you?

SEEKER: No. Would it be too outrageous to ask for us to take some examples and say this is an example of and this is not an example of? For example, could we take the U. as a group? Could we take the Iraq situation and identify the perspective of this what you're describing, and then take the U. position and then take the French position which is all different. And where in this real-life circumstance are we seeing the examples that you're illustrating and we're trying to get through? Maybe that is not a way to approach it, but it's an idea.

RAJ: I will tell you that you're not seeing examples of what I'm talking about.

SEEKER: Maybe you could tell us why then, because that's what we're being asked to do today is to either, you know, support our country and the dominance...

RAJ: Who is asking that of you?

SEEKER: Our government.

RAJ: Okay.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: I'm not.

SEEKER: I agree, but that seems when you said war, that's what got me thinking about...

RAJ: I understand.

SEEKER: Wrongly but thinking.

RAJ: I am addressing in this fashion a very small part of the population of your planet, and every single one of you is to one degree or another part of, a member, you might say, of a group that lives by mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And one of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you live by is that you are the result of a physical event when a sperm and an egg joined and that you are one of the creatures on this planet that is the result of a big bang, a purely physical event. And you don't know, significantly know that this is a definition and not the Truth, and that you are in fact the very Presence of God embodied and that the Father's Perspective is your natural inheritance that you could never lose. And so what am I doing? I am continually nudging and finessing you into considering things differently, and finding ways to do it that cause you to be curious enough to let something new in and perhaps become preoccupied with a whole new range of ideas, thoughts, perspectives, that will pave the way for future growth to happen even more easily and more spontaneously.

I am in every word I say speaking to egos in a way that does not reinforce your ego-hood, and so I don't appear to be a threat. I don't appear to be against you. And yet I'm absolutely saying, "No, I will not join you in reinforcing your ego sense of self."

So you have an example of what I'm talking about. It's just that I am speaking to the Divine One That You Are in such a way that it does not arouse the ire of the ego that you think you are and thus defeat my purpose, which is to uncover your real purpose to you so that you might come back into your Right Mind. You see, I can even say that without getting your ego to say, "What! I'm not in my right mind? Who the hell are you? You arrogant so-and-so!" [audience laughter] My reason, my motive, where I'm coming from, which is my union with the Father, causes me to be able to say things that promote change without frightening, without frightening you. And so, when you turn toward the Altar and join with the Father, you will find yourself able to be in a way with your Brothers and Sisters, the group with the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, in a way that will not appear to be threatening, and will spawn or inspire curiosity about things that it had been defended against in the past.

Now, there are no private thoughts. Another phrase to think about. No, there are no private thoughts. As a matter of fact there simply are no private thoughts.

And so, as each one of you turns toward the Altar and listens first so that what comes forth through you embodies not only the transformational Truth, but the nurturing Love that allows for the ideas to be heard without instilling fear, that is what I'm talking about when I say "cast your vote." You see, I'm not casting my vote against you stupid egos. [audience laughter] Your egohood isn't my concern. Doing something about it is not my concern. There is no such egohood so I'm not going to attack it. But I'm also not going to use my words in a way that reinforce a sense of egohood. They are well-chosen so as to cause you to be interested in something different from reinforcing your egos, and finding some, to you, intelligent and constructive reason for doing it so that you have more interest in doing that than reinforcing your egos.

In the beginning if I spoke about Paul, he became self-conscious. Now I can talk about Paul and he doesn't become self-conscious. Now I can talk to you about your not being an ego without engaging the ego that you think you are. So you have come a ways, you see.

Now because there are no private thoughts, as you join with the Father and as you are willing to do what Paul is doing right now, embodying the Father, you will find that not only your immediate acts in your immediate neighborhood will trigger transformation. Your willingness to make commitment to not being divided within yourself, your willingness to not claim a right to have your own private beneficent thoughts constitutes a joining, a union with the Father that makes what appears to be your specific contribution more than the contribution could possibly be if it really was just your tiny contribution. And it becomes the leaven that leavens the whole lump; the little bit that has a broad transformational effect in the world. Why? Not because of what you have decided, not because of how focused you can be in presenting the idea, but because you're not conflicted within yourself.

When you are not conflicted within yourself, it means that you have abandoned your so-called right to act independently. And in the absence of the introduction of the static of claiming a mind of your own and rights of your own, you are able to experience yourself as What God Is Being right where you are. The Holy Self That You Are becomes your Experience. Not with halos around your head and not with choirs of angels singing, but with simple Purity of Singleness of Purpose. Purpose set in motion by the Father that you're willing to embody without embellishing and without feeling that you've been deprived of something essential by not being able to add your own little bias to it, or even having a totally different contribution to give. You see? It has power to change the dream, to improve the dream so that it becomes the happy dream because of the Purity, the Singleness of what you're willing to allow yourself to be because you're yielding to God. Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Much clearer. When I feel your words about me individually and my relationship to God, it makes sense. When I get myself into a group and we're talking about war, and it just becomes, you know, it's not applicable. It is applicable but it has to start from here.

RAJ: That's right.

SEEKER: And I felt your last suggestion was great. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

Let's go to Robbie first.

ANOTHER SEEKER: When I was trying to understand this, took a long time to understand it, but you've been talking about this since right after September eleventh. And how I've been able to understand it is I get flooded with all of these other pictures of the same situation but on a smaller scale and closer. And when there's an integrity to it, it will run through every single one of those examples and it'll fit in every single example because it's universal. I'm not able to really say it very well, but it should fit every single circumstance. And it does and that's how you can tell that you've got it, you've honed in on it.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Is that right?

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Mark.

ANOTHER SEEKER: You've told me more than once I'm not a sperm and an egg. Is DNA part of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions?

RAJ: No.

SEEKER: It's the way things work?

RAJ: No. Nothing that you see is the way things work. The way things work, and things working because God Is Being Creation, look like that. It's going to look like something. And no matter how great the magnification of the microscope with which you look at the Visibility and Tangibility of God, you're going to find order and it's going to look like something. But what it looks like isn't what makes it work like it works. God working, God being the Movement of Creation looks like something. And it's because of What God Is Being that it looks like it looks.

And part of the problem everyone is having in your scientific community is that you are looking at it as though you're trying to arrive at God but they would say the ultimate meaning of what they're studying. They are trying to arrive at the ultimate meaning by studying what they have defined to be matter, and so they're all studying their mutually-agreed-upon definition which is that this is some result of a big bang, a physical event that had nothing to do with God. If they would look at it as though they were seeing the Visibility and Tangibility of God, Mind, they would begin to discover radically new things.

SEEKER: There are mutually-agreed-upon definitions about DNA.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: But DNA...

RAJ: One of which is that it's matter...

SEEKER: Right. Right.

RAJ: ...instead of Spirit. That it identifies some self-existent substance rather the Look Of What God Is Being.

SEEKER: DNA is Love.

RAJ: All Substance is Love.

SEEKER: Right. Yeah. One thing I did notice...

RAJ: All Substance is Spirit.

SEEKER: ...you said the suffering wasn't some generic suffering. That it was specific to your experience, what's on your plate. That's the words you used.

And we all here listening and I just want to help everybody remember that the Foundation [NWFFACIM] is suffering...

RAJ: [laughing]

SEEKER: ...because that seems to be on my plate.

RAJ: You know what? Suffering is need unmet. Very simply. So look where there is need and find a way to meet it. Not through your best judgments. Not through your best definitions. Not through any separated vantage point. But by recognizing the need and saying, "God, what's the Truth here? God, what do I need to see not about this illusion, but what do I need to see about the Reality that this illusion is about? And what do I need to know and feel in order to address the need so that the need disappears and is replaced by need met?" Which means no need.

SEEKER: Should I read?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Good evening, Raj.

RAJ: Good evening.

SEEKER: As I'm sitting here listening to what you're saying about groups within groups within groups and we're all immersed in definitions and how are we to be in this sea of definitions, which I see, which I'm beginning to, that it occurred to me that it's just reverberating reactions, constantly reverberating reactions to everything. That if we are joined with the Father we are embodying Meaning, so we're coming into any situation with the Embodiment of Meaning which is the answer.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And so whatever we're looking at or whatever's coming across our field of vision, we see the answer.

RAJ: And.

SEEKER: In other words, we don't make decisions anymore.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Because the answer, we see what the answer is or the need in the moment for that particular moment because we're joined.

SEEKER (previous): If you embody it, you are the answer.

SEEKER (previous): Right, but what I'm trying to say here is we're in a state of observation, not in a state of reaction.

RAJ: Observation can be from a distance. It is better to say that you are in a state of awareness, of alert consciousness from which it is easy for you to act with utter appropriateness in ways that allow for shifting to occur without increasing fear on the part of the one doing the shifting. So you see, one can observe without being involved, and so I do not want that word "observation" to be employed very often.

SEEKER: What I'm trying to say is if you have a blank mind, meaning you don't have a lot of definitions and judgments, you're trying to be in wherever you are without any definitions. You're looking, you're trying to look with clear eyes, you know. [laughing]

RAJ: That's right.

SEEKER: Yeah. You're trying to just see what is really going on here. I mean...

RAJ: You're saying, "Father, show me what is really going on."

SEEKER: Show me what is going on. But you've made your, and I don't know if this is the correct word "private," but when you go within, your connection, and then you're moving from then on in a continuous state of asking because you're feeling your way through the situation. Not trying to think.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Or join with the definitions. So everything, you're not connected by definition anymore.

RAJ: That is correct. You are not connected by definitions. Correct.

SEEKER: So just that being, that state of being, everyone feels the disconnect of you from that, which is what I think you were saying "when you stand out."

RAJ: Others will feel your disconnect but at the same time they will feel your connection with the answer. They will feel your connection with capital "M" Meaning. And you will be involved and extending the gift that peaks their curiosity and doesn't threaten them.

SEEKER: This takes a lot of practice anyway, 'cause I'm at...

RAJ: It does. And practice comes from involvement.

SEEKER: Involvement. In other words, I know I blow it on a lot. But I'm repeating and I'm not running away from it now so that I'll get the feel of it more and more and I become more sensitive to what is needed.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: I mean you gotta start somewhere even if it's in judgment. At least you will get the feedback so that you can refine and refine and refine.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: I think I see what you're saying. Thanks.

RAJ: You are welcome.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Okay, I'd like to take this back to the Course directly and see if I can make it apply to the generic suffering, or specifically some of what you mentioned that seems to be out of my pervue, such as starving in Africa, or AIDS in Africa, or starving in Korea, or the pending war in Iraq versus the tyranny in Iraq. And do it in a way that doesn't put me in Michael's pseudo-happy-dream that isn't shared by every citizen of the planet. [audience laughing]

RAJ: We love you, Michael.

SEEKER: I love you, Michael. [laughing]

And in the Course there seems to be a contradiction or a very difficult point that you highlighted there and that. And I thought of immediately two lessons in the Workbook. One of which, Lesson 38, "There is nothing my holiness cannot do." And conversely when you talked about choosing to turn towards the Altar rather than being for or against, my thought was to the Lesson that said, "God did not create that plane crash so it cannot be real." God did not create that famine so it cannot be real. God did not create that war and so it can't be real. God did not create that tyranny and so it cannot be real.

Which seems to be the place Michael was coming from. And that is a Lesson in the Course, but I'm sure somehow it ties into also, "There is nothing my holiness cannot do," and there is a merger of the two between action and belief.

RAJ: Absolutely. And there better be the merger.

Now, what I've shared tonight needs not to be used as a way of moving into a safe zone where you're having a much clearer picture of how it works and therefore you can go home this week and mull over what I've said and enjoy it like a tasty morsel that you roll around on your mental tongue. And maybe for the next seven days you don't have to pay attention to what you're seeing in the newspaper or what you're seeing on the TV and having a vote to cast about it. I didn't say having an opinion about it. But caring enough to ask within until you are infilled with a clarity so that you know what your vote is.

And then especially if it's not a vote that you like, daring to commit to it anyway and doing the hard work of having to act in harmony with God's Will, whether you like it or not. That's what's hard. You've got to get your hands dirty and you've got to deal with things that you don't like because there are things that are wrong going on that need to be corrected.

And you know what? I'm going to leave you tonight with something to consider. Judgment is called for in your process of yielding to the Father, in your process of waking up. There's a great tendency to look at things that are going on and say, like I've said before, "it's an illusion," or "that's just their perception," and never arrive at a point of saying, "This works and this doesn't. This reflects God and this doesn't."

You have to make a distinction between the tares and the wheat and you have to cast your vote. You have to learn to recognize What Is Real and what is unreal, and commit to What Is Real and withdraw your commitment from what is not. And you can't stay in a safe noncommittal place where you're saying, "that's just your opinion," or "that's just your perception," or "that's just their perception, it's not real anyway," and refrain from making the distinction between What Is True and what is not, and committing to What Is and withdrawing your commitment from what is not.

Again, we're talking about becoming involved. Not talking about having an opinion. You're going to have to ask the Father, "Is this Real or not?" You're going to have to make distinctions or you are forever going to be stuck in the mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

Your mutually-agreed-upon definitions are not true. And until you are willing to look at them squarely to find out whether they are or not, so that you can see that they are not, you won't know how to make the correction. And if you don't make the correction, it goes on uncorrected and you're still in the dream.

One way or another you're going to get off the fence, and I am not going to let you forget that that's what you're here for. And it means involvement. It means caring enough to discern What Is True and what is not so that you can withdraw your investment of energy and attention from what is not true. Because until you invest your energy in What Is True, you will not be embodying God and you will not get to a happy dream.

If we ever get to the next section [audience laughter], you will see that it's called "The Meaning of the Last Judgment."

So, hey people, it's time to discover how good the meat and potatoes of the Course are. But you're going to have to chew in order to digest it. You're going to have to put forth the effort, and stop wishing for parfaits and pudding and nice soft sweet stuff. You see? Okay.

Now Michael, this can be fun. It can be, but it won't be. [audience laughter]

SEEKER (previous): Is that just for Michael? [audience laughter]

RAJ: I have selected Michael to be the only one. [audience laughter] No, this applies to everyone. See, I use meat and potatoes and I know there are many who savor and thoroughly delight in a good meat and potatoes meal, even though it's more difficult to digest than pudding and parfaits and ice cream. And I'm saying that the effort needed to be put forth in order to be involved, in order to not be on the fence, in order to embody, to act out into manifestation the clearer manifestation of God, is as satisfying as meat and potatoes is. But, if you're delicate and you think spirituality is about delicate but beautiful things, you know, floating around in pinkness and lavender, meat and potatoes is not going to sound desirable to you. I'm telling you that the meat and potatoes of waking up is satisfying. The work, the effort you have to put forth to care enough for your Brother and Sister to become involved, to get off the fence and act in ways that change the world, so that any video camera scanning the scene will see Harmony and Peace and Beauty and Love expressed, is worth it, is satisfying.

So sit with that for a week soberly, groundedly. And don't let fun be a distraction from the joy that will become available to you when you care enough to make the Gift of Love. Okay.

We did get through one paragraph, but you all moved through and out of a lot of muck that had been weighing you down.

I love you all.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Chapter 2 – THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT
Section –CAUSE AND EFFECT
First Edition – p. 28 / Second Edition – p. 32

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone as well who is joining us on the internet.

The things we have been speaking about over the last few weeks in many ways have caused some polarization to occur rather than peace. And it's important for this not to continue.

I'll ask a question. What is a miracle?

SEEKER: A sudden shift of perception.

RAJ: And when you say the sudden shift of perception is from peace to fear?

SEEKER: No.

RAJ: Good. A miracle is a shift of perception in which mutually-agreed-upon definitions, or beliefs, have dissolved leaving in their place the Experience of Peace, the Experience of Love, and the capacity to extend love that nurtures and promotes further sudden shifts of perception.

We've been talking about correction. Since you are all emerging from an ego frame of reference, it's very easy for the word "correction" to be misunderstood. You have what are called "houses of correction," don't you? These are places where punishment is brought to bear upon those who were found guilty. But can that be what correction means as we're talking about it? The recognition that there's a need for correction is interpreted by the ego, the voice for fear, as a call for punishment. Justice, in other words. But the Voice for Truth expresses the call for correction, and it's calling for healing. It's calling for a sudden shift of perception.

So please understand that when we're talking about correction, we're talking about that which promotes healing. That which promotes healing is that which is an act in the world of embodying that which in every way promotes transformation, regeneration and redemption, whether it's physical, whether it's mental, emotional, whether it's between individuals or between nations. And so even if the acts that embody what will promote healing are firm, unyielding, unequivocal, they are done in a way that promotes healing more than it promotes harm.

And an example I have used in the past is a surgeon who has to perform surgery. He causes injury by making an incision, but he knows how to do that with the least amount of injury or detriment to his patient. And he does it because that is what will save that person's life. Healing is the motive and the method embodies it. Healing is the motive and the method embodies it. He says "No" to cancer. He (the physician) says "No" to peritonitis, if there's been a burst appendix. And he does whatever is necessary to bring the body back into harmony and peace with itself.

So when you say "No," it is not a means of meting out punishment. It is not a means of attaining justice. It's only real meaning can be to promote healing through means that promote healing.

That is all I wanted to say to begin with, and we will go directly into the Text here.

READER: Nothing and everything cannot coexist. To believe in one is to deny the other. Fear is really nothing and love is everything. Whenever light enters darkness, the darkness is abolished. What you believe is true for you. In this sense the separation has occurred, and to deny it is merely to use denial inappropriately.

RAJ: Okay. We're going to stop right there. A very important point.

RAJ READING: What you believe is true for you.

RAJ: I don't think it can be any more clearly stated that what covers up the Truth from you is what you believe. Your beliefs, whether good or bad, preoccupy your attention, coloring What Is Actually There so that you don't see it. A sudden shift of perception is when your attentiveness to your belief breaks down suddenly and What Is Really Present has a chance of registering with you so that you see truly. And in that true seeing, you are not only able, you're more than happy to release the belief that you were committed to, in order to continue to experience the joy of seeing What Is True.

Continue.

READER: However, to concentrate on error is only a further error. The initial corrective procedure is to recognize temporarily that there is a problem, but only as an indication that immediate correction is needed.

RAJ: There's our word "correction" again. Yes.

Now it's very important you're having a consistent opportunity not to hone in on the problem. A problem is constantly being presented to you as being a problem. And you must all remember that that is simply a call for you to recognize that, yes, there is a problem, and that it calls for correction, so that you can shift your attention to listening for what will correct the problem.

And you know what? You won't really be open, genuinely open to experience the influx of Light and Clarity, the influx of what will correct the problem, if your motive isn't Love. And that means that you must be willing to look at your so-called enemy—the one, let us say, who you have to temporarily or momentarily recognize as the problem—and embrace him with love. Now this doesn't mean that you become lovey-dovey. It means that you care enough about that Christ, that One who is the Son of God, you care enough about him to want to know what will promote a sudden shift of perception, what will promote his willingness to abandon his justification for being a problem. If you don't remember that, then you will listen with a bias. You will listen for an influx of the Father's Will with a bias, and the bias will be that you will be expecting to hear something that will bring about justice. In other words, punishment. And it's essential not to become sidetracked that way, because healing is truly needed here.

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: What if it's a problem that seems to be beyond my purview to do anything about? There are many problems in the world that aren't my problem. There are people dying of AIDS in Africa and I feel bad for them, but that's not my problem. There's nothing I can do about that. There are people dying of hunger all over the world, but that's not my problem. If I see a hungry man, I'll be sure to feed him. But... but what am I to do with these problems I'm inundated with that aren't my problem, that seem to be beyond my scope and my power as the one of six billion I am here in the world?

RAJ: Good question.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Can I offer something that suddenly came to me?

RAJ: You may indeed

SEEKER: Well if we give our mind to the Holy Spirit, the Holy Spirit directs our attention to what needs healing. And also I noticed in our work that only those who I can bless, and only those who have a blessing for me, show up in my experience. There is great order to my life when I do a fundamental acknowledgment, and that is to let the Holy Spirit govern each moment of my day.

RAJ: Indeed. We spoke last week about the fact that minds are joined and there are no private thoughts, and therefore when you do listen and you are guided, the very fact of listening, regardless of what you hear, makes it easier for everyone else to listen as well. The very act of turning toward the Altar, the very fact of inquiring of the Holy Spirit, or the Father, or Me, constitutes an act that every one is a participant in, whether they realize it or not. And your simple act of turning to the Father with inquiry, with curiosity, to know what will bring about healing, blesses absolutely everyone. It's the leaven that leavens the whole lump.

Now notice that I didn't suggest that you join with all of your starving brothers in your mind, and try from your mind to their mind to bless them. It's the act of not attempting to do anything from your separate sense of self, it's the act of joining with One Who Is Awake, or with the Father, that constitutes the Real blessing, and blesses absolutely all of the Brotherhood, not just those on your planet. That's why it's the leaven that leavens the whole lump. And then you do what you are led to do, whether it's something local in your immediate vicinity, or whether it's something on a larger scale.

But you know what? Your sense of community in your own mind has to include more than the township you live in. Your sense of community truly needs to be global. If your sense of community is global where you are consciously wanting healing, the sudden shift of perception that constitutes the miracle for all of your Brothers everywhere, you will find that this will color or affect every aspect of your day. Your behavior will be different.

And I might say that the way you move your little finger when you're not even thinking about your little finger will have a global or a universal affect, much like the commercial that used to be on your TV's where a butterfly in Japan has an affect in an entirely different part of your globe just by flapping its wings. But even more than that, as citizens of your world, as members of a global Brotherhood, and your conscious caring that every one of you experience the very best will begin to be reflected in the governments that represent you.

I'm addressing anyone from any country living under any government. When there is an intent to bless, when there is an intent to heal, when there is an intent to experience the happy dream, those who represent you will begin to represent that. But you know what? You have to express it. You have to embody it in words. You have to become, as I have said, involved.

What I am intending to do here is to get the ball rolling, set this into motion with each of you, so that you might care enough not to get caught up in any current sense of justice that might be... that you might be invited to participate in. But rather, for you to become consciously involved in healing, which absolutely does require saying “No” to that which doesn’t represent the happy dream, to that which doesn’t represent harmony, to that which promotes harm.

What you might be given to do might feel quite inconsequential, not in the least bit earthshaking. But the little amount of force that the flapping of a butterfly wing involves does indeed have its affect globally. All I’m trying to do is to help you bring your attention to where it needs to be in order to promote the sudden shifts of consciousness.

SEEKER: Thank you

RAJ: You are welcome.

Let us continue.

READER: This establishes a state of mind in which the Atonement can be accepted without delay.

RAJ: What does the temporary recognition that there’s a problem.... Read that again.

READER: The initial corrective procedure is to recognize temporarily that there is a problem, but only as an indication that immediate correction is needed. This establishes a state of mind in which the Atonement can be accepted without delay. It should be emphasized, however, that ultimately no compromise is possible between everything and nothing. Time is...

RAJ: Now that means that there can be no compromise between your beliefs and What Is Real. There can be no compromise between your mutually-agreed-upon definitions about what a thing is and What It Actually Is. They won’t merge. They won’t blend. They won’t meld. Your belief will ultimately simply be abandoned.

Continue.

READER: Time is essentially a device by which all compromise in this respect can be given up.

RAJ: Ah! Time is not there for the resolution of a problem. It’s there for the purpose of compromise being given up. Compromise being given up means coming to the point where you give full commitment, full commitment to one thing—Truth, in which there is no suggestion or insinuation of anything to compromise about.

Continue.

READER: It only seems to be abolished by degrees, because time itself involves intervals that do not exist. Miscreation made this necessary as a corrective device. The statement "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life" needs only one slight correction to be meaningful in this context; "He gave it to His only begotten Son."

RAJ READING: ... "He gave it to His only begotten Son."

RAJ: What did he give? He gave...

SEEKER (Reader): The world.

RAJ: And what is the world? It's more than just the world. It's the Kingdom of Heaven. God has given you All That He Is. God has given you Creation. Because He (What He Is) is fully embodied in you as you. And isn't it interesting that your believing that and making commitment to it brings you everlasting life? As long as you are having some belief other than that, some belief of your own creation, you cause yourself to become blinded to your Everlasting Life, your Eternality, your Indestructibility, your Permanence, just because you've chosen to honor a belief of your own making, and you've joined with someone else in it in a mutually-agreed-upon definition.

Continue.

SEEKER (Reader): Can I ask or just expand on this one point? I think it's interesting here. It says, "Atonement can be accepted without delay," and Atonement's an Act of Love. Could you just comment on accepting what would apparently be a task? Is that... am I seeing that right? The Atonement would be a task, an Act of Love. It's like accept your job.

RAJ: Well, the Atonement is an Act of Love. That's a good way of putting it. I would say that's your Function. That is your Purpose. And you could say, yes, that is your job. Yes, I accept it. That's utter wisdom, yes, and simple wisdom, but one that you feel doesn't have the priority that defending yourself in a conflicted world does.

SEEKER (Reader): No, unfortunately you're right.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj, you said earlier, that our big problem is our mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And it just flashed on me that in order to dissolve those, we must see everything that is going on as a call for love.

RAJ: And therefore an opportunity for you to be at your post, on the job, being the Presence of Love.

SEEKER: Right. Which would eliminate all the definitions of what we think we are seeing if we choose only to see whatever we think is happening as a call for love. That will eliminate all the definitions, wouldn't it?

RAJ: It would. Yes. All of your definitions have been put into place as a means of defense. And it's impossible to love and defend yourself simultaneously.

SEEKER: It would shift the whole impetus.

RAJ: Absolutely. And each one of you that does it, contributes to the total shift immeasurably if it's done with commitment.

SEEKER: I want to be very clear on this.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Because we have encyclopedia full of definitions. [small chuckle]

RAJ: That is correct. That's why I talk about being willing to look at everything with innocent eyes, meaning innocent of any distortions caused by preexisting mindsets, mutually-agreed-upon definitions, cherished beliefs. There must be a willingness to look at everything with curiosity because there is more there than what you are seeing, and the more that's there is literally the Presence of God visible. And why not be curious to see that?

SEEKER: This would certainly eliminate fear.

RAJ: Of course. But you won't find the fear eliminated until you dare to love. And you know what? We need more people being willing to dare to love, to risk the chance that becoming defenseless will reveal to them their invulnerability. But your conditioning says, "Lay down your defenses and you will be vulnerable." But you can't love until you are willing to lay down your defenses.

We can put it another way because that sounds as though it would be a test that you might fail at. You can just dare to love and not worry about having to lay down your defenses. You can have an object of your affection, or you can have a principle that's of value to you in your mind that says: "What I want for the world is healing. What I want for my Brother is the happy dream. And I'm asking the Father to reveal to me what I can do to contribute to my Brother's experience of a happy dream. What can I do to contribute to the sudden shift of perception that constitutes the miracle?" And you can leave the abandonment of self-defense on the back burner without even giving any thought to it. And your impulse to care and to embody caring can move you right past any reluctance to releasing your defenses that you would experience if you were sitting there saying, "How am I going to release my defenses?" You see?

SEEKER: Something that helped me years ago come to this point that you're emphasizing is I took the attitude that, "There are no strangers quote 'out there,' there's only family or friends that I haven't met," which really helped me to eliminate the anxiety of encounter.

RAJ: Indeed

SEEKER: And I think if we could kind of adopt that type of attitude, we'd be halfway there at least as far as worrying about what they are going to think or not think, or things like that.

RAJ: That is another way of saying what I have been saying this evening. Yes. Exactly.

SEEKER: It's served me very well so far.

RAJ: And if there is someone who is afraid of you, you will care enough to find ways to reduce their fear, by being involved with them even though they are afraid of you, and finding ongoing ways to provide them with evidence that they don't need to be afraid of you.

SEEKER: That's a very good point.

RAJ: Behave like a friend and provide the evidence that you're a friend that proves that they don't need to be afraid of you. But that means being involved with someone who is afraid of you and behaving as though they have reason to be afraid of you.

SEEKER: This would be recognizing their call for love...

RAJ: That is correct

SEEKER: ...instead of interpreting them as attack.

RAJ: That is correct. Yes.

READER: It should especially be noted that God has only one Son. If all His creations are His Sons, every one must be an integral part of the whole Sonship. The Sonship in its oneness transcends the sum of its parts. However, this is obscured as long as any of its parts is missing. That is why the conflict cannot ultimately be resolved until all the parts of the Sonship have returned.

RAJ: And, and of course, my being with you in this way is to provide an invitation to you to return, to provide you with an embodied expression of my love and of the love of the whole Brotherhood, of all of the Brotherhood who are awake, so that you might know that there is a place to come to where your welcome is already prepared for you, so that you might feel justified in turning toward Home. In effect I am reducing your fear of coming Home. I am reducing your fear of me. I am being with you the way you need to be with those who are afraid of you, those who feel that you are their enemy.

Continue.

READER: Only then can the meaning of wholeness in the true sense be understood. Any part of the Sonship can believe in error or incompleteness if he so chooses. However, if he does so, he is believing in the existence of nothingness. The correction of this error is the Atonement.

RAJ: There you go.

RAJ READING: Any part of the Sonship can believe in error or incompleteness...

RAJ: It's not a sin. To believe in incompleteness is what has been called "the fall." But there it is right there.

RAJ READING: Any part of the Sonship can believe in error or incompleteness if he so chooses.

RAJ: It's not a mortal sin. It's not something that causes you to be subject to ultimate punishment if you come back Home. You see? You can do it. You can do it if you want to. What it means though is that you're believing in the existence of nothingness. That's why it's not a sin and that's why you can't be punished. You can't be punished for believing something that isn't true, and thinking that something is happening that isn't happening, or thinking you have done something that you haven't done. The correction of this error is the Atonement—the sudden shift of perception that causes you to be able to engage in an Act of Love toward your Brother and embody God in the world, thus causing the world to become a truer representation of creation that's called the happy dream.

My goodness we've gotten through two paragraphs. [audience laughter]

EARLIER SEEKER: Has any Brother forgotten twice? Has any Brother, you know, come back Home and left again?

RAJ: Only you.

I'm joking. [audience laughter] No.

SEEKER: Once is enough.

RAJ: Once provides all the learning that is needed.

READER: I have already briefly spoken about readiness, but some additional points might be helpful here. Readiness is only the prerequisite for accomplishment.

RAJ: It's only the prerequisite for accomplishment. Yes

READER: The two should not be confused. As soon as a state of readiness occurs, there is usually some degree of desire to accomplish, but it is by no means necessarily undivided.

RAJ: And there's the key. The moment it's undivided, the accomplishment is done. The moment the desire is undivided, indecision (confusion) disappears. A shift has occurred and it's done. So the key is in the absence of division.

Continue.

READER: The state does not imply more than a potential for a change of mind.

RAJ: That is the state of readiness. Indeed, to be miracle-ready can sometimes be thought of as the destination. You see? But it's just the first step. And then there must be the mind training, the mental self-discipline brought into play that allows you to become focused. Your attention becoming undivided, undistracted. And the moment it is not... the moment it is no longer divided, the miracle-readiness transitions into miracle accomplished.

Continue.

READER: Confidence cannot develop fully until mastery has been accomplished.

RAJ: Mastery meaning becoming single-minded, undivided attention, undivided desire.

Continue.

READER: We have already attempted to correct the fundamental error that fear can be mastered, and have emphasized that the only real mastery is through love. Readiness is only the beginning of confidence. You may think this implies that an enormous amount of time is necessary between readiness and mastery, but let me remind you that time and space are under my control.

RAJ: Confidence. You think of confidence as something you bolster up, you rev it up. You actually use your bodies—many of you workout, many of you exercise, many of you jog—and you do this to get your body into shape. And part of the reason is that the more cohesive your body feels, the more you think you can feel confident in the actions you engage in with your body.

But confidence here is the state of undivided single-mindedness; when you have a desire that is undivided, undistracted by anything. Confidence is knowing that $2+2 = 4$. This confidence doesn't require force. It's a knowing of an unalterable fact that you have absolutely no question about in your mind. You see? That's confidence. Confidence isn't bravado. You see? It's not forcefulness. It's unchangeable, peaceful, awareness of an unalterable fact. Confidence when experienced shows you that there is no need for defense of anything. And usually you associate confidence with a capacity to defend yourself well. So I want you to consider this meaning for the word "confidence."

ANOTHER SEEKER: It says, "But let me remind you that time and space are under my control." Does that imply that... that are long as we are ready and are in the process of becoming masterful with the mind, that... that through the Grace of God at any moment, it can click.

RAJ: Absolutely

SEEKER: So that there is a jump, an immediate shift and we're awake.

RAJ: What is called a time collapse. You may not be suddenly totally awake, but there will be a sudden shift of perception.

SEEKER: So that you're more awake.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Relatively speaking.

RAJ: That is correct. Exactly.

EARLIER SEEKER: Does this fit right in with you having control of everything that doesn't matter? Is that...

RAJ: Yes, it does.

SEEKER: Time and space doesn't matter.

RAJ: Of course, that is correct.

EARLIER SEEKER: I keep having this niggling question which is a little like his—unresolved. How do you apply what has just been said in this paragraph to what many would call "the incorrigibles." I still am confused.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: You should listen to Susan Tuttle. She had this incredible answer.

PREVIOUS SEEKER: I still am confused.

Okay, I'll be more specific. Let's say there are those who appear one's friends, and yet, there's a gap. There is a constant ongoing lack of rapport manifested. I'm sure everyone has had that experience in an ongoing difficulty in which you see on the horizon the potential for healing, but yet it just keeps missing.

RAJ: Well in a way, you could liken that scenario to the one on the world stage at the present time. One must say "No" to the incorrigible behavior, while at the same time being available to be the Presence of Love which invites a change of mind on the part of the one being incorrigible, desiring for healing to be the goal, knowing all along that the one seeming to be incorrigible is a fellow Christ, a Brother, a Sister, the direct and unalterable Expression of God, no matter how they're seeing themselves, and being willing to be that point of love that comes forth as education. Education being the provision of the example of your benign-ness.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Would or could you be specific in terms of who is being incorrigible—the one that is threatening war, or the one that is the objective of that? And wherein lies the perspective that we might become clearer to see? When three countries in the world support one, and the rest of the country is saying "No, we have to deal with the incorrigible in another way..."

RAJ: Let me just throw this out. That's three more than I had willing to witness for me at the time of the crucifixion. The number willing to support does not necessarily determine the correctness of the one being supported.

SEEKER: Thereby we probably have two incorrigibles with extreme.

RAJ: No. If it is not clear to you where a call for correction exists in this case, I encourage you to listen again. I encourage you to listen within again, more deeply. Whether the steps being taken are occurring awkwardly or not, whether they are happening for the very best reasons or not, they are essential steps.

Is that clear enough for you?

SEEKER: Yes. I believe...

RAJ: Now... now this is one of the reasons that I pointed out earlier this evening and wanted to get out into the air, so to speak, the fact that the reasons for steps of correction must be healing, and not punishment. This is the place where adjustment needs to occur in the global family.

Paul is reluctant to let me speak for fear of being on the hot seat, so to speak.

We will go to Trish's question, and I will finagle what I have to say behind Paul's back.

EARLIER SEEKER: Raj, I got a glimpse of what I think you're saying here about education. What I'm not seeing on the world scene is the reasons for the hostilities, which I feel really need to be surfaced, rather than...

RAJ: What hostilities are you talking of?

SEEKER: The hostilities between the governments. What's promoting or provoking war in the first place. The issues that are not being addressed, such as poverty, the imbalance of the world's wealth, greed, inhumanity, inhumanness. These issues. And the inquiry of religious fanaticism hiding behind... because of deep inner seated jealousies, ancient jealousies, hiding behind God to exercise these hatreds. This is the education I feel that needs to be re-educated, even to the point of maybe helicopters with pamphlets. [laughing] There are things I feel that can be done and now, rather than this constant focus and preoccupation as whether we should go to war, whether we should not go to war. This is not, to me, this is not where the focus needs to be.

RAJ: At the moment that is where the focus needs to be. The focus needs to be on the meaning of the word "No." And it needs to be focused exactly where it's being focused.

SEEKER: Well, but this other...

RAJ: Once, as I have said before, once you have restrained unrestrained expressions of harm,...

SEEKER: I see. Yeah, I see what you're saying.

RAJ: ...then education can begin.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: It is a shame that it has gotten to the point where there is unrestrained expression of harm. Education should have come into play much sooner.

SEEKER: Long before this.

But they go hand in hand. I mean this is the intent of restraint, and then education.

RAJ: At the bottom line that is correct. That is at the bottom line what this uncivilized, civilized world is attempting to embody right now. But just as with any tax bill, or appropriations bill, that goes through your Congress, there are little agendas tacked on. And the little agendas will need ultimately to be dropped off so that the fundamental humane acts of love that constitute being truly civilized are the alpha and omega of the action that's engaged in, without the private little leveraging agendas that get tacked onto it for personal gain, or national gain, and so on.

SEEKER: So it's first things first.

RAJ: Yes. First thing you have to do is get their attention. The first thing I have to do is get your attention. And you're not an enemy. Until one's... until the attention is gotten, communication can't occur. And until communication can occur, resolution and healing cannot occur. And if the reason for communication is love, then the manner in which communication is engaged in will in all respects conform to the end goal, which is the mutual experience of love. Friendship.

And you know what? In order for that to happen, as you all know, each of you has to become defenseless, so that you might be able to be genuine with each other, so that you can speak from your heart of hearts, and so that you might voice the discrepancies that you see that you have been experiencing. Not as a form of attack, but as a point for the two of you to become mutually clearer about where there can be healing.

SEEKER: You surface the truth of the issues.

RAJ: Indeed. But you know what the truth of the issue is, at the bottom line? Everybody wants to be loved. Everyone wants to be respected. Everyone wants to be able to feel love for everyone else. Everyone wants to feel safe in giving and receiving love, and in being respected. That's it at the bottom line. And if you are all the direct Expression of God, and therefore the Christ—plain, pure and simple then you are all worthy of respect and love and kindness, and nothing less.

There is a United States in order for there to be a united world that even goes beyond the meaning of united states. Everyone is going to have to desire for there to be peace, and desire it enough to behave in a way that inspires others to let down their defenses, in order to find that in the absence of their defenses they don't get attacked and that they are safe. And when the desire that all of you embody for your Brothers globally to feel safe, and where there can be open communion one with another around the globe, when that desire becomes undivided, that's when [snap of the fingers] it happens. That is when it's done. That's when the first domino falls, and the second and the third and the fourth and the fifth, and on, and on.

Are you getting it?

EARLIER SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Okay over these last three weeks we've been working really hard to pin you down.

RAJ: Working really hard?

SEEKER: To pin you down on the issues that are facing us. You have told us several times that Hitler is now awake.

RAJ: Indeed

SEEKER: When Hitler was embodied he was responsible for an awful lot of inhumanity.

RAJ: Not all by himself

SEEKER: No, not all by himself, but as a symbol he represents and was the leader, at least of the fascist movement. And at the time the free world said, "No, we are not going to have this." And the free world said "No" with such ferocity that it went down in history as World War II. And many people died during this war, and there were many atrocities during this war. Did the ferocity of the free world, did the ferocity of the free world saying "No," did that play a role in Hitler's awakening? And was it the most healing thing for the world to do at the time under those circumstances?

RAJ: It's a dangerous question you ask. It played a role in his awakening only in the sense that the Holy Spirit can use every event on behalf of the one waking up. But let's not think that the world, or the United States and a few allies saying an unequivocal "No" to Saddam Hussein will have the beneficent effect of promoting his awakening, and therefore perhaps further justify saying "No" vehemently.

You know what I do want you to... I want everyone who's hearing what I am saying to know? Everyone... many are surprised that Hitler is awake after such a short passage of time since the atrocities he engaged in. It's possible for Saddam Hussein to wake up tomorrow and not some years after his death. It's possible for each one of you to wake up tomorrow. Keep that in mind because it keeps perspective. Because at the same time you say "No" with physical force, you will know and you will be open to the possibility of a sudden shift of perception—a spontaneous, sudden shift of perception on his part. And there is a need for a sudden shift of perception on his part.

The ferocity of the “No” that you spoke of in World War II was an example of, we will say, relatively speaking, a global desire that came close to a point of being undivided. And when a desire for that which represents Truth and God and Life becomes undivided, as I said, the desire becomes fulfilled spontaneously. Which is another reason that I have been addressing everyone’s willingness, or the need for everyone to be willing to become involved to the point of saying “No” where “No” needs to be said, and “Yes” where “Yes” needs to be said.

So that whether you join the infantry and go to the front, or whether you’re at home, your un-private thoughts, your un-private commitment—because there are no private thoughts—do join on behalf of healing. Again not punishment, healing. And you know what? The potential for redemption.

If someone has a highly communicable disease, you quarantine him. Why? Well because at the bottom line you’re unaware of your invulnerability as a Child of God. If you knew that you could not be subject to something that God didn’t create, you would not quarantine the person with this disease. That wouldn’t correct the problem. But it would determine how you behaved relative to him. As long as you don’t know how to be in the presence of the communicable disease without catching it, you quarantine him, or her, and then you take steps to heal. So, is this making sense?

You do what you have to do under the circumstances at your present point of growth, your present point of awakening, while at the same time turning toward the Altar to be open to even clearer views of Reality As God Is Being It, so that that might become embodied in the Gift of Love that constitutes the Act of Love that is the Atonement.

So right now everyone is engaged in acts of confinement of a problem that are in many ways gross, not very spiritual, because you don’t yet have the spiritual means to do it otherwise. So you do it the way you have to do it, while at the same time remembering what I brought out at the beginning this evening. That correction means healing, not punishment. So that you might not forget that your focus of attention needs to be on healing, transformation, regeneration, redemption. If healing is the goal, then every aspect of the means of arriving at the healing will reflect and embody that goal.

EARLIER SEEKER: Even war? If it has to come to that? If you hold the idea that the intent is for healing and transformation, not for punishment?

RAJ: Even the forceful confinement or restraining of a continuing intent to bring harm, yes. If you wish to call that war, you may.

SEEKER: I'm trying to be very clear on supporting what needs to be done with the right attitude.

RAJ: What I want to point out is that the more individuals on your globe who will become involved and take a stand "Yes" or "No"—"Yes" for that which reflects and identifies God, and "No" to that which does not—the more on your globe that would take a position, cast their vote, the less and less likely it would be that a single missile would be fired, or shot would be fired. But if that kind of resolve cannot be arrived at in the mind of mankind, then absolutely missiles will have to be launched, bullets will have to be fired, and the confinement will have to be accomplished. You cannot look at something that does not reflect God and is aggressively opposite to Love, and say, "I will not say 'No' to this until I can do it from a supreme level of divine spirituality." You've got to say "No" in whatever way works.

SEEKER: I think you've really cleared up a lot of confusion around this, this evening, and I thank you, at least for myself.

EARLIER SEEKER: Well, I'm not quiet at peace with this because I notice that whatever goes on, on the big scene usually does show up personally. And I certainly have been met with the last few months, a year or so, with an ongoing message that certainly I felt was broadcast as a dinner bell before, let's say, the pending threat of war has shown up. And that message which I can't say that I've gotten a handle on, or have healed is this. That our main enslavement or preoccupation is with two things, and this is what my Guide said, that keeps us in a box, each one of us in the box.

And those two messages are the temptation around mutual agreements, are righteousness and personal power. And I feel if I had healed that within the point of my awareness, I may not be seeing on the world stage what I see today. And even so, I'm keen to it, and anytime when the air of, let's say, where my interest is drawn to what is right, or righteousness. Everyone on the war scene feels like their a good guy in a bad world. And that to me still stands as the dilemma.

And I'm sure that's why we have this whole book, and the time to work out this dilemma of how... at least I am still working on how do I talk away, argue away, in my own awareness the issue of righteousness, and out of the valuing of righteousness that I would attempt to exercise personal power. That to me has been where I've been working within, you know, behind the scenes to reckon with those two issues as I feel is the basis of the correction. So I'll be quiet.

RAJ: I can answer this relatively briefly. Righteousness and personal power are selfish. They're always with the focus on the self, the self feeling righteous, the self wanting personal power. It is very simply the nature of the ego, which is incapable of extension, which is incapable of embrace, which is incapable of putting another's interest before its own.

Don't you find it interesting that the Atonement is an Act of Love, and not something else? It's the specific thing which breaks the dream. It's the specific thing that undoes the illusions. Because an Act of Love is not selfish. It doesn't relate to one's self. It requires involvement or joining. And more than the joining that happens between one person and another, it's the primary joining that one has to engage in with the Father in order to be infilled with What Love Really Is, and the inspiration of it that causes it to spontaneously bubble forth and embrace another, thus breaking the isolation.

Again that's the point of what I wanted to convey tonight. Correction means healing, not punishment, where correction is needed. And it involves each one's willingness to provide the correction where it's needed, not with any sense of righteousness, not with any sense of personal power, but as a communication of benign-ness and friendship.

And you know what? Every single country in this world has friends that it needs to reestablish its friendship with. You get that? Not enemies that they have to establish friendships with, but old friends, forever friends, that they have forgotten their friendship with and need to reestablish those friendships that could never actually end. And that's it in a nutshell. And just to be utterly clear. If one of the friends, by virtue of both friends forgetting that they were friends, has become so frightened that there is low trust and that one continues to be unfriendly when overtures of friendliness are extended, the one who has become clear enough to care, to extend friendship once again, must refrain from becoming reactive to the lack of trust, and persist in extending friendship apparently over time, over a period of time, with persistence, so that, for lack of better words, a history of friendship and benign-ness has been embodied, acted out, in the world. And do this for however long it takes for the more frightened friend to lay down his fear. And that must be the goal.

If the frightened friend is inclined to express his fear in harmful acts, steps must be taken to keep those harmful acts from becoming actualized. Why? So that harm does not occur to either one while the reestablishing of an ancient friendship occurs.

Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Yes, thank you.

RAJ: The next section which we will begin on next week is called "The Meaning of the Last Judgement." Good timing.

I love you.

Two things. I know this sounds trite. Love one another as I have loved you. Second thing, I encourage all of you to revisit last week's Gathering, because in it you will find that I described exactly how to deal with Saddam Hussein, and I did it by describing at some length how I deal with you.

Okay, I look forward to being with you next week.

A Course In Miracles reference pages)
Chapter 2 – THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT
Section –THE MEANING OF THE LAST JUDGMENT
First Edition – p. 29 / Second Edition – p. 33

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: We will go directly to the book. And again for those in the second edition, we're on page 33 section VIII, "The Meaning of the Last Judgment." And for those in the first edition it's on page 29. Go ahead.

READER: The Meaning of the Last Judgment

One of the ways in which you can correct the magic-miracle confusion is to remember that you did not create yourself.

RAJ: Ah. That's because when you engage in what would be called magic, it amounts to you thinking that you exist in your own right, on your own, independent, and that in that state you have a capacity to make things happen. In other words, you are god, you are the creator. And whatever you believe that you create is only an effect of magic, and it's an illusion.

The miracle, on the other hand, is the result of your not standing separate, not thinking that you exist in your own right separate and independent, and having no capacity whatsoever to act on your own. In other words, you are not God, but God is all there is of you. And in this perspective and in this state of mind, your very Being is expressing the meaning of the statement "Thy Will be done, Father." And you're in a State of Listening, in a State of Union, in a State of Communion with God, which is your natural State of Being. It's the only State of Being you have.

From there, because of your union and because of your yielding to the Father's Will, His Will becomes yours. And you act out the Presence of God. You embody God. You give expression to God. And when you begin to do that as you are waking up, the result is what is called a miracle—a sudden shift of perception in you that, as I've said before, causes you to behave in a new way, embody in a new way, no longer embodying magic or illusion. So, if you can all dare to consider the possibility that not only did you not create yourself, but your parents didn't create you either, and that if there's anything there at all right where you are, it's God being All There Is of you, then confusion will leave, and what is embodied will be cohesive, will be unified, perfect, lovely, harmonizing. Everything you do will fit into the Wholeness of Creation as an integral part of the Wholeness of Creation. And you will see the happy dream begin to be manifested in the world.

Again, the key lies in daring to consider the possibility that you are not self-created, and that you are not what you have come to the conclusion that you are based upon your ability to think and reason and come to conclusions. You are not self-created. Your existence is entirely God-derived.

Continue.

READER: You are apt to forget this when you become egocentric, and this puts you in a position where a belief in magic is virtually inevitable.

RAJ: In fact, it's not only inevitable, it's going to seem to you to be absolutely necessary in order for you to survive.

Continue.

READER: Your will to create was given you by your Creator, Who was expressing the same Will in His creation. Since creative ability rests in the mind, everything you create is necessarily a matter of will. It also follows that whatever you alone make is real in your own sight, though not in the Mind of God. This basic distinction leads directly into the real meaning of the Last Judgment.

RAJ: Since creative ability rests in the mind and we've talked before about the fact that there are no idle thoughts, every thought you have has an effect, whether Real or not.

Everything you create is necessarily a matter of will. And I'd like to make a little distinction here. When you are behaving as though you are self-created, the word "will," the word "willfulness" is what describes the mode of your creativity. When you are joined with the Father and not claiming a right to any independent act of will, the word "willingness" is the best expression of the way in which you create, because you are willing to let the Father embody Himself in you as you, and let that find expression in your every act. So it's a different kind of will.

Another distinction that needs to be made is that willfulness always embodies your fear and acts out defense. Whereas when you are joined with the Father and claiming no separate right to act on your own, your acts embody, embrace inclusion, Love, and constitute the extension of healing.

Let us continue.

READER: The Last Judgment is one of the most threatening ideas in your thinking. This is because you do not understand it. Judgment is not an attribute of God. It was brought into being only after the separation, when it became one of the many learning devices to be built into the overall plan.

RAJ: The overall plan of reawakening. Indeed.

READER: Just as the separation occurred over millions of years, the Last Judgment will extend over a similarly long period, and perhaps an even longer one.

RAJ: Now, I'm going to interrupt here because that can sound very discouraging. But I'm going to mention this. Once you awaken, you will make true judgments all the time, because that is natural to you. To recognize What Is True and nothing else, constitutes the very Nature of Being, with a capital "B", your True Being. And just as a habit isn't dropped lightly and requires of you persistence as a new habit develops, you will find yourself consciously practicing judgment—meaning the recognition of What Is Of Value and nothing else. You will do that with persistence. But not because you're any longer overcoming an inclination to go back to the old habit. It will seem to go on for a great deal of time. That's what it means, "until time leaves your awareness, until time is abolished."

So don't be discouraged. Hitler is awake now. I am awake now. All of your Guides are awake now. Awakening can happen now. So do not be discouraged by this. It is not meant to discourage you.

Continue.

READER (said this): The length of the Last Judgment, however, can...

READER (if reading the first edition, 14th printing): Its length, however, can...

READER (if reading the second edition): Its length can, however,...

READER: ...be greatly shortened by miracles, the device for shortening but not abolishing time. If a sufficient number become truly miracle-minded, this shortening process can be virtually immeasurable. It is essential, however, that you free yourself from fear quickly, because you must emerge from the conflict if you are to bring peace to other minds.

RAJ: And in the second edition it says:

RAJ READING: It is essential, however, that you free yourself from fear quickly, because you must emerge from the conflict if you are to bring peace to other minds.

RAJ: Now that's your job. To bring peace. To bring peace to other minds.

Relinquishing fear, abandoning it, is easy. And everyone who has meditated has demonstrated this to themselves. Abandoning fear is easy if you don't value it. So, abandoning fear so that you find yourself in your peace is something any of you can do at any moment during any day, and you can do it as often as you choose. That's not difficult. That is not going to take millions of years to accomplish. And so you have the capacity, all of you, today to access your peace and be available to bring peace to other minds.

Interesting, isn't it, that it's your job to bring peace? You could say that it's your job to wage peace, instead of war. And I'll just take a moment to be utterly clear here.

Waging peace, bringing peace to the minds of others is accomplished by saying "No" to everything that is unlike peace. It isn't just a sweet, smiling peaceful face and gentle demeanor. It is a gentle spirit capable of unequivocally saying "No" to that which doesn't represent peace, to that which doesn't embody peace. And then in peace providing an irresistible invitation to your Brother to join you in that peace and in the attitude of Love that insures that peace will be embodied further.

I could put it this way. Teachers of Peace are not wimps. Teachers of Peace are able to stand in the face of calls for Love that appear to be attack, without being swayed by the presentation, but with the capability to unswervingly say "No," an absolute "No" to that which doesn't support peace, so that the educational Expression of Love and Intelligence can occur and transform.

Let's continue.

READER: The Last Judgment is generally thought of as a procedure undertaken by God. Actually it will be undertaken by my brothers with my help.

RAJ: And I'll tell you right now, that that's what we're doing here every Thursday evening. And that's what happens every time any one of you joins with Me or with your Guide. I am helping you discern between What Is Real and what is not, so that you can choose for What Is and abandon what is not, withdraw your investment in what is not.

Continue.

READER: It is a final healing rather than a meting out of punishment, however much you may think that punishment is deserved. Punishment is a concept totally opposed to right-mindedness, and the aim of the Last Judgment is to restore right-mindedness to you. The Last Judgment might be called a process of right evaluation.

RAJ: Read that sentence again.

READER: The Last Judgment might be called a process of right evaluation.

RAJ: And so actually, the word "last" doesn't mean quite what you thought it did.

Continue.

READER: It simply means that everyone will finally come to understand what is worthy and what is not.

RAJ: Yes. In other words, you will spontaneously and easily make the distinction between What Is Worthy and what is not. You will be able to distinguish the tares from the wheat.

Continue.

READER: After this, the ability to choose can be directed rationally.

RAJ: Now you hear people throwing around the idea of distinguishing the tares from the wheat. And you wait until the tares and the wheat are full grown because that's when you can finally recognize the difference. When they're young, they all look the same. And so, if you try to separate it then, you will throw out the good with the bad.

You have distinguish between the tares and the wheat, and then what? You have to separate the tares from the wheat. An act occurs. A decision that governs your actions occurs. And in this case, the action is your withdrawal of your investment of faith in what has no value, even if everyone else mutually agrees that what you are abandoning is of value still.

Continue.

READER: Until this distinction is made, however, the vacillations between free and imprisoned will cannot but continue.

RAJ: Important point. Until this distinction is made vacillations between free will and imprisoned will, will continue. You will still be confused and what you embody will manifest that confusion.

Essential to awakening is the making of distinctions. This is so important, especially in the present time when "New Age" thought says, "Everyone is creating their own world. And it's not appropriate to interfere with someone else's point of view." It is a laissez-faire attitude, an "anything goes" attitude where no distinction between What Is Of Value and what is not is being made. And the result of that is, for lack of better words, the breakdown of the moral fiber of society. "Nothing's right or wrong.

Thinking makes it so. Whatever you make up, hey, that's your right. Whatever I make up, hey, that's my right." But there is... there is a Groundedness of Being, and the Groundedness of Being is Truth, What Is True. And if you're not making any distinction between What Is True and what you made-up, you're lost.

And so, in the recognition that awakening requires that distinction be made, you are going to seem to step on the toes of egos who want the right to believe anything and to say, "If you don't think it's right, that's just your opinion. It doesn't count. It doesn't matter." It does matter.

Now, how are you going to know What Is True? How are you going to make the distinction? You're going to have to ask somebody who knows the difference. You're going to have to become a student. You're going to have to say, "You know, I'm willing to believe that I don't know What The Truth Is at the moment, and I want someone who does truly know What The Truth Is to help me make the distinction." And that is exactly what every one of your Guides is for—to help you redefine by distinguishing correctly between illusions that you think are real, and Realities that are Real. Because, you know what? You're not experiencing total illusion. You're experiencing Reality mixed in with a lot of misunderstandings, a lot of mutually-agreed-upon definitions that, in the end, were made as a defense against knowing the Truth.

So again, awakening isn't for wimps. It isn't going to be for the namby-pamby. It's going to be for those who are willing to take on the task of making distinctions where everyone else doesn't want to make distinctions. Is that making sense?

Now, that might seem scary if you think it's your job to convince everyone else of Truth. You know what? When you ask to know What The Truth Is of your Guide, of the Holy Spirit, of the Father, and Truth is uncovered to you, it's a relief. There's peace with it. You are relieved of the fear you were experiencing because you didn't know What The Truth Is. And, as I've said before, you feel safe. And you know what happens when you're feeling safe and you're not confused? You don't behave in an unloving way toward your Brother, or your Sister. Just like you don't find me behaving in an unlovely or an unkind way with you

And so your Presence as you express the Truth is one which makes it quite possible for the one you're sharing it with to hear it with fresh ears, and not be put off by you. Truth that is revealed to you, the Divine One that You Are, is not something you will hit everyone else over the head with. There will be no contest to it. So it isn't a scary thing if you engage in it.

When you see others “get a hold of the Truth and lay it on ya” [audience laugh], and you feel the discomfort of that, you might think that if you got hold of Truth, you’d do the same thing. And you know you don’t want to do that. And so you might say, “I don’t want to know What The Truth Is because I don’t want... I don’t want to end up beating everybody over the head with it.” So, I encourage you to dare to explore listening for the Truth so it might be revealed to you, so that it might affect the way you behave in the world, and you become an agent for change without arousing fear and resistance in your Brothers and Sisters.

Continue.

READER: The first step toward freedom involves a sorting out of the false from the true. This is a process of separation in the constructive sense, and reflects the true meaning of the Apocalypse.

RAJ: Do you know what? There’s only three things God won’t let you have. Only three things He won’t let you have—sin, disease, and death. The Apocalypse is the sorting out of those three things so they are sorted out of your experience.

Of course, you have named, you’ve given definitions to, you have created for yourself illusions of lots of diseases, lots of sins, and lots of ways to die. But that really doesn’t complicate anything at all, ‘cause there are only three things—sin, disease, and death—no matter by how many names you call it. So again, awakening isn’t as hard as you might be imagining.

Continue.

READER: Everyone will ultimately look upon his own creations and choose to preserve only what is good, just as God Himself looked upon what He had created and knew that it was good.

RAJ: You see, when you look on the results of your thoughts that were good, and you see that they are good, you see that they are truly good, you see that they are eternally good, you’re placing a benediction on them just as the Father did. “And God saw everything that He had made, and behold, it was very good.” That’s a benediction. That’s Love. That’s an Acknowledgment of Truth.

So do you see that the making of the distinction between What’s Of Value and what isn’t, constitutes a choice that you make where what is valueless is obviously valueless, and you let go of your valuing of it, and it’s gone. And What Is Of Value you recognize as Good, as of the Nature of God, and of the Nature of the Real You. And so, making the distinction allows you to clearly glorify God.

And so it's not you sitting in your ivory tower making distinctions. "That's good. That's bad. You're in. You're out. I like you. I don't like you." You see? It's a holier thing than making distinctions between right and wrong and self-righteously declaring it. It's a holy thing to make the distinction so that what is not of value no longer receives your attention because clearly it is meaningless to you.

Continue.

READER: At this point, the mind can begin to look with love on its own creations because of their worthiness. At the same time the mind will inevitably disown its miscreations which, without belief, will no longer exist.

RAJ: Yes. Continue.

READER: The term "Last Judgment" is frightening not only because it has been projected onto God, but also because of the association of "last" with death. This is an outstanding example of upside-down perception. If the meaning of the Last Judgment is objectively examined, it is quite apparent that it is really the doorway to life.

RAJ: Yes. Remember last week we were talking about the word "correction." And that from the ego's standpoint, the word "correction" means judgment. It means punishment.

But correction as we are using it here means healing. So the Last Judgment unclearly interpreted would see you being subject to correction and punishment. But, to be provided with the clarity to make the distinction between What Is Of Value and what is not, your being able to make the distinction means that you become dis-illusioned. You see? And you are left with clarity, and so it's the beginning of being awake. And so it's healing, not punishment. You see?

Continue.

SEEKER: No one who is... No one who... it is quite apparent that it is really the doorway to life. Okay.

READER: No one who lives in fear is really alive.

RAJ: Yes. And I just want to insert here that at the present time on your globe the majority of you are living in fear. And it's not your Birthright. And it's not to be really alive. And so, whatever it takes to say "No" to that which seems to create fear is essential.

Continue.

ANOTHER SEEKER: May I ask a question?

RAJ: Yes, you may.

SEEKER: You said that the majority of us here on this planet are living in fear. Does that mean that there are some people who are fearless on this planet? I've never met one. That's why I'm curious.

RAJ: There are many who are living in a great deal less fear than others. And I'm inviting all of you to join those who are so disposed at the present time, so that the weight for... (the w-e-i-g-h-t)... the weight for Truth can become more focused, more single, more pure. And thus help to bring peace to other minds.

SEEKER: And this is accomplished primarily by corrective thinking? Is that...

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And we're doing that right now. So what we're doing here is becoming less and less fearful.

RAJ: I hope that you are.

SEEKER: Alright, I'm just wondering if there's any shortcuts? That's... that's why...

RAJ: You don't need shortcuts to be the Presence of Love. You should wish for Eternity to be able to be the Presence of Love. You should wish not to be able to get it over with quickly. It's your Function to be this with each other forever.

SEEKER: So as one becomes more and more loving, then automatically they become less and less fearful.

RAJ: Of course, because Love and fear can't occupy the same space. And you become more and more loving by joining with the Father so that you might know exactly what embodies Love under the particular circumstances, rather than your going through steps to embody a concept of love that you have held, perhaps for all of your life or for a number of years.

Because a concept of love does not have the bubbly in it of actual Living Love. It's just a rehash. It's like an old bottle of... it's like an old glass of champagne. You need to be constantly opening a new bottle of champagne. You need to constantly be opening the Presence of Love that the Father would extend through you now, and now, and now, without any preconception as to how that's going to appear. As I've said before, sometimes it will be a caress. Sometimes it will be a strong arm holding down an obstreperous and careless individual. So you can't dare to second guess what is called for based on your best past perceptions or your best concept of what love is.

Continue.

READER: Your own last judgment cannot be directed toward yourself, because you are not your own creation.

RAJ: Isn't that wonderful? So the Last Judgment isn't... hasn't shifted from God condemning you to you condemning you, because it's not about you at all. It's about misplaced value. It's about discerning where you have misplaced value. It's not where you look and discover what a sorry asshole you've been. [audience laughter] It's a joyful experience of recognizing things you were believing that aren't true that you were suffering from needlessly, and that you can now be free of suffering from because it's such obvious nonsense. And because it's so clearly obvious, you're not attracted to it anymore. It's relief. And it's joy.

Continue.

READER: You can, however, apply it meaningfully and at any time to everything you have made, and retain in your memory only what is creative and good.

RAJ: Now you can apply it meaningfully at any time, but I'm going to say at any time that you join with someone who knows the Truth, and you've asked, "Please show me the difference," and then willingly accept the difference, willingly look at things anew without insisting upon hanging onto an old pet perception, or an old or past loved concept.

So the more consistently you're in touch with your Guide or the Holy Spirit, the more consistently your misperceptions will be uncovered to you. Not with any judgment on you, but with simple distinction so that you're able to say, "Wow! That's meaningless." And in that recognition, be free of it forever. And be the happier for it.

Continue.

READER: This is what your right-mindedness cannot but dictate. The purpose of time is solely to "give you time" to achieve this judgment. It is your own perfect judgment of your own perfect creations. When everything you retain is lovable, there is no reason for fear to remain with you. This is your part in the Atonement.

RAJ: Whew!

RAJ READING: This is your part in the Atonement.

RAJ: What's is the Atonement? An Act of Love. So, when you do this, you make a gift to everyone and everything, because your mind becomes single, without distractions, without confusions. And in that singleness, in that single-mindedness, in that purity of the awareness of What Truth Is, in the awareness of What Truth Is, you spontaneously and effortlessly and without conscious design become a beacon of Light, a Presence of Love that blesses absolutely everyone. Not just on your globe, but the whole Brotherhood—those who are awake as well as those who are still dreaming dreams.

So, when you do this... well, there's no reason for delay. And that means you've got to start doing it right where you are. Right where the calls for Love are coming from that appear as hate and attack. And right there with those who are apparently loving as well, and those who are not making waves or creating dissonance. Because you're not totally free of illusion about either one of them—those who are lovely and lovable, and those who are calling for Love and appear to be hateful and a problem.

Yes. Somebody had a hand?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Some years ago if I remember correctly in my study of the Course under your direction, you were making the distinction between discernment and judgment. That being when you see an apple and an orange, you're discerning that there is a difference, but you're not judging one to be better or other than the other.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Of late in our discussions here on Thursday night, it seems to have been a greater distinction to make a "Yes" a "No." Make a choice for the correct, the good, the way the Father would see it.

RAJ: Well let's put it this way. You have a bowl of oranges and you have a bowl of lemons, and you want to make orange juice. Are you going to pick the lemons?

SEEKER: No.

RAJ: Right. You're going to say "No" to the lemons. Not because lemons are bad, but because lemons don't make orange juice. You have to make a distinction between what fits and what doesn't, what works and what doesn't.

SEEKER: My question would be that because that was some years ago, I don't remember... but now we're hitting the nail a little harder on the head.

We're making a greater distinction, a greater discernment. Does that have, even though they're the same words as they probably meant, does that have any indication as to the body waking up more, calling for more action? Is it any distinction between a more awake state of man? Because now we've made the distinction between judgment and discernment, now we're making the distinction between judgment as to what we choose, what the Father would choose. I'm just curious as to the... if that is an indicator because it is over a period of time. And time is why we are given it to... what is it?... "give you time to achieve this judgment." Just in my own opening up.

RAJ: Yes. It is a very good question. The call for judgment has increased because everyone is closer to waking up. And therefore, it's not only easier to make the distinctions, it's more necessary to make the distinctions.

SEEKER: And choose.

RAJ: And choose. Exactly.

SEEKER: So the old judgment, the word "judgment" as opposed to discernment, is a different judgment, if I would...

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: ...today than it was five, maybe ten years ago.

RAJ: The old judgment was an evaluation of worth. The old judgment was an evaluation of the worth of an objective thing, another individual. As in a court of law, you have been judged and found guilty and now, because you are a bad person, you must pay the penalty.

What we're talking about here is making a distinction between each one's faulty definitions of what is of value and what is not, and his true definitions of What Is Of Value and what is not. We're talking about something within each individual.

And so, if you say Saddam Hussein is an evil man, you are making a judgment about the man. But the judgment we're talking about is what occurs when you say, "Saddam Hussein is an evil man," and then you catch yourself, and you ask yourself whether that thought that you are entertaining is of value or not, whether it is a worthy thought or not, whether it represents the Truth or not, whether it embodies What God Is Being or not, so that you may choose not to embody that thought. So that you choose not to embrace it. So that you say "No" to the thought and are open to discover What Is True about that man from the Father.

Now if someone is behaving badly, if someone is behaving poorly, you say "No" to the poor behavior, because you know since he is the direct Expression of God that he is capable of behaving better. And it's your intent to inspire better behavior because you know he's capable of it. Your action toward him arises out of truly an ultimate... an ultimately true awareness of him, so that your behavior doesn't condemn him, but uplifts him by encouragement and inspiration that comes out of the Love you feel because you are apprehending him truly. All you need is the ability to make the distinction between the two examples that I just gave. You see? And you have to remember that your reason for being in relationships is healing, not punishment. You see? So that the means you use embody the vision, the goal, that you would achieve.

SEEKER: May I go further?

RAJ: You may.

SEEKER: Could it be that the purpose being... I don't know the word... exemplified... would be the calling forth of people globally to the Iraq situation in expressing, calling forth, challenging the greater body in making a "Yes/No" decision as to war as a response to this behavior. Could... because the change from judgment to discernment back to judgment, if you will, was over time, could this also be as we called it twelve years ago, the Gulf Crisis as the rebirthing of something new in the Middle East? Could this be the next step of coming together globally to look at this as a global response to... what might previously have been a behavior that would have called for direct war, like in World War II or something? What I'm saying is are we seeing a progress and a coming together over this issue, and might that be greater to the Truth than good or bad behavior?

RAJ: It is a good question. It is a call. It is a global call. It is a global roll call, if you will, inviting people, inviting everyone to discover the part they can play by being involved together in standing with What Is Of Value, and standing against what is not of value. Not against with force, but against in the awareness that what is valueless is meaningless.

There is a global call for unity of intent to demand the Expression of Intelligence and Love and Respect for every single individuality and nothing less. Even though this will seem to infringe on free will, which everyone is... not everyone, but too many are intent upon valuing, free will that is, to the point where no distinction is being made between the allowability of free will that harms and free will that heals.

It is time for mankind to discover its global capacity to speak on behalf of global humaneness. It is time for mankind to globally discover its integrity, and that it has a capacity to exert its integrity on behalf of the integrity of every man, woman, and child on the globe, and thereby experience a unity that transcends national ego interests. And that this is what the call is for, is evidence of progress made. The world, mankind, is in a new place.

I want to point something out. Many of you have jobs and you also have relationships outside of your jobs. And you go to work and you have a skill that you're able to express and embody well. But at home, we'll say, you don't have as many skills as would be helpful, and so what you embody and express, if it were put under a magnifying glass, would seem to provide many opportunities for judgment and for discrediting you. And I mean every single one of you. Is the fact that in some areas of your life you don't have great skills... does the fact that in areas of your life you don't have great skill, and therefore behave poorly, does that constitute justification for calling the good work that you are able to do skillfully in your job into question? Be careful that you don't allow yourself to succumb to the invitation to discredit an essential act of integrity, because in some other areas, the person expressing the integrity may not have expressed integrity. And I'm going to leave it at that.

You all are opening up a lot and becoming significantly less defended against what, just a short time ago, you would have been unwilling to embrace. You are becoming more significantly grounded and stable. And it's giving you the ability to recognize that every aspect of awakening is intelligent, is reasonable. And that even though it calls for you to embrace what would have been unthinkable in the not too distant past, is now thinkable. And that means shift is happening.

Okay. I love you all. Good night.

AUDIENCE: Good night.

October 12, 2003--A Course In Miracles Study Group with Raj/Jesus

Discussion Today

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

I would like to start with some comments. The last time we gathered, we ended with a discussion about, let us say, the rate of speed with which I was moving and the fact that there wasn't enough time for everything to settle in, to be dealt with. And so I indicated that today we would take time for you to address portions of the book that we moved over quickly that there is lack of clarity about for you and that you wish to have clarity about.

I want to say something. We call this an ACIM Study Group and we have been for over a year discussing and moving through the Course. But you know what? I'm not really here trying to illuminate the words in a book. This isn't about quote "a course of study" unquote. At the bottom line, the Course is all about you. It's not about the Course.

My Function here is not to illuminate the Course but to illuminate you--Who You Divinely Are--to yourself, or shall I say, your Self, with a capital "S", to you. You are the focal point because you are the ones having the dream, the nightmare. The book isn't having a dream. And the purpose of the book is to cause you to experience your Self more clearly. The purpose of the book is to give you language and concepts that will undo the sense of yourself which you carry with you and reinforce and embody and actify, if I may put it that way, and undo it. The book is not the focal point. Your Real Self is and your, what you would call as an ego, your potential is the focal point. Divine potential, not ego potential.

So far, as we have read, I have been bringing the attention back to you, using it to help you see how you utilize your mind, and the starting point that you are using.

Last week, the last meeting I pointed out there are two different operating systems. One of the them is Real in You, and one is the one you have made-up. Everything that we have read up to this point has helped to provide language and concepts that will allow you to grasp this. But you know what? We're at a point of transition here, you might say, out of the theoretical into the practical where it stops being something you're studying about; ideas that you're able to put together, classify, categorize, put into your memory banks, and then draw from, like legal boiler plate, phrases, statements that can be pulled out of a memory bank and put together in fresh new ways, intriguing ways, surprising ways.

It's not about gathering anything from memory banks, and it's not about putting anything into memory banks. It's not about finding something new to incorporate into your mutually-agreed-upon definitions, refining them and perfecting them and making them be more spiritual while still functioning from an operating system which is purely imaginary and has nothing to do with Reality.

Your boiler plate, your definitions, and the way you have put everything together to give you a sense of what everything is about so you may feel secure, is what you are about to be willing to abandon, if indeed you want to wake up, if indeed you want to regain your Sanity. In abandoning this, it feels like abandoning your security. But you know what? Your security has always been derived from your ability to give quick responses because you can access your memory quickly and efficiently so that you have a rebuttal, you have an idea that overrides the idea that has been expressed. That's not really security. It's just a good defense system.

When you move into the other Operating System, you move into a place where your immediate response to anything is, "I don't know what the answer is," and where you abandon the attempt to have the quick answer, the quick rebuttal that supercedes whatever came before it. Switching to the other Operating System is a matter of moving into the, I'm going to say, forever unknown and letting yourself be there in your Peace with the inevitable curiosity that will accompany it. You may not know what the answer is, but you know there's a question. You know there's a need. And in the silence of not attempting to provide the quick rebuttal, the quick answer, you find insight, revelation occurring. You find yourself knowing in that moment what to do, what to say, how to phrase it, how to intone it. And you know what? Your behavior will always be a blessing. But you know something else? What you have found yourself expressing that constituted a blessing doesn't become a bit of information to store in your memory banks, because that is not the way the new Operating System works. It doesn't have any memory banks.

The new Operating System where you have gone to the Place of Excellence in You and you have said, "Thy Will be done, not mine," means that you forever stand at unknowing attention with curiosity, openness so that your appropriateness in every given moment is fresh and original and expresses the Living Will of God in the Now.

As you make the conscious and conscientious effort to shift to the other Operating System, what I'm going to call the new Operating System, the Holy Spirit, as you make conscious and conscientious effort to do that more and more consistently and find yourself being able to be utterly appropriate in the moment, always with a blessing accompanying it, you will begin to find security in never knowing anything beforehand. A new experience of security will occur, and it will reinforce itself without your having to try to have to reinforce it. It will reinforce itself, not because you are consistently expressing a clear will, but because you are consistently being willful-less.

None of you realizes the degree to which the tone of your voice and your choice of words is governing your ignorance, is governing and securing your ignorance, your dream.

So, you have been my focus all along--not the Course. The Course is being used as a means of providing language that will allow you to somewhat gracefully shift from the current operating system to the Real Operating System in You. That's what it's all about.

Now, who has questions about what we've been discussing in the Course that you would like clarification on? And if you will give us the page numbers.

SEEKER: This would be on page 93.

RAJ: Of the sparkly book.

SEEKER: That's correct.

RAJ: Okay, this is for those who are in the first or second edition, this would be on the second page of chapter five.

SEEKER: Okay. Here it talks about giving; the whole idea of giving is losing and how...

RAJ: Which paragraph are you looking at?

SEEKER: It's the whole, it's "Healing as Joining." It's in that entire paragraph. For instance, in the last sentence it says:

SEEKER READING: If you can accept the concept that the world IS one of ideas, the whole belief in the false association which the ego makes between giving and LOSING is gone. (H-#101)

SEEKER: Do you see that, that last sentence there?

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Okay. The whole concept of this paragraph is about the whole idea of scarcity, I think, versus abundance. In other words, it makes the... it presents the concept that if you share a... if you give someone a thing... okay, it looks like you lose the thing and the other person gains it. But if you give a person an idea, it does not diminish your holding the idea but actually increases, makes it bigger. The other person has the idea and you have the idea, and the more people that believe in the idea the stronger the idea becomes.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Here is what the... and now I want to take this concept and put it into my everyday life. So here's the question. Let's talk about... and of course scarcity in the lives of myself and others is often about money. The whole question of money. So my question that immediately came up for me was if you believe in this particular concept, if you believe in the idea of this particular concept, then would it be possible for you to experience a lack in your life as far as materiality is concerned?

RAJ: If you believe in this particular concept meaning?

SEEKER: The concept of giving is and sharing is increasing as opposed to giving as losing. You follow me?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Okay. So the thing that immediately came up for me was that if I'm totally 100% in belief of this idea, would I experience scarcity, lack, need in my life? In other words, is what... for instance, if I do experience scarcity, lack, and lack of whatever it is I feel I need to continue, is it because I'm not fully invested in this whole idea that this paragraph puts across? Does that make sense what I'm getting at?

RAJ: I am going to ask you to say it again more succinctly.

SEEKER: Okay. You want me to repeat the idea again? Okay. Let me see if I can find the exact sentence that... okay.

SEEKER READING: If you think about it, you will see that, while this kind of thinking is totally alien to having THINGS,... (H-#101)

SEEKER: That is, the idea of "when you give you lose."

SEEKER READING: ...even to the lower mind it is quite comprehensible in connection with IDEAS. If you share a physical possession, you DO divide its ownership. If you share an idea, however, you do NOT lessen it. ALL of it is still yours, although all of it has been given away. Further, if the person to whom you give it accepts it as HIS, he reinforces it in YOUR mind, and thus INCREASES it. (H-#101)

SEEKER: So in the world of ideas, it's quite obvious. In the world of things, it's hard to see. So my question is if I fully invest, if I'm 100% vested in this idea of "giving is increasing," then could scarcity, lack of anything be experienced in my particular experience?

RAJ: You would indeed find your needs being met. I'm going to ask you to become even more specific. What kind of things are you talking about giving?

SEEKER: Well, money is a perfect example. In my own life, I operate at a deficit. And so, instead of saying, well, the folks out there in yoga-land in this particular neighborhood aren't just getting it, they don't see the value of what I'm doing, I'm a bad teacher, you know, all of the ego bullshit that will come up that will condemn me or my Brother for as why this is in a deficit situation. So I'm in the process of trying to re-look at the situation, change my perspective. And this particular paragraph, you know, is that what I have to do? Do I have to change my mind in order to change what is in my experience?

RAJ: You do indeed.

SEEKER: How would I do that?

RAJ: You have to arrive at a point where you have to decide whether there is anything, anything that can justify your withholding your Gift. As long as there is anything that can justify your withholding your Gift, your Gift is not complete. There can be no joy in the sharing of It. And that will be reflected back to you as insufficiency of some sort, providing you the opportunity to solidify and unify your commitment to your Function to be that which extends what is valuable, what meets the need, whatever it is the Father's Will that you be the expression of.

SEEKER: In my experience, what I'm experiencing right now is I do all that I can. It's taken priority in my life to extend the Gift to... for people who say they can't pay, to say, "You can have it for free. You don't have to pay. It's my pleasure to give it to you." I see it as more important than the fee for the class is watching people progress in the practice. That seems to give me the most joy because I recognize that at the level that I'm at right now, I'm never going to be able to, or at least I can't foresee getting enough from this financially to make me wealthy, or in any way well off. So, there's that. Then the... I don't see myself withholding anything from the people who I teach, at this point. And I don't, I thought I was beyond the idea of making it about money.

So I keep... what I'm saying is there's still confusion. What is it that I'm specifically not doing or feeling or seeing that continues to deny me to be able to move comfortably monetarily in the situation, or feel that I'm... In other words, what am I doing that's not working? If it's not them, it's gotta be me. And that... I always look at me as being the problem. So where is the problem?

RAJ: Sometimes the problem is with them. And sometimes you are there to be the one to provide the illumination, the clarification of the fact that sharing is a two-way street. Sharing is a mutual thing. And so you're going to have to listen in the moment as to how to be with a particular individual or a particular group as to what you are going to say, and how you are going to illuminate what is still covered in their mind about the mutuality of Gift. Because, mind you, they are coming still from the place you are emerging from, perhaps even more solidly than you, and so it doesn't make sense to them. And so education, illumination needs to happen. And you're going to have to listen on the spot as to what it is that will need to be said.

SEEKER: There is also some guilt that I have in this situation because, like Paul and Susan, they don't... there is no fee for... they give and it's up to you, us to determine what that Gift is worth, or how much we're moved to give, or so it's all on a volunteer basis.

But yet I in my particular practice say well, if you come to this class, it's this amount of money. If you come, you know, you pay twelve classes. There is a fee. It makes it easy for everyone. It's ten dollars, or nine dollars, or whatever, twelve dollars.

RAJ: It makes it easy for everyone because it doesn't challenge the current operating system, and it doesn't promote a shift to the other Operating System.

SEEKER: Right. Exactly. So my guilt comes up with I'm not doing that. So my question is, is that my next step? Is to make it a donation basis in my particular practice? I mean am I... am I... is that my fear? My withholding my...

RAJ: It is, and understand that a certain amount of education is going to have to accompany the shift.

SEEKER: You mean of me or of them?

RAJ: Of them, of those who you are teaching. Yes.

SEEKER: So is it time to do that? Or is it like I have to get more comfortable with the concept?

RAJ: Well, let's put it this way. The ego is never going to get more comfortable with the concept.

[Michael and scattered audience laughing] And there is no time like the present to break the habit, to break the pattern, to make an excursion into the new Operating System, the new Premise.

SEEKER: The last thing that comes up for me around this whole idea of abundance is the whole idea of conservation. Conservation from... on the individual level as far as recycling is concerned. In other words, saving your waste paper and taking it to the recycling center, driving an automobile that doesn't burn a lot of gas, and limiting your trips to only those that are necessary, and on and on and on and on. How does that fit into the whole idea of abundance and not buy into the whole idea of limited resources and scarcity and pollution and et cetera?

RAJ: [laughing] To be intelligent doesn't constitute a practice of limitation or scarcity. To organize your waste so that it can be processed efficiently and recycled, not out of lack, but out of honoring the abundance that you have, the abundance that you have that you're throwing away. This does not constitute scarcity.

To limit your trips to conserve on fuel does not make sense. To be able to increase your ability to make trips without losing is intelligent. And so the means to make as many trips as you wish and not pollute is intelligent. Conservation, thrift is the means by which you block the experience of abundance.

SEEKER: I'm not getting it. It's like you just said two different things. In one sense you said conservation makes sense, and is intelligent...

RAJ: In what sense?

SEEKER: Pardon me?

RAJ: Feed back to me in what sense.

SEEKER: In the sense of recycling, for instance.

RAJ: I didn't say that had anything to do with thrift. I said it had to do with the intelligent use of abundance that you have that you're throwing away.

SEEKER: Okay. But then for instance, to buy a gas hog and...

RAJ: The aluminum, the glass, and so on, that is a resource; an already existing asset, you might say. To handle it intelligently so that it remains an asset doesn't constitute thrift. It constitutes simple wisdom.

SEEKER: What about, for instance, like consumerism where you just go out and buy stuff. You buy, buy, buy. And you say, "Well, why not? Everything is abundant." And then it just gets thrown away, or...

RAJ: What is the motivation for the buying?

SEEKER: Well, obviously...

RAJ: If it's to fulfill a need or fulfill a purpose, a function, if you are buying to be able to do something to be able to make the Gift...

SEEKER: Ahh.

RAJ: ...but if you are buying to keep up with the Joneses, or if you are buying so as to appear to be successful when you're not, or if you are buying to feel important, now you're clearly in the ego, and this is not what we're talking about.

SEEKER: How about the question of like luxury? For instance, you know, buying a big beautiful, comfortable car that just really, you know, gets five miles to the gallon versus having a compact economical car because you feel that it's easier on the environment?

RAJ: The question is what purpose is the vehicle going to serve?

SEEKER: Well, in one sense it serves the purpose of making me comfortable, and making me feel like I'm in the lap of luxury versus the whole idea of feeling...

RAJ: Let's stop right there. Quote "the lap of luxury" unquote. That is pure ego bullshit. It's a concept. Lap of luxury.

SEEKER: Well, I think...

RAJ: Now, to have a car so that you feel like you're in the "lap of luxury" is way off base. To be comfortable, to be surrounded by that which is beautiful, is a divine thing. And you know what? There's a whole area of freedom and enjoyment that is being missed out on because, for example, the Volkswagen could be designed so that it is beautiful inside with cherry wood and leather and comfortable seats so that everything about it is as enjoyable as you associate what is enjoyable about a BMW or a Rolls Royce.

What is the purpose that it serves? You may need a car that is a larger car, because part of the Gift you make involves driving other people, as well as yourself, where the room is needed. Does what you have serve the Gift you're giving? Or does it serve a personal satisfaction? Does what you have embody and further fulfill the Gift that you have to give. You see?

SEEKER: Yes. I don't want to get too far off track. I just want to ask one more question. Could you in this paragraph it talks about Soul. And I've looked through the material and cannot find a definition. It talks about higher mind and it talks about Soul. The higher mind follows the Soul. Could you give us a definition, a working definition of Soul?

RAJ: Soul means Individuality. Individuality means indivisibility. Individuality means indivisible and therefore undivided. And I have also given you a definition of Soul and that definition is, the capacity to sense and feel what is divinely Real. It is what you would call the Divine Mind's Capacity to Feel the capital "M" Meaning of Everything.

Therefore the word "Individuality" means you. And you are the Function of glorifying God by recognizing God in each and every thing. You're very Being is the Function of recognizing God in everything, acknowledging God in everything, feeling What God Is Being in everything. And you witnessing to God are inseparable from God.

The most clearly I can put it in words is that you recognizing God in everything is God Himself recognizing Himself in everything. Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

What page?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: What page are you...

SEEKER: In the same area. Refining this more into a for me which is kind of a personal dilemma, the idea of surrendering. What's been coming up for me is...

RAJ: When I finish the sentence,...

SEEKER: I'm sorry.

RAJ: Surrendering...

SEEKER: Surrendering the ego into that place which seems like a void, risking letting go of everything with the promise that a greater or a complete fulfillment awaits us. And what...

RAJ: Fortunately you don't have to do that in one giant leap. Because as with the Prodigal Son, the moment you start Home the Father comes out to meet you. The moment you start Home the Holy Spirit that is your Real Mind is present to meet you right where you are to facilitate the rest of your journey Home.

Continue.

SEEKER: That's nice to hear, but in my own personal experience, when I get close to that place of surrendering into that silence, in meditation, for example, my ego is scratching and clawing and insinuating stuff like, "Okay if you want to become one who is awake, then you're no longer going to get to have any physical and emotional intimacy with anyone. And it's already pretty sparse. And so are you sure that's where you want to go?" And...

RAJ: It tempts you.

SEEKER: These kinds of things, and my Higher Self is saying, "Yes, but I remember having the experience of that state of mind for a while earlier in life and I didn't feel like I was missing anything."

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: But now where I'm at because I'm not in a relationship, I miss being close and intimate and having a heart connection with someone, you know. So there's this dichotomy going on in me and...

RAJ: And it's going on in everyone.

SEEKER: And I think most of us beings who are associating our bodies and emotions as males are wanting probably more intimacy than the female gender seems to want to have. I don't know. It just seems to me like that's a common perception anyway.

RAJ: Well, come on. Be honest. Even when you're getting more, it's still not a happy life, is it?

SEEKER: That's correct. There's a price to pay.

RAJ: What I mean is when you're getting more, the fundamental problematic nature of existence still confronts you.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: The promise though is that if you shift operating systems, you will still have intimacy except that now it will be able to be infinitely intimate. But you also have the promise of losing the problematic nature of existence. The question is are you miserable enough yet to have the willingness to try something new? Or are you not adventurous enough yet because you can tolerate the misery?

SEEKER: That's exactly... I'm glad you brought that up because I've been thinking like, you know, I'm in this lukewarm state and God make me miserable enough so that I can give up like I did before.

RAJ: God can't make you any more miserable than you are.

SEEKER: Because I'm not miserable enough evidently to go into complete surrender and say I'm through with trying to do this on my own and just give in into God.

RAJ: At least you're honest enough to acknowledge that. And there's nothing...

SEEKER: And if I could be more miserable, maybe I would give up. I don't know.

RAJ: You have been more miserable than this and you didn't give up.

SEEKER: Well, once I did.

RAJ: So what's the answer? I can't cause misery for you to make you change your mind. I can't do anything to get you to change your mind. All I can do is to inform you of your option, of your opportunity. So maybe it would be helpful for you to know that until you change your mind, you're stuck. Just very simply.

SEEKER: And I'm not likely to go lay on a bed of nails or something just so I can be more miserable than I am.

RAJ: No, because you would pick a bed of nails that would be tolerable. The nails wouldn't be so far apart that it would be intolerable. You see, it's all a game. It's all a game. All of you are all playing a game. And even your misery that you create for yourself is always just as much as you can tolerate. And I'm going to tell you something. You create illness for yourself that is terminal, and you know what? Even that is tolerable to you. Even that is tolerable to you. So the threat of death is not sufficient to cause you to change your mind. Interesting, huh? So at the bottom line the reason for your changing your mind is not going to be the depth of your misery. It's going to come from some place else. And it's going to come from a place of conscious intelligence within you that finally says, "You know what? I'm going to abandon this foolish game and I'm going to head for Home just because."

SEEKER: It's good to hear that Awakened Ones have an even fuller experience of what we in the ego state consider pretty fulfilling.

RAJ: "We in the ego state." You're not in an ego state! You're acting out an ego state.

SEEKER: Well, okay. I guess I didn't state it right.

RAJ: No, you stated it the way everybody states it and it's a way you keep yourself fuzzy. You're not in an ego state and you don't have an ego. You are the Christ behaving in a consciously selected way and then believing the choice of behavior that you've chosen to practice. You say, "Those who are awake blah, blah, blah." And I'm telling you that you at this moment, which I have referred to as the Place of Excellence in you who you think you are at the moment, is fully in possession of its faculties as the Christ right now, right there where you are. At the moment because you're in denial of it, it's called the Holy Spirit. But the Holy Spirit is your very Being, your very Divinity. It is your Divine Perspective which is being constantly derived from the Movement of God, your Source.

Now, this section that we're looking at is called "Healing as Joining." If you want to wake up, if you want to finally be rid of the misery of the quote "human condition" unquote, you're going to choose to join with One Who Is Awake. You're going to turn to the Altar to gather the Facts of Being from the Father through the Holy Spirit, or your Guide which serves the same Function as the Holy Spirit. And you'll persist in that until it's more and more consistent, and more and more continuous. And that's the way you're going to shift operating systems. And if you decide to be fuzzy and not make up your mind quite yet, go ahead and do it. Don't make up your mind quite yet, but be aware You Are The Ultimate right now, the Christed One, the Son of God, choosing in this moment to behave as though you are less than that and then choosing to believe what your behavior expresses, thereby apparently forgetting Who You Are.

Now, a word to everyone. Everyone incarnated, I'm going to put it that way, everyone that you might run into on the face of your planet is to one degree or another engaged in this and suffering from the engagement, just as you are. And the call is for you to witness for the excellence in your Brother instead of agreeing with him, or instead of formulating your own definition of him and agreeing with that definition which has nothing to do with that which is excellent in him.

Stop looking at others and saying, "He's ancient. He's old. He's poor. He's stubborn. She's difficult." Stop doing it because it blinds you to the excellence in them, and it prohibits you from behaving in a way that illuminates and uncovers the excellence in them to them. And it keeps everyone in a constant state of defense against these poor images which you are utilizing in your mind and verifying, confirming and reestablishing over and over and over again in a constant state of misery.

You've got to start changing your habits. Stop. Change the way you are using your minds. You must start witnessing for the excellence in your Brothers and Sisters whether they see it or not. Now, what if you are witnessing for the best or the excellent in your Brothers and Sisters, a Brother or a Sister, and that one does not catch the flavor or the vision with which you are embracing them and they behave in a manner that is hateful or harmful, well, what do you do? Do you say, "This one is not worthy of my acknowledging the excellence in them and I need to protect myself against their hateful behavior that is directed toward me"? No.

You must be willing to do two things. You must be willing not to abandon your role, your Function as the Christ which is to feel and acknowledge God in each and every thing because that is the Function of your very presence, your existence, your existing. And at the same time that you refuse to abandon the vision of What They Divinely Are, you also, in very practical terms, refuse to join them in the dance that they would try to initiate with you of negative action and reaction; negative action on their part and reaction in you. You refuse to join in reaction and you say "No" to the behavior.

It's very important for you in your day-to-day relationships with people to respond from the Integrity you find you have in the Place of Excellence within You, and refuse to respond to the dance that you're invited to participate in, and make a call for correction in the behavior, the hateful behavior. A call for correction.

SEEKER: Thank you, Raj. You've given me, and I think most of us, a full plate. I feel like I would like to pass the mic to whoever else has a question.

RAJ: Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: What's been up for me since this last meeting...

RAJ: Oh, what page is this with reference to?

SEEKER: In that chapter switching operating systems. And my point being you once told me that when a Brother, when I see bad behavior happening, inappropriate behavior which is abusive, in order to effectively be the answer to the call for help, we have to shift into the correct operating system and we do that by asking God for help. And at the same time...

RAJ: I'm going to interrupt for just a moment.

Every single one of you does basically know the difference between right and wrong, between what works and what doesn't work, whether you are divinely inspired at the moment or not. You know what hurts and what doesn't hurt. You know what's beautiful and what isn't beautiful. Who of you has any difficulty going into a jewelry store, let us say, on Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills and looking at the jewelry there and recognizing that it's beautiful, as opposed to the jewelry that you might see in Penney's in their little jewelry department? Who has any difficulty looking at royal or imperial jewelry or art and has any difficulty recognizing exquisite beauty? You all know the difference between beauty and ugliness.

You all know the difference between what hurts and what doesn't. And so if you see something going on that is hurtful, don't hesitate to say "No" to it on the basis of your simple innate ability to recognize the difference between what is right and what is wrong, what hurts and what doesn't hurt.

Now, if someone pulls a gun out and points it at you and they are in a frenzy and unstable, are you going to stand there trying to get centered and trying to hear the Voice for Truth, the Holy Spirit in you, to come up with exactly the perfect answer? Not if you're wise. Not if you're practical. You'll get out of the range of that gun [snap of the fingers] as quickly as you can and that will be your way of saying "No." You will object spontaneously.

Now, if you have time to listen so that you can hear what would be the ultimately appropriate way to deal with this, do it. Not all abusive circumstances call for an instantaneously, immediate response.

But I'll tell you something. It's a shame to let abuse continue that you recognize as abuse because you're waiting for the perfect answer. Do you hear what I'm saying? That is spiritual stupidity. If something is going on that is abusive, don't hesitate to blurt out your "No," your objection. Otherwise, your attempt to be spiritually perfect becomes nothing more than a delay in the provision of relief from abuse.

Now hopefully you are changing operating systems. Hopefully as a result of changing operating systems, you're more consistently in touch with Guidance so that Guidance is available to you on the spot. But for God's sake, and I mean for God's sake, for the sake of that which is God in each and every one of you, don't delay in objecting to abuse in order to get centered and connected with your Divine Source and feeling the movement of being on the beam so that you can hear with utter clarity how to be the Presence of Love in this situation so that there is blessing for all involved. Perhaps there's another punch to the face that occurs while you're doing that. Perhaps there's another dig that someone has applied to a so-called friend.

And you know what? You know what is perhaps the ultimate insult to your Brother, the Christ, who seems to be confronted with abuse? It's you saying, "Maybe he or she needs this experience in order to wake up. Maybe I should just bite my tongue and say and do nothing. After all this may be the part of the human condition, this may be the very experience that will turn the tide for them and cause them to shift. And so I will stand in support of hate because in this instance hate may be just the ticket for this person. The results of hate may be just the ticket for this person." Do you see how distorted your spirituality can become?

"Well, you know what? Maybe sin, disease and death really has some divine purpose. After all, they wouldn't be having the experience for no reason at all." And then it's said, "Well, remember, Raj, you said the Holy Spirit can turn everything to your advantage." Well, thank God the Holy Spirit can, because it means there is an answer to an unjustifiable experience of suffering and limitation and lack. But don't take what isn't real, don't take what is hateful, don't take what is unloving and say, "Maybe this is just the thing it will take for the Holy Spirit to turn it to their advantage." That in itself is hate.

But you have provide to healing and wholeness. First section, "Healing as Joining." And the next section, "The Mind of the Atonement." Wow! All of these have to do with integrity, integration, unification, the coming back into the Experience of Individuality which is Indivisibility. And Indivisibility is not your personal indivisibility, but it's the Indivisibility of God's Ideas universally joined, in other words.

Therefore whatever causes you to delay in witnessing for the excellence in your Brother, I'm going to be very bold here, is sin. It is the exact opposite of Truth. It is the exact opposite of your Function. And when you deny yourself your Function, you are caught in quote "the human condition," your dream. And there's no way that you can say looking at another, "Maybe he or she needs this hateful experience because it might just be the thing that will move them over the threshold." That is not your Function. That is not you witnessing to the Place of Excellence in your Brother, witnessing to the Presence of God in your Brother. And it does nothing but delay transformation.

Now, I will let you continue.

SEEKER: Well, I'm aware of what you have just said. What I was concerned about was not putting the tips on the arrows when they fly and being in a place in my mind where...

RAJ: You know what? When they fly from where?

SEEKER: Whatever direction they're coming.

RAJ: From you?

SEEKER: No.

RAJ: Towards you?

SEEKER: Towards me.

RAJ: Yes. What does that mean, "not putting tips on the arrows"?

SEEKER: It means not reacting.

RAJ: What does "not reacting" mean?

SEEKER: Getting emotionally upset which is being in judgment. The reason I brought this up is because I have had a hard time in the past standing up for myself because I would react. So I know that there is another place I have to shift to in order to be more objective about what I'm seeing, but yet from a calm place and not from a reactive place.

RAJ: Your capacity to say “No” with the Power of the Universe behind it might be a roar emerging from your throat that sounds like an insane eruption of vocal noises that one could look at and say, “Wow! She’s really in a state of reaction.” But because it came out of your mouth from the tips of your toes, because you knew with utter clarity that what was happening was inappropriate and there was a call for correction, would cause the correction to occur.

What you’re talking about will cause delay in the necessary objection.

SEEKER: Yeah, I know. I’ve experienced that.

RAJ: I’m going to tell you something else. Many times when you stand up for yourselves, all of you, and you’re shaking and you are uneasy, you are unsettled, and you express your objection without control and without dignity, but you express it well so that it is heard, whether it’s accepted or not, it’s heard, all that’s happening is that you are speaking from an Integrity in you that you’re not used to acknowledging. And that you are used to soft pedaling or pushing down and it takes that much energy for you to speak from your Integrity and get it past your lips.

And then you say, “Boy, I have to get pretty angry in order to speak up for myself.” No. And then you say, “Wow, I was being emotional and that isn’t spiritually correct. That is ego. Emotions are ego stuff.” And you talk away what was perhaps one of the few times that you spoke from your Integrity, even though it took so much courage to do it because you don’t feel it that much that it came out awkwardly. Do you see what I’m saying? And then your ego will misinterpret it as anger and emotion. The ego will interpret it as an ego reaction. Isn’t that funny? The pot calling the kettle black. The ego will say, “That was an ego reaction, Trish. Shame on you. Now next time you get in your centered place.”

SEEKER: That’s so true.

RAJ: “And you get your act together because until you do that you have no right and no real place of divine authority from which to express yourself.”

So, do you understand that what I’m talking about has to do with operating from the new Operating System?

SEEKER: Yes, I do. That’s why I’m asking this question.

RAJ: Okay. I’m not just asking you. I’m saying that to everyone here and everyone who’s listening on the internet.

SEEKER: It seems that we have concepts... I’ll speak for myself. I may have a concept about how this Operating System is supposed to operate.

RAJ: Oh, absolutely. Your egos will immediately provide you with a structure within which to consider this new Operating System. So that then you can say, “Well, step one, get calm. Step two, lean into my Guidance. Step three,...” You know, except that there will be, you know, a thousand and one steps and all the time that you’re taking those steps, abuse is occurring, objection isn’t being made. And all the time that you’re doing that, you’re feeling so good about yourself because you are doing it the right way. And because you’re doing it the right way, there will be a blessing for you. Hopefully the person’s who’s getting killed in the process will get a blessing, too.

I’ll tell you. I’ll give you all a hint. Join with your Brother first, and then reach for the Holy Spirit. Don’t reach for the Holy Spirit and wait to join with your Brother in witnessing for the excellence in him or her. And mind you, sometimes joining with your Brother or your Sister means objecting to hateful behavior that they are expressing toward you. Don’t justify hate. There is no spiritual principle that justifies justifying hate.

SEEKER: The argument has come up that, well, I don’t want to confront anyone.

RAJ: Oh, of course.

SEEKER: And confrontation has always meant to me something negative.

RAJ: Can’t you get a proxy?

SEEKER: [laughing]

RAJ: Is there a proxy anywhere in the group that will...? Maybe somebody else will do it.

Hopefully when you have a need, somebody won’t say the same thing and not reach out a hand that could save you. Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.

I keep saying it. Involvement, involvement, involvement. Involvement isn’t done by a proxy. It’s not done with loving thoughts from a distance. It means standing there with your Brother or Sister, getting into the nitty-gritty where the need is and bringing correction to it because you care enough to witness for the best in your Brother or Sister.

SEEKER: That brings a lot of flak with it.

RAJ: You don’t think I get flak? [some audience laughter] A lot of people hate me, Michael. [audience laughter]

SEEKER (Michael): I’ve never see it.

SEEKER (previous): So we have permission then to stir up the shit.

RAJ: No, you don’t.

SEEKER: No?

RAJ: Where you gonna go to find the shit to stir?

SEEKER: I don't have to go to look for it.

RAJ: Your attention is on the wrong place. Don't have your attention on stirring shit. Have your attention on being the Presence of Love that cares enough about your Brother or Sister to cast your vote publicly out there, up front, so that hurt and harm cannot continue unobjected to.

SEEKER: I totally appreciate your clarifying this. In principle I'm in agreement with that, of course.

RAJ: No one has the right to hurt their Brother or Sister until they're stopped. It isn't as though there's some innate right you all have to do anything you want until you're corrected. You can't say, "Well, you know, he's just expressing himself. He's just exploring new territory of self expression as he runs by and snatches the purse off the old ladies' arm."

SEEKER: Raj, I think to encapsulate it, the whole thing here, is either people get angry and say nothing, can't say anything, or they get hurt and can't say nothing. And these are the two emotions...

RAJ: Who are these... who is? The person objecting or the person...

SEEKER: I'll speak for myself. The person objecting, or the person to whom the abuse is targeted.

RAJ: Start over now.

SEEKER: It has been my experience in my life whenever I have perceived abuse, I couldn't stand up for myself in the moment it was happening. I couldn't find my voice because I was emotionally hurting.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And so...

RAJ: How wonderful it would have been for you if there had been Brothers and Sisters standing around you who felt that it was their function to say "No" to the abuser, to witness for you. And to witness for the abuser by causing the abuser to stop doing what didn't reflect their true nature, as well. That is a shame that that was your experience. And what I'm talking about is what will correct that experience for everyone in the future.

SEEKER: Right. Unfortunately...

RAJ: And you know what? Maybe you had some incredible insights as a result of the whole horrible experience.

SEEKER: I did.

RAJ: But that is not justification for not helping someone else. It's by the grace of God, the Holy Spirit, that it was turned to your advantage.

SEEKER: Absolutely.

RAJ: So is there anything remaining unclear in your mind at this moment? You were asking a question.

SEEKER: I was only concerned about being in the place where I can speak up in a way that's helpful when I see abuse or inappropriate behavior taking place. That is joining with or being in, from the right Operating System. And you said even if you don't think you're coming from the right operating system, just open your mouth and do what you see that will be helpful. Because...

RAJ: Raise objection.

SEEKER: Yeah. Because I care.

RAJ: Exactly. What other intelligent choice do you have?

SEEKER: None.

RAJ: Good.

SEEKER: I only brought this up because I know there are many who are like myself used to be who can't for some reason get involved or say something.

RAJ: Does anyone have any question on this subject?

ANOTHER SEEKER: This is something exactly what I've been struggling with since last summer when I just blew up at my boss and I did everything you just said, that I justified it until it made no sense to myself, and actually I was acting on my Integrity. So I remembered that and that was really significant to me and I've begun trying to stand up when I see something that I think needs to be challenged. And [I've] been watching myself to make sure that I'm not coming from emotion or ego. If there's enough time I can stop and ask, "Oh, what do I say here?" And I do, it does feel exactly like you said. It's coming from the tips of your toes, and your entire body feels the truth of what you're saying and you can't hold it in.

And I think if you... that's where I don't feel the judgment I'm that I used to feel against the person whom I saw the behavior. It seems like I'm released from judging them and all of a sudden I feel like I'm on their side. Of course, they don't feel like that usually, but that's okay. Finally it is okay. And I care enough about them to say, "Whoa. Hello. Wake up here. Whoa. Whoa. Whoa. You're making a big mistake." Just try to find some way to do it. And sometimes it comes out real awkward, but with practice it starts getting easier and easier and then calmer and the most amazing, creative things come out of your mouth.

RAJ: Part of it is because the more you do it, the less inertia is present. When it first comes out and feels like an explosion, most of the dynamic is the overcoming of inertia within you; your own reluctance to let your Integrity have expression just because it's really there.

SEEKER: Kind of like all of the suppressed things behind it too, like a cork in a bottle. All of a sudden the cork gets released and by God, you're going to have your say finally and somebody's going to listen. So, and then once you do that, you don't want to go back, put the cork back in the bottle.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And it's very uncomfortable sometimes and then my ego gets a hold of it and says, "Oh, so you think you're the corrector, huh? You can go around and tell everybody how to be. You're not right and you're not right." But then that...

RAJ: That's stirring shit. But I am not talking about quote "being the corrector of people." We're not talking about being some sort of authority, having some sort of position that you're carrying out. What we're talking about is being the Presence of Love responding from your capacity to be Love that cares enough about another to speak up and object to what is unjust or what is hateful. Do you see the difference?

SEEKER: Oh, absolutely.

RAJ: Okay.

SEEKER: That's all I have to say. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

A full get-together. I'm glad we have shared together today. And I look forward to being with you next Saturday and Sunday.

Thank you for letting me be the corrective Presence of Truth. Whether correction has occurred or not, you have provided me with the opportunity to be the corrective Presence of Truth. Now you be that all week.

Okay.

Chapter 2 – THE SEPARATION AND THE ATONEMENT
Section –SPECIAL PRINCIPLES OF MIRACLE WORKERS
First Edition – p. 23 / Second Edition – p. 27

This section in my original dictation to Helen came now. In other words, it followed what we finished reading last week. And as I said when we skipped it, you will find that it has much more meaning at this point than if we had read it in the sequence you find it in the second and first editions.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is also joining us on the internet. We will begin this evening with a section entitled, "Special Principles of Miracle Worker's" found on page 27 in the second edition and on page 23 of the first edition.

This section in my original dictation to Helen came now. In other words, it followed what we finished reading last week. And as I said when we skipped it, you will find that it has much more meaning at this point than if we had read it in the sequence you find it in the second and first editions.

Now before we begin, I want to present two ideas. What if... what if there's only one Altar? We've been talking about turning toward the Altar, going within and turning toward the Altar. And I would be willing to bet that all of you thought you were turning to an Altar somewhere in the center of you, and that therefore, there were as many Altars as there were individuals turning within. What if there's only one Altar? And the Altar you're turning to when you go within is that one Altar.

It's sort of like the illustration of the diamond that I've used in the past where each of you could be considered facets of the diamond. If you are looking out from the diamond, you can see that there are other facets adjoining you that seem quite independent of you, having a distinct shape of their own, and so on, all capable of refracting the light. But communication is difficult because you have to bridge the line separating the facets. And you have to somehow communicate around the outer surface of the diamond. But if as the facet you look toward the interior of the diamond, you find that the whole diamond is you. And you find that every other facet, every other individuality as a facet looking toward the interior finds that the whole diamond is what constitutes them, including you. There's only one interior. And in that interior, you are all One, having, you might say, a little bit of the surface area of the diamond specifically identifying you. And in a way you can extrapolate from this the meaning of being specific and universal at the same time, because you are all universal and specific simultaneously.

So now if you're all turning toward the same Altar because there's only one Altar, the very fact that you're turning toward the Altar means you're turning toward each other. You see that? The very act of turning toward the Altar means that you are all moving into the space where you are One. Now I know that after listening to me for some length of time or any length of time, you know that turning toward the Altar is what you are doing when you turn toward your Guide, or toward the Holy Spirit, or toward the Father, asking for guidance. But now you have the added perspective that all the rest of you are available to each other, to you along with your Guide, and along with the Holy Spirit.

And that space, if you will, the interior of the diamond where the One Altar is, is where you're already One, where you're already available to each other to perceive as the Christs That You Are. It's where communion with each other can occur. So I just wanted to add that little bit of information so that you might be able to contemplate it and abide with it.

It doesn't matter where any individuality is on your globe. It doesn't matter where any individuality is in the Whole of Creation. All of those individualities are available to you as some aspect of the Infinitude Of Your Being when you are turning toward the Altar. And that's where Real Communion can occur. That's where you can see each other as you are and connect with each other on that basis. And you will find that when you connect with each other from there, you will appear to communicate with each other in the world. So once again, this isn't a matter of withdrawing from the world and going into some private mental space where you have a private conversation mentally with your Brothers and Sisters. It's going to look like something. Mind, every aspect of capital "M" Mind is a Conscious Experience, and is therefore a manifested experience. There is Visibility and Tangibility to It and it's called Creation.

And so going within to gather from the Father His Perspective of your Brother or Sister so that you might experience a miracle, a sudden shift of perception, that allows you to Love your Brother from the gifted perspective that you find yourself filled up with is healing.

Now the second thing I wanted to talk about is this. When you are facing away from the Altar, you experience what I'm going to call the Fourth Dimensional Conscious Experience of Being as though it is a three-dimensional-only universe. Cause arises from the Fourth Dimensional Conscious Experience of Being and is infinitely manifest. But if you deprive yourself of the Father's Perspective which is Fourth-Dimensional—in other words, Whole, All-Inclusive—you experience the Infinitude of Creation as though it's external to you and as though it's self-existent. And as I said last week and the week before, when your back is to the Altar, everything you see is seen through the lens of fear. And so this three-dimensional universe that you see appears to be fearsome and you become locked into a defensive stance toward it. You are suffering from ignorance of What It Is. And in the ignorance of What It Is, you give it definition yourself. But all your definitions amount to are beliefs. And the minute you create a belief, you also create quote "the believer" unquote. There is no believer. There's only the Son of God, the Daughter of God. But the moment you create a belief, you necessarily create a believer, and then you begin to think that's who you are—the believer of what you're believing.

Now, I'm bringing this up for a very important reason and that is, that when correction occurs, which means healing, it is absolutely essential for the belief be separated from the Christ that seems to be suffering from the belief.

And so we will pick the obvious example, I will pick two obvious examples of how correction can occur. You have an individuality by the name of Saddam Hussein. You also have an individuality by the name of George W. Bush. There are other individuals on the stage at the moment. And depending upon your point of view, the two individuals I have named are considered evil men. But, if you're going to see correction occur, healing occur, you're going to have to separate the belief that they are evil men, or the belief of evilness, from the individuality known as George Bush and the individuality known as Saddam Hussein. If you do not make that distinction, we were talking about distinction last week, if you do not make that distinction, then you will proceed to get rid of evil men. And there's no correction in that. And who's the deluded one? You!

Now that doesn't mean that correction doesn't need to occur. But understand that the way correction occurs is when you distinguish between the Christ and whatever belief that Christ happens to have succumbed to that is causing his perspective to be fearful and defensive, and who finds force to be the only way to survive.

Now this applies equally to cancer, or any disease, or any sin that any of you might be suffering from, or any of your friends might be. Don't say, "Oh, that poor soul!" Say, "There's no poor soul there. There's the Christ." What they're suffering from is a belief. The belief is nothing more than magic. And the effects of that magic are nothing more than illusion. They are not real and they have nothing whatsoever to do with that individuality who is the Christ.

Now this you can do intellectually—consciously and intellectually. Having done it, you can then without bias go within to ask God, “What needs to be known here? What is the healing element here that will transform the appearance of a Christ suffering from ignorance? How can I approach this Christ with peace and with Love that will illuminate the Christ of that one, reminding him or her of the Truth about himself or herself?”

And it won't be quite so difficult as it is if you say, “He's an evil bastard. God, help me to forgive him for his awfulness!” You see? You're the one projecting the awfulness onto him. You're adding that. That's a job to overcome to have God to help you overcome the awfulness of his evilness, which is a definition you've provided.

It's much easier to recognize that the belief and the believer are both illusions. And that right where a believer believing a belief that he's suffering from seems to be is the unalterable, unchangeable, eternal Christ. If you recognize that even just intellectually, you will find that you have the means to approach and address this one in your mind with genuine Love and genuine caring. And in extending that to him or her, you know what you do? You claim that as being the Truth about you, and you will not be so ready to succumb to your beliefs without separating them from yourself, and recognizing that no matter what beliefs you are believing, you are neither the believer or the belief. You are the Christ, the direct and present Expression of God that cannot in any way be altered in the slightest from What God Is Being right where you are. It is this separation that allows for healing.

You see, it's very easy to look at others, especially in the “New Age” and say, “Well, he's created it for himself.” You see? You're saying that all that's there is a believer believing a belief. You see? No possibility of healing there. And if you approach that one as though he is a believer having a belief that he needs to get rid of so he believes something new that's more spiritual, you're still dealing with a believer. You've never cut through to the spiritual fact of him that he's the Christ, absolutely incapable of ever having become a believer with a belief that he's suffering from.

Now I don't mean for this to sound intellectually complicated, but if you get this, it will be much easier for you to be miracle ready. And it's closer to being miracle-minded, and it lays the way for a sudden shift of perception to occur [snap of the fingers] much more easily. You see?

If you want to experience a time collapse where there's instantaneous healing, you're going to have to approach the one needing healing, whether it's yourself or another, with some way to cut through the confusion that keeps the bondage in place. And when you realize that what will cut through it is the recognition that the belief that this other one is suffering from is being entertained by a non-existent presence called a believer, who is actually the Christ temporarily unconscious of his Christhood, then you will forget about the belief. You will forget about whether that one has created itself... created it for himself and deserves the consequences he or she is experiencing, and you will address your attention to the Christ that is there. And what happens? You negate the belief, the believer, and the suffering, the consequences, and there's [snap of the fingers] a time collapse and you have what is called an instantaneous healing, or which you call a sudden shift of perception. What cuts through it is the capacity to recognize another's Innocence, primitive Innocence, primordial Innocence. Innocence from the beginning that could never be altered.

You hear that there is an evil axis in your world. Oooh! And you have the leaders of the three countries that constitute the evil axis and they are evil. Wow! Well, you better get it straight right now. All three of them are the Christ. All three of them are the direct expression and embodiment of God, or Allah, or whatever name is used to identify the Original and Omnipotent Creator of Existence. They are all right now the Christ. And they are innocent. Their innocence is part of the very embodiment of them that God is embodying at every moment just like He is embodying it in you in every moment.

And so, you have to be practical, and you have to disallow acts of harm. Sort of the same way you would restrain someone who was delirious and flailing, but you would not believe that you were restraining evil. You would just be restraining behavior arising out of misunderstanding, out of beliefs that were acquired while one's back was to the Altar, while one wasn't listening for God to reveal His Perception, His Perspective, His Vision of His Creation, as it truly is.

So you restrain those whose inarticulate and awkward expression of existence would bring harm, while not believing for a moment that they are evil. You separate the belief and the believer from the individuality. You acknowledge Who and What the Individuality can only Be and you Love that. And you let God fill you with the means to convey, to embody, to express the Love that God instills in you. Not that you figure out with your best judgment will probably be the thing that will help. You embody what you're infilled with to share so that a sudden shift of perception can occur and healing, an experience of time collapsed, can occur, so that it doesn't take years to change, or years to refine your soul to a better, purer place. So that was the second thing I wanted to share.

So let's go to the book.

Question.

SEEKER: As we see with these new eyes facing the Altar and seeing the Christ, we are also seeing ourselves as the Expression of the Father. When I see and make the distinction in another who is afar—George W. Bush, Saddam Hussein—where is the healing? Is it just one more person seeing the Truth? How do we observe a healing?

RAJ: How do we?

SEEKER: Observe the healing from afar. I only say that in perspective in that we're not going to wake up the next morning and see a change in behavior.

RAJ: To Love there is no distance

SEEKER: Okay. But with my partner I can see something more clearly maybe than I can with the individuals you've...

RAJ: Well let me put it this way. Tests have been made, and it has been shown that a plant that is on a table in your own house that you give loving attention to, that if you just sit there and look at it, appreciating it, it responds. And if that plant is taken thirty miles or a hundred miles away, and you sit in your house and think exactly the same loving thoughts about it, it responds as though it were in your house.

Don't you... don't you believe for a moment that your Expression of Love toward Christ George Bush, or Christ Saddam Hussein, isn't felt. We've talked before about the fact that there are no private thoughts.

We've talked about waging peace. You know what? I don't know if anyone thought about it, but you can't wage peace as a defense. It is like talking about dry water. You've got to find in you some way to recognize that Saddam Hussein is at this very moment the undefiled, unaltered, direct Expression of God, and that anything else is an overlay that either he is putting like a cloak over himself or that you are putting like a cloak over him. And then take the cloak off. That's your task: to find a way to take the cloak off so that you can actually Love, and then turn to God and say, "God, fill me with the Love so that it fills me so full it overflows and blesses everyone."

This isn't you using your mind to make something happen. This is you letting God use your mind to make something happen. And that's why you turn toward the Altar, because you don't know how to use your mind to make something happen. Why? Because the you, you think you are at the moment is a three-dimensional object, and the third dimension is not where cause arises. That's why you turn toward the Altar so that God can move through you, so that God can use your mind to find expression quote "in the dream," and thereby dissolve the dream. Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Yes. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

Okay. Actually we always start here. Let's start in the back.

READER: Special Principles of Miracle Workers

(1) The miracle abolishes the need for...

RAJ: I'm sorry. This is... if you'll as you read them, this is Principle Number One.

READER: [Principle Number] (1) The miracle abolishes the need for lower-order concerns.

RAJ: And just for clarity, "lower-order" would refer to the three-dimensional frame of reference and the Kingdom of Heaven as it appears to be seen through the three-dimensional frame, lens, let's say.

Continue.

READER: Since it is an out-of-pattern time interval,...

RAJ: The miracle, that is.

READER: ...the ordinary considerations of time and space do not apply.

RAJ: Which is why there can be a collapse of time.

READER: When you perform a miracle, I will arrange both time and space to adjust to it.

RAJ: And how do you perform a miracle? By letting God use your mind to embody His Purpose. Not because you have said, "I am going to make a miracle." You see? Okay.

READER: [Principle Number] (2) A clear distinction between what is created and what is made is essential. All forms of healing rest on this fundamental correction in level perception.

[Editor's Note: Below Raj says: When I actually dictated this to Helen in Principle Number Two I said, "All forms of correction," and then in parentheses, "(healing) rest on this fundamental correction in level perception."]

RAJ: Okay. And for additional clarity, a clear distinction between What Is Created and what is made is essential. What Is Created is What God Has Created. What is made are the modifications to What God Has Created that we've talked about during the last two weeks. What you make, what you seem to be able to create, is nothing more than a modification of What Actually Exists, and your modification isn't even eternal.

Okay. Microphone.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I asked a while back about DNA. So if there's these two people standing there talking and all of the words and the vibrating of the air, and all of that's God's Love. It's all Spirit. And in their minds there's this perception, mutual agreements about language, and the conversation's made in the midst of Creation.

RAJ: That is true.

SEEKER: So... and I get this, about a million years we were talking about, you know, the last judgment. Isn't... since the development of a tooth and a claw coming from a sense of lack, isn't what's going on even though DNA is Spirit, isn't there intent? Isn't a claw made? Isn't a tooth made versus created?

RAJ: No. What's made is the use it's put to. So shall birds and sheep and frogs have toenails just like you? How boring. And how exquisite the design if you look at each varied form as though it were a work of art that is there for appreciation because it is so exquisite. When you misperceive or give a strange definition to some part of Creation, you do tend to cover up your capacity to discern and feel the Meaning expressed as a tooth, or a claw, or a toenail. And I promise you all, that there is nothing that is not glorious once you manage to abandon the confidence you have in the definitions you have given to claw and tooth and toenail.

SEEKER: You've got to look at the Altar to see.

RAJ: That is correct. You have to look at the Altar to see them.

Continue.

READER: [The third Special Principles of a Miracle Worker.] (3) Never confuse right- and wrong-mindedness. Responding to any form of error with anything except a desire to heal is an expression of this confusion.

RAJ: Exactly. It couldn't be stated any more clearly. Wrong-mindedness is constituted of whatever goes on in your mind when your back is toward the Altar and you have deprived yourself of the Father's Perspective. And right-mindedness is what you spontaneously experience when you stop valuing your private perspective, and genuinely, and humbly, and defenselessly, ask for the Father's Perspective.

When I actually dictated this to Helen, in Principle Number Two I said, "All forms of correction," and then in parentheses, "(healing) rest on this fundamental correction in level perception."

Correction in its true meaning is healing. And when you turn to the Father and you are filled with right-mindedness, every thought directed to George Bush, every thought directed toward Saddam Hussein, and every thought you direct toward your ugly self, will have as its intent healing, because it's being extended to the Christ that the Father's Perspective has revealed to you as them, and as yourself. Amazing stuff.

Continue.

READER: [Principle Number] (4) The miracle is always a denial of this error and an affirmation of the truth. Only right-mindedness can correct in a way that has any real effect.

RAJ: And that is because right-mindedness originates from the level of Cause, the Father's Mind, the Fourth-Dimensional Conscious Experience of Being.

Continue.

READER: Pragmatically, what has no real effect has no real existence. Its effect, then, is emptiness. Being without substantial content, it lends itself to projection.

RAJ: Okay.

RAJ READING: Pragmatically, what has no real effect has no real existence. Its effect, then, is emptiness.

RAJ: Well, what about so-and-so who insulted you? What about so-and-so who treated you raunchy? What about so-and-so who made your life miserable? What about so-and-so who caused you great grief?

Well first of all, you see, if you're going to hold a grievance, it means that you think they actually could have done something that actually did hurt you. But I'm telling you that if you want to become free of the hurt that you say you have experienced, you are going to have to make this distinction between the Christ who was standing there all the time you were being treated grievously, and you're going to have to separate the claim that their presence seemed to make that there was a believer with a belief that he or she was suffering from that caused him or her to behave in a way that harmed you. Because if you cannot separate the innocent Christ from the false presentation, if you can't separate the false presentation from the Christ, you're not going to be able to see that what you thought they did to you and what they thought they were doing to you, had to be magic and had to be an illusion. And until you can see that, you can't see that the suffering you have been experiencing is likewise an effect of magic and an illusion that you have bought into by believing that someone actually did some real magic.

Do you understand what I'm saying? In your ability to make distinction between the Christ and the false sense of self that seemed to be overlaid on the Christ, until you can make that distinction, or when you make that distinction, you have laid the groundwork for that one to feel safe enough to allow a sudden shift of perception and you have set yourself up for instantaneous release from the so-called damage that you were suffering from. And so you experience instantaneous healing as well.

Question.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So when you are saying "No" like we're saying "No" to Saddam, you are saying "No" to the belief and the believer.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: You're saying "No" because... and in any situation that you need to say "No," that's what... you're saying "No" to the thing that is the alteration of the Truth.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Not the person.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: And just saying "No" isn't enough. You say "No" to the so-called believer and the beliefs that have made the believer behave unlovingly. But, you do that as a part of the process of separating the believer and belief from the Christ and then you be the Presence of Love toward the Christ. And if that seems to involve a process of re-education, if it seems to involve an ongoing process of extending Love, of embodying Love, toward that Christ, and because it's Love finding that it comes out in a way that inspires the Christ that that one is to come out of the closet, then you are... then you're being an agent for change.

So it's not just a matter of saying "No." It's saying "No" and "Yes." "No" to the idea that there's an evil person. Separating the evilness from the Christ that it's been associated with, and then giving full attention, Brotherly attention, caring attention, persistent attention, to the Christ that is standing there, knowing, as I've said before, that the Christ that is standing there is quite capable of comprehending and feeling what is whole, and what is true, and what is healthy, and what is loving.

SEEKER: So it would be like if you are in an argument, like in a group, and the group is misbehaving, and it's... you're... and you're a part of that. You all of a sudden realize, "Wait a minute! What are we doing here?!" And you speak up and say, "No, I'm not going to play this any more. We need to rethink this." And then hold... hold on to that belief and refuse to participate in the game. And by doing that, that's what will help.

RAJ: It will as long as you're not... do not think you're talking to a bunch of contrary egos when you say, "We need to rethink this." You may be saying "No" to the contrary egos, but when you say, "We need to rethink this," you've got to know you're speaking to the Christ of each one of them, to that which is of excellence in the middle of each one of them, you see, so that in saying that you are honoring them. Something which is very difficult for anyone to ignore. To be honored is something usually all of you usually respond to well. You see?

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: You aren't even saying "No" to them. You're saying "No" to an illusion that everyone has succumbed to thinking is real. You're saying "No" to what is senseless.

SEEKER: Like a cultural belief that... you don't even know where that came from but you've gone along with it because that's the way it always is, then all of a sudden something wakes you up to, "Wait a minute!"

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: If you don't follow up the "No" with the "Yes," then the person would still likely associate themselves with the part that made the "No."

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Yes. The "No" and the "Yes" better be simultaneously present, else the "No" is nothing more than a defense. It's that simple.

Let us continue.

READER: [Principle Number] (5) The level-adjustment power of the miracle induces the right perception for healing.

RAJ: Which is exactly what we've just been saying.

READER: Until this has occurred healing cannot be understood. Forgiveness is an empty gesture unless it entails correction.

RAJ: Indeed. Which is healing.

READER: Without this it is essentially judgmental, rather than healing.

RAJ: Yes. Like we were talking about last week where it's a judgment against something. Whereas Judgment is the distinction between What Is Real and what is not, and choosing for the Real. Making the distinction between What Is Of Value and what is valueless, and choosing for What Is Value because what has become obviously valueless to you is something not any part of you would hang on to any longer because you see that it serves you in no way. Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I have a question about forgiveness. And basically you said, it's the judgment followed by the healing. First you discern, and then you offer a healing.

RAJ: Forgiveness is really the withdrawal of judgment upon your Brother.

SEEKER: I don't mean that kind of judgment. I meant judgment as far as discernment.

RAJ: Ask your question again.

SEEKER: Okay. Forgiveness is the process where first you discern What's Real and what's not real, and then you offer a healing. Correct?

RAJ: Yes. Yes. You make the distinction between What Is Real and unreal, and then you address What Is Real in the individual.

SEEKER: Mmm hmmm. Which is offering a healing.

RAJ: Exactly. And that is an excellent way of describing forgiveness. Yes.

SEEKER: Okay. And here's the thought that followed for me is that if you are not in physical presence of the person that you're forgiving, and since there are no private thoughts, can you then send a healing when you turn towards the Altar?

RAJ: You can't help but send the healing

SEEKER: Right. But you don't have to be in physical vicinity?

RAJ: Absolutely not.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: And that doesn't constitute a personal power. It doesn't constitute a means of control.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: The extension of Love is spontaneous because it fills you and overflows. You can't contain it. And so not only the one you're thinking about, but everyone else is blessed as well. And you've got to let Love do its work on its terms in the way that addresses the ignorance of the one being Loved perfectly, in a way that allows for the sudden shift of perception that can get in through the back door, catching that one off guard so that there's [finger snap] a sudden "Aha!"

I've said before that the ego is nothing but a defense mechanism. And so any time you inflict Love on anyone for their good, you can count on it that they will be well-defended immediately to object to the intrusion, to object to what they perceive to be an invasion of their privacy, and an overriding over their free will. And mind you, your free will is very important to all of you, although it's becoming less.

And so, you see, that's another reason it's important for you not to think you know what Love is going to appear as so that you can direct it in that way. Because Love has to find the back door, has to find the place where there's a weak defense so that it can sneak in, bringing Light where it was dark, and that person experiences a light bulb going on.

You've got to let Love do its work in its way and on its terms. And you've got to trust that the Father's Love is sufficient to the need.

But you know what? You can't say, "Father, please Love him. Father, he needs Your Love." You've got to become involved, and you've got to say, "Father, show me how to Love him." Because the Love has to be a gift in a relationship. It has to be the manifestation of caring. It has to be the manifestation of joining in Brotherhood for reasons of Brotherhood.

This globe, this planet is not going to arrive at peace and harmony until the reasons everyone relates to each other are reasons of Love and Brotherhood, to express and embody Brotherhood, so that everyone does well because everyone cares about everyone else. Not because they managed in the game of one-up-man-ship. You see?

Okay. Let us continue.

EARLIER SEEKER: Can I ask one quick question?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: In... um...

RAJ: That wasn't quick enough. [audience laughter]

SEEKER: [laughing] In the job that I'm doing now, this seems like this is a very important thing to use, to practice. And I... am I correct?

RAJ: You are correct. And it is also a place where you will find it much easier to practice it than any other place you've been before.

SEEKER: Yes. Right on. It hits the nail on the head. Thanks.

RAJ: You are welcome.

READER: [Principle Number] (6) Miracle-minded forgiveness is only correction. It has no element of judgment at all. The statement "Father forgive them for they know not what they do" in no way evaluates what they do. It is an appeal to God to heal their minds.

RAJ: Yes. You see the... what they do, what they've done, what their reasons were, whether their suffering is deserved or not, all of that is irrelevant to the correction. The correction is the result of loving enough to ask that their belief and their sense of being the believer of the belief be illuminated for the illusions they are so that that one can come into a fuller Conscious Experience of their Christhood and their God-given Sanity.

Continue.

READER: There is no reference to the outcome of the error. That does not matter.

RAJ: How can there be an outcome to an error? How can there become... how can there be an outcome to something that didn't happen? And I mean that in the sense that if God didn't authorize it, nothing happened. And if God did authorize it, it's obviously an aspect of the Kingdom of Heaven that is perfect and awesome.

Now, if someone is attempting to do something that they cannot do, like inflict harm, the fact that they are attempting to do it means they are suffering some form of insanity, and that does require correction. You can't say, "He's not doing anything. What he thinks he's doing is an illusion. Therefore, there's nothing I need to do."

If you see somebody walking into a wall over and over, and a foot to the left of him is an open doorway, you don't say, "Oh. Well just let him do it. He's not hurting anything." But he's not managing to get where he's trying to go. So you go over and you say, "Hey! Move over a foot to your left." Phoom! He walks through the wall. It doesn't matter why he was ignorant enough to keep walking into the wall. It doesn't matter... none of it matters. All that matters is correction is called for so that he experiences his freedom, and his freedom to go where he's wanting to go, and his freedom from an unnecessary block to his getting there. You see?

Continue.

READER: [Principle Number] (7) The injunction "Be of one mind" is the statement for revelation-readiness.

RAJ: And we've talked about singleness of mind, singleness of purpose, and that when you become unconfused and undistracted and your intent is pure because there's nothing extraneous to it, at the moment that that intent is pure it is done. The intent is done. Time does not stand in the way of the manifestation of that intent. That is what this means.

Continue.

READER: My request "Do this in remembrance of me" is the appeal for cooperation from miracle workers. The two statements are not in the same order of reality. Only the latter involves an awareness of time, since to remember is to recall the past in the present. Time is under my direction, but timelessness belongs to God. In time we exist for and with each other. In timelessness we coexist with God.

RAJ: Indeed. In time we exist, mind you, not just with each other, but for and with each other. In timelessness, we coexist with God. If you want to get to the timeless coexistence with God, you've got to fulfill the function of consciously being not only with, but for, present on behalf of each other. That's the way you break the isolation. That's the way you break the sense of the presence of a believer having to believe something because the Experience of What Everything Is, is temporarily unavailable to you because you've turned your back on the Altar.

The simple answer is Love. The simple answer is Love. And for the last five or six weeks we've been very specifically speaking about how to release fear. Why? So that nothing blocks your ability to stand in receipt of the Father's Love and extend it to your Brother, thus breaking the illusion of separation and causing you to be extremely susceptible to waking up. You will not be able to get to the timeless coexistence with God until you're willing to be present now, existing for and with each other.

Microphone over here.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'm really asking for the words to express this. It seems for a while I have been witness to many working hard at unsuccessful relationships. And so when I hear what you just said, "that we exist in time for each other," the first thing that comes to mind are all those who are having unsuccessful relationships. Meaning relationships with those who do not wish to make commitments in any kind of a relationship, who stand firm...

RAJ: No, I beg your pardon.

SEEKER: ...in the claim of independence...

RAJ: I beg your pardon.

SEEKER: ...as far as I see it.

RAJ: There is a willingness to make commitment to relationships, but on the condition that the one they're in relationship with, or that they make commitment to, is going to be there for them. In other words, if I want to be in a relationship with you so that I can get what you have for me because we're supposed to be here for each other, I want you to be here for me. That's not... that's got it backwards.

I'm here for you whether you're here for me or not. I am here for all of you whether you're here for me or not. And I will continue to be here for you until you recognize that I'm here for you and arrive at a point of saying, "Wow! How incredible! And he doesn't ask for anything back as a condition for being here for me, although he does want something." I do want something from you, but that's not a... my getting it is not a condition of my being here for you.

When you want to be in a relationship so that you have the opportunity to be there for someone else, it causes you to be very, very attractive. So attractive that you will find those who want to get coming to your doorstep, those who want to get without giving. And so you will have to be alert not to be used, and you will have to discern, make a distinction between those who want to be in a relationship with you in order to get, and those who want to be in a relationship with you because they find you desirable and who want to give you, be there for you, and then choose well. Choose for What Is Valuable. And choose not for that which is valueless.

The key in every case to unsuccessful relationships is when one or both of the partners have moved to a selfish getting standpoint and insist upon operating from there. And that's the bottom line of the distress on your globe at the moment. And it is calling for Brotherly Love to be expressed in ways that allow for the innate dignity of those behaving like ignorant bastards to be illuminated and magnified, so that those behaving badly can feel like it's safe to act with respect. The resolution will occur when everyone wins. Everyone wins.

Now, there are really only seven Special Principles of Miracle Workers. The eighth one here appears in a part of the original Course that no longer appears in the Course at all, but it was felt to be worth keeping and so it was, like pin the tail on the donkey, added here. [audience amusement]

[Editor's Note: In the above paragraph, the "original Course" refers to the Urtext version of the Course. The missing section referred to is, "True Rehabilitation," and it is in the Urtext Text, the HLC Text, and the "Sparkly Book." The section, "True Rehabilitation," does not appear in the published first and second editions of the Course (except the last paragraph of the section, see below). Note also that Raj will discuss the "True Rehabilitation" section on September 7, 2003 when he is reading from the "Sparkly Book."]

I am not going to say that we're not going to read it because it wasn't said here. We're going to read it because it does fit. And you'll find.... Well, let's read it.

Who has the microphone? Continue.

ANOTHER SEEKER: My privilege.

READER: [Number] (8) You can do much on behalf of your own healing and that of others if, in a situation calling for help, you think of it this way:

I am here only to be truly helpful.

I am here to represent Him Who sent me.

I do not have to worry about what to say or what to do, because He Who sent me will direct me.

I am content to be wherever He wishes, knowing He goes there with me.

I will be healed as I let Him teach me to heal.

RAJ: Indeed. Now, it can't help but be clearer to you than ever before that this is not a wonderful string of words with positive ideas for you to run through your mind. These words are literal. These words are literal.

You are here only to be truly helpful, because that's your divine Function. You are here to represent Him, with a capital "H", Who sent you. Well, you don't really have any other choice than to be the direct Expression of God embodying God. You can indulge in magic thoughts and fool yourself into believing that you are here to represent yourself. But it doesn't make it true. You are the direct Expression of God, and nothing else.

RAJ READING: I do not have to worry about what to say or what to do, because He Who sent me will direct me.

RAJ: And that's not in the by-and-by, you know. We're talking about listening, turning toward the Altar now, and hearing the Father's Voice now, hearing your Guide's Voice now, hearing the Holy Spirit's direction now really in a real event here today. You see? Not airy-fairy wonderful, pink cloud, fluffy ideas.

RAJ READING: I am content...

RAJ READING: I am content to be wherever He wishes,...

RAJ: [laughing] It is sort of amusing, isn't it? It's really foolish not to be content with where... with being wherever the Father is being you. [laughing a lot] Do you have any other choice than to be where He is being you?

RAJ READING: I am content to be wherever He wishes, knowing He goes there with me.

RAJ: You could say: Knowing He goes me there. [audience laughing] Which means you're not alone.

RAJ READING: I will be healed as I let Him teach me to heal.

RAJ: Yes. You see, this is all literal. It's all wonderfully literal. It's meat and potatoes. Not pie in the sky after you die.

Yes.

SEEKER: So if I refuse to do anything at all when I'm with my Brother or Sister except one thing, and that is to see the Christ standing right smack dab before me, then that's like what you've been saying and what I've been understanding. A very real and very clear distinction behind... between what I see and how they're behaving. Is that right?

RAJ: Between what you see?

SEEKER: Between the Christ that I see and how they're behaving, which is nine times... ninety-nine times out of a hundred, probably with all of their, you know, historical reactions and beliefs, and so forth, and so on, that's really not representative of the Christ That They Are.

RAJ: And what is the question?

SEEKER: It's like a reaffirmation that I'm giving back to you of what you've been saying to us.

RAJ: Yes. That is correct.

SEEKER: And from like an experiential point of view, if I remove myself like from my thinking part, and I just refuse to see anything but the Christ in them from an experiential point...

RAJ: You refuse to see anything but whatever it is God reveals to you. I don't even want you to start doing a string of words. You know, "I only want to see the Christ there."

You can say very practically, "I am able to recognize, because at the bottom line I know it's true about me, that I am more than my thoughts. And I am more than my beliefs, because my beliefs can change, but I don't. Therefore, because I am not my beliefs, my beliefs and their results cannot identify me. Because I see that about myself, I can look at my Brother and reason clearly that he is not his beliefs, and he doesn't deserve the suffering he is experiencing from his beliefs, therefore, I see them separate. I am able to make a distinction between the two, and on the basis of that distinction I choose to ask God how to be with the unchangeable Christ that is there, so that he might be released from suffering beliefs that he thinks he's the believer of, together with his freedom from his belief that he's the believer of them." You see?

SEEKER: Yes, and I would definitely like to be with What's Real with me and be with What's Real with my Brother and Sister.

RAJ: Yes. And then having acknowledged what I just said, you turn to the Father and say, "Fill me with Love. Fill me with Your Vision. Fill me with Your Perspective, so that I might be overflowing with it, and my Brother is blessed, the Christ that is standing there. Show me how to be with him. And if his sudden shift of perception isn't instantaneous, help me to keep my attention on the Christ That He Is, while we be together in an educational... a lovingly educational, healing process."

SEEKER: I'll stay with that clear distinction with my own awareness and my own willingness to stay with that clear distinction between Christ in my Brother and Sister and their... and their behavior.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: I'll have Guidance, won't I?

RAJ: Yes, you will.

SEEKER: And it'll be so much... it'll be a heck of a lot easier for me to be appropriate with their behavior without me lapsing into a state of blah, blah, blah, fear of what's up... you know, whatever I might be inclined to...

RAJ: And there will be a lot more quietness on your globe, because there will be a lot less grapevine gossip and malicious gossip, and any kind of gossip going on. And when you do open your mouths, something beautiful and of substance will emerge.

And as Paul can tell you, when he opens his mouth and shares what he is hearing, there's no way to feel egotistical about it. And it's as natural as apple pie, and so it doesn't seem like you're doing anything great. But it is meaningful, and it does have substance. And the result will not be a sort of cotton candy, insubstantial bliss that everyone is in because they're speaking meaningfully and there is harmony. If something has substance to it, it has significant meaning to it. And significant meaning is experienced as vital. And there is a great deal of joy that is experienced in the vitality of the substantiality of the ideas finding expression.

So there's nothing else to say tonight.

SEEKER: Well, can you...

RAJ: I have enjoyed being with you.

SEEKER: So have I, of course.

RAJ: Okay.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 3 – THE INNOCENT PERCEPTION
Section – ATONEMENT WITHOUT SACRIFICE
First Edition – p. 32 / Second Edition – p. 37

RAJ: Good evening. And as always I welcome everyone who is also joining us on the internet.

READER: The statement “Vengeance is Mine, sayeth the Lord” is a misperception by which one assigns his own “evil” past to God. The “evil” past has nothing to do with God. He did not create it and He does not maintain it. God does not believe in retribution. His Mind does not create that way. He does not hold your “evil” deeds against you. Is it likely that He would hold them against me? Be very sure that you recognize how utterly impossible this assumption is, and how entirely it arises from projection. This kind of error is responsible for a host of related errors, including the belief that God rejected Adam and forced him out of the Garden of Eden.

RAJ: You see the idea that God penalizes you for something you are entirely incapable of actually doing can cause one to come to this ridiculous conclusion that God rejected Adam, and therefore you as well. And so you presently are cast out. You’re in this dream of existence because of what Adam did. It’s a tricky ploy of the ego because it distracts you from the easy capacity to realize that you’re quote “on the outside” unquote because of a choice you are currently making and not because of anything God has done.

Let me ask you this. If you are doing a mathematical equation and you introduce an incorrect element into the equation, you come up with the wrong answer. Now, if this equation is related to an experiment in chemistry, your incorrect answer could result in, let us say, an explosion occurring. And you could come to the insane conclusion that the explosion was your punishment for introducing an incorrect element into the equation as though the principle of mathematics was just waiting to nail you, when it has nothing to do with judgment placed upon you. When you introduce an incorrect element into an equation, you naturally come up with an incorrect answer. It’s not a punishment. It’s just evidence that you have made a mistake.

If you aren’t experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven right now as the Kingdom of Heaven, and you are instead thinking it’s the world and universe, it's not because God kicked you out by virtue of kicking Adam out of the Garden of Eden, the Kingdom of Heaven, but because at this moment you're introducing a mutually-agreed-upon definition that is at odds with Reality that you're committed to. That's all. It causes you to see in a flawed manner. No one has laid that on you but yourself. And the simple fact is that your commitment to a mutually-agreed-upon definition that is flawed isn't changing the Kingdom of Heaven at all. So, you haven't accomplished the impossible which would be to actually change the Kingdom of Heaven by introducing a flawed perception. You see?

SEEKER: So in the Old Testament it talks about the God of Abraham being a jealous and a wrathful and a vengeful God. He also instructs the Israelites to go out and slay the Canaanites so He can... they can take over their land, et cetera. And so the general theme of the Old Testament, if I recall it correctly, is based...

RAJ: An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.

SEEKER: Exactly. Exactly. So, two questions are: Did the Old Testament serve a purpose in its time and then it was replaced by the Gospel of Love? Or was it erroneous from the beginning and should be negated entirely?

RAJ: I have said before that rules are for those who have forgotten how to Love. The ten commandments were rules. And they were, if I may put it this way, the best rules that could be embraced by the mindset at that time that would provide longevity to the individuals who needed to arrive at a point of remembering Love. So they were absolutely and completely valuable at the time. Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Yes, it does. Thank you.

RAJ: For those who still do not remember how to Love, those rules called the ten commandments are still valuable in helping you to, I'm going to say, mechanically by virtue of rules achieving a certain semblance of peace and harmony so that in the absence of living out of pure survival, there is the opportunity, the space, if you will, the relative safety that allows you to go within, to become still, to become unprotected, undefended, so that you can turn toward the Altar.

Now, again so we don't become ungrounded. If you have introduced a flawed perception into your experience of the Kingdom of Heaven that isn't actually changing the Kingdom of Heaven in any way, but is most definitely altering your experience of it, you cannot say that the result of the flawed perception doesn't matter because it hasn't actually changed anything about the Kingdom of Heaven, it hasn't altered God or His Creation in any way, therefore, you are not guilty of anything that God would punish you for, and therefore, everything is all right.

If there's a flawed perception in the equation, correction of it needs to occur. Why? So that you are no longer misperceiving the Kingdom of Heaven and behaving as though you are and can be the Christ unconsciously. It's a matter of coming back into your own Sanity. Also, it's a matter of knowing the Truth so that there is no sense of suffering that you or anyone else seems to be experiencing. Correction of the misperception must occur, else you're not awake yet.

So again I want to bring home the point that until correction has occurred, you are not in a position to say, "None of this is real. None of the misperceptions that I have had have actually changed God or Reality in any way, and therefore, I am not subject to punishment from God because I haven't actually succeeded in doing anything wrong, and therefore, I need do nothing. I can just continue introducing the misperception into my life, and it's okay." You cannot do that. If you could, there would be no Course In Miracles. If you could, there would have been no need for me to show up two thousand years ago. The whole point of this is that correction needs to be made and it's time to get about the task of making the correction.

If correction didn't need to be made, then tell me what benefit it would be to look at somebody who's acting hatefully and say, "Well, that's a call for Love. I recognize it. That's a call for Love," and then you go on about your business. "I mean who needs to do anything about it? Yeah, it's a call for Love. But you know, he's not really hurting anything in his misbehaving. Yeah. Yeah. I got this. A lot of calls for Love showing up all over the place. Isn't that fascinating? Mmmm." And you pick up your cup of tea and have another sip and notice how beautiful the day is and what a nice breeze there is and a... You see what I'm saying? A call for Love calls for Love to be embodied, so that what was inhibiting the one calling for Love from expressing and embodying Love himself can dissolve and free that one up to embody Love, instead of a call for Love, instead of needing Love to be able to extend Love.

So let's be very clear. It's all about correction occurring. And until correction has occurred, you're still in the dream. And if you don't even think correction is called for, you're stuck in the dream. And your stuckness contributes to the stuckness of your Brothers and Sisters as well because you don't do any of this by yourself.

Yes?

ANOTHER SEEKER: There has been a question regarding what the embodiment of the Love should or should not look like. Could you please elaborate on that?

RAJ: [laughing] Should or shouldn't. Here we get into rules and the effects of rules known ahead of time before the Act of Love occurs. The Atonement is an Act of Love, right? And the Atonement is an Act of Love that not one of you will know anything about until you let yourself into that place where God infills you with the inspiration that overflows from you and spontaneously blesses your Brother. Afterwards, you can say, "This is what it looked like." But you cannot say beforehand what it should look like. And I will make this very clear. You better... you better be ready and willing for what it does look like to be a surprise to you, and perhaps be completely unlike anything you expected. Do you know why? Because if that's not the way you approach it, you are going to have some bias as to what it will look like and that it really won't be at all surprising to you because you're so full of love already that you know that it's not going to look certain ways. And right there you have twisted or biased your listening, your attentiveness, and whatever does come through will have to twist itself way through your bias. And if it doesn't fit your bias, you won't recognize it and your opportunity to engage in an Act of Love, the Atonement, simply won't happen.

Now, I said in the Course, you are the salvation of the world and I'm going to ask you, how well have you done this past week being the salvation of the world? I'm not going to ask for an answer. [audience laughter] But I ask the question because the majority of you forgot to think about that. I'm not saying that you forgot to think about turning toward the Altar, but I am saying that you didn't remember the fullness of what it means to turn toward the Altar. What it means is that you become the salvation of the world.

Fear in you might say, "Well that's a pretty tall order." But in the absence of fear, it's seen as Fulfillment of Purpose. It's seen as the greatness of your Essential Being, the maximal fullness of the gift you have to bring. You are the salvation of the world. At the least you can see that your willingness to abandon your well-established definitions of everything puts you in a position of your seeing your world with less bias. And if you were able to be completely free of your agreed-upon-definitions and biases, you would be able to see the world and universe as the Kingdom of Heaven that it actually is. You would be able to see totally clearly. So in that sense you can grasp just how completely you govern what you're experiencing. In that sense you can see that you are the salvation of the world you're seeing. Do you see that?

So, what you could miss out on is the fact that when you are seeing the world through the eyes of salvation, perfectly in other words, you have withdrawn from the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that constitute the joining that is mutual dreaming and you have lessened the dream. And you also have become I'm going to call it a maximal agent for change because everything that comes from you is pure Love that answers the call for Love from others with Love, which lays the groundwork for everyone that you're in touch with to have an experience of more safety that allows them to trust more and for everyone in the Brotherhood who is still dreaming dreams that you are not in one-on-one contact that you know of. Everyone is blessed as well. And so your simple clarity in which the world you see is saved, is seen without bias, demonstrates the fact that you are the salvation of the world, and it blesses everyone else as well. So it's more than just you having a clearer picture of everything.

Okay, let's continue.

READER: It is also why you may believe from time to time that I am misdirecting you. I have made every effort to use words that are almost impossible to distort, but it is always possible to twist symbols around if you wish.

RAJ: Ain't that the truth! I want you to realize that it's your habit, every single one of you, it's your habit to twist symbols around because that's how you maintain the mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

So it's not only always possible to twist symbols around if you wish, you wish to do it all the time. And what I'm engaged in with you and what the Course is engaged in with you is to inspire you to try abandoning twisting the symbols around, and daring to look at things with fresh eyes, even if it's just for a moment, even if it's just a momentary wish not to twist the symbols. Okay?

I just want you to understand that it's not only always possible to twist symbols around if you wish, at the present time you wish to twist them all the time. You're breaking that habit, but don't believe that you've left the habit behind yet. This is part of the correction that's needed of being in a new way, which means perceiving in a new way and behaving on the basis of the new perception in a new way. Not by design. "Oh, we ought to be like this. We should be like that." But whatever way it is, when you're filled with the inspiration of Clarity and Truth and Love that infills you when you turn toward the Altar, and embodying that, whatever it is, whether it's a surprise to you or not.

Okay.

READER: Sacrifice is a notion totally unknown to God. It arises solely from fear, and frightened people can be vicious. Sacrificing in any way is a violation of my injunction that you should be merciful even as your Father in Heaven is merciful. It has been hard for many Christians to realize that this applies to themselves. Good teachers never terrorize their students. To terrorize is to attack, and this results in rejection of what the teacher offers. The result is learning failure.

RAJ: Is anyone unclear about that? God doesn't terrorize you. I don't terrorize you. And here we're specifically talking about terrorizing with the threat of sacrifice. Remember that we're talking about one of the last fears that will present itself to you, that being that God is a whimsical, flip-flop God who can be loving and hateful, who can provide relief as well as suffering for your own good, for your own growth. The suggestion that you will have to sacrifice is a form of terrorizing. God's Law for you is Fulfillment, not sacrifice. God's Law for you is Fulfillment, not sacrifice. It is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom, the whole ball of wax. All that He is being He gives to you as You.

That's like the laws of mathematics. They're not there so that if you break them, you will be penalized. It's just the way things work—the perfect way things work. It's God's Law that Fulfillment is your Birthright. If God is going to enforce anything, it's going to be the Experience of that Fulfillment. So you could say God is on your side, so much on your side that you can't really succeed at getting on another side yourself where you're on your own deciding what things will be and what they won't be, what they are and what they aren't, and making up your own rules.

Continue.

READER: I have been correctly referred to as “the lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world,” but those who represent the lamb as blood-stained do not understand the meaning of the symbol. Correctly understood, it is a very simple symbol that speaks of my innocence. The lion and the lamb lying down together symbolize that strength and innocence are not in conflict, but naturally live in peace.

RAJ: Okay. I am the lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world. Sounds pretty special. Wow! Or the ego could make it sound pretty special. But you know what? It's more a State of Being than an individuality with a role. When you choose for your peace and you go within and you find that your peace is available to you, you find freedom from fear. And freedom from fear is a direct experience of your innocence, your purity. It is your experience of being the lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world by virtue of your not magnifying the sins of the world, but rather having turned from your own private, distorted perceptions which have scared you to death, and turning toward God by choosing for peace when your ego has said there's no justification for it and it's unavailable to you.

The next sentence says:

RAJ READING: The lion and the lamb lying down together symbolize that strength and innocence are not in conflict, but naturally live in peace.

RAJ: When you choose for your peace and you move into it, you find that you are at once strong and innocent. The experience of innocence and therefore guiltlessness means that you are undivided and indivisible. And that which is indivisible has no weaknesses. It has pure integrity, and pure integrity is like, for lack of better words, structural strength. It's like a very well-built car that has structural integrity that doesn't rattle or shake or shimmy, and you feel its integrity when you drive it.

So, please, don't attribute great significance to me being the lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world. You each hold within you the capacity and the obligation to be the lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world you're seeing, so that you are the salvation of the world you're seeing, and thereby an agent for change that transforms anyone else who is still dreaming dreams.

Continue.

READER: "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God" is another way of saying the same thing. A pure mind knows the truth and this is its strength. It does not confuse destruction with innocence because it associates innocence with strength, not with weakness.

RAJ: And you know what? It associates it not through a process of thinking but as a direct, inner experience. Why do I say this? Because I want to keep you focused on the experience of turning toward the Altar, the experience of hearing the Voice for Truth, the Presence of God infilling you so that your behavior is a spontaneous outcome of that influx, rather than a result of a consciously directed, thought-out choice.

Okay.

SEEKER: So the behavior then can take on a number of different forms and be appropriate if we have turned towards the Altar first and we're inspired.

RAJ: Absolutely. Are your fingerprints identical to anyone else in the world? No.

SEEKER: No.

RAJ: That's how original the Expression of God is.

SEEKER: That could be a mistake to look at a form and say that was not an inspired Act of God because it should not look like such-and-such.

RAJ: That is quite correct because you know what? You could just happen to be the one that someone else looks at and says, "That is not a legitimate form there." Absolutely.

No one else can make your gift. No one else can make the Gift of the Presence Of God That God Is Being right there where you are. Therefore, your Presence has to be unique. God never stops to repeat Himself. "Behold, I make all things new."

SEEKER: How do you recognize a call for Love? I mean what comes to me when I say that is you can't recognize a call for Love by looking out there and seeing a certain form. How I would recognize a call for Love is again to turn towards the Altar and ask and feel whether that is a call for Love. Is that correct?

RAJ: No. That is a careless abandonment of common sense. All of you know what a call for Love is because it hurts. Because you don't feel good when it's happening. It's real simple. And sometimes some of you try to gloss it over, talk it away. But you need to learn to trust your innate capacity to recognize a call for Love because it doesn't feel good.

SEEKER: Makes a lot of sense.

RAJ: Indeed. You see, God hasn't made it difficult to wake up. It's natural to be awake. And everything about waking up is as simple as what I just said.

Okay. Continue.

READER: Innocence is incapable of sacrificing anything, because the innocent mind has everything and strives only to protect its wholeness.

RAJ: Now, let me just interrupt. How does it protect its wholeness? By not being tempted to entertain any other experience than the experience of wholeness. It protects its wholeness by giving its full attention to its wholeness in the same way that one protects Truth. One protects Truth not by defending it against something else, but by loving it wholly. By loving it and giving your attention to it more than you're willing to give it to anything else. You protect Truth, you protect innocence by being totally committed to it. You see?

Continue.

READER: It cannot project. It can only honor other minds, because honor is the natural greeting of the truly loved to others who are like them. The lamb “taketh away the sins of the world” in the sense that the state of innocence, or grace, is one in which the meaning of the Atonement is perfectly apparent. The Atonement is entirely unambiguous.

RAJ: And it's unambiguous because it's so utterly simple. Love is Love. Love felt is Love that can't help but illuminate you and thus illuminate the world.

Continue.

READER: It is perfectly clear because it exists in light. Only the attempts to shroud it in darkness have made it inaccessible to those who do not choose to see.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: The Atonement itself radiates nothing but truth. It therefore epitomizes harmlessness and sheds only blessing. It could not do this if it arose from anything but perfect innocence. Innocence is wisdom because it is unaware of evil, and evil does not exist. It is, however, perfectly aware of everything that is true. The resurrection demonstrated that nothing can destroy truth. Good can withstand any form of evil, as light abolishes forms of darkness. The Atonement is therefore the perfect lesson.

RAJ: Yes. Say that again.

READER: The Atonement is therefore the perfect lesson.

RAJ: And it's utterly simple. The Atonement is, I'm going to say, the inspired Act of Love. How much simpler could you get? That's all it takes to wake up. The willingness to engage in, to be the channel for the inspired Act of Love emanating from the Father—the forever commitment to that. That's all the more complicated it is. I want you to keep this in mind. It's the perfect lesson, because it's the lesson that undoes all illusion. And it's the perfect lesson because it's so utterly simple.

Continue.

READER: It is the final demonstration that all the other lessons I taught are true. If you can accept this one generalization now, there will be no need to learn from many smaller lessons. You are released from all errors if you believe this.

RAJ: Indeed. Continue.

You have a question?

EARLIER SEEKER: I had a discussion with a gentleman today and he was very depressed. And the reason was is he sees the environment being compromised by the withdrawal from conservation measures. He sees peace being compromised because of war. He sees the Vice President of the United States being awarded huge sums of money...

RAJ: I'm going to say something.

SEEKER: Yep.

RAJ: This is part of the misperception. He sees peace being compromised because of war.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: What he sees is peace being called for and resisted. It is not peace being compromised. Peace called for and not responded to would be peace compromised. Continue with the question.

SEEKER: Okay. Generally, I guess, if you look at the condition of the world as it is today it looks a lot worse than it did yesterday or the day before.

RAJ: Transformation always looks like that because it upsets the status quo while transformation occurs.

SEEKER: Okay. But relatively speaking, to this gentleman as well as many others, the world looks like it's in the state of degeneration with global warming, etc., etc. And every time you pick up the newspaper, there's another incredible affront to what many people would call good common sense, and, you know, righteousness, et cetera. So the question is how does one, short of burying your head in the sand, keep lighthearted or have a positive attitude when there are so many things that seem to be challenging goodness?

RAJ: By getting off the fence. By becoming involved. By beginning to actively embody all the Truth you've been so wonderfully studying and feeling such uplift from when there didn't seem to be a call for you to consciously and specifically embody it.

It's one thing to easily and merrily go along your way and say, "God is Love. And God loves me and God loves the whole world. All is well. All is well." It's one thing to do that when there aren't challenges. But when there are challenges, it becomes a requirement to do it, not as a nice idea, but because in the presence of the invitation to abandon your peace and engage in fear, you must not allow yourself to forget your Function. You don't... you don't... you don't maintain your peace in airy-fairy platitudes. You accept the call for Love. You accept the call for Love because it calls to you, and you get to work, and you find it important enough to be that Place where God can be embodied. You could look at it this way. You could look at as though you have all been healers held in trust for the occasion where healing was called for.

Now, if I said to you that you were all ordained by God to be healers, your egos would like that, and you at a deeper level might find that inspiring. But remember you are the salvation of the world. That's your Function. And so the call for Love is calling for you to fulfill your Function. And you've got to abandon the desire to have a dreamy state in which to be the Presence of Love, an idyllic state in which to be the Presence of Love. Because the Presence of Love is called for where Love seems to have been lost and people are behaving as though they are not loved and Love is not available to them and it's your Function to show them otherwise. So, what can I say? It's time... it's time to roll up your sleeves and answer the call and stop wishing for some better circumstance in which to be the Presence of Love. Once you begin to feel your Function as the Presence of Love embodying in the world, the stresses of the call for Love will stop distracting you from the pleasure of being the place where Love is embodied and where those calling for Love can find safety and security so that they can dare to feel Love and be able to extend it.

Hey, if you want to be able to be the Presence of Love in the middle of peace, come on Home to the Kingdom of Heaven. Come on Home and be with Us who are awake, because there you can have the pleasant experience of being the Presence of Love.

Where the Presence of Love is needed is where the call for Love is being made. And that's where all of you are standing in receipt of the call for Love. Having been called out of inactive duty as healers to be in active duty. "Whoa! That looks like it might be a little bit... require a little bit of effort. That's going to change my routine, I'll tell you." But, you know what? The routine you've been in is the one that has promoted the dream.

And the effort you're going to have to put forth is one which if you put it forth, will disclose to you a capacity and a strength to be the Presence of Love that you didn't realize that you had, and you will find it to be effortless, not more effort. And that's the way a new habit will emerge, a new way of being all the time because it's not only your Birthright, it's your Function and it's your Joy. At the bottom line, it is your Joy. You don't see it yet, but it's awaiting you. But it's going to take conscious, conscientious attention. You see? And that won't be a wonderful dreamy experience. It'll be a vital, fulfilling experience. Not ego-fulfilling, but fulfilling because for you it will be the Experience of the Presence of God in You that shines away any ego satisfaction that you might have thought you would have from such an experience. One which lets God stand forth and demonstrates to you What You Are as What God Is Choosing For You To Be, which is where your full satisfaction and full joy of being lies.

SEEKER: Can I bring this... perhaps it would be easier for us to understand if I brought it to an actual situation. A lot of people have gone out and demonstrated for peace. And a lot of people have gone out and demonstrated for war. So let's take one side. Okay, a lot of people go out and demonstrate for peace, and the newspaper reporters ask President Bush, what does he think about all the people all over the world demonstrating for peace? And his response was, "Well, I think it's great that people have the ability or the freedom to go out and demonstrate. But actually I really don't care, because I'm going to do what I'm going to do." And for those people who are out demonstrating for peace, they can look at that and become tremendously exasperated as him not being representative of their... of the majority or whatever. So, the answer then is to replace the exasperation with, "I really love George Bush but he's just got a little bit of a misperception right now and I'm going to love him through it." Is that what you're saying?

RAJ: Well, that statement is something that did not come from having turned toward the Altar and listened for What To Be relative to the question, relative to the distress.

SEEKER: What? You mean the last statement I made about loving George Bush?

RAJ: That I love George Bush, but blah, blah, blah. Yes. You can't... you can't... you can't know ahead of time what you'll be saying.

SEEKER: Right. But I mean when you're exasperated, it's a difficult...

RAJ: You've lost your peace.

SEEKER: Yes. And it's a difficult thing to turn to the Altar and hear anything except...

RAJ: Only because you value your aggravation more than the great benefit...

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: ...of your peace.

SEEKER: So let me rephrase it then. How do you get past that? How do you get past the exasperation [audience laughter] so you can hear what the appropriate response to George Bush, or to his statement, or to the environmental problems, or all the myriad of problems that we're faced with now at this point in time, this interesting time that we live in?

RAJ: Well therein lies the work.

SEEKER: So it's just a matter of being still until it passes?

RAJ: No! [audience amusement] You become still... you become still until you know the answer.

SEEKER: That's what I'm saying, until the exasperation passes so you can get clear enough to be able to hear.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: I didn't mean until the world passes away and we're in the Kingdom. [more audience amusement]

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Well thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj, in response to Michael's question, it occurred to me today I kind of had a revelation that, and in accordance to what you're saying tonight, in order to be the Presence of Love, we have to first of all, when the call for Love presents itself recognize it's coming from misperceptions. These are definitions we've given everything. So the definitions have to be addressed. I mean, for example, today I realized we're not at war, we're at transformation, and that the answer is moving because the Movement of God is the only thing going on. So war is a definition that the media has given to describe the corrective action that is being taken. Now, that gave me a whole different feeling, that realization.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And so, my point being is we've got to address these definitions. When we're in conversation with people and they are upset because they're drowning in definitions of what they think they're seeing, we have... that's our opportunity to clarify what it... was really going on, to be helpful in clarifying what is really going on.

RAJ: Yes. However, having had this realization today and the capacity to restate it in those words doesn't mean that that will be sufficient to the day tomorrow. So don't expect that now you'll have a wonderfully concise way of expressing it that you will be able to use indefinitely, that will naturally be beneficial to everyone who hears it. What I want you to do is to continue to stand at the threshold of clarification so that tomorrow you have whatever is given to you to know to share.

What is marvelous about what you have just shared is not what you have shared, is not what you have shared, but the freshness of it. The illumination of you having experienced a light bulb going on.

SEEKER: Yeah. That's... what the... but the message was...

RAJ: Today's light bulb will not illuminate tomorrow. That's what I want to... that's what I want you...

SEEKER: Okay. So, in other words, we have... we can't drag the previous definition of the illumination into tomorrow's experience, or the next moment's experience. It has to be illumination, illumination, illumination.

RAJ: Exactly! Experience, experience, experience. Not idea, idea, idea.

SEEKER: Okay. I got it.

RAJ: Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You see, the marvelousness of our being together is not what I'm saying but the freshness of the Gift that Paul is making by standing at the threshold. And next week, if we were to talk about these very pages we've been reading from tonight, I would not repeat myself.

The Gift lies in the spontaneity and the freshness of the Presence of Truth and Clarity in each and every moment that comes forth when one is not in one's head and when one's thinking is not generating one's words. That's the Act of Love.

SEEKER: I am amazed sometimes when I look back at what I said because I wasn't thinking about it when it was said.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: I mean it just kind of rolled. If I start to think, then I get all... then I go into reaction.

RAJ: Everyone does. Indeed.

SEEKER: I think I...

RAJ: So when you look back and experience amazement, what you're really being amazed at is the fact that there really is a God.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: And it was your Experience of Being at that moment, and therefore ultimately it was you being more truly What You Are than you can possibly be when you're thinking.

SEEKER: What I also experience when those moments, thank God, are happening for me, is that I feel so grounded. It's like I am... nothing can shake me.

RAJ: That is the strength of innocence. But it's not an authority or power over anything.

SEEKER: No, it's just...

RAJ: It's just the utter immovability of everything that's true about you. The utter unchangeability of everything that's true about you. And every time you experience that, you make that Gift because your behavior with your Brothers at that moment is entirely different from the way it is when you're behaving as a result of thinking.

SEEKER: Concepts.

RAJ: Exactly.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I just have a comment.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: When you're talking about how we benefit from the joy, I know that's true. I've experienced that. And what I'm finding is that whenever I approach someone, I really love that person and that's what I see, and because of that, that's like the basis of it. That's how I get more joy and it grows stronger and it... I guess most of what I say is that it's that approach of loving somebody that... that I see first, and if I get upset, I quickly remind myself, "Wrong. Love that person." And just loving a person always brings you right back. That's the goal. That's our job. Just love each other.

RAJ: Okay. Now this is sort of like the ten commandments. Love each other and remind yourself to love each other. And of course, the patterned behavior you're describing "to remember to do this, remember to do this," is great for those who have forgotten how to Love. It isn't really love yet. It's a good, intelligent practice.

SEEKER: It's developing a habit.

RAJ: Yes. But what I want you to develop the habit of is, I'm going to say, in addition to remembering to love your neighbor, to find even more value in turning toward the Altar so that God might give you the Vision of your Brother that is a Vision of Love that will spontaneously result in behavior that will identify God's Vision and Purpose, rather than a practical and intelligent and humanly beneficial practice.

SEEKER: I understand. And when I do, do that, I don't ever feel alone. I feel God's right with me.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: I don't like going without God.

RAJ: And that's really where the Joy, that's where the real Joy is. You get good feelings from remembering to Love your Brother and doing it and seeing that it has a better result than misbehaving with your Brother. But the Joy comes from the undeniable Experience of God's Presence in the whole thing. That's... that's what I'm homing in on here is the experience. And I'm homing in on your rolling up your sleeves and engaging in the work of answering the call for Love where the call for Love is being made, rather than saying, "Well there must be something wrong because everything seems so much more stressful. I really would like to be the Presence of Love under less... when the call for Love is less strenuous." But you know what? Where the call is most strenuous is the place where it is most needed and it is the place where when the Love is gifted, the most transformation can occur.

SEEKER: I find it extremely easy, well not extremely. I find it... I find it very easy here in the northwest to see people under stress and yet it's so easy for me to look beyond that, because when you're in stress you have a tendency to lash out at people and not really be at your best. But for some reason, up here, it's just so much easier for me to see right through that, to see the person is hurting.

RAJ: Your stress level is lower. They're not different, but you are. And that's what's making it easier. You're experiencing less stress, therefore automatic defense is not coming into play, and with less defense you are available for the Father's Perspective to register with you.

SEEKER: That's good.

RAJ: Yes.

Okay, so, next week, I will probably ask you again, "You are the salvation of the world. How did you do this last week?" I probably won't make you answer, but don't depend upon it. The point is I just want to set your mind in an attitude that includes your Function so that you might bring it in conscious play every day.

SEEKER: We have nothing else to do.

RAJ: Nothing real, anyway. [audience laughter] Indeed.

I love you all.

AUDIENCE: Thank you, Raj.

RAJ: And I hope you all have a better week. Not one in which there are fewer calls for Love, or less strenuous calls for Love, but one in which you willingly face the calls for Love with the willingness to let the answer to the calls for Love come through you because you really do want to fulfill your Function as the savior of the world, saviors of the world. Because you really do want to be healers. I use that word because almost every one of you likes that idea. And so you can transfer it to the words I've used which are, "you are the saviors of the world." You don't like that one as much because it seems to involve some great responsibility. Well, it's not ego-type greatness, but it is great because whether you see the Integrity and the Presence of the Kingdom of Heaven, or not, is up to you. And it will be a profound experience for all of you to be experiencing the world and universe as the Kingdom of Heaven.

So you have not a daunting task in front of you, but a wonderful task that it's your Birtheright to experience and which you have the innate capacity to embody. But we're down to the embodiment time. We're out of the head trip time. We're out of the wonderful ideas in A Course in Miracles and into the practical transformational experiential meaning of those words.

I will look forward to being with you next week.

First Edition – p. 34 / Second Edition – p. 38

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is also joining us on the internet.

Last week I mentioned that each of you is the salvation of the world and that I might ask you how you did in that respect this week. I'm not going to do that. [a little audience laughter] You're off the hook.

But you might ask, "How can I be the salvation of the world? What am I supposed to do?" And the simple answer is you might pray for the world. You might pray for key figures, let us say, in situations occurring in the world. You might pray for a particular part of your body that doesn't seem to be reflecting God or God's Purpose. And then we might ask, "Well, how do you pray? What is the right way to pray?" And actually we've been talking about it for some weeks now.

True prayer is when you abandon what you think you want, what you think you need, when you abandon the thoughts you have about your wants and needs and go within and turn toward the Altar. To what? Inquire of God What The Truth Is. And then listen without interjecting anything in the process. Listen.

If it's the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom, which means withhold nothing from you, then you can count on it that any genuine inquiry you extend to God will be answered. The fact is that the answer is always being given. But by virtue of bringing your attention to the point of listening for the answer opens your mind to the receipt of the answer.

Now, when you get the answer, when clarification occurs, you can say, "Oh wow! This is a wonderful bit of information." Having received the answer doesn't automatically mean that you embrace the answer and let it change you. So ultimately true prayer, and I said this a number of years ago, is saying "Yes" to God. It's not asking for something. It's not asking God to change a situation or do something for you. It's to listen unconditionally, undefendedly within in the quietness of your Being. In other words, turning toward the Altar and desiring to know the Truth. Listening, standing in receipt of it, and then saying "Yes." In other words, agreeing. Because when you make agreement, you make a commitment. You make commitment.

So, prayer is saying "Yes" to God. What I want to have be unmistakable to every single one of you is that when you say "Yes" to God having inquired, having listened, and having heard, you abandon independence and you join with God, and as I've said before, One with God is a majority. When there is only one Will finding expression in your partnership with God and it's God's Will, there is power. You become an agent for change. It's not a personal, private power. But it's the Power of God being unequivocally Himself in all of His Integrity that finds no resistance to its embodiment in you, and so it becomes embodied. It's spontaneous. It's automatic. It's actual.

And so the Brother you wanted to know the Truth about, the kidney, or the heart, or the circulatory system that you wanted to know the Truth about, you know the Truth about and healing results.

Do not... do not under any circumstances think that realization of the Truth is something that will only happen in your mind. When it happens in your mind and your mind is not imbued with a sense of personal, private independent authority, the Authority of God is what is embodied. And therefore, God is not blocked from expression. I would encourage all of you at least once a day to sit down to love your world, to want to know the Truth about it so that you might say "Yes" to God and have the embodiment of His Will objectively manifested in the world. Because when you bring your undivided willingness to Him, that is what happens. His Will becomes embodied, and healing occurs. What is healing? Healing is the revealing of God's Intent in His Creation, where it had been escaping your attention because you had given your own definitions to it.

So, when the ego suggests to you, "What can you do? You're just one among billions?", now you know that you have the capacity to be an agent for change by saying "Yes" to God.

What happens when you turn toward the Altar? You have the Experience of Knowing the Truth, and you have the Experience of the Truth making you free. Ye shall know the Truth and the Truth shall make you free. Not that you will know a truth and rehearse it in your mind, but you will become still enough to inquire of God as to What Truth Is, and in the inspiration, in the infilling of Truth that occurs, you will find yourself knowing it and then you will say "Yes." And it will be embodied because that's the way it works.

Okay.

SEEKER: Good evening, Raj. Are there other dynamics that might... we might be called to share with the greater body? I speak specifically of life-force, chi coming accumulative to possibly serve the difficulties in the Middle East. A draining of energy, a loss of focus on an individual basis. As we turn to the Altar, can we be called unconsciously to be sharing our life-force, if you will, for healing? Is there a sensation of loss of maybe grounding, not peace, but grounding? Is there another dynamic that might be going on that we might be experiencing but not identifying correctly?

RAJ: Absolutely not. Your question suggests that you are a body.

SEEKER: Part of a body, the body of Christ.

RAJ: But when you speak of your energy, you are speaking of a private energy, an energy that's peculiar to you. There's only one Energy and it is Infinite. It is the Energy of Spirit, and the Energy of Spirit is Love. And Love is God. Love is Infinite. And that Energy can't be spent. You cannot be depleted. And when you're joined with the Father, you no longer have a sense of private, separate beingness that can be energized or depleted. You don't need to call the energy chi, or anything else. It's Love—plain, pure and simple. Love is the Substance of Everything. Everything you are experiencing is pure Energy, whether you call it glass, or carpet, or skin, it's Energy. It is Spirit, not matter. And the Substance of It is Love embodying perfectly what the Father is being right there in the Movement of Being Creation.

So, no. You will not find yourself becoming ungrounded at all, or depleted in any way, unless... unless you decide that having turned toward the Altar and having gotten filled up with quote "the Truth," you turn your back to the Altar and try to take it out to everyone you see who needs the Truth, without realizing that the reason they "need the Truth" is because you are looking at them on your own, still with your own definitions, and seeing them through the lens of fear, because you cannot have your back to the Altar without experiencing fear and without misinterpreting everything you see.

Many individuals play with the idea that turning to the Altar is like dipping a candle into wax in the process of making a candle. And you dip it in, and then you pull it out of the wax and let the new coating harden and the candle is more than it was before. And so they dip themselves in Love and Truth, and then they come out from it and they bring to those poor souls that they see, which they see because they're not looking with God. Then they will find themselves depleted and will need to go back for another dip. You see?

No. When you put leaven in bread and it performs its function, it doesn't wear itself out. And a little bit of leaven leavens the whole Brotherhood. A little bit of Love experienced unequivocally and without bias and admitted to, embraced, blesses the whole Brotherhood. And it doesn't deplete you at all because it's not a personal possession of a particular form occupying a certain amount of space. You see?

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

SEEKER: Could I just add a... Many I've spoken with are experiencing a floating, overwhelming reaction to what's going on. Not knowing maybe the Truth, that's the problem. Is this sensation the turning away from the Altar? Is this kind of...

RAJ: It happens when you try to gather the facts of being from the way things appear when you have your back to the Altar. Yes.

SEEKER: So a sensation of turning your back to the Altar, the...

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Yes, you must watch for the tendency to become infatuated with the awfulness of things. Your movies, your television programs have conditioned you to "enjoy" (in quotes) the stimulation of violence—car crashes, explosions, wild hair-raising chases, cars flipping over and over, things that cannot even happen in real life. And there is an infatuation with stimulation.

Right now you could say that there is a lot of quote "reality TV" unquote being broadcast on your televisions. And it is quite stimulating because it's "real." It's not pre-recorded. It's not staged. It's quote "real life" unquote. And it's a rather violent, and in that sense, visually stimulating experience. If you are going to try to gather the facts of being from what is presented, you are going to experience ungroundedness. You are going to find yourself blown emotionally one way and then another because you don't have an anchor. And the only way you're going to find an anchor is if you pull back from your infatuation and your tendency to find out what's going on, in other words, gather the facts of being from what you're seeing, so that in the quietness within you, you might inquire, "What is really going on here?", so that you're not stimulated by the definitions you've given to everything or that you've been taught to see.

What you will see on the TV is a call for Love, a call for the Conscious Experience of Truth in you. When you recognize that's what it is, then turn away from the TV and go within so that you might know the Truth, agree with It, make commitment to It and be out from that clarity within you.

Okay. We will begin in the Text.

READER: The innocence of God is the true state of the mind of His Son. In this state your mind knows God, for God is not symbolic;...

RAJ: If God was symbolic you could only think about God, or have an opinion about God. But in this state of mind, in this state your mind knows God. It's a direct experience. And not only that. The experience reveals to you that it is your natural state of being. So you have learned from knowing God that You are the Presence of God when you get your personal little sense of yourself out of the way and let Him be all there is right where you are.

Continue.

SEEKER: Should I read that sentence again?

RAJ: Yes.

READER: In this state your mind knows God, for God is not symbolic; He is Fact. Knowing His Son as he is,...

RAJ: Meaning that now that you've experienced yourself as you are and have had this insightful, inspirational revelation.

Go on.

READER: Knowing His Son as he is, you realize that the Atonement, not sacrifice, is the only appropriate gift for God's altar, where nothing except perfection belongs.

RAJ: Or can be.

Continue.

READER: The understanding of the innocent is truth. That is why their altars are truly radiant.

RAJ: Their Altars are truly radiant because they're not introducing anything that covers up and dims the radiance.

Continue.

READER: Miracles as True Perception

I have stated that the basic concepts referred to in this course are not matters of degree. Certain fundamental concepts cannot be understood in terms of opposites. It is impossible to conceive of light and darkness or everything and nothing as joint possibilities. They are all true or all false. It is essential that you realize your thinking will be erratic until a firm commitment to one or the other is made.

RAJ: And this is why I said that prayer is saying "Yes" to God. Until you say "Yes" to God, your thinking will be erratic, ungrounded, rudderless.

READER: A firm commitment to darkness or nothingness, however, is impossible. No one has ever lived who has not experienced some light and some thing. No one, therefore, is able to deny truth totally, even if he thinks he can.

RAJ: Now, if you're the direct Expression of God, the Son or Daughter of God, and you have chosen to have a daydream, you have chosen to use your imagination to conceive of something that God has not created. You can create for yourself a fantasy, a daydream, and in this daydream you can imagine that you are not connected with God. You can imagine that you are an independent free agent. But you know what? You couldn't have this fantasy without being the direct Expression of God. Something real about you has to be engaged in the fantasy, in creating the fantasy. So no matter how definite you become about seeing yourself as independent from God, you have to use your God-given ability to be conscious to do it. You see? So there's no way for you to become totally ignorant of God. There's no way for you to not be experiencing some of What Truth Is. You see?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Mm hmm.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: Innocence is not a partial attribute. It is not real until it is total. The partly innocent are apt to be quite foolish at times. It is not until their innocence becomes a viewpoint with universal application that it becomes wisdom.

RAJ: This is not to say that spurts of the experience of innocent are not valuable. It just means that you are apt to be quite foolish at times and at other times you are apt to be quite wise. And the moments of wisdom that you experience reveal to you more of What Is True of you so that it becomes easier for you to think of yourself in that more enlightened way and thus give more frequent permission.

Continue.

READER: Innocent or true perception means that you never misperceive and always see truly. More simply, it means that you never see what does not exist, and always see what does.

RAJ: Yes. I'm going to share with you a statement that will help to make things clearer here. The statement is that, "I, Jesus, beheld the perfect man where sinning mortal man appeared to mortals." In other words, where those whose backs were to the Altar were seeing sinning mortal men, the Sons and Daughters of God, but seeing them as sinning mortal men, he saw the perfect man because he (I) did not have my back to the Altar and this correct view of man healed the sick, was transformational.

I bring this out to tie it in with my opening statements as to how you can be the salvation of the world. When you see the Truth where erroneous delusional experiences seem to be going on, the result is healing. And it's your job to make the choice for that. It's your work to make the choice for that. It's your nature to do that naturally. And all I'm trying to do is help inspire you to come back into that which is natural to you, even though it seems to you like an effort.

How will you arrive at a point where you never see what does not exist and always see what does? Only by having come to a point where you choose only to see what does truly exist, turning to God for the vision, standing in receipt of it and saying "Yes" to it, making commitment to Truth.

It's interesting, you can't come back into your Right Mind until you're willing to see your world truly. You see that? You can't wake up without blessing the world. You can't see truly until you care enough about your fellowman to want to know the Truth about him so that you're no longer confused. Isn't that a wonderful way for salvation and Atonement to be set up? It's impossible for it to be an act of selfishness. Waking up requires that you join with your Brother on your Brother's behalf, witnessing for your Brother or Sister. And it's so simple. You could call it an exquisite, divine mechanism.

Continue.

READER: When you lack confidence in what someone will do, you are attesting to your belief that he is not in his right mind.

RAJ: Again, when you lack confidence in what someone will do, you are attesting to your belief that he is not in his Right Mind. You are making commitment to your belief, which means you are not even in relationship with him. You're having your own private experience in which you are pretending that you're having a relationship.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Is that because you assume something before it happens?

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: Okay. You're judging it before it even happens because you don't know.

RAJ: That is correct. But you're also choosing to come to a conclusion without ever connecting with your Brother. And in not connecting with your Brother, you're withholding yourself from a relationship. And it's only in relationship that caring can occur.

Continue.

READER: This is hardly a miracle-based frame of reference.

RAJ: Indeed. And that sentence should cause some laughter to come from you. [slight scattered audience laughter] This is hardly a miracle-based frame of reference.

Continue.

READER: It also has the disastrous effect of denying the power of the miracle.

RAJ: Yes. Because there's no joining. There's not enough caring to connect and having a real experience of relationship before coming to a conclusion. And because you are having confidence in what the other one will do based on your own judgments, you're not available to relate to him or her based on what the Father has revealed to you about him or her. And you do not have available to you the Love that the Father has for him or her to be inspired by yourself to the point of overflowing so that it's extended to your Brother or your Sister. And without that, there's no miracle.

Continue.

READER: The miracle perceives everything as it is. If nothing but the truth exists, right-minded seeing cannot see anything but perfection.

RAJ: Right. If nothing but the Truth exists. Well, nothing but the Truth does exist. I keep saying that you are confronted always and only by the Kingdom of Heaven because there's nothing else going on and therefore there is nothing else in your face. If you want to see the Kingdom of Heaven that's going on, you're going to have to abandon your commitment to the definition you've given to it, and inquire and be infilled, and then say "Yes" to the infilling. You have to actually do something to get past the definitions you've been employing.

Continue.

READER: I have said that only what God creates or what you create with the same Will has any real existence. This, then, is all the innocent can see. They do not suffer from distorted perception.

RAJ: Yes. And wouldn't it be wonderful if you were able to think about yourselves as innocents (c-e-n-t-s), in innocence, ones who are innocent. Well, not looking at you through your eyes, I see that you are all innocent. Because no matter what you think, you really haven't succeeded at being more or less than What God Is Being right where each one of you is right at this moment.

Love is the willingness to recognize that which is Real in each and every thing, that which is Divinely Real. Are you willing to see That Which Is Real in everyone you know? It requires a willingness to Love. Are you really willing to Love everyone you know?

ANOTHER SEEKER (Reader): I believe that I am. However, I just believe that I am, and here comes a "yes but." And this is my experience of my birthright and my experience of the birthright that everyone in this room and everyone who's listening, everyone in the world, but my own habits of thinking, my own reactions, my own fears, my own sense of judgment of the situation or any situation is a cloud. So... that's not good.

RAJ: And so all of you, all of you do have individuals in your life that you have reluctance to be willing to Love. Well, you need healing from that. So for yourself, for yourself be willing to ask the Father to show you the Truth about that one so that you aren't blocked from being able to extend and embody God's Love more clearly in the world.

"Oh, but I've been hurt too much by that one. And blah, blah, blah."
[audience amusement] But you know what? When you're blocking your capacity to embrace with Love, you are causing a hurt in yourself all by yourself and you need to be free of that.

You know what? Right where every single individual is, is a Divine One so beautiful and so perfect and so much the Embodiment of Love that you deserve to be experiencing it even if that one doesn't know it about himself or herself yet.

You know what? If you're going to be the salvation of the world, you've got to be willing to anchor God in the world by choosing to get past your unwillingness to see the Truth there. "Well, if I do that and I become defenseless, I'll just get hurt again." No. Being filled with Love and the Vision of the perfection of your Brother or Sister does not cause you to become ungrounded, foolish, or stupid. And so, if your Brother or Sister continues to behave as though they are not the perfection you see, you will recognize it. And without judging them for it, you will not cooperate with their point of view. And so you will not get hurt again, and you will not find yourself used. And because you know the Truth, you will stick with it with commitment. And that commitment on behalf of your Brother or Sister will constitute a witnessing for them that will cause yielding to the Truth to occur in them. And if it takes a while, it won't bother you because it's your pleasure to give them the true perception of them over and over and over again until they finally get it.

Okay. Let's continue.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I have a statement. What I've noticed in my own life that has gotten in the way before of wanting to fully know and to fully love another person is all the little fears: fears of losing something, fears of the form of the relationship changing, fears of appearing foolish or thinking that you would appear foolish or that somehow you would be attacked, or all those... all those little fears that come from the sense of the little "I." The little, you know, person that's, you know, split off.

RAJ: The self it feels like you are when you have your back turned toward the Altar.

SEEKER: Yes. Correct. And I notice in my own life as I stop being afraid of losing something, as that becomes less important to me than being aligned with God...

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: ...as I stop being afraid, then it becomes irrelevant to me if the person chooses to walk away, or chooses to react however they react to my standing with the Truth. It's almost like I develop an endless patience that comes with the Love and not being afraid what the form may or may not look like as a result of what I put forth.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: It's not being afraid any more. Not being afraid of things changing. Not being afraid of losing somebody.

RAJ: And being free of the fear, your capacity to on the spot respond with the clarity of God's Mind, will allow you to be utterly appropriate. And so, if someone is leaving and it's not appropriate for them to leave, you will be able to express the clarity of what the Father's Will is in that circumstance. In other words, to not be afraid of form changing, to not be afraid of someone abandoning you or leaving doesn't mean that you will say "yes" to everything that happens. But in the absence of the fear, God's Grounded Clarity and your having a Divine Rudder will allow you to say "Good-bye" or "Wait a minute!"

SEEKER: Mm hmm. But it all comes from being aligned so you know how to respond.

RAJ: Exactly. Exactly.

READER: You are afraid of God's Will because you have used your own mind, which He created in the likeness of His Own, to miscreate.

RAJ: There you go. You see? The Son or Daughter of God has to be present and Real in order for you to miscreate a fantasy that you can commit yourself to and thereby enter into a state of apparent insanity. But all the time that which is energizing it is something utterly Real—the Son or Daughter of God That You Are.

Continue.

READER: The mind can miscreate only when it believes it is not free. An "imprisoned" mind is not free because it is possessed, or held back, by itself.

RAJ: Indeed. By itself.

Continue.

READER: It is therefore limited, and the will is not free to assert itself. To be one is to be of one mind or will. When the Will of the Sonship and the Father are one, their perfect accord is Heaven.

RAJ: Ah. There's your definition of Heaven. When the Will of the Sonship and the Father are One, their perfect accord is Heaven. And that perfect accord is what you experience as being embodied and so it is what you experience as a healed world, as a healed body, as harmony and peace on earth. That's not the ultimate, but that's an unavoidable step in the process of waking up. And it's why I keep homing in on the fact that [laughing] it is part of the insanity to think that you can become spiritually clear without having the manifestation of healing.

SEEKER: So if you don't have the manifestation of healing, then you weren't clear.

RAJ: That is absolutely correct. Absolutely correct. Write that down and put it on your refrigerator, because until you... until you accept that, your spirituality is ungrounded.

SEEKER: Okay. So in an example of a personal relationship with someone, if you see a call for Love and you ask to see the other truly, and then you respond, while you're turning towards the Altar you respond, there would have to be a healing manifested.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: So if you continue to see a call for Love, then you didn't get it.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Okay. [laughing] Okay, I got that. [laughing]

RAJ: Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Okay, so this is what I notice. First there's an upsettedness. So someone says something or does something or whatever, and you feel your button pushed. Okay then time goes, you know, so then you may, you know, what happens sometimes if it really gets pushed, you may just be in that hurt for a while. "Oh! I've been, you know. This is such an injustice, et cetera, et cetera." Then that passes and you say, "Oh, I see what happened. It's just... it's just an ego trick." And so you turn to the Father and you say, "Father, help me to see this the way You see it." And then you be quiet and nothing. There's no infilling. There's no answer to it. There's no response. There's no transformation there. So from there, there's two ways to go. You can just keep sitting there until it becomes impractical, I guess, to sit there any longer. Or you can wait until... until another time when you can go back and say, "Father, I still don't feel healed from that last situation. Help me to see, to see how You see it." And so this is the process, correct?

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: You just keep... the perseverance just has to keep being there and you just keep going back again and again and again for thousands and thousands of years. [laughing] [audience laughter]

RAJ: For however long it takes!

SEEKER: [simultaneously] ...long it takes!

RAJ: It's like straightening teeth. You put the braces on and they keep pressuring for the movement into alignment. And the pressure is persistent. And as movement occurs, new pressure is applied for further movement. And so you must persist. You must persist in fulfilling your Reason for Being. And the only reason you seem to need to persist is because you're out of the habit of being the Presence of Love, and you're heavily into the habit of being the presence of judgment.

SEEKER: And so, you know, we've spoken about the bottom of the barrel, being at the bottom of the barrel. Well, this is a little different from being at the bottom of the barrel because what it is, is you recognize that other ways don't work. I mean you've been down that road so many times before, that it doesn't work to get involved in this ego-dynamic bullshit that just keeps spinning you out. So you have to be persistent. And you keep going back. And guess what, Raj? That's not fun. [single audience laugh]

RAJ: You and I have talked about that before.

SEEKER: That's a cooker. You're in the pressure cooker, and you just... I mean you're sizzling. You're just... you're there because you're neither... you're neither answered, or... or and you're not in your ego and you're not, you know what I mean? Maybe you are in your ego, but you recognize that you're... that's no way... that's nowhere to live your life.

RAJ: That's correct.

SEEKER: And yet you're not... you're not... you're like in nowhere land, in like...

RAJ: But the reason you're there is simple. It's because you're all stubborn. [some audience laughter]

SEEKER: So there's a surrender that needs to happen there, a letting go of the way you were. But the thing is...

RAJ: Surrender is absolutely essential. And what makes it seem to take time is your unwillingness to abandon your stubbornness. And many of you may think that you have very little of a stubborn streak in you and it's when you find out how long it takes to hear the Father's Voice that you discover the degree of stubbornness. But, you know what? The opportunity will keep presenting itself to you...

SEEKER: Oh, I know that.

RAJ: ...and wearing you down.

SEEKER: Right. The other thing, too, is, you know, you're always saying in your head, "Well, I'm willing. I certainly am willing!" But that's a head trip. [scattered audience laughter] You're not willing. It's gotta be in... deep... deep down inside. It's gotta be a shift that you can... that's palpable, that you can feel in your gut shifting. So uh...

RAJ: Michael, what can I say? [audience laughter]

SEEKER: I don't know. What can I say? [more audience laughter]

RAJ: You've got the point.

This book I'm holding in my hand, A Course in Miracles, is umpteen hundred pages of what you just talked about. [some audience laughter] And until each of you is willing to persist in yielding, that absolutely horrible word "yielding," until you actually do that, which isn't fun, you're still stuck no matter how well you can talk the Course. But I have to remind you that it's your nature to do this awful thing. It's your nature to yield. It's utterly natural to you and you aren't going against your nature by doing it. You're going against your ego conditioning, but you're not going against your nature. And so you have the support of the Universe behind you in doing it. And so you're assured of success.

SEEKER: If feeling helpless is the first step, then I've taken that one. That's for sure. I don't know what else to say. I mean I guess... I guess I'm on the right track. It's just that a... when you come to this point, it's just a... limbo. What can I say?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Oh, there no more limbo I realize, that was abolished recently but nevertheless that's what I feel. Like maybe I was...

RAJ: Feeling helpless, feeling incompetent is just the first step. The reason for that experience is to cause you to say "Help!", to reach out, truly reach out to God. The first step is the realization, "I of myself can do nothing." But you can get stuck there.

SEEKER: And then, you know, anger and frustration can come in, too. Just like a little kid.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: You know.

RAJ: And sidetrack you for a little longer. But you get to that point which is essential and then you must take the next step and say, "Help!" You much reach out.

SEEKER: Okay. Thanks.

RAJ: There's another word that goes along with this. It's another one of those awful words, "repentance." All repentance means is that you're willing to change. But you will not arrive at a point of being willing to change until... until you realize that your stubbornness has done nothing but create permanent grief for you, and you want to choose again. You realize you can do nothing of yourself. You get over being mad about it and you ask for help. And then you say "Yes" to the help you receive. And that's repentance. It's just you coming back into your Right Mind. These aren't really terrible words, and the meanings aren't terrible. It's just you becoming sane again.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So, I'm having a similar experience. What's happening for me is I've made my commitment, and I know there's no way out. And I do have enough... enough evidence that there is a God and that He's working in my life. And so when I want to value how quickly the change is happening, instead of doing that, I relax and I trust. And I'm finding that even though I might not be changing any faster than Michael, I'm not nearly as uncomfortable because I got faith that the change is happening in good time and I just sort of rest there. I mean, I'm not thinking that I'm getting results any faster, but I'm not uncomfortable.

RAJ: Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: You know, I'm listening to this and I'm resonating with myself and I know there's got to be a shift here somewhere where it becomes a matter of Love. I mean where... where... I'm hearing it's like it's a chore—we've got to do this. But it really isn't. This is a Love affair which takes precedent over everything in our lives.

RAJ: But you see, the Love affair, the subject of Love, can't really be talked about...

SEEKER: I know. [softly]

RAJ: ...until the experience of helplessness has been arrived at, and the element of stubbornness has been gotten past. One has to arrive at a point where struggling and pain and misery that have been brought about by stubbornness are no longer experienced as being valuable. And there's something in you that wants to make a different choice.

SEEKER: Does that... does that...

RAJ: That willingness or desire to make a different choice, you could say, is the first glimmering of self Love, with a capital "L".

SEEKER: Okay. Would the chore then still be the holdout that you still think you can do it your way?

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: Okay. So there's still a little...

RAJ: That's the stubbornness.

SEEKER: That's the stubbornness. Okay. I wanted to be clear on that.

RAJ: Yes. I want all of you to be very practical and very real. And I'm not hanging crepe here, but don't try to gloss over the work. Don't try to find different words to use that make it sound easier. Because abandoning old habits must be done consciously and conscientiously by choice. And so I don't want you to get too flowery about it. I don't want you to be depressed about it either just because it's work. But if you know that there's work involved, you will arrive at a point where you love yourself enough to engage in the effort. The effort to what? The effort to make distinctions between Truth and error, Good and evil, and make the choice for Truth and Good, and actually break old habits.

When you are able to distinguish between Truth and error and make the choice for Truth, you find that instead of being blown about like a will-of-the-wisp, you now have a rudder. And the amount of effort you have to put forth to stay on track when you have a rudder is far less than the amount of effort you have to put forth when you're being blown about like a will-of-the-wisp and are having to try stay on track without a rudder. And so, when you're willing to become practical enough and grounded enough to make these distinctions with commitment, you find that there's a new level of order and harmony that are accompanied by conscientiousness. Conscientiousness could be called effort or work. But you have a natural capacity to stand with the Truth, and that's what conscientiousness is.

So I encourage you to avoid words like "a Love affair" and "it's all about Love." I'm not putting you down, but I'm trying to save you time. Because if you're looking for something wonderful about it, you will tend to miss the wonder of the discovery of your capacity to be divinely conscientious, forever standing at the post, forever making the distinction, because it's natural to you to be doing nothing else but recognizing the Truth and protecting it. Protecting it by never again indulging in infatuation with error. You see what I'm saying? Okay.

SEEKER: I have a question. I've noticed that making distinctions and saying "Yes" to God means that you also have to be willing to change. And I think that that is the hook that sometimes comes that... where we practice faithlessness. And we think that change means that we're being led to something worse than what we have, I think is where the stubbornness comes in. I've noticed in my own life, being more willing to change, because sometimes saying "Yes" to God means, you know, a change in circumstance, or a change in behavior, or a change in response, whatever. It's like you have to be flexible. And to know...

RAJ: And sometimes it means staying right where you are and being in a new way.

SEEKER: Yes. That's right. But I think that's where the development of trust comes in because I've noticed that the more that I say "Yes" to God, the more that I'm willing to change and go with the flow, the more that I realize that I am being led to something better. And so with time, with the continued effort, I'm recognizing that I'm becoming stronger, that I'm more grounded. It's paying off. From experience I'm noticing it's paying off. And I could see how sometimes the... early on in the process, there's a lot more fear to making distinctions which would then lead to saying "Yes" which would then lead to... because of the change, because...

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: ...because the ego likes to suggest that change means change for the worst.

RAJ: Exactly. Exactly.

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'm sorry. I feel like I've been experiencing this and I've finally got past the big chunk of letting go and it's... and it's... it's like letting habits... the habits that don't get you anywhere. You think they're getting you somewhere, but they really don't go anywhere; dead end street. I finally somehow got the willingness to let some of that go and just say, "Okay. I'm all Yours. You show me what to do." I don't have to make any more decisions. I don't have to do anything except hone in, and then...

RAJ: Except that you have to say "Yes."

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: And make commitment to it and that is a decision. But that is something you will do anew daily.

SEEKER: I feel like that's happening.

RAJ: You are correct.

SEEKER: And it is a very wonderful feeling, and it encourages you to keep going. You want more and more. And it feels like everything is expanding and making more sense when it's less scary. Right?

RAJ: And, at the very same time, you are exercising less control than you ever have before without becoming stupid or truly foolish.

SEEKER: Quite the opposite actually.

RAJ: Yes. Exactly.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Ye shall know the Truth and the Truth shall make you free, for God knows what. For what you don't want to imagine because what you would imagine will be far less than what the Father's gifting you with. And when in any given moment you ask the Father, "What is Truth?" and you experience Truth, as I said last week, don't assume that today's illumination will be sufficient to illuminate tomorrow. Because you want the direct Experience of Truth in its ever-freshness moment by moment by moment eternally.

So do understand that listening to the Father, listening for the Father's Will and saying "Yes" to it will mean that you will never be able to peg anything. You will never have it under your belt so that you will never have to listen again because you've got it. Being means forever getting it fresh. And just remember this. Forever getting it fresh is going to be evidenced as healing, as the salvation of the world, the uncovering of the Kingdom of Heaven where you had been seeing the world. And so it's with each other and with all of the Brotherhood that the Love of God comes into play and expression and embodiment, and the revelation of What Truth Is in every single relationship. And remember, you not only have relationships with each other, you have relationships with the flowers, and the trees and the animals, and everything.

RAJ: Is everyone enjoying the Course?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Absolutely.

RAJ: It is a wonderful trigger of the movement from head to heart, from having one's back to the Altar to turning toward the Altar, to wanting to know the Truth and inquiring as to What Truth Is. Not for uses you would put it to, but to know What God Is Being so that you might be let in on the secret, the very public infinite manifestation of Creation that you've been missing out on because you've insisted on using your own private definitions, thus making [laugh] the universal publicness of God's Being a secret kept from you!

The process will take effort in the sense that distinctions will need to be made. Commitments will have to be made. Persistence will have to occur. Dedication. You see? But having these is your Birthright. You could say it's programmed into you already. It's on your hard drive. You just haven't opened the programs up for a while. It's all there.

I love you. Remember to love each other enough to want to know the Truth about each other, and then turn to God for the revelation of it.

Okay. I look forward to seeing you next week.

*A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 3 – THE INNOCENT PERCEPTION
Section – MIRACLES AS TRUE PERCEPTION
First Edition – p. 35 / Second Edition – p. 39*

RAJ: Okay. Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: It is good to see all of you. Before we begin, there are a couple of announcements. The first is that there is a need for financial support. This particular month is one of the two months out of the year that the Foundation has to pay property taxes, which amount to $2,500. And at the present moment, those funds are not present, and they're due on the last day of the month. Also, generally speaking, over the last three or four months, there has been a very noticeable increase in the amount of support that has been coming in, and it is allowing, how shall I say it, it is allowing the Foundation to pay its bills within the month that the bills arrive. And it is allowing the Foundation to pay Chris for the tremendous work he is doing to maintain the website and master the audiotapes and everything he does. But it is not sufficient to free him from having to find other employment, and so we continue to be faced with the loss of his help at any moment when he finds work. And I encourage everyone who finds the work that all of us are doing valuable and who wish to see it shared to help financially. For those of you who are new here and may not be aware of it, we do have a contribution bowl over on the table at the top of the stairs.

And the last announcement is that next Thursday there will be no Gathering, and we will resume the following Thursday. Okay.

What a week! What a week! Regardless of what any of you may think about the way everything has happened, you cannot escape being aware of joy being experienced and expressed by many, I will say, of the Iraqi people. Don't overlook that or minimize it because of what I will call your practice of faithlessness. Something more significant than just overthrowing Saddam Hussein's regime is happening.

Now, before we begin, I just want to have everyone look at the dynamics. The coalition forces have moved into Iraq in the south and moved north. The end result so far has been the liberation of the Iraqi people from a harsh, hateful dictatorship. Because of the instant availability of information through the media and the availability of information from other than your usual sources, I mean by that the Al Jazeera TV Network, other countries' documentation of the happening, you know that whatever it is that's happening is being seen in many different ways. Correct? Obviously through different lenses. And the different lenses are what they are because of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions employed by those areas that are using those lenses and for the purposes of those in those areas. And the purposes in those areas are, as it is with everyone everywhere in every country, the maintenance of the status quo, self-protection in other words, and the preservation of even financial security.

Now, even among the Iraqi people, they are seeing this through different lenses. And it's in this respect that I want you to notice that you can find yourselves in exactly the same position.

Liberation is occurring. The end of oppression, or shall I say the current regime of oppression, the ending of it is occurring. In other words, the good of the Iraqi people is in their face. Like I've said to all of you, at every single moment the only thing confronting you is the Kingdom of Heaven no matter how you are choosing to define it, and therefore, see it.

There are others who are seeing their good as beneficial but perhaps ultimately threatening. Is it colonialism that is occurring, or is it really liberation? Can we trust our Good? You see? You all have that problem.

I keep saying, "Turn toward the Altar. Go within and ask to be talked to by the Father so that you might experience His perspective." And some of you smile joyfully and say, "Okay!" And others of you say, "You know this sounds really good, but I don't know if I dare to trust it because I'm not sure of the real nature of God."

We've been talking about this just in the last few weeks, that fact that it's easy to perceive God who is indivisible as sometimes whimsical—sometimes loving, sometimes hateful. Sometimes answering your prayers and sometimes not, without any particularly good reason, but just because. And so there is lack of trust of your Good.

Now, it's obvious to most everyone that when a dictatorship ends, when the rule of a dictatorship ends, it becomes utterly obvious that all government is self-government. Ah, and this is what I've been talking about, what all of us have been considering. And that is, "Oh dear! This is going to bring new responsibility if I am going to choose to listen to God and yield to God." Because why? Because you're going to end up being the salvation of the world. "Oh, my God! Such responsibility I will have! I will have to be conscientious and unswerving in my allegiance to protecting Truth by loving it so completely that I let nothing else enter my mind to distract me from Truth and therefore, its spontaneous embodiment." You see?

There are those in Iraq who are afraid of this. "I don't know if we'll be able to do it. I don't know if I want to. I've become comfortable letting someone else take care of that for me." And for all of you, it's something else that takes care of that for you, and it's your ego. You see? And so there's the tendency to be lazy and sloppy and casual about it, about your Awakening, because the Good that's in front of your face appears to suggest that it's going to be more work for you. Things are going to be worse than they were when you were self-satisfied operating within the ego's frame of reference.

So, all of the dynamics of Awakening are illustrated in what's going on in Iraq. The presence of the availability of Freedom is being seen through many different lenses. And each one of you has many different lenses. It isn't just that one of you has a different lens from another, depending upon the circumstance. You are agreeable to Awakening and listening to the Father, and in another instance you're not. It frightens you.

But, as with the Iraqi people, it will be worth the effort to take on the task of being self-governed because it will mean their ability to be free. To be free to honestly be out from their best use of intelligence, and thus feel their integrity embodied in their land.

And this is what all of you are faced with, even though there's no apparent war going on.

Now, there's another aspect of this that will be helpful for you, because if, indeed, you are the salvation of the world, as we've talked about the last couple of weeks, it means that you will be the liberators. And again, regardless of the opinions and biases that you have or have been supplied to you by the media, the fact is that the liberators here have not been popular. "Ooh! Does that mean that if you're going to be the salvation of the world, you might not be popular?" Yes, it does. "Does it mean that you may have to stand and embody the Father's perspective, the Father's Will, in spite of the misinterpretations of it that will occur, and which will cause you to be belittled and slandered and disliked and spoken ill of?" Yes, it does.

It means that you're going to have to be dedicated to Truth whether it is clearly understood for what it is, or not. Why? Because you know there's nothing more important than that. You know that there is nothing more important, in terms of awakening for yourself and your Brothers, than for you to honor Truth totally from the tips of your toes. And you know what? Doing that isn't going to take courage, but daring to listen to the Father so that you're infilled with that which is to be embodied, as well as the energy to do it. That is where the effort and the work and the conscientiousness is going to have to come into play.

SEEKER: And I've heard you say that's us embracing our Good.

RAJ: Indeed. Indeed. Now, mind you, being the salvation of the world is not the goal. It's a side effect. It's secondary to you coming back into your Right Mind because you have decided that you no longer want to be tormented and oppressed by the dictatorial regime of ignorance. Do you get that?

AUDIENCE: [murmurs of assent]

RAJ: Then when you do that, and you let the energy in, your faces and your bodies and your movements will be lit up the way the Iraqi people were who let their joy out, and everyone will be blessed.

None of what this book [A Course In Miracles] says and none of what we've been talking about means anything unless it brings about an actual change in you that causes you to embody something different from what you have been embodying and confirming and maintaining because you have inappropriately felt vulnerable, and therefore, everything you have been doing has been done for self-protection. And that's not a gift. That's something you're taking from everyone else and depleting everyone else, and what they're taking from you.

Now, as we continue on week to week, during the week, please remember that it's not about remembering what we've talked about, but it is about daring to begin to practice what we've been talking about by counting it as extremely important for each of you to be connecting with your Source, so that you no longer attempt to act independent of it and thereby continue to confirm your being subject to the totalitarian, cruel results of ignorance.

You could say that the Course is here at this particular time as a Liberator that has come into your experience. Your Guides, your Brothers who are fully awake, who stand at the ready with you every moment to convey to you the true Vision, are your Liberators. Liberation is at hand. It has been all along, but it's more obvious. Embodied. Embodied in your world is more evidence of Liberation and your Liberators.

Now what aspect of the Iraqi society are you going to fall into, relative to your Liberators? Are you going to see them for what they are and grab on to them and thank them and let gratitude pour from you, and let their presence cause you to dishonor the unjust laws that have bound you because you have committed yourself to mutually-agreed-upon definitions that don't express the Father's Will? Or are you going to weigh in the balances what it's going to cost you? And what's the real motive of these liberators? Is it what they say?

I mean, after all, if your Guide is saying to you, "Let me respond to everything. Lean on me and let me respond to everything, so that in the absence of your expressing self-will, you might more quickly remember your innate capacity and ability to be the immediate expresser of the Father's Will."

You see, you could say, "Well, how do I know I'm not listening to an evil spirit. And that if I do this, and let Him or Her respond to everything, and I, in my personal sense of power back out of the picture, how do I know that I'm not going to be overtaken by this so-called Guide, this one who says He's awakened?" Do you see what I'm saying? This is the way the ego works.

You know what? You're going to have to risk the chance. Because even if you yield, you don't have to abandon your intelligence. You don't have to abandon your common sense. You don't have to become stupid. You will always have the capacity to call it to a stop. But you're going to have to, nevertheless, step over the line and make commitment to your Liberators, so that may show you how to be liberated within yourself as a matter of self-government.

And by self-government, I don't mean what you have called self-government which has meant being a really good ego. I mean self-government where distinctions are being made by you between Truth and error, and the choice being made for Truth. A distinction being made between Love and hate, and the choice being made for Love so that you protect Love by not indulging in anything else. By protecting Truth by not expressing anything else, not being fascinated by anything else. You see? Being single of mind, single of intent, where there's no confusion within you. That's where the self-government comes in, making the distinction and making the choice, and making the choice wholly (w-h-o-l-l-y), unequivocally and permanently.

I could go on and on. I would like for you all to, let's say, do a little of your own work and consider the dynamics of what has occurred this week, and how there is transfer value regarding it and regarding you in your processes of awakening and the ego dynamics you're having to deal with.

I cannot close my remarks without reiterating that to become immobilized and to take no action whatsoever until you can do it with utter spiritual perfection, even when you recognize the call for Love and the call for protecting the Truth of your Brothers...

PAUL: I'm sorry. This is me, Paul. I lost it.

RAJ: You have seen actions take place over the past number of weeks. You have seen the embodiment of Love. Do not minimize it by saying there must have been another way to do it. If another way to do it had been available, it would have been used. And everyone who has said there is another way to do it has not stated what it is, and so there was nothing to implement. And so, you will find that as you allow yourselves to be the salvation of the world, you will be guided to do what will work, whether it's the ultimate or not. And you must dare to take the actions that embody liberation, whether they are ultimately spiritual or not. Because I promise you: The Liberation is Real. Don't let yourselves be immobilized. I want to let what I've said set for now and to go directly into the [A Course In Miracles] book.

READER: Nothing can prevail against a Son of God who commends his spirit into the Hands of his Father.

RAJ: Oooh!

READER: By doing this the mind awakens from its sleep and remembers its Creator.

RAJ: Or maybe becomes subject to an evil spirit. [Audience laughter.] Tsk-tsk! Mmm! [Audience laughter.] And how are you going to know which it is?

ANOTHER SEEKER: You've got to try it.

RAJ: You've got to try it. That's right. You risk the chance. Else all you're doing is covering your ass and you're stuck. You're stuck with what you've got in your hand.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Trust is risk.

RAJ: Trust is... trust feels risky but only to those who have not trusted in a very long time and have forgotten the immediate influx of the Experience of Integrity and Invulnerability that comes from it. And so I'm here to remind you that that is what will be experienced. But no matter how much I say it, it's not going to prove it to you. The only thing that's going to prove it to you is for you to at least play around with it, experiment with it, if not attempt it with genuine commitment.

Continue.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Julie would like to ask a question.

RAJ: Very well.

ANOTHER SEEKER: What you were saying on a personal level, which I have to apply, you know, what's going on globally on a personal level for it to sink in, but it's definitely a wonderful mirror. And I think what I see... that my own little dictator does in my mind is it stands ready to criticize the attempt. The times that I practice and perhaps slip, it tries to use that to promote the faithlessness. It tries to use that as some kind of evidence that the effort isn't worthwhile.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And I think what I really got, in the last couple of days especially, was that it's really okay to go through the rough and tumble effort, the process of getting there, because as we keep it up, it'll get smoother and smoother and easier and easier. And I think to not be dissuaded, not be led astray by the work, because it's practice. It's like in the short term it takes practice and it's not going to be perfect, but like you were saying, not to wait till we can do it perfectly before we even begin on the journey. To let it be okay to practice, and to keep putting [forth] the effort, and to not to let the times that it's not perfect [be] used as some kind of evidence that the work isn't taking place, or isn't growth, or that there isn't the end result, isn't leading it to a more positive place.

That's like the biggest breakthrough for me, I think, that I've had recently is to let the process happen and to let it be okay that it's not completely smooth. And to kind of keep the vision ahead that... and the trust that it's getting there.

RAJ: Yes. Yes. It's the practice that is the point. It is the persistence and the conscientiousness, whether [laugh], whether it's smooth and whether you're praised for it, or not. And whether your ego has shut up, or not. As I've said before, the only thing your ego can't defend itself against is disregard.

SEEKER: And every time we begin again, that's a disregard.

RAJ: Exactly.

SEEKER: Every time we get back up, and you know, like in Iraq, there are going to be those, because the rebuilding...

RAJ: In our what?

SEEKER: In Iraq.

RAJ: Oh. In Iraq.

SEEKER: I'm taking my personal example out global again. There's going to be... it's not going to be a smooth process, rebuilding and restoring the freedom. They've gone without it for so long. There's going to be slips. There's going to be trials. There's going to be times that it's not going to be so smooth, and there're going to be those ever-ready to jump with criticism and say, "See. It doesn't work. See what. All that that happened was for nothing."

RAJ: And there's going to be a call for further witnessing on their behalf by those who have the vision and experience. So as the coalition is aware, you can't just go in and liberate them without backing it up with the support that it takes for a shift of perception to be embodied.

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: As we practice faithfulness in ourselves, we have to keep giving it to others because it strengthens it in ourselves. And we have to see it through to the very end. There's never like a moment that we can become complacent and say, "okay, my work is done now," and just leave it, leave it alone. We've got to stick it out with them. I mean, this is the first step. The first step is this initial liberation. And then after that, it's clearing the way because there's still rubbish. There's still the wrong thinking. There's still the ease of slipping back into different patterns, and so we have to keep going, and going...

RAJ: Okay.

SEEKER: ...until it's no longer habit.

RAJ: I'm going to address something here that... There needs to be wisdom. What you do is you witness for your Brother or your Sister. And if your Brother or your Sister stands in receipt of it, you persist. I want you to remember that there are those who have incarnated at this time—which is the end of incarnations—for the purpose, the sole purpose of having one last fling in the ego frame of reference. And they are totally committed to it. And when you witness for them and hang in there with them, and they deny you persistently, and see you as an aggressor persistently, and see you as someone trying to, shall I say, colonialize them and change them into what they call "your perspective of reality," you must be wise.

I've used this analogy before. None of you have ever left the Kingdom of Heaven. You're in it right now. And in effect, you're lying on grassy knolls sleeping, having a dream. Those who are committed to their dreams, who are not beginning to rouse at all, we do not bother. No matter how rugged their dream, we do not bother. But the moment one of you begins to stir and we see the signs of consciousness returning, we are right there to help you by facilitating, by providing a point of focus in the world of consciousness, you might say, so that you have something to home in on as you rouse yourself further. We cannot rouse you. You must understand that we cannot make you wake up and you cannot make anyone else wake up.

So, you must be willing to listen for the wisdom that comes from within to tell you when it is not appropriate to persist with a Brother who is absolutely committed to his dream. And you bring your attention to those who, like you, are beginning to wake up and who are curious and interested, who are having problems but are not insisting on their problems, and want to hear the Truth that will actually relieve them of their problems. Those who are in the process of Awakening, those who are stirring, who are becoming Conscious, with a capital "C," are the ones to bring the extension of Love to, because their Awakening, which will happen more easily than those who are committed to their dreams, will constitute their withdrawal from the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that constitute the dream everyone else is in, which is going to weaken the dream everyone else is in and cause them to spontaneously begin to stir as well.

Yes! You all have free will and that free will is absolute. The key lies in the fact that once your choice, once your expression of your free will is to know what the Father's Will is, you begin to wake up out of your dream. Once your commitment to your ability, so-called ability to authorize things on your own, once that has been called into question and you have a curiosity about something more than that, then movement of Awakening begins. And that is where those who are awake can meet you and where their Presence can be experienced by you.

So, there are some that you won't hang in with, not because of any judgment, but because you recognize their commitment to their dream and that they simply are not hearing anything that you are saying. And if they are not hearing anything that you are saying, then intelligence and wisdom says, "Give your attention where you can be heard, and where your Love does register, and where the Father's Will moving through you can be experienced by them." And by virtue of the experience, reminding them back in the dim halls of their memory, you might say, of their Divine Birthright. And that what they are getting a glimmer of, through you, is a glimmer of Who They Really Are so that the "Aha!," the light bulb can go on. The "Aha!" can occur. And they rejoin themselves.

Many women try to find men to be in relationship with in order to save them [the men]. They find flawed men with potential so that they can be their savior. Well, the salvation happens very seldom. And the women who attempt to do that often spend many years totally wasting their gift and being miserable in the process. Why? Because you can't override free will. God's power cannot override free will. It's very simple. Learn that fact so that you might attend to what will promote awakening. Does anyone have a question about this?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Well, I have a couple.

RAJ: Of course you do.

SEEKER: Well, I was going to let it slide until you asked but, are you saying that the current administration is doing this because they have a higher sense of purpose? Or are you saying they're doing this and the Will of God gets done no matter? You don't have to answer that question.

RAJ: Of course not. You already know the answer.

SEEKER: Do you know why I'm asking the question?

RAJ: Of course I do.

SEEKER: Okay. Because there's a lot of people out there that feel that the current administration is not particularly a good one. And so when you say that they're rescuing or liberating the people of Iraq, that, I think, creates consternation. And the impression that I get...

RAJ: Isn't that wonderful? [audience laughter]

SEEKER: What?

RAJ: I'm not going to answer the question as you asked.

SEEKER: Oh.

RAJ: Because I'm not talking about these evaluations. Everyone is very alert on your globe right now and that's what's wonderful. And they are alert in your country and they are alert in your government. And they are alert in other countries and in other governments. And as a result of the absence of lazy, slipshod mental attitudes, more than what anybody planned on having happen will happen. And it will happen in ways that truly express democracy and Brotherly Love, in ways that surpass prior expressions of global Brotherly Love. Nobody's going to get away with anything.

SEEKER: Yeah. I totally see that. I mean I don't have any problem with that. I just want to delineate the fact that the current administration does not have this higher sense of purpose that you're talking about, because I don't see the consistency in the policies that they have across the board. So, in other words, what I'm saying is that the Will of God happens, period. It doesn't make any difference, you know, what intent we little ego... the little ego parts of us have. The Will of God happens, regardless. In other words, the Holy Spirit prevails. And so that's where I see the greater good coming from this. And that's what I'm trying to... in other words, I don't see you, Raj, saying... taking... In other words, it could be interpreted from what you just said that you feel that the current administration has this higher purpose that we're all missing—that we don't see—that motivates them. And what I'm saying is...

RAJ: You want to know something?

SEEKER: What?

RAJ: You're right.

SEEKER: Oh.

RAJ: I'm saying that the coalition has a moral vision that has escaped everyone else. I am also saying that as with any other governmental act that occurs, other agendas are getting attached to them that are profiteering and not expressing the same moral vision. But I am saying, yes, that those involved in the coalition have not moved here because of the agendas, but because there has been a deep moral recognition that they were not afraid to act upon. And that is all the further I will get into politics.

SEEKER: I'm just trying to find... I'm not trying to get in pol-... I'm just trying to discover what you're saying and your particular views of what's going on. I mean I could care less as far as what's going on in the world. What I'm trying to do is to understand what you're saying so that everyone out there in radio-land doesn't go: "Oh, well. Raj is a Republican." You see what I'm getting at?

RAJ: I'm not even a Christian! How could I be a Republican? [audience laughter]

SEEKER: Well, not all Republicans are Christians. [continued audience hilarity]

The second question...

RAJ: Wait a minute before you ask the second question.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Michael, somehow I want to answer, to give you a response that's come up in me right now. And that response is...

RAJ: Point it [the microphone] at your mouth.

SEEKER: Hello. [Testing microphone.] I agonize every time I move out into that objective point of view. My cells hurt. The only thing that I can see in my day, whatever crosses my path, it has to be a subjective experience, and I have to ask, "What is the meaning of this for me?" It wouldn't matter whether it's the war in Iraq or somebody at the grocery store. I have to ask every moment and I ask of my Guide, "What meaning does this have for me?"

All I know is that yesterday when I went down and turned on the TV, I needed to look at somebody being joyful, because I felt so miserable yesterday. And that lifted my spirits. And so I want to get out of the historical view of things because I'm interested in transcending time. And the best way that I can transcend time is look for Meaning. The alternative to time is the experience of Meaning, and for me, history is not Meaning. So I have to respond not so much to you, but to a popular point of view, a certain path, that many say the way to Awaken is through an objective, uninvolved point of view. I can't awake like that. So, that's my response.

RAJ: Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I want to go off on a completely different tangent because I had a little trouble this week in looking at my agreed-upon definitions and realizing that that's my whole life, everywhere I look, that's where I'm doing. And I was listening to one of your tapes and you were talking about the picture that Glenda Green did. And you told the person that was asking about that, not to get too, you know, hung up on the picture because you wanted her to see you. And that got me thinking...

RAJ: And not the image.

SEEKER: And not the image. And that got me thinking. I think maybe you were helping me a little here: "If you're going to look, look for an experience."

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: As opposed to... because I'm seeing myself. I always thought the way to win was how I looked. I mean I got a lot of stuff by the way I used to look. And then as I got older and I lost a lot of that stuff, I mean my looks, life changed drastically, and I was pretty upset about that. Well, we talked about that. Anyway, now I'm really having to give that all up: How I look, or how somebody else looks. I don't want that to govern my thinking anymore. Because I would bypass so many beautiful people because they were fat, they were tall. They were this, they were in rags. They were begging. They were... and I just skipped by 'em!

RAJ: I will tell you that, in the beginning, Paul made me available to people for private conversations. And over the first six months or so, all of the conversations occurred over the phone. And Paul's experience of these people was, you might say, through my eyes. He had never seen them. There was no image for him, and it is not that he had a different kind of image, but he experienced them as lovable because I treated them as though they were lovable. He experienced them as being capable of experiencing healing or transformation because that is the way I was treating them. And that is what would happen. And so when we had our first Gathering and he had the opportunity to meet these people, it was a little bit of a shock because, as you said, some were tall, some were short. Some were fat, some were thin. And those were not the criteria that he had been experiencing them with. And so, you are expressing a Truth here: that what you, if no one is a body, if you are not a body, and you are still free to be as God created thee...

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: ...then you are—what you really are—is an experience awaiting everyone who comes into contact with you...

SEEKER: Ah.

RAJ: ...and the same with everyone else for you. And if you get stuck with the appearance, you'll miss the experience. And you're still isolated and alone, and seeing a world and universe, instead of the Kingdom of Heaven and your Brother or Sister—the Christ. So, yes, we're talking about having an experience.

SEEKER: And that's what I should look for because I'm...

RAJ: That's what you should have curiosity to see.

SEEKER: Got it. Yeah.

RAJ: It's to look for... Mmm... "I'm going to... I'm going to look for it! I'm going to look for it!" No. It's like: "Wow! Is there more for me to see? I wanna see it! Wow!" Let there be curiosity. Let it be light. Let it be interested. Just be interested.

SEEKER: Right. Instead of trying to make myself do a different thing. Once more using my head.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Yeah.

RAJ: Yes. Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome. I haven't forgotten your second question. [audience laughter]

SEEKER (previous): We were talking about the news media earlier as Susan brought up. And in my experience, in my teaching and practice, I notice that a lot of people have been spun out by this situation. And no wonder. If you turn on the TV or the radio, or pick up a newspaper, it is 90% of everything that being talked about in those media. Now, my question to you is: What's the best way to interact with the media, because depending on who you're listening to, you're getting a very slanted... usually a slanted viewpoint. Very little objectivity from what I can tell, either one way or the other. So, do we just turn everything off? Just don't watch TV. Don't listen to the radio. Don't pick up a newspaper. Or do you immerse yourself? Where's the... is there a golden mean here? Or is it always just turning to the Father and asking, "Father, which station to watch?" And you know, et cetera. I mean how does that... what's the best way to handle that situation?

RAJ: If ignorance is what you're all suffering from, then don't do what promotes further ignorance by isolating yourself from the media and from anything that brings you news of the world. Dare to be informed, but just don't become fixated on the delivery of the information. And, in this day and age, because there is the availability, I encourage you to gather your information from a broad range of sources that clearly show the difference, the different lenses, the different perspectives. But remember that you're not going to be able to gather the Facts, the capital "F" Facts of capital "B" Being from the media at all. What you're going to see are the current beliefs, the current perspectives, even though they are reporting on... even though the event they are reporting is a Movement of Liberation that is divinely authorized, they are going to be reporting it through the lens of their beliefs.

Now, gather your information so that you have a general and broad picture of what the beliefs are. And then, turn off the media and go within to ask the Father: What needs to be known here? What do you need to see? What is your part to play? What is the clarity that you need to be embodying? And how do you become free of your own bias? Because you want to be the clearest channel of the Truth that you can be.

Did we get to the second sentence [of A Course In Miracles]? [audience laughter]

ANOTHER SEEKER: No.

RAJ READING: Nothing...

ANOTHER SEEKER: Do you want me to start it? You want me to start over?

RAJ: I will read it.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ READING: Nothing can prevail against a Son of God who commends his spirit into the Hands of his Father. By doing this the mind awakens from its sleep and remembers its Creator.

This is the Truth, no matter what doubts your egos and your conditioned thinking throws in the way. It is the Truth, and I encourage you during the next two weeks (since we are not meeting next Thursday) to commend your Soul, your Spirit, to the Father. And don't imagine that you have to dive off into the deep end of the experience, the deep end of the pool. It's all right for you to get into the kiddies' wading pool and splash in what the experience feels like of commending your Spirit unto the Father. But begin to actually inquire, "What do I need to know here?" Do it. Do it. Do it.

You know what? I look forward to the day that I no longer hear students of the Course talking about what the words mean, and I start hearing them talk about the transformation they're experiencing because they've done it, done it, done it! They've risked the chance and commended their Spirit unto the Father and let the Father's Will find expression through them, because they were so undefended against it that it infilled them and overflowed them and blessed their Brothers. That's what we need to start having embodied in the world about the Course. Not which version is the right version. Ugh! Because no matter what version you pick up, it's going to point you in the direction of commending your Spirit into the hands of your Father, so that by doing this the mind awakens from its sleep and remembers its Creator. And this is the good news. This is your Liberator! And your Liberator will bring Joy to your face and your body and your world. So let's remember what it's all about. Or maybe even if you've been a student of the Course for twenty years, maybe you're just discovering tonight, from hearing what I'm saying, that this is what it's all about, so that you have an opportunity to live it in a brand-new and truly transformational way.

So, we may have only gone through three sentences [audience laughter], but it has been a very fruitful and wonderful evening. Thank you.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

RAJ: Okay.

Chapter 3 – THE INNOCENT PERCEPTION

And Section – PERCEPTION VERSUS KNOWLEDGE
First Edition – p. 35 / Second Edition – p. 39*

RAJ: Good Evening.

AUDIENCE: Good Evening.

RAJ: The last time we were together we were speaking about liberation and the fact that accompanying liberation is always joy. How many of you go through your day experiencing joy uninterruptedly? Then if you are not experiencing joy as you tackle each task or attend to each thing that needs to be done, it means that you are functioning under the control of a regime that has as its fundamental tool to keep you in line fear. And this state of being is what you call life!

If you remembered the experience of joy, you wouldn't be tolerating the regime that is controlling you. You get it? You wouldn't be tolerating it. You wouldn't be going through your day saying: "Well, this is life. I'm doing pretty well. What can I expect?" Well, that question is a statement of ignorance, isn't it? You can expect joy.

Joy can be the context in which every event of your day occurs. Even if you have to dig a ditch, joy can accompany it. Now my point is to simply make utterly clear that when you are not experiencing joy accompanying every moment of your day, then you are indeed in bondage, and you can either cry in your milk about the horrible situation you're in, or you can become immediately, and with focus, curious to find the way out, to find your way out from under the bondage, to regain your freedom. So I'm encouraging you, as you enter this next week, to bring with you everywhere you go a very definite sense of curiosity. Don't be so laid back. Don't be so willing to be pretty comfortable.

Be curious to have the light go on in your mind, so that you can feel the influx of joy that it's your Birthright to be experiencing so that it can spontaneously extend from you and bless everyone else. In other words, be a little more conscious this week. Be a little more awake to what you don't know.

And this brings me to the second thing I want to share. We've been talking about going within, turning toward the Altar, asking of the Father, or of your Guide, "What is the Truth?" Now the one thing I haven't talked about is when you do that, leave the Course In Miracles behind. Leave your parents teaching behind. Leave what you've learned from your experience behind. Turn toward the Altar, ask your question, and be wide open to the unexpected. Everything you've learned so far has not caused you to be awake yet. So don't expect the Father's Voice or your Guide's Voice to sound like the Course or to sound like anything you've heard before. You're going to hear something new obviously. And if you aren't hearing something new, then what's the point of asking and listening?

Don't expect what you're going to hear to fit a pattern that you're already familiar with. You need to dare... you need to dare to listen without expectations of any kind as to what you're going to hear, how it's going to be expressed, what it's going to sound like. And I promise you one thing: what you hear will always be perfect for you. And so the answer that two of you... the answer to a question that two of you ask of your Guides is not going to be identical, but it's going to be perfect for you.

So, don't say, "Oh well, this doesn't sound like Raj," or "This doesn't sound like the Course." Well, my God, if it doesn't sound like either one of them, maybe, maybe it's something new! Maybe it's exactly the thing you need to hear that will push you over the edge, so to speak, into freefall, a new experience. So when you listen, don't listen with preconceptions. Listen with an innocent mind, innocent of preconceptions. Expect, if you're going to expect something, something you're not familiar with. And if you're not listening for something you're not familiar with, you're wasting your time.

Don't hold the Father's Expression of His Will to you to conform to anything you're already familiar with. That will put you in a position of what could be called full open reception. And this is very important. Many times when you listen, you'll get a feeling for what's coming, and if the feeling doesn't conform to your expectation, you'll block it and you won't hear anything. You want to hear something different from what you already know, 'cause what you already know hasn't cut it yet. Afterwards, if you want, you can always compare, argue, notice differences. And this is healthy because then you can ask new questions without any expectations as to what the answer ought to be and hear further things that are new that will move you out of self-satisfaction with a small "s" and move you into your Birthright.

In a way, the Course is like a message some earlier prisoner wrote on your cell wall. "I'm going to be released tomorrow," it says. And you look at it and you say, "Released? Released from what? I wonder what that means?"

And of course, now your mind is open for a new idea to register with you that there is something more than living within your prison wall. You see?

"Oh, I'll bet it's going to be a new message that I get to write on the wall." No! The message is that there's somewhere other to be than inside the prison. You see? But if you think that what's going to come is going to be like what already came and that it's just going to be a new message for you to write on the wall, there will be no release, no liberation. You see?

So you've got to listen with totally fresh ears because the answers will come in totally fresh language with meanings that haven't dawned on you yet.

Okay. Let's start up on this side, and... okay.

READER: The Son of God is part of the Holy Trinity, but the Trinity Itself is one.

RAJ: Wow! There we go right off the bat. What would you say if I told you that there's no Holy Trinity? "Oh, but it says it in the Course!" [audience laughter] Wow! Now, I've said before that when you chose to make up your own definitions, when you chose to quote "think for yourself" unquote independent of the Father and in so doing denied your Identity, denied what you were as the direct Expression and Presence of God, you couldn't alter What You Divinely Are and so the part of you that you denied remained in place unaltered, but ignored by you. And at that moment, the Holy Spirit came into existence. And I've said that the Holy Spirit is your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego.

Now this reference to the Holy Trinity is not only an accommodation to Christian theology. It does express the way creation appears when you've turned your back on the Father and have defined everything in your own terms. Because there is the Father, there is the Son—you, each one of you—as an ignorant travesty, you might say, of What You Truly Are, and the ignored Presence of What You Truly Are which is the Holy Spirit. What You Truly Are serves the Father. And the difficulty in waking up is that you don't want to yield to the Father. You want to express your own will.

And so the Holy Spirit, your Divinity, is always functioning in a nurturing, nudging, supporting way to cause you to stop using such narrow vision when what's confronting you is Infinity, Reality. And it's always serving the Father. And by serving the Father on your behalf because You are It, It is constantly engaged in promoting your movement back into your Wholeness. And this is why it can be said that the Holy Spirit can turn every situation to your advantage.

Now, when you come back Home and you let yourself be God Expressed, you let God be All, the only thing going on where you are on God's terms, then you become His Sane Son, His Sane Daughter, His Sane Expression, and there will no longer be the Holy Spirit. There will be Mind with a capital "M" and Its Idea. There will be the Creator and His Creation. And as I've said before, Mind moves and recognizes Itself, and that recognition consummates the total Movement of Being that is Creation.

In other words, there isn't cause and effect. There's Cause and Event. And the Event is Cause seen and recognized. Mind moves, recognizes Its Self, and that constitutes Self-consciousness. Mind Moving, Mind Being Conscious is the Event so the two are one.

Father and the Son are One as an Experience so the time will come when there will no longer be a Trinity and your experience of Being will be God's Experience of Being All There Is, of Being All with no aspect of Its Infinity unavailable to you and where you experience your utter Oneness with it all, which would mean experiencing your utter Oneness with each other and experiencing your utter Oneness with what you call the Universe, All of Creation, consciously.

So there's an example right there of being willing to listen without forcing what you're going to hear to conform to the Course, or any other teaching, or any other learning that you have adopted for yourself. It won't deny what you've read, but it will take you beyond it. And by damn it, you need to get beyond it, all of it, 'cause the all of it that you are currently experiencing isn't what it takes to wake up.

Look at this with delight, like being an explorer. Listen with full open consciousness placing no limits whatsoever on what you're going to hear. Be willing to let it be nonsensical even. One night Paul sat down to talk to me and I suggested he talk to his Supply. Well, this was a little far out for him. So he addressed his Supply and his Supply answered and Paul cut the conversation short. This was too much. Another time he had a conversation with me and when it was over, it didn't make any sense to him at all. And he was sure he hadn't listened well. And the next morning he got up and read it over, made perfect sense. And he wondered how on earth it couldn't have made sense the night before. You see? Be full open in your listening.

Okay. Continue.

READER: There is no confusion within Its Levels, because They are of one Mind and one Will. This single purpose creates perfect integration and establishes the peace of God. Yet this vision can be perceived only by the truly innocent. Because their hearts are pure, the innocent defend true perception instead of defending themselves against it.

RAJ: And you remember, we've been talking about defending something by giving it your attention and not allowing yourself to be distracted from it by anything. That's the way you defend Truth. That's the way you defend True Perception, by giving yourself over to it completely. You don't defend Truth by attacking error. You see?

Continue.

READER: Understanding the lesson of the Atonement they are without the wish to attack, and therefore they see truly.

RAJ: Okay. A little pop quiz. Understanding the lesson of the Atonement. What is the meaning of Atonement?

One person [in the audience] said, "A shift of perception." That's a miracle. And someone else [in the audience] said, "An inspired Act of Love." Yes. The Atonement is an Act of Love.

So understanding the meaning of the Act of Love, they are without the wish to attack. They value Love embodied in action more than anything else. And so they're without the wish to attack, and therefore they see truly.

Continue.

READER: This is what the Bible means when it says, "When He shall appear (or be perceived) we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is."

RAJ: And this is sort of like: Which came first? The chicken or the egg?

Is it that we shall see Him as He is because we are like Him.

Or is it that: We shall be like Him for we shall see Him as He is.

The two are actually inseparable. When you care enough to look at a Brother with innocent eyes, again with the willingness to see what you've never seen there before, you will have revealed to you the Father's View of him, and you will know that it's the Truth about you, too. And vice versa. If you ask to know the Truth about you, or any little incremental clearer glimpse of your Divinity that you have about yourself, you will immediately know it's True about your Brother, and you will see him as he is. They are two sides of one coin, if you will.

Continue.

READER: The way to correct distortions is to withdraw your faith in them and invest it only in what is true.

RAJ: That's called protecting True Perception, protecting Truth.

Continue.

READER: You cannot make untruth true. If you are willing to accept what is true in everything you perceive, you let it be true for you.

RAJ: Now, the key word is "let." You let it be true for you. You don't make it be true for you, because you are letting the Father's Perspective, if I may use that word, be Real for you. You are abandoning your determined definition about a thing and letting the Father's View be the only one you choose to entertain.

Continue.

READER: Truth overcomes all error, and those who live in error and emptiness can never find lasting solace.

RAJ: Now Truth overcomes error not through a fight, but by being the nonexistence of the error, being the nonsense of the error. So Truth overcomes it because what is valueless becomes obviously valueless. And you always abandon what has no value. So there's no struggle there in the overcoming of error.

Continue.

SEEKER (reader): I just want to add a little note. And the miracle is the little shift in perception that returns us back to the Atonement. So whenever we're seeing error, to be open to the miracle which shifts us back to that Experience of Love where we can see the Truth.

RAJ: It shifts you back to the Truth where you can spontaneously feel the Love that is appropriate to it and that Love gets extended. Yes.

Continue.

READER: If you perceive truly you are cancelling out misperceptions in yourself and in others simultaneously.

RAJ: Ah, again very important. You cannot have a private revelation. You can't have a private insight. You can't become clearer without the whole Sonship being freed to some degree from the ignorance that has kept it from feeling and experiencing Its Unity.

Continue.

READER: Because you see them as they are, you offer them your acceptance of their truth so they can accept it for themselves.

RAJ: And I just, because of the New-Age lingo where everyone speaks about everyone having their truth as though each one has a private different perception that is truth, true, this [the section read] really means because you see them as they are, you offer them your acceptance of the Truth about them that is so obvious to you. Not a Truth that's their possession, but the Reality of them that you're no longer confused about so they can accept it for themselves.

Continue.

READER: This is the healing that the miracle induces.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Is this why we can't wake up alone because we need another one to see our Truth when we haven't seen it?

RAJ: Well, what are you being healed of? You're being healed of the idea that you can be alone. And so absolutely, you can't wake up alone because being asleep is the problem of being alone. And the way you break that problem, the way you destroy that illusion, is by breaking the isolation. Absolutely.

Okay.

READER: Perception versus Knowledge

We have been emphasizing perception, and have said very little about knowledge as yet. This is because perception must be straightened out before you can know anything.

RAJ: And actually the word "know" is the key word: before you can know anything.

Continue.

READER: To know is to be certain. Uncertainty means that you do not know. Knowledge is power because it is certain, and certainty is strength.

RAJ: So Knowledge is the clear experience of unequivocal Truth.

READER: Perception is temporary. As an attribute of the belief in space and time, it is subject to either fear or love. Misperceptions produce fear and true perceptions foster love, but neither brings certainty because all perception varies. That is why it is not knowledge. True perception is the basis for knowledge, but knowing is the affirmation of truth and beyond all perceptions.

RAJ: Indeed. Now, again, I'd like to make a clarification. You think of knowledge as an acquired body of information. And that is not what is meant here. Knowledge is what you specifically know when Truth is not hidden from you. And it isn't something that you deposit in your memory banks. You do not move along experiencing truth now, and another truth now, and another truth now, and store these bits of information in memory to draw upon.

Come with me for a moment on an inner visual journey. You are awake and all of Infinity and all of Creation that fills It is consciously present in your awareness. No part of It is beyond your Presence of Mind. Now, you can move through it if you wish, as though you were going through space, and just for purpose of illustration, we'll say that you start out from Planet Earth. And as you leave Planet Earth, you are specifically, and with more focus, aware of all that it is and all that is Truth about it. And as you move toward Mars, your attention begins to shift toward your destination. And more and more specifically, you become aware of Mars, and less and less are you, specifically, with a high degree of focus, aware of Earth, even though everything about it is still present as part of your consciousness. When you arrive at Mars, you can be aware of the Truth, the meaning of every little grain of sand. If you shift your attention [finger snap] just like that back to Earth, you can do the same thing with the grains of sand on the beach.

Now, my point is this: That knowledge is the direct present Experience of Truth when it is needed, even though you are never unconscious of the Truth of any aspect of the Infinitude of Creation. You do not need to store the Knowing of Truth away for future use. You can Know the Truth at any moment by asking what Truth is. And at any moment you can Know the Truth without ever having to search your memory banks. And that's my point.

My point is: Do not study this Course, do not desire to know the Truth so that you can engage in a lifelong habit of storing bits of information away for future use. Ye shall Know the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free. And you will Know the Truth by being fully present in the moment with the specifics of Creation that are in your face at the moment so that the direct Experience of the Truth of it can be experienced and thereby be the nonexistence of any confusion about it. And you might say, the next time you're back at this place, you will be present in the moment with it, so that you might experience the Truth of it, Know the Truth of it, and thereby you could say have Knowledge of it, but it's a Living Knowledge, not a stored knowledge. I want you to catch the feeling of being in the Flow of Knowing always, and beginning to be willing to abandon the high regard you give to, and the use you put to, memory.

Okay. Continue.

READER: All your difficulties stem from the fact that you do not recognize yourself, your brother or God. To recognize means to "know again," implying that you knew before.

RAJ: In other words: re-cognize, to cognize again.

Continue.

READER: You can see in many ways because perception involves interpretation, and this means that it is not whole or consistent. The miracle, being a way of perceiving, is not knowledge. It is the right answer to a question, but you do not question when you know. Questioning illusions is the first step in undoing them. The miracle, or the right answer, corrects them. Since perceptions change, their dependence on time is obvious. How you perceive at any given time determines what you do, and actions must occur in time. Knowledge is timeless, because certainty is not questionable. You know when you have ceased to ask questions.

RAJ: You know when you have ceased to ask questions.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Question? [much amusement] Truth and knowledge are subjective experiences?

RAJ: All being is subjective. All being is subjective.

You will find that I use the word "Knowing" a lot. And I use it in the way that "Knowledge" is used here. Knowing is a direct Experience of Truth.

There is a sneaky style that the ego is employing in this day and age, a way of avoiding looking at what needs to be looked at. If a statement is made, the person bound by their ego says, "Well, that's just your perception," meaning "I don't have to pay any attention to it."

But you know what? There's something more than perception available to you. And, if you had listened so that you know the Truth and you express it, and another person says, "That's just your perception," avoid getting entangled with them in arguing about whether it's a perception or whether it's knowledge. Because the point is that the answer lies beyond perception. And whoever the Truth has been spoken to needs to abandon the avoidance technique of saying, "That's just your perception," and replace it with a desire to know what the immutable Truth is, the unchanging Truth is, because there is something Real going on. And to live in perceptions is insanity. Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I have a question.

RAJ: Go ahead.

SEEKER: Truth and knowledge, when we abandon it and identify with perceptions, we are in fact going from a fourth-dimensional experience back to a third-dimensional where we're looking out there, outside of our subjective experience, and we in that moment do not know the Truth. Is that correct?

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: You are ignorant of the Truth about something that is Real. And so the focus needs to come back to the fact that there's always something Real about which you're having a misperception and a willingness to abandon the misperception because there's a desire to protect Truth by being conscious only of It. And abiding by that commitment, you abandon the perception and become open, if you have innocent ears or innocent eyes, to the direct Experience of Truth or Knowledge or Knowing with a capital "K." Okay.

SEEKER: Which is back in the subjective experience...

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: ...and which accompanies, which you know when you're there because you feel a complete sense of Love and Peace with it, with the Knowing.

RAJ: Yes. Except that it doesn't feel subjective. Subjective... the word "subjective" suggests somehow intangible and perhaps unreal. But the experience is a direct Experience of Truth and therefore, the direct Experience of the Reality of it. And so, in many ways it will feel like what you call objective, but infinitely more so.

Okay.

READER: The questioning mind perceives itself in time, and therefore looks for future answers. The closed mind believes the future and the present will be the same. This establishes a seemingly stable state that is usually an attempt to counteract an underlying fear that the future will be worse than the present. This fear inhibits the tendency to question at all.

RAJ: Indeed. Nothing difficult to understand there.

READER: True vision is the natural perception of spiritual sight, but it is still a correction rather than a fact. Spiritual sight is symbolic, and therefore not a device for knowing. It is, however, a means of right perception, which brings it into the proper domain of the miracle. A “vision of God” would be a miracle rather than a revelation. The fact that perception is involved at all removes the experience from the realm of knowledge. That is why visions, however holy, do not last.

RAJ: Indeed. Spiritual sight is a gift that sets the mind in the right direction that causes one, let us say, to turn around toward the Altar, to desire to know something more than is known, and to feel the impulse to turn to where the answer can be received.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Please clarify just a little bit there. That spot you’re talking about.

RAJ: I mean the Altar.

SEEKER: Yeah, but it brings you into a state of mind where clar-... say that again please. I think I’m almost there.

RAJ: Spiritual vision is always accompanied with an Experience of Meaning, an Experience of Holiness, an experience of that which is obviously not a normal part of your daily life. As a result, it not only causes you to become curious, it causes you to know where to look to have the curiosity satisfied. Because when you’re uninspired and in the ego place and you have a question, you always look to memory. You always look in the wrong place to find the answer. But spiritual vision has an accompaniment to it that by virtue of its Divinity, its obvious Divinity, causes you to become curious about Divine Things, which causes you to turn toward a Divine Source. You might call it God, but the fact is that even in calling it God, you’re turning back toward the Altar. You’re turning to where the answer can come from that satisfies the question.

SEEKER: These are my first experiences of the freedom and the joy.

RAJ: What are?

SEEKER: These visions. This place where I have an inkling, and it’s different and it’s the freedom and then the little bit of joy. And that’s where the indignation for the bondage is coming ‘cause I know now that there’s these little experiences, I know that there’s a way out and the absurdity of being held by nothing that makes any sense. I’ve touched these spots some.

RAJ: I'm glad you referred to them as a first slight taste of joy, because Joy in Its fullness comes when the answer is given and Knowing is being experienced and then Joy uninhibited courses through your very Being. So I guess what I'm trying to say is don't become satisfied with the first few tastes of joy, the intimation of Real Joy that comes from the spiritual insights. That's not the ultimate guys. Keep looking to where the answer is that satisfies the question.

SEEKER: In that unexpected place.

RAJ: Yes. Even if as the answer comes forth you experience feeling more and more joy, stay the course until you arrive at the fullness of Joy that comes from Knowing and not a perception, a hint of joy. You see? Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: May I ask you...

RAJ: We have a question here.

SEEKER: I take it then that it's not necessary to be fully awake to have Knowledge, to have a...

RAJ: Absolutely not.

SEEKER: So and Knowledge is like, you say things like: "I don't know how I knew it, but I just knew it. I could feel it all the way down to the tips of my toes. I just knew it." Is that...

RAJ: No. When you Know something, you don't talk about having Known it. You just be in the Knowing of it and you be in a new way, but you don't talk about Knowing.

SEEKER: So like when it goes...

RAJ: It's like looking at Ken over there and saying, "Wow! My eyes are sure doing a good job of seeing." You see what I'm saying. You say, "Hi, Ken."

SEEKER: But if you usually wear glasses and then you look at Ken and you can see him in perfect focus and then you realize that you don't have your glasses on, and then everything goes fuzzy again, you go: "Wow! I could see him perfectly clear without my glasses." That's the kind of thing I was referring to.

RAJ: No. When Knowing occurs, the Experience of Knowing takes precedence over any levels of perception you had prior.

SEEKER: So you can't reflect on it though? I mean you can't look back and say, "I knew it."

RAJ: Knowing is a now, a present experience and it causes one to find the past to be irrelevant, and gives you a direct experience of the fact that there is no past or future and that any past or future you conceived of was an illusion, and therefore not worth any comment or conversation whatsoever in light of the fullness of Knowing which you can't help but let govern the way you're being in the moment. It moves you out of time.

SEEKER: So you recognize the illusion of time?

RAJ: Oh, absolutely.

SEEKER: Okay, then a question about vision. I had an experience where it was like my field of vision parted and then I could look past my normal way of seeing, and I saw everything phosphorescing or colors streaming, colored energy streaming off of everything I looked at, and then that disappeared. Is that what you meant when it talks about vision and why vision can't last? Or doesn't last.

RAJ: Oh, that is perception. Perception can't last, no matter how inspired it is. But once again, it points you in the right direction. You know from the experience that there's more to everything than...

SEEKER: Exactly. That was the value of it.

RAJ: And so now your level of curiosity is heightened because of experience, instead of because someone else told you about it and it sounded like an interesting experience to have. You see?

SEEKER: The other aspect of a vision like that, whatever you want to call it, experience, was that it was almost unbearable. It was overpowering. And so you were saying you know it's out there, but by the same token, you still feel like, "Gee, I don't know if I could handle that all the time." So that just shows you you're not ready for it. You see what I mean? Then you can get caught in the thing, well...

RAJ: It shows you how comfortable you are in your prison.

SEEKER: Right. Right. But how it might be frightening if you were out of your prison. So I guess that's why we keep the door closed.

RAJ: Yes. Or if there's no door on the door frame, you keep well away from the door frame.

SEEKER: With that experience of being frightened by the ever more of becoming, how does one... what do you do? Take baby steps? It's the...

RAJ: You will take the biggest steps you can take. Even if they are very tiny, they will be the biggest you can take. Suffering is always a wonderful nudge to taking bigger steps or edging toward the door frame that doesn't have a door on it.

SEEKER: Right. But you see, where the experience is certainly inspiring, it can also act as you saying to yourself: "Well, gee. I don't know if I can take that. I don't know if I want to... if I want to do that or not because..."

RAJ: Indeed. But you know what? You have less and less excuse for doing that because of the time we have spent together and your study of the Course. And so you have the capacity to look at it and say, "This is too significant for me, but I recognize that it's my Birthright to be experiencing it. I recognize that it's really Natural to me. I know that it is unnatural for me not to be experiencing it. And I know that the suffering that I am experiencing by virtue of not allowing it, is not worth as much to me as it used to be." And so you are being moved into a state of miracle-readiness; a place of less defendedness, a place where you're willing to be a little more vulnerable.

And this brings us back to what I started out speaking about this evening that if you're not experiencing Joy, it's because you're under the domination of a regime that it's illegitimate for you to be bound by. And you need to... you need to dare to invite and let in what you don't know yet. And you need to do it more consciously with more purpose. And you can dare to do it with courage, because now you know after listening to me and listening to me and listening to me that at least you can say, "The possibility is that if I persist, I will find my true state of normalcy. And my satisfaction will come from the full experience of this that appears to me to be overwhelming. And I will no longer be satisfied with a halfway tolerable level of pain, sickness, grief, sorrow, illness." You see?

SEEKER: Yes. Out of curiosity, when you fully let yourself into an experience like that, I take it then it's not that you have to get used to the bright lights. It's more of "Ah, this is what it's supposed... this is... I knew..." In other words, it's a familiarity. You feel like: "Ah, I'm home again. This is the way it's supposed to be." Is that... is it different for everyone?

RAJ: The actuality of it is that it does take some getting used to. It is like going through reorientation.

SEEKER: So bring your sunglasses.

RAJ: Bring your sunglasses. Yes. Bring your willingness to not know what anything means, so that the Real Meaning has space in you to register with you. I must say, "Don't be surprised if it feels unnatural."

SEEKER: Initially.

RAJ: Exactly. Freedom to the Iraqis does not feel natural at the moment. What it means and how to be free has not fully registered. And what it means to you to be truly free, you don't know. So, again, to be very practical with you: Don't be surprised if the experience of your Divinity is upsetting in the sense that it will unsettle the confidences that you have had in the illusion which you've been very comfortable with.

But once again at the same time that you're experiencing an unsettling, you are also experiencing that the unsettling is caused by Something utterly Divine which provides you with the impulse to persist in turning to the right place to have your ignorance satisfied by being replaced with that of which it was the ignorance.

SEEKER: Is it ever so unsettling that you go: "Whoa! I'm not gonna do this!" And you just withdraw way deeply back into the dream.

RAJ: It can.

SEEKER: It can do that.

RAJ: If I had told Paul on our first conversation that my name was Jesus, he would have backed off, known that he had gone crazy, and we would not have had a second conversation.

SEEKER: But the curiosity then is piqued and you can never forget it.

RAJ: That's correct. But you can fight it for a while—maybe even for a long time.

SEEKER: Let's hope not.

RAJ: Right. The Holy Spirit is conspiring to shorten the time. Your Divinity held in trust is conspiring on your behalf to shorten the time that you are ignorant. [laugh]

And everything that I'm doing has one goal: To bring about a little bit of willingness to be open and let it in. A little bit of willingness to let time collapse by letting your confidences in your mutually-agreed-upon definitions...

PAUL: I'm sorry. This is me Paul. Was that a complete sentence?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Yes, it was.

ANOTHER SEEKER: No.

RAJ: ...to collapse. [audience laughter]

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Can I ask a question?

RAJ: No. We will end at this point for tonight. I've enjoyed being with all of you as always.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

RAJ: And I look forward to being with you next week.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 3 – THE INNOCENT PERCEPTION
Section – PERCEPTION VERSUS KNOWLEDGE
First Edition – p. 36 / Second Edition – p. 40

RAJ: Good Evening. So we're on the chapter entitled, "Perception Versus Knowledge." And the way the word "perception" is used in the Course, it really means "misperception." Perception is the way you see something when you're looking at it without God, whether what you're looking at is being defined by you as good or bad.

And as I said last week, Knowledge is the direct perception, you might say, of Truth, the direct Experience of Truth. You, each one of you are the salvation of the world. Ye shall know the Truth and the Truth shall make you free. That doesn't mean that you will have an idea about the Truth, but you shall experience directly the Truth about anything you're experiencing. When you're engaged in your function of being the salvation of the world, you are glorifying God. And you could say that in glorifying God, you are calling God forth in whatever it is you're experiencing, instead of muddling along in your mutually-agreed-upon definitions of what that thing is.

You're here to undo the dream. It is not your function to glide along in the middle of the dream untouched by the dream. You're here to undo the dream. Which means that if you see a friend, or a co-worker, or anyone, who appears not be well, you don't say, "Poor dear, she needs to be home in bed." Instead, it's your job to correct that perception you're having. And at the least to realize that's not her Birthright. That is not innately natural to her. That is an illegitimate imposition upon her of an illusion which it's not her Birthright to be experiencing at all.

Of course, now that will be drawing from your memory, but it's an excellent first step to redirect the tendency, you might say, the natural tendency to respond, "Oh, poor dear, she needs to be home in bed." Which does nothing to correct the dream. And it also does nothing to direct your thought and your mind in toward the desire to know of God: "What is the Truth here? What is the Truth about this Divine One who couldn't possibly for an instant have ceased to be the Divine One that God Is Being right there?"

That's how you turn toward the Altar, but in order to turn toward the Altar you have to realize when you're not turned toward it, when you are turned away. And all of your habits of thinking about others have arisen out of having your back to the Altar. You're here to bless each other all day long every day by desiring to glorify God right there in each other, no matter how cranky or ill or unpleasant another is behaving. You want to break the habit of thoughtlessly moving down a well-worn path of ignorance and confirming it further, making the rut deeper.

So you're not here to be in passive bliss while illusion goes on unchanged and unchallenged. You're here to be an agent for change. Why? Because God gave you that special task? No. But because it is your Function to be glorifying God in everything you see. And it just so happens that glorifying God in everything you see, blesses and heals and puts the weight on the right side, the side of Truth. And reminds you to listen more deeply and to desire when you look at this other one to see the fullness of God right there because you don't want to labor under an illusion. And you don't want them to labor under an illusion.

You are the Light of the World, if the Light is what you want to see and if the Light is what you insist upon letting in right where darkness and obscureness seems to prevail. Another reason you do it is because it's the way for you to wake up. It's the way you undo your decision to see things by yourself, on your own, in your own inimitable unique way.

The one, "poor dear who needs to be home in bed," can't possibly be the Glory of God. The perception you have of them cannot be a recognition of the Glory of God. And you know what? The picture you project upon her is the one that governs you. And the Truth that you let in blesses her and blesses you as well. Whatever you think you know about someone else is what you think you know about yourself. And whatever you truly Know in the sense that the Course is speaking of Knowledge, whatever direct Experience of Truth you have is unavoidably the direct Experience of the Truth about you.

Now you can't have a direct Experience of the Truth about you all by yourself, because that's still private. You, if you want to know the Truth about yourself, need to seek the Truth about your Brother. It's a fact that what you need, you need to give. And so, of course, we're coming back to this word "involvement." Involvement meaning not being private, not being isolated. And you know what? If it's your desire to see the fullness of God in your Brother or your pet or your plant or your home, and you don't see immediate transformation, you don't see immediate evidence of healing so that the fullness of God is what is being given back to you, you persist. And you don't worry about their willingness or unwillingness. You persist because they need someone to see for them the Truth in them, because they can't do it alone. You persist. You persist. You persist. And you don't fret about delays and you don't wonder if you're not doing it well enough. You persist until whatever resistance you have is melted and the direct Experience of Truth can flood you, and for lack of better words, convince you so that you utterly Know the Truth.

Let's talk about something else. The moment you decided to look at things all by yourself, "but, Father, I'd rather see it my way," and you imagined that you could do it and you imagined that you did do it, it left you with an impression that you had a mind of your own. And you believe it. And as a result, when you look at your Brother and Sister, and they, "poor dears, look like they need to be home in bed," you make the natural assumption that they have a mind of their own. And then you can metaphysically mess yourself up by saying: "Well, they have a mind of their own and they brought it on themselves. And what can I do to overcome the mind of their own that they're insisting on embodying?" And that's a trap, because you don't have a mind of your own, except in your imagination, and that doesn't mean that you have a mind of your own.

When it dawns on you that you don't have a mind of your own and they don't, even intellectually as a thought and not a knowing, when it dawns on you that you don't have a mind of your own and they don't have a mind of their own, then you know that there's nothing to overcome. And there is no one there with a right to see things the way they want to see them. That's part of the illusion, too.

And so, as part of being the salvation of the world as far as being an agent for change is concerned, as far as being that Presence which corrects illusion, you must not only recognize that they are suffering from an illegitimate imposition, you must recognize that they don't actually have a mind to make-up their illusion and embody it, that they themselves still exist, just as you do right now, in your pristine state of God Presencing Himself/Herself right where you are, in which there's no mind to have its illusions or its perceptions.

You need to exonerate your Brother and Sister, not only from the belief that they're suffering from, but the suggestion that they are capable of believing, of having a perception actually of something God didn't make, or of having a perception on their own. Ridiculous words. You can't have a perception on your own because no such "you" exists. So in glorifying God, you are exonerating the so-called one capable of being willful and having private disturbed perceptions of Reality. You exonerate them from this in the realization that they don't even have such a mind that's going to take ages to change. They don't have a mind that you have to convince. They don't have a mind that you have to struggle with, because if there's anything right there where they are, all there is, is God Presencing Himself or Herself.

Now I am giving you ideas that prime you for being less resistance to the influx of the Experience of Knowing the Truth. But realize you have the capacity to provide direction to your thoughts and provide that direction so that, as I said, you don't just flow with the illusion and thus fail to fulfill your function of correcting the illusion. Why? So that there is no further apparent evidence of anything but the Presence of God there. This Course is not about learning how not to be bothered by the illusion while being in it. It is about correction.

Does that mean you have authority and some new level of control? No. What it means is that you have a capacity to reflect nothing other than God, to be the Presence of nothing other than the Father's Point of View and thereby magnify what God Is Being. Another way of saying glorifying God right there where you thought you saw an illusion and you thought you saw somebody else seeing an illusion about themselves. And which, if you weren't careful, you would give them the right to do because you thought they had a mind of their own just like you.

Let that mind be in you. "Let that mind be in you that was also in Christ Jesus," it was said. That's what it's about is letting the only Mind there is, the Presence of Mind that is God being Conscious of His Infinite Creation. Let that be in you because that is all there is of you and to you. You see? That's coming back Home.

That is not an exercise of personal authority. And it is not an exercise of the power of thought. It's the spontaneous and natural evidence of abandoning authority you think you have and the private position you think you have. That constitutes a lowered defense, a softened shell, a weakened privacy so that the Presence of God that is what is right there where each of you sits can be your Conscious Experience of Being putting you in a state of Knowing the Truth.

You don't know the Truth to make something happen. When you Know the Truth, when you're having a direct Experience of Truth, you no longer see anything to have something done to. And that's what makes you free, not that you have known the Truth so well that it changed something wrong into something right. The direct Experience of Truth is the Reality of a thing revealed to you because you weren't blocking the experience of it with a dearly loved concept or perception or definition.

SEEKER: Raj, could I ask a question please?

RAJ: No. Let us begin. Remember it.

READER: The Bible tells you to know yourself, or to be certain.

RAJ: Uh huh. Now, some people try to be certain. Some people practice certainty. They sort of screw up enough courage and guts to be definite. You see? And they call that being certain. Do you understand?

SEEKER (reader): I'm working on it.

RAJ: Someone says, "Such-and-such-a-thing is true."

And you say to them, "Are you certain?"

And they say, "I'm pretty certain."

"Now just a moment."

"Yes! I'm certain!"

That is an adopted certainty. That's a certainty that arises out of a faith one has in his own perceptions.

SEEKER: Right. Okay, then I understand.

RAJ: Yes, but to Know yourself is to be in the unobstructed direct Experience of Truth in which there is nothing but It, nothing but Truth. And that is certainty because there is nothing else to defer to or to be distracted by.

Continue.

READER: Certainty is always of God.

RAJ: Yes. The certainty of you is God Presencing Himself/Herself right where you are. Everything else is un-certainty. Any other sense of yourself that you entertain separate and apart from God's Being of You, is really uncertainty, even if you feel you have a great deal of confidence in yourself. It's not certainty.

Continue.

READER: When you love someone you have perceived him as he is, and this makes it possible for you to know him. Until you first perceive him as he is you cannot know him. While you ask questions about him you are clearly implying that you do not know God.

RAJ: You're clearly implying that you do not know God. And what that means is that you don't have the expectation when you're looking at your Brother or your Sister of seeing the Presence of God. It is not your spontaneous intent to see the Wholeness of God and the Glory of God right there.

Continue.

READER: Certainty does not require action. When you say you are acting on the basis of knowledge, you are really confusing knowledge with perception. Knowledge provides the strength for creative thinking, but not for right doing.

RAJ: Hmmm. This is because Knowledge shows God's Work as already done.

Continue.

READER: Perception, miracles and doing are closely related. Knowledge is the result of revelation and induces only thought. Even in its most spiritualized form perception involves the body. Knowledge comes from the altar within and is timeless because it is certain. To perceive the truth is not the same as to know it.

RAJ: Exactly. Perception is variable. One moment you can perceive Truth, and the next moment you can perceive error. But when you Know the Truth as a direct Experience of Truth, there is no variableness to it. It is certain.

Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: [apparently someone wanted to ask a question]

RAJ: I'm going to hold comments down because of the time and so that we can cover as much as possible.

READER: Right perception is necessary before God can communicate directly to His altars, ...

SEEKER (reader): To His Altars?

RAJ: To His Altars.

SEEKER: Hmmm. I didn't quite understand multiple Altars is why I was wondering about that.

RAJ READING: ...which He established in His Sons.

RAJ: Plural.

SEEKER: Okay.

READER: There He can communicate His certainty, and His knowledge will bring peace without question.

RAJ: Now why is right perception necessary? Because right perception is the ability to distinguish between Truth and illusion, to recognize where an illusion is operating, to recognize where an illegitimate imposition seems to be holding a Sister or a Brother in bondage. Because without being able to discern the difference between right and wrong, you cannot make the choice for right. And in making the choice for right, turning toward the Altar, if you cannot tell the difference, you will not know that there is a call for correction. You see?

READER: God is not a stranger to His Sons, and His Sons are not strangers to each other. Knowledge preceded both perception and time, and will ultimately replace them.

RAJ: It is you coming back into your Right Mind which, because it Knows the Truth, experiences nothing unlike it to distract you from it.

Continue.

READER: That is the real meaning of “Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end,” and “Before Abraham was I am.” Perception can and must be stabilized, but knowledge is stable.

RAJ: Yes. And so, at this point, what you’re all engaged in is a process of stabilizing perception, learning to recognize when something is going on that is illegitimate, meaning not God-ordained. And in being able to recognize that, not vacillating from positive to negative to willing cooperation with an illusion to taking steps to correct it. You are learning to not be fooled, not to be sucked in on a daily basis from hour to hour. Where never again, when you see someone who doesn’t look well, do you say, “Poor dear, she really needs to be home in bed.” You find yourself catching that thought and correcting that thought by at least acknowledging: “This is not her Birthright, and it’s illegitimate, and she doesn’t even really have a mind of her own with which to create that illusion and bind herself with. All that is there is the Presence of God Presencing Himself/Herself.”

That kind of a statement, even though it’s drawn from memory because you heard me say it or you’ve realized it in the past, that kind of thought is discernment and constitutes a mental discipline that allows you then to say, “Father, I would Know the Truth about her. Father, show me Your Fullness in her.” And then you listen. That’s turning toward the Altar.

Continue.

READER: “Fear God and keep His commandments” becomes “Know God and accept His certainty.”

RAJ: Yes. To know God, you have to have your attention turned toward God. What God is has to be more important than what you think you are and what you think your Brothers are, and what you think your obligations to your Brothers are, as well as to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that the two of you, or more, have made commitment to. And the minute you are willing to abandon those, the minute you are willing not to give the value to them that you have in the past, you can shift your attention to God so that you might be filled with the direct Experience of Truth. In other words, an Experience of Knowing that constitutes Knowledge. But again, as I said last week, not knowledge as a bit of information to be stored away in memory to be used again in the future. It is a Living Knowledge that can only be gathered in the moment of the Conscious Experience of what Truth is. And it's therefore always new.

The Experience of God is always new.

Okay.

READER: If you attack error in another, you will hurt yourself. You cannot know your brother when you attack him. Attack is always made upon a stranger.

RAJ: Why? Because you trust a Brother. You know a Brother. You feel your kinship. Attack is always made upon an estranger, someone you are estranged from. And yet it's your Brother whom you have estranged yourself from. And it is this lapse of memory that he is your Brother and who seems to be left when you have forgotten who he is that you attack.

Continue.

READER: You are making him a stranger by misperceiving him, and so you cannot know him. It is because you have made him a stranger that you are afraid of him.

RAJ: And the best way to make a Brother out of a stranger is to remember your Father and look for your Father in him. Because if you can find your Father in him, then you have found your Brother and you cannot be estranged. And then the messengers that you send out to him will return to you confirming his Brotherhood and God has been glorified. And correction has occurred. Healing has occurred.

Continue.

READER: Perceive him correctly so that you can know him.

RAJ: Yes. And I've restated it a number of times. When you look at your Brother or Sister and say, "This is not the Truth about them. This is an illegitimate imposition upon them. It is not his or her Birthright. And not only that, he or she doesn't even actually have a mind that can create this imposition and bind her." That is all at the level of perception. It is still at the level of perception, but it is a truer perception that sets a tone in your mind that allows you then to ask God to reveal to you the Truth so that you can Know him or her.

Continue.

READER: There are no strangers in God's creation. To create as He created you can create only what you know, and therefore accept as yours.

RAJ: Ahhh. And the only way you can create only what you Know is when you have asked God for the direct Experience of Truth, which for, lack of better words, you could call God's Truth. And then you find yourself creating the Conscious Experience of What God Is Being there, which isn't an actual creation at all of your own, but is the direct Experience of God Being All There Is right there. And healing has occurred. Correction has occurred. And there doesn't seem, any longer, to even be the suggestion of something unlike God.

And the one who, you know, "the poor dear who ought to be home in bed" is obviously in exactly the place she needs to be to carry on the joyous activity that she came there for with happiness and health and perfection because correction has occurred. Again, it hasn't been a process by which you come into your peace while she's still miserable. That's not correction. That's not the evidence of Knowing.

Continue.

READER: God knows His children with perfect certainty. He created them by knowing them. He recognizes them perfectly. When they do not recognize each other, they do not recognize Him.

RAJ: And He recognizes them perfectly because He recognizes Himself in them. And you will recognize them perfectly when you see nothing else but Him in them. And when you see Him in them, you will Know Him in you.

We will end there. I want to point out something to you. When you are willing to turn to the Altar to learn of God what the Truth is so that you can give voice to God's Truth, and you do it for your Brother which is the only legitimate reason for doing it, it is an Act of Love. And that's the real event. Not the communication, but the extension and the receipt of the Act of Love.

You have watched Paul this evening make that choice under circumstances that he felt were disturbing. And he was willing to persist in abandoning any value that he gave to being upset. And he did it for you. He preferred to see the Glory of God right here, over an experience of self-righteous indignation. And I know all of you are grateful and I know all of you are blessed. I would have you learn from this, more than anything we've talked about tonight.

Because your Brother, your Sister, is worth more as an object of your affection than any ego reaction that might entice you to stay in a state of misery in which no correction can occur, in which no healing can occur, in which no relief can occur for you. And so it might not always be easy to get past the desire to relish in the discomfort, the wonderful discomfort of self-righteous indignation. But do it. Doing it is the leaven that leavens the whole lump, the little bit that affects all. When he does that I can say, "I love you all." But he would not have been able to give voice to that Truth if he had insisted upon relishing his delicious discomfort. You see?

Our next Thursday evening Gathering will be a week from Sunday at 2 o'clock. We are going to change the day and the time in order to make it easier for more people who would like to attend to participate. I look forward to seeing you then.

And in the meantime realize that there are no private thoughts. And when you see something that you know doesn't embody and reflect the Glory of God, challenge it in your mind, even if you are simply saying: "That is not the Truth about her. That is a lie about him. I do not join in it." And then say, "Father, I would like to experience the Wholeness of You right there where I seem to be seeing something that I know is illegitimate." Even though the word "know" there is not yet a direct Experience of the Truth and be the little bit of leaven that leavens the whole lump.

A little bit of leaven blesses everyone, blesses the Whole. But you know what more than anything? You're gonna find yourselves not as dragged down and depressed as you are by the constant rehearsal of: "Wow, she doesn't look so hot today. Boy, he's really a grouch today. Boy, I could have done without running into her." You depress yourselves by careless [laughing]... careless thoughts. Careless thoughts. And because there are no private thoughts, your careless thoughts can seem to reinforce the dream.

Be the leaven. Be the leaven this next week and a half.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 3 – THE INNOCENT PERCEPTION
Section – ERROR AND THE EGO
First Edition – p. 37 / Second Edition – p. 41

RAJ: Okay. Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: With apologies to everyone on the internet, the stream went down. And so I hope that everyone will not mind the foibles of high technology. For those who might not have heard me say it because of the breakdown of the streaming, today those who are on the internet who have a question about what's being discussed from the Course can post the question and Chris will relay it to me. And in the first edition it's on page 37 [second edition page 41]. Okay.

Without any preamble, we will leap right into the Text. And we'll start right here.

READER: Error and the Ego

The abilities you now possess are only shadows of your real strength. All of your present functions are divided and open to question and doubt. This is because you are not certain how you will use them, and are therefore incapable of knowledge. You are also incapable of knowledge because you can still perceive lovelessly.

RAJ: And let's remember that the word "Knowledge" refers to what I have described as Knowing with a capital "K"—the direct Experience of Truth. Not the direct idea of Truth, but the direct Experience of Truth which is to be experiencing the Father's point of view; letting that Mind be in you which is the Father's Mind and claiming no right to a mind of your own.

Continue.

READER: Perception did not exist until the separation introduced degrees, aspects and intervals. Spirit has no levels, and all conflict arises from the concept of levels. Only the Levels of the Trinity are capable of Unity. The levels created by the separation cannot but conflict. This is because they are meaningless to each other.

RAJ: You see the minute you decided to try to have a point of view of your own, to see things your way and you turned your back on the Father, turned your back to the Altar and took what you thought would be an independent stance, it caused you to introduce into your experience a perspective unlike the Father's.

This perspective, was, nevertheless, a perspective on Reality, because you didn't have anything but Reality to experience. When you introduced therefore a biased perception, a twisted or altered perception of Reality, you created an illusory... a distorted experience of it. Now, if you look at your distorted experience and believe it, you are in error. And everything you are seeing is erroneous.

Literally, waking up is coming back into your Right Mind where you're not claiming a private perspective of your own, and where you stop introducing this bias or twist on Reality. The illusions that you choose to believe, because they are not real, are meaningless because only what is Real is Meaning-full—with a capital "M."

Let's continue.

READER: Consciousness, the level of perception, was the first split introduced into the mind after the separation, making the mind a perceiver rather than a creator.

RAJ: Now I'm going to interrupt here. Mind, with a capital "M," is conscious. Consciousness is not an illusion. And this is important to understand. What this is referring to is the personal private mind each of you thinks you have when you've turned your back on the Altar. The level of perception is what consciousness is when you have dissociated yourself from the Father. We could describe it as human consciousness versus Divine Consciousness. Here it's referring to the human consciousness. It says, "Consciousness, the level of perception, was the first split introduced into the mind after the separation, making the mind a perceiver rather than a creator."

Continue.

SEEKER: Is it possible to be conscious at two levels at the same time simultaneously?

RAJ: No, it is not. Because either your back is toward the Altar or your back is away—you have turned toward the Altar. They are exclusive. That doesn't mean that you can't have moments of clarity, moments of revelation, and then seem to turn back once again to your habitual way of perceiving and reacting to what you perceive.

SEEKER: So it is a matter of where you focus your attention.

RAJ: That is correct.

READER: Consciousness is correctly identified as the domain of the ego. The ego is a wrong-minded attempt to perceive yourself as you wish to be, rather than as you are. Yet you can know yourself only as you are, because that is all you can be sure of.

RAJ: And here the word "know" might be better understood if it had a capital "K." Yet you can Know yourself only as you are because that is all you can be sure of.

Continue.

READER: Everything else is open to question.

RAJ: And that's what's important! Until you're awake, you need to look at even these beautiful lilacs and be open to question. What is the true Meaning? What is really going on there that is so beautiful to the eye and so delicious to the nose. You need to let everything be open to question so that your mutually-agreed-upon definitions don't get in the way of discovering the more of what is really there than what you're currently seeing.

I wish to see the Wholeness of God right there where the lilacs are. That's how you keep it open to question. You keep... what you do is, you question your mutually-agreed-upon definitions by reaching beyond them. You cast doubt upon what you're so sure of with the desire to have Truth replace your perception. Okay.

READER: The ego is the questioning aspect of the post-separation self, which was made rather than created.

RAJ: And you could say "made-up." Fantasy, imagination.

Continue.

READER: It is capable of asking questions but not of perceiving meaningful answers, because these would involve knowledge and cannot be perceived.

RAJ: Indeed. And, in fact, if all of you were honest with yourselves, even in your prayers, your asking of the question, your making the request, becomes more important than the answer. And you state, restate, and justify, and explain, your question endlessly, rather than saying, "I would like to know the Truth about this Father," and shutting up and listening until you get the answer.

Continue.

READER: The mind is therefore confused, because only One-mindedness can be without confusion. A separated or divided mind must be confused.

RAJ: Now this could sound like an indictment on your very state of existence, but it is important to accept this as the Truth. A separated or divided mind must be confused. And since you are not awake, you must accept the fact that you are experiencing confusion. If you do not arrive at a point where you're able to consider that the truth, you will not recognize that there is a call for correction. And so this isn't an indictment on you. It's the provision of a bit of information which is essential to your acknowledging that something is missing from your experience. And that that lack needs to be fulfilled; it needs to be corrected. And until you recognize that, you won't call anything into question. You will constantly confirm and reconfirm and reconfirm your current definitions. And you will do your best to live your life under the terms of those definitions.

So, to recognize intellectually that everything you are experiencing is really an inadequate experience of Reality and that there is more to Reality than you are experiencing, and then becoming inquisitive to see the more that's there, to experience God in the lilacs, to experience the meaning of Love and Beauty and Truth that God is embodying and it looks like lilacs. That is what will open you up to a certain receptivity that can be filled, infilled by God, helping bring you back into your Right Mind.

So, a separated or divided mind must be confused. And because you are not awake you are confused, but not lost. And you could say you have been lost as long as you didn't know you were confused, because if you didn't know you were confused, you didn't know there was a call for correction. And you thought it's just the way everything was, and therefore you were stuck.

So this is good news—essential news. And it ties in with what we've discussed about the necessity to be able to discern between Truth and error, Truth and illusion. You see? You have to be able to discern the difference, make the distinction, because without the ability to make the distinction, you're stuck in whatever your current mutually-agreed-upon definitions are.

Okay. Continue.

ANOTHER SEEKER: May I ask a question?

RAJ: You may.

SEEKER: So, the discernment... first the question, "What's the lilac?" And then that discernment is that going along with what you used to say is acknowledging what's Real, and that's right there with the Atonement...

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: ...and then that's the first steps of moving into creativity, out of perception.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: The doorway.

RAJ: That is correct. It's also been called the "little willingness."

SEEKER: It's a batch file. You do the one thing and it all executes.

RAJ: Indeed.

AUDIENCE VOICE: _____

RAJ: Yes.

AUDIENCE VOICE: _____

RAJ: Okay. Go ahead Michael.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I caught you saying that you must learn the discernment between Truth and illusion.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And this is learned by constantly turning back to the Altar and asking the Father?

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: And that's how the discernment... that's really to me, that's not indicative of me becoming able to discern. It's constantly giving my will over to the Father. So, by continuing this practice on and on, you come to the point where you're able to discern.

RAJ: You come to a point where you could say you find yourself Knowing with the Father.

SEEKER: So it's like a joining.

RAJ: It is.

SEEKER: Eventually you begin joining with the Father so that it begins permeating the veil, so to speak.

RAJ: Exactly. And then, then the act of an independent one joining with the Father begins to fade and yield to the Father being all there is of you, and it's no longer a you joining with the Father, or a you being creative, or a you having achieved true creativity because that still suggests a separation.

SEEKER: It's more like a dissolving into.

RAJ: That is correct, although that does not constitute a loss of the experience of Individuality, and we will not go into that at this time. But there is Conscious Individuality that is not in any way separate from God.

Okay. Yes.

CHRIS: Douglas from Australia asks, we've been discussing sickness and the body in the TGP Forum and he wonders, could you help him deal with the discomfort in his mind he feels between knowing (or trying to know) sickness is not real and as a paramedic having to deal daily with the seeming reality of both sickness and the body?

RAJ: Ah. Yes. Well, your job, Douglas, is like mine. I am constantly, even at this moment, dealing with people who are experiencing sickness of the body or the mind, or suffering from mistakes or accidents, and so on. But the point is not that your confrontation with these dynamics makes them real, but that they provide you with the ongoing opportunity to cut through the presentation, the appearance, by virtue of your willingness to go within and to ask for the Father's point of view, "What is the divine Truth of this individual right now?" And you know what? You may find that as a paramedic, you will never end up with anyone needing to actually be delivered to a hospital because they will have been healed on the way.

Do not see these things as challenges, but rather ongoing opportunities for you to relinquish your definition and the generally-accepted definitions of such circumstances, so that you might be the agent for change that heals, where transformation, regeneration and redemption occur on the spot. In the meantime if transformation, regeneration and redemption do not occur instantaneously, you value and appreciate your having the opportunity to take every step possible, let us say, through physical means to allow for regeneration and healing to occur, whether that requires surgery, the setting of bones, or whatever. The point is do not fret yourself over the presentation that seems to say that Reality must be other-worldly and doesn't apply here.

I know that in spite of the confusion all of you are experiencing, it isn't true. It isn't real. It isn't a challenge to me. It's simply the ongoing opportunity to reflect back to you the Truth, because I have gone to the Father to ask of the Truth about you. And if you seem not to get it right away, I do not ask myself how I'm failing because you didn't see it instantaneously. And I hang in there with you as you adjust to the best of your ability and as quickly as you're able to allow yourself to let go of self-control and yield to the authority and omnipotence of the Father so you can let the Father be all there is of you. And you are not holding on to a right to a private perception of yourself and thus blinding yourself to your awakening, to your already existing and living perfection. Okay.

READER: A separated or divided mind must be confused. It is necessarily uncertain about what it is.

RAJ: Because it isn't anything at all. It's an imagination. It can't be certain of what it is because there ain't no such critter!

READER: It has to be in conflict because it is out of accord with itself. This makes its aspects strangers to each other, and this is the essence of the fear-prone condition, in which attack is always possible. You have every reason to feel afraid as you perceive yourself.

RAJ: Why? Because you're so horrible? No. Because you're not looking with the Father. You're looking at everything from a state of isolation. What is fearful is the dissonance you feel because of this totally unnatural adopted perspective that you are choosing to believe is true. And in feeling disconnected from the Father, from your essential capital "I" Integrity, you cannot help but feel uneasy. I've talked before about the fact that this uneasiness is your immovable, unchangeable Sanity letting you know you're off the beam. Why? Not so that you can feel guilty for it, but so that you can get back on the beam.

As you perceive yourself, or as you perceive anything by yourself, you cannot help but be experiencing it in a state of fear, because looking at it by yourself is not only unnatural, it's actually impossible. And the attempt to do the impossible has a feeling to it, and uncomfortable feeling. It tells you that you are doing something utterly unnatural that you cannot actually succeed at.

Continue.

READER: This is why you cannot escape from fear until you realize that you did not and could not create yourself.

RAJ: There you go. And therefore this you that is feeling afraid, or this you that seems to be bound by its definition, doesn't even exist. Now that's the bottom line of your healing, whatever the healing is that's needed. Because if you can't do it and it hasn't been done, then you are not bound.

And whatever you felt bound by can and must vanish without any process to it, without refining your soul and living a few more lifetimes inching your way up the spiritual ladder. There ain't no such you to go anywhere. That's the bottom line.

Continue.

READER: You can never make your misperceptions true, and your creation is beyond your own error. That is why you must eventually choose to heal the separation.

RAJ: Indeed. And it's really, if you think about what's being said and what we've been talking about, it's really very basic and very simple. When you're uncomfortable, you're on the wrong track. And it means, get back on the right track. It means you're trying to do something that's impossible. Stop wasting your time. That's all it means. And so, when you find yourself suffering, whether it's mild or whether it's severe, it simply means turn back toward the Altar. Inquire of God to know what the Truth is, rather than valuing and validating your own definitions, and the definitions that you have agreed to with everyone else.

Isn't it obvious that if this which is experiencing misperceptions, having its own private perspective, were real, were valid, it wouldn't have to gather around itself a bunch of others to get mutual agreement in order to secure the truth of what he's believing because there are numbers of others who agree.

The awakened Sonship does not indulge in mutual agreements with each other. You might say that the Sonship mutually agrees with the Father and yields to the Father. But as I've said, once yielding to the Father occurs, there's no longer any sense of separate identity, of one in agreement with God. And Unity, Oneness, is the Truth known that has no opposite, and therefore nothing experienced needing correction. And that can come in glimpses. And when it does, you have instantaneous healing. And Douglas, you can look forward to having the experience of instantaneous healing occur as you're driving that person to a hospital for care.

Continue.

READER: Right-mindedness is not to be confused with the knowing mind, because it is applicable only to right perception. You can be right-minded or wrong-minded, and even this is subject to degrees, clearly demonstrating that knowledge is not involved.

RAJ: Or you could say, Clearly demonstrating that Knowing with a capital "K" is not involved. I am not correcting what is here; I'm implementing an understanding of the meaning.

Continue.

READER: The term "right-mindedness" is properly used as the correction for "wrong-mindedness," and applies to the state of mind that induces accurate perception.

RAJ: Yes. You see right-mindedness is a stepping-stone to the direct Experience of Truth, but you have to be able to make the distinction between right-mindedness and wrong-mindedness. And that's why I encouraged you last week that when you see someone during your day who appears not to be well, don't just let it pass by and say, "Oh, poor dear, she needs to be home in bed." Or "Boy, I'm glad I'm not in her shoes today." Or whatever. Correct it! Recognize immediately that this is illegitimate. It's not the Truth. That's right-mindedness.

And then, ask to know what the Truth is. This doesn't mean that you have to stop in the middle of your activities and take a half hour to listen and wait for the answer and interrupt the flow of your day. But it means, don't let these little moments, these little opportunities to recognize the call for correction, don't miss those opportunities. And take advantage of them, because, as I've said, every time you do that and express that right-mindedness, it's the little bit of leaven that leavens the whole. And then as you proceed on with your activities, you can still be listening. Because, ultimately, what you want is not just right-mindedness.

The acknowledgement, "Well, that's illegitimate about her. I don't join in the idea that I'm being invited to join with. That's not the Truth about her." And then go on to do your things and say, "Father, I would like to experience the Truth about her." You see?

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Raj, is it appropriate also to ask for blessing for that one in travail?

RAJ: You may, of course.

SEEKER: Well, the reason I'm asking is I encounter, from time to time, accidents along the freeway. And I encountered one the other day that was pretty severe. In other words, the person was on the ground. And as I was approaching it, my thought was to ask for a blessing for whatever was transpiring then.

RAJ: Certainly. Yes. But I want you all to do more than that. I want you to invite the direct experience—experience within yourself—of what the Truth about that one is. I want you bringing everything that we're talking about and reading about here into the level of experience, and not just a surface acknowledgment of an idea of Truth.

You can say, "Father, please help them." But then say, "Father, please help me to have a direct Experience of the Truth about them." You see?

SEEKER: Does that mean that you would experience the pain and suffering also that they're going through? I mean you're asking...

RAJ: That's not the Truth.

SEEKER: Okay. That's not the Truth. Then what you're asking for is to experience their wholeness along with your own.

RAJ: Yes. You are asking for an Experience of Truth, with a capital "T." Not the truth of the human condition.

SEEKER: That's what I want to be clear about that.

RAJ: The human condition is an illusion.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: The accident, the injury, the suffering that appears to be going on there is an illusion. It's an illegitimate imposition on that Christ, that Divine One. And you want to know what the Truth is about that Divine One.

When you ask to know the Truth, you're never asking to know the truth about the human condition. "Well, what is the condition of my liver? What's the truth about the condition of..." "Well, you have a perforated liver." Well, how much help is that?

You don't want to know what the truth of a thing is according to the well-established mutually-agreed-upon definitions of everything. You don't really believe that that's what I've been talking about when I say ask to know what the Truth is here. Because we're talking about correcting illusion. We're talking about correcting the un-God-like evidences of a human condition, so that we might know the Truth of the Divine Condition and have a direct experience of it so that it is a Knowing of the Truth, because Truth known is the conscious experience of nothing present to be corrected. And this is the important part because I hear a lot of students of the Course and of metaphysics and so on saying the truth of the situation is that there's nothing needing to be corrected. And they leave it there without correction occurring!

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: When you ask for the Father to provide you with the direct Experience of the Truth about that one, your experience of it has the direct effect of causing transformation, regeneration and redemption to actually occur so that you are no longer presented with the evidence of anything needing correction, which means no more blood gushing out of a wound onto the ground, no more opening in the skin, perfect flawless form identifying the Presence of that individuality perfectly, flawlessly.

SEEKER: Then I'm understanding you're saying then [that] is healing in the manner in which you did when you were here 2,000 years ago. Now we will be doing the same.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: This is how it was happening.

RAJ: That is how it was happening. And it was not, therefore, by virtue of some personal authority I had different from any of you, or any of my disciples, or anyone in the communities we were in. It had to do with the fact that when you're not joining with the mutually-agreed-upon definitions of the crowd, of the neighborhood, of the community, of those in your synagogue, or your church, or your political group, and you are asking the Father what the Truth is, you are turning to the Altar, relying on something other than even your best knowledge.

The experience is provided because you're joining with the Father. And there's an experience to it that you call Knowing the Truth. Not something you do mechanically. "I'm going to the Truth for a while. And the Truth is God is all, and I am His Son, and therefore I must have been created perfect because He is perfect." And you go through a logical process in your mind. You could call that knowing the Truth. That's not what I'm talking about.

When you turn toward the Altar and you are willing to abandon your best judgments, your best definitions, when you're willing to dismember yourself, give up your membership in the group that is making the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and lean into the Father's point of view, then you will be infilled with the Father's point of view. And then you will find that you Know the Truth from the tips of your toes, from the bottom of the depths of your Being, and it's unalterable and unequivocal, and there's nothing unlike it. And that is when the transformation, regeneration, redemption occurs.

And remember that the word "redemption" means bringing back to its original form, or its original state. So redemption of a broken limb, redemption of an injury, redemption of a sick body is for it to be brought back into its original state of being the visibility and tangibility of your individuality. And your individuality is God expressed right there as you. And so, the transformation, regeneration and redemption is a way of describing God being glorified in slow motion, as though it were happening in time. Do you see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: Yes. What I'm hearing you say is that once we do this, we reach within, we turn to the Altar, we go into our hearts and ask with no pre-thought about anything, but ask, really ask, then we're convicted in that moment of the Truth we join...

RAJ: By the Truth. Yes.

SEEKER: And then we expect a miracle. I mean...

RAJ: No! The miracle is already done.

SEEKER: Well, okay, but to see the transformation...

RAJ: Forget about expecting a miracle. You can have the attitude of expecting a miracle in the recognition or willingness to see that if you'll turn toward the Altar, transformation, regeneration...

SEEKER: Oh. Okay.

RAJ: ...and redemption will occur.

SEEKER: We know that ahead of time.

RAJ: Right.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: You could say that expect an attitude of expecting a miracle is right-mindedness.

SEEKER: Oh. Okay. So being in that state already...

RAJ: Being in that state already means that there will be a willingness on your part to turn toward the Altar.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: And desire to have an Experience of Truth that is described as Knowing the Truth because the Truth has been revealed to you because you have desired to have the revelation. And you've desired to have the revelation and you will allow the revelation to occur because you are willing to abandon your allegiance to your best definitions and your pet theories, and as I've said, the pleasure of the sociability that you experience with everyone who's in agreement with the mutually-agreed-upon definitions. In other words, sometimes it causes you to have to let go of a circle of friends because there has to be a shift of allegiance from making other people happy to God.

SEEKER: I appreciate your emphasizing and taking time with this very important point.

RAJ: You are welcome. Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: To take this one step further, if we can... how literal at the human level will the miracle manifest if one person driving down the freeway sees an accident, asks for the Father, shuts up, asks to see it as the Father would have it... have us see it... wait for the answer. Could one expect to drive off the freeway, go to the hospital, and see the person whole? I'm...

RAJ: One might.

SEEKER: ...trying to...

RAJ: One might see the person actually sit up and stand up there beside the car in which they had the accident.

SEEKER: Does it take more than one person asking to see it to create the miracle?

RAJ: No. It does not.

SEEKER: If no one asks, does the human condition continue? I'm not trying to be provocative...

RAJ: No!

SEEKER: ...whatever...

RAJ: If no one realizes that there's a call for correction, if everyone thinks this is just the way life is and no one asks, then they will stay committed to their current definition. "This is just the way life is." That phrase is a definition. If you think this is just the way life is, you will be bound by that phrase, the meaning of those words. You're saying there's nothing more. Nothing more than this is possible.

SEEKER: But if it's the Father's Will that that be the situation just because...

RAJ: Absolutely not! Because, mind you, that the one who's sitting there saying, "There's nothing more to life than just this. This is just life."

SEEKER: Is this the victim, the person... There are no victims. Is this the individual who's in the accident?

RAJ: No, I am speaking of the person driving by. The person driving by says, "Uh, that's life." Or "Uh, that's death. That's just the way things are." If nobody asks, if nobody recognizes that this is a perception rather than a knowing... in other words that it's a misperception of Reality...

PAUL: I'm sorry. I lost it.

RAJ: If one doesn't recognize that this is a misperception of Reality, one won't ask to see more of what Reality truly is. And without asking for more, that one stays in his isolated separated frame of reference and he's bound by it. And unless the individual who was in the accident, who's lying on the ground, asks God himself, there won't be any change for him.

You need to ask for your Brothers. You need to ask to know the Truth about them for them. Not only because it will bless them, but because your caring enough to do that means that you're willing to abandon your separate independent point of view that keeps you asleep.

SEEKER: To take one step further for clarification...

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: ...if I am to go home and ask to see my partner as perfect and whole, and she is to also do that, if there's still a need for an operation because the doctors think it's needed, have we failed to ask or hear what the Father said? If we ask with a lot of willingness—not just a little—I mean just how healing can we... how much willingness do we need to create the suggestion you've been giving, you know. Who wouldn't do it?

AUDIENCE VOICE: _____

SEEKER: Sure.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Did you want to answer this?

RAJ: Is it a relevant addition to his question?

SEEKER: It is. It's something that happened to me. I watched a really violent movie last week, "American History." And there's a scene that when I was going to bed that night was replaying in my mind. It was disturbing to me. Even though you don't see the outcome in the film, the outcome of what happens to this person's head, but you know it's really awful. Right. And so, as I was laying there, it was disturbing me so much, and it felt like, you know, I was tuning in with you and we were talking about it. And I felt like you were showing me that if I was in... no, Raj, that... that I was talking to you, Raj. That if I was in that situation, and that even if that person's head had been, you know, destroyed by another person's foot right in front of me, that there was a way that I could be in that situation that was so... it was like his head was whole, whatever it looked like, and if I was just willing to be there with it, it like... it would all be different. And I felt like I had a completely different feeling inside of me, like it was completely restored. But it was the perception that was restored. It wasn't his head. You know. In other words, his head was Whole, Whole, Whole. You know?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And it was you saying I could get with that despite the whole, horrible drama that was unfolding where people were upset and hurting each other and violent with one another. And it gave me like this tremendous peace to be able to go to sleep.

And I don't know if I was just hearing what I wanted to hear, or if it was like a teaching, like a _____ kind of thing.

RAJ: Oh, it was definitely a teaching. Yes.

Now whatever the situation is, whether the situation seems to call for surgery, or whether it's a relationship difficulty, whatever it is, always keep in mind that the potential is for an instantaneous correction, an instantaneous healing, I mean in a fraction of a second.

SEEKER: Potential.

RAJ: This is the potential. Yes.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: This is the real, actual potential. You may never have come across somebody who has experienced an instantaneous healing, but they happen! And so it doesn't matter whether it's a broken bone, a tooth that's half gone, it doesn't matter. Instantaneously a correction can occur. Really. Down here where you are today, or where you think you are, right here in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven today, the potential is for all the Sons and Daughters of God that are here to have instantaneous breakthroughs into the conscious experience of their Divinity that will be experienced on the spot as redemption. And I don't mean spiritual redemption, or psychological redemption. I mean redemption of bones, redemption of teeth, redemption of hair, redemption of the bringing back to the spiritual original of what God is being there right where that one is.

Now, you ask, how long should you be willing to persist if you don't see instantaneous healing? Well, try persisting as long as I have. And what I mean by that is that's a very long time as you count time. But you know what? What better thing do you have to do?

Infinite patience brings immediate results. When there is no impatience present any longer, then what you are doing, you do because it's what you're Being. And you could say that the doing that took perseverance, you now do just because there's nothing else more important, nothing else you'd rather do than to be intent upon glorifying God in everything you see, and glorifying God by desiring to see God there, instead of what your well-developed definitions tell you are there. They're not just yours. Your scientists think in terms of mathematical equations, numbers, digits. And so their definition of form, which is really the substance of Spirit, reflect the sieve, the filter, that they're looking at It through and that has become part of your definition of things; that your body is matter; that everything you see is matter; that matter is subject to decay and change and that it is vulnerable and blah blah blah. And so you take them as authority and you agree with them. And that's part of your mutually-agreed-upon definition.

But if you're willing to look at every form and consider the possibility that its substance is pure energy and that the energy is Spirit—capital "S" Spirit, one of the definitions of God—that will open up the windows of Heaven to you because then you can become curious to know what it really is with an expectation that what you will discover will be wonderful. And it's easy to be willing to discover wonderful things. You don't resist discovering wonderful things. And the way I'm talking right now is right-mindedness. It doesn't accomplish the goal, but it sets you in the right direction and allows curiosity to be present, so that you can dare to abandon your acquired best definitions that have given you a feeling of security, and turn toward the Altar, the UNknown, what you're not sure of yet, so that you can ask to be infilled with what you don't know yet and have the experience, the direct Experience of Truth. And so you persist. You persist because that's the only way to wake up. That's the only way to come back into your Right Mind. That's the only way to undo the separation that you believe you accomplished, but never did.

ANOTHER SEEKER: To hear or see the Truth, know the Truth as the Father would have us in a specific situation, and have a willingness that's more than just a little willingness, and not confounding it by keep defining it and saying, "Father, this is the way it...", you know. But just continue with the prayer, to hold it. You holding the thought, "Let me see it as You would have me see it." By holding the fact...

RAJ: Now...

SEEKER: Be patient.

RAJ: ...let me just say this: Don't continue with that thought over and over and over. You've got to express the thought and shut up. And...

SEEKER: And listen forever.

RAJ: And listen. Yes.

SEEKER: But...

RAJ: And maybe occasionally renew the question but let there be longer periods of willing attentiveness to the answer.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Now there is one other aspect here. If you don't seem to have instantaneous healing, then be willing to hear from your Guidance that it's appropriate for the nearest approximation of transformation, regeneration, redemption to occur, which might involve surgery at this point. Because that's the closest within the mutually-agreed-upon definition of what everything is that everyone has been able to get to where there can be a manifestation of transformation, regeneration, redemption.

Now, if in the surgery, some part of the body is removed, redemption is still necessary.

SEEKER: And possible.

RAJ: Well, what's necessary must be possible. And so when awakening occurs, let me just put it this way, everything that might seem to have been taken away through processes that were lesser approximations of wholeness and completeness, or lesser attempts to arrive at healing through surgery or whatever, those things that were missing will be there, will be returned. The redemption of what identifies your Presence, your individuality perfectly, will be whole. The redemption will be complete. And so if there was a finger that was lost or a leg that was lost, it will be present. And you don't have to wait until you die to find them returned to you.

I was going to say, "My God! Be willing to expect a miracle!"

And that's what it... let your definition of miracle include that kind of embodiment of God's perfection in a moment, in an instant, and not as something that must take lifetimes to refine your soul to come back into the full experience of.

SEEKER: So the process of removal that allows life at the human level could be the miracle, even though that is not the way we would want to see it.

RAJ: That is correct. If you must read to connect with the Truth that will heal and your vision is so poor that you can't read, then get glasses and say thank you for the glasses that allow you to read so that you can read the Truth that will promote the transformation that will heal your eyes. Getting the glasses is not redemption but it allows for redemption to occur.

SEEKER: So turning to the Altar, asking to see it, and being at peace with the removal of surgery could be the Father's answer to my... Let me see it as you would have me see it. The peace. The level of peace.

RAJ: There's a statement: Divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need. The simple fact is that because you never left the Kingdom of Heaven and you never stopped being the Christ, you never stopped being the place where God is Presence-ing Himself, the Truth about you, your Wholeness, the Truth about you that you are loved, the Truth about you that you were never abandoned, remains the Truth, you might say, right in the middle of your dream.

And so, because it is the nature and function of your Being to fulfill itself perfectly, you will find the means within the dream for your needs to be met as you come back Home. And so, you say, "Father, I've asked to be infilled with the direct Experience of Your Presence in her or in him. And humanly speaking, there's a need that needs to be addressed because she's bleeding to death, or such-and-such a thing is keeping normal functions from occurring, and there is a need for correction at some level. I'm not seeing it in terms of instantaneous healing. Should we take steps, humanly speaking, to secure the ongoingness of her life so that, together, we can continue to ask and have the experience of complete redemption, which would mean the reappearance of what seems to be lost surgically?"

SEEKER: Normal functioning.

RAJ: Yes!

SEEKER: Without the reproduction _____.

RAJ: That's right.

SEEKER: Thank you very much.

RAJ: You are welcome.

ANOTHER SEEKER: A long time ago, Raj, you said to me when I was beginning to make my transformation to a practitioner of the healing arts, to be the transparency and not to take the responsibility. And so whenever I feel like I really want this to happen, I really want this healing to happen, I recognize it that it's me taking responsibility and that I need to let that go so that whatever truly should happen, in the Divine Sense, can take place.

RAJ: That's right because any intent you have that you become intense about becomes an opaqueness, a lack of transparency, that disallows for God's Love to flow through you because you wish to be the servant of the Father's Will. You cannot be willful about another's healing. You must be willing to allow it. And, in order for that to happen, you have to get out of the way as an ego having a want.

SEEKER: Stop it.

RAJ: Pardon?

SEEKER: It will stop it.

RAJ: Yes. Because, at the bottom line, what the ego wants is it wants to have healing at its hand. When you want it, you want it to be evident that you accomplished it.

SEEKER: The credit.

RAJ: Exactly. And that's where the opaqueness is. Okay.

READER: It is miracle-minded because it heals misperception, and this is indeed a miracle in view of how you perceive yourself.

RAJ: Right-mindedness is miracle-minded because it heals misperception. It heals misperception because its result is that you become infilled with the direct Experience of Truth and this is indeed a miracle in view of how you perceive yourself.

So, the interesting thing is that the correct perception of yourself at the moment is that there's no you to have a perception at all and that your assertion that you do exist as something capable of having perceptions of Reality is a pure illusion, a mistake, a confusion calling for correction. And so, at the bottom line, what we've been talking about today points to the need to open up to your Source so that that which really constitutes your Presence, which is God, might find room in your Conscious Experience of Being to be the illuminating Presence of your mind and reveal Himself in You as You, and thus open you up to the Experience of Reality, of the Kingdom of Heaven, of unalterable perfection, and cause you to wake up.

Mind you, in the process, in the experience of the Kingdom of Heaven that's currently being called the human experience rather than the Kingdom of Heaven, you will appear to be an agent for change, and your Brothers and Sisters will be healed. And you will find yourself healed. But the improvement of the human condition is not the goal. The improvement of the human condition is always the manifestation of God occurring demonstrating that God is with you as an experience of being Loved. And that experience of God loving you illuminates for you your Divinity again at an experiential level of Knowing, which transforms your mind and opens the door for more and more influx of the Conscious Experience of Truth.

And so, in a way, it's a self-fulfilling movement of awakening. And this is just the beginning of this section. There's more good stuff coming. But we will end here for today. Thank you.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 3 – THE INNOCENT PERCEPTION
Section – ERROR AND THE EGO
First Edition – p. 38 / Second Edition – p. 42

RAJ: Good afternoon and welcome to everyone who's joining us on the internet as well. And, again, today, if there are questions from the internet, some of them will be addressed.

Let's go right into the book. And actually we will probably only read the first paragraph and use it as a springboard. Would you do the honors?

READER: Perception always involves some misuse of mind, because it brings the mind into areas of uncertainty. The mind is very active. When it chooses to be separated it chooses to perceive. Until then it wills only to know. Afterwards it can only choose ambiguously, and the only way out of ambiguity is clear perception. The mind returns to its proper function only when it wills to know. This places it in the service of spirit, where perception is changed. The mind chooses to divide itself when it chooses to make its own levels. But it could not entirely separate itself from spirit, because it is from spirit that it derives its whole power to make or create. Even in miscreation the mind is affirming its Source, or it would merely cease to be. This is impossible, because the mind belongs to spirit which God created and which is therefore eternal. (T-#38/42)

[Editor's Note: The teal colored words in the above paragraph were not spoken by the reader. They are in the Second Edition, but not in the First Edition.]

RAJ: Perhaps the most important sentence in there says: "But it could not entirely separate itself from spirit, because it is from spirit that it derives its whole power to make or create." And let's be sure we understand the distinction between make and create.

Last week I suggested that the word "up" should be added to "make." "Make-up," to make-up something, an imagination. To make is what the mind does when it has separated itself from the Father and experiences, or seems to experience itself as independent, then it makes things. But the making doesn't constitute Creation. Now the point is that not a single one of you has ever stopped being the direct Expression of God.

Your apparent capacity to believe yourself to be independent, to be unrelated to God by virtue of being at the end of a chain of evolution that started with a big bang and all you are is the result of a joining of a sperm and an egg, that is a made-up view of yourselves. And everything you do on that basis constitutes a making of things, and as I said, does not constitute Creation at all.

Now, it is still the Son of God making things as opposed to the Son of God creating things. You have not become an ego. You have not become what you think you are. And any power you have to draw a breath as a human being separate from God is derived from the fact that at this very moment you are the Son of God, the direct Expression of God, God embodied. This is very important for you to understand because it's in this way that you can understand what I mean when I say you're having a dream on a grassy knoll in the Kingdom of Heaven. At this moment you are exactly as you were created by the Father. This is why an ego does not have to refine its soul to get back Home. You're already at Home. You're already the Son of God pretending you're not and believing the pretension. If that's clear to you, your awakening will be much simpler.

Even in miscreation, the mind is affirming its capital "S" Source. You see that? Right now, you are, no matter how you see yourself, affirming and being the Expression of God, but you're doing it unconsciously. And as a result of doing it unconsciously, you're goofing up all over the place. You are mis-creating, and you are misunderstanding Creation.

The mortal dream of existence is what you experience when you make of the Kingdom of Heaven something other than it is in your mind, and then believe and devote yourself to your belief. But it's still the Son of God confronted with and seeing the Kingdom of Heaven with all the power and all of the glory of your Divine Being active, but occurring unknown to you while you are devoted to your perception of it all. Period.

The experience is an uneasy experience. It is an unpleasant experience. It's an experience in which there are these things called sin, disease and death. "But, oh, you accept the challenge of trying to overcome them" instead of coming back Home where they don't exist at all because they were only ever imaginary.

It is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom. That statement only means something if you're in the mortal dream, the made-up concept of existence and the made-up sense of yourself as being separate because, divinely speaking, Creation is the undivided and inseparable manifestation of All That God Is, which includes you, and so Creation is the extension of you as well.

But if you have taken a stance of independence and you're choosing to see things the way you want to see them, then the infinite embodiment of What-You-Are/God-Is becomes something you stand in receipt of. The very Presence of your Being becomes something separate from you that can't become separate from you, and therefore, it can only be understood as God's Gift to you.

But, you know what? The way the ego works, the way being is experienced when you have claimed independence from the Father is that the Gift, all of Creation, is also seen as independent of the Father. Independent in this sense: The very scientific physical sense that the Universe has nothing to do with God at all. It's purely physical and started from a big bang. And everything about it is the natural evolution of matter and the way matter works. Now the Gift has become separated from the Giver. You see that?

Just as the one seeing the Gift separated from the Giver sees himself as separate from his Source, thinking that he is the source of himself and therefore has free will to be in whatever way he wishes without accountability to any other part of Creation, and it's called the capacity to be original and introduce something new into the human condition. And then, this supposed capacity to be so independent that one can be so original that something valuably new can be introduced into the human condition becomes a source of pride.

Now, when you conceive of yourself as self-created, as independent from God, as I said, it's an uneasy and uncomfortable experience. No one enjoys it and everyone does want to escape from it. Everyone wants to become free from suffering. And the manifestation of that independent stance is called dis-ease, lack of ease.

But when one accepts the independence as valid and finds himself experiencing dis-ease, lack of ease, discomfort, stress, and so on, and takes these on as a challenge to assert his authority or her authority as an independent authorizer and convinces himself or herself that in so doing, it gives him or her greater credibility so that it becomes a goal of great meaning and one makes commitment to quote "making his mark in the world," what he has made and therefore takes pleasure in the suffering experience and the overcoming of it, that's not dis-ease. That is sin. When one takes pleasure, finds gratification, finds meaning in the dream and the overcoming of it by independent means, that is sin.

And I'm going to be very frank with you. The fact that you're not awake means that you are all enjoying the challenge of bringing your own unique independent viewpoint to bear upon life so as to overcome these problems. You are in sin. And so, in this sense, the traditional church, the traditional religious teaching that says, “you are all sinners,” is true. But the way I have expressed it comes from another direction. It doesn’t mean you’re guilty and it has nothing to do with punishment. It has to do with engaging in an activity that is erroneous that you believe is valid and which you are taking pleasure in engaging with.

The healing of dis-ease and the healing of sin are different. Why? Because you don’t enjoy dis-ease. And many times dis-ease is healed without your having to have any conscious awareness of what the specific belief was that was manifest in the form of the disease. But sin can only be healed when the specific pleasure that you are taking in it is uncovered so that you may see what you are doing, and consciously abandon it. And until it is seen and consciously abandoned, sin will not spontaneously and miraculously disappear. This is very important to understand.

In a moment. [said to someone who wanted to ask a question]

Again, I am not using the word “sin” with the traditional connotations. All it is, is the commitment to an erroneous belief that is done with pleasure and satisfaction that strokes one’s ego, thereby apparently strengthening it. To know that this is what it is, means that you do not have to worry about retribution, about ultimate penalties, because you’re already experiencing ignorance of Home. You’re already experiencing ignorance of your connection with the Father. There’s no further penalty, and it’s not a penalty laid upon you. It’s just that if you’re not paying attention, you’re likely to stub your toe. So that’s all the extent... that is the extent of punishment, you might say, and it doesn’t come from any outside source, like the Father.

Understanding this will make it easier for you to awaken because you will not be existing in a state of fear of the Father’s wrath because you have sinned. You see? And so you do not need to be distracted by fear in the process of dealing with sin.

Yes, Michael?

SEEKER: You indicated that if you’re in... if you’re not awake, then you’re living in sin. Is it possible that say that you’re at the bottom of the barrel and you’re as surrendered as you can be at the bottom of the barrel, is it possible at that point to still not be awake but yet not be in sin because you’re not enjoying anything at that point. Like you don’t want any more.

RAJ: No, you see, it’s not the state of not enjoying anything at that point that undoes anything. It’s the state of not enjoying anything and giving up...

SEEKER: Right. Right.

RAJ: ...and yielding to the Father.

SEEKER: So what I'm getting from this then is that if you're not awake, there's still a part of you that's not fully surrendered.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: So that even though we've all been through the situation where we feel like we're totally surrendered, there is a part of us that's not totally surrendered. I mean I believe that each one of us has hit the bottom of the barrel at one time or another, but yet, here we are. We just .. I mean, we were at the bottom of the barrel but now we feel that we're not at the bottom of the barrel, even though, in reality, we're really nowhere.

RAJ: [laugh] That's correct. Yes. You will find that you come to the bottom of the barrel and you yield and there is transformation and there is regeneration. And that doesn't mean that you've risen in the barrel. And there is a level of peace and a level of respite from struggle. And then,...

SEEKER: That's seems to...

RAJ: ...the bottom of the barrel drops lower and you find that the barrel was a deeper barrel than you thought.

SEEKER: And you feel better about yourself.

RAJ: Mmm?

SEEKER: In other words, when I've hit the bottom of the barrel and then things seem to clear up,...

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: ...and then I feel better about it...

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: ...and then I don't feel as surrendered as I was before, because I feel like, "Oh, I've really made progress." And that kind of reinforces me not to surrender further. Do you see what I mean?

RAJ: That... Yes.

SEEKER: Because I feel better about myself.

RAJ: Yes. And it's natural to come to a new level of peace and self-appreciation in the yielding. But then subtler levels of willfulness, subtler levels of mutually-agreed-upon beliefs have to be uncovered. And so the bottom of the barrel drops further and you become, for lack of better words, more delicately attuned to the subtleties of the ego that you couldn't even perceive at what I will call grosser levels of ego structures.

And when the bottom drops out again, you think, "Oh boy, and here I had thought I had made so much progress, and evidently I haven't made any progress at all." But that is an illusion. You have made progress. And now there's further progress to be made, further yielding which now you are prepared to engage in, or better prepared to engage in, because you've already yielded up so much control and learned how valuable it has been not to be in control that there's less resistance to abandoning even subtler levels of control that you heretofore were unaware you were utilizing.

SEEKER: Each time the bottom of the barrel drops down a little bit further, does that mean that your suffering has to be turned up more or is it less or is that all dependent on how you handle it? In other words, what you choose as far as your way to perceive it?

RAJ: Well, suffering is always equal to the amount of resistance to God you are introducing into the picture.

SEEKER: So it's a real time thing? The more you resist, the more painful it feels. It's not like there's a...

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: It's not like two steps forward, one step back, or one step forward, two steps back. It all depends on what's going on...

RAJ: Of course.

SEEKER: ...in the moment. I see. Thank you.

RAJ: Now obviously if when you have claimed independence from the Father you have narrowed your focus of attention down because you've abandon the infinite view, every step of awakening, you could say, is going to involve greater, fuller, more glorious views, I'll say, of Reality. That part sounds very desirable to you. The part you may not be aware that you will want to avoid is the apparent responsibility to embrace it consciously because it appears to you that it requires you to be more conscientiously conscious than you've ever been before. And that terrible word "work" looms its head. "Oh, if this is awakening and it's natural to my being, it shouldn't seem like work!"

Well, what's natural to you does seem like work if you have managed to push the wholeness of you out of the picture and the wholeness of your capacity to be aware out of your experience in favor of a much smaller dimension of everything, and so it does look like more work. It does look like not having any free time to just let go and relax because there's so much to be conscious of. And there's a tendency to want to fall back into... mmmm... fuzziness.

Now, awakening is a process of learning. I mean you're going to be changed from the way you're experiencing yourselves. You're going to know things that you had forgotten. And in that sense you're going to re-learn them. You're going to reincorporate them into your Conscious Experience of Being. And in the reincorporating, you will seem to change. Learning means change.

Now those of you here at least have been engaged consciously in what you have called an awakening process and so you have been studying yourselves, you might say, you have been examining your motives. You have been examining your beliefs. You've been examining your concepts to see whether they're serving you. And then you have been willing to consider the possibility that none of your concepts and beliefs serve you well at all and therefore you are willing to reach beyond them to the Father for His Guidance.

And so, all the way along this apparent process of awakening, you have been faced with the correction of your ignorances by virtue of their being replaced with what I'm going to call clearer and clearer experiences of Truth. You, yourselves, privately, individually, I'm going to say, have looked for those places in you which call for correction, and if you have made any valid progress, you have been willing to uncover not only your beliefs that promote dis-ease, but the false pleasures in illusion that you have been committed to for the purpose of self-satisfying ego-building. And so you have all engaged in uncovering sin in yourselves.

If you have made progress, it is because you have allowed what you would have kept secret to be uncovered to you so that you might see it clearly, so that you might make the distinction between illusion and Truth so that in the clarity of the distinction, you can abandon your commitment to illusion. Right?

Okay. For the most part since we have been going through the Course and for the most part as most students of the Course have studied it, they have and you have, taken this as a course of study about voluntary individual growth as though the answer to all problems is an entirely private individual affair and that your doing that will be sufficient to change the world. And, as a result, you've ended up still being private, still being separate from the world. And yet, we've discussed the fact that you are the salvation of the world.

Today is sort of like a... when you take chemistry, you have three days a week of class work and then two days a week of lab work so today's a little bit of lab work. Okay.

We've talked about involvement, haven't we? We've talked about being present with and for your Brother. We've talked about turning back to the Altar so that you might be infilled with the Father's perspective which it's your Birthright to be experiencing because the Father's Mind is your Right Mind. And what? The fact that in order for what the Father reveals to you to have meaning will occur only when your desire to know the Truth is on your brother's behalf. You can't get the goodies from the Father for yourself privately! It's simple. It's un-reversible. It's unchangeable.

If you want the blessing of the Father's point of view, you've got to ask for it for someone else. You have to have an object of your affection and you're not a sufficient object of your affection. Because if you could be the sufficient object of your affection to experience the Father's Will and wake up, you could leave everybody behind and still be separate from everyone because there had been no caring, no extension of Love, no involvement, no unity. And I'll tell you, Unity with God does not mean an absence of Unity with your Brothers and Sisters. You can't have Unity with God and leave your Brothers and Sisters out. It's like talking about dry water. There ain't no such thing!

Now, when your Brother or Sister is ill, experiencing dis-ease, your turning toward the Altar, your refusal to accept what your conditionings cause your eyes to see in a Brother and your decision to turn toward the Altar to learn of God what the Truth is, not about that person's problem or their particular dis-ease, but the Truth about them as the Son or Daughter of God. As you do that, healing can occur.

But if that individual is suffering from sin, you're put in a new position, a different kind of position. When you turn to the Father to learn the Truth about them, the Truth about them will be the truth that will help them release their fascination with and devotion to the pleasure that they're getting out of indulging in believing an illusion. And you will have to be a teacher. You will have to uncover the sin. You will have to not keep your mouth shut and say, "I'll let them work it out for themselves." In effect, you're saying "Oh, I'll let them suffer a little longer, even though if I spoke up and uncovered it, it could lead to their instantaneous recovery, or at least more rapid recovery, because what they're keeping hidden from themselves will be brought out at least for them to accept or consciously reject again."

Awakening is a process of education. And so, your having an object of your affection, a Brother or a Sister, and your caring enough about them to turn toward the Altar to learn of God what is the Truth about them, will provide you with what it takes to be bold enough to not join in keeping the sin hidden, keeping the sin secret, keeping the pleasure, the false pleasure in something that is binding them still hidden, still covered up.

I'm constantly uncovering to you your illusions. And so it's obvious to you that illusions and devotions to illusions can be uncovered without insulting you, even though at times I know I bother you.

Now as I said as we've been going through the Course, we've been talking about these principles as they relate to you individually and your own inner work. But you exist in a Brotherhood and you're not an island. And your devotion to your Brother, your Love for him and your Love for your Sister requires that you involve yourself with courage. And when the Father reveals to you what needs to be uncovered and impulses you to engage with your Brother on behalf of his release, it will require you to abandon the inclination to let each one work out his salvation on his own and speak up and involve yourself. Involve yourself and cast your vote on behalf of Truth, which is the Truth about them that can and will undo their bondage to their devotion to the pleasure they think they're getting from, I'm going to say, independence and the further establishing of it.

Now, if you look at yourselves, if you look at yourselves honestly, you will be aware of all the arguments you have used to avoid looking at the Truth; all the excuses you have, all the justifications and the arguments you have employed. And so you must be practical enough to understand that you are going to meet resistance in the uncovering of that which another wishes to keep secret and who feels that the uncovering of the secret will jeopardize them, damage them, injure them, rather than release them. And you must be willing nevertheless to care enough to voice the Truth without indicting that one.

Now, another aspect of this that you must understand so that you're not surprised. I've spoken before about the crab barrel theory where a crab tries to crawl out of the crab barrel and the other crabs grab it back and that's why there don't need to be any covers on crab barrels. First of all, the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you abide by have arisen out of a mindset, an imagination, that you can be independent and that you are independent and therefore you are a person, private person with a boundary. And this person is flawed. And you all mutually agree between yourselves that you are flawed and you all mutually agree that you will use each other's flaws which you all know about to keep each other in line. Right? That's just the rule of the human condition.

Now, when you have been willing to abandon a personal sense of yourself, when you have been willing to say, "I desire to see things outside of the box of my personal sense of things. I intend to yield to the Father. I am willing to let the Father in." And you let that infilling occur, and you begin to have your illusions revealed to you, and you set them aside and you grow and you exercise less and less control, you move into, for lack of better words, an arena where the word "personal" doesn't apply to you because there's less and less boundary to it and it's more and more infinite, more and more all-inclusive.

And the simple fact is that by the time you arrive at a point where you're able to yield to God and feel the infilling of enlightenment and greater clarity to the point where you can distinguish between Truth and illusion and make the choice, and none of this activity in you has anything to do with personal authority or personal control, you are able then to know when to speak in an educational way to a Brother or Sister to uncover the secret that great pleasure is being taken in.

And when you do, the response is likely to be to call you back into a personal sense of yourself. In other words, they're likely say, "Well, that's just your opinion," belittling the clarity. But it isn't just belittling the clarity and the more infinite view. It is a ploy to re-engage you in a habit newly released by you of responding to everything from a personal level, a personal sense of yourself. And because your familiarity with those responses isn't far enough in the past for you to not be hooked by at all, it is possible for you to be hooked and then abandon the more infinite view in order to defend yourself.

Another response could be: "Well, you're just afraid. You're actually acting paranoid. You're seeing awful things everywhere." In other words: "You're crazy. Your mind is not functioning well. You are at fault for what you are seeing." And again, you see what it does? It calls a personal integrity into question. And if any of you have seen [the movie] "Back to the Future," you know that the main character could not resist responding unintelligently to the suggestion that he was a chicken.

The suggestion that you're an ego, when you are not coming from an ego place, is something that you are subject to reacting to because your habit of acting as an ego is not far enough in your past for you to be free of the knee-jerk response to a personal ego... a personal attack in the sense of re-igniting in you the dynamics of being an ego and the need to defend yourself.

Now, I could give you more examples, but it is important for you to understand that regardless of the variation in the examples, all of the varied things, because those who know you will use what they perceive to be your weaknesses, and they won't be the same for each person.

But the point is that when you have been willing to do the work to abandon your own egos, to not validate them, to not resist them, but to turn your attention undividedly to the Altar desiring to know of God what the Truth is and becoming undefended enough to let the Truth infill you, you become more stable. Your experience of peace is more grounded. Your feeling of invulnerability is more secure.

And because you are not bouncing off of your own ego reactions, it can then be a surprise when you extend Love to another to have them try to reengage you in your old habits of ego reactions. And you need to be practical enough to know that it's inevitable that that's going to happen, so that you're not surprised and not sidetracked from being able to be an agent for change because you can make the distinction between what is illusion and what is Truth.

And because you can make the choice for Truth and make commitment to it and voice it to your Brother or Sister, so that you say, "No, I will not join you in that. Yes, I will join you in this. Will you join me in the Truth about you? Will you bear with me long enough to hear what will release you from the suffering you're experiencing?"

Oh, but another ploy is, "Well, you're the one who's causing me my suffering." And of course what they mean is, "You're uncovering what I need to keep secret, because my keeping it secret is what keeps me safe." And they will say, "What you're doing is not love." And what you have to be clear about is that keeping silent and letting the secret remain covered, that is what is not love. But again, this means involvement; this means what the other person would call butting into their business. And it means when you are dealing with sin, meaning the pleasure in keeping a secret, the pleasure in engaging in and embodying a lie which you will not let anybody else see, but which you revel in doing.

It means that their accusative response pointing the finger at you and saying, "you're not being love and therefore you can't possibly be hearing God and this is all your ego," that when they do that, you'll take it. And you will stand there in the face of their distress without flinching and without abandoning the Truth that you know that they need to know so that their suffering can stop. And you teach them. And you say, "No, here is the Truth." You care enough to hang in there and re-educate, because that's the only thing that will correct sin. You see what I'm saying?

This is not a private work. Your clear correct perception or your clear correct experience of Truth can heal disease and death instantaneously as I did, but sin requires education. And education requires involvement. One-on-one involvement.

You must understand that in order for the private personal ego sense of itself to survive, it must defend itself against its non-existence being uncovered. And therefore, it will aggressively protect itself. And it will protect itself by unscrupulous means. It will not protect itself intelligently, reasonably, kindly, but always by unscrupulous means.

Now, am I saying this that you might know that you are faced with a deadly enemy, or at least is nothing less than malicious and therefore you ought to be afraid? No. Because it's still nothing. But you must understand the way it works so that you are unequivocal with it, because it will attack your integrity, either directly in your mind or out of the mouths of others, and cause you to doubt yourself because it's only when you doubt yourself that it can reign freely. It's purpose is to keep you from remembering Who You Are because when you remember Who You Are, it will cease to seem to be anything.

Now you must understand this, not so that you might see just how starkly the opposites are opposed to each other, because these are not opposites. It's Something and nothing! Those are not opposites. It's God and nothing. But you must understand that because the ego is imagined and is not real, it cannot gather anything to substantiate its existence that has substance. And it, therefore, operates with what? It operates with the discomfort, the bell that rings when the truck is backing up.

The warning bell, your innate Sanity that tells you that: "When you're not connected with the Father, you are in territory that you need to be alert to so you don't accept it as real and you get back Home as soon as possible because you're attempting to do something impossible."

It [the ego] takes that uneasiness and says: "It has nothing to do with your remembering Who You Are. It has to do with the condition of existence. And you know what? You have the capacity to overcome it by strengthening yourself and feeling your integrity and your personal power. And so I will help you enhance your sense of personal power in your privateness in order to overcome this uneasiness."

Which can't go away because it's your innate Sanity saying: "You're playing with impossibilities here. You are playing with what would cause you to not be fully conscious." And your innate Sanity provides you with the warning so that you might stop.

Okay. If you understand that this is the way the ego works, and that it succeeds only by making you feel personally vulnerable as a tiny personality. It will even try to convince you that all you are is a personality and that everything you're seeing is your creation. And if you're seeing something you don't like, it's your mis-creation, et cetera. And it undermines your capacity to see that there's an absolute difference between what is Real and what is illusory. So absolute that what is Real is the Only And All That There Is, and what is unreal is non-existent.

So when we're talking about glorifying God in everything you see, we're talking about something that's far from passive. Something that's far from private and uninvolved. Something where you call a spade a spade. Something where you don't mince words. And where the education, the loving persistent expression of what Truth is, is presented. And a clear-cut expression that, "this isn't true, this isn't appropriate, this does not serve you, this is illusion," gets voiced because it's part of the educational process of making the distinction. And it provides a requirement for the individual who wants to believe that anything goes and that there is no black and white, it provides them with the inability to believe that unchallenged.

The lie has to be challenged. I'm challenging the lie every time I speak with you. And the Course is challenging the lie in the world whenever anyone reads it. It says, "There is another way to look at this." And it's not just a point of view. It is not just the perspective of the author. There is a God. There are absolutes. And there is nothing else.

There is black and white, and white cancels out black so there's only white. But there's not fuzziness. There's not ambiguousness. And to the degree that you do not make the distinction between Truth and illusion, and protect Truth by proclaiming It out loud and loving your Brother enough to join in an educational process, you will be promoting ongoing nebulosity and you will not be glorifying God. You can't keep your mouth shut. And you must call a lie a lie and you must call the Truth true. And you must, if you're going to be an agent for change, and if you're going to be the salvation of the world, you must declare yourself declaring God.

And now I've brought you face to face with the dirty word "work!" I've brought you face to face with the fact that as you open up to more, it's going to seem like there is more responsibility, more to be conscious of. "God, do I have to be that alert? Do I have to be that conscious? Do I have to be so on the ball that [snap of the fingers] in the moment something happens, I can reflect God back? Don't I get a rest?" What you mean is, "Don't I get time to be fuzzy and unconscious?", as though being conscious and the presence as an active agent for change is not natural to you and is not easy for you.

Because it is natural for you, it is easy for you, but you've been practicing, let us say, that you can be conscious at warp speed, but you've been practicing traveling at only 5,000 miles an hour where you didn't have to pay as much attention and you could see the sights "at your leisure, Ohhhh." You see?

Warp speed is natural to you. And you will find that it's natural to you when you're willing to come out of the closet, when you're willing to get off the couch, out of your easy chair, out of your mentally fuzzy thinking and actually be conscious with God for yourself and your Brother so that none of capital "C" Creation escapes your notice. And so that the wholeness of you doesn't escape your notice.

You know what? You've got to stop giving rights to the human condition. You've got to stop giving rights to the human condition. "Ah, well, they're only human. You know, we're bound to have terrorists. You can't get rid of terrorists. Everybody has different points of view and there's always going to be terrorists." Bullshit! Stop being lackadaisical in your mind. Stop giving rights to the human condition.

The human condition is an illusion! It can't be given any rights because it doesn't exist. But to the degree that you're lazy and sloppy in your thinking and give it rights and you say, "Well, there's nothing you can do about that. Ah, you know what? The best thing to do is leave it alone, and it'll go away." No, it won't, because the ego is intent upon preserving itself and undermining and getting rid of that which will disclose its non-existence. Leave it alone and it will secure more and more ground by virtue of mutually-agreed-upon definitions of more and more people who are valuing their illusions.

And as long as it's going on over in the Middle East, or as long as it's going off some distance away from you, you can for a while say, "Just ignore it. It'll go away." But you know what? That's not the way the ego works. The ego is squeezing God out. Not successfully. But that is its motive because only in the absence of God can an illusory self seem to have any presence and existence. You see that?

You know what? Don't speak up and the human condition will expand until it's on your doorstep, in your face, aggressively undermining whatever peace you have been able to achieve by virtue of un-involvement because you were at a distance. And now you will be faced with the call that I've been giving you today, a call for correction that I've been giving you today. Not because there's a threat out there, but because you want to wake up. And you've said you want to wake up and you've said you want to be an agent for change. That you do want to glorify God. And you don't glorify

God passively by un-involvement and not magnifying the lie by pointing it out, uncovering it. It will arrive at your doorstep and then you will have to do what I'm saying today because it will be overwhelming. It will be in your face.

Now, I'm not suggesting that you're on the threshold of Armageddon. I'm not suggesting that you're on the threshold of a great war--inner or outer. I'm not describing anything any worse than is going on at this very instant. At this very instant you're not awake. You're the Sons and Daughters of God, whose Mind is your Right Mind. And the contents of that Infinite Mind are by Birthright yours, and you're not experiencing it. And you will not regain the experience of them through some private spiritual process of waking up.

Now I've said that the only thing the ego can't defend itself against is disregard. So, does that mean that as long as you disregard the ego, you can go along your merry way and everything will be hunky-dory? No, because you're not awake yet! Because there's something else to do besides not defend yourself against the ego by disregarding it. The something else is to want to wake up, to want to come back into your Sanity, to want your Right Mind which never abandoned you, but which you compartmentalized so that the majority of it was out of sight, so that It might be restored to you.

And what I've shared with you today will help you deal with the way the ego will attempt to distract you from your desire to come back into your Right Mind so that you won't be surprised and shocked that it's happening. And so that you won't be afraid of it when it's happens. As well as illuminating the fact that when your Brother or Sister is caught in the pleasure of an indulging in an illusion and wanting to keep that covered up, if you don't want the effects of what they're covering up to eventually encroach directly on you in your face, you'll uncover it with Love and with education. And you won't be afraid to say, "This is wrong," and, "This is right."

You know, you grew up. You were a child and you looked forward to the day you were twenty-one when you would be emancipated from your teachers and you would graduate into being independent. Not realizing that it wasn't independence at all but was a shift into a responsibility to be cooperative with the whole. Yielding to that which blesses the whole and that at no point was there the freedom to be like a wild cannonball careening without any order, or path, everywhere and anywhere it wanted to go with no intelligence to it whatsoever.

The belief was that when you got to be twenty-one, you wouldn't have to do any more learning. You would have learned enough to be able to function without any more information, directions, rules, crammed down your throat that you would have to abide by. And so it's very difficult for many so-called adults to adjust to the fact that society and circumstances, and so on, place requirements on them. And they have to change, if they haven't been willing to cooperate with the way things work. And, well, the fact is learning goes on. And as long as learning of Truth goes on, change occurs in you, and you grow and you become something new.

Your desire not to be told what to do or how things work, your desire to be free of having to cooperate with the way things work, fuels your resistance to telling other people the Truth, telling other people that there's need for change. That this works and this doesn't work, and therefore, you need to start doing what works. Being the Voice for Truth.

"Well, I grew up. I got away from home. I'm making a living. I'm supporting myself. I'm paying my way. I'm not leaning on anyone. No one has a right to tell me anything." Not true.

And once it dawns on you that it's your job to witness for your Brother and Sister, to be there with them and for them on their behalf, and that they're there for you, they're there with you for the same reason, when that becomes clear to you, you will stop being afraid to open up your mouth and say, "Stop this now. This works. Do that." As long as everyone thinks they have the right not to have to learn anything new and change, you will continue to have evidences of chaos and confusion in your relationships, in your country, and internationally.

I said a little earlier that you would have your chance to ask questions. I'm not going to, because I want what I've said to sit there undiluted by comments and where the questions might lead us. And next week, at the beginning, if you have questions relative to what I've said today, we will take time for that because, to tell you the truth, I hope you do have questions. I hope it moves you to the consideration of uncomfortable things, which will cause you to have questions that will be less fuzzy than you might otherwise have had, and because of their focus will lead to answers that will be even more illuminating.

Do you know how much I love you?

AUDIENCE: Yes! We love you too!

RAJ: I look forward to being with you next week.

Chapter 3 – THE INNOCENT PERCEPTION
Section – ERROR AND THE EGO
First Edition – p. 38 / Second Edition – p. 43*

RAJ: Okay. Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: Welcome. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the internet as well. I sort of gave everyone some homework last time. And, so, I will open it up to questions, arguments, whatever was prompted by our meaty discussion last week. I'm not surprised, Michael, that you have a question.

SEEKER: I want to thank you for Jim's healing. And not that I played a part in it, but I was surprised at some of the things I said to him.

RAJ: Heaven forbid that you played a part in it!

SEEKER: Oh, Heaven forbid! You know. But it was fun to watch as he got so irritated with what I was saying until he finally left the room because I couldn't agree with his dying. And so I just thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome. And I thank you for speaking up. I thank you for being involved.

There you go, Michael.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Good afternoon, Raj.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

SEEKER: It seems it's been a long time since we had a little talk. We talked last time about not keeping quiet when we see sin, in that we bring it to the attention of the other person, and which I guess you could say that that's rocking the boat because it flies in the face of mutually-agreed-upon concepts. There have been a couple... I have a couple of different positions that I work at...

RAJ: That must be uncomfortable.

SEEKER: Well, for a yoga teacher, it's not. But one of them was as a trainer at a local health club. And there was a head trainer there who I felt was totally coming from his ego in the way he was managing the staff there was not fostering growth, let's put it that way. What I'm trying to do here is I'm trying to get a feeling for what it's like to say "No." So what happened was, I said, "No," to this fellow over a point of... At first I would say, "I don't think that's going to work." Or "Maybe there's a better way to do that." And got no result. And then, when I felt that I was being held back, I basically said, "No!" and lost that particular position at that club.

The reason I bring it to a personal level is because what happened was... it wasn't like I turned to the Altar and said, "Father, how should I handle this situation?" It came from me spontaneously. It was like a spontaneous "No!" There wasn't even an instant of thought. It just welled up and got out before I could contain it, because, had I thought about it, I might have stifled it. The question that I have is, was that an instant of saying "No," or was that an ego dynamic?

RAJ: That was an instant of your standing in your integrity. The "No" was not calculated to have an effect.

SEEKER: I was surprised at myself afterwards, actually.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: I felt like I had lost it, you know what I mean, lost my cool.

RAJ: But you did not.

SEEKER: Okay, which brings the next point. This is a Course In Miracles card. You know they have these little cards that you pull out of the box. And this might also help to clear it up. It says, and this is in the Text on page 156, according to this card, it says:

It is not up to you to change your brother, but merely to accept him as he is.

Any attempt you make to correct a brother means that you believe correction by you is possible, and this can only be the arrogance of the ego.

So, even though we're not to page 156, this kind of can create, created... this is something I keep on my refrigerator, so this kind of created some confusion to me in when is saying "No" or calling to your Brother's attention the proper thing to do, and when is it arrogance of the ego which is kind of related to the last... what we just talked about.

RAJ: Your saying "No" to your superior was not arrogance. Again, it was a simple, spontaneous utterance of honesty from your integrity.

SEEKER: Where... what I mean...

RAJ: You were not correcting him. You were stating your position.

SEEKER: I see. That's true. Yeah. That was the feeling of it.

RAJ: Now, you are not to correct a Brother. I think that if you'll listen to the discussion last week, that nothing was said about correcting a Brother. You correct the belief. You correct the misunderstanding. You correct the ignorance through education. If you were to correct a Brother, it would mean that you would say that he was wrong, when it's the belief that's wrong; the illusion that is being taken as real. That process is wrong, but that which is engaging in the process is not wrong.

A child in 4th grade is learning mathematics and he makes a mistake on his paper. And his teacher says, "No. That's incorrect. That's wrong." That's not making the child wrong, but it is uncovering an error that needs to be corrected. And then the teacher says, "Here's how to do it correctly, so that you come up with the right answer," and provides education. If the teacher says, "Oh, Johnny you're no good at math, and you never will be," now the teacher has made Johnny wrong.

SEEKER: Thank you. I understand. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome. Remember that this section is called "Error and the Ego." They're inseparable, but they're totally separable from every one of you because you're not the error, you're not the mistake.

In a corporation amongst the officers and supervisors and so on, there can be a problem that's causing a blockage in the flow of the business. And the possibility is through ignorance that somebody says, "Ah, he's the problem," making a particular manager, himself, the problem, when it's not the manager, but a misapplication of principles. You see? You don't correct a Brother. It's never about correcting a Brother.

If you misunderstand the statement that you read on that card, you will be convinced that's it's a good idea to keep your mouth shut.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Well, shall I take this book back? This book is a correction. Should I have kept my mouth shut? Should Helen not have listened? Should it never have been published? No.

Correction is called for if you are ignorant of the fact that you are operating under ignorance. A wife is cooking in the kitchen. The cat walks into the kitchen. The wife is working at the stove and the cat sits down right behind her, tail neatly laid out where it will be obviously stepped upon when she moves. Should you keep your mouth shut? Enlightenment is needed. Awareness of the situation needs to occur. Do you not want to interfere for fear of telling the wife something, or doing something that the cat should do for itself? This isn't difficult. Correction is called for because none of you are awake. And the provision of correction of the belief, or the concept, or the mutually-agreed-upon definition that isn't serving you, needs to be uncovered because you care, because you don't want the cat to suffer from the wife's ignorance. You don't want the wife to have something to feel sorry for because she accidentally stepped on the cat's tail. And you have the overview that neither one of them has that can resolve the potential problem. That's Love.

The reason you turn toward the Altar and inquire to know what the Truth is, and inquire what is needed here that will effect the correction, means that you are turning to a place where the Truth may be known from a larger vantage point. And therefore, what you say to correct the situation or the potential harm will be able to be heard without suggesting that it's a stupid cat, or that the wife ought to be paying more attention than she is and not be so preoccupied with the boiling pasta. You see? The integrity of neither one of them needs to be called into question in the process of providing clarity that will spontaneously produce harmony.

Again, as we said last week, as we discuss these things, you need to pay attention to the resistance that arises in you to involving yourself in being the salvation of the world and protecting the Truth by declaring It, rather than remaining silent and allowing the illusion to persist longer, when it doesn't need to.

Why don't you want to open up your mouth? Why don't you want to be an agent for change?

SEEKER: Safety. Safety. We feel we put ourselves at risk. That's what I felt.

RAJ: Aha! So, it's a matter of wanting to save your ass.

SEEKER: Correct.

RAJ: That is the definition of sin. Because you don't have an ass to save—a private, personal one. But you believe you do, because you think you're separate. And you've got to protect the so-called integrity of this independent one.

And you do it with fervor. You do it with emotion. You have attachment [laughing] to your ass. [audience laughter] And that attachment to an illusion is sin. And so you must take a look at this.

SEEKER: So you're not trying to change us because we're changeless. You're just calling the illusion to our attention so that we have the opportunity to choose again.

RAJ: That's right. Like a teacher seeing Johnny gazing off in the distance through the window and she says, "Johnny!" She calls to get his attention back, not to say he's bad and not to say that what he's looking at is improper, but to bring his attention back to where he is.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome. Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: More on that Raj. My experience is a lot of times we fail to speak up is because we're irritated by what it is we're seeing, and if we speak up from that frame of reference, we know we're going to get a bigger load back of crap. So, viewing the discrepancy from a different vantage point, which is wanting to be helpful, is gonna mean everything. It's the dynamic of what we're looking... how we're looking. It's the lens through what we're looking at everything. Because if you've judged your Brother, you can't face him.

RAJ: That's right. Judgment has nothing to do with the correction that we're talking about.

SEEKER: Right. But, most people cannot view error without judging it.

RAJ: That is correct. But that doesn't mean that you should abandon recognizing error.

SEEKER: No. No. I understand that. I'm just saying...

RAJ: I'm just adding that.

SEEKER: Yeah, because I'm just saying the big problem we... most of us have from speaking up is because we're not aware that we're irritated.

RAJ: And often the reason you're irritated is because the error you see in them that they're getting away with is something you're not able to get away with and you're jealous. You are not really interested in correction. I'm not speaking of you...

SEEKER: Yeah, I understand.

RAJ: ...specifically. You want the same right, and what you're mad at is you can't get away with it and they can. So there are a whole lot of elements here.

SEEKER: A whole lot of dynamics to go with that.

RAJ: So, if you're willing to see a call for Love that presents itself as negative behavior as a call for Love, rather than a call for correction that really means punishment. The word "correction" has gotten a little bit distorted. There's a Department of Corrections, right? It's called jail. And so the word "correction" has a negative connotation as punishment. You see? And that's not what correction means as we're talking about it here. The call for Love is an illumination of a call for correction. Correction amounts to addressing the belief, the concept, the mutually-agreed-upon definition that is blocking one from experiencing What he truly divinely is. So you provide the information that corrects the misunderstanding, the ignorance.

SEEKER: You illuminate the Truth. Or you...

RAJ: Exactly. And it's called glorifying God. That's another way of describing it. So you must understand the practical aspect of glorifying God. It means opening up your mouth and expressing the Truth that shows the error to be erroneous, and therefore, not valuable, so that the one who was acting on the basis of error can easily say, "Well, I'm not going to do that any more!" And correction has occurred. You see?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Last summer when I was having trouble with my job, I couldn't stop speaking up. I just kept speaking up. It's interesting what you said, it's because of not... of being jealous that I couldn't get away with what he was doing? I'm confused.

RAJ: No. That is sometimes the case...

SEEKER: Oh.

RAJ: ...with people. Not in all cases.

SEEKER: Okay. Now I've forgotten my question. I was very angry when I said "No" to him.

RAJ: That was what you thought. You thought you were angry, but you were feeling the definiteness of the integrity of your Being, and it felt powerful. You made the assumption that anytime that you felt that powerful, it had to be the emotion of anger. And it wasn't.

SEEKER: Others gave me feedback that, "You shouldn't really do that. You shouldn't speak up. And you know, I just put up with it. And you know, what difference does it make?"

RAJ: Of course. The mutually-agreed-upon definition rule is: Don't rock the boat. Don't stand out.

SEEKER: But then that doesn't help correct the problem.

RAJ: Of course not!

SEEKER: It keeps it. It keeps it.

RAJ: Exactly!

SEEKER: And they're all still working there and nothing's changed, except for I'm happy. [laughing] [audience laugh]

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

ANOTHER SEEKER: My experience this last week, without... as I was called upon to go and meet a moment back east, the situation was a little uncomfortable, but then I meditated on that I'm there only to be helpful and to go with an attitude of Love. I was able to greet the person that I really didn't want to talk to and say some things that I felt needed to be said. And I'm hoping this made a difference, because it turned out I wasn't needed for what I thought I was going to be needed for. So, I'm asking if that, my experience this last week, was helpful?

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: You expressed intelligence. You expressed Love. You weren't mealy-mouthed. And you spoke about the Truth, instead of about someone's bad behavior and how bad that made them.

SEEKER: Thank you. I was trying to get a feel for this. Right. When you're on the firing line [laugh] and there wasn't too much time to get out a whole lot of stuff, I'm hoping I got the right points out that I felt in my heart needed to be made, and I know there's more to follow up.

RAJ: More than what you got out was a spirit of Brotherhood that you were embodying. And I'll tell you: That was more impactful than the specific words you said.

SEEKER: Excellent. Because it appeared to be an adversarial situation, like I was on one side of the fence, they were on the other, but I really didn't feel that from my vantage point.

RAJ: And that was actually no part of the interaction.

SEEKER: Thank you. I appreciate that.

RAJ: You are welcome.

SEEKER (previous): Just as a follow-up. When I was called on the carpet for my actions at the health club, one of the things that was really felt that I had done really inappropriately was that when I said "No," it was said in front of members, health club members. So it was like as an employee, you should do this all behind closed doors. And, you know, I can understand not wanting to make clients uncomfortable. But it wasn't like, I mean the moment...it was at the moment. In other words, the moment was there and it was spontaneous. So that it... And the owner said to me, "And you made a lot of people uncomfortable."

RAJ: Oh. Mmm hmmm.

SEEKER: So, I mean, you know, these other people, they didn't know what was going on. They didn't know what it was about. But it...

RAJ: That was a projection on the person's part who said, "You made everyone uncomfortable."

SEEKER: Right. Right.

RAJ: He was wanting to save his ass and not look bad. He didn't want his club to look bad. He didn't want to give the wrong impression, et cetera. But you see the nature of sin is that it wants to keep itself covered up, and so then it wants the correction to also be secret. You see?

SEEKER: Yeah. I get it.

RAJ: And that isn't the way correction works.

Yes.

CHRIS: There's a question on the internet from Carol that asks what love has to do with it since it's just another attraction for us like magnetism and gravity, and our brothers are so unlovable for the most part.

RAJ: Are so unlovable?

CHRIS: Yeah. For the most part.

RAJ: What does love have to do with replacing ignorance with understanding, illuminating an error to be an error rather than a Truth so that one doesn't labor under it any longer? It's love because it lifts another into a greater experience of harmony and out of the bondage of suffering that is the inevitable result of acting on the basis of ignorance.

Where's the love in telling the wife, "the cat's right behind you, don't step back"? It corrects an ignorance that she's experiencing at the moment that could lead to an uncomfortable situation for her and for the cat. And perhaps she might be carrying the hot pot of pasta to the sink when she steps on the cat's tail and everything goes onto the floor with greater injury.

The replacement of ignorance with fuller conscious awareness of the circumstances, the replacement of error with Truth is Love because it releases you from suffering. It's that simple.

SEEKER: May I just... one last comment. The interesting quality about that confrontation was that afterwards I walked up to the head trainer and I said, "I have nothing personal... (this is like a few days later after the tempers, or the emotion, cleared) I have nothing against you personally, and I hope now that this is behind us (because I'd already been relieved of the position) that we can be friends."

And the distinct quality about it is, you know how sometimes you get angry at someone and you feel the hate against them personally? That was never there. It was never against the individual. That was the real different quality that I noticed. So many times I've gotten angry at people and I hate that son of a gun. And that was never there. I could see their ignorance in operation. It was almost like he's a manager, but he doesn't have the experience. And I could feel that and know that ten years from now as he got the experience, he would look back on that and say, "You know that son of a gun was right about what he had said." And he looked at me and said, "I didn't think you liked me." It was like a revelation to him because he took it as a personal attack, as opposed to just what he had done. His actions weren't appropriate as a manager in bringing together people like you would bring a small child along in their learning type of thing. And that was the distinctive quality about it. And I just wanted to say that.

RAJ: Indeed. Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I suppose the more comfortable we are with ourselves and the more that we're able to love ourselves and others, that when we say "No" that it appears to be more graciously felt than clumsily where other people are kind of feeling, you know, like it's abrupt. I just think as we practice more and we become more into, you know, love and you know what I'm trying to say. We get better at it and more appropriate with each other where we don't shock each other RAJ: Yes, but you'll also find when you are turning to the Altar first, what you end up knowing to share comes with a feeling that will find its way into your expression as well, so that you won't be as awkward as you would be if you were personally privately trying to correct someone else based upon the force of your own made up integrity and righteousness. You see?

SEEKER: Mmm. Mmm hmmm.

RAJ: Now, just because you see a call for Love, just because you see something that calls for correction, does not mean you're the one to do the correcting. You can't make that assumption. You have to go within and ask.

There are times, for example, when I'm responding to someone's question and it's something that Paul and I have discussed earlier, or that I've discussed with others in great detail, and he knows there's a whole lot more I could say. And when I'm through, he'll say, "Aren't you going to say anything about this? Or aren't you going to take it there?" And I say, "No." Because what I've said has been enough for the person I'm speaking to. And to go further would be overwhelming. You see?

So you must ask first. You don't want to become a zealot who's going to go out and be the salvation of the world without knowing where and when and when not to speak. You see? Because then you do not become a force for good. You become a force for force. You see? And that will draw resistance. And that will not transform. If you see a call for Love, if you see a call for correction, if something happens that bothers you, you go within and you ask, "What is the Truth here?" And then you also ask, "Am I to participate in any way in the correction of this? Or is what you have shared with me all that I need to be involved in at this moment?" You see?

SEEKER: Is there a time when you feel connected and close with God that you already know when you come from that place without turning and asking God?

RAJ: No. There's never a time that you are close enough to God that you will feel what is right to do without feeling Him over your shoulder. I want that to be very clear. It is too easy to become disconnected again by assuming that now you've got the hang of it and you're so in tune with God that you don't have to be sure the connection has been made. Let me put it this way: Until you're awake... until you're awake, make sure the connection has been made with God, or with your Guide, or with the Holy Spirit, and that you are listening to what One of them is saying and that you are responding to what One of them is saying.

SEEKER: So would you suggest then in every situation, in every contact with another person?

RAJ: Oh, I would indeed! I would dearly love...

SEEKER: You would.

RAJ: ...to have every single one of you embrace that. Why wouldn't you? I mean...

SEEKER: Because we all seem like we'd be stalled! [laughing]

RAJ: Ahh. And there might be less arguments, less fights, less wars, less unpleasantness, less suffering because there would be more silence. That's a very good point. You might find yourself stalled. Yes. You might.

And if you let yourself be stalled, if you will give yourself permission to be stalled, then because it's uncomfortable to be in the not-knowing place, you will listen more attentively. "Well, I can't afford to be stalled too long. Everybody's waiting for an answer." A response is needed. And if you are going to refuse to respond from your habitual mindsets, then you're going to listen a lot more attentively and you will get the answer much more quickly.

The whole point of this is to break your isolation, to break out of the cocoon that has you separated from everyone else.

If, as I said yesterday, you have the choice to be in the world from that Place of Excellence in you, why wouldn't you do it? Why would you opt for less than excellence that you know is going to screw something up somewhere. Where's the payoff? There isn't any.

So adopt a new way of Being on Purpose. Adopt a new way of Being on Purpose [softly] without being on a purpose of your own. Being on Purpose means yielding to capital "P" Purpose, the Father's Will, the Will of that Place of Excellence in you that is the Father.

We're talking about the word "correction" and we're talking about the fact that when it comes to sin, the pleasure people take in being ignorant and overcoming it, and the commitment they have to it because of the ego satisfaction...

PAUL: I lost it.

RAJ: The correction, if correction does not mean punishment but education, means that correction will come as an expression of the ideas that correct the problem that are presented in an attractive way. Good education teaches something new, something before unknown, in a way that is interesting.

So rather than sitting here and telling all of you your faults, I sit here and tell you about your potentials, if you will, your capacities and what new directions will do for you in terms of enhancing your experience, and confirming for you the benefit of continuing to move in the new direction that benefits you more. You see?

But, in order to find interesting ways to express the new ideas, you have to care enough about the person you're educating to do it.

When a teacher says to Johnny, “you’re no good at math, you’ll never be any good at math,” all that teacher is doing is saying, “I have arrived at a point where I don’t know how to inspire you to embrace greater capacity than you’re currently letting be expressed by you.” You see? He’s lost his love for the expansion of this child’s experience. So that’s where the love is in it, Carol, and all of you. Did anyone else have a...

SEEKER (previous): You used an example last week of the crabs in the barrel. And you said what will happen is you’ll say to someone, “I offer you this correction.” And they say, or look at what you’re doing when you do this and they say, “Well, that’s just your opinion.” And I think that’s exactly how you said it too! “That’s just your opinion.” And what’s the response to something like that? Because it’s like arguing... I mean, do you just say, “Well, you know, you can say that if you like,” and just turn around and walk away. Or do you just look at them with love and compassion or... because that’s a common defense. I’ve heard that so many times. When people say, “Well, we all have our own realities.” You know something like that.

How do you respond to something like that? Because the person is just blocking. They’re just in denial. It’s obvious.

RAJ: You’re just going to have to listen on the spot for the answer to that...

SEEKER: Obviously.

RAJ: ...because, and that is not a cop-out on my part...

SEEKER: No, I understand.

RAJ: ...because what will specifically cut through that will have to be revealed on the spot. Because two days later, if that person makes that same remark, it’ll be a different response that will cut through. I’ll tell you one thing: You don’t bother getting offended. Yes.

CHRIS: There’s a question from Mark on the Forum, says, “I turn to the Altar and ask but I’m still afraid of being judged by others in the illusion when comes time to share what I’ve heard.”

RAJ: Indeed. And you know what? You’re simply going to have to screw up enough courage to go ahead and share it in order to find out that it’s not going to create great negative reaction. You know, when you listen for the Voice for Truth within, the Voice for Truth is also the Voice for Love. And so, it finds a way to express Truth that is nurturing. And even though you—because of your habit of limiting your self-expression—find yourself called upon to say something you would not otherwise normally give yourself the freedom to say, you must dare to go ahead and express it. And Love, for the most part, will prevail, so that you can find out that the axe will not fall, and that Love, for the most part, will prevail. And this will help you have more courage on successive occasions. But you must start to invest the trust in the Voice for Truth that you hear enough to voice it.

If you wish to play it safe, then voice it in circumstances where you feel less threat. Practice, let us say, in milder circumstances. But you must dare to risk the chance that there is a God. You must dare to risk the chance that it's the Voice for Truth and the Voice for Love and give it expression so that you may find that the world does not collapse around you.

When any of you are very resistant to what I'm saying, I never broadside you with the Truth. I finesse you gently, delicately. I curry your favor, you might say. Love curries your favor. Love curries, nurtures your friendship by not threatening you, but still managing to find a way to say what will provide clarity that you're needing.

So dare. Dare to risk the chance that Love will prevail. It's like you're afraid to jump in the lake because it might be cold. Well, jump in the lake. You'll survive. And the next time it won't be so hard to jump in the lake. And maybe it is cold, but you'll find out you survive and you can do it with a little bit more willingness each successive time. So the answer is risk the chance, Mark.

You don't think, in the beginning, that Paul felt like he might end up being the fool. You don't think that he might just be making it all up and the farce would be uncovered in front of everybody. But I didn't ask him to go in front of everybody at first. I just talked with Susan. And then I just talked with Susan and Paul's mother. And then with Susan and Paul's mother and a good friend who had a lot of curiosity questions. And then six months later, I said to him the words he will never forget: It is time to go public. Meaning let others, strangers ask questions. And so it was still one-on-one with more people.

And then there came a time when somebody said, "Can we have a Gathering? I have a bunch of friends who would love to get together and be able to ask questions." But by this time, the little thresholds of concern Paul had, and doubt and fear, had been passed over. Now it was a new threshold. It would be a group of strangers. But he had become solidly connected with me in this process and was able to stay with me.

And then, after a number of years while he had been doing this with his eyes closed, I said, "Okay, this time we're going to do it with your eyes open." And Paul was afraid that seeing everybody's faces, to be able to see whether they're scowling or smiling or nodding or shaking their heads would be a distraction that he had been free of. But he opened his eyes and got past that.

So Love will nurture your ability to hear and to share in gentle progressive steps. Remember that. All of this is done in an atmosphere of Love. And turning every situation to your advantage and the advantage of everyone you become involved with, but you must dare to risk the chance by exposing, you might say, this capacity that others might call craziness.

And of course the ego says, "to abandon your own authority, your own self-determination is irresponsible and crazy." And yet, the fact that you are not joined, the fact that you are experiencing an illusion of separation, is creating for you what's called the human condition, and that is hell.

Okay. Any of the hanging thoughts or questions about what we discussed last week?

SEEKER (previous): Just one other incident that I'm still unsure about. And if I let the moment pass, I'll keep thinking about it. So here goes. There was another instance where I was teaching a yoga class at an organization and I was teaching at a certain fee, X say. And then one of the other teachers asked me to substitute for her, so I said, "Sure." And she was teaching at a lower fee which I told her, "You know, you should charge more because you're worth it." So when she asked me to substitute, I charged for the lower fee. Say why? Okay. Then the owners of that organization came and said to me, "We'd like you to take over her class on a permanent basis." And I said, "Well, I would be glad to do that, but I will not teach it... take it for the lower fee. You have to pay the higher fee." And they said to me, "Well, why?" And I said, "Well, if you look around on the peninsula, I'm the only male yoga teacher. And the reason is because all the female yoga teachers have a partner that helps support their family. But this is not a working wage, so I couldn't take this class without doing a disservice to every yoga teacher who wants to make a living out of teaching yoga." Okay. So they said, "Well, we'll think about it and see if we can find it in the budget." And then they said, "Well, we're going to get somebody else to teach that class." Then my... so but I felt like I was coming from integrity. But then, I thought the students who were in that class, okay, who were... we were really developing relationship between us, because even when I teach yoga, I teach the Course. And I thought, "I am actually depriving them of the ability to be able to interrelate with someone who teaches the Course." And then I said, "Well maybe I'm making too big a thing out of this principle thing about money and that kind of thing." Do you see what I mean?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: So, so basically, when I did go to the Altar what I got back was, "Just keep your position and let the chips fall where they may." But yet, I had these second thoughts afterwards about severing relationship with all these students, who... when you're a teacher, you grow to love your students, as you know.

RAJ: When you say keep your position, what do you mean?

SEEKER: I mean as teaching this class, my position as, you know, continuing to teach that same...

RAJ: For what?

SEEKER: Pardon me?

RAJ: For the lower price?

SEEKER: For the lower price. Right. Exactly. Exactly. I mean I still go... teach there once a week. But, you know, it's like anything else, the more you practice, the better it is.

RAJ: So your Guidance said what you didn't expect: To do it for the lower price even though it violated a principle.

SEEKER: Ah, that's what I'm not sure of. The Guidance that I thought I got was that, "Just stick to where you're... to asking for the higher price and let the chips fall where they may." That's the feeling that I got from it, because, I thought, for the difference of a few dollars, why wouldn't they want to have me there? I mean I was drawing a large class.

RAJ: I understand. The simple fact is that all of the reasoning you went through was irrelevant. And when you asked and heard, that was what was relevant, whether you can explain why or not. Because you are where you belong and you are fitting where you fit into, what I'm going to call, the larger orderliness.

And if you had applied logic and reason to it and acted on the basis of that, you would not have been where you belonged. You must, all of you, start trusting your Guidance. Even if you mishear, you must practice, practice, practice, in order for the experience of hearing to be refined and clarified. And you were hearing correctly. I will confirm that to you.

Okay. Let's go to the book.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I wonder... I have a question...

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Still on the issue of last week.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: And specifically the one... the paragraph that we looked at. It seemed to relate. The thought was triggered by Michael's last comments. I was struck reading over that paragraph by the distinction made between perception and knowing. And it seems for all of the to-ing and fro-ing, the mental gymnastics gone through before one arrives at a response often is based upon perceptions.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: And is contrasted it seems to be essentially a passive, receptive process taking information in on an ego level, but not accessing the Source of Knowledge or Knowing which is a connection in a Loving Place. Seems to be based entirely differently.

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: And that seems to be a key distinction: whether we approach the conditions of this existence by observation and perception, or by a prayer of Knowing and Love.

RAJ: Well put. Well put. Yes.

SEEKER: I heard that first reaction, the spontaneous "No." I mean that was a "Yes." I heard "Yes" when he said "No." And a few times in life I can remember, my goodness, that "No" was really an affirmation and...

RAJ: Yes. The "No" is a protection of Truth...

SEEKER: Yes. [softly]

RAJ: ...when it is a disagreement with error. When you say "No" and it means that you are refusing to cooperate with an erroneous premise or an erroneous action, that "No" is a positive statement in favor of Truth. Yes.

And also the to-ing and fro-ing that you were talking... the intellectual argument and reasoning process is laborious. You'll find out just how laborious when you truly make commitment to listening because Guidance is simple and clear and doesn't go through an argumentative process. It's very often just "Yes." If you want to say "Why?" after the answer is given and if you want to argue it, you're welcome to do that, but it's not necessary because the knowing of Truth that provides a smooth, harmonious experience is all that's needed. The simple "Yes" or the simple "No" that provides the harmonious experience is all that's needed. You've all, to one degree or another, loved the vigorousness of the argument in arriving at the conclusion when you could be experiencing a whole lot of peace and time to smell the roses.

Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome. Okay, so in the 2nd edition we're on page 43, paragraph 6, and in the 1st edition it's page 38, the last paragraph. Correct?

AUDIENCE VOICE: Yes.

RAJ: Okay. If you will.

READER: The ability to perceive made the body possible, because you must perceive something and with something.

RAJ: Hmm. Anybody find that statement disturbing? The ability to perceive made the body possible.

ANOTHER SEEKER: It implies there's no body.

RAJ: Someone said, "It implies there's no body." Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I suppose the ability to perceive occurred when we chose the separation instead of the Oneness with our Guide, or with our Creator, and we needed something to replace it with, and so here came the body. The experience of perception, is that... am I perceiving that right? [laughter]

RAJ: Right here.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Well, I've been contemplating this paragraph and here's what I perceive about it. When I am perceiving, I'm thinking. And when I'm thinking, I'm in some form of judgment. And I've got to use something to establish a position and so I take what is the Life-force identified as me and densify it into an objective state, an object. I therefore need time and space in which to exist as an object and I have miscreated. I've used the body in an unnatural way. I have held it up as an object, instead of the flowing Presence of Love which involves no judgment. Something like that.

RAJ: Indeed. Indeed. Now, remember that "made" is the past tense of "make." And remember the difference between "making" and "creating." And I said that the word "up" needs to be added to the word "made." That which is "made" is "made-up." It's fantasy. But remember also that you cannot have a misperception—a made-up perception—of nothing. You can only have a misperception of something actual. Creation—what you call Creation—is the visibility and tangibility of God; the visibility that which renders God experienceable to God. Your body is the visibility and tangibility of your Individuality, that Place of Excellence in you, and so your body is Real. But perception made the body as something that exists independent of its Source. When you separate Creation from Its Source—God—you end up with a perception of Creation that you currently call the world and universe. You see what I'm saying?

AUDIENCE: [some assent]

ANOTHER SEEKER: Through our senses.

RAJ: Through your senses. Yes. And you think that your senses are also physical and separate from any divine Aspect or divine Presence or divine Actuality, instead of their being the Senses of Soul.

So the ability to perceive made a perception of the visibility and tangibility of your Individuality as an independent material form called a body possible. Was that too complex? And so the visibility and tangibility of your Individuality which is inviolable and eternal became to you, by virtue of the use of perception, something unlike what it truly is: a thing that is born and dies, a temporary residence, a temporary residence for your soul, an impediment to your soul that limits you for a brief period of time and that you must just suffer through to the best of your ability. You see?

It made the misperception of the visibility and tangibility of God possible as a distorted experience of it that you call a material body that is the result of physical evolution, separate and apart from God. This really means the ability to perceive made a misperception possible. It does not mean that it made an illusion of body possible that has no existence whatsoever. Is anyone confused about what I'm saying?

ANOTHER SEEKER: So let's say you're a little soul in a sense walking along with God, Creator, and you want to experience forgiveness. When you're in the state of Beingness with the collective, so to speak, you know all there is about forgiveness, but you are not actually able to sense it with feeling. And so, if you incarnate, you are actually able to, in a sense, come down to our perception of creation, maybe experience forgiveness with a partner and in doing so you have a better perception of what forgiveness is.

RAJ: No. No. There's no place to come down to. And there's no way for you to be a little soul. Soul has a capital "S" and it's Infinite and all of what Soul/God is constitutes your Soul.

Now, right now in the middle of an apparent human condition called the world and universe, you are already home. It is Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven that you're in the middle of and experiencing through a glass darkly, through a distorted pair of glasses. So there's no place for you to come down to or incarnate into. You're forever identified. God is forever identified and His Identification is called Creation, the visibility and tangibility that you're experiencing everywhere right now.

You're not a soul refining itself. You are Soul in the process of re-embracing what you already are as you're willing to let go of the idea, the belief, the mutually-agreed-upon definition that you are separate and tiny and can incarnate and be out of incarnation and jump back and forth. You see?

The ultimate is what is happening right now. You're already at your destination because you only left your destination, like Johnny in the schoolroom, by giving his attention someplace else and ignoring where he really is, while he's still there where he really is. Do you see what I'm saying? Waking up is a matter of bringing your attention back to where you really are, instead of dwelling in the land of imagination.

Now, you're not imagining that you have a body. I've said before that God unidentified, un-manifest God is non-existent God. You without manifestation would be non-existent. So that which identifies you is Real. That you call it a material body, that you call it an organism that's a result of a physical process is your misunderstanding of it, your misinterpretation of it. And your definition of it as being born and inevitably dying causes you, the Son of God, to behave as though you are a mortal who is going to live and die, and you slowly die yourself. You slowly behave as a dying one and you act it out. And you seem to have the evidence of it because you are the Son of God and you can create an illusion for yourself that seems quite real. But you know what happens? Once you or anyone else manages to go through the last act and take your last breath and you seem to disappear to everyone else, you find that you're still present.

SEEKER: So it's just the body you shake?

RAJ: And you find that you're still fully identified with form. And whatever you seem to die from, you will not have anymore. Whatever the disease, the injury, or whatever, will not be there and you'll realize, "Oh, my body wasn't physical at all. When I thought it was physical, it wasn't physical. I was behaving it as though it were. I was behaving it as though it were."

That's why healing can be instantaneous right now, because there's no physical process it has to go through in order to arrive at healing, because it's not physical at all right now. It's the visibility and tangibility of a Divine Idea in the Mind of God. And all of God's Ideas are experienceable to God as Real, visible, tangible. Real, but not physical, not material. Not self-created dust out of dust, atoms out of atoms, et cetera.

It's not an orderliness of an arrangement of physical form. It's a Divine Idea held together intact forever by the Mind that formed that Idea. And the Idea is as Eternal as Its Source.

SEEKER: Thank you for that clarity.

RAJ: You are welcome.

Now, the ability to perceive makes it possible for you to identify, or call, this tangibility of God a material body. You see? Perception makes that misperception possible.

And then you live on the basis of that misperception. Or should I say, you suffer and die under that misperception. And you call that normal and you say "okay" to it and you don't challenge it. Except, underneath, you know it's not true. And so you have people who study real hard and they become physicians and they do everything they can to overcome death. Why? Because they know it's an illegitimate imposition. They know it's not the Truth, but they don't turn to the Father to learn what the Truth is. They stay in their separated state of ignorance and to the best of their ability within the scope of ignorance, mind you, they attempt to overcome death. And you run to them when you feel that you're going to die to live. Why? Because you also haven't stopped being the direct Expression of God and you know that Life is eternal and that it needs to be challenged. And so you challenge it too by resisting it.

And the true resistance is, the true resistance that constitutes correction is when you abandon the ability to perceive by choosing no longer to see by yourself and you turn to God and you say, "What is the Truth here? I want to know the Real Truth, the Divinity of the thing, the Divinity of me, what You made me to be, what You are being me as at this moment." And then you open up to receive and when you receive, you say "Yes." You don't argue.

The ability to perceive made the misperception of that which identifies you possible. Because you must perceive something and with something. It's not possible to be conscious without having some thing to be conscious of. God moved. God is the Movement of Mind. God moved and God saw the Movement and God recognized Himself in the Movement. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the final essential point, Self-recognition, and the Word was God. So, in order to be conscious, you must be conscious of something, and you must recognize it for what it is.

Now, the great secret is that Mind Moving is an infinite Movement and it is an infinite Movement of Ideas. And that infinite Movement of Ideas is experienceable to the Mind that is Moving. And because Mind must be aware of something in order to be Mind, it has to have that something to be aware of, and then when it recognizes Itself as the Movement, there is what you would call Integrity, Wholeness, cohesiveness, Sanity, you might say.

Now, that experience that you attribute to God is what constitutes your very Presence because you are the Presence of God. God is Presence-ing Himself right where you are, right where each one of you is. And all that God is, is Presence-ed where you are.

And I do not want you to hold on to this image factually, but if you have a hologram and you take one little piece of the hologram, you'll find that the whole picture is in that little piece. So wherever there seem to be individualities that you might think were small, all of what God is being right there is right there in you. The reason I don't want you to hold on to that image is because you are limitless. You are the Presence of God in His Wholeness. It is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom, to withhold nothing of What He Is from you. So God's Experience is your Birthright, which you are in the process of re-awakening to, reawakening to.

Now, when any of you chose to look at things all by yourself, as I said last week, you separated yourself from your Source and it caused the only thing available to you to experience, which was the Kingdom of Heaven, to seem to be separated from Its Source. And you're left with a perception of the Kingdom of Heaven that's called a material world and universe.

And yet, you've got to be conscious because in this process you can't stop being the Divine One that You Are, the very Presence of God.

And so you say, "Oh, I have a brain. I have this hunk of meat in my head and that's how I'm conscious. And I have eyeballs with which to see things that have nothing to do with my mind. And I have a world to experience that has nothing to do with God and has nothing to do with me. But I will spend my life learning how to be in the middle of all of this that is unlike me and has nothing to do with me and find some level of safety and happiness." And so you're in a state of ignorance. You are in a constant denial of what is actually happening. And a redefinition of the Kingdom of Heaven and the way things work has occurred. And it's an uncomfortable experience.

And so, the inevitable result is for you to say, "I am this form. I am a series of synapses and a hunk of meat in my skull. And I am in a material world." And yet all you've managed to do is take all the fundamental elements of Reality and just translate them into interconnected separate things, instead of an inseparable Wholeness that's fully conscious of Its Wholeness and where no part of the Kingdom of Heaven is separate from you and separate from your conscious awareness. Where everything that is going on infinitely is available to you and experienced by you eternally with nothing escaping your attention. Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Yes. Thank you very much.

RAJ: You are welcome.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I just have a comment.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: When you were talking about the body, I believe that you gave us proof, or a good example, when you arose and you transfigured that we are to keep our body. And what I saw in the transfiguration is that the body is so symmetrical and so balanced, that it's Light.

RAJ: Indeed. You couldn't lose your body if you tried. So you don't keep it. You only keep what you can lose. [laughing] But for you to be unidentified is impossible. For you to be unidentifiable, for you to be unrecognizable to the Brotherhood is impossible. And even as a Body of Light, you will be uniquely recognizable.

And, remember Paul does not see it but I see the Body of Light that you are. All of you are already the Ultimate. Get this through your head. Let it sink in. All of you are already the Ultimate that you're working so hard to get back to. So you can stop working so hard at getting back to it and become less defended so that the experience of it can penetrate your very private world that you're trying so hard to maintain, because that's how you think you have integrity and that's how you can have respect and that's how you can be safe.

Yes. Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Many years ago I had like a vision of the Body of Light. And I won't go into it, but I just remember, and I've heard someone speak of the adamantine particles. These Light particles say something constantly. As I remember in my vision, they speak of the individuality. They say who that individuality is constantly. Every particle that makes up an individuality speaks of that individuality. So I just thought just this moment, well, if we were relinquishing our speaking through our perceptions, we would allow, literally, these particles of Light which are Living Love to speak for us and as us, which they already are doing constantly. Just a vision.

RAJ: Yes. You could say that they glorify you as you glorify God.

Ann, you had a question? Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: As you were saying, or answering his question a minute ago, I had this... I really got what you were saying on a very deep level. And it was almost overwhelming, because I had this realization that there is no such thing as alone. I really got that. There is no such thing as alone. And you were talking about Mind recognizing Itself.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And that's Integrity. And we do that. We do that when we listen for the Father. We do that when we look at each other. We do that... it's like everywhere we look there is nothing but God expressing Itself. And I think where the distortion came from is that we looked at what is identified as God and we thought that looks like a separate something. That looks like a little piece split off. And then how is that little piece going to survive? And how's that little piece going to, you know, make it on its own? [laugh] And all there is...

RAJ: Well, you see, the reason these things are seen as separate is because first you said, "But, Father, I'd rather see it myself."

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: "I'd rather see it my way!" And in that act of separation and denial of your Source, it caused all of Creation to seem to become separated from Its Source. And that's when, instead of an Infinite Unity, it became broken into an infinite separation of things, distinct and separate and apart from each other, that all must somehow manage to do the immensely, unnatural thing of cooperating with each other on the basis of agreements. And the natural harmony of the infinite Oneness of God's Self-Expression was lost. And any harmony that might be achieved through mutual agreements of separated parts would end up having to be something that was enforced, rather than utterly and absolutely and eternally natural.

SEEKER: Because they had to keep remembering the illusion.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: To keep making it real. To keep recreating it.

RAJ: To reinforce the illusion. Yes.

RAJ: Okay. Let us continue.

READER: That is why perception involves an exchange or translation, which knowledge does not need. The interpretative function of perception, a distorted form of creation, then permits you to interpret the body as yourself in an attempt to escape from the conflict you have induced.

RAJ: Yes. Now, this is also important. The interpretative function of perception is a distorted form of Creation, not a new Creation. It's always an altered experience of Creation Itself. When you have made something, rather than created, you have not made something new. It is always a distorted form of Creation that the interpretative function creates.

READER: Spirit, which knows, could not be reconciled with this loss of power, because it is incapable of darkness. This makes spirit almost inaccessible to the mind and entirely inaccessible to the body. Thereafter, spirit is perceived as a threat, because light abolishes darkness merely by showing you it is not there.

RAJ: Indeed.

READER: Truth will always overcome error in this way.

RAJ: How? By showing you it is not there. Not by having a war with it and causing it to knuckle under and yield. The battle is with something non-existent. And that's why you ask to know the Truth, because the Truth will disclose to you with utter clarity that what you were suffering from isn't real.

Continue.

READER: This cannot be an active process of correction because, as I have already emphasized, knowledge does not do anything.

RAJ: Indeed. And you could read that to say, "Oh, correction isn't an active process, so maybe I don't have to say anything about a problem I see." No. Knowledge does not do anything except reveal what is true. And then, because you Love your Brother, you don't withhold the clarity that you're experiencing. You tell the wife, "the cat's right behind you, don't step back," because you care about your Brother.

Continue.

READER: It can be perceived as an attacker, but it cannot attack.

RAJ: You understand that! [laugh] If Truth be told about something you want kept secret, then you will see Truth as an attacker, as something violating you because the thing you want to keep secret is something that you think keeps you safe.

Continue.

READER: What you perceive as its attack is your own vague recognition that knowledge can always be remembered, never having been destroyed.

RAJ: Yes. You might have been able to partition off one small part of the Infinite Mind that you Are and claim that that is all there is of you, but you can't get rid of the Infiniteness that you Are. And you know what? The reuniting of It in Its entirety is inevitable because the only thing that you are shielding yourself from the rest of the infinitude of you is an imagination. And imaginations aren't real. And they cannot reinforce themselves. And either sooner or later you will get tired of the effort of reinforcing them, or you will get tired of the stress of living in that unnatural state. Or the Infiniteness of You outside the boundary you've created will manage to penetrate enough times for you to have experienced sufficient enough illumination for you to realize that there's a different experience available to you that you really prefer to have, and you turn toward It and say, "I allow you, I invite you, to register with me." That's turning to the Altar.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Can you make... I oftentimes go through my day and I forget to stay in touch. So I just kind of... I have a standing invitation always to kind of come and say, "Yoo hoo!" [audience laugh] Is that... [laughing] does that work?

RAJ: It does.

SEEKER: It feels like it works,...

RAJ: It does indeed.

SEEKER: ...'cause I get lots of little "Yoo hoos." [audience laughter]

RAJ: Yes. Yes. It is a good practice. Yes.

SEEKER: Well, like on my current job, I feel like that is...it feels...it's a completely different job than I've ever had. It's almost like a playground for this, to learn this. It's not like I'm going and making a living. The whole thing is it's not that I'm going and making a living and it's where I'm learning something completely different in an experiential way.

RAJ: Where you are allowing glimpses of the Kingdom of Heaven to occur right there in your workspace.

SEEKER: Mmm hmmm. And I feel constant...

RAJ: Good. Does everyone hear that?

AUDIENCE: Mmm hmmm.

RAJ: Everyone thinks of Heaven as in the sweet bye-and-bye after you die. And no one is looking for it right now because "as in Heaven so on earth" makes it sound like they are two places. The delightful part of everything we're talking about is the fact that right here where you say "on earth" there is nothing present but the Kingdom of Heaven. Here and now is where you should be curious to experience glimpses that can grow into more persistent visions, or experiences, of Reality that ultimately will break down the resistance you have been maintaining to the experience of your Wholeness.

SEEKER: And effortlessly.

RAJ: Yes. Exactly. And that is a good point to end for today. Okay.

AUDIENCE: Thank you, Raj.

RAJ: You are welcome. You are welcome.

AUDIENCE VOICE: We are so blessed!

RAJ: And I look forward to being with you next week. Okay.

Chapter 3 – THE INNOCENT PERCEPTION
Section – ERROR AND THE EGO
And Section – BEYOND PERCEPTION
First Edition – p. 39 / Second Edition – p. 43

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome. And welcome to everyone who is also joining us on the internet. We will go right into the book. And if you will, what we do is each person reads a paragraph. Nobody has succeeded in reading a paragraph without my interrupting. But once you have finished the paragraph, then pass the microphone on to the next person.

READER: God and His creations remain in surety, and therefore know that no miscreation exists. Truth cannot deal with errors that you want. I was a man who remembered spirit and its knowledge. As a man I did not attempt to counteract error with knowledge, but to correct error from the bottom up.

RAJ: Okay. Ahh. It's like in the beginning, or everything in its original, unaltered state, even at this moment, remains in surety. God and His Creations even at this moment remain in surety and therefore know that no miscreation exists as a fact, even though you all seem to be suffering from miscreation.

Truth cannot deal with errors that you want. That's why your Good can't be inflicted upon you by those of us who are awake. What you want, you will seem to have. And you will seem to have it until you no longer want it. But as long as you want to pay attention to and value your own perceptions of the Kingdom of Heaven and as long as you want to call those perceptions a world and universe that started from a big bang and are purely physical, that is all you will see. It's very simple.

I was a man who remembered Spirit and Its Knowledge. And I'm going to play on the word "remembered" there. I was a man who re-membered Spirit, who re-joined Spirit, you might say, and Its Knowledge.

Well, we've been talking for some months now about re-membering, re-joining. In other words, abandoning the fascination you have with your concepts about what the Kingdom of Heaven is. The willingness to abandon mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you have with each other about what everything is and turning toward the Altar, giving your attention to that Place of Excellence in you. And without bringing to that Place your best ideas, your best judgments, your best concepts, you allow yourself to be innocent, empty of preconceptions, with a desire to know of God of the Place of Excellence in you, what Truth is. That's how you rejoin. And we've also talked about a very important next part to that which is being willing only to be present with your Brother, your Sister, your world from that Place of Excellence, free of your preconceptions, treasured ideas, beliefs, and so on.

As a man, I did not attempt to counteract error with knowledge. In other words, you are not to go into that quiet place within you, you are not to turn to the Altar so that you may gather information of God and then turn your back on the Altar again and go out and deal with the world with this wonderful new ammunition that you got from God that's going to help you independently cope with a separated sense of life more efficiently, more successfully.

Do not attempt to counteract error with knowledge. As a man, I did not attempt to counteract error with knowledge, but to correct error from the bottom up. Wonder what that means, "from the bottom up"? How many of you have read that sentence and thought, "Wonder what that means, 'from the bottom up'?" To do it from the bottom up means to abandon the initial mistake, to undo the initial mis-step. And the initial mis-step was to turn your back on God and say, "I'd rather do it myself. I'd rather decide what this means. I'd like to give this event an entirely different meaning from the one You're giving it, God." In other words, the initial mis-step was that you decided to think for yourself, perceive for yourself.

And the way you undo error from the bottom up is to stop thinking for yourself. To stop valuing your independence. To stop insulating yourself from and against God.

Continue.

SEEKER: May I ask a... ?

RAJ: Not yet.

READER: I demonstrated both the powerlessness of the body and the power of the mind.

RAJ: Okay. I demonstrated both the powerlessness of the body. I want you to understand that that statement doesn't mean I demonstrated the non-existence of the body. I demonstrated the powerlessness of the body and the power of the Mind. The body, that which all of you can see when you look at each other, that which all of you can see when you look at the orchid or the leaf or the table, is the visibility and tangibility of an idea—an Idea held in the Mind of God. Its substance is Spirit—Pure, Divine Energy. Now, you turn your back on God and say, “I’d rather see it myself” and this independent stance and the uneasy undercurrent, or the uncomfortable undercurrent, that accompanies the choice to see things in a way that is not natural to you, causes everything to be seen opposite to what it is. And so, instead of Spirit you see substance as matter, purely physical, a presence of something that has nothing to do with God. And so you see your body as material. You see it as an organism, instead of an incredible symphony of... that is actually musical, of the Energy that is Light.

And not only that. You endow it with personality, character. “My body is acting up. My body is making a fuss today. My body is not my friend today. It’s my enemy.” You characterize it. And in the characterization, you attribute to it power that it does not have.

Now, when you re-member, re-member Spirit, when you re-join Spirit, you discover and demonstrate the powerlessness of the body because you come back into your Right Mind into a True Perspective because the body never did have power. So in re-membering Spirit I demonstrated both the powerlessness of the body and the power of the Mind—the divinely mental nature of all existence. Because the simple fact is that you’re not observing everything from your body. You’re observing everything from your Mind. And your body is just one of the infinitude of things that you experience in your Mind. Your Mind is the ground of your existence. It is the infinite Place from which infinity is experienced.

Continue.

READER: By uniting my will with that of my Creator, I naturally remembered spirit and its real purpose.

RAJ: Indeed. Turning to the Altar, abandoning your will in favor of the Father’s Will constitutes a uniting, a re-uniting of that which never ever actually became separate. And you naturally will remember, when you do that, Spirit—not matter—and Its real purpose. And the real purpose of Spirit is to give recognizability to the Movement of Mind that is God Being All.

Continue.

READER: I cannot unite your will with God’s for you, but I can erase all misperceptions from your mind if you will bring it under my guidance.

RAJ: Mmmm, mmmm, mmmm. An insulting idea. Bring your mind under my Guidance. Subject yourself to something other than your own authority, your own so-called authority, your own imagined authority. But, even though it's only imagined, it is something you value so highly that it's insulting to you, to your ego sense of yourself to have to abandon it as the central point from which you exist.

It's hard enough to co-operate with your brother or your sister or your husband or your wife, but to have to do it in an ultimate sort of way with someone who knows the Truth more clearly than you, and therefore can appear to you to be superior to you, is not an easy thing to willingly embrace. And yet, since last June, that's all we've been talking about.

And you know what? It constitutes a new way of being. It constitutes your making a fundamental shift. When you're having good days, fundamental shifts don't seem so important. When you're having really awful days, and you're experiencing misery, a fundamental shift looks pretty good—at least, reasonable.

But what I keep bringing out, and what the Course has been bringing out, is that when you are not joined with the Father and you are looking at everything from an independent vantage point, you are suffering. You are suffering the loss of the Peace that comes from the experience of being One with everything universally. You experience the loss of infinite communion with the Brotherhood, with all the Sons and Daughters of God. Waking up will constitute the loss of loneliness.

"Oh, well, I can stand loneliness. You know, I mean, I have a few friends. Whatever degree of loneliness I'm experiencing isn't bothering me too much." [laughing] Well, then experience it. Truth cannot deal with errors that you want.

I'm telling you that there's an alternative and I'm telling you that it's an alternative worth reaching for. It's an alternative worth claiming because it's your Birthright. I cannot unite your will with God's for you, but I can erase all misperceptions from your mind if you will bring it under my Guidance. Aren't you glad I... it didn't say under the Guidance of all the awakened Brotherhood? [a little audience laugh] At least you only have to deal with me. And I won't penalize you if you argue with me. And if you delay, if you procrastinate, I will not chastise you, punish you. But as long as you continue to return to me and continue to inquire as to what the Truth is, and continue to want to have any misperceptions you're suffering from erased, our Brotherhood and camaraderie will accomplish that.

The simple answer to the problem is break the isolation. Abandon the independence. That is your whole problem. That is what creates what you call the human condition. And, so, do it with me, or do it with your Guide, because we're all awake. And we're all performing the same Function.

Continue.

READER: Only your misperceptions stand in your way.

RAJ: That's all! That's the only thing that stands in your way are your misperceptions. It's not that you're a bad person. It isn't that you've been so bad that you can't possibly be admitted back into the Kingdom of Heaven until you've been punished and suffered enough. The only thing that stands in your way are your misperceptions. Now you can't tell me that just because you're not little kids and that you're adults, that you have no curiosity to have a better perception of something, that you have no interest whatsoever in exploring and being open to surprises that benefit you.

Benefit you. That curiosity is still there with you. Don't defend yourself against the surprise of discovering Truth more clearly just because you'd rather be in charge yourself.

Continue.

READER: Without them your choice is certain. Sane perception induces sane choosing.

RAJ: Again, that sentence.

READER: Sane perception induces sane choosing.

RAJ: It's inevitable. It's natural. Sane perception, even though it's not Knowing, even though it's not Knowledge, induces sane choosing.

Continue.

READER: I cannot choose for you, but I can help you make your own right choice. "Many are called but few are chosen" should be, "All are called but few choose to listen."

RAJ: Yeah. Let's stop right there. All are called but few choose to listen. Listen is such an important word because listening breaks isolation, doesn't it? If you are listening, you're listening for something other than the idle chatter of your mind and your own ego. It's an invitation to hear something other than yourself. Such a simple thing. None of this at the bottom line is difficult. You already know how to listen. You just aren't choosing to. That's all.

Continue.

READER: Therefore, they do not choose right. The “chosen ones” are merely those who choose right sooner. Right minds can do this now, and they will find rest unto their souls. God knows you only in peace, and this is your reality.

RAJ: And this is your Reality already. This is your Reality. Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: May I?

RAJ: Yes, you may.

SEEKER: Miscreations, is that equal to misperception or mutually-agreed-upon concepts when it says, “miscreations”?

RAJ: Miscreation is like a nightmare. It’s a fantasy.

SEEKER: Right. But I’m going to use this phrase for clarification, “There’s no basis in matter.” In other words, I don’t look around and see a miscreation in the physical form, do I? It’s just all in my head. Is that... you see what I’m getting at?

RAJ: When it comes to disease, you are seeing miscreation in physical form.

SEEKER: I see.

RAJ: You are having a delusion. And others who see the same thing are joined in a mutual delusion of mutually-agreed-upon false definition.

And the moment that one realizes that the substance of all form is Spirit and is therefore not physical and not governed by what have become called the laws of matter, physics, instantaneous healing can occur because what you are seeing is not apparently held to a false structure of rules in your mind. And so what you had called physical form, when you have abandoned it to what it truly is, can shift form instantaneously, effortlessly, and comfortably, painlessly.

Continue.

SEEKER: Yes. If I said, “a weapon of mass destruction could be a miscreation,” is that going too far a field from the point that you’re trying to make? Do you see what I’m getting at? Or would you say there is such a thing as a miscreation that winds up being a weapon of mass destruction or a... you know.

RAJ: A weapon of mass destruction is nothing more than a form that everyone has mutually-agreed-upon to define as that which can bring great devastating harm to a great number of people or a great area of land. That’s still nothing more than an imagination, an idea that is being held by everyone, and by holding it, everyone is confirming it and holding it in place. And I will tell you this. Only those who are agreed to that definition will suffer from, shall I say, the detonation or the implementation of a weapon of mass destruction. You can have SARS, you can have whooping cough, you can have measles running through the community but those who have not bought into the definition and understand that they are...

PAUL: Just a moment.

RAJ: ...that they're not subject to such a belief structure because they're subject to the Laws of God and who have even a rudimentary concept of their body as being the substance which is Spirit rather than matter, they won't get SARS or whooping cough or measles. Even those who might seem to experience the first stages of any of those dis-eases, who "catch it" and recognize that they're buying into it and refuse to, will find those first few symptoms immediately or rapidly disappearing. You only suffer from the rules that you have agreed upon and that you're committed to because there's no matter at all. My point is that no matter how strong the belief is, matter has never been created and will never be created. It will always be Spirit biased by a misconception that you're committed to. And you who are committed to it will be the only one experiencing it that way or the group of you who have mutually agreed to that definition and the rules and structures of that definition. You see?

SEEKER: Yes. Another point of confusion for me is that last sentence where it says, "God sees you only in peace." The confusion is surely God can see our delusions, but is it that He doesn't choose to see us, or He doesn't recognize that as being our true nature? How is that?

RAJ: It's the fact that Truth cannot deal with errors that you want. God cannot force you to see the Truth when you want to see something else.

SEEKER: But He sees us kicking and screaming?

RAJ: God is not unaware that you are distressed, but He also knows that your distress is unreal and that your Being is not threatened in any way by your thrilling and frightening imaginations.

SEEKER: Like a parent seeing its child be upset about the bogeyman.

RAJ: Indeed. And like a father of a human child, God loves you with a nurturing Love that is sufficient to convey to you the true state of Peace that is yours. But if, like the child, you are so fascinated by the excitement of the terror that you're unwilling to let go of it, no matter how much comforting is provided, it won't be felt until you, like the child, withdraw your investment of energy in your reaction and your preoccupation with your imagination.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome. Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I was trying to think this through. You, as you move around, you know things. I'm trying to give up my definitions. Thursday on three different occasions I almost stepped in front of a car—I don't mean the same car—three times. So I was thinking, so what's up for me, even though I know that I and the car can be in the exact same spot at the same time and both of us go our ways, because we're both Spirit...

RAJ: Don't test that yet. [audience laughter]

SEEKER: That's probably a good idea. [laughing] But what's up now is trust, isn't it?

RAJ: Until you can sit at a counter or at a table and gently pass your hand through the table, don't step in front of a car.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Don't test a natural capacity that you have under stress of that sort. Discover the capacity in the simpleness of a test, you might say, that you engage in, in your dining room at your dining room table.

Continue.

SEEKER: Okay. So bottom line I guess what's up for me is am I really totally willing, which is what I want to be is to give up my definitions that the car can hurt me, or that this or that. That's what's up, right?

RAJ: No. How about what's up being just being more conscious.

SEEKER: I can't daydream so much?

RAJ: Being more present where you are.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Be present with the intersection. Be present with where the cars are in the parking lot so you're not surprised from lack of attention...

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: ...that there's a car bearing down upon you. You don't have to go for the Ultimate. Just be more conscious in every moment of your day.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You're welcome. I would like to continue for right now.

READER: Beyond Perception

I have said that the abilities you possess are only shadows of your real strength, and that perception, which is inherently judgmental, was introduced only after the separation. No one has been sure of anything since.

RAJ: Yes. Now perception is what happens when you give an evaluation to an event in the Kingdom of Heaven, when you describe it in your own words and those words do not reflect what the Movement of God is there.

You're at work. A fellow employee walks by calmly. His whole stance conveys that he's not ill at ease, while everyone else is disturbed about some event that has occurred within the office politics, we'll say. So, here we have a Christ who has walked past. And you say, "I never have liked that guy. [an audience laugh] Look at him! Swaggering! Swaggering his peace. Showing how uninvolved he is. I really don't like that guy."

You see? That's a perception of a Christ, an unmoved Christ who's in his peace. And I'm going to say, for this example, that he knows better than to get upset. And so he's staying in his peace so that he can more effectively deal with what everyone else is reacting to.

Someone else seems always to do the right thing and is always kind, a good person, and those around him think he's flaunting his goodness and they can't stand him. You see my point? A perception is a description you apply to something in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven that doesn't illuminate the Truth that it's something or someone in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So it illuminates your misperception, really.

RAJ: What does?

SEEKER: It shows you your misperception. Well, it doesn't show it to you, but it demonstrates your misperception.

RAJ: It demonstrates that you are perceiving, rather than Knowing. That you are seeing what you choose to believe, rather than having the direct Experience of What Is Really Divinely Going On.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: And so in the sense, perception means misperception.

Continue.

READER: I have also made it clear that the resurrection was the means for the return to knowledge, which was accomplished by the union of my will with the Father's.

RAJ: And here, Knowledge, as I've used the word, means the same thing as Knowing, with a capital "K." Because when you have abandoned self-will to unite with the Will of the Father by desiring to know of the Father what Truth is, then you have available to you the Experience of Knowing the Truth, not having a perception of the Truth, but Knowing it from the tips of your toes, from the ends of the Universe.

Continue.

READER: We can now establish a distinction that will clarify some of our subsequent statements.

READER: Since the separation, the words "create" and "make" have become confused. When you make something, you do so out of a specific sense of lack or need. Anything made for a specific purpose has no true generalizability. When you make something to fill a perceived lack, you are tacitly implying that you believe in separation.

RAJ: Because, of course, when you're joined with the Father, it's impossible to experience anything such as lack.

READER: The ego has invented many ingenious thought systems for this purpose. None of them is creative. Inventiveness is wasted effort even in its most ingenious form. The highly specific nature of invention is not worthy of the abstract creativity of God's creations.

RAJ: Now, just as a little tidbit of information. When you turned away from the Father, when you turned away from the Altar and you became preoccupied with the form, the Infinite Form of Creation but minus the Father's Perspective, and form seemed to be transformed from Spirit into matter and Eternity seemed to be transformed into time and space, you found yourself apparently on the Earth with a moon orbiting around it and other planets orbiting around your sun. And all of this from God's Perspective, from a True Perspective, is simply part of the Infinitude of You. But, having turned away from the Altar and Spirit having been transformed into matter and Eternity into time and space, your Infinitude seemed to be separate from you—all physical objects.

And so, ingenious inventiveness had to be developed to find a way to get to the moon. And, additionally, in order to move yourself through space, you had to employ something called force, rocket engines, but nevertheless force, enough force to be able to overcome the gravity that holds you on the Earth. When, truly speaking, if you hadn't turned from the Altar and Spirit had not been turned into matter apparently and Eternity had not been changed into time and space, all you would have to do would be to shift your attention from Earth to moon and you would be there because it's all in You. Earth, moon, planets, stars, galaxies are all resident in the Mind that you are, because Mind is the ground of your Being. The body is not the ground of your Being. You are observing everything with your Mind, even now while you think you are viewing it from your body.

Do you see what I'm getting at? The minute Spirit was translated into matter, you all became subject to what you subsequently decided were the laws of matter which you call physics and call a science. But at this moment none of you are bound by those laws, because those laws are imaginary. And force is not needed to get from here to there, whether it's from home to work or from Earth to the moon. I bring this out so that you will not give as much credibility to the laws of physics, and so that you might come to understand the Power of Mind which involves no force whatsoever. It takes no energy to shift your attention from one idea to another, does it? Likewise, it takes no energy or force to be present, intimately present with the surface of the moon, and then instantaneously present with the surface of the Earth. The only thing that has to shift is attention—not matter.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Right now, in theatres, there's been a real concentration of movies around things like, you know, like "Spiderman," supernatural powers. "The Hulk" is coming out. "Matrix" which shows Neo as not being bound by physical laws any more. Is this in the human psyche? Is there a deep knowing of what...

RAJ: Well, of course there is, but it's not deep in the human psyche, because human is only a definition that has been given to the Divine One that is a Christ. So, deep within you—the only one there is of you—you know the Truth.

SEEKER: And so that's the fascination.

RAJ: And the disowned part of you is called the Holy Spirit, which is always taking every opportunity It can to turn your current limited perception into a better perception and thus turning every situation to your advantage. And so, yes. You're going to find more of these movies and more events occurring that will trigger the remembering, because the remembering is bringing forth the triggers.

SEEKER: So, it becomes a spiral in momentum. As the memories bring about the triggers, the triggers bring about more memory, et cetera.

RAJ: Indeed. It's Self-affirming. It's Self-affirming, with a capital "S." Yes. None of it is magic at all. And none of it is supernatural. It's just the Truth registering a little bit more openly. In a way you could say that you're in a time when closet Christs are beginning to come out of the closet. Discomfort with What One Truly Is, is not as strong as it was. And a great many are finding the courage to embrace what they deeply know from what they deeply are but have kept hidden from themselves.

And, as I've been saying for the last few weeks, the call here is for those of you who are aware of this to make a choice for glorifying God by embodying God in the world, in words and in deeds. I'm saying, "Come out of the closet! Declare Yourself." Okay.

READER: Knowing, as we have already observed, does not lead to doing.

RAJ: And why? Because Knowing is the awareness that everything is already done. Not done in the past. When you Know What God Is Being—and I'm using the word "Being" as a verb—when one Knows as a direct Experience What God Is Being, one Knows that there is nothing needing to be done to It. And if there's anything needing to be done, it is in this sense that you stay on the leading edge of the wave of the Movement of Creation so that as the quote "Behold, I make all things new" unquote continues eternally, you are present for the fullness of What God Is Being as the Knowing of it, so that the Experience of Knowing is ever fresh.

In this sense, Knowledge can never be applied to the past. Knowledge cannot be acquired and saved. Knowledge is the direct Now Experience of the Movement that God Is Being and that you are inseparable from.

Continue.

READER: The confusion between your real creation and what you have made of yourself is so profound that it has become literally impossible for you to know anything.

RAJ: And what makes it confusing is the vehemence with which you are committed to what you have made, and your unwillingness to disown it, your unwillingness to abandon your maker-hood, the unwillingness to abandon the credit you think you deserve and have gotten for the skill with which you made whatever was made. It's a self-love that stands in the way. And it is a love of a self that has existence only in your imagination.

Continue.

READER: Knowledge is always stable, and it is quite evident that you are not.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: Nevertheless, you are perfectly stable as God created you.

RAJ: Nevertheless, you are perfectly stable as God created you. In other words, you recognize that you are experiencing instability, but it hasn't changed What You Truly Are. Your belief hasn't changed what God created right there and is Being right there where you are. Therefore, in spite of the instability you're experiencing, you are perfectly stable as God Created You, or as God Is Being You at this instant.

Continue.

READER: In this sense, when your behavior is unstable, you are disagreeing with God's Idea of your creation.

RAJ: Continue.

READER: You can do this if you choose, but you would hardly want to do it if you were in your right mind.

RAJ: Yes. Truth cannot deal with errors that you want. So, if you want an error, you can do so if you choose. You have complete permission. But you would hardly want to do it if you were in your Right Mind. "Oh, Daddy, won't you please make me do it? Won't you kick my butt and bring me into line?" No. No. Each of you has to choose for your Sanity yourself.

Your insanity hasn't altered the Truth about you in any way. But you've chosen to be willful, and you have to abandon the willfulness yourself. It's simple. Unfortunately it means you can't be enticed back. You can't be coerced. You can be invited, but manipulation... no one of us who is awake will [laughing] attempt to manipulate your mind and coerce you because if we do that, your egos will recognize the coercion and will turn the dynamic into its gain. And it will say, "Okay, I'll take ten steps in this direction, but not without making a bargain with you, or not without holding you responsible for any distress I might experience on the way." And so there's no willingness there. It just emphasizes the game-playing and further establishes the ego dynamic.

Nevertheless, if you want to be committed to an illusion, do it. Do it. Sure. But you would hardly want to do it if you were in your Right Mind.

Yes?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Can you help me to better distinguish when I'm not listening? Is it just the experience of that subtle loss of peace?

RAJ: Ai! [laughing] Yes. Subtle and not so subtle.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: But you can put a note on your refrigerator, or around the house, that just says, "Is it I or We?"

SEEKER: Can you explain that?

RAJ: Meaning at the moment that you look at the note that says, "Is it I or We?", it will cause you to question whether or not at that moment you're engaged in whatever you're doing by yourself or in communion with your Guide or the Holy Spirit. Is what is happening a joint activity, whether you're vacuuming or whether you're driving the car, or are you apparently doing it all by yourself at the moment? That will tell you right away and will serve to give you a reminder throughout the day to remember to do it with your Guide.

SEEKER: Is it just remembering to ask?

RAJ: Is what just remembering to ask?

SEEKER: Knowing that you're actually listening. Is there an experience of it? Or is it just the fact that you say, "Okay, I'm willing to do it together"?

RAJ: Well, let's put it this way. If you're listening and not hearing, the listening isn't fulfilled. If you are wanting not to be alone and you are reaching out to the Holy Spirit or to your Guide or to Me, and you're not feeling the presence of anything but your everyday experience of yourself, then listening isn't fulfilled yet. When it's fulfilled, you know you're not alone, whether you're vacuuming or not. And you pay attention. You find that your movement is led, how you move back and forth. It could almost become a dance to you because you're not doing it alone. You are letting your Guide be involved so that what you are doing is altered from the way you do it all by yourself. And there is a feeling of camaraderie, a Conscious Experience of Someone being present with you. So make the little signs, "Is it I or We?", just to remind you to join if you're not joined.

Listening... be careful that you don't listen... you're doing the vacuuming and you're listening, you know, so that your attention is not just on what you're doing but open to something else, and just continue to do your vacuuming. You want to listen and hear, listen and feel the response. And then stay in touch so that the connection is ongoing.

SEEKER: I'm sure I've felt that before, but I think I want to get a little bit more grounded in knowing the difference, knowing for sure when it is that I'm experiencing and when I'm wondering. [laugh]

RAJ: Well, when you feel Loved, when you are having an Experience of Being Loved, you know you're not alone. If you're not experiencing that right now, then joining is not occurring right now. You know the difference. Just be really honest with yourself.

SEEKER: Okay. So if I'm not hearing, just persist. [laughing]

RAJ: Absolutely. Absolutely.

I just want to repeat this. The highly specific nature of invention is not worthy of the abstract creativity of God's creations. So be willing to abandon any commitment that you all have to being inventive, to being creative, creative problem solving. [audience laughter] That's a nice buzzword, isn't it? Creative problem solving. And are you any good at it? You're worse off if you think that you are than those who don't think that they are, because that means that you think you've got some skill at being the creative, inventive problem-solver.

You have people attempting to creatively, ingeniously, ingeniously and inventively, find ways to manipulate the matter that your body is made-up with, made-up of, into health. And these are called drug companies.

When the fact is that what will correct error from the bottom up is the recognition that you don't have a material body. That form, the form that you recognize as your body, is pure Spirit. The Substance of pure Spirit is Love, Divine Love, the Father's Love. It's therefore not bound by the laws of physics, inertia, that which calls for time in order for change to occur. And in abandoning the form that you recognize as your body to Spirit, it becomes subject to spontaneous reconfiguration that doesn't require any conscious direction from you to become what it ought to be. The minute you release it from the agreed-upon structures of the perception of substance as matter, it will spontaneously reconfigure to identify what it is. Or you will find yourself no longer biased, experiencing a biased perception of what had been Spirit all along. And that is not inventive or ingenious or creative as a personal accomplishment. Do you see what I'm saying?

Healing is not limited to the laws of physics. Arriving on the moon is not limited by the laws of physics. You mentioned "Matrix" and in the first "Matrix," one of the statements made to Neo was, "You think you're breathing air?!" The sense of air being breathed was a concept that was being provided. And breathing air wasn't what was going on at all. Likewise a material universe isn't what's going on. And it's not what you're in the middle of. It's all Spirit, which is incapable of being sluggish, which is incapable of being limited in its movement because the Energy is constantly available to identify the ongoing Movement of Creation that is accomplished in the Mind of God as the Movement of Ideas. That's what going on!

Okay. Continue.

READER: The fundamental question you continually ask yourself cannot properly be directed to yourself at all. You keep asking what it is you are. This implies that the answer is not only one you know, but is also one that is up to you to supply. Yet you cannot perceive yourself correctly. You have no image to be perceived. The word "image" is always perception-related, and not a part of knowledge. Images are symbolic and stand for something else. The idea of "changing your image" recognizes the power of perception, but also implies that there is nothing stable to know.

RAJ: Yes. Have any of you ever run up against the boundary of your mind? Have you?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Yes. Yes.

RAJ: Geographically, where was it?

SEEKER: Well, it was...

RAJ: [laughing]

SEEKER: ...about four blocks... No! No! It was when I had a vision that totally didn't fit any of my mutually-agreed-upon concepts and just, as the expression goes, blew my mind. I had no way to explain it physically or in any other way that was not, for lack of a better word, supernatural.

RAJ: Well, let me ask you it this way. Is your mind rectangular? Is it cubic? Is it an oval?

SEEKER: It feels like a little dark box. [laughing]

RAJ: [laughing]

SEEKER: I'm being evasive, but I understand what you mean.

RAJ: Indeed. You are Mind. And Mind has no limits. Mind is, and always has been, boundaryless. That means there can only be One Mind, doesn't it? You're not a what. You're a Presence—the Presence of Mind, the Presence of that in which all Conscious Experience is occurring infinitely.

When you make a definition, you create an artificial boundary, an imagined boundary. And then when you confine your attention within that boundary, you seem to lose the infinite view, the infinite connection, you might say.

But you only accomplish this by ignoring the rest, not by actually creating a boundary.

The Function of Mind is to Know.

Let's continue.

READER: Knowing is not open to interpretation. You may try to "interpret" meaning, but this is always open to error because it refers to the perception of meaning.

RAJ: In other words, it refers to a definition of the word "meaning" rather than referring to that of which you're trying to find the meaning.

Continue.

READER: Such incongruities are the result of attempts to regard yourself as separated and un-separated at the same time. It is impossible to make so fundamental a confusion without increasing your overall confusion still further. Your mind may have become very ingenious, but as always happens when method and content are separated, it is utilized in a futile attempt to escape from an inescapable impasse.

RAJ: Yes. Every attempt you make to improve a human condition without arriving... as though the human condition were real will always cause you to remain enmeshed in the human condition. Is that clear? You're trying to do the impossible.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Why can't she step in front of a car?

RAJ: Mark, why can't she step in front of the car? You tell me.

SEEKER: You met her at the place where meaningful and not meaningful come together and by her listening to you, you helped her out of her misperception, and you're in charge of cars and time and all of that. And I put all that together from reading this book and it's quite confusing. [great audience amusement]

RAJ: I am not in charge of cars. [more audience laughter]

ANOTHER SEEKER: This is where instability reigns. It always is based on the need. Need. Needs met.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I understand need.

ANOTHER SEEKER: The need to know. Needs met. Once we keep grounded in that, we won't be so _____...

RAJ: I cannot be in charge of myself much less cars.

SEEKER (previous): What about time and space? I mean, it says you're in charge of time and space and in charge of everything that has no meaning. [audience amusement] I have this documented too. [audience laughter]

RAJ: [amused] Would you accept that? Would you accept such a job? [much audience laughter and random clapping] To be in charge of all that is meaningless. [extreme audience hilarity]

ANOTHER SEEKER: And to include time and space in that category?

RAJ: [said gently] I cannot override free will. [more firmly] I am not in charge of this dastardly miscreation that each of you has miscreated and made commitment to, because what you have created doesn't exist. But I can meet you, my Brother, as my Brother, and be the Presence of Love with you that causes you to remember what it feels like not to be alone, and thus distract you from what is meaningless that has been binding you.

And you know, because Love is Love, as you and I walk you out of your misperceptions, I counsel you wisely not to stop breathing even though you think you're breathing air, because until you know that there is no air to breathe and you don't need it and what is happening called breathing air is something other than what you believe it is, my telling you to stop breathing would create for you a very frightening experience. Because there would have been no provision of understanding what's really going on and called quote "breathing air" unquote.

And so I will tell you how not to frighten yourself any more than you're already frightened because a long time ago you turned away from the Altar. And I will bring you back to the Altar. I will refresh you with the Truth about You in a way that reduces your fear and allows you to find the courage you didn't know you had. The courage that doesn't require force to move, to move with.

Forget about being in charge of cars and being in charge of all that is meaningless. I accepted the job. But that's not where my work is. My work is with you, with each of you as Brothers and Sisters, as Divine Beings, as Divine Ones, as the Presence of God. And as long as you believe with all your might that being in front of an oncoming car will kill you, I will advise you not to step in front of one. And when you finally understand why you can't be harmed, then you can walk wherever you want—in front of cars, horses, rabid dogs, off the edge of buildings, into a propeller, whatever.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Not as an I. I mean that's there. The doorway is the big I and the We.

RAJ: [laughing] That is for sure.

SEEKER: So, We We We all the way home. [some audience laughter]

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: I got that.

RAJ: Indeed.

Continue.

READER: Ingenuity is totally divorced from knowledge, because knowledge does not require ingenuity. Ingenious thinking is not the truth that shall set you free, but you are free of the need to engage in it when you are willing to let it go.

RAJ: Ahh! Oh! You should all feel greatly relieved because there's no effort called for. There's no effort called for in coming back into your Right Mind. Ingenious thinking is effortful, but it's not the Truth that shall set you free. And I'm going to say, you will be free of the need to engage in it when you're willing to let it go. That's all. You just have to be willing to let it go. Let go of the apparently satisfying exercise of ingenious creativity where you, not We, where you can make a difference in the world. Any difference you make in the world as a result of ingenuity will be nothing more than a variation on an age-old theme that has for ages constituted the re-establishment of and the continuation of the human condition.

When you're willing to abandon the need to be ingenious and you abandon the "I" attitude adopting the "We" attitude as an actual experience of joining, there will be wonders that you can't imagine. But they won't be the result of ingenuity. They will be the result of your no longer blocking the Movement of God that embodies the meaning of the words, "Behold, I make all things new." And you have a week to let that sink in.

I am enjoying myself!

AUDIENCE VOICE: I'm enjoying myself too.

RAJ: I am enjoying the experience of you hearing me. I'm enjoying the experience of your hearing me and your knowing that you're hearing me. Many times you hear me, but you don't know that we connected. I am enjoying the conscious camaraderie, the conscious connection with you. Not with you and you and you and you. I am enjoying—the "you" isn't the most important part of what I'm saying—I am enjoying the conscious connection because You are Consciousness. You are Mind. I am enjoying the connection that is the real connection that has nothing to do with personal little I's, capital letter "I," egos, little you, you, you, you, you. Do you see what I'm saying?

I am the universal smile at this moment. [audience laughter]

And I look forward to every single moment with you between now and next weekend, [audience laughter] as well as next Sunday. We will call it a day.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 3 – THE INNOCENT PERCEPTION
Section – BEYOND PERCEPTION
First Edition – p. 40 / Second Edition – p. 45

RAJ: Okay. Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to all of you who are joining us on the internet as well. For those of you here, as well as those are on the internet, this is not a closed group and you are welcome to and invited to invite your friends who you think might be interested to participate. Just because we're into the book doesn't mean that no one new can start. Okay. Well, let's go right into the book.

READER: Prayer is a way of asking for something. It is the medium of miracles. But the only meaningful prayer is for forgiveness, because those who have been forgiven have everything. Once forgiveness has been accepted, prayer in the usual sense becomes utterly meaningless. The prayer for forgiveness is nothing more than a request that you may be able to recognize what you already have. In electing perception instead of knowledge, you placed yourself in a position where you could resemble your Father only by perceiving miraculously.

RAJ: Note the word "resemble." You placed yourself in a position where you could resemble your Father. But the fact is that you're not here to resemble the Father. You're here to be the Father expressed.

Continue.

READER: You have lost the knowledge that you yourself are a miracle of God. Creation is your Source and your only real function.

RAJ: That pretty well summarizes everything we've been talking about in terms of turning toward the Altar. Forgiving means to give something for something. And in turning to the Altar, you're saying, "I'm willing to give my predisposition to interpret things the way I want to interpret them for Your View, Father, for Truth as You Are Being It."

Because at the bottom line, all of you in some way feel guilty, and mind you, that feeling of discomfort is like the bell on the garbage truck when it's in reverse, saying, "This is a more dangerous circumstance than when I'm moving forward." It would seem to you that punishment would naturally be forthcoming for your disobedience, if you will. And so it's comforting and practical to suggest to you that you need to ask for forgiveness. That sets your mind in the right direction. But, [laughing] because of the polarized nature of your attitude when you're separate, it's easy for you to imagine that the Father would say, "No! I won't forgive you. You have been too disobedient and you deserve to suffer a little before I extend My forgiveness." And so, it's necessary to go a step further and understand that forgiveness is really embodied in your willingness to abandon your perceptions and your confidences in the way things work in favor of having the Father's View, the Father's Perspective revealed to you, which naturally brings you back into your Divine Function of Being the Presence of God expressing Himself right where you are and claiming no right to a private and personal authority.

I've said before that prayer is saying "Yes" to God, not asking God for something. Which is another way of saying, "Prayer is yielding to God." And once you've yielded to God, prayer in the usual sense becomes utterly meaningless.

And the last sentence there. Creation is your Source and your only Real Function." You simply aren't here to have a perception of what that is, an evaluation of what that is, an opinion about what that is. You see? Everything is so much simpler than the way you've been doing it.

Let's continue.

SEEKER: May I ask a question on that paragraph?

RAJ: Yes, you may.

SEEKER: It's on the last sentence where it says, Creation is my Function. I'm still a little hazy on what that would be like since I'm perceiving and trying to be ingenious and intellectual all the time.

RAJ: Well, it means none of that!

SEEKER: I realize that. So therefore I don't even have a feel for what it's... and since it's my only Function, I think I ought to look into it. [laugh]
[slight audience laugh]

RAJ: That recognition is the dawning of wisdom. Yes.

SEEKER: It's a start.

RAJ: Yes. First of all, it's an Experience of perfect Peace. Perfect Peace is you experiencing no self-consciousness, you experiencing no fear, you experiencing no vulnerability, you not caring whether others have judgments of you, on you. And in that space, if I may put it that way, you find yourself being completely undefended. In being completely undefended, there is no inclination to assert yourself in any way.

And it's like floating on your back in a river where no energy needs to be extended for survival or to achieve a goal. And when you find yourself floating in a river, you find nothing static about your life because the current of the river is moving you and you are letting yourself be at one with it. In practical terms that means that you will find yourself functioning quote "in the world" unquote, busy, active, but not busy or active achieving personal goals, things you have made-up to accomplish. And when that happens, you will find yourself by virtue of having abandoned yourself to the Movement of Being reflecting the Father's Will, embodying the Father's Will. And thus, everything you find yourself doing will have Real Meaning, with a capital "M," that for lack of better words, will glorify God quote "in the world" unquote, embodying His purpose and blessing everyone. That's the beginning of the experience and that's the nature of the experience. That's the end of the answer.

SEEKER: So you know that doesn't sound like the common ordinary run-of-the-mill definition of creating. You know, like we think of someone who's a creative artist or you know, "Gee, that person is really creative. Look at what they did to their garden." But it sounds like what you're talking about is where you actually have no idea or ideas in your head that you claim that come from thinking and planning. It's more like, "Oh, that's interesting. Look how that worked out. Gee, I wonder what's going to happen next? Well, I wonder how that's going to resolve itself?" So, it's kind of that internal dialogue as opposed to the ones that we're normally... is that...

RAJ: That's exactly correct. It's where everything that you do is inspired, not reasoned out. And, as you say, it is only afterwards when you look and see what has happened that you will marvel at it. You will find yourself in the beginning saying often, "Man, I would never have thought of that!" Or "I would never have been that expansive. I would never have been that free in expressing what was expressed." And so you will find that Creation has occurred and it has not been separate from you in any way. But it will not have had anything to do with the thinker, the planner, the imaginer, the smart ass, the one who was inventive. And you know, it's when you let that happen and you see the perfection of what happens that you begin to realize how much energy you wasted, how much trepidation you experienced when you were trying to be ingenious yourself.

And at the bottom line, you will experience the fact that there is a God and that nothing is up to you, and nothing ever was up to you to do all by yourself.

If you were to do this rather persistently, you might be surprised to find that it wasn't until well after the fact, it wasn't until some "time" (in quotes) had passed that you realized that all of this happened in the absence of fear. That you were and had been experiencing utter Peace. And then you will say, "Ah, what a difference from the way I used to do it and the way I used to feel and the debilitating effect of the undercurrent of anxiety."

Peace doesn't come up and hit you in the face. But when you discover you have been being for six months without fear, then you understand experientially what Peace is, and how wonderful it is and that it really is your Birthright. And this realization helps to devalue any inclination you have to continue to operate independently as an authorizer in your own right.

Being part of the Movement of Creation by not behaving in any way separate from It causes You and the Creator to be indistinguishable. And you find your very Being to Itself Be the Movement of Creation, an experience in which is pure satisfaction, even though it is utterly obvious to you that you haven't had one little speck of an idea of your own being implemented.

This is why what I'm talking about is so unsatisfying and unappealing to the ego. You all get quite a hit from having your back to the Altar and imagining that everything is there for you to deal with on your own and to define and to manipulate and to protect yourself against. So, [laughing] there's no way I can appeal to your egos in order to help you or get you to wake up because that's the one thing you have to give for the Father's Point of View. That's the one thing you have to give up in order to have a replacement of something Meaningful. And there's the forgiveness. Okay.

SEEKER: A follow-up one?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: How does intuition fit into this scheme? Because a lot of people will say, "well, you know, I have a feeling," but so often it's a projection. You know, it's like when I was in Hawaii, I kept running into people who wanted to start a healing center. And every new person, "I'm going to start a healing center." And after a year of listening to people talk about... I began to recognize that what they were looking for was healing for themselves. And then they would project it out there into the world. So, many people have intuition, or think that they have intuition, and I can't help but feel that intuition in some... it's like, you know, you do recognize that there's a lack, you know what I mean, in your life. There's something missing. So how does intuition fit into...

RAJ: I would put it this way. Intuition is inspiration not looked into deeply enough. Real Intuition is an Experience of Knowing something True, and that is different from projection. And the word is used carelessly. But intuition is like the leading edge of the experience of inspiration. And instead of acting quickly on intuition, one should abide with it and go deeper into it—in-tu-it—in to it—to intuit it more deeply so that the fullness of the inspiration can flow into manifestation or embodiment. Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Yes, thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

CHRIS: Raj.

RAJ: Yes.

CHRIS: We have a question from Amena.

RAJ: Yes.

CHRIS: Amena on the internet would like to know is the process of creating art and music where there is no planning and where it just emerges from that inspiration, is [that] a moment of God-expressing?

RAJ: Indeed. It is when one tries to be creative to order that it stops being inspiration. If someone says, "My living room is done in blues and greens, and I would like a painting that would harmonize with and complement the color scheme of my living room," that's when an artist ceases to be an artist. When he tries to be artistic to order, to fulfill a request. Because the Movement of God considers nothing except the blossoming, forthcoming of Love in utter Originality and nothing other than Love is taken into consideration.

Now I want to refine that because you can sit a monkey down at a piano and the monkey will behave without plans, and what will emerge will not be beautiful or harmonious. And so thoughtless action is not the same as doing something without a personal plan. Let me put it this way. Inspiration is a Movement that is allowed by you, by any one of you, and when it is allowed, that Movement finds expression in form, and that is different from thoughtless, unplanned action.

So just letting go and behaving randomly and without concern—and ultimately without Love—will not result in art or beauty or that which blesses everyone. So because of the tendency of much metaphysical and new age thought in this present day, I need to make that distinction so that no one thinks I'm saying that if you just behave without plans, you will be doing God's Will. It's not true. The only way you will be doing God's Will is when you have turned toward God, desiring to know the Truth, desiring to Experience the Movement of Love so that your every breath, your every movement reflects that into expression.

Okay. Continue.

READER: The statement "God created man in his own image and likeness" needs reinterpretation. "Image" can be understood as "thought," and "likeness" as "of a like quality." God did create spirit in His Own Thought and of a quality like to His Own. There is nothing else.

RAJ: I'm going to interrupt here. We spoke in the last two weeks about the fact that Mind, God moves. And the Movement is a Movement of Ideas and those Ideas are perfectly recognizable to that which formed the Ideas. And in their recognizability, they are visible and tangible, but not material. All of it is pure Spirit.

Continue.

READER: Perception, on the other hand, is impossible without a belief in "more" and "less." At every level it involves selectivity. Perception is a continual process of accepting and rejecting, organizing and reorganizing, shifting and changing. Evaluation is an essential part of perception, because judgments are necessary in order to select.

RAJ: Yes. In order to perceive, in order to accept or reject, organize and reorganize, there has to be something separate from the Movement of Creation to observe it. And therefore be in a position to analyze it. And so, of course, one must have turned one's back from the Altar in order to create the imaginary environment in which one could be an independent observer, and then proceed to evaluate. Part of what is very dissatisfying to the ego in the process of awakening is that in yielding to the river, floating on your back, expending no energy whatsoever for survival or the achievement of goals, one has abandoned the so-called right to make evaluations. You can't even say, "Well, I'd like to be closer to the edge of the river." Or "I'd like to be in a quieter part of the river." Or "I'd like to be in a faster part of the river."

One has arrived at a point of saying, "Thy Will be done. I will fit in." Those are the terrible words. I will fit in. I yield to the Movement of Creation and hold myself separate from it no longer. And in doing that, abandoning this apparent right to be separate, you find yourself at One with It, and It Being The Wholeness Of You.

Mind spake and Form appeared. That's a brief description of Creation. Or, Mind speaks and Form appears. But understand that this Form is not matter. Mind speaks and recognizes Itself in that Act or Action. And it's all mental. It's all Mind. And the Substance of the Experience is Spirit, not matter.

Now, what I want to bring home at this moment is that nothing that you are experiencing right now is matter. Not the chairs you're sitting on. Not the bodies that are sitting on the chairs. Not the trees. Nothing that you are experiencing is matter. And, therefore, nothing that you are experiencing right now is bound by what you would call the laws of matter or physics.

Form follows Function. Mind spake and Form appeared. Mind spake and Function functioned and was recognizable and identifiable. The Movement of God, of Creation, is Be-ing—the verb Be-ing. It is Movement. It is Function. If Form follows Function, it serves Function. It renders Function visible and tangible. Not materially tangible, but experienceable. With what? The only thing there is, Mind. And that's what's going on right now for every single one of you. It's the only thing going on, period.

What does this mean? This means that if a sprinkler head is jammed by a little piece of metal that is supposed to shift and it's not shifting, that it seems that the function of the idea is blocked by a little piece of metal, matter, and if you think it is matter, you will stand there and grouse about having to get into the water while it's running to try to loosen it up, to get it to function. If you will realize in moments like that that there is no material sprinkler head there, that it is an idea which someone allowed to register in his or her mind and render it visible. And if you will at the same time remember that Form follows Function, then you will realize that there's no material piece of metal that has the ability to do anything other than render visible the Function of the sprinkler head, of the idea. And you can watch that sprinkler head begin to function properly because there is no matter there.

The Energy of Spirit looked at when your back is to the Altar, minus the Father's Perspective, appears to be able to function or not function, to allow or to block. And this could apply to the veins in your body, the arteries. The flesh of the arteries themselves that seem perhaps to be able to change shape and block the flow of blood. If you think it's matter, you're going to have to deal with it as matter. You're going to have to manipulate it. You're going to have to oppose its ability to do something that does not identify the function it has and the functions it allows. But the moment you are willing to challenge that and recognize at least as an idea that there's no matter to it and that what you see is simply the visibility of the Movement of an Idea which God Is Being at that moment, you then will release the visibility from your belief that it is immovable matter, and you will be able to recognize that Spirit, that the Substance that is Spirit which is serving the Function that God has set in place can reconfigure, if you will, to identify the Function that it's rendering visible and tangible as a Conscious Experience, not as matter.

You really need to enjoy the opportunities you have daily for reassessing anything that you think of as matter, and challenge it with the idea that if it appears to be matter, that it must be pure Spirit. And pure Spirit is unable to act on its own. It can only render visible and tangible the Idea that God Is Expressing. This is very important.

There is another aspect I will go into and that is when we speak of energy, like light from the sun, or energy like electricity, you cannot say that electricity is the Energy of Spirit. It is a modified experience of Spirit. And it is a material experience of it. And the way you can know is that it has polarities. Spirit is not polarized. The Energy of Spirit which is Love is Pure, purely single. It therefore does not have the capacity to kill. The energy of the sun, light can seem to damage your skin, and, after all of these centuries of everyone thriving under the sun wearing no clothes whatsoever, now, suddenly, the sun can cause cancer. Interesting shift of belief. And everybody buys into it. This energy that can seem to cause cancer and damage things is not the Energy of Spirit. It's not the Energy of Love that is Light. And you need to be clear on that.

Whatever has polarities is something you are seeing independent of the Father. It is the way you are perceiving the only Energy there is when your back is to the Altar. And absolutely everything you see with your back to the Altar will be polarized. And why will it be polarized? It will be polarized because you're attempting to do something impossible. And you're believing that you're succeeding at it. And so you are in error, and that error will be reflected in absolutely every part of Creation that you're experiencing. It is like putting on a pair of polarized glasses. It doesn't change anything you're looking at, but it causes you to perceive everything different from what it is.

So, again, I encourage you all to have fun consciously approaching everything that you run into with the remembrance that there's not a bit of matter there. And because there's not a bit of matter there, what you're seeing is incapable of operating at odds with the Function that has brought forth, or the Movement of Creation that has brought forth, or the Idea of God that spontaneously brings into manifestation the visibility and tangibility of the Idea. And therefore, this so-called material universe isn't a material universe and you cannot possibly be in bondage to it.

Form, remember this, Form follows Function. Function the Movement of Mind elicits without interruption without delay, that which makes that Movement recognizable—visibility and tangibility. And the only thing the visibility and tangibility can do is identify the Movement of Creation, the Movement and Presence of God. Form never ends up being independent from that which it is identifying.

And the definition of matter is something which is independent of its Source, of its Creation. A statue carved 200 years ago, you go and look at today and experience as an object in its own right. And the one who carved it is irrelevant. You see. But that's not the nature of Creation. That which Authors All That Is, is always Authoring it. Creation is Current. And Creation in every single moment being inseparable from Its Source has only one thing it can do, render visible and tangible that Source now.

Why am I harping on this? Because you need to become free of your bondage to what you think Form is. So that a sprinkler head returns immediately to its function without repair. So that a heart straining at circulating the blood in your body can return instantly to identifying the Idea of which it is the visibility and tangibility, the Function that it is rendering visible. A Function that is a Current Idea in the Mind of God and which is incapable of actually becoming embodied as something that has polarities, as something that can work or not work. That can work well or work poorly. That can, if it works well, allow you to survive. And if it works poorly, kill you. You see? And I want you to have fun with this. What a delightful thing to become free of the bondage you have been experiencing to matter, which is nothing more than Spirit, an Idea, a nonmaterial Presence that you have chosen to look at with a peculiar bias that then keeps you bound. This is part of your emerging freedom. This is part of waking up.

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: What I'm hearing you say today is there's some light bulbs going off here, that there's...

RAJ: I hope they're going on!

SEEKER: [laughing] You're right. It not just applies to our alive body, but this applies to inanimate objects too, because there is no such thing as an inanimate object.

RAJ: There's no such thing as an object that isn't energy.

SEEKER: That it... right.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: What you're saying, so that if we look at it, really look at it the way we're supposed to be looking at it, it's making itself new, then...

RAJ: Absolutely.

SEEKER: ...that allows for that. So there is no such thing as deterioration.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: This is really something.

RAJ: And that is part of the bondage that you all deserve to be free of, and which you won't be free of as long as you continue to say, "That's matter."

SEEKER: I'm getting a glimpse of this because I remember I had a mechanical apparatus that I prayed would work and it did.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: So it wasn't mechanical. It was part of what you're... we are saying today, of God's Expression of the Idea which through Love re-energized or remade itself new.

RAJ: That's right. You see, when you look at a sprinkler head, you say, "Well, the spring is going to wear out sooner or later." And so you're bound. The minute you recognize, though, that that spring is an idea, a nonmaterial idea, you know that ideas aren't material. In the recognition that it's an idea and that what you see there is the visibility and tangibility of the idea, and that the visibility and tangibility of the idea can't... has no capacity to do anything other than identify the Function of the Idea, then you'll realize that the spring does not have to wear out. And in fact, the spring can't wear out, and it can't become detached, and it can't do anything other than render visible and tangible the Idea, the Function, the Movement of Creation that embodies the idea. Amazing things will happen when you release everything from your definition of it as matter.

Okay. Let us continue. Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Just briefly. So this means a changed perception is where the miracle is. That is what the miracle is all about, a changed perception in a sprinkler head.

RAJ: Exactly. No, not a changed perception in the sprinkler head, but in the observer of the sprinkler head. Yes. Indeed.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So nothing will ever wear out?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Oh my goodness. This is overcoming death, in a sense. These are all these definitions. We've created deterioration. We've created it all by our word.

RAJ: Indeed. Planned obsolescence it's called. If everything is going to be eternal, I tell you one thing [laughing] and if everything is going to have to be somewhere eternally, you will not fill the Universe with junk anymore. [scattered audience laughter] And when something is made, it will be an ultimate thing that you will be happy with always, and not need to replace with something more stimulating than the last thing to keep you alive and happy with life. You see?

SEEKER: Resurrecting everything is gonna be more fun.

RAJ: Uncovering everything that is Real is going to be fun and let's let it begin now. Not a year from now. Not a week from now. Go out of here today, or before you leave here today, question everything you're looking at, because you think everything is material whether it's the roses, or the glass, or the fabric that your pants are made of. You think it's matter. And you've been taught what matter is. Well, now it's time for re-education. It's time for re-definition. Does the glass have scratches in it? It appears to, but that is not part of the Function or Intent of the glass table top, so that cannot be the Truth. And because it is not matter, and because the only thing it can do is identify its Purpose or its Function perfectly, and what you are experiencing as a piece of glass has no capacity to do otherwise, nor reason to do anything otherwise, you can expect the scratches to disappear.

And it doesn't matter if they don't disappear the first time you do this. Your habit of interpreting what that piece of glass is and how glass behaves is well seated. There's a deep groove in your mind. It's a habit. And I'm encouraging you to start breaking the habit. And the more you can look at a thing and say, "That's not matter. That's Spirit." And, as you drive home and you see the streetlight, "That's not matter. That's Spirit. That's an Idea." Well, you know that at some point it was an idea in somebody's mind who designs streetlights. Take it a step further and realize that if it exists at all, it's an Idea in the Mind of God, pure Spirit, and that which is the Movement of God which is the only Mind there is universally, has formed; was like its Source, Pure Idea recognizable to the Mind which formed it. And therefore, there's not a bit of matter to it.

If you engage in this often during your day, it will begin if not to create a new groove quickly, to weaken the resolve you have in your mind as far as your sureness that you know what everything is, and it will begin to undo the confidence that you have that it's all matter. None of it is matter.

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Yesterday I took apart an old Volkswagen engine in hopes of fixing it quickly, only to find that just about every part inside that engine is junk. [laughing] So, I'm gonna go home and stop working on it. [scattered audience laughter] I think I'm just gonna sit with it [a little more laughing] and just let it lie there. And I'll continue to just sit with it, probably, knowing me, [laughing] and it will probably continue to lie there scattered all over the table.

RAJ: Well, you will find that a time will come when you'll have to go out and buy new parts because you can't just continue to have it spread out on the table. I'm telling you how to begin how to break the habit. I'm not saying that you cannot have instantaneous healing of that engine...

SEEKER: I didn't mean to imply that, I'm just...

RAJ: I know.

SEEKER: ...adding a bit _____.

RAJ: But I am adding a clarification here, because as you proceed to undo the dream you have created, you're still going to have to be practical and see that the human need is met until the transformation, the miracle, the sudden shift of perception occurs more spontaneously and more frequently. And you will thank your lucky stars that the idea is still valid because you can go and find another part that is an expression of that same idea.

SEEKER: Exactly. I think that I have a better attitude...

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: ...about the whole thing. [laughing]

RAJ: Indeed. Indeed.

SEEKER: And it's not so much an insurmountable chore to me right now...

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: ...having heard you.

RAJ: Good.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Because you should enjoy this process.

SEEKER: Exactly! What kicked in my response to speak on the mike right now was your statement, "I want you to enjoy yourselves."

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: You know, until letting go and letting what is, I've heard you say many times before, what is Real in each and every thing...

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: ...just simply be. And...

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

ANOTHER SEEKER: _____

RAJ: No, we must continue.

READER: What happens to perceptions if there are no judgments and nothing but perfect equality? Perception becomes impossible.

RAJ: Stop right there. These two sentences should be written out and put on your refrigerator door. What happens to perceptions if there are no judgments and nothing but perfect equality? It's simple. Perception becomes impossible. To have a perception of the Kingdom of Heaven different from what it really is becomes impossible. You don't need to work to change anything back into something else. You see that? But if you abandon judgments and in its wake there is nothing but perfect equality, perception becomes impossible.

Continue.

READER: Truth can only be known.

RAJ: Period.

READER: Period.

RAJ: Or Truth only can be known. That's the meaning.

Continue.

READER: All of it is equally true, and knowing any part of it is to know all of it. Only perception involves partial awareness. Knowledge transcends the laws governing perception, because partial knowledge is impossible. It is all one and has no separate parts. You who are really one with it need but know yourself and your knowledge is complete. To know God's miracle is to know Him.

RAJ: And you are His miracle.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Can I ask a very brief question?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: So whenever we see a work of art or a piece of music and recognize the Truth in it, at least to some extent the individuals involved in that in their following their inspiration had stopped seeing what they were working with as matter and saw it as Spirit. Otherwise the Truth and the value couldn't have been being expressed there.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And then you were describing seeing the sprinkler as whole, you were really talking about what maybe could be called an extremely high form of art.

RAJ: You could say that. Yes. Indeed. Yes.

READER: Forgiveness is the healing of the perception of separation. Correct perception of your brother is necessary, because minds have chosen to see themselves as separate.

RAJ: In other words, you start out, since it's a given that everyone has chosen to see himself as separate, it is essential to begin with correct perception, even though perception isn't ultimate. Correct perception of your Brother is necessary because minds have chosen to see themselves as separate.

Continue.

READER: Spirit knows God completely. That is its miraculous power. The fact that each one has this power completely is a condition entirely alien to the world's thinking. The world believes that if anyone has everything, there is nothing left.

RAJ: That's because they think everything is matter.

Continue.

READER: But God's miracles are as total as His Thoughts because they are His Thoughts.

RAJ: Indeed.

READER: As long as perception lasts prayer has a place. Since perception rests on lack, those who perceive have not totally accepted the Atonement and given themselves over to truth.

RAJ: Oh! There it is again! Given themselves over to Truth. Yielding to Truth, abandoning self-made authority, imagined self-made authority. Oh!

Becoming a puppet of God. Oh! Since perception rests on lack, those who perceive have not totally accepted the Atonement and given themselves over to truth. There's the forgiveness. How about giving yourself, giving your separated present sense of yourself over to God so that it might be replaced with the Truth about you.

That's the ultimate exchange, isn't it? That you would abandon your definition of yourself and all the rights you think it has and all the power, and all the potential for success that you think it has, and giving it up for the Father's Perspective about You, giving it up for the purpose of glorifying God rather than yourself. For the purpose of letting GOD BE ALL THERE IS OF YOU because that's ALL there ever has been of You.

Continue.

READER: Perception is based on a separated state, so that anyone who perceives at all needs healing.

RAJ: Yes. Anyone who perceives at all is in need of healing. Every single one of you are in need of healing. Does that make you awful? No. But hey! It means that there are glorious things for you to discover that you're missing out on. So forget about being down on yourself because you need healing, because you're in a state of ignorance, and let your curiosity lead you to the discovery of what's True about Yourself. Let it lead you to the acknowledgement that the streetlight is all Spirit, not matter, and therefore eternal.

Continue.

READER: Communion, not prayer, is the natural state of those who know.

RAJ: And there is another way of describing what I spoke of as floating on your back on the river. Communion is being present with the Movement without asserting any authority of your own that you imagine that you have. Communion is an innocent allowing of yourself to be present with, and in no way separate from, God. Continue.

READER: God and His miracle are inseparable.

RAJ: And again remember that you have been described as His miracle.

Continue.

READER: How beautiful indeed are the Thoughts of God who live in His Light!

RAJ: Oh. You're a Thought of God. And how beautiful indeed are the Thoughts of God who live in His Light, rather than in the darkness of your own imagined private authority and ability to succeed at overcoming the duality and the conflict that you've created by turning your back on the Altar without having to turn your face toward the Altar.

Continue.

READER: Your worth is beyond perception because it is beyond doubt. Do not perceive yourself in different lights. Know yourself in the One Light where the miracle that is you is perfectly clear.

RAJ: Wow! How inspiring! How wonderful! And you've all gotten the point. And I think you've gotten it without a sense of labor, and you will be able to leave today challenging the materiality of your world with delight rather than awful seriousness.

I know I'm beginning to sound repetitious, but, for lack of better words, the energy of our communion together, and I'm not excluding anyone listening or joining us on the internet, the energy of our joining together is, I'm going to put it this way, less and less dense, and therefore, again for lack of better words, more and more enjoyable.

And though it is impossible for me to feel bad, I can only convey to you what I need to convey to you by saying, it really feels good to be with you in this way. And it has been a most pleasant experience. And I want to say, thank you. And I look forward to being with you next week.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome. Okay.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 3 – THE INNOCENT PERCEPTION
Section – JUDGMENT AND THE AUTHORITY PROBLEM
First Edition – p. 41 / Second Edition – p. 46

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: It's good to have you here. And I welcome everyone on the internet as well. Before we begin, I would just like to touch on a couple of things that we discussed last week.

Remember that an Idea leaves not Its Source. Therefore the visibility and tangibility of that Idea, in other words, the recognizability of It by the Mind that formed It, is not something different or separate from the Source. It is the Idea Itself. It is such an ingrained habit to think that creation is something separate from its creator, like a clay pot is something different from the one who threw it, the one who formed it. It is such an ingrained habit that there's a tendency to think when I spoke last week about the spring in the sprinkler head as though that spring is an idea that was in the mind of the one who conceived of it but that the spring in the sprinkler head is itself matter. Or the same with the signal light at the intersection.

But what I want you to understand is that when I'm talking about the spring and the signal light at the intersection, or the leaf, or the glass-topped table, I am saying that you are seeing right there an Idea. It never left Its Source. It isn't a manifestation of an Idea. It is the Idea Itself directly experienced. It is pure Spirit.

Likewise, there could be a tendency to think when I spoke of the arteries that had become misshapen so that they blocked the flow of blood that it was important to recognize that the artery is pure Spirit so that it wouldn't interfere with the blood that kept your material body functioning. You see what I'm saying? It's easy to be selective still and to say, "Okay, I'm going to see my arteries as Spirit, but at the same time think that this will allow the blood in your body to circulate more freely, allowing for less stress and therefore keeping your material body from dying." You see what I'm saying? The blood, the arteries, the veins, the corpuscles, all of it is an Idea that never left Its Source and therefore is an Idea still. And therefore is pure Spirit.

When you hear the word "manifestation" translate it into the meaning visibility and tangibility or the experience of recognizability. Manifestation is not something separate from the Idea. It is the Idea recognized. Don't leave any part of your experience of the world and universe outside of God by thinking that in any respect any part of it is material and is influenceable by knowing the Truth or influenceable by calling it Spirit. It is Spirit and nothing else.

Well, the thought can come up, "Well, why would God create a sprinkler head if grass is eternal? Why would it need to be watered? That's a human idea, a human concept, and therefore in Reality there couldn't be a sprinkler head. That has to be part of the human dream." Well, I'm telling you that you're thinking too much. You don't know what it means yet.

And that's exactly why I'm inviting you all to look at everything with innocent eyes, with freshness and without your pre-existing definitions. You don't know just how infinitely and wonderfully and uniquely and originally the Wholeness of Eternal Being is manifest, is rendered visible, is rendered recognizable. So stop making snap judgments or assumptions that say, "Well, this couldn't be part of Reality because blah, blah, blah, blah, blah." And be willing to assume that the blah, blah, blah, blah, blah that you follow the statement with, "this couldn't be part of the Kingdom of Heaven," is the means you utilize to keep yourself locked into and limited by your love of giving definitions to everything, your love of determining by yourself what this part or that part or the other part of the Kingdom of Heaven is, and giving preference to your definition over the Reality of it.

Now the second thing I want to comment on is that during the week, the question was presented, "How much of Reality spills over into our dream or your dream of Reality?" Again, this suggests a split that isn't there, as though you're having some sort of autonomous dream that is entirely different and separate from Reality, when the fact is that your dream, every part of your dream is based in Reality. Your dream is nothing more than an altered perception of Reality. It is Reality perceived with a bias. You have not succeeded in going someplace, like to sleep, and having a dream that is entirely separate and apart from Reality.

What I am referring to as the dream is nothing more than a biased perception of Reality. It's Reality you're seeing unclearly. So Reality doesn't spill over into your dream. It's what every single one of you is using as the basis for a biased, slanted, distorted perception that you're claiming is real.

So, what does this mean? It means you don't have to wake up from the dream before you can see Reality. Reality is what is in your face as I've said over and over. Reality is what is confronting you at every instant, whether you call it a rose, or the glass-topped table, or the fabric of your pants, or the hair on your head. Reality is what is confronting you. How you are perceiving it, or misperceiving it, is what constitutes the illusion, the dream.

And because that's so, you don't have to wake up before you can see Reality. You can start with what's right in front of your face and say, "That's not matter. That's Spirit. That isn't a manifestation of some act of Creation. That is an Idea that God is having at this instant. And that Idea never left Its Source. And therefore, aside from my current perceptions, misperceptions of what it is, I choose to become undefended against experiencing this Idea that never left Its Source and never became matter, and is pure Spirit, and is embodying the Will of God, the Nature of God, the Love of God, at this very instant. I choose no longer to defend myself against experiencing that by having an opinion or a definition of my own."

The expression of that desire to Experience the Truth of that rose, or whatever it might be, is the way you open up to God. It's the way you turn toward the Altar. And it's the way you manage to let God register with you and yield to Him.

Okay. Let's go into the book. Page 46 [in the second edition; page 41 in the first edition].

READER: Judgment and the Authority Problem

We have already discussed the Last Judgment, but in insufficient detail. After the Last Judgment there will be no more.

RAJ: No more judgments.

Continue.

READER: Judgment is symbolic because beyond perception there is no judgment. When the Bible says "Judge not that ye be not judged," it means that if you judge the reality of others you will be unable to avoid judging your own.

RAJ: It's a very simple fact the same measuring stick you use to judge others, you judge yourself by absolutely. You do not have a different measuring stick for yourself—a better one, a more lenient one—than you have for others.

READER: The choice to judge rather than to know is the cause of the loss of peace.

RAJ: To know what? To Know the Truth, to have the direct Experience of What The Father Is Being there where the rose is.

Continue.

READER: Judgment is the process on which perception but not knowledge rests. I have discussed this before in terms of the selectivity of perception, pointing out that evaluation is its obvious prerequisite. Judgment always involves rejection. It never emphasizes only the positive aspects of what is judged, whether in you or in others. What has been perceived and rejected, or judged and found wanting, remains in your mind because it has been perceived. One of the illusions from which you suffer is the belief that what you judged against has no effect. This cannot be true unless you also believe that what you judged against does not exist. You evidently do not believe this, or you would not have judged against it. In the end it does not matter whether your judgment is right or wrong. Either way you are placing your belief in the unreal. This cannot be avoided in any type of judgment, because it implies the belief that reality is yours to select from.

RAJ: Indeed. The minute you look at that rose or the minute you look at the spring in the sprinkler head and you determine that it's matter, you determine that it has had its source in a material evolution or a mechanical process of manufacture and you make commitment to that idea, that belief, you're choosing for the unreal. You're anchoring the unreal. And you are creating a temporary inability on your part in your mind to perceive What It Really Is.

Now, when you say that the rose is alive and the spring in the sprinkler head is not, and that therefore the rose is a more valuable material object, you've made a judgment. If you say that the white rose to you is more beautiful than the red rose, you've made a judgment. But you know what? No matter how many judgments you make between objects in this so-called material world, it's meaningless because you haven't made the one distinction that is essential to your salvation. And that distinction is not between objects, but it is the distinction in your mind that you have made that says, "What I have determined a thing to be is what it is. And I choose to value it, rather than the other choice that I have available to me which is to inquire What It Really Is as God Is Being It."

The moment you provide a definition for any thing, an explanation, an understanding of it that wasn't derived from Its Source which is God, you have made a distinction and a judgment, a value judgment, and that judgment has separated you from the Experience of Reality. That's the only distinction that needs to be made because that distinction is the one which will allow you to make the choice for Reality and get out of the bondage of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that constituted your choice to be able to apparently be an authorizer in your own right.

Let's continue.

READER: You have no idea of the tremendous release and deep peace that comes from meeting yourself and your brothers totally without judgment. When you recognize what you are and what your brothers are, you will realize that judging them in any way is without meaning. In fact, their meaning is lost to you precisely because you are judging them.

RAJ: And I would use a capital "M" there for Meaning. In fact, their capital "M" Meaning, their Divine Meaning, their Real Meaning, is lost to you precisely because you are judging them.

Continue.

READER: All uncertainty comes from the belief that you are under the coercion of judgment. You do not need judgment to organize your life, and you certainly do not need it to organize yourself. In the presence of knowledge all judgment is automatically suspended, and this is the process that enables recognition to replace perception.

RAJ: Yes, it does. It also deprives you of the hit that you get from thinking that you can be the originator of an idea, the originator of a meaningful definition. It deflates the ego. [pause] It deflates the ego.

Continue.

SEEKER: Raj, can I make a comment or two?

RAJ: Not yet.

READER: You are very fearful of everything you have perceived but have refused to accept. You believe that, because you have refused to accept it, you have lost control over it. This is why you see it in nightmares, or in pleasant disguises in what seem to be your happier dreams. Nothing that you have refused to accept can be brought into awareness. It is not dangerous in itself, but you have made it seem dangerous to you.

RAJ: Yes. Nothing that you have refused to accept can be brought into awareness. Your decisions, your use of your mind is absolute. So, what you have refused to accept, you will not experience.

Now, you could say there are lots of things you have refused to accept. And psychology helps you go on an internal search to find out what those things are that you have refused to accept so that you can embrace them. But that's like going through all of your definitions, mutually-agreed-upon definitions of things, like roses are more valuable than the spring in the sprinkler head, and helping you to stop making the judgment, help you to somehow re-embrace the spring in the sprinkler head as much as you do the rose.

But you know what? If you manage to do that and you go on this internal hunt for all of the things you have refused to look at, and you manage to re-embrace them all without making judgments one over the other, you still haven't addressed the one fundamental thing that you've rejected, which was that all of this, all of these things about which you have mutually-agreed-upon definitions, are the visibility and tangibility of God. You have rejected the God-ness of them. And so, no matter how much you work at reducing the judgments you have for or against the various things about which you have made-up definitions that you are committed to, you still haven't done anything valuable.

The one thing, you might say the cornerstone that the builders rejected, the builders of mutually-agreed-upon definitions, is that All Is God, that All Is Spirit. And that includes you, and your Function is to be that consciousness which recognizes God in everything you see. Your Function is to be that which glorifies God by recognizing the Divinity of absolutely everyone and everything, including yourself. So when you reject the cornerstone, when you make the one simple rejection of the God-ness of everything and then look at everything minus God and give your definitions to it all, no matter how many definitions you've given to it and no matter how much work you do to bring your assessment of all those things you've defined into perfect balance and into perfect equilibrium where you love and appreciate them all equally, you are still flat out in the dream. You are still flat out unconscious of the God-ness of it. You haven't brought God back into the picture. And yet, as I said earlier, you are using All That God Is as the basis for creating the definitions you want to give to All That God Is. So you're using Reality to your own ends, while ignoring what Reality is and where you fit into it. And rather than witnessing to God, you are choosing to witness to definitions you have given to everything.

In other words, you are trying to enjoy a position of authorship that was never given to you, and therefore you can't have, even though you can imagine you have it and make commitment to that imagination and thereby create a belief that you believe.

When the word "belief" is used, it's not a very strong word. When you hear of a person's beliefs, you recognize immediately by the choice of words that they are not anchored in anything eternal, because beliefs change. But when you say, "I believe this," you give more substance to it in your mind. And what you believe becomes important and you want everyone else to honor what you believe. In fact, you want everyone else to believe what you believe so that you can feel as though your belief really is meaningful.

Nothing that you have refused to accept, including the Allness Of God and the God-ness Of All, can be brought into your awareness. Your refusal is absolute and will govern your perception until you modify your refusal.

What you have refused to accept is not dangerous in itself. God is not dangerous. Reality is not dangerous. The Divinity of Everything is not dangerous. The Substance of Love that Everything is constituted of is a Love that embraces you and that you can feel loved by. That is not dangerous. But you have made It seem dangerous to you. And you've made It seem dangerous to you because if you embrace It, It will take away this supposed authority that you think you have which is the basis you use for self-respect. And so you've made yielding to the way things really are a threat to your respectability, to your credibility, to everything that's important to you. You see?

That's how you've made God a fearful thing and Reality a fearful thing. You think you derive energy for existing from being a clever, ingenious, creative presence creating out of the Stuff Of God what you would have the Stuff Of God be defined as. And this you will lose if you yield to God, if you dare to really want to see the Divinity of the rose, the capital "M" Meaning, the Divine Meaning that God is embodying there, or of the spring in the sprinkler head.

Continue.

READER: When you feel tired, it is because you have judged yourself as capable of being tired.

RAJ: Oh, and of course, the only thing... Spirit can't be tired, so if you're tired that means that you're a hunk of matter. Only matter can wear down. Only matter can wear out. Only matter can become exhausted.

Continue.

READER: When you laugh at someone, it is because you have judged him as unworthy. When you laugh at yourself you must laugh at others, if only because you cannot tolerate the idea of being more unworthy than they are. All this makes you feel tired because it is essentially disheartening.

RAJ: And part of this tiredness accumulates through the years, and you begin when you're 40 to be more tired than you were at 20. And at 50, more tired. And at 60, Ohhh. And why? Because what's really happened is that in your commitment to your mutually-agreed-upon God-less definitions, you have disheartened yourself. You have disheartened yourself. And when you become disheartened, less and less feels worthwhile to engage in. And so, without challenging it, you acquiesce to the disheartening and you slowly give up.

Continue.

READER: You are not really capable of being tired, but you are very capable of wearying yourself. The strain of constant judgment is virtually intolerable.

RAJ: I'm going to interrupt there. "Virtually intolerable" has new meaning this day in terms of "virtual reality." It's a virtual intolerance. It's not real. It becomes virtually intolerable. The strain of constant judgment is virtually intolerable, just as all of Creation that you're looking at and calling matter is virtually unreal.

Continue.

READER: It is curious that an ability so debilitating would be so deeply cherished. Yet if you wish to be the author of reality,

RAJ: Oh, there it is. If you wish to be the author of reality. You might have thought that judgment and the authority problem would have something to do with, you know, your mother, or your husband, or your wife, or your father, or your boss, exerting authority over you and the authority problem you're running into as a result of the contest of wills between human beings. But the authority problem is what I've talked about before as the original sin, the origin-al sin, the false belief about one's origin. The original sin is not the first sin. It is the sin, the belief, the misperception of your origin. It's the origin-al sin. It's the origin-al false belief. And the authority problem is that problem. When you think that God is not the origin of you, but that you are the origin of yourself and you're a self-made man, and when you have your mutually-agreed-upon definitions and you all agree that the universe came from a big bang and had nothing to do with God and is not spiritual, you are asserting an authority that has its basis in a misunderstanding about your origin. So the authority problem and the origin-al misunderstanding are one and the same thing.

So we're not going to find out how to win in a contest of wills here and learn how to express authority well so that it blesses everyone. We're talking about challenging the wish to be the author of reality yourself, so that in the willingness to abandon the wish to be the author, you can turn toward the Author, with a capital "A," and say, "I want to Know the Truth about All That Is, including me."

Continue. Start that sentence over.

READER: Yet if you wish to be the author of reality, you will insist on holding on to judgment.

RAJ: It's the only way that you can continue to seem to be an author, an ego, a separate entity.

Continue.

READER: You will also regard judgment with fear, believing that it will someday be used against you.

RAJ: Oh, and it's more than a belief. It's a confidence. You know that someday it will be used against you. You know that some day authority, someone else's authority, something else's authority will supersede yours. You are absolutely confident about it.

Continue.

READER: This belief can exist only to the extent that you believe in the efficacy of judgment as a weapon of defense for your own authority.

RAJ: You see? Absolutely. The marvelously wonderfully insulting Truth is that you don't have any authority. You don't need any authority, because it's not your function to have authority. It's your Function to be that which recognizes the Authority Of God in the Movement of Being that constitutes Creation as the same Mind that is God recognizing Himself in the Movement of Creation as the Source and Condition and Visibility and Tangibility of Creation. It's your Function to let God's Mind be in you so that you have no other consciousness of anything than that which God is having of His Infinite Being.

When God sees what He has made and recognizes Himself in it, He's glorifying Himself, and that Conscious Experience is the definition of Sanity. And that Experience is your Function. It's your Birthright. It's you in your Right Mind, not as a private little separate part having its own mind that can be in its right mind. It's you letting the Mind Of God be, I will say, in your mind so that your puny little mind takes on its full stature, its Sanity, and you become God recognizing Himself in the Movement of Creation.

I know you cannot conceive of what I'm saying without interpreting what I've said as you being swallowed up in some kind of Infiniteness in which there is no sense of identity, and that is not what I am saying, and that is not what the experience is. Because I will tell you this. When that experience is allowed by you and your mind is transformed, you will still relate to each other as well as all of the Brotherhood, and you will relate to each other with more beauty, and more harmony, and more kindness, and more thoughtfulness, and more involvement. And every aspect of your involvement with each other, with your world, with the universe, will be something that you cherish because it is so rich and so full of Meaning.

Let's continue.

READER: God offers only mercy. Your words should reflect only mercy, because that is what you have received and that is what you should give. Justice is a temporary expedient, or an attempt to teach you the meaning of mercy. It is judgmental only because you are capable of injustice.

RAJ: God offers only mercy, the unending opportunity for you to realize that all that you are attempting to do and think that you are succeeding in doing that has arisen from a loveless foundation, you haven't done. And therefore, there is no call for judgment on you. And you are not guilty for what you could not actually accomplish. You cannot even be judged for trying to do the impossible.

You are still the Son and Daughter of God. You are still the full, whole Expression of the Father that He has never stopped expressing. If you can't become less than that even if you believe you have, there's no recourse for the Father except to say, "'Tain't so. It's okay, Child. 'Tain't so." And to Love you so that you might not judge yourself and detain yourself from coming Home again, from re-embracing what you have judged as frightening or threatening, meaning the Divinity of You, the God-ness of You.

So God offers only mercy. God offers only the Love that reveals to you that no matter what you think you've done, you have done nothing wrong. You haven't succeeded at creating a lie. You haven't succeeded at actually manifesting an illusion. To have caused yourself to experience a misperception is not a sin. And misperceptions can be replaced with Truth easily.

Now God offers you... God offers only mercy. Your words should reflect only mercy because that is what you have received. And that is what you should give. And you will experience this mercy if you will turn toward the Father and say, "Thy Will, not mine be done. I may not be able to abandon my willfulness completely in this instant, but I do, Father, want to experience more and more of What You're Being right where that rose is. What You're Being right where that spring in the sprinkler head is. What You're Being right where my obstinate boss is. What You're Being right where my sick cat is being." You see? And when you do that, you will be answered and you will feel the mercy of it and you will feel loved. And it will be easy for you to extend it. And that's the beginning of the end of independence, of private authority, and it's the beginning of awakening.

Justice is a temporary expedient, or an attempt, to teach you the meaning of mercy. God's Love saying to you that the loveless thing you're attempting to do, you can't succeed at doing because you don't have that capacity. It was never given to you. Can seem to you to be a deprivation that authority that you ought to have is being taken away from you. And this Act of Love, because you're in a judgmental state of mind, will be seen as judgmental, as something against you. But the only reason it will seem to be judgment is because you have opted to operate from within a framework where judgment is essential.

In order for you as a group of people to have mutually-agreed-upon definitions, judgments have had to have been used. That's the way you come upon definitions. And that's the way you come upon agreements. And so, when you're in that mutually-agreed-upon state of mind, you are expressing a capability to be unjust. When Love comes along and says, "You're not doing anything at all. You're not succeeding at doing anything loveless. You don't have any authority to act lovelessly. The concept of yourself, the definition of yourself that says 'you are a creator on your own' is false.", you say, "Oh! You're going to take away my identity? You're going to take away my authority? Why are you against me? Why do you want to undermine my respectability, my dignity, my very being?"

And the Father says, "Because that isn't your Being. I am your Being. You and I are One. And in that Oneness, you are Infinite. And in that Oneness, you are unending Love. And in that Oneness, the Glory Of All That Exists dawns upon you as the Glory of the Infinitude of your Being inseparable from Me. And I cannot agree with you when you say that this authority that you think you have is real. And I cannot agree with you when you say that if I take that away from you, you will be less than whole. Because when you let go of it, you will be Whole beyond conception. You will Be And Experience Wholeness beyond your most ingenious, imaginative definition."

Yes. Michael.

ANOTHER SEEKER: So the idea here is to lay judgment aside. And that becomes a process in that, for instance, I'm looking at the roses and I say, "Oh, that's a beautiful rose." Or I may even say, "Oh, look at the beautiful roses. I like the white ones better than the red ones." Where the alternative would be to say something like, "Oh, what a beautiful rose. Father, how do You see this rose?"

And what I'm getting at is there's two things. One is the process just looking at things and saying, "Father, how do You see this? Father, how do You see this? Father, how do You see this?" And the other thing that comes to mind is I'll see something and automatically it's judged. It's like... I mean I realize that I'm doing it but it's so habitual that I make the judgment before I can even say, "Father, how do You see this?"

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: So there's two things. One is how do you live your life in the process of putting judgment aside on a minute-by-minute, second-by-second basis? And the second thing is when you see yourself, when you recognize that there's nothing that you don't judge all the time, do you just let that be and then the judgment comes in and reminds you to say, "Father, how are You seeing this?" How... what's the process?

RAJ: It's really not divided into two things. The fact is that unless you see something you haven't seen before when you see a thing, there is judgment, at least to the extent that you think you know what that thing is and have stopped looking at it with fresh eyes. So, that's the given. That's the fundamental that you have to work with.

Now, as a result of our communion, you know that you have an option and you can ask, "What is the Meaning of this? I realize that I probably don't grasp the Reality of what I'm looking at. Father, I'm curious now. I'm not fully committed to the judgment/definition I have placed upon this part of Creation." And you just do it more and more and more frequently, because when you realize that you're insane, you then know that you have another choice which is Sanity. And you want to be Sane. So, you choose for Sanity more and more and more consistently.

SEEKER: And then right here, it said when it talked about justice, it said that, "Justice is a temporary expedient, or an attempt to teach you the meaning of mercy." I'm not sure what person that's... Is that what we do or is that what the Real Meaning Of Justice is?

RAJ: That's the Real Meaning Of Justice.

SEEKER: So there is like Truth, Beauty, there is a Justice with a capital "J." There's a Justice, a Justice in the real sense.

RAJ: There is indeed. There is Divine Harmony which could be called Divine Law and Order. There is the Way Things Work, with a capital "W." The capital "W" Way Things Work which is just another way of saying there is a Way God Be's All That Is. And when one chooses to behave in a loveless way by acting independent of the Father, one runs into the dissonance of the way they're choosing to behave which is the way things don't work, and the capital "W" Way Things Work.

And always when the capital "W" Way Things Work dominates, it is obvious that the result is Just because it blesses everyone. And so, in that sense, there is Justice. Yes. This Justice uncovers to you the Fact that the mistake you were making was not judgable. And therefore, there's no penalty because you couldn't actually succeed at doing what you thought you were doing. Therefore Justice becomes recognizable as the Father's Expression Of Mercy, not judgment. Justice uncovers the correction of your mind as an Expression Of Mercy, rather than an expression of judgment. That's very important.

Okay. Let us continue.

READER: I have spoken of different symptoms, and at that level there is almost endless variation. There is, however, only one cause for all of them: the authority problem. This is "the root of all evil."

RAJ: The origin-al sin.

Continue.

READER: Every symptom the ego makes involves a contradiction in terms, because the mind is split between the ego and the Holy Spirit, so that whatever the ego makes is incomplete and contradictory. This untenable position is the result of the authority problem which, because it accepts the one inconceivable thought as its premise, can produce only ideas that are inconceivable.

RAJ: Yes. And the one inconceivable thought is, "I'd rather do it myself. I'd rather see it my way." Such a thing is impossible. And therefore beyond conception, inconceivable. "Iwould like to look at things without You, God." [laughing] Impossible. Inconceivable.

Continue.

READER: The issue of authority is really a question of authorship. When you have an authority problem, it is always because you believe you are the author of yourself and project your delusion onto others. You then perceive the situation as one in which others are literally fighting you for your authorship.

RAJ: Yes.

READER: This is the fundamental error of all those who believe they have usurped the power of God.

RAJ: Which itself is the one inconceivable thought and the one thing that can be corrected.

Continue.

READER: This belief is very frightening to them, but hardly troubles God. He is, however, eager to undo it,

RAJ: In a merciful fashion by uncovering your mistake and showing you that your mistake never succeeded at having any effect whatsoever, and that therefore you were—and still are—utterly innocent as His Perfect Self-Expression.

Continue.

READER: He is, however, eager to undo it, not to punish His children, but only because He knows that it makes them unhappy. God's creations are given their true Authorship, but you prefer to be anonymous when you choose to separate yourself from your Author.

RAJ: Interesting thought, isn't it? That when you choose to stand on your own, you become anonymous.

SEEKER (reader): No name?

RAJ: No name. No Presence. No real Presence of your own. You become, you might say, invisible, a non-entity.

READER: Being uncertain of your true Authorship, you believe that your creation was anonymous. This leaves you in a position where it sounds meaningful to believe that you created yourself. The dispute over authorship has left such uncertainty in your mind that it may even doubt whether you really exist at all.

RAJ: And most of you have at one point or another questioned your own existence. That is sad. That is really sad. Because the one thing that is absolutely certain in all this Universe is that you exist. That's the one fundamental, unalterable Fact. And for you to arrive at a point where you might actually doubt your existence is such an extreme, such an extremely polarized state at the opposite end of the spectrum of Reality, that for you to be feeling that is sad. Sad because it's a useless and meaningless experience that you have fooled yourself into believing is real.

And to suffer that impossible experience brings out all of the compassion of the Brotherhood in support of your finding that feeling dissolving rapidly so that you become free of it. You have no idea, all of you who have had that experience, you have no idea the extent to which and the infinite amount, if I may put it that way, of compassion and support is extended to you. Great illumination embraces you. But, of course, you will not see what you have chosen not to see. And so, you do not always feel this compassionate, loving embrace. But it is there and it does slowly penetrate. And it does slowly lift you out of it to a point where you are willing to abandon some of your commitment to the awfulness of your current sense of yourself and then your upliftment can happen much more rapidly.

Continue.

READER: Only those who give over all desire to reject can know that their own rejection is impossible. You have not usurped the power of God, but you have lost it.

RAJ: And you think you have usurped the Power of God.

Continue.

READER: Fortunately, to lose something does not mean that it has gone. It merely means that you do not remember where it is.

RAJ: Isn't that wonderful? A simple clarity. Fortunately, to lose something does not mean that it has gone. It merely means that you do not remember where it is. In that realization, it's easy to bring your curiosity into play and not get stuck in the lostness of it.

Continue.

READER: Its existence does not depend on your ability to identify it, or even to place it.

RAJ: Remember that "it" is referring to the Power of God.

Continue.

READER: It is possible to look on reality without judgment and merely know that it is there.

RAJ: It is possible. It is possible. It is possible to look on Reality without judgment. It really is.

Continue.

READER: Peace is a natural heritage of spirit. Everyone is free to refuse to accept his inheritance, but he is not free to establish what his inheritance is.

RAJ: Ah! So, you all have an inheritance. Wouldn't you love to know what it is? You're not free to choose what it is, but there is one. There's a Birthright that is here for you.

And all of your personal, private, prized authority blocks you from experiencing it. And all I'm doing is trying to inspire you to become curious about what your Birthright is so that you will value opening up to It more than holding on to your mutually-agreed-upon definitions, your sense of personal authority.

Continue.

READER: The problem everyone must decide is the fundamental question of authorship.

RAJ: The one and only question really.

Continue.

READER: All fear comes ultimately, and sometimes by way of very devious routes, from the denial of Authorship.

RAJ: All fear, all fear no matter what it is, comes ultimately from the denial of Authorship, God's Authorship.

Continue.

READER: The offense is never to God, but only to those who deny Him. To deny His Authorship is to deny yourself the reason for your peace, so that you see yourself only in segments. This strange perception is the authority problem.

RAJ: This strange perception is the Authority Problem. That's all there is to the Authority Problem: a strange perception, a biased perception, an altered perception. Again, an altered perception of the only thing there is, period. Don't pride yourself in some capacity you think you have to alter or bias or twist the experience of Reality and call it names you choose to call it, and create ways to be within those definitions that give you a sense of authority independent of God. Don't pride yourself on this.

That's not what your mind is for and that's not your mind's Function and no matter how real you think the results of doing it are, they are not real. And your commitment to their reality constitutes a form of insanity. Is it not interesting that you've never heard of terminal insanity? Insanity can never come to an end result. It's more like... I'm going to put it this way. It's more like what the world looks like when you are looking at it while having a really constipated bowel movement. It takes more effort than you can imagine to be so unnatural as to create a misperception of Reality.

Paul wondered whether I really wanted to say that and I really did [audience laughter].

When you look at a baby having a really difficult B-M and his face turns red and his eyes squinch up, can you imagine what his world looks like to him at that moment? When you are going to the effort to try to be something that you cannot be, it's a strain. It's hard work to do the impossible, and while you're doing it and looking at everything, looking at the Kingdom of Heaven through the strain of it, you see it [laughing] in what your ego calls fresh, new ways, but there's no pleasure in it. There is no Love in it. There's no Peace in it. And to forever be in the middle of the experience of a constipated bowel movement is not something for you to work at becoming comfortable with. It's something to let go of. It's something to abandon.

We are not going to read the last paragraph today. I want to leave it today just exactly where we've left it so that you might be with it.

I thank you very much and I look forward to being with all of you next week.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome everyone who's joining us on the internet. We will go right into the Text without delay.

READER: There is no one who does not feel that he is imprisoned in some way. If this is the result of his own free will he must regard his will as not free, or the circular reasoning in this position would be quite apparent. Free will must lead to freedom. Judgment always imprisons because it separates segments of reality by the unstable scales of desire. Wishes are not facts. To wish is to imply that willing is not sufficient. Yet no one in his right mind believes that what is wished is as real as what is willed. Instead of "Seek ye first the Kingdom of Heaven" say, "Will ye first the Kingdom of Heaven," and you have said, "I know what I am and I accept my own inheritance."

RAJ: A strong series of statements. To see the Truth of them, each one of you must dare to be honest with yourselves, else you will be inclined to say, "Oh, I don't feel imprisoned."

The limits you are all experiencing are the result of free will being expressed; the free will to give your own definitions to everything without getting their Meaning from That Which Created them in the first place in order for you to have something to make up a definition about.

You know what you're doing when you turn within and you say, "I'm willing. I'm willing to consider the possibility that the way I'm seeing everything is flawed. That what I think things are may not be what they are." And you ask to have an experience of the Real Meaning of each thing that goes beyond your current experience of it, what you're doing is you're saying: "Father, I want Your Vision. I want the Will that You are expressing right where this thing is to be established in me as my conscious experience and override and eliminate my current definitions, my current perceptions." And at the bottom line what you're saying is: "Father, I'm asking for the Will You are expressing to render null and void and nonexistent any personal will I thought I had.”

Now the only problem is that you associate your existence and your identity with your will. And so if you ask for your will to be replaced by the Father’s Will, you think that you are asking for your very identity to be obliterated. And you must understand that that is not true. That is not what the result of your request will be. The result of your request will be that you will no longer experience being imprisoned because you will have abandoned, you will have let your personal private sense of will be deleted, if you will, from your experience and that is the very thing which has caused you to experience limitations or imprisonment.

As long as you are exercising willfulness by determining what a thing is to be in your own mind, you are depriving yourself of being inseparable from, at one with, the Movement of capital “B” Being, which is the Father Willing, Creating anew, Being All That Is new.

You will not be swallowed up in anything. Rather you will find yourself, as it were, standing where the fountain pours forth into expression and you will experience yourself Be-ing the Place where it pours forth through, which is what the Father experiences.

“Thy Will be done,” is a request for you to no longer be subject to distorted perceptions of Reality or the Movement of Creation Itself. And so, ultimately, it doesn’t constitute a loss of identity at all. It constitutes a coming back into what your true Real Identity is.

Instead of “Seek ye first the Kingdom of Heaven,” say, “Will ye first the Kingdom of Heaven.” And who are you saying it to? Yourself? No. What that means is you’re returning authority to the only place where Authorship is. You’re saying: “Father, I’m abandoning my so-called position of authority and all of my attempts to create the meaning of everything. And I yield to what you will. Will Ye first the Kingdom of Heaven and I’ll stop willing the world and universe, the distorted perception of the Kingdom of Heaven.” And when you say that, you have said, in effect: “Now I know what I am. I am all You are Be-ing right here where I am, Father. And I’ve returned the Authority to You, so that I might let this mask of personhood that I’ve been creating and maintaining slip from me so that I might see You right here where I am. And in returning Authorship to the only Authorship, the only Author there is, I realize that I am putting myself in a position of accepting my inheritance.”

You see, you exist only for the purpose of standing in receipt of your inheritance. You don’t have a private personal purpose of creating an inheritance for your offspring, or for creating your own good or your own wealth. Your function is to forever stand in receipt of your inheritance which comes from the Father. And when you accept that inheritance, when you stand in receipt because you've abandoned any sense of personal private authorship of your own, it isn't that you still stand separate in receipt of All That Is. What happens is there is a shift of conscious experience in which you find yourself at one with, and inseparable from, the emergence of All That Is. And your inheritance isn't something you stand in receipt of. It is what constitutes You in Your Totality. It is an experience, a new experience, of Identity far superior than the identity you thought you created for yourself by being an independent author willing things to be what you said they were, rather than what God was Being. This is very important.

There is no one who does not feel that he is imprisoned in some way. That's nothing to feel bad about. It simply means there's a whole lot you don't know yet. It means there's a whole lot available to you. And so rather than making you feel bad, it should inspire you to be inquisitive, but to be inquisitive of God.

Before we go on to the next section, I will ask if there is anyone who has a question.

ANOTHER SEEKER: If I remember correctly, Raj, this is the first time we've come up against the word "wish." And so could you give us the difference between "wishing" and "willing"? "Willing" seems like a passive thing, and "wishing" is a more active thing, is that more active thing of the mind?

RAJ: "Wishing" is to want to have something you don't have. "Wishing" is brought into play for the purpose of having things be different than they unalterably are. "Wishing" is an expression of dissatisfaction.

In your sense of separation, you wish for everything to not be what God is being it as (and I'm aware that's not good English) because you want the right to define it yourself. And then you bring willfulness into play. You bring will into play to force yourself to believe the definition and to get everyone else to believe the definition with you, so the group consensus confirms it and seems to make it more real.

When it says, "to wish is to imply that willing is not sufficient," does not mean the same thing as to wish is to imply that will is not sufficient. To wish is to imply that willingness to yield to the Authorship of God is not sufficient. I wish it to be more or different, and I will for it to be different.

SEEKER: So whenever we're not surrendering to the Will of God, we are wishing.

RAJ: You sure are. You sure are. And you're also wishing for the hit of the experience of authority which isn't available to you on your own.

SEEKER: So, most people when they talking about manifesting, the ability to be able to manifest, they're talking about having their wishes fulfilled.

RAJ: That is true. And then they use their spiritual or metaphysical thought processes to supposedly will that thing into manifestation.

SEEKER: Like the power of positive thinking, that kind of stuff.

RAJ: Exactly. Prayer is not a wish and it's not a will. It's not an expression of will. Prayer is "Father, Thy Will be done, not mine."

You cannot comprehend the Fullness of fulfillment that you will experience when you abandon this so-called authority you think you have to manifest success and let in the Fullness of what the Father is Being as You. But I ask all of you to be curious to have the experience.

Okay, let's continue.

SEEKER: Thank you.

READER: Creating versus the Self-Image

Every system of thought must have a starting point. It begins with either a making or a creating, a difference we have already discussed. Their resemblance lies in their power as foundations. Their difference lies in what rests upon them. Both are cornerstones for systems of belief by which one lives. It is a mistake to believe that a thought system based on lies is weak. Nothing made by a child of God is without power. It is essential to realize this, because otherwise you will be unable to escape from the prison you have made.

RAJ: And as I've brought out before, you can't stop being the Sons or Daughters of God, therefore you are using the Substantiality, the Divine Substantiality of What You Are to create for yourselves misperceptions. You haven't lost your Divine status and become something different called a mortal, a human being, who has been born into a material universe for the purpose of refining your soul until you get until you get smart enough not to do it again.

You are the absolute and only Divine One that you will ever be, behaving as though you aren't that Divine Being and believing your behavior. It's because this is the fact that you can escape from your imprisonment. And you can escape from it as quickly as you change your mind. It's not any more complicated than that.

Continue.

READER: You cannot resolve the authority problem by depreciating the power of your mind. To do so is to deceive yourself, and this will hurt you because you really understand the strength of the mind. You also realize that you cannot weaken it, any more than you can weaken God. The "devil" is a frightening concept because he seems to be extremely powerful and extremely active. He is perceived...

RAJ: And that's the key word: He is perceived.

Continue.

READER: He is perceived as a force in combat with God, battling Him for possession of His creations. The devil deceives by lies, and builds kingdoms in which everything is in direct opposition to God. Yet he attracts men rather than repels them, and they are willing to "sell" him their souls in return for gifts of no real worth. This makes absolutely no sense.

RAJ: Now I want to point out that this devil that of course is out there, is something separate from you, different from you, but it's out to get you, is simply a projection of what all of you are already engaged in. You are the devil, if you will. You are the Christ behaving as though you're not the Christ and believing your behavior. And everything you are engaged in is in opposition to Reality because you're enjoying the hit of defining everything yourself. So that's all there is to the devil. It isn't a powerful force. It's just a misuse of your mind.

It seems to entice you and it seems to cause you to be willing to abandon God, abandon your Soul, abandon your Self, in favor of the concept of yourself that you've created and the imagined satisfaction of developing this self-authority through willfulness to the point where it has power of its own. And yet this is all just an unrealistic imagining in your mind.

Continue.

READER: We have discussed the fall or separation before, but its meaning must be clearly understood. The separation is a system of thought real enough in time, though not in eternity.

RAJ: Let me interrupt you. The separation is a system of thought. That's all. It's a system of thought. It's a way of thinking about things. It's not an event. It's not even a result. The separation occurred and now you're separate from God. Hopefully with some sort of gold tether but separate from God. No! All there is to the separation is the way of thinking that you have adopted in order to perceive things the way you want to perceive them.

Continue.

READER: All beliefs are real to the believer. The fruit of only one tree was “forbidden” in the symbolic garden. But God could not have forbidden it, or it could not have been eaten. If God knows His children, and I assure you that He does, would He have put them in a position where their own destruction was possible? The “forbidden tree” was named the “tree of knowledge.” Yet God created knowledge and gave it freely to His creations. The symbolism here has been given many interpretations, but you may be sure that any interpretation that sees either God or His creations as capable of destroying Their Own purpose is in error.

RAJ: That is very clear.

Continue.

READER: Eating of the fruit of the tree of knowledge is a symbolic expression for usurping the ability for self-creating.

RAJ: Okay. Eating of the fruit of the tree of knowledge is a symbolic expression for usurping the ability for self-creating, meaning that you have attempted to take on the capacity to be self-creative yourself. You’ve stolen authorship from God in effect.

Continue.

READER: This is the only sense in which God and His creations are not co-creators. The belief that they are is implicit in the “self-concept,” or the tendency of the self to make an image of itself. Images are perceived, not known.

RAJ: They are masks. They are costumes that characterize you. You go to a fair and there are artists there who will draw caricatures of you that capture the essence, but not the fullness, and usually bring a little bit of humor in, which means that it makes a little bit of fun of the flaws in you. Images are perceived, not known.

Continue.

READER: Knowledge cannot deceive, but perception can. You can perceive yourself as self-creating, but you cannot do more than believe it. You cannot make it true. And, as I said before, when you finally perceive correctly you can only be glad that you cannot. Until then, however, the belief that you can is the foundation stone in your thought system, and all your defenses are used to attack ideas that might bring it to light. You still believe...

RAJ: Let's stop right there. And all your defenses are used to attack ideas that might bring it to light. Again the reason is because your sense of identity is derived from the imagined authority that you have brought into play so that you might succeed at replacing God by actually defining something and the definition becoming the new capital "M" Meaning of it. The defense comes up because you do not want to lose this cherished sense of identity, this caricature of identity.

Continue.

READER: You still believe you are an image of your own making. Your mind is split with the Holy Spirit on this point, ...

RAJ: I'm going to interrupt, and when you continue I'd like you to go back to the beginning of that sentence. Your mind is split with the Holy Spirit on this point. Remember that I said the Holy Spirit is your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego. This is another way, that is another way of saying your mind is split with the Holy Spirit.

Continue.

READER: Your mind is split with the Holy Spirit on this point, and there is no resolution while you believe the one thing that is literally inconceivable. That is why you cannot create and are filled with fear about what you make.

RAJ: Understand that when something is conceived, it is Created. When something is imagined, all you have is a belief as a result. You have what you made-up. What is conceived becomes Created. Creation is God conceiving infinitely according to His Nature and Being. And what God conceives and is experienced as Creation varies not one iota from the Nature and Character of God.

Your Function is to be the conscious experience of the conceiving which becomes Creation. The authority you are all trying so hard to have independently is an Authority that waits for you to join with It letting It be the Totality of You so that you find yourself standing always at the threshold between Conception and Creation, being All of Both with God, with God. And without any sense of tininess or privateness or differentness associated with it.

Continue.

READER: The mind can make the belief in separation very real and very fearful, and this belief is the “devil.” It is powerful, active, destructive and clearly in opposition to God, because it literally denies His Fatherhood.

RAJ: And there we are again. When you claim an existence separate from God, you are denying His Fatherhood. You are denying your Sonship.

A Father without a Son is not a Father and a Son without a Father is not a Son. Let me put it this way: If a Son could successfully separate himself from His Father, both would cease to exist.

Continue.

READER: Look at your life and see what the devil has made. But realize that this making...

RAJ: I'm going to interrupt one more time. Look at your life and see what the devil has made. "Ooo hoo, you see what the devil has made?" No. Look at your life and see what your practice of giving your own definitions to everything as being different from what God is Be-ing right there has made for you. Look what it has made-up for you. It has made-up for you a lot of curious, radically unique and distorted perceptions that constantly reinforce a sense of threat and danger and persecution and vulnerability for you. Look at what the devil has made. Look at the thought system you have been employing has made for you. When you realize that it's your very own thought system that has made it for you and that that's all that there is to the devil, you'll realize that there is no evil power out there that may be stronger than you. And you will also recognize that the solution to the problem is a simple change of mind from making things up yourself to letting God be the only One Who is making anything, actually which means that He is Creating them.

Again, waking up is transferring the mantle of authorship from your shoulders to the Real Author. And again, although that may seem to deprive you of something essential to your individuality, your sense of who you are, it will return you to Who You REALLY Are because you will be taking your place as Son and letting Father be Father. And in that joining you will lose all sense of difference from the Father and find that the Father is All there is of You. Your Identity will be infinitely enhanced and then when you look at your life or your experience, you will rejoice. You will exist in an ever-present conscious experience of Joy.

Continue.

READER: But realize that this making will surely dissolve in the light of truth, because its foundation is a lie. Your creation by God is the only foundation that cannot be shaken, because the light is in it. Your starting point is truth, and you must return to your Beginning. Much has been seen since then, ...

RAJ: And you could say much has been made, or a lot of water has gone under the bridge with flotsam and jetsam of your imagination flowing by.

Continue.

READER: Much has been seen since then, but nothing has really happened. Your Self is still in peace, even though your mind is in conflict. You have not yet gone back far enough, and that is why you become so fearful. As you approach the Beginning, you feel the fear of the destruction of your thought system...

RAJ: And your sense of your identity.

Continue.

READER: ... upon you as if it were the fear of death. There is no death, but there is a belief in death.

RAJ: And you must understand this so that when you are faced with this fear that arises as you get back near the Beginning, you will say, "I will proceed further anyway. Because all there is to this fear that is arising is nothing more than the death throes of what I have imagined myself to be and which I have invested emotion into."

So don't be surprised that it's there, but also, don't be deterred by it.

Pardon?

ANOTHER SEEKER: What does that mean, "as you approach the Beginning"?

RAJ: As you retrace your steps and you get back to, closer to, the point where you made that initial step away from Home and said, "I would rather see it my way." As you get back closer your Essential Being, your Real Self, because you are abandoning your insistence upon private personal authority, you will find fear increasing. That's why I said, when you get near the doors of the Kingdom of Heaven, you will find that the ego will create gargoyles around it to scare you off. And the point is: Persist forward. Know that that will happen, and when it happens, disregard it.

SEEKER: So "Beginning" just means where you begun to have a thought different from God.

RAJ: Exactly. The Beginning is where you started from on this fateful journey.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome. Yes?

ANOTHER SEEKER: In regards to what you just said, I've been experiencing more peace recently, except for certain events that seem to take place that bring up issues, and I'm wondering, are those events taking place because the ego's putting up the gargoyles, as you said, or because that is what I have to experience on my journey back to the Beginning?

RAJ: Each undoing of a belief has its own little gargoyles, has its own little resistances, because you're breaking a habit. And when you break a habit, there's a certain discomfort because you have become comfortable with your habits. The abandoning of a habit is the abandoning of a certain level of comfort which you have held onto in order to avoid being out of control.

What's being referred to here as quote "as you approach the Beginning," we're not talking about the little breaking of habits that occurs along the way, but as you near the end of the undoing of old beliefs and old definitions, that point where the only thing left for you to do is to abandon control completely and forever. Okay.

SEEKER: Can I just review... Oh, before you move on, can I go back to the conceiving thing?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: I sort of got stuck there because it seems like the paragraph didn't fit in with the rest of it. Is God the only One Who conceives and does He conceive through us? And that is inspiration?

RAJ: God is the only One Who conceives. The fact is that you're not separate from Him for Him to conceive through.

This "us" that's on its way home is an imaginary "us." It's You, the Divine One That You Are, believing that you are some sort of independent lost soul, lost from God, on a journey home. It's the Christ believing he or she isn't the Christ, returning to the realization that he or she is the Christ. And so this one apparently coming Home is the imaginary self. But the closer you get to Home, the less that imaginary self has value for you and the more you find yourself feeling your Divinity and your Nature as It is derived from God. And as that happens, you desire even more fully to have God reveal to you this Divine Nature of your Being. And so, as you move toward Home, and as you yield to what the Father reveals to you about You, you become more and more undefended against experiencing your Christhood.

But when you get Home, there is no experience of separation and you are not something for God to conceive through. You find yourself to be the Conscious Experience of the Movement of Conception/Creation.

Now, You Are Being That at this moment. That is What You Are at the moment, at this moment. You're just not paying any attention to it. You have, in effect, blocked it out because you preferred to toy with the idea of being able to be a private personal creator on your own. And you can't possibly do that unless somehow you block from yourself the fact that God is the only Author. So you must deny that in order to have a place, as insane as it is, to pretend authorship and to explore all of the interesting facets of it, and what it means for you and what it means about you and what power it gives you over things, including your brothers and sisters, and so on and so on. You see? You can't possibly explore that in a believable way unless you deny God's Authority and push It out of sight.

Nevertheless, You as the Presence of God are at this very moment Being the Movement of God that is Conception/Creation. And coming back into your Right Mind means becoming undefended to this Fullness of Your Being so that you are not denying it so successfully that you're somehow unconscious of it. You see? Okay.

You must be careful when we talk about the journey Home, because it implies that there is someone making a journey Home. And quite obviously, you have to bring into play an intent to go back Home. But the only thing that can successfully have the intent to return Home is some part of the Awakened One That You Are, that could never have been gotten rid of, asserting Itself instead of the willfulness that wants to assert itself independently.

ANOTHER SEEKER: _____

RAJ: It is your Sanity registering with you in the middle of your insanity. And so it would seem that there is an insane one getting more sane. But the fact is that it is the Whole One that each of you is, coming into a fuller experience of What It Is in Its Wholeness. So it can be confusing. That's why it's so important not to get too focused on this one who is returning Home and the dynamics of the trip.

SEEKER: It's just Be-ing Divine Movement. If we are, we are in action as Divine Movement.

RAJ: Yes. Either consciously or unconsciously. And if it's unconsciously...

SEEKER: Then we screw it up.

RAJ: If it is unconsciously, everything is already screwed up as far as your perceptions of the Only Thing To Perceive go. And the Only Thing To Perceive, or have a perception about, is the Kingdom of Heaven—Reality.

SEEKER: So going back to Michael's statement about positive thinking. What is that? Is that... could what positive...

RAJ: "Every day in every way, I'm getting better and better." It's a positive use of will, of willfulness, personal will. Yes. It doesn't really have anything to do with yielding to the only Author there is. And that yielding to the only Author there is, is the only thing that will uncover you better and better. You see?

It's time to abandon clear, correct thinking as the means for getting Home. And let this one clear thought be the bridge to getting Home, and that one clear thought is: Thy Will be done.

SEEKER: But doesn't sometimes "Thy Will be done" come out in positive feedback to somebody or a positive... if something awful is going on and you just sort of have this... you see that there is a purpose, or there's gotta be something and it comes out like positive thinking, or positive speaking. Oh, I'm sorry. Isn't that a natural...

RAJ: Love. When you are in touch with the Father, when you are the Expression of Love, of course the Truth that comes out of your mouth, the Love that comes out of your mouth, will always be affirmative.

SEEKER: That's what I was getting at.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And that answers it.

RAJ: But that's different from putting together...

SEEKER: By rote.

RAJ: ...a string of words that are positive and thinking that by rehearsing that string of words, you're going to get better.

SEEKER: Because that's phony.

RAJ: Because that doesn't let God in yet. That's still personal private authorship of the string of words. This whole book, A Course in Miracles, is... are positive ideas. Positive meaningful ideas will always lead you in the direction of abandoning thoughts for the inspiration that God has for you. Truly meaningful words will help relieve you of the fear of abandoning control and submitting yourself to the Father's Will. But that's different than a practice of positive thinking. Is that clear?

SEEKER: Absolutely. Yes. Thank you.

RAJ: Yes. Continue.

READER: The branch that bears no fruit will be cut off and will wither away. Be glad! The light will shine from the true Foundation of life, and your own thought system will stand corrected.

RAJ: There it is. The branch that bears no fruit. In other words, the thought system that doesn't result in Creation, the thought system that makes rather than creates, will be cut off and will wither away. Be glad, rejoice! The Light will shine from the true capital "F" Foundation or the true Author of Life. And your own thought system will stand corrected. In other words, you will not disappear. You will remain with your thought system corrected so that now your thought system is derived from the influx of Truth that God is embodying at all times right where you are. So this has nothing to do with annihilation at all.

Okay, continue.

READER: It cannot stand otherwise. You who fear salvation are choosing death. Life and death, light and darkness, knowledge and perception, are irreconcilable. To believe that they can be reconciled is to believe that God and His Son can not. Only the oneness of knowledge is free of conflict. Your kingdom is not of this world because it was given you from beyond this world.

RAJ: Now just a moment: "Your Kingdom," this is not a Kingdom that you've created. "Your Kingdom" is the Kingdom that it's the Father's good pleasure to give you and always has been giving you. "Your Kingdom" is the One that is Your Inheritance. As long as you see yourself as separate from God, His Kingdom will seem to be something you stand in receipt of. But when you join with the Father, the Kingdom is experienced as Your Being.

Continue.

READER: Only in this world is the idea of an authority problem meaningful.

RAJ: Only in the world that you have made and made-up.

Continue.

READER: The world is not left by death but by truth, and truth can be known by all those for whom the Kingdom was created, and for whom it waits.

RAJ: And It waits for you because It Is You. It waits for you to re-embrace It. It waits for you to re-embrace your Self. And you re-embrace your Self by embracing the Father as the Father that makes You the Son or You the Offspring. And the moment you reestablish the Fatherhood of God by claiming the Daughtership or the Sonship of God, then the Father and the Son become One once again as your Conscious Experience. And that's what this is all about.

Wow! What more can we say? Well, about 675 more pages. But that is where we will end for today, with more of the good news. I love you all.

AUDIENCE: Thank you, Raj. We love you, too.

RAJ: And you know what? You're loving me. What You Really Are, even when you're down in the dumps, even when you're at the bottom of the barrel, even when you're pissed off at me, you're loving me because you haven't stopped being the Presence of what God is Be-ing, and what you therefore really are is still Loving me right in the midst of your, I'm going to say, virtual anger and distress. You are always all the Presence of Love.

Sometimes you wonder, "how can he listen to all of us wailing, either because of our misery or because of our upset with him?" Well, I hear it, but what I experience is the Love That You ARE. And the Love That You Are perfectly being at every moment, you could say, is the ongoing reassurance that you are providing me with that says what you're believing isn't harming you at all. You haven't been able to make your imaginations real. And so I know, because of the impeccable Love that each of you cannot stop Be-ing and that is Loving me, that you are assured of abandoning the wish, the wish you have to be personal private creators that ultimately are causing your wailing.

So I just want you to know how Complete and how Ultimate You Are at the moment. And that's why Awakening is literally a journey without distance. So don't get fascinated with the journey of Awakening. Okay.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

RAJ: Microphone.

ANOTHER SEEKER: If we are loving you at the moment and you feel that, are we not also loving each other?

RAJ: Oh yes! You are bathed in Love—unbelievably and infinitely. You get a feel when people talk about passing on and moving toward a Light that is whiter than anything they have ever experienced. The Love with which you are all loving each other is the Energy of Spirit, and it is Light. And you stand in such illumination, you wouldn't believe it.

I'm telling you this so that when you are in your darkest moment, you might not take that darkest moment so seriously. And in not taking it quite so seriously cause yourself to be vulnerable to the Experience of Love, of the Love with which all of you are blessing each other, and the Love that I am extending to you. The dream, it just 'tain't so. And you need to have a glimpse of just how fragile the dream is, just how fragile the suffering is, and how easily it can crack apart and disappear. I look forward to being with you next week.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 4 – THE ILLUSIONS OF THE EGO
Section – INTRODUCTION
First Edition – p. 47 / Second Edition – p. 52

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: Don't sigh Michael. And good afternoon to everyone who's joining us on the internet as well, and if those of you on the internet have a question specific to something we're discussing from the Course, feel free to post your question. Okay.

RAJ READING: THE ILLUSIONS OF THE EGO

RAJ: All of you have rather sloppy definitions of the ego that tend to cause it to seem as though it is something that has a life of its own. And yet last week we found that the ego is nothing more than a thought system, a system of thoughts, something made-up, an infrastructure, you might say, of ideas strung together in a way that seem to give you a code for living and a means of understanding the Kingdom of Heaven without ever having to refer to the Father in order to understand the Real Meaning of the Kingdom of Heaven. And so using this thought system, you walk around in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven calling it the world and universe which started with a big bang that is purely physical and this you call life.

Now, imagine, if you will, that sometime in the not too distant future you can go to the grocery store and you can buy packets, foil packets, little tiny foil packets of instant water. Freeze-dried water vapor, we'll say. And all you have to do, as with any other instant product, is bring it home and no matter that the packet is very tiny, you pour it into a glass and you add water.

You're supposed to smile. [brief scattered laughs] Does anyone get it? [a few more quick laughs]

Now, we'll bring it into focus. There isn't any such thing and can't be any such thing as dry water that can be put into a packet. But you can imagine kids pretending to have little packets of dry water, just little empty packets, and they pour it in and then they add water and they're amazed at how much you can make with just that little packet. Because their attention is on the packet and they're ignoring the fact that they are adding real water to nothing and ending up with as much real water as they want. They are consciously ignoring the facts and sticking with their imagination that they have created dry water, dried instant water that they can make as much as they want from.

Now, the ego is like dry water. It's a bunch of nothing. But you all talk about the ego as though it's something. You say, "What an ego he is." You define other people by their egohood. You say, "Boy, my ego is on the rampage today." And at other times you acknowledge that you are an ego. And yet, the ego is nothing but a thought system, a collection of ideas. You think of the ego as being willful, and therefore having a persona that has the capacity to have an original intent and carry it out. And yet the fact is that it is nothing but a thought system, a collection of thoughts and ideas that you believe and have committed yourself to.

Now, the first step away from Home was the mad idea, you might say, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. I'd rather see All That Is according to definitions I give it." In that act, you didn't realize that you were also giving yourself a definition that was nothing but dry water. Nothing but nothing. You were saying, "I have a capacity to see things on my own. I have a capacity to see things the way I want to see them." And that was the beginning of what you call the ego.

But again, the ego is nothing but a packet of nothing. And the only way it can seem to become something is if you add the Real Thing to it. And so, what is the only Real Thing you can add to an idea of an ego as a thing? It is the Christ That You Are. It is What You Really Are. And so, as I said last week, you have developed beliefs and you have made commitment to them so now you believe them. You are the Christ pretending not to be the Christ and believing your belief.

This is very important, especially as we go into this section about the illusions of the ego. Because all there is to your ego is a bunch of nothing constituted of ideas not gathered from God but from the imagination. In other words, created out of nothing, and the result of that creation is still a bunch of nothing but with a bunch of complicated definitions that seem to have substance.

And the only thing that makes the ego seem to be able to act with purpose is that your capacity to be the expression of purpose which is Real has to be added to it, and then you have to consciously choose to ignore that you've added something Real to it so that you can think that the nothing that you made out of nothing has become something. Just like the kids thinking that they put in a packet of nothing, added water to it, and the nothing became water. And they ignore the fact that the water that is there was Real.

Is that clear to everyone?

So, while we're reading about the ego here, we're not reading about you. We're not reading about a thing. We're not reading about anything that has a capacity to have a conscious intent. And you must remember that all there is to it is a Christ imagining that he or she has a capacity to conceive of himself or herself as something separate from what God is Being. And, then borrowing from the Truth or the Reality of Himself or Herself that which is Real and adding It to the infrastructure of nothing causing it to seem to be something capable of conscious intent, of conscious will that can act, that can make, that can wish, and thus be a life force, if you will.

So again, any ego you think you are, or any ego you think you see, is nothing but the Divine One that God has Created pretending not to be the Presence of God, believing that he or she is not the Presence of God, and then consciously rejecting his or her Source and abiding in this imagination, this system of thoughts.

Once you understand this, you will see that the ego is nothing to deal with, it doesn't really exist, and that the solution to the problem of being an ego is to once again consciously remember your Source. Consciously remember the only Real Author there is and abandon any authority you thought you had so that you begin to realize that whatever is experienceable is Real by virtue of the Father's Will, and what you thought it was is really non-existent.

In doing this, in remembering your Source like we read last week, you remember God is your Father which makes You His Son which makes You Real. And in your acknowledgement of What You Truly Are, in your remembering What You Truly Are, the Father and the Son become One as a Conscious Experience and you wake up.

So I hope I've helped to make it clear that the ego is like a packet of dry water to which you must add something Real, which is the Divine One That You Are, the Christ That You Are, and that seems to give the ego life. But the Life is drawn from what is Real about You. This is very important. Even so, the life that the ego seems to have by virtue of your having added something Real to it, exists no more than the contents of the packet of nothing that were put into the glass before you added the real water to it.

So, again, the ego is nothing more than the Divine One That You Are believing that you are not What You Are and suffering from your belief. But it still doesn't make your existence as an ego real. Therefore, the solution lies in remembering that right now in the middle of your dream, you are a Divine One creating an illusion and believing it. And the only thing that is necessary in order to wake up is not to challenge the ego that you seem to have created, but to remember Who You Are and to throw your allegiance on that side.

Okay, let us begin.

READER: Chapter 4 THE ILLUSIONS OF THE EGO

The Bible says that you should go with a brother twice as far as he asks. It certainly does not suggest that you set him back on his journey. Devotion to a brother cannot set you back either. It can lead only to mutual progress. The result of genuine devotion is inspiration, a word which properly understood is the opposite of fatigue. To be fatigued is to be dis-spirited, but to be inspired is to be in the spirit. To be egocentric is to be dis-spirited, but to be Self-centered in the right sense is to be inspired or in spirit. The truly inspired are enlightened and cannot abide in darkness.

RAJ: To be egocentric is to be dis-spirited. To identify with the ego is to be identified with the emptiness in the packet to which you added what was Real about you. To get a divorce from your Father by choosing to see things on your own is to put yourself in a place devoid of the Father, a place devoid of your Source, at least in your imagination, and in effect to become unplugged, and that is dis-spiriting. That causes you to lose your Spirit. To be dis-spirited is to be fatigued. You find your energy draining because you're identifying with something non-existent in a place that's empty of anything.

This is important. To be fatigued is to be dis-spirited. But to be inspired is to be in the Spirit. And so as long as you have your back to the Altar, you will feel weak and in a process of becoming constantly weaker. But when you turn toward the Altar to ask of the Father, "What does this mean? What does that mean? What do the petals on the rose mean? What did you intend by that petal on the rose?", then you open yourself up to be inspired, infilled. Infilled with the knowledge of what is Real rather than being, you might say, infilled with the emptiness of something that does not exist.

Continue.

SEEKER: It says here, "The truly inspired are enlightened and cannot abide in darkness." I think where that causes confusion for me is that at times in my life I have felt inspired, but I don't think I've ever been fully awake or enlightened.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: So what this is saying that I'm sure many people have felt inspired by many things, but that's not the same kind of inspired as this is talking about.

RAJ: No, that is not correct. True inspiration, the inspiration that is experienced because the penetration of Truth has occurred, that is Real. If you are calling listening to a speaker who jacks you up and who revs you up, if you call that inspiration, that is not inspiration, even though you might float out of there on a high.

SEEKER: Well, I find you inspiring at times. Am I... is that...

RAJ: Well, you'll also agree it's never because I've jacked up your ego.

SEEKER: That's true. I see the difference. Okay. I'll pass the mike now.

RAJ: Yes.

READER: You can speak from the spirit or from the ego, as you choose. If you speak from spirit you have chosen to "Be still and know that I am God."

RAJ: And I'm going to interrupt there. It might be helpful to remember that it's God that is saying this and this would only need to be said to a Christ who has chosen to indulge in imagination and turn his back on the Father, and thus, as I said, steal authority from the Father in order to apparently engage it as an act of his own or her own.

And so the Father says, "Be still. Shut up. Silence your mind. Be still and know that I am God, not you. Be still and know that I am the Father and you are the Son because this is how you remember Who You Are which is the essential first step to coming back Home into your Right Mind. Be still and know that I am the Author. I am the Source. And when you stop trying to be an independent source of things and let yourself back into Me, you will find your Conscious Experience of Being, the Experience of Being the Source, the experience of being the threshold where Conception moves into Creation. You will find yourself having the full blown Conscious Experience of Being Me which is your Function. In other words, You and I are One, and I am that One."

It's important that this be understood so that you might realize that the process of awakening will constitute the complete, complete, complete relinquishment of any authority you might have on your own. And yet, that will not mean that you will cease to be conscious of yourself as the Father individualized, period.

And remember that I have said before that the Father individualized is Universal and specific simultaneously. And I will let that just set with you.

Let's continue.

READER: These words are inspired because they reflect knowledge. If you speak from the ego you are disclaiming knowledge instead of affirming it, and are thus dis-spiriting yourself.

RAJ: That's important. When you go through your day without ever experiencing or allowing for a conscious Idea of God, and without for a moment looking at anything that confronts you in your day without remembering that if anything is going on there at all, it must be God and therefore it must be more than what I'm experiencing at the moment and therefore I want to be curious about what it really is, you are in the act of dis-spiriting yourself. You are in the act of pushing yourself further and further into the hole, further and further into ignorance, further and further into the quote "the problem of being" unquote.

Now, am I trying to discourage you? No. I'm simply trying to show you that there's another choice available to you that is a significantly better choice so that you might at least play with it once in a while, so that you might engage the conscious awareness once in a while, and then, hopefully, more and more frequently.

Continue.

READER: Do not embark on useless journeys, because they are indeed in vain. The ego may desire them, but spirit cannot embark on them because it is forever unwilling to depart from its Foundation.

RAJ: The ego may desire them. Oh now, there it sounds like the ego has a capacity to actually desire something all by itself because it is something real. The Christ who is choosing to ignore his Christhood and thus is experiencing his Divinity in a fantastic imaginative way, and I use the word "fantastic" with a sense of fantasy, that one, and all of them are, has become hooked on the challenge of overcoming the discomfort of trying to be something he isn't. And so that Divine One which is referred to here as the ego, that Divine One brings Its Divine Capacity to commit to something to the overcoming of the discomfort of trying to be something It isn't by doing something with the problem it perceives rather than remembering Its Divinity and abandoning the game of imagination.

So, here's where the carelessness in language comes into play about the ego. You, the Divine Ones that You Are, have imagined, have imagined, and I know I'm being repetitive, have imagined out of whole cloth, out of nothing, out of the ethers, if you will, something that cannot be. And this is an unnatural function to you because your Function is to be in the constant acknowledgement of the Movement of Creation that God is Being from Whom you are not separate.

So, you have imagined something out of whole cloth, out of nothing, and then you have chosen to make commitment to it. And you've made commitment to it with the Will of God in You, while claiming that you have no connection to God, and therefore, you have created a state of delusion. But it's the Christ, the Holy One, doing it. And that's what is called the ego. The ego may desire them, meaning useless journeys, but Spirit, the Divine One That You Are, cannot embark on them because It is forever unwilling to depart from Its Foundation, meaning Its Source.

The Divine One that you are, in spite of this imagination, has not stopped being the Son of God or the Daughter of God. And the fact is that you, even though you believe you have successfully created a world and universe through the use of your imagination, have not been able to create it. And waking up is the discovery that you made nothing that occurs because you come to a point where you're willing to abandon fantasy and the apparent hit that you get from trying to overcome the uncomfortableness that's inherent in believing something that isn't true.

Continue.

READER: The journey to the cross should be the last "useless journey." Do not dwell upon it, but dismiss it as accomplished. If you can accept it as your own last useless journey, you are also free to join my resurrection.

RAJ: Now what do you think the journey to the cross would be? Well, the journey to the cross is the end result of your fantasy, the end result of your redefining the Kingdom of Heaven as the world and the universe and of yourself as a separate entity from God, having thereby put yourself in a position of being dis-spirited, having put yourself in a position where the nature of your existence is one of increasing exhaustion. You will ultimately come to the point where something will kill you, whether it's someone nailing nails into your hands on a cross made out of boards, or whether it's a disease, or whether it's an accident.

You will inevitably come to the end result of the choice you have made to define everything by yourself and the attempt to exist in a space that is empty of anything while believing it is full. If you can accept this experience of being that you are having because you turned your back on the Altar as a last useless attempt to be on your own, you will also be free to join my resurrection.

Continue.

READER: Until you do so your life is indeed wasted. It merely re-enacts the separation, the loss of power, the futile attempts of the ego at reparation, and finally the crucifixion of the body, or death. Such repetitions are endless until they are voluntarily given up.

RAJ: And this refers to lifetimes. And it even refers to what you might call lifetimes within a single lifetime, because many times a single life seems to be many in which you make the same mistake over and over and over again, because you choose over and over again to do something that doesn't work.

Continue.

READER: Do not make the pathetic error of "clinging to the old rugged cross." The only message of the crucifixion is that you can overcome the cross.

RAJ: But you don't overcome the cross by hacking it to bits with an axe. You don't overcome the cross by addressing the cross. You get off the cross by getting out of the illusion. You get out of the illusion by turning back... turning toward the Altar again. Turning toward God and willingly saying, "Thy Will be done. I know You are the Author. I know I don't have any authority. And the only authority that I've ever thought I had has continuously brought me to the experience of crucifixion. And you know what? I'm tired of it. And I'm not going to wait until the crucifixion this time to do something about it. While things are still pretty good, even though I'm not totally happy, I am going to turn back toward the Altar. I am going to start inquiring of God. I am going to start listening without interfering with hearing to what the Father has to say to me. I am going to let His Perspective register with me. I am going to let His Authority register with me as the Conscious Experience of What Everything Means as the Father is Being It."

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: The last few words you just mentioned, I would like to know if, I'm going to say, anybody here does that? Do you know how to do that?

RAJ: Let me put it this way. Those who are here are leaning in that direction. The Divinity of each one of you is beginning to have enough ascendance in you to cause you in your ignorance to have a desire to have a new experience derived from the Father's Perspective. And so there is a willingness, an intent, to let that experience in. And that is increasing. But there's no one here doing it fully. And it doesn't matter. The point is that the Divine One That You Are, each one of you, is, well, this is a poor choice of words, awakened in you.

Of course, the Divine One That You Are never went to sleep but the experience of the Divine One That You Are is more conscious for you now. And It is what gives you the motivation to press further toward Home. Your ego will never encourage you in that direction. And so, if you are moving in that direction, which I guarantee you that you are, it is because the Divine One That You Are has greater ascendancy in your awareness than it used to. And It is what you are aligning your present sense of yourself with. And this is providing the energy for quote "the trip Home" unquote. Does that answer your question?

SEEKER: Uh, no. [laughing] Yes. But it doesn't address the fact that, and I wasn't specific about that in the first place that um... how do you do it? What I hear you saying is curiosity. You know, I can be curious and then I can trip myself over being curious and then I can trip myself over "okay so the rowboat came by, but it didn't feel like the rowboat." So, you know, I mean curiosity can also be difficult for me. So how do you do it?

RAJ: You, well, you hit the nail on the head. Curiosity is indeed the key element. And you need to persist in staying with the curiosity with this specific proviso, that you are addressing your curiosity to God so that God can answer, so that a connection between you and the Father can be had. And then you simply abide persistently with the curiosity because you have to allow the inspiration to come. You have to let the Father in.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome. Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: What's difficult to me when I read this is it's general still, as the Course presents to me a general road map, but when you start to take it into the details, when I start to take it into the details of my life, I have big questions because I think of, "Is this place better than that place? Is this activity better than that activity? Should I be, let's say, in the kitchen rather than in my crafts room where I really love to be, and maybe even become resentful that I can't be where I really want to be doing what I really want to do." So when you say willfulness, what exactly does one give up? Does he give up the talents that, let's say, in gardening or going shopping for a family member? In other words, how does this get practically realized? That's even a general question.

RAJ: There is no activity you can be engaged in, whether it's in the kitchen, the crafts room, the store, where you are not confronted with Creation. With the Presence of God, in other words. And so no matter what the apparent activity is, it is at that moment the available threshold for you to recognize God in what is happening, to re-experience the connection of the absolute Divinity of whatever is going on. You think you are wanting to accomplish the finishing of a meal, or the finishing of a project, or the finishing of the grocery shopping, but the real goal is the Experience of God in whatever is happening in the moment.

PAUL: Just a moment.

SEEKER: Well, I have a little other part to this.

RAJ: Continue.

SEEKER: So let's say I embark on a new project and I join a new group of people who enjoy the same thing I enjoy. And I believe that I'm going to have some fun, or some fulfillment, or expand my talents. But I end up having a surprising experience that had nothing to do with the goal that I set out to do. I'm going to share an event that happened a few weeks ago. To my surprise when I thought I was moving in a direction of fulfillment, I found myself dealing with something completely different than I had set out to do. During the course of the event, I found someone pulling the chair out from under me, literally, and falling on my face on the floor and appearing to hear...

RAJ: I beg your pardon. Your rear end is not your face

SEEKER: Okay, I fell on my rear end and heard cracks and joints moving, and like, you know, suddenly realizing, "Oh, you know, I'm still experiencing myself as a body." So here I am considering that I'm going in one direction and I'm caught short to say, "Oh well, that's your learning!" So I'm at square one, you know, back to learning something that I didn't think I had to learn and I really didn't want to learn right now because I wanted to learn the other thing. So how do you explain those kind of situations?

RAJ: You really already know the answer because you took the ego's bait to engage in a social activity with a potential circle of like-minded friends out there and have the camaraderie that you're told should be available there. And yet, that morning, your Guidance said, "Don't go today." And you overrode it because the infrastructure of the thought system called the ego said, "There's a promise of something you don't have out there. And, you know, it would be good for you not to be so private. And it would be good for you to have, you know, a little social time, friendship, while you're also learning how to develop your skill more fully."

And you were completely ungrounded because you abandoned the Place where the Guidance came from. And, so you might say, you made a useless journey and got to the crucifixion part of the story real quick.

I understand that part of the infrastructure of the ego is that if you don't engage in easy-going gay repartee with your friends and neighbors, life will be empty, life will be boring. Well, look at the alternative. Peace would have been a lot better than the crucifixion you experienced. Also you have to be willing to get rid of or let go of the measuring stick that the ego uses. In other words, the so-called rules set into place by the infrastructure of all of the various ideas in the thought system that is called the ego. Maybe you are not out there in the world. And maybe you're not out there engaging in the community. But where are you getting the measuring stick that says, "You ought to be doing that. That's what everybody does. That's what normal people do."

But you know what? That isn't what your Guidance is saying. If you will stay with your Guidance, I promise you, all of you, it will take you into new patterns of behavior, new ways of Being in the world that don't match up with all the definitions that you have made-up in an attempt to give meaning to your life.

And you've got to start asking, "Do I really want to be in the world in the atmosphere and the Energy and the Nature and Character of what God is Being right here? Or do I want to continue missing what's really going on, including the feeling of a new way of Being, by continuing to reinforce the old definitions."

You've got to remember that we're talking about change. We're talking about correction occurring. We're talking about having a new experience of the Kingdom of Heaven that is, at the least, a closer approximation of what the Kingdom of Heaven is than the one you're currently employing with such great vigor and commitment.

But that means being willing to abandon the status quo, to not necessarily fit in with the mutually-agreed-upon definitions of your society, and taking your Impulse for Being from a place other than the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, meaning the Movement of God's Will for you right here while you're apparently quote "in the world." You must let your actions be impulsed from a new place, not the old place which is nothing more than old habit patterns, ruts.

SEEKER: May I say something else, please?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Well, it also left me with the challenge that what, you know, what my talents are and what I have to give may be given up soon along with everything else. So that's a good... a great fear that I have. If I wake up I'm going to lose what I love to do.

RAJ: [sigh] Yes. Yes. [sigh]

Whatever you're experiencing right now is Something Real seen in a limited fashion. Unreality has never occurred! No ego has ever been brought into existence. Therefore Awakening will not cause you to lose anything, but to experience every single thing in greater fullness. Every little thing will be infinitely enhanced, together with an apparently increased capacity on the part of every one of you to embrace it all without confusion and without the confinements of time so that the real meaning of cooking, and the real meaning of a project you're engaged in, and the real meaning of shopping, all occur simultaneously.

You are not going to lose. You've already lost. You're already existing in a state of lack. The only direction there is, is up. The only direction there is, is expansion. Greater and greater inclusiveness of what is Real so that what you bring into play with the crafts you engage in, and what you bring into play with the cooking you engage in, and what one brings into play in whatever area of interest that involves creativity, et cetera, those things, the meaning of them and the embodiment of them will be increasingly enhanced to infinity.

You all must watch, like I said, for the gargoyles the ego puts up around your fulfillment, and not find ways to practice faithlessness, to employ doubt. As though the further along your path you get, the more clearly right and wrong activity will be illuminated, and therefore a greater starkness between whether you're doing something that's right or you're doing something that's wrong, something that you'll get a gold star for divinely and something you'll get a penalty for. Whatever it is you're doing, don't weigh it to see, "Am I doing the right thing or the wrong thing?" Whatever it is, take that instant, that instance and desire of God to know what the capital "M" Meaning of it is. Embrace the instant fully with the desire to move over whatever threshold of limitation is present with you so that you can see the more of God that's in it.

Don't take the bait, else the ego will rake you over the coals and keep you busy "being sure that you're not doing the wrong thing," or "making sure that you're doing the right thing even if you don't want to." And let every moment be the occasion for the willingness to recognize God Being You and the events you're in the middle of.

SEEKER: I know I'm hogging the mike this week, but there's one last little thing.

RAJ: That is the biggest mistake you could make. You see how quick the ego is. Where did that measuring stick come from? How much time is the right amount of time? How much is the right amount of time to take to talk with me, to be with me? "And well, yeah, I see your question might not elicit as good an answer as someone else's question." Tssk. Mmm. [a little audience laughter] "Maybe someone else's question would be more enlightening to everyone." Bullshit!

This instant is the opportunity to move over a threshold, for everyone to move over a threshold of limited perception into greater understanding. Because why? Communion is occurring. Involvement is occurring. Love is happening.

SEEKER: Okay. Well, there's even another little part to this thing and this is that it sent me on a completely different project of forgiving the person who pulled the chair out from under me in the first place, and even showing my face in the store where they work. So, I don't know, it just... it just brought me up to the point where I realized, you know, how angry I was with that person and wanting to teach them, you know, better manners, I guess you could say.

RAJ: Of course, you see, you're the one who didn't listen to Guidance. And so you're the one who went on a useless journey. And of course, now it's important to nail the one who nailed you to the cross. [scattered audience laughs]

Everything that happened from the point where you didn't listen to your Guidance was nonsense and not any part of it deserves your attention, except to exonerate it all by realizing that it isn't what the Father had in Mind. Therefore, it wasn't what was in the Father's Mind, and therefore, because it wasn't in the Father's Mind, what you experienced didn't happen, and the belief that it did is what constitutes the "useless" part of the phrase "useless journey."

So you must forgive it all, which means withdraw your judgments on every part of it because it didn't happen. And because what happened didn't arise out of the Authority of God, God did not author what you experienced. That fact is what you will come into the full experience of when you forgive the whole thing and any residual of injury [finger snap] will immediately vanish.

Because in spite of what your body seems to be saying, it didn't happen if God didn't create it. That sounds extreme. That sounds radical and it sounds unintelligent. But somewhere along the line you're going to discover that everything that seems so real to you that you have made-up and imagined and made commitment to hasn't happened. It literally hasn't happened. God's Creation, what God Is Being has not been altered in any way at any time in Eternity. And it's that Fact, together with you remembering that You are the Son or Daughter of God, and not God, will uncover and cause to be manifest as your conscious experience of what is Real and your complete freedom from whatever manifestations you were experiencing of suffering and crucifixion. Instantaneous healing of the most ghastly forms of human experience are possible because they are water that has been made out of a packet of nothing.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'd just like to ask at this point, isn't that what we would also consider free will? I mean isn't that what free will is? You were saying that she had Guidance not to go that day, but she did, so...

RAJ: So her behavior...

SEEKER: ...the consequences...

RAJ: ...her subsequent behavior was an expression of free will.

SEEKER: Right. The consequences of not taking the Guidance was the act of free will, and therefore, whatever happened, happened.

RAJ: Yes. When free will, when independence, is acted out, that's the useless journey which ultimately ends up in crucifixion.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: And what you were talking about before when you are, let's say, immersed in a project, in shopping, in cooking, if you are really present and you were in the moment, isn't that when inspiration occurs so that whatever you're doing becomes inspired?

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: So you don't have to give anything up. This...

SEEKER (previous): Well, I would like to add that the Holy Spirit turned it for me when I was down on the floor with my arm over my head praying finally. And I did hear my Guide say, "Now's a good time to practice what you heard last week in the meeting before." So I'm saying that things were turned in that moment but only because I recognized I needed help.

RAJ: Right. That was when you abandoned free will. Yes, there's an absolute Divine Order to Being, to Life. And I've used the illustration of a tapestry before, where there's a thread that runs continuously from the beginning to the end of the carpet but it only surfaces where it becomes part of the exquisiteness of the design that the carpet is there to embody and express. And so if you are listening to Guidance, if you are listening to be on the beam, to be in the flow of fulfillment, you may, during the first quarter of next year, find yourself at the store more frequently than you were the first quarter of this year. And you may find that your engagement in your crafts will be even more frequent than they were this year. And then in the second quarter the thread may not come up to be seen at all.

Engaging in the activities is not for your personal satisfaction. Engaging in the activities is to be in the flow of what God... the infinite design of God that is unfolding.

And in the process of awakening, you come to a point of being willing to appreciate which thread is up while it's up and not fussing about the other color that isn't showing up and being in utter harmony with the design of God. You've got to be willing to allow for a larger picture than your current mutually-agreed-upon definitions allow you to see. And then you will have joy. And then you will have no useless journeys. And you will have, you will provide no occasion for the Holy Spirit to turn a part of a useless journey to your advantage.

Spend less time wondering, "Am I doing the right thing or the wrong thing? Is what I'm doing willful or is it not willful?", and be in that moment with what you are doing with the desire to see God in it and to feel the Movement of God in it so that you might be flowing perfectly with it. And when it's time to be through, you will find yourself moved out into the next Movement of Fulfillment.

The ego is all about measuring sticks. I used the word "infrastructure" today, the mutually-agreed-upon definitions which constitute rules, rules of perception. When you find yourself consumed with various kinds of measuring sticks, realize that the call is not for continuing to measure this against that, but to turn back to that Place in you where you can feel the Movement and feel being on the beam. Because your desire is to be in harmony with God. It is not your desire to be right versus wrong. You see?

Okay.

READER: Until then you are free to crucify yourself as often as you choose. This is not the Gospel...

RAJ: It's no skin off my teeth. [audience laughter] But it's also ultimately no skin off your teeth. It's a useless journey in which nothing is accomplished and so no matter how many times you do it, not even that is judgeable, not even that is wrong. Until then, you are completely free to crucify yourself as often as you choose.

Continue.

READER: This is not the Gospel I intended to offer you. We have another journey to undertake, and if you will read these lessons carefully they will help prepare you to undertake it.

RAJ: There you go. It's not the only journey there is. The freedom to crucify yourself, the useless journey, is not the only choice you have. And I'm not here to talk about those journeys and I'm not here to teach you anything about them. I'm not here to help you evaluate them better and learn how to engage in them better and more successfully. We have other work to do, you might say, in the Realm of the Real, instead of the realm of fantasy, in the realm of each one of you as the Christ behaving as though you are not and believing your behavior.

I'm here to talk to you and illuminate to you the Real One That You Are that is using Its Presence poorly, and choosing to ignore the fact that you're using it poorly so that then you seem to be the victim of God knows what. Once you discover that all there is to the ego is the Christ behaving as though he or she is not the Christ and believing his or her behavior, you will never be threatened by the ego again. And that clarity will always keep in the foreground of your awareness what the way out of your problems and illusions is. It's a matter of being willing to re-member and re-acknowledge your Christhood, together with the ego-insulting fact that the Christ is the Expression of God deriving All That It Is from God. And therefore, the Christ is not author. The Christ is that which glorifies God by acknowledging nothing other than what God Is Being. And in glorifying God, the Christ discovers Its Utter Amazing Infinite Character and Nature and Beauty and Love because God and the Christ are One, and that One is God.

Paul wonders why again this week I'm going to say, "Wow!" He assumes that the Truth is old hat to me. Truth is always amazing. Truth is always that which arrests your attention and focuses it on the Fullness of Meaning.

Don't worry. When you're awake, just because Truth, just because Love, just because Harmony and Peace are as normal as apple pie doesn't mean that they ever lose their awesomeness.

I love you all and I look forward to being with you next week.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And good afternoon to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

RAJ READING: Right Teaching and Right Learning

RAJ: Well, we've talked before about the fact that all of you are always teaching. You might not think you are, but you are. A lot of the teaching you engage in is indirect; sneaky, in other words. You tend to set your limits with others with a tone of voice or a choice of words that say, "Mmm, you're overstepping your boundaries there," without saying "You're overstepping your boundaries there." You constantly teach each other how to behave with you, again, for the most part, indirectly.

We've been talking about the authority problem and the fact that it's just another version of the origin problem. That when you are denying the Author of You, your Father, and claiming a capacity to stand in your own right and see things in your own way as you choose, you take over authorship, you steal it away from God. Or at least you pretend to, and then you convince yourself that you're actually accomplishing it and then you believe yourself. And now, in this state of autonomy, you're put in the position, a required position of being a teacher of your particular way of seeing things because you need others to agree with it if there's to be any sort of harmony.

And so at the bottom line, when you have your back to the Altar and the Father is nowhere in your sight, you have to constantly be in a state of teaching, and re-teaching, and reconfirming the teaching, and influencing others in your experience. That's the state of being, you might say. The state of being of the human condition. Teaching becomes a means of control. And you all control each other into the best semblance of order you can achieve [small laugh] while all of you are still trying to be independent.

When Paul first reached out to me and we made the connection, I told him, not immediately but within weeks because he was in a financial problem, I said to him, "Your income comes from being centered." He had just finished a useless journey, as we talked last week, where he had attempted to express authority in a brand new way and develop a brand new idea that would control his world into a moneymaking, profitable and successful business venture. Unfortunately, as with most good plans of mice and men, it failed and he had, as we talked again about last week, his own crucifixion experience of total failure and being put in a position where he recognized that he had no personal power. And that's what it took in order for him to say "help" and reach out.

Now, it's interesting because as a result of my saying to him, "your income comes from being centered," which was another way of saying, "your fulfillment comes from turning back toward the Altar," I just didn't use those terms, he ventured into a brand new way of being where he allowed fulfillment to unfold, rather than manipulating it into his experience. And he found peace with that. So much so, that it became utterly natural and he didn't even think about it until one day, perhaps seven years ago, someone visiting said, "What's the biggest change that you've experienced having Raj in your life?" And he hadn't thought about it. But at that moment when he thought about it, he realized the biggest change was that he was living without fear. Here he is living without any control, living without exercising any control, making the Gift of Love that the two of us express together as a result of the joining. And so however much or however little was in the bank account was not a trigger for emotion, because he learned that his income comes from being centered, being in his peace, joining with me, and being out from that experience. This in spite of the fact that he still is reluctant to do it 100% of the time.

Now, I'm mentioning this because we're talking about the fact that when learning occurs, change occurs. And when change occurs, you start being in the world in a new way. Not according to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that I have referred to as ego infrastructure. And when you do that, and you find the joy of it and you find the peace of it, you will still find others in your experience who want to teach you, convince you that the well-established infrastructure is still valid and you need to pay attention to it. And so teaching goes on, in Paul's case, in interesting ways.

Someone who requested materials, some of the Raj Materials, and had not received them because there weren't funds to be able to supply them with and Paul has learned that if there aren't, he doesn't try to do what is impossible and continues to make the Gift until it is possible. This person called and suggested that perhaps orders, requests for materials should be filled for those who make contributions first. And then, if there are funds left, send them to those who don't make contributions.

Of course that is untenable, but it's an interesting way to try to reestablish the agreed-upon definition, the financial and business infrastructure. Now the time came when some of those requests could be filled. In fact, a large number of sets of tapes were sent. And, almost immediately there was a check in the mail; not humungous but substantial. Well, now here's another example of teaching. "I get, you get. The moment I get something from you, you'll get something from me." And it's a temptation. It says, "Here is the way the infrastructure works, at least with me." And it suggests that it will work that way for everyone else. And therefore, if there is a need for more, if it would be nice for there to be more inflow of funds so that more of the information that everyone wants could be sent out to them, all it requires is to get it out to them because they'll send it. They then will pay for it. But you know what? It completely sidetracks the fact that one's fulfillment comes from being centered and not from manipulation, even in the most indirect way that a quick response will create a quick payment. You see? You see how indirect? But the teaching is there.

Another suggestion is that those who make a gift by means of a credit card who say, "I would like to make a contribution monthly until I say otherwise," that if their credit card expires and therefore the withdrawal ceases occurring, that there should be someone to call them up and knowing that they want to make a contribution, bring to their attention that their card has expired and it has ceased. And again, we're in the realm of manipulation, manipulation of income in the guise of being friendly, in the guise of helping that individual succeed in doing what they want to do anyway. But when that happens, if that happened, the gift wouldn't come because there was an impulse in the giver to give, but because someone else had reminded them of their lapse of memory. It's very tempting, because all of you are familiar with the already established ego infrastructure, to slip back into it with a sort of spiritual slant to it, if you see what I mean, which means that in actuality you're abandoning spirituality and you're just functioning in the mutually-agreed-upon definitions with a slightly new set of words to describe what you're doing.

This is just an example of how you are all teaching in indirect ways, and even with the highest motives. The infrastructure that is firmly established says, "You get this for that. Tit for tat." It's a barter. It's a bargain. It's not a gift. Love is a Gift.

And as you turn toward the Altar and as you open yourself up for learning, what's the fundamental lesson going to be? Love. It's going to be how to learn how to embody Love, and that is indeed going to require you to be from a new foundation, from your connection with your Source so that you are reflecting and glorifying God. Embodying God, embodying Truth, embodying Love quote "in the world" unquote, meaning right where everyone else is still stuck in the rut. Right where everyone else has a devotion to the very thing that they need to abandon, to let go of, and explore the possibility of living without. To explore the possibility of living without exercising authority, but rather yielding to God and His Authorship of everything that identifies your fulfillment.

Now, here's another way in which you teach each other, and that's your choice of words. You talk entirely differently with a new lover than you do with an old friend, and you convey different things with a new lover than you do with an old friend.

[laughing] Paul knows that his name is Paul and he knew that when his mother said, "Paul," she was talking to him. But he also knew that when she said, "Paul Norman Tuttle," ohhhh! That meant something different. Different choice of words, a different way of saying it.

Today, we're going to break the usual format of passing the microphone. I want you all to read along, but I'm going to read from the text as Bill Thetford typed it before any editing was done to it. And I'm doing it for a reason. We're on the subject of right teaching and right learning.

You will find as I read today that there are different words, and you will find that the difference is that the words in the 1st and 2nd edition have been couched in, what shall I say, the high style of a significant document that fits in a library of significant documents that have withstood the test of time. And yet, you know what? It isn't the order of the words and it isn't the preciseness of the words that makes the Course of value. What makes the Course of value is the fact that I was talking to someone. I was talking to Helen Schucman. And I was talking to Bill Thetford. It was a communication. Not a dictation of a script. Not a dictation of a book to withstand the test of time. What makes the Course of value is that it demonstrates that I am, and that I am in relationship to each of you just as I was with Helen and just as I was with Bill.

And the value is in the relationship, and not in the words or how they're couched. And so, I want you to read along. I do not want you to become distracted by the differences you see. Just notice them, but pay attention to what I'm sharing. And pay attention to the fact that I was talking to two human beings who were willing to listen thereby establishing our Brotherhood now as a Living Thing—mine with them and mine with you—and that I won't talk to you, as you can tell right now, in a stilted fashion, but as a Brother talking to a Brother or a Sister, talking to another Christ who has forgotten that he or she is the Christ. Reminding you of it. Inspiring you to embrace it as a possibility and explore it. And to be with me as a Brother on equal footing as you rediscover Who You Are.

RAJ READING: Right Teaching and Right Learning

We have spoken of many different human symptoms, and at this level...

RAJ: Meaning the human level.

RAJ READING: ...there is almost endless variation. There is, however, only ONE cause of all of them. The authority problem IS “the root of all evil.” Money is but one of its many reflections, and is a reasonably representative example of the kind of thinking which stems from it.

RAJ: There we go with the existing ego infrastructures regarding business. Money is but one of its many reflections—the root of all evil—and is a reasonably representative example of the kind of thinking which stems from it.

RAJ READING: The idea of buying and selling implies precisely the kind of exchange that the Soul cannot understand at all, because its Supply is always abundant and all its demands are fully met.

Every symptom which the ego has made involves a contradiction in terms.

RAJ: Be patient. We'll come to the part that's in the book. [audience laughter]

RAJ READING: Every symptom which the ego has made involves a contradiction in terms. This is because the mind is split between the ego and the Soul, so that WHATEVER the ego makes is incomplete and contradictory. This untenable position is the result of the authority problem which, because it accepts the one inconceivable thought as its premise, can only produce ideas which are inconceivable. The term "profess" is used quite frequently in the Bible. To profess is to identify with an idea, and offer the idea to others to be their own.

RAJ: There you go. Teaching. Influencing. And influencing for the purpose of affirming and establishing ego infrastructure; detailed complex little rules that govern how things work, and what to do if they aren't working that way, and having four or five backup plans to replace the existing one under a variety of different circumstances, et cetera. And, not only that, you have to teach all of this to someone else so that they know how to behave in order to be abiding by the agreed-upon definitions and have some sort of harmony.

So to profess is to identify with an idea, an infrastructure, and offer the idea to others to be their own. To be their own! Now, if that's not an imposition, I don't know what it is. And if that's not a practice of an exercise of control, I don't know what it is.

RAJ READING: The idea does not lessen; it becomes STRONGER.

RAJ: Now you'll find what's in the Text.

RAJ READING: A good teacher...

RAJ: And I'm going to add this: humanly speaking

RAJ READING: A good teacher clarifies his own ideas, and strengthens them by teaching them.

RAJ: And when I say "a good teacher," I means it in the best of terms.

RAJ READING: A good teacher clarifies his own ideas, and strengthens them by teaching them. Teacher and pupil are alike in the learning process. They are in the same order of learning, and unless they SHARE their lessons, they will lack conviction. A good teacher must believe in the ideas which he professes, but he must meet another condition; he must also believe in the students to whom he offers his ideas.

RAJ: Now, humanly speaking, none of you really consistently brings into play the best of being a good teacher because, for the most part, you tend not to believe in the students to whom you're offering the ideas. You see them as lacking or negligent or ignorant or uncaring or insensitive or unwise, and therefore needing your wise counsel to be pumped down their throat so as to turn them into something worthy. That's not believing in your students. That's not called being a good teacher.

A good teacher looks at his Brother and sees the Christ there, sees the potential there, and keeps that potential in the foreground as he illuminates ideas. He sees the student as capable of understanding, even though he's currently ignorant. Capable of understanding math. Capable of understanding how to reach those fingers around to the right frets on the guitar so that the chord comes out on pitch and clear. He constantly sees the ultimate there as he helps illuminate the student's capacity to let it in and embrace it and own it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Many stand guard over their ideas because they want to protect their thought systems as they are, and learning means change. Change is always fearful to the separated ones, because they cannot conceive of it as a change towards HEALING the separation. They ALWAYS perceive it as a change towards further separation, because the separation was their first experience of change.

RAJ: When you first said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way," and undertook to imaginatively embrace an entirely different interpretation of some part of the Kingdom of Heaven, you experienced a change. And the first change you experienced was a loss of infiniteness. You experienced the tininess of the stance that you had taken in order to have an idea of your own and apply it to some part of the Kingdom of Heaven. That was a major change.

And as I've said before, the result of that was an uneasy feeling because that stance is unnatural to a Child of God, to an Expression of God, to the visibility and tangibility of God. And so, your ever-present Sanity provided a warning, an awareness that this was unnatural. And then you became afraid because you were alone, because you were tiny, because you were separate. And that brought up what you would call an instinct of self-preservation to maintain that isolated point of view and to overcome the fear.

So, that was your first experience of change, because change is not normal to the Divine State of Mind that is the Father's embodied in You.

Now I'm reading again:

RAJ READING: You believe that, if you allow no change to enter into your ego, your Soul will find peace. This profound confusion is possible only if one maintains that the same thought system can stand on two foundations.

RAJ: Meaning the human and the Divine foundation.

RAJ READING: NOTHING can reach the Soul from the ego, and nothing FROM the Soul can strengthen the ego, or reduce the conflict within it.

RAJ: Well, you say, "Not even a little bit?" No, not even a little bit. If you're not looking toward the Altar, you can't see the Altar. It's simple. If you're not looking at something, you can't see it. If you have your back to it, you can't see it. And whatever is going on there will not register with you. And so there is no transfer.

That's why I brought out last week that there is no such thing as an actually separate ego. There is only the Divine One that you are, the Christ that you are, pretending that you aren't the Christ and suffering from that belief. But everything that the ego seems to be accomplishing, even though it's just an empty packet of imaginative nothing, anything that it seems to accomplish is accomplished by the Divine One that you are by your bringing into play what is Real about you, while consciously denying that the Divine One that you are is doing it.

So the ego is never going to really become educated and finally become divine. It's the Divine One that you are who wants to go Home. It's the Divine One that you are that feels the impetus to no longer tolerate suffering, because something in you knows that it's illegitimate for you. It is the Divine One in you, you could say, returning Home. Or you could say it's the Divine One in you that you are letting come forward more fully in your conscious experience of yourself.

I'm reading again:

RAJ READING: The ego IS a contradiction.

RAJ: In other words, the only thing that can exist in that imaginative nothing is imaginative conflict and nothing else.

RAJ READING: Man's self...

RAJ: With a small "s."

RAJ READING: ...and God's...

RAJ: Capital "S."

RAJ READING: ...Self ARE in opposition.

RAJ: "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way." That is in opposition to the Father. And everything that follows from your decision to see things your way is going to be conflicted.

I'm reading again:

RAJ READING: They are opposed in creation, in will, and in outcome. They are fundamentally irreconcilable because the Soul cannot perceive and the ego cannot know. They are therefore NOT IN COMMUNICATION, and can never BE in communication.

RAJ: So again, don't think that your ego is becoming enlightened and somehow being transformed so that it will be able to get back into the Kingdom of Heaven as an actual divine ego. The ego is nothing but an infrastructure of thoughts and ideas that are used to secure, even more firmly, independence.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Nevertheless, the ego can learn because its maker can be misguided, but CANNOT make the totally lifeless out of the life-given. The Soul need not be taught, but the ego MUST.

RAJ: Because you are so closely identified with the ego, it will seem to you as though you and ego are making progress and are becoming enlightened.

But here's the beauty of it. What's really happening is that the Divine One that you are is not being obscured as completely and as skillfully, and the Divine One that you are, the Christ that you are right now is showing up more and more, and in the process the ego is dissolving. The infrastructures that have held together your so-called authority and your so-called power is yielding because there's a shift of attention and a shift of intention within you to find that Place of Excellence in you that is divine. And let It be magnified because you are choosing to Love It more than the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, the ego infrastructures, and the attempt to control because there's a promise of success.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ultimate reason why learning is perceived as frightening is because learning DOES lead to the relinquishment (NOT destruction) of the ego to the Light of the Soul.

RAJ: And this is a key point. Waking up is not a matter of destroying the ego. How can you destroy what is nothing but a collection of imaginative thoughts that never had any actual existence? The ultimate reason why learning is perceived as frightening is because learning does lead to the relinquishment (not destruction) of the ego to the Light—the capital "L" Light—of the Soul.

RAJ READING: This is the change the ego MUST fear because it does not share my charity. My lesson was like yours, and because I learned it I can teach it. I never attack your egos...

RAJ: You see, I don't try to destroy your egos. You don't waste your time on nothing. I don't waste my time on nothing. I don't try to get rid of what you think you made out of nothing more than empty packets to which you've added the Christ of you and you said, "Oh! There's a real ego!", all the while choosing to ignore the fact that you added what was Real to nothing and filled the void with that which was Real and that's why it seems like there is something there.

RAJ READING: I never attack your egos, but I DO try to teach you how their thought systems...

RAJ: How their infrastructure.

RAJ READING: ...arose. When I remind you of your TRUE creation, your egos cannot BUT respond with fear.

Teaching and learning are your greatest strengths now because you MUST change your mind and help others change theirs.

RAJ: Now don't let your little egos get too happy here. The only way real change will occur is when you say, "Father, what is the Truth here? Father, how does this work? Father, even if the way things really work goes against the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, the ruts that are so well-established, even if it's going to make me look like an oddball, I want to know how do things really work? How can I be in harmony with Reality, rather than the way I think things ought to be?"

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is pointless to refuse to tolerate change because you believe you can demonstrate that, by doing so, the separation has not occurred.

RAJ: You see? "Well, if I don't allow for change, everything will be perfectly stable. And if everything is perfectly stable, that will be a manifestation of the orderliness and harmony of God." You see?

But that's sort of like wanting to get in touch with your Guidance and knowing that your mind has to become still, and so you learn to meditate and you learn how to go into the silence. You learn how to experience your mind being still, and then you don't allow any Movement whatsoever. When the fact is that communion with your Guide, turning toward the Altar and inquiring of the Father what the Truth is, is going to mean there will be Movement in the stillness. But if you're going to hold everything to perfect silence, the disallowing for the Movement of God, the Movement of Love, the Movement of Truth, to register with you, you will not hear anything and you will not feel the Father's Love. And you will not learn anything new.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The dreamer who doubts the reality of his dream while he is still dreaming is not really healing the level-split. You HAVE dreamed of a separated ego,...

RAJ: In other words, you've made it up.

RAJ READING: ...and you HAVE believed in a world which rests upon it. This is very real to you. You cannot undo this by doing nothing and NOT changing.

RAJ: When you're suffering, you are experiencing a call for correction. You're experiencing a call for change. When you're going through a crucifixion, having fallen flat on not your face but your derrière, you're experiencing a call for correction, a call for change.

And you know what? You know what I want to teach you today? Change is good. Change is something to be desired, because the change we're talking about will constitute the instantaneous relief and release from suffering because you're not reaffirming the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, the ego infrastructure that can be nothing other than conflicted and unpleasant.

This is utterly simple, isn't it? You cannot undo this by doing nothing and not changing. Truth is utterly simple.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you are willing to renounce the role of guardian of your thought system and open it to me, I will correct it very gently and lead you home.

RAJ: This is what I said to Helen. This is what I said to Bill. This is what I say to you. If you are willing to renounce the role of guardian of your thought system, what you made-up, everything that you've made-up, and open it to me, I will correct it very gently and lead you Home, because... this is not in the book, because I love you and you're my Brother and my Sister. You are fellow Christs and you and I deserve to be with each other in full recognition of Who We Are.

RAJ READING: Every good teacher hopes to give his students so much of his own thinking that they will one day no longer need him.

RAJ: Well, what's the best thinking that I can offer you. The best thinking that I can offer you is whatever encourages you to be willing to abandon the mutually-agreed-upon definitions and step into the void, where you think you don't know the answers because you didn't make them up, so that you might find that the answers are already there and you knew them from the beginning. Those are the best thoughts I can give to you.

Dare, dare to step into what your ego calls the unknown, but which to the Divine You has always been known, so that you might become once again conscious of what you have always known and wake up. And don't be afraid of the gargoyles that the ego throws up at you when you do that.

And don't be discouraged by the attempts of those around you who would, in their best and greatest caring, encourage you to once again re-embrace the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, the business infrastructures, the infrastructures of the psychology of relationships and how they work, how they ought to work that somebody made up. Don't be discouraged when the invitation to come back into the old patterns is made.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This...

RAJ: The hope that one's students will no longer need him.

RAJ READING: ...is the one real goal of the parent, teacher and therapist. This goal will not be achieved by those who believe that they will LOSE their child or pupil or patient if they succeed. It is IMPOSSIBLE to convince the ego of this because it goes against all of its own laws.

RAJ: All of its own infrastructures.

RAJ READING: But remember that laws...

RAJ: These infrastructures.

RAJ READING: ...are set up to protect the continuity of the system in which the lawmaker BELIEVES.

It is natural enough for the ego to try to protect itself, once you have made it, but it is NOT natural for YOU to want to obey its laws unless YOU believe in them. The ego cannot make this choice because of the nature of its origin.

RAJ: In other words, it doesn't have a capacity to make a choice at all because it's been made-up out of whole cloth, out of nothing. A little packet of nothing that you poured into space and then added a little or a lot of something Real, the Divine One that you are, and thus apparently activated these magic invisible crystals of nothing and made something that never existed before, and actually doesn't even exist now because the only thing enlivening it is a little bit of something Real you added to it while ignoring completely the fact that you added to it something that was Real.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot make this choice because of the nature of its origin. YOU can...

RAJ: Make this choice.

RAJ READING: ...because of the nature of YOURS.

RAJ: Your origin is the Father.

RAJ READING: Egos can clash in any situation, but Souls cannot clash at all. If you perceive a teacher as merely a "larger ego," you WILL be afraid, because to ENLARGE an ego IS to increase separation anxiety.

RAJ: Now, listen to me.

RAJ READING: I will teach with you and live with you if you will think with me, but my goal will always be to absolve you finally from the NEED for a teacher.

RAJ: These words are real meanings expressed by me to Helen and Bill and thereby demonstrate, or embody, quote "in the world" unquote my function with everyone. That's what makes this Course valuable. Not how the words are put together. Not whether they're put together so beautifully that they'll withstand the test of time in a library of great books. But because it conveys to you a Relationship that's Real, a Relationship that arises out of my Love for You, not puny little piss-ant egos, but the Christ that each one of You is right now! And it's escaping your notice.

And you deserve for it not to escape your notice. It's too wonderful not to be conscious of. So I'll give you a nudge and a support and a kick in the butt, but always with Love. Never in a way that will discourage you truly. So that you don't forget to be inquisitive and you don't forget to be open to the fuller Meaning of your Self. And I will do this until you remember Who You Are. And the moment you remember Who You Are, together we will rejoice. And I won't be your teacher. I will be your Brother, your full-fledged Brother whom you know intimately infinitely. And so together we will experience our union. We will recognize ourselves in each other.

And then, you might say, we will learn of God, because both of us will be fully available to the Movement of Creation in Its Infinite Meanings with none of it escaping our notice. And together we will be able to stand in awe of the incredibleness of the Movement of God that we're not separate from in any way.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is the OPPOSITE of the ego-oriented teacher's goal. He is concerned with the effect of HIS ego on OTHER egos, and therefore interprets their interaction...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...as a means of ego preservation.

RAJ: You teach each other what you believe. Why? So that you can find mutual agreement with what you believe, and in finding mutual agreement you get confirmation of what you believe, and who you believe you are becomes strengthened in your mind and the one you have convinced has become your follower.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I would not be able to devote myself to teaching if I believed this, and YOU will not be a devoted teacher as long as YOU maintain it. I am constantly being perceived as a teacher either to be exalted or rejected, but I do not accept either perception for myself.

RAJ: It may look like I'm a Teacher, but I'm your Brother. And I'm just being your Brother. I'm just loving you. And Love inspires that in you which is Divine to remember what it knows so that that in you which is Divine can come out of the closet, stand forth, and be experienced and owned and embodied.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your worth is NOT established by your teaching OR your learning. Your worth was established by God.

RAJ: Or we could say your worth is being established by God in every moment because You are the Ever New Living Presence of a Current and Living God. Creation is now, not off in the distant past. Your worth was established by God.

RAJ READING: As long as you dispute this...

RAJ: Hmmm. You say, "Well, why would I dispute that?" Well, you dispute it by not checking in with God, by not thinking about God, by not thinking with God, as you engage in the simplest of relationships in your day.

You dispute the fact that your worth was established by God in every attempt you make to establish it in the eyes of your brothers, instead of saying, "to hell with what they think," and letting your already existing worth shine forth for no good reason. Not to teach anybody anything. But because you have no pleasure other than letting the capital "M" Meaning embodied right where you are by God as an Expression of Himself to be the only thing present right where you are, and letting the chips fall where they may.

RAJ READING: As long as you dispute this EVERYTHING you do will be fearful, particularly any situation which lends itself to the "superiority-inferiority" fallacy. Teachers must be patient, and repeat their lessons until they are learned.

RAJ: But when there's Love, it isn't really called patience. It's just called caring enough to express the Truth until it registers, because you know that there's nothing better than having the Truth register and be known, because the Truth sets you free from your illusions. Teachers must be patient and repeat their lessons until they are learned.

RAJ READING: I am willing to do this because I have no right to set your learning limits for you.

RAJ: You see? I'm not here to influence you. I'm not here to control you. In fact, if I tried to control you, it would bring your ego into play which is nothing more than a defense mechanism. So if I want you to make fast progress, I will not try to enforce anything on you at all. And that's the one thing your ego can't defend itself against. And it's the one thing that allows Truth to remain where it can be seen by the Divine One that you are, because the ego has gotten no trigger that says, "Throw up a smoke screen and cloud this Truth from sight."

Continuing:

RAJ READING: Once again, NOTHING you do or think or wish or make is necessary to establish your worth.

RAJ: And of course those are all the things the ego does. It do-s things, thinks things, wishes things, and makes/makes-up things. But nothing you do or think or wish or make is necessary to establish your worth.

RAJ READING: This point is NOT debatable except in delusions. Your ego is NEVER at stake because God did NOT create it. Your Soul is never at stake because He DID. ANY confusion on this point is a delusion, and no form of devotion is possible as long as this delusion lasts.

RAJ: Again, you can't have a delusion about nothing. You can only ever be deluded about something. You can only ever have a false belief about something. So when it's said, "this world is an illusion," it's a misperception of something that actually exists. It's a delusion you're experiencing about something Real.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego tries to exploit ALL situations into forms of praise for itself in order to overcome its doubts.

RAJ: That's its whole function, is to confirm itself. And it has to do that because it doesn't really exist. And in order for it to seem to exist, it is on a forever quest to confirm itself by convincing others that it exists and getting their confirmation so as to strengthen its belief in itself. It's a tremendous amount of work creating these infrastructures, these mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And you have no idea how much energy you're expending trying to keep them active, not only in your mind, but in everybody else's mind so that they can cooperate with it and confirm it.

And not only that. The more complex it gets, the harder it is for you to remember all the rules you've made up regarding who you are and how things should work. And as a result, things begin to fall apart at the seams because you are trying to keep too many balls juggling. The ego tries to exploit all situations into forms of praise or self-confirmation for itself in order to overcome its doubts.

RAJ READING: It will be doubtful forever, or rather, as long as you believe in it.

RAJ: Or, as long as you can keep those balls goin' around.

RAJ READING: You who made it CANNOT trust it because you KNOW it is not real. The only SANE solution is not to try to change reality,...

RAJ: Which is all that the ego has been trying to do.

RAJ READING: ...which is indeed a fearful attempt, but to see it as it IS. YOU are part of reality, which stands unchanged beyond the reach of your ego, but within easy reach of your Soul. When you are afraid, be still and KNOW that God is real and YOU are His beloved Son in whom He is well pleased. Do not let your ego dispute this, because the ego cannot know what is as far beyond its reach as you are.

RAJ: You all are so significantly different from the ego definition you've made-up about yourself. All of you have had the opportunity to have a magnet and a piece of paper and some iron filings, and to have put the iron filings on the paper and put the magnet underneath it and to shake it a little bit and watch the iron filings gather together in a pattern that show the lines of the magnetic field. And you say, "Wow! Look at the magnetic field!" Well, you know what? You haven't seen the magnetic field yet. All you've seen is where the magnetic filing... where the filings have gathered. If you were really seeing the magnetic field, you would see the magnetic field extended above the paper and underneath the paper and as a three-dimensional shape, if you will, of energy that you still can't see.

The energy is so much more than the pattern that the filings let you see. Do you see what I'm saying? The Energy of Spirit is so much more than what you see. And what you see is not the Energy, but the visibility and tangibility of it.

So, please walk out of here today, or for those of you at home, turn off your computers and go out, and be open to, be desirous of experiencing, be less defended against that of You which is so much more than the current definition that you're letting yourself see.

Beware of teachers who teach with authority. Beware of teachers whose intent is to force change in you. Beware of teachers whose teaching process invades you, and coerces you, because those teachers think they're egos. And what they're teaching can only confirm the ego infrastructures; the experience of existence that one has with his or her back to the Altar.

And then, beware of being one of those kinds of teachers. If you don't know what the Truth is from God, keep your mouth shut and don't teach anyone anything. There would be amazing growth if every one of you did that because immediately there would be silence. And there would be silence for such a long time that it would become intolerable to you because it is impossible for you to not be expressive.

But if you're going to be true to the willingness not to teach something God hasn't disclosed to you, you will find yourself, like someone who's not breathing, needing a breath. And you will come to the point where you will say, "God, I really do want to hear You! I really do want to know the Truth because I can't hold my breath any longer! I can't be silent any longer!"

And you will become defenseless, and the penetration will occur and inspiration will occur and you will have something to talk about and express. But you know what? It won't be to try to convince anybody. You know what? It might come out as a laugh that lasts three weeks. A laugh of such Joy that you would never want to stop laughing. And after three weeks, those around you will have begun to laugh, and they will have laughed and it will extend on out. Because you will have been teaching, and you might not even have noticed that you were teaching, because you were just being the Presence of God.

And I promise you something. We can get together for a millennia of Sunday afternoons and I will never run dry of ways to encourage you to look with innocence, to look with fresh eyes, to look for the unexpected, to look for that which goes beyond all of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions and the habits with which you've looked at everything that keep you from seeing with new eyes. I can do it! And you know what? I can do it happily. I will never get tired. That's what kind of teacher I am.

You know what? That's the kind of teacher you all are, if you'll just remember to bring that into play. And remember you're always teaching. Do you wanna be a bad teacher or a good teacher? Well, I want you to experience a connection with God where being a teacher of any kind becomes less important than being the place where God shines through because that is such an inspiring and wonderful, and I'm going to say, mind-boggling experience.

I must say it again. WOW!

And I look forward to being with you next week. I actually look forward to your being with me a lot more during the week. Know that I'm with you. I'm just waiting.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And good afternoon to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

Today I will not be reading out of the first or second editions of the Course, but will continue to read from the transcript of what I shared with Helen and Bill which Bill typed up. I encourage you to read along, and again, don't get hung up on the differences that you see.

The chapter we're on, the section we're on is called "Right Teaching and Right Learning." It helps in order to understand right teaching, to know what wrong teaching is.

And so let's consider this: When the point came where each of you decided, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. I'd rather define everything myself. I'd like to play with the experience of being an authorizer myself, all by myself.", at that moment, as I've said before, the first thing you noticed was that you were, for lack of better words, small, tiny. I even used the word "piss-ant mortal," and that's not puissant, that's p-i-s-s-a-n-t; not a water ant, not a sugar ant, not a red ant but a piss-ant—a piss-ant nothing. That was the first thing you noticed was that your bigness, your universality, your Infiniteness was missing.

And what was the first thing you felt? Uneasy because it was unnatural to the Divine One that you were. And a more accurate word for "uneasy" was the word "fear." You felt small, in other words, incomplete, and it was a fearful experience. What necessarily followed was that the only thing available for you to teach was fear, because fear was expressed in every single thought and utterance you had or made. What you necessarily had to teach everyone else was quote "make me whole" unquote, because being the Divine One that you are and not being able to abandon your capital "S" Self completely, you knew that was your Birthright and therefore your fundamental need.

And so it became your task to create equity, if you will. And equity could only be achieved by making others be responsible for your wholeness, your ease, your comfort, your abundance. And so, naturally, everything that followed became transactional. It became your lifelong task to see to it that others made you comfortable, happy, successful, abundant, whole.

Now, the simple fact is that only those others that you could reach in this way were those who likewise had decided to look at things in their own way. And so they made the same demands of you. And so everyone joined together in finding ways to hopefully bring about the greatest amount of equity without... [laugh] without losing even more than you had lost by virtue of abandoning the Father. And that's why existence is a struggle.

But I'm bringing this up because at the bottom line what all of you are teaching, if you are not in a process of awakening, is transactional. Getting for getting, or getting for giving. I give you this, you give me that, and what you must give me must be equal to what I think I am losing if I give you something.

Of course, fear does many things. It causes a sense of paranoia. It causes there to be lack of confidence, even though there might be justification for confidence. And so there is distrust. And as a result of distrust coupled with fear, one tends to, if he can get away with it, take advantage of his brother or sister and get more than the apparent cost of the loss of what is being extended to that brother or sister. And so everything becomes quite muddy.

Mind you, this doesn't just apply to money. It applies to the sharing or extension of Love, the sharing or extension of trust. It applies to human relationships. It truly finds its way into every corner of life experience. And this isn't right teaching. And the learning that occurs isn't right learning. The teaching and the learning accomplish one thing: the reinforcement of the human condition. The reinforcement of the empty experience of not being connected with one's Source, of not be fully consciously aware of What You Truly Are. It's the result of abandoning the Place of Excellence in You and then imagining that you haven't abandoned it. It's miserable.

And what's the way out? The way out is to shift from getting to giving. And to give from that Place of Excellence in You that up to this point you have chosen to block out of your mind, because, of course, you have more important things to do, like survive in this miserable experience and make something wonderful out of it all by yourself, which is impossible.

Right learning is never a matter of finding a way to be alone, separate from your Source, and experience fulfillment. It is not a matter of improving the human condition without ever discovering that what you're calling the human condition is the Divine State of Being which you are blocking from your experience.

Now if fear and wrong teaching is coloring your every perception and therefore causes misperception to creep into every corner of your life, then obviously, if the shift from getting to giving is going to occur, then the attitude of gifting is going to have to reach every single itty-bitty corner of your life. The willingness to extend Love and consideration and genuine caring will have to extend to the smallest insect, the most poisonous insect, the most ferocious beast, the plants, the trees, the clod of dirt, the rock, your Brother and your Sister, and yourself.

In other words, it's not complicated. You're either doing one of two things. You're either in a state of fear engaged in getting, or you're in a state of Peace engaged in giving, behaving in a way always that makes your Brother whole, that makes your plants whole, that makes your world whole, that makes your business transactions identify your wholeness and the wholeness of another, without for a moment indulging in getting. Because you're willing to embrace as a fact the divine Truth that Wholeness is the nature of your Being because it's the Father's good pleasure to give you it all, the Kingdom. That's your Birthright.

Because this is not your habit, it's something that you must use some self-discipline for. And you must practice it on purpose in order for it to be a conscious experience for you, which, as time goes, accumulates for you a background, a history, if you will, of conscious experience of engaging in making your Brother, your Sister and your world whole until it becomes second nature to you. Because, you see, as this habit begins to replace the old habit of getting, you begin to remember, "Ah. This is what's normal. This is my Birthright. This is my Being. This is what I'm all about." And when that light bulb goes on in your awareness, it stops being a disciplined practice and it just becomes you being yourself in an entirely new way from an entirely new place.

But you won't get to that new place if you don't begin to consciously practice what, to you at the moment, seems to be unnatural. And to practice it with discipline, to practice it with commitment, and to be alert to the places where you are either bargaining for another to provide you with your wholeness, or you are dealing with another in a manner that gets more than the situation is worth and leaves your Brother at a disadvantage.

It feels risky when you're coming from the place where your coming to not leverage your well-being from your Brothers and your Sisters and your world. "Oh, we need fossil fuel so that we can drive our cars." And so it justifies raping the land and being unwise in the use of its resources. And you create imbalance. You leave everything less than whole. You leave things depleted because there wasn't enough Love to give the attention needed to see that your behavior didn't cost the earth, or you, or anyone else, anything. Thus leaving everyone in a position to continue with ease to experience natural abundance. You see.

Fear, fear is the lesson that you all need to stop teaching. And Love is the lesson that you all need to start BEing. I didn't say loving, being loving is the lesson you need to start teaching, because being loving is a behavior. It is time for you to BE Love. And in order for you to BE LOVE, you have to turn your front toward the Altar instead of your back, and you need to inquire from a source other than all of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you and everyone have securely established. But remember this: To the degree that fear has been the reason for your actions, then your actions will confirm their source which is fear.

And I know, in many ways, all of you say, "Well, I'm not that uncomfortable. You know, things could be better but I'm not so uncomfortable that I really think I need to be as radical as you're talking about and shift from securing my best interests from my Brother and my world, and instead shift to extending my Brother's and Sister's and world's best interests to them, and let that be first. Because that's the way I move out of fear. That's the way I re-access my experience of What I Divinely Am. And that's the way I wake up from the whole illusion of lack, tininess, of being solitary, isolated and alone and lonely, constantly trying to overcome that loneliness. No, things aren't that bad for me to go to that extreme."

The simple fact is there is a different way to be than the way you are being. And I am here to talk with you about that different way of being. And not to confirm the way you have been being. And, indeed, that is what the Course is here to illuminate as well. But the whole reason of illuminating it is so that you might come to a place where within yourself you decide to behave in a different way. Not think in a different way in the privateness of your mind, but to be in the world, with the world, and with your Brothers and Sisters in a new way that doesn't always secure your safety, but one which has as its motive to secure your Brother's safety.

Because whatever you do to your Brother, you do to yourself. Whatever you extend to your Brother, you are embraced by. Because you are what you be. And you can't be anything all by yourself. You've tried that. You've been there, done that, but you haven't stopped yet. You see. I want you all to arrive at the point where you can say, "Ah, been there, done that. It's out of my life. I know I don't need to do that any more."

Okay. We'll go to the book.

RAJ READING: God is NOT the author of fear. YOU are. You have chosen, therefore, to create unlike Him, and you have made fear for yourselves. You are not at peace because you are not fulfilling your function.

RAJ: That's all. You're at odds with yourself. It isn't that you're not at peace because you've been disobedient and there's threat of punishment. The moment you act at odds with yourself, you try to do the impossible and it's uncomfortable, but it's not a punishment. As I've said before, it's just your innate capital "S" Sanity providing you with the experience that you're attempting to do the impossible and there's no fulfillment in it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God gave you a very lofty responsibility which you are not meeting.

RAJ: Well, don't let that overwhelm you. Your lofty responsibility is to be the Presence of Love which you are. He didn't give you piss-ant little egos a lofty responsibility. He didn't give who you think you are a lofty responsibility. And don't worry, who you think you are is not going to have to fulfill that lofty responsibility because you haven't for a moment been who you think you are. Who You Divinely Are has a natural spontaneous inclination and impulse to be the fullest that you can be from that Place of Excellence in You. And that's utterly natural. And yes, it can be called a lofty responsibility. God gave you a very lofty responsibility which you are not meeting.

RAJ READING: You KNOW this, and you are afraid. In fact, your egos have chosen to be afraid INSTEAD of meeting it.

RAJ: You see. "Well, I'm not really that uncomfortable. I'm not so uncomfortable that I would choose to do this radical thing that you're talking about." You see, your egos have chosen to be afraid instead of meeting it.

RAJ READING: When you awaken, you will not be able to understand this because it is literally incredible.

RAJ: But another thing is that not only will you not be able to understand it, you won't give it a second thought, because you will be so fully engaged in the Joy of reflecting God and letting God be all there is of you so that every single act, every single intent you have, is a universal blessing that illuminates universally. That's where you will be. That's what you will be experiencing. And you won't even be trying to understand how on earth it is you could have looked at things the way you did before.

RAJ READING: DO NOT BELIEVE THE INCREDIBLE NOW. Any attempt to increase its believableness is merely to postpone the inevitable.

The word "inevitable" is fearful to the ego, but joyous to the Soul. God IS inevitable, ...

RAJ: And I'll say, the Son of God knowing that he's the Son or Daughter of God, is inevitable.

RAJ READING: God IS inevitable, and you CANNOT avoid Him any more than He can avoid YOU.

RAJ: And this is me. You can only imagine that you can avoid God, or abandon God, or steal His Authority away from Him and express your own. Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego is afraid of the Soul's joy because, once you have experienced it, you will withdraw all protection from the ego, and become totally without the investment in fear.

RAJ: I want to tell you something. When you decide to shift from getting to giving, to having your Brother demonstrate your wholeness for you to you and it is your pleasure to make him whole, not because that's what he wants, but because there's nothing more satisfying to do, it will bring up your fear of being vulnerable because you will be abandoning your practice of self- protection. But, if you will persist in caring enough to see to it that you never leave your Brother at a disadvantage, you will begin to experience peace because the peace you're giving your Brother by not demanding from him what he cannot truly give you is the peace you become enveloped by.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your investment...

RAJ: In fear.

RAJ READING: ...is great now because fear is a witness to the separation, and your ego rejoices when you witness to it. Leave it behind! Do not listen to it, and do not preserve it.

RAJ: And this is where the self-discipline comes in. When the tendency is there to jew your Brother down on a deal, or take advantage of him on a deal, or to just engage in the deal to preserve your wholeness or to substantiate what you think you need to have in order to feel secure...

PAUL: Sorry. I lost it.

RAJ: You will find yourself encircled by, embraced by, and imbued with the conscious experience of your invulnerability and your safety. Why? Because you gave it away to another.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Listen only to God, ...

RAJ: And that can mean something as simple as listening for the impulse to be Love. Listen to the impulse to come from the Place of Excellence in You.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Listen only to God, Who is as incapable of deception as are the Souls He created.

RAJ: All of you are actually incapable of deception. And the you that you think you are that is capable of deception is purely imaginary. And the brothers or sisters you see that you believe are capable of deception are purely imaginary. Because neither you nor they have the capacity to be independent of your Source and so you haven't accomplished it.

And once you get this point that none of you have accomplished being sinners, you will understand why all of you in an instant can be exonerated and healed of any of the effects of deception that you think you either brought on someone else or that someone else brought on you. You have got to be open to the experience of instantaneous correction of anything that you have seen that has been to your disadvantage or injury. Because if you don't believe that there can be instantaneous correction for no good reason, not because justice has been served, not because a penalty had been paid, but just because it isn't the Truth of you or your Brother, until you see that, you will continue to justify extracting a tooth for a tooth and an eye for an eye. Get. Get. Get. Make your Brother responsible for your wholeness.

This is an axiom. And I'm continuing.

RAJ READING: Release yourselves and release others.

RAJ: If you release yourself, you release others. If you release others truly, you release yourself. And until you release each other from your mutually-agreed-upon definitions and your mutual agreements, you will not remember your wholeness and re-access your wholeness and will unnecessarily remain bound in the dream.

Again, continuing.

RAJ READING: Release yourselves and release others. Do not present a false and unworthy picture of yourself to others, and do not accept such a picture of them yourselves.

RAJ: See this is where a good teacher comes into play, because a good teacher is not only concerned with what he has to teach, but finds the student worthy and capable of embracing and embodying what's being taught.

RAJ READING: The ego has built a shabby and unsheltering home for you because it cannot build otherwise.

RAJ: And let's remember that what this really means is that the Christ that you are, the Divine One that you are, who has chosen to express autonomy, has built a shabby and unsheltering home for yourself because that's really the only thing you can do in a state of fear and in a sense of piss-ant tininess.

So, when it says the ego has built a shabby and unsheltering home for you, don't sit there self-righteously and say, "Yeah, my ego really doesn't like me. Yeah, my ego really is a bad guy." Well, that's a way of disowning your authority. You're doing it and you're saying, "I'm not doing it." And you convinced yourself you're not doing it. And you ultimately succeed, or think that you succeed, in saying that you're not doing it by saying, "I'm not the Christ. I'm not Holy. I'm just a human being. I'm a human being with a brain in my head with synapses and electrical currents. And what comes out of one's brain is an ego. All of the psychologists will tell me that. Oh, there are studies for years to tell me that I'm an ego."

So then, something comes along like metaphysics or the Course, and it says that you are not your ego. Oh. That's even better. Now you can really be mad at your ego. "Oh, my ego did this. My ego did that. Damn my ego." But you're still caught because you still have neglected to own Who You Are. You still are reluctant to say, "I am the Christ." And you're still reluctant to be out from that Place of Excellence in You which is your Christhood. And you still insist on operating on a get-get basis. You still continue to operate as though it's your Brother's responsibility to demonstrate your wholeness for you.

And so now, you're even more confused than ever. And your ego infrastructures have gotten even more complex because now there's you and your ego.

But you know what? It isn't You, the Christ yet. It isn't You, the One capable of utter, unsurpassable Excellence. "Oh, yeah. Well, things aren't that rough yet. I can exist a little bit longer without going that far." You see? And so your ego continues to build, or you continue as an unacknowledged Christ that has to be then an acknowledged ego has built, a shabby and unsheltering home for you because it cannot build otherwise and things aren't tough enough yet for you to change." Tsk. Tsk. Hmm dear.

RAJ READING: Do not try to make this impoverished house stand.

RAJ: Give it up! [Aside:] That isn't what it says here [meaning in the book].

RAJ READING: Do not try to make this impoverished house stand. ITS weakness is YOUR strength.

RAJ: And that might be more clearly understood if we reverse it. Your strength, your Divine strength is its weakness.

RAJ READING: Only God could make a home that is worthy of His creations, who have chosen to leave it empty by their own dispossession.

RAJ: But the Home is still there. The Altar is still in the center of you. Your capacity to turn around toward that Place of Excellence to learn of the Father what the Truth is about everything because your Father is You, your Right Mind. Only that. That is all it takes. And only that is what it takes to repossess your Home.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Yet His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...home will stand forever, ...

RAJ: Because it's—this is me—because it's your very Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...and is ready for you when you choose to enter it.

RAJ: Which means when you are ready to readmit to yourself that you're the Christ. That You are a Place of Excellence Being Excellent because you have no other real capacity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Of this you can be wholly certain. God is as incapable of creating the perishable as the ego is of making the eternal.

RAJ: That's how diametrically opposed things are. That's how black and white things are. And ultimately, the blackness and whiteness of it is that everything is either Real or unreal. And there ain't no in-between.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Of your egos you can do nothing to save yourselves or others, but of your Souls you can do everything for the salvation of both. Humility is a lesson for the ego, NOT for the Soul. The Soul is beyond humility because it recognizes its radiance, ...

RAJ: It doesn't block it.

RAJ READING: ...and gladly sheds its light everywhere.

RAJ: Now the Soul doesn't prance around the Universe saying, "Oh! Glory, glory! I'm spreading my Light everywhere and blessing everyone. Oh, glory, glory! Isn't this a wonderful experience! Ohhh! Bliss, bliss, bliss, bliss, bliss!"

The Soul is Light. Illumination is spontaneous, inevitable. It doesn't spread Its Light for a purpose—to get, get, get. It doesn't be illumination for everyone's benefit, or to make them happy so they'll be nice to the Soul that's spreading the Light.

The Soul is beyond humility because It recognizes Its Radiance, It recognizes Its Self in the Radiance, and gladly sheds Its Light everywhere. A better way than saying, "gladly sheds Its Light everywhere," is that It finds absolutely no justification for withholding it. In that sense, It gladly sheds Its Light. It doesn't even consider a possibility that there might be some corner of Infinity of the Universe that it might withhold Its Light, that It might withhold Itself.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The meek shall inherit the earth because their egos are humble, and this gives them better perception.

RAJ: Well, humility is embodied in the abandoning of the determination to say, "Father, I would rather see things my way," and turning back toward the Altar. And naturally if you're turning back to where the Truth lies to be seen, you're going to have better perception, aren't you? Because you're going to be seeing Truth more clearly. You're going to be having the experience of what it is. And you're also going to be having the clearer not understanding or knowledge of Love, but the experience of being that point where Love bubbles forth into expression, again spontaneously and without a justification.

When you're not looking at something, you can't see it. When you are looking at it, you can. And so the meek shall inherit the earth because their egos are humble, willing to look where they can see. And what? The inevitable happens. This gives them better perception. Simple. Uncomplicated.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Kingdom of Heaven is the RIGHT of the Soul, whose beauty and dignity are far beyond doubt, beyond perception, and stand forever as the mark of the Love of God for His creations, ...

RAJ: In other words, that Place of Excellence in You is the mark of the Love of God for You, for His Creations.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...who are wholly worthy of Him and ONLY of Him. Nothing else is sufficiently worthy to be a gift for a creation of God Himself.

RAJ: So the gifts of fear that you're all giving each other out of habit and out of self-preservation is unworthy. It's an unworthy gift for a Creation of God—meaning You—and each other.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I will substitute for your ego...

RAJ: That is if you want a substitute. "Oh, I know, things aren't tough enough yet. Things are going along fairly well. I know, I don't need you to substitute yet, but Jesus, I'll call on ya. I'm sure I'll call on ya if the goin' gets really rough. But, hey. Right now I don't wanna rock the boat. Okay? But I hear ya."

Again:

RAJ READING: I will substitute for your ego if you wish, but NEVER for your Soul. A father can safely leave a child with an elder brother who has shown himself responsible, but this involves no confusion about the child's origin.

RAJ: Meaning the one left in the older brother's care.

RAJ READING: The brother...

RAJ: The older brother.

RAJ READING: ...can protect the child's body and his ego, which are VERY closely related, but he does not confuse HIMSELF with the father...

RAJ: Of the child.

RAJ READING: ... because he does this, although the child may.

RAJ: The child may, while he's in the older brother's care, look upon his older brother the same as he looks upon his Father.

RAJ READING: I can be entrusted with your body and your ego simply because this enables you NOT to be concerned with them, and lets ME teach you their unimportance.

RAJ: That's why I'm here for you. That's why your Guides are here for you. That's why the whole Brotherhood that is awake is present for you on your behalf so that you might set aside the habit of engaging the ego infrastructures, the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and the fear that if you don't, you will die. So that you might be with Me consciously and experience a stable and continuous relationship that at the least demonstrates to you experientially that you're safe no matter what your ego definitions are, or what your ego fears are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I could not understand their importance to YOU if I had not once been tempted to believe in them myself.

RAJ: Well, you know what? It really is helpful if you believe that I really do exist and that I'm not just a figurehead of a major religion. And it really does help if in addition to believing that I exist, you are willing to believe that I'm available to you directly in your mind, and that it's my desire to commune with you directly, to have a direct relationship with you. So that if you wish, you may shift your allegiance, ever increasingly hopefully, from your ego to Me, so that I might let you lean upon Me, so that you might get the feel of the Movement of Being from a different vantage point than the one you've been engaged in, which has been one of fear and self-protection.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Let us undertake to learn this lesson together, so we can be free of them together. I need devoted teachers who share my aim of healing the mind.

RAJ: I need devoted teachers, teachers of right teaching and right learning. I need teachers who are going to teach by BEING LOVE rather than teaching fear.

Now, another way of saying it that will put it more clearly is that I need devoted Be-ers. I need those who are willing to come from that Place of Excellence within themselves, in the beginning with Me so that you might get the feel for coming from that Place of Excellence in You, because this allows you to be the Presence of Love, the embodiment of the Father's Will that constitutes the Light that illumines every little itty-bitty corner of life.

I need Teachers of Truth rather than teachers of illusion. But I don't need a concept of teachers. I don't need someone being a teacher. The word "teacher" is not the designator of a position. Truly, a teacher is one who is simply Being with Excellence as a Brother to his Brothers and Sisters, as a Sister to her Brothers and Sisters, as that which is inseparable from the earth, the plants, the birds, the universe, as something that has as its conscious intent the desire to make and keep everything in his experience whole because everything in his experience is worthy of it.

A teacher is one who is willing to extend Love, Truth, rather than fear and illusion.

I need you to be Who You Really Are. Why? Because that's the way you wake up. And when you wake up, the Brotherhood is more consciously whole because there isn't some part of the Brotherhood having committed themselves to fitful dreams and who are therefore not present with us, not joying their Birthright, and in effect, disallowing us from experiencing them as part of the wholeness of us as a conscious experience.

Don't get hung up on the word "teachers." I need devoted Be-ers of Love who share my aim of healing the mind.

RAJ READING: The Soul...

RAJ: Meaning your Soul.

RAJ READING: ... is far beyond the need of your protection OR mine. Remember this: In this world you NEED not have tribulation BECAUSE I have overcome the world. THAT is why you should be of good cheer.

RAJ: You know what? All of you are pretty confident that's it's impossible to levitate. Somebody says, "Levitate." You say, "I can't levitate. I can't levitate. Levitation is impossible. I've heard it, but you know how rumors are and stories go, you know. I don't believe it's possible. I can't do it!" But the moment somebody, one or someone of your friends does it, you're going to say, "Well, if he can do it, I can do it, because he's not someone special." As soon as someone does the impossible, you know it's possible for you and you will embrace the possibility and you will accomplish the possibility.

So, it is helpful for you to know that I have stood exactly where you are with the same temptations to be teachers of fear, and to be in the get-get position, and to make others demonstrate my wholeness to me, and make sure that I'm not shortchanged, and that equity prevails. I've been there. That whole perspective I moved out of.

Now, if you dare for a moment to think that I exist, that I really exist, and that I'm available to you, and then you acknowledge or are willing to believe that I've been exactly where you are and know exactly how you're feeling, and that I'm no longer in that place, then you have a justification for saying, "Well, if he did it, I can do it. Not only that, he did it and he says that it's now his function to stand with me as I do that and help me."

And again, the last sentence in this section:

RAJ READING: THAT is why you should be of good cheer.

RAJ: And you want to know something? I'm not the only one standing with you in this way.

And let me review with these words: Don't wait until it really gets tough before you say, "Hey, I'm willing to take a look at this radical way of being that Raj is talking about." Do it while you're not under stress. And then don't believe yourself when you say, "It's not really that bad yet." Don't believe yourself when you say that. Because it can be a Heaven of a lot better.

I love you. Talk to me this week. Talk to me tonight. Don't call Paul on the phone to talk to me. Sit down and shut up and say, "Raj," and wait for Me to respond. Feel for My response. And keep persisting because it's inevitable that we will connect. It's unavoidable because I love you, because I am Love, and because my only function is to extend it, to embrace you in it, and to illuminate the experience of it in you so that it's not just a nice thought.

And if I love you this way, God loves you this way because I am expressing the Father. And not great little Jesus prancing around outside his Father's House saying, "Oh, I love you. I love you. I love you. Oh, it's my purpose to love you and love you and love you." No. I am Love. And I'm not outside my Father's House. And the Love with which I love you is the Love the Father is embracing and embodying, embracing you with and embodying as you, and I am conveying to you that fact so that you might dare to abandon your commitment to fear and self-defense that keeps you locked in the dream.

Again I love you, and I look forward to being with you next week.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And again welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

Once again, I will not be reading from either the first or second edition of the Course, but from the final transcript as it was typed by Bill Thetford. I'm doing this for a reason. And that is because I'm able to provide a constant reminder that the Course isn't just a document transcribed by someone who was willing to transcribe it. It was a communion between Me and Helen and Bill. And it represents the nature of my relationship with every single one of you, a current relationship whether [laughing]... whether it's been activated or not by virtue of your desiring to talk with me, commune with me, learn with me, and make the connection.

It's important for you to understand that my speaking with Helen was not a special dispensation but the natural, normal way things work. When you're aware of this, it makes it possible to experience the fact as you're reading the Course that the sharing of the Course and the communion was an Act of Love—a Living Act of Love; not just a mechanical repeating of words that needed to be put in print, but an active Living Love that I'm engaged in always with all of you.

To read the Course, to study it, isn't just about learning words and new meanings, and you diligently applying them to your mind and your lives. It's about the fact that the Christ is the Living Christ, Living and Loving you today, caring enough about you to go to great lengths to help you remember Who You Are and to be unafraid to wake up, to be unafraid to abandon the practice of control that keeps you blinded to the Truth about You and Reality.

I know there will be many who will be angry at what I'm going to say, but if all you did was pick up this book and in the first chapter realize that I was available to Helen and that I'm available to you and you set the book down and devoted yourself to establishing your connection with me, that's all you'd need.

In the meantime, this book is full of valuable information, which if you're not reading it for the purpose of absorbing the information as information, but you are reading it with the awareness that you are reading a communication that was occurring, it will reinforce your desire to have the same experience. And the Truth that's shared will help you to be less and less afraid of having that Experience of Communion with Me or the Holy Spirit or your Guide. That's why I'm doing it.

So the subject of this section is:

RAJ READING: The Ego and False Autonomy

RAJ: And we've been talking in the last couple of weeks about the fact that you have in effect stolen authority from God so that you could pretend to exercise it yourself on your own. You have attempted to establish autonomy. Well, obviously the autonomy has to be false, purely imaginary. The ego is false autonomy. It's a fantasy.

So, from the book, and you will find today that sometimes there are almost whole paragraphs that will not be found in the first and second editions. I encourage you not to say, "oh, I've lost my place," and scramble through the pages and completely lose your place. Just wait until the next sentence comes up.

No questions.

RAJ READING: You have asked lately how the mind could ever have made the ego. This is a perfectly reasonable question; in fact, the best question you could ask. There is, however, no point in giving an historical answer because the past does not matter in human terms, and history would not exist if the same errors were not being repeated in the present.

RAJ: There have been many occasions where in a Gathering someone would ask me about my childhood and I neglect to amplify on history. Why would you want to know about what my life was like 2,000 years ago when what my life is right now is available to you right now as an illustration of What You Truly Are right now? And it doesn't really matter why it was that you decided to try to see things in your own way. It only matters that right now you're insisting on seeing things in your own way and that "flaw," if you will, in the now needs to be undone in the now.

If you realize this, it will help you to understand that it really doesn't do much good to try to resolve past issues with each other, to go back and rehearse the past and try to figure out what went wrong. If you have a grievance with a brother now, handle the grievance now. Deal with what you are presently feeling. "Oh, well, I'm feeling something about the past."

But you're feeling it now. What is the feeling now when you are with this Brother that you have a grievance about because of something that happened in the past? You will find resolution much swifter if you deal with what you are feeling now. This is important.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Abstract thought applies to knowledge because knowledge is completely impersonal, and examples are irrelevant to its understanding.

RAJ: Now Knowledge is another word for Knowing, with a capital "K". And Knowing is your perception... not perception but Experience of the Truth. And the Experience of Truth is a revelation from God. It's what you experience when you turn toward the Altar to inquire as to what the Truth of a thing is. Knowing is different from thinking.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Perception, however, is always specific, and therefore quite concrete.

Each man makes one ego for himself, although it is subject to enormous variation because of its instability, and one for everyone he perceives, which is equally variable.

RAJ: If you happen to run into someone you haven't seen since you were teenagers, you have no means to connect with them except in terms of the way you last knew them. In fact you might remember quite well some unkind thing that was done, or a way of behavior that was peculiar to that person at that time, and your assumption will be that that is the way they are now, and you will relate to them first on the basis of how you last knew them.

Now, that is a perception that you have in your mind, a picture you have in your mind, and so in spite of the fact that over the years they may have grown and developed and be quite different, you will be relating to an ego you have made-up about that person. And you may have awkward moments as you are confronted with who that one is now and have to adjust your perception. You see. So, you have a picture of yourself, a concept of yourself, a definition of yourself, and you have a concept of everyone else. And then you deal with this someone else on the basis of your perception rather than a real connection with them. It's that simple.

Continuing, or repeating.

RAJ READING: Each man makes one ego for himself, although it is subject to enormous variation because of its instability, and one for everyone he perceives, which is equally variable. Their interaction is a process which literally alters both, because they were not made either BY or WITH the unalterable.

RAJ: Meaning that they were not built upon a direct connection with the Excellence of the other person from the Excellence within you.

RAJ READING: It is particularly important to realize that this alteration can and does occur as readily when the interaction takes place IN THE MIND as when it involves physical presence.

RAJ: How many of you have been in a tense situation with someone and you happen to go to the store and you see them, and you decide you don't want to run into them, but you're pretty sure that they saw you? And because they are the ones who owe you the apology, or are responsible in your mind for correcting the inequity that exists, you know that in their seeing you and in their not coming up to you that they were avoiding you. And then you finish your shopping and get in the car and leave and you begin to smolder inside because of how uncaring they were when they had the opportunity to correct the situation and didn't.

Now, let us say that that person didn't see you at all. And you're sitting there smoldering because, first of all, you have a concept of them that is upsetting to you, and then you have a concept about their behavior in this interaction that didn't even occur, and you're bouncing off your sense of yourself in this situation and your sense of them, and none of it touches Reality in any way. You are getting upset because you're playing the part of your ego and the part of their ego in your mind. And then you wonder why they're surprised when you do actually come face to face with them and you express your distress with them.

It's rather like going to bed at night and your wife or your husband has a dream about the other and wakes up in the morning and says, "I had the most awful dream last night about you. You did such-and-such and such-and-such and you were very insulting. How could you do that? You know, I'm really upset with you and I can't get it out of my mind." There you are playing the part of your ego and playing the part of the other's ego and upsetting yourself. And in expressing the upset as though it were based on something real, you put the other one at a loss to be able to respond because there's nothing real about it to respond to. And that brings a stress, a misunderstanding, a lack of communication into your real relationship with your Brother or your mate, or whoever it is that had the dream about you. You see?

And this is pretty much an example of life, the way you go through your day everyday. Because very few of you consistently relate from the Excellence in you to the Excellence in your Brother. And if you are not relating from the Excellence in you to the Excellence in your Brother, all that's going on is you bouncing off your concept of yourself and your Brother, and communication isn't occurring at all.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: THINKING about another ego is as effective in changing relative perception as is physical interaction. There could be no better example of the fact that the ego is an idea, though not a reality-based thought.

RAJ: Now this is true of all of you, but I was talking to Helen and Bill when I said this.

RAJ READING: Your own present state is a good example of how the mind made the ego. You DO have knowledge at times, ...

RAJ: In other words, True Perception, an Experience of Truth.

RAJ READING: You DO have knowledge at times, but when you throw it away it is as if you never had it. This willfulness is so apparent that one need only perceive it to see that it DOES happen. If it can occur that way in the present, why is it surprising that it occurred that way in the past?

RAJ: And I would add, and why would you try to go back to the past to correct it? Correct it now where it's currently happening. And how do you correct it? You correct it by not taking yourself seriously, this ego that you think you are, and not taking the picture you have of your Brother seriously as the ego you've created for them, and abandoning the court in which you bounce off of the two sides of the relationship all in your own head.

RAJ READING: Psychology rests on the principle of the continuity of behavior. Surprise is a reasonable response to the unfamiliar, but hardly to something that has occurred with such persistence. I am using your present state of how the mind CAN work, provided you fully recognize that it NEED not work that way.

RAJ: In other words, there's another way to look at what you're experiencing than through your definition of yourself and your definition of your Brother. Do you hear that? There's another way to do this than to bounce off your definition of yourself and your definition of your Brother.

Many times you're standing with a friend or a neighbor or an acquaintance, and you appear to be having a conversation and the whole time you are bouncing off your definition of yourself and your definition of them and you're leaving them out entirely! And they are doing the same thing with you! And because there's no actual connection with the real Ones who are standing there in front of each other, ultimately the apparent communication becomes obviously poor communication, becomes an argument, becomes a misunderstanding, becomes hurt feelings. And you say the other one is to blame. And yet one of you never managed to stand there and abandon the self-definition that was being employed, or the definition of the other one that was being employed, so that one of you could come from the Place of Excellence in you with the intent to connect with the Excellence in the other one, regardless of whether the other one was able to see it, or experience it, or not.

RAJ READING: Why are you surprised that something happened in the dim past when it is so clearly happening right now?

You forget the love that animals have for their own offspring, and the need they feel to protect them. This is because they regard them as part of themselves. No-one disowns something he regards as a very real part of himself.

RAJ: Interesting. No one disowns something he regards as a very real part of himself, and yet the fact is that you've all disowned your Father. In your attempt to be an independent authorizer, to have the thrill of making something that has never been made before and the thrill of making your mark in the world, which as I've said before is nothing more than the Kingdom of Heaven with your definitions applied to it and your conscious ignoring of What It Really Is, you have disowned what is part of you. And in actuality you have disowned what is the Totality of You.

And you've done it for so long that you don't remember that you did it. And that's why I'm talking to you to remind you that you have abandoned your Source. And now you don't even think you have one other than your own capacity to define yourself to yourself, and even redefine yourself over and over into a better and better self.

And all the time that you are doing this having disowned your Source, you're in a state of self-ignorance, of self-denial that is uncomfortable. And you recognize that you're uncomfortable, but you think that's just the way life is. And so you don't challenge its legitimacy. And I'm here to express the Truth so that you realize there is a different way to look at this and you find a willingness in you to challenge the way you're seeing everything, the definitions you've given everything, and ultimately to challenge your supposed capacity to authorize and create anything. Because in doing that, in challenging it successfully, the discomfort of existence will disappear, and the Peace and the Joy and the Happiness that you know it's your Birthright to be experiencing without it costing you anything, will be your experience.

Now that's a worthy reason for at least playing around with challenging the authority you think you have, to play around with the possibility that there's meaning to everything other than that meaning which you have given it. Because in that way, you open yourself up to breakthrough, to insight, to inspiration that will provide you with evidence that, indeed, there is more to everything than you're seeing. And whatever you've been doing to blind yourself to it is not worth continuing so that you have even more enthusiasm for playing with the possibility that you have no capacity whatsoever to be creative by yourself all alone.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Man reacts to his ego much as God does to His Souls;— with love, protection and great charity. The reaction of man to the self he made is not at all surprising. In fact it duplicates, in many ways, how he will one day react to his REAL creations, which are as timeless as he is. The question is not HOW man responds to his ego, but what he believes he IS.

RAJ: Just let that sink in for a moment. The question is not HOW man responds to his ego, but what he believes he IS. Do you believe that you are an ego that you created, or do you believe that you are something far beyond anything you could imagine? Something you are not personally responsible for. Something that has been set in Its Place for Eternity, flawless, perfect, unchangeable, unthreatenable. Something that expresses the Glory of the Movement of Love that God Is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Belief is an ego function, and as long as your origin is open to belief at all, you ARE regarding it from an ego viewpoint.

RAJ: Somebody might say to you, "Well, who do you believe you are? Who do you believe you are?" And you tell them. Well, but then the question needs to be asked, "Okay, but who are you? Who is the one that is holding the belief?" And always the answer to that question is, as silly as it sounds, the you that you are that has a belief about who you are is the Christ, is the Ultimate right now, is the Presence of God Being All There Is To You right now.

But you prefer your belief. After all, you have taken many, many years to build that belief up and to impress everyone else with who you believe you are. And you have even succeeded in making other people believe what you believe you are. And if this someone that you believe you are is a person of high regard in the community, of great respect in the world, well, are you going to easily be willing to say, "I'm not at all who I believe I am. I'm going to be willing to abandon who I think I am and I'm going to be willing to abandon who everyone else thinks I am. And I'm going to stop caring about what everyone else thinks I am." You're not going to easily abandon all the hard work you put into convincing yourself and everyone else [who] you are because you've got pride.

And yet, who you think you are is an ego definition, is a definition of an ego. And who everyone else thinks you are is a definition of an ego. And everyone else that you look at to get confirmation about who you are is in your mind an ego as well.

Because you know what? You don't have to convince the Excellence in Another of the Excellence in You. So it isn't the Christ in them that's confirming to you everything you've worked so hard to create as a definition of you. You only need that from other egos. And so, once again, all of your success in creating a self-definition that not only you believe, but you've gotten everyone else to believe, constitutes you bouncing off of your picture of yourself and your picture of everyone else. And you see that that's the belief of having a relationship when you're stuck in a little closet in your mind and you're never going outside of it to connect with the Real One that's there.

That's insanity, because what's insane about it is you think communication is actually going on. You think relationships are actually happening. You're dinging around in your own little closet and they're dinging around in their own little closet and as each... the two of you dings around privately together, it looks like there's an interaction. And I'm telling you, there isn't. You see? Most of you still haven't met each other! Right now! And you know what? I'm here to introduce you to each other. [audience laughter] I'm here to say, "Stop dinging around in your mind. Forget about being an ego and remember that there's a Place of Excellence in You—the Altar, the Presence of God, the Living Light of Love. It's the Presence of God and it's the Nature of You right now. And that's the Truth about everyone else in this room."

Connect with that. And let that be more important than the picture of yourself you've created. And then extend your attention to your Brother to that Place of Excellence in them.

Now you got the picture when I said, "You haven't even met each other." If all you've ever been relating to is a picture you have in your mind of your Brother and you haven't met them, then if the only experience you're allowing of yourself is the picture you have of yourself, you haven't met yourself either.

And I'm telling you there is a Self there to meet! But you will not be able to meet it as long as you honor and revere and are committed to the picture of yourself that you've developed. Because as long as you're committed to that, what are you doing? You are having your back turned toward the Altar. You are choosing to not have in your range of vision the You That You Are, the Divine One That You Are, the Christ That You Are.

And I'll tell you something else. You can listen to what I'm saying. You can read the Course. You can read the Bible. It says, "Love your neighbor as yourself." And you can say, "Okay, I am going to honor the Excellence in my Brother." But you know what? You have a law that all of you practice and that law is this: I will not extend to my Brother what I will not extend to myself. I will not give to my Brother rights that I don't have. Why?

Because you refuse to make yourself jealous. And so you can't just adopt a habit or a behavior of thoughtfulness for the Excellence that your Brother is because it's gonna be a farce if you are not willing to acknowledge a Place of Excellence in You that you didn't create. All you can make is a picture of excellence, a pretty picture, being a good boy, being a good girl, doing all the right things, being impeccable. Ah! It's just a picture.

And as long as you're engaged in reinforcing that picture, you are ignoring the Place of Excellence in Yourself that has this wonderful benefit. This wonderful benefit is that It doesn't have to prove itself. It is Excellence by virtue of Its Existence.

Can you imagine the bliss of not having to prove yourself to anybody ever again? And to never have anyone doubt your Excellence? Think about it or feel what that would mean to you. And do you know what? When you finally give up making and reinforcing a picture of yourself in your mind and in everyone else's mind, and when you no longer have to maintain that picture, or maintain everyone else's allegiance to that picture, it feels like failure, collapse, death to the ego, because the whole effort is what has given you your feeling of worth.

When you arrive at the point where there's no longer any energy to be found in you for keeping up the façade, something happens. You abandon defense. You no longer have to defend your picture of yourself in your Brother's mind. And what begins to emerge from your mouth in this state of abject failure as an ego, is something called honesty. And it's not an ego being honest. It's something else being honest. It's something else saying, "First of all, I can't be something I'm not." It sounds like a negative statement. "I can't be something I'm not. I can no longer be something I'm not." It doesn't mean, "Now I'm free to be anything I want to be." No. "I can't be something I'm not."

That first acknowledgement or statement of honesty expressed outwardly is recognizable to every single one of you as an expression of genuineness. And it doesn't arouse defense in you. You know what it really does? It makes you want to be closer to this point of genuineness, more open to this point of genuineness. Others recognize it as a desirable state of mind. And I'll tell you something. The more of you who are willing to let yourself get into that place and the more of you who are expressing what I'm going to call abject honesty, the more it will inspire others to want to find out how to be that too.

And you know what? In saying, "I cannot be what I'm not," you're being a Teacher of God. You are for the first time teaching something. And it will be met with reception. And that's the beginning of transformation. Others will behave as though there's something wonderful about you, and will even imply that you're teaching them something wonderful. And you'll say, "What? I'm not teaching anything. All I'm doing is realizing that I can't any longer teach what I'm not."

Ironic. A Teacher doesn't try to teach something. A Real Teacher just Be's Genuine.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When teaching is no longer necessary, you will merely KNOW God.

RAJ: In other words, you won't block the Presence of God in You. You will just let God be All There Is.

RAJ READING: Belief that there IS another way is the loftiest idea of which ego thinking is capable. That is because it contains a hint of recognition that the ego is NOT the self.

RAJ: Now this is something all of you need to know.

RAJ READING: Undermining the ego's thought system MUST be perceived as painful, even though this is anything but true.

RAJ: It must be perceived by the ego as painful, even though this is anything but true.

RAJ READING: Babies scream in rage if you take away a knife or a scissors, even though they may well harm themselves if you do not. The speed-up has placed you in the same position.

You are NOT prepared, and in this sense you ARE babies. You have no sense of real self-preservation, and are very likely to decide that you need precisely what would hurt you most.

RAJ: Like more self-defense. Like more defense of the picture of you in your Brother's eyes.

RAJ READING: Whether you know it now or not, however, you HAVE willed to cooperate in a concerted and very commendable effort to become both harmLESS and helpFUL, two attributes which MUST go together.

RAJ: Now I was saying this to Helen and Bill. But you know what? As awkwardly as all of you may be embarking on the real steps of awakening, and regardless of how little Love sometimes gets expressed by you even though you have embarked on a conscientious desire to awaken, these words apply to you.

RAJ READING: ...you HAVE willed to cooperate in a concerted and very commendable effort to become both harmLESS and helpFUL, two attributes which MUST go together. Your attitudes, even toward this, are necessarily conflicted because ALL attitudes are ego-based. This will not last.

RAJ: I'm telling you just as I told them. This will not last. The conflict will not last.

RAJ READING: Be patient awhile, and remember that the outcome is as certain as God.

RAJ: Continuing.

RAJ READING: Only those who have a real and lasting sense of abundance CAN be truly charitable.

RAJ: If there isn't a real and lasting sense of wholeness, completeness, it will always be this for that, tit for tat. If you want something, you give me something. I will give you something if you will give me something. It's all getting. And at the bottom line, the process of getting has been established for self-protection so that you will not be vulnerable to abuse.

Again, charity is something that you find spontaneously arising out of you when you're coming from the Place of Excellence in You and relating to the Excellence in Another, having abandoned dinging around in your mind between your concept of yourself and your concept of them. It's when you're dinging around in your own mind having your own fantasy and playing both the part of you and the other that you are incapable of being charitable.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is quite obvious when you consider the concepts involved. To the ego, to give anything implies that you will do without it. When you associate giving with sacrifice, then, you give only because you believe that you are somehow getting something better, so that you can do without the thing you give. "Giving to get" is an inescapable law of the ego, which ALWAYS evaluates itself in relation to other egos, ...

RAJ: In other words, it's always dinging around between both roles. It's your sense of yourself bouncing off your sense of someone else.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ... and is therefore continually preoccupied with the scarcity principle which gave rise to it.

RAJ: The scarcity principle that gave rise to it was the experience you were left with when you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. I want to define everything. I respectfully (which really means disrespectfully) no longer defer to the Meaning You are giving all of Creation. And I'm going to give the meaning to it. And I'm going to believe the meaning I give to it. And so, my experience of knowing what everything is, Father, because I'm letting You infill me with Its Meaning so that I miss nothing of what exists, instead of that, I'm going to give meaning to everything."

And you lost the full Meaning. And you were left with whatever limited meaning you gave to it, and you're left with whatever satisfaction you're able to muster from this act of loss to feel pride in your very first act of independence.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is the meaning of Freud's "reality principle," since Freud thought of the ego as very weak and deprived, capable of functioning ONLY as a thing in need.

The "reality principle" of the ego is not real at all.

RAJ: It's purely imagined.

RAJ READING: The ego is forced to perceive the "reality" of other egos...

RAJ: Why?

RAJ READING: ... because it cannot establish the reality of ITSELF. In fact, its whole perception of other egos AS real is only an attempt to convince itself that IT is real. "Self esteem," in ego terms, means nothing more than that the ego has deluded itself into accepting its reality, and is therefore temporarily less predatory.

RAJ: And I'm going to bring this home a little further once more. Self-esteem, in ego terms, means nothing more than that the ego... I'm going to change it here, ...means nothing more than that the Christ that you are has deluded itself into accepting the reality it made-up and is therefore temporarily less predatory.

Remember there's no ego doing anything. There's always a Christ behaving as though it's not the Christ and denying its Christhood. The only reality that an ego seems to have is a reality that is borrowed from the Real One entertaining the belief, entertaining the picture, entertaining the concept. And so the Christ authorizes something, but says it isn't. That's all there is to the ego; the Christ behaving as though it's not the Christ and believing its belief. You see?

When you realize that, you realize that the correction to the problem, the correction to the illusion has only to do with your re-embracing Who You Are and not denying Who You Are. And the only way that you can re-embrace being the Son of God is by acknowledging the Existence of God. The only way you can be the Son or Daughter is if you have a Father. And so you have to reach out to the Father and say, "Thy Will, not mine, be done." That's the step. That, then, causes a Revelation of your Sonship, your Daughtership, puts things back in proper relationship. And when that relationship no longer finds in you any objection, the sense of difference between Father and Son fades, Father and Daughter fades, and it becomes Father. Do you disappear? No. Now you are the Father in Expression with nothing blocking the Father's Expression as Himself right where each one of you is.

And so the Experience of Being becomes more specific, more full. As I've said, everything that you're already aware of becomes more meaningful because nothing of What It Is in Its Totality is escaping your attention any longer.

Continuing or repeating.

RAJ READING: "Self esteem," in ego terms, means nothing more than that the ego has deluded itself into accepting its reality, and is therefore temporarily less predatory. This ...

RAJ: So-called.

RAJ READING: ... “self esteem” is ALWAYS vulnerable to stress, a term which actually refers to a condition in which the delusion of the ego's reality is threatened.

RAJ: It really is funny. The delusion of the ego's reality is threatened.

RAJ READING: This produces either ego deflation or ego inflation, resulting in either withdrawal or attack.

RAJ: And you know what? Even withdrawal is an attack. When you withdraw into self-pity, you're saying, "Look what you did to me. Look what you're doing to me. The way you're treating me is causing me to not want to be anything at all." That's attack. Even withdrawal is attack

RAJ READING: The ego ...

RAJ: In other words, this picture that you have of yourself that you believe and you govern yourself according to.

RAJ READING: ... literally lives by comparisons.

RAJ: Why does it live by comparisons? It lives by comparisons because it has no stable, ever-present grounding to rely upon because it has disowned that which is stable, uninterrupted, eternal.

RAJ READING: This means that equality is beyond its grasp, and charity becomes impossible. The ego NEVER gives out of abundance ...

RAJ: "I never do anything for nothing," it says.

Again:

RAJ READING: The ego NEVER gives out of abundance, because it was made as a SUBSTITUTE for it. That is why the concept of “getting” arose in the ego's thought system. All appetites are “getting” mechanisms, representing the ego's need to confirm itself.

RAJ: Okay. Again, let's bring it home. All appetites are getting mechanisms representing your need to confirm yourself when you are in a constant act of denying Who You Really Are—the Christ.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is as true of bodily appetites as it is of the so-called “higher” ego needs. Bodily appetites are NOT physical in origin.

RAJ: Why? Because nothing's physical in origin.

RAJ READING: The ego regards the body as its home and DOES try to satisfy itself through the body, but the IDEA that this is possible is a decision of the ego, which is completely confused about what is REALLY possible. This accounts for its erratic nature.

RAJ: See, it's the idea that this is possible that goes on when you're dinging around in your own mind and never connecting with what a Thing Really Is or Who Another Really Is or Who You Really Are. It's all happening in terms of ideas, fantastic ideas. And when I use the word "fantastic," it's always related to fantasy, never to awesome wonder.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego believes it is completely on its own, ...

RAJ: This is me. It chooses to believe that. Its whole reason for creating itself was so that it could try to play with the experience of doing something on its own. The ego is a deluded state of independence.

Again, continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego believes it is completely on its own, which is merely another way of describing how it originated.

RAJ: It originated through an act of belief. You see? Can it be said any more clearly that the way you're looking at yourself and your world at this point is nothing more than a set of beliefs built upon an initial belief that you could do something on your own.

Therefore, awakening, correction, is always a matter, and only a matter, of abandoning your commitment to a belief, to, let us say, a belief that you're a body, to a belief that cancer can kill your body, to a belief that you are vulnerable to sickness and death. The belief that you are a mortal, a little physical body living on a physical planet in the middle of a physical universe that is nothing more than a process of physical evolution, and so on. But all of those beliefs are built upon one fundamental belief, and that is that you are capable of acting on your own. Therefore, the solution to every one of the problems you believe you have is in abandoning the primary belief that you have the capacity to be creative on your own.

And how do you do that? By saying not "uncle," but "Father, I yield to you. Father, I want to Know the Truth as You Are Being It. Father, I want to understand how it is that I am your Son, or your Daughter, so that I might understand how it is that I am nothing otherwise. So that I will find no invitation, no temptation, to explore the possibility of being something without You."

Continuing and repeating:

RAJ READING: The ego believes it is completely on its own, which is merely another way of describing how it originated.

RAJ: In other words, by believing that it's completely on its own.

RAJ READING: This is such a fearful state that it can only turn to other egos and try to unite with them in a feeble attempt at identification, or attack them in an equally feeble show of strength. It is NOT free, however, to consider the validity of the premise itself because this premise is its FOUNDATION.

RAJ: Belief, that isn't here, the word "belief."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego IS the belief of the mind that it is completely on its own. Its ceaseless attempts to gain the Soul's acknowledgment, and thus to establish its own existence, are utterly useless.

RAJ: Another simple truth.

RAJ READING: Its ceaseless attempts to gain the Soul's acknowledgment, and thus to establish its own existence, are utterly useless.

RAJ: And the wonderful news is that all that's necessary to wake up, to come back into your Right Mind, is to stop doing what's useless. You aren't required to do more than you're doing. You're required to do less than you're doing.

"BORRRRING. Doesn't sound like much fun to me. Doesn't sound very exciting to me. Sounds like too much damn peace to me. What am I gonna do? Float around on pick clouds strumming a harp?" No.

Doing less than you're doing will first of all cause you to experience no more conflict, no more threat, no more fear. It will cause you to feel Peace. It will cause you to look at a thing without inserting your definition between you and that thing. And it means that all that you're already aware of, as I've said before, will become illuminated with Its Divinity. And you will experience it. And the Fullness of Being will consume you and put you in a constant, conscious state of appreciation and gratitude so that everything that you do glorifies God.

"Oh, there you go again. I'm gonna be floatin' in the clouds, strummin' the harp and singing praises. Borrrring." No.

When you see a beautiful rose, when you see something that is especially exquisite, you almost gasp with acknowledgement of its beauty. It's not boring. And because you recognize its beauty, you're able to be present with it so much more than you're willing to be present with something that doesn't catch your attention and isn't as beautiful.

Constantly glorifying God is to constantly be in a state of awe, but not an awe that incapacitates you, not an awe that keeps you from engaging in communication, communion and being active together. To be constantly glorifying God means that you are no longer having to engage in defending your picture of yourself.

And it means no longer having to engage in teaching everyone else who you are so that they might believe it too, might believe it too and confirm your reality to yourself endlessly. Because this is an endless task you have taken on yourself because since this picture of you isn't real, you are going to have to forever teach it. And you are going to have to forever reinforce it. And you're going to have to forever defend it until you finally realize that you're doing something absolutely useless. And it's depriving you of the Joy of finding God in Everything and Experiencing Meaning that you cannot in any way comprehend from the standpoint of your even greatest imagination.

'Nough said for today.

"Ain't it wonderful?" are the words I will leave you with. I love you.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And good afternoon to everyone who is joining us on the internet as well. [dog barking loudly in distance] And our neighbor dog welcomes everyone. [audience laughter]

The big question that all of you have that plagues you throughout your life is, "Who am I?" And the second biggest question is "What am I?" And the third question is, "Why am I here?"

It should be becoming obvious to you why you have these questions. The simple fact is that if you have denied your Father, if you have denied your Source, you have denied that which gives you your Identity. Isn't that simple? And so of course you're going to say, "Who am I?"

The minute you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way," and you dissociated yourself from your Father, you dissociated yourself from the Experience of Who You Are. And so everything that has followed that decision has occurred to one who has no identity, he doesn't know who he is, doesn't know what he is, and doesn't know why he is where he finds himself.

Many, many, many of you have the feeling of being a stranger in a strange land. You feel like you don't really belong here. But when you say you don't belong here, you mean in the world, in this life experience that's going on all around you. When the real place that you are, and I use the word "real" loosely, when the real place you are is in the middle of the definitions you have given to everything you're experiencing and the definition you have given yourself.

You are a stranger in a strange land. It's the land of nod. It's the land of imagination. It's the made-up world and the made-up self. And instinctively you know that such an experience of ignorance is not natural to you. And yet you persist endlessly trying to find the answer to the question, "Who am I?" And you try to find the answer by refining your definitions, refining your definition of who you are and trying to improve it and trying to convince others of it so that they can give support to your newer and better belief about who you are, without realizing that the answer to the question lies in abandoning your definitions and reaching out to your Source again and connecting with your Source so that your Sonship, your Daughtership, can register with you once again. And in registering with you, providing you with the Experience of your Identity so that there's no question about Who You Are or What You Are.

Isn't that simple? It really is that simple.

Okay. I will start reading.

RAJ READING: The Soul...

RAJ: Capital "S" Soul.

RAJ READING: ...in its knowledge...

RAJ: Or as I've said before Knowing with a capital "K".

RAJ READING: ...is unaware of the ego.

Who you really are is unaware of who you think you are. It's like when you go to bed at night and you have a dream. You in the bed, the one and only real you, we'll say, has no knowledge of a you, you are experiencing in the context of a fantasy, a dream. You are lying there, breathing deeply, relaxed, getting rest.

So, again:

RAJ READING: The Soul in its knowledge is unaware of the ego. It does not attack it; it merely cannot conceive of it at all. While the ego is equally unaware of the Soul, it DOES perceive itself as rejected by "something" which is greater than itself. This is why self-esteem in ego terms MUST be a delusion. The creations of God do not create myths, although the creative efforts of man CAN turn to mythology.

RAJ: Or fantasy.

RAJ READING: It can do so, however, only under one condition; what man then makes is no longer creative.

RAJ: And what's the one condition? It can only happen under the condition that you have denied your Source and you have taken on the role of authorizer of the meaning of things, the definition of things. The only thing is that whatever you think you're doing when you have dissociated yourself from your Source, accomplishes absolutely nothing.

When you have a dream at night and you plant a garden and water it and it grows and you pick a flower, has a garden gotten watered? Has a flower grown? Could you have picked that flower? No, nothing has happened except as, let us say, an imaginative film strip.

I'm continuing.

RAJ READING: Myths are entirely perceptions, ...

RAJ: Not knowledge, not knowing.

RAJ READING: ... and are so ambiguous in form and so characteristically good and evil in nature that the most benevolent of them is not without fearful components, if only by innuendo.

RAJ: If only by innuendo. Hmm. Well, let's put that into perspective. How many of you have awakened in the morning and before you move a muscle, you feel guilty. Not for any reason, but it's just there. That's by innuendo. It's just a feeling that's there for no apparent reason.

Now it's important to pay attention to these feelings. The feeling of being guilty for no good reason, for no reason at all, the feeling of not knowing Who You Are, the feeling of not knowing What You Are, and the feeling of not knowing why you exist or why you're here, these are clues. They're very helpful clues. They are your innate capital "S" Sanity, the Sanity of the Divine One That You Are penetrating this dream, this fantasy you have created out of applying new definitions to the Kingdom of Heaven and the Son of God or Daughter of God That You Are. It's your Sanity penetrating your dream reminding you that you're attempting to do something you cannot really do and to abandon the project. You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Myths and magic are closely associated in that myths are usually related to the ego origins, and magic to the powers which the ego ascribes to itself. Every mythological system includes some account of "the creation," and associates this with its particular perception of magic. The "battle for survival" ...

RAJ: Which is a bit of magic because it expresses a capacity you think you have to survive this hostile environment you find yourself in.

RAJ READING: ... is nothing more than the ego's struggle to preserve itself...

RAJ: And I'm interjecting here. Its struggle to preserve itself not in the hostile environment, but to preserve itself because it isn't real in the first place and in order for it to seem to have persistence, its existence must be defended, reinforced.

Repeating.

RAJ READING: The “battle for survival” is nothing more than the ego's struggle to preserve itself and its interpretation of its own beginning. This beginning is always associated with physical birth, ...

RAJ: And I'm going to interject here. [laugh] This beginning is always associated with physical birth. It's never associated with your having said, “Father, I am not going to pay any attention to the way You Are Being Things. I am going to give everything new definitions of my choosing so that I can enjoy being the authorizer of something.” So this beginning is never associated with what really started it all.

RAJ READING: This beginning is always associated with physical birth, because no-one maintains that the ego existed before that point in time. The religiously ego-oriented believe that the Soul existed before and will continue to exist afterwards, after a temporary lapse in ego life. Some actually believe that the Soul will be punished for this lapse, even though in reality, it could not possibly know anything about it.

RAJ: That's like saying that when you go to sleep at night and have a dream and have a lapse of true self-awareness, that when you wake up in the morning you're likely to be punished for having had this lapse of true self-awareness and perhaps having an enjoyable fantasy.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The term “salvation” does NOT apply to the Soul, ...

RAJ: Capital “S” Soul.

RAJ READING: ... which is not in danger, and does not need to be salvaged.

RAJ: Interesting word “salvaged.” Salvation sounds so wonderful, but salvaged sounds like cutting torches and metal and, you know, tearing apart damaged ships and reducing them to their lowest common denominator and melting them down, et cetera. Something that occurs in a shipyard.

So what does salvation refer to when you think of it? You usually think of it as the salvation of who you think you are, that you will come into the experience of your salvation. But it's very important, as I keep reiterating, to remember that right at this very moment in spite of your imaginative definitions and your distorted experience of Reality, You Are The Presence of God, You Are God Self-Expressed, and you have never for an instant stopped being that. It does not require salvation. And the ego will never ever be able to experience salvation because it's just an imagination. So your task is not to improve your ego, but to abandon it so that there can be a return to the direct Experience of What and Who You Divinely Are Which Is The Expression of God, the Son or Daughter of God, for lack of better words, Effect of a Source.

Well, that sounds very dangerous to the ego to be an effect only. Tsk tsk tsk. That's very insulting because of course part of your ego definition of yourself is that you have authority, that you can act and have a result to your acts that gives you notoriety, either good or bad, that creates for you in the world an identity that is respected or disrespected. But to be the effect only of something else, why that means you're a robot, that means you're a puppet.

But you know what? You are the Effect, the Manifestation of the Movement of Love. You are the Embodiment of Intelligence. You are the Manifestation, the Visibility and Tangibility of Life. You are the Presence of God. And that is not nothing. And that would only appear to be a state of puppethood to one who imagines that there is a way to be separate from one's Source. And so it conceives that if you're going to abandon being a puppet with no strings, in other words seeming to be able to be a self-authorized and active puppet, that instead of that you're going to become the inanimate, lifeless, collection of wood parts at the end of strings that something alive is going to manipulate. It still sees the possibility of the truth in terms of separateness. Either a puppet with no strings or a puppet with strings.

But when you acknowledge that you have a Source and you're not It, and you're willing to become defenseless against the Experience of that Source, you find out that that Source is the Father and that tells you immediately Who You Are, the Son or the Daughter, and now you have the Experience of Identity, True Identity. And then you find that the mind that you have been using to have imaginations and the mind that you've been using to give your full attention and commitment to those definitions, rather than the mind that you are that's having the definitions...

PAUL: This is me, Paul. I lost it. Just a moment.

RAJ: You find that this Mind that was having the definitions was what was Real about you and that this Mind that you thought was your private mind is the capital "M" Mind that is God without any privateness to It embracing All of the Infinity of What God Is Being. And so your Experience of Mind is enhanced totally. And you find that You and God are One. And that One is God. It's that simple.

And there is no divine puppet at the end of strings that God is manipulating. Your Mind and the Mind of God are One. Your Soul is the Soul that is God. Soul is Mind's Capacity to Feel the Meaning of All of Creation.

You don't have a Soul. From a separated standpoint that is the way you would interpret it, that you do have a soul, but the Truth is that You Are Soul. You Are, you might say, God's Capacity to Feel the Meaning of Creation, the Movement of Creation Infinitely. That's not an experience of puppethood. That's an Experience of Oneness with God.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The term "salvation" does NOT apply to the Soul, which is not in danger, and does not need to be salvaged. Salvation is nothing more than "right-mindedness," which is not the One-Mindedness of the Soul, but which must be accomplished before One-Mindedness can be restored.

RAJ: Very simply you in your separate sense of yourself must arrive at a point where you will give deference to God, reaching outside of your tiny sense of yourself that you revere so fully and inviting the Experience of God in. This is the way right-mindedness is achieved. And right-mindedness has this advantage: It brings you into alignment with the Father's Will. It weakens the self-definitions that you have previously made commitment to. And it provides the opportunity for breakthrough, for revelation to occur in you, the revealing of your inseparability from God and the full Conscious Experience of Intelligence, Life, Love, Mind, Soul, Spirit, Truth.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Right-mindedness dictates the next step automatically...

In other words, without your having to have a goal, without your having to be proactive about it, without your having to take some personal private action that can give the little ego you are a little bit of glory.

Again, and I'm going to insert the word "itself."

RAJ READING: Right-mindedness [itself] dictates the next step automatically because right perception is uniformly without attack, ...

RAJ: Which means without defense.

RAJ READING: ...so that wrong-mindedness is obliterated. The ego cannot survive without judgment, and is laid aside accordingly.

RAJ: In other words, the ego cannot survive without judgment, therefore without judgment, it is laid aside accordingly. It just disappears.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The mind then has only ONE direction in which it can move. The direction which the mind will take is always automatic, because it cannot BUT be dictated by the thought system to which the mind adheres.

RAJ: If your thought system is the one you have created giving definition to everything, then your mind will follow the dictates of those definitions. But if you have decided to yield to the Father, to be open to the Father and to let the Father in, then you will have moved into what you could call a new thought system, except it's a thought system that you're not originating. And your mind will follow automatically the characteristics and the nature of this new thought system. Which means that you will find yourself, like a snowball rolling down a mountainside of snow, or an avalanche thundering down the mountainside, that you will be moving inexorably to the most grounded place available to you, which is your Sanity, which is your Conscious Experience of Union with God.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Every thought system has internal consistency, and this provides the basis for the continuity of behavior. However, this is a matter of reliability, and not validity.

RAJ: Reliable behavior. Oh, he's a good boy, or she's a good girl and you can depend upon her.

RAJ READING: "Reliable behavior" is a meaningful perception, as far as ego thinking goes. However, "valid behavior" is an expression which is inherently contradictory, because validity is an END and behavior is a MEANS. These cannot be combined logically because, when an end has been attained, the means for its attainment are no longer meaningful.

RAJ: And this is what is characteristic of imaginative thinking. It doesn't have to follow rules. It doesn't have to be intelligent. And unintelligent thoughts connected together can be embraced by you as being intelligent. Or a grouping of intelligent thoughts and unintelligent thoughts can be embraced by you. And you can say, "This is reasonable." It's like saying, "If I have unconditional Love, I can have multiple simultaneous relationships with others and it will work. No need for commitment. Or, I can have multiple simultaneous relationships with others with commitment and be a little more respectable." But the fact is that if you try to do it, it won't work. But you can in the freedom of your imagination create that concept and attempt to live it out and think that you're being intelligent, when at the bottom line you have combined intelligence and unintelligence which don't mix.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: A hypothesis is either false or true, to be accepted or rejected accordingly. If it is shown to be true it becomes a fact, after which no-one attempts to evaluate it unless its status AS fact is questioned.

RAJ: Now this next sentence is key.

RAJ READING: EVERY idea to which the ego has accorded the status of fact is questionable, because facts are in the realm of knowledge.

RAJ: Or capital "K" Knowing.

That's why I've told you when you go through your day, do not assume that you know what a thing is, even if it's a beautiful thing. Because if you're not awake, you're not experiencing the totality of what you're looking at. And so you need to call into question any definition that you've given to anything, or that you've been provided with by teachers. You need to be willing to call it into question, at least to the extent to say, "What is the more of What God Is Being right there than what I'm seeing?"

And here's the reason stated very clearly.

RAJ READING: EVERY idea to which the ego has accorded the status of fact is questionable, because facts are in the realm of knowledge.

RAJ: Another way of saying that is that facts are non-existent in the ego frame of reference.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Confusing realms of discourse...

RAJ: Confusing realms of discourse, which is another way of describing talking about that which you know nothing about because you haven't checked in to see what is Real.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...is a thinking error which philosophers have recognized for centuries. Psychologists...

RAJ: And every single one of you as well.

RAJ READING: ...are generally quite deficient in this respect, as are many theologians.

RAJ: In other words, absolutely everyone who has turned their back on their Source and denied It and therefore does not know who he or she is, is deficient in this respect.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Data from one realm of discourse do not mean anything in another because they can be understood only WITHIN the thought system of which they are a part. That is why psychologists are concentrating increasingly on the ego, in an attempt to unify their clearly unrelated data.

RAJ: [laughing] You see it's very important to get mutual agreement, because without mutual agreement, flaws or beliefs or ignorances will never be embraced as anything other than what they are. So it's very important to become very focused in studying the illusion so that everybody will agree as to what the nature of the illusion is, even though everybody's calling that illusion something real.

So be careful of... shall I call it "group thinking." "Oh! I just love to be with like-minded people. Give me a group of metaphysical people to be with. Let me find people who value what I value." Well, be careful. Because what you're going to end up with is a bunch of mutual agreements that make you feel cozy and warm in the heart because everybody loves each other because everyone thinks the same way. Everyone values the things you value.

But where is God in that? If you haven't turned toward the Altar, if you haven't connected with your Source, you're just having a hunky-dory metaphysical illusion of togetherness. And you're still dreaming a dream. It would be better for you to be with other people who, like you, are valuing connecting with your Source, and who value you and everyone else giving expression to what you find yourself Knowing as a result with your connection with your Source. Because when you're connected with your Source, you have gone to the Place of Excellence in You. And you will be speaking to that Place of Excellence in Them. And they will be speaking from that Place of Excellence in Themselves when they speak to you. And mutual agreement will have nothing to do with the interaction. You see?

And you will feel not cozy and safe in this wonderful social setting of like-minded people. You will instead feel coming through you and coming from everyone else the current, fresh inspiration of God. And now you're talking about a meaningful experience! And you're talking about an experience which will not degenerate into nothing more than a bunch of mealy-mouthed individuals rehearsing the rhetoric of their mutually-agreed-upon definitions. Do you see what I'm saying?

Repeating.

RAJ READING: That is why psychologists are concentrating increasingly on the ego, ...

RAJ: They gotta find some one thing to focus on and that will narrow down the topic, that will narrow down the need for definitions so it will be easier to come to a single mutually-agreed-upon definition.

Again, repeating:

RAJ READING: That is why psychologists are concentrating increasingly on the ego, in an attempt to unify their clearly unrelated data. It need hardly be said that an attempt to relate the unrelated CANNOT succeed.

The more recent ecological emphases are but another ingenious way of trying to impose order on chaos.

RAJ: What chaos? The chaos of not Knowing Who You Are. The chaos of not Knowing What You Are. The chaos of not Knowing Why You're Here. The chaos of not knowing where to go to get the answer. Or, if you do know, refusing to do it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have already credited the ego with considerable ingenuity, though not with creativeness.

RAJ: The Source of Creation is God and the Realm of Creation is God, or You in your Right Mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It should, however, be remembered that inventiveness is really wasted effort, even in its most ingenious forms.

RAJ: Why? Because when you are denying your Source, all of your inventiveness, all of your ingenuity will be directed to establishing your definition of yourself and your definition of everything else in the minds of others so that they will confirm to you your fantasy as though it's true, and thereby secure your existence. In other words, give you a sense of identity that you cannot have when you don't know what your Source is. So all ingenuity and all inventiveness will without fail be directed toward your security, your safety, your invulnerability, your groundedness in an absolutely ungrounded state of fantasy.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We...

RAJ: Those who are awake.

RAJ READING: ...do not have to explain ANYTHING.

RAJ: We don't have to justify anything. We don't have to convince anyone of anything. We don't have to protect anything. What We Are Is God in the Act of Creation. And nothing else.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is why we need not trouble ourselves with inventiveness. The highly specific nature of invention...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: or ingenuity.

RAJ READING: ...is not worthy of the abstract creativity of God's creations.

RAJ: Which We Are. Not just those of Us who are awake, but you as well.

Many of you can imagine that it would a wonderful thing to be able to go to the tropics and go out on the beach and maybe get a boogie board or a surfboard, and in the leisure of your day, go out to the waves and ride them in on your boogie board or your surfboard, to enjoy finding the crest of the wave, catching it, and flowing with it.

Well, in the leisure of your True Being, You ride the Wave of Creation Infinitely in all directions simultaneously without missing any tiny aspect of every leading edge of every Movement of Creation all at the same time. Such Conscious Experience, such Infinite Conscious Experience, such Fullness of Experience is what is yours when you're not denying your Source and thereby not denying Who You Are. You don't get absorbed into anything. All, infinitely speaking, becomes available to you as that which identifies You Truly to You. And therefore your flowing with, your riding the Wave of Creation constitutes the incredible Experience of Your Identity.

And no such question as, "Who am I?", will popup. No ridiculous question such as, "What am I?", will even touch the fringes of your Infinite Mind. And to wonder, "Why am I here?", would cause you to laugh with great peals of joy. Because you know that why you're here is to glorify Creation in Its Infinite Waves of Movement. Because You are Mind and its your Function to be Conscious. And You are Soul and so it is your Function to Feel the capital "M" Meaning of All That Is.

And, if you don't be careful, you might be likely to listen to my words at this very moment and imagine that I'm talking about some other-worldly spiritual experience. And I want to bring you right back to the here and now [knocking on the table] to the glass-topped table, to the beautiful roses, to your fingernails, to your hair, to the other individuals who are in the room. And I want you to be willing to dare to assume that every single thing you're seeing is a Wave of the Movement of Creation with the Fullness of the Meaning God Is Being right there. And so what I'm talking about isn't other-worldly and you need to be watching for the clearer image, if you will, the clearer experience of the rose and the glass-topped table and your fingernails and your hair and the other people in the room.

Because remember the Mind that you are experiencing right now is the Divine Mind. It's the only Mind you will ever have, but you are using your Mind for the specific purpose of giving your attention only to the definitions and meanings you are applying to the Infinite Movement of Creation that is in your face. And so you say, "It's just a red rose. It's just a white rose. It's just a piece [knocking on the glass] of glass. It's just a not too attractive fingernail. It's thinning hair." You see? And you block the Experience of What It Really Is.

The Ultimate is in your face today. And the Mind you are using is the Mind That Is God. The Mind That Is God what? Being your Consciousness, being your Mind. And so the answer lies not in finding another place to be where you could just as easily say, "Why am I here?" It lies in using your Mind differently right here and right now. Because the moment you move into a different thought system, you will see the Kingdom of Heaven in completely different form than the form you're seeing the Kingdom of Heaven in at this moment when you are preoccupied with your definitions. Reality, the only thing that's confronting you, will look different to you when you shift to a different thought system from which to view the Kingdom of Heaven.

At least intellectually, do you grasp what I'm saying? Your belief system is a filter. And the filter sieves out, filters out certain aspects of Reality. And you take what's left and you say, "This is what is going on. This is what these little parts of infinity are and they are the totality." Change your filter, like changing your glasses from regular to polarized will give you a different view.

What is a miracle? A shift, a sudden shift of perception. A movement from one thought system to another system.

Now don't get smart-assed with me, and I'm saying this not to anyone in this room, but to all of those people who just love to think. Don't get smart-assed with me and say, "Well, a heck of a lot of good it does to move from one thought system to another thought system 'cause you're still in a thought system. You haven't woken up yet." Well, don't discount what I'm saying with such stupidity, please.

When you change from a thought system that is ignorant, that is a denial of your Source, that causes you not to know Who You Are because you can't have an identity if you're sourceless, when you make a shift from that to a better thought system that is more in alignment with the Truth, you are moving toward what the Course calls the happy dream.

The poor thought models that you're using right now do not allow for breaking out of the thought system. But you can move to a thought system that recognizes that indeed it is still not a matter of being awake, but if that thought system embraces within itself an infrastructure, I will say, that promotes invalidating the way you're currently seeing things and invites you to look with innocent eyes at everything you're seeing, because you've been told that what's there is truly the Kingdom of Heaven even though you're not seeing it, and you decide you want to see the more of the Kingdom of Heaven that's there, you're in a thought system which inherently undermines itself and promotes the experience of insight because you become undefended against insight. You become undefended against what you don't know yet. And hopefully, you actually begin to desire to have an experience of the unknown because this better thought system you're in tells you that the unknown is not fearful, is not fearsome, is not threatening.

And I will tell you something. You will move from thought system to thought system to thought system with improvements. Actually what will happen is that your current thought system is being undermined by everything I'm sharing with you. It's being undermined by your Soul directly with you as It insists upon reuniting yourself with your Self, with a capital "S". And so, you will find that a constant modification of your thought system will occur until the infrastructure of it becomes so freeing, rather than binding, that you will finally arrive at a point where you have the guts to abandon thought systems entirely and let go into the Father, let go into your Soul, let go into the Love That You Are. And let It consume you. Let It Be All There Is Of You. And that's when you'll wake up.

You will say "Uncle" to God. And God will fill you full because you will be presenting no resistance whatsoever and that is why it is said that, "God will take the last step." You see, it isn't the Kingdom of Heaven that you need to let yourself back into at the bottom line. What you need to do at the bottom line is to be so completely undefended that you let God in to replace who you thought you were. To replace who you thought you were. Not improve it. Replace it.

And here's another way of putting it that you'll be able to embrace more easily. What you will be doing is becoming defenseless enough, or so completely void of defense, that your Self, your capital "S" Self will replace who you think you are. Maybe it's scary to think that God might replace who you are. So realize that it is Who You Truly Are that will replace who you think you are. They both mean the same thing.

But it's helpful, ultimately it's required for you to recognize that God will replace who you are, because until you say "Yes" to God, you will still be in some state of denial of your Source.

God and You are One. And That One Is God. Write that on your refrigerator. God and You are One. And God Is That One.

And when you let that be the utter simple Truth, you will get your Identity back. You will get your Identity back and you will Know What You Are. And instead of wondering why you are where you are, you will Know Where You Are, in the Kingdom of Heaven in the Conscious Experience of Creation as It Moves.

Is this interesting, or what!?

I Love You All.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And again welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet. For those who might be joining for the first time on the internet, I will not be reading from either the first or second edition of the Course but rather from the transcript as prepared by Bill Thetford. So when you find differences between what I'm reading and what you're reading in the first and second editions, you will understand why.

Okay. And the section is entitled:

RAJ READING: Love without Conflict

You have never understood what “the Kingdom of Heaven is within you” means. The reason you have not understood it is because it is NOT understandable to the ego, which interprets it as if something outside is inside, and this does not mean anything. The word “within” is unnecessary. The Kingdom of Heaven IS you.

RAJ: And I'm going to repeat that.

RAJ READING: The Kingdom of Heaven IS you. What else BUT you did the Creator create, and what else BUT you is His Kingdom? This is the whole message of the Atonement, a message, which, in its totality, transcends the sum of its parts. Christmas is not a time; it is a state of mind.

RAJ: And I'm going to add: Just as Being is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Christ Mind wills from the Soul, NOT from the ego, and the Christ Mind IS yours.

RAJ: This pretty well summarizes what we talked about last week and what we've been talking about for some weeks now. And that is that the Mind that you are using to give definitions to everything is the Christ Mind and the Mind that you are using to believe the definitions you are giving to everything instead of the full capital "M" Meaning that God Is Expressing In Everything, is the Christ Mind. It's the only Mind there is. And you either allow it to be the Absolute Fullness and Totality of You, or you imaginatively use it as though it's a tool with which you can be creative, like the Father, while ignoring the Father completely.

This is why the Kingdom of Heaven is you. Returning Home is you coming back into your Right Mind. It's not a place. It's you returning to Sanity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You, too, have a kingdom which your Soul created. It...

RAJ: Meaning your Soul.

RAJ READING: ...has NOT ceased to create because your ego has set you on the road of perception.

RAJ: Or definitions.

RAJ READING: Your Soul's creations are no more fatherless than YOU are. Your ego and your Soul will never be co-creators, but your Soul and YOUR Creator will ALWAYS be. Be confident that your creations are as safe as you are.

RAJ: And I'm going to remind you again that the way in which you fully awakened are co-creators with God lies in the fact that when you are not presenting any suggestion of independent authorship, you, in so many words, sit on God's Shoulder while God Be's The Movement Of Creation. And you are the observing of the Movement of Creation. In other words, you are allowing your Mind to have nothing present in it but the Mind of God that is the Movement of Creation and your Function is to be the Conscious Awareness of that Movement of Creation in Its Totality with God simultaneously.

In this way, the Movement of Creation becomes yours. Not as a separate creator but as nothing less and nothing more than the Conscious, the full Conscious Experience of All of the Meaning of the Movement of Creation. You become co-creators by virtue of not introducing anything extraneous any longer to the Movement of Creation that God Is Being.

When it says, "Be confident that your creations are as safe as you are," it means that what has truly been Being, what has truly been Created all the time you have been dallying with the ego and you apparently have missed it because of your preoccupation with what you have made-up, all of that will become available to you once again as Eternal and as ever available to you as your Conscious Experience. All of Reality that has been occurring while you have been dallying with the ego will become your Conscious Experience once again.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Kingdom is perfectly united and perfectly protected, and the ego will NOT prevail against it,—Amen.

That was written in that form because it is a good thing to use as a kind of a prayer in moments of temptation.

RAJ: Mmm. Moments of temptation? Like what? Well, like, "I've got a headache." Or the suggestion is whispered in your ear by the ego that says, "Ooo, your financial picture is pretty tight and you know you have some demands coming up and you're not going to be able to meet them and therefore it's appropriate for you to indulge in fear." Those are moments of temptation to become further distracted and further preoccupied with a consciousness of existence that has nothing to do with God and with your Birthright of Wholeness.

When that happens, it is helpful to remind yourself quote, "The Kingdom is perfectly united, and perfectly protected." In other words, it isn't being altered by my momentary perception of lack and the fear that it's generating. My Wholeness is still Whole and Untouched, and the ego will not prevail against it.

Now, the ego is not going to not prevail against it because you're making this declaration. The ego is not going to prevail against it because Reality is unalterable and the ego is purely imaginary, and therefore has no capacity to accomplish a thing.

Continuing. Regarding the prayer:

RAJ READING: It is a Declaration of Independence.

RAJ: Hmmm. Dangerous words, "declaration of independence," because your ego state of mind is itself a declaration of independence from God. So this has to be referring to your Birthright of independence from being the puppet of an imaginary presence that you call the ego.

Making this declaration of independence, recognizing that you need not play into being governed by the suggestion that fear is justified, is not enough. The declaration of independence says, in so many words, "There is another way to look at this." But that acknowledgement is not all that's necessary. It is then necessary to turn to the Father, to turn to the Altar within, and say, "What is the Truth here? What is another way to look at this that embodies the Father's Will so that I may know that I am safe and whole and that the ego's suggestion of fear is totally unjustified?" So the declaration of independence from the ego is the first step in turning toward the answer that completely nullifies whatever the suggestion is that the ego has put before you and enticed you with.

Continuing.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the next sentence: You will find it very helpful if you understand it fully.]

RAJ READING: In its characteristically upside-down way, the ego has taken the impulses from the superconscious and perceives them as if they arise in the unconscious.

RAJ: What are the impulses from the superconscious? Simply the insight, the inspiration, that comes from the Father to you when you have turned toward the Altar. So:

RAJ READING: In its characteristically upside-down way, the ego has taken the impulses from the superconscious and perceives them as if they arise in the unconscious. The ego judges what is to be accepted, and the impulses from the superconscious are unacceptable to it because they clearly point to the nonexistence of the ego itself. The ego therefore experiences threat, and not only censors but also reinterprets the data. However, as Freud correctly pointed out, what you have repressed can retain a very active life BEYOND your awareness.

RAJ: This is a very important point because it's something you can depend on. If you repress the Allness of God and His Fatherhood, then... and if you repress that, you may know it has a life of its own that goes on beyond your willingness to recognize it. And it goes on, on your behalf constantly. That's good news.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Repression thus operates to conceal not only the baser impulses but also the most lofty ones from awareness because BOTH are threatening to the ego and, being concerned primarily with its own preservation in the face of threat, the ego perceives them AS THE SAME. The threat-value of the lofty is actually much greater to the ego because the pull of God Himself can hardly be equated with the pull of human appetites. By perceiving them AS the same, the ego attempts to save itself from being swept away, as it would surely BE in the presence of knowledge.

RAJ: Or capital "K" Knowing.

RAJ READING: The upper level of the unconscious thus contains the Call of God as well as the call of the body. That is why the basic conflict between Love and fear is unconscious; the ego cannot tolerate either, and represses both by resorting to inhibition. Society depends on inhibiting the latter,...

RAJ: Meaning fear.

RAJ READING: ..., but SALVATION depends on DISinhibiting the former.

RAJ: Meaning Love.

RAJ READING: The reason you need MY help is because you have repressed your own Guide, and therefore need guidance. My role is to separate the true from the false in your unconscious, so it can break through the barriers the ego has set up, and shine into your minds. Against our united strength the ego CANNOT prevail.

RAJ: Again, this is so very important and it's the reason that I'm reading from the transcript, because in the transcript it makes it clear that my communion with Helen and Bill was the point, not the message. The message is important, but it is our joining, it is our communion, it is our mutual working together, that promotes the actual shift in consciousness that each of you needs to undergo. And I am constantly reminding you in these Gatherings that I am available to each one of you directly, just as your Guides are, and that We are there for the purpose of joining, for the purpose of communion, because it's in that ending of isolation that the shift back into your Sanity is facilitated. It is the means of coming Home.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It should be apparent to you by now why the ego regards the Soul as its "enemy." The ego arose from the separation, and its continued existence depends on YOUR continuing belief in the separation.

RAJ: You see?

RAJ READING: Having reduced the Soul impulses to the unconscious, the ego has to offer you some sort of reward for maintaining this belief.

RAJ: This mindset. This definition.

RAJ READING: All it CAN offer is a sense of temporary existence, which begins with its OWN beginning and ends with its OWN ending. It tells you this life is YOUR existence because it IS its own.

RAJ: And remember last week we were talking about the three questions you have, "Who am I?", "What am I?" and "Why am I here?" You have those questions because the ego's existence is temporary. It's not real, but it's claiming to be. And because it itself is a denial of God, it is a denial of That which gives Real Identity to you. And so your sense of yourself is temporary, identity-less, without any Conscious Experience of what your true, real, meaningful Function is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Against this sense of temporary existence the Soul offers you the knowledge...

RAJ: The Knowing.

RAJ READING: ...of permanence and unshakable BEING. No-one who has experienced the revelation of THIS can ever fully believe in the ego again. How can its meager offering to you prevail against the glorious gift of God?

RAJ: I'm adding the word "naturally" here.

RAJ READING: [Naturally] You who identify WITH your egos cannot believe that God loves you. YOU...

RAJ: Identifying with your egos.

RAJ READING: ...do not love what you have made, and what you made does not love YOU. Being made out of the denial of the Father, the ego has no allegiance to its own maker.

RAJ: And again, to be clear here, being made out of the denial of the Father, the Christ That You Are is unconscious of the Father and therefore has no means of giving allegiance to Its own Maker—God.

You must remember that the ego isn't a thing in itself. It's a Christ choosing to give new definitions to everything, believing the definitions, and in the process losing the full Conscious Awareness of Its Christhood because it's preferring the definition of itself that it has created for itself. And in that state of affairs, the Christ That You Are has no allegiance to Its own Maker which is God. Again, it doesn't make any of this true. But this is the understanding of the dynamic that makes things seem the way they seem to be.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You cannot conceive of the real relationship which exists between God and His Souls because of the hatred you have for the self YOU have made. You project onto your OWN idea of yourself the will to separate, which conflicts with the love you feel for what you made BECAUSE you made it. No human love is without this ambivalence,...

RAJ: In other words, no love that you have for anything you made separate from God is without this ambivalence.

RAJ READING: ...and since no ego has experienced love WITHOUT ambivalence, the concept is beyond its understanding.

RAJ: Because it's beyond its understanding, resolution of the "problem of being" cannot occur from within the ego's perceptions, the ego's quote "understanding" unquote. And that is why awakening requires your reaching beyond your best definitions, your best thoughts, your best principles, to Know what the Truth is that you didn't create.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Love will enter immediately into ANY mind which truly wants it, but it MUST want it truly. This means that it wants it WITHOUT ambivalence, and this kind of wanting is wholly without the ego's "drive to get." There is a kind of experience which is so different from anything the ego can offer that you will never recover. The word "recover" is used quite literally here,—you will never be able to cover or hide again. It is necessary to repeat here that your belief in darkness and in hiding IS why the Light cannot enter.

RAJ: Remember that your beliefs are powerful for you because they are definitions you have created which you have invested confidence, trust and commitment in, and where you give your commitment is what you will have. And until you will for something different, it will not change.

At the bottom line beliefs are houses built upon sand, houses built out of straw. Beliefs are insubstantial and structurally unsound. Beliefs are imaginary. But when you create the belief and you make commitment to it, the laws that you apply to it are the laws by which you will govern your conscious awareness of things and you will disallow for the full Conscious Experience of What Is Real. And so, for you, you will be in a limited experience even though the Fullness of the Kingdom of Heaven is going on without interruption and without alteration.

Again:

RAJ READING: Love will enter immediately into ANY mind which truly wants it, but it MUST want it truly.

RAJ: And the experience of it is so different from anything the ego can offer that you will never re-cover, never be able to cover or hide again.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Bible gives many references to the immeasurable gifts which are FOR you, but for which YOU must ask.

RAJ: And the only reason you must ask for them is because you have denied them, you have blocked them out of your experience. You have said, "I don't want them. I want only what I have made-up for myself." You, in so many words, set them outside the door of your tiny limit of conscious awareness. And because you set them out there, you must invite them back in. You must undo your denial. You must undo your objection to Reality.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is not a condition as the ego sets conditions. It is the glorious condition of what you ARE.

RAJ: This is very important.

RAJ READING: No force except your own will is strong enough or worthy enough to guide you. In this you are as free as God, and must remain so forever. You can never be bound except in honor, and that is always voluntary. Let us ask the Father in my name to keep you mindful of His Love for you and yours for Him.

RAJ: You can reach out to the Father for His Love by yourself, but I invite you to do it with Me consciously so that you might have My support when your commitment is weak, when your willingness falters.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: He has never failed to answer this request because it asks only for what He has already willed. Those who call truly are ALWAYS answered. Thou shalt have no other gods before Him because there ARE none.

RAJ: And it's time for you to stop making gods out of your own definitions, out of the understandings that you have come to through your human reasoning based upon your being a mortal.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It has never really entered your mind to give up every idea you ever had that OPPOSES knowledge.

RAJ: Or capital "K" Knowing. One of the reasons it has never really entered your mind to give up every idea you ever had that opposes Knowing is because you didn't know there was such a thing as Knowing. You didn't know that the Mind of God is your Mind to be experienced from God's Perspective. You thought that you had a mind like God which God gave you as a creation separate from Him and that you were to honor and use this mind on your own. So it was natural not to ever have the idea enter your mind to give up all of your thoughts.

RAJ READING: You retain thousands of little scraps of meanness which prevent the Holy One from entering.

RAJ: And without going into gross levels of meanness, let's just say that an idea that you have to look at a thing and determine what it is by yourself without the Father, that's a mean idea. It's not an embracing idea. It's a very private separate selfish idea.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Light cannot penetrate through the walls you make to block it, and it is forever unwilling to destroy what you have made. No-one can see THROUGH a wall, but I can step around it. Watch your minds for the scraps of meanness, or you will be unable to ask me to do so. I can help you only as our Father created us. I will love you and honor you and maintain complete respect for what you have made, but I will neither honor it nor love it unless it is true.

RAJ: And you know what? That makes me your best friend. But you can't pull shit on me. [some audience laughs] And when you do so out of habit and not out of conscious meanness, I will not join you in agreement about it. And I will clarify the discrepancy without calling your Integrity into question. I will do it by holding before you a clear sense of the fact that you not only have Integrity, you are Integrity Embodied because You're God Expressed.

And I will confirm that to you in ways that will help you to see that your devotion to a contrary belief is useless and meaningless, but not self-demeaning of you. Because by virtue of confronting you with your unchangeable Integrity, it's obvious to you that you thereby have an Integrity with which to disagree with an ignorance or a flaw in your thinking. You are strong enough. You are credible enough. You are Real enough to be able to deny a definition you gave to yourself or to your world without threatening or undermining your existence. And that is very important.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I will never forsake you, any more than God will, but I MUST wait as long as you choose to forsake yourself.

RAJ: Now not only must I wait, I will gladly wait. I will gladly forever stand ready to help you the moment you decide for whatever reason that it's no longer worth it to you to try to create the world and universe out of whole cloth, out of pure imagination. And that it's not worth it to you to continue longer experiencing the frustration of no real fulfillment felt. So I must wait and I will wait.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Because I wait in love and not in impatience you will surely ask me truly. I will come in response to a single unequivocal call. Watch carefully and see what it is you are really asking for. Be very honest with yourself about this, for we must hide nothing from each other. If you will really try to do this, you have taken the first step toward preparing your mind for the Holy One to enter. We will prepare for this together, for once He has come you will be ready to help me make other minds ready for Him. How long will you deny Him His Kingdom?

RAJ: Put another way, how long will you deny yourself the experience of the fact that You Are The Kingdom?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: In your own unconscious,...

RAJ: We could say in your own unconsciousness of God.

RAJ READING: ...deeply repressed by the ego, is the declaration of your release. GOD HAS GIVEN YOU EVERYTHING. This is the one fact that means the ego does not exist, and which therefore makes it profoundly afraid. In the ego's language, remember, "to have" and "to be" are different, but they are identical to the Soul. The Soul knows that you both HAVE everything and ARE everything. Any distinction in this respect is meaningful only when the idea of "getting," which implies a lack, has ALREADY been accepted.

RAJ: In other words, when that thought becomes a definition of reality to you and you embrace it and make commitment to it, it becomes for you a fact.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: That is why we made no distinction before between HAVING the Kingdom of God and BEING the Kingdom of God.

The calm being of God's Kingdom, which in your sane mind is perfectly conscious,...

RAJ: Perfectly conscious.

RAJ READING: ...is ruthlessly banished from the part of the mind which the ego rules. The ego is desperate because it opposes literally invincible odds, whether you are asleep or awake. Consider how much vigilance you have been willing to exert to protect your ego, and how little you have been willing to expend to protect your higher mind. Who but the insane would undertake to believe what is not true, and then protect this belief at the COST of truth?

RAJ: Well, who would? And the practical and helpful answer is you wouldn't if you knew better.

You see how that answer leaves your self-respect and integrity intact? If I said the answer was, "Well, only an idiot would do that!", well, now we'd have to spend some time undoing all of the feelings you have about being an idiot.

If you knew better, you wouldn't do it. And so the solution to that problem is for someone to tell you how to do it better. And you know what? That's what you get from your Guide. That's what you get from the Holy Spirit. It doesn't convict you of anything. It shows you that you are more than what you thought you were. You are more than the definition you have been applying to yourself. And it helps you feel from that greater definition or greater Truth about you, the strength, the impulse to abandon your definition so that you might not unknowingly be bound by an ignorance and might be freed by Knowing the Truth. Because you deserve to Know the Truth because You Are God's Expression. You are something more than the puny, measly definition of yourself that you have been applying to yourself.

It's very simple really. When you have made up a definition of yourself and you are no longer consciously embodying the Divine Meaning that the Father Has Expressed and that appears as You, then, as we've said before, you feel separate, alone, vulnerable, fearful. And everything that comes after that is a conscious means of defending yourself in this irrevocable state of vulnerability that you find yourself experiencing.

And therefore, love is never really love when you express it. It's always serving you as a defense. As a result, love is conflicted. Love that is used as a defense is a conflicted expression of something which in itself, if it weren't being used for defense, would uncover to you the fact that there isn't one single element of anything that is at odds with you, and therefore there is no need for self-defense of any sort.

And so this section that we've been reading makes this clear so that you might make a choice for real Love. The real capacity, first of all, to feel

God's Love for you because you have decided to become defenseless against God and let God in by invitation on your part. And then in the infilling of Love that you are filled by, extending it without conflict to your Brother and to your world and to your universe so that its extension is not an act of defense in any way.

Now, doing this is the first step, the pushing and the causing to fall of the first domino. Because when you Love from this Place of Unconflicted Love, it is felt by others. And whether they can put their finger on it or not, something has changed in their life. And they can't ever be quite as covered up again. And so you become an agent for change, if you will. Change of what? Change of the minds, the hearts, you might say, of your Brothers and Sisters.

The need is to get back to Unconflicted Love. It's your Birthright. And you know what else? It is your Joy to Experience because in the Experience of it you discover again that this is your Function, this is your Purpose. It is not why you are here. It is why you exist, period! And if it is your Function, that is Who You Are. Who You Are Is Love. What You Are Is Love.

This is why you keep hearing the simplicity. Love one another. Do unto others as you would have them to do unto you. If you would like them to come from the Place of Excellence in Themselves, that which reflects God in them, then you come from the Place of Excellence in You, that Place Where God Is in You. Love one another. As I have loved you, love one another. Love is the answer. It's an age-old song, shall I say, an age-old melody, an age-old theme.

But unfortunately, it's been taken as an idea for little independent egos to embody and actualize from their little tiny egohood. And so you get zealots. You get little egos running around being loving, extending love to their neighbor, which literally is meant cramming it down their throat. It's been a matter of figuring out what love is. Well, love must be good behavior. It must be kindness. It must be thoughtfulness. And so you put together a package of behaviors that you all mutually agree are the definition of Love.

But again, nobody's thought to ask God what is Love. Nobody has thought to turn to God and say, "You know what? The only thing I can do is to make-up a bunch of ideas about what Love is and create a package of definitions and a criteria of behaviors that then I can implement. But you know what? I don't get a feeling from that. I only get a result of, let's say, improved harmony with everyone. But I don't get a feeling with it. I don't get a feeling of connection with my Brother. There's just a sort of a physical harmony.

"And so God, because my definitions of Love and my implementation of my definitions of Love, because they aren't fulfilling, I'm willing to set them aside, Father, and ask You to provide me with the Experience Of Being Loved By You. I would like to have the experience of not being separate and apart where I have to make-up my own definitions and then convince everyone else of them and try and make them work in the world I see. Help me. Fill me up with the Experience Of Being Loved. And I, with all of my ability, will attempt to be defenseless enough to not block Your Entry into my conscious awareness. I invite You in and I realize that it's my responsibility to let You in because You never ever withdrew from me. I will even ask you to help me be more defenseless, more yielding."

SEEKER: Are we talking about defenselessness only to God?

RAJ: Someone here asked, "Are we talking about defenselessness only to God?" And the answer to that is "Yes" because until you become defenseless against God, which is the Source of your Being and therefore that which gives you the Experience of Identity, you will still see yourself as separate from your Brothers and Sisters, and any expression of love that you make from that state of separateness is always going to involve, as I said earlier, certain elements of self-defense which means that its not really Love.

The only way any of you will find yourself able to extend Unconflicted Love is to become defenseless against the Father first, because it's the infilling of the Love That God Is that will uncover to you your Divine Function as the Son or Daughter of God. And it is in that experience of infilling that you have the Love of God, you might say, to pass on to your Brother and Sister. And that Love will be unconflicted and will embody no elements of defense, will be unconflicted in any way.

That is what has been bandied about as unconditional love. Again, note unconditional love has been a concept which little egos have been trying to implement and embody again without ever joining with the Father where the Living Love of God is available and which when you allow It into yourself and through you, becomes unconditional Love expressed to your Brother and Sister. You see?

Now the next section, which we will not go into today, is entitled, "The Escape From Fear." And I think that you can begin to see that the escape from fear is the result of inviting in and letting flow through you, unconflicted Love.

PAUL: This is me, Paul. Just a moment.

RAJ: While I have been speaking, I have been being with all of you sort of like a rotorooter facilitating deep changes, deep shifts within you. An Expression of My Love.

And so, without any further embellishment, we will end for today, except that I will let you know that next Sunday after I have spoken as I've spoken today, since there's been no opportunity for the last month or so for anyone to ask questions or make comments or objections, we will take a period of time after the discussion of the Course for you to bring up questions relative to what we've been discussing and pursue them more deeply, let us say.

And so I will say I Love You and I look forward to being with you all next week.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the internet as well.

Again, I will be reading from the transcript in the finished form that Bill Thetford prepared it, and in the transcript this section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Escape from Fear

If you cannot hear the Voice of God, it is because you do not choose to listen.

RAJ: In other words, it's not because you can't hear. It's not because it's not possible. It's not because it's really difficult. It's not because it takes some psychic talent. It's simply because you do not choose to listen. And what that really means is that there is something else you do choose to listen to, and what you choose to listen to are your best judgments, your lousy judgments, your opinions, your ungrounded thoughts. Sometimes you think that your problems are because you're listening to other people, but what that really means is that you're having a problem because you are listening to your best definition about other people. And when their behavior doesn't coincide with your definition of them, you feel distressed.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The fact that you DO listen to the voice of your ego is demonstrated by your attitudes, your feelings and your behavior. Your attitudes are obviously conflicted, your feelings have a narrow range on the negative side but are never purely joyous, and your behavior is either strained or unpredictable. Yet this is what you WANT.

RAJ: "Oh," you say, "No, it's not!"

But I'll tell you something, and I've said it before: You're always doing only what you want. If you're doing something you don't want to do, it's because you're doing something you don't want to do and there's a payoff for you somewhere in the end of the process.

SEEKER: [faint] What's the payoff look like when you wake up?

RAJ: Whoops! We're going to save the questions until the end.

The payoff for doing something you don't want to do is often the guilt trip you're able to lay on someone else and say, "See what a mess you made out of my life? Now you're going to pay for it." So even when you're doing something you don't want to do, you're doing it because, for one reason or another, you do want to do it. And you're just not being honest with yourselves.

Does that make you a fool? It may be a foolish thing to do, but fools do things that they don't intend to do. And when you choose to do something you don't want to do because there's a payoff, it's very calculated. It's very conscious. It is with definite intent, and so, no, you are not a fool. You are being intelligently, and consciously, unintelligent. That's what it amounts to. But you're no fool.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is what you are fighting to keep and what you are vigilant to save. Your minds are filled with schemes to save the face of your egos, and you do not seek the Face of God.

RAJ: That's not a judgment. It's a simple observation. The whole human condition is your experience of the Kingdom of Heaven when you are choosing not to look at it with God. It's that simple.

Continuing

RAJ READING: The glass in which the ego seeks to see its face is dark indeed. How can it maintain the trick of its existence except with mirrors?

RAJ: The trick of its existence. What that means is: How on earth can that which doesn't exist seem to present an existence and get you to believe it without trickery? How can it maintain the trick of its existence except with mirrors? Continuing.

RAJ READING: But where YOU look to find yourself is up to you.

RAJ: In other words, the power is in your hands. The power to be clear is in your mind. And if you realize that you are very consciously using your mind to deceive yourself, then it becomes obvious to you that you can consciously use your mind in a manner which promotes Divine Clarity—Your Birthright.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have said that you cannot change your mind by changing your behavior, but we have also said, and many times before, that you CAN change your mind.

Again you notice the simplicity here. You can get into whole thought systems about changing your behavior in order to facilitate changing your mind, and it can have a lot of structure to it and a lot of complications to it. But quote:

RAJ READING: We have said that you cannot change your mind by changing your behavior, but we have also said, and many times before, that you CAN change your mind. When your mood tells you that you have chosen wrongly, and this is so whenever you are not joyous, then KNOW this need not be.

RAJ: This need not be. This need not be. Mmm. Taint so! That's what "Taint so!" means. This need not be.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: In every case you have thought wrongly about some Soul that God created, ...

RAJ: And I'm going to insert: That doesn't apply just to someone else, but to yourself as well.

RAJ READING: In every case you have thought wrongly about some Soul that God created, and are perceiving images your ego makes in a darkened glass.

RAJ: In other words, a definition.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Think honestly what you have thought that God would NOT have thought, and what you have NOT thought that God would have you think. Search sincerely for what you have done and left undone accordingly, and then change your minds TO THINK WITH GOD'S.

RAJ: "Oh, isn't this getting monotonous?" You might have thought when you started the Course that you were going to learn something complex, and indeed, some of you have treated it quite complexly. But at the bottom line, all it's about is the willingness to abandon the commitment you have to the definitions and understandings that you have given to everything. And to be willing to become curious to know what those things might be beyond your definitions. What they might be in the Mind of God. What they are as God is Being it, Being them. Turning toward the Altar. Abandoning your very independent selfish stance and perception of Infinity, of All That Is, of the Kingdom of Heaven.

And so, what is it about? Is it about ideas in a book? No, it's about your mental behavior, if I may put it that way. Change your physical behavior and it will not change your mind. But change your mind and you will have changed your mind. You see?

Change the way you use your mind, and your perception will improve coming into closer and closer alignment with what a thing is that you have been perceiving until you're having the direct experience of what it really is and perception itself fades out of your Conscious Experience and all experience is the direct experience of the Presence of God, whether it looks like a rose, or a glass-topped table, or anything you're seeing.

Continuing or repeating:

RAJ READING: Search sincerely for what you have done and left undone accordingly, and then change your minds TO THINK WITH GOD'S.

This may seem hard to you, but it is much easier than trying to think AGAINST It. Your mind IS one with God's. Denying this and thinking otherwise has held your ego together, but has literally split your mind. As a loving brother, I am deeply concerned with your mind, ...

RAJ: Not your definitions. Not your behavior, your physical behavior. I am deeply concerned with your mind. And concerned means involved, attentive to, not worried. I'm not worried about your mind. I'm not worried about you. You are not a concern to me, but you are my brother. You are my sister. We are One. And when you're not experiencing the Oneness consciously, Our Brotherhood and Sisterhood is not occurring in Its Fullness. And so my attention comes to where this call for correction lies, so that I might facilitate the correction, and we might experience each other uninhibitedly. So:

RAJ READING: As a loving brother, I am deeply concerned with your mind, and urge you to follow my example as you look at yourselves and at each other, and see in both the glorious creations of a glorious Father.

When you are sad, KNOW THAT THIS NEED NOT BE.

RAJ: In other words: Taint so.

RAJ READING: Depression ALWAYS arises ultimately from a sense of being deprived of something you want and do not have. KNOW you are deprived of nothing except by your own decisions, and then decide otherwise.

RAJ: Here we are again talking about the behavior of your mind, the use to which you put your mind. If the Father has withheld nothing of What He Is from you and you are experiencing less than that, it is because you have decided to give preference to a different point of view, a different perception of everything, than what the Father is extending to you. Which means that you are not in a state of lack of capability, but you're just using the capability to provide yourself with an experience that has limits to it which are not natural or normal. And therefore, in your already existing capacity to use your mind explicitly and specifically, you can make a new decision that doesn't block the Fullness of what God Is Expressing As You and As All That Is.

So right now when you all feign powerlessness, you are doing it with all the power of God. So you know, no matter how good an act you put on, you're never successful at being a Sad Sack. You're just not. A good actor maybe, but never what it is you're portraying.

You have the power to act out from the direct experience of the Divine One That You Are. And the fact is that you are using the power of the Divine One That You Are to present a picture of yourself that embodies far less than What You Divinely Are. But remember you're doing it with the Power of the Christ That You Are, and therefore, you can change the way you are using your mind at any moment.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you are anxious, KNOW that all anxiety comes from the capriciousness of the ego, AND NEED NOT BE. You can be as vigilant AGAINST the ego's dictates as FOR them.

When you feel guilty, KNOW that the ego has indeed violated the laws of God, but YOU have not. Leave the sins of the ego to me. That is what Atonement is for. But until you change your mind about those your ego has hurt, the Atonement cannot release you.

RAJ: In other words, you're released, not by the forgiveness of others, but by the change of your mind by you.

And forgiveness on your part means the withdrawal of judgment against another on your part.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: As long as you feel guilty your ego is in command because only the ego CAN experience guilt.

RAJ: And again to make this very clear: "As long as you feel guilty, your ego is in command" means that as long as you feel guilty, the Christ That You Are is pretending to be less than it is, consciously and on purpose, and is creating for itself an experience of dissonance that you call guilt. You see what a farce it is?

You are the Direct Expression of God. You are the Christ behaving as though you aren't and then choosing to forget that you are so that you believe what you're pretending. And you're doing it with all of the Power of the Christ That You Are. Now, if that isn't a farce, I don't know what it is. A farce is something that's not real. A farce is a pretension.

And you're all engaged in pretensions with yourselves, with yourselves and with each other. And you're all joining into the pretension and agreeing with it. And then you cry and commiserate with each other about how miserable life is. Whew!

And I hope you're catching the vision that it's all nonsense. It's so nonsensical that it isn't even something you need to be punished for. How can you be punished for doing something you can't do, and therefore, never did? And if you can't be punished for something you cannot do and never did, then you don't need to be afraid of turning to the Altar and asking God for anything, because there's no judgment that can become forthcoming from One Who is awake against something that could never be done, and therefore, never did happen. You see?

But let's also be very practical and grounded in Reality. If in your acting as though you're independent, as though you're not the Christ, and if in that acting out of that delusion, you behave in an inappropriate unloving way toward your brother or sister because fear is your constant companion in this imaginary state of being, your behavior must change.

You must arrive at a point where you care enough about your brother or your sister and you stop relating to them from your fear and stop engaging in bad behavior toward them.

You can't just say that because you tried to do something that you can't do truly, and therefore, you never did it, and therefore, there's no judgment that's going to be coming to you from God, that in so many words, therefore, you cannot possibly ever have been a sinner, that therefore, you don't need to change your behavior toward your brother or sister because none of it's really happening anyway.

We talked last week about the necessity of arriving at a point where you're expressing unconflicted Love, which means Love that pours forth from you, not as a calculated means of manipulating your world or getting something or saving your ass, but as a natural flow of the influx of Love that you experience coming from God because you've become defenseless against God and let Him in to you and you have joined and broken the isolation.

Bad behavior toward each other must stop. It must change to behavior that arises out of unconflicted Love.

Continuing.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read: THIS NEED NOT BE.]

RAJ READING: Watch your mind for the temptations of the ego, and do not be deceived by it. KNOW it offers you nothing.

RAJ: Now what does that mean? It means that when you are not seeing someone or something through the Impulse of Love received by you from the Father, whatever you are seeing is a distorted perception, a biased perception, an untrue perception of something that is divinely Real. And therefore, it becomes essential for you to realize that whatever your perception is in that unjoined state, that isolated from God state, offers you nothing. You need to know that. There simply is no value to be received from it, no matter how comfortable you've become with it.

It offers you nothing and when you realize that it offers you nothing, you'll stop doing it because you never do anything that you know is useless.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you have given up this voluntary dis-spiriting, ...

RAJ: In other words, this enervating of your energy, of your Spirit.

RAJ READING: When you have given up this voluntary dis-spiriting, you will see how your mind can focus and rise above fatigue and heal. Yet you are not sufficiently vigilant AGAINST the demands of the ego to disengage yourself. THIS NEED NOT BE.

RAJ: Why? Why keep saying, "This need not be"? So that you might realize you have a different choice available to you—an active, different choice. That you are not sufficiently vigilant against the demands of the ego to disengage yourself from it doesn't have to be. Just know that you have a different choice so that you have a new place to place your curiosity

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The habit of engaging WITH God and His creations is easily made if you actively refuse to let your minds slip away.

RAJ: That you look around at everything as you go through your day without experiencing any sense of its Holiness or Divinity or Awesomeness, the fact that you go through your day and don't see this is just a habit. It doesn't mean it's not there to perceive. It just means that you've slipped into a habit of not paying attention. And this need not be.

Again:

RAJ READING: The habit of engaging WITH God and His creations...

RAJ: Instead of separate from God and His Creations.

RAJ READING: ...is easily made if you actively refuse to let your minds slip away.

RAJ: I'm adding this: If you actively refuse to go unconscious. "Oh, go unconscious. Oh, I'm just not seein' anything today. Just looks regular to me. Same old, same old. What can I do? It is what it is." No, it's not what it is! It is what you're not bothering to pay attention to, as well as what you're paying attention to. And the difference lies in how conscious and attentive you're willing to be. And in this case, when I use the word "willing" to be, I mean it not so much in a sense of acquiescence, but in the sense of conscious decision—a willingness to be conscious more fully.

Again:

RAJ READING: The habit of engaging WITH God and His creations is easily made if you actively refuse to let your minds slip away. The problem is NOT one of concentration; it is the belief that no-one, including yourself, is WORTH consistent effort.

RAJ: Well, now, here we're talking about the use you put your mind to consciously. If you really felt that the person sitting across from you, or that the tree that you're seeing out there, were the Presence of the Christ and the Direct Expression of God, the Active Presence of Creation occurring in front of you, [finger snap] you would pay attention real fast. If I said to you, "I'm going to appear in the middle of this room in three seconds," [finger snap] and you believed that, you would immediately become attentive with a degree of aliveness that you've never brought to anything before.

Bring that attention to the person who is sitting next to you, and to the roses that are in front of you. Now you're putting your mind to a new use. Everyone, including yourself, is worth the consistent effort of wanting to be fully conscious, as though doing that would bring you Face to Face with God. Because at the bottom line that is what every moment of Conscious Experience brings to you.

This isn't just the world. It's the Presence of God Being All There Is. It's Holy. It's Divine. It is Awesome.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Side with me CONSISTENTLY against this deception, ...

RAJ: This deception that no one, including yourself, is worth consistent effort.

RAJ READING: ...and do not permit this shabby belief to pull you back.

RAJ: Or let us say, don't let this habit of lazy mindfulness put you to sleep again.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The disheartened are useless to themselves and to me, but only the ego can BE disheartened.

RAJ: And I'm going to add: And you are not your ego. You are not the definition of yourself that you have made up, and you are not the definition of a mind that an entity separate from God has.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Have you REALLY considered how many opportunities you have to gladden yourselves, and how many of them you have refused?

RAJ: And the answer is: No, you have no idea. It's so humungous that if you would look at it from the flip side of the coin, you would realize that you are faced with an infinite Gift Basket of the true experience of Reality. And you wouldn't waste a minute feeling bad because you had been missing it. You would soak it up. You would let it in.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: There is no limit to the power of a Son of God, but he himself can limit the expression of his power as much as he chooses.

RAJ: There you go. The Son of God can limit the expression of His Power as much as He chooses.

So this puny little ego that you think that you are and that you're so frustrated with and that you wish you could get past and you wish you could get rid of and you wish you weren't being controlled by, is nothing more nor less than the Christ That You Are acting like an ego.

So own it. Own what you're doing so that you don't complain about your ego and what it did to you. "The devil made me do it!" Mmm. No, the Christ, acting like the devil, did what it wanted to do. And ultimately, what it did was nothing. But as long as it thinks it did something when it did nothing, it's deluded.

And the only thing that will get rid of the delusion is for you to take your power back, which simply means: Own what you're doing. Say to yourself: I am the Christ behaving as though I'm a body. I am the Fullness of God acting like I'm a mortal. I am the Movement of Love that God is Being right where I am, acting like an asshole, mistreating my brothers and sisters.

And when you see that that's what you're doing, when you really see that's what you're doing and you own it, you will spontaneously make a decision to do something else. And I'm pointing out to you what you're doing to speed things up so that you can use your mind more intelligently and come to the realization that you are the Christ behaving as though you're not and believing it, and therefore, it's time for a new belief or an abandonment of belief all together, so that you will behave in a way consistent with what You Divinely Are.

And because of your current ignorance, you cannot gather the Fullness of the Meaning of What You Divinely Are. Your next step is obvious: You've got to ask God for help. You've got to turn to God and say, "Reveal to me what You're Being right where I am. Reveal to me what is here where I am as You see me, because my ability to see myself that way is God-derived and a God-derived Birthright and I no longer choose to ignore it."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your mind and mine can unite in shining your ego away, and releasing the strength of God into everything you think and will and do.

RAJ: Now why can your mind and mine unite in shining your ego away? Well, not because together we have power, but because together your commitment to isolation weakens. Simple. The moment we join, your commitment to isolation begins to dissolve. And everything that held together your private, tiny sense of yourself will begin to break down because it can't continue in the face of joining. You see? So, your mind and mine can unite in shining your ego away. And, I'm adding: thereby releasing the strength of God into everything you think and will and do.

RAJ READING: Do not settle for anything LESS than this, and refuse to accept anything BUT this as your goal.

RAJ: Well, there comes a little bit of mental self-discipline, a better use of your mind. Stay alert so you don't zonk out again through habit.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Watch your minds carefully for ANY beliefs that hinder its accomplishment, and step away from them. Judge how well you have done this by your own feelings, for this is the one RIGHT use of judgment.

RAJ: In other words, if you pay attention to your feelings and you find yourself feeling bad, you may know that you have switched allegiance to the limited viewpoint, the ego perception. If you're feeling depressed, if you're feeling guilty, you may know that you've gone to sleep. It's time to wake up! It's not time to indulge sadness, guilt and fear of punishment. Don't muck around in it. It's a call to become alert again.

Again:

RAJ READING: Judge how well you have done this by your own feelings, for this is the one RIGHT use of judgment. Judgment, like any other defense, can be used to attack or protect, to hurt or to heal. The ego SHOULD be brought to your judgment and found wanting there. Without your own allegiance, ...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: Without your own allegiance, protection and love, it cannot exist.

RAJ: Why? Because you made it up in the first place! It's never been anything more than an imagination. And so, without your own allegiance, protection and love, it cannot exist.

RAJ READING: Judge your ego truly...

RAJ: And it doesn't say, "and it must disappear." It says:

RAJ READING: Judge your ego truly and you MUST withdraw allegiance, protection and love from it.

RAJ: It will be spontaneous.

RAJ READING: You are mirrors of truth in which God Himself shines in perfect Light. To the ego's dark glass you need but say, "I will not look there because I KNOW these images are not true." Then let the Holy One shine on you in peace, knowing that this and ONLY this must be. His Mind shone on you in your creation...

RAJ: God's Mind shone on you in your creation.

RAJ READING: ... and brought YOUR mind into being.

RAJ: Not as a separate thing.

RAJ READING: His Mind still shines on you, and must shine THROUGH you.

RAJ: In other words, Being your Mind.

RAJ READING: Your ego cannot prevent HIM from shining on you, but it CAN prevent you from letting Him shine THROUGH you.

RAJ: What a powerful, pivotal point you sit in. You can either block God or let God through. Hmmm. Well, or so it seems. Because you can't block God, but you can block from your awareness the Movement of God through you that continues no matter what. You can block it from your own awareness. And in effect, you're the only one suffering the loss.

The unfortunate thing is that your loss of feeling the Light of Love flowing through you causes you to be unable to see the Love in everyone and everything around you. And so you feel unloved and you behave accordingly. That's a very dark mirror. It's a very un-illuminated experience.

But I want you to see that when you begin to devalue the independence, it's not just you, your mind, your being, that will be filled with the experience of God's Love. It will illuminate your Brothers and Sisters and the Universe, all of Creation, to you again as the Substance of Love that God Is Being in every Aspect of Creation. And so, your whole Being filling with illumination will constitute an experience of all Existence, infinitely speaking, being illuminated to you as well, where's there's no way for you to feel alone or small. And it's your Birthright to be experiencing this.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The first coming of Christ is just another name for the creation, ...

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the rest of the sentence: for Christ is the Son of God.]

RAJ: God said, "I AM," and there you were, and there you were, and there you were, and there you were. God embodied Himself. And everything that... every Soul, every Spirit, every Individuation of His Soul, His Spirit, His Soul and Spirit He is, embodied all that He was, and there was the Christ. Christ You, Christ You, Christ You, Christ You. That was the First Coming: the Movement of Creation in which you became.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The SECOND coming of Christ means nothing more than the end of the ego's rule over part of the minds of men, and the healing of the mind.

RAJ: It's you waking up. It's every single one who's valuing this independent existence letting go of it and re-embracing the Conscious Experience of Being the Christ—God manifest right there where each one of you is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I was created like you in the first, ...

RAJ: In other words, the Movement of Creation.

RAJ READING: ... and I have called you to join with me in the second.

RAJ: So you don't need to wait for Me to come again. It's not about Me coming again. It's about you coming into your Right Mind and becoming the fully-fledged embodiment of the Christ That You Are and never stopped Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you will think over your lives you will see how carefully the preparations were made. I am in charge of the Second Coming, and my judgment, which is used only for protection, cannot be wrong because it NEVER attacks. YOURS is so distorted that you believe I was mistaken in choosing you. I assure you this is a mistake of your egos. Do NOT mistake it for humility.

Your egos are trying to convince you that THEY are real and I am not because if I am real, I am no more real than YOU are.

RAJ: In other words, I'm no more special than you are. You are as special as I am. You are as Real as I am.

Continuing

RAJ READING: That knowledge, and I assure you that it IS knowledge, means that Christ must come into your minds and heal them. Although I am NOT attacking your egos, ...

RAJ: I mean, after all, why would I attack something that is pure fantasy and has no real existence?

RAJ READING: Although I am NOT attacking your egos, I AM working with your higher mind whether you are asleep or awake, just as your ego does with your lower mind. I am your vigilance in this because you are too confused to recognize your own hope. I was NOT mistaken. Your minds WILL elect to join with mine, and together we are invincible.

RAJ: You see, separate, independent, you are inherently vulnerable. It's an illusion, but you can have no other experience. In joining, in Oneness is invincibility.

Not invincibility against anything. Not invincibility as part of some bigger, more glorified tension or conflict, but invincibility that constitutes a perfectly stable, unalterable Purity, where the only Thing occurring is the Movement of the Will of God that's inseparable from yours and which you are experiencing as yours. That's invincibility.

RAJ READING: You will yet come together in my name and your sanity will be restored.

RAJ: Why? Because the Christ behaving as though he isn't and believing his behavior, is still the Christ unalterably. And that which is unalterable will prevail.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I raised the dead by KNOWING that life is an eternal attribute of everything that the living God created.

RAJ: I raised the dead.

RAJ READING: Why do you believe it is harder for me to inspire the dispirited, ...

RAJ: I mean, believe me, raising your awareness back to Its Divine Nature is far less work than raising the dead.

RAJ READING: Why do you believe it is harder for me to inspire the dispirited, or to stabilize the unstable? I do not believe that there is an order of difficulty in miracles; YOU do. I have called, and you will answer.

RAJ: And I know there are times that your egos say, "Like hell I will!" Because you see my call as a demand. You see my call as a... or your ego sees my call as an exercise of control.

But my call is a call of a friend to a friend. My call is an Experience of Love embracing the Wonderfulness of You That Is You. And I'm going to keep calling because I Love You. And because for us to be experiencing disconnection doesn't feel good, is unnatural, and is an illusion calling for correction.

RAJ READING: I have called, and you will answer. I KNOW that miracles are natural because they are expressions of love. My calling you is as natural as your answer, and as inevitable.

RAJ: Does this sound like a Love song? Does this sound like an invitation? It emphasizes that you and I and all of the Brotherhood are to be in relationship. Not out of communication. We are to be feeling each other, present with each other. Not experiencing disconnection. This is an overture to you.

The Bible says that I said, "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me."

"Oh, hoity-toity-toity, huh? You can't get to the Father without coming by me." That isn't what it means.

Love is the only thing that is going to break through the definite wall of isolation you have built around yourselves that keeps you from experiencing What You Divinely Are and keeps you from experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven right where you're seeing the world and universe that originated with the big bang. And someone who is awake must Love you persistently, consistently. Because it is your connection with One who is awake that will promote the more rapid breakdown of the wall of defense that you have built up around yourself.

And so none of you will get to the Conscious Experience of the Father's Point of View without Love being extended to you. Love embracing you in spite of your rather autistic inclination to not be embraced, to wiggle out of the embrace, to not be touched, to be able to stay private.

No one can get to the Father until a certain degree of defenselessness replaces the commitment to isolation. That's what it means.

No one will get to the Father without coming by an Awakened One who is extending Love to you so eternally, you might say, that it finally registers with you that you cannot possibly maintain independence longer than my willingness to Love you.

Do you see that? Really, it's only on the outside chance that you might actually be able to outlast me that you could become a truly independent ego in your own right because you, separated, were able to best My Love, or best the Love of any of the Brotherhood Who Are Awake. Do you see that? The ego is suggesting to you that there is an outside chance that you can outlast My Love and thus best Me and thereby secure a real independent self-existent place in the universe that has nothing to do with God. 'Tain't so!

So your Guides, the Holy Spirit which is Your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego, Me, will outlast your resistance or the resistance of this imaginary self which you have made up in your mind and believe. So you will come back into your Right Mind by Us. And this overture of Love, this invitation to join and the offer that I give and each One of your Guides gives is that We will be vigilant for you if you will be with Us so that these seemingly definite habits can give up the ghost.

Why am I talking about the overture of Love here? Because what? What the value of this book is, is to communicate to you the existence of this Relationship I'm talking with you about, not the existence of words and facts and principles. There's no need to bicker over the words or the meanings and the different opinions everyone has about the meanings of the words because that's not where it's at. It's in the uncovering of the fact that no one is going to wake up without coming by One Who Is Awake Whose Love will outlast your attempt to resist the Love and succeed.

It's about a Relationship, an active Relationship of Love. As you go through your day, go through it being aware that I'm with you. And more than that. Be aware that I am there to converse with you, to feel with you, to be with you as a Companion consciously, with conversation in your mind, as are your Guides. You're getting it.

Every word I share with you is Love embodied, is Me caring. You don't even have to pay any attention to what the words mean. If I were to sit here and hum for an hour and a half, it would be done as an Expression of Love and a manifestation of communion of my being present with you, and that is what will break down the isolation. My words help to break down the trickery the ego uses to make you believe that it actually exists and that it is you. But it's the communion that breaks the isolation.

And as you go through your week, I want you to do your best to remember that I'm there. And even if there aren't words between us, I am with you and I am with you with such permanence that I can outlast your ego's attempt to best Me by outlasting and passing the limits of my capacity to Love. Remember that, the feeling of what I'm saying, so that you might remember at any given moment during the coming week that that's the way I am being with you and that I'm available to you even more fully. Let Me in. Be willing to make the smallest of cracks in the wall of your defense.

Okay.

I said last week that since there has been no opportunity for any dialogue between us for some weeks now, that we would take time today to talk about things we had discussed from the Course that maybe have been difficult to swallow or are not making sense. Whatever. And so I will open up the Gathering to questions, which I see we have an abundance of.

Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Hello, Raj.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

SEEKER: This is Ken.

RAJ: I know.

SEEKER: How in God's name did we ever manage to make up a thing such as the ego in the first place?

RAJ: Really very simply all you had to do was say to a Brother: "You know, the Father says that this is a such-and-such. But come over here and look at it with me. Doesn't it look like a horse to you?"

The other one says: "Come to think of it, yeah, it does."

"Well, let's call it a horse then. Forget about what the Father says. You know, I mean, obviously we have the ability to look at this and see something that the Father wasn't seeing."

The other one says: "Good idea. Let's try it out."

Now all of you have this capacity to be imaginative, but to use the imagination in order to create an alternate way of seeing Reality is not what it's about. Once two or more are gathered together in an imagination, mutually-agreed-upon definitions were developed. It's simple really.

And to address what you're really wanting to know: The illusion you created isn't really serious. It isn't really a severe disobedience. It's an airhead's fantasy. It's meaningless. Don't make the degree of devotion you bring to your current definitions of everything, don't let that be the measuring stick of how difficult it must be going to be to get out of this illusion.

Continue.

SEEKER: But surely there must have been a bell ringing in our heads somewhere that must have been saying: "Don't do this!"

RAJ: Yes, it's ringing right now.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: It's feeling uneasy.

SEEKER: Exactly.

RAJ: The bell's ringing. You feel uneasy. You feel sad. You feel grief. You feel jealousy. You feel worthless. These are the bells.

You say, "Oh! Well, they just reflect the truth of me. I am worthless."

No! No! Hey, those are bells. They're saying: [drawn out drowsy voice] "You're drifting... you're drifting into... unconsciousness."

You see? Okay.

SEEKER: Should I pass the mike?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Thank you, Raj, very much.

RAJ: Hands. Right there.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Is this on? I'm kind of following what he was asking. I recognize what the Course is saying and also from some past, personal experience, that the suffering we seem to experience can just instantly change into joy and become like it never really existed at all.

But recently I'm currently evidently completely enveloped in ego consciousness. And it feels like a roller coaster ride of going from being swooning in love and romantic feelings to being completely down in the toilet of feeling worthless and sort of magnifying physical complaints that may or may not be... well, they're obviously not serious from the standpoint of Eternal Life but nevertheless we feel the pains. And so getting back to his questioning, why in the hell do we continue this?

I think everyone listening, we're all here wanting to wake up. And you know, if we could just say, "Okay, you know, I'm ready. Let's go for it." You know. But it doesn't seem like it's that easy. I mean give us a cup of coffee, or a kick in the butt, or something. [laughing] I don't know what it takes. But, oh boy. It is really tiring to go through this roller coaster ride. And I think we all want to be, you know, fulfilled and Love and not feel separate. Thank you.

RAJ: The problem is isolation. That's another way of saying the problem is separation. The isolation is the manifestation of a refusal to be involved, not with each other, but with God, or with the Holy Spirit, with the Altar within you. And you're going to be miserable and be on this roller coaster as long as you are doing everything but turning within.

You must address the real problem and the real problem is not in relationships. It isn't with anything that's going on between you and other things out there. And nothing is going to change until you start addressing the real problem which is the disconnect from your Source. And there is a point at which the roller coaster ride will become so tiresome that you'll say and really mean: "Father, I want another way." And you will actually turn toward the Father and actually listen without all the while you're listening having a vested interest in having your current perception confirmed from your limited frame of reference.

And the moment you genuinely become defenseless and let something other than your current definitions into your awareness, the moment you do that, you will find the shift occurring, the sudden shift of awareness of perception that is a miracle.

That's the end of the answer.

SEEKER: Thank you. I'll meditate more and try to reconnect. I know I've been just as you described.

RAJ: You see, when you come to the Father because you have a problem and you want the Father to address the problem you're experiencing, it isn't addressing the real problem which is the disconnection from Him. The crux of it all lies in the phrase: "Thy Will be done, not mine." It's the shift of allegiance that is the solution to the human condition. Do you see that?

SEEKER: Yeah. It's as if I've been wanting to use God to get what I want.

RAJ: Exactly. Instead of using God to get what God wants...

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: ...for you, which is for you to know Who You Are as Him, as All That He Is embodied. He wants that for you because that then gives you the eyes of the Father, you might say, to see All That Is as it Truly Is, including your Self.

Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome. You see, again, it's all about putting your mind to a different use than the one you've been giving. And you might say that you can't put your mind to a new use until a new operating system is downloaded. You want your current operating system to be fixed up. You see? It's being willing to go into that place where the current operating system is erased—scary, scary, scary—and the new operating system can be downloaded and implemented.

Not my will, but Thine be done. All of you will keep trying what seems to be working for you now until you give up, for whatever reason, and let something new in.

And I'm inviting you to let something new in because the incoming of it is inevitable. And you don't need to suffer every little step of the way. It's not your Birthright. You're worth too much to continue to behave as though you're worthless and suffer from it. But, you are going to have to break the isolation. That's the answer. And you will not break the isolation by getting a new relationship with somebody else, or fixing up the relationship you have, because relationships with each other aren't where the problem lies. It's the fact that you're out of relationship with your Source and the Source of everyone else. And that's why you're having problems with each other.

Okay. Hands. Right here.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Thank you, Raj. I'm so happy to be here. From time to time I read about near-death experiences on the internet and it seems the people that go through them, for the most part, have an incredible freedom of experience...

RAJ: Now I...

SEEKER: ...of Love.

RAJ: ...I want to be sure that you... that the question's related to...

SEEKER: Yes. It's relating, because it's their way of getting a taste of something greater and better and more wonderful and everything. But here we are, I guess you could say, we're all living in a near-death [laughing] experience, but not to the point of crises in...

RAJ: No. You're in a near-life experience.

SEEKER: A near-life. Okay.

RAJ: Not quite there.

SEEKER: [laughing] So what I'm asking is: Is there any way you can facilitate a heightened, a more heightened awareness with us?

RAJ: My God! What do you think I've been doing?!!

SEEKER: No, no! No, but [laugh] I...

RAJ: The most I can do is invite you be defenseless against having a greater experience, but I don't hold the keys to the power you only have to lower your defenses.

SEEKER: Can't we do this together? [audience laughter]

RAJ: No, you can't.

SEEKER: Okay. I mean, I'm asking...

RAJ: You can't... who do it together?

SEEKER: You and I. Or my Guidance and me.

RAJ: Only you have your hands on the switch. Only your decisions are creating the wall of defense. I cannot reach it. I can only invite you. I can only behave with you in a way that makes you feel safe enough to risk the chance to lower your defenses. But you have to lower the defense. You have to want it more than you want the defense. I stand with you. I stand beside you. I stand within your mind. And I am present with you to encourage you, but you have to want to lower the defense and let more in.

SEEKER: It's a matter of recognizing what the defenses are.

RAJ: Well, what the defenses are that are standing most prominently in the way will rear their ugly head the minute you genuinely invite me in, defenselessly invite me in, the moment you're willing to let yourself really be in the void in your mind without a backup plan, without an alternative. The moment you lay yourself on the line, so to speak. That's when you'll find what the defenses are that stand in the way.

What am I saying? Why am I saying this? So that you don't go on an intellectual hunt for what the defenses are. That'll keep you busy for another century.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Okay. You are welcome. Hands. Right here.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I kind of have the need to know, being that we talk about the ego and we've experienced what it's like when we're being the ego, all the pain and suffering, and we talk about our connection with God and that's where our Source is. And it would help me to know what it looks like when we're awakened. I know it's not time or space. And to say that what would it be like to be with Awakened Beings in a typical day? I know it's not appropriate, but can you shed some Light as far as what it's like when we are awake?

RAJ: Not as this time.

SEEKER: Okay. So we're not ready yet.

RAJ: I really want to...

SEEKER: But that's my point... is that we're hearing pages and pages of ego stuff, pages and pages of turning to the Altar. Can you offer a little bit... what's it look like? What's our... what's the payoff? I know it's good. I know it is, but I don't know, maybe I'm more visual. I need to see it to keep it in my mind as when I'm not connecting. When I forget to connect, when I am working out of the mad, mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And I realized that you would say that and that's okay because that's something that I'll just take with me and you and we'll work on, or we'll... I'll open up to it with you. I just wonder... may... We'll be ready. I know you'll start talking about that...

[Apparently the microphone was turned off or the volume was turned very low; could not hear clearly.]

ANOTHER SEEKER: Yes, it is not admirable to have an image, let us say, of what everything looks like when you're awake. The [way of the straight and narrow, ???] the place where the attention needs to be that constitutes the Gate to Awakening, if you will, is to be present with what you experience as it is.

RAJ: Humanly speaking. And to be present on behalf of others relative to their needs. Because that's where the discomfort is. That's where you lack confidence. The experience of need is unsettling, isn't it? Whatever the form of need that you have is unsettling.

PAUL: No. It was off. I don't know how.

RAJ: And so the call is for you to be willing to not try to escape that uneasy, unsettling experience, but to be in it out of control.

Now when you're there, it becomes really easy to reach out to God because the place where you're out of control is the place where you're not exercising control. Your defenses are lower, and that's where you can say, "Father, intellectually, and perhaps I even feel it somewhat, I know that it's not my Birthright to be suffering and I know that I'm suffering because I'm not seeing truly here. I'm not seeing things as they are. Come in to me. Be with me. Talk to me. Uncover to me the Truth that I need to know. I know that it's my Birthright not to be suffering. Or I know it's my friend's Birthright not to be suffering. What's the answer here? What needs to be known that will demonstrate that the suffering is illegitimate, and therefore, doesn't have a leg to stand on and that will cause it to disintegrate and fall away leaving me or my friend in the state of Perfection and Peace and Wholeness that it's our Birthright to be experiencing?" That is where the attention needs to be.

You don't need a vision of the future. You need to be willing to be very much in the present and very much in touch with need because need is a call for correction. Need is not something to wallow in. Need is not something to react to. Need is simply one of those signs you're asking for. The bell that says, "Do something different." The need is just a call for correction, so you go to the Source of correction by reaching out to God right then and there.

And if you're not getting an answer, you may know that you're still practicing too much defense. So you've got to one way or another find a way to withdraw your investment in what you want, meaning your defense, and what you want, meaning the Clarity that will heal. In the middle of your need is where your opportunity to actually shift gears exists. You gotta go there and go into the void and let the sudden shift of perception occur. Now you can hold out for some sort of image to inspire you, which I promise you will never come, and use that as a means of becoming so frustrated with going for what you want instead of what's needed. Or you can go ahead and give your attention where I've told you, just now, it needs to be. And that's where you'll find breakthrough occurring and Movement occurring.

Because, again, the essence of all that we're talking about lies in your arriving at that place within yourself where it's hard to maintain the farce. And that's what you call a problem. And where you arrive at a willingness to dare to abandon the control that keeps the farce going and actually want something that's not already included in the definitions you've given to everything, and you become vulnerable enough, unprotected enough, to let the answer in. There's just no way to get past that point of inner honesty and inner decision and the risk that you feel you're facing when you abandon control. And then you must risk the chance. There is no way to get past that.

When you hear people say, "Oh! I just love the truth." Well, you probably aren't talking to someone who's experienced much of it. When you've talked to someone who's experienced much of it, that one will talk about the stress, the seeming risk, the courage it took to move across the threshold. And they will tell you that they found it to be transforming, and that the more frequently they experienced it, the more trust came into their lives. But they won't be giddy and sweet and effusive about: "Oh! I just love the truth. Oh! Here's something... that's a keeper. That's something to hold on to."

That's a sort of floating around on the periphery of what Truth's about, what the Course is about, what waking up is about. So forget about what it's going to look like and get into the meat and potatoes of it. That's where I would have you bring your attention.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

And I will leave it there for today. You ask good questions. You listen well.

And aren't you glad to know that any insistence that you have upon going for the gusto and succeeding in becoming a real independent ego will not work because it can't outlast Me.

I love you all.

RAJ: Okay. Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And good afternoon to everyone who is joining us on the internet as well. Today we will continue with my reading from the transcript as prepared by Bill Thetford and the section begins, the subject of the section today is:

RAJ READING: The Ego-Body Illusion

RAJ: And before we even begin reading, let's just take a look at those words, "The Ego-Body Illusion." It's so commonplace for students of the Course to call the body and the world illusion, but the reason we have this subject is to pinpoint the fact that a relationship between the ego and the body is illusory. The relationship between the ego and the body is illusory.

I will begin.

RAJ READING: ALL things work together for good. There are NO exceptions except in the ego's judgment. Control is a central factor in what the ego permits into consciousness,...

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: Control is a central factor in what the ego permits into consciousness, and one to which it devotes its maximum vigilance. This is NOT the way a balanced mind holds together.

RAJ: And now we have an interesting, a very interesting sentence.

RAJ READING: ITS control is unconscious.

RAJ: A balanced mind's control is unconscious. Hmm. A balanced mind, one which is in equilibrium, is one which is not maintaining a sense of itself as separate, independent, self-authoritative. A balanced mind is a mind which has joined with, yielded to, and moves in harmony with God. When one is being in this manner, control is not consciously exercised. Why?

Because self-protection is uncalled for and control is only employed as a means of self-protection.

A balanced mind joined with the Father, in other words, you being from that Place of Excellence within yourself, not having to exercise control, and yielding to the Father, will find yourself being and doing, acting, behaving just as Paul is at this moment, without conscious ego-minded direction or authority. You find yourself simply being appropriate. And mind you, being appropriate doesn't mean everyone holding A Course In Miracles study groups as we are doing right now. Being appropriate is coming from that Place of Excellence while you're grocery shopping, or preparing dinner, or bowling, or gardening. Did you ever think of gardening with God? That sounds like the title of a new book. Or vacuuming with God? I'm not meaning to be funny here. I'm very serious.

So, repeating.

RAJ READING: This...

RAJ: Meaning control being a central factor.

RAJ READING: ...is NOT the way a balanced mind holds together. ITS control is unconscious. The ego is further off balance by keeping its primary MOTIVATION unconscious, and raising control rather than sensible judgment to predominance. The ego has every reason to do this, according to the thought system which gave rise to it, and which it serves.

RAJ: And what is the ego's thought system? Self-preservation, because it's not real. And the only way it has half a chance of being considered real is by joining with another and creating a mutual agreement about itself, and then spending eternity reconfirming the mutual agreement.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Sane judgment would inevitably judge AGAINST the ego, and must be obliterated BY the ego in the interest of its self-preservation.

A major source of the ego's off-balanced state is its lack of discrimination between impulses from God and from the body. Any thought system which makes this confusion MUST be insane. Yet this demented state is ESSENTIAL to the ego, which judges only in terms of threat or non-threat TO ITSELF. In one sense the ego's fear of the idea of God is at least logical, since this idea DOES dispel the ego.

RAJ: Now why does the Idea of God dispel the ego? Because the Idea of God draws one's attention to a Source beyond whatever mutually-agreed definitions egos have come to. The Idea of God involves, we'll say, a dimension beyond the highly coveted state of independence that is essential to the ego's existence. So just the Idea of God interferes with the... hmmm, I'm going to say structural integrity of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions which are intended to hold together and make real something that doesn't exist—an ego.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Fear of dissolution from the Higher Source, then, makes SOME sense in ego-terms. But fear of the body, with which the ego identifies so closely, is more blatantly senseless.

RAJ: And here we come to an interesting statement.

RAJ READING: The body is the ego's home by its own election.

RAJ: Like the ego went on a shopping trip with a realtor to find a new home and it elected this one. How could the ego have elected a home that didn't exist before it started looking for a home? I keep saying over and over again that the Body is the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality. And your Individuality is the Presence of God, God Expressed and Expressing Himself/Herself right there where you are. Your Body therefore is Divine and as Eternal as Its Maker and Its Intent is to identify You perfectly eternally. It is not an illusion. And this non-illusion the ego chose to identify as its home.

The way this happened was that when one Christ said, "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way," and imaginatively gave new definitions to everything in the Kingdom of Heaven and dissociated himself or herself from God, he/she was immediately faced with an experience of limits, of not being infinite. And in this act, all this Christ had available to itself was the specific identification of himself, having lost the universal experience of himself. And so it was natural to say this is where my existence is, with the body, the specific identification.

Now I want you to understand that when you are awake, all of Creation, all of the universe and all of Creation that goes beyond what you're aware of right now is your Home and is that which identifies your Being, your Body is all of Creation. But when you chose not to identify with your Father, you lost consciousness of your universality, your Universal All-Embracing Wholeness. But you couldn't lose that which specifically identifies you, and so this Conscious Awareness that had lost the Infinite View identified itself with the only thing remaining which was the specific identification. You are all Universal and Specific simultaneously, but you've lost the Universal context, the Universal Experience of Your Being.

Repeating.

RAJ READING: The body is the ego's home by its own election.

RAJ: Another way of saying that is that the body is the home of the Christ who has forgotten his Christhood. I want to keep reminding you that the reference to ego is not reference to some illusion behaving as though it's real. This is very confusing. You've got to remember that you've never stopped being the Christ That You Are. You've never stopped being exactly and always What God Is Being right where each one of you is. And so all there is to an ego is a Son or Daughter of God behaving as though he or she is not the Son or Daughter of God, but is, instead, an independent agent who has forgotten thereby his or her Divinity. So all references to the ego are references to the full-fledged Christ behaving as though he isn't and, as I've said, believing his behavior. So you could say the body is your home by your own election because you have elected to ignore the Father. You have elected to ignore your Source in favor of having this unusual, imaginative experience of independence.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is the only...

RAJ: The body.

RAJ READING: It is the only identification with which the ego feels safe because the body's vulnerability is its own best argument that you CANNOT be of God.

RAJ: Well, you've got to remember that the moment you lost the Infinite View, the moment you chose to look at everything independently and began behaving in an unnatural and insane way, all of your perceptions of the Kingdom of Heaven became colored by the experience of aloneness, and therefore fear, and therefore vulnerability, and therefore an experience of that which is eternal as though it were capable of posing actual threat to your existence, especially by deterioration.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is the belief that the ego sponsors eagerly.

RAJ: Mind you, as long as you're believing that you're not the Christ, you must devote yourself to maintaining the imaginative sense of yourself that you have created and maintain it at all costs. And so the ego eagerly sponsors ways of seeing that cause you to rely upon it and never reach beyond it to that which ultimately would undo it, uncover it as the illusion that it is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Yet the ego hates the body because it does not accept the idea that the body is GOOD enough to be its home.

RAJ: If the ego [laughing] were able to conceive that the body is good enough to be its home because it's Divine, well, that would be the end of the ego because the ego has never claimed Divinity. And that the body is a worthy residence for it would require it to embrace the Presence of God because that is the only thing that could make the body good enough to be its home.

So, continuing.

RAJ READING: Here is where the mind becomes actually dazed.

RAJ: The Mind becomes dazed. The Christ Mind becomes dazed.

RAJ READING: Being told by the ego that it...

RAJ: The Mind.

RAJ READING: ...is really part of the body and that the body is its protector, the mind is also constantly informed that the body can NOT protect it.

RAJ: Why? Because the ego knows the body can't protect it. Why? Because you can't protect something that doesn't exist. And so the ego, as I've said, must constantly engage in a constant advertising blitz which puts forward out in the open the suggestion that it's real and calls for the agreement of everyone else and manipulates everyone else into agreement. It says it so much that it becomes accepted as a fact when it's not a fact at all.

Repeating.

RAJ READING: Here is where the mind becomes actually dazed. Being told by the ego that it is...

RAJ: The Mind is.

RAJ READING: ...really part of the body and that the body is its protector, the mind is also constantly informed...

RAJ: By whom? The ego.

RAJ READING: ...that the body can NOT protect it. This, of course, is not only accurate but perfectly obvious.

RAJ: Now it isn't that the body can't protect the ego because the body isn't real, the body is an illusion. It is that the body cannot protect the ego because the ego is an illusion and an illusion can't be protected.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Therefore the mind asks, "Where can I go for protection?"...

RAJ: In other words, the unconscious Christ That You Are at the moment that you are experiencing yourself as asks, "Where can I go for protection?"

RAJ READING: ...to which the ego replies, "Turn to me." The mind, and not without cause, reminds the ego that it has itself insisted that it...

RAJ: The ego.

RAJ READING: ...IS identified with the body, so there is no point in turning to it for protection. The ego has no real answer to this because there IS none, but it DOES have a typical solution.

RAJ: One that I know you're all familiar with.

RAJ READING: It obliterates the QUESTION from the mind's awareness.

RAJ: So when the Christ of you has this niggling awareness that there is no safety in all the places it has been looking for safety and it asks, "Where can I go for protection?", that's when a wavering of allegiance to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions occurs. And there is an opportunity to reach beyond each one's own best judgments, which necessarily places your attention in a larger sphere than the separated sense of yourself.

So the ego obliterates the question from the Mind's awareness. And I will tell you that it does this by distracting you from the question.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Once unconscious, the question can and does produce uneasiness, ...

RAJ: And I referred to that uneasiness as your Divine Sanity saying to you, "You're out of your mind. You're trying to function in a way you cannot function. It's time to come back into your Right Mind."

RAJ READING: Once unconscious, the question can and does produce uneasiness, but it cannot be answered because it cannot be ASKED. This is the question which MUST be asked: "Where am I to go for protection?"

RAJ: In other words, that needs to be a very real and serious question each of you needs to ask. It is your Birthright not to be experiencing fear, vulnerability, debilitation, sin, sickness, death. And so you need to ask the question, "Where am I to go in order not to experience these things?"

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Even the insane ask it unconsciously, but it requires real sanity to ask it consciously.

RAJ: Well, you know, you hear a... oh, in fact each one of you at times has been a whimperer. "Oh, what am I to do? What can I do?" But it's a rhetorical question rather than a serious question. You're not asking it because you know there's an answer and you expect the answer to be revealed to you if you keep your attention on the desire to know the answer. Your question is a complaint! It's a whine that's supposed to be a means to an end in itself. It's a statement of your dilemma. "Oooohh." Which means it's not a request for the answer that will resolve the dilemma.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When the Bible says, "Seek and ye shall find," it does not mean that you should seek blindly and desperately for something you would not recognize. Meaningful seeking is consciously undertaken, consciously organized, and consciously directed. The goal must be formulated clearly...

RAJ: And this is key.

RAJ READING: ...AND KEPT IN MIND. As a teacher with some experience, let me remind you that learning and WANTING to learn are inseparable. All learners learn best when they believe that what they are trying to learn is of VALUE to them. However, values in this world...

RAJ: Meaning within the scope of the ego's mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

RAJ READING: ...are hierarchical, and not everything you may want to learn has lasting value.

Indeed, many of the things you want to learn...

RAJ: Or shall I say, think you want to learn.

RAJ READING: ...are chosen BECAUSE their value will not last.

RAJ: Commerce even capitalizes on that. It gets you to want something that's going to be updated in six months or improved in a year. That's the way the economy keeps going, by always getting that which won't last or that which won't forever be good enough.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego thinks it is an advantage not to commit itself to ANYTHING that is eternal because the eternal MUST come from God. Eternalness is the one function which the ego has tried to develop, but has systematically failed. It may surprise you to learn that had the ego wished to do so it could have made the eternal because, as a product of the mind,...

RAJ: And mind you, it doesn't say as a product of the ego.

RAJ READING: ...as a product of the mind, it IS endowed with the power of its own creator.

RAJ: Remember that the ego is the Christ pretending not to be the Christ and believing its behavior, but not ceasing to be the Christ. It still can make the eternal. An important point.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: However, the DECISION to do this, rather than the ability to do it, is what the ego cannot tolerate. That is because the decision, from which the ability would naturally develop, would necessarily involve accurate perception, a state of clarity which the ego, fearful of being judged truly, MUST avoid.

RAJ: You see, if you as an independent authorizer actually decided to create that which is eternal, you would have to embrace your Source. You would, if you were going to exercise a God-given ability, have to be acknowledging God in the act of exercising that ability, wouldn't you? You see? And that would undo the ego.

And that is why the Christ, choosing to behave and act as an independent authorizer, will not choose to create something Real. That's why you won't choose to create something Real. Because it would spoil the fun and the thrill of a constant ongoing experience of threat, which as I said yesterday, can't ever really overcome you or destroy you, and which, therefore you... hmmm... delight in having the most scary experience of, that you can evolve for yourself without actually driving you back Home into the Father's arms.

Smile everyone. Smile. It's funny. It's not serious. It's a joke. Living this way, being this way is a joke. Don't take it so seriously. Lighten up and realize that maybe this isn't what you want to do. [laughing] Maybe this, even though it's exciting, isn't holding for you the Fullness, the Wholeness, the Satisfaction, the Joy, the Awe, that it's your Birthright to be experiencing. You see?

Why can't you be punished for being such awful children? Because you're not doing anything. You're not succeeding at doing anything naughty. You can't be punished for having a fantasy in your own mind and suffering from it and yet getting pleasure out of it because it stimulates in you a great desire to overcome the suffering and continue the excitement. And all the time it's just fantasy.

So, you're not sinners. You're not sinners by default. You're not sinners at all. You're Christs. Each of you is the Christ ignoring your Christhood, but not affecting it in any way, and having an imaginative experience, all the time missing out on the part you're playing in the Movement of Creation. A full Conscious Experience of which will be available to you once you wake up again so that you will find you've lost nothing, no experience of the Movement of Creation that you must have been participating in because you never ever really got away from God. The experience of your participation in the Movement of Creation that you're not experiencing at this moment, will be available to you when you stop insisting on having this private experience.

So, don't be afraid to explore your Divinity. You weren't afraid to explore your insanity! Don't be afraid to begin to explore your Divinity. And don't delay it because you think that God is a wrathful God and is going to punish you, and perhaps send you into eternal damnation for having this weird little dream you've had. How ridiculous!

Repeating.

RAJ READING: However, the DECISION...

[Editor's Note: Raj replaces the words "to do this," as follows:]

RAJ: ...to create something eternal...

RAJ READING: ...rather than the ability to do it, is what the ego cannot tolerate. That is because the decision, from which the ability would naturally develop, would necessarily involve accurate perception, a state of clarity which the ego, fearful of being judged truly, MUST avoid.

The results of this dilemma are peculiar, but no more so than the dilemma itself. The ego...

RAJ: Once again, the Christ That You Are pretending you're not, behaving as though you're not and believing your behavior.

RAJ READING: ...has reacted characteristically here as elsewhere because mental illness, which is ALWAYS a form of ego involvement, is not a matter of reliability as much as of validity. The ego compromises with the issue of the eternal, just as it does with all issues that touch on the real question in any way.

RAJ: What's the real question? "Where can I go for protection?" "Where can I go to not have an illusory, suffering experience?"

Repeating.

RAJ READING: The ego compromises with the issue of the eternal, just as it does with all issues that touch on the real question in any way. By compromising in connection with all TANGENTIAL questions, it hopes to hide the real question AND KEEP IT OUT OF MIND.

RAJ: A tangential question is a question that distracts you while not removing you entirely from the subject. It distracts you enough from being focused and determined to stay with the question until you get the answer.

RAJ READING: The ego's characteristic busyness with nonessentials is for precisely that purpose.

Consider the alchemist's age-old attempts to turn base metal into gold. The one question which the alchemist did not permit himself to ask was, "What FOR?" He could not ask this, because it would immediately become apparent that there was no sense in his efforts even if he succeeded. If gold became more plentiful its value would decrease, and his own purpose would be defeated. The ego has countenanced some strange compromises with the idea of the eternal, making many odd attempts to relate the concept to the UNimportant, in an effort to satisfy the mind without jeopardizing itself.

RAJ: In other words, to satisfy the Christ That You Are, the Mind That You Are without jeopardizing the ego. So the ego tantalizes you. It says, "Okay. We will countenance the idea of eternality and we'll countenance the idea of your Divinity and here's the way it works. The way it works is that you must understand that you are an evolving soul and that your purpose is to refine your soul. It's your purpose to involve yourself in means of education about spirituality. It's your task to read all the books you can find, and go through all the different thought systems you can find, and work on yourself. It may take lifetimes." And it chuckles behind your back, "It'll take thousands of lifetimes if he buys this. [laughing] He won't even think to look to God he's gonna be so busy refining his soul. This is great. [laughing]" You see?

So it takes something essentially Real and says, "Let's not talk about a direct Experience of Being Soul. Let's not talk about the fact that you don't have a soul but that You Are Soul. You are the Capacity to Feel the capital 'M' Meaning of What God Is Being in every little aspect of Creation. Let's not talk about going for the Experience. No. Let's talk about you being a soul, you know, one of many souls which God has created, and each one of these souls is separate and independent from God and from each other. And you know what? Part of refining your soul so that you might finally develop into something worthy and truly Divine, so that you might experience your Eternality, is going to involve learning how to be with each other in more and more spiritual terms while you're still independent souls." You see?

And it chuckles again because it says [chuckling], "That's going to triple the amount of time it's going to take, because they're never going to be able to do it as long as they think they're separate." So the ego institutes a fabulous insurance plan guaranteeing its life as long as it can distract you from asking a real question and sticking with the question until you get the answer, until you arrive at the Experience of What You Truly Are.

Where can you go for protection? You can only find protection in the Conscious Awareness of the Truth About You that dispels illusions by virtue of the fact that Truth does dispel illusions. And the Truth About You is to be found right in the middle of you in a place that very few of you access unless you have become totally worn out by the struggle to improve yourself and you actually momentarily give up the struggle.

Why do you think they say, "It's always darkest before the dawn. Every cloud has a silver lining."? Because at the very depths of the ego's despair, at the very point where that which is genuinely you no longer has a willingness to invest energy and commitment to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that aren't working, it's only when you arrive at that point of utter failure and you really give up the game, the manipulation, the illusion, you always find yourself filled up by God. A revelation occurs. Not necessarily as a flow of ideas, but as a feeling of inner illumination in which in spite of the dreadfulness of what has driven you to this point of failure, you are feeling Real Peace. And you are feeling really safe. And you know that the experience is not an illusion. You know that you're experiencing something really valid.

The saying is, "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." Well, when the Christ That You Are arrives at a point where it withdraws its willingness to invest its energy in what doesn't work and lets go of what doesn't work, what hadn't been working drops away from the Christ that had been holding it so close, and it no longer obscures that Christ from Himself or Herself. And that's why dawn comes. That's why the silver lining contradicts the darkness of the cloud. And usually this is a turning point in your lives.

Okay. Repeating.

RAJ READING: The ego has countenanced some strange compromises with the idea of the eternal, making many odd attempts to relate the concept to the UNimportant, in an effort to satisfy the mind...

RAJ: See, as long as it can keep you reading those books and refining your soul, it satisfies the mind that something real is occurring. And thus the mind is willing to abandon going for the specific question and the specific answer only.

So:

RAJ READING: The ego has countenanced some strange compromises with the idea of the eternal, making many odd attempts to relate the concept to the UNimportant, in an effort to satisfy the mind without jeopardizing itself. Thus, it has permitted minds to devote themselves to the possibility of perpetual MOTION, but NOT to perpetual thoughts.

Ideational preoccupations with problems set up to be incapable of solution are also favorite ego devices for impeding the strong-willed from making real learning progress.

RAJ: It's interesting, many times you become strong-willed on behalf of your awakening because you are hurting, because you are dissatisfied, and because you know there must be another way.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The problems of squaring the circle and carrying pi to infinity are good examples. A more recent ego attempt is particularly noteworthy.

RAJ: Grin, grin, grin.

RAJ READING: The idea of preserving the BODY by suspension, thus giving it the kind of limited immortality which the ego can tolerate, is among its more recent appeals to the mind. It is noticeable, however, that in all these diversionary tactics, the one question which is NEVER asked by those who pursue them is, "What FOR?"

This is the question which YOU must learn to ask, in connection with EVERYTHING your mind wishes to undertake. What is the purpose? Whatever it is, you cannot doubt that it will channelize your efforts automatically.

RAJ: Automatically, automatically it will set into motion a movement in the direction.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you make a decision of purpose, then, you have made a decision about your future effort, a decision which will remain in effect unless you change the DECISION.

RAJ: A decision is a commitment, isn't it? A decision is more than a resolution. On New Year's Day, you may resolve to lose ten pounds or you may resolve to quit smoking. But until you decide to lose ten pounds or you decide to stop smoking, you won't lose 10 pounds and you won't stop smoking.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Psychologists are in a good position to realize that the ego is capable of making and accepting as real some very distorted associations.

RAJ: And again, that means that... and this isn't necessarily true of psychologists but I'll read it as it says.

RAJ READING: Psychologists are in a good position to realize...

RAJ: That the Christ who is unconscious of its Christhood. [Editor's Note: Raj replaced the words "the ego"]

RAJ READING: ...is capable of making and accepting as real some very distorted associations.

RAJ: I insist again that you remember that every time you read the word "ego," it means a Christ who believes he is not the Christ, who has chosen to behave as though he is not the Christ, and is now believing his behavior. It's you. It's You The Christ unconscious of your Christhood.

If you remember this, then every time you read the word "ego," you will know that it's talking about you, You A Christ who's forgotten Who He or She Divinely Is. And in remembering that, you will be unable to talk about the ego in a third person, in a detached way as though it is out there. "It is not me. It's different from me, but it's controlling me. And I can't do anything about it. It's too strong for me. It's this, or it's that."

And the other thing is that in remembering that it's You The Christ being unconscious of your Christhood but with the full Authority of your Christhood creating an illusory experience of limitation, it will inevitably empower you because it involves remembering Who You Divinely Are to use your Divine Power on your behalf, instead of to your detriment. It empowers you to let go of this silly waste of time that you've been so preoccupied with. And it makes you realize that you can't possibly be a victim.

This is where we're going to stop for today because we're going to move into a slightly different subject, and I want what has been illuminated so far to sit with you so that you abide with it in its simplicity and in its clarity.

As you go through this coming week between now and the next time we gather, I want you to watch for, with a willingness to be amused at it rather than feeling guilty for it, I want you to watch to see how often you distract yourself from a focused intent to arrive at a specific answer so that you might instead consider things relative to the primary issue and indulge in distress, because the distraction by the relative issues relative to the main question tend to confirm to you that there really isn't an answer that you will arrive at if you give focused attention to the question with an expectation of having the answer.

I want you to watch how much of your time is spent during the next seven days suffering exquisitely. Not really hurting yourself but just being stuck in a delicate... delicate, exquisite, exquisite suffering. If you see yourself doing it, and you look at it honestly so that you see what you're doing, you will be able to laugh. You really will be able to laugh at it, which will promote its leaving you almost immediately and placing you in a frame of mind within yourself where there's a remembrance of the fact that you are something more than an ego. That you are a Christ, you are the Christ behaving in a manner totally inconsistent to the Christ That You Are, but because you are feeling more clearly that there is something excellent about you, you can bring yourself back to the real question and forget about indulging in the distractions so that you can stay focused for the specific answer that wipes the question, the problem, out of your experience. So just with a light heart observe yourselves during this coming week.

And as always I will be with you watching you as well and enjoying with you your discoveries. And will I look forward to being with you in this fashion again next week. Thank you.

RAJ: Okay. Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: It's good to have you here. And welcome everyone as well who is joining us on the internet.

I'm going to continue reading from the transcript as completed by Bill Thetford. And the next two paragraphs were not only specifically directed to Helen and Bill, but you might say all psychologists, and there is transfer value here for every single person who reads it.

Beginning.

RAJ READING: Psychologists are in a good position to realize that the ego is capable of making and accepting as real some very distorted associations. The confusion of sex with aggression, and the resulting behavior which is perceived as the same for both, serves as an example. This is "understandable" to the psychologist, and does not produce surprise. The lack of surprise, however, is NOT a sign of understanding. It is a symptom of the psychologist's ability to accept as reasonable a compromise which is clearly senseless; to attribute it to the mental illness of the patient, rather than his own; and to limit his questions about both the patient AND himself to the trivial. [no equivalent content in the first or second edition of the Text]

Such relatively minor confusions of the ego are not among its more profound misassociations, although they do reflect them. Your egos have been blocking the more important questions which your minds SHOULD ask. You do not understand a patient... [no equivalent content in the first or second edition of the Text]

RAJ: Or you could say you do not understand a brother or a sister or a partner or a friend or a boss.

RAJ READING: You do not understand a patient while you yourselves are willing to limit the questions you raise about HIS mind, because you are also accepting these limits for YOURS. [no equivalent content in the first or second edition of the Text]

RAJ: In other words, anyone who thinks just like you do, you don't question. You don't practice doubt. You don't ask, "Is there another way to look at this?" Because the way they think confirms the way you think and there you are, your mutually-agreed-upon definitions are confirmed, even though the mutually-agreed-upon definitions constitute a mental aberration, or what you might call a mental illness, because of the fact that the mutually-agreed-upon definitions are in contradiction to the Meanings Expressed By God in all of the things you have applied new definitions to.

So, repeating.

RAJ READING: ...you are also accepting these limits for YOURS. This makes you unable to heal him AND yourselves. Be always unwilling to adapt to ANY situation in which miracle-mindedness is unthinkable. That state in itself is enough to demonstrate that the perception is wrong. [no equivalent content in the first or second edition of the Text]

RAJ: The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Constant State

RAJ: And in the first and second edition it's entitled:

RAJ READING: The Rewards of God (T-#61/67)

RAJ READING: The Constant State

It cannot be emphasized too often that correcting perception is merely a temporary expedient.

RAJ: In other words, it's not an end goal. Correcting perception doesn't resolve your dream. Correcting perception doesn't wake you up.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is necessary to do so...

RAJ: Meaning correct perception.

RAJ READING: ...only because misperception is a block to knowledge,...

RAJ: Or capital "K" Knowing.

RAJ READING: ...while accurate perception is a stepping-stone TOWARDS it.

Again.

RAJ READING: It cannot be emphasized too often that correcting perception is merely a temporary expedient. It is necessary to do so only because misperception is a block to knowledge, while accurate perception is a stepping-stone TOWARDS it. The whole value of right perception lies in the inevitable judgment which it entails that it IS unnecessary.

RAJ: In other words, the value of right perception lies in the discovery you make upon experiencing correct perception, accurate perception, that having accurate perception is unnecessary. And the reason you have that realization is because in the presence of accurate perception, you see the valuelessness of the misperception you were harboring, and in that space, if I may put it that way, in the space of accurate perception you are subject to sudden insight, sudden inspiration, sudden revelation that constitutes a connection with God. An Experience of Truth that shows you that although right perception was valuable as a stepping stone, it wasn't the end goal and it wasn't the point. It was the experience of Knowing with a capital "K", the Impulse of Truth from God registering with you that was the point and that you see was the point.

Okay.

RAJ READING: This...

RAJ: Experience.

RAJ READING: This removes the block entirely. You may ask how this is possible as long as you appear to be living in this world, and since this is a sensible question, it has a sensible answer. You must be careful, however, that you really understand the question. What IS the "you" who are living in this world?

RAJ: Well, let's explore what this you is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Immortality is a constant state. It is as true now as it ever was or ever will be, because it implies NO CHANGE AT ALL. It is not a continuum, nor is it understood by being compared to an opposite. Knowledge...

RAJ: Or capital "K" Knowing.

RAJ READING: ...never involves comparisons. That is its essential difference from everything else the mind can grasp. "A little knowledge" is not dangerous except to the ego.

RAJ: In other words, a little bit of the Experience of Knowing the Truth is not dangerous except to the ego.

RAJ READING: Vaguely it senses threat, and being unable to realize that “a little knowledge” is a meaningless phrase since “all” and “a little” in this context are the same, the ego decides that since “all” is impossible, the fear does not lie there. “A little,” however, is a scarcity concept, and THIS the ego understands well. “A little,” then, is perceived as the real threat.

The essential thing to remember is that the ego DOES NOT RECOGNIZE the real source of its perceived threat, and if YOU associate yourself with the ego, YOU do not perceive the whole situation as it is. Only your allegiance to it gives the ego ANY power over you.

RAJ: Now what's coming up next is extremely important.

RAJ READING: We have spoken of the ego as if it were a separate thing acting on its own.

RAJ: And I spoke about this last week.

RAJ READING: This was necessary to persuade you that you cannot dismiss it lightly, and must realize how much of your thinking is ego-directed. We cannot safely let it go at that, however, or you will regard yourselves as necessarily conflicted as long as you are here, or, more properly, as long as you BELIEVE that you are here.

RAJ: And this should be underlined and printed in red and put on your refrigerator.

RAJ READING: The ego is nothing more than a PART of your belief about yourselves.

RAJ: You remember last week I spoke about the fact that never at any point had you ceased to be the direct Expression of God. That each one of you is the Christ pretending not to be the Christ, behaving as though you're not the Christ and believing your behavior. And so you call yourselves egos and with the full power of the Christ That You Are, you construct experiences that are unpleasant because they don't reflect your Divine Intelligence. But never at any time is there a thing called an ego doing anything at all. It's always the Christ with an ego-mask on pretending to be what the mask represents. You see?

And so, repeating.

RAJ READING: The ego is nothing more than a PART of your belief about yourselves.

RAJ: The ego is nothing more than a part of the Christ's belief about himself. You see? It's always the Christ. It's always the Christ. You're always the Christ. You can't stop Being What You Are. You can pretend. You can fool yourselves. But you can't make it true. And so at every single moment, You are the Ultimate. At this very moment You are the Ultimate, the very Presence of God. And isn't it amazing? None of you can believe it. "Nice idea. Wonderful thought. But it just can't be so. I know who I am. I know I'm not what you're talking about."

Well, I will keep telling you that you are what I'm talking about until your confidence and your doubt begins to break down. I will keep talking until your confidence begins to break down and you begin to consider the possibility that maybe, in spite of your absolute confidence in your belief about yourself, you might be wrong and I might be right. So that you might let your Experience of Who You Are be regenerated, illuminated, and let Its Absolute Infinite Divinity begin to register with you. And so that you might look at your bodies and say, "The limitations I'm experiencing here, the age I seem to be experiencing here, the youth that my children seem to be experiencing there, can't be the Truth because I am Eternal, Changeless, Forever Embodying The Pristine Idea God Is Having right where I see myself and right where I see my children."

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego is nothing more than a PART of your belief about yourselves. Your other life...

RAJ: The Life of the Divine One That You Are. The Life that God is unfolding flawlessly and which it is a Joy for you to be experiencing.

RAJ READING: ...has continued without interruption, and has been and always will be totally unaffected by your attempts to disassociate.

RAJ: In other words, by your attempts to say, "Father, I'd rather do it my way. Father, I'd rather see it my way. Father, I'd rather decide what things are."

RAJ READING: The ratio of repression...

RAJ: Meaning the ignoring of your Divinity.

RAJ READING: ...and dissociation...

RAJ: Meaning your distancing yourself from God and your acknowledgement that God is your Source and that you are not your source.

RAJ READING: ...varies with the individual ego-illusion, but dissociation is always involved, or you would not believe that you ARE here.

RAJ: Meaning in an experience that can't be called the Kingdom of Heaven, that can't be called Reality with a capital "R".

RAJ READING: In learning to escape from the illusions you have made,...

RAJ: Remember they are not illusions that you, a piss-ant little ego, has made. They are illusions which you, a fully Christed Presence of God, have made-up and given preference to.

RAJ READING: In learning to escape from the illusions you have made, your great debt to each other is something you must never forget. It is exactly the same debt that you owe to me. Whenever you react egotistically towards each other, you are throwing away the graciousness of your indebtedness, and the holy perception it would produce.

RAJ: What is the indebtedness you have to each other? At the bottom line it is the fact that each one of you is the Christ whether you are embodying it consciously or not. And because you haven't stopped being What You Divinely Are, you present to all of your Brothers and Sisters the ongoing, ever-present opportunity to recognize the Christ right where you are. You are all indebted to each other because you all provide each other with the constant opportunity to remember Home, to remember God, and thereby to remember Who You Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The term "holy" can be used here because, as you learn how much you ARE indebted to the whole Sonship, which INCLUDES me, you come as close to knowledge as perception ever can. The gap...

RAJ: Between perception and Knowledge or Knowing.

RAJ READING: ...is then so small that knowledge can easily flow across it, and obliterate it forever.

RAJ: Again that's why you're indebted to each other because you're constantly providing each other with the opportunity for that to happen.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You have very little trust in me as yet, but it will increase as you turn more and more often to me INSTEAD of your egos for guidance.

RAJ: And of course, what that means is instead of you, the Christ, turning to the definition you have given yourself and all of the self-protecting, mutual agreements that have been developed by you in order not to be able to remember Home.

Again.

RAJ READING: You have very little trust in me as yet, but it will increase as you turn more and more often to me INSTEAD of your egos for guidance.

RAJ: Another way of saying that would be instead of your imaginations for guidance.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The results will convince you increasingly that your choice in turning to me is the only sane one you can make.

RAJ: Well, if you haven't had the experience of turning to me and experiencing the result, then I will share with you that when you turn to me, when you genuinely, unresistantly ask anything of me, I will respond. I do respond. And I respond in a manner you can hear.

And in that experience, you find yourself experiencing yourself as I experience You. As a result, you feel your Innocence. You don't feel at all surprised that you're hearing from me. It doesn't feel at all unnatural. Although afterwards you will stand in wonder, and even ask yourself if you went crazy. But the Experience of Communion with me is one that feels utterly natural and normal with one exception; that you feel utterly Loved and you're not surprised. In other words, the experience doesn't feel unnatural to you. And at the time that it's occurring, you won't find yourself objecting to it. You won't find yourself arguing with it. You will not find yourself saying, "I am not worthy of this."

Repeating.

RAJ READING: The results...

RAJ: Which I just described.

RAJ READING: ...will convince you increasingly that your choice in turning to me is the only sane one you can make. No-one who has learned from experience that one choice brings peace and joy, while another brings chaos and disaster, needs much conditioning.

RAJ: The simple fact is that you will need more, but you won't need a whole lot.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego...

RAJ: Meaning your current best definition of yourself that you have convinced yourself of and that you have convinced many others of.

RAJ READING: ...cannot withstand the conditioning process...

RAJ: Of repeated communion with me.

RAJ READING: ...because the process itself DEMONSTRATES that there is another way. Conditioning by rewards has always been more effective than conditioning by pain because pain is an ego-illusion, and can never induce more than a temporary effect. The rewards of God, however, are immediately recognized as eternal.

RAJ: And I will tell you something. No matter how slight or how momentary or how brief an encounter you have with me, it will leave you forever changed. Not shockingly, but it will leave you changed because you will have had a demonstration that in spite of your attempt to be separate and alone, you aren't. And the experience is a demonstration of the fact that you aren't alone, that you never have been alone, and never will be. In other words, that Being, I'm going to put it this way, is a community experience, is an Experience of Brotherhood.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Since this recognition is made by you...

RAJ: In other words, the Christ That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...and NOT the ego, the recognition ITSELF establishes that you and your ego CANNOT be identical.

RAJ: That's one of the realizations that will change you forever because you can't undo that recognition.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You may believe that you have already accepted the difference, but you are by no means convinced as yet. The very fact that you are preoccupied with the idea of escaping FROM the ego shows this.

RAJ: Keeping in mind that your ego isn't something separate from you, but that you are not the ego, that You are the Christ employing a mask or a definition of yourself that can't possibly change what's underneath the mask.

Remember this:

RAJ READING: You CANNOT escape from the ego by humbling it or controlling it or punishing it. Remember that the ego and the Soul DO NOT KNOW each other. The separated mind cannot maintain the separation EXCEPT by dissociating.

RAJ: Now, this may sound confusing. If you, the Christ, are pretending to be an ego, then it would seem that You, Soul, can know the ego, but the fact is that they are mutually exclusive. The ego cannot let itself know the Soul, cannot let itself know... I'm going to change that. The ego cannot let you know or access the fact that You Are Soul because that will constitute the demise of the ego. And so that's why it tells you, you are not Soul, with a capital "S", the Living Presence of God, but that you are a soul, a little creation of God, a little separate and apart thing that God made that has the attributes of God, but isn't God Presencing Himself Right Where You Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The separated mind cannot maintain the separation EXCEPT by dissociating.

RAJ: By keeping Soul separate from it so that it cannot experience its demise.

RAJ READING: Having done this, it utilizes repression against all truly natural impulses,...

RAJ: And I'm going to say Divine Impulses.

RAJ READING: ...not because the EGO is a separate thing, but because you want to believe that YOU are.

RAJ: You might say that's hard to believe. You never decided that you wanted to be separate. But the fact is that you have gotten hooked, as we've talked about many times, on the experience, the high, the hit that you get from attempting to be individually privately creative and to make your mark on the world, or to actually create something on your own that you can take credit for entirely. You thrive on the attempt to accomplish this. And you do it because the ego suggests to you that you can. And the ego suggests to you that you can so that you will be distracted from connecting with yourself as Soul.

Repeating.

RAJ READING: Having done this, it...

RAJ: The separated mind.

RAJ READING: ...utilizes repression against all truly natural impulses, not because the EGO is a separate thing, but because you want to believe that YOU are. The ego is a device for maintaining this belief, but it is still only YOUR willingness to use the device that enables it to endure.

RAJ: Do you see what I've been meaning when I've said that you are at this moment the Christ pretending you aren't, behaving as though you aren't, and believing your behavior. There is no ego.

Repeating.

RAJ READING: The ego is a device...

RAJ: A tool, a means.

RAJ READING: ...for maintaining this belief,...

RAJ: That you can be separate.

RAJ READING: ...but it is still only YOUR willingness...

RAJ: The willingness of the Christ That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...to use the device that enables it to endure.

RAJ: And then, silly ones, you blame the ego. "The ego made me do it." And all the time, you have put on the mask, behaved as though you aren't yourself, and then tried to lay responsibility for the crazy actions that you've taken, on this masked figure. "Who was that masked man?" "I don't know. We better try and find out." You see? More subterfuge.

I mentioned last week that what I'm engaged in with all of you is an overture of Love, and here's a little more of it.

RAJ READING: My trust in you is greater than yours in me at the moment, but it will not always be that way. Your mission is very simple. You have been chosen to live so as to demonstrate that you are NOT an ego. I repeat that I do not choose God's channels wrongly.

RAJ: Now it could be very easy to say here that I was speaking exclusively to Helen and Bill and that this doesn't relate to you. But I'll tell you something. Anyone who is hearing my voice, whether it's right now through Paul or whether it's in the stillness within yourself, you are at a point of becoming undefended against your connection with the Whole of Being, your connection with those of the Brotherhood who are not confined by ego definitions.

You have arrived at a point where you're breaking the boundary and the isolation. In that sense, your intent that you have followed through on to the point of successful contact, if I may put it that way, has made it possible for Me or for your Guides or for the Holy Spirit to provide the invitation to you to persist further in this direction.

In that sense, I have chosen each one of you who has chosen to listen. And so, you're having been chosen doesn't make you special. It simply confirms where a newfound commitment lies in you. And it inevitably, that decision, that choice inevitably puts you in the position of realizing that part of waking up involves Loving your Brother as yourself, behaving in a new way with your Brother, seeing your Brother in a new way, being willing to use your Brother for the purpose of remembering the Christ in him, and therefore the Christ in you.

So continuing.

RAJ READING: I repeat that I do not choose God's channels wrongly.

RAJ: It was really a mutual choice. You and I did it together.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy One shares my trust, and always approves my Atonement decisions because my will is never out of accord with His. I have told you before that I am in charge of the whole Atonement. This is ONLY because I completed my part in it as a man, and can now complete it through other men. My chosen receiving and sending channels...

RAJ: Meaning any of you who hears My Voice and communes with Me.

RAJ READING: ...cannot fail because I will lend them MY strength as long as theirs is wanting.

RAJ: The word "channels" has a somewhat bad rap these days. But what are you doing when you become defenseless against God? You let God shine through you. We've talked about your needing to have an object of your affection, some place to extend your Love to so that you might extend the Father's Love through you to the object of your affection, and thereby both of you stand in receipt of the Father's Love. Doesn't that make you a channel in that sense? If you are here to represent God, if you are here because you are the Expression of God, then you are channeling God.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I will go with you to the Holy One,...

RAJ READING: I will go with you to the Holy One, and through MY perception HE can bridge the little gap. Your gratitude to EACH OTHER is the only gift I want. I will bring it to God for you, knowing that to know your brother IS to know God. A little knowledge is an all-encompassing thing. If you are grateful to each other, you are grateful to God for what He created.

RAJ: Now, don't be grateful to each other because you scratched his back and he scratched your back, and you made a good deal together. You made-up a good agreement. That's not what we're talking about. Gratitude, gratitude for the Christ that your Brother must be regardless of how he's behaving, is the gratitude that will transform you and him.

Continuing here.

RAJ READING: If you are grateful to each other, you are grateful to God for what He created. Through your gratitude you can come to know each other,...

RAJ: And that truly, in the sense of Knowing as opposed to perceiving.

RAJ READING: Through your gratitude you can come to know each other, and one moment of real recognition makes all men your brothers, because they are all of your Father.

RAJ: There's an incredible learning when you find yourself feeling Loved by Me or Loved by God. And that is that you realize that you didn't do anything to become worthy of it. You know that you didn't change in any way to suddenly stand in the conscious receipt of being Loved by God. And in that moment you inescapably become aware of the fact that the same thing is true of your Brother or your Sister, that they are as deserving of it as you are because you know you're not any more special than them. And in that realization a truer sense of Brotherhood comes into play and a capacity on your part to truly be able to look beyond your definitions of them, or the definitions of themselves that they present to you, and see more deeply into their worthiness.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Love does not conquer all things, but it DOES set all things right.

RAJ: You might say it puts all things into perspective so that everything fits perfectly and divinely.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Because you are all the Kingdom of God, I can lead you back to your own creations, which you do not yet know. What has been dissociated is still there.

RAJ: In other words, the Movement of Creation that has been going on all this time that you have been dallying with the ego and playing with the idea of being an ego and suffering from the idea of being an ego, all of the Movement of Creation that you've been participating in remains unchanged and awaiting your recognition and remembrance of It. And it will be returned as I said.

Continuing in my invitation to Love.

RAJ READING: As you come closer to a brother you DO approach me, and as you withdraw from him, I become distant to you.

RAJ: Notice I didn't say from you. I don't withdraw, but as you withdraw from him, I become distant to you. Because in effect, you withdraw from me.

RAJ READING: Your giant step forward was to insist on a "collaborative venture."

RAJ: This remark was specifically made to Helen and Bill, but I want to point out to you that the moment you, any one of you decides to abandon your isolation and you reach out to me and you make connection with me, it is because you have insisted on a collaborative venture. You have said, "I want to join. I do not want to be autonomous."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This does not go against the true spirit of meditation; it is inherent in it.

RAJ: In other words, meditation is not an isolated experience. It is not meant to hold you in your already-existing isolation, but in a finer experience of peace in your isolation.

RAJ READING: Meditation is a collaborative venture with God.

RAJ: See how I'm promoting our Love affair here.

RAJ READING: It CANNOT be undertaken successfully by those who disengage themselves from the Sonship,...

RAJ: Or the Brotherhood.

RAJ READING: ...because they are disengaging themselves from me. God will come to you...

RAJ: And I've said this over and over and it's the key point and it's the simplicity of it.

RAJ READING: God will come to you ONLY as you will give Him to your brothers.

RAJ: Only as you are willing to have an object of your affection and let that object of your affection not be the bastard who is confronting you, but the Christ that you know has to underlie that definition he is applying to himself.

RAJ READING: God will come to you ONLY as you will give Him to your brothers. Learn first of them,...

RAJ: In other words, let your Brothers pleasant or nasty, kind or mean, aggressive or passive, be the ones, be the one whom you choose to extend the acknowledgement of Christhood to. Let them be the trigger for your refusing to respond from your ego, and rather respond from that Place of having turned toward the Altar, having joined with Me or with the Father so that you might extend a purer, more acceptable Love that arises out of a sense of Who The One You're Extending To Is Divinely.

RAJ READING: Learn first of them, and you will be ready to hear God as you hear them.

RAJ: In other words, don't go running off to God and leave your Brother out in the boonies and say, "I'll come back with you when I've got a clearer perception. It's a little bit too hard for me to deal with you right now. It will be easier for me to deal with God and I'm going to do that by myself. So I'll be back when I make the connection." You see?

You start with your Brother. Let your Brother be the reason you turn toward God. But not as a means of leaving your Brother, but rather as a means of coming into Clarity, Divine Clarity within yourself so that your Brother will be worth your attention and your commitment and so that you will reflect back to your Brother or your Sister the Divine Truth you know about the Christ That They Are in whatever manner it takes to cause them to feel safe enough to abandon the definition that they've given themselves and the effort they are confident they have to put forth to protect themselves in your presence.

Repeating.

RAJ READING: Learn first of them, and you will be ready to hear God as you hear them. That is because the function of love is one.

RAJ: Now, I'm asking you this question. You could ask me this question.

RAJ READING: How can you teach someone the value of something he has deliberately thrown away?

RAJ: And if your ego is really rearing its head, it would say, " Why would you bother to teach someone the value of something he has deliberately thrown away?"

Well, how do you teach someone the value of something he has deliberately thrown away?

RAJ READING: He must have thrown it away because he did not value it. You can only show him how miserable he is without it,...

RAJ: Without the thing he threw away.

RAJ READING: ...and bring it near very slowly,...

RAJ: You don't cram it down his throat. You don't shove it in his face.

RAJ READING: You can only show him how miserable he is without it,...

RAJ: Meaning the correct perception that he's thrown away.

RAJ READING: ...and bring it near very slowly, so he can learn how his misery lessens as he approaches it.

RAJ: If you don't approach slowly, you will frighten him and his fear will not lessen.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This conditions him to associate his misery with its absence, and to associate the opposite of misery with its presence. It gradually becomes desirable, as he changes his mind about its worth.

RAJ: You see? This is my Love affair with you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I am conditioning you to associate misery with the ego and joy with the Soul.

RAJ: With a capital "S".

RAJ READING: You have conditioned yourselves the other way around. A far greater reward, however, will break through any conditioning, if it is repeatedly offered whenever the old habit pattern is broken. You are still free to choose, but can you really WANT the rewards of the ego in the presence of the rewards of God?

RAJ: Well, of course, the answer is "No."

But just as I am willing to persist with you for as long as it takes, you are invited to persist with each other for as long as it takes. Why? Because somewhere along the line, you will arrive at a point where you have more faith in your Brother than your Brother has in you, just as I have more faith in you than you have in me. Because I have more faith in you because I know Who You Are—the Christ, my Brother, my Sister. Because I have more faith in you, because I know Who You Are, than you have faith in me, I persist in the face of your mistrust of me and your fear of abandoning the control that keeps you bound, even though you think it keeps you safe.

And so I persist with you, and as that begins to be obvious to you and make sense to you, you will begin to feel, not think, but you will begin to feel that this is your function as well with your Brother. And you will be able to feel the fact that no matter how much resistance you run into, and no matter how much delay they introduce into the process of their waking up, they're worth persisting with because they deserve to Know Who They Already Divinely Are. They deserve not the opportunity to refine themselves and become something that they aren't already. You see? They deserve to Experience What They Already Are and think they're not, believe they're not, and are committed to believing they're not. And even though you are not feeling Who You Truly Are fully, your commitment to helping them be less afraid of experiencing Who They Are Truly will confirm to you the safety of your persisting, and both of you will be blessed, and that's the way it works.

So I continue in my Love affair with you. And I invite you all to consider having a Love affair with your fellowman. A Love affair in which you bring to your fellowman an acknowledgement of his Christhood, and bless him with that acknowledgement by neglecting to respond to his ego assertions from your ego habits.

I love companioning with you.

RAJ: Okay. Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the internet. I'm going to put you on the spot. Two weeks ago I gave you a homework assignment. Does anyone remember what it was? The homework assignment was to notice during the coming week how many times and in what ways your egos distracted you from asking the one essential question. Does that ring any bells?

Does anyone remember what the one essential question was? Two gold stars for Mark. Yes sir.

SEEKER (Mark): Where do I go to find protection?

RAJ: Indeed. Did anyone explore that? And does anyone remember what they discovered as a result? Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: There is no place to go for protection.

RAJ: No. The question was did you notice how your ego distracted you from asking the question?

SEEKER: No, I didn't.

SEEKER (previous): I got busy doing things that had those words involved in them and circled around the concept and never directly embraced the question honestly waiting for an answer. I just stayed busy thinking about it and studying about it.

RAJ: What kind of thoughts did you... went through your mind?

SEEKER: What kind of activity that I could do to create that space or find that space, versus just accepting it from God, accepting that it's true, allowing that experience to come in God's terms.

RAJ: Can you think of any specific interactions with others where you did not go to where your safety was, but engaged in subterfuge and reaction and what the techniques were that you used?

SEEKER: Really when I get close to it, I want to undermine the activity, and I'll get mad. I'll get impatient and start looking for, you know, faults in other people that seem obvious to me, that I find those to be irritating. And the closer it gets, the more angry I get, the more frustrated I get with how other people aren't getting it. Approaching it does create...

RAJ: Approaching what?

SEEKER: Approaching just honestly sitting still and being quiet with the question there generates some kind of intense frustration and eventually it goes into anger.

RAJ: Contemplating what?

SEEKER: Asking the question and sitting still and waiting for the answer.

RAJ: What question?

SEEKER: Where can I go to find safety, to be protected? And I ask the question and really want an answer that's... I'm invited to become frustrated and enraged with children walking around making noise, somebody.... It just is I become hypersensitive and very judgmental 'cause I really... I really worked at it and asked the question and tried to, you know, be still, as I did that which, you know, is repetitive. I mean it wasn't like I did it once. But as I worked with that and I became more sincere with it, I found I began to be reactive. My behavior was harder to control. And I mean it rustled some stuff loose in there so, you know, I gave up pretty quick. A few days of trying. I had space to myself where my environment was a little different. I was out of town and so it was really... I was crying because I really wanted it. I mean I really wanted it and I got really sincere and asked the question. And as I became more sincere, it brought stuff up that I don't know that I could clearly say why or how. It's not like it makes any sense that a child making some noise would irritate me that much, but I just noticed I started to become real judgmental and hypersensitive and not the usual nice guy that's got everything all bolted down. Stirred up some stuff and I became... really wanted the answer.

RAJ: And it wasn't enlightenment that got stirred up.

SEEKER: No.

RAJ: No.

SEEKER: No.

RAJ: Does what Mark has shared remind any of you of any experiences you had during the last couple of weeks?

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'm thinking of that prayer that you gave us. The Kingdom which is me, which is us, is... now my mind is just going blank,... perfectly unified and perfectly protected and ego shall not prevail against it, 'cause that's what came up when I got really frightened one time. And it just came up over and over and over again when the fear would... it worked for two seconds and then it would be back again. And as long as I kept saying that. And then what came to me was this wonderful sensation that, you know, the Kingdom is unified. I mean unified with every thing. I'm not alone. There isn't any way that I can keep thinking of myself as separate.

RAJ: Yes. Anyone else?

ANOTHER SEEKER: I wrote that down, that question, but I think I forgot about it very quickly. But that week I had a couple of like real big fits [laughing] where I was really trying to arrange out there to get my safety and I was really trying to make somebody, you know, give it to me. And I didn't even remember that we had that because I got so embroiled in the fits. I think I felt extremely vulnerable. Just was grabbing at, okay, how about you, or how about money, how about this, you know, to make me feel safe.

RAJ: Each of you has spoken of particular situations or instances that caused you to become unglued, unsettled, uncomfortable. But what I want all of you to be aware of is that you are constantly ill at ease even when no specific circumstance has caused you to flare up or for your ego to flare up. You are constantly primed for blowups. You are constantly on edge poised to defend yourselves. I do not say this to you to disturb you. I say this to you so that you might understand that in your relative peace, you already are disturbed. You've just gotten used to it. And as a result, you don't bother to ask, "Where is my protection? Where is my safety? Where can I find my peace?"

Now Paul heard me ask the question as well and somehow thought that he was exempt from participating, and he was going to be very interested to see what everyone else had to say. And as a result he went through two weeks of constant opportunity to notice how his ego was distracting him from asking the essential question. As a result of his not recognizing his ongoing uneasiness, and thereby missing the point that his uneasiness was result of a choice he had made not to be joined.

He, like Mark and Judy, found himself finding fault with others. Pay with the reason he was miserable. And then poor Susan comes along and says, "I don't know if you realize it but you're really being cranky. You're really not on the beam. You're really not listening." And of course Paul had allowed himself already to get into a state of self-pity. And then when she confronted him with the answer, he saw her as finding fault with him and maintained the distraction further by arguing with her and being unkind to her by suggesting that she was being thoughtless and insensitive, and you know, you don't beat the guy when he's already down, et cetera. Here, she was presenting to him what would allow him to get out of his funk and he saw it as even more reason to stay in his funk.

Now, the point is that as long as you are seeing yourself as an independent agent, as long as you're seeing yourself in your own right, which ultimately means your own wrongness, you are experiencing vulnerability. You are experiencing vulnerability. No matter how numb you've become to it, you are experiencing vulnerability. And the only answer, the only resolution to that vulnerability is to stop maintaining your independent autonomous standpoint, the idea that you can exist quote "in your own right" unquote with your own rights that everyone else better recognize.

And of course, any action you take to get other people to recognize your rights is the way mutually-agreed-upon definitions are arrived at. Now if you can get everyone to agree with you that you have rights of your own and they agree to give them to you in exchange for your giving them their rights, you all are working together, consorting together, conniving together, to keep yourself from seeing where the answer lies, which is in not maintaining an autonomous stand, an independent stand.

I will tell you something and I'm telling Paul something. The more experience you have at being joined with Me or with the Holy Spirit, the more experience you get at being in Communion, the more you're going to find acts of independence to be increasingly uncomfortable. And so what used to not bother you so much, will now become extremely bothersome. And being unjoined will be an increasingly uncomfortable experience. In fact, I believe this is what we talked about last week. And this is the way you learn that there is no value in independent autonomous activity, or the attempt to engage in independent autonomous activity. The more uncomfortable it becomes, the less value you will find in it. The more apparent it will become that when you are joined, when you are seeking not to be alone and you are letting involvement occur with Me or with the Holy Spirit or with the Father, the more the peace and the stability and the experience of invulnerability that you have in that joined place will be obviously desirable.

And so in this process of strenuous back and forth flip-flopping you begin to learn that you want to choose again, that you want to choose something new, that it really is more valuable to be joined, not with other egos in mutually-agreed-upon definitions, but with Me or the Holy Spirit or the Father in the Experience of Unity and Harmony and Wholeness. And then, because that's what you enjoy more than suffering, you will put your weight on the side of your Peace. And you will not value the stance that gives you suffering. And so this is the way you learn.

It all seems too simple perhaps. It deprives me of having fresh new ways to tell you how to wake up because at the bottom line you have only one problem and that is that you have chosen to dissociate yourself, to separate yourself from your Source and attempt to exist in that imaginary, foolish, insane state of mind. The only answer to all of your problems, to the problem of the human condition, is breaking the isolation, turning toward the Altar. That is the only solution because the only problem you're having is your committed conscious intent to try to imagine yourself as independent and bring that state of independence into actuality. As a result, I sound monotonous because I can't give you 113,000 different things you could do to wake up. There's only one. That does make it utterly simple.

Paul found that he was feeling vulnerable but he didn't want to look at why. He felt vulnerable. He felt unloved. He felt disrespected. He felt discounted. On and on and on. And, you know, rather than project out on anyone, he wanted to make himself smaller and more private and just be in the sense of justified misery. Like to hell with everyone else. "I'm just going to be privately miserable. I won't make waves for anyone. I'll be kind. You know, I won't make waves."

But of course his behavior changed. And those around him, like his wife, noticed that he was reclusive and uncommunicative. And so she boldly brought it to his attention. "What's wrong?"

"Ah, you don't want to hear about it. I don't want to talk about it."

"No, talk about it."

So he talked about it and ten words got out of his mouth and it was obvious to her what the problem was and she interrupted him. But now he was getting a little satisfaction out of somebody hearing his misery, right, and wanted more time at the podium. And so now she was thoughtlessly interrupting him when she had asked him, "What's wrong?" When she spoke up with the correction, what would correct the problem since there was no need to go on at length about the problem, he demanded the right to have it, or to be able to criticize her for being inconsistent. "Well, you asked me. At least give me the opportunity to answer you." You see?

You see the ego technique of self-protection, of self-protection of this imagined state of independence, will not allow for what will undo its intent to be private, its intent to be self-directed and self-governed. And so it does everything it can to distract.

First, it distracted Paul privately. It said, "Yeah, you have a right to just sog. You have a right to just be quiet and not bother anybody." Okay, distraction number one.
