Then Susan says, "Hey guy," in so many words, "What's going on? You're not acting like yourself." Ah! Now we have distraction number two. Now we're not going to talk about... we're not going to engage in sogging, we're going to engage in defending against the imposition someone else is providing that would keep you from sogging. And so now whoever it is that provides this, whether it's a crying baby, or a barking dog, or Susan confronting Paul with the answer, an attack on this bothersome element becomes a further distraction.

You see? You get sort of a zigzag course further and further away from the simple answer which is to turn toward the Altar, to break the isolation. All of the distractions are relative to the original problem. But they all are distractions to your finding the answer and employing the answer.

Now, what we've been talking about relates to what we are going to be reading about, so let us go to the book. The subject of this section is:

RAJ READING: Creation and Communication

It should be clear by now that, while the content of any particular ego-illusion does not matter, it is usually more helpful to correct it in a specific context. Ego-illusions are QUITE specific, although they frequently change, and although the mind is naturally abstract.

RAJ: Remember again that when it is referring to the Mind, it's referring to the Christ Mind, the Christ of each one of you who is imagining that he's not the Christ, behaving as though he's not the Christ, and believing his behavior.

RAJ READING: The mind nevertheless becomes concrete voluntarily as soon as it splits.

RAJ: As soon as it says, "Father, I would rather see it my way. I'd rather do it my way. I'd rather be the one to say what everything means."

RAJ READING: However, only PART of it splits, so only PART of it is concrete. The concrete part is the same part that believes in the ego because the ego DEPENDS on the specific. It is the part that believes your existence means you are SEPARATE.

Everything the ego perceives is a separate whole, without the relationships that imply BEING.

RAJ: It sees everything as a separate whole. It's like this plant here, the African violet, or the tree you see out in the yard. You think it is a discrete wholeness in it itself. But you know what? Well, let me say this. You also think of water as a thing in itself, a wholeness. You know that you need to water the tree. So you put the water in the ground and you know the tree will drink it up. But you know what? The tree doesn't have any way to get the water into its roots. There are organisms that live on the surface of the roots. They depend upon the tree for their existence as well as the water, and what they do with the water transfers the water to the roots, makes it possible for the roots to absorb the water. So, the tree isn't a whole on its own. It cannot exist without these organisms. And these organisms can't exist without the tree. And the tree and the organisms can't exist without the water. Everything is interdependent. Nothing is discrete and whole in itself. You know what? You need absolutely everything that exists. And everything that exists, whether it's the African violet or the tree outside, needs you.

Nothing, absolutely nothing exists independently. The ego suggests that if something is truly independent, not dependent on anything else, it is eternal. If you didn't have to eat, if you didn't have to drink, if your cells were embodying wholeness in themselves, you would be eternal. Your body would be eternal. No. Your eternality depends upon absolutely every other part of Creation. It's in the Wholeness of All That Is that your Eternality awaits you.

But that means you've got to give up this age-old quest for independence. It means that you have to allow for the fact that you fit in, not stand out. You've got to yield to the Wholeness. You've got to let yourself be part of the Wholeness. And initially, that's the way it will look to you. It will look to you as though this little thing that you are has to say, "Okay, I'm willing to be a part of Infinity, a part of Creation, not the author of it, not being in some special position riding on God's shoulder separate and apart not needing it all, but being able to enjoy it maybe through God's eyes."

You've got to find out that you fit in. This is very humbling to the ego. It's actually humiliating to the ego. It is incapable of being humble. When you have had enough misery as a result of the attempt to be independent, when you've had enough misery from that that you are willing to join, you are willing to yield into, you are willing to find where you fit in, that breaks the isolation. And that's what opens the door for your Mind to resume Its Function, which is to be the Presence of capital "M" Mind which is God, in which you are Experiencing All As The Infinitude Of Your Being because you are not claiming a being separate from the Movement of God which is the Meaning of the word "Be-ing."

And so, ultimately [cell phone ringing] you find that you are not a part of anything. You are the Whole Itself. [more ringing, audience amusement] Part of Mark's infinitude has just tried to connect with him. So again, once you yield to being part of the Whole and Joining occurs, you come back into your Right Mind in which you are no longer a part of the Whole, but You Are The Experience Of The Wholeness knowing that every other part of the Wholeness is essential, and that no part of it is superior, no part of it is special. No part of it is actually separate in any way.

Let's continue. Again.

RAJ READING: Everything the ego perceives is a separate whole...

RAJ: W-h-o-l-e.

RAJ READING: ...without the relationships that imply BEING. The ego is thus AGAINST communication, except in so far as it...

RAJ: Communication.

RAJ READING: ...is utilized to ESTABLISH separateness rather than to abolish it.

RAJ: That means that when you're not connected and you are experiencing ongoing uneasiness which you may have become numb to, you nevertheless continue to use communication solely for the purpose of reinforcing separateness. That's very important to understand. If you realize that at all times when you are not joined, all communication occurs for the purpose of establishing and maintaining separateness, you will find more justification for questioning the way you're perceiving things. You'll find more justification for saying, "Mmmm, maybe I ought to actively try to employ a different way of relating with everyone and everything." Because at the bottom line you don't want to unconsciously be engaging in something detrimental to your Sanity and something detrimental to everyone else's Sanity. You really don't want to be constantly engaged in reinforcing your uneasiness, your discomfort, your illness, your frustration, your jealousy, or well everything that accompanies the human condition.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The communication system of the ego is based on its own thought system, as is everything else it dictates. Its communication is controlled by its need to protect itself, and it will disrupt communication when it experiences threat.

RAJ: Which is, of course, what Paul was doing with Susan for two weeks because for two weeks she tried to establish communication.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: While this is always so, individual egos perceive different kinds of threat, which are quite specific in their own judgment. For example, although all forms of perceived demands may be classified, or judged, by the ego as coercive communication which must be disrupted, the response of breaking communication will nevertheless be to a SPECIFIC person or persons.

RAJ: So, here it is folks. As long as you're not joined, you are using and abusing each other and nothing else. The interesting thing is that you don't have to abuse each other harshly. All you have to do is just maintain a gentle level of abuse in order to keep yourself from waking up. Just a constant, slight undercurrent of thoughtlessness or judgmental words, just ever so slight is all it takes. So it isn't like you're all mentally raping each other, or physically punching each other, or doing grossly abusive things. All you have to do is just be a little out of sync with each other, just a little out of sync with each other in order to maintain an edge to things that keeps union from occurring, that keeps you from engaging with that Place of Excellence that is in You and from there joining with your Brother or Sister in the Place of Excellence in Them.

You know what? Trees, flowers, dogs and cats, mosquitoes, rocks, leaves, can contribute nothing to the development of mutually-agreed-upon definitions. All of your illusions occur as a result of manipulative communication with each other. Nothing, not the world, not the universe, not physics, nothing creates illusion for you except the way you use each other. You know, it doesn't say in the Course that I looked at a rock and remembered God, or that I looked at a tree and remembered God. I looked into my Brother's eyes and remembered God.

So there's only one problem you have. And that problem is having chosen to imaginatively create in your mind a space in which you could conceive of yourself as being independent and autonomous from the Mind of God, which is the only Mind you have, and then you bind yourself to that by the way you interact with each other. So now you could say we have two steps involved in coming Home. One is to abandon your attempts to be autonomous and independent so that you might join with the Father once again or with Me or with the Holy Spirit in Inner Communion so that you might be infilled with perspective not embraced by the definitions you've given to everything. And the second part of it is that you must stop using each other to confirm your autonomy.

And that's why in order to wake up you must have an object of your affection. And that object of your affection is not a cat, is not a flower, is not a tree, is not a chair, is not a star, but it's the person, the Brother or Sister next to you. And you must find a way within yourself to care enough about them to want to extend to them something excellent. And the only place you can get something excellent to extend to them is from some place other than this imaginary space you've made for yourself that you've identified as the totality of what you are. In other words, Me or the Holy Spirit or God.

I and the Holy Spirit will only be conveying to you the Father's Will. So however you approach it, whether it is through Me or the Holy Spirit or the Father, you're still only approaching the Father. You're still only inviting in a conscious embrace of your Source with the acknowledgement that you are not the source of yourself.

So it's very simple. You have to turn toward God but the only justification for turning toward God that will contribute to your awakening is that what the Father gives you in response to your opening up to Him is to be a gift to someone else—your Brother, your Sister, your Fellowman. Isn't it wonderful? The Wholeness of the manner of coming Home and the fact that in order for you to come Home, everyone else has to be embraced with you so that no one is left out.

"Oooh, well, that's more work than I thought it was going to be." No. The only thing that will make it work is your reluctance to actually be willing to care, to actually be willing to Love your Brother or your Sister. It's not the loving that's hard. It's breaking down your resistance, it's freeing up your willingness to extend Love, to be Loving.

Okay. Continuing.

RAJ READING: The specificity of the ego's thinking, then, results in a spurious kind of generalization which is really not abstract at all. It will respond in certain specific ways to ALL stimuli which it perceives as related. In contrast, the Soul reacts in the same way to everything it knows is true, and does not respond at all to anything else. Nor does it make any attempt to ESTABLISH what is true. It knows that what is true is everything that God created. It...

RAJ: The Soul.

RAJ READING: ...is in complete and direct communication with every aspect of creation because it is in complete and direct communication with its Creator.

THIS communication IS the Will of God.

RAJ: Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: Creation and communication are synonymous.

RAJ: Creation is a gift. It's an extension. Not just sort of poufed out into empty space. Not something extruded into a waiting vessel. Communication is the extension of something to something else, to someone. When the word "hello" is said, it is said to someone who can hear the word. It isn't printed on a page and put on a bulletin board out on a telephone post out in the middle of the desert where someone may see it if they happen to be going down that road where that telephone pole is. Communication is something extended to someone or something that it can register with; where dialogue, interchange can occur.

RAJ READING: Creation and communication are synonymous.

RAJ: Now, listen.

RAJ READING: God created every mind by communicating His Mind to it, thus establishing it forever as a channel for the reception of...

RAJ: Capital "H".

RAJ READING: ...His Mind and Will.

RAJ: We were talking last week about the bad rap that channeling gets, but let's face it. It's your Function to glorify God. It's your Function to represent God. It's your Function to make the Gift of your Source.

RAJ READING: Since only beings of a like order can truly communicate, His creations naturally communicate WITH Him and LIKE Him.

RAJ: Mind you now, we're talking about the Christ That You Are right at this moment in spite of the definition you've currently given yourself and which you're currently committed to. We're talking about the fully Christed Ones that each one of you are right here, but which you're not availing yourself of and you're not employing, you might say, in everything you do.

Again.

RAJ READING: Since only beings of a like order can truly communicate, His creations naturally communicate WITH Him and LIKE Him. This communication is perfectly abstract in that its quality is universal in application, and not subject to ANY judgment, ANY exception, or ANY alteration. God created you BY this and FOR this. The mind...

RAJ: Not the ego. The Mind.

RAJ READING: ...can distort its function, but it cannot endow itself with functions it was not given. That is why the mind cannot totally lose the ability to communicate, even though it may refuse to utilize it on behalf of being.

Existence as well as being rests on communication.

RAJ: Makes it sound like existence and Being are two separate things. And there is a distinction. Existence is the definition you've given to the Experience of Being. Being is the Experience of Mind, with a capital "M", seeing All That It Infinitely Is and recognizing Itself in It. Being is a total Experience. You might say the Infinite Experience Of Being is totally grasped, totally understood, totally felt, without a single thought occurring, and therefore without a single definition being attached to it. Existence is Being with definitions attached to it.

Again.

RAJ READING: Existence as well as being rests on communication. Existence, however, is SPECIFIC in how, what, and with whom communication is judged to be worth undertaking. Being is completely without these distinctions. It is a state in which the mind IS in communication with everything that is real, including the Soul. To whatever extent you permit this state to be curtailed, you are limiting your sense of your OWN reality, which becomes total only by your recognizing ALL reality in the glorious context of its REAL relationship to you.

RAJ: In other words, when you realize how you fit in to it.

RAJ READING: This IS your reality.

RAJ: You are in relationship with All That Exists, with All of Creation.

RAJ READING: Do not desecrate it or recoil from it. It is your real home, your real temple, and your real...

RAJ: Capital "S".

RAJ READING: ...Self.

God, Who encompasses ALL being, nevertheless created beings who have everything individually, but who want to share it...

RAJ: Who want to share it.

RAJ READING: ...to increase their joy. Nothing that is real can be increased EXCEPT by sharing.

RAJ: Gift.

RAJ READING: That is why God Himself created you.

RAJ: You see?

RAJ READING: Divine Abstraction takes joy in application, and that is what creation MEANS.

RAJ READING: Divine Abstraction takes joy in application, and that is what creation MEANS. "How," "what" and "to whom" are irrelevant because real creation gives everything, since it can create ONLY like itself. Remember that in being there is no difference between "having" and "being," as there is in existence. In the state of being, the mind gives everything always.

The Bible repeatedly states that you should praise God. This hardly means that you should tell Him how wonderful He is. He has no ego with which to accept such thanks, and no perception with which to judge such offerings. But unless you take your part in the creation, His joy is not complete because YOURS is incomplete. And THIS He does know. He knows it in His own Being and Its experience of His Son's experience. The constant GOING OUT of His Love is blocked when His channels are closed,...

RAJ: You hear that? The constant going out, the constant extension of His Love, is blocked when His Channels are closed.

RAJ READING: ...and He IS lonely when the minds He created do not communicate fully with Him.

RAJ: "Oh dear. How many guilty marks do you get for that? How bad should you feel?" Don't waste your time feeling bad, but just understand the way it works. Joy is supposed to be your experience. And Joy is supposed to be the Father's Experience. And so everybody should just get back to the business of doing what allows that Joy to be, rather than engaging in this idiotic preference to try to be independent and make independence real and as a result constantly feel an undercurrent that causes you to mistreat each other.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God HAS kept your kingdom for you, but He cannot share His joy with you until you know it with your whole mind. Even revelation is not enough, because it is communication FROM God. It is not enough until it is SHARED.

RAJ: And again, that doesn't mean shared with your cat or your flower garden. It means with a Brother or a Sister.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God does not need revelation returned to Him, which would clearly be impossible, but He DOES want revelation brought to others. This cannot be done with the actual revelation because its content cannot be expressed, and it is intensely personal to the mind which receives it. It can, however, still be returned BY that mind...

RAJ: How?

RAJ READING: ...through its attitudes to OTHER minds which the knowledge from the revelation brings.

RAJ: This is how you praise God. Not by turning around and shooting the revelation right back to Him, but by sharing it with your Brothers, confirming Infinite Oneness rather than singular isolation.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God is praised whenever any mind learns to be wholly helpful.

RAJ: Hmmmm, helpful. Well, that sounds like caring to me. That means being thoughtful. That means having someone on your mind besides yourself in a caring way. Not in the way Paul was treating Susan the last two weeks. Not in the way that any of you have treated each other when what you were doing was trying to secure your privacy.

RAJ READING: God is praised whenever any mind learns to be wholly helpful. This is impossible without being wholly harmless because the two...

RAJ: Helpfulness and harmlessness.

RAJ READING: ...the two beliefs coexist. The truly helpful are invulnerable because they are NOT protecting their egos, so that nothing CAN hurt them.

RAJ: Do you see that? This is a key sentence.

RAJ READING: The truly helpful are invulnerable because they are NOT protecting their egos, so that nothing CAN hurt them.

RAJ: Hurt, therefore, is inseparable from an ego in the act of self-protection. And that's the only source of hurt. That means there's only one thing you need to stop doing. We're not talking about fifty lessons you must learn that have 10,000 little adjustments you have to make in order to come back in alignment with the way things really are enough to promote a change. There's only one thing you need to stop doing.

Again.

RAJ READING: The truly helpful are invulnerable because they are NOT protecting their egos, so that nothing CAN hurt them. Their helpfulness...

RAJ: In other words, involvement with a Brother or Sister where kindness and thoughtfulness and caring is being expressed.

RAJ READING: ...IS their praise of God, and He will return their praise of Him because they are like Him, and they can rejoice together. God goes out to them and through them, and there is great joy throughout the Kingdom. Every mind that is changed adds to this joy with its own individual willingness to share in it.

RAJ: Those last three words need to be in bright red.

RAJ READING: Every mind that is changed adds to this joy with its own individual willingness to...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...share in it. The truly helpful are God's miracle workers, whom I direct until we are all united in the joy of the Kingdom.

RAJ: Another way of saying that is the Joy of our Right Mind where no little part of it has tried to box itself off from the rest.

RAJ READING: I will direct you to wherever you can be truly helpful,...

RAJ: But, and this isn't in the book, I can't do that until something in you wants to be truly helpful. And that means being helpful in accomplishing something beyond self-protection.

RAJ READING: I will direct you to wherever you can be truly helpful, and to whoever can follow my guidance through you.

RAJ: Hmmmm, my guidance. Well, it's not my personal guidance and I hope that's clear to all of you by now. It's not some really neat guidance that I came up with that I want to spread around the universe through you guys.

My Guidance is nothing more and nothing less than the Father's Will being extended to you in language that has meaning for you, and in ways that help your mind re-recognize itself and become willing to stand forth on its own, if I may put it that way, without employing the ego for any reason.

I hope as we continue on that it will become clearer and clearer to you how little is required to wake up. There's only one thing you need to do, or as we said, two things. One is to abandon your independence by turning to the Father and saying, "Help," or saying: "Thy Will be done," and doing that in the context of wanting to do His Will for your Brother or your Sister. And I have certainly been illuminating for some time now the fact that You Are The Christ right now, using your mind in a way that causes you not to recognize yourself, and you are doing this with all of the Fullness of the Christhood That You Are, if you want to put it this way, the Divine Power of your Being.

And so there's nothing weak about you at this moment. You are with the Power of the Universe enforcing darkness and blindness and ignorance upon yourself and claiming that this is your normal state of being. Therefore, all the Power in the Universe that is the very Nature of your Being stands ready for you to make a new decision. So you can't claim that it will take you a long time to wake up because you're nothing but a piss-ant mortal, a little puny ego that's going to have to refine itself over many lifetimes and as a result of studying many thought systems, or that what you're called upon to do is really, really hard, and therefore it's going to take a long time.

So, I'm uncovering to you how simple it is, how little it takes and that because you haven't even at this very moment stopped being the Ultimate Expression Of God. You include within yourself everything that is necessary to make the shift. You already include it in yourself and you are employing all of the power to create for yourself at this moment the experience you're having. So you don't have to recharge your batteries. You don't have to gas up with a higher octane fuel. All you have to do is stop saying, "I'm not the Christ. I'm not what you're saying I am. I know what I am and I know it's going to take a long time because I've got change from what I am into something I'm not. And that kind of adjustment is going to be hard. And you can't expect me to do it overnight."

So, like a drop of water wearing away on a rock, I will keep pointing out the simplicity of this so that you don't continue to overwhelm yourself with the so-called impossibility of waking up, or the so-called difficulty of waking up. And the closer you come to an inner feeling that it's going to be easy, [snap of the fingers] the sooner it's going to happen. And I'm hanging in here with you until you're willing to accept the possibility that it might be utterly simple. Not only that but it truly is your Birthright and you aren't what you thought you were.

We will call it a day. It's joy to express the Truth. It's even more joy that you're listening, because that means that there's more oneness. There's more communion. There's less defended isolation. And so more of the Brotherhood is experiencing its Wholeness. You must remember that whatever tinges of Wholeness you might be experiencing at this moment that's new for you constitutes a new level of Wholeness for all of the rest of the Brotherhood that is already awake because now more of their Infinitude is connected with them. So the gift you give is one that's received universally.

I love you and I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Okay. Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Okay. This section is entitled:

RAJ READING: True Rehabilitation

[Editor's Note: There is no equivalent section in the first or second edition of the Text, except for the last half of the last paragraph.]

RAJ: It's a good choice of words, "rehabilitation." Rehabilitation is the bringing back into play of capacities that exist which for whatever reason have apparently been lost through lack of use. This is important. The bringing back into use of capacities that exist which apparently have been lost through lack of use.

Well, there's one significant capacity that all of you seem to have lost through lack of use and that capacity is to be the Christ, to be the Divine One That You Are in your full capacity. You see, we're not in the process of trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. We're not taking you poor mortals and changing you, transforming you miraculously into something you never were. All we're doing is uncovering the Truth About You that you've forgotten, and that once having forgotten, you seem not to have an easy opportunity to remember because you're so preoccupied with survival as this ignorant one that you seem to be.

Rehabilitation: The bringing back into use of capacities that exist that you seem to have lost through lack of use. So absolutely everything that we've been considering has to do with rehabilitation, has to do with transformation, has to do with redemption. It has to do with each one of you experiencing actual change, transformational change.

It has nothing to do with finding a way to experience bliss while you're unconscious of Who You Are. It's not a way of explaining life so you can have a certain degree of ease and peace, while continuing to remain unconscious of Who You Are.

Another way we could say it is that it's all about healing. It's about never being satisfied with the status quo when the status quo is limitation, sin, disease, death. It's about challenging the status quo. It's about never being satisfied with a single speck of error, mistake, in any part of your experience, any part of your mind.

So it's far from passive and yet the action of it, the activity has nothing to do with being proactive in the sense that you have always been proactive, which has amounted to trying to gain control over your experience aggressively so that you might exercise authority that keeps you safe while you are still unconscious of Who You Divinely Are.

So what does the proactivity amount to? It amounts to your arriving at a point where you say, "I will no longer tolerate the experience I'm having of everything. I will no longer tolerate the suffering I've been experiencing, the fear I've been experiencing, the vulnerability I've been experiencing, the threat I've been experiencing. And the way I am going to be intolerant of it is to refuse to rely upon my best judgments, my best theories, my past learning, and I'm going to turn to a new Source for new input that will allow me to become free of the bondage of the concepts I have been holding myself to." In other words, it amounts to turning toward the Altar, that Place of Excellence in You that has nothing to do with your best judgments or your reasoning or your capacity to figure things out, where in your willingness to hear outside of the box you've been living in, you open the door for the influx of Revelation from the Father.

So that's how you object to the status quo. You look to a new Source actively. You stop looking toward yourself actively.

And so when you see someone who is apparently dying, or when you look at someone who is for whatever reason engaging in life in ways that impose on others and break the law, you don't just say, "Well, they're working out their salvation. I'll keep my nose clean. I'll keep my nose out of it." Or if you see someone who is suffering from obvious ignorance about a particular subject which if they had the information, they would be able to function better and perform better, if I may put it that way, with that knowledge, you don't just say, "Well, that's their point of learning. I'm not going to interfere."

You recognize that the apparent process of death is illegitimate, an illegitimate imposition upon the Christ That They Are. You acknowledge that the one who is insisting upon going down a path that constantly breaks the law and disrespects property and value of others, you look at that and you recognize that that does not embody the best in them, the Christ That They Are, and you say, if you must say anything, you say, "They have the right to behave in whatever way they choose to behave, but they do not have the right to behave that way without objection." You see?

Someone does not have the right to die without objection. You see? No one has the right to suffer from ignorance without objection. And mind you, objection doesn't have to be obtuse. A teacher in an elementary school, or a junior high, high school, college, objects to ignorance by providing education, by providing that which replaces the ignorance. You see? But objection must be made because it's all about rehabilitation. It's all about redemption.

Smile Michael.

You see what I'm saying? It's not about some gentle, unintrusive way of living life that makes it comfortable, while at the bottom line all of you are unconscious of your Birthright. Sometimes sloppy metaphysical thinking seems to justify the right or the rights that individuals have to be stupid if they want to, to be sick if they want to, to create a drama of death if they want to, to engage in gang fights and squabbles, and even a style of relating in marriages that is constantly argumentative and emotionally dynamic without resolution.

No one has a right to engage in an illusion, no one has a right to engage in being ignorant and acting out that ignorance without objection being provided. It is wrong to be ignorant. It is right to be enlightened. It is wrong to be ignorant because your Birthright is to be Whole. And so what is wrong needs to be objected to. And we have talked about this in the past.

So:

RAJ READING: True Rehabilitation

Every mind which is split needs rehabilitation.

RAJ: Can it be any clearer than that? It doesn't say, "Every mind which is split deserves to have the right to suffer from that split and nothing needs to be done about it." No. It says:

RAJ READING: Every mind which is split needs rehabilitation. The medical orientation to rehabilitation emphasizes the body, while the vocational orientation stresses the ego. The "team" approach generally leads more to confusion than to anything else because it is too often misused as a way of exerting the ego's domination over other egos, rather than as a real experiment in the cooperation of minds. Rehabilitation as a movement is an improvement over the overt neglect of those in need of help, but it is often little more than a painful attempt on the part of the halt to lead the blind.

RAJ: Well, where does that leave everyone? Rehabilitation without Divine Inspiration doesn't really help. So the real need, the real answer is what we've been discussing.

It is, number one, to break the act of isolation that you have been engaged in by turning toward your Source, by turning toward God, and inviting education, inviting a sudden shift of perception, inviting a new way of seeing things that more closely approximates the Father's Perspective which it is your Birthright to be experiencing.

And secondly, this desire for revelation, this desire for clarity must be asked for so that you may give it away to your Brother and Sister. You must ask for a Gift from God because you need to make a gift of that Gift from God to your Brother. In other words, your request for clarity must be a result of your caring for and about each other.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego is likely to fear broken bodies because it cannot tolerate them. The ego cannot tolerate ego weakness either without ambivalence because it is afraid of its own weakness as well as the weakness of its chosen home.

RAJ: That being the body which, as we discussed last week, the ego says is not good enough for it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When it is threatened, the ego blocks your natural impulse to help, placing you under the strain of divided will.

RAJ: Isn't it true that when your ego is threatened, when your sense of your safety is threatened, you block your natural impulse to help? You're too busy protecting yourself to take care of someone else. And yet, that's your function. And so, when you withhold caring about another because you're taking care of your perceived threat, you are a house divided.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You may then be tempted to withdraw to allow your ego to recover and to gain enough strength to be helpful again on a basis limited enough NOT to threaten your ego, but too limited to give YOU joy.

RAJ: "Yes, just let me get out of the conflict long enough to catch my breath. It's difficult to be in the great demand that conflict presents to me right along with the experience of insecurity I have when I'm not in control." That's what your ego says. And yet, interestingly enough, it's in the willingness to be in that spot where you as an ego feel out of control, because that's where You As The Christ have the capacity to remember God in your Brother and be the Presence of Clarity that can resolve the conflict lifting both you and your Brother out of the ego level of perception that saw conflict as a solution.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Those with broken bodies are often looked down on by the ego because of its belief that nothing but a perfect body is worthy as its OWN temple.

RAJ: Well, all of you are certainly aware of how consistently you're confronted in the media with quote "perfect bodies" unquote selling cars or getting to be in the limelight. Have you ever wondered how many football players are chosen because they're good-looking? How many of the people in sports are chosen to be on the team because of the potential avenue for revenues because they're good enough looking to appear in the media? Oh yes, perfect bodies are most desirable. And of course everyone who looks like you is never there and so what does that say about you? You see?

Now let us say you're in the health-care industry. Perhaps an ambulance driver or a nurse or a doctor who works in an emergency room where you are confronted with apparently alarmingly damaged bodies. And these of course are not lovely. They're not perfect. And because life and death seems to hang in the balance, it would seem to call upon much more than you're capable of coping with except in the most cursory way, let's say.

Well, you've got to remember that what we're discussing here, the truths that we're discussing here have to do with rehabilitation and have to do with not settling for a single speck of error. It has to do with objecting to all appearances that seem to claim that an individual is not the Christ, is not the direct Expression of God, and therefore is capable of injury, suffering and death. You have to object to that, or there will be no rehabilitation. Do you see that when you say, "That one has a right to die," or, "That one has little chance of living under the trauma that's been experienced," you are as damaged as they are? And you are incapable of being a transformational Presence. When you say that one is unworthy of intervention, you are saying, "I am unworthy and unable to be the one to introduce the intervention that will transform and rehabilitate."

True rehabilitation is you fulfilling your Function by not joining with the one who is expressing a right to experience limitations and suffering. It's you objecting and introducing the elements that will allow that one to see beyond his or her commitments to the limitations he or she is embracing. Then you are not as broken as they are and they have the opportunity to be as whole as you are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: A mind that recoils from a hurt body is in great need of rehabilitation itself. ALL symptoms...

RAJ: ALL symptoms.

RAJ READING: ...of hurt need true helpfulness...

RAJ: They not only need it, they deserve it. And true helpfulness is not saying, "I'm going to leave them alone so that they can learn for themselves," unless when you go to the Altar and you inquire what is appropriate here, you are told, "Be still." But it's never your prerogative based upon your gut level reaction or your best judgments to say, "Hmmm. He or she needs to suffer. I can see that he or she needs to suffer a little bit more in order to really learn her lesson."

Continuing or repeating.

RAJ READING: ALL symptoms of hurt need true helpfulness, and whenever they are met with this, the mind that so meets them heals ITSELF.

RAJ: There better be in any interaction at least one mind that is being healed as a result of the interaction. And the mind that's healed as a result of the interaction is the mind that has said, "I will not rely upon my best judgments, my experience or my confidences." I am going to turn to the Father and say, "What is appropriate here? What is Your Perspective? Show me what to do. Show me what to say. I yield to something beyond my best judgments."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Rehabilitation is an attitude of praising God as He Himself knows praise. He offers praise to you, and you must offer it to others.

RAJ: It's as simple as that. That's the Movement of Creation. He offers praise to you and you must offer it to others. That is the Movement of Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The chief handicaps of the clinicians...

RAJ: Or any psychological helper or spiritual helper or anyone who's trying to be helpful without being joined.

RAJ READING: The chief handicaps of the clinicians lie in their attitudes to those whom their egos perceive as weakened and damaged. BY these evaluations, they have weakened and damaged their own helpfulness, and have thus set their own rehabilitation back. Rehabilitation is NOT concerned either with the ego's fight for control, or its need to avoid and withdraw.

RAJ: And we're talking here about true rehabilitation.

RAJ READING: *You can do much on behalf of your own rehabilitation AND that of others if, in a situation calling for healing, you think of it this way: I am here ONLY to be truly helpful.

RAJ: Okay. We're talking about an attitude of caring. We're talking about having an object of your affection, 'cause you can't just be here generically or generally only to be helpful. If you're going to be helpful, you're going to have to be specifically helpful. It's going to have to have something to do with someone else who has a need, a need that you recognize. And there has to be something in you that cares enough about that Brother or Sister to want to extend help. So we have an object of our affection. We have a reason to ask for help from the Father. That's one of the two conditions.

RAJ READING: I am here ONLY to be truly helpful.

RAJ: Well, how can you be truly helpful? That's in the next sentence.

RAJ READING: I am here to represent Christ, Who sent me.

RAJ: In other words, you're here to represent someone other than your present ego sense of who you are. You're here to be present with another from a place outside of the box of your already existing mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And because you aren't having to rely upon your already existing definitions, as the next sentence says:

RAJ READING: I do NOT have to worry about what to say or what to do because He Who sent me will direct me.

RAJ: Ah, so now you have an object of your affection, a reason for turning toward the Father, and then in turning toward the Father, you're saying, "I'm not going to rely upon anything from my past. I am going to rely upon the Direction, the Guidance of something else. I'm abandoning any private personal authority I thought I had, and I'm letting something bigger than me express authority."

Again.

RAJ READING: I do NOT have to worry about what to say or what to do because He Who sent me will direct me.

RAJ: Ah, now here's the humiliating thing to the ego.

RAJ READING: I am content to be wherever He wishes, knowing He goes there with me.

RAJ: That's called yielding to the Father, yielding up any authority you thought you had.

And, finishing.

RAJ READING: I will be healed as I let Him teach me to heal.

RAJ: I will be healed as I extend to my Brother the healing. And that, folks, is the way it works.

Again.

RAJ READING: You can do much on behalf of your own rehabilitation AND that of others if, in a situation calling for healing, you think of it this way: [equivalent (T-#24/28)]

I am here ONLY to be truly helpful.

I am here to represent Christ, Who sent me.

I do NOT have to worry about what to say or what to do because

He Who sent me will direct me.

I am content to be wherever He wishes, knowing He goes there with me.

I will be healed as I let Him teach me to heal.

RAJ: So this chapter that we've just finished is called, "The Root of All Evil." And of course we found out that the root of all evil is nothing more than a Christ believing that he could go into his imagination and out of his imagination give new definitions to Creation Itself and new definitions to himself, and disassociate himself with not only his Source but the Source of All Creation which he's now redefined, and thus begin to believe that he's not the Christ, that he is, or she is, whatever he defines himself as. And then cope with the result, the distorted result, the untrue, unreal result as though coping with it would ultimately secure a position of authority independent from God for that one. Something which is utterly impossible. Why? Because in order to do any of this, this Christ has had to use his Divine Capacity As The Christ to have this imagination.

So, the undoing of this that has come to be called the human condition, the undoing of this human condition is a matter of rehabilitation, the uncovering and the illumination of capacities that already exist which seem to have been lost through lack of use.

So I guess you could look at life as a process of healing, because either you're going to continue to engage in life strenuously because you're trying to live in it while ignoring it, pretending that it's not there in the way that it's really there, or you're going to bring a stop to that. And you're going to constantly challenge the status quo. You're constantly going to disagree with what you see on the TV, or what your brothers or sisters or family present to you as sin, disease and death. And you're going to object to it by once again asking, "God, what is the Truth here?" So that you may pass the Truth along. So that you don't remain silent where help is needed. And you don't just willy-nilly let cancer progress. Don't ever, don't ever say that so-and-so, whoever he or she might be, has the right to create this drama for himself or herself. That is no more reasonable than saying that so-and-so has the right to explore all of the possibilities of breaking the law, or all of the possibilities of bringing harm and injury and suffering to his Brothers and Sisters.

You better, as I've said before, you had better be black or white. It's either true or it's not. And if it's not, you object to it! And how do you object to it? Not by going out and dealing with it, strong-arming it. You deal with it by going within to the place where you feel inadequate to deal with it, and you ask God, "How am I to see this place in me that is as hampered as the person I'm seeing is in me? Help uncover in me the capacity not to be overwhelmed and moved into inaction, so that I might be clear about what is Real and what is True and be able to express it in terms that constitute objection through education. Education that will work."

Hey, you're all having a dream of one degree or another. Am I shutting up? Am I sitting back and saying, "Hey, you all have a right to whatever little nightmare you want to have. I see you lying there on a grassy knoll in the Kingdom of Heaven, and I know you're safe." No. Open your mouth and be willing to be an agent for change.

But also notice the way I deal with you. It's with Love. It's with education that is presented in a way that the Place of Excellence in You can hear so that you might feel the Place of Excellence in You more than you have, and thereby be able to act out from that Place with a little more confidence.

The correction of an illusion must occur in the context of Love because you can bet your bottom dollar that when you turn toward the Father and ask to know, "What is the Truth here?", that what the Father is going to be expressing to you to extend to your Brother and thereby bless yourself and your Brother with, is going to be in the context of Love in all of the Fullness of the Meaning of that word. And so even if you're having to say "No" when your Brother wants to hear "Yes," it will be done in a way that clearly expresses an absence of personal judgment, and which because it is minus any personal judgment conveys, if I may put it this way, the Fullness of the Power of God which will always be far greater than whatever degree of force you might feel you're introducing into the correction of the problem by virtue of bringing judgment into its expression.

The next chapter is "Healing and Wholeness," and you can see how natural it is to flow into this subject at this point. We have spent a few weeks uncovering the root of all evil, making it really relevant to each of you in your daily life so that it's not just a theory and a nice head trip. We've brought it home so that you're more grounded and more hopeful than you were when we began the chapter.

And so we will end here for today and begin on the new chapter next week. The new chapter will be significantly more meaningful to you than it has been in the past if you have read it in the past, because of the groundwork that we've laid.

If you remember nothing else from today, I want you to remember that although we can stretch it and say that everyone has a right to behave in whatever way they want, they don't have the right to do it without objection. If you remember that, you will stay grounded in your metaphysics and in your spirituality, and your Divinity will be available to you in much more powerful ways. And then remember that all of this is about rehabilitation, all of this is about redemption, all of this is about the uncovering of capacities that you have that you thought you lost through lack of use.

We're not making a silk purse out of a sow's ear. We're uncovering a Christ where the Christ has been all along, no matter what the hell you think you are at the moment. And that is part of what makes all of this easy. You could think it would be really difficult if in fact you were the lowliest, lowliest nothing that somehow could become something entirely different—the most, the biggest, the fullest Expression of God. Now that would be work. But you know what? To put it in perspective, all we're talking about is rehabilitation. All we're talking about is rehabilitation.

Chew on that for a week. And enjoy the fullness of the flavor of the bite you have in your mouth.

I love you all.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Okay. Good afternoon to everyone here and to everyone who is joining us on the internet as well. Before we begin, I need to mention that, as many of you know and some of you don't, the Gathering scheduled for next Saturday, September 20th, has been cancelled. As a result of the announcement, many have gone through interesting imaginations, and some wild conclusions have been arrived at. And others have felt that perhaps it was their fault because of something they did that the Gathering was cancelled. But it's simpler than that really.

We were speaking last weekend, last Sunday, about rehabilitation. About the fact that although everyone may think they have the right to behave in any way they wish, they do not have the right to do it without objection. And in your thinking processes you should not ever assume that anything goes, that that is the new metaphysical and spiritual paradigm, that anything goes and it must be allowed.

In talking about this as I did, it brought home a point to Paul and Susan regarding something in their lives that was not getting attended to, that objection was not being made to, and something that literally calls for rehabilitation. After the meeting was over, they spoke with me at some length and Paul with me until nearly five in the morning. And in the course of our conversation I made it clear that indeed this area in their lives needed to be addressed, and that addressing it was incompatible with the preparation necessary for the Gathering on the 20th, and that it had higher priority. And so at my direction Paul announced that the Gathering was cancelled.

The specifics are irrelevant, but I ask that instead of indulging in vain imaginings, and instead of speculating via the grapevine, that each one give Paul and Susan the benefit of the doubt and assume the best. They are about their Father's business, if I may put it that way. And they are being obedient to the call that is on their plate. It's that simple.

We will have the Gathering on Sunday, the ACIM Study Group as we are right now and the format will be as it has been every Sunday.

Okay.

RAJ READING: Chapter 5 HEALING AND WHOLENESS

RAJ: Two words that necessarily go together because healing is always the uncovering of wholeness. Healing is always the revealing of you to you as What The Father Is Being right there in all the Fullness of His Self-Expression. Healing is not the changing of one thing into another. It's the uncovering of the only thing that could ever have been there from the beginning, no matter how covered over it has become by your commitment to a belief that you are less than whole.

RAJ READING: To heal is to make happy. I have told you before to think how many opportunities you have to gladden yourselves, and how many you have refused. This is exactly the same as telling you that you have refused to heal yourselves. The light that belongs to you is the light of joy. Radiance is not associated with sorrow. Depression is often contagious, but although it may affect those who come in contact with it, they do not yield to the influence whole-heartedly.

RAJ: You all resist depression.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: But joy calls forth an integrated willingness to share in it, and thus promotes the mind's natural impulse TO RESPOND AS ONE.

RAJ: In other words, singularly, not divided up between a desire to be happy and a desire to be resentful, a desire to feel your Joy and a sense of necessity to attend to something unpleasant which you therefore have reluctance to attend to.

Again.

RAJ READING: ...joy calls forth an integrated willingness to share in it, and thus promotes the mind's natural impulse TO RESPOND AS ONE.

Those who attempt to heal without being wholly joyous themselves call forth different kinds of responses at the same time,...

RAJ: What that means is that you send out different messengers simultaneously. You send out messengers of expectancy and of hope and of doubt and of fear. And those messengers go out, find confirmation, and return to you. And they return to you with conflicted messages which cause you to continue to be conflicted. Your conflict is reinforced.

Again.

RAJ READING: Those who attempt to heal without being wholly joyous themselves call forth different kinds of responses at the same time, and thus deprive others of the joy of responding whole-heartedly. To be whole-hearted, you MUST be happy. If fear and love cannot coexist, and if it is impossible to be wholly fearful and remain alive,...

RAJ: Which of course isn't an option you have available to you.

RAJ READING: ...then the only possible whole state IS that of love.

RAJ: So then, what's the first essential element in the healing of your mind that will constitute the healing of your world, of your neighbor, of your friend, your brother, et cetera? It is your willingness to abandon fear right where fear seems to be called for, whether it's behavior that arouses fear in you, whether it's a physical condition that arouses fear in you. You must be willing to abandon the fear and move into that Place in You where Love is felt, where your Love is available. That must be more important to you than reacting to fear.

That is part of the healing process. If you are going to be a healer, you would have to make commitment to that first step constantly. You would know that's the way it works and therefore this is my task. This is the way I do it. I consciously choose to abandon my inclination to react with fear, and instead I insist upon connecting with my ever-present capacity to feel and be the Presence of Love so that from that Love I may extend a singularity of intent and send out only one kind of messenger, so that it might return to me with confirmation of Its Energy, of Its Intent, and of Its Blessing.

Continuing.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read: There is no difference between love and joy. Therefore, the only possible whole state is the wholly joyous.]

RAJ READING: To heal or to make joyous is therefore the same as to integrate and to MAKE ONE. That is why it makes no difference to what part or by what part of the Sonship the healing is done. EVERY part benefits, and benefits equally.

RAJ: I know that most of the time all of you feel alone, but listen to this.

RAJ READING: YOU are being blessed by every beneficent thought of any of your brothers anywhere.

RAJ: If you will remember that, it will cancel out your feeling of isolation, and you will find yourself receptive to the Experience of the Love embodied in those beneficent thoughts, and you will realize just how much value there is in your extending to your Brothers and Sisters only beneficent thoughts.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read: You should want to bless them in return, out of gratitude.]

RAJ READING: You do not have to know them individually,...

RAJ: The ones from whom those beneficent thoughts come.

RAJ READING: You do not have to know them individually, or they you. The light is so strong that it radiates throughout the Sonship, and returns thanks to the Father for radiating His joy upon it. Only God's holy children are worthy to be channels of His beautiful joy,...

RAJ: And let me be very clear right now. He doesn't have any unholy children so it isn't a classification that maybe you're in and maybe you're not. The reason it says this is that:

RAJ READING: *Only God's holy children are worthy to be channels of His beautiful joy, because only they are beautiful enough to hold it by sharing it. It is impossible for a Child of God to love his neighbor EXCEPT as himself. That is why the healer's prayer is: Let me know this brother as I know myself.

RAJ: Whether you say the prayer or not, it's a Law. It's the way it works. And so you can reverse it and say, "As I know myself, I know my brother." That's just the way it is. So how do you know yourself at the moment? A bastard, a prick, a bitch? A difficult person, a cranky person, someone in her period? Whatever way you know yourself, you have no capacity to see anyone else differently. And the way you are knowing yourself is what constitutes the messengers you send out into your world to look for confirmation.

Now if the messengers are coming from the ego, they are as dishonest as the ego. And so they will always lie when they return and confirm to you what they were sent out to find. They haven't the capacity to return true messages to you. And that's important to understand.

Again, you must understand that when you send liars out, they will come back with lies and confirm to you your belief about yourself, and therefore your belief will end up coloring everyone in your experience with lies. So you can't escape what you have set into motion.

Take a look at that honestly, because in looking at it honestly, it will allow you to make a new choice as to what messengers you're willing to send out. And if the messengers, coming from your ego structures, from your mutually-agreed-upon definitions and your misperceptions of Truth, cannot but report to you that which confirms your sad state of being, then you, understanding that, will choose to go to a different source to learn what messages to send out, what messengers to send out.

You will learn that if you want to escape suffering, and if you wish to escape the confirmation of the need for suffering, you must find that Place of Excellence in You so that you might be informed by It about yourself, and in that informing, have new messengers to send out which will then confirm to you your Holiness when they return, by confirming to you your Brother's and your Sister's Holiness to you.

That's called making one. That's called becoming undivided. That's called becoming unfragmented. That's called becoming singular in intent. And what is singular in intent is singular in result. It's a Law. It's absolutely dependable. And equally dependable is that fragmented messengers sent out will come back with fragmented confirmation of your sad state of existence, even though it will be a lie.

Next heading.

RAJ READING: Healing as Joining

Healing is an act of thought by which two minds perceive their oneness and become glad.

RAJ: And become glad!

RAJ READING: This gladness calls to every part of the Sonship to rejoice with them,...

RAJ: Because there are no private thoughts.

RAJ READING: ...and lets God Himself go out into them and through them.

RAJ: The messengers you send out from the Place of Excellence in You are Messengers of God. They go out with God's Message of His Joy and His Love. And they confirm His Presence in every one and every thing they meet. And they return to you, not with threats of war, but with an olive branch in its beak.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Only the healed mind can experience revelation with lasting effect because revelation is an experience of pure joy.

Okay. "Only the healed mind," that means only the mind which by your conscious choice has become singular in intent, even if it's only for the space of ten minutes, or five minutes, or two.

RAJ READING: Only the healed mind can experience revelation with lasting effect because revelation is an experience of pure joy. If you do not choose to be wholly joyous, your mind cannot HAVE what it does not choose to BE.

RAJ: Again, it's just the way it works.

RAJ READING: Remember that the Soul knows no difference between "being" and "having." The higher mind thinks according to the laws which the Soul obeys, and therefore honors only the laws of God. To Him, getting is meaningless and giving is all. Having everything, the Soul HOLDS everything BY giving it, and thus creates as the Father created.

If you think about it, you will see that, while this kind of thinking is totally alien to having THINGS, even to the lower mind it is quite comprehensible in connection with IDEAS.

RAJ: Which is what we've just been talking about.

RAJ READING: If you share a physical possession, you DO divide its ownership. If you share an idea, however, you do NOT lessen it. ALL of it is still yours, although all of it has been given away.

RAJ: By the sending out of the Messengers of Love.

RAJ READING: Further, if the person to whom you give it accepts it as HIS, he reinforces it in YOUR mind,...

RAJ: The messengers come back confirming the Truth.

RAJ READING: ...and thus INCREASES it. If you can accept the concept that the world IS one of ideas, the whole belief in the false association which the ego makes between giving and LOSING is gone.

RAJ: Let's not turn that page too fast. Let's not skip over something important here.

If you can accept the concept. It's really the Truth but it's easier for you to think of it as a concept at the moment. If you can accept the concept that the world is one of ideas. Is one of ideas. It's not a world of matter. It's a world constituted of God's Ideas, Pure Spirit.

Ideas which embody the Intent of their Source, that being God, and the Intent of their Source, being God, is to embody and express God perfectly. His Nature. His Character. His Intent. His Singularity, and therefore the impossibility of His Expression being conflicted. Therefore demonstrating the fact that every Idea Of God is a Joyful Idea, a Joyful Idea the Substance of which is the Spirit of God.

And once again, we're talking about the petal on the rose, [tapping] the glass on the table top, your fingernail. It's an Idea. And it's not an idea an ego made-up. Your ego may have made-up a secondary definition about a Primal, Original, Eternal Idea Of God. But That About Which it created a definition is Real and It is Spirit. And It embodies God and His Singularity, and therefore it is the Embodiment of Joy in the act of giving Its Joy away to be experienced by all universally. Now that's the fact.

And that's the fact about an appendix that's about ready to burst. And that's the fact about a part of the body that seems to be cancerous. And that's the fact about a digestive tract that doesn't seem to be functioning properly.

But you're not going to be able to see it and experience it until you're willing to become a healer who knows, first of all, that it's necessary for him or her to abandon the inclination to react to the appearance, or to the symptoms, or to the definitions, that seem to be embodied and to choose for your Peace so that your mind might become single. And so that in that Peace you might access the Place of Excellence in You in which God's Perspective is available to you so that you might send out new messengers that are unconflicted which will return to you confirming Purity, Integrity, Healing.

Now you may turn the page.

RAJ READING: Let us start our process of reawakening with just a few simple concepts:

Thoughts INCREASE by being given away.

The more who believe in them, the STRONGER they become.

EVERYTHING is an idea.

How, then, is it possible that giving and losing CAN be meaningfully associated?

RAJ: Mind you, this statement is absolute, whether we're talking about Thoughts conveyed to you by God or thoughts created by your separated, defensive little ego. They increase by being given away. The more you believe, the more who believe in them, the stronger they become.

So the first step is to become single-minded so that the thoughts that increase by being given away are Thoughts expressing and embodying the Singularity and the Integrity and the Loving Purpose that is the Movement of God's Mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is the invitation to the Holy Spirit. I told you that I could reach up and bring the Holy Spirit down to you, but I can bring Him to you ONLY at your own invitation.

RAJ: Now listen to this, and don't forget it.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your own right mind.

RAJ: I've said before that the Holy Spirit is your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your own right mind.

RAJ: Now let's be very clear on something here, because your ego is likely to take hold of this and say, "Ah! It's me! It's me when I'm being right. You don't have to reach beyond yourself because it's your own right mind."

Well, let's be very clear. As long as you are identifying as an ego, as long as you are committed to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you and other egos have come to, you are operating according to an entirely different set of rules than the Holy Spirit, which is your Right Mind, is working by. There is no compatibility between the two.

And so you will not be able to say, "Oh, I'm just going to have a clearer and clearer experience of myself. We're gonna start with who I think I am right now and this self that I think I am is going to become clearer and clearer and clearer. So, I will have more faith in the excellence of this self I think I am because, well, after all Raj has said, 'There's a Place of Excellence in You.'" No. I didn't say there was a Place of Excellence in your ego. I didn't say there was a Place of Excellence in this one you think you are. I said there was a Place of Excellence in You that is not the one you think you are.

And so you are going to have to still reach beyond your present sense of things and your present sense of yourself as though you are reaching out to something entirely different from you. If you do not reach out to something beyond your present sense of yourself, there will be no yielding. There will be no relinquishment of any sense of personal authority. There will be no place where you will say, "Thy Will be done," that means something other than your personal will being done.

Now the simple fact is that when you reach out to the Holy Spirit, your Real Mind, the Holy Spirit will respond, but it will respond according to God's Laws. It will respond, you might say, according to the Infrastructure Of What God Is, where[as] your ego is always responding to the infrastructure of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

This is very important. As you reach out to the Holy Spirit, which is the way you become One, which is the way you make one out of that which seemed to be split, as you do this you become informed about being from a new level, you might say, with new rules. The first of which is you are not in charge, but something is. And you won't find out what that something is until you relinquish the authority you think you have and embody enough trust in what you don't yet know consciously that it might begin to reveal itself to you.

And as this revealing of the new order of things begins to dawn in your mind and you begin to become familiar with It, instead of the stranger to It that you are, then you find yourself having a continuing and growing capacity to yield into It with even more commitment. And as this happens, you will begin to recognize your Self in your Right Mind in the Experiences of Singularity that you're having. And as this is yielded into further and further, you bring into play less and less commitment to the definition you have given yourself. And with joy and confidence, you will express less and less faith in how the ego had determined everything worked. And so this sense of yourself that you had been maintaining will begin to shrivel for lack of investment of confidence and commitment. It will begin to fade and give up the ghost. You see? This is the way it works.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your own right mind.

RAJ: And I'm going to add: although it is much more and completely different in nature and character and function than what you're calling your mind at the moment.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your own right mind. He was also mine. The Bible says, "May the mind be in you that was also in Christ Jesus," and uses this as a BLESSING. It is the blessing of miracle-mindedness.

RAJ: Healing.

RAJ READING: It asks that you may think as I thought, joining with me in Christ-thinking.

RAJ: Now, as we continue through the book, and as you read the book on your own, no matter where you are when you read the words “Holy Spirit,” remember this:

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your own right mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is the only part of the Holy Trinity which is symbolic. He is referred to in the Bible as the Healer, the Comforter, and the Guide. He is also described as something “separate,” apart from the Father and from the Son.

RAJ: Which I’ve already explained.

RAJ READING: I myself said, “If I go I will send you another comforter, and He will abide with you.”

RAJ: Now the fact is that this Comforter came into existence the moment you decided to imagine that you could have an independent thought, because you couldn’t get rid of your Right Mind, even if you were using it stupidly. And so, It simply became unavailable to you because you chose to ignore It, but stayed present as your Divinity held in trust while you chose to ignore It.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is a difficult concept to grasp precisely because it IS symbolic, and therefore open to many different interpretations.

RAJ: Now, that confusion should be over because I’ve made it very clear.

RAJ READING: As a man and as one of God’s creations, my right thinking, which came from the Universal Inspiration which IS the Holy Spirit, taught me first and foremost that this Inspiration is for all. I could not have It myself WITHOUT knowing this.

RAJ: You see? Everything you learn about your Real Mind, about your Real Self, is something you learn about every other individual who exists. And if you don’t know that, you don’t yet Know the Truth About Yourself. Waking up does not happen exclusively. It is impossible for it to be an experience of specialness.

Continuing. Repeating.

RAJ READING: I could not have It myself WITHOUT knowing this.

The word “know”...

RAJ: K-n-o-w.

RAJ READING: ...is proper in this context, because the Holy Inspiration is so close to knowledge that It calls it forth; or better, allows it to come.

RAJ: Or best, allows it to come. In fact, allowing it to come is really the only way it comes. When you have ceased to express private, assertive authority of your own, you allow it to come because you're not blocking it with an imaginative sense of your having a will of your own.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have spoken before of the higher, or the “true” perception, which is so close to truth that God Himself can flow across the little gap. Knowledge is always ready to flow everywhere, but it cannot oppose. Therefore, you can obstruct it, although you can never lose it. The Holy Spirit is the Christ Mind Which senses the knowledge that lies beyond perception.

RAJ: In other words, beyond your mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

RAJ READING: It came into being with the separation as a protection, inspiring the beginning of the Atonement at the same time.

RAJ: In other words, the minute you went off on an imaginative path that was impossible to go on, there was at that very moment the means of retracing the path established. Why? Because, as we've said in the last few weeks, you had to use your Christ Mind, you had to use your basic [laugh] Divine Capacity to imagine an illusion, and then attempt to imagine that you could make the illusion real. And since you are using your God-given Capacity, your Christ Mind, if I may put it that way, to behave as though you're not the Christ and believe your behavior, the fact that you're doing it with your Christhood constitutes the ever-present Capacity to return to your Right Mind, to a realization that indeed You Are The Christ and never stopped. You see?

You couldn't get outside of your Divinity to have an ego have an experience of quote “the human condition” unquote. And so the means of coming back into your Right Mind has been present with you every step of the way as you attempted to get further and further away from It. Your movement away created the path back, because you never could stop Being What You Divinely Are. It's that simple.

So, the Holy Spirit...

RAJ READING: ...came into being with the separation as a protection, inspiring the beginning of the Atonement at the same time. Before that, there was no need for healing, and no-one was comfortless.

RAJ: Is the simplicity of this becoming clearer and clearer? It's referred to as a journey without distance. Is the distancelessness of it becoming clearer to you? And the fact that you have never become enervated? The Divine Energy Of You As The Christ has never been drained from you, and therefore you're not in a weakened state at this moment. You're just really excellent actors behaving as though the Energy Of Spirit, your Divine Energy, has vacated the premises of you. And you're tired, and you're exhausted, and you don't have in you what it takes to re-embrace your Divinity, and therefore, it's gonna be a struggle. A struggle that is going to deserve for you all the gold stars in the heavens when you finally make it back to God. You are not enervated. And the Energy Of Spirit, the Divine Energy Of Your Being is in full use right now, but you're using it to cover up the Truth About You to yourself. All the Energy it takes, all the Divine Capacity it takes to reawaken, to come back into your Right Mind, is actively in use right now. It just needs to be put to a different use. And what's the different use? It's embodied in the words, "Not my will, but Thine, be done."

Continuing. The next section.

RAJ READING: The Mind of the Atonement [There in no heading here in the first and second editions of the Text.]

God honored even the miscreations of His Children because they had made them, but He also blessed them with a way of thinking that could raise their perceptions until they became so lofty that they could reach almost back to Him. The Holy Spirit is the...

RAJ: Capital "M".

RAJ READING: ...Mind of the Atonement.

RAJ: Your Right Mind is the capital "M" Mind of the Atonement. In other words, the very Mind which is behaving as though it's not Divine is Itself the means of coming back Home by choosing to abandon its use of Itself to create a mask of ignorance of the Truth.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is the...

RAJ: Capital "M".

RAJ READING: ...Mind of the Atonement. It represents a state of mind that comes close enough to One-Mindedness that transfer to it is at last possible. Transfer depends on common elements in the old learning and the new situation to which it is transferred. Perception is not knowledge, but it can be transferred TO knowledge, or CROSS OVER into it. It might even be more helpful here to use the literal meaning of “carried” over, since the last step is taken by God.

RAJ: Why is the last step taken by God? Because it's the place where you relinquish the belief that you can take a step by yourself at all. It's the place where the sense of you says, "Uncle," and gives up the ghost. It's the place where you return to normal by not asserting any so-called authority that you privately have. You see? It's the place where you abandon any act of self-defense, self-preservation.

God takes the last step because you've arrived at a point where you allow for the fact that God's the only One Who's been taking any steps, where God is the only Author of Creation, is the only Movement of Being, including the Movement Of Being That You Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit,...

RAJ: Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...the shared Inspiration of all the Sonship, induces a kind of perception in which many elements are like those in the Kingdom of Heaven itself.

First, its universality is perfectly clear, and no-one who receives it could ever believe for one instant that sharing it involves anything BUT gain.

Second, it is incapable of attack, and is therefore truly open.

RAJ: If it's incapable of attack, it's defenseless. If it's defenseless, there's no block to communion with it. There's nothing standing between it and anything else.

RAJ READING: This means that, although it does not engender knowledge, it does not OBSTRUCT it in any way. There is a point at which sufficient quantitative changes produce real qualitative differences.

RAJ: Where? In your experience. Real qualitative differences. Like fearlessness where fear used to prevail. Like the equivalent of confidence where you had in the past always felt inadequate. Qualitative differences in your inner experience of being present.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The next point requires real understanding because it is the point at which the shift occurs:

Finally,...

RAJ: And this is the next point.

RAJ READING: ...it points the way BEYOND the healing which it brings, and leads the mind beyond its own integration into the paths of creation.

RAJ: When singleness of mind has been accomplished because you have come to a point of complete abandonment of any right you thought you had to having thoughts of your own which you initiated and made-up, then healing has been accomplished. And it's no longer necessary to consciously choose for Singularity, for Singleness of Mind.

And when that point comes and you have yielded, you find that what you yielded into is the Movement of Creation, your Conscious Union with God in which What Everything Is and What Everything Means is utterly clear to you, together with the fact that you become unequivocally conscious of the fact that your Real Function is to be in constant Acknowledgement, constant Conscious Awareness of the Divine Meaning Of Everything As The Movement Of Being Moves, so that you find yourself recognizing God In Everything, and in that recognition glorifying God In Everything. And because you are making that Gift Of Recognition, you are infilled by God with the Conscious Experience and Joy of the Experience Of Your True Identity.

Continuing.

[Editor's Note: The first and second editions Text heading, The Voice for God (T-#69/75), appears here.]

RAJ READING: Healing is not creating; it is reparation. The Holy Spirit promotes healing by looking BEYOND it, to what the Children of God were before healing was needed, and will be when they have BEEN healed. This alteration of the time sequence should be quite familiar because it is very similar to the shift in time perception which the miracle introduces. The Holy Spirit is the MOTIVATION for miracle-mindedness;...

RAJ: I've mentioned before that your Divinity is constantly pressuring against the walls you have built against your Conscious Experience of It. It's constantly nudging, constantly insinuating a larger picture into your awareness. And you call it, when you don't block it, inspiration, inventiveness, creativity.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is the MOTIVATION for miracle-mindedness; the will to HEAL the separation by letting it go.

RAJ: Abandoning it.

RAJ READING: This will is IN you because God placed it in your mind, and although you can keep it asleep, you cannot obliterate it.

RAJ: So you see we're still talking about rehabilitation: the uncovering of capacities that already exist which seem to have been lost through lack of use.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God Himself keeps this will alive by transmitting it from His Mind to yours as long as there is time.

RAJ: Which doesn't mean you're gonna run out of time for this to be done. But as long as you are insisting on looking at Eternity through a lens called time, this will be kept alive in you until you're willing to re-embrace it.

RAJ READING: God Himself keeps this will alive by transmitting it from His Mind to yours as long as there is time. It is partly His and partly yours. The miracle itself is just this fusion or union of will between Father and Son.

RAJ: You see? The miracle itself is just this. Nothing more, and not the giant thing you thought. It's just this: the fusion or union of will between Father and Son.

Now, again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Your Real Mind.

RAJ READING: ...is the spirit of joy. He is the Call to return with which God blessed the minds of His separated Sons. This is the vocation of the mind. The mind had no calling until the separation because, before that, it had only BEING, and would not have understood the call to right thinking.

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit was God's Answer to the separation, the means by which the Atonement could repair until the whole mind returned to creating.

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: The Atonement and the separation began at the same time.

RAJ: That they both began at the same time is a statement of the Divine Integrity of your Being that was never lost.

RAJ READING: When man made the ego, God placed in him the call to joy. This call is so strong that the ego always dissolves at its sound. That is why you can choose to listen to two voices within you. One you made yourself, and that one is not of God. But the other is given you BY God, Who asks you only to listen to it.

RAJ: Well now, if God is asking you to listen to what is at the bottom line your Real Mind, it's an invitation to utterly simple Sanity, isn't it? Nothing complicated. It's like, "Pay attention to yourselves, guys." That's all. That's all waking up is about. Stop paying attention to your imaginations. Pay attention to your Self.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is in you in a very literal sense.

RAJ: Why? Because It Is You! It couldn't be more in you than to Be You Yourself.

RAJ READING: His is the Voice that calls you back to where you were before, and will be again.

RAJ: And I will add: where you are right now, but you're unconscious of it because you're having so damn much fun thinking for yourselves, and suffering from your thinking. And taking the challenge of overcoming the suffering that you're experiencing from your thinking, instead of saying, "There must be another way to look at this, even if it requires me to completely abandon everything I have built confidences in. I'm willing to look again because I don't really have the intent to be insane. That's not really what I want to be doing. I didn't know that that's what I was doing."

And I'll tell you as long as you didn't know that's what you were doing, you had no recourse. But now it's becoming clearer that there is another way to look at this, and there is another choice to be made. And it's the choice for Healing or Wholeness. It's the choice for Integration. It's the choice for Unity.

But in order for Unity to be experienced, you're going to have to be willing to be present with everything without insisting upon determining for yourself what it all is. That's all. And what that means is that you're called upon to be present with All That Is with curiosity and the willingness to discover what you never knew about It before. So that in the breaking down of the act of isolation, you might find yourself beginning to realize that you did know what It was before. You see? And remember Who You Are, and remember What It All Is so that the Experience of It All will be Joy. You see?

Are you enjoying A Course In Miracles?

AUDIENCE: Yeah. Yeah.

RAJ: I know that everyone thinks from time to time, "What in the heck does this have to do with my life. This is such irrelevant bullshit, because it has nothing to do with what's going on, and seems to give me no leverage in the world I'm living in."

Well, A Course In Miracles came forth from the Holy Spirit. It expresses a different set of rules. A set of rules different from the rules that you have all developed in the process of forming your mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and in that sense it doesn't compute.

But you know what? As long as the only words you had to think with were words that were defined by a false sense of who you were, you didn't have any other option. And so I ask you to please forbear the difficulty you're experiencing and hang in here because what the Course is doing is giving you a new way to use the words you've been using that don't lock you into the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, but inspire in you a capacity to become curious and to explore the unknown. Because there's a payoff for you, but mostly because it's wrong for you to feel trapped in the status quo when you're the Sons and Daughters of God. And you need to feel the right to reach for something you're not conscious of at the moment. You need to be inspired to explore and to let new things happen so that you break the habit of rigidity.

So, you're aware that since we began reading, I have been making things relevant to quote "the human condition." Maybe not when you want it, and maybe not about what you want it to be about, but a groundwork is being laid for you to have new words to use in new contexts, so that your involuntary entrapment to your old meanings for those words lose their hold on you. These words are not here to put you in a new context of words to be trapped by, but to inspire you to be willing to look with great abandonment of self-protection and control, so that the walls of your prison that you built become weaker and weaker and weaker until they crumble, and the view becomes available to you of How Things Really Are.

So be patient. You don't know what A Course In Miracles needs to do for you, or how it should bring about the changes that need to be made. So try not to quibble too much when you can't find the relevance, remembering that what your ego calls relevance is that which conforms to its rules.

Okay.

I love you very much, and I look forward to being with you next Sunday.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 5 – HEALING AND WHOLENESS
Section – THE VOICE FOR GOD
First Edition – p. 69 / Second Edition – p. 75
Sparkly Book – p. 96

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And again, welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet. I will continue reading from the transcript as it was completed by Bill Thetford. And so those of you who are reading either the first or second editions, you will have to bear with the fact that there are differences. And you might feel like you've lost your place, but I suggest that when you've lost your place keep your finger there and at some point it will pick up again.

A Course In Miracles. A Course. Well, all of you know what a course is. You've taken courses in college. You've taken courses at weekend workshops. And if you're not careful, you're likely to approach A Course In Miracles in the same way you've been taught to approach other courses, and that is as a means of gathering new information which will help you to more skillfully deal with life, without ever calling into question the student who's taking the Course, without ever calling into question the mind that is studying the Course. And if you don't make that distinction, if you don't know that there is that distinction, then you will not catch the real meaning of the Course and you will end up being an ego practicing the principles of the Course so as to be better in control in your life, and so as to be more safe because this wonderful Course In Miracles has presented you with a new defense.

Sometimes the misunderstanding of what the Course is about, meaning that which calls the mind that is studying the Course into question, causes one's behavior as quote "a student of the Course" unquote to become most unkind, thoughtless. Throwing out statements from the Course that don't really address anything at all except the security and defense system of the one throwing out the words. And the end result is hurt rather than healing. Someone behaves badly. The one towards whom the bad behavior has been expressed says, "Ouch! I don't like the way you're behaving. It hurts." And the one behaving badly says, "Well, it's all in your perception." Wow, what an unkindness. Not only that, if the person to whom that statement has [been] made is halfway intellectual, he or she is likely say, "Hmmm. Maybe you're right." And then they go off on a tangent of trying to improve their perception so that bad or hurtful behavior doesn't hurt them. Awful.

An ego practicing the principles of the Course is no more useful than an ego practicing any other system of thought, or an ego practicing any other principles.

We are in Chapter 5 and as most of you are aware, you haven't really been given any useful tools for being a more skillful ego in the world. And you can end up thinking that the Course really isn't useful. But as we've been going through it I have been pointing out to you over and over and over again as the Course has been pointing it out over and over again that until you Know Who You Are, until you Know How Things Work, you can't understand what you're reading about. And until you understand that the Course is from the get-go calling your ego into question and not addressing your ego at all, but addressing that Place of Excellence in You which is your Divinity, until you recognize that, you are not going to be in any position to be an agent for change in the world. You are not going to be in any position to be a healer. You are not going to be in any position to be what the Course calls a co-creator with God.

As the Course says the Place of Excellence in You is called the Altar. The Place, you could say, where the Flame of Truth is lit and burning, illuminating everything for you. But if your back is turned to the Altar you seem to be able to be free to give new definitions that are not the Truth to everything. And so before A Course In Miracles can even begin to make sense to you, you have to recognize the necessity of not reinforcing your ego any further.

You must recognize that the Course is not addressing your ego. It is not there to improve your ego nor its skill at anything. The Course is here to help turn your attention to a different resource that's right in the middle of you. This Place of Excellence. This Place where you can connect with the direct Experience of Truth. This Place where there is forever flowing forth God's Perspective.

These two apparent resources that you have available to you are called the Voice for Truth and the voice for fear. The Course is not directed at those who are listening to the voice for fear, those who are defining themselves according to the voice for fear. It is addressing the Divinity of every single one of you which is present right in the middle of each one of you at this moment, and is not a state to be achieved, grown into, but one which you must care enough to become quiet enough to sense in the withinness of you so that you might begin to consciously use it as your prime resource.

The Voice for Truth is also the Holy Spirit. And again, I want to remind you that last week we read, "The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your own right mind." The Holy Spirit is your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego, while you play around at being an independent thinker and definer of things, a pseudo-authoritative presence that can never become actualized.

The last sentence of the last section reads, or the last two sentences:

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is in you in a very literal sense. His is the...

RAJ: Capital "V".

RAJ READING: ...Voice that calls you back to where you were before, and will be again.

RAJ: Which simply means it calls you back into your Right Mind, into your True Experience of your Self where you're not blocking It by insisting upon expressing authority that God never gave you and that you can never really have. It's you becoming Sane again. It's you not having a mind divided where there seems to be the occasion for choice.

This section is called:

RAJ READING: The Voice for God

[Editor's Note: The first or second edition Text heading, The Voice for God (T-#69/75), appeared earlier than this. See the previous transcript for the exact placement.]

RAJ: And I'm reading.

RAJ READING: It is possible, even in this world, to hear ONLY that voice...

RAJ: Meaning the Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...and no other.

RAJ: Now it is not only possible, it is absolutely necessary even in this world to hear only that Voice and no other.

RAJ READING: It takes effort and great willingness to learn. It is the final lesson that I learned, and God's Sons are as equal as learners as they are as Souls.

RAJ: Now, as the ego reads the Course, it's looking for ways to control and manipulate the world better to its benefit. And because that is its habit, it can't make sense out of what I just read, because what I've just read says that what you need to attend to first is becoming single-minded; unconflicted within yourself. Well, how can that solve your problem at work? How can that solve your problem with your family? How can that solve the financial disaster that you're in the middle of? Well, that isn't what needs to be attended to first. What needs to be attended to first is for you to get in your Right Mind so you can perceive What Is True about what is going on and what is not true, and in that clarity make better choices and correct what needs to be corrected.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Voice of the Holy Spirit IS the call to Atonement,...

RAJ: Now another way of saying that is the Voice of your True Mind is the call to reintegration, the reintegration of you.

RAJ READING: The Voice of the Holy Spirit IS the call to Atonement, or the restoration of the integrity of the mind.

RAJ: The mind? Your mind.

RAJ READING: When the Atonement is complete and the whole Sonship is healed, there will be no call to return, but what God creates is eternal. The Holy Spirit will remain with the Sons of God, to bless THEIR creations, and keep them in the light of joy.

RAJ: Well, of course. If the Holy Spirit is your Divinity, then when you have stopped denying It and you have stopped making a choice for something imaginary, It's going to remain with you, isn't it? Your Self is going to remain with you except that now you will Know Who You Are. And you will know that you have no authority of the sort you thought you had as an ego. And you will know that it is your Joy not to express independent, authoritative presence, but to glorify God by reflecting Him in every act and thought and meaning that you embody.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You ARE the Kingdom of Heaven, but you have let the belief in darkness enter your minds, and so you need a new light. The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Your Real Self.

RAJ READING: ...is the radiance that you must let banish the idea of darkness. His is the glory before which dissociation falls away, and the Kingdom of Heaven breaks through into its own.

RAJ: Sanity breaks through into the middle of who you thought you were, redefining you to yourself, re-illuminating Who You've Always Been to yourself.

RAJ READING: Before the separation you did not need guidance. You KNEW as you will know again, but as you do NOT know now. God does not guide because he can share only perfect knowledge. Guidance is evaluative because it implies that there is a RIGHT way and also a WRONG way, one to be chosen and the other to be avoided. By choosing one, you give up the other.

RAJ: As an ego studying any system of thought, including the Course, you can think that you are learning how to make better choices between what I'm going to call bad options without ever arriving at a point of realizing that there's a whole other level from which choice can be made. The choice isn't between good and bad methods of control. The choice is between believing that you can have control and try to exercise it, or yielding all sense of control up and deferring to the Father. Deferring to what comes forth from that Place of Excellence in the middle of You that has been ever-presently waiting for you to turn around and look at It again.

Again.

RAJ READING: Guidance is evaluative because it implies that there is a RIGHT way and also a WRONG way, one to be chosen and the other to be avoided. By choosing one, you give up the other.

This IS a conflict state. It MEANS that knowledge has been lost...

RAJ: What I've referred to as capital "K" Knowing.

RAJ READING: ...because knowledge is sure. God is not in you in a literal sense; YOU are part of HIM. When you chose to leave Him, He gave you a Voice to speak FOR Him because He could no longer share His knowledge with you without hindrance. Direct communication was broken because you had made another voice through another will.

RAJ: And in effect it means you simply stopped paying attention and started ignoring God. And you did it because it seemed to you to be an interesting thing to think independently, to think originally.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit calls you both to remember and to forget.

RAJ: To remember and to forget. To remember Who You Are and to forget who you think you are. To remember that your Function is to let All That God Is Being find expression in you by your giving it way, by your sharing it, by your letting your every act and thought and deed glorify something other than you. And to forget this you that you made-up. And to forget to try to protect it. And to forget to use your life to manipulate others to agree with you to whatever degree it takes for you to not be threatened by them.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You have chosen to be in a state of opposition, in which opposites are possible. As a result, there ARE choices which you must make.

RAJ: That's the work, if you will. That's what you're going to perceive as work anyway because you're going to have to remember not to proceed willy-nilly and thoughtlessly down the paths of old mental habits, and rather, stop and ask of that Place of Excellence in You, "What is appropriate here? What is really going on here? Aside from my best judgments, what is truly needed here? Not that which will protect me, but that which will glorify God. That which will embody God right here. Because I'm told that if I give that precedence in my mind and I find a way to let that be embodied in me, I will find my invulnerability and the fact that I don't need to be in a constant state of self-protection."

But you're going to have to make that choice. You're going to have to make it over and over and over again because that's the way you break an old habit. That's the way change happens.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: In the holy state, the will is free in the sense that its CREATIVE power is unlimited, but choice itself is meaningless.

RAJ: Choice itself is meaningless. What outside of the Infinite Movement of Creation which it is your Function to experience and acknowledge and recognize Its Source in, could constitute a choice? Can you see that when you made a choice, when you attempted to imagine that you could make a choice, what you had to do, because there's nothing outside the Infinite Movement of Creation, was to block and limit your Conscious Experience of the Infinite Movement of Creation?

That's the only thing you could do. That's the only thing that any act of personal or private creativity you could engage in—blocking the full Experience of Creation. You might say that's like using drugs and slowly killing off the cells in your brain, and finding that the choice to be limited in your ability to be aware causes a temporary experience of exhilaration caused by the dying of the cells in your brain. You see what I'm saying? Except that in your choice to ignore parts of the Infinite Movement of Creation, nothing died. Your Right-Minded, Real-Minded Capacities blocked off by you from your awareness of It, remains intact and forever available to you, simply awaiting the time when you will tire of the unnatural effort it takes to be in a constant state of Self, with a capital "S", Self-denial.

So, here you are at a point of having to make a choice between the capital "S" Self You Are and the made-up small "s" self that you can never really be. And you're going to have to make the choice on purpose, and you're going to have to make it over and over and over because that's how you escape an unnatural bondage to ignorance, to being asleep. Not fully awake. Constantly in a dozey, drowsy state that doesn't absorb the Fullness of Everything in front of you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Freedom to choose is the same POWER as freedom to create, but its APPLICATION is different.

RAJ: The difference is the power to choose as you have been using it, not as it's being spoken of here, the power to choose is the power to create definitions and choose for your definition which has as its function self-protection which is selfish in nature, where[as] the Power To Create is your Capacity to make a Gift, to extend, to glorify God by extending What God Is to your Brothers, your Sisters, your world, your Universe, and everything in it. The Power To Create is your innate power to extend blessing to everything by recognizing God In Everything. You see? It's unselfish. You might say it's "otherish" except in extending Truth, in extending Love, in extending the Essence Of What God Is to your Brother, you provide yourself with the experience that your Brother is yourself, that your Brother is not separate from you, that your Brother is not other than you. Because the Function each of You has is the same Function—to glorify God.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Choosing MEANS divided will. The Holy Spirit is one way of choosing. This way is in you because there is also ANOTHER way.

RAJ: You get that?

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is one way of choosing. This way is in you because there is also ANOTHER way.

RAJ: What that means is that you seem to have created another way. You seem to have created for yourself a capacity to think for yourself, to choose for yourself, to have an intent of your own that originates with you and nothing else. And you believe you have succeeded, and you govern yourselves accordingly. Having created that imaginary capacity to choose, which you could never totally succeed at having created, it made You As That Divine One Whose Function It Is To Glorify God another choice. But when you finally abandon thinking that you have a capacity to choose independent of God, then glorifying God, being the Fullness of the Radiance of What God Is Expressing Himself As right where you are, will be the unchallenged Nature of Being and won't constitute a choice at all.

Nevertheless, while you seem to have made the choice for doing things your way, and I am continuing here.

RAJ READING: God did not leave His Children comfortless, even though they chose to leave Him. The voice they put in their minds was NOT the voice of His Will, for which the Holy Spirit speaks.

RAJ: You see? The Divine One That You Are never speaks for Itself. It speaks for God. And that's why it's absolutely necessary to understand that this is not a Course to give the one you think you are a better means of control, a better way for you to speak for yourself, a higher, loftier motive for speaking for yourself, so that you might one day perhaps change the world with the loftiness of a position you have taken as an independent one. You see? Without ever having remembered Who You Really Are.

The Holy Spirit speaks for God, not for you. Your Real Self speaks for God, not for itself. You see the difference? Until you catch the scent, the flavor of the meaning of what I've just said, you can't possibly be in a position of being an agent for change in the world, or a healing Presence in the world.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The call to return is stronger than the call to depart, but it speaks in a different way.

RAJ: It not only speaks in a different way, it speaks with a different intent, and it speaks for a different outcome. It doesn't speak for an outcome of self-preservation. It speaks for an outcome of the Extension of All That God Is through you.

And you know, I'll promise you something. The excitement you think you experience being an independent ego making decisions and definitions on its own and trying to succeed in overcoming the hostile world it sees itself living in, the excitement and thrill of that doesn't begin to match the Joy and the Bliss and the Innocence and the utter Safety that you experience when you're being utterly congruent with your capital "S" Self and are introducing nothing foreign to it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Voice of the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: The Voice of the Holy Spirit does not command because it is incapable of arrogance. It does not demand because it does not seek control. It does not overcome because it does not attack. It merely REMINDS.

RAJ: And that's what I'm constantly doing. It's constantly reminding you of the Truth which you deeply know within your Being because you couldn't get rid of It even if you buried It where you thought It was out of sight. And I remind you of the Truth, and your Divinity when you turn to It will remind you of the Truth. Not so that the you, you think you are can embrace the Truth and live it better, but so that in the experience of the reminder of what you know from that Place of Excellence in You, you have the opportunity to say, "Wow, maybe I'm going stop making a choice for my best capacity to reason and think and come to conclusions and give definitions and manipulate the world. Maybe, maybe I'm going to abandon that in favor of this experience I'm having within me which is an experience of utter Peace and utter Integrity and utter Safety in which I feel universally grounded and Whole. Maybe I will give that preference and explore the experience more fully." All of this because you have been reminded of something.

The Voice of the Holy Spirit...

[Editor's Note: Raj replaced the word "It" with "The Voice of the Holy Spirit"]

RAJ READING: ...is compelling only because of what it reminds you OF.

RAJ: Not because it reminded you with force but because it stayed out of the way and illuminated some part of your Divinity to you so that you might, because it's part of you and you can tell that it's part of you, find the inclination to investigate it further.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It brings to your mind the OTHER way, remaining quiet even in the midst of the turmoil you have made for yourselves. The Voice for God is always quiet because it speaks of peace. Yet peace is stronger than war because it heals. War is division, not increase. No-one gains from strife.

“What profiteth it a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own Soul?” That means that if he listens to the wrong voice, he has LOST SIGHT of his Soul. He CANNOT lose it, but he CAN not know it.

RAJ: And I’m adding this: He can not know it by consciously choosing to ignore it.

You can all not know it by consciously choosing to ignore it, but ignoring something doesn’t make it go away. And so when you consciously choose to ignore What You Are in favor of an imaginary and exciting false picture of who you are, all you have done is, you might say, closed the door so that the Truth About You is out of sight, out of mind. But It’s sitting there. It’s sitting there at this moment accessible to you at this moment, available to you at this moment.

And you know what? You don’t have to study any course in order to get the skill to re-access your Right Mind. All you have to do is let there be a little chink of doubt about the mind that you think you have. All you have to do is be willing to withdraw the trust you have invested in the way you’re seeing things and say, “Father I would like to see the Truth here. I would like to have an experience, a point of view that’s bigger and truer than any point of view I have arrived at.” That’s the way you do it.

You withdraw investment of trust in the way you have decided everything is and invite a new perspective from God. I say “from God” because you want a new perspective that is utterly Truthful and the word “God,” to you, does involve the meaning of Ultimateness. So desire to Know Of That Which Is Ultimate What The Truth Is. And let there be a stronger intent to have the new experience than to reestablish the old one that you have created for yourself.

Again.

RAJ READING: That means that if he listens to the wrong voice, he has LOST SIGHT of his Soul. He CANNOT lose it, but he CAN not know it. It is therefore LOST TO HIM until he chooses right. The Holy Spirit is your Guide in choosing.

RAJ: Isn’t that amazing?

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is your Guide in choosing.

RAJ: That means that when you chose to ignore the Truth and make-up truth for yourself, God didn’t give you some other guide, something different from you to be your guide. The Holy Spirit is your own Right Mind. Therefore as you lean into the Holy Spirit for the truer Experience of Being, you’re leaning into, how shall I say it, you’re leaning into something you can trust because it's your Self. You're leaning into that which would be the most dependable thing that could be given to you to rely upon—your Divinity. Your Guide isn't a stranger to you, in other words. What Integrity that embodies that what you must lean into is the Voice for God that is your very own Being. You get it? You get the Integrity of it? You get the stability of it, the dependability of it, the reliableness of it, and the fact that the solution to the human condition is so utterly thoughtful, so utterly Loving, and so full of Integrity?

In other words, you're leaning into your Divine Integrity in order to have It uncovered to you so that the process is one of constant, fuller confirmation of That Which Is Valuable About You. You can feel the Unity of it, the Oneness of the process of coming Home, and why it ultimately is, I'm going to say, maximally powerful.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is your Guide in choosing. He is the part of your mind which ALWAYS speaks for the right choice because He speaks for God.

RAJ: That is your measuring stick. If what you're hearing isn't speaking for God, it's not the Holy Spirit. If what you're listening to is speaking for you so that you might be exercising better control with loftier motives in the world, you may know that you are listening to that which is going to bind you to longer dreams and more sleep.

Reading again. The Holy Spirit...

[Editor's Note: Raj replaced the word "He" with "The Holy Spirit"]

RAJ READING: ...is the part of your mind which ALWAYS speaks for the right choice because He speaks for God. He is your remaining communication with God, which you can interrupt but cannot destroy.

The Holy Spirit is the way in which God's Will can be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Both Heaven and earth are in YOU because the call of both is in your will, and therefore in your mind. The Voice for God comes from your own altars to Him.

RAJ: Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: These altars are not things; they are DEVOTIONS. Yet you have other devotions now. Your divided devotion has given you the two voices, and you must choose at which altar you will to serve.

RAJ: Now, again you see we're not talking about how to fix your financial picture or your horrible relationship. We're not talking about what she's doing, or what he's doing, or what they're not doing. We're talking about what is essential before you can even address the healing of anything. And what is essential before you can truly address the healing of anything is for you to choose for the Voice that will confirm healing, rather than conflict and disease.

So don't try to rush ahead. Don't try to skip over this.

Reading.

RAJ READING: Yet you have other devotions now. Your divided devotion has given you the two voices, and you must choose at which altar you will to serve. The call you answer now IS an evaluation because it is a DECISION.

RAJ: Well, don't fuss around and mince around about whether or not you should be being decisive because after all the only thing that can be decisive is the ego. Bullshit! Make a decision. Make a choice between the voices.

RAJ READING: The decision itself is very simple. It is made on the basis of which call is worth more to you.

My mind will always be like yours because we were created as equals. It was only my DECISION...

RAJ: My choice.

RAJ READING: ...that gave me all power in Heaven and earth. My only gift to you is to help you make the same decision FOR YOURSELF.

RAJ: I cannot make it for you. No one else can make it for you. You made the choice for moving into the realm of imagination and then trying to believe that what you were imagining was truly real, and you must unmake that choice by making the only other choice that's available to you which is to abandon your imagined right to have ideas and thoughts of your own independent of God. And turn around from that and say, "Father, Thy Will be done. Father, I wish to glorify You because I have decided that I want the effect of my presence to be an Expression Of What Is Truly, Divinely, Eternally Real. I want the effect of my presence to embody and illuminate what is Ultimate, not partial." But you've got to want it. No way you can do this on lip service. You've got to want it. You've got to decide for it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The will for this decision is the will to SHARE it because the decision itself IS the decision to share.

RAJ: You see? "Oh! I want to glorify God!" Hmmm. Well, to what? To whom? Glorify how? Are you just going to go out in the black corner of the universe and glorify God, or go to a desert island and glorify God there on the little, you know, one mile square perimeter that you have of land to stand on? No. Glorifying God is involvement with your Brothers and Sisters. It's involvement with every aspect of Creation. It's extension, not out into the void, but extension to a Brother or a Sister, to something, to an object of your affection. It's involvement, as we've spoken before.

RAJ READING: The will for this decision is the will to SHARE it because the decision itself IS the decision to share. It is MADE BY GIVING, and is therefore the ONE act of mind that resembles true creation. You understand the role of "models" in the learning process, and the importance of the models you value and choose to follow in determining what you will to learn. I am your model for decision. By deciding for God I showed you that this decision CAN be made, and that YOU can make it.

I promised you that the mind that made the decision for me is also in YOU,...

RAJ: Key words there.

RAJ READING: I promised you that the mind that made the decision for me is also in YOU,...

RAJ: Ahh. The Mind that will make the decision for you is the Holy Spirit. That Place of Excellence in You which when remembering that It Is What Is Real, chooses from what I'm going to call that Level of Clarity, rather than the imaginary sense of self that is nothing but unclarity. It makes the decision. The ego you think you are does not make this decision to wake up. Let's be very clear on that. The decision to wake up is impulsed by You from that Place of Excellence in You, and it's not a calculated decision, calculated to have a particular effect. It's a decision to be unconflicted within yourself any more. That's what it is.

Again.

RAJ READING: I promised you that the mind that made the decision for me is also in YOU, and that you can let it change you just as it changed me.

RAJ: This states in a different way what I told you last week. The Holy Spirit, your own Real Self, your own Real Mind, operates according to different Laws than your ego sense of self does. It operates according to God's Laws, where your ego responds according to the laws set up by the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that all of you have made-up together.

They serve two different purposes. One is a service of self-protection, and the other is a Service of Extension.

Therefore, as you begin to reach out to the Holy Spirit, even though you now know that it's your own Real Mind, it is at the beginning going to be exactly like reaching out to something different than you, something that will require you to yield up your self-trust in favor of. Again, it's just another way of saying that waking up is not a matter of ego self-improvement; it's a matter of abandoning the ego and making a choice for That Of You Which Is Real and Sane. It's really a matter of being willing to forget insanity.

Again.

RAJ READING: I promised you that the mind that made the decision for me is also in YOU, and that you can let it change you just as it changed me. This mind is unequivocal because it hears only ONE voice and answers in only ONE way. You are the light of the world with me. Rest does not come from sleeping but from waking.

RAJ: Oh, you cannot imagine the Joy of the Peace and the Effortlessness of Being Infinitely as compared to the effort and strain it has taken you to experience things finitely. Trust me on this.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is the call to awake and be glad. The world is very tired because it IS the idea of weariness. Our task is the joyous one of waking it to the Call for God. Everyone will answer the Call of the Holy Spirit, or the Sonship cannot be as one. What better vocation could there be for any part of the Kingdom than to restore it to the perfect integration that can make it whole?

RAJ: So, if you ever wondered what you were here for, now you know. You're here to wake up from the repetitive process of falling asleep and having dreams called incarnations. You're here to wake up from falling prey to the distraction of looking at the Kingdom of Heaven through the lens of mutually-agreed-upon definitions. That's what you're here for. So that you don't have these endlessly repetitious experiences of Reality through the distorting lens of false perception.

When you wake up, you're not going to go anywhere. You're just going to see here with fresh eyes in which everything you see is some Aspect of God embodying His Purity, His Beauty, His Loveliness, and His Indivisbleness. Universal Indivisibility while at the same time being Infinitely Expressed.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Hear only this through the Holy Spirit within you, and teach your brothers to listen as I am teaching you. When you are tempted by the wrong voice, call on me to remind you how to heal by sharing my decision AND MAKING IT STRONGER. As we share this goal we increase its power to attract the whole Sonship, and to bring it back into the Oneness in which it was created.

RAJ: And I'm going to say, "and in which it has forever continued to be even though no one is noticing it because they are distracted by the thrill of independence."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Remember that "yoke" means "join together" and "burden" means message. Let us reconsider the Biblical statement "my yoke is easy and my burden light" in this way; let us join together, for my message is...

RAJ: Capital "L".

RAJ READING: ... Light.

RAJ: You see, you keep looking for something in the Course to miraculously change your life in the world. But that won't happen until something else happens first, and it's called joining. It's called abandoning your independent stance. And you know what? It's not possible to join with egos. It's not possible. The only thing it's possible to join with is something that's Real. And that which is Real Is Divine.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I came into your minds because you had grown vaguely aware of the fact that there IS another way, or another Voice.

RAJ: It doesn't matter whether I was saying this to Helen and Bill or not. If you are experiencing Me in your mind, it is because you have grown vaguely aware of the fact that there is another way or another Voice.

RAJ READING: Having given this invitation to the Holy Spirit, I could come to provide the model for HOW TO THINK.

RAJ: This is very important.

RAJ READING: Psychology has become the study of BEHAVIOR, but no-one denies the basic law that behavior is a response to MOTIVATION, and motivation is will. I have enjoined you to behave as I behaved, but we must respond to the same mind to do this.

RAJ: You see?

RAJ READING: This mind is the Holy Spirit, Whose will is for God always.

RAJ: Not for you! Not for you. The Holy Spirit's Will is for God. God's Will is for You. You already are God's Will In Expression. You are the Presence Of God Embodied. And there's nothing more nor less than the Infiniteness Of God constituting the Presence That You Are.

Again.

RAJ READING: I have enjoined you to behave as I behaved, but we must respond to the same mind to do this. This mind is the Holy Spirit, Whose will is for God always. He teaches you how to keep me as the model for your thought, and to behave like me as a result.

The power of our joint motivation is beyond belief but NOT beyond accomplishment. What we can accomplish together HAS no limits because the Call for God IS the call to the unlimited. Child of God,...

RAJ: Brother and Sister. I'm inserting that.

RAJ READING: ...my message is for YOU, to hear and give away as you answer the Holy Spirit within you.

RAJ: It's a whole shift of Being for you. A shift from getting to giving. A shift from self-protection to Loving your Brother enough to be benign in his experience, and therefore be a demonstration of the fact that fear is not called for, and thereby be an inspiration to him to dare to have the confidence to set aside his conviction that self-protection is essential.

Everyone is indeed becoming clearer. I may not be providing opportunity very frequently for dialog, for interaction, but our Communion, Mine with each of You, is very definite and is going on whether you are able to interact on Sunday afternoons. And your increasing Clarity is nurtured, you might say, fertilized and protected by Me and by your Guides.

And you want to know something? Your own Real Self, the Holy Spirit, is experiencing Joy as all of this becomes clearer to you. And you're going to begin to experience it as Joy felt for no good reason. And I want you to know that when you have that experience of feeling Joy for no apparent reason, that this is a True Experience Of Your Real Mind. And in your recognizing that when it happens, it will constitute a further act of Integration and Unification.

Now, I do not mean to imply by anything I've said today that there is not going to be healing in your world. I am not saying that you should not expect a reversal of financial disaster, or that you should not feel it is important to be healed of a disease. All I'm saying today is that before you tackle healing a disease, before you tackle the correction of a financial disaster, that you make sure that you've done everything you can not to rely upon your ego to do it. And that the means for avoiding investing further energy into your ego is to ask of the Holy Spirit or to ask of the Father, "What is the Truth here?" The Call, the necessity is for abandoning the isolation and joining with the Father, or the Holy Spirit that speaks for the Father, so that the healing or the reversal of misfortune cannot ever be attributed to the expression of will on your part. Every single time you think that your expression of will has accomplished something, it has strengthened your faith in the utilization of will power, which has caused your back to be turned more solidly toward the Altar.

The Course is not about improving the ego or its skills. It's really about the Divine You coming out of the closet. And you know what? There's no way for you to be "out-ed." No one else can "out" you unfortunately, or fortunately. So, you can feel comforted if you want to that nobody can demonstrate to anybody else your Divinity, or your Capacity to Experience perfect Health, perfect Harmony, all the Abundance you might ever want. No one will ever expose your Capacity to be Meaningful. Don't worry. It won't happen until you make the decision to make commitment to the Voice for Truth that is the Holy Spirit which is your own Real Mind.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)
Chapter 5 – HEALING AND WHOLENESS
Section – THE GUIDE TO SALVATION
First Edition – p. 72 / Second Edition – p. 78
Sparkly Book – p. 99

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the internet.

Before we begin reading, I want to remind you of something we read a couple of weeks ago, the statement being, "The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Real Mind."

[Editor's Note: The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your own right mind. (SB p. 94)]

RAJ: You will find me emphasizing this somewhat frequently because in the first and second editions of the Course that statement was changed to read, "The Holy Spirit is in your mind."

[Editor's Note: The Holy Spirit is in your right mind, as He was in mine. (T-#67/73)]

RAJ: What I said to Helen was, "The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Real Mind." I am emphasizing this repetitively because if you only have the first or second edition of the Course available to you, you have no occasion to hear what I actually said which is significantly different in its meaning. And so you need to be reminded.

The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Real Mind. Why say "nothing more"? That in a way sounds belittling. But what it actually is, it is expansive in terms of what your Real Mind is. Your Real Mind is the Holy Spirit.

Now I'm also going to repeat again that the Holy Spirit—your Real Mind—works on the basis of entirely different Laws than your egos do. Your egos operate according to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that all of you have created together. The Holy Spirit operates according to the Laws of God. Mind you, although we're talking about your ego and we're talking about the Holy Spirit, we're talking about two different ways of discussing you. You see that? We're talking about two different ways of discussing you.

If you're into computers, you will understand that you can have two different operating systems. And a good example of that is the operating system that the Macintosh® uses and the Windows® operating system. When you use the Windows operating system, you cannot access and work in programs written for the Mac®. And if you have a Mac, you cannot access and utilize programs that are written for Windows. A better example could be the difference between Windows and Linux® because both of those operating systems can function on a PC [Personal Computer].

The Holy Spirit is one operating system, and your egos are another operating system. It's important to understand this because there's no transfer between the two. And that is why when I speak about your accessing that Place of Excellence in You, I'm not talking about a place of excellence, of goodwill, of loving kindness, of thoughtfulness, or of anything that would operate within the realm of your ego perception of yourself. That is not what I'm talking about. It isn't the very best of your ego.

The Place of Excellence in You is where this other operating system is functioning, where the Holy Spirit is, where your Real Mind is functioning right now, even though you're not paying any attention to it as a general rule.

And as I said last week the Course is not addressing your ego to improve it. It is addressing the Truth about the Place of Excellence in You, the Holy Spirit. That which is nothing more than your Real Mind. And in addressing it, it reminds you of It so that you become less invested in your ego sense of things, and will arrive at a point of saying, "Mmmm. I think I may want to change operating systems for a bit and explore what it's like to be out from my Real Mind."

Because they are exclusive of each other, you must reach out to something that at the moment seems not to be you. You can't just slip into your Divinity because your operating system has been one of aggressive and specific and focused use of the Kingdom of Heaven for the purpose of securing your separate safety, security and peace, as well as a well-defined sense of who you are on your own.

So, initially, it will seem as though the Holy Spirit is something different from you. And you will specifically have to reach out for It as though It is different from you. But if you understand as you do this that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Real Mind, you will be willing to reach out for It as though It's different from you because you want to experience the difference, you want to experience the difference in the operating system. And knowing that It is nothing more than your Real Mind that you are reaching out for will give you a sense of confidence that this is a reasonable and intelligent and safe thing to do.

I've shared this before and it bears repeating again. When Paul sits down at a Gathering, before he begins he shifts gears. He changes operating systems. He sits there and says, "I allow only"—that's making one—"I allow only for that which expresses the Christ Consciousness. And I allow only for that which is in harmony with the capital 'P' Purpose of capital 'B' Being"—God. In other words, "Thy Will, not mine, be done." There's the transfer of power. There's the shift of operating systems. "Thy Will, not mine, be done. Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in me." And when he says this, these are not just words he is saying. Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in him. "And rule out of me all self-will." There's the abandonment of the other operating system. And then there's a prayer, "And may Thy Word enrich the affections of all mankind and govern them."

Now in order to practice, shall I say in order to practice the Holy Spirit, not a good choice of words but it gives you the idea, in order to practice the Holy Spirit, you must make a point of shifting operating systems or intending to shift them many times a day. That is what I encourage you to do. Remind yourself that there's another operating system from which you can be in your daily life. Remind yourself and then invite It. And in the invitation, acknowledge that you're willing to abandon all self-will, which means being in charge.

This section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Guide to Salvation

RAJ: Well, the Guide to salvation is the Holy Spirit, that which comes forth from a Place of Excellence in You.

RAJ READING: The way to learn to know your brother...

RAJ: Notice it didn't say, "The way to learn how to wake up." The Course keeps you well-focused on where it's at. Waking up has something to do with you learning to know your Brother.

RAJ READING: The way to learn to know your brother is by perceiving the Holy Spirit in him. We have already said that the Holy Spirit is the bridge or thought-transfer of perception to knowledge...

RAJ: In other words, it is the shift from misperception of your Brother, or misperception of the Kingdom of Heaven into the Experience of Knowing your Brother, Knowing the Kingdom of Heaven, the direct Experience of What It Truly Is.

RAJ READING: We have already said that the Holy Spirit is the bridge or thought-transfer of perception to knowledge, so we can use the terms as if they were related because, in His mind,...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...they ARE. The relationship MUST be in His mind because, unless it were, the separation between the two ways of thinking would not be open to healing.

RAJ: In other words, the Holy Spirit must be able to recognize both operating systems. Because if It didn't, It could not help you, It could not help you to shift from one to the other. It would be impossible and you would be forever asleep.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...is part of the Holy Trinity because His mind is partly yours and also partly God's. This needs clarification, not in statement since we have said it before, but in EXPERIENCE.

RAJ: Well, how do you think it's going to translate into experience if it doesn't involve your relationship with your Brother? Involvement. It won't. It can't.

Now you notice that I have not invited your questions for a while, and we've just been discussing the Course. And the reason is because at this point there's a very clear exposition of the way things work and what it is that's working. And this understanding must be gained, I'm going to say, intellectually if you're going to arrive at a point where you're going to yield to the Holy Spirit. You must understand that the Holy Spirit is not something apart and different from you but is your Real Mind.

Now, continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is the IDEA of healing. Being thought, the idea GAINS AS IT IS SHARED.

RAJ: Again, how is it going to be shared if it isn't extended to a Brother or a Sister? How is it going to be shared if there isn't involvement?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Being the Call FOR God, it is also the idea OF God.

RAJ: You see? It is the Idea Of Something that isn't embraced in the ego operating system.

RAJ READING: Since YOU are part of God, it is also the idea of YOURSELF, as well as of all the parts of God.

RAJ: So you see, what the Holy Spirit is as you consider It, as you open up to It, is far more expansive and all-inclusive than you might have imagined, which means that your Real Mind is far more inclusive and expansive than you might imagine.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The idea of the Holy Spirit shares the property of other ideas because it follows the laws of the Universe of which it is a part.

RAJ: Mind you, all of this is talking about You! Isn't it far more interesting to be reading about you than some disembodied Holy Spirit that God brought into existence the moment you chose to be separate and is there to be your distant but really connected Guide? Your Guide is your Right Mind that reflects God and functions according to the Laws of God, and is therefore inseparable from the Whole Universe and inseparable consciously. I'm going to say "mentally" but that's not the best word. It is inseparable consciously with every other consciousness.

And so your Right Mind is the Intimate, Conscious Experience of every thing and every one with no walls. And in that Experience you find that every thing and every one is You Infinitely speaking, but not "you" like you ever considered yourself before. You Infinitely, You The Very Presence Of The Mind Of God Being What God Is Being.

Don't fuss. Don't wish you could ask questions right now. Just hear the meanings that I'm expressing and let them register and let them settle. Let them be in you.

Again.

RAJ READING: The idea of the Holy Spirit shares the property of other ideas because it follows the laws of the Universe of which it is a part. Therefore, it is strengthened by being given away. It increases in YOU as you give it to your brothers.

RAJ: This "you" that it is speaking of that it increases in is this tiny, isolated sense of yourself. And as long as you're insisting upon being tiny and isolated and alone, with distance, walls, impenetrability between you and your Brothers and Sisters, then the only way in which this new operating system is going to take precedence is when you consciously choose to extend the Father's Love to your Brothers and Sisters. And as that is done, it increases the Idea of the Holy Spirit. It increases the Presence of the Holy Spirit both in you and in your Brothers and Sisters.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Since thoughts do not have to be conscious to exist, your brother does not have to be aware of the Holy Spirit, either in himself or in you, for this miracle to occur.

RAJ: Again, a little bit of leaven leavens the whole lump. Your increasing awareness of the existence of the Holy Spirit as your Real Mind and the lessening of your resistance to that fact, leavens the whole of the Brotherhood of man. It changes everyone. Those who are awake experience you as being more conscious of them. And those who are not awake are to some degree less asleep than before. And no one has to be aware of it in order for it to occur as long as one of you is making the shift of operating systems, even if it's for a fraction of a second.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your brother may have dissociated the Call for God, just as YOU have.

RAJ: In other words, put it out of sight, out of mind, and is ignoring it so that it can have the frightful delight of believing that he or she is independent, alone, vulnerable, but capable of overcoming the vulnerability, and in the process of overcoming the vulnerability demonstrating its actual existence. Crazy.

Continuing. Reading again.

RAJ READING: Your brother may have dissociated the Call for God, just as YOU have. The dissociation is healed in BOTH of you as YOU become aware of the Call for God in him, and thus acknowledge its BEING.

RAJ: You know, if you realize even slightly that there's the Holy Spirit in you, the Call for God in you, you immediately recognize that it's true of every one of your Brothers and Sisters. And so now a new set of messengers have been sent out into your world to your Brothers and Sisters that must come back to you confirming the Holy Spirit in them. And now the leavening has increased.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: There are two ways of seeing your brother which are diametrically opposed to each other. They must both be in YOUR mind because YOU are the perceiver.

RAJ: Mind you, it doesn't say you are the Knower, the capital "K" Knowing of Truth. You are the perceiver.

RAJ READING: They must also be in HIS because you are perceiving HIM.

RAJ: Now, let's be clear here. It doesn't mean that it must actually be in him. But because you are in a state of perception, everything that is true about you will have to be true about him in your mind.

What is the answer to this? The solution? I'm reading.

RAJ READING: See him through the Holy Spirit in HIS mind,...

RAJ: And here the word "His" refers to Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: See him...

RAJ: Your Brother.

RAJ READING: ...through the Holy Spirit in HIS...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...mind and you will recognize Him...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...in YOURS. What you acknowledge in your brother you ARE acknowledging in yourself, and what you share you strengthen.

RAJ: Now again understand that this is a Law. What you share you strengthen and it's true in both operating systems. And so what you share from the ego strengthens the ego. And what you share from the Holy Spirit, the other operating system in you, is strengthened.

Now just for one further point of clarity. There's really only one operating system, and it's the Holy Spirit. The operating system called the ego is an imagined operating system made-up out of whole cloth, out of absolutely nothing, pure fantasy. But, being the Christ That You Are, being the Holy Son Or Daughter Of God That You Are that you can't stop being, you are using all of your Divine Power, if I may put it that way, to energize your fantasy. And you are bringing all of your Omnipotent Capacity to bear upon the reinforcement of your fantasy and the commitment to your fantasy so that you become highly focused. So highly focused on your fantasy that you block everything else out and you seem to make your fantasy real to you.

But understand this. All the time that you are seeming to succeed in making a fantasy real, you are doing it with That Which will forever keep it false. You are using your Capacity As The Christ, which means that that which negates the false sense of you is ever-present and keeping the sense of yourself that you're trying to establish from becoming real in any way. What you are using to create a fantasy is constantly negating the fantasy.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Voice of the Holy Spirit IS weak in you. That is why you MUST share it.

RAJ: You see that? By sharing It, you strengthen It. By sharing It, you embody It. By sharing It you energize It in your life, in your awareness, and It does not remain successfully hidden out of sight, therefore out of mind, and bind you to total ignorance, you might say.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It must be INCREASED in strength before YOU can hear it. It is impossible to hear it in yourself while it is so weak in your OWN mind.

RAJ: Or shall I say, so blocked in your own mind.

RAJ READING: It is not weak in itself, but it IS limited by your unwillingness to hear it. Will itself is an idea, and is therefore strengthened by being shared.

RAJ: You remember I mentioned that at the beginning of each Gathering Paul says, "Thy Will, not mine, be done. And let the reign of Divine Truth, Life, and Love be established in me and rule out of me all self-will."

There is will in both operating systems. In the ego operating system you think it's yours. You think it's a possession and something that gives you authority. In the Holy Spirit the Will is the Father's Will which All That The Father Is Be-ing yields to. In other words, the Infinite Creation of God is forever yielding to God by not claiming an existence of its own in its own right. You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Will itself is an idea, and is therefore strengthened by being shared. If you make the mistake of looking for the Holy Spirit in yourself alone, your meditations will frighten you because, by ADOPTING the ego's viewpoint, you are undertaking an ego-alien journey with the ego as GUIDE. This is BOUND to produce fear.

RAJ: And this is exactly why as you begin the shift of operating systems, you have to abandon the valuing of your ego and of your present sense of everything. And you must reach outside of the boundaries of it completely. You must reach out to the Holy Spirit as though it is something different from you. Because if you don't do that, you will have nothing to yield to, and yielding is the essential means of breaking the dream of isolation and waking up.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Delay is of the ego because time is ITS concept. Delay is obviously a time idea. Both time and delay are meaningless in eternity.

RAJ: In other words, in the other operating system.

RAJ READING: We have said before that the Holy Spirit is God's ANSWER to the ego. Everything of which the Holy Spirit reminds you is in direct opposition to the ego's notions because true and false perceptions are THEMSELVES opposed.

RAJ: Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit has the task of UNDOING what the ego has made.

RAJ: Uh oh! Uh oh! So your egos have been put on notice. But you must understand this so that you don't approach the Course thinking that what it's going to uncover to you is going to be helpful to your ego. If that's clear to you, then you will be able to more clearly see that the Course is going to help you shift operating systems whereby you become free of illusions. How? By coming into the conscious clear Experience of your Real Mind. And that is not a frightening proposition. You can swallow that. You can embrace that. And you can dare to explore that.

Reading.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...undoes it in the same realm of discourse in which the ego itself operates, or the mind would be unable to understand the change.

RAJ: Divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need. In other words, Divine Love meets you right where you are, right where the human need is, right in the same realm of discourse in which the ego itself operates. So rather than trying to escape the world and the universe, let the Holy Spirit in right where the need is, right where the world seems to be.

The world and universe, all of creation, is not something to rise above. It is something to invite the Holy Spirit into. Relationships aren't something to be gotten out of but something to invite the Holy Spirit and Its perspective into. Why? So that you might be able to share it with your Brother and strengthen It by the sharing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have repeatedly emphasized that one level of the mind is not understandable to another.

RAJ: In other words, one operating system is not understandable to another operating system.

RAJ READING: So it is with the ego and the Soul; with time and eternity. Eternity is an idea of God, so the Soul understands it perfectly. Time is a belief of the ego, so the lower mind, which IS the ego's domain, accepts it without question.

RAJ: We might also call the lower mind the imagined mind, the fantasy mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The only aspect of time which is really eternal is NOW. That is what we really mean when we say that "now is the only time." The literal nature of this statement does not mean anything to the ego, which interprets it, at best, to mean "don't worry about the future." That is not what it really means at all.

RAJ: Now is the present. The Presence, the present is where Presence presents Itself, where God Be's.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is the Mediator between the interpretations of the ego...

RAJ: One operating system.

RAJ READING: ...and the knowledge...

RAJ: Or capital "K" Knowing.

RAJ READING: ...of the Soul.

RAJ: The other Operating System.

RAJ READING: His ability to deal with symbols enables Him to work AGAINST the ego's beliefs in its own language.

RAJ: Mind you, your... I'm going to go back and reread this. Your Real Mind is the mediator between the interpretations of your fantasized mind and the Knowledge of the Soul. Your Right Mind's ability to deal with symbols enables It to work against your ego's beliefs in its own language.

[Editor's Note: Actual next sentence: His equal ability to look BEYOND symbols into eternity also enables Him to understand the laws of God, for which He speaks.]

RAJ: Your Real Mind's equal ability to look beyond symbols into eternity also enables It to understand the Laws of God, for which It speaks.

It's really important for you to read this understanding that when it refers to the Holy Spirit, it is referring to your Real Mind. This is integrating. And this affirms the Integrity of your Being divinely speaking that you never lost and which is fully functional in you right now. In the realization of this, it strengthens your ability to abandon your obsession with and commitment to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, the infrastructure, the operating system of the ego.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...can thus perform the function of REINTERPRETING what the ego makes, NOT by destruction, but by UNDERSTANDING. Understanding is light, and light leads to knowledge.

RAJ: Or capital "K" Knowing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Your Real Mind.

RAJ READING: ...is IN light because He...

RAJ: It.

RAJ READING: ...is in you who ARE light,...

RAJ: You see? You are Light.

RAJ READING: ...but you yourselves...

RAJ: From the ego's vantage point.

RAJ READING: ...do not know this. It is therefore the task of the Holy Spirit to reinterpret YOU on behalf of God.

RAJ: And what it doesn't say here is, "to you." That's the way Sanity returns. When your Real Mind, your capital "S" Sanity reinterprets your delusions to you and leaves you with understanding and thus brings about re-Integration.

Do you see how cohesive and integrated the means of Coming Home is? The essence of What You Divinely Are becomes the building blocks of your Awakening. That's Integrity and that's Love. And it requires you to be willing to honor something in you beyond your current limited definitions of yourselves. And to the degree that you acknowledge and value the Something Of Essential Integrity in you and you let It find experiencing, or extension, It becomes strengthened in you and in your Brother and Sister and in your world because there are no private thoughts.

You're not tiny and you're not separated, and therefore the Essential You exists, functions, acts in its Wholeness which is Universal. When you are awake there is nothing you can do or be that does not constitute a Universal Experience for All That Exists. That's how expansive the benefit of your sharing is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You cannot understand yourselves alone. This is because you have no meaning APART from your rightful place in the Sonship, and the rightful place of the Sonship in God.

RAJ: Another way of saying this is what was said earlier, that you have no meaning separated from your Father. Denying your Father, existing separate from your Father causes you not to be a Son or a Daughter. It causes you to lose the experience of your Identity, and without Identity you are meaningless. You see?

RAJ READING: You cannot understand yourselves alone. This is because you have no meaning APART from your rightful place in the Sonship, and the rightful place of the Sonship in God. This is your life, your eternity, and YOURSELF. It is of this that the Holy Spirit reminds you. It is this that the Holy Spirit SEES. This vision invariably frightens the ego because it is so calm. Peace is the ego's greatest enemy because, according to ITS interpretation of reality, war is the guarantee of its survival.

RAJ: That's part of the underlying structure of the other operating system.

RAJ READING: The ego becomes strong in strife. If you believe there IS strife, you will react viciously because the idea of danger has entered your mind. The idea itself IS an appeal to the ego.

RAJ: But listen to this.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Your Real Mind.

RAJ READING: ...is as vigilant as the ego to the call of danger, opposing it with His strength just as the ego WELCOMES it with all its might.

RAJ: So, if there's any question in anybody's mind about whether there's a difference between right and wrong, or that it's just a matter of one man's meat is another man's poison, let us no longer be confused about this. There is right and wrong. There is that which is opposed to something else between which a choice has to be made.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit counters this welcome by welcoming peace. Peace and eternity are as closely related as are time and war. Perception as well as knowledge...

RAJ: Or capital "K" Knowing.

RAJ READING: ...derives meaning from relationships.

RAJ: That's the same in both operating systems.

RAJ READING: Those which you accept are the foundations of your beliefs.

RAJ: The infrastructure. The operating system.

RAJ READING: The separation is merely another term for...

RAJ: What? Not a distance between you and your Father, but...

RAJ READING: ...a split mind.

RAJ: It's one part of you separated from another part of you by a conscious act of denial of the part that's being left out in the cold, the part that's being ignored. That's the separation. It's not really a separation from God. It's a movement from the clear Experience of Reality into a purely fantastic imagined experience.

Again.

RAJ READING: The separation is merely another term for a split mind. It was not an act, but a THOUGHT. Therefore, the idea of separation can be given away, just as the idea of unity can. Either way, the idea will be strengthened IN THE MIND OF THE GIVER.

RAJ: Again, either way it's a law. Either way the idea will be strengthened. Where? In the mind of the giver.

Do you see why this needs to be addressed before we talk about... well, let's say how to do miracles, how to change your world, how to heal, how to redeem, how to regenerate, how to bless? If you don't realize that you've been operating according to an operating system which at some point you imaginatively created for yourself, then you are lost. You're totally unconscious of anything except the trap of the fantasy that you are consumed by.

When you learn that it is an operating system and not a fact, and that there is another operating system and the other operating system is valid, but the one you've been using is invalid, you have made an unsettling discovery. One that is appropriately called a disillusioning discovery. Disillusioning because you're in a position of recognizing that there is an illusion that can be abandoned because there's a real operating system. So you're not lost, but everything that you had valued isn't really valuable.

And so, if you don't understand this, and if you don't realize that the Call for God is a call to another operating system, you will just continue to take every new spiritual expression and try to use it from the operating system currently in use and will remain stuck. What we're uncovering here is the fact that there are two operating systems going on in you. Not operating systems being enforced from some outside source but entirely within the singular presence that you are. One of them disintegrates you and one of them integrates you. Knowing this means that you can now make a choice. But making the choice is going to require that you yield what you have valued to that which is apparently unknown to you because you have so successfully blocked It off from yourself. But now you know the direction to move in. And you know that the Holy Spirit is your own Real Mind, and that therefore any exploration into It will constitute an increased Integrity of your Essential Valuable Being.

So now you know what needs to be addressed. And in the addressing of that successfully by persistence until the connection is made and then the broadening of the connection, you will find through the reinterpretation of everything that you've been aware of by the Holy Spirit, by your Real Mind, you will shift operating systems. You may not do it wholly all at once. You may do it as Paul does it; frequently but not all the time. But every moment you spend connected to the Holy Spirit, your Real Mind, you find yourself extending, giving, sharing what you find yourself Knowing in that Place. And the extension of it always involves the acknowledgement that the Truth you're experiencing is true about your Brother, and therefore about yourself, and the leaven increases the leavening.

Continuing.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read: The ego is the symbol of separation, just as the Holy Spirit is the symbol of peace. What you perceive in others you are strengthening in YOURSELF.]

RAJ READING: You...

RAJ: From the old operating system.

RAJ READING: ...let your mind misperceive, but the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Your Real Mind.

RAJ READING: ...lets your mind reinterpret its own misperceptions.

RAJ: Now that's called education. And that's called learning. And that's called change. And that's called redemption.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is the perfect teacher.

RAJ: Can you imagine a Teacher more perfect for you than your Self with a capital "S"? If you stop to think about it, it's quite incredible the way your reawakening is set up because it's so full of Integrity. And it's so foolproof.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is the perfect teacher. He uses only what your minds ALREADY understand to teach you that you do NOT understand it. The Holy Spirit can deal with an unwilling learner without going counter to his will because part of his will IS still for God.

RAJ: Part of your will is still for God.

RAJ READING: Despite the ego's attempts to conceal this part it is still much stronger than the ego, even though the ego does not recognize it.

RAJ: That in you which is the Will for God, no matter how much you've blocked it from your awareness, is still stronger than the infrastructure of mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you have created.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit recognizes it perfectly because it is His own dwelling place, or the place in the mind where He is at home.

YOU are at home there, too, because it is a place of peace and peace is of God. You who are part of God are not at home EXCEPT in His peace. If peace is eternal, you are at home only in eternity. The ego made the world as IT perceives it, but the Holy Spirit, the REINTERPRETER of what the ego made, sees it only as a teaching device for bringing you home.

RAJ: And so I and the Holy Spirit say, "Look at the roses. Look at the petals. Look at the glass on the glass-topped table and be willing to see something new there, something that doesn't fit the definitions that you've given to it. Be willing to see the Presence of God. Be willing to see an Idea there, rather than matter. Be willing to see the Substance of Spirit there, instead of the substance of matter. Look with innocent eyes."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit must perceive time and reinterpret it into the timeless. The mind must be led into eternity THROUGH time because, having made time, it is capable of perceiving its opposite.

RAJ: Remember I said before that the only "creative"—and that word "creative" should be in quotes—the only "creative" capacity you have as an ego is to block the Experience of Creation. There is no capacity to make a new creation. So the only capacity you have as an ego to be "creative" is to block off more and more and more of Creation from your Conscious Awareness.

So:

RAJ READING: The mind must be led into eternity THROUGH time because, having made time, it is capable...

RAJ: It is capable.

RAJ READING: ...of perceiving its opposite.

RAJ: If you are capable of seeming to create something for yourself through an act of denial of Reality, then you know at the bottom line there is a choice other than what you're experiencing because you used that other choice as the point of denial in order to create the illusion.

SEEKER (Susan): [faint, no microphone] It's too much. It's too much. I have to speak up from my integrity.

RAJ: No, this needs to be...

SEEKER: [with microphone] Well, okay. I've just got through spending six weeks reading a manual from my sewing machine that I don't understand. And then I go take a class and I have a teacher reading that manual to me, and I'm sorry, I don't get that manual. Now I don't learn this way. I can't learn this way. It's, you know, it's bulldozing my mind and I have to speak up.

I learn by taking one jewel and assimilating it and embracing it fully. When I have this wealth of one concept after another being presented, I can't absorb it. And there are so many questions I have after each paragraph, I have to speak up and say something. I have to say I can't move this fast because I want to learn what's in here.

And so I have to say, you know, either I have to wait... I'm so... it raises my frustration level much like a child must who first enters first and second grade, you know, and they're on to the fourth grade material. I have to say something here because if I don't I'm overlooking what I intuitively love about this book, but yet not fully understood.

Now Paul and I have discussed this behind the scenes already. This is not new. I'm not throwing something at him. But I've got to speak up here because we're all involved in this. And I've already run over must be ten different ideas that I'm not grasping. Now maybe the human mind may never grasp it but somewhere I've got to be in sync with it. So I'm begging can we move a little slower where I am not getting enough examples for in depth understanding.

And I wonder if others in the group are feeling this way. I just had to say it.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'm coming unglued. I'm coming unglued absolutely.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'm not. I'm right with you.

ANOTHER SEEKER: Fast or slow once in a while I get.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'm really following with this. For me, and it's only because I had a really odd experience back in like 2000. It's called like a kundalini experience and it was just like my mind was really opened. And this was like I had a vision and it was just like there was nothing but white light, you know, with God and it was just pure peace and everything like that. And then for some reason I felt a fall or a separation take place. And it was just like all of a sudden it was just like I've fallen and it was one mass ball of light and it was falling in a spiral circle and it seemed to create the stars and everything. And then I seem to be on this planet and it seemed like my consciousness had been split asunder and thrown everywhere.

And what I found was, is that from what you're saying is, is that everything that I'm seeing and everything like that is just the idea that I had of separation. And that as I start to open myself up and let go of my ego definitions of who I think I am and start loving and opening up to everything, the Reality of the situation of being in the real world with God and everything will be my full experience as I open up and allow the Holy Spirit to make that conscious again. I fully understand what he's saying.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I'm feeling very connected with what Susan was expressing. And as I'm hearing you read on and explain this, my mind is working in picture form and I'm trying to get an analogy that would help me to understand from this ego perception that I'm experiencing. And one of the things that came to my mind that was sort of helpful was, you know, I'm seeing this paper cup on the table and imagining that if there's an infilling of Love that comes into this perception, ego perception that I'm seeing myself as a paper cup that can be filled from meditating, let's say. And then if I say, "okay, now I've got this infilling" and I close the top of that paper cup and say, "now this is mine, I have this," then I'm closing off the capability of continuing to be filled so that I'm overflowing and then I actually have the capacity to love and to give, but it's not my giving. It's the overflowing of the Holy Spirit that is just filling this to overflowing. And I just... my ego perception wants to take credit for extending Love, and when I try to do that I block the flow of Love.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: So it's kind of... I don't if that's helping. But when you're saying that by giving we're reinforcing that experience...

RAJ: Strengthening it.

SEEKER: Strengthening it. To me I can't give something that I don't have and so...

RAJ: That is...

SEEKER: ...I don't have any love of my own from an ego standpoint except a sort of a bargain kind of idea of love. And the Real Love Is Of God.

RAJ: Indeed, and one of the elements that allows you to know whether it's coming from the ego or from the Holy Spirit or the Father is that when it is not from your ego, you will have no way of making a connection to what has happened where you can say, "I was responsible for that. I did that." You will know you were involved but there will be no way to feel that you authored it. You will know that you were inseparable from it and you will have the joy of the experience, but afterwards you will have to say something to the effect that, "I was filled with inspiration and what came forth was incredibly beautiful, wonderful or helpful, but," quote, "It didn't come from me," unquote, meaning I wasn't the originator of it.

SEEKER: So we can remain innocent that way.

RAJ: You could look at it that way, yes.

When it's from the ego you will definitely be able to take credit for it and feel pride around it. Now it is an entirely new way of being to be the Presence of the Movement of Love without being able to take credit for it. To be something wonderful, to be the Presence of Fulfillment, to be a true agent for change is a new kind of experience because a personal sense of authorship is not connected with it in any way. But it doesn't bother you because there was such a complete experience of involvement with It that you were inseparable from It. That kind of experience of being a truly meaningful Presence without having authored the event, that is part of being from the new operating system.

And you will experience a sense of loss of the previous capacity you had to be able to take credit and to feel pride and to think that you knew that it validated you as a worthwhile being. There will seem to be the loss of that experience but it will be replaced by something entirely different, that being as I said the experience of being inseparable from the Movement Itself, of that Movement not being different from you in any way. And the only way I can put this is having the Experience of having been Meaningful because there is infinite feedback from all your Brothers and Sisters who are awake confirming, I'm going to say, God In The Event. This is a new way of experiencing Identity.

SEEKER: I've had glimpses of that in my past and I long for that to return. And I really want to appreciate Susan's courage to come forth and express the frustration that I feel too. But at the same time I also sometimes wonder... you know we get so much intellectual... I mean the words that are being given in this Text and your explanation, sometimes it almost seems it's, like Susan said, it's too much. And it sort of confounds the mind almost like one of those... what do they call those... Buddhist quatrains or something, I don't know what they called them, where it so confuses the mind that finally the mind just says, "I give up." And in that giving up then maybe there's a chance for us to feel the Love that's being extended.

And I really feel it here. When I come in the door and I smell Susan's cooking, [getting emotional] that fills me every bit as much as listening to you, Raj. I just... I'm sorry, I'm getting emotional. I want to pass the mic to somebody.

RAJ: Indeed, Susan, what you were feeling was like a child in a small river nine to twelve inches deep sitting on the rocky bottom and enjoying a little bit of buoyancy so that with a little push on the rocks, she would float a little bit and the current would move her. But then having moved or been moved by the current to an area a little shallower where the current was faster, finding that when she buoyed herself off the pebbles she was moved faster than she anticipated, and felt a loss of control. Indeed, what I'm engaged in here doesn't have so much to do with the words as it has to do with having exactly the right ideas expressed in exactly the right timing so that it causes aha's to occur.

Now I'm going to honor at the same time your request. We have gone many weeks without the ability to interact. And so I'm going to invite everyone this week to give some thought to what we have talked about and what questions you have had. And we will devote next Sunday, or at least as much time as it takes to answer or explore the questions that concerns the doubts or whatever that you might have. This format will not continue indefinitely. It has been appropriate and it will continue to be appropriate for a short time.

I commend you for speaking up. And I encourage all of you whether it's here or whether it's when you're dealing with your own Guide, when you feel like you've just had it, then stop and have it out. Maintain that degree of integrity and realness with your Guide or the Holy Spirit or the Father.

SEEKER (previous): Or your wife.

RAJ: Someone said, "Or your wife." Your wife is as good an object of your affection as the Holy Spirit is. Yes. Yes.

ANOTHER SEEKER: I can't always go along with whatever's going on. And I've not found it to be a problem to stay with you all the while. And I don't get in the road. So what do you have, and I think I already know what the answer is, is that I accept. And we can go next week and ask all kinds of questions that we don't understand. Except my position...

RAJ: I want the questions to relate to what we have been reading about. It will not shift into, let us say, a typical Gathering where questions about all different subjects can be brought up. We're here discussing and exploring the ideas expressed in the Course.

SEEKER: And so being that, there's a good possibility that I don't have any questions. That my part is to be gracious and allow for the questions even though I would just love for you to continue on and just talk for hours and hours more and I wouldn't leave you ever. So that's my part is to just sit and listen to questions.

RAJ: Your Brothers and Sisters with questions are as worthy an object of your affection as Mark's wife is.

SEEKER: I agree. I agree. I knew the answer. And I go along.

SEEKER (Susan): Has this been on the internet?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: One more thing. The value I see in pausing while we're moving along swiftly here is... I'll give an example. There's a paragraph here that's hanging me up. Mainly it's the language whether it's in this book or the other one. It's still the language that's hanging me up. I don't know if I should go into it.

RAJ: I will ask you to save it for next week.

SEEKER: May I say something though not about the Course?

RAJ: Certainly.

SEEKER: I hope I don't forget. Whatever paragraph would be hanging me up, if I happen to have an unrecognized part of me that's interpreting but imagining that I'm joined and I'm not paying attention to the level of frustration that I'm experiencing because there is an unrecognized part of me or of what I thought I was, interpreting it, I can't move any further until there is a shift of... it's like in meditation. Once you see that you're in a stuck level or an altered state, the moment you see it, the moment you grasp where that misperception was, the moment you see it, you can move beyond it.

But obviously there's some identification that I'm having here that's preventing me from seeing truly what's in that paragraph. And so I can't move forward. And the group's going to have to wait or I'm going to have to go over there and do my homework.

ANOTHER SEEKER: We'll wait.

SEEKER (Susan): You know, because...

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: ...I have to recognize that what it was in that strata that I was seeing with that I don't need, in order then to get back into the movement and it be smooth sailing again. And that requires me to pause. If I don't pause, I will stay stuck where I am and everybody else moves forward, which increases my frustration. And they've all gotten it, but here I am stuck.

So I think it's a learning procedure, a process. And if somebody else were saying this, you know, I could feel quite impatient with it and say, "Come on. I know this stuff. I've known it for twenty years." Well, guess what? I know this stuff and I have known it for twenty years. But something's hanging me up. And I'm sorry to miss the beauty of letting this sink in, because I want it to sink in and lift me even further out of a personal sense of self. Okay.

RAJ: Yes. Thank you. I know that there are others who thank you for speaking up.

We will end on this note of appreciation. And I look forward and I know many others look forward to next Sunday. Thank you for being very real.

I love you all.

October 12, 2003--A Course In Miracles Study Group with Raj/Jesus

Discussion Today

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

I would like to start with some comments. The last time we gathered, we ended with a discussion about, let us say, the rate of speed with which I was moving and the fact that there wasn't enough time for everything to settle in, to be dealt with. And so I indicated that today we would take time for you to address portions of the book that we moved over quickly that there is lack of clarity about for you and that you wish to have clarity about.

I want to say something. We call this an ACIM Study Group and we have been for over a year discussing and moving through the Course. But you know what? I'm not really here trying to illuminate the words in a book. This isn't about quote "a course of study" unquote. At the bottom line, the Course is all about you. It's not about the Course.

My Function here is not to illuminate the Course but to illuminate you--Who You Divinely Are--to yourself, or shall I say, your Self, with a capital "S", to you. You are the focal point because you are the ones having the dream, the nightmare. The book isn't having a dream. And the purpose of the book is to cause you to experience your Self more clearly. The purpose of the book is to give you language and concepts that will undo the sense of yourself which you carry with you and reinforce and embody and actify, if I may put it that way, and undo it. The book is not the focal point. Your Real Self is and your, what you would call as an ego, your potential is the focal point. Divine potential, not ego potential.

So far, as we have read, I have been bringing the attention back to you, using it to help you see how you utilize your mind, and the starting point that you are using.

Last week, the last meeting I pointed out there are two different operating systems. One of the them is Real in You, and one is the one you have made-up. Everything that we have read up to this point has helped to provide language and concepts that will allow you to grasp this. But you know what? We're at a point of transition here, you might say, out of the theoretical into the practical where it stops being something you're studying about; ideas that you're able to put together, classify, categorize, put into your memory banks, and then draw from, like legal boiler plate, phrases, statements that can be pulled out of a memory bank and put together in fresh new ways, intriguing ways, surprising ways.

It's not about gathering anything from memory banks, and it's not about putting anything into memory banks. It's not about finding something new to incorporate into your mutually-agreed-upon definitions, refining them and perfecting them and making them be more spiritual while still functioning from an operating system which is purely imaginary and has nothing to do with Reality.

Your boiler plate, your definitions, and the way you have put everything together to give you a sense of what everything is about so you may feel secure, is what you are about to be willing to abandon, if indeed you want to wake up, if indeed you want to regain your Sanity. In abandoning this, it feels like abandoning your security. But you know what? Your security has always been derived from your ability to give quick responses because you can access your memory quickly and efficiently so that you have a rebuttal, you have an idea that overrides the idea that has been expressed. That's not really security. It's just a good defense system.

When you move into the other Operating System, you move into a place where your immediate response to anything is, "I don't know what the answer is," and where you abandon the attempt to have the quick answer, the quick rebuttal that supercedes whatever came before it. Switching to the other Operating System is a matter of moving into the, I'm going to say, forever unknown and letting yourself be there in your Peace with the inevitable curiosity that will accompany it. You may not know what the answer is, but you know there's a question. You know there's a need. And in the silence of not attempting to provide the quick rebuttal, the quick answer, you find insight, revelation occurring. You find yourself knowing in that moment what to do, what to say, how to phrase it, how to intone it. And you know what? Your behavior will always be a blessing. But you know something else? What you have found yourself expressing that constituted a blessing doesn't become a bit of information to store in your memory banks, because that is not the way the new Operating System works. It doesn't have any memory banks.

The new Operating System where you have gone to the Place of Excellence in You and you have said, "Thy Will be done, not mine," means that you forever stand at unknowing attention with curiosity, openness so that your appropriateness in every given moment is fresh and original and expresses the Living Will of God in the Now.

As you make the conscious and conscientious effort to shift to the other Operating System, what I'm going to call the new Operating System, the Holy Spirit, as you make conscious and conscientious effort to do that more and more consistently and find yourself being able to be utterly appropriate in the moment, always with a blessing accompanying it, you will begin to find security in never knowing anything beforehand. A new experience of security will occur, and it will reinforce itself without your having to try to have to reinforce it. It will reinforce itself, not because you are consistently expressing a clear will, but because you are consistently being willful-less.

None of you realizes the degree to which the tone of your voice and your choice of words is governing your ignorance, is governing and securing your ignorance, your dream.

So, you have been my focus all along--not the Course. The Course is being used as a means of providing language that will allow you to somewhat gracefully shift from the current operating system to the Real Operating System in You. That's what it's all about.

Now, who has questions about what we've been discussing in the Course that you would like clarification on? And if you will give us the page numbers.

SEEKER: This would be on page 93.

RAJ: Of the sparkly book.

SEEKER: That's correct.

RAJ: Okay, this is for those who are in the first or second edition, this would be on the second page of chapter five.

SEEKER: Okay. Here it talks about giving; the whole idea of giving is losing and how...

RAJ: Which paragraph are you looking at?

SEEKER: It's the whole, it's "Healing as Joining." It's in that entire paragraph. For instance, in the last sentence it says:

SEEKER READING: If you can accept the concept that the world IS one of ideas, the whole belief in the false association which the ego makes between giving and LOSING is gone. (H-#101)

SEEKER: Do you see that, that last sentence there?

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Okay. The whole concept of this paragraph is about the whole idea of scarcity, I think, versus abundance. In other words, it makes the... it presents the concept that if you share a... if you give someone a thing... okay, it looks like you lose the thing and the other person gains it. But if you give a person an idea, it does not diminish your holding the idea but actually increases, makes it bigger. The other person has the idea and you have the idea, and the more people that believe in the idea the stronger the idea becomes.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Here is what the... and now I want to take this concept and put it into my everyday life. So here's the question. Let's talk about... and of course scarcity in the lives of myself and others is often about money. The whole question of money. So my question that immediately came up for me was if you believe in this particular concept, if you believe in the idea of this particular concept, then would it be possible for you to experience a lack in your life as far as materiality is concerned?

RAJ: If you believe in this particular concept meaning?

SEEKER: The concept of giving is and sharing is increasing as opposed to giving as losing. You follow me?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: Okay. So the thing that immediately came up for me was that if I'm totally 100% in belief of this idea, would I experience scarcity, lack, need in my life? In other words, is what... for instance, if I do experience scarcity, lack, and lack of whatever it is I feel I need to continue, is it because I'm not fully invested in this whole idea that this paragraph puts across? Does that make sense what I'm getting at?

RAJ: I am going to ask you to say it again more succinctly.

SEEKER: Okay. You want me to repeat the idea again? Okay. Let me see if I can find the exact sentence that... okay.

SEEKER READING: If you think about it, you will see that, while this kind of thinking is totally alien to having THINGS,... (H-#101)

SEEKER: That is, the idea of "when you give you lose."

SEEKER READING: ...even to the lower mind it is quite comprehensible in connection with IDEAS. If you share a physical possession, you DO divide its ownership. If you share an idea, however, you do NOT lessen it. ALL of it is still yours, although all of it has been given away. Further, if the person to whom you give it accepts it as HIS, he reinforces it in YOUR mind, and thus INCREASES it. (H-#101)

SEEKER: So in the world of ideas, it's quite obvious. In the world of things, it's hard to see. So my question is if I fully invest, if I'm 100% vested in this idea of "giving is increasing," then could scarcity, lack of anything be experienced in my particular experience?

RAJ: You would indeed find your needs being met. I'm going to ask you to become even more specific. What kind of things are you talking about giving?

SEEKER: Well, money is a perfect example. In my own life, I operate at a deficit. And so, instead of saying, well, the folks out there in yoga-land in this particular neighborhood aren't just getting it, they don't see the value of what I'm doing, I'm a bad teacher, you know, all of the ego bullshit that will come up that will condemn me or my Brother for as why this is in a deficit situation. So I'm in the process of trying to re-look at the situation, change my perspective. And this particular paragraph, you know, is that what I have to do? Do I have to change my mind in order to change what is in my experience?

RAJ: You do indeed.

SEEKER: How would I do that?

RAJ: You have to arrive at a point where you have to decide whether there is anything, anything that can justify your withholding your Gift. As long as there is anything that can justify your withholding your Gift, your Gift is not complete. There can be no joy in the sharing of It. And that will be reflected back to you as insufficiency of some sort, providing you the opportunity to solidify and unify your commitment to your Function to be that which extends what is valuable, what meets the need, whatever it is the Father's Will that you be the expression of.

SEEKER: In my experience, what I'm experiencing right now is I do all that I can. It's taken priority in my life to extend the Gift to... for people who say they can't pay, to say, "You can have it for free. You don't have to pay. It's my pleasure to give it to you." I see it as more important than the fee for the class is watching people progress in the practice. That seems to give me the most joy because I recognize that at the level that I'm at right now, I'm never going to be able to, or at least I can't foresee getting enough from this financially to make me wealthy, or in any way well off. So, there's that. Then the... I don't see myself withholding anything from the people who I teach, at this point. And I don't, I thought I was beyond the idea of making it about money.

So I keep... what I'm saying is there's still confusion. What is it that I'm specifically not doing or feeling or seeing that continues to deny me to be able to move comfortably monetarily in the situation, or feel that I'm... In other words, what am I doing that's not working? If it's not them, it's gotta be me. And that... I always look at me as being the problem. So where is the problem?

RAJ: Sometimes the problem is with them. And sometimes you are there to be the one to provide the illumination, the clarification of the fact that sharing is a two-way street. Sharing is a mutual thing. And so you're going to have to listen in the moment as to how to be with a particular individual or a particular group as to what you are going to say, and how you are going to illuminate what is still covered in their mind about the mutuality of Gift. Because, mind you, they are coming still from the place you are emerging from, perhaps even more solidly than you, and so it doesn't make sense to them. And so education, illumination needs to happen. And you're going to have to listen on the spot as to what it is that will need to be said.

SEEKER: There is also some guilt that I have in this situation because, like Paul and Susan, they don't... there is no fee for... they give and it's up to you, us to determine what that Gift is worth, or how much we're moved to give, or so it's all on a volunteer basis.

But yet I in my particular practice say well, if you come to this class, it's this amount of money. If you come, you know, you pay twelve classes. There is a fee. It makes it easy for everyone. It's ten dollars, or nine dollars, or whatever, twelve dollars.

RAJ: It makes it easy for everyone because it doesn't challenge the current operating system, and it doesn't promote a shift to the other Operating System.

SEEKER: Right. Exactly. So my guilt comes up with I'm not doing that. So my question is, is that my next step? Is to make it a donation basis in my particular practice? I mean am I... am I... is that my fear? My withholding my...

RAJ: It is, and understand that a certain amount of education is going to have to accompany the shift.

SEEKER: You mean of me or of them?

RAJ: Of them, of those who you are teaching. Yes.

SEEKER: So is it time to do that? Or is it like I have to get more comfortable with the concept?

RAJ: Well, let's put it this way. The ego is never going to get more comfortable with the concept.

[Michael and scattered audience laughing] And there is no time like the present to break the habit, to break the pattern, to make an excursion into the new Operating System, the new Premise.

SEEKER: The last thing that comes up for me around this whole idea of abundance is the whole idea of conservation. Conservation from... on the individual level as far as recycling is concerned. In other words, saving your waste paper and taking it to the recycling center, driving an automobile that doesn't burn a lot of gas, and limiting your trips to only those that are necessary, and on and on and on and on. How does that fit into the whole idea of abundance and not buy into the whole idea of limited resources and scarcity and pollution and et cetera?

RAJ: [laughing] To be intelligent doesn't constitute a practice of limitation or scarcity. To organize your waste so that it can be processed efficiently and recycled, not out of lack, but out of honoring the abundance that you have, the abundance that you have that you're throwing away. This does not constitute scarcity.

To limit your trips to conserve on fuel does not make sense. To be able to increase your ability to make trips without losing is intelligent. And so the means to make as many trips as you wish and not pollute is intelligent. Conservation, thrift is the means by which you block the experience of abundance.

SEEKER: I'm not getting it. It's like you just said two different things. In one sense you said conservation makes sense, and is intelligent...

RAJ: In what sense?

SEEKER: Pardon me?

RAJ: Feed back to me in what sense.

SEEKER: In the sense of recycling, for instance.

RAJ: I didn't say that had anything to do with thrift. I said it had to do with the intelligent use of abundance that you have that you're throwing away.

SEEKER: Okay. But then for instance, to buy a gas hog and...

RAJ: The aluminum, the glass, and so on, that is a resource; an already existing asset, you might say. To handle it intelligently so that it remains an asset doesn't constitute thrift. It constitutes simple wisdom.

SEEKER: What about, for instance, like consumerism where you just go out and buy stuff. You buy, buy, buy. And you say, "Well, why not? Everything is abundant." And then it just gets thrown away, or...

RAJ: What is the motivation for the buying?

SEEKER: Well, obviously...

RAJ: If it's to fulfill a need or fulfill a purpose, a function, if you are buying to be able to do something to be able to make the Gift...

SEEKER: Ahh.

RAJ: ...but if you are buying to keep up with the Joneses, or if you are buying so as to appear to be successful when you're not, or if you are buying to feel important, now you're clearly in the ego, and this is not what we're talking about.

SEEKER: How about the question of like luxury? For instance, you know, buying a big beautiful, comfortable car that just really, you know, gets five miles to the gallon versus having a compact economical car because you feel that it's easier on the environment?

RAJ: The question is what purpose is the vehicle going to serve?

SEEKER: Well, in one sense it serves the purpose of making me comfortable, and making me feel like I'm in the lap of luxury versus the whole idea of feeling...

RAJ: Let's stop right there. Quote "the lap of luxury" unquote. That is pure ego bullshit. It's a concept. Lap of luxury.

SEEKER: Well, I think...

RAJ: Now, to have a car so that you feel like you're in the "lap of luxury" is way off base. To be comfortable, to be surrounded by that which is beautiful, is a divine thing. And you know what? There's a whole area of freedom and enjoyment that is being missed out on because, for example, the Volkswagen could be designed so that it is beautiful inside with cherry wood and leather and comfortable seats so that everything about it is as enjoyable as you associate what is enjoyable about a BMW or a Rolls Royce.

What is the purpose that it serves? You may need a car that is a larger car, because part of the Gift you make involves driving other people, as well as yourself, where the room is needed. Does what you have serve the Gift you're giving? Or does it serve a personal satisfaction? Does what you have embody and further fulfill the Gift that you have to give. You see?

SEEKER: Yes. I don't want to get too far off track. I just want to ask one more question. Could you in this paragraph it talks about Soul. And I've looked through the material and cannot find a definition. It talks about higher mind and it talks about Soul. The higher mind follows the Soul. Could you give us a definition, a working definition of Soul?

RAJ: Soul means Individuality. Individuality means indivisibility. Individuality means indivisible and therefore undivided. And I have also given you a definition of Soul and that definition is, the capacity to sense and feel what is divinely Real. It is what you would call the Divine Mind's Capacity to Feel the capital "M" Meaning of Everything.

Therefore the word "Individuality" means you. And you are the Function of glorifying God by recognizing God in each and every thing. You're very Being is the Function of recognizing God in everything, acknowledging God in everything, feeling What God Is Being in everything. And you witnessing to God are inseparable from God.

The most clearly I can put it in words is that you recognizing God in everything is God Himself recognizing Himself in everything. Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

What page?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: What page are you...

SEEKER: In the same area. Refining this more into a for me which is kind of a personal dilemma, the idea of surrendering. What's been coming up for me is...

RAJ: When I finish the sentence,...

SEEKER: I'm sorry.

RAJ: Surrendering...

SEEKER: Surrendering the ego into that place which seems like a void, risking letting go of everything with the promise that a greater or a complete fulfillment awaits us. And what...

RAJ: Fortunately you don't have to do that in one giant leap. Because as with the Prodigal Son, the moment you start Home the Father comes out to meet you. The moment you start Home the Holy Spirit that is your Real Mind is present to meet you right where you are to facilitate the rest of your journey Home.

Continue.

SEEKER: That's nice to hear, but in my own personal experience, when I get close to that place of surrendering into that silence, in meditation, for example, my ego is scratching and clawing and insinuating stuff like, "Okay if you want to become one who is awake, then you're no longer going to get to have any physical and emotional intimacy with anyone. And it's already pretty sparse. And so are you sure that's where you want to go?" And...

RAJ: It tempts you.

SEEKER: These kinds of things, and my Higher Self is saying, "Yes, but I remember having the experience of that state of mind for a while earlier in life and I didn't feel like I was missing anything."

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: But now where I'm at because I'm not in a relationship, I miss being close and intimate and having a heart connection with someone, you know. So there's this dichotomy going on in me and...

RAJ: And it's going on in everyone.

SEEKER: And I think most of us beings who are associating our bodies and emotions as males are wanting probably more intimacy than the female gender seems to want to have. I don't know. It just seems to me like that's a common perception anyway.

RAJ: Well, come on. Be honest. Even when you're getting more, it's still not a happy life, is it?

SEEKER: That's correct. There's a price to pay.

RAJ: What I mean is when you're getting more, the fundamental problematic nature of existence still confronts you.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: The promise though is that if you shift operating systems, you will still have intimacy except that now it will be able to be infinitely intimate. But you also have the promise of losing the problematic nature of existence. The question is are you miserable enough yet to have the willingness to try something new? Or are you not adventurous enough yet because you can tolerate the misery?

SEEKER: That's exactly... I'm glad you brought that up because I've been thinking like, you know, I'm in this lukewarm state and God make me miserable enough so that I can give up like I did before.

RAJ: God can't make you any more miserable than you are.

SEEKER: Because I'm not miserable enough evidently to go into complete surrender and say I'm through with trying to do this on my own and just give in into God.

RAJ: At least you're honest enough to acknowledge that. And there's nothing...

SEEKER: And if I could be more miserable, maybe I would give up. I don't know.

RAJ: You have been more miserable than this and you didn't give up.

SEEKER: Well, once I did.

RAJ: So what's the answer? I can't cause misery for you to make you change your mind. I can't do anything to get you to change your mind. All I can do is to inform you of your option, of your opportunity. So maybe it would be helpful for you to know that until you change your mind, you're stuck. Just very simply.

SEEKER: And I'm not likely to go lay on a bed of nails or something just so I can be more miserable than I am.

RAJ: No, because you would pick a bed of nails that would be tolerable. The nails wouldn't be so far apart that it would be intolerable. You see, it's all a game. It's all a game. All of you are all playing a game. And even your misery that you create for yourself is always just as much as you can tolerate. And I'm going to tell you something. You create illness for yourself that is terminal, and you know what? Even that is tolerable to you. Even that is tolerable to you. So the threat of death is not sufficient to cause you to change your mind. Interesting, huh? So at the bottom line the reason for your changing your mind is not going to be the depth of your misery. It's going to come from some place else. And it's going to come from a place of conscious intelligence within you that finally says, "You know what? I'm going to abandon this foolish game and I'm going to head for Home just because."

SEEKER: It's good to hear that Awakened Ones have an even fuller experience of what we in the ego state consider pretty fulfilling.

RAJ: "We in the ego state." You're not in an ego state! You're acting out an ego state.

SEEKER: Well, okay. I guess I didn't state it right.

RAJ: No, you stated it the way everybody states it and it's a way you keep yourself fuzzy. You're not in an ego state and you don't have an ego. You are the Christ behaving in a consciously selected way and then believing the choice of behavior that you've chosen to practice. You say, "Those who are awake blah, blah, blah." And I'm telling you that you at this moment, which I have referred to as the Place of Excellence in you who you think you are at the moment, is fully in possession of its faculties as the Christ right now, right there where you are. At the moment because you're in denial of it, it's called the Holy Spirit. But the Holy Spirit is your very Being, your very Divinity. It is your Divine Perspective which is being constantly derived from the Movement of God, your Source.

Now, this section that we're looking at is called "Healing as Joining." If you want to wake up, if you want to finally be rid of the misery of the quote "human condition" unquote, you're going to choose to join with One Who Is Awake. You're going to turn to the Altar to gather the Facts of Being from the Father through the Holy Spirit, or your Guide which serves the same Function as the Holy Spirit. And you'll persist in that until it's more and more consistent, and more and more continuous. And that's the way you're going to shift operating systems. And if you decide to be fuzzy and not make up your mind quite yet, go ahead and do it. Don't make up your mind quite yet, but be aware You Are The Ultimate right now, the Christed One, the Son of God, choosing in this moment to behave as though you are less than that and then choosing to believe what your behavior expresses, thereby apparently forgetting Who You Are.

Now, a word to everyone. Everyone incarnated, I'm going to put it that way, everyone that you might run into on the face of your planet is to one degree or another engaged in this and suffering from the engagement, just as you are. And the call is for you to witness for the excellence in your Brother instead of agreeing with him, or instead of formulating your own definition of him and agreeing with that definition which has nothing to do with that which is excellent in him.

Stop looking at others and saying, "He's ancient. He's old. He's poor. He's stubborn. She's difficult." Stop doing it because it blinds you to the excellence in them, and it prohibits you from behaving in a way that illuminates and uncovers the excellence in them to them. And it keeps everyone in a constant state of defense against these poor images which you are utilizing in your mind and verifying, confirming and reestablishing over and over and over again in a constant state of misery.

You've got to start changing your habits. Stop. Change the way you are using your minds. You must start witnessing for the excellence in your Brothers and Sisters whether they see it or not. Now, what if you are witnessing for the best or the excellent in your Brothers and Sisters, a Brother or a Sister, and that one does not catch the flavor or the vision with which you are embracing them and they behave in a manner that is hateful or harmful, well, what do you do? Do you say, "This one is not worthy of my acknowledging the excellence in them and I need to protect myself against their hateful behavior that is directed toward me"? No.

You must be willing to do two things. You must be willing not to abandon your role, your Function as the Christ which is to feel and acknowledge God in each and every thing because that is the Function of your very presence, your existence, your existing. And at the same time that you refuse to abandon the vision of What They Divinely Are, you also, in very practical terms, refuse to join them in the dance that they would try to initiate with you of negative action and reaction; negative action on their part and reaction in you. You refuse to join in reaction and you say "No" to the behavior.

It's very important for you in your day-to-day relationships with people to respond from the Integrity you find you have in the Place of Excellence within You, and refuse to respond to the dance that you're invited to participate in, and make a call for correction in the behavior, the hateful behavior. A call for correction.

SEEKER: Thank you, Raj. You've given me, and I think most of us, a full plate. I feel like I would like to pass the mic to whoever else has a question.

RAJ: Okay.

ANOTHER SEEKER: What's been up for me since this last meeting...

RAJ: Oh, what page is this with reference to?

SEEKER: In that chapter switching operating systems. And my point being you once told me that when a Brother, when I see bad behavior happening, inappropriate behavior which is abusive, in order to effectively be the answer to the call for help, we have to shift into the correct operating system and we do that by asking God for help. And at the same time...

RAJ: I'm going to interrupt for just a moment.

Every single one of you does basically know the difference between right and wrong, between what works and what doesn't work, whether you are divinely inspired at the moment or not. You know what hurts and what doesn't hurt. You know what's beautiful and what isn't beautiful. Who of you has any difficulty going into a jewelry store, let us say, on Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills and looking at the jewelry there and recognizing that it's beautiful, as opposed to the jewelry that you might see in Penney's in their little jewelry department? Who has any difficulty looking at royal or imperial jewelry or art and has any difficulty recognizing exquisite beauty? You all know the difference between beauty and ugliness.

You all know the difference between what hurts and what doesn't. And so if you see something going on that is hurtful, don't hesitate to say "No" to it on the basis of your simple innate ability to recognize the difference between what is right and what is wrong, what hurts and what doesn't hurt.

Now, if someone pulls a gun out and points it at you and they are in a frenzy and unstable, are you going to stand there trying to get centered and trying to hear the Voice for Truth, the Holy Spirit in you, to come up with exactly the perfect answer? Not if you're wise. Not if you're practical. You'll get out of the range of that gun [snap of the fingers] as quickly as you can and that will be your way of saying "No." You will object spontaneously.

Now, if you have time to listen so that you can hear what would be the ultimately appropriate way to deal with this, do it. Not all abusive circumstances call for an instantaneously, immediate response.

But I'll tell you something. It's a shame to let abuse continue that you recognize as abuse because you're waiting for the perfect answer. Do you hear what I'm saying? That is spiritual stupidity. If something is going on that is abusive, don't hesitate to blurt out your "No," your objection. Otherwise, your attempt to be spiritually perfect becomes nothing more than a delay in the provision of relief from abuse.

Now hopefully you are changing operating systems. Hopefully as a result of changing operating systems, you're more consistently in touch with Guidance so that Guidance is available to you on the spot. But for God's sake, and I mean for God's sake, for the sake of that which is God in each and every one of you, don't delay in objecting to abuse in order to get centered and connected with your Divine Source and feeling the movement of being on the beam so that you can hear with utter clarity how to be the Presence of Love in this situation so that there is blessing for all involved. Perhaps there's another punch to the face that occurs while you're doing that. Perhaps there's another dig that someone has applied to a so-called friend.

And you know what? You know what is perhaps the ultimate insult to your Brother, the Christ, who seems to be confronted with abuse? It's you saying, "Maybe he or she needs this experience in order to wake up. Maybe I should just bite my tongue and say and do nothing. After all this may be the part of the human condition, this may be the very experience that will turn the tide for them and cause them to shift. And so I will stand in support of hate because in this instance hate may be just the ticket for this person. The results of hate may be just the ticket for this person." Do you see how distorted your spirituality can become?

"Well, you know what? Maybe sin, disease and death really has some divine purpose. After all, they wouldn't be having the experience for no reason at all." And then it's said, "Well, remember, Raj, you said the Holy Spirit can turn everything to your advantage." Well, thank God the Holy Spirit can, because it means there is an answer to an unjustifiable experience of suffering and limitation and lack. But don't take what isn't real, don't take what is hateful, don't take what is unloving and say, "Maybe this is just the thing it will take for the Holy Spirit to turn it to their advantage." That in itself is hate.

But you have provide to healing and wholeness. First section, "Healing as Joining." And the next section, "The Mind of the Atonement." Wow! All of these have to do with integrity, integration, unification, the coming back into the Experience of Individuality which is Indivisibility. And Indivisibility is not your personal indivisibility, but it's the Indivisibility of God's Ideas universally joined, in other words.

Therefore whatever causes you to delay in witnessing for the excellence in your Brother, I'm going to be very bold here, is sin. It is the exact opposite of Truth. It is the exact opposite of your Function. And when you deny yourself your Function, you are caught in quote "the human condition," your dream. And there's no way that you can say looking at another, "Maybe he or she needs this hateful experience because it might just be the thing that will move them over the threshold." That is not your Function. That is not you witnessing to the Place of Excellence in your Brother, witnessing to the Presence of God in your Brother. And it does nothing but delay transformation.

Now, I will let you continue.

SEEKER: Well, I'm aware of what you have just said. What I was concerned about was not putting the tips on the arrows when they fly and being in a place in my mind where...

RAJ: You know what? When they fly from where?

SEEKER: Whatever direction they're coming.

RAJ: From you?

SEEKER: No.

RAJ: Towards you?

SEEKER: Towards me.

RAJ: Yes. What does that mean, "not putting tips on the arrows"?

SEEKER: It means not reacting.

RAJ: What does "not reacting" mean?

SEEKER: Getting emotionally upset which is being in judgment. The reason I brought this up is because I have had a hard time in the past standing up for myself because I would react. So I know that there is another place I have to shift to in order to be more objective about what I'm seeing, but yet from a calm place and not from a reactive place.

RAJ: Your capacity to say “No” with the Power of the Universe behind it might be a roar emerging from your throat that sounds like an insane eruption of vocal noises that one could look at and say, “Wow! She’s really in a state of reaction.” But because it came out of your mouth from the tips of your toes, because you knew with utter clarity that what was happening was inappropriate and there was a call for correction, would cause the correction to occur.

What you’re talking about will cause delay in the necessary objection.

SEEKER: Yeah, I know. I’ve experienced that.

RAJ: I’m going to tell you something else. Many times when you stand up for yourselves, all of you, and you’re shaking and you are uneasy, you are unsettled, and you express your objection without control and without dignity, but you express it well so that it is heard, whether it’s accepted or not, it’s heard, all that’s happening is that you are speaking from an Integrity in you that you’re not used to acknowledging. And that you are used to soft pedaling or pushing down and it takes that much energy for you to speak from your Integrity and get it past your lips.

And then you say, “Boy, I have to get pretty angry in order to speak up for myself.” No. And then you say, “Wow, I was being emotional and that isn’t spiritually correct. That is ego. Emotions are ego stuff.” And you talk away what was perhaps one of the few times that you spoke from your Integrity, even though it took so much courage to do it because you don’t feel it that much that it came out awkwardly. Do you see what I’m saying? And then your ego will misinterpret it as anger and emotion. The ego will interpret it as an ego reaction. Isn’t that funny? The pot calling the kettle black. The ego will say, “That was an ego reaction, Trish. Shame on you. Now next time you get in your centered place.”

SEEKER: That’s so true.

RAJ: “And you get your act together because until you do that you have no right and no real place of divine authority from which to express yourself.”

So, do you understand that what I’m talking about has to do with operating from the new Operating System?

SEEKER: Yes, I do. That’s why I’m asking this question.

RAJ: Okay. I’m not just asking you. I’m saying that to everyone here and everyone who’s listening on the internet.

SEEKER: It seems that we have concepts... I’ll speak for myself. I may have a concept about how this Operating System is supposed to operate.

RAJ: Oh, absolutely. Your egos will immediately provide you with a structure within which to consider this new Operating System. So that then you can say, “Well, step one, get calm. Step two, lean into my Guidance. Step three,...” You know, except that there will be, you know, a thousand and one steps and all the time that you’re taking those steps, abuse is occurring, objection isn’t being made. And all the time that you’re doing that, you’re feeling so good about yourself because you are doing it the right way. And because you’re doing it the right way, there will be a blessing for you. Hopefully the person’s who’s getting killed in the process will get a blessing, too.

I’ll tell you. I’ll give you all a hint. Join with your Brother first, and then reach for the Holy Spirit. Don’t reach for the Holy Spirit and wait to join with your Brother in witnessing for the excellence in him or her. And mind you, sometimes joining with your Brother or your Sister means objecting to hateful behavior that they are expressing toward you. Don’t justify hate. There is no spiritual principle that justifies justifying hate.

SEEKER: The argument has come up that, well, I don’t want to confront anyone.

RAJ: Oh, of course.

SEEKER: And confrontation has always meant to me something negative.

RAJ: Can’t you get a proxy?

SEEKER: [laughing]

RAJ: Is there a proxy anywhere in the group that will...? Maybe somebody else will do it.

Hopefully when you have a need, somebody won’t say the same thing and not reach out a hand that could save you. Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.

I keep saying it. Involvement, involvement, involvement. Involvement isn’t done by a proxy. It’s not done with loving thoughts from a distance. It means standing there with your Brother or Sister, getting into the nitty-gritty where the need is and bringing correction to it because you care enough to witness for the best in your Brother or Sister.

SEEKER: That brings a lot of flak with it.

RAJ: You don’t think I get flak? [some audience laughter] A lot of people hate me, Michael. [audience laughter]

SEEKER (Michael): I’ve never see it.

SEEKER (previous): So we have permission then to stir up the shit.

RAJ: No, you don’t.

SEEKER: No?

RAJ: Where you gonna go to find the shit to stir?

SEEKER: I don't have to go to look for it.

RAJ: Your attention is on the wrong place. Don't have your attention on stirring shit. Have your attention on being the Presence of Love that cares enough about your Brother or Sister to cast your vote publicly out there, up front, so that hurt and harm cannot continue unobjected to.

SEEKER: I totally appreciate your clarifying this. In principle I'm in agreement with that, of course.

RAJ: No one has the right to hurt their Brother or Sister until they're stopped. It isn't as though there's some innate right you all have to do anything you want until you're corrected. You can't say, "Well, you know, he's just expressing himself. He's just exploring new territory of self expression as he runs by and snatches the purse off the old ladies' arm."

SEEKER: Raj, I think to encapsulate it, the whole thing here, is either people get angry and say nothing, can't say anything, or they get hurt and can't say nothing. And these are the two emotions...

RAJ: Who are these... who is? The person objecting or the person...

SEEKER: I'll speak for myself. The person objecting, or the person to whom the abuse is targeted.

RAJ: Start over now.

SEEKER: It has been my experience in my life whenever I have perceived abuse, I couldn't stand up for myself in the moment it was happening. I couldn't find my voice because I was emotionally hurting.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: And so...

RAJ: How wonderful it would have been for you if there had been Brothers and Sisters standing around you who felt that it was their function to say "No" to the abuser, to witness for you. And to witness for the abuser by causing the abuser to stop doing what didn't reflect their true nature, as well. That is a shame that that was your experience. And what I'm talking about is what will correct that experience for everyone in the future.

SEEKER: Right. Unfortunately...

RAJ: And you know what? Maybe you had some incredible insights as a result of the whole horrible experience.

SEEKER: I did.

RAJ: But that is not justification for not helping someone else. It's by the grace of God, the Holy Spirit, that it was turned to your advantage.

SEEKER: Absolutely.

RAJ: So is there anything remaining unclear in your mind at this moment? You were asking a question.

SEEKER: I was only concerned about being in the place where I can speak up in a way that's helpful when I see abuse or inappropriate behavior taking place. That is joining with or being in, from the right Operating System. And you said even if you don't think you're coming from the right operating system, just open your mouth and do what you see that will be helpful. Because...

RAJ: Raise objection.

SEEKER: Yeah. Because I care.

RAJ: Exactly. What other intelligent choice do you have?

SEEKER: None.

RAJ: Good.

SEEKER: I only brought this up because I know there are many who are like myself used to be who can't for some reason get involved or say something.

RAJ: Does anyone have any question on this subject?

ANOTHER SEEKER: This is something exactly what I've been struggling with since last summer when I just blew up at my boss and I did everything you just said, that I justified it until it made no sense to myself, and actually I was acting on my Integrity. So I remembered that and that was really significant to me and I've begun trying to stand up when I see something that I think needs to be challenged. And [I've] been watching myself to make sure that I'm not coming from emotion or ego. If there's enough time I can stop and ask, "Oh, what do I say here?" And I do, it does feel exactly like you said. It's coming from the tips of your toes, and your entire body feels the truth of what you're saying and you can't hold it in.

And I think if you... that's where I don't feel the judgment I'm that I used to feel against the person whom I saw the behavior. It seems like I'm released from judging them and all of a sudden I feel like I'm on their side. Of course, they don't feel like that usually, but that's okay. Finally it is okay. And I care enough about them to say, "Whoa. Hello. Wake up here. Whoa. Whoa. Whoa. You're making a big mistake." Just try to find some way to do it. And sometimes it comes out real awkward, but with practice it starts getting easier and easier and then calmer and the most amazing, creative things come out of your mouth.

RAJ: Part of it is because the more you do it, the less inertia is present. When it first comes out and feels like an explosion, most of the dynamic is the overcoming of inertia within you; your own reluctance to let your Integrity have expression just because it's really there.

SEEKER: Kind of like all of the suppressed things behind it too, like a cork in a bottle. All of a sudden the cork gets released and by God, you're going to have your say finally and somebody's going to listen. So, and then once you do that, you don't want to go back, put the cork back in the bottle.

RAJ: That is correct.

SEEKER: And it's very uncomfortable sometimes and then my ego gets a hold of it and says, "Oh, so you think you're the corrector, huh? You can go around and tell everybody how to be. You're not right and you're not right." But then that...

RAJ: That's stirring shit. But I am not talking about quote "being the corrector of people." We're not talking about being some sort of authority, having some sort of position that you're carrying out. What we're talking about is being the Presence of Love responding from your capacity to be Love that cares enough about another to speak up and object to what is unjust or what is hateful. Do you see the difference?

SEEKER: Oh, absolutely.

RAJ: Okay.

SEEKER: That's all I have to say. Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

A full get-together. I'm glad we have shared together today. And I look forward to being with you next Saturday and Sunday.

Thank you for letting me be the corrective Presence of Truth. Whether correction has occurred or not, you have provided me with the opportunity to be the corrective Presence of Truth. Now you be that all week.

Okay.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

As we finish up the section we've been on, I want to remind everyone that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Real Mind.

And so it begins:

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit must work through opposites because He must work with and for a mind that IS in opposition.

RAJ: In other words, your Divinity, which is being held in trust while you dally with the ego, has to deal with this dallying part of your mind which is necessarily conflicted and oppositional. It is not only oppositional within itself, but it stands in opposition to your having the Conscious Experience of your Divinity, of your Right Mind, of your Real Mind.

RAJ READING: Correct and learn, and be open to learning. You have NOT made truth, but truth can still set you free. Look as the Holy Spirit looks and understand as He understands.

RAJ: You see how important it is to be aware that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind, because looking as the Holy Spirit looks and understanding He understands is really You letting yourself back into your Right Mind. And that's why whole-izing and healing can occur.

RAJ READING: His understanding looks back to God in remembrance of me. He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...is in Holy Communion always, and He is part of YOU.

RAJ: In actuality, He's all of you. But as long as you have yourself separated off, then your Real Mind and your ego sense of things seem to be two parts of you. Even though at the moment you're only letting one part register with you—the ego.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...is your Guide...

RAJ: Your Right Mind is your Guide to salvation.

RAJ READING: ...because He...

RAJ: It.

RAJ READING: ...holds the remembrance of things past and to come. He holds this gladness gently in your minds, asking only that you INCREASE it in His name by sharing it to increase His joy in YOU.

RAJ: And this doesn't mean to increase His joy about you. It isn't so that the Holy Spirit can be joyful about you. It is so that His joy will be experienced by you as your joy because you are nothing more than the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: Therapy and Teaching

RAJ: And these are the correct words for this section heading.

Therapy and Teaching. As we read this, you'll find that it's apparent that I was addressing Helen and Bill, but you know, at the bottom line we're all therapists and teachers. You're always teaching something. And you're always therapizing upon each other. And so this applies to all of you as well; has transfer value, you might say.

Therapy. Hmm. Therapy when you're not joined with the Holy Spirit is your ego busy nudging and coercing your Brothers and Sisters into either new mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you have come up with, or to keep them in line with already established mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And this goes on all day long every day. What you choose to be silent about becomes part of the teaching. By virtue of your silence, it teaches others the appropriateness of being silent, whether it's actually necessary to speak up or not.

And what you choose to talk about and the way you choose to talk about it, teaches your Brothers and Sisters how to likewise speak and feel. And this is the way you reinforce your ignorance. And this is the way you contribute to everyone else never having an “Ah ha!” experience that moves them outside the box.

Now, one other aspect of this section that I want you to keep in mind is that the way I am talking to Helen and Bill is the way I work with each one of you when you’re open to me. And it’s the way in which the Holy Spirit, your Divinity works with you as you are willing to release your frantic grasp on your ego sense of things.

So there is an example here of what you can appropriately expect from listening for my Guidance or listening to the Guidance you get from the Holy Spirit. And it also sets an example for your behavior, let’s say, your appropriate behavior, your healing behavior with your Brothers and Sisters. So this section, which for the most part doesn’t appear in the first or second editions, is very important.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You must have noticed how often I have used your own ideas to help you.

RAJ: Well, it’s the same with you. You will find Me, you will find the Holy Spirit using your own ideas. Why? Because it’s easy for you to grasp what you’re already familiar with. It allows you to be in communion with Me or the Holy Spirit without feeling like you are engaging with a foreigner. And also because many of the ideas you already have are true; it’s just that you don’t know how true they are. And so, I have the opportunity to express to you your own ideas so that you have an “Ah ha!” about those ideas, so that you see them in a new light. It’s a kind and loving thing to do because it helps you know from the outset that you’re not all bad, you’re not all goofed up, that you’re not a total mess. And your ignorance of Truth isn’t total.

Again, I want you to think about that in light of your involvements with your Brothers and Sisters. You don’t want to come on with a brand-new metaphysical or spiritual language, or a whole new set of concepts, that blow their mind because they don’t relate in any way to the concepts and ideas that they’re already familiar with. You want to care enough to illuminate the Truth that is already there in your Brother’s and Sister’s mind, even if it’s in a different language than the Course or a spiritual theory. You see?

RAJ READING: You have learned to be a loving, wise and very understanding therapist EXCEPT FOR YOURSELF. That exception has given you more than perception for others because of what you saw in

THEM, but LESS than knowledge of your real relationships TO them because you did not accept them as PART of you.

RAJ: Understand that perception is, or amounts to, the definition you have given to everything in the Kingdom of Heaven, including yourself, that has not been drawn from God but from your imagination.

By learning to be a loving, wise, and very understanding therapist, even though you were excluding yourself in the process, it has given you more than just perception, more than just ego perception for others because of what you saw in them, but less than Knowledge, less than what would come out of your mouth if you were connected with Me or with the Holy Spirit and were experiencing Knowing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Understanding IS beyond perception because it introduces meaning.

RAJ: In other words, it's not just a concept. You feel it. That's what it means when the word "Meaning" is used. When you are experiencing Meaning, you are feeling the Truth Of A Thing.

RAJ READING: It...

RAJ: Understanding.

RAJ READING: ...is, however, below knowledge,...

RAJ: Or Knowing.

RAJ READING: ...even though it can grow TOWARDS it. It is possible, with great effort, to understand someone else to some extent and to be quite helpful to...

RAJ: Them.

RAJ READING: ...and to be quite helpful to him, but the effort is misdirected. The misdirection is quite apparent; it is directed away from YOU.

RAJ: You see, it's still me and them.

Knowing, the Experience of Knowing the Truth makes it utterly obvious to you that the Truth you're Knowing is not only True of them, it's True of you. Or the Truth that you find yourself Knowing, revealed to you, is not only True about you, it's True about them and there's no way to maintain a sense of separateness.

RAJ READING: This does not mean that it is LOST to you, but it DOES mean that you are not aware of it.

RAJ: Now, listen.

RAJ READING: I have saved all your kindnesses and every loving thought you have had.

RAJ: And I'm going to interject here: even though you've extended it to others but not applied it to yourself. Even though you've extended it to others, but you have overlooked and ignored the fact that you were being the Presence of Love, and that it was yourself you were embracing your Brother with, thereby demonstrating or embodying the Oneness of you both.

You see, as a therapist the tendency is to see it as one-half of a partnership; therapist and patient; helper and helpee. And so, of course, the therapist helps the helpee, but stays aloof, keeps himself or herself separate in his or her mind. Not involved, in other words. Not recognizing the Brotherhood of the two of you. Because, of course, if you get into Brotherhood, that means involvement and that will spoil the therapist-client relationship. Mmm.

So I have purified them. I've saved all of your kindnesses.

RAJ READING: I have purified them of the errors which hid their light, and have kept them for you in their own perfect radiance. They are beyond destruction and beyond guilt. They came from the Holy Spirit within YOU, and we know what God creates is eternal. What fear...

RAJ: And I'm adding this: in you.

RAJ READING: ...has hidden still is part of you.

RAJ: So even in your dreams, even in your nightmare, even in your ignorance, because you are the Presence of God you do express Truth and you do embody Love. But as long as you are insisting upon seeing yourself as separate from your Brother, you will keep yourself, you will have kept yourself from recognizing your part in the exchange with your Brother. You will not have let yourself conceive of yourself of having been actually involved. You will see the Truth or the Love that you've expressed as an object transferred to them; something which you picked up and gave away. You will miss the fact that the gift was a Gift of Yourself. And you will miss the fact that you and your Brother are One. And you will have missed the involvement. But nevertheless, all of that is held in trust for you to be able to recognize and experience and enjoy, once you abandon, once you abandon your intent to remain separate.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Joining the Atonement, which I have repeatedly asked you to do, is always a way OUT of fear. This does not mean that you can safely fail to acknowledge anything that is true.

RAJ: In other words, just because you know you have a way out doesn't mean that it's safe for you to continue to behave ignorantly. It's similar to the statement that the Holy Spirit can turn every experience to your advantage, and the idea that because that's true, it really doesn't matter whether you do what's right or wrong, because if you do what's wrong, the Holy Spirit can turn it to your advantage, you see. And so that line of thought says that it's really not necessary for you to behave responsibly. It's not really necessary for you to embody Truth. It's not really necessary for you to declare that you have a position. It's all right to be wishy-washy, as I was saying yesterday. That's what it suggests. But it's not.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: However, the Holy Spirit will not fail to help you reinterpret everything that you perceive as fearful, and teach you that ONLY what is loving IS true. Truth...

RAJ: The unyielding, as I spoke of it yesterday; the immovable.

RAJ READING: ...is beyond your ability to destroy, but entirely within your grasp. It belongs to you because you created it. It is yours because it is a part of you, just as you are part of God because He created YOU.

[Editor's Note: Raj said, "It is yours because it is part of you" instead of "It is yours because it is a part of you."]

RAJ: Truth is forever with you. You, as an ego, did not create it. But You, not standing separate from God, letting the Mind Of God be in you, are the creator of Truth because God Is Truth Being and you are not separate from that Movement of Being. That's the Ultimate Truth.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Atonement is the GUARANTEE of the safety of the Kingdom. Nothing good is lost because it comes from the Holy Spirit, the Voice for creation.

RAJ: I would like to touch on that. The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. And I said here that the Holy Spirit is the Voice for Creation. That's your Function. Your Function is to be that which gives Voice to Creation. And you give Voice to Creation by recognizing and acknowledging God in it. You see? And not acknowledging and giving voice to imaginations that you've come up with and definitions of things that you've preferred to What Everything Really Is.

Again.

RAJ READING: Nothing good is lost because it comes from the Holy Spirit, the Voice for creation. Nothing that is NOT good was ever created, and therefore CANNOT be protected.

RAJ: Now, conversely...

RAJ READING: What the ego makes it KEEPS TO ITSELF, and so it is without strength.

RAJ: As a therapist or when you are therapizing on each other, you are holding yourself separate from your Brother, being the beneficent giver of things that ought to be believed. And so, the one essential thing for healing is never given—the Essence of You—and your acknowledgment that you are giving your Brother something, that you are involved with your Brother, not sitting on a sideline proffering ideas that will help him fit into the mutually-agreed-upon definitions better. You see?

So what the ego makes, it keeps to itself, and so what it makes is without strength.

RAJ READING: Its unshared existence does not die; it was merely never born. Real birth is not a beginning; it is a CONTINUING.

RAJ: That's another way of saying that Real birth is a Movement. It's another way of saying Being is a Movement. And that's why I've talked about catching the wave and finding the balance point on the Wave of the Movement, because that's the way you become harmoniously present with Creation.

Because Real birth is a Continuing, or a Movement, you, when you are interested in catching the wave and finding the balance point, will always find yourself to be in a state that your ego calls unstable. You will find that existence, that Being is something you cannot be in control of. In other words, Being is an experience of being forever out of control. Now you understand your reluctance to waking up. Because up to this point, coming from your egos, existence is only about control, and your safety and your life, your very existence depends upon it.

The difference between the two is the difference between the two operating systems that we've been talking about.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Everything that can continue has BEEN born, but it can INCREASE as you are willing to return the part of your mind that needs healing to the higher part, and thus render your creating undivided.

RAJ: So the part of your mind, that you are currently keeping separate from the rest of your Mind which is the Holy Spirit, needs to be willing to return to the rest of your Mind. And as I've said before, this is something no one else can cause you to do. The key word here is, "as you are willing," not willful-ing, but willing to return the part of your mind that needs healing to the higher part, and thus render your creating undivided.

Now, continuing.

RAJ READING: As a therapist, you yourself tell your patients that the real difference between neurotic and "healthy" guilt feelings is that neurotic guilt feelings DO NOT HELP ANYONE. This distinction is wise though incomplete. Let us make the distinction a little sharper now. Neurotic guilt feelings are a device of the ego for "atoning" without sharing,...

RAJ: Therefore, and I'm interrupting here, this kind of guilt is something that is processed and experienced entirely within you. And so you, without sharing it with anyone, experience the guilt and come to a conclusion that you're not going to do this anymore. But you haven't shared it with anyone. It's private.

Repeating.

RAJ READING: Neurotic guilt feelings are a device of the ego for "atoning"...

RAJ: In other words, it's not really atoning.

RAJ READING: ...without sharing, and for asking pardon without change.

RAJ: You see, [amused] that's why you must keep it a secret. Because if you didn't keep it a secret, you'd have to change.

RAJ READING: The ego NEVER calls for REAL Atonement, and cannot tolerate forgiveness, which IS change.

Your concept of "healthy guilt feelings"...

RAJ: And mind you, this idea of healthy guilt feelings and neurotic guilt feelings isn't something that only trained psychologists understand. You all understand it perfectly well, too.

RAJ READING: Your concept of "healthy guilt feelings" has merit, but without the concept of the Atonement it lacks the healing potential it holds.

RAJ: The healing potential that Atonement holds.

RAJ READING: You made the distinction in terms of feelings which led to a decision not to REPEAT the error, which is only PART of healing.

RAJ: This is very important.

RAJ READING: You made the distinction in terms of feelings which led to a decision not to REPEAT the error, which is only PART of healing. Your concept lacked the idea of UNDOING it.

RAJ: Mary Baker Eddy recognized the same underlying truth here when she said, "You are not truly healed until the liability to be ill is overcome."

Healing goes all the way. Guilt must go away completely. The feeling of guilt, the call of guilt, if it is healed is eradicated from your experience.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: What you were really advocating, then, was adopting a policy of sharing without a real FOUNDATION.

RAJ: And this is important too. When there's a real foundation, when the healing of guilt has occurred because there's a real foundation, it is cleansed from your mind. And the liability to feel guilty, or indulge in guilt, will not occur again.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I have come to GIVE you the foundation, so your own thoughts can make you REALLY free. You have carried the burden of the ideas you did not share and which were therefore too weak to increase, but you did not recognize how to undo their existence BECAUSE you had made them.

RAJ: A key point here.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT cancel out your past errors alone. They will NOT disappear from your mind without remedy. The remedy is NOT of your making, any more than YOU are.

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: The Atonement cannot be understood except as a PURE ACT OF SHARING.

RAJ: Sharing of what? Of an idea? The sharing of a truth? The sharing of an insight? The sharing of a trigger to awakening? No. A sharing of your Essential Being. A sharing of You with your Brother so that you're able to say, "I recognize myself in him." And so that your Brother can say, "I recognize myself in him." You see? Involvement—actual connection. Not the bouncing back and forth of wonderful ideas that may end up being very valuable. You haven't given, you haven't engaged in a pure act of sharing until what's been shared is you!

Continuing.

RAJ READING: That is what is meant when we said it is possible, even in this world, to listen to ONE voice. If you are part of God and the Sonship is one, you CANNOT be limited to the "self" the ego sees. Every loving thought held in ANY part of the Sonship belongs to every part.

RAJ: And every Son or Daughter in the Sonship belongs to every other Daughter or Son in the Sonship because you are all One, if you're willing to abandon your privacy finally and recognize yourself in your Brother and recognize your Brother as you.

Again.

RAJ READING: Every loving thought held in ANY part of the Sonship belongs to every part. It is shared BECAUSE it is loving. Sharing is God's way of creating, and also YOURS. Your ego can keep you in exile FROM the Kingdom, but in the Kingdom itself it has no power.

RAJ: And you know what? As I've said over and over, your ego keeps you in exile from the Kingdom of Heaven by causing you to define the Kingdom of Heaven as quote "dirty word, the world" unquote so you look at the Kingdom of Heaven every day. Every day the Kingdom of Heaven confronts you and you don't see It. Ordinarily you think of exile as a matter of being removed from your homeland but this exile is you exiled right in the middle of your homeland, because there isn't any place else for you to be removed to.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You have become willing to receive my messages as I give them without interference by the ego, so we can clarify an earlier point. We said that you will one day teach as much as you learn, and that will keep you in balance. The time is now because you have LET it be now. You cannot learn EXCEPT by teaching. I heard one voice because I had learned that learning is attained BY teaching.

RAJ: And I'm going to add: I learned that I couldn't be the teacher.

And that's why I keep telling you that you must have something that is apparently not you to yield to, because unless, until you learn to yield, you're still going to maintain this false sense of authorship and authority that you fool yourselves with. And there's no humility in it. And there's no joining in it. And there's no defenselessness in it. And so the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind, is something you have to yield to. And I'm making it very clear to you that until you yield to it, it will seem to be different from you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I heard one voice because I had learned that learning is attained BY teaching. I understood that I COULD NOT ATONE FOR MYSELF ALONE.

RAJ: Atonement has to be offered to a Brother by you. And in your willingness under whatever the circumstances are to offer Atonement to your Brother, you receive it. You can't receive it if the desire and the Love is not present enough for you to want to give it to your Brother even before you have it.

This is not heavy stuff, is it? This is very fundamental, very grounded. You don't get a spiritual high from the idea. But you will get an ultimate spiritual high from embodying the idea and actually Loving your Brother and Sister.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Listening to one voice means the will to SHARE the voice in order to hear it yourself.

RAJ: You don't get the gift until it's your desire to extend the gift to another, and then you get it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The mind that was in me is still irresistibly drawn to every mind created by God because God's Wholeness IS the wholeness of His Son.

RAJ: Now, continuing.

RAJ READING: Turning the other cheek does NOT mean that you should submit to violence without protest.

RAJ: When something wrong is occurring, you must dare to express the unyielding immovability of Truth and Integrity. You must object. You should...

Excuse me. Repeating.

RAJ READING: Turning the other cheek does NOT mean that you should submit to violence without protest. It means that you cannot BE hurt, and do not want to show your brother anything EXCEPT your wholeness.

RAJ: Listen to this carefully. You object, but not because you're hurt. You object because what is being objected to does not represent in your Brother what he divinely is and you will not join in confirmation of his expression of what he is not. You respond by objecting. You don't react.

When you respond with objection from the Experience of Wholeness, nothing you do convicts the Brother of the behavior you're objecting to. Understand that when the objection arises out of reaction, you are therapizing. You are finding a means of coercing your Brother into certain already existing mutually-agreed-upon definitions of behavior through the use of guilt. And that will leave you as an unhealed victim because you will have to maintain your victimization in order to back up the guilt that you're trying to therapize your Brother with to get him to behave properly. And it will not lift your brother out of the very dream that caused your Brother to behave in a way that was inappropriate. You see this?

Reaction and the demonstration of hurt is the way the ego maintains control over your Brother in order to keep him bound to his ignorance, and also in order to see to it that neither one of you is healed of the perception that you could be hurt or that you could hurt another, or that you could be hurt or that you needed to hurt someone else.

Is this clear? Is anyone... I don't want to be going too fast here. Okay.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Show him that he CANNOT hurt you and hold nothing against him, or you hold it against yourself.

RAJ: And, as I said, you keep both of you bound to the experience of no healing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Teaching is done in many ways,—by formal means, by guidance,...

RAJ: Now I'm not speaking of Divine Guidance here.

RAJ READING: ...—by formal means, by guidance, and above all BY EXAMPLE. Teaching is therapy because it means the SHARING of ideas, and the awareness that to share them is to STRENGTHEN them. The union of the Sonship IS its protection.

RAJ: Now why was that sentence put there? It sounds like one has changed the subject. Teaching is therapy because it means the sharing of ideas. When all are sharing everything with all, that is absolute Unity. When no one is withholding anything from any part of the Sonship, the Sonship is indivisible, undivided. Therefore, the sentence, "The union of the Sonship IS its protection." Conversely, you could say the splintering or disintegration of the Sonship is its vulnerability. Make sense? Yes.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot prevail against the Kingdom BECAUSE it is united, and the ego fades away and is undone in the presence of the attraction of the parts of the Sonship which hear the call of the Holy Spirit to be as One.

RAJ: Now, if the call of the Holy Spirit is to be as One, then it means that you all in hearing the Call and accepting the Call, will begin allowing for connection with your Brothers and Sisters, with each other. In the context of witnessing for What Is True about them that is also True about you, which means that there's no way for you to stand as the beneficent giver of the acknowledgment of their worth, because it's clearer to you or more True about you than it is about them. Do you see that in witnessing for what is best in your Brother, for his Divinity, because you understand that you are both nothing less than What God Is Being, it brings the two of you into a state of pure equality, oneness, no superior/inferior dichotomy?

You know what? None of you, none of you are going to find your invulnerability until it becomes your goal to demonstrate to your Brother his invulnerability. Not as an intellectual task, not as a behavioral task, but because you don't want to experience any further severance from your Brother, because you don't want to experience any further severance from the Brotherhood, and because you don't want to experience any further severance from your Father Whose Existence is the proof of your Sonship, and therefore of your Reality, and therefore of your Validity. Again, nothing heady here.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I cannot forget my need to teach what I have learned, which arose in me BECAUSE I learned it.

RAJ: What is it that arose because I learned it? My need to teach what I had learned. Why? Because, in order to have the learning, you must share it. If you keep it private and do not share it and do not connect with your Brother, you don't demonstrate your Oneness and you are still as asleep as you ever were.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I call upon you to teach what you have learned because, by so doing, YOU can depend on it. Make it dependable in my name because my name is the name of God's Son.

RAJ: "Oh boy. Oh, God's Son." Be careful! I'm not the only begotten Son of God. That is not a special designation. The minute you acknowledge God, Who You Are begins to become clear to you. As long as you are not denying the Father, you are not actively denying and obscuring from yourself your own Identity.

So, make it dependable in your name because your name is the name of God's Son or Daughter. Make it dependable by acknowledging your Source so that you might Know, and I mean truly Know, with a capital "K", Who You Are. So that you come back to Integrity. So that you come back into the full Conscious Experience of Who You Are and what your Function is. Why? So that you can now enjoy a new, glorious position? No. So that you can share it and make it your own. As long as it's just an idea, it hasn't become yours.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: What I learned I give you freely, and the mind which was in me rejoices as YOU choose to hear it. The Holy Spirit atones in all of us by UNDOING, and thus lifts the burden you have placed in your mind.

RAJ: It does it by the undoing of guilt and therefore its eradication. It does it by undoing the liability to be ill, and therefore, thereby removing illness from your experience as a possibility.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit atones in all of us by UNDOING, and thus lifts the burden you have placed in your mind. By following Him,...

RAJ: This which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...He leads you back to God where you belong, and how can you find this way...

RAJ: Here it is.

RAJ READING: ...except by taking your brother with you?

My part in the Atonement is not complete until YOU join it and give it away. As you teach, so shall you learn. I will never leave you or forsake you, because to forsake you would be to forsake myself and God who created me.

RAJ: And if I did that, I would lose the Experience of Who I Am. I would lose my Identity, and I would be in a box, like you are. I can't get out of the box without returning to you who are in boxes, and coming into the darkness and coming into the stress and coming into the distress and coming into the pain where you are, to help you out of the box, to help you see that you're suffering from nothing other than an imagination that has replaced the Real Meaning Of Everything with definitions you have chosen and which all of you together have agreed to commit to about the Kingdom of Heaven, definitions that are different than What The Kingdom Of Heaven Really Is.

RAJ: And here it is.

RAJ READING: You will forsake yourselves and God if you forsake ANY of your brothers.

RAJ: So you want to come Home? Grab someone's hand and lift them up. And if you care to do that, you will be lifted up as they are lifted up. And if you know that you won't be lifted up until they're lifted up, you will find it of great value to you to persist in spite of their fearful, unstable and aggressively unpleasant behavior.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are more than your brother's keeper. In fact, you do not WANT to keep him. You must learn to see him as he is, and KNOW that he belongs to God as you do. How could you treat your brother better than by rendering unto God the things which are God's?

RAJ: Just let this set for a moment. When you look at your Brother and render him unto God because he's God's, you put yourself in the position of remembering his Real Identity, his Sonhood, if I may put it that way, because you acknowledged God as the Source of him. And now you have a gift to give to him, and it's a gift that will give you your Identity back to you. Can it be more simple? If you don't do it and you leave your Brother out in the cold, you're out there with him. This is the unyielding, immovable way things work. And there's no shortcut. There's no way to get around it.

So, roll up your sleeves, everyone, and get involved for your sake. And get your blessing because you extend a blessing to your Brother, because you've arrived at a place where you are miserable enough that you are willing to try the very radical action of being the Presence of Love and caring about someone else more than your own self-protection.

Aren't you glad that the really good stuff is so simple? And don't worry. I will not let you make it more complex.

I love you and I look forward to being with you next Sunday.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And as always welcome to those who are joining us on the internet.

Jumping right in, and I am reading from the transcript as prepared by Bill Thetford.

RAJ READING: Ideas do not LEAVE the mind which thought them to have a separate being, nor do separate thoughts conflict with one another in space because they do not occupy space at all.

RAJ: Ideas do not leave the Mind which thought them. Your individuality is an Idea in the Mind of God, and the Idea is the Idea of God. In other words, the Idea is All That God Is.

Now, you're familiar with the statement, "Ideas leave not their Source." That means it is absolutely impossible for you to leave your Source or to modify in any way what you are. So you are not able to leave the Mind which thought you to have a separate being or existence. And I'm going to say nor do individual thoughts conflict with one another in space because they, meaning you, do not occupy space at all. Again, you are Conscious Awareness, Mind, in which the experience of time and space is occurring, in which all of Creation is occurring.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: However, human ideas CAN conflict in content because they occur at different levels, and include opposite thoughts at the SAME level.

RAJ: And when we're speaking of levels here, we could relate them to the two different operating systems that we were talking about.

And this is a very important statement.

RAJ READING: IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO SHARE OPPOSING THOUGHTS.

RAJ: Let me ask you this. If you have turned your back to the Altar, if you have said I would rather look at Creation, I would rather look at the Kingdom of Heaven by myself and determine for myself what it all is, as I've said before, that constitutes a withdrawal of your acknowledgement of your Source, which causes you to experience being Sourceless, and therefore having no identity because your Identity as a Son or a Daughter is derived from the fact that you have a Father Who Is Your Source. And in this imaginative, independent position, you have no alternative but to experience a state of conflict which first shows itself as the experience of fear.

Now, if it is impossible to share opposing thoughts, and if while you are separated from your Father you are in a state of conflict, it means that you're not in a position to share anything at all. Which means you are not and have not been sharing anything at all. So what is it that has substituted for sharing? What has substituted for sharing, which can appropriately be identified as communion, has been communication. Communion is an Inner Awareness of Unity with all Things. And communion is not a matter of communication. It's a matter of Knowing, Universal Knowing.

Having separated yourself, however, the fact that you're all one has to show up some way because you can't alter the Divine Facts. And so, as a substitute for communion, you developed communication. And now you are able to talk to each other and express ideas that you've all made-up. And as we've talked about, existence becomes a constant manipulation of each other so that your definitions of everything are mutually-agreed-upon. Because if they are not agreed-upon, you cannot work together.

Your mutually-agreed-upon definitions constitute a common language, you might say, that allows you to communicate with each other and thus cooperate with each other. Now, the interesting thing is that in the State of Communion, the Conscious Experience of Being is Universal. It's Eternal, and therefore time is not a part of It and space is not a part of It. But when you turn your back on the clear, uninterrupted, pure Awareness of the Kingdom of Heaven, then it becomes necessary to have time and space in order to appear to cooperate.

If you care to have a business meeting, let us say, you have to say in order to appear to end up having communication, you have to say, "I will meet you at the corner of Hollywood and Vine at 10:00 a. on Thursday morning, January 21st." In this way you can manage to be at the same place at the same time and conduct your manipulative process of feeding your greed. And you do this. This is life.

And you say, "Oh, let's meet for lunch on Wednesday at such-and-such a place and just chat." And you get together and you just chat, and you feel like there is communication and sharing. You bring each other up to date on the latest news and you think there has been sharing.

But it says here:

RAJ READING: IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO SHARE OPPOSING THOUGHTS.

RAJ: And so all the time that you think you have been sharing, you have really been maintaining and reinforcing the idea that you can look things, you can look at the Kingdom of Heaven independently of God and function and bring into play all the aspects of being, including sharing. But I'm going to be very frank with you here. Unless you're coming from that Place of Excellence in You which is You in your Right Mind, you're not communicating. And everything you're doing is constantly calculated in order to have an end result that meets your needs.

You get together. You chat. And what do you do? You get the lay of the land as perceived by the other person. You get the lay of the land as to where that other person is coming from and where the people they know that you know are coming from. Why? "Oh, to be sociable." No. At the bottom line you get the information so that you know what areas you need to reinforce your vulnerability in.

But you're all really slick at it. And you manage to pull it off with an apparently genuine friendliness to it. In fact you found that the more friendliness you bring into the process, the more harmony there is, the more pleasure there is.

But what I want you to understand is that sharing as it's spoken of in the Course here is not what I've just described. The closest thing to being in a State of Sharing that you could say you've had, in other words, the way Being is experienced when you're in your Right Mind, is one in which cooperation and coordination do not occur. And you do not have space/time coordinates that you use in order to be in communion with your Brothers and Sisters and in order for the Beauty, the Harmony, and the Joy of Being to be manifest.

Now the closest experience you have to this is when you start out in your day and you have a general plan, but you're not fixed on it. And as the day unfolds, you find yourself in places you hadn't expected to be because you weren't governing everything absolutely. And in the process of flowing with what's happening, you find yourself running into someone you haven't seen for years, or someone you hadn't planned on meeting, and you have an encounter together in which information becomes available to you that meets your need.

Being, with a capital "B", is a Movement. It's a Movement orchestrated by the Mind of God. It's the Movement of Creation. And All of Creation, like a Broadway musical, All of Creation appears to move and dance and sing, we'll say, and appears to be coordinated exquisitely. And yet each part of Creation is not being where it is by design, by prior agreement, by the use of will. Creation is an exquisite Movement of the Divine Mind and what you would call the Universe.

Everything is where it is because it allowed the Father's Impulse to cause it to be where it was. And when you stand and observe it all, the exquisiteness and perfection of the detail of the Movement is awesome, and yet not a bit of coordination amongst the participants has occurred. In effect, each part of Creation just happens to end up where it is. It just happens to end up where it is. It awesomely ends up being where it is.

Sometimes the Movement of Being occurs even when you are specifically trying to be in charge. You know that you are going to meet so-and-so, and if you don't meet them on time, you'll miss them because they have to catch a plane, and blah, blah, blah. And so you get up in the morning and you conscientiously do everything you can to be at the meeting place at the appointed time, and everything goes wrong. And you end up getting there 25 minutes late. And you walk in the door and bump into the other person you're supposed to meet who just happened to get there 25 minutes late. And you have the opportunity to marvel at the fact that everything was in perfect order in spite of what you thought the order had to be.

I'm bringing this out because this is the Nature of Being. And this is the way sharing happens. Sharing is you being where the Father would have you be, without plans, without conscious control over the situation and the circumstances, without depending upon space and time coordinates in order to have connection. Sharing is communion, not communication, and therefore sharing is never a matter of wheedling another person into cooperation, wheedling another person into yielding to your best judgment as to what is right, or coercing everyone around you into abiding by the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that have been developed in place of sharing, in place of communion.

RAJ READING: IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO SHARE OPPOSING THOUGHTS.

RAJ: It's a very full sentence.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit does not LET you forsake your brothers.

RAJ: What does that mean? If the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind, how does your Right Mind not let you forsake your Brothers? Well, let me put it this way. When you're coming from an independent stance and you're going through all this process that I've just described of using time/space coordinates in order to communicate, nothing Real is happening. You cannot actually accomplish the unaccomplishable. You cannot actually accomplish being independent from the Father.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit does not LET you forsake your brothers. Therefore, you can really share ONLY the parts of your thoughts which are of Him, and which He also keeps for YOU. And of such is the Kingdom of Heaven. All the rest...

RAJ: All the stuff you made-up, all of the distorted perceptions of Reality that you have created.

RAJ READING: All the rest remains with you until He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...has reinterpreted them in the light of the Kingdom, making them, too, worthy of being shared.

RAJ: So you see, Reality doesn't allow unreality to actually happen.

RAJ READING: When they...

RAJ: The definitions, the concepts you have made-up about the Kingdom of Heaven.

RAJ READING: When they have been sufficiently purified He lets you give them away.

RAJ: He lets you give them away. That's because you're not blocking the fruitage of your Right Mind with your own concepts, and so the Truth you Know, the Love you Experience Being, ends up being given away, shared, because at that point you're coming from that Place of Excellence in You, and not from the other operating system--the ego's operating system.

RAJ READING: The will to share them IS their purification.

RAJ: Your intent to share from your Right Mind is what ends up purifying, getting rid of the false from the concepts you have created about everything and about everyone. And in the absence of the impurity of your distortions that you've introduced, the True Knowing about your Brother, the True Knowing about Every Aspect of Creation flows from you because that is the only thing there is for you to share. That's the only thing that can be shared.

Again, if you have an IBM®, a PC computer, and you have an Apple® computer, it is impossible to share data between the two because they're in two different languages. And so, sharing doesn't occur.

Now, in what way could this be useful knowledge? How can it be other than depressing to believe what I've just said, that knowing that you're not awake at the moment, everything you're doing amounts to nothing? Well, here's the way it can be helpful. No matter how independent you believe you have become, you haven't stopped being the Christ. And you only have One Mind and that is the Mind of Christ, that is the Mind of God expressed right where you are.

And as I've said before, you're using this omnipotent Divine Mind in a distorted way. And in the process, you are creating distorted perceptions of Reality or the Kingdom of Heaven. Your exploration of a distorted state of mind has created what you might call a carbon copy, a virtual copy, let us say, of Reality. The only thing is that everything is 180 degrees out of sync. This means that because you haven't stopped being the Christ and you only have Reality to work with, you have been working with Reality in an oppositional way--in a way that denies What It Really Is but affirms that it's something else.

If you realize that this is true, then it becomes obvious to you that everything that you are doing that is the reverse of Reality isn't accomplishing anything, but it doesn't leave you out in the void. Because whether You, the Christ, the Divine Mind that is God Manifest right where you are, is creating a distorted perception of Reality or not, you're still Real and Reality is still Real. And Reality, because It's the thing you're manipulating, will be there as it truly is the moment you decide to abandon the manipulation of It.

This means that when I tell you and encourage you to abandon your attempts to be in charge of everything autonomously, when I encourage you to abandon that, it will not leave you in a vulnerable position. The only thing it will do will be to constantly bring you into a more and more invulnerable Conscious Experience of Being, even though it requires you to abandon the very thing that you think has brought you a sense of safety, and that is the attempt to be in control privately and personally yourself.

The old operating system says to you, "If you abandon me, all order will go out of the picture. Your sense of identity, your personal sense of yourself will evaporate." But what I'm telling you is that when it evaporates, your True Identity is right there behind it. And there is no loss whatsoever. But it requires you to take the risk, to make the investment into a Right Mind that I'm telling you that you have, that you don't have much experience of yet.

Now there's no way you can make this switch of operating systems all by yourself. And there's no way for you to do it instantaneously. And that's why there is the Holy Spirit. That's why there is me. That is why there is all of the Brotherhood who are awake standing available to you to help reinterpret what you're looking at, to help bring you back into a Conscious Experience of Its Divinity rather than its materiality, so that you can make this adjustment gradually and with a feeling of safety.

I must tell you that everything you currently think you're doing, you're not doing at all. And everything you think you're accomplishing, you're not accomplishing at all. I must tell you that so that you're no longer totally fooled and so that you will call into question the operating system you're using. And call it into question so that you can make a choice for the other Operating System which at the bottom line is the Real You hiding behind, or hidden behind, the concept of yourselves that you've developed and substantiated for yourself, period.

I must tell you this and you must be willing to acknowledge it so that you will have an intelligent, logical reason for exploring something you're not naturally inclined to explore. A place in which you cannot be in charge like you think you have to be in order to survive. A place where you yield into the already existing Movement of God which is being you perfectly and wholly and flawlessly. And that the Experience of the Harmony and Awesome Beauty of Being in the Flow of What God Is Being awaits you so that you'll have the courage to abandon bit by bit the operating system that you're currently using. And dare to entrust yourself to a God you're not even sure is there. And I'm telling you that what you're doing is entrusting yourself into a capital "S" Self that you don't believe is really there. To abandon yourself to Who You Really Are.

So that's why this horrible news can be such good news and why I have to tell you the Truth.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Atonement gives you the power of a healed mind, but the power to create is of God.

RAJ: The Atonement gives you the power of a healed mind. Not power over anything, but the power that recognizes what is True and what isn't True and is not offended by or affected by what is untrue. A healed mind knows the Truth and knows it is the Truth and anything else that's presented is meaningless to it. So it does not become offended, and it does not become defensive. That is its power, its unmovable clarity that supercedes confusion and illusion without a fight.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Therefore, those who have been forgiven...

RAJ: Which would be those who have or are practicing yielding to the Place of Excellence in Them.

RAJ READING: Therefore, those who have been forgiven must devote themselves first to healing because, having RECEIVED the idea of healing, they must GIVE it to HOLD it.

RAJ: Or you might say give it to have it.

Healing. How do you give healing? The Clarity of What Truth Is--that means you are utterly unmoved by the presentation of what Truth isn't--is a gift of healing. It is something you can share with another because it is coming from your Right Mind, your experience of being in your Right Mind.

"Oh!" But you say, you're likely to say, "Well, I've experienced healing. What's next? What's next?" Like having gone on one ride at Disneyland and you get off, you say, "What's next? What's next?" What's next is that you give what you've received. You give what you know in order to embody it fully. You might say in order to make it yours. The absolute necessity is for you to give what you have been given to your Brothers and Sisters before you speed on to some new exhilarating realization.

And I will tell you that the next step automatically shows up right in the middle of your extending, sharing the Truth that you find yourself Knowing and the Love that you find yourself Being with your Brothers and Sisters.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The full power of creation cannot be expressed as long as ANY of God's ideas withhold it from the Kingdom. The joint will of ALL the Sonship is the only creator that can create like the Father, because only the complete can think completely, and the thinking of God lacks nothing. Everything you think that is not through the Holy Spirit IS lacking.

RAJ: What it boils down to is if you have experienced revelation, if you have had a God experience and you want more of it, you've got to pass it on to your Brothers. It's that simple. In this way, you could say, you join, or begin to join, the ranks of those who are already awake. And in that increased Unity of the Brotherhood as a Conscious Experience of Being, it lays the groundwork for others to join in the Awakening easier and with less resistance. So if you want to move forward, you've got to turn around and take your Brother's hand.

Now, what do you do if you turn around to take your Brother's hand and he says, "Leave me alone! Don't give me any of your lovey-dovey stuff!" Well, as I said last week, when you're presented with the response, "Catch me if you can," don't take the bait. Turn to another Brother who will take your hand and help that one. Those who have a willingness to receive what is being shared increase the Unity of the Brotherhood that is awake, and weakens the apparent strength of the other operating system, making it easier for those still dreaming to wake up.

You must learn to be very wise. You cannot force anyone to wake up. And when you are met with resistance that is unyielding, let them be, and turn around to find one who is eager to abandon his or her suffering. And do not be offended by the one who refuses what you have to share. Your sharing, whether it was received or not, means that you have embodied for yourself the gift more completely. And the simple fact is that if another is committed to the ego's operating system, they cannot hear what you have to share.

So go where you can be heard. That doesn't mean go where you can be a great teacher. It means go where there is less defense. Go where Brotherhood is possible as an experience. Go where communion to whatever degree can occur. Go where there is willingness.

All that your experience of insight and revelation can prepare you to do is to be an effective presence, an agent for change where there is willingness for change. It will not give you the power to force change. If you understand that, you will not subject yourself to a false sense of guilt because in your sharing of what you know was an utterly beautiful, pure, healing Presence of Love, you ought to have been able to make change happen. You won't play into that. And you will let the one who is adamantly resisting be, without guilt. This is very important.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: How can you who are so holy suffer?

RAJ: It doesn't mean, "How can you suffer as you're actually doing?" It means, "How can you who are so holy think that suffering is an experience available to you?"

RAJ READING: All your past, except its beauty, is gone, and nothing is left except a blessing.

RAJ: You see, in other words, in all of the time that you thought you were doing something, in all the years or perhaps lifetimes that you thought you were sharing something, there were times when you were coming from a Place of Love. There were times when you were inspired, and you shared the inspiration and sharing or communion occurred. When you weren't inspired, nothing was happening, and so therefore all that you thought happened is gone, and all that was coming from Inspiration and Love is left, is still there.

RAJ: In other words, the Real things that you did are still there. And the things you never did never were there, and now they don't even seem to be there, like ghosts of the past.

RAJ READING: You can indeed depart in peace...

RAJ: Depart in peace. It means that you can be with your fellowman. You can leave today. You can at other times talk to me privately and then leave the conversation and go and deal with your Brother.

RAJ READING: You can indeed depart in peace because I have loved you as I loved myself. You go WITH my blessing and FOR my blessing.

RAJ: Do you get that? In order to have, you must give. So you give to have. You go with my blessing to share it with others, and you go for my blessing because in the giving of it you receive it and embody it and confirm it for yourself and thus grow, change.

RAJ READING: Hold it...

RAJ: My blessing.

RAJ READING: ...and share it, that it may always be...

RAJ: Not just yours but...

RAJ READING: ...ours. I place the peace of God in your heart and in your hands, to hold and share. The heart is pure to hold it and the hands are strong to give it.

RAJ: And you need to know that. You need to know that your heart is big enough to bear the Love that you are willing to share and that your hands are strong to give it, because as you begin to do this, you feel weak and you feel unsure because this is new territory for you.

I assure you...

RAJ READING: The heart is pure to hold it and the hands are strong to give it. We cannot lose.

RAJ: In a way, it's not that big a deal. We can't lose because only What Is True is True. And there is no other choice, so all we can end up with is the Fact that True Is True, that the Truth Is True, and that there's only one Operating System.

RAJ READING: My judgment is as strong as the wisdom of God, in Whose Heart and Hands we have our being. His quiet children are His blessed Sons. The Thoughts of God are with you.

RAJ: This is a benediction.

And it's a benediction that you can extend to your Brothers and Sisters no matter how they are behaving. And even when a Brother is obtuse and aggressive and hateful and says, "no thanks," to your sharing, you must be willing to within yourself extend this benediction, extend the continued Awareness of the Truth you Know about him, and not move into the state of reaction that he would have you move into as a result of his obtuse behavior. You, nevertheless, walk away and find someone who is embodying willingness. You must see to it that as you walk away, it is with no harbored resentment but a simple awareness that two different operating systems cannot communicate. Conflicted ideas cannot be shared. I say this so you will understand how it works, and so that you will not be sucked into believing that you are guilty of not having done enough just because someone has refused to stand in receipt of what you truly and genuinely shared from that Place of Excellence in You.

When someone has abandoned the Father in order to have the exhilarating, false experience of autonomy and independence, they do not want to hear of God, they do not want to hear of Truth, and when it is shared with them they will resist it with all their might. And then they will blame you for disturbing them. Understand that that is simply how it will work. Notice it, recognize "oh, it's following the normal pattern," and turn toward someone who is embodying willingness. I have tried to be utterly clear here.

The one who resisted you because they are conflicted is likely, when you have turned your back toward one who is willing, to say, "You're abandoning me!" No. That one has abandoned the Father. That one has abandoned his own Right Mind, or her own Right Mind, and is insisting upon being totally unconscious of it. And when their abandonment of their own Sanity gets turned toward you as a claim that you are abandoning them, you must understand that it is nothing but a ploy to instill guilt in you, which would mean that fear would have to come back into your conscious experience which would require you to leave or abandon your Right Mind, and you had better be too smart to be fooled into doing it.

You see, I'm not going to leave you today with a curse saying you have abandoned me or you have some reason to feel guilty. I've explained to you that for perhaps centuries you've been accomplishing absolutely nothing. But I'm not judging you, because having done absolutely nothing means absolutely nothing has happened that you can be guilty for. And everything that is Real about you has been held in trust. The Real You has continued to be present and has continued to Function over in the other Operating System, as it were. And I'm acknowledging that in you right now and pointing you in the direction of opening up to it now. And so my telling you the Truth doesn't convict you, but it does provide you with the basis for becoming released from an illegitimate imprisonment in a state of nothingness.

And I say you go with my blessing and for my blessing. Hold it and share it that it may always be ours. I place the Peace of God in your heart. Everything that I've been saying is for the purpose of bringing you to a place of peace in yourself where guilt isn't overriding and fear isn't overriding, so that you might dare to risk the chance that there is a God, and that there's a Real You and that there is a Real Operating System and It's your Real Self. And you can lean into It and let It catch you.

I place the Peace of God in your heart and in your hands to hold and share. The heart, your heart, is pure to hold It, and your hands are strong to give It. We cannot lose. My judgment is as strong as the Wisdom of God in Whose Heart and Hands we, all of us here, have our Being. His quiet children are His blessed Sons. The thoughts of God are with you.

I love you. And I look forward to being with you next week.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

All of you, each of you, whether you know it or not, or whether you believe it or not, each of you has been entrusted with something very Holy. In the past it is something that has been spoken of as being written in your hearts. This Something Holy that you have been entrusted with is the Presence of God, the Presence of God Being God right where you are. This Something Holy that you have been entrusted with to carry with you, to let no harm come to, to protect, is your Divinity.

Now it wasn't given to you as though you at first did not have it and then it was given to you. In the beginning it was you, but when you decided to have a different slant on everything, a unique perspective on Reality, and you abandoned your Sonship or Daughtership and thus abandoned your Father and thereby lost your Identity, your Divinity became hidden by you because you gave preference to something else—a voyage, if you will, into fantasy.

And so you have been carrying this Holiness around with you and it's time for you to uncover It. It's time for you to stop suffering from the fantasies that you have developed. It's time for you to stop keeping your Divinity so well hidden that no one, not even you, has the slightest idea that It exists.

We have been talking about the fact that this Holy Thing that you've been entrusted with is the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind. And we've referred to this as an operating system, a Divine Operating System, if you will, and the ego's frame of reference and imaginative fantasies as the other operating system.

Now, I'm bringing this up for a specific reason. You all know I do not indulge in idle chitchat. This past week a judge in New York City has rendered the copyright to A Course In Miracles invalid. And this is creating quite a stir. For some it is a stir of joy; for others it is a stir of concern, even fear, et cetera.

The general consensus is that the Course is now free for anyone to speak about, to quote in any way, shape or form that he or she wishes. The Course is free—free from restrictions. But I want to keep a little well-grounded perspective here. There are hundreds and hundreds of thousands of copies of the Course that have been printed in the last 27 years in multiple languages. It isn't the Course that needs to be free; it's you, each one of you.

And if it's now possible for anyone and his brother to publish the Course so that there are perhaps billions of copies available, if one of you doesn't shift from one operating system to the other, the first domino will not have been pushed over that will start the chain reaction of awakening. It takes guts. It takes commitment. And at the bottom line it takes a real inner Experience of Love to dare to make the shift to what is nothing more than your Right Mind, and abandon the fascination with the ego's frame of reference and its imaginative, fantastic, and totally illusory perceptions of the Kingdom of Heaven and of you.

The weight, you might say, [laughing] in the world of another billion copies of A Course In Miracles will not provide any one of you with the guts to make the shift, and their presence in themselves will promote nothing. All that the Course can do is to bring you to a point of a reasoned ability to make a commitment to What Is Real, a commitment to being the Presence of Love that is Love with a capital "L", because it is gathering the Sense of Being, the Perspective of Being, the Truth of Being, directly from its... your Source—the Father.

More powerful than all the copies of A Course In Miracles in the world is just one of you making commitment to the shift and endeavoring throughout your day to come from that Place of Excellence in You that causes you to be this scary thing called Being The Christ.

What is the Christ? God embodied? Awesome? Foreign? Alien? That which will strike doom for those engaged in evil? [gently whispered] No. The Christ is the Presence of Love that meets its Brothers and Sisters with the clear recognition that they are the Christ as well, even if they don't yet know it, and even if in not knowing it, they feel afraid and vulnerable. And the Christ is the simple Presence of kindness that meets them where they are without frightening them, without throwing a lot of religious verbiage at them, and says things that awaken in them their Love for the Truth and their desire to know more about it, and their willingness to be less defended against it in their life. You hear that? In their life! Not to be less afraid of it as it spews forth from your mouth.

The Christ knows what to say to help another not be as afraid, or how to be with them in a way that causes them to be less afraid. Because at the bottom line it's fear and your preoccupation with it and the validation of threat that it seems to secure in your mind that keeps you in a state of defense which blocks you from knowing the Truth about yourself, about your Brother and Sister, about your world.

This book, A Course In Miracles, does nothing but point you toward the Holiness that you've been entrusted with which needs to be embodied; not hidden, not kept secret from the world and yourself.

And I promise you I will keep all of your noses pointed in the right direction so that you attend to, and are inspired to attend to not what will free the Course but what will free you and what will thereby free your Brother, because you can't gain your freedom by yourself. Your freedom comes in your extension of freedom to your Brother. And because you haven't the faintest idea to how to free your Brother, it means that you have to turn to God to be inspired. You have to be willing to turn to the Place of Excellence in you that I've assured you is there, already capable because of What It Divinely Is of knowing what to say and what to do. And when to be silent. And when to just hug. And when to just smile. And when say "No" with utter gentleness but absolute firmness.

You know what? You can say it's time to change operating systems in at least 30 different languages. To be free to do it in even more languages won't constitute the actual changing of operating systems, the actual getting up in the morning and approaching your day with innocent eyes and the willingness and a desire to see What God Is Being right where you thought just the world was, and What God Is Being right where puny little piss-ant you has been, and then to give voice or expression to the vision that opens up to you.

Okay, enough said about the copyright issue, as well as what the real issue is.

Going to the Text.

RAJ READING: The Two Decisions

Perhaps some of our concepts will become clearer and more personally meaningful if the ego's use of guilt is clarified. The ego has a purpose, just as the Holy Spirit has.

RAJ: In other words, both operating systems have a purpose, have a structure which is aimed at a specific kind of operation.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego's purpose is FEAR, because ONLY the fearful can BE egotistic. The ego's logic is as impeccable as that of the Holy Spirit because your mind has all the means at its disposal to side with Heaven or earth, as it elects.

RAJ: How could the ego's logic be as impeccable as that of the Holy Spirit? How could it even be impeccable at all? The reason is that because a Christ, you, each one of you, with all of your Divinity cannot help but bring into play in whatever your mental endeavor is all of the nature and character of What You Divinely Are. And so, when you create an illusion for yourself, you create an impeccable illusion. The logic it uses to confirm and reinforce its fantasy is as impeccable as the logic, you could say, that God embodies in all of His Creation.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego's logic is as impeccable as that of the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Why?

RAJ READING: ...because your mind...

RAJ: The Christ That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...has all the means at its disposal to side with Heaven or earth, as it elects.

RAJ: With What Is Real or with what is illusion as it elects.

RAJ READING: But again, let us remember that both are in YOU. In Heaven there is no guilt because the Kingdom is attained through the Atonement, which releases you to create.

PAUL: Just a moment.

RAJ READING: The word "create" is appropriate here because, once what YOU have made...

RAJ: As an ego.

RAJ READING: ...is undone by the Holy Spirit,...

RAJ: Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...the blessed residue is restored, and therefore continues in creation.

What is truly blessed...

RAJ: In other words, anything that you have embodied that was an expression of What Is Real about you, even though you may have done it for wrong reasons.

RAJ READING: ...is incapable of giving rise to guilt, and MUST give rise to joy. This makes it invulnerable to the ego because its peace is unassailable. It is invulnerable...

RAJ: To destruction.

RAJ READING: ...to disruption BECAUSE it is whole. Guilt...

RAJ: The foundational basis of the ego's operating system.

RAJ READING: ...is ALWAYS disruptive. Anything that engenders fear is divisive because it obeys the law of division.

RAJ: And I'm adding: not of unification.

RAJ READING: If the ego is the symbol of the separation, it is also the symbol of guilt. Guilt is more than merely not of God. It is the symbol of the ATTACK on God. This is a totally meaningless concept EXCEPT to the ego, but do not underestimate the power of the ego's belief in it.

RAJ: And remember when it says, "the power of the ego's belief in it," it means the power of the belief that the Christ That Is You is exercising in the establishment and reinforcement of a fantasy, an illusion.

RAJ READING: This is the belief from which ALL guilt really stems.

RAJ: Let's sort of express it in more human terms. When you have said, "I want a divorce from you, Father," and you think that you have managed to get a divorce from your Father, then, as I've said before, you cease to be a Son or a Daughter and you have lost your Identity. You are now an orphan, at least in the conviction of your belief. As an orphan you are alone with no ties, adrift. And because in order for you to be an orphan, you had to deny your Father, and it has caused you to lose your Identity, you know you must be guilty of something because there is an experience of fear that was never yours before you made this declaration of independence. To deny your Father and lose your Identity is what constitutes an attack on God.

Now the ultimate fact is that God can't be attacked and you can't stop being the Expression of God. And so you haven't stopped being the direct Expression of God. You haven't at this very moment stopped being God Embodied by God. So the guilt and the fear are illusions. But the Christ That You Are ignorantly created those illusions and made commitment to them with all the power of God, you might say. And so you feel the guilt and you feel the fear, and for all intents and purposes it is absolutely real to you, even though it is not real at all.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego IS the part of the mind which believes in division.

RAJ: Believes in division.

RAJ READING: How can part of God detach itself WITHOUT believing it is attacking Him?

RAJ: Meaning God.

RAJ READING: We spoke before of the authority problem as involving the concept of USURPING God's power. The ego believes that this is what YOU did because it believes it IS you. It follows, then, that if you identify WITH the ego, you MUST perceive yourself as guilty. Whenever you respond to your ego you WILL experience guilt, and you WILL fear punishment. The ego is quite literally a fearful thought.

RAJ: This means then that any time you are experiencing fear, you may know that you're in a state of illusion. You may know that at that moment you are operating from an operating system which is invalid and that you have another choice available to you. And recognizing that, you will not labor under the fear, you will not wilt in front of it, collapse and succumb to it. You'll make a different choice. You'll choose for the Other Operating System.

And no matter how convinced you are that there is justification for the fear, you will put your weight on the side of the Real Operating System. You will put your weight on the side of what is nothing more than your Right Mind and that will be your escape from fear.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: However ridiculous the idea of attacking God may be to the SANE mind, never forget that the ego is NOT sane. It represents a delusional system,...

RAJ: A delusional operating system.

RAJ READING: ...and it speaks FOR it. Listening to the ego's voice MEANS that you believe it is possible to attack God. You believe that a part of Him...

RAJ: You. That's not in the Text.

RAJ READING: You believe that a part of Him has been torn away by YOU.

RAJ: By your bill of divorcement.

RAJ READING: The classic picture of fear of retaliation FROM WITHOUT then follows because the severity of the guilt is so acute that it MUST be projected. Although Freud was wrong about the basic conflict itself, he was very accurate in describing its effects.

RAJ: Freud didn't say that the basic conflict was you and your bill of divorcement from your Source that caused you to lose your Sonship or Daughtership, and therefore your Identity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Whatever you accept INTO your mind has reality for you. It is, however, only your ACCEPTANCE of it that makes it real. If you enthrone the ego in it,...

RAJ: The ego operating system.

RAJ READING: ...the fact that you have accepted it or allowed it to enter MAKES it your reality. This is because the mind, as God created it, IS capable of creating reality.

RAJ: This mind that God created that is your mind is capable of creating Reality, not separate from God, with God.

RAJ READING: We said before that you must learn to think WITH God. To think with Him is to think LIKE Him. This engenders joy, not guilt, because it is natural. Guilt is a sure sign that your thinking is UNnatural.

RAJ: Again, if you'll just let that sink in, you will realize when you find yourself experiencing fear that you are experiencing something unnatural, not natural to you, not normal for you, not your Birthright, and therefore invalid.

None of you really is willing to be subject to an illusion. None of you would consciously choose to be deluded. And so when it does dawn on you that if you're experiencing fear, you're experiencing a delusion which it's not your Birthright to be experiencing, you will consciously choose to find a way to abandon the delusion so that you won't suffer from insanity, from something that isn't real.

And that's what allows you to turn to your Father and say, "Father, what does this mean? Is there justification for fear? What's the Truth here that would uncover to me either the justification for fear, or its total illusory nature and the fact that I need not honor it in any way, shape or form. Father, help."

And of course thereby you reestablish the connection, you undo the bill of divorcement, even though you might be doing it as a last resort in a state of panic without any intent whatsoever to continue the relationship indefinitely. But it doesn't matter because if the opening is there, the connection is made. And whether you choose to abandon it or not later, the connection at that moment is not withheld from you.

SEEKER: Is fear ever justified?

RAJ: The question is asked, "Is fear ever justified?" Absolutely not! One doesn't have to be afraid in order not to stick his finger into an electrical socket. One can understand that it's not an intelligent thing to do and decide not to do it. Fear is not essential to intelligent action ever. But one has to be leaning into a Source, you might say, of Intelligence, rather than a source of unintelligence, to have intelligence available that allows one to be without any occasion for fear. Do you see what I mean?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Perverted thinking will ALWAYS be attended with guilt because it IS the belief in sin.

RAJ: Oh, I know, you want to know why would I, why do I use words like "perverted thinking"? "Can't you be a little kinder in your choice of words. I would get the message." Well, if I thought you would get the message with a weaker word, so to speak, I would use a weaker word. But it's important for you to know that a wrong thought is a wrong thought, is a wrong thought, is a wrong thought, is an untrue thought, is a thought that is not in harmony with God, is a thought that has perverted, converted for unloving purposes some aspect of the Awareness of the Kingdom of Heaven and it is perverted.

Does that make you perverted? No. It means that you are simply what you have always been, the Christ, the perfect Son or Daughter of God using your mind in a way that it can't actually be used, and believing the use you are putting to it, and suffering from your belief without anything that's Real having been altered at all.

So here you stand, or here you sit right now, listening to my words from a place of distorted perception. And yet that which is listening is the unalterable living Christ, the Son and Daughter of God, not affected in any way, shape, or form by a fantasy that never became true. And so you are not perverted, but your perception is altered. And the alteration needs to be corrected so that you're not seeing Reality through a lens that causes it to appear to be to you something that it's not. It's that simple.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego does not perceive sin as a lack of love. It perceives sin as a POSITIVE ACT OF ASSAULT.

RAJ: This is the definition of will, willfulness: the energy and the means of accomplishing the establishment of an illusion as Truth, and the coercion of your Brothers and Sisters into adopting the concept you're embracing and making commitment to it so that in the joined strengths of what we could only call deluded Christs, you create for yourselves a state of mesmerism so total and so complete that it seems to you to be absolutely solid and real.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is an interpretation which is necessary to the ego's survival because, as soon as you regard sin as a LACK,...

RAJ: Not a positive act of assault.

RAJ READING: ...you will automatically attempt to remedy the situation. And you will succeed.

RAJ: Those last four words are the key words. As soon as you regard sin as a lack, you will automatically, it's like naturally, spontaneously attempt to remedy the situation. Well, you're all used to attempting to remedy things. It may or may not work. But the last four words let you know, "And you will succeed." Why? Because in order to do it, you have had to move to the Other Operating System. And from the Other Operating System you are thinking with God.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego regards this as doom, but YOU must learn to regard it as freedom.

RAJ: That's also important. You must learn to regard it as freedom. It will not seem like freedom to begin with because you think you are an ego. The ego is what you think you are. And so when it sees doom, you think you are seeing doom. And so you have to bring into play some self-discipline, so that when you feel the threat that accompanies a willingness to abandon sin, you can use reason and logic to remind yourself that the fear you are feeling is not legitimate, that the doom that you are feeling is not your doom but the sense of yourself that you've been entertaining that's feeling the doom.

And that for you it means freedom. For you it means coming back into your Right Mind. For you it means having the Holy Spirit descend upon you and uncover Itself as You to you and be You without any resistance from you.

So be aware it's going to take some self-discipline. You must learn to regard it as freedom and you must persist with the learning until the shift occurs. And you have, each one of you, ample opportunities all day long to practice this.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The guiltless mind CANNOT suffer.

RAJ: It doesn't say that it, the guiltless mind, doesn't suffer. It doesn't say the guiltless mind only suffers very occasionally. It says:

RAJ READING: The guiltless mind CANNOT suffer.

RAJ: Suffering finds no lodging place in the guiltless mind, this Place of Excellence in you. It's already in you. Your Right Mind is already in you. Your Right Mind is already all there is to you. And It cannot suffer and It is not suffering. And that experience is available to you if you'll simply wish to experience the Other Operating System.

Of course, in order to experience the Other Operating System, what are you going to have to do? You're going to have to abandon your independence. And how are you going to do that? You're going to say, "God, help!" You're going to have to invite Something into your privacy. And you're going to have to be willing to abandon your right, your supposed right to privacy, and you're going to have to share your space with God, with the Holy Spirit.

"Well, I don't know if I want to be transformed by the Presence of the Holy Spirit in my space. Who knows what that might mean?" Well, you know, a few months ago maybe you could have said that. But now you know that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. It's You with a capital "Y".

And so you can't claim through ignorance that you have no idea what it will be like to let the Holy Spirit share your space. You know that at the bottom line it's going to have to mean you experiencing the omnipotence of What God Is Being right where you are. You know that it's going to have to mean experiencing the integrity of your union with all of your Brothers and Sisters. You know that it's going to have to mean the experience of invulnerability in your world. Not because the world is hostile but it can't reach you, but because You and the World are One, and it is therefore benign. And it is because it is benign and you are benign that everything is invulnerable, because there is nothing to be vulnerable against.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Being sane,...

RAJ: The guiltless mind.

RAJ READING: ...it heals the body because IT has been healed.

RAJ: And I'm going to say it heals the world because it, the guiltless mind, your mind, having abandoned the sin of trying to be independent, has been healed. And the scales have fallen from your eyes. The division, which is the nature and character of the ego operating system, has dissolved in the face of preexisting, eternally preexisting Unity that was always available for you to experience.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The sane mind cannot conceive of illness because it cannot conceive of attacking anyone or anything.

RAJ: And if it cannot... this is me, not the Text... and if it cannot conceive of attacking any one or any thing, it likewise cannot conceive of being attacked by any one or any thing.

The Conscious Experience of Unity right here and right now in what you call the world is available to you to experience because it is the unalterable Truth of Everything. And that's why at the bottom line it's worth your attention, your effort, your self-discipline, to look at everything with new eyes and with a willingness to abandon a defense system that is always on high alert.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We said before that illness is a form of magic. It might be better to say that it is a form of magical solution.

RAJ: Magical, fantastic, fantasy, a groundless idea or set of ideas, a baseless set of ideas treated as though it had substance to it and believed and acted upon.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego believes that by punishing ITSELF it will mitigate the punishment of God. Yet even in this it is arrogant. It attributes to God a punishing intent, and then takes over this intent as its OWN prerogative.

It tries to usurp ALL the functions of God as it perceives them because it recognizes that only total allegiance can be trusted.

RAJ: Well, this is true, only total allegiance can be trusted. But you don't have anything available to you to give total allegiance to except That Which Is Real. And giving total allegiance to a fantasy, to that which isn't real, is a non-event, is a non-action.

It's interesting, isn't it, that... it's like self-flagellation and self-punishment is a way of saying to God, "I recognize my sins and I'm suffering for them, and therefore you don't have to punish me." But the one thing it doesn't say is, "And I'm not going to indulge in my sins any more. I'm not going to indulge in the act of self-will that causes me to experience myself as separate from You, Father. I'm not going to engage in acts of self-will that constitute an ongoing act of divorcement." You see, it doesn't say that. So it says, "I will punish myself so that You don't have to and so that I don't have to abandon my independence which I value so highly, even though in order to maintain it I must constantly punish myself."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot OPPOSE the laws of God any more than YOU can, but it can INTERPRET them according to what it wants, just as YOU can. That is why the question, "What DO you want?" must be answered. You ARE answering it every minute and every second, and each moment of decision is a judgment which is anything BUT ineffectual.

RAJ: You see? There it is again. That which is making the decision is the Christ That You Are, the Holy Son or Daughter of God That You Are, and you cannot make an ineffectual decision. The only thing you cannot do is cause a second creation separate and apart from God to arise into existence. You can believe that you have and you will suffer from the belief. Why? Because your decisions are not ineffectual for you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Its effects...

RAJ: The effects of judgment.

RAJ READING: ...will follow automatically...

RAJ: And this is all capitalized words.

RAJ READING: ...UNTIL THE DECISION IS CHANGED.

RAJ: Until the Christ That You Are makes a new choice and a new commitment, and therefore a new decision, because your decisions cannot be ineffectual because of What You Divinely Are, even though you sit in this room and for the most part are in a constant state of denying the possibility that You Are The Christ.

You don't want to be the Christ. You might want to be the Christ if you could do it secretly and no one would know it. But the last thing you want to do is get up in the morning and face your world and have the world see you glowing, and have the world feel the Presence of God right where you are. Because you are afraid if you were that odd, you would be attacked. You would be ridiculed. You don't want to be the Christ, at least not publicly. And yet, the call is for you to look into your Brother's or Sister's eyes and remember God while you're looking them in the eye. There's no way to do that privately!

But remember what I said. Being the Christ means being the Presence of Love, with a capital "L". And being the Presence of Love means being the on-the-spot inspired Conscious Awareness that knows how to be in such utterly simple but effective ways with your Brother. And all you might do is put your arm around that one's shoulder, or smile, or say, "You know, maybe, maybe you don't need to be quite as afraid as you are and here's why. Here's the way it looks to me." And just be the absence of fear with them. You don't know how it's going to come out. But by damn it dare to be from that Place of Excellence in You because it will be recognizable as Love to those to whom you are led to extend it.

The only ones to whom it will not appear as Love are those who are fascinated by and committed to what they see to be the pleasure of engaging in hate, who pleasure in it because it gives them a sense of identity that they don't think they can achieve in any other way. And therefore the Presence Of Love That You Are would be a threat, an over-aggressive threat to their fascination with sin. But your willingness to come from the Place of Excellence in You and to be inspired of the Father how to be in that moment, you'll know whether to walk away or whether to persist in ways that you couldn't imagine as being effective at all.

There are fewer people indulging in sin than those who are not. And as I said last week and the week before, if you are met by someone who refuses your gift and are committed to non-acceptance of it, then turn toward those who are reaching out.

Again.

RAJ READING: Its effects...

RAJ: The effects of judgment.

RAJ READING: ...will follow automatically UNTIL THE DECISION IS CHANGED. This is repeated here because you have not learned it.

RAJ: You see? "Oh, but I'm learning it! I'm learning it!" But then when I say "Are you willing to get up in the morning and go out and be the Presence of the Christ publicly?", you recognize that if there were a less public way to do it, you really would rather do it that way. And so you have not learned it yet.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: But again, your decision...

RAJ: Not to have learned it.

RAJ READING: ...can be UNMADE as well as made.

RAJ: Can be unmade as well as made.

RAJ READING: Remember, though, that the ALTERNATIVES are unalterable.

The Holy Spirit, like the ego, is a decision.

RAJ: It's one of the two operating systems. And which one you're using is nothing more and nothing less than a decision you are making on the spot every single moment.

RAJ READING: Together they constitute all the alternatives which the mind can accept and obey. The ego and the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: The two operating systems.

RAJ READING: ...are the ONLY choices open to you. God created one, and so you CANNOT eradicate it. YOU...

RAJ: The Christ That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...made the other, and so you CAN.

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: God created one, and so you CANNOT eradicate it. YOU made the other, and so you CAN. ONLY what God creates is irreversible and unchangeable. What YOU have made can always be changed because, when you do not think LIKE God,...

RAJ: This is what I was saying last week.

RAJ READING: ...you are not really thinking at all. Delusional ideas are not real thoughts, although you CAN believe in them.

RAJ: And here are the key words again.

RAJ READING: But you are wrong. The function of thought comes FROM God and is IN God. As part of His Thought, you cannot think APART from Him.

RAJ: You know the phrase, "Reach out and touch someone." At various times in your lives, something has happened and the person you are with has been touched by something you said or did, because in that moment you happened to be defenseless enough to be inspired by the Father, to be the Presence of His Will and the Expression of the Place of Excellence in You. And you functioned from the Other Operating System. And the one you were with was literally touched and changed by the encounter. And then, all the rest of your life, nothing significant like that has ever happened.

What I want to say to you is notice that, because it constitutes a clear, distinguishable difference that allows you to see that occasionally something extremely valuable has happened. And all the rest of time, nothing of that sort has happened. Notice the difference so that you might stay connected with the desire to have that evidence of your being a transformational agent for change. That's how you honor the Place of Excellence in You. And that's how you invite God to be embodied more fully in you so that you in your Right Mind, you in the Conscious Experience of Sanity, can replace the fantasy experience of yourself that is to one degree or another an experience of misery, suffering, anxiety, tension, exhaustion, the absence of fun.

This section in the sparkly book is entitled, "The Two Decisions"—the decision for one or the other of the two operating systems.

Last week in the section we were discussing, we talked about the fact that you're always teaching. Whichever operating system you're coming from, you're teaching and you're embodying in the world. And one of them confirms and reestablishes misery, and the Other establishes release from that misery.

You can't say, "Well, hey, what difference does it make if I don't come from the Place of Excellence in me for a while? What difference does it make? Nobody else is either. You know, I know Armageddon isn't coming. And hey, things aren't that bad, you know. And so rather than get up on a bandbox and teach something and be a transformational Presence, I'd rather do nothing at all."

Well, friends, you can't do nothing at all! If you're not doing that, you are on another bandbox and you're teaching the other operating system. And to those who are using the same operating system you are, you are an effective presence on behalf of continued ignorance.

So don't think that right now you're doing nothing. And if you choose for the Other Operating System, you will be taking a stand for something. You're taking a stand for something right this minute! And you cannot not be taking a stand for something. So take a look squarely at this. If you really thought for a moment that what you were contributing was that which caused ignorance and suffering to be extended, well, you would have no more truck with yourself than you have with so-and-so down the street that's being awful. You see?

So, I'm going to say don't get hung up on the fact that if you're not coming from the Place of Excellence in You, that you are... you're being... what was the word back here [turning pages]... a perverted presence in the world. In the world of the ego, you are being a perverted presence, but you're not accomplishing anything by it and you're not affecting Reality by it, but you are keeping yourself and others from experiencing Reality, Harmony, Unity.

Don't get hung up on that. Just realize that you're not really being the good boy or the good girl who's not really doing bad things in the world, and therefore what difference does it make if you wait a little while to actually be the dynamic Presence of Love that is transformational for yourself and your Brother. Don't think that it doesn't make any difference if you wait a little while. Because either you're teaching that, either you're teaching what causes sudden shifts of perception to occur, healing, or you are doing what inhibits sudden shifts of perception, miracles. You're doing one or the other absolutely. Own it.

Contemplate this one point for this coming week. You're teaching one or the other fully. You are teaching one or the other with commitment. You are teaching one or the other aggressively. Knowing that will allow you to feel motivated to make a conscious choice, instead of an unconscious choice, for one or the other. And that's the way movement begins. That's the way the first domino begins to fall.

It won't fall because a billion more copies of the Course can now be freely printed and distributed in the world. It will happen because you today, tomorrow, the next day, are realizing that you're teaching all the time and you're either teaching that which unifies or you are teaching that which divides. And you are teaching it with the Power of the Christ That You Are.

Well, this coming week I know it's going to feel good to us to have more of you standing with us consciously. And to the degree that you make commitment to it, you will feel us standing with you and that will be a wonderful confirmation of the Truth of what I've been saying to you. And it will also be that which will add impetus, strength, if you will, to your willingness to make a commitment in a new direction.

I love you all and I look forward to seeing you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And, as usual, welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

In so many words, someone said to Paul, ask Raj to be gentle with us today. I want to remind you that at every moment you are companioned by mighty companions, if I may put it that way. You are never alone. And in this transfer from one operating system to the Other, you have available to you the ready and willing and encouraging support of Me, of your Guides, and of course, the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

You know, I am being gentle with you. It's just that I'm sharing the simplicity of all of this in a way that makes awakening seem to you to be easier, and therefore more unavoidable. In other words, the simpler it gets, and the more unavoidable it gets, the more you're in the position of, as they say, putting your money where your mouth is, putting your actions where the Truth of you is.

And that's meaning, that's going to mean a change of behavior, a change in the way you convey who you are by means of your behavior, and the way in which you convey to your Brother who they are by your behavior.

The interesting difference between doing that and what you have been doing in the old operating system is that in the old operating system what you were conveying about yourself to your Brother and what you were conveying to your Brother about your Brother was all for the purpose of control, was all for the purpose of manipulation. But when you shift operating systems, you convey to your Brother Who You Are and Who They Are because you see Who They Truly Are by virtue of your not claiming a mind separate from God with which to see your Brother and Sister. And therefore, your vision of them that you are conveying, and your experience of yourself that you are conveying, is not for the purpose of control at all, but for the purpose of glorifying Truth, for the purpose of glorifying God by expressing no other Mind than His.

The fundamental means by which you coerce each other from the old operating system—the one I'm calling old, even though it's the one you're primarily using at the moment—is guilt. Guilt, if you are able to convince another of his or her guilt, is the precursor to judgment and penalty. And that strikes fear in every single one of you. Guilt and its use are absent in the new operating system. And, in a way, that's what makes moving to the new Operating System scary, because without guilt as the primary means of leveraging others into behaving in a way that provides you with whatever your sense of safety is, will not be available to you from the new Operating System. And, up until now, the use of guilt has been your only effective means of providing yourself with safety. Therefore, at the bottom line, guilt, according to the old operating system, has been the one effective means of securing your salvation. Do you see?

And when you use the word "salvation," you do give it divine overtones. And when you give it divine overtones and you speak about your salvation, you lend an incredibly insane coloration to the meaning of guilt. Guilt is not only the means of your salvation; it must thereby, because it serves a divine purpose, be utterly and truly valuable. Now none of you thinks things through very completely, but if you think about what I've said, where I've thought it through completely and expressed it completely, you can see how idiotic it is. You can see how idiotic it is for you to employ guilt in getting others to behave the way you think they ought to behave. And that, of course, calls for a change in your behavior. But you can also see how idiotic it is for you to play into another's ploy directed at you, which you tend to voluntarily knuckle under to... for fear of judgment and penalty.

I'm going to begin reading.

RAJ READING: Irrational thought...

RAJ: And isn't that what we've just been talking about?

RAJ READING: Irrational thought is a thought DISORDER. God Himself orders your thought because your thought was created BY Him.

RAJ: Mary Baker Eddy said, or wrote: "Angels are God's Thoughts passing to man spiritual intuitions, pure and perfect."

When you aren't busy creating your own thoughts and you are silent, the flow of God's Thoughts become noticeable to you. And they are experienced right where you have always had all of your own private thoughts. And as you let that happen, you begin to be able to recognize that this flow of spiritual intuitions is the natural function of your mind, constitutes you being in your Right Mind, and that all you are called upon to do is to embody or give expression to those spiritual intuitions, pure and perfect.

Again.

RAJ READING: God Himself orders your thought because your thought was created BY Him. Guilt feelings are always a sign that you do not know this.

RAJ: And I'm inserting: Because you don't know it, you busy yourself with creating your own thoughts and your own opinions and your own definitions. And then you do your darnedest to use guilt to convince your Brothers and Sisters of the correctness of your definition in order to get them to agree with you, so as to increase the strength of your thought by the joining of others in agreement with it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: They...

RAJ: Guilt feelings.

RAJ READING: ...also show that you believe you can think apart from God AND WANT TO.

RAJ: Wanting to think on your own is not truly possible. You can't... you, the Divine One That You Are, can't truly want to do what you can't do. You can't want to do what is impossible. You can't want or desire to not be in your Right Mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Every thought disorder is attended by guilt at its inception and maintained by guilt in its continuance. Guilt is inescapable for those who believe they order their own thought and must therefore obey its orders. This makes them feel RESPONSIBLE for their mind errors, without recognizing that, by ACCEPTING this responsibility, they are really reacting irresponsibly. If the SOLE responsibility of the miracle worker is to accept the Atonement for himself, and I assure you that it is, then the responsibility for what is atoned FOR cannot BE yours.

RAJ: Little bit of a mind-bender there. If you are engaging in the disordered thought of using guilt to make others yield to your will, and they react from their will, and this creates a dynamic of stress, you might think that the way to correct it, to correct the distress, is to heal that one of his reluctance to yield to your will. It's that simple. When the answer, the true resolution to the problem, is for you to shift operating systems. That's what constitutes the Atonement—shifting operating systems.

It isn't your responsibility to correct the individual problems. It's your responsibility to shift to the Operating System in which the problem doesn't exist because independent authority doesn't exist, and therefore coercion never comes into play and never has to be defended against.

And here's the difficult thing. You do this right in the arena where the problem seems to be going on. You must shift operating systems so that the messages, the messengers, you are sending out to a problematic Brother or Sister arise from Clarity of Truth that you are experiencing, where you are not... where you are not buckling under to the call for guilt that's being presented to you and retaliate in the old mode of returning guilt for guilt in an attempt to win the battle of the wills. And you must do this even though it feels to you as though you no longer have any authority at all, when authority of the kind you have been used to seems to be being called for, and seems to be essential.

Remember it always takes two to tangle. And if you withdraw from the contest, there is no contest no matter how much the so-called quote "opponent" unquote wants the battle to continue and wants you to remain in the battle mode.

And so you must dare to make a commitment to shift operating systems and then reflect and embody Truth right in that arena, to reflect and embody Love right in that arena, because Something in you knows that the making of the shift to the new Operating System is the only thing that will truly resolve the apparent differences and the apparent conflict. And so you must have guts and commitment and resolve.

I'm going to take a moment here to bring something else out. We've talked before about the fact that when you got a bill of divorcement from your Father, and you became Fatherless in your own mind, you lost your Identity. In that state of lost Identity, of being an orphan, you have endeavored to create an Identity for yourself out of whole cloth, out of pure imagination. What I want you to very clearly see is that every independent authoritative act you have engaged in has caused your lack of Identity to become even more pronounced. Every overt willful act of independence has obscured Who You Are further.

Therefore, every act of independence has been an act of Self-denial, not an act of self-creation. You see? I want you to at least grasp this intellectually. Every willful act of independence has obscured Who You Are even further. And so the result has been the exact opposite of what you have thought you were attempting to achieve. And the only way in which your Identity is going to be reestablished in your experience is by your abandoning your very conscious, insistent attempts to be independent. Just let that sit there for a moment.

Now how do you reverse this? You reverse it by saying in true prayer, "Father, help me." You break the isolation, as I've said so many times, by inviting into your space your Father, your Guide, the Holy Spirit. You make room for something else with the conscious intent to embrace It and yield to It. Those are the key words. Yield to It.

You think that there's the possibility of companioning with others independently, being with others without abandoning your independence. And as long as you are still intent on establishing your independence, you are engaging in the establishment of the further obscuring of Who You Are from everyone else, as well as from yourself, and thus securing the dream of suffering, the experience of misery. It's that simple. And the fact is that Joy is your Birthright, and it is available to you to be experienced at this instant, at this instant, at this instant, every moment.

And again, those who companion with you, those of the Brotherhood Who Are Awake, stand fully in support of your experiencing this Joy and the Peace and the Love that it's your Birthright to be experiencing in every moment, and to convey to you in every means possible the experience of fearlessness, of comfort in the process of your shifting operating systems. Be willing to let them in and accept their help, and yield to their Vision.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The dilemma...

RAJ: Of guilt feelings.

RAJ READING: The dilemma cannot be resolved except by accepting the solution of UNDOING.

RAJ: I'm going to insert: the absence of the expression of authority, private independent authority which has as its goal the accomplishment of something, the doing of something actual.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You WOULD be responsible for the effects of all your wrong thinking if it could not be undone. The purpose of the Atonement is to save the past in purified form only.

RAJ: Which simply means minus the irrelevancies of self-will that you introduced into the picture along with whatever you did that did reflect the Father's Will, that did express your Divinity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you accept the remedy for a thought disorder, and a remedy whose efficacy is beyond doubt, how can its symptoms remain?

RAJ: I'm going to say, how could the effects of something you never actually did continue to distort your perception of what was really going on? It can't.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You have reason to question the validity of symptom cure,...

RAJ: That's like solving this little problem and solving that little problem by coercing your Brother into obedience to what will provide you with your safety.

RAJ READING: You have reason to question the validity of symptom cure, but NO-ONE believes that the symptoms can remain if the underlying CAUSE is removed.

RAJ: Well, is the underlying cause of your Brother's awful behavior the fact that he hasn't learned how to Love yet? Or is it because you haven't learned how to Love yet, and you're behaving in an atrocious way with him? Does it mean that he needs to learn how to Love and you need to learn how to Love? No! It means you need to get out of that operating system where you are serving the one single goal of establishing the reality of yourself as something independent of a Source. You see? It's simple. But it's difficult to remember because you are so ingrained in your well-trained, habitual responses to the expressions of willfulness that are going on around you, and the expressions of willfulness that you are putting out.

No one believes... no one believes that the symptoms can remain if the underlying cause is removed. If you move out of the old operating system, absolutely nothing that seemed to go on within it can be your experience any more. It's that simple. And shifting operating systems is the Atonement.

You see, you don't atone for your sins. Atonement means shifting into your Right Mind in which sin, disease, and death do not exist. And your fascination with them is no longer present in your mind. And your seeming to be subject to them is no longer an experience available to you. And your inclination to inflict them on others is no longer present. This is very important to understand.

The next section is:

RAJ READING: Time and Eternity

RAJ: Time and Eternity. Eternity, you might say, is the environment of existing in the new Operating System. And time is what Eternity looks like, feels like, and is experienced as when you're in the ego's operating system. Time and Eternity are one and they are Eternity. But please understand that what I'm saying there is that time is Eternity misperceived from within the willful state of acting independently.

Reading.

RAJ READING: The CONTINUING will to remain separated is the only possible reason for continuing guilt feelings.

RAJ: Do you get that? If you are continuing to will to remain separate, then you are continuing to be in the arena where guilt is essential to maintaining the dissonance that constantly needs correction, so that you and your Brothers are constantly distracted from discovering that the conflict does not lie in either one of you, but in the choice of vantage point from which you are choosing to view the Only Thing available to experience, which is the Kingdom of Heaven, which is Eternity, which is Reality.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have said this before, but we did not emphasize the destructive results of this decision at that time.

RAJ: And the word "destructive" is not too strong there. We could also say "distractive" results.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ANY decision of the mind will affect both behavior AND experience. What you will, you EXPECT. This is not delusional. Your mind DOES create your future, and it can turn it back to full creation at any minute,...

RAJ: Key words.

RAJ READING: ...IF IT ACCEPTS THE ATONEMENT FIRST.

RAJ: In other words, if you make the shift to the new Operating System which is really the Original Operating System, which is really the ancient Operating System, which is really the Ever-Present, Eternal Operating System.

Again, key words: "It can turn it back to full creation at any minute."

Please understand that you're constantly standing at the threshold of making that shift. You're constantly standing at the threshold of abandoning authoritative self-will. It can happen in an instant. It can happen at any minute. Not when you have finished the Course. Not after several lifetimes. It can happen at any minute! Do not forget this, else you can begin to believe that there is a process in time that must be fulfilled before it can happen.

The Experience of your Right Mind is as close as your willingness to stop thinking for a moment and make commitment to not thinking. That's all the further away it is.

Again.

RAJ READING: Your mind DOES create your future, and it can turn it back to full creation at any minute, IF IT ACCEPTS THE ATONEMENT FIRST.

Again, if it will shift to the new Operating System.

RAJ READING: It will also turn back to full creation the instant it has done so. Having given up its thought disorder,...

RAJ: [laughing] It's a nice way, a simple way of referring to the old operating system—"a thought disorder."

RAJ READING: Having given up its thought disorder, the proper ordering of thought becomes quite apparent.

RAJ: And you become the mouthpiece for God. You become the Expression of God that puts nothing in the way of What God Is Being right where you are to obscure the Beauty of Creation That You Are. In your willingness to let God Be What He Is Being where you are without your introducing anything extraneous into the picture, you become what we have called a co-creator with God.

Continuing.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: Time and Eternity (T-#79/86)]

RAJ READING: God in His knowledge is not waiting, but His Kingdom is bereft while YOU wait.

RAJ: As long as you are enjoying this state of independence and of free will to do as you wish without yielding to the underlying order of the Universe that you are part of, you block yourself from experiencing the Brotherhood consciously as part of you. And in your defiant act of independence, you hold yourself apart and unavailable to the rest of the Brotherhood. And in that sense, the Kingdom is bereft.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: All the Sons of God are waiting for your return, just as YOU are waiting for THEIRS. Delay does not matter in eternity, but it IS tragic in time.

RAJ: Tragic? Too strong a word? Well, you don't really think that your lives are tragedies, but in light of the Gifts of Wholeness and Joy and Love and Truth and Beauty and Harmony that you're missing, it is tragic. Because not only are you missing it, you don't know you're missing it! You think what you see is what you get. This is all there is. And you're making the best of it. And you're trying to use your spirituality to make the best of an illusion, to make the illusion more harmonious, when what's called for is the abandonment of the illusion by the abandonment of self-will, willful authoritative attempts to dominate.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You have elected to be in time rather than eternity,...

RAJ: You didn't know you did that, but now you know that when you enacted this bill of divorcement from your Father by saying, "Father, I'd rather do it myself," and you lost your Identity, it caused Eternity to be experienced as the illusion of time in which aging and death are the ultimate benefit. Crazy, isn't it?

Again.

RAJ READING: You have elected to be in time rather than eternity, and have therefore changed your belief in your status.

RAJ: You lost your Sonship. You lost your Daughtership. And your status now is orphan.

Ohhh. But an orphan that has the opportunity to declare herself or himself, and make herself or himself into anything he or she wants to be, and have the glorious experience of having private personal authority that you can exercise in a dominating manner over your Brother and your Sister and your world. Oh, how you value the state of orphanhood and the promise you think it holds.

You have secured the rightness of this stance by providing another definition, another meaning, that says God gave you free will. And so you have made up a fantasy whereby God actually has authorized you to be an independent, willful, self-made authority, and in fact, if you don't succeed at doing that, you are not fulfilling your divine purpose. You see? You see how this distorted sense of self and distorted experience of reality that you're having in a state of so-called independence is utterly insane, senseless, useless. But one which, nevertheless, tragically blinds you to your Birthright so that you no longer even think It exists, while all along you have continued to be the Divine One That You Are, the Christ, the Son and Daughter of God, because the only way that could be changed is in a fantasy. And fantasies do not override, or alter, in any way Reality.

Again.

RAJ READING: You have elected to be in time rather than eternity, and have therefore changed your belief in your status. Yet your election is both free and alterable. You do not belong in time.

RAJ: Why do you not belong in time? Because time doesn't exist except as a distorted perception of Eternity. You don't belong in time because there is no time for you to be in actually.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your place is ONLY in eternity, where God Himself placed you forever.

RAJ: Okay. Your place is only in Eternity.

Well, who the hell knows what Eternity is?! How can this be relevant to you? You know, what does Eternity have to do with tomorrow morning when it's time to get up and go to work?

Well, you know what Eternity has to do with? It's real simple. Eternity has to do with the fact that each one of you is unchangeably pure and perfect. Eternity in the Here and Now in relevant terms means that you are forever, for lack of better words, at your prime. You are incapable right Here and right Now of aging. You are incapable right Here and right Now from experiencing disease that debilitates and wears out your body. It means that your Brother or Sister that you encounter in the day is Eternal Being, not in the sense of endless time but in the sense of instant, unchanging Perfection.

Eternity has to do with your looking at your Brothers and Sisters who seem to be looking older today than yesterday, and saying, "Tain't so. I will not confirm the suggestion that's being presented to me that this is a mortal existing in time moving on an inexorable path from birth to death with accompanying distresses, both physical and mental, that contribute to the ultimate of death.”

The Eternal Is Forever Now in Absolute Perfection. And, as I said, in a State of Primeness. So when you look in the mirror in the morning and you see bags under your eyes that didn't used to be there, or breasts that are a little lower than they used to be, or a paunch that didn't used to be there, know that you're looking in and identifying with time, when Right Now Eternity is the arena, the context of All Being, not time.

The shifting of operating systems involves a shifting of the way in which you are willing to apprehend what's going on around you, so that you begin to say, so that you begin to recognize what's inconsistent with the new Operating System, what's inconsistent with Eternity.

“Mmm. The paint's beginning to peel on the house. The roof is thirteen years old.” You see? “Wear and tear has occurred. Deterioration, which is inevitable because everything is made of matter, is happening and needs to be dealt with.” Catch these little things as you see them so that you can say, “No! There is another way to look at this. If I am being confronted with the only thing that's going on and that's the Kingdom of Heaven, and if Eternity is the context in which All Of Creation is occurring, then this evidence of deterioration cannot be so. And I will not confirm it by agreeing with it.” This is where the self-discipline comes in. This is where the commitment in very practical terms to the new Operating System must come into play.

There are in children's magazines and on the backs of cereal boxes cartoons; two cartoons side by side that are almost identical, except that there are six or eight variations. You need to become like the kids who delight in finding the variations. You need to begin to delight in finding the inconsistencies, so that you can identify it, and instead of agreeing with it say, “Tain't so! This does not reflect and embody Eternity.” You see? This can be fun. It can be delightful. And I'm going to put it this way. It is a very effective way to retrain your mind so that your mind doesn't simply rehearse the old, habitual refrain of sin, disease, and death, of time, and aging, and suffering. So that you break down your natural inclination to reconfirm again, and again, and again, the old operating system, the thought disorder.

And you know what? As you do that, you will... you will become an agent for change in your world because you will stop employing guilt as a means of keeping your world in line, and your Brothers and Sisters. And at the same time, you will find yourself unsusceptible to invitations to guilt that others extend in your direction as a means of getting you into line. And you will have less and less to be upset with your Brothers and Sisters for. You see? It isn't that they extend an invitation of guilt to you that bothers you. What bothers you is after you have accepted the invitation and are now suffering from having accepted it.

We're going to stop here, but there's one thing I want to reassert for you to remember. Every act of authoritative self-will that you engage in for the purpose of demonstrating your successful, independent existence constitutes the reinforcing of your obscurity. Every act of authoritative self-will is a demonstration of Self-denial that covers you up more completely than ever before. Remember this.

Because I promise you, as the Divine One That You Are, or the ego that you think you are, you truly do not want to push yourself further and further into nonexistence. None of you does. And you wouldn't be employing the ego's means of demonstrating your real presence if you knew that it was obscuring your Real Presence. And that's why I'm making such a point of it for you today so that that will be clear, because then the Impulse To Be that is the very core of your existence, the Divine Core Of Your Existence will be able to come forth into expression through means that will secure the clearer and clearer and more obvious manifestation of your Real Identity as God Being God right there where you are and you glorifying God by introducing nothing extraneous to What God Is Being right there where you are, and your thereby experiencing yourself from what is nothing more than your Right Mind.

I love you all. And your Light is a little bit brighter tonight. I don't care how old or young you appear to be. Your Light is timeless. Your Being is timeless. Your Individuality is timeless. And the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality is timeless, in Its Prime, available for you to experience at any moment without any growth or development on the part of your ego needing to occur in order to have that experience.

I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Chapter 5 – HEALING AND WHOLENESS
Section – TIME AND ETERNITY
First Edition – p. 79 / Second Edition – p. 86
Sparkly Book – p. 110

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

We've been talking for the last few weeks about the two operating systems, the one being the ego's operating system and the other being the Holy Spirit's Operating System, and that waking up is a matter of shifting from the ego's operating system to the Holy Spirit's Operating System.

Remembering that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind.

Because of the general familiarity with computers and computer systems and the fact that they're called operating systems, it's possible for you to think that the two operating systems are like two different objects. And I want to make a subtle distinction here. The ego's operating system, in replacing the Holy Spirit's Operating System, did not constitute the Holy Spirit's Operating System to be removed from you, or to be like removed from the computer. The ego's operating system is overlaid upon the Holy Spirit's Operating System. It's rather like you're putting on a pair of colored glasses which, let us say, they're red colored glasses. It causes an overlay of red to be placed between you and everything you're observing, so that everything you see is colored red. It didn't make everything you see change, but it made the way you perceive it change.

The ego's operating system is a way of thinking which you have overlaid over the direct, clear experience of Reality. Now, in shifting from one operating system to the Other, you abandon the ego's operating system so that the overlay fades, allowing the Eternal Operating System, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, to be experienced by you without any distractions. And the new Operating System becomes obviously yours, instead of something that has been obscured and put into the background by an overlay of thoughts, ideas, mutually-agreed-upon definitions that are at odds with Reality. This is important.

Now, the paramount subject at the moment happens to be guilt. And we've discussed the fact that you use guilt not only to distract yourself from the Other Operating System, the New Operating System, the only Real Operating System, but you use it to keep your Brothers and Sisters unconscious of it as well. And you use it by continually finding ways to make your Brother say "ouch." And in the process of making your Brother say "ouch," you suggest that it is your Brother's perception that needs to be changed. So not only have you implied guilt, you have implied that the guilt has been brought into play entirely by the one you made feel guilty. And thus your part in the introduction of guilt becomes overlooked.

Now there are many ways you do this to each other. And one of the most subtle, and therefore most-difficult-to-address forms of it is criticism.

How many of you have noticed someone of the female persuasion who has started going through menopause and apparently become cranky and critical. And you say, you notice it, of course, and you say, "Well, she's going through menopause." And what you're saying is, in effect, I don't have to honor the criticism. I don't have to take it personally. I understand it because quote "it's a stage she's going through" unquote. And in actuality that is a kindness. But you recognize there... you recognize there the fact that the criticism is not appropriate. And that's the key point.

In other cases you may notice that somebody is apparently getting older, and in their old age they're becoming critical, and you recognize that it's not appropriate. You don't like it, but you say, "Well, that's old age for you."

What I'm trying to point out is that when you see it in others, you recognize that it is inappropriate, but when you engage in it, you seldom notice that you're doing it. And yet, little criticisms constitute niggling cuts, if you will, against the Integrity of the person being criticized. And you need to become alert to when you're practicing criticism, even in the guise of jokes. You need to become alert because you are allowing yourself to practice hate, because the act of criticism is undercutting and undermining of another's peace. You need to recognize when you're doing it so that you can bite your tongue and not embody hate, not give it voice in the world, and then correct yourself, make another choice, so that what comes out of your mouth expresses Love and support and encouragement and that which substantiates the Excellence in your Brother.

Why? Because when you are in the act of instilling guilt, you are distancing yourself from that Place of Excellence in You, and you are causing the one being made to feel guilty to automatically become defensive and retaliatory, and thus teach the necessity of not being unconditional, the necessity of not being trusting, the necessity of not being open and undefended against the influx of God's Point of View so that It might be expressed and embodied in the world.

Love one another.

See to it that in everything you do, it causes your Brother to feel safe, or your Sister, to feel safe enough to let down his or her defenses so that the overlay of the ego's operating system may fade, and in its absence disclose the underlying Eternal Operating System of the Holy Spirit which is the Presence of God in each one of you.

I encourage you during this coming week and beyond that, but I encourage you during this, all of you, during this coming week to monitor your thoughts and your expressions to see whether or not what you're saying, or what you're about to say, is going to be an invitation to your Brother or Sister to feel guilty and to feel the need for defense, so that you don't become the focal point for more firmly establishing the ego's operating system.

Okay. Reading.

RAJ READING: Guilt feelings are the PRESERVERS of time.

RAJ: And I'm adding: and therefore the obscurers of Eternity.

RAJ READING: They...

RAJ: Guilt feelings.

RAJ READING: ...induce fears of future retaliation or abandonment, and thus ensure that the future will remain like the past.

RAJ: You see, guilt feelings bring your imagination into play because the future can only be imagined. And so, when you attempt to cause another to feel guilty, you cause the imagination of another to come into play. And you know they're going to do this, which is why you employ guilt, because you want them to become fearful of what you will do as a consequence of their not buckling under to your wish to have them see things your way and not abandon the mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This...

RAJ: Meaning the ensuring that the future will remain like the past.

RAJ READING: ...is the ego's continuity, and gives it a false sense of security through the belief that you cannot escape from it. But you can and...

RAJ: ...you...

RAJ READING: ...MUST. God offers you the continuity of eternity in exchange.

RAJ: In exchange for what? In exchange for the abandonment of guilt, but more basically in exchange for your abandoning the ego's operating system and choosing instead, in all cases, to come from the Place of Excellence in You, which is the Holy Spirit.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you choose to make this exchange, you will simultaneously exchange guilt for joy, viciousness for love, and pain for peace. My role is only to unchain your will and make it free. Your ego cannot accept this freedom, and will oppose your free decision at every possible moment and in every possible way. And as its maker you recognize what it can do because you GAVE it the power to do it.

RAJ: You see, when you're in the ego operating system, you are conditioned, you're nothing but a bunch of conditioned responses. You are conditioned to keep everybody else conditioned, and you are also conditioned to keep yourself conditioned.

"Oh! When I was knee-high to a grasshopper, my mother instilled in me conscience, and I learned it, and I know better than to go against what I was taught. It has become my code of conduct. And because she used guilt and shame as the justification for my adopting it so sincerely, I must do the same with everyone else because that's the way it works." And so, if you, through truly Divine Inspiration find yourself led to behave in a way that occurs outside of your conditioned conscience, you feel guilty and you stop yourself immediately.

And so, guilt keeps you in line. And you use guilt to keep everyone else in line. And everyone else uses guilt to keep you in line. And it's a continuing downward spiral of ignorance. And you need to realize that this is happening so that you can make a different choice. And so that you can find the use of guilt to be repulsive, something you do not want to utilize or engage in or be controlled by.

Because as long as you, with your mind, keep yourself bound to ignorance, and as long as you use that to keep others bound to ignorance, and as long as everyone else is using it to keep you bound to ignorance, well, it's obvious that you're like a butterfly caught and pinned in a display case absolutely kept from expressing your Function of Freedom and Beauty and Life.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The mind does indeed know its power, because the mind does indeed know God. Remember the Kingdom always,...

RAJ: You could say do not forget there's another Operating System. Remember that the only thing you are confronted by is Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...and remember that you who are part of the Kingdom CANNOT be lost. The mind that was in me IS in you, for God creates with perfect fairness. Let the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...remind you always of His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...fairness, and let me teach you how to share it with your brothers. How else can the chance to claim it for yourself be given you?

RAJ: You see there's that process again. You must invite the consciousness of Love in so that it can be extended to your Brother so that you may have it for yourself because you have embodied it.

Again.

RAJ READING: How else can the chance to claim it for yourself be given you? What you do not understand is that the two voices speak for different interpretations of the same thing simultaneously, or almost simultaneously, for the ego always speaks first.

RAJ: That's because it's a defense system. And it's always going to present the defense against the clear perception of Truth before you have the chance to express the Truth, because it must defend its existence.

Now let's go back because this is important. What you do not understand is that the two voices speak for different interpretations of the same thing. I've said, over and over again that the only thing you're confronted by is Reality. At this very moment as you sit in your homes, or as each of you sits here in this room with all of the objects in the room, the only thing confronting you and looking like objects is the Kingdom of Heaven. It's only the Kingdom of Heaven that the ego can have an interpretation of. It's only the Kingdom of Heaven that you can have mutually-agreed-upon definitions about. There's nothing else available for you to have a single thought about. So the ego and the Holy Spirit speak of the same thing. The only thing is that the Holy Spirit speaks of it truly and reveals it truly. And the ego definitions lie about it, and then, you become engaged in a lifelong goal of trying to confirm the lie as the Truth. And the strife between you and your Brother and Sister is made up of nothing more than the constant battle of trying to establish the lie as Truth.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Alternate interpretations were unnecessary until the first one was made, and speaking itself was unnecessary before the ego was made.

RAJ: Why was speaking unnecessary? Because you all Knew the Truth. And you all Knew that each other Knew It as a direct unrestricted Experience Of What Each Other Was Knowing. And that's what awaits you at this moment as you abandon the overlay of the ego's operating system.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego speaks in judgment...

Judgment... I'm interjecting this here. Judgment spoken is always a form of criticism, and is therefore always an attempt to instill guilt so as to cause defense which constitutes a tightening up which causes your body to become more dense, your Body of Light, and therefore dark. And as a result, the Illumination of Your Being is no longer seen, and it's easy to forget that You Are The Light, that You Are The Light Of Living Love, that You Are Radiant Being. And then it's very easy for you to say that everything is matter, because you cannot see the Light of it in it.

PAUL: Just a moment.

RAJ: Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego speaks in judgment and the Holy Spirit reverses its decisions,...

RAJ: Let's just be with that for a moment.

RAJ READING: The ego speaks in judgment and the Holy Spirit reverses its decisions, much as the Supreme Court has the power to reverse the lower courts' decisions about the laws of this world. The ego's decisions are ALWAYS wrong because they are based on a complete fallacy which they were made to uphold. NOTHING the ego perceives is interpreted correctly.

RAJ: And the reason is that the ego's purpose is to provide a definition different from the Father's Meaning. Why? So that it can get the hit of being an original thinker, an authoritative presence in its own right.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Not only does it cite Scripture for its purpose, but it even interprets Scripture as a witness for itself. The Bible is a fearful thing to the ego because of its...

RAJ: The ego's.

RAJ READING: ...prejudiced judgment. Perceiving it as fearful, it interprets it fearfully. Having made YOU afraid, you do not appeal to the Higher Court because you believe its judgment would be AGAINST you.

RAJ: Well, I am aware that many of you are afraid of God. And when I speak of coming Home, you are afraid that that will mean that you will be punished for everything you did that was unloving, for everything that you did while you were denying God. But the simple fact is that quote "the ego's decisions are always wrong because they are based on a complete fallacy." Therefore, everything you think you have done that the Father would punish you for, is based on a thought that has as its foundation a fallacy. Which means that all of the conclusions that you have come to about your guilt are false. Which means that the Father looks at you and sees that while you are having your own little private personal fantasy and you are believing the awfulness of the ideas you are choosing to think with, absolutely nothing is happening. And therefore, there is nothing that God would judge you for. There is nothing that God can find you guilty of. And therefore, you will be embraced as What You Truly Are.

And I will tell you this. The Father will rejoice in seeing you not laboring under fear and guilt for things that never happened. The Father will rejoice that you are no longer experiencing a form of insanity. The Father will rejoice that you are recognizing Him and embodying Him and fulfilling your Function, and, we will say, becoming co-creators with Him. You will be received with welcome. You are embraced with welcome right now.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We need cite only a few examples to see how the ego's interpretations...

RAJ: Of the Bible.

RAJ READING: ...have misled you. A favorite ego quotation is "As ye sow, so shall ye reap." Another is "Vengeance is mine, sayeth the Lord." Still another is "I will visit the sins of the father unto the third and fourth generation," and also "The wicked shall perish." There are many others, but if you will let the Holy Spirit reinterpret these in His own light, they will suffice.

“As ye sow, so shall ye reap” merely means that what you believe to be worth cultivating you will cultivate in yourself. Your judgment of what is worthy MAKES it worthy for you. “Vengeance is mine, sayeth the Lord” is easily explained if you remember that ideas increase only by being shared. This quotation therefore emphasizes the fact that vengeance CANNOT be shared. Give it therefore to the Holy Spirit, Who will undo it in you because it does not belong in your mind, which is part of God.

“I will visit the sins of the fathers unto the third and fourth generation,” as interpreted by the ego, is particularly vicious. It is used, in fact, as an attempt to guarantee its survival beyond itself. Actually, all the quotation means is that the Holy Spirit, in later generations, retains the power to interpret CORRECTLY what former generations have thought, and thus release THEIR thoughts from the ability to produce fear anywhere in the Sonship. “The wicked shall perish” is merely a statement of fact, if the word “perish” is properly understood. Every loveless thought MUST be undone. Even the word “undone” is fearful to the ego, which interprets “I am undone” as “I am destroyed.”

RAJ: Now here's a particularly important point.

RAJ READING: The ego will NOT be destroyed because it is part of your thought, but because it is uncreative, and therefore unsharing, it WILL be reinterpreted entirely, to release you from fear.

RAJ: Now, I have in the past described the ego as structures of thought that have formed a bubble in the middle of the Infinitude of You. And now, with that boundary there, you say, “This, all that is included within the boundary, is me,” even though the air inside the bubble is the same air that's on the outside of the bubble. What you are calling the ego, your ego-self, is just a confined, small part of the Infinitude of You, of You in your Wholeness. What is inside the bubble is as absolutely Divine as what is outside of the bubble. And it's only the false ideas, the ego infrastructure, the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, that constitute this flimsy, delicate boundary that seems to say there's an inside and an outside to you, which further says the inside is you and the outside is not you. You see?

The ego, you as an ego, are an illusion, because there is no way a flimsy, fragile surface that has no structural integrity, or strength, can define you, can define the interior of the bubble as all there is of you. And so that sense of yourself that you entertain that is gathered from only the interior of the bubble is a false perception of yourself when All Of You is present inside and outside the bubble. So the ego is not going to be gotten rid of. The volume of air inside the bubble is not going to disappear. It's only this artificial, false, flimsy boundary that's going to disappear.

RAJ READING: The ego will NOT be destroyed because it is part of your thought, but because it is uncreative, and therefore unsharing, it WILL be reinterpreted entirely, to release you from fear.

RAJ: I have just reinterpreted it for you intellectually, but it is going to be reinterpreted for you experientially.

But the only way this flimsy bubble is going to pop is when you stop re-enforcing it through the use of guilt, through the use of fear, on yourself and others. Now you know how flimsy a soap bubble is? That's as flimsy as the ego structures are that keep you bound. So you're not up against an overwhelming task. The bubble has only the strength that the Divine One That You Are inside the bubble brings to bear upon your own thoughts to strengthen your own thoughts as opposed to the Father's Thoughts. When you invite God in, you have to be inviting Something from outside the circumference of the sphere of the bubble of ego structures. And that desire that reaches beyond the boundary of the ego structures weakens the bubble.

The key fact is that not only does the circumference of this bubble seem to separate you from God, it seems to separate you from your Brothers. And your natural Unity is lost to you as an experience.

So, if you reach out to God, that weakens the bubble. If from the Place of Excellence in you, you reach out to your Brother, that weakens the bubble. If from the Excellence in you, you reach out to the Excellence that you know has to be there in your Brother, that weakens the bubble. But you've got to break the isolation, the apparent isolation, that this flimsy bubble creates the illusion of.

Reaching out from the Excellence in You to the Excellence in your Brother, whether it's apparent or not in your Brother, weakens the bubble. But, also, even if you're not reaching out to the Excellence in your Brother, if you get into the habit of catching yourself when you, out of habit, spontaneously engage in criticism of your Brother, that may not weaken the bubble but it impedes the substantiation of the bubble, both yours and your Brother's or Sister's bubble. So the very act of being kind enough to bite your tongue and not express criticism contributes... contributes substantially to the mental environment that allows your bubble to weaken, and your Brother's or Sister's as well.

So again, surprising news.

RAJ READING: The ego will NOT be destroyed because it is part of your thought, but because it is uncreative, and therefore unsharing, it WILL be reinterpreted entirely, to release you from fear. The part of your thought which you have given to the ego...

RAJ: Meaning the part that's inside the bubble.

RAJ READING: ...will merely return to the Kingdom where your whole mind BELONGS.

RAJ: In other words, all of you that's outside the bubble will be reunited with the little bit of you that's on the inside of the bubble, and your experience of Conscious Awareness, of being Mind, will be whole.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego is a form of arrest, but arrest is merely delay. It does NOT involve the concept of punishment, although the ego welcomes that interpretation. You CAN delay the completion of the Kingdom, but you CANNOT introduce the concept of assault into it.

RAJ: You tell me how the part of you that's inside the bubble becoming undefended against the rest of You, the Infinite rest of You outside of the bubble, can be interpreted as anything other than a rejoining of That Which Has Always Been One. And how can that be interpreted as potential for judgment and penalty upon you? It becomes easier to see that as long as you have held yourself to be tiny and to only be that which you perceive from within the bubble, has constituted imprisonment, and for lack of better words, punishment, suffering, because you cannot be comfortable when you're not in your Right Mind. And you can't be comfortable when you're not in your Right Mind because there's no way for you to escape your fundamental Sanity. No matter how hard you've been trying, you have not been able to deny What You Are because It is Eternal, It is unchanging, It is unalterable, It is omnipotent, It is omnipresent.

And so, every time you try to deny yourself, you get the feedback that says, "You can't do this." Except that it's an absolute "No," an absolutely unyielding "No." And it's your very Being that is saying "No." And the part of you that wants to be at odds, or thinks it wants to be at odds, doesn't like to hear the word "No." And so it makes that which is saying "No," quote "the enemy" unquote, and takes on what would have to be an eternal battle, because it is an attempt to do something which it was told it couldn't do from the beginning.

You know what? All I'm saying to any of you is, you can't do what you can't do. Stop trying. All of your problems that you're experiencing is because you're trying to do what you can't do, and getting the absolute, universal "No!" that has to accompany it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When I said, "I am come as a light into the world," I surely came to share the light with you.

RAJ: [laughing] I certainly didn't come to shine the Light on you and illuminate your awfulness to you and everyone else.

I surely came to share the Light with you. Share the Light with you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Remember the symbolic reference we made before to the ego's dark glass, and remember also that we said, "Do not look there." It is still true that "where you look to find yourself is up to you." The Higher Court will NOT condemn you. It will merely dismiss the case against you. There can BE no case against a Child of God, and every witness to guilt in God's creations is bearing false witness to God Himself.

Appeal everything you believe...

RAJ: Everything you believe.

RAJ READING: ...gladly to God's Own Higher Court because it speaks for Him, and therefore speaks truly.

RAJ: And what is God's Higher Court? The Holy Spirit. And what is the Holy Spirit? Nothing more than your Right Mind. It's the very Presence of What You Divinely Are standing ready to reinterpret the ego, and to uncover the meaninglessness, the uselessness, the purely illusory nature of all the imaginations that you have governed yourselves by, punished yourselves with, that were based upon a fundamental fallacy; that fundamental fallacy being that you could have an original thought of your own, on your own, and that you could make-up the world yourself. Everything that followed it never happened. Everything that followed it was pure illusion.

And since at the moment you don't know which of your thoughts reflect the Truth, and which of the thoughts are affirming and reaffirming and attempting to establish illusion, since you don't know then, reading again:

RAJ READING: Appeal everything you believe gladly to God's Own Higher Court because it speaks for Him, and therefore speaks truly. It...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit. Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...will dismiss the case against you however carefully YOU have built it. The case may be foolproof, but it is NOT God-proof. The Voice for God will not hear it at all because He can only witness truly.

RAJ: Again, the Voice for God is the Holy Spirit. And the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. Your Right Mind will not hear the case at all, because it can only witness truly.

RAJ READING: His verdict...

RAJ: Its verdict.

RAJ READING: ...will always be "Thine is the Kingdom" because He was GIVEN you to remind you of what you are.

RAJ: The Holy Spirit is there to remind you of What You Truly Are. Why? Because It is You in your Truth. And the only thing it can do is penetrate the bubble and register with the little part of you that you're identifying with inside the bubble, to remind you of your Wholeness by letting there be even a miniscule connection with It through a little pinprick of a hole, if you will, or a little weakness in the bubble where the connection with your Wholeness can occur.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your patience with each other is your patience with yourselves.

RAJ: Your willingness to withdraw from spontaneous criticism constitutes being patient with each other, constitutes the withdrawing of that which reinforces bubbles and promotes ongoing conflict so that there have to be ongoing negotiations for the purpose of what? Of reestablishing or even redefining mutually-agreed-upon definitions, which if they are engaged in, constitute your continuing to be unconscious of What You Divinely Are and unconscious of Reality, and even possibly being able to be convinced that there is nothing else to life but this ongoing state of disruptive tension that it is your sole purpose to learn to minimize, but not get rid of, and live with.

RAJ READING: Your patience with each other...

RAJ: Here we are talking about involvement again, not isolation.

RAJ READING: Your patience with each other is your patience with yourselves. Is not a Child of God WORTH patience?

RAJ: I could get dramatic. "I have shown you infinite patience!" No.

RAJ READING: I have shown you infinite patience because my will IS that of our Father, from Whom I learned of infinite patience. His Voice was in me as it is in you, speaking for patience towards the Sonship in the Name of its Creator. What you need to learn now is that only infinite patience CAN produce immediate effects.

RAJ: What's "infinite patience"? Well, the only thing that would make infinite patience untenable is because you think criticism works so much faster, and is so much more effective, and that guilt gets things done. And you like the hit of the sense of power that the exercise of criticism and guilt produces. But it just keeps those bubbles going. And it just keeps the hurting going. And it just keeps the Joy of Being out of sight.

RAJ READING: What you need to learn now is that only infinite patience CAN produce immediate effects. This is the way in which time is exchanged for eternity.

RAJ: And remember I said last week that time and Eternity are one and that one is Eternity, meaning that you're always looking at, you are always experiencing Eternity.

If you have chosen to define it as time and created an infrastructure of beliefs around what time is and what its effect are, and so on, then you are caught in an ignorance. An ignorance that you could call blindness to Eternity, even though you are looking at Eternity, or experiencing Eternity, and applying to it an overlay of a different definition which you're giving preference to, but it is... it is a preferential, distorted perception of the Only Thing There Is to have a perception about and that is Eternity. Therefore, time and Eternity are one, and that one is Eternity.

Well, if that one is Eternity, then be willing to abandon the definitions that are causing you to experience it as time. That's what it means.

Again.

RAJ READING: This is the way in which time is exchanged for eternity. Infinite patience calls upon infinite love, and by producing results NOW it renders time unnecessary.

To say that time is temporary is merely redundant. We have repeatedly said that time is a learning device which will be abolished when it is no longer useful.

RAJ: And I've said earlier in our talks that any choice you make to have a perception of something different from What It Really Is causes What That Thing Divinely Is to be a Source of Discovery for you, a Source of rediscovery of What It Truly Is, and so it becomes a learning device, only because you have engaged in a perception of it that is false and must therefore be unlearned.

And so What The Thing Really Is sits there communicating to you What It Really Is because that's Its Function, to glorify God, and so it sits there communicating to you What It Is. And you seeing It, because there's nothing else to see, you seeing It but looking at It through a biased perception, see something unclearly, and that thing that you're seeing unclearly becomes a learning device for you. It becomes the means of helping you unlearn, devalue, and abandon the distortion you have applied to it.

You see? Isn't that wonderful?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit,...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...Who speaks for God in time, also knows that time is meaningless. He reminds you of this in every passing moment of time because it is His special function to return you to eternity,...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind has the special Function to return you, the infinite One That You Are, who sees himself or herself circumscribed by a bubble, to return you to your Wholeness minus the bubble.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit, Who speaks for God in time, also knows that time is meaningless. He reminds you of this in every passing moment of time...

RAJ: Every passing moment of time becomes a learning device, because every moment of time is just a little slice of Eternity that you've chosen to look at instead of embracing the Whole. But it's all of Eternity there, even though you've decided to slice it up and see it a slice at a time. And so that little slice of Eternity that you're calling time sits there as a learning device to bring to your remembrance Eternity and to undo, or cause an unlearning of, the illusion that you have taught yourself.

Again.

RAJ READING: He reminds you of this in every...

RAJ: Every.

RAJ READING: ...passing moment of time because it is His special function to return you to eternity, and remain...

RAJ: There.

RAJ READING: ...to bless YOUR creations there. He is the only blessing you can truly give because He is so truly blessed, and because He has been given you so freely by God, you must give Him as you received Him.

RAJ: Okay. If you must give Him as you have received Him, this explains this principle. When you are willing to abandon your isolation, when you are willing to abandon your independence, and you invite something else in, well the only... the only other thing there is, is what's outside the surface of the bubble. And so you invite in the only Thing there is which is the Rest Of You. And you, in your Wholeness, are What God Is Being in His Wholeness. And so you receive the inspiration, you receive the influx of clarity.

But in order for... it's as though in order for the bubble to pop, you have to give away what's been given to you. And so you have to turn to your Brother and Sister. And that's why this paragraph is in here, this paragraph before the last one we read, that begins:

RAJ READING: Your patience with each other is your patience with yourselves.

RAJ: That's not just a nice thing to say, and it's not just a nice thing to be. It's an essential thing to be, because if you do not engage in having an object of your affection, if you do not extend to your Brother because of Love felt in you, the Love that the Father is extending to you, it doesn't become embodied in you as you and break the bubble.

By golly. I think you're getting it. [a little audience laugh]

I know that at times all of you can see how utterly simple this is. And ten minutes later the ego introduces the conditioned thinking, [the conditioned thinking] returns, and you say, "It can't be that simple. This is a really difficult thing to grasp!"—even though you got it and it wasn't difficult to grasp. Your conditioned responses are deeply ingrained habits. So don't be surprised that they return. But also, at moments like these, I want you to remember how utterly simple the Truth is, and therefore how utterly simple your release is, so that when you lose the experience that you're having of the simplicity of it, you don't begin to bear down on yourself, and you don't begin to bear down on your Brothers and Sisters through the use of criticism and guilt to try to get things to improve by means of the old familiar operating system. You have got to stay light with yourselves.

You see, the suggestion is that either everything isn't as simple as the clarity that has come to you today, that either everything isn't as simple as that, and therefore you really do have to work hard at it. Or the flip side of it is that what I'm saying is nonsense. That I really don't have [laughing] any grasp on Reality at all, and therefore don't pay any attention to what Raj is saying. Well, you all, at moments today, have felt the simplicity of it. You've had an experience of the simplicity of it. That was Real. It is the Truth.

And rather than climbing on your own backs and each other's backs in order to work on making this the Truth, keep a light touch. Go lightly on yourselves and persist gently and thoughtfully and kindly as you move to the next time the simplicity of it registers with you clearly, because there will be increasing episodes, we'll say, of bursts of clarity that you will experience, and those will become the foundation for your capacity to trust the Truth of those experiences. And if you will be kind to yourself in the interim, between these episodes, and if you will be kind with each other in the interim, then it won't seem as though there's such a contrast between the points of clarity and your everyday life.

If you like a green lawn, water it. If you like friends, treat them well. If you want to wake up, Love your Brother. Be involved, minus the use of criticism and guilt. Bite your tongue if you have to. It's better for your tongue to bleed than for your Brother to suffer uselessly. And to suffer from guilt is a useless suffering. Don't employ it any more.

If you bite your tongue, and you're having to bite it so often that it begins to bleed, you know what? You'll stop. [a little audience laugh] And it won't have anything to do with anyone else or the way they're behaving, because you know what? You're not really stupid enough to bite your own tongue to the point it bleeds and suffer that. But you are dumb enough to employ criticism and guilt and let someone else hurt.

So bite your tongue, so that it will put the focus where it needs to be, that brings you to a point of ceasing to do something that hurts you. And in the process, your world will be blessed and you will start being on a new basis. And you being on a new basis is you embodying the Excellence in You in the world, and thus making the Truth yours, thus making Love yours.

Don't worry. I won't let you forget for long the simplicity of it all.

I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet. I would like a show of hands. Have any of you ever found studying or reading the Course depressing?

SEEKER: Frustrating, kind of.

RAJ: Frustrating...

SEEKER: [laughing]

RAJ: ...is a distress. Well, let me say this right now. That isn't supposed to be, that isn't intended to be the result. But it is understandable that that reaction occurs because as you read, it appears that you are being taught that you are all insane to one degree or another. And the nature of your insanity is picked apart piece by piece and illuminated to you. And what I want to address right now is that to have mistakes that you're making uncovered to you is not a process by which you become convicted of wrongdoing, although the ego will use it that way.

The mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you have evolved, and the agreement that you have amongst each other is all called into question by the Course. The reason being that these agreements have been arrived at on a false basis. And if no one tells you this, you're stuck. If someone tells you this, it doesn't mean you're convicted. It means that you have the information necessary in order to do something different, in order to get unstuck. And so, the purpose of the Course is to inspire you, not convict you and depress you.

I notice however, and I'm not addressing this specifically to those of you in this room, but I notice, however, that many students of the Course pick up on the apparent fault-finding that seems to be part of the Course and they go on internal witch hunts within themselves, and they go on external witch hunts exploring the faults of others, uncovering the faults of others. And they call this love, because they think this is what the Course is about.

We've been going through the Course for over a year now, and I think that if you will look back, you will find that I have been pointing your eyes and your attention in the direction of acknowledging God where you haven't been looking for God—right in the petals of the flower, in the glass on the table, the trees outside, and each other.

I have been doing everything I can to inspire curiosity and openness of mind, that which does not call into play self-defense, because it has your attention turned toward something other than yourself, other than your current sense of yourself.

Oh, in the last two weeks we've talked about the non-materiality of matter, the fact that everything that you see and can touch is pure Spirit and is Idea rather than a physical object, that the Energy of Spirit that constitutes your body is not a physical energy, it is pure Idea.

Now, how many of you have become curious about the capability that you each have to move this idea from one place to another instantaneously, because there is no mass of matter to have to move by means of laws of physics? In other words, teleportation, or even levitation, or walking through a wall.

And of course, we have ongoingly talked about the fact that healing can be instantaneous because there is no physical mass of matter that has to reconfigure while being obedient to the laws of matter, or what you could call the laws of physics. And so how many of you have been being curious enough to explore the healing of a mole or a wrinkle or a disease that you seem to have? And to persist with it.

You see, the point is to be inspired, to not become obsessed with the way things appear to you. The presence of a mole that is not attractive does not express the beauty and symmetry of your perfect body. The desire to see God right there where your body is, where this Idea is that is perfectly visible and tangible to mind without having any material accompaniments to it at all.

I promise you that as you begin to be curious to see beyond the definitions you've currently given everything, you will find the intent raising objections in you. In other words, whatever resistances you have to healing or levitating or teleporting will present themselves to you, and then you can address them. You don't have to go on a witch hunt to find all your flaws before you can turn toward God.

The point is to turn toward God first. And then, whatever openness you have to seeing more of the Presence of God where you are will, in itself, uncover to you the reasons you don't think it can happen.

You will find yourself saying, "Mmm. Well, let's say that I actually succeeded in teleporting to the base of the Eiffel Tower. I might be so excited by the experience that I couldn't possibly have enough peace to get back. And what would I do then in France without a passport?" You see?

You will find resistances presenting themselves to you. And those are the ones for you to release, those are the ones for you to ask the Father or your Guide, "How do I look at this? Reinterpret this for me, so that I may either see the Truth of it, or the lie of it, and let it go." In other words, start pushing the boundaries. Start pushing your boundaries. Start letting your mind move outside the box, instead of being obsessed with the current status quo.

We've been discussing the fact that the human condition with all of its suffering and misery and depression and so on, is a result of one thing only. The attempt to be autonomous, the attempt to be an independent authorizer, the attempt to see and think about everything while leaving God out of the picture, and to determine what everything is for yourself.

Obviously, the solution to that problem is not going to come through further self-examination. The solution is going to come from reaching outside, inviting something else in. A simple thing that we've been talking about all along.

And so, I encourage you, especially over this next two-week period in which there is a holiday set aside for what? Gratitude! Use these two weeks to push the boundaries, to desire to experience what is beyond what you're currently experiencing, but which, if I'm telling you the Truth, is present for you to experience. That every flower, every tree, every object you see, every paper cup, every CD, every object you see is an idea, and even though it's tangible and perceptible to you, it is still pure idea. It is still pure energy and has no material accompaniments, no physical mass that must abide by physical laws, laws of physics.

Everything you see is capable of responding to and reflecting the Mind of God without being bound by anything other than the Father's Intent. And that is why as you abandon a sick sense of yourself, a diseased sense of yourself, there can be instantaneous reconfiguration. And that's why when there is a shift of your attention from one location to another, there can be immediate movement to the new location without the use of an airplane or any other physical means of travel.

What holds you in the human condition is your fascination with, and your commitment to, the attempt to be an independent authorizer. An independent, I'm going to say, visionary where you can make up the vision that you want to see and then see it, and thereby cause it to be real, separate and apart from Creation Itself as the Father Is Being It.

So let's read and let's find out about redefining or retranslating obsession, preoccupation, undying commitment to your personal goals, undying commitment to your personal goals that keeps you from experiencing Life fully, wholly, Divinely, satisfyingly and joyfully.

Again I will be reading from the transcript as prepared by Bill Thetford. And this section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Eternal Fixation

[Editor's Note: The first 7 paragraphs are not in the first and second editions.]

RAJ READING: The idea of "set" is among the better psychological concepts. Actually, it is used quite frequently in the Bible and also in this course under many different terms. For example, "God will keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed (or set) on Him," a statement which means that God's peace is set in the Holy Spirit because it is fixed on God. It is also fixed in you. You, then, ARE fixed in the peace of God. The concept of "fixation" is also a very helpful one which Freud understood perfectly. Unfortunately, he lost his understanding because he was afraid, and, as you know all too well, fear is incompatible with good judgment. Fear distorts thinking, and therefore DISorders thought.

Freud's system of thought was extremely ingenious because Freud was extremely ingenuous, and a mind MUST endow its thoughts with its own attributes. This is its inherent strength, although it may misuse its power. Freud lost much of the potential value of his thought system because he did NOT include himself in it. This is a dissociated state because the thinker cuts himself off from his thoughts. Freud's thought was so conflicted that he could not have retained his sanity as HE saw it WITHOUT dissociation. That is why the many contradictions which are quite apparent in his thinking became increasingly less apparent to HIM. A man who knows what fixation really means and yet does not yield to it is terribly afraid.

RAJ: Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: Fixation is the pull of God, on Whom your mind IS fixed because of the Holy Spirit's irrevocable set.

RAJ: Remember the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. Your Right Mind is forever fixed on God. Devoted. Committed. And truly incapable of having any other focus of attention.

As I've made clear to you, you can imagine that you can give your attention elsewhere, and then you can believe your imagination. And then you can make commitment to your imagination and become so involved with it that you forget what your only true capacity to make commitment involves, which is glorifying God, recognizing God in every single thing, recognizing what is Real in every single thing, rather than what you have determined it to be.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: "Irrevocable" means "cannot be called back or redirected." The irrevocable nature of the Holy Spirit's set...

RAJ: Or you could say "fixation."

RAJ READING: ...is the basis for His unequivocal Voice. The Holy Spirit NEVER changes His mind. Clarity of thought CANNOT occur under conditions of vacillation.

RAJ: So what does that mean? That means that this Place of Excellence in You, the Presence of the Holy Spirit that is your Right Mind, is actually incapable of vacillation. Your Essential Being is utterly stable right now, utterly clear right now, utterly intelligent right now, completely at Peace right now, and it never varies. You in your Right Mind are never in a state of variance, unevenness, disturbance, distress... right now.

What keeps you from experiencing it? The fact that in your attempt to look at everything through your own imagination and arriving at agreed-upon definitions with each other, you take this Divine Nature of yours to be fixated, to be unvaryingly committed to God, and you apply it to what you want to give your attention to. This Divine One That You Are uses Its Capacity to be unswervingly clear and focused on the Truth, you take it and apply it to what you are choosing to believe, the definitions you are choosing to give to everything. And you become obsessed with that activity. You become inappropriately fixated. But the fixation arises out of your Divine Capacity to be fixated on God, which is your Function.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Unless a mind is fixed in its purpose it is NOT clear. Clarity literally means the state of light, and enlightenment IS understanding. Enlightenment stands UNDER perception because you have denied it as the REAL foundation of thought.

RAJ: And.

RAJ READING: This is the basis for ALL delusional systems.

RAJ: Enlightenment doesn't really stand under perception, but that's the definition you've given to it and so it seems to be so for you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The concept of fixation, as Freud saw it, has a number of learning advantages. First, it recognizes that man can be fixated at a point in development which does NOT accord with a point in time.

RAJ: You've all, at one time or another, heard someone say, "Yes, he or she is 17 going on 34, or 34 going on 18," meaning that someone has... their development has been arrested, you might say, at 18 years-old, even though they're older. They've become fixated at a point of development that has nothing to do with their actual years. You can all become fixated in your growth.

Continuing. In fact, repeating.

RAJ READING: First, it recognizes that man can be fixated at a point in development which does NOT accord with a point in time. This clearly could have been a means toward real release from the time belief had Freud pursued it with an open mind. Freud, however, suffered all his life from refusal to allow eternity to dawn upon his mind and enlighten it truly. As a result, he overlooked NOW entirely, and merely saw the continuity of past and future.

Second, although Freud misinterpreted what the Holy Spirit told him, or better, reminded him of, he was too honest to deny more than was necessary to keep his fear in tolerable bounds as he perceived the situation. Therefore, he emphasized that the point in development at which the mind is fixated is more real to ITSELF than the external reality with which it disagrees.

RAJ: Does that make sense to you? It's what we've been talking about. Your definitions that you give to everything, and the mutual agreements that you come to about those things, means that you are giving greater importance to your definition than to What The Thing Really Is, and you are becoming fixated on your definition.

Again.

RAJ READING: Therefore, he emphasized that the point in development at which the mind is fixated is more real to ITSELF than the external reality with which it disagrees. This, again, could have been a powerful RELEASE mechanism had Freud not decided to involve it in a strong DEFENSE system because he perceived it as an attack.

RAJ: I come along and I share with you A Course In Miracles and I talk with you and I uncover flaws in your thinking. I uncover illusions that you are entertaining that you thought were real. And I say, "There is something more here than what you're seeing. You have bound yourself to a limited perception and it's time for you to enlarge your boundaries. It's time for you to let go of your tininess."

And your ego says, "Attack! Attack! Everybody to their quarters! Attack! Attack! Take your stations!" You see?

Freud had the same problem. And so Freud used psychology so as to be able to better defend the threat without giving up the illusion. In other words, now you know what your problem is, now we're going to learn how to live with it. We're going to accept the problem, but we're going to learn how to minimize its effects by greater self-discipline of your mind. You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Third, although Freud interpreted fixation as involving irrevocable "danger points" to which the mind could always regress, the concept can also be interpreted as an irrevocable call to sanity which the mind cannot LOSE.

RAJ: You see? There's the redefinition that leads to freedom.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Freud himself could not accept this interpretation, but throughout his thought system, the "threat" of fixation remained, and could never be eliminated by any living human being. Essentially, this was the basis of Freud's pessimism, personally as well as theoretically. He tried every means his very inventive mind could devise to set up a form of therapy which could enable the mind to escape from fixation forever, even though he KNEW this was impossible.

RAJ: Do you see what I was saying there? I was saying that Freud's recognition of fixation, which was a new recognition, was the Holy Spirit's reminding him that the very state of Divine Being, of Being Itself, involved fixation, involved one's unswerving attentiveness to God in the Movement of Creation so as to be joined in the Movement of Creation, and so as to experience What You Are in your Totality as you were created to be, which again we could call co-creators with God. But such a statement required abandoning the personal private sense of self that you and Freud were entertaining, and that was too threatening to him.

ANOTHER SEEKER: If you know something is impossible, why do you keep trying to invent...

RAJ: The question is asked, "If you know something is impossible, why do you keep trying to invent..."

SEEKER: As he did. He knew, but he kept inventing.

RAJ: Well, for the same reason that you do, or any of the rest of you do. Because you have this very stubborn belief that you can actually succeed, independent of God, in creating something that would be as Real as what God is creating. You... you all believe this deeply. At the very center of your Being you know this is impossible. Logically it's impossible because it's impossible for you to actually be an independent thing.

You are having to use all of your Christ Capacity to create the imagination. You are the Son of God, or the Daughter of God, and all of this imagination that you're engaging in, and all of this attempt that you are engaged in, to be independent and create something on your own, is utilizing the very thing that denies the accomplishment of the goal. Do you see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: So we know it but we don't know it.

RAJ: It's said, "So we know it, but we don't know that we know it."

That is correct. You know it, but you are... you are ignoring what you know. You are burying it out of sight. You are repressing it. And all I'm encouraging all of you to do is to stop doing this. But the draw, you might say, the excitement of imagining that you have the potential to be an independent creator along with God, standing alongside God in your own right, that has you hooked.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This knowledge...

RAJ: That it's impossible.

RAJ READING: ...plagued Freud's belief in his own thought system at every turn because he was both an honest man and a healer. He was therefore only partially insane, and was unable to relinquish the HOPE of release even though he could not cope with it. The reason for this amount of detail is because YOU are in the same position. You...

RAJ: And this doesn't just apply to Helen and Bill but to every one of you, every single one.

RAJ READING: You were eternally fixated on God in your creation, and the pull of this fixation is so strong that you will never overcome it. The reason is perfectly clear. The fixation is on a level so high that it cannot BE surmounted. You are ALWAYS being pulled back to your Creator because you BELONG to Him.

RAJ: Ooh! [Whispered] "You belong to someone." [spoken much louder] "You're a kept man. You're a kept woman." Insulting ain't it? Yes, or comforting. It all depends on how important it is to you to be a self-made man or self-made woman.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Do you REALLY believe you can make a voice that can drown out His? Do you REALLY believe that you can devise a thought system which can separate you from His? Do you REALLY believe that you can plan for your safety and joy better than He can?

RAJ: And believe it or not, your answers to all these questions are "yes." At least they are still "yes."

But now, let's not feel guilty about it. Let's not get depressed about it. But let's recognize that you haven't arrived yet. And if you haven't arrived yet, you're standing on the threshold of discovery, and all you have to do is to bring some curiosity, some genuine, playful curiosity into play.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You need be neither careful nor careless; you need merely cast your cares upon Him because He careth for YOU. You ARE His care because He loves you. His Voice reminds you always that all hope is yours BECAUSE of His care. You CANNOT choose to escape His care because that is not His Will, but you CAN choose to accept His care and use the infinite power OF His care for all those He created BY it.

RAJ: You see, here's where the reinterpretation is and here's where the shift of fixation comes in. You're not going to get rid of fixation. You're just going to abandon being fixated on illusions. And you're going to become fixated on the Light, as it were. You're going to become fixated on the avenue by means of which your fulfillment comes to you. Not the avenue by means of which you generate your fulfillment, but the avenue by means of which your fulfillment comes to you because He cares for you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: There have been many healers who did not heal themselves. They have not moved mountains by their faith because their faith was not whole.

RAJ: Any of these in the group here? Every single one of you are healers who may, or may not, have healed themselves, who haven't moved any mountains. But these are the things... this is like the beginning of a list of things to become curious about having the experience of, that go outside the boundaries of your tiny, personal sense of yourself that you've honored so completely that you haven't allowed for any other possibilities.

Again.

RAJ READING: There have been many healers who did not heal themselves. They have not moved mountains by their faith because their faith was not whole. Some of them have healed the sick at times, but they have not raised the dead.

RAJ: Oh! There's another wonderful thing to add to the list. It's one of the things, it's an experience that awaits every single one of you. And you don't have to be special to have the experience. Every single one of you is qualified, pre-qualified, truly pre-qualified, and not a pre-qualification that will go through after your credit is checked. You are fully pre-qualified.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Unless the healer heals HIMSELF he does NOT believe that there is no order of difficulty in miracles. He has not learned that EVERY mind God created is equally worthy of being healed BECAUSE GOD CREATED IT WHOLE. You are merely asked to return to God the mind as HE created it.

RAJ: Your mind as He created it.

RAJ READING: He asks you only for what He gave, knowing that this giving will heal you. Sanity IS wholeness, and the sanity of your brothers IS yours.

Why should you listen to the endless insane calls which you think are made upon you when you KNOW the Voice of God Himself is in you?

RAJ: In other words, why, why would you listen to the calls of your Brothers and Sisters who say, "Behave yourself. You're getting outside the box. Behave yourself. That's not a part of the agreed-upon definitions. You don't really believe you can be healed, do you? You don't really believe that you're divine, do you?" Every means will be used to bring you back in line with the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, including the ploy of guilt that we were speaking of last week.

But, again.

RAJ READING: Why should you listen to the endless insane calls which you think are made upon you when you KNOW the Voice of God Himself is in you?

RAJ: See. Where are you going to fixate your attention? Where are you going to obsess? Are you going to obsess on an illusion with your Brothers and Sisters? Are you going to make their opinion about you "god" to you? Or are you going to switch your fixation to God Whose Voice is in you, Whose Voice is you? Are you going to begin to fixate on the Place of Excellence in You that is the Excellent You That You Are and embody That and let the chips fall where they may?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God commended His Spirit to you, and asks that you commend yours to Him. He wills to keep it in perfect peace because you are of one mind and Spirit with Him. Excluding yourself from the Atonement is the ego's last-ditch defense of its OWN existence. It reflects both the ego's need to separate, and your willingness to side with its separateness. This willingness...

RAJ: To side with its separateness.

RAJ READING: ...means THAT YOU DO NOT WANT TO BE HEALED.

RAJ: And that's all in capital letters.

Here's where it might seem to be a criticism of you. But what it is, is a statement of the way the ego works, and that in order for the ego's definitions to be effective, you must be willing to agree with it. You must bring your willingness into the picture. So, does this make you guilty? That's irrelevant. What it means is that in order to have a different experience, all you have to do is redirect your willingness. What are you willing to become fixated upon? That which it is your fundamental nature to be? Or that which is absolutely foreign to you, is totally imaginative and therefore not substantially real, and therefore constitutes an illusory result? Which one are you going to make commitment to?

You didn't know you had made commitment to the latter because you didn't know there was any alternative. You had forgotten it because of your fixation. Now you're not unconscious of the other option any longer. Now you have a choice. And now you can bring your willingness and express it in a new direction that returns you to your Sanity, wholizes you, breaks down the flimsy surface of the bubble that has been separating that of you which is Divine on the inside of the bubble with that of you which is Infinitely Present that is on the outside of the bubble.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: But the time IS now. You have not been asked to work out the plan of salvation yourselves because,...

RAJ: As I told you before.

RAJ READING: ...the remedy is NOT of your making. God Himself gave you the perfect correction for everything you have made which is NOT in accord with His holy Will. I have made His plan perfectly explicit to you,...

RAJ: And I'm adding this: And will continue to make it explicit as long as I need to.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...and have also told you of your part in His plan, and how urgent it is that you fulfill it. There is time for delay,...

RAJ: There is time for delay...

RAJ READING: ...but there need not be. God weeps at the "sacrifice" of His Children who believe they are lost to Him.

RAJ: That's another way of saying, "God cares." And like any father or mother or anyone who truly cares about another, there is a compassion that comes into play when the one cared for is suffering needlessly. And there is an outpouring that comes forth because of caring, to override and overwhelm the nonsense that the loved one is suffering from. And it continues to pour forth until the suffering ends.

Now, you as you sit here may not feel as though you are really suffering at the moment. And I am grateful that that is the case. But until you are experiencing Pure Joy at being Conscious because you are experiencing your inseparability from God, compassion, and Love and Clarity designed to cut through your defenses and register with the Divine You that's inside the bubble, comes forth from the Father and from those of us in the Brotherhood Who Are Awake, and Sisterhood Those of Us Who Are Awake, every one of your Guides, and most of all that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, the Holy Spirit.

After all, it's important for you to know that if you're going to shift your attention to God, that God and all Those Who Know they are inseparable from God are reaching out to you, and have been reaching out to you even before you knew that there was any alternative to the current quote "state of being" unquote that you're experiencing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I have already told you that whenever you are not wholly joyous it is because you have reacted with a lack of love to some Soul which God created. Perceiving this as "sin," you become defensive because you EXPECT ATTACK. The decision to react in this way, however, is YOURS, and can therefore be undone. It CANNOT be undone by repentance in the usual sense, because this implies guilt. If you allow yourself to feel guilty you will REINFORCE the error rather than allow it to be undone FOR you.

Decisions CANNOT be difficult. This is obvious if you realize that you must ALREADY have made a decision NOT to be wholly joyous if that is how you feel. Therefore, the first step in the undoing is to recognize that you ACTIVELY DECIDED WRONGLY,...

RAJ: Oh dear! Another accusation? Another thing to feel guilty for? How bad you are? No.

RAJ READING: Therefore, the first step in the undoing is to recognize that you ACTIVELY DECIDED WRONGLY, but can AS ACTIVELY DECIDE OTHERWISE.

RAJ: We've talked about shifting operating systems, and now we could talk about shifting fixations.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Be very firm with yourselves in this, and keep yourselves fully aware of the fact that the undoing process, which does NOT come from you, is nevertheless WITHIN you because God placed it there.

RAJ: It's the Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: YOUR part...

RAJ: And here I am speaking to the Holy Spirit in you, but I'm also speaking to who you think you are.

RAJ READING: YOUR part is merely to return your thinking to the point at which the error was made, and give it over to the Atonement in peace. Say to yourselves the following as sincerely as you can, remembering that the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...will respond fully to your slightest invitation:

RAJ: This is how you shift fixations. This is how you open the door to shifting operating systems.

Quote:

RAJ READING:

I must have decided wrongly because I am NOT at peace.
I made the decision myself, but I can also decide otherwise.
I WILL to decide otherwise because I WANT to be at peace.
I do NOT feel guilty because the Holy Spirit will undo all the consequences of my wrong decision IF I WILL LET HIM.
I WILL to let Him by allowing Him to decide for God for me.

RAJ: You see, who you think you are in your ignorance of the awareness of What You Divinely Are is what you think is a decision against God on your own behalf. It's a decision against God on behalf of your capacity to successfully get a bill of divorcement from God and become the very first Son or Daughter of God who has managed to mature into independent Godhood status, and thereby having become the full-fledged expression of God. I say "full-fledged" because the belief is that a child is always to grow up and become an adult and break allegiance with the parents, and be an adult like them in their own right. And that's the means by which you justify the way you behave in your families, as well as the way you approach, or shall I say, leave God.

As you give your attention to that Place of Excellence in You and you open up to It, and you decide to yield to It, and the bubble begins to burst, what you're doing is letting the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, decide for God because It's fixed on God and It makes the decision for you, because in the act of yielding, you're not in full command and full awareness of Who You Are. And so It makes the decision for God for you. And because you are yielding to Its decision, you are blessed. And you are brought back. This one who seems to have been experiencing an independent existence on its own, it finds its true experience of Selfhood, of Being, infilling you.

So we're talking about having a new fixation. Not a fixation on yourself. Not a fixation on your visions and your imaginations, but a fixation on God. And how have I suggested having a fixation on God? By looking for God in everything you see and desiring to see What God Is Meaning right there, as I've said, in the flower, in your Brothers' and Sisters' eyes. And then facilitate that movement by disengaging from the use of criticism and guilt. At least facilitate it by not engaging in that any longer.

So have two weeks for sure of embodying gratitude. Say "Thank you" for the flowers because of what they must be even if you're not seeing it. Say "Thank you" for what they hold for you. And let there be a curiosity at the same time and even if you don't see it yet, say "Thank you." Say "Thank you" for your family, and say "Thank you" for everything that's in your face, because What Each Thing Divinely Is stands there as a learning device for you, a means of remembering what's true. And whether you see it or not depends upon what you're fixed on. That's all. And you know what? You'll all get the hang of it. You'll all get the hang of it.

I love you. And I'll be with you two weeks from now.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Before we go into the Text I have a couple of comments.

The first one is, it might seem that we're not spending much time making what we're discussing relevant to your daily life. There is a reason for this. You have ample opportunities during the week to relate what we're talking about to your daily life. But it's rather like getting a new computer or getting a new sewing machine. And you say I want to get a computer to write a book with. I don't want to work on an old typewriter. Or I want to get a sewing machine so that I can make clothes. And you bring the computer home and you bring the sewing machine home, not having had any experience on them before, all enthused about writing the book or making the blouse or the shirt. And you find that you have to sit down and with a computer you have to learn how Windows® XP® works or you have to learn how the operating system works before you can even open up Microsoft® Word® or any other program where you can begin to write the book. Or you have to learn how to insert the bobbin and you have to learn how to thread the machine and you have to learn how to use the knee lift, and so on and so forth. All of which seem to have nothing to do with the project that you got the machine for, which was to make a garment.

So, we're going through the Course, which is at the bottom line helping you to see that there is a different way of looking at things than the way you have been used to. And what is being read has come directly from One Who Knows The Truth, One Who Sees As The Father Sees because he is not claiming a right to a mind of his own. And so the perspective provided gives you new language and new ideas. And if you do nothing more than just become familiar with the new language and the new ideas, and you put them together and begin to live your life on the basis of those new ideas, your life will improve. But, it won't be improving because you yourself have made a connection with the Holy Spirit, or with the Father, directly.

You can learn to use a sewing machine, and you can learn how to read patterns, and you can learn how to assemble the fabric so that it ends up looking like the garment you wanted, but all you're doing is following a blueprint someone else has set forth for you. And you can't say that you have come to an experiential place of expertise that comes from an inner grasp of how and why things fit together the way they fit. And as a result, you will not have the freedom to alter the pattern to make it fit even more specifically to you or to create a brand-new garment.

And this is important. You're not here to become familiar with the words in A Course In Miracles so that you can repeat them and so that you can apply them in your daily life, even though doing that will cause improvement. It's like being able to run your machine, follow the pattern, and end up with a garment. At the bottom line, all you are being is a copycat. All you are being is someone following a direction, a direction that's there because someone else did listen. A lesson, a pattern, that is there because someone else did understand how things fit together, how things work in the construction of a garment that will look good on you.

The purpose of the Course is first of all to provide you with new language, and therefore new ideas that allow you to see that there is, indeed, another way to look at everything. But the essential step is for you to arrive at a point where you lean into the same place the Author of the Course did, or the same place Helen Schucman did, where you don't know anything on your own, and you don't know what is going to come up next, and you open up, you become defenseless and you let in the Father's Will. You let in the essential originality of the State of Being That You Are or That Is You so that then what comes out of your mouth is as helplessly original as what came out of Helen's mouth. And so that you, when you're relating to your Brother or Sister, speak because the words come, not because you figured out what they ought to be.

Now, how many of you—you don't have to raise your hands—but how many of you would dearly love to be a healer, to be a Presence in the world that is healing? Recognizably healing. Well, it's very simple. In order to be a healer, you have to be sure that you're responding to the problem from a level other than the problem arose from.

And you could say there are only two levels, apparently two levels. And one is the level of you existing independent of God, perhaps created by God, but set in an independent mode by God so that you, separate from God, could begin to utilize and develop your God-given talents and abilities. This separate sense of self is one that you've created out of imagination, as we've already discussed, and it is one that you have gotten other Brothers and Sisters [laughing] to join you in believing in while you join them in believing in their independence. And this level is called the human condition. It's also called the ego frame of reference. And it's made up, as we've discussed before, of nothing more than mutually-agreed-upon definitions of the Kingdom of Heaven that are different from what the Father has created the Kingdom of Heaven to be. That's one level.

That's the level of problems because that's the level that's been built on a fundamental perception of yourself that is untrue. And that fundamental perception of yourself that is untrue is that you exist independent from your Source. Whether your Source created you and set you free to be independent, or whether you just chose to believe it, it doesn't matter. The point is that you have accepted this as your premise.

The other level is the level of what we've called the Other Operating System, the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind, and which is devoted to one thing only: the Father, or Its Source, your Source, That Which Is Being You, period.

Now, if you want to be a healer and you know that you can't heal a problem from the level of the problem, it's obvious then that the only way to be a healer is to move out of the level of mutually-agreed-upon definitions, to move out of the ego frame of reference. And to lean into the Holy Spirit in you, which is nothing more than your Right Mind, so that you might gather from your Right Mind the Father's Perspective, the True Perspective, because from there that which will resolve the problem, or the sickness, or the disease, or the trauma, or whatever the trouble might be, that the solution to that can only come from looking at it with your Source, looking at it with the Father.

Now, all of this is laying a groundwork for what we're going to be reading.

Something which escapes everyone's attention is the fact that everything you see is affected by the way you are defining yourself to yourself. Whatever your definition of yourself is causes you to see everything else in the shadow of that definition, if I may put it that way. You look at another, or you look at some thing, and you observe it and you observe the way it behaves, and you come to conclusions about it as though those conclusions relate only to the thing you were observing. And you do not realize that the definition of yourself that you are embracing is affecting the definition you're giving to everything else.

Put simply, because you are attempting to exist and be conscious of life from an independent vantage point, independent of your Source, you feel separate, alone, lost, and insecure or afraid. Now, it's an uncomfortable feeling, so you develop ways to be that cover it up. You develop a way to be with bravado, or with force, or with assertiveness, so that others will not be aware that you are basically afraid.

Then, another comes up and behaves in a way that is threatening to you. Is it because they're really being threatening? Or is it because the way they're behaving is causing you to connect with your own deep fear? And there is the fear that they will uncover the front, they will uncover the fear that's behind the front of assuredness that you're putting forth.

Now, they may just be being enthusiastic. They may just be expressing a freedom that you're not letting yourself have. And that you will not let yourself have. You cannot conceive of letting yourself have it. And you know that if you continue to be around this person expressing this freedom that you won't let yourself have, this confidence that you won't let yourself feel, that it will become obvious to them, you won't be able to keep it covered up. And so your quote "weakness" unquote will become obvious to them, which is the last thing you want, and so you experience their behavior as threatening. You see?

Let's say that you don't have a large income. And let's say you have defined your financial state as one of poverty. You're poor. And you have decided that you are poor because there's something you lack within your nature or character. It's a flaw and the poverty is evidence of this flaw in you. And somebody else comes around and has abundance, and speaks about this or that or the other thing that they have purchased and that they now own, and how good they feel about it. And you hear that as insensitive on their part. You see them as uncaring, and thoughtless, and unkind. And that isn't what they're being at all. But the way you experience them is colored by the way you are defining yourself.

Now this is very important. You must not forget that the determinations you make about everything you see and experience in the world are absolutely governed by the definitions you are giving to yourself. And as a result, your responses to them will not be responses to them, they will be responses or reactions to your feelings of inadequacy and incapacity and fear and vulnerability. And that means no communication will occur at all because you're responding to a picture of them that you have in your mind that has been created by what? The very definitions that you have given yourself. Any response you give from that place will be unable to heal anything at all. The only way healing can be brought into any situation is when you have been able to get free of your very own definition of yourself so that you might be available to the Experience of What You Really Are.

Now, listen carefully. It might sound as though what I've just said means that no matter how someone else might be behaving, it's perfectly all right and the problematic nature of it is due entirely to the way you are looking at everything based upon your current definition of yourself. And that would be wrong because anyone else you come in contact with is not awake either. And so they are engaged in exactly the same activity you are. And everything they see is absolutely governed by the definitions they are embracing about themselves. And so just as your picture of them is your picture projected on them, their picture of you is their picture of you projected on you. A picture governed by the definitions they are using to define themselves, and therefore everything that they are doing is not all right.

The key is, how do any of you get free of the dilemma of trying to deal with the problem from the level of the problem? You get free of it by realizing that there's another Operating System and choosing to be from there. Because from there your responses can correct any projection they are engaged in. And it will keep you from projecting any false perceptions you are projecting upon them, because you will be free of them. And that is what will open the door up for correction of all projection, and will allow you to speak in a way that will help another who is projecting to become free of that.

You cannot correct the problem from the level of the problem. You cannot correct the problems of human existence from the level of human existence, or from the level of the human condition. And the level of the human condition is not something out there in the world. The level of the human condition is nothing more and nothing less than the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that you are all engaged in agreeing upon, and reinforcing, and redefining, all as a means of neglecting to acknowledge your Source and connect with It once again.

Okay.

RAJ READING: Chapter 6

RAJ: And I am reading from the transcript as finished by Bill Thetford. In it this chapter is entitled:

RAJ READING: ATTACK AND FEAR

RAJ: In the first and second edition of the Course, it is entitled:

RAJ READING: THE LESSONS OF LOVE (T-#84/91)

RAJ READING: The relationship of anger to attack is obvious, but the inevitable association of anger and FEAR is not always so clear.

RAJ: Well we've discussed that when you are in a state of fear which you must keep covered up so no one else will know it and take advantage of you, that very state of mind causes behavior of others that may not be any form of attack at all to be perceived as a call for defense. In other words, to be perceived as an attack because it might overwhelm you. It might uncover the fact that you're not as confident as you present yourself to be. It might uncover the fact that you are experiencing fear. And so if you're constantly confronted with the threat of your fearful state being uncovered, you will practice the defense called anger. It's very simple. You will do whatever you can to get this other one to stop. And anger is a forceful way of expression that can often effectively alter another's behavior.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Anger ALWAYS involves PROJECTION OF SEPARATION, which must ultimately be accepted as entirely one's own responsibility.

RAJ: You see, the only reason you experience fear is because you've chosen to look at everything on your own. You've chosen to be separate. You've chosen and then forgotten that you actually have a Source that you are inseparably connected to. So, everything that follows is going to be affected by and colored by your... by the fear that is inseparable from your choosing to be autonomous. It's that simple. That's called projection of separation. And this separation must ultimately be accepted as entirely one's own responsibility. It can't be blamed on anyone else, because no one else but you decided to say, "Father, I'd rather see it my way." You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Anger cannot occur unless you believe that you have been attacked; that your attack was justified; and that YOU are in no way responsible.

RAJ: In other words, anger cannot occur unless you believe that you have been attacked. Okay so far. That your attack in return, which you call a defense, was justified, and that you are in no way responsible for the fact that any of that happened at all. And yet you are absolutely participating in it because you have been looking at your attacker through your poor self-definition.

SEEKER: Can I ask a question?

RAJ: Not yet.

You say, "The other one is responsible, the other one behaved poorly. He behaved poorly and attacked me for no reason." Well whether he attacked you for no reason or a good reason, the only reason you see attack and feel vulnerable is because you're looking at his behavior through your own poor self-definition. You are seeing his behavior in light of your innate vulnerability; the fact that you are delicate, that you are not strong. That as a result, you are not confident and you are fearful.

And why? Why is this the way you see yourself? Because you have gotten a bill of divorcement from your Father and lost your Identity. You have forgotten Who You Are, and that's why you are afraid. And it's because you're afraid and feel vulnerable that you can determine that some movement or activity out there in your world is a threat to you. And that's what causing the mistake in your perception. That's what needs to be corrected.

The behavior of another out there may be inappropriate, but the fact that you see it as a threat and feel vulnerable to it, is because you believe the definition you've given yourself. That being that you exist independently as an independent authorizer, as something existing on its own in its own right. And, as we've said before, the moment you've disowned your Father, you've lost your Identity and everything that follows will be an illusion, will be a total misperception on your part.

The answer lies in remembering Who You Are so that your response to someone else's behavior that is an expression of their ignorance, will arise not out of any feeling of threat or vulnerability in yourself, but out of compassion and understanding of What Is True about the Brother who is behaving poorly, who is expressing his own projections of his own fear that he doesn't want anybody to see.

The only way for you to be able to bring correction to this situation is when you are looking at your Brother from the Place of Excellence in You, your connectedness with your Source, so that your response is not a reaction that says to your Brother, "You're getting out of line. You are not behaving according to the mutually-agreed-upon definitions. You are at fault. You should feel sorry. You should feel vulnerable. You should feel bad. Get back in the box. Get back into the crab barrel. Begin to act like a proper ego. Get in line with the mutually-agreed-upon definitions so that you're not causing so much distress to the rest of us vulnerable ones."

You see? It says to that one, "Your inappropriate behavior based upon your vulnerability, your feeling of vulnerability, is too threatening to my feeling of vulnerability but I'm not going to let you know that. I'm going to stand up here and I'm going to speak with some force and some authority and not let you know that I'm afraid. But I am going to put you in your place through the use of guilt and the threat of uncovering the fear you're experiencing. But I won't uncover that fear if you will behave better, if you will stop doing this thing that's just plain old wrong." And what you mean is, it just plain old uncovers the fear that you're experiencing that you don't want to have exposed. You see?

Repeating.

RAJ READING: Anger cannot occur unless you believe that you have been attacked; that your attack...

RAJ: In return.

RAJ READING: ...was justified; and that YOU are...

RAJ: [laughing]

RAJ READING: ...in no way responsible. Given these three wholly irrational premises, the equally irrational conclusion that a brother is WORTHY of attack rather than of love follows. What can be expected from insane premises except an insane conclusion?

The way to undo an insane conclusion is to consider the sanity of the premises on which it rests. You cannot BE attacked;...

RAJ: Truly as the Divine One That You Are, you cannot be attacked. You're not only not available for attack, you're not in... you're not in a context where attack can happen. And because you are invulnerable because of What You Divinely Are, any attempt of attack that might be directed at you would be to you nonsensical. You wouldn't see it as threatening in any way. It might even be humorous to you. But because you see that it's not attack but a call for Love, an expression of distress on the part of the one attempting to attack you, then you're in a position to respond compassionately to that hurt in your Brother, or Sister, addressing it and healing it so that that one relaxes, comes into his natural State of Peace, and finds no justification for engaging in this nonsense of attack.

Again.

RAJ READING: You cannot BE attacked; attack HAS no justification; and you ARE responsible for what you believe. You have been asked to take me as your model for learning, since an extreme example is a particularly helpful learning device.

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: Everyone teaches, and teaches all the time. This is a responsibility which he inevitably assumes the moment he accepts any premise at all, and no-one can organize his life without ANY thought system. Once he has developed a thought system of any kind, he lives by it AND TEACHES IT.

RAJ: So, your fundamental thought system is your definition of yourself. Your fundamental thought system is your definition of yourself. And however you perceive yourself to be, you will project. Anyone who operates outside of your definition of yourself, you will perceive to be either a threat or a potential threat because their presence will always throw you off-balance. It will always be upsetting to the definition of yourself that you have. And so by projecting it, you teach it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You have been chosen to teach the Atonement precisely because you have been extreme examples of allegiance to your thought systems, and therefore have developed the CAPACITY for allegiance.

RAJ: Now it could be argued that this statement was being made specifically to Helen and Bill, but this applies to every single one of you. There isn't anyone, whether they've read the Course or not, whether they have embarked on a spiritual path or not, there is no one who does not have a thought system that they give complete allegiance to. And the thought system that everyone is giving their complete allegiance to is their definition of themselves. And you give complete allegiance to it because you believe that it's your means of self-protection. And you think you need self-protection. Why? Because you got this bill of divorcement from your Father and lost your Identity! At least you imagine that you got a bill of divorcement, and you are acting as though you succeeded at being divorced and that you have no Father and you are an individuality in your own right.

Now, you may think it's strange to say that somewhere along the line you got a bill of divorcement from your Father, especially if you aren't a Christian, especially if you don't believe in God. But if you think you're an independent thinker, you're wrong. And all of you do think that you're an independent thinker. You think that you're an independent individuality. You think everyone, you think the world is full of independent individualities; each unique creations of God but existing in their own right to work out their own salvation, independent of God, regardless of God.

Now, the fact is that you didn't create yourselves and you're not the Source of your Existence, and therefore you do have a Source, and therefore you're not independent. And therefore, you're not here on your own, and the way you are defining yourself is wrong. It's a mistake. And everything built on that mistake will be an embellishment of that mistake. And if all of you are behaving on the basis of a mistake, then you have 10 billion mistakes in process, and you are all cooperating with each other and melding those mistakes into a humungous ball of confusion. And then you all think that you've got to work together to bring order to this confusion, because you know what? Somewhere in you, you remember that order is appropriate and order is desirable. Of course, the order that you're remembering is the Divine Order of Being. But you are wanting to try to bring it back into existence in the context of a fundamental, uncorrected mistake about Who You Are. Is this making sense?

Now we're learning about the way it works before we apply it in daily life. You must understand this because it's the basis for correcting the problem where the problem lies, not in a problem that is a result of the basic problem, or a tenth generation problem that stemmed from the basic problem.

Now because all of you have learned great allegiance to your thought system, and I'm continuing.

RAJ READING: You have been chosen to teach the Atonement...

RAJ: Isn't that something? Because you're all so excellent at being mistaken, you are chosen to teach the Atonement. And yet it makes perfect sense, because, you see, the Truth is that you're all the Christ behaving as though you're not and believing your behavior. And you are using your Divine Capacity to be devoted to something in an idiotic way. And because of that, shall I say, because you have become so good at it, 'cause in the beginning you... you... How can I say it? Your attempts to be idiotic were so awkward because they were so unnatural to you that the results were amazingly awful.

AUDIENCE: [laugh or two]

RAJ: And you have refined the process and you have become better at it, and your devotion to it has had its beneficial effect, I will put it that way, to the point where you are once again clear enough in your ability to be devoted that you can be chosen to teach the Atonement.

RAJ READING: You have been chosen to teach the Atonement precisely because you have been extreme examples of allegiance to your thought systems, and therefore have developed the CAPACITY for allegiance. It has indeed been misplaced, but it IS a form of faith, which you yourselves have been willing to redirect.

RAJ: You have been willing to redirect it in that you find yourself reading the Course. You have been willing to redirect it in your search for a spiritual path. You have been willing to redirect it by conceiving of the possibility that there is another way to look at everything.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You cannot doubt the strength of your devotion, when you consider how faithfully you have observed it. It was quite evident that you had already developed the ability to follow a better model, if you could accept it.

RAJ: The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Message of the Crucifixion

For teaching purposes, let us consider the crucifixion again. We have not dwelt on it before, because of its fearful connotations. The only emphasis we laid upon it was that it was NOT a form of punishment. Nothing, however, can be really explained in negative terms only. There is a positive interpretation of the crucifixion which is wholly devoid of fear, and therefore wholly benign in what it teaches,...

RAJ: You hear that? Whatever is wholly devoid of fear is wholly benign in what it teaches.

Remember that you're always teaching. And what you have been teaching for lifetimes is the definition of yourself, which is that you're an independent, authoritative, self-authorized presence with no Source other than the presence that you are. That's what you've been teaching. That's what you've been cramming down everyone's throats and that's what everyone else has been cramming down your throats. And you have been mutually reinforcing that illusion and causing everything else that follows to be a misperception of what's Real.

Again.

RAJ READING: There is a positive interpretation of the crucifixion which is wholly devoid of fear, and therefore wholly benign in what it teaches, if it is properly understood. The crucifixion is nothing more than an extreme example. Its value, like the value of any teaching device, lies solely in the kind of learning it facilitates. It can be, and has been, misunderstood. This is only because the fearful are apt to perceive fearfully.

I have already told you that you can always call on me to share my decision and thus MAKE IT STRONGER. I also told you that the crucifixion was the last foolish journey that the Sonship need take, and that it should mean RELEASE from fear to anyone who understands it. While we emphasized only the resurrection before, the purpose of the crucifixion and how it actually LED to the resurrection was not clarified at that time. Nevertheless, it has a definite contribution to make to your own lives, and if you will consider it WITHOUT fear, it will help you understand your own role as teachers.

RAJ: Now some of you might not be looking at the crucifixion with fear. But many of you have been educated to believe that you all played a part in the crucifixion, and that you all are in some respect guilty, even if it's only guilty by association with all the other sinners in the world going right back to the time where the crucifixion occurred. And that's one reason this sentence is so important.

Again.

RAJ READING: Nevertheless, it has a definite contribution to make to your own lives, and if you will consider it WITHOUT fear, it will help you understand your own role as teachers.

You have reacted for years AS IF you were being crucified. This is a marked tendency of the separated ones, who always refuse to consider what they have done TO THEMSELVES.

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: You have reacted for years AS IF you were being crucified.

RAJ: You know, like the Jewish mother, "You'll be the death of me yet!" You look at your neighbors, your family, your friends, your bosses, and you see them as putting you on the rack, always keeping you at a disadvantage. You look at your politicians. You look at the state of life itself and see it as a constant threat, a constant being put on the rack, a constant being put up on the cross and no relief, no relief, no relief.

RAJ READING: This is a marked tendency of the separated ones, who always refuse to consider what they have done TO THEMSELVES.

RAJ: And so you say, "I didn't do anything to myself." Yes. You got a bill of divorcement from your Father. You forgot your Identity in the pleasure of trying to establish it for yourself made-up out of your own ideas of what you would like, as opposed to what anyone else would like. Yes, you did it to yourselves by saying, "I am an independent being." And as long as you believe that, and as long as you are convinced of it, and as long as you are committed to it, you are today doing this to yourself. You see?

No one else is doing it to you. And that's the one fundamental, I'm going to say, weak link in this whole thing called the human condition. It's the one weak link which, if you will address it and abandon it entirely, it's the one thing that will cause you to spontaneously wake up, instead of trying to fix your Brothers and fix everyone else before you've gotten rid of that one fundamental mistake that causes anything that follows to be mistaken also.

RAJ READING: Projection...

RAJ: Which means saying, "The devil made me do it! She made me do it! He made me do it!" instead of recognizing, "Wait a minute! I have a fundamental mistake in my premise. I better take care of that first before I determine what someone else is or isn't doing. I've got to correct that fundamental mistake by inviting Someone else in, the Father, that Place of Excellence in me that is the Holy Spirit which is devoted to the Father, or That in Me Which Is Real which is forever devoted to the clear Experience of the Truth about All Of Reality."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Projection means anger, anger fosters assault, and assault promotes fear. The real meaning of the crucifixion lies in the APPARENT intensity of the assault of some of the Sons of God upon another.

RAJ: The apparent intensity. And I would add: the apparent assault.

RAJ READING: This, of course, is impossible, and must be fully understood AS an impossibility. In fact, unless it IS fully understood as only that, I cannot serve as a real model for learning.

RAJ: Your invulnerability will never become apparent to you as long as you're playing in the field of mutually-agreed-upon definitions that all of you together have made up as a substitute for the direct Experience of Truth.

As long as you choose not to have a direct experience of your invulnerability, because you would rather have this farce of an experience of independence and the thrill that comes with it, the fear that comes with it, you will not be able to fathom or experience the fact that you're invulnerable and that you are incapable of being actually threatened. As a result, you will not be able to join me in teaching this Truth. You will not be in a position to join in teaching the Atonement. And you will not be an agent for change or a healer.

And let's just touch on a little thing here. All of you must become healers. That's part of the unavoidable process of coming Home, of Awakening. And we've discussed it in other words before. You become a healer by having an object of your affection. You see? And you have an object of your affection because that's the way you break the isolation. That's the way you break your aloneness. And that's the way you break the one thing that seems to make fear be reasonable in your logic. Break the aloneness, and fear will become impossible.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Assault can ultimately be made ONLY on the body. There is little doubt that one BODY can assault another, and can even destroy it. Yet if destruction ITSELF is impossible, then anything that is destructible cannot be REAL.

RAJ: And here we are again. Your body is the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality, and your Individuality is derived from God now, now, now, now, forever.

And the fact is that if you seemed to be killed at this instant, you would find in the very next instant that you still existed and you still were identified visibly and tangibly. And you would find that that which identified you was not affected by the apparent killing.

Now the point is to make this shift to the awareness of the impossibility of the destructibility of you in any way, shape, or form, without having to be killed to find out. To make this shift now by letting there be a sudden shift of perception. Which is what? What is a sudden shift of perception?

AUDIENCE: A miracle.

RAJ: A miracle. Yes.

Again. Yet if destruction itself is impossible, its destruction...

PAUL: I'm sorry.

RAJ READING: Yet if destruction ITSELF is impossible, then anything that is destructible cannot be REAL.

RAJ: Well, let's understand that if you seem to be killed right now and there's a body lying here that must be buried, it doesn't mean that your body wasn't Real. But what it means is that the definition everybody had of you that's still lingering in their mind has to be dealt with, while you unaffected whatsoever in terms of your Eternal And Uninterruptible Being are continuing to wake up with all your parts present, accounted for, and available to express God.

Now the point is, let's let them be present, available, accounted for to express God now by not defining your body as anything other than the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality which is God expressed. And let's not claim a mind other than the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind which is devoted to the Father's Will, which is devoted to the absolutely flawless Experience of Creation, of Being The Movement of Creation.

Again.

RAJ READING: Yet if destruction ITSELF is impossible, then anything that is destructible cannot be REAL. Therefore, its destruction does NOT justify anger.

RAJ: Your ego rears its ugly head and screams, "Foul play!" "It does justify anger!" your ego says.

I'm sorry but you can't solve the problem from the level of the problem. And anger is one of the means you use to try to solve a problem from the level of the problem.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: To the extent to which you believe that it DOES,...

RAJ: Justify anger.

RAJ READING: ...you must be accepting false premises AND TEACHING THEM TO OTHERS.

RAJ: Because you're teaching. You're always teaching.

RAJ READING: The message which the crucifixion was intended to teach was that it is not necessary to perceive ANY form of assault in persecution because you cannot BE persecuted. If you respond with anger you must be equating yourself with the destructible, and are therefore regarding yourself insanely.

RAJ: You see we're holding to the line right through this. If you are insisting upon seeing yourself as an independent self-existent entity, you have divorced yourself in your mind from your Source, which causes you to experience a loss of Identity. In the presence, you might say, or in the absence of an experience of Identity, you create one out of whole cloth for yourself. This identity, which you have created, is purely fallacious, unreal. And everything that follows from whatever definition you give yourself is equally illusory, and it causes the Kingdom of Heaven, any part of the Kingdom of Heaven or Creation that you look at, to be seen falsely. And you are all subject to the devotion that you bring to this definition of yourself.

This is why the statement, "There is another way to look at this," is so pertinent, so essential. Because it's on the basis of the meaning of that sentence that you can bring yourself to withdraw your devotion to your current definition of yourself and be less defended against the influx of inspiration, to be less defended against those of the Brotherhood who stand with you constantly, waiting for the barest glimmer of consciousness, you might say, where your attention is being able to wander outside of your commitment to your definition and be available to recognize the Presence of One of Us. And perhaps hear Us and thus provide the Conscious Experience of a link that you had forgotten that you had, an actual State of Brotherhood that you have forgotten that you were a part of.

The crucifixion did not destroy me, which means that the idea that all of you play with in your mind that there is such a thing as crucifixion is false. And if you will stand back far enough to see the contrast of the crucifixion and the resurrection, and the fact that it states that crucifixion didn't succeed, and that it didn't succeed because it's an illusion. And that therefore, your existence is not only available after a crucifixion, it's present before a crucifixion and it's present during a crucifixion, and therefore a crucifixion is nothing but a distraction from something that has been uninterrupted and inviolable. And that's the lesson of the crucifixion. The crucifixion demonstrated that crucifixion is impossible. And therefore, it's impossible for you.

And what is this uninterruptible Continuity of the Conscious Experience of Being going on behind an apparent crucifixion? It's the Presence of the Christ which does know Its Christhood before, during, and after a crucifixion.

So let's not bother to endure more crucifixion. It's not necessary. We're laying a wonderful groundwork here for release.

And I want to finish with one thing as you go into the next week. To be willing to abandon the self-definitions that you have created for yourself. In abandoning those definitions so that you don't see your Brother threatening you, whether he thinks he's threatening you or not.

This does not exonerate your Brother from projecting on you his own definitions of self that are ones of inadequacy, incompetency, loneliness, fear, and the great need for defense. And whatever of those self-definitions your Brother chooses to project on you still stand there calling for correction, education through Love and perseverance and steadfastness for the Truth of them, no matter how much they try to argue on behalf of the sense of inadequacy which they mightily defend and do not want to let go of.

When you see with the Father, when you see with me, you will not look at a Brother projecting his fears and say, "Nothing is going on there that needs correction." But you know what? You will not be reactive to the awkward and unloving expressions of fear that your Brother is projecting toward you. And as a result, you won't fall back into the habit of reacting from within the level of the problem, and thereby teaching the problem, reinforcing the problem further.

You will respond with Clarity and with Love that is indeed demanding of your Brother to look again because there is a Place in him, a Place of Excellence, an Altar, his Right Mind, that is a far more satisfying experience than the one he's currently suffering in. Now that's as close as I'm going to get at this time to a practical application of what we've been talking about. But that alone is significant.

I love you all, and I look forward to being with you next week.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

There is a habit that all of you have been engaged in, we'll say since the beginning of your lifetime here, and that habit is to believe that you're a human being. That's part of your fundamental definition of yourself. And it's that fundamental premise that we're in the process of breaking down, annihilating. It colors every thought that follows that you have. As a result you begin a spiritual quest and you see yourself as a human being somehow improving himself or herself. Somehow finding the means to grow beyond being a human being, a physical presence, the product of a sperm and an egg.

And indeed, we've been meeting for a year and a half and reading from the Course and breaking down that fundamental idea. And yet, because it has been the premise of your sense of yourself and therefore of your life, you still see yourselves in many ways as human beings trying to overcome the human condition. And there is a tendency to use the Course as a means to overcome this human condition, when what the Course is teaching and what I have been teaching, is that you were never in a human condition because you were never a human being. You have from the beginning been nothing more and nothing less than the Presence of God expressing What God Is Being right where you are.

I've shared a statement before that you need to be reminded of. It is this: You are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it, you are at that Point and must understand yourself there from. In other words, the premise of your thoughts, the premise of your sense of yourself must be that of one who is at the Point of Perfection, who must understand himself or herself from there.

The practice is to not slip into the old framework, but to consciously and conscientiously bring your attention back, as you go through the day, to the fact that because you are the Presence of God, you are at the Point of Perfection and you must conceive of yourself from there. What does that mean? It means that when suggestions come to your mind that you need to do something to protect yourself, when the suggestion is, "Get prepared for winter colds," that you don't say, "Oh, yes. Time to prepare for winter colds." You say, "Oh, how ridiculous!" You say, "That statement doesn't apply to me, and it doesn't apply to any of my Brothers and Sisters. I refuse to join in that definition and add to the mutuality of the agreement that indeed I'm a body, I'm a human being, and I am subject to this illness and that illness, and therefore because that's the case, I really had better defend myself against winter colds, or whatever it might be.

When someone coughs beside you and you know that it's not just phlegm in their throat but it seems to be a physical problem, a cold or a sore throat or whatever, your first response needs to be: That isn't true about them. I don't buy that as being the Truth about them. And because it's not the Truth about them, I don't have to protect myself against her or his belief that she's ill or he's ill. I don't have to become reactive. I don't have to wonder why she didn't cover her mouth when she coughed. I don't have to wonder why he came to work that day when he had the potential to expose so many to a problem. You see? You see how easily you can move back into a sense of being a human being who is always vulnerable to something, and therefore had better be on the alert to guard himself or herself against the threats of existence.

As we've been going through the Course, you all should have been finding a new sense of yourself developing in which the suggestion of vulnerability finds no lodging place in your mind, so that you stop being on the defense, so that you stop practicing defense. So that you stop being guarded against your world, your neighbor, your friend, your fellow employee, and what problems they might bring to you because you are vulnerable and you are subject to this, that and the other thing. It doesn't really matter what it is. What matters is whether or not you're buying into the idea that you're vulnerable.

"Well, I'd better strengthen my immune system." Listen to me! You are immune because of What You Are. And that better be the first thing that flashes through your mind before you say, "Oh! I better strengthen my immune system." Because once you slip past the instant acknowledge of your immunity because God can't be subject to anything unlike God, the minute you slip past the acknowledgement of your immunity, you have slipped into the mutually-agreed-upon definitions of yourself, and you will seem to be subject to that agreement. And you will govern yourself accordingly, and you will begin to tighten up, and you will begin to protect yourself, and you will begin to use your body in ways that oppose its Intent to identify you perfectly. And so a struggle begins within you. Your insistence that you are vulnerable and must protect yourself fighting against your body intending to identify you perfectly because it has nothing else to do.

And this tension, if you will, that you, not your body, are introducing into the picture, will begin to show up in your experience, and you'll say, "You see, I told you so." All because of what? Because you forgot What You Were and you forgot that because of What You Are, you are immune. Not strengthened against something so completely that it can't get you, but you are unavailable to seeming to have an experience of an illusion, of something that God didn't create.

I've talked before about the way the ego works. The ego is not a presence. It's an idea that all of you have made-up. But it isn't a presence. It has no authority. It has no capacity to initiate anything. And so how does the ego work? The ego works, like a hypnotist, through what?

SEEKER: Suggestion.

RAJ: Suggestion. Yes.

It suggests that you have been exposed to the flu. You'd better become afraid. You'd better protect yourself. The idea wisps into your mind, "Something has just occurred here that has put you in danger." That is a suggestion.

You don't have to accept the suggestions. And as I've said before, when you're watching the commercials on TV, all they are, are suggestions. They suggest to you to buy. They suggest to you to be afraid. They suggest to you that your security lies in medicine, or hair restorer, or money, or whatever. You don't have to buy into the suggestion. You don't have to join in with and substantiate a mutually-agreed-upon definition. And if you withdraw your agreement, if all of you begin to withdraw your agreements, the mutually-agreed-upon definition fades, together with their seeming effects.

You are right now God appearing. Nothing more and nothing less. That's the bottom line premise of your Being, of your existing.

Because your lives are made up of nothing more than mutually-agreed-upon definitions at the present time for the most part, then you are faced with the necessity of being alert to recognize when these definitions present themselves in your mind for you to agree with and thereby confirm. Why? So that you can use that opportunity to remember the Truth and move back to the Real fundamental premise of your existence, which is that you are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward It, you are at that Point and you must understand yourself there from. You must be willing to experience yourself there from.

You might say that you must be willing to teleport from your mutually-agreed-upon definitions to the Real, fundamental premise of your Being. And you must be alert to every opportunity you have to make that leap, that jump, as it were.

Now, as I said, the ego always works by means of suggestion, and it always presents itself, you might say, as though it were your idea. The suggestion doesn't come to you, "You should be afraid because you've just been exposed to something." It says, "Oh dear. I'm... I am afraid. Oh dear. I have been exposed to something." And because it comes with the word "I" attached to it, you think it's your thought, and you tend to validate what you think spontaneously.

When others project upon you their limited perception of themselves, it always comes to you as a suggestion. "You should feel guilty. You are at fault. You are being unkind. Blah, blah, blah." It always comes as a suggestion for you to accept or reject. But you forget that you have the option to reject it on the spot. And that's what you need to be alert to. You are not an ego, and your Brothers and Sisters are not egos either. Therefore, when they speak from an ego sense of themselves, you need to recognize that is not them who is speaking. But, just as with a drunk person, you say, "That's the liquor speaking, that's the liquor talking," you need to be alert to say, "Ah, that's the ego talking, not them."

And when the suggestion presents itself within you as your own thought, you need to be alert enough to recognize it and say, "Oh, that's the ego talking," not "That's my ego talking." Because you don't have an ego! That's the ego talking.

It's very important to make this distinction, because as long as the suggestions that the ego is making can be attached to an individuality, it seems to gain credence and authority that you buy into. But the minute you recognize that it's the... it's ego speaking, and that therefore it can't be the individual, and therefore it can't be you either, and you detach the person from the suggestion, either your own personhood or the personhood of another, then you have detached the thought, the suggestion, from that which would seem to give it validity, and you're able to treat it more objectively. And you're able to reject it more easily. Do you see what I'm saying? Is this making sense?

AUDIENCE: Yes.

RAJ: You are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you are, and you always have been, at that Point, and you must begin to experience and understand yourself from that Point. Else you will never escape from the human condition, the false experience of being that says you must be defended all the time, and you must always be on guard for something new to defend yourself against because you aren't at the Point of Perfection. You're at the point of imperfection, and therefore flawed, and therefore vulnerable and therefore in need of the greatest and surest defense that you can bring to bear upon the situation.

And I'm telling you, that your greatest defense is the recognition that you don't need a defense at all because you're not anything less than the Presence of God manifesting Himself as Himself right where you are and That is What You Are! And is God vulnerable? And is anything that God is manifesting as Himself right there where you are vulnerable to anything? No!

Your only real defense is What You Already Truly Are right now! And from understanding yourself there, you will be able to say to the suggestions that come, "Sorry. I'm not going to join with this suggestion. I'm not going to agree with this suggestion. There's nothing about this suggestion I need to be afraid about, so I'm not going to react to this suggestion." You are never ever defending yourself against anything actual. You're only defending yourself against something you are afraid is real. Like a child, hiding under the covers to protect himself from ghosts. You see?

Now what I'm talking about, what I'm expressing are not a bunch of ideas that you can use to create a better protection for yourself. The ideas I'm expressing that I would invite you to abide with, express the fact that You Are That Which Is Utterly Invulnerable. And you need to claim that for yourself. You need to claim it for yourself, not as a defense, but as a conscious reminder of the Truth About You so that you don't slip back into the habit of trying to be a better and better human being in order to grow out of being human.

In a way I'm saying you've got to start behaving in your mind as though you are Divine, and not just think about being Divine. So that you are using your mind in a new way, and not just repeating the old habits that are so well-ingrained that they feel absolutely natural. And because they feel absolutely natural, they are unquestionable, and you just go along in the same groove, groovin' along, without ever calling the groove into question, or without having the opportunity to discover that there ain't no such thing as a groove, and you're not in it and never were. Do you see what I'm saying?

Okay. Let's go to the book.

Again, it's Chapter 6, first subsection, [counting] fifth paragraph. In the sparkly book, it's page 119, first full paragraph.

RAJ READING: I have made it perfectly clear that I am like you and you are like me, but our fundamental equality can be demonstrated only through joint DECISION.

RAJ: Now, so far, I've been asking you to decide to stop thinking of yourself as being behind the Point of Perfection and to decide to stop thinking that you are advancing toward perfection, and to decide to understand yourself from and be from the Point of Perfection. That's what I am Being. That is my decision and I'm asking you to join me in it, because in our joining together in it, it is strengthened. Conversely, in your joining me in that decision, the mutually-agreed definitions are weakened. And so, in your decision, you help the rest of the Brotherhood by weakening their conviction around the mutually-agreed-upon definitions. Your support has been withdrawn. That's the blessing you give to everyone as well as yourself.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are free to perceive yourselves as persecuted if you choose. You might remember, however, when you DO choose to react that way, that I WAS persecuted as the world judges, and did NOT share this evaluation for myself. And because I did not share it I did not STRENGTHEN it. I therefore offered a DIFFERENT interpretation of attack, and one which I DO want to share with you. If you will BELIEVE it, you will help me to TEACH it.

RAJ: Now I want to go back here to the key word "persecuted."

RAJ READING: You are free to perceive yourselves as persecuted...

RAJ: If you impersonalize the ego, if you impersonalize a suggestion, it is impossible to feel persecuted. Again, if you impersonalize a suggestion, it will be impossible to feel persecuted. Persecution is an experience you have when you believe that a false assessment, a negative assessment, has been made of you by another individuality; someone who is consciously intent upon hurting you. That's when the hackles go up on the back of your neck because some one is aggressively and consciously choosing to hurt you.

But an idea floating in the air, a thought floating in the air looking for someone to attach to, offering its wares to you and inviting you to invite it in and entertain it, there's no way for you to consider that to be persecution. You can consider it to be bait. But dangling bait can't be called persecution.

And when persecution isn't an element in the process, reaction won't be a part of your process, and your ability to dismiss the suggestion will remain simple and available and clear. But the moment you add the element of this suggestion, this negative suggestion, coming from a person, then you feel a right to be affronted and offended by that real individual's choice to be unkind to you. And then you will have reaction and you will have lost sight of the fact that what you've been presented with is nothing more than a suggestion.

And so you won't address what needs to be addressed, which is a foundationless, sourceless suggestion, hypnotic suggestion, if you will. If you take the bait because the suggestion does say in your... your mindset says, "This is coming from someone who is trying to hurt me. I've got to protect myself against them." Ah! You've lost sight of the fact that the only thing that's come into play is a suggestion which you've taken hook, line and sinker. And as long as you then engage in trying to defend yourself against the person that's become attached to the suggestion, you're hypnotized. You're already under the influence of what? The suggestion, the illusion, not... not the person that that suggestion has become attached to. Is this making sense?

ANOTHER SEEKER: Oh absolutely. [and other assenting voices]

RAJ: Again, if you do not attach a suggestion to a person, there is no way for you to experience persecution. So you must learn to impersonalize the ego, impersonalize the suggestion.

If you will, I'm paraphrasing the last sentence that was read, if you will join me in believing the Truth of what I have just said, you will help me to teach it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have said before, "As you teach so shall you learn." If you react as if you are persecuted, you are TEACHING persecution.

RAJ: [laughing] I would say also that if you are reacting, you are teaching that you are hypnotized. You are teaching that you are under the influence, and you are teaching others to be under the influence as well. Every time you do it, it's like handing your brother a drink and saying, "Get drunk with me." That's not Love and that's not your Function. And now that you realize that's what you're doing, I am assured that you will do it less and less.

Again.

RAJ READING: If you react as if you are persecuted, you are TEACHING persecution. This is not a lesson which the Sons of God should WANT to teach if they are to realize their own salvation. Rather teach your own perfect immunity, which IS the truth in you, and KNOW that it cannot be assailed.

RAJ: Now, again, as you read these words, you can think that you're supposed to know this in order to ward off that which is threatening you. And if you think that's what it is, you're under the influence again. You're to know it because it's the Truth. You aren't behind the Point of Perfection. You aren't advancing toward the Point of Perfection. You're there, and you must assess yourself, you must conceive of yourself, you must experience yourself there from. From there you are unassailable because from there you are unopposed. And the reason you're unopposed is that when you're there, you're unconflicted. You're single-minded. And that is where the "I" of you, the essentialness of you, already is right now.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Do not protect it yourselves, or you have believed that it IS assailable.

RAJ: "It" referring to your immunity.

RAJ READING: You are not asked to BE crucified, which was part of my own teaching contribution. You are merely asked to follow my example in the face of much LESS extreme temptations to misperceive,...

RAJ: Temptations to misperceive. Not actual affronts. Not actual persecutions. Not actual threats. Temptations to misperceive. Invitations to misperceive. Suggestive innuendos that invite you to misperceive.

Again.

RAJ READING: You are merely asked to follow my example in the face of much LESS extreme temptations to misperceive, and NOT to accept them falsely as justifications for anger.

RAJ: Or justifications for defense. Or as justifications for becoming afraid. When you don't abandon the Point of Perfection, when you are alert to recognize a suggestion for what it is and you impersonalize and keep impersonalized the suggestions that are presented to you, it doesn't mean that you become unconscious of the fact that the suggestions are being made. And you don't become ignorant of the fact that because the suggestions are being made, a Brother is experiencing a misunderstanding and correction is called for. I will keep bringing this balance back into the picture.

You are misperceiving a whole lot because of your deeply ingrained habits. And just because I know the Truth About You and just because I know the Truth About Me, doesn't mean that I don't see where the places of correction exist to be addressed. And then I address them, which is what I'm doing right now.

Something needs to be done about the misunderstandings. Something needs to be done about the misperceptions that others have been invited through the power of suggestion to accept and agree to. They need to be freed from their habit of going under [finger snap] at the drop of a hat, of becoming hypnotized from moment to moment about something new. They deserve and need the same freedom you do.

But, as I've been bringing out, if you remain un hypnotized, then you will not experience persecution as what is happening. And you will not be in a state of reaction. And as a result you will be able to be available to your, shall I say, your hypnotized or inebriated Brother in a way that will help break the hypnotic spell.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: There can BE no justification for the unjustifiable.

RAJ: You might just as well say there is no justification for becoming sick as a result of being exposed to something that can't make you sick because it's not real. There's no justification for becoming sick when you're exposed to "germs" because you're invulnerable. Don't forget that you're invulnerable. Remember it consciously. Make a practice of remembering that you're invulnerable. Why? Because you didn't create yourself. And What Created You is indivisible and undivided, therefore unpolarized and incapable of being the presence of anything other than singular harmony without conflict.

Again.

RAJ READING: There can BE no justification for the unjustifiable. Do not believe there is, and do not TEACH that there is. Remember always that what you believe, you WILL teach. Believe with me, and we will become equal as teachers.

RAJ: You know what? It doesn't mean you will become equal with me, The Great Teacher. It doesn't have to do with levels of teaching. We will be equal in our Awareness of What Truth Is. We will be equal in Being That Which Is Expressing The Truth. It has nothing to do with comparisons of quality of teaching. It has to do with what's being taught. And we will become equal as teachers because we are together embodying Truth.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: YOUR resurrection is your reawakening. I am the model for rebirth, but rebirth itself is merely the dawning on your minds of what is already in them.

RAJ: It's you remembering that you aren't behind the Point of Perfection, and you're not advancing toward it, and that you must understand yourself there from, because that's always been where you've been being from. And you couldn't ever have been doing anything else.

Again.

RAJ READING: I am the model for rebirth, but rebirth itself is merely the dawning on your minds of what is already in them. God placed it there Himself, and so it is true forever.

RAJ: That's part of your being at the Point of Perfection.

RAJ READING: I believed in it, and therefore made it forever true for me.

RAJ: It had always been Forever True, but until I believed it, it was not Forever True for me. It's True about you, each of you, but it won't be True for you until it is True for you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Help me to teach it to our brothers in the name of the Kingdom of God, but first believe that it is true for YOU, or you will teach amiss.

RAJ: If you don't remember it for yourself, you'll accept the suggestion and then, in so many words, you'll go into a hypnotic trance and live out whatever the hypnotist suggested, even though it's not really going on. And you'll teach dreaming. And you'll teach trance. Trance 1, trance 2, trance 3, advanced trance. [audience amusement]

Continuing.

RAJ READING: My brothers slept during the so-called "agony" in the garden, but I could not be angry with them because I had learned I could not BE abandoned. Peter swore he would never deny me, but he did so three times. He did offer to defend me with the sword, which I naturally refused, not being at all in need of bodily protection. I AM sorry when my brothers do not share my decision to hear only one voice, because it weakens them as teachers AND as learners. Yet I know that they cannot really betray themselves OR me, and that it is still on them that I must build my church.

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: I AM sorry when my brothers do not share my decision to hear only one voice, because it weakens them as teachers AND as learners. Yet I know that they cannot really betray themselves OR me,...

RAJ: Do you see in that sentence, that part of the sentence, "Yet I know that they cannot really betray themselves or me," that that is the act of impersonalizing the suggestions. That statement says I did not attach the suggestion that their behavior came from them to them. I impersonalized it. I lifted the suggestion off of them, just as I had lifted it off of me. It could be rather discouraging to think that poor misguided them were the ones upon whom I must build my church. [a little audience amusement] But it's not disheartening because, having impersonalized the suggestion, having removed them personally from the suggestion, it was easy to see, it is easy to see that they're still what God created them to be and that they are worthy of being the ones to build my church.

Mmm. "To build my church." Well, they are the ones to join with me in the remembrance of What They Divinely Are, so that together joined in decision we can glorify God by presenting nothing other than What God Is Being right where we are. And that's what constitutes church. And church is not really the key word. It's the joining together in the Conscious Being of What Is True About Us. Church, you might say, fully established is everyone finally having come Home.

And who else is there to come Home beside what appears to be a motley crew? [a little audience amusement] Which could be discouraging if I accepted the suggestion that you are a motley crew. In one way or another, you all tell me that you are. And you're reluctant to leave your motleyhood. [audience amusement]

ANOTHER SEEKER: They call it the church of the quivering flesh.

RAJ: The quivering what?

SEEKER: The quivering flesh.

RAJ: Ah, the church of the quivering flesh. Yes. Yes. [amused]

ANOTHER SEEKER: _____ trance. [audience laughter]

RAJ: [laughing] Continuing.

RAJ READING: There is no choice in this because only you can BE the foundation of God's church. A church is where an altar is, and the presence of the altar is what MAKES it a church.

RAJ: And the Altar is in you, and it's the Holiness of You kept intact because God is uninterrupted. And therefore, God's Presence in you is the intactness of your Holiness that's uninterrupted

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Any church which does not inspire love has a hidden altar which is not serving the purpose for which God intended it.

RAJ: And let's be clear here. It doesn't mean a second Altar that's hidden, with evil motives and ungodlike intentions. It doesn't mean a personal altar that you have erected in honor of yourself. It's referring to the one and only Altar. "Any church which does not inspire love has a hidden altar." In other words, your Divinity is hidden from you. And because it's hidden, then it is not serving the purpose for which God intended it.

The Altar is the Holy Spirit in You. And the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. And Its Function is to Know Truth and not be fooled by suggestions to the contrary as to What Truth Is. And when you're not paying attention to it, it's hidden from you and it's hidden from the world. And it's... you withhold it from me, but you can't cover it up to me because I don't accept the suggestion that you put forth to me that we're different and that you're devoted in struggling but not quite there yet. Tain't so. You're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it. I tell you right now, you're at that Point! And that's the way you need to start seeing yourself and experiencing yourself and being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I must found His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...church on you because you who accept me as a model are literally my disciples. Disciples are followers, but if the model they follow has chosen to save them pain in all respects, they are probably unwise NOT to follow him.

RAJ: That's just simple common sense. Follow me. You must follow the same path of undoing.

It's difficult to know whether I'm leading or pushing; leading from in front of you or pushing from behind you. [audience amusement] Or slapping you smartly in the face saying, "Wake up! Wake up! You're already here! Wake up!"

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I elected, both for your sake AND mine, to demonstrate that the most outrageous assault, as judged by the ego, did not matter. As the world judges these things, but NOT as God KNOWS them, I was betrayed, abandoned, beaten, torn, and finally killed. It was perfectly clear that this was only because of the projection of others, because I had not harmed anyone and had healed many. We are still equal as learners, even though we need not have equal experiences. The Holy Spirit is glad when you can learn enough from mine to be reawakened by them. That was their only purpose, and that is the only way in which I can be perceived as the Way, the Truth and the Light.

RAJ: Those are strong words, "betrayed, abandoned, beaten, torn, and finally killed." The Principle, the Truth, is True at all levels of misperception.

You say, "My God, might I have to do that?" But let me tell you this. You say, instead of saying "I was betrayed, abandoned, beaten, torn, and killed," you say, "Well today I was exposed to the flu. I was confronted by an obviously frustrated policeman who hasn't fulfilled his quota and was just picking on anybody doing the slightest thing." What you're actually saying is, "I forgot to remember that I'm neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it, and that I'm invulnerable, and that I wasn't confronted by anything that made a statement about my safety. And therefore I was not confronted by anything I need to give a second thought to or defend myself against."

Illness and disease and suffering are suggestions that were presented to you that you became distracted by. And in the face of them, you abandoned the Clear, Conscious Experience that you are at the Point of Perfection and that What You Are is incapable of being affected positively or negatively by suggestions, by that which doesn't have any Source.

There is no order of difficulty in miracles because miracles uncover the fact that all forms of threat are imaginary, unreal, Sourceless... period.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you hear only one voice you are NEVER called on to sacrifice. On the contrary, by enabling yourselves to hear the Holy Spirit in others, you can learn from their experiences, and gain from them WITHOUT experiencing them yourselves.

RAJ: Now I want you to be clear here, too. It is possible to become intellectually and spiritually and metaphysically confused to the point where you would read this to say, "On the contrary, by enabling yourselves to hear the Holy Spirit in others who are attacking you, you can learn from their experiences." No. By enabling yourselves to hear the Holy Spirit in others like me, the Holy Spirit in others who are letting the Holy Spirit speak for them, by listening to the Holy Spirit in Others Who Are Awake, like your own Guides, you can learn from their experiences and gain from them without experiencing them yourselves.

In other words, you don't have to keep reinventing the wheel. You don't have to reinvent the Atonement. All you have to do is let yourself companion with One who has, so that you might learn from their experience.

The Holy Spirit never speaks through your Brother by means of his ignorance of the Truth about himself, acted out toward you as a call for Love that really means misbehaving. So don't try to figure out what the Holy Spirit is trying to say to you by means of your Brother's bad behavior.

Is anyone not clear about what I've just said? I mean it's a... if you are, please say so and we will make it clearer. Okay.

Again.

RAJ READING: ...by enabling yourselves to hear the Holy Spirit in others, you can learn from their experiences, and gain from them WITHOUT experiencing them yourselves. That is because the Holy Spirit is one,...

RAJ: Meaning infinite, all-inclusive.

RAJ READING: ...and anyone who listens is inevitably led to demonstrate His...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...way for all.

RAJ: The moment you become clear, the moment you decide for Truth with me, you lessen the density of the dream by withdrawing from the mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and so your decision has been for everyone.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are not persecuted,...

RAJ: The suggestion is that you're persecuted. But you're not. You're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it. You're at that Point and that Point is the Living Presence and Movement of God Being The Only Mind There Is right where you are, Which is incapable of being split, and therefore is still Whole and doesn't need to be fixed. Persecution is nonsense.

RAJ READING: You are not persecuted, nor was I. You are not asked to REPEAT my experiences because the Holy Spirit, Whom we SHARE, makes this unnecessary. To USE my experiences constructively, however, you must still follow my example in how to perceive them.

My brothers and yours are constantly engaged in justifying the unjustifiable.

RAJ: In other words, they're still hypnotized. They're still fooled into believing that they're vulnerable and that they must protect themselves. They've abandoned the Conscious Experience of Being at the Point of Perfection which they can't leave. And they are caught up in a dream of defending themselves against something that doesn't exist.

RAJ READING: My brothers and yours are constantly engaged in justifying the unjustifiable. My one lesson, which I must teach as I learned, is that no perception which is out of accord with the judgment of the Holy Spirit CAN be justified.

RAJ: Any perception which is out of accord with the judgment of the Holy Spirit is a judgment made from a state of deluded conscious awareness where you've already taken the bait. You're already under. You've already lost perspective, Divinely speaking.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I undertook to show this was true in a very extreme case merely because it would serve as a good teaching aid to those whose temptations to give in to anger and assault would NOT be so extreme. I will, with God, that none of His Sons should suffer.

RAJ: If you will with God that none of your Brothers should suffer, are you going to go out and find a better antidote to the flu? Or are you going to address the fundamental problem that your Brother is neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; that he is at this instant, no matter how he's defining himself, at that Point. And he needs be willing to allow a shift to occur wherein he's willing to conceive of himself from the Point of Perfection and be from the Point of Perfection in which he's untouchable, unreachable, by any threat and in whose Presence threat cannot present itself. In whose Presence persecution is meaningless because he hasn't taken the bait. Because he hasn't taken the bait. And because he hasn't taken the bait, he can see the bait for what it is. And can address the motive that caused a Brother to dangle the bait in the first place so that the Brother can withdraw the bait because he's not interested in deluding you either.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Remember that the Holy Spirit is the communication link between God the Father and His separated Sons. If you will listen to His Voice,...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...you will know that you cannot either hurt or BE hurt, and that many need your blessing to help them hear this for themselves.

RAJ: Your Brothers need to hear it, just as you need to hear it right now.

Continuing

RAJ READING: When you perceive ONLY this need in them, and do not respond to ANY other, you will have learned of me, and will be as eager to share your learning as I am. The crucifixion CANNOT be shared because it is the symbol of projection, but the resurrection is the symbol of SHARING because the reawakening of every Son of God is necessary to enable the Sonship to know its wholeness. Only this IS knowledge.

*The message of the crucifixion is perfectly clear: Teach ONLY love, for that is what you ARE.

RAJ: So, how do you teach Love? You teach it by not taking the bait, not becoming inebriated or hypnotized into being in a constant state of defending yourself against ghosts.

"Oh," you say, "but I can see the germs! They can show me the germs under the microscope. And they can show me this person's lungs after they died and had an autopsy and they can... I can see what the germs did to the tissues. What do you mean I can't be persecuted? What do you mean I'm not vulnerable?"

You know what? You're gonna start having new reports in the news that demonstrate the other side. That when you stop taking the bait, when you do not play into the suggestions that come to you that you need to join the mutually-agreed-upon definitions about how germs and bodies and matter work, bodies that seem to have been affected by germs will have a spontaneous remission. What you will call physical healing will occur. And if as it were possible that someone were to die who was open to being healed so that a lung could be looked at, which had earlier been examined and been found to be in a great state of deterioration, they would find everything there to be absolutely flawless in spite of the fact that the mutually-agreed-upon definitions about how germs and matter work could be demonstrated and seen under a microscope.

It's time for new things to happen besides sin, disease and death. And they can happen because none of you is behind the Point of Perfection, and therefore flawed and inadequate and vulnerable. And you're not advancing toward it. And doing pretty well, if I might say so, and spiritualizing yourself wonderfully, but it might be another 1,000 lifetimes before you make it. You're not advancing toward it either. You're at that Point, and you must understand yourself there from, from there.

You must be willing to open yourself up to the Conscious Experience of Being There. And even if you're not having the total Conscious Experience of Being There, you must dare to voice to yourself that you're not available to join in mutually-agreed-upon definitions without running them by the Holy Spirit first. And that means that you must object [finger snap], you must object [finger snap] on the spot when these suggestions come to you out of your memory, or when they're presented to you on the spot through the media or your Brothers or Sisters.

It may be fun to go to a show that a hypnotist is putting on. And it may be fun to watch the guy walk around on the stage thinking he's a rooster cackling at the hens and crowing and strutting his stuff. [audience laugh] It may be funny, but you know he's suffering a delusion.

Your delusions are no more real, but they seem not to be funny to you, and for the most part they seem not to be funny to anyone around you. And it's important for you to stop taking them seriously, and objecting to them so that you might become [finger snap] un hypnotized, and thus demonstrate that you have joined with me in this decision, and demonstrate along with me that there is no order of difficulty in miracles.

You don't have to hang on a cross. You don't seem to have to die and then resurrect so that you can demonstrate for your Brothers that you are not available to see them as persecutors. And that you're not available to see yourself as persecuted because you've insisted not to take the bait in the first place that their very behavior suggests to you that you should do.

Good stuff.

That's not Paul. That's me.

The Truth is wonderful. And the Truth is radical. The statement, "In defenselessness my safety lies," you see, really doesn't mean presenting no defense in the face of threat and letting threat walk all over you. Your safety lies in your unwillingness to abandon the Point of Perfection that you're in, which is a Place in which you see nothing to be defended against, and the Place in which the apparent call for defense can be recognized as a suggestion being made by a Brother who's ignorant of the Point of Perfection that he is in, and who is in need, not of retaliation, but of the Loving Expression of Truth in language that he or she can hear, that helps him realize that his defenselessness does not mean abandoning bad behavior that he thinks is going to defend his safety, but in not forgetting Who He Is and thinking a new definition of himself and believing it and as a result having moved into a state of delusion.

And you will be able to be a healing Presence. And you will be able to teach him how not to take the bait, how to recognize the bait, and pass on the gift to his Brothers and Sisters who are dangling bait in front of him.

Okay. I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet as well.

We're in the midst of clarifying the meaning of the crucifixion, finding its meaning by not looking at it through the lens of your sense of yourself being separated from the Father. If you are looking at the crucifixion, or any aspect of your lives, from an independent vantage point, you're going to see everything you're looking at in a conflicted manner. You're going to see everything as polarized, including God. And every single Divine Event that is happening, and I will tell you there is nothing that is not a Divine Event happening, every Divine Event that is happening will be seen as both good and bad, beneficial and threatening, depending upon your mood, but nevertheless, everything that you see will be composed of opposing dynamics. Not because they're there, but because you are choosing to look at them while utilizing what we're going to call a split mind.

A split mind in this sense: When you choose to conceive of yourself as being an independent being, an independent entity, you are leaving the Holy Spirit out. And what is the Holy Spirit? Nothing more than your Right Mind. Nothing more than your Right Mind.

The Holy Spirit you do not see as your Self. And that's because you disowned It, if I may put it that way, when you said, "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way." And you adopted an independent stance all by yourself on your own for the purpose of trying to create a certain sense of independent authority, because you wanted to see what that felt like, because you thought it might be interesting.

When you did that, you separated off a small part of what you are and said, "This is me," and you rejected the rest. And so now the Holy Spirit is the Altar in the middle of you that you're too busy to pay any attention to. Too busy doing what? Defending your existence. [laughing] Defending this private sense of existence that seems so important to you to maintain.

After having gotten this bill of divorcement from the Father and thereby splitting your mind, then God, the Indivisible Moving Presence of capital "B" Being became your enemy because, of course, God, being your Source, would uncover the falsity, the illusionary nature of the sense of yourself that you are intent upon manifesting and confirming and somehow making real. And so that which can uncover the falsity of your position becomes your enemy, while at the same time being something which, if you are a good boy or a good girl and you plead with Him, because He is Love, He will be your Helper. So, you create this conflicted sense of your God—part of which is true and part of which is false.

Going to the book.

RAJ READING: The message of the crucifixion is perfectly clear: Teach ONLY love, for that is what you ARE.

If you interpret the crucifixion in any other way, you are using it as a weapon for assault rather than as the call for peace for which it was intended. The Apostles often misunderstood it, and always for the same reason that makes anyone misunderstand anything. Their own imperfect love made them vulnerable to projection, and out of their own fear they spoke of the "wrath of God" as His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...retaliatory weapon.

RAJ: Now it would have been impossible to conceive of God as wrathful and having a retaliatory weapon if one wasn't feeling guilty, if one wasn't looking through a lens of conflict.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Nor could they speak of the crucifixion entirely without anger because their own sense of guilt had MADE them angry.

RAJ: You know what? All of you have a predisposition to anger, because anger is just about the only effective means you have for making change and for enforcing conditions that won't be further threatening to your already false sense or definition of yourself that you are trying to impress everyone else with as being the truth. And so part of your being on guard to defend this imaginary position that you want to think is real is to be ready to express anger to bring your fellowman into line, to bring him back into agreement with a mutually-agreed-upon definition of yourself that you are trying to teach and force others to believe.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: There are two glaring examples of upside-down thinking in the New Testament, whose whole gospel is ONLY the message of love. These are not like the several slips into impatience which I made. I had learned the Atonement prayer, which I also came to teach, too well to engage in upside-down thinking myself.

RAJ: What is the Atonement prayer? Teach only Love for that is What You Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If the Apostles had not felt guilty they never could have quoted me as saying, "I come not to bring peace but a sword." This is clearly the exact opposite of everything I taught.

Nor could they have described my reactions to Judas as they did if they had really understood me. They would have realized I COULD not have said, "Betrayest thou the Son of Man with a kiss?" unless I BELIEVED in betrayal.

RAJ: You see, you can't teach what you don't believe. You can't teach what you don't believe, and what you believe you teach.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The whole message of the crucifixion was simply that I did NOT. The "punishment" which I am said to have called forth upon Judas was a similar reversal. Judas was my brother and a Son of God, as much a part of the Sonship as myself. Was it likely that I would condemn him when I was ready to demonstrate that condemnation is impossible?

RAJ: The lesson of the crucifixion was to convey to you the value of not taking the bait that causes you to respond from your imaginary sense of yourself. Not to take the bait that causes you to forget Who You Are. Not to take the bait that causes you to feel that there is justification for abandoning your Right Mind, for abandoning the Father, for abandoning the Clear, Infinite Direct Experience of What You Are in favor of a definition you made-up that you thereafter have to defend and which forever after causes everything you see to be polarized, worthy of your defense, and therefore a reason not to remember Home.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I am very grateful to the Apostles for their teaching and fully aware of the extent of their devotion to me. Nevertheless, as you read their teachings, remember that I told them myself that there was much they would understand later because they were NOT wholly ready to follow me at the time.

RAJ: Follow me. To follow me all of the way at the time.

RAJ READING: I emphasize this only because I do not want you to allow ANY fear to enter into the thought system toward which I am guiding you. I do NOT call for martyrs, but for TEACHERS. No-one is “punished” for sins, and the Sons of God are not sinners.

RAJ: You see, if you look at what I’m teaching and if you look in the direction that I am guiding you, and you look in that direction from your own conflicted sense of yourself, you will be bound to assume that the road will be a hard one, a struggle, that the road will be fraught with opposition from your Brothers and Sisters because it’s going to be so radically different.

And that can be justification for walking slowly or turning and running. But I must remind you that what we’re talking about is learning how to be the clearer and clearer Presence of Love. And you know what? Everyone recognizes Love, and does not find the Presence of Love frightening, objectionable or otherworldly. You may have forgotten how to Love, but none of you has forgotten what the Experience of Love feels like. And so you must know that what I’m uncovering in you is your ever-increasing capacity to be the Presence of Love which will be recognizable as Love and will not create for you dynamics of conflict, struggle, or martyrdom. This is very important.

Those being the Presence of Love are welcomed and embraced by those around them. This is the truth. You may say, “Well I’ve been the Presence of Love and indeed, I’ve had people get very angry with me.” Well I promise you that if that was the case, you were working at being the Presence of Love and you were feeling that the only way to convey being the Presence of Love was through the same use of willfulness and coercion that you brought into play when you were trying to enforce the mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And it was that willful intent to coerce by means of Love the experience of Love in others that others responded to negatively.

What we’re discussing is not a way to teach Love but a way to be Love. And there’s a big difference.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ANY concept of “punishment” involves the projection of blame, and REINFORCES the idea that blame is justified. The behavior that results is a LESSON IN BLAME, just as all behavior teaches the beliefs which motivate it.

RAJ: All behavior teaches the beliefs which motivate it. You're teaching all the time, even when you're not saying a word. Psychologists refer to some aspects of it as body language. But your behavior always is reflecting what you believe. If you through body language communicate defense, you are teaching that you feel threatened. You are thereby teaching that you have taken the bait and forgotten Who You Are, and that the only correction for defense against threat, perceived threat, is to back up prior to the point where you saw yourself as separate, divorced from your Father, and therefore divorced from your Brothers and Sisters because as an orphan you don't have any Brothers or Sisters, without a Father you don't have any Brothers or Sisters.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The crucifixion was a complex of behaviors arising out of clearly opposed thought systems. As such, it was the perfect symbol of conflict between the ego and the Son of God.

RAJ: Mind you, it said the ego and the Son of God. It didn't say Judas. It didn't say Pilate. It didn't say the crowd yelling, “Crucify him. Crucify him.” Remember not to personalize the ego.

Again.

RAJ READING: The crucifixion was a complex of behaviors arising out of clearly opposed thought systems. As such, it was the perfect symbol of conflict between the ego and the Son of God. The conflict is just as real now, and its lessons, too, have equal reality WHEN THEY ARE LEARNED. I do not need gratitude any more than I needed protection, but YOU need to develop your weakened ability to BE grateful, or you cannot appreciate God.

RAJ: That's another way of saying, if you cannot Love your Brother whom you have seen, how can you Love God whom you have not seen?

RAJ READING: ...YOU need to develop your weakened ability to BE grateful, or you cannot appreciate God. HE does not need your appreciation, but YOU do.

RAJ: And you all know this. When you are afraid of something, when you're engulfed in fear, it's almost impossible to feel gratitude. And because you are constantly defending, reinforcing, supporting your false sense of yourself, and therefore a false sense of what you're called upon to be every day, you seldom find occasion for expressing gratitude, and it has become a somewhat foreign activity to you.

Now, a short while ago, I suggested to everyone that during the holiday period here, that you when you encounter someone who is providing you with a service, that when they're finished you look them squarely in the eye and say, "Thank you for being here for me." Or "Thank you for doing what you do."

Ah! A little bit of expression of gratitude. Many of you have found this difficult to do. That it's much easier just to say, "Thank you very much." But to say, "Thank you for being here for me," or "Thank you for doing what you do," is more difficult because it's more intimate. Intimacy breaks isolation. And those of you who have attempted to put into practice my suggestion have found out just exactly how much you defend yourself against abandoning your isolation. It shows you how deeply ingrained your habit of separation goes. And all of it comes out in a very simple opportunity to do something very simple, to say a few words. "Thank you for being here for me." "Thank you for doing what you do." I encourage you to engage in this practice indefinitely.

You know you need to experience gratitude expressed toward you. Well, so does everyone else. And gratitude can only be extended from a heart that cares. So, does that tell you something? If you're reluctant to express gratitude, it means you are reluctant to express the fact that you care. It demonstrates how defended you are against caring, how foreign it has become to you. And yet I tell you that when you become completely undefended, when you yield into the Brotherhood, as it were, and you find yourself at one with everyone, you will find that caring, that being the Presence of Love as a direct, not communication, but as a direct communion, it will be the most joyful thing you have experienced. But it's got to start right now in the middle of your reluctance to express it, because it seems to have become foreign to you, in order for it to grow into a fuller and fuller expression.

Now, you know what? When you let appreciation come forth from you, it can't come forth as any means of control over another. It will be a gift. And it will create ripples and it will spread.

And not only will it become less and less foreign to extend appreciation and to break down the isolation, it will also become easier and easier for you and everyone else to stand in receipt of appreciation without minimizing it, or apologizing for it, or talking it away. "Thank you for being here for me." "Oh, oh, that's okay! It's nothing!" You see? "You look especially lovely today." "Oh, well. Well, the dress I'm wearing was only $5.95 at the store." You know, instead of saying "thank you" and letting it in and letting it register with you as nothing more or less than appreciation, Love extended.

It not only is difficult for you to express a simple intimacy of appreciation, it's hard for you to let appreciation or Love in and register with you without messing with it, at least a little bit to keep it from being clearly what it is. Because if you let it be clearly what it is, it will mean that you have lowered your defenses which you are hesitant to do, because your sense of yourself, your definition of yourself causes you to experience everything as duplicitous.

As a result, you must be suspicious of everything. And even an expression of simple appreciation, intimacy, will be interpreted at times to be a means that your Brother or Sister has to try to get something from you, that there's some other reason for their behavior than real appreciation.

This is very important. Your conflicted way of looking at everything causes you to be sure that everything has two sides, and that therefore everything is untrustworthy until you have put everything to the test. And even then, you are not so sure.

Now, find ways to express appreciation. Why? Not because your Brother needs it, even though your Brother does, but because you need to break the habit of maintaining your isolation.

Again.

RAJ READING: I do not need gratitude any more than I needed protection, but YOU need to develop your weakened ability to BE grateful, or you cannot appreciate God. HE does not need your appreciation, but YOU do.

RAJ: And so, at this Christmas season when singing praises to God are... the words singing praises to God are heard in your Christmas carols, know that it's not that God needs your praise, but that it is a reminder that you need to engage in the act of praise extended to God and extended to each other.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You cannot love what you do not appreciate, and FEAR MAKES APPRECIATION IMPOSSIBLE. Whenever you are afraid of what you are you do NOT appreciate it,...

RAJ: Whenever you are afraid of what you are, you do not appreciate it. Let's be clear here. I'm not talking about when you are afraid of what you think you are. I'm talking about when you are afraid of What You Are. When you are afraid to acknowledge the Holy Spirit in you, with the awareness that acknowledging It means acknowledging that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. You're afraid of doing this, and quote:

RAJ READING: Whenever you are afraid of what you are you do NOT appreciate it, and will therefore reject it. As a result, you will TEACH REJECTION.

RAJ: Fortunately, the Holy Spirit is not amenable to your projection on It. And because It is you, It cannot abandon you, and so It remains you in your Truth, you in your Reality, busy, forever busy insinuating Itself into your awareness, attracting you to let It in. Which means attracting you to a forever better experience of What You Truly Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The power of the Sons of God is operating all the time because they were created as creators. Their influence on EACH OTHER is without limit, and MUST be used for their joint salvation.

RAJ: Right now you're using that for the purpose of reaffirming, reestablishing, and confirming separation. And it's called war. And it's called not saying, "Thank you for being here for me."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Each one must learn to teach that all forms of rejection are utterly meaningless.

RAJ: And, again, this is the lesson of the crucifixion.

RAJ READING: Each one must learn to teach that all forms of rejection are utterly meaningless. The separation IS the notion of rejection.

RAJ: "Father, I'd rather see it my way. Don't call me. I'll call you." Rejection of your Father, rejection of your Source, and ultimately, rejection of your Identity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: As long as you TEACH this, you still believe it.

RAJ: Or conversely, as long as you believe it, you still teach it, because you teach what you believe. Your behavior expresses what you believe.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is NOT as God thinks, and you must think as He thinks if you are to know Him again.

RAJ: Mmmm. If you are to know Him again. You know what? There's something in it for you. Knowing Him again is inseparable from a Gift that you will experience and that Gift is remembering your Identity. So, it's not about puny little you acknowledging God, appreciating God, while you remain puny little you. It's not about puny little you engaging in adoration. It's about you reuniting with your Source so that the full Conscious Experience of What You Are comes back into your mind as realization, enhancing everything about you so that your full potential can come forth.

You must think as He thinks if you are to know Him again, and if you want to know your Self again. There must be a reconciliation that undoes the bill of divorcement. And when that bill of divorcement is annulled, you come into the full use of your Right Mind and wake up. And dreams and illusions cease.

This sounds pretty magnificent and impressive and major, if you will. But you know what? You don't have to somehow do this all at once. You can start out with two simple things. Say to others, "Thank you! Thank you for being here for me. Thank you for doing what you do." Remember, look them in the eye when you say it. Look them in the eye when you say it. And don't demean it by saying it in an offhanded way.

Teach only Love for that is What You Are. Don't take the bait that causes you to forget What You Are and causes you to react from a habituated place of automatic responses which are all defensive.

And I want to point out something else to you. When others engage in projection or when you engage in projection, but I'm primarily going to put it this way, when others engage in projection and project upon you the fact that they've forgotten Who They Are, and therefore can't see you except in a conflicted way, they will always call your ego into question. They will always make some remark that will twist what may have been a perfectly clear expression of Love into an opportunity to suggest that you're not the Presence of Love and that you are nothing but a collection of psychological responses which are less than the best. And they will suggest that your behavior occurred for some unsavory reason. And that's the invitation to take the bait and forget yourself that what you were expressing was Love and respond in like manner to their behavior.

So when you find someone minimizing you, misinterpreting you, and addressing you on the basis of the way they're seeing you in a reactive and uncomplimentary way, be very alert because they're doing exactly the opposite of what is healing. What is healing is to impersonalize the ego, to impersonalize the suggestions that the ego makes. Conversely, the use of projection is to personalize your behavior and twist it into something that it is not.

And of course, that's always experienced as insulting. "Oh!" Insulting to what? Insulting to nothing if you didn't take the bait. But if you take the bait and forget What You Are and forget what you were meaning, you will identify with the definition of yourself, and you will immediately move into defensive mode, attack mode, retaliation mode, and now you've both fallen into the ditch. And you're the blind leading the blind, which means that all that can follow is bumping into this, that, and the other thing, and skinning your shin, until someone remembers that they took the bait and then consciously steps back prior to that point remembering to join with the Holy Spirit in you so that everything that follows might be nothing less than the Expression of Love that can trigger your Brother's release from his need to project by personalizing something you have done on you. This is very important.

The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Uses of Projection

Any split in will MUST involve a rejection of part of it, and this IS...

RAJ: This is.

RAJ READING: ...the belief in separation. The wholeness of God, which IS His peace, cannot be appreciated EXCEPT by a whole mind,...

RAJ: An undivided mind, an unsplit mind, which recognizes the Wholeness of God's Creation.

RAJ READING: ...and BY this recognition, know its Creator. Exclusion and separation are synonymous, as are separation and dissociation. We have said before that the separation was and IS dissociation,...

RAJ: A bill of divorcement. "I choose no longer to be associated with you. I choose to imagine that I'm no longer associated with you. I choose to imagine that I can be, no longer be associated with you. And I choose to imagine that I am now no longer associated with you. See you later buddy. I'm on my way!"

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have said before that the separation was and IS dissociation, and also that, once it had occurred, projection became its main defense, or the device that KEEPS IT GOING. The reason, however, may not be as clear as you think.

In the ego's use of projection, to which we are obviously referring, what you project you disown, and therefore DO NOT BELIEVE IS YOURS.

RAJ: If you have an inferiority complex, or if you just feel inferior without it being full-blown into a complex, that is the lens through which you will observe everything. And everything that happens, everything that others say will be reflected to you in light of your sense of your inferiority. As a result, you will assume that others see you as inferior and will treat you accordingly. Mind you, when you feel inferior, you generally don't let yourself know that you're feeling inferior. You don't walk around saying, "I have an inferiority complex." You have blocked it out of your awareness, but you project it on your Brothers and Sisters and you see reflected in their behavior your unconscious self-definition.

Again.

RAJ READING: In the ego's use of projection, to which we are obviously referring, what you project you disown, and therefore DO NOT BELIEVE IS YOURS. You are EXCLUDING yourself by the very statement you are making that you are DIFFERENT from the one on whom you project. Since you have also judged AGAINST what you project, you continue to attack it because you have already attacked it BY projecting it. By doing this unconsciously, you try to keep the fact that you must have attacked yourself FIRST out of awareness, and thus imagine that you have made yourself safe.

RAJ: You've attacked yourself first. We've got to step all the way back to the first step away. You attacked yourself first by saying, "Father, I'd rather see it my way." You attacked yourself first by enacting a bill of divorcement, not realizing that in so doing you would remove from your awareness your Identity. And the loss of your Identity is the result of your bill of divorcement, your attack on God that ended up being an attack on you because you immediately began to suffer amnesia, which you're now in the process of emerging out of.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Projection will ALWAYS hurt you. It reinforces your belief in your own split mind, and its ONLY purpose is TO KEEP THE SEPARATION GOING. It is SOLELY a device of the ego to make you feel DIFFERENT from your brothers, and separated from them. The ego justifies this on the wholly spurious grounds that it makes you seem "better" than they are, thus obscuring your equality with them still further.

RAJ: How many of you have had the experience of a Brother speaking to you as though they are better than you? And how does that feel? Insulting. Insulting because you know that they aren't better than you. But you know what? You don't carry it far enough. You know they aren't better than you, but until you abandon the idea that they are worse than you because of this atrocious behavior that they're engaging in, you are doing exactly the same thing, and there's no opportunity for connection. And therefore, there's no opportunity for healing of a separation that isn't real. And this absolutely inhibits communion, Oneness with your Brother, Harmony.

Again, if they are projecting on you in this way, it doesn't mean that you become oblivious to the projection. It just means that you address it from that which is nothing more than your Right Mind so that you respond to the call for Love with Love.

You need to learn to emphasize a different word in the phrase "a call for Love." Right now you tend to emphasize the word "call," and the word "call" represents inappropriate, unloving behavior, hateful behavior, that your brother is engaging in that is a call for Love. It's like "Yeah, I see. I see what's going on here. This terrible behavior they're engaging in is a call for Love. Ooooh!" The word "Love" needs to be the thing emphasized. It's a call for Love. This shifts the attention from the Brother who's making the call to the Brother who should be responding with what is called for, Love. It shifts the attention to you and your capacity to respond with Love, to be the Presence of Love. Not a reactor to the one calling for Love in such an atrocious manner.

Again, this is difficult because it's a call for intimacy. If it's a call for you to be the Presence of Love, it's a call for you to be intimate. And you already have thousands of reasons not to be intimate, much less intimate in the face for this call for Love. You see what I'm saying? The emphasis gets put on the wrong word and the emphasis gets put on whatever the awful elements are of the call, and you become distracted from the presented opportunity for you to be the Presence of Love, the opportunity for you not to take the bait and forget to be the Presence of Love. And then, care enough to hang in there with this Brother or Sister until his or her apparent need to project is reduced and healed.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Projection and attack are inevitably related because projection is ALWAYS a means of justifying attack. Anger without projection is impossible.

RAJ: I'll tell you something else. Anger would be impossible if you had a sensationless body, just as fear would be impossible if you had a sensationless body. Both are supported and strengthened by your using your body to be the manifestation of emotion which you are introducing into the mix. It is not something that the call for Love ever introduces into the mix.

Your Brother's poor behavior does not call for anger or fear. Your interpretation of your Brother's protection and then your use of your body by creating sensations in it are what elicit anger, fear. It is what substantiates it. It's what aggravates it. And it's what moves you into a momentary focused insanity, loss of intelligence, which then you feel freely able to express and justified in expressing because of the way your decision and your creation of your body sensations has caused your Brother to appear to you as a threat to you.

And whether your Brother's behavior does need correction or not, this drama that you have engaged yourself and your body in has nothing to do with the correction of it. It has no means of causing a miracle to occur, a sudden shift of perception. And, in fact, it blocks it, and it confirms for you and your Brother the ongoing need for even further projection.

This may seem complex, but I know that you each understand it enough at this point for that understanding to grow within you so that you might see the way you are handling things, as well as the fact that you handle things in that way because, first of all, you took the bait and found yourself justified in forgetting What You Are and Who You Are. Thus causing you to forget to reach out to that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, the Holy Spirit, so that you might break the isolation with your capital "S" Self first so that then in the Experience of Love that fills you, you might break the separation with your Brother by hanging in there with him with Love until the correction occurs.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Projection will ALWAYS hurt you.

RAJ: How's that? Well, projection hurts you because it's the means by which you remain securely unconscious of the fact that you are suffering yourself from no longer knowing Who You Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It reinforces your belief in your own split mind, and its ONLY purpose is TO KEEP THE SEPARATION GOING.

RAJ: It's really an act of dishonesty. You are saying, "I refuse to take an honest look at what I am doing. I refuse to take an honest look at the fact that I am not independent." It's an unwillingness to say, and look at the fact, that you didn't create yourself, and you cannot be separate from your Source.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is SOLELY a device of the ego to make you feel DIFFERENT from your brothers, and separated from them. The ego justifies this on the wholly spurious grounds that it makes you seem "better" than they are, thus obscuring your equality with them still further. Projection and attack are inevitably related because projection is ALWAYS a means of justifying attack. Anger without projection is impossible.

RAJ: And conversely, without projection, Peace is possible. Without projection, self-honesty is possible. Without projection, you're in a position of being able to correct the mistake you've made, and turn to the Father and say, "Help." Or turn to the Holy Spirit and say, "Help." Or turn to your Brother and Sister and say, "Thank you for being here for me. Thank you for doing what you do." And you might say putting a new Spirit in the air. The Spirit of Christmas, the Spirit of the Christ Mind, the Spirit of the Divine One That You Are that you no longer want to be unconscious of.

I love you all.

If you all want to be agents for change in the new year, then stay conscious and be alert for every time that you're willing to take the bait and engage in the excitement of not totally destructive conflict with your Brother, the willingness to engage in the invigoration of a good tussle, even though hurt feelings will be the result. Certainly not clarification or healing.

So, I look forward to being with you, as the saying goes, next year. And in the meantime, please, do everything you can to alleviate yourself of the awkwardness and discomfort of saying, "Thank you for being here for me. Thank you for doing what you do." And contribute to the reduced discomfort of it and awkwardness of it by doing it often.

Why? Because they need it? No, because you need it. And they do need it. But be aware that it's a two-way street. You need to be the initiator of the Gift of Appreciation because your initiating it becomes your declaration, your behavioral declaration that you choose not to continue to contribute to yours and everyone else's ongoing sense of isolation.

I will stop there.

Thank you for being here for me.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Section – THE USES OF PROJECTION
Sparkly Book – p. 123

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet as well.

The section we're reading is entitled, "The Uses of Projection." And usually the word "projection," the uses of the word "projection" tend to have derogatory meanings. "Well he's projecting," meaning he's disowning a part of himself and inappropriately projecting it out there on his world, or his Brothers or his Sisters, not seeing what he's doing. We're going to talk about projection with non-derogatory meanings here.

And we'll go right into the book.

RAJ READING: The ego uses projection ONLY to distort your perception both of yourself AND your brothers. The process begins by excluding something THAT exists in you which you do not want, and leads directly to excluding you from your brothers.

RAJ: Of course, the thing in you that you're excluding is your Source, your Father. "But Father, I'd rather see it my way. But Father, I'd rather do it my way." And as we've said, you engaged in an imaginary procedure of getting a bill of divorcement from your Father. And when you did that, you found that you became Identity-less, because you were minus that which gave you and gives you your Identity.

And so, because your Identity couldn't truly disappear and you couldn't cease being What You Really Are, your Identity became held in trust for you while you engaged in this fantasy of independence, and it became known as the Holy Spirit. So, all that wasn't, and all that isn't, included in whatever your current definition of yourself is... whatever is not included in whatever your current definition of yourself is, is all the rest of you that you have disowned, disengaged from, gotten a bill of divorcement from, and it remains permanently in Place as the Rest Of What You Divinely Are right in the middle of you as the Altar to which you are to turn in order to experience the Atonement and come Home. And it's called the Holy Spirit. And the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind.

Now the process begins by excluding something that exists in you which you do not want, and leads directly to excluding you from your Brothers. Well, inevitably in your divorcement from the Father you find yourself alone. Your Infinite All-Inclusiveness has disappeared from your conscious experience of being and you think that your aloneness is isolation and that everything but the identity you are imaginatively giving to yourself is not you, everything else is not you, including your Brothers. And so inevitably, in your inability to recognize yourself in your Brothers and your Brothers in yourself, you defend yourself against them and you all defend yourselves against each other.

And you even have managed to come to a point where you work together in your self-defense against each other so that you have a certain degree of harmony through what I'm going to call negative cooperation. It's negative cooperation because it's cooperation based on the precept that you are all different from each other. You are therefore alien to each other. And in recognizing this, you can negotiate agreements so that you don't harm or injure each other too greatly.

So your negotiated harmony is itself a defense against the almost absolute belief that you are energizing that you and everyone else are foreign to each other, and therefore incompatible with each other. And that's not real harmony. And that's not real cooperation. That is all of you existing in a fantasy that blinds you to What You Divinely Are. And therefore, it constitutes a false peace.

Now I'm going to be very clear. The whole thing's a pile of shit. [a little audience amusement] The whole concept is crap. This whole way of existing is pure illusion, or I will say, pure delusion. And none of it is going on at all. You don't deserve to live together in harmony as aliens who have refined themselves to the point of having developed a conscience, and then a capacity to care, and who have refined yourselves to the point where you are living in elegant harmony with the purest of motives and the most excellent of attitudes. Because as long as you think that you are aliens who have succeeded in becoming true friends, you're still caught in the illusion. The fundamental basis of your behavior toward each other is based upon a lie.

Now you deserve to experience harmony because that's the only thing that's really going on. At this very moment, that's the only thing that's going on and what keeps you from experiencing it is your mutually-agreed-upon definition that you're just humans, that you're just a hunk of matter walking around with a sentient brain that makes everything move. And your nature is basically human, which when it's used in that sense is basically animal, and therefore at the bottom line your basic motivation is survival, and survival of the fittest. And therefore, it postulates the excellence of the fittest and the non-excellence of the non-fit. So now we've got the non-fits who have to march on Washington and fight for their rights, their equal rights, until finally everyone develops enough of a social conscience that they stop isolating the non-fits and say, "We embrace you. We will treat you as equals. Blah. Blah. Blah." And now you have a better level of harmony, but it's still crap.

Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God. Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God, not "will be." Now are you the Ultimate. Now is each One of You the Christ, the direct in this moment Expression of God. The Expression brand new in this moment of God embodying Himself Infinitely. And there's not a bit of "humanness" to you in the sense of animalness, in the sense of physicalness. Everything about you is pure Spirit.

Part of the Atonement is the shift in your awareness whereby you come to a realization of your now Divinity that has nothing to do with your mutually-agreed-upon definitions about what everything is and your purely fantastic imaginary meanings that you have given yourselves as something independent from your Source.

Now, you've got to be careful. You've got to be alert because as you begin to reach out to the Light, so to speak, as you reach out for inspiration and the influx of enlightenment and others notice it, you're going begin to hear them say: "The Light is coming! The Light is coming! Close your eyes everyone! Close your eyes! The Light is coming! If you see the Light you will forget how to exist in the dark and you will lose this rich heritage we have established between ourselves of how to get along together in the dark. The Light is coming! The Light is coming! Close your eyes! Close your eyes! We can't afford to forget how to be together in the dark. We can't afford to abandon the skill that we've developed, the lifetimes that mankind has had to go through in order to arrive at a reasonable existence in the dark. You must value the past. You must value everything that we have done to manage to get to exist this well in the dark. Don't let it be lost in the Light."

Now, not only will you find others responding to the coming of the Light that they see in you that way, your very own ego conditionings will arise in you and say: "Stop this. Stop reaching for the Light. You can't afford to forget who you are in the dark. You can't afford to forget who you have come to know yourself to be in the dark. You've worked very hard for the clarity you have about yourself as a dark being. Don't let your best sense of your identity that you are experiencing now be swallowed up in whatever this awareness of your self will be in the Light, because you know that once the Light comes the darkness will be gone, and your darkness identity will disappear forever. Be sane here. Don't be so radical as to be willing to abandon your identity as a dark being. That's irrational and insane." One way or another, that's what all of your egos are doing. Every step forward that you take toward the Light, so to speak, is met with reluctance and resistance.

But I will give you a helpful hint. Pay attention to the deep feel of the Light, the deep feel of the Clarity that is becoming illuminated in you as you persist in turning toward the Altar, in turning to the Holy Spirit, in yielding to the Father's Will. Pay attention to the deep feeling of the inspiration that comes. Pay attention to the feel of the deep illumination, the inspiration, because it's not just intellectual information. It's as though sensation is returning at the deepest levels to the Christ That You Are and registering with you. And as a result, there is always accompanying it an assurance, a steadfastness, a stability, a groundedness in more universal terms that you begin to feel associated with you. And this is something which has never come from the definitions and meanings you have independently applied to yourselves.

This more universal groundedness includes within Itself what can only be described as the courage to violate the definitions you have given to everything and to violate the insistence of others that you not rock the boat by embracing something that goes beyond the mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

The returning of Sanity is recognizably good, solid, stable, like an infinite Rock of Gibraltar. And even though you feel it growing minutely, as though sensation is returning to a small part of you, you can recognize Its Godness, Its Divinity, Its Reality with a capital "R". And you need to pay attention to this feeling so that as the egos of others and your very own ego conditioning tells you, "Close your eyes! Close your eyes! The Light's coming! Close your eyes!", you may say with courage that's coming from a more universal place: "No. No. I am going to continue to keep my eyes open and invite the Light. I am going to continue to turn within to the Holy Spirit and inquire of it What Truth Is rather than relying upon what all of us together have decided truth is.

"And when you tell me that if I do this I am going to go crazy, or when you tell me that if I persist in this you are going to get very angry and you will give me hell for it, I will persist in keeping my eyes open because you know what? In spite of what you say, and in spite of the so-called rules that we've all set up by means of our mutually-agreed-upon definitions, the Light that I'm beginning to sense within me as the sensation of my True Identity emerging in my Awareness, it tells me that the sense of conflict that you are suggesting you will confront me with, or the sense of conflict that you are suggesting I will run into in my mind because I'm on the verge of insanity, is something that only seems to have existence as long as I am refusing to pay attention to this Light, this inspiration, this returning deep sensory Awareness of my Divinity is telling me.

"I am going to stop using all of the rules we've set up together. I'm going to stop using and relying upon all of the safeguards that we have put in place together to save us in the face of a fundamentally hostile existence, and I'm going to risk the chance that when I don't respond the way we've all agreed we ought to respond, I'm going to risk the chance that that will result in the problems we've all been seeing together dissolving, because they weren't real in the first place, because that's the promise I am feeling in the increasing sensory Awareness that I'm having of my Divinity as a result of my turning to the Holy Spirit, turning to the Altar within to the Light within."

So, the use of projection allowed you to dissociate yourself from the Father, and then dissociate yourself from your Brothers and Sisters and indeed all of Creation. That's what projection did for you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have learned, however, that there is another use of projection. Every ability of the ego has a better counterpart because its abilities are directed by the mind, which has a better...

RAJ: Capital V.

RAJ READING: ...Voice.

RAJ: You will remember that I have said you are all Christs believing that you are not the Christ and behaving according to your belief. So now you're behaving as though you're not the Christ, but you're using all of your Christly capacities to do it because just believing that you're not the Christ doesn't make you cease being What You Are.

So, it says here:

RAJ READING: Every ability of the ego has a better counterpart because its abilities are directed by the mind,...

RAJ: And there's only one mind whether it's being used well or used poorly, and it's the Mind of Christ. It's the Christ-Mind, which is the only Mind any of you are at the moment whether you're using it constructively or destructively, poorly or well, consciously or unconsciously.

Again.

RAJ READING: Every ability of the ego has a better counterpart because its abilities are directed by the mind, which has a better...

RAJ: Capital V.

RAJ READING: ...Voice. The Holy Spirit as well as the ego utilizes projection, but since their goals are opposed, so is the result.

RAJ: So there's a better counterpart to projection of the ego which all of you frown upon, and that is the projection of the Holy Spirit, which when you begin to turn toward the Altar within and desire to know What Truth Really Is and you listen, the Holy Spirit provides to you why? So that you may look with new eyes at your Brother and Sister and your world. But what does that mean, "looking with new eyes"? It means sending out new messengers, doesn't it? So that your world might reflect back to you the messengers you're sending.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit begins by perceiving YOU as perfect. KNOWING this perfection is shared, He recognizes it in others, thus strengthening it in both. Instead of anger this arouses love for both BECAUSE IT ESTABLISHES INCLUSION. Perceiving equality, the Holy Spirit perceives equal needs. This invites Atonement automatically because Atonement IS the one need which, in this world, IS universal. To perceive yourself this way is the ONLY way in which you can find happiness in the world.

RAJ: That doesn't mean it's the only way you can experience happiness in this god-awful place called the world. It means that anywhere at any time the only way you can experience happiness is when you're sending out Messengers of Love, when you're sending out messengers that recognize equality, when you're sending out messengers that recognize God there. You see? That's the only way you're going to be able to experience happiness in the world. That's the only way you're going to be able to experience happiness in the Kingdom of Heaven, which is what you have been looking at and calling derogatorily "the world."

RAJ READING: To perceive yourself this way is the ONLY way in which you can find happiness in the world. That is because it is the acknowledgment that you are NOT in this world, for the world IS unhappy.

RAJ: In other words, it's an acknowledgement that you're not in the definition that you've all created which was based upon an unconsciousness of its Source because you were choosing to be unconscious of your Source. And both sources are One—God. You see, as I said, when you say to your Brothers:

"I am not going to react to your threats of violence or harm to me if I disobey the mutually-agreed-upon definitions that we've all signed in imaginary blood and fellowship and for eternity. I am not going to abide by these because this almost sensory Awareness deep within me of What I Divinely Am is making me aware that threat itself, that vulnerability itself, which you are threatening me with is part-and-parcel of the fundamental premise we've based our definitions upon, which is that this existence has nothing to do with God, that it just happened in the middle of something by chance. And there's nothing natural about it. And there's nothing about us that is fundamentally unified. We're a haphazard lot who through some amazing capacity we came upon have been able, in spite of our alienness to each other, to come to mutual agreements that have allowed us to experience harmony and cooperation.

"The fundamental premise that all of this is a fluke and unnatural, and that therefore existence is nothing more than a reduced chance of harm coming to us in what is a basically hostile existence, this is not true. And I'm not going to join in affirming or reaffirming it because the Light that is illuminating me from within says that the hostility is a result, the vulnerability is a result, of believing a fundamental lie and basing everything upon it. And your invitation to me to not abandon these mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and your threat to violate me if I do, are as false as every other assumption that has been built upon the fundamental lie. And therefore, I will persist in inviting in the Light, and yielding to the Light, and leaning into It so that It might support me, rather than our well-established mutually-agreed-upon definitions."

So, again.

RAJ READING: To perceive yourself this way is the ONLY way in which you can find happiness in the world. That is because it is the acknowledgment that you are NOT in this world, for the world IS unhappy.

RAJ: And it's an acknowledgement that you're not in this world because this world is one that has been made-up out of a mind unconscious of what it is and unconscious of its Source, and unconscious of what it's using in order to make-up its imaginative world of definitions. And this Christ That You Are has never been in this world that you're suffering from and isn't right now.

You know what? It's just a damn good projector. Or shall I say, a divinely good projector?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: How else can you find joy in a joyless place EXCEPT by realizing that you are NOT there? You cannot be anywhere that God did not put you, and God created you as part of Him. That is both WHERE you are and WHAT you are. It is COMPLETELY unalterable.

RAJ: If it's completely unalterable, it hasn't been altered. And anything less than that that you seem to be experiencing isn't what is happening, or let us say, it's not all that is happening. None of you are having any totally original false experiences. You're all having distorted experiences of something Real because the only thing in front of you to distort or alter is God Infinitely Being God called Creation. So everything that you're seeing with a little twist or bias applied to it so that you think it's your creation, or you think it's what you have decided it is, hasn't stopped being What It Divinely Is.

And that's why I say, look at the flowers, look at the table, look at the trees, look at your Brother with innocent eyes and curiosity asking God or the Holy Spirit, "What is the Truth here? What's the capital 'M' Meaning of this which has to be some aspect of Creation, even though I have conditioned myself to see it with such a bias applied to it that it doesn't look like it has anything to do with God at all? What is the Truth here?" You see?

Again.

RAJ READING: You cannot be anywhere that God did not put you, and God created you as part of Him. That is both WHERE you are and WHAT you are. It is COMPLETELY unalterable. It is total inclusion. You cannot change it now or ever.

RAJ: And I will add: And, therefore, you never have! Therefore, what you believe something to be, if it's not what God is Being, you never succeeded in creating it, you never succeeded in making it Real. But you have succeeded in fooling yourself enough to be able to ignore What God Is Being there in preference to the hit you get, the ego hit you get at being able to have an experience, or thinking that you're being able to have an experience, that God did not create. And, again it's a bunch of crap. Another way of saying it is it's insanity.

How is the fearful, horrible world that an insane one sees corrected? By his perception changing, because the world never became what he thought. Atonement is you coming back into your Right Mind. And you coming back into your Right Mind is a result of paying attention to the fire in the middle of you that could never be put out, the Altar, the Light that is the Holy Spirit that is nothing more than your Right Mind that didn't go anywhere, and inviting it in even though it seems as though you might end up shifting allegiance from who you know you are to something [small laugh] that only God knows what it is, it's certainly not you. And yet, it is you. And as you invite it in and embrace it, you are embracing your Right Mind, you are embracing your Self, and the experience does not constitute a loss of identity. It constitutes a new, expanded, all-inclusive, non-exclusive Conscious Experience of Being.

And how do you... how do you make this begin to happen? You begin to make it happen, you begin to cause the Movement to occur of this shift by deciding to abandon your best definition of your Brother and Sister, to abandon your best definition and daring to say, "I wish to have this one be the object of my affection. Father, help me see this one as he is or she is. Help me to see this plant or this tree as it is so that I might acknowledge it in Your Sight, or with Your Sight, from Your Viewpoint."

Why? So that you begin to send out Messengers of Love, sending out Messengers of the Acknowledgement of the Truth about that one or that thing. Why? So that you engage in the one act that breaks your isolation, that undoes your bill of divorcement.

Again.

RAJ READING: It is total inclusion. You cannot change it now or ever. It is forever true. It is not a belief, but a FACT.

RAJ: You see, you don't want just better beliefs. You want Truth. You want the Facts.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Anything that God created is as true as He is. Its truth lies only in its perfect inclusion in Him Who alone IS perfect. To deny this in any way is to deny yourself AND Him, since it is impossible to accept one WITHOUT the other.

RAJ: And there it is. When you denied the Father, when you got this imaginary bill of divorcement, you not only lost the Father apparently, you lost your Identity.

Again.

RAJ READING: To deny this in any way is to deny yourself AND Him, since it is impossible to accept one WITHOUT the other.

The perfect equality of the Holy Spirit's perception is the counterpart of the perfect equality of God's knowing. The ego's perception HAS no counterpart in God, but the Holy Spirit remains the bridge between perception and knowledge. By enabling you to use perception in a way that PARALLELS knowledge, you will ultimately meet it and KNOW it. The ego would prefer to believe that this meeting is impossible, yet it is YOUR perception which the Holy Spirit guides.

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: The ego would prefer to believe that this meeting is impossible, yet it is YOUR perception which the Holy Spirit guides. You might remember that the human eye perceives parallel lines AS IF they meet in the distance, which is the same as in the future, if time and space are one dimension. Your perception WILL end where it began. EVERYTHING meets in God because everything was created BY Him and IN Him.

RAJ: Do you realize that you couldn't possibly seem to have one false idea? You couldn't seem to have one small belief. You couldn't possibly have the most minute misunderstanding if it weren't for the fact that God exists and you're the Christ. I see some shaking their heads. The only way you can seem to have an illusion is if there's Truth. And the only way you can seem to yourselves to be humans having false perceptions is because you are the Christ. There couldn't be a part, there couldn't be a partiality if there weren't a wholeness.

And if you all want to take the Conscious Experience of Being which is without limit and you want to narrow it down to a few dozen things, we'll say, that you want to occupy your mind with, and you focus your attention on those ten or twelve things so that you're no longer paying attention with focus on the rest, you can seem to create for yourself an illusory sensation of existence. That sensation being one of a mind attentive to ten or twelve things only, and also a mind which no longer knows What It Is. But remember that this is the Christ focusing its attention consciously on purpose in a manner which causes this Christ to forget Who It Is without ceasing to Be What It Is. Is that clear?

So, the Atonement, you coming back into your Right Mind, is not a matter of growth of some puny, little piss-ant mortal into a Divine One. And there's not a great distance that needs to be traversed. It requires one thing: the momentary realization that you're not here, you're not in the world, you're not in your definition. That you are the Eternal, Infinite One That God Is Being right now using its capacities to create this highly-focused and limited awareness of All That Is.

You believe that you are in the middle of that finite focus. But you aren't. You're still the Infinite Christ. You're still the Presence of God being the Wholeness of Mind That God Is right where you are.

So I will keep saying this in many different ways until the light bulb goes on, and you say, "Oh! Yeah!" And you let go of the tininess, you let go of the focus of your attention, and the commitment you bring to confirming the tininess and maintaining it in its tininess, and your insistence upon keeping your eyes closed as the Light comes, as the Light comes.

"Here come the judge! [escalating loudness] Here come the judge! Here come the Light! Close your eyes everyone! Here comes the judge. Oh! Here come the judgment. Here come the Light! Oh! Here come the judgment. The Light will uncover [small laugh] my insanity." No! The Light will uncover your Sanity. The Light will exonerate you by showing you that nothing that you thought you did in opposition to God by saying, "But Father, I'd rather do it my way," that none of it ever happened as a fact, and therefore there is nothing for you to be held accountable for and there is no debt for you to pay because you can't be punished for what you never did.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God created His Sons by extending His thought and retaining the extensions of His Thought in His Mind.

RAJ: You see, God did not extend His Thoughts and project them outside His Mind. That's what the ego does. God extended His Thoughts and retained the Extensions of His Thought in His Mind.

RAJ READING: ALL His Thoughts...

RAJ: Which means every single one of you, and every leaf, every petal, every tree, every... every thing.

RAJ READING: ...are thus perfectly united within themselves and with each other because they were created neither partially nor in part. The Holy Spirit enables you TO PERCEIVE THIS WHOLENESS NOW.

RAJ: Not off in the distant future. Not after there's been a tremendous soul growth, but right now, right here because here and now are the Kingdom of Heaven. Here and now are Reality. Here and now is God Being Everything. And What It Is In God's Truth is What The Christ That You Are at this very moment is meant to be experiencing and acknowledging and loving and conscious of so that you send out the Messengers of Love, you send out the Messengers of the Acknowledgement of What Is True. The Acknowledgement of God is glorifying God, as we talked about, now.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You can no more pray for yourselves alone than you can find joy for yourself alone.

RAJ: Likewise, you can no more condemn yourselves alone than you can find joy for yourself alone. Everything you do, you don't do alone. And while you're imagining that you're separate, everything you do is a projection. You project your affection to that alien over there who happens to be pretty cute. You see what I mean? Or you project your judgment out there. Whatever you do to yourself, you do to everyone else. And you project it to that other one out there who is outside of your mind, which means you are not recognizing yourself in them. Which means that in actuality it's as though the Christ That You Are that is one with every single one of his Brothers and Sisters and all of Creation because it's All One In God is saying, "That Brother out there is not me. I am choosing to imaginatively see him as different from me, and I am... I'm doing it very well. And he really does seem to be out there to me. And boy is he ugly."

AUDIENCE: [scattered laughter]

RAJ: "I wouldn't want to be seen with him. I only want to be seen with the beautiful people, because that will be good for my reputation." And yet, you know what? The beautiful person that that ego finds will be somebody that the ego that's looking for the beautiful person doesn't feel equal to. And so they will be embracing a beautiful alien, a beautiful different kind of being, because when you're in whatever fantasy you're in, you don't feel good about yourself because once again you don't have any identity of your own. You see?

But still, understand this. This is all being done by the Christ. You don't stop being the Christ just because you are behaving in an un-Christlike way. But when you are the Christ behaving in an un-Christlike way, you forfeit your power. You forfeit your power or capacity to see yourself truly. And you forfeit your capacity to see Creation truly. And therefore, you forfeit the Joy that is inseparable from your being the Christ. You forfeit the power to be co-creators with God. And thus, whatever you do doesn't actually get done except in the imagination.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Prayer is the restatement of INCLUSION, directed by the Holy Spirit under the laws of God. God created you to create. You cannot EXTEND His Kingdom until you know of its wholeness.

RAJ: In other words, nothing you do will be Real until you take the steps necessary in order to abandon projection and engage in extension. And it's very simple. You will not feel/know what to extend until you let the Father, or the Holy Spirit, inform you of What The Truth Is, because when you know the Truth, that is what you will spontaneously extend, as a light bulb going on. "Ah! Ha! That's what it is!" And when you say, "That's what it is," the messenger has gone out. And in that instant, the messenger will come back confirming it because your thought is parallel with God's. In other words, there is no bias applied to it that gets it just a little bit out of sync with the Truth.

Now it may seem as though your world is feeding back to you information that says there are urgencies and emergencies of various kinds that call for you to respond with fear, with emotion, with rejection, with fear, something other than your choice to let the call remind you to turn within to the Holy Spirit so that you might gather the Truth of things from where the Truth is available to you, so that you might extend the Acknowledgement of Truth rather than project your conditioned reaction to the illusion. And this is very important.

"I will. Okay. Okay. I will. I'll get to the Truth of this, but first I've got to deal with the ruckus that's going on. If I don't deal with the ruckus that's going on, it will mean that I'm insensitive. It will mean that I'm not compassionate. It will mean that I have no humanity in me whatsoever." But remember this, folks. You can't correct the problem from the level of the problem. You can't correct the flaws in the mutually-agreed-upon definitions from the level of the mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

If you want to be sensitive, compassionate, humane then go to the Altar immediately so that you don't get churned up emotionally. And so that your feelings might arise out of the influx of Truth that the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind infills you with so that then your actions constitute an extension of the Acknowledgement of Truth that elicits an entirely different response and effect in your world that will be recognized as loving, thoughtful, humane, considerate.

"Oh, but the problem is real! The problem is dire. It calls for a spontaneous knee-jerk reaction, or response. It calls for me to respond from my best common sense. It requires...." What you're saying is that it requires you to respond having neglected to go to the place where the response that would correct the situation comes from, which is your reunion with that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, the Holy Spirit, God.

And you must get it through your heads that the only truly corrective response is one that comes from that joining. One that comes not from assessing the human condition, but one that comes from quickly [finger snap] turning within and saying, "Father, what do I need to know here? Father, what is the Truth here that will correct the situation? I wish to be the Place where the Truth that would correct the situation can shine through." And that needs to become your knee-jerk response.

That needs to become your knee-jerk response: to check in with the Father [finger snap] instantly because you've done it so often that it has become a habit. Right now your habit is to engage in everything with reaction, whether it's a reaction of joy, or a reaction of fear, or a reaction of vulnerability, a reaction of depression. You see what I'm saying?

And I'm saying that nothing that you might be faced with, or have been faced with recently, nothing requires you to neglect to go to the Holy Spirit first. And nothing will correct an emergency... nothing will correct an emergency that doesn't arise out of inclusion. And inclusion will not arise from your current conditioned minds, your current conditioned thinking.

Correction will come from the inspiration that infills you because you have turned instantaneously to the Source of the Knowledge of Truth so that it might dawn in your mind, so that you might see it with your eyes, and having seen it you are your eyes extending the Acknowledgement of Truth into your world which is not outside of your mind and is not outside of you, but is some aspect of the Infinitude of Your Being so that the whole corrective procedure, if you will, is one of conscious, inclusive Wholeness.

Now mind you, this is not something you will... these are not factors that you'll keep together in your mind, because you won't be engaged in control at all. This isn't something for you to get your mind around so you can control it. It's the Christ State of Mind that is your Very Being at this moment, even though you're not experiencing it. And all of what I described is a simultaneous, automatic extension that is unavoidable in the face of the Conscious Experience of Knowing God's Truth, of Knowing the Presence of God in what is in your mind and what you're experiencing.

The Christ Mind sends out Messengers of Truth, projects the Acknowledgement of Truth, but never projecting it outside of Itself, so that the act is an act of integrated infinite Wholeness, Oneness, that is demonstrated, if you will, in the Conscious Experience of Undivided Perfection, and therefore the complete absence of conflict—what would be called healing.

And I will leave you with that for the evening. I love you all.

AUDIENCE: We love you, too.

RAJ: I look forward to being with you here next week. I look forward to your recognizing my being with you throughout the week. Remember to include me. Don't forget about me, in other words.

AUDIENCE: We won't.

RAJ: Thank you.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet as well.

Before we go into the book, I observe that for many who are studying the Course, there is not a lot of pleasure, a lot of joy being experienced as a result of their study of the Course. In so many words it says that you are suffering because you have, you know, gotten this bill of divorcement from your Father and lost your awareness of your Identity and have gone into a mode of being that is one of control and manipulation and defense and by God that must make you awful. And you had better be constantly looking into what's wrong with you so that you might let go of what's wrong with you. I've said that you are all Christs behaving as though you're not the Christ and believing your behavior.

Now, one could look at that negatively, but don't forget that I said you're all Christs. That's the Truth right now. You are what the Father is expressing of Himself right where you are. No matter what you have believed, the Truth about you has remained the Truth.

Now, how often have you heard me say, "Go within and ask of the Holy Spirit what's wrong with you?" How many times have you heard me say go within and ask, "What is the lie here?" Never! The question is, "What is the Truth here? What is the Truth there? What is the Truth about the leaf? What is the Truth about the glass-topped table? What's the Truth about the tree outside? What's the Truth about my Brother? What's the Truth about me?" It's exactly the opposite of some internal witch hunt where you're uncovering your errors and your flaws and everything that's wrong with you. You want to know What The Truth Is. You want to know what the good news is.

How many of you are going to seriously sit down with self-discipline and persistence to be constantly asking, "What is wrong with me?" Some of you with a masochistic bent may do that, but, the fact is you don't want to know what's wrong with you. You don't want to know what's wrong with you and so you will not really listen for an answer because the answer will convict you. And so whatever attention you bring to that task of wanting to learn what's wrong with you will be half-hearted. Or you will supply resistance. And you will be miserable and those around you will not see the Light in your eyes. And if they learn from you that your serious state is a result of your studying A Course In Miracles, they will likely not pick the Course up if it's going to turn someone who had been a relatively cheerful person into a serious and somber, obviously unhappy individual.

Now, this is not to say that you don't have things to learn. It is not to say that you are not making mistakes that will need to be uncovered so that you can set them aside. But instead of asking yourself, "What am I doing wrong? What flaw is there in me that needs to be corrected?", you can ask, "What do I need to know in order to be free of the misery I'm experiencing? What is the Light-filled answer, the Joy-filled answer, the resolving answer to the problem I'm experiencing?"

You know, people can stand around and say, "Well, you're creating the problem for yourself, you know. You are creating the problem for yourself. You are the culprit!" Well, that'll knock the wind out of your sails and your spirit. But if that person said to you, "You know, if you'll go within and ask this, it will help. 'If there is....' This is the question. 'If there is something I am doing to block my good, would you please reveal it to me together with the answer as to how to set it aside?'" You see, now the focus isn't on you and what you're doing wrong, or you and the way you're creating your problems for yourself. The focus is on the answer. The focus is on that which will resolve. And it includes the willingness to see whatever there might be going on in you that's inhibiting you from experiencing your freedom.

There needs to be less finger-pointing at you and you and you and other people, and more and more finger-pointing toward the Truth that will set you free. It doesn't say the Truth will set you free from all the awful things you're doing. It's the Truth will set you free. You're in there and the correction of the problem is embraced in that attitude, but the finger is pointing at Truth and freedom. Do you see the difference?

And you can bind yourself and others unnecessarily by where you're giving your attention and focus. You know you're miserable. Or you know you're suffering. You know you're in pain. You know you're ill. No one needs to tell you, "You're ill." Everyone needs to tell you, "You may be old, but you don't need to be. It's an illegitimate imposition upon you and you deserve to be experiencing freedom from it. Let's give our attention to gaining the freedom."

If you do that and you begin to experience healing and resolution of problems, the process of awakening will become a more enjoyable one. You will have a more positive attitude during the day and in your involvement with others. And you will find that waking up is something you can dare to be genuinely curious about. You can become genuinely curious about what the poinsettia really means. Or you can be curious to find out what your liver or your bladder or your uterus means divinely speaking, so that what it doesn't mean can disappear from your experience.

Well you're having a problem with your uterus, or you're having a problem with your bladder, or whatever else, asking, "What am I... What am I doing to create this for myself? What is there about me that would find justification for creating this for myself?" Do you see how this is a witch hunt and this is a negative, judgmental approach?

I'll tell you something else. When you ask for healing, turn the need for healing over to the Holy Spirit, praying to be healed. And let that be the first part of your prayer. And the second part of your prayer should be, "And if there is anything I need to know, if there is anything I am doing to contribute to this that I need to be aware of, please illuminate it to me so that I might consciously, intentionally set it aside."

But don't assume that the correction of every problem calls for a conscious correction of you or of your thinking. Maybe the problem is not because of some focused, negative attitude or idea that you are embracing about yourself or a Brother that is causing tension that needs to be seen and corrected in your mind and released. Sometimes it's just fear. Just the feeling of being vulnerable which when you open up to the answer constitutes you opening up to the Father's Love. And in opening up, opening the door and being less defended, the Father's Love can register with you and in the Presence of that Love, the fear disappears. And in the disappearing of the fear, the disease or illness fades. And there was no specific thought on your part that needed to be weeded out and corrected.

Waking up is not about finding fault with your Brother or with yourself. It's about finding the Truth about your Brother and yourself. And if you will remember that, the Light will come back into your eyes, the twinkle, and your spirits will be lifted. And you will become more curious, undefendedly curious. And there will be anticipation of clarification and insight and new conscious experiences of yourself and your world and your Brothers and Sisters. And it will be called healing. Physical healing. Healing of relationships. Healing of your reluctance to embrace the world so that you might find God there, instead of what others have taught you it is and what you think your experience has taught you that it is. I am encouraging you all today to let the Light in, to lighten up.

Don't let your process of awakening be one of a constant, internal witch hunt wherein you find out just what awful things you're doing. The only awful thing any of you is doing is that you're looking at everything alone, or you're looking at everything in the context of what you think it is and what all of your Brothers and Sisters have determined it is. And you're not looking at it with God. You're not looking at it with your capital "V" Vision. The Vision, the capital "V" Vision that You The Christ is, not has but is.

And the correction of this problem lies in accessing that Vision that you are. And that's what we're talking about when we say turn to the Altar, go within, turn toward the Altar, lean into the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind, lean in to the Christ That You Are, and gather the facts about everything from Its Vision—your True Vision. Doing this returns you to your Right Mind. Or you could say returns your Right Mind to you.

And you're not found guilty of anything. So let there be more happy inquisitiveness. Let your waking up remain in the realm of the good news, in the realm of delight, in the realm of innocence to be uncovered in you, not guilt. Let's stop wasting time pointing out the flaws in others on the premise that that's the practice of love and that's the means by which healing can occur. [whispered] No.

Let's start pointing out the Truth in each other in a manner that makes others feel safe enough to abandon their fear. And even safe enough to take a look at what they might be doing that's blocking them from standing in receipt of the Father's Love, blocking them from standing in receipt of all of the Kingdom that has been given to him or her. And if there's an uncovering of a flaw, let it arise from the Holy Spirit, because not only will the motive be Love, it will find expression in a manner that is disarming to the ego which is already standing on guard in defense of itself.

If you see someone on a trek going from one place to another and you can see that there is a pitfall ahead of them that they can't see, you can yell at them, "Don't go there!" in a commanding, authoritative way, because you can see the truth that there's a pitfall ahead and you don't want them to fall into it. You can even say, "Don't be insane and continue in that direction!" and thereby call that one's integrity into question when all they're doing is just putting one foot in front of the other, not bothering anybody. Or you can say, "Don't go that way because about 15 feet ahead of you and around to the left, there's a pitfall. It would be better for you to go to the right, and then go forward about a hundred feet, and then continue on your way. Have a good time." You see?

Also, don't use yourself as the butt of judgment. "You're really stupid." Or it would come as, "Boy, am I ever stupid. Ahh. I probably shouldn't start out on this trek at all because I'm bound to run into pitfalls, and there won't be anybody there to tell me to watch out. No need for me to borrow trouble. I'll just stay home. The cards are stacked against me. My mindsets are stupid. Nothing ever works for me. What's the use? I'll stay home and watch HBO. And I just won't engage in life." And so there you end up being the butt of your own judgments. No.

What is the Truth about you? What is it appropriate for you to be doing today? Is it appropriate for me to go out? If it's appropriate for me to go out, what is it appropriate for me to do? In other words, what is it appropriate for me to do that will uncover to me the Birthright, my Birthright that my Father has established in me? What is it appropriate for me to do today that will constitute an Experience of Joy, an experience of enjoyment? What is it appropriate for me to do today that will uncover the good in me and the good in my Brothers and Sisters? Now that's... that's a different sort of question.

And to sum it up, you could put it this way. "I intellectually understand that I am the Christ, that I am the absolutely perfect Expression of God that God is expressing at this very instant. I understand this intellectually even though I do not have the experience of it. And based on that idea which I hope is the Truth, I want to know: What should I do today? Where should I go so that this Birthright of mine as the Christ will be more fully present and available to me to experience? And so that my Brothers and Sisters might be blessed by behavior from me that more fully embodies the Truth about me that I am the Christ, not some sinner who got a bill of divorcement and is thereby experiencing eternal trouble because he was naughty." You see?

Your day, you might even say your future sits in front of you holding for you your Conscious Experience of the Kingdom of Heaven and of you as the Christ That You Are. And waking up is a result of giving your interest and your curiosity and your attention to the fuller Experience of the Truth about you; not of finding out every little frigging flaw or false belief that you're entertaining.

Because I'll tell you something. When you're curious to know the Truth and you open up to it and it begins to filter in, it's going to make obvious to you where you've been mistaken. You'll say, "Wow. That's... this is the Truth." And you will feel it and experience the Truthfulness of it. And then you'll say, "Wow! And I used to believe such-and-such." Used to. Because now you know the Truth and you don't believe such-and-such any more. You can see that it was false.

And you release it in favor of the Experience of Truth you're having. Your flaws will be uncovered not by going in search for them, but by asking to know What The Truth Is. And when the Truth is revealed, it uncovers the falsity of things you had believed. And your release and the apparent loss of those falsities will be a non-event in the face of the Truth that you now feel and know.

The Experience of Truth removes your capacity to believe a lie. The Presence of Truth removes your capacity to continue to believe a lie. Let the Truth do the search. Let the Truth do the hunt. It's like the Light. It goes in where the darkness was and you can't see the darkness anymore. You don't have to go look for the dark corners of yourself. Turn toward the Light. Let the Light fill you and the dark corners will be gone. That's a happier process and it's consistent with what Awakening truly means. I just desire for each one of you to not find any of this to be a heavy, burdensome project.

You remembering Who You Really Are is a joyful thing. You reincorporating your Experience of Being the Son or Daughter of God, Perfect, whose Function is only to recognize God in every thing, which is a totally joyous experience. You whose Function it is to recognize God in every thing with the realization that every thing is some aspect of the Infinitude Of Your Being is an equally joyous thing, because What and Who You Are is redefined into a Wholeness, into a Oneness, where conflict is non-existent.

Just beware of anyone or anything that would tell you that you've got to go on an internal witch hunt to find out what's wrong with yourself before you've gone to the Holy Spirit to ask, "What is the Truth?"

And by all means, don't pick up a book, whether it's A Course In Miracles or the Bible or any other book, don't pick up a book and use the intellectual principles you find there as the proper tool or tools to use to find out what is wrong with you so that you might fix yourself, or so that you using the principles, the words in those books, can help another find out what's wrong with them and fix them.

Learned principles—this is important—learned principles applied to the human condition lack the inspiration and power that accompany the discernment and Experience of What Truth Is which you will only have if you go within, let down your defenses, and invite the Father in, invite the Holy Spirit in, invite what is nothing more than your Right Mind in, and abandon your tiny, personal, private, isolated self that would take the words in the book to beat some sense into your fellowman so that your fellowman might wake up, or beat some sense into yourself so that you might wake up.

I've said it before. The only holy books that are worth their salt are the ones that manage to convince you that there is a God and that this God is your Friend, and that cause you in one way or another to abandon your insistence upon your private, isolated, self-determined sense of self and invite something else into your space, into you, so that the isolation is broken. And so that the line of communication between you and your Father is opened up once again, and you are filled, infilled by the Father's Love and the Father's Vision, and which encourages you not to address your fellowman to fix him or her up until you have done that. So that you no longer continue to reaffirm that existence is about isolated, private, selfish entities controlling each other for selfish reasons, even if it's in the guise of fairness and kindness and love.

Let's bring the joy back into waking up. Let's lighten up. You can be persistent and diligent without being hard on yourselves. You can be honest without being critical toward yourself and others. You can be practical without losing your ability to soar. In other words, you can be practical without becoming grounded like a dead weight.

Generally speaking when you say that you need to be practical, you mean that you need to do whatever you need to do to save your ass, to protect your ass. But practical really means not being duped into acting out of ignorance. Being practical means having enough clarity to want to know What The Truth Is. Not the awful truth about you, but the Divine Truth about you. Not the awful truth about your Brother, but the Divine Truth about your Brother. Why? So that that might be what you facilitate the embodiment of. You see?

You can be disciplined. You can use your mind in a disciplined way without the use of discipline being some sort of self-punishment. Got it? Okay!

We will go into the book.

RAJ READING: Thoughts begin in the mind of the thinker, from which they extend outward. This is as true of God's Thinking as it is of yours. Because your minds are split, you can also perceive as well as think. Yet perception cannot escape from the basic laws of mind.

RAJ: Another way of putting this is that just as you can seem to be the Christ behaving as though you aren't the Christ, everything you do as though you're not the Christ is utilizing the capacities of the Christ That

You Are. Likewise, whatever the laws are that govern the Christ also govern what is thought by a Christ who has forgotten that he's the Christ.

Again.

RAJ READING: Because your minds are split, you can also perceive as well as think. Yet perception cannot escape from the basic laws of mind. You perceive FROM your mind and extend your perceptions outward. Although perception of any kind is unnecessary,...

RAJ: Indeed God does not indulge in it.

RAJ READING: Although perception of any kind is unnecessary, YOU made it, and the Holy Spirit can therefore use it...

RAJ: ...as...

RAJ READING: ...well.

RAJ: Now let's just stop for a moment. What is perception? The best way to describe it is that it is the conscious experience one has after applying a little torque to an Original, Flawless Idea that God has Thought. When I say a little torque, I mean a little bias. When you take a metal rod and you take hold of each end with something that can hold the pipe (the rod) solidly and you twist the pipe, you create torque. And you also in creating torque (t-o-r-q-u-e), when you apply torque, you create stress in the pipe, in the rod. So when you apply a little torque, a little bias, to one of God's Ideas, you create stress together with a distorted experience of that Real Thing. And so, instead of seeing What A Thing Truly Is, you see your perception of it, and inherent in that perception of it is stress, distress.

Now, again.

RAJ READING: Although perception...

RAJ: A torqued experience of something Real.

RAJ READING: ...of any kind is unnecessary, YOU made it, and the Holy Spirit can therefore use it well. He can INSPIRE perception and lead it toward God by making it PARALLEL to God's way of thinking, and thus guarantee their ultimate meeting. This convergence SEEMS to be far in the future only because your mind is not in perfect alignment with the idea, and therefore DOES NOT WANT IT NOW.

RAJ: That's the only reason you don't wake up every morning and see the Kingdom of Heaven. You do not want it now. You prefer the torqued perception of it. Why? Because you think your salvation depends upon the bias you're bringing, and the persistence with which you bring it, because you know what? It's up to you. It's entirely up to you to keep your perception of the universe together, to keep it going so that it doesn't collapse. [laughing] And the minute you withdraw your investment of energy and attention and reinforcement from it, it will collapse because the torque hasn't been placed there by God and isn't therefore part of Reality.

You keep the Kingdom of Heaven, the experience of the Kingdom of Heaven torqued because in your present mindset your existence depends on it. Your safety depends upon it. Your continuity depends upon it—you think. That is your belief.

You know what? At the bottom line the reason you don't let go of it is because you would have to abandon whatever sense of power you presently think you have, whatever authority you presently think you have. And you think that this power and authority that you personally have is the very life-force of your being—the utterly, simply essential element of your identity. And so you are obsessed with your power.

That's why the word "yielding" is such an unappealing word. "Yielding. Ooohhh! You mean let someone else be in charge of me?" No. What I mean is by the word "yielding," abandoning your sense of power, your sense of authority, not so that something else can be in charge of you but so that you might discover that in the absence of your expressing power and authority, you will find that you have the Conscious Experience of Reality, of the Kingdom of Heaven, wherein no one is exercising authority or power because the Movement of Being, the Movement of Creation is already done, is already being done, is already inexorably in Movement and no one has any personal responsibility of being in charge of it. Everyone has the freedom to be in full acknowledgement of the Infinite Perfection and Beauty and Bliss of Creation in which you are benign and invulnerable along with everything else.

And because of this lack of need for power and authority, you can be fully present with the whole Brotherhood. You can be undefendedly present with every aspect of Creation because there will be no fear that it might kill you. You will have no fear that if you are walking in the forest, a tree might fall on you and kill you, because God is indivisible and therefore unconflicted, and therefore Creation is incapable of being at odds with any other part of Creation.

The purpose of letting go of this power that you think is essential to and inseparable from your identity, the reason for abandoning this power is so that you might find that it is completely irrelevant to Reality and that its maintenance constitutes a constant distraction from your capacity to be present with everything without defense. And therefore, that you have the capacity to feel the Meaning of Everything fully as some aspect of the Infinitude of You.

Now your mind is a little more, a little bit more in perfect alignment with the idea, and therefore does want it a little bit more now than you did 15 minutes ago.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit USES time, but does NOT believe in it. Coming from God He uses everything for good, but He does not BELIEVE in what is not true. Since the Holy Spirit is IN your minds, your minds must...

[Editor's note: Raj did not say the word "also."]

RAJ READING: ...be able to believe only what is true.

RAJ: Your minds must also be able to believe Only What Is True. Your minds really are able to believe Only What Is True. It's not a capacity you have to develop. Because you are the Christ right now, your minds must be able to believe Only What Is True. It's a capacity you have, but it's like an unused muscle. The muscle's there.

You have the capacity [laughing]... you have the capacity to be unfettered with a clutter of untruths that you believe. Now you initially will find that as you let go of them, it would seem as though it's a narrowing down of your attention because [in a very amused voice] there's so much less to think about without the clutter of untrue things. And only believing What Is True, it will seem as though your attention is becoming much narrower than it used to be because, of course, you can imagine infinite possibilities of untrue things.

Now, the Fact is that What Is True is Infinitely Present and Infinitely Expressed, and so there's a lot to give your attention to. But you know what? When you begin to allow your mind to be engaged only with Those Things That Are True, the fact that All Of What Is True is unconflicted and in Harmony with every other Thing That Is True, there's not much static in your mind. And you can experience more with less confusion because it all fits together, it all blends together. And so you're aware of the greater Infinitude of What Is True with less effort than it took for you to cope with the myriad of beliefs that were untrue, and which were therefore conflicted by nature, and which therefore kept you on guard because you had to keep everything straight for your own self-protection and your own peace of mind. And it took a lot of control and it took a lot of power. And, of course, every time you used all this power, you were reinforcing your identity—you thought—the manufactured identity, the made-up identity that you created after you got your bill of divorcement and became Identity-less in your mind.

So, again.

RAJ READING: Since the Holy Spirit is IN your minds, your minds must also be able to believe only what is true. The Holy Spirit can speak only for this, because he speaks for God. He tells you to return your whole mind to God because IT HAS NEVER LEFT HIM.

RAJ: Your whole mind never got broken up into pieces, even though you seemed to create an imaginary line around yourself, or an imaginary sphere around yourself, and you said, “All of me that’s inside the sphere, I will call me. And everything on the outside of... every... all of me that’s on the outside of the sphere, I will call not me.” All you’re doing is making up a story that doesn’t affect the Uninterruptible Continuity of All of You.

The Holy Spirit...

RAJ READING: ...tells you to return your whole mind to God because IT HAS NEVER LEFT HIM. If it has never left Him you need only perceive it as it is to BE returned.

RAJ: So, not a lot of book learning. Not a lot of principles to learn. If your Whole Mind never left God, you need only perceive it as it is to be returned. Perceive it as it is? Well, how’re you going to perceive it? Intellectually? Like “A + B = C therefore D, E and F are what I am. Ahh!” No. It’s not an intellectual process like that. It’s a matter of inviting God in again. It’s a matter of inviting the Holy Spirit in. It’s a matter of acknowledging that there is in you a Place of Excellence and turning your attention there so that you might learn of this Excellence of You with a willingness to abandon the definitions you have created about yourself, so that you might let your Right Mind begin to register with you as an experience. And that’s the way you perceive your mind as it is. And when you perceive it as it is that way, it is, it has been returned.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The full awareness of the Atonement, then, is the recognition THAT THE SEPARATION NEVER OCCURRED.

RAJ: You are beginning to glimpse the fact that maybe, indeed, you are really at Home right now, that maybe you really are in the Kingdom of Heaven right now even though you’re calling it something else and insisting that it’s something else. It’s beginning to dawn on you that you might actually be looking at all of this right from the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven with a Christ-Mind that has the capacity, that really has the ability to see Only What Is Real. And that is giving you an experiential glimpse of the fact that the separation never occurred.

Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot prevail against this because it is an explicit statement that the EGO never occurred.

RAJ: You, not being in your Right Mind, did not become a quote “not-right-minded entity” unquote. Therefore, this not-right-minded entity that seems to be you fumbling around in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven but saying you’re fumbling around in the middle of quote “the world” unquote, that awful ungodlike place. That, instead of that, it’s more like the Christ has taken a nap, or had a daydream, none of which was real but which succeeded in distracting him from the clear recognition of the Kingdom of Heaven and the Christ That He is. Period. No self ever got created! All this sense of yourself is that’s alone, isolated, struggling, vulnerable, subject to sin, disease, death, and living in a universe of fundamental conflict—all of that is nothing but an idea that you are entertaining in your mind and identifying with so completely that you think it’s true.

When you choose to join with the Holy Spirit... when you choose to join with the Holy Spirit you break the intent to see the Kingdom of Heaven with a little bit of torque applied to it. And you break the obsession of maintaining the torque, the bias. You therefore abandon the personal power that you believe is inseparable from your identity, meaning the definitions you have given yourself. And in the willingness to abandon those, there is a spontaneous movement of rejoining, of reconnection, if you will, with your Source, that returns your Experience of your Real Identity to you and you discover that it just wasn’t so. There never was an ego called you. And there never was this fantastic conglomeration of false definitions that constituted you living in a world that had nothing to do with God. Awakening is really the undoing of the belief that you really became something other than What God Is Forever Being New.

Now, you did not create the world. You only created the definitions that you’re applying to the world. And so everything will not disappear. Creation will be recognizable to you as Creation, instead of quote “the world and universe” that was constituted of the best definitions you could come up with. And so this is not going to constitute a loss of any sort. Everything that you see will become illumined with the Truth Of What It Is. And so everything that you see will in that process of becoming illumined to you, will take on more meaning—awesome meaning. Its Divinity that would warrant the hosannas of the angels will register with you and make your Soul soar and sing with Joy in the recognition of the Exquisiteness of What God Be's.

And so this is why I keep saying ask, "What is the Truth here?" And let your energy and your interest and your attention be turned to the Holy Spirit with the question, "What is the Truth here?" so that the delight of Experiencing the Truth being revealed to you might be had by you.

And as I said when we first started, get off of this habit of wanting to know what's wrong with you. Get out of the habit of wanting to know, "What is there in me that is so perverted and perverse that it would not want to experience God?" That kind of pursuit of quote "truth" unquote will not illuminate Truth. Because the fact is that there is nothing perverted or perverse in you because you didn't for a moment stop being The Christ That You Are That God Is Expressing right where you are at this moment. And therefore, the only exploration that is worth its salt is the inquisitive pursuit of a clearer and clearer experience of what is right about you, of this Christ That You Are.

And in the process of inviting that in, whatever resistances your ego seems to have to it will become illuminated. But you know what? It will be illuminated by the very thing that negates it so that its uncovering will not engage you in a war with something perverted in you to get rid of it. The Truth will illuminate its untruth, and therefore its non-existence. And you will easily withdraw your faith in the untruth. You see? Because it will be obviously invalid, unhelpful, unconstructive, and not useful to you in any way. And when it's not useful to you, when something is not useful to you, you drop it. You let it go. If it's not useful, it just becomes excess baggage, doesn't it? And none of you really carries anything around with you that you don't find useful.

Okay. The good news is that Waking Up is a Joy. The good news is give your attention to desiring to know What The Truth Is. And the good news is don't uncover what's untrue in your Brother in the guise of helping him grow. Uncover the Truth in your Brother. Uncover the Truth in your Brother. And in the process, if your Brother has reluctances about seeing the Truth about himself because he or she has some pet ideas that he or she wants to hold on to, those things will become clear as the blocks. And then you can tell the Truth about them, not because you uncovered them, but because the Truth that you were being uncovered them. And because they are what has been illuminated, they are what is on the plate and they are therefore the very next things to be seen through, the ones that are ready to be released.

You can be an agent for change in the world and for your Brother, but not by pointing out his flaws. The only way you can be an agent for change is by illuminating the Truth about your Brother or Sister. And you know what? You don't know What The Truth Is until you ask God What The Truth Is in each and every moment. It's not that the Truth changes in each and every moment. It is that without checking in with God, you're relying upon something else. And there is nothing else. So the something else that you're relying upon is something that doesn't exist and, if you are going to base your actions on the basis of something that doesn't exist, you are going to introduce chaos and confusion, and not healing or correction. Is that clear? Does that make sense?

You ask at every moment of God What The Truth Is, not because the Truth changes, but because you don't want at any moment to be relying upon any other source for the Experience of Truth than the Only Source of the Experience of Truth there is.

And right now you have long-standing habits of relying upon your best judgments and your imaginations and your thinking, all of which... all of which arises from a fundamental lie. That lie being the premise that you exist on your own without a Source—you are self-existent. That's why only confusion can follow any actions that arise.

So, again, as you proceed this next week, bring some lightness and some Light into your experience by remembering that it's your Function to be curious to know What The Truth Is about yourself, about your circumstances, about your Brothers, Sisters, employers, blah, blah, blah. And the Truth is always the Divine Reality that resolves conflict, distress, tension, jealousy, hate, fear, sin, sickness, and death. It's easy to want to know What The Truth Is when you know that Truth felt and experienced heals, corrects, harmonizes, unifies, and uncovers your inseparableness from all that has been healed, corrected, unified, et cetera.

I love you all. And I'm going to say have more fun this week. Now I don't mean have more fun going out doing irrelevant things. I mean have more fun with this thing that's so fundamentally valuable to you—your Love of Truth and your wanting to Wake Up. And have more fun bringing the principles into play in the workplace, in your home, inside your mind, by remembering not to go on an internal witch hunt, but to desire to know the Truth because the Truth uncovers the Joy and Unity and Harmony of Being. It's that simple. Don't forget it. Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

We have a question or a comment here.

ANOTHER SEEKER: My question is it occurred to me... something maybe... is that maybe adding some levity to this, I was going to pose the question and it is... I suppose we can take it seriously or... or hopefully not seriously, but the question that I was gonna pose is, is it true that there is a delusion?

RAJ: Indeed, is it true that there is a delusion?

SEEKER: Yes. That's... that's the question. And it's kind of one of those things like the monks would ask and then go off and meditate on that for a day or two.

RAJ: Or the sound of one hand clapping.

SEEKER: Right. Right.

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: Yes.

RAJ: Yes. Yes. And I will not comment.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: The question...

SEEKER: It's not a serious question. It's something to ask as a...

RAJ: The question expresses a wholeness within itself that needs to simply be contemplated.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: Yes. Thank you for sharing that.

SEEKER: You're welcome.

RAJ: Okay. I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Sparkly Book – p. 125

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And I welcome everyone who's joining us on the internet as well.

We have been learning about the uses of projection. And more than anything, we've been uncovering the fact that what you ultimately want to be is what you are at this very moment. I have been illuminating ever more clearly that you should not see your Awakening, or your arriving at your ultimate destination, at some point in the distant future, but rather take hold of it in the moment you're in, because no matter how you're imagining yourself to be, and no matter how well you have convinced yourself that you are what you believe you are, you are, every single one of you at this instant nothing less than the direct Expression of God, as Perfect and Flawless as God's Expression Is.

And so don't lazily wait for the future to come. Be vitally curious in every moment to what? To see your world transformed? Well, yes, but more than that. To see your perceptions transformed. Be curious and alert for any manifestation of a change in which you are seeing everything, a change in which you are experiencing existence.

If you just think that it's the world out there that's going to be transformed, you are likely to overlook your absolute and direct connection with everything you're seeing. And it will be possible for you to think that everything out there, well it will change but all of the factors out there will contribute to how fast or slow it changes. And you will lose sight of the fact that in order for anything to change out there, improve, more closely identify the Kingdom of Heaven, you are the one who is going to have to be willing to look at it, not only in a new way, but also with a new sense of Who It Is That You Are observing everything. And that yes, you are right now the Ultimate Christ. You are right now nothing more and nothing less than What God Is Originating right where you are moment by moment by moment by moment as long as you're experiencing time.

So, for the rest of the day today and tomorrow when you wake up, let there be a sense of expectancy, because you don't have to wait until we get through the whole Course to be willing to see things As God Is Seeing Them, which it is your Birthright to be experiencing because God literally didn't give you any other means to observe everything than His Way.

You could say that God has extended His Mind and you are the Extension. But in His extending His Mind, He did not project It outside Himself, and therefore your having the Mind of God is something that is occurring within God and is not separate in any way. And therefore, you are the Presence of God. Not you are the Presence of God, but you are the Presence of God Being All There Is. Again, you are not God, but God Is All There Is of you.

Now that's the fact at this moment. And that's the fact that you have to stop doubting. That's the fact that you have to stop seeing as an experience awaiting you some time in the future. You see? God isn't withholding the experience from you. That means it's available to you and that means it's your Birthright. And that means that all there is to this process of awakening is not a bunch of hard work, but a simple willingness to embrace your Birthright. And the way to embrace your Birthright is to annul the bill of divorcement and invite God back in.

Again I will say that coming from a tiny, separated sense of yourself, it will feel to you as though doing this means yielding to a power greater than you, becoming subject to something other than you. And you're just going to have to tough that one out. You're going to have to accept it, go ahead and experience it and persist in inviting God in. Because the fact is that in your inviting God in, making room for God, and being willing to be subject to Him apparently, your Right Mind will be restored to you and you will find that you are One with God, because God Is All There Is to you. And there won't be two of you—God and this you that is subject to God.

The Fullness Of Who And What You Are will be returned to you as your Right Mind, because you were willing to let it in. That's what will happen, but it will require you, I'm going to say, to let your ego be subjugated to God, to become subject to God. You are going to have to bring your capacity to express your will into alignment with the Will of God. You're going to have to let your will, this puny little private will that you think you have and that you are expressing with such vehemence, you're going to have to let that become subject to the Father's Will.

And as insulting as that will seem to be, it will be your savior because in letting the Father's Will in, it will illuminate you, not as a now grand, separate entity, but as the Divine One That You Are and never stopped being. And the fullness of the Experience of What You Divinely Are finally being experienced by you will constitute such a joy that you will wonder what made you delay. Because All That God Is Being will be felt as all that you are being, because you're no longer claiming a separate mind from the Mind of God. So you will become the Experience of What God Is Being. And none of What God Is Being will be projected outside of you anymore. It will all be part of you. And so the leaf and the table and the tree and your partner and your friends will be experienced as the Divine Idea That They Are That God Is Having.

And because there is no conflict in your mind, All of Creation, all of what you have been calling the world will be seen as unconflicted, will be seen in its fullness as part of you. It will all still be there, but it will be incapable of being at odds with you, and you will be incapable of being at odds with it, and even the concept of being at odds with it will be unthinkable, unavailable.

And so I reiterate that everything you're experiencing right now will still be experienced. It's just that it will no longer be experienced with the torque, the bias, that you have brought to it that has caused All of Creation to be experienced by you with distress.

Now watch it. Your tendency is when I talk about the way things will be, or the way things truly are, your habit is to automatically project that into the future as something to look forward to. Well, if you're going to look forward to it, look for it here and now. Look for it in the experience of the sensation of your rear end on the folding chair or the sofa that you're sitting on here. Because this sensation is what you're to have a transformed experience of. And what this folding chair is, is what you're to have a transformed experience of. And what the sofa is and how it feels is what you're to have a transformed experience of. And what your derriere is, is what you're to have a transformed experience of. And if you'll keep that in mind, you'll keep your Awakening more present in the moment of consciousness you're experiencing and it will be available to you more quickly. And this is the good news.

The good news is that there truly is no lengthy process to the experience of a miracle, which is what? A sudden shift of perception. So let's remember that. A sudden shift of perception. You've all had sudden shifts of perception. And I would ask you, how many of them were the result of your having sat for two hours studying a text real hard? They usually happened when you weren't thinking. Right? Remember this so you don't get sucked into an ethic of study and self-improvement.

The good news is it's not as hard as you thought it was. And the reason it's not as hard as you thought it was is because you aren't what you thought you were. And I'm disclosing to you What You Are so that you might be able to conceive of it and embrace it even if it's not believable. Because to the degree that you can conceive that it might be true, you have brought your thinking more in alignment with capital "T" Truth, with God's Point Of View. And in that better alignment, it's much easier for that sudden shift of perception to occur, when you're not thinking, when you're defenseless. You see? This is the good news.

It's good news that shouldn't be on the back page of the newspaper, or at the bottom of the list in your mind. It's the good news that you should have on your mind constantly, because you really, really would prefer to in this moment be having a better experience than the one you're having. If you don't know that there's an alternative to what you're experiencing in this moment, you won't be looking for an alternative. You won't be attentive for it. But I'm telling you there is. And the alternative experience is available here quote "in the world" unquote and now without one more of intellectual self-improvement.

Can you see the smile on my face? It is a smile you should have on yours and that you should be feeling, and that you should bring with you as you look at everything and encounter everyone.

Okay. Let's go to the book and I am continuing to read from the transcript as finished by Bill Thetford.

RAJ READING: The ego CAN accept the idea that return...

RAJ: Meaning return to Home.

RAJ READING: ...is necessary because it can so easily make the idea seem so difficult.

RAJ: If the ego couldn't make it to seem difficult easily, it wouldn't allow you to see this as a possibility. But the ego knows that because its function is to distract you from your Divinity and it's already been doing quite well thank you, that if it let's you know that you can wake up but it can convince you that it's going to be difficult and get you involved in a difficult process, if it can do that, it'll allow you to have this idea of waking up. You see?

RAJ: Continuing.

RAJ READING: Yet the Holy Spirit tells you that even return is unnecessary because what never happened cannot involve ANY problem. It does NOT follow, however, that YOU cannot make the idea of return both necessary AND difficult. It is surely clear, however, that the perfect NEED nothing, and CANNOT experience perfection as a difficult accomplishment because that is what they ARE.

RAJ: I've said before, you're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it. You are at that Point and must understand yourself there from. In other words, that must be the starting point of any thought you have. That must be the starting point of any thought you have about another. You are not struggling to regain what you lost. You're in a process of discovering that you never lost it and that the only thing that has separated you from the experience of it is a thought that you would call a belief. That's all! Just a thought.

You can abandon a thought. A thought cannot provide resistance. It's just an idea. It can't struggle against you. You either embrace it or you reject it. The embrace or the rejection is the only thing that stands between you and [finger snap] waking up this instant. That's the culprit, is a thought that you've chosen to believe or reject. A thought that you have the choice to believe or reject which at the moment you're choosing to believe. You see, that's what you need to be attending to—not study, study, study, study, and refine your soul. You see? Don't get confused and you won't delay your Awakening.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is the way in which you MUST perceive God's creations, bringing all of your perceptions into the one parallel line which the Holy Spirit sees. This line is the direct line of communication with God, and lets your mind converge with HIS. There is no conflict anywhere in this perception because it means that ALL perception is guided by the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: When you yield to the Holy Spirit, which again is nothing more than your Right Mind, you might say that you, as the ego you think you are, are bringing yourself into alignment with the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind. And the Holy Spirit presents to you understandings of your perceptions that bring your perceptions in alignment with God's Truth. It's almost as though there are three parallel lines. You as the ego you think you are wanting to wake up allows your mind to become subject to the Holy Spirit, which means you're allowing yourself as the ego you think you are to come into alignment with your capital "S" Self, the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. So now we have two parallel lines which allow convergence to occur. What you might call connection with the Altar within you, connection with the Holy Spirit, your Right Mind. And then there are the parallel lines of the Holy Spirit and the Father which converge. You see, it's all yielding. It's all yielding.

Again.

RAJ READING: There is no conflict anywhere in this perception because it means that ALL perception is guided by the Holy Spirit, Whose mind is fixed on God.

RAJ: Whose Mind is fixed on God.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the first part of the next sentence: ONLY the Holy Spirit can resolve conflict because...]

RAJ READING: ...ONLY the Holy Spirit is conflict-free. He perceives ONLY what is true in your mind, and extends outward ONLY to what is true in other minds.

The difference between the ego's use of projection and projection as the Holy Spirit uses it is very simple.

RAJ: It's all simple.

RAJ READING: The ego projects to EXCLUDE, and therefore to deceive.

RAJ: What does it exclude? It excludes all of you that is not inside the bubble. It says, "What's inside the bubble is me, and all the rest of what I infinitely am is not me," and it projects it out there. And then, in this very, very biased perception of All That Is, it begins to interpret everything else. And in interpreting everything else, it must cover up its dishonesty, because it is dishonest to say this is me and that is not me when it's all me. And so it must cover up its dishonesty because if it sees it (the Truth) it will cause the lie to be seen for what it is and it will cause the Christ That You Are to abandon the lie and not validate it. And so it will project it out there as part of what is not it. And it will turn all that it sees into dishonesty, untrustworthiness, undependability, the justification for lack of trust. You see? And then its behavior will reflect that toward All of Infinity.

So, continuing or repeating.

RAJ READING: The ego projects to EXCLUDE, and...

RAJ: There we go.

RAJ READING: ...therefore to deceive. The Holy Spirit projects by RECOGNIZING HIMSELF in every mind,...

RAJ: And I would add: and in every thing.

RAJ READING: ...and thus perceives them as ONE.

RAJ: In other words, it perceives them as One and the Holy Spirit is that One that includes everything.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Nothing conflicts in this perception because what the Holy Spirit perceives IS the same.

RAJ: It doesn't perceive differentness. God infinitely individualizes Himself, but the Infinite Individualizations of God do not constitute something different or separate from God. It's all One and that One is God.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Wherever He looks He sees Himself, and because He is united, He offers the whole Kingdom always.

RAJ: Not just bits and pieces.

RAJ READING: This is the one message God gave TO Him, and for which He must speak because that is what He IS.

RAJ: Now, if the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind, then we could read it this way. This is the one message God gave to you and for which you must speak because that is What You Are.

You're here to speak for God. In other words, you're here to represent God. You're here to glorify God by acknowledging nothing else in anything you see but God because you're seeing God there. Not seeing what you choose to say a thing is there.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The peace of God lies in that message, and so the peace of God lies in YOU.

The great peace of the Kingdom shines in your mind forever, but it must shine OUTWARD to make YOU aware of it.

RAJ: And that's why I keep saying you must have an object of your affection. If you have an object of your affection, you have something to which you desire to extend your acknowledgement of everything that is meaningful truly and worthwhile and valuable, everything that identifies the Real Source of the object of your affection, which means that therefore in your extending your attention you are glorifying God.

Again.

RAJ READING: The great peace of the Kingdom shines in your mind forever, but it must shine OUTWARD to make YOU aware of it.

RAJ: Here come the Light. Like a coal miner with a helmet on your head that has a light in it, you must invite the Light so that the Light goes on so that what? Does a coal miner's light shine on the coal miner? No! It's extended outward and it illuminates everything that couldn't be seen in the dark. And so the coal miner brings the light to the darkness so that he might be able to carry out his function.

You bring the Light so that it shines on your Brother and your world so that you might be able to carry out your Function of saying, "Yes, God's there. Yes, God's there. Yes, God's there. I see God everywhere I look!" You extend the Light so that you might have the glorious experience of fulfilling your Function, which is to see God.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit was given you with perfect impartiality,...

RAJ: Your Birthright was extended to you. All That God Is was extended to you to be expressed as God right there where you are without hesitation, without reluctance, without using any measuring stick to see whether you were worth it. Again, it's the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom and so you've received it. There is no other way God's Gift can be made. God cannot extend Himself partially.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit was given you with perfect impartiality, and only by perceiving Him impartially can you perceive Him at all. The ego is legion, but the Holy Spirit is One.

RAJ: I'm going to say the ego is legion, but it's a conglomeration of what you might call infinite and infinitely separated parts that are at odds with each other and can never be in harmony.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...but the Holy Spirit is One.

RAJ: And I will say, one in which all of those distinctly separate and oppositional parts that the ego sees are part of the Infinitude of the Holy Spirit that is seeing them. And so nothing is left out. All of Creation is One as the Mind that looks on Creation through God's Eyes.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: No darkness abides anywhere in the Kingdom, but your part is only to allow no darkness to abide in your OWN mind.

RAJ: That's all. You don't have to tackle the universe. You don't have to tackle all of the Kingdom. All you have to do is attend to your own mind. And you attend to your own mind by breaking this habit of relying vehemently on your best judgments, your best assessments, your best definitions, and your allegiances to each other and the mutual agreements you've made with each other, and turning toward the Altar, acknowledging that indeed there is another way to look at this, meaning All There Is. And it's a truer way. And I am interested in exploring, for lack of better words, the potential that I hear there is from Raj from looking toward that which is nothing more than my Right Mind and abandoning my isolation, and letting in a better view with a willingness to yield to it, even though I don't have complete confidence.

Even though I don't have complete confidence. You're very much like the young lady who was faced with the option of kissing the frog prince. [amused voice] "Hey, she might end up just having kissed a frog!" But the Extension of Love might be exactly that which uncovers the Reality there, we will say the handsome prince. And you might as well dare to do that which might uncover the Christ That You Are to yourself. You know, you might as well put your religious faith to the test. Put your mouth where your theories are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This alignment with Light is unlimited because it is in alignment with the...

RAJ: Capital "L".

RAJ READING: ...Light of the world. Each of us IS the Light of the world, and by joining our minds IN this Light, we proclaim the Kingdom of God together and AS ONE.

RAJ: You see that? If you and you and you and you, all individually are extending the Light, you're all in harmony with each other. You are all jointly expressing the same purpose.

Now, just one of you can do wonders. But what if all of you this week decide that you're not going to take the bait like you did this last week when the suggestion came that you were vulnerable and that you had better defend yourself and that you had better take care of your defense before you question which teacher you're listening to, before you consider whose vision you are choosing to employ.

You know, it's not going to change. When you employ the ego's vision and engage in defense, you're going to hurt, hurt, hurt. You're going to be in pain, pain, pain. You're going to be miserable, miserable, miserable. I mean it! And you know it! It's inevitable! There is no other result from not listening to the Voice for Truth. What do they say? Stupidity is persisting in doing what doesn't work.

Remember we're still talking about the good news. And to really be willing to acknowledge that what doesn't work doesn't work and saying that this constitutes justification for trying something new, that's part of the good news.

The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Relinquishment of Attack

We have used many words as synonymous which are not ordinarily regarded as the same. We began with having and being, and more recently have used others. Hearing and being are examples, to which we can also add teaching and being, learning and being, and, above all, PROJECTING and being. This is because, as we have said before, every idea begins in the mind of the thinker and extends outward. Therefore, what extends FROM the mind IS STILL IN IT,...

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: ...what extends FROM the mind IS STILL IN IT, and from what it extends it knows ITSELF. That is its natural talent. The word "knows" is correct here, even though the ego does NOT know, and is not concerned with being at all.

The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...still holds knowledge safe through His impartial perception. By attacking nothing, He presents no barrier at all to the communication of God. Thus, being is never threatened. Your Godlike mind can never BE defiled. The ego never was and never will be part of it, but THROUGH the ego you can hear and teach and learn WHAT IS NOT TRUE.

RAJ: And I would add: and which never takes on any aspect of Real Being. Again.

RAJ READING: The ego never was and never will be part of it, but THROUGH the ego you can hear and teach and learn WHAT IS NOT TRUE.

RAJ: End of quote. And which can never take on any aspect of Real Being. Continuing.

RAJ READING: From this, which YOU have made, you have taught yourselves to believe that you ARE NOT what you ARE.

RAJ: Well nothing new about that. We've been talking about it ad infinitum.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT teach what you have not learned, and what you teach you strengthen in yourselves BECAUSE you are sharing it. Every lesson you teach, YOU are learning.

RAJ: You meet someone new. Well, let's put it this way. You are fresh out of college, you're stepping out into the world and you have decided to be an architect. You go and apply for a job and you get one. And let's say you've been working there for two or three weeks. You're unsure about yourself. You know, you're just starting out. It's a new job. First job you've ever had. Will they like you? Will you be able to perform? Blah, blah, blah. And as you meet your friends and acquaintances or run into new people, the question comes up, "Well, what do you do?" And you say, "Well, I'm an architect." Well, you don't feel like an architect yet. You know that you've completed school and you have a job and your job title says "architect," but you have to keep saying it so that the words don't sound as foreign to you.

And after you've said it enough, let us say twenty years goes by and now you have your own office, and you are the owner of it, and you are running things. When somebody says, "Well, what do you do?", you say, "I'm an architect," and there's no doubt in your mind in all. And when you say it, you expect others to hear that you are an architect with the same degree of assurance that you're using the word. And why are you now in this position? Because you've convinced yourself by saying the unfamiliar word over and over again, and performing the functions of your office over and over again. You see? You have taught yourself that you are an architect by your words and your actions. You see?

Again.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT teach what you have not learned, and what you teach you strengthen in yourselves BECAUSE you are sharing it. Every lesson you teach, YOU are learning.

That is why you must teach only ONE lesson. If you are to be conflict-free yourselves, you must learn ONLY from the Holy Spirit, and teach ONLY by Him. You ARE only love, but when you denied this you made what you ARE something you must LEARN.

RAJ: When you said, "But Father, I'd rather do it my way. I'm getting a bill of divorcement," you separated yourself from your Source. You separated yourself from what gave you True, Real Identity. And the fact that You Are Love became not you, and therefore, something you must learn.

Now the interesting fact is that you couldn't possibly for a second cease Being Love. So all of your effort to learn to Be Love by saying it and by behaving lovingly has still constituted a denial of What You Are because you already are It, and you're still not embracing That. That's why I started out today talking about the fallacy of study, study, study, and improving yourself, because it will constantly distance you from the fact that you're already at your destination.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We said before that the message of the crucifixion was, "Teach only love, for that is what you ARE." This is the ONE lesson which is perfectly unified because it is the only lesson which IS one. Only BY teaching it can you learn it. "As you teach so will you learn." If that is true, and it is true indeed, you must never forget that what you teach is teaching YOU. What you project you BELIEVE.

RAJ: Simple, but powerful words. So, if what you project is what you believe and you want to have an improved belief, then you've got to make different choices about what you're projecting. And one of the ways in which you can find new ways to project is to stop, I'm going to say, stop frequenting immoral, illicit, unprincipled, unloving, argumentative, conflicted venues. Let's put it that way. To stop being curious to see what kind of awfulness there is going on in the world, especially awfulnesses that might affect you in some way.

Relinquish curiosity about the awfulness of life. Relinquish curiosity about that which doesn't express Unity. Don't be curious... don't be curious about evil, would be another way of... a more traditional way of putting it. When you're looking for awfulness in yourselves or others, you send out messengers, evil-seeking messengers, and they will find what they're looking for. Oh, yes, they will go out, and they'll find this little part of the Kingdom of Heaven and that little part of the Kingdom of Heaven, because that's all there is for them to go out and explore in. And they will bring you back messages, untrue messages about the Kingdom of Heaven. They will tell you lies, because a lie was what sent them out. And what was the lie? The lie was, on the part of the sender, "I'm not the Christ. I am not the direct Expression of God at this moment. God is not All There Is of me. I am... I am independent! And I have a life of my own." You see, this is a lie.

And you know what? "My perception of everything is that I live in a hostile world." Well that's a lie too. It's not a hostile world, but it looks that way to the one who's being on the basis of a lie.

And so a liar sends out messengers looking for the conflicted awfulness of the world so that they might bring back information that will help the sender be ready for whatever's coming well-defended in advance.

Stop doing this, everyone. Stop sending out these messengers. Abandon the fundamental lie that you're not the Christ, or let's say abandon the fundamental lie that you have any existence other than What God Is Expressing Of Himself right where you are. And then send out messengers looking for confirmation of this Divine Presence Of God That You Are so that they might come back and confirm to you even more fully your Divinity and the Divinity Of Your World.

Let go of morbid fascination with the awfulness of existence. Do you hear me? Abandon morbid fascination with conflict. Abandon morbid obsession with awfulness that might potentially affect you. "Oh boy," the ego says. "That's really stupid. You're really gonna make yourself vulnerable." Well, the fact is that morbid fascination with the awfulness of the world and what effect it might have on you is what is stupid, because it will bring back to you confirmation of what isn't real and isn't true. And you will believe it because it's confirming your intent by sending out those messengers. And you're stuck in an illusion with no opportunity to experience freedom from it, because the only freedom from it that you will get is by sending out new messengers, different messengers that you send out from a true premise, that being that God Is All There Is Of You and You Are Divine and it's your desire to experience confirmation of the Divinity Of Everything Else.

Again.

RAJ READING: ...you must never forget that what you teach is teaching YOU.

RAJ: I'm going to say this. What you teach constitutes your sending messengers out into your world. And they will come back and teach you of the intent that you sent them out with. What you project— in other words, the messengers you send out— and the dishonesty of your position, you believe.

RAJ READING: What you project you BELIEVE.

RAJ: And, again, if you want a new belief, you're going to have to find something new to project.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The only REAL safety lies in projecting only the Holy Spirit, because as you see His gentleness in others, your OWN mind perceives ITSELF as totally harmless.

RAJ: In other words, what you see, you be.

RAJ READING: Once it can accept this fully, it does NOT see the need to PROTECT ITSELF. The protection of God then dawns upon it, assuring it that it is perfectly safe forever. The perfectly safe are wholly benign.

RAJ: Why? Why are the perfectly safe wholly benign? Because they're sending out Messengers of Love. They are not sending out messengers to find the expected awfulness. You see? That's dishonest, deceitful, hateful. It's certainly not benign.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: They bless because they know they ARE blessed. Without anxiety the mind is wholly kind, and because it PROJECTS beneficence, it IS beneficent.

RAJ: Now one thing ought to be becoming perfectly clear. As you have read the Course, and you've read the way in which the word "projection" is used, it has been easy for you to come to the conclusion that projection is a dirty word. "Oh, he's projecting! Oh, he's projecting!" No. Projection is a Divine Law of Being. God in the Act of Creation is projecting What He Is, but not projecting it outside of Himself. And God experiences His Projection and recognizes Himself in It. And so we have this full circle of a Projection Of What God Is coming full circle back to God, you might say, because It never left God and God recognizes Himself in It.

What does it say? "And God saw everything that He had made, and behold, it was very good." Or verily God. [Note: Genesis 1:31] You see? Self-Recognition. Wholeness. Oneness. Unity.

So don't use... don't use the word "projection" or think of it as a bad word, a dirty word, a metaphysically or spiritually incorrect word. Rather recognize that projection is inseparable from the Conscious Experience of Being. You're doing it all the time, either from the basis of a lie that you believe is true, or an Experience of What Is Real that you have invited in which causes you to be in perfect alignment with the Projection that constitutes the Movement of Creation That God Is that allows you, then, to experience the influx of God's Point Of View, if you will, God's Perspective, that allows alignment to occur so that the last vestige of the bill of divorcement can dissolve and you are awake.

And we can't stop without my reminding you this isn't a long project for you to engage in. It's available to you at this moment, and it boils down to the acceptance or rejection of an idea. That's all! A single idea that can't defend itself against your choice. And that idea is: You are not God but God Is All

There Is of you. Are you going to accept that idea, or reject it? Whether you do it or not, this week or tonight, and wake up, the fact is that that's the only fly in the ointment there is. That's the only fly in the ointment there is.

I hope you find this all incredibly interesting. It is the incredible good news. Everybody else might say, "Ah, come on. Put your back into it. Put your back into it, you know. Work! Work! We're doing it that way. You don't think it can be that easy do you? Come on, put your back into it. Exert a little effort." It's bait. Are you going to take hook, line and sinker? Or not?

Whether you do or not, the point is that all you're dealing with is the acceptance or rejection... acceptance or rejection of a single idea. Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God.

I love you little Sons and Daughters of God.

AUDIENCE: [laughter]

RAJ: You Infinite Sons and Daughters of God. And I look forward to being with you next week.

SEEKER: Can I ask a question?

RAJ: Yes.

SEEKER: On the way over here tonight or this afternoon, one... I was thinking about one time you said that we aren't really here. And what I heard was the reason I'm seeing this stuff is because I'm focusing on it. Because I've been seeing a lot of the messengers coming back with meanness and stuff. So what I got today was when I see any of this going on then what I need to do is focus on the Holy Spirit that second, not the thing I'm hearing, or the thing I'm seeing, or the whatever. Is that right?

RAJ: That is correct. And then with the Holy Spirit look upon these things.

SEEKER: In a different way.

RAJ: Because the Holy Spirit will be looking at it...

SEEKER: Correctly.

RAJ: ...through the Eyes of Unity and Oneness and can reflect back to you, report back to you the True Vision. Now let's be careful. To say, "I'm not here," it means that you are not in the perception of the Kingdom of Heaven that you're having that you call a material world and universe full of mortals.

SEEKER: Yeah, that was the startling thing.

RAJ: But you are in the Kingdom of Heaven right here and everything you are seeing is...

SEEKER: Is Real.

RAJ: ...some aspect of Reality. It's just that it's seen through this torque...

SEEKER: My focus.

RAJ: ...that you've applied,...

SEEKER: Yes. This focus.

RAJ: ...that causes the Kingdom of Heaven to be experienced as stressful. And causes you to be defensive and to see everything as justification for defense. You see?

SEEKER: Mmm hmmm.

RAJ: Okay.

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: Okay. We'll meet again next week. Thank you.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet as well.

So, we've been getting together for quite a while discussing the Course. Or let us say we've been discussing the Truth and seeing in what ways the Course supports the Truth, because there was something before the Course and what was before the Course was the Truth. And the Course is an expression of the Truth. The Course is not the end. The Course is not the point. The Truth is the point.

And I'm wondering, I'm not going to ask any of you to respond to this, but I'm wondering over the last year and a half, year and three-quarters that we've been reading, has your life been changing? Or better put, is the way you're responding to life changing? Are you letting life just roll over you? Or are you realizing that, indeed, there is another way to look at this, and purposely and conscientiously [exercising] inquisitiveness to see it a different way, and then actually seeing it in a new way? Have there been healings?

I know, a miracle is quote "a sudden shift of perception" unquote. I've heard it said, "It's not about healing. It's about a sudden shift of perception in your mind." [small laugh] Well, if that's what you think, if that's what you believe, that's what you'll get. And it won't be worth much. What point is there in having a sudden shift of perception, let us say, so that pain doesn't bother you, and pain continues? Ah, but you're in bliss, and it doesn't bother you that you're in pain. If you think that's what it's about, you're wrong.

What is the sudden shift of perception about? The sudden shift of perception is going to be about your experience. And when the sudden shift of perception that constitutes a miracle occurs, it's a shift of perception in which, I'm going to say, God's Truth registers with you. God's Truth about what? God's Truth about what you're experiencing. God's Truth about the Kingdom of Heaven that you've been looking at and calling the world, as though it has nothing to do with God. And so a sudden shift of perception is going to be accompanied with, accompanied by, a shift of experience.

And so, instead of seeing your perception of Creation, you will see Creation Itself. And that will be recognizable as healing. Cancer gone. Deformed joints reformed. The Beauty, the Exquisiteness, the Perfection of Creation is what will be embodied, instead of your perception being embodied. And so you will experience a new embodiment whether it's of your body, what you call your body, or the dying tree in the yard, or whatever it is that isn't manifesting all of the qualities of Creation Itself.

Some sudden shifts of perception are little ones so they don't blow your mind. In fact, some shifts that occur, you don't recognize until later on when you realize, "Wow! If that had happened a year ago, I would have been really upset. And now, no problem for me at all. I haven't lost my peace. And I've been able to cope with it quickly, intelligently and well. And there's been no drama or trauma."

What's my point? My point is that if all of this isn't registering in your life as transformed experience, as the disappearance of physical problems, or the meeting of a physical problem quickly, then you're up in your head, you're up in your intellect, and you are not connected to your Right Mind yet.

A Course In Miracles. Well we're not talking about causing miracles to happen. We're not talking about causing physical regeneration to happen. What we're talking about is your relinquishment of your very definite definitions. The definitions you have come to on your own or through mutual agreements about the Kingdom of Heaven that define it as not being the Kingdom of Heaven. We're talking about abandoning those definitions so that What Each Thing Truly Is can register with you.

And the way you abandon your current definitions, as we've been talking about, is by going within to the Altar. Being willing for a moment to abandon your best theories and your best concepts, and saying, "Father, I want to know What The Truth Is here. I want You to tell me what it is, because I want to replace my definition with Your Perspective. Because I don't want to hurt anymore. And I don't want my Brother to hurt anymore. And I don't want to see the tree dying in the yard. Father, I'm not... I'm not asking to change the tree. I'm asking You to help me relinquish whatever it is in me that is insisting upon seeing something different from the Perfect Embodiment of Creation That You Must Be Being there, right where that tree is."

And why? Because when the shift of perception occurs within you that has been illuminated by the Father, you will see a perfect tree. Not because you manipulated matter through magic, or the force of the power of miracle-making, but because you actually were willing to relinquish whatever you thought the tree was, and whatever you thought the condition of the tree was, and whatever you thought the conditions were that brought about the problem the tree was having. And, indeed, your willingness to relinquish the idea that the world and universe you're seeing started from a big bang, a purely physical event, rather than It being the Visibility and Tangibility of the Movement of God that It has forever been.

You know, we talk about waking up and going Home. Well, what's the purpose of our getting together and reading the Course and discussing the ideas? The purpose is to bring it home, to bring the point home. So, we're talking about bringing it home right into this room. Bringing it home right into your house. Illuminating the Truth right where you are and seeing what could only be called physical transformations. Transformations that would register in a photograph. And if you're not seeing changes, you're not bringing this stuff home. And if you didn't realize that that was the point, I'm telling you that's the point so that you will be inquisitive and attentive in the right place.

In other words, all of this is relevant right now, right here. As someone else said, "It's not pie in the sky after you die." And if it isn't relevant to you right now, you're missing it. I'm not suggesting that all of you are missing it, but it's essential for me to make this point. And if you do say, "Well, you know, I haven't seen much difference," don't ask yourself, "What have I been doing wrong?" Let the fact that you're aware that there hasn't been a lot of difference simply suggest to you that there is more for you to see, there is more for you to look forward to in this moment. That this moment is pregnant with illumination, transformation, sudden shifts of perception, expectancy.

When a woman is pregnant, you say she is expecting. And when you're in a pregnant moment, which every moment is until you're fully awake, you should be expecting. When you're awake, every moment is pregnant, but it's not pregnant with the abandoning of illusions and the replacement of them by the Truth. It's every moment is pregnant with the Movement of the Mind of God that never stops to repeat itself and therefore is always new, always vitally, significantly awesomely alive, awesomely new.

But for the time being as you are bringing yourselves more and more into alignment with God, with your Real Mind which is the Holy Spirit, your expectancy needs to be to have the revelation of Truth that you haven't been experiencing because you stifled it the moment you said, "Father, I would rather see it my way. Father, I would rather do it my way. I would like to try being the author of my experience for a while." And as they say in television, when you did that you cut the feed. You lost the feed. You lost the connection. Okay.

Expect your sudden shifts of perception to be relevant to where you are and to be experienced as transforming in a healing way where more perfection is manifest. There is more perfection that can be recorded in a photograph. That there is more perfection that everyone can see. So that where you limped before, you don't limp now. And where your fingers moved difficultly and were misshapen by arthritis, they now move flawlessly and are not misshapen. What are you going to have a new perception of if it isn't everything you're currently having misperceptions of? Just think about that. Okay.

We'll go to the book. And as I've said before, I'm reading from the transcript as it was completed by Bill Thetford.

RAJ READING: Safety is THE COMPLETE RELINQUISHMENT OF ATTACK.

RAJ: You know, I've said it before. When we sit down to have a Gathering, Paul says, "I allow only for that which expresses the Christ Consciousness and only that which is in harmony with the Purpose of capital 'B' Being, the Father's Will." In other words, "Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in me and rule out of me all self will. And may Thy Word enrich the affections of all mankind and govern them."

Now, the key words here are the words "only." "I allow only for that which expresses the Christ Consciousness and only that which is in harmony with the Purpose of capital 'B' Being." This is the only way he, or any of you, can relinquish attack, because if you realize it, anytime you are not yielding to the Father, you are being the author of thoughts on your own.

And as long as you are attempting to act as an independent agent, a thinker, you are reaffirming this bill of divorcement from the Father, which is a denial of God and as we've said before ends up being a denial of What You Truly Are. Everything that follows is based upon a misapprehension of yourself, a misperception of yourself. And therefore, everything that follows is an illusion. Being an illusion, it has no possibility of being real, of being truly effective, of being truly present. And because it arises out of an act of denial, it cannot express or embody Love. Now the fact is, if it's not embodying Love, it's embodying nothing at all.

But since you all engage together in being independent in this way, and you come to mutual agreements, and you base your behavior with each other on those agreements, and you base your interpretations of everything that you're aware of on this belief that you can actually be something functioning on its own, everything that you do must be recognized as unconstructive, unintelligent. But most importantly and perhaps the most difficult thing to accept, it is an act that can have only one effect—destruction, chaos. It isn't just unproductive, it hurts. It isn't just meaningless, it causes you pain. It isn't just not loving, it finds expression in your relationships in forms that have as their intent your Brothers' and Sisters' distraction from What They Divinely Are. That is not just unkind, it's destructive.

I don't care what thought it is you might have, if you're having it alone, if you're having it without any Conscious Awareness of your connection with the Holy Spirit, if you're having it without any Conscious Connection with your Guide, with your Brother or Sister who is awake, it constitutes one further emphasis, one further act of maintenance of your bill of divorce.

The relinquishment of this kind of behavior—which can appropriately be described as attack, attack on Reality, attack on the Kingdom of Heaven, attack on God because you are denying all of these things—the one thing that can cause the relinquishment of this attack is your willingness to abandon every single one of your thoughts that you've had by yourself, even if the thought is, "I really like that woman," or "I really like that beautiful garment," and you know that it is truly an acknowledgement of beauty.

You must be willing to abandon every single thought that you are having on your own. And as I've said before, this seems to mean that you are bringing, you're narrowing your attention down, because you're narrowing it down from all... all of the thoughts you're able to think and all of the potential thoughts that remain for you to think up, in order to give your attention to only one thing. "I allow only for that which expresses the Christ Consciousness." What is that which only expresses the Christ Consciousness for you? It's nothing more than your Right Mind which is the Holy Spirit. And the Holy Spirit speaks for the Father.

"I allow only...." It's like saying, "I allow only for what is essential. I allow only for What Is Real." Like the sculptor, I chipped away everything that wasn't part of the statue. I was only interested in only that which was part of the statue. "Hey, he could have had the whole block of marble. Wasn't that more than what he was left with after he finished?" You see?

The thing is that as you go through your day, if you will be willing to let go of everything that isn't necessary, and you choose to look at everything only with the Christ Consciousness, only with your Right Mind, only with that which embodies the Father's Perspective, you're not going to end up having a narrow experience. The Kingdom of Heaven will be given to you. The Kingdom of Heaven will be revealed to you in everything you had already been seeing, and more. And your aloneness, your separation from everyone in this room as well as all of the Brotherhood that you're not experiencing at this moment because it doesn't fit into your definitions. "Oh, well they passed on, you know. Someday I'll see them." You see, that's your definition. It's not true.

Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and all these things will be added unto you. Separate yourself from God, choose to be an independent authorizer of the definitions of your world, and all of these things will be taken away from you. Actually, you will have abandoned all these things, because you wanted for a while to play with being god all by yourself, when God was Being All There Was of you all along and you were being All That God Was Being right where you were.

So, again, the one sentence we've succeeded in reading so far today.

RAJ READING: Safety is THE COMPLETE RELINQUISHMENT OF ATTACK. No compromise is possible in this.

RAJ: And your lives are demonstrations of the Truth of that sentence. No compromise is possible in this. You try just a little bit to be an independent thinker and you are absolutely shut out from the experience of your Wholeness as you. And what happens is that the experience of your Wholeness is divided up into a little bit that you have said is you, and everything else that isn't you. A world and universe that started with a big bang. Brothers and Sisters who aren't you, who don't think like you, can't think like you, won't think like you. And you certainly don't want to think like them. If anything, you want them to think like you. But you sure don't want to think like them, do you? Oooo!

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Teach attack in ANY form, and YOU HAVE LEARNED IT AND IT WILL HURT YOU.

RAJ: It's absolute. It will hurt you by causing you to be ignorant of the Truth about you, and you will behave as though you aren't What You Divinely Are, and every step will be a misstep. Every step will be fraught with danger and threat. Existence will be frightening. Not because it truly is, but, quote:

RAJ READING: Teach attack in ANY form, and YOU HAVE LEARNED IT AND IT WILL HURT YOU. Yet your learning is not immortal,...

RAJ: In other words, it's not absolute. Your learning is temporary. It can't be anything else because it's the entertainment of a mad idea, of an insane idea, and that can't be eternal. There will come a point where you will decide not to embrace it, and you will abandon it and it will be over. And what is immortal will be in your face to accept and honor.

RAJ READING: ...your learning is not immortal, and you can unlearn it...

RAJ: How?

RAJ READING: ...by NOT TEACHING IT.

RAJ: Isn't that utterly simple?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Since you cannot NOT teach, your salvation lies in teaching the exact OPPOSITE of everything the ego believes. This is how YOU will learn the truth that will set you free, and keep you so as others learn it of YOU. The only way to HAVE peace is to TEACH peace. By learning it through projection, it becomes a part of what you KNOW because you cannot teach what you have dissociated.

RAJ: Now, here the word "projection" is being used in its positive sense.

RAJ READING: By learning it...

RAJ: Peace.

RAJ READING: ...through projection,...

RAJ: Which means the extension of it without putting it outside of yourself.

RAJ READING: ...it becomes a part of what you KNOW because you cannot teach what you have dissociated.

RAJ: What you have projected outside yourself.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Only thus can you win back the knowledge that you threw away.

RAJ: You threw away something when you said, "Father, I'd rather explore this imagination that I have that says I can do things on my own. And I'm going to explore it with all the power of my Being as the Christ."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: An idea which you SHARE...

RAJ: Not put outside of yourself.

RAJ READING: An idea which you SHARE you must HAVE.

RAJ: Sharing is something that's always done with embrace, isn't it? When you're truly sharing, you're embracing the one you're sharing it with. You're including them in your space, in your acknowledgement.

RAJ READING: An idea which you SHARE you must HAVE.

RAJ: An idea that you share, you cannot lose.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It awakens in you through the conviction of teaching.

RAJ: You extend what is established in you. And extending it illumines the fact that it is established in you.

Again the statement Paul begins with says, "Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life, and Love be established in me, and rule out of me all self will." All self-authorizations. And when you join with the Holy Spirit, or the Father, or your Guide, and you be with each other from that joined place, letting the Holy Spirit or your Guide give you the words with which to be together with your Brothers and Sisters, Love is shared and simultaneously established in you in a manner that you can recognize as you.

And so the Truth about you is strengthened by your sharing. It's strengthened because it uncovers to you more fully what has been established in you since the beginning, but which you apparently lost the Conscious Experience of when you tried to play with the idea of being independent.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Remember that if teaching is being and learning is being, teaching is learning.

RAJ: That's like saying: If $A = C$ and $B = C$, [then] $A = B$.

RAJ READING: EVERYTHING you teach you are learning. Teach only love, and learn that love is yours, and YOU are love.

RAJ: See.

RAJ READING: Teach only love, and learn that love is yours,...

RAJ: You can manage to do that intellectually, but the real meaning and value of it hasn't registered with you until the last part of the sentence dawns on you.

RAJ READING: ...and YOU are love.

RAJ READING: Teach only love, and learn that love is yours, and YOU are love.

RAJ: You could say: Teach only what God reveals to you, and learn that What God Is, is yours.

But the crowning point of it all is the discovery that you are God. And when I say that I mean that you are All That God Is Expressing of Himself Infinitely without reservation is What You Are. In that experience, you come back into your Right Mind. And the world and the universe will become so illuminated to you that you will recognize that it is, and always had been, the Kingdom of Heaven in all of Its Glory.

And I know you're familiar with these kinds of words like, "in all Its Glory." But some words have to be used, and the purpose of using the words is so that you might have a hint that the experience that you've been missing out on is unbelievable, is something to desire. I could say, is something to look forward to, but I don't want you to think in terms of time, and so I'm saying is something that is available to you in the moment so bring your attention fully into the moment without your best definitions accompanying your awareness in the moment. And be curious.

The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Only Answer

Remember that the Holy Spirit is the ANSWER, NOT the question.

RAJ: That's like saying: I am the Way, not the rut.

I am the Way, not the rut. I am the Truth, not the lie. I am the Life, and not the misperception of It.

RAJ READING: Remember that the Holy Spirit is the ANSWER, NOT the question. The ego always speaks first because it is capricious, and does NOT mean its maker well.

RAJ: Ooo! Who's its maker? Who made your egos? You did. And your ego does not mean you well. It does not mean the One That You Divinely Are well. It's task, once you imagined it into being, is to keep you so distracted that you forget that there is a Place in you, a Place of Excellence called the Altar where you can re-access your Right Mind.

Repeating.

RAJ READING: The ego always speaks first because it is capricious, and does NOT mean its maker well.

RAJ: Well, if it shut up long enough, you might have enough silence to not be distracted any longer and remember the Truth about yourself. So the ego is always ready with an answer, except the answer is a lie and not the Truth, and therefore, is not a real answer.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego always speaks first because it is capricious, and does NOT mean its maker well. That is because it believes, and correctly, that its maker...

RAJ: Meaning the Divine One That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...may withdraw his support from it at any moment.

RAJ: So the ego doesn't give you a moment of peace [laughing] in which to remember and make the transition.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If it meant you well it would be glad, as the Holy Spirit will be glad when He has brought you home, and you no longer need His guidance. The ego does not regard itself as PART of you.

RAJ: The Divine One That You Are.

RAJ READING: Herein lies its primary perceptual error, the foundation of its whole thought system.

When God created you, He made you part of Him.

RAJ: You see? God projected Himself without projecting it outside of Himself, which meant that His Creation was part of Him. You were part of Him. The word "part" is not the best word because God embodies All Of What He Is in everything He Creates. And so the Whole of Him is You. But without it going outside of What God Is, it remains a Conscious Experience of All That God Is. That's your Function—to be the Conscious Experience of All That God Is.

Again.

RAJ READING: When God created you, He made you part of Him. That is why attack WITHIN the Kingdom is impossible. YOU made the ego without love,...

RAJ: And, of course, you didn't make the ego until after you said, "Father, I'd rather do it my way," got the bill of divorcement, and acted independently. And independently, you have no capacity to act with Love because that's derived from your Source. And if you were connected with your Source, you wouldn't have lost your Identity, and you wouldn't be engaged in an attempt to act independently, with self-authority.

RAJ READING: YOU made the ego without love, and so it does not love YOU.

RAJ: It's like I said last week. You send out messengers based upon a lie, the lie being that you are independent. And the messengers will go out into what? The only thing there is to go out into, the Kingdom of Heaven, and it will bring you back reports that say it's not the Kingdom of Heaven. They will bring back lies. They're incapable of telling the Truth because a lie launched them on their quest.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You could not remain WITHIN the Kingdom without love, and since the Kingdom IS love, you believe that you are WITHOUT it. This enables the ego to regard itself as separate and OUTSIDE its maker,...

RAJ: Meaning the Divine One That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...thus speaking for the part of your mind that believes YOU are separate and outside the Mind of God. The ego, then, raised the first question that was ever asked, but one which it can never answer. That question,— "What are you?"...

RAJ: Except in your mind it was translated into, "What am I?"

RAJ READING: That question,— "What are you?"—was the beginning of doubt.

RAJ: Something totally foreign and impossible to experience when you're in your Right Mind.

Listen to this.

RAJ READING: The ego has never answered ANY questions since, although it has raised a great many. The most inventive activities of the ego have never done more than OBSCURE THE QUESTION because you HAVE the answer, and THE EGO IS AFRAID OF YOU.

RAJ: Now let's get a little practical here. What does that mean? It means that you as you currently perceive yourself to be are afraid of What You Divinely Are. You are afraid that if you will pay attention to what I'm saying, and you will be willing to abandon your definitions and lean into this something called the Holy Spirit within you that's your Right Mind, that you will... that you will lose your identity.

Do you see the irony of it? You said, "Father, I'd rather do it myself. I'd rather see it my way. I am enacting a bill of divorcement." And you lost your Identity! And you created one for yourself that's purely imaginary. And now I come along. The Truth reveals itself to you and says abandon your definitions and lean into the Holy Spirit within you. There is a Place of Excellence in you that doesn't require you to authorize anything, that doesn't require you to be responsible for anything, that puts you in a place of being the constant Acknowledgement of What Is Real with an awareness that you are not separate from Its Reality and It is not separate from yours. That It's All One.

And you can grasp the possibility that this experience of indivisible unity might be bliss. But you are afraid that if you lean into this and yield to it, that you will lose your identity. Why weren't you afraid of losing your Identity when you said, "Father, I'd rather see it myself, my way." Do you see the irony of it? Because if you do, it will make it easier for you to make a new decision.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You cannot understand the conflict until you fully understand one basic fact that the ego does NOT know. The Holy Spirit does not speak first, BUT HE ALWAYS ANSWERS. Everyone has called upon Him for help at one time or another and in one way or another AND HAS BEEN ANSWERED. Since the Holy Spirit answers truly, He answers FOR ALL TIME, which means that everyone has the answer NOW.

RAJ: How do you get someone to answer the phone? You call them. How do you get an answer from the Holy Spirit, from that which is nothing more than your Right Mind? By asking a question.

"Oh yeah, but if I do that, He might really answer, and that would prove to me that my state of independence is not Real. And his answer might cause me to move into a new space wherein I wouldn't be able to pull off this really excellent business deal next Tuesday afternoon in which I will make a lot of money, but you know unfortunately a few heads will drop along the way. But nevertheless, you know, if I dare to ask the Holy Spirit and abandon my determined isolation and let Him in, it might spoil all of the deals I have gotten set up for myself by getting everybody to join me in mutual agreements that they don't realize is going to take advantage of them. I've set it up in such away that it looks to them like it's a good deal for them. But man, I might have to sacrifice." You see?

The ego sense of self that you identify as you is afraid of the Divine One That You Are. Can you see that? You may not be able to see it in all of its ramifications, but you can see the principle of it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot hear the Holy Spirit,...

RAJ: Interesting. Let that... let that sink in. Because if any of you have gotten an answer from God, if any of you have experienced revelation, if any of you have experienced the Holy Spirit responding to you and healing you, it was the Christ That You Are that heard it. I bring that out so that you might realize that right now you are the Christ. You are right now the Divine One that the Father set into motion, you might say, Created by having an Idea that He identified as You and recognized Himself in. If you have ever experienced communion with the Holy Spirit, that experience was absolute proof of your Christhood here and now in this lifetime, if you wish. And it is not something that you will attain in the future.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot hear the Holy Spirit, but it DOES believe that part of the same mind that made it is AGAINST it. It interprets this as a justification for ATTACKING its maker. It believes that the best defense IS attack, and WANTS YOU TO BELIEVE IT. Unless you DO believe it you will not side with it, and the ego feels badly in need of allies, though NOT of brothers.

RAJ: "Oh, no. No. The ego's my best friend. I promise you. The ego is my best friend." No, it's not. "Well, if it weren't for my ego, I wouldn't... I wouldn't exist today. I wouldn't have survived all the experiences I've had. If I hadn't been smarter than the bastard down the street, or if I hadn't played dirtier than he did, I wouldn't be here today. Thank God for my ego!" Bullshit. All your ego has ever done is to reinforce the little willingness you had to play with the idea of being independent and to cause you not to remember Who You Are. It isn't the best friend you've ever had. The whole ego structure is a self-substantiating process in which ignorance is extended. That's all.

And as long as you don't challenge that, every day will be groundhog day. Every year will be groundhog year. Every lifetime will be groundhog lifetime. What's this all about? It's all about breaking the rut! I am the Way, not the rut. The Holy Spirit that is your Right Mind is the Way. And your commitment to your ego is the rut.

I promise you every time we meet and every time I share with you, your commitment to the state of independence is dissolving a little bit more. It may not register with you, but I can tell that it's as though the Energy of your Being begins to glimmer and glisten. There is more Light moving in you. The Light of you is increasing. And it's a joy for us to see.

I want you to believe what I'm saying. You're not stuck. You're not stuck. And you know what? If no one else recognizes what's happening with you, and if no one else seems to be being blessed by the good that is happening to you, don't become distracted by it. Because by damn it, every little bit of diminishing determination to be independent weakens everyone else's resolve to be independent as well.

Don't become discouraged if what you have to give by being more in alignment with the Father isn't received, because it will be in your following through that those who can't relinquish their determination, their obsession with independence, will be freed. You will not be able to go out there and take them by the shoulder and say, "Be free. Be free." But you will, by becoming free yourself with commitment and resolve, be the absence of support for obsessive determination that weakens obsessive determination in your Brothers because there's no longer confirmation from you of their point of view. And because your obvious Embodiment of Perfection and Harmony and Love will further promote healing for them.

I love you. And I like the Light I'm seeing glimmering. It's a joy. And I look forward to being with you next week. And between now and then, come chat with me once in a while within yourself. Make the connection. Break the allegiance to self-determination.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: It's good to have you here. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the internet as well.

I want to remind everyone of the fact that there is no such thing as a pure illusion. It's easy to rip the phrase off the end of your tongue, "Oh, that's just an illusion." But, again, there is no such thing as a pure illusion, something that is an actual existing thing that is an illusion. An illusion is only a misunderstanding or a misapprehension of Reality believed. It's always nothing more than a distorted experience of something that is Real, with a capital "R", and therefore, actual.

If you understand this, then if somebody says to you, "Well, the world is an illusion," or, "Your body is an illusion," you may know that it means that "the world" or "your body" is a misunderstanding of, or a misapprehension of, something Real, a distorted perception of something Real, with a capital "R".

It's good to understand this because then that activates your curiosity, doesn't it? Or at least it should. "Oh, well if it is a misperception of something Real, what is the Real Something that I'm misperceiving? What is the Something that is there minus the bias I'm bringing to my experience of it?" Aha! That opens you up to the experience of enlightenment. Why? Because you've become less defended against What It Is. Because you are willing to call into question the way you're currently experiencing it. So you're withdrawing your commitment to your current perception and becoming undefended against a thing's Real Meaning, and that's what opens the door.

And that's why I am constantly encouraging you all to become curious, like a child, with the assumption that the apparently unknown that you're curious about is benign, not harmful, and at least interesting, and maybe full of delight that goes beyond anything you've imagined. That adds fuel to your curiosity. It increases the interest you bring to your attention, and that's an invitation to the more that is there, the Kingdom of Heaven.

There's only one thing for you to have an experience of. And I know I'm getting very monotonous about this, but there's only one thing available to you to experience. And that is the one and only thing that's going on— Reality. Except I insist upon capitalizing the "R" of the word "Reality" to remind you that it is a Reality beyond whatever your current definition of reality is, so that you will not just settle for the way things seem to be to you and you might be curious beyond the limits of the definitions you've given to everything.

To know that every leaf, every petal, every tree, every object, is the Presence of Something Ultimate, Something right now expressed by God embodying All That He Is, She Is, and that therefore, each thing you currently see is pregnant with more than you can imagine.

Mind you, all that you're currently seeing is the maximum that you have been able to imagine. That's all there is to everything you can see at the moment, because that's all you're willing to confirm about any given thing is what you have been able to imagine it is. You see? Well there's a Heaven of a lot more to it than what you're seeing.

So just remember there's no such thing as a pure illusion. Illusion is a misunderstanding or a misapprehension of something Real, with a capital "R".

We're reading in the section entitled:

RAJ READING: The Only Answer

RAJ: And the very first sentence said:

RAJ READING: Remember that the Holy Spirit is the ANSWER, NOT the question.

RAJ: And I've been reminding you that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. However, there is a question [small laugh]... a question which has kept you in a constant state of distraction from experiencing Reality As It Is. And that question is, "What are you?" That question came into being when you got your bill of divorcement from the Father and said, "I'd rather see everything for myself. I'd rather determine what everything is for myself. I'd rather be the authorizer of the meaning of everything." Unfortunately, that meant that you became definition-less yourself and you remained evidently in need of a definition. And so you made up a definition about yourselves because there was this inevitable question in the void of lack of Identity, "What am I?"

And yet, as we read last week, although the ego has posited that question, the ego has never answered it. And so you could say that as long as you have been in this independent, highly imaginative and very unrealistic state of mind, you have been plagued with the quest for the answer to that question, when the answer has always been to abandon the question and get into your Peace and pay attention to the Experience of Being. The moment you became an orphan by choice, very imaginatively I might add, the moment you became an orphan, all of yourself that you had denied in favor of whatever new and creative definition you could come up with about yourself, could go nowhere. And so, it became quote "the rest of you" unquote held in trust while you dallied with a fascinating adventure of independence. And this quote "rest of you" unquote held at a distance from yourself by your preoccupation with your imagination is your Divinity, the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

And so the Holy Spirit is the Answer. Your Right Mind, your True Identity is the Answer. But it's not the answer to the question, "What am I in my independent state?" It's the quest for that answer that is a straw-dog, a preoccupation with that which can never be satisfied because there is no answer. And your state of independence is, itself, a misperception of your existence which is forever held securely within the grasp of God, because all there is to you is What God Is Being of Himself right there where you are. All of What God Is Being as Himself right where you are.

Okay. I'm backtracking a little bit for context from last week to the beginning of the paragraph.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot hear the Holy Spirit, but it DOES believe that part of the same mind that made it is AGAINST it.

RAJ: And we discussed last week, that this mind that made the ego is the Christ-Mind, the one and only Individuality that you are, the one and only Mind there is.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot hear the Holy Spirit, but it DOES believe that part of the same mind that made it is AGAINST it.

RAJ: In other words, your Right Mind, your Divinity is against the ego because it actually is the nonexistence of the ego as a real thing, and the ego recognizes it's a falsity [its falsity].

RAJ READING: It...

RAJ: The ego.

RAJ READING: ...interprets this as a justification for ATTACKING its maker.

RAJ: In other words, the mind that made it.

RAJ READING: It believes that the best defense IS attack, and WANTS YOU TO BELIEVE IT.

RAJ: Well in a way it's not really hard for the ego to convince you that attack is the best defense, because lacking the Direct Experience of your Real Identity you feel vulnerable, you feel insecure, and it does seem reasonable that the only appropriate response is to reinforce your safety.

Once again, not recognizing that the only thing that will reinforce your safety is abandoning the question, "What am I?", and abandoning this fascination with an independent stance, and becoming still and paying attention to the Experience of Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Unless you DO believe it you will not side with it, and the ego feels badly in need of allies, though NOT of brothers.

RAJ: Ooo! Why not Brothers? Well that means involvement. That means caring. That means being willing to operate outside of the bounds of pure selfishness.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Perceiving something alien to itself in your mind,...

RAJ: Meaning what? Your Divinity, the Truth about you, the Actuality of What Your Mind Really Is.

RAJ READING: Perceiving something alien to itself in your mind, the ego turns to the body, NOT the mind, as its ally because the body is NOT part of you.

RAJ: Now, this can be very tricky if you're not careful to read exactly what it says.

RAJ READING: ...the ego turns to the body, NOT the mind, as its ally because the body is NOT part of you.

RAJ: What is turning to the body to get as an ally? The ego. Is the ego perceiving anything truly? So what is this body that it's turning to? The Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality which is Divine, the Manifestation of God right where you are? Do you think that is what the ego is turning toward for an ally? No. The ego is nothing more than something, which doesn't exist actually, seeing all of the Kingdom of Heaven as it chooses to define the Kingdom of Heaven. The ego is turning to its perception of the Visibility and Tangibility of You, with a capital "Y". It's not turning to the Visibility and Tangibility of You, with a capital "Y", and looking for an ally there. You see what I'm saying? The ego is turning to a misperception of the Presence of God called You.

And naturally, the ego's misperception of What You Truly Are is not part of you. This does not mean that there is no body. If you misunderstand this, you can get into a self-defeating and destructive state of mind in which you begin to deny your body, not understanding that what it said was that the ego turns to its misperception, to its misperception of That Which Identifies You Truly.

And if you begin to discount and deny your body on the basis that it is a pure illusion, that demeaning attitude will begin to be reflected as an increased defensive attitude in your mind in which you are constantly on guard against your body, and therefore constantly sending out messengers of hate, messengers of distrust, to that which is the Visibility and Tangibility of your Divine Individuality. It will put you in a state of self-denial that will, as we said last week, hurt, hurt, hurt, and it will block healing, healing, healing. It's very important to understand this.

Again.

RAJ READING: Perceiving something alien to itself in your mind,...

RAJ: Meaning your Divinity.

RAJ READING: ...the ego turns to the body, NOT the mind, as its ally because the body is NOT part of you. This makes the body the ego's friend.

RAJ: In a way, that's backwards. The ego made the body its friend. The body does not have a capacity to desire to have the ego as a friend. But the ego has a capacity to make friends with anything for its own dastardly, dishonest purposes.

The ego needed to have a home base to operate from in order to lend credence to its existence. It's like moving to a new town. What do you do? You find a place to live so you have an address where you can receive mail. So you become grounded in that town by identifying yourself there with an address. And the ego needed an address, and it chose your body to be its address, except that what it was really choosing was its misperception of your Real Body as its address. And then, because your body embodies your capacity to feel, the ego used your feelings to give further substance to its illusory existence. And it uses your body for sensations of fear and anxiety, as well as peace, although it's always a false peace when that is what the ego employs it for.

And because all of this seems to be going on right where something Real is, meaning the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality, it's very easy for you to say, "I am feeling frightened. I am feeling tense." You see? When all that's happening is that this definition of yourself that you have come to believe is feeling the uncomfortableness of its unreality, is feeling that its unreality is vulnerable to exposure. It's like it's afraid that the curtain will be pulled back and the manipulator will be able to be seen. But worse than that, it will become clear that there isn't even any manipulator there behind the curtain. And so, it uses What Is Real About You for the purposes of keeping you from Knowing What Is Real About You.

Is there anything fuzzy about that? Is anyone not understanding what I'm saying?

Okay. Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is an alliance...

RAJ: Between the body and the ego.

RAJ READING: It is an alliance frankly based on separation. If you SIDE with this alliance you WILL be afraid, because you are siding with an alliance of fear.

The ego and the body...

RAJ: Meaning the ego and its misperception of What Is Real About You.

RAJ READING: ...conspire AGAINST your minds, and because the ego realizes that its "enemy" CAN end them both merely by knowing they are NOT part of him,...

RAJ: Meaning the ego and the ego's misperception of your body which it is using.

RAJ READING: ... they join in the attack together.

RAJ: This does not, again, mean that this body that the ego is perceiving has a capacity to act on its own. It's that the claim to authority which the ego puts forth, tries to confuse and fool you about, is used by the ego to cause your body to convey to you the ego's messages. In that way they work together, but understand that there is no body existing, Divinely or illusorily, that has a capacity to govern or influence.

It is your Body's Function to identify You perfectly. It is your servant. It is the servant of That Which Is Divine In You, ultimately meaning God. It has no capacity to act on its own. It only has the capacity to perfectly reflect that which it is identifying. And the only thing that it is identifying at any time is the Presence of God Individualized and Identified as You.

It's very important for this understanding of Body to register with you, and to be embraced by you, and to be honored by you, because only in that way will you bring forth the willingness to let go of any lesser definitions of it that you have been embracing for fear that if you didn't embrace it, you would die. In other words, if you did... if you don't embrace the thought that it is a body brought into existence by a sperm and an egg, made out of matter, which has a given lifespan and will naturally and inevitably begin to decay and ultimately die, if you are not willing to abandon that context, that definition, and all the beliefs associated with it, you will not be able to come into a transformed perspective and experience of body in which healing is inevitable, regeneration and redemption, the coming back into the spiritual, the coming back into the Experience of the Spiritual Original of What Your Body Is.

But if you're going to wake up, if you're going to be released from the trap the ego has created, you're going to have to step out of the box. You're going to have to be willing to reach outside your definitions. You're going to have to let new Meanings, with a capital "M", in.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego and the body conspire AGAINST your minds, and because the ego realizes that its "enemy"...

RAJ: Meaning the Divine One That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...CAN end them both merely by knowing they are NOT part of him, they join in the attack together. This is perhaps the strangest...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...perception...

RAJ: Not Truth. You see?

RAJ READING: ...the strangest perception of all, if you consider what it really involves. The ego, which is NOT real, attempts to persuade the mind, which IS real, that the mind is its own learning device, and that the learning device is more real than IT is.

RAJ: More real than it, the Mind, is.

RAJ READING: No-one in his right mind could POSSIBLY believe this, and no-one in his right mind DOES believe it.

RAJ: Now is anyone confused about what was just said? I think so.

You are Mind. You are the Conscious Experience of Being. The center and circumference of you is Mind, Consciousness, in which all experience is being experienced.

I pick up the piece of paper. [rustling paper noise] I hear it. I feel it. Where? Out here in front of me? No. In my Consciousness. Where are you experiencing everything that's going on in this room? Are you experiencing it in this room? Or is all of what you are experiencing in this room going on in you as a Conscious Experience, purely mental? Well I'll tell you, the answer is the latter. Everything is going on in your mind, even your experience of so-called physicality. It is a Conscious Experience. The Function of Mind is to be Conscious. To be Conscious of what? Itself.

Now, Mind is God. The Movement of God's Mind, because God is Life and therefore Action, the Movement of Mind is Experienced as Conscious Experience, Mental Experience. Mental Experience of what? Of the Nature and Character and Infinity and Omnipotence of the Mind that is Moving. In other words, of God. This Movement of Mind that is God is what you call Creation. And Creation is as Infinite as the Mind that is Moving.

So, Mind Moves. "In the beginning was the Word." And the Movement is Experienced. "And the Word was with God." And the Movement of Mind that is Experienced is recognized by That Which Is Being The Movement, in other words, Self-Recognition, God recognizing Himself in the Movement. "And the Word was God."

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God." And light bulb going on, "The Word was God." Self-Recognition. The Function of Mind is to be aware. And to be aware of what? The only thing there is to be aware of—God.

The Function of Mind is to glorify God by recognizing God in everything that's being experienced because God is the Only Thing That Is Happening. Now that's your Function. That's the Function of Mind.

Ah! But the ego has come up with this incredibly tiny and selfish idea of mind. It says that, "Your mind is right up here in your head. It's a brain. It's in synapses and electrical currents. And it's all a matter of reaction and response to physical stimuli from this physical world." Of course, it's talking about the Kingdom of Heaven. And it says, "It is the function of this mind to learn, to learn, to gather information." You see? In other words, it takes this Infinite Presence of Mind Whose Function, Only Function, is to fully acknowledge God in the Infinite Experience of Being Consciousness, it takes that and says, "Mind is a learning tool." You see? Diminishing it and twisting it into something that will occupy this Mind forever in a manner that will absolutely deprive it of remembering and accessing its Infinite and Real Function.

So let me read this again.

RAJ READING: The ego, which is NOT real, attempts to persuade the mind, which IS real, that the mind is its own learning device, and that the learning device is more real than...

RAJ: The Mind itself is. Although it says here:

RAJ READING: ...that the learning device is more real than IT is.

RAJ: You see how it shifts the emphasis?

You know, it's very much like sewing, for those of you who have used sewing machines. When you're new, you think you are supposed to watch the needle and where it's penetrating the fabric just so that you may make straight lines. But once you get a little experience, you find that where your attention needs to be given is the 5/8th inch seam-line marked on the footplate, which is 5/8th of an inch away from the needle. And if you keep the edge of the fabric on that what? GUIDELINE. You'll have a straight seam.

Inexperience causes you to look in the wrong place, give your attention to the wrong thing. Experience teaches you where to really look. The ego distracts you and tells you to put your attention where everything will keep you in a state of need of constant defense, whereas there's a Place of Excellence in You, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, the Altar, the Holy Spirit. That is where you need to be giving your attention. And that is where you need to be looking at your garment from, you might say. That is where you are to be looking at the world and universe from.

The Guide that you have within you, that is only a Guide because you've disowned it temporarily, and it's really your capital "S" Self. And you have to choose to give your attention to your Guide so that you may have a Guideline that will bring you Home because you're looking in the right Place where the opportunity to see things Truly resides.

So, again.

RAJ READING: The ego, which is NOT real, attempts to persuade the mind, which IS real, that the mind is its own learning device, and that the learning device is more real than IT ...

RAJ: The Mind.

RAJ READING: ...is. No-one in his right mind could POSSIBLY believe this, and no-one in his right mind DOES believe it.

Hear, then, the ONE answer of the Holy Spirit to ALL the questions which the ego raises. You are a Child of God, a priceless part of His Kingdom, which He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...created as part of Him.

RAJ: Remember God in the Act of Extension, or Creation, does not extend outside Himself, so everything that God is creating remains within God as God, and in that sense is incapable of losing Its Identity.

RAJ READING: You are a Child of God, a priceless part of His Kingdom, which He created as part of Him.

RAJ: Now, I'm going to put it this way. You are a Child of God right now, right here, not a Child of God in Reality, not a Child of God in the sweet bye and bye after you die.

RAJ READING: You are a Child of God,...

RAJ: Right now.

RAJ READING: ...a priceless part of His Kingdom...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: Right here.

RAJ READING: ...which He created as part of Him. Nothing else exists and ONLY this is real.

RAJ: Now what I've just read is a redefinition of your Conscious Experience of Being right here and right now. It is not a comment about the future or a different dimension. Let's be very clear on this point.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You have chosen a sleep in which you have had bad dreams, but the sleep is not real, and God calls you to awake. There will be nothing left of your dream when you hear Him because you WILL be awake. Your dreams have contained many of the ego's symbols, and they have confused you. Yet that was only because you were asleep AND DID NOT KNOW. When you awake...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: Which needs to happen in the here and now, not in the sweet bye and bye.

RAJ READING: When you awake you will see the truth around you and in you, and you will no longer believe in dreams because they will have no reality for you.

Yet the Kingdom and all that you have created there will have great reality for you because they are beautiful and true.

RAJ: And I'm going to reiterate and I have not talked about this much. I'm not going to say a lot about it now, but all this time that you have been preoccupied with misinterpretations of Reality, of the Kingdom of Heaven, and of your Self, you haven't stopped being the Christ. And you have managed to extend Love, and every Extension of Love has constituted a Creation. And therefore, in the Kingdom of Heaven, your Creations that you have been bringing into existence by virtue of Love that has managed to be expressed, remain for you to experience once again because they are Eternal.

You are, every single one of you, from time to time, creating Eternal Expressions. And I'll tell you something. When those Eternal Expressions have come into Being, almost always there has been a healing in the here and now for you, or for a loved one, or for a stranger that you had a momentary contact with and were undefended enough to truly care. And in that moment of undefendedness, Love was extended, and that one was healed. That one's life was transformed, whether you ever heard about it or not. You see?

What I want to convey to you is that no matter how mortal you think you are, and no matter how much you think your mind is a learning tool for getting better, or for creating better defense, you are forever still being the Only Thing God Is Being right where you are, the Christ That You Are. And in the Kingdom of Heaven your Extensions of Love abide Eternally and await your remembrance of them.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: In the Kingdom,...

RAJ: Right here and right now.

RAJ READING: ...where you are and what you are is perfectly certain.

RAJ: In other words, there's no confusion about it for you.

RAJ READING: There is no doubt there because the first question was never asked.

RAJ: What is that question? "What am I?"

Again.

RAJ READING: There is no doubt there because the first question was never asked.

RAJ: Even the asking of the question was part of the dream, asked by [laugh] a fantastic or fantasy presence that didn't even exist.

Continuing.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read: Having finally been wholly answered, IT HAS NEVER BEEN.]

RAJ READING: Being...

RAJ: Comma.

RAJ READING: ...alone lives in the Kingdom, where everything lives in God without question. The time that was spent on questioning in the dream has given way to creation and to its eternity.

YOU...

RAJ: And I'm going to add again: Right here, right now.

RAJ READING: ...are as certain as God because you are as true as He is, but what was once quite certain in your minds has become only the ABILITY for certainty.

RAJ: In other words, when you chose to go it alone, then everything that you are became nothing more than a potential for you to become because you lost the Experience of your Identity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The introduction of abilities into being was the beginning of UNcertainty because abilities are potentials, NOT accomplishments. Your abilities are totally useless in the presence of God's accomplishments, and also of yours. Accomplishments are results which HAVE BEEN achieved.

RAJ: In other words, accomplishments have nothing to do with a Birthright which is already yours before you thought to lift a finger.

RAJ READING: When they are perfect, abilities are meaningless. It is curious that the perfect must now be perfected.

RAJ: Meaning that you who are the Mind whose Function is to recognize God everywhere, has been turned into a series of mental processes by which you can ultimately arrive at a point of perfection.

RAJ READING: It is curious that the perfect must now be perfected.

RAJ: In fact, it's more than curious.

RAJ READING: In fact, it is impossible. You must remember, however, that when you put yourselves in an impossible situation, you believed that the impossible WAS possible.

RAJ: You believed that you actually could do things yourself. Impossible. And right now, the apparent difficulty of existence lies in the fact that you're still attempting to do what's impossible. But you are beginning to hear the answer.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Abilities must be DEVELOPED, or you cannot use them. This is not true of anything that God created, but it is the kindest solution possible to what YOU have made. In an impossible situation you can develop your abilities to the point where they can GET YOU OUT OF IT. You have a Guide to how to develop them, but you have no COMMANDER except yourself.

RAJ: This is important.

RAJ READING: You have a Guide to how to develop them,...

RAJ: It's the Holy Spirit. It's Me. It's every one of the awakened Brotherhood who are working with each one of you—your Guide, your Guides.

RAJ READING: You have a Guide to how to develop them, but you have no COMMANDER except yourself.

RAJ: This is the down-to-earth, nitty-gritty, practical aspect of what we're talking about. It's the part all of you are reluctant to accept because you would rather have someone else or something else wave a magic wand and heal you or wake you up. And there ain't no such creature.

Again.

RAJ READING: You have a Guide to how to develop them,...

RAJ: Abilities.

RAJ READING: ...but you have no COMMANDER except yourself. This leaves YOU in charge of the Kingdom, with both a Guide to FIND it and a means to KEEP it. You have a model to follow who will STRENGTHEN your command, and never detract from it in any way. You therefore retain the central place in your perceived enslavement, a fact which ITSELF demonstrates that you are NOT enslaved.

RAJ: In this realization lies your salvation.

"Oh, but does this mean you're guilty?" Ah. Another question not to try to answer. No. It means what it says.

RAJ READING: You therefore retain the central place in your perceived enslavement,...

RAJ: Pay attention to that. That's empowering. That's not a negative. That's a statement of releasing Truth.

RAJ READING: You therefore retain the central place...

RAJ: As commander.

RAJ READING: ...in your perceived enslavement, a fact which ITSELF demonstrates that you are NOT enslaved.

You are in an impossible situation only because you thought it was possible to be in one. You WOULD be...

RAJ: Now listen to this, 'cause this is the part none of you wants to hear.

RAJ READING: You WOULD be in an impossible situation if God showed you your perfection and PROVED to you that you were wrong.

RAJ: But that's what all of you want to do. That's what all of you want. You want God to show you the answer. You want a commander other than yourself. You want an authority other than yourself. You want an authority other than your very own conviction that you must bring every ounce of your energy and commitment to. And until you bring every ounce of energy and commitment to it yourself for your reason, you won't be behaving in your True Identity.

Now, if God comes along and be's the Commander and commands you to recognize the Truth About Yourself, it won't be necessary for you to bring every ounce of your energy and commitment to claiming your Divine Birthright. And until you reclaim your Divine Birthright, you will not have undone the bill of divorcement that you so creatively brought into play.

Is this clear? Do you understand why God can't relieve you? The saying is, "A mind that's changed against its will, is of the same opinion still." If God changes your mind for you, you'll still be of the same opinion.

How many of you have done what someone else said to do because they said to do it? Or how many of you have told someone else what to do and they did it, and then subsequently, when having done it brought them in, let's say, in face to face with principled responsibilities that accompany such behavior, they felt that much too much was being demanded of them, and life was becoming hell for them, and they turned around and blamed you? "Well you told me to do it! Now look what's happened!"

Again.

RAJ READING: You WOULD be in an impossible situation if God showed you your perfection and PROVED to you that you were wrong. This would demonstrate that the perfect...

RAJ: Meaning you.

RAJ READING: ...were inadequate to bring THEMSELVES to the awareness of their perfection, and thus side with the belief that those who have everything need help and are therefore helpless. This the kind of "reasoning" which the ego engages in, but God, Who KNOWS that His creations are perfect, does NOT insult them. This would be as impossible as the ego's notion that IT has insulted HIM.

RAJ: Meaning God.

RAJ READING: That is why the Holy Spirit NEVER commands. To command is to assume INequality, which the Holy Spirit demonstrates does not exist. Fidelity to premises is a law of mind,...

RAJ: When the Divine Mind (God) Moves, the Movement is always True and Forever True to the premises that set the Movement into Motion. In other words, God's Will, God's Nature, God's Character, is Always Perfectly Embodied in Everything He Does.

RAJ READING: Fidelity to premises is a law of mind, and everything God created is faithful to His laws. Fidelity to other laws is also possible, however, not because the laws are true, but because YOU MADE THEM. What would be gained if God proved to you that you have thought insanely? Can God lose His own certainty? We have frequently stated that what you teach you ARE. Would you have God teach you that you have sinned? If He confronted...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...the self you made with the truth He created for you, what could you be but afraid? You would doubt your sanity, which is the one thing in which you can FIND the sanity He gave you.

RAJ: My God. If God showed up in your living room and pointed His finger at you and said, "You have sinned!" This is Almighty God making a pronouncement on you that must be the truth, and therefore must be an eternal truth. That must be a truth that you would be wise to do nothing other than accept. After all, it would be unwise to challenge the Word of God. Now, if you were consistent with the premise, you would be in a state of eternal damnation because God had said, "You have sinned!" No!

When Paul sits down here, he gets out of the way. His ego sense of himself gets out of the way so what can happen? So that that which expresses the Truth can come through him, which is me. And what am I doing? I'm being here out of the way as an ego letting the Truth come through that is God's Will.

Have I ever condemned any of you? Have I ever said you were real sinners? Have I ever condemned you? Or have I monotonously and persistently expressed to you the Truth about you, that right now you are the Sons and Daughters of God, that right now you are the Christ which you're not letting register with you because you're so preoccupied with defense? But have I condemned you for that? No. I've said, "Hey! You have an alternative to looking at things through your defense. And this alternative is to go within to the Altar and listen for the Truth from what? The Holy Spirit."

"Oh. What? Some other entity called the Holy Spirit? Part of the Holy Trinity. Something real but not you." No. I said to listen to the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than what? Your Right Mind! So that if you listen to your Right Mind, there's only one inevitable thing that can happen. You will come back into focus as your Self, What You Divinely Are. Does that convict you and make you guilty of anything? No. What it does is that it convicts you about something that's Real About You, which calls for no penalty, but the reversal of all penalties.

So what I'm teaching you, what I am illuminating to you is that the Truth Is True About You right here and right now in spite of everything you're thinking. And if you will pay attention to it, it will do nothing but confirm more and more clearly to you the healing, transforming Truth About You that will integrate You, Divinely speaking, once again.

I have never said I can do any of this for you. I've said you must take the steps. You must reclaim your Divinity. I leave you in the position of Commander so that when clarity occurs, you will know that it is because you have reversed your decision to be independent which had caused you to become confused. And that awareness keeps your Integrity intact. Whereas, if the Holy Spirit or God corrected you and authored a command that you couldn't deny, you would not have that Conscious Experience of the reintegration of your Integrity. And that therefore, the new Self Experience that you're having is not only absolutely Real, it's absolutely consistent with your intent... your intent to no longer be confused and suffer. And so the whole process is capital "S" Self-Affirming, and capital "S" Self-congealing, and capital "S" Self-Substantiating.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God does not teach.

RAJ: How many times have you said, or have you heard someone say, "Well God gave me that experience to teach me a lesson." Well, here it is.

RAJ READING: God does not teach. To teach is to imply a lack which God KNOWS is not there. God is not conflicted. Teaching aims at change, but God created only the changeless. The separation was...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: The separation was not a loss of perfection, but a failure in communication.

RAJ: You hung up on God! [single spontaneous audience laugh] You didn't lose your Perfection in the process, you just lost the connection. And you didn't know how to use the Perfection. You didn't know how to own the Perfection. So now, your Perfection became a potential to achieve. And you know what? You used your innate Perfection unconsciously to engage in the quest for gaining Perfection.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: A harsh and strident form of communication arose as the ego's voice. It could not shatter the peace of God, but it COULD shatter YOURS.

RAJ: And I will say this. It could shatter yours because now that you had hung up on God, you didn't have the Constant, Conscious Experience of your Omnipotence, your Inviolability.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God did not blot it out,...

RAJ: Your Peace.

RAJ READING: ...because to eradicate it would be to attack it. Being questioned, He did not question. He merely gave the Answer. His Answer is your Teacher.

RAJ: Remember the very first sentence of this section.

RAJ READING: Remember that the Holy Spirit is the ANSWER, NOT the question.

RAJ: The moment you chose to abandon God, to abandon your Divinity and dally with the ego, at that very moment your Divinity became held in trust where? The only place it could be, right in the middle of You. The answer was provided the moment you chose to become unconscious of the Truth. And it's been held inviolably in trust the whole time.

Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God. And it doth not yet appear what you shall be. It doesn't matter what you shall be. Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God. You see?

I know that sometimes you feel as though the things we're discussing don't have any practical application. Or there are things on your mind of a practical nature that you would really like to have the answers to in preference to what I'm sharing with you at the moment. Don't fret about it.

There is a willingness in you to see beyond your present perceptions. And that willingness coupled with your bringing your attention here and my being with you expressing the Father's Will is causing movement and transformation, not because you have been commanded to move and progress, but because the Expression of Love coupled with your willingness to abandon your boxes constitutes you yielding. Yielding your hold to your concepts, and yielding to the influx of that which is changing your lives and causing you to respond in your day naturally in new ways.

Trust me. Do you know I love you? I love you.

And I look forward to being with you next week.

AUDIENCE: Thank you.

RAJ: You are welcome.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet as well.

RAJ: I want to backtrack a little bit. You've heard me say that, "You are not God, but God is all there is of you truly." And as we have been moving through the Course, it's become obvious that the first legitimate step one takes in the process of his awakening occurs when you arrive at an impasse and you don't know what the heck to do, and yet there is a demand for something to be done. And all of the resources you thought you had are not answering the need. And you finally reach out beyond your memory, your past experiences, your best theories, and you say "Help."

Now, in the terminology of the Course, this is a matter of turning toward the Altar which is right in the middle of you. It's the way you let something else in. And I've identified the Altar as the Holy Spirit which we've learned is nothing more than your Right Mind. The Holy Spirit is your capacity to see things God's Way. That's the simplest way it can be put.

But remember that the action involved in turning to the Holy Spirit, turning to the Altar, is one of abandoning your best judgments, your best theories, your strongest beliefs, all the definitions you've given to everything. It is experienced as the abandonment of the "I" that you have thought you were, the self-sufficient "I" that you thought you were, or the self-sufficient "I" that you thought you ought to be. It's a matter of abandoning that and yielding to what you find yourself knowing when you've turned to the Holy Spirit, opened the door and invited It in. When you do this, you are abandoning the question, "What am I?" The concern you feel about needing to know what you are is left behind.

And if you persist in giving your attention to the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, you will ultimately never return to that place of independence that you thought was your normal state. You will not turn to the Holy Spirit, learn of It, and then abandon It and come back and apply in your independent life, and as an independent entity, what you have learned. If you are persistent in yielding into the Holy Spirit, you might say that the Holy Spirit, your Right Mind, will subsume and consume you, and the experience of it will be the Experience of your Identity.

It's very important to understand that you don't lean into the Truth, you don't lean into God's Perspective, so that you might leave God's Presence and practice God's Perspective independently. This has nothing to do with learning how to be independent more effectively. It has to do with abandoning the imagined state of independence entirely.

I said, "You are not God, but God is all there is of you." I could equally say, "You are not the Holy Spirit, but the Holy Spirit is all there is of you." I use these words so that you might be very clear about the fact that waking up involves an actual shift of emphasis, an actual shift of focus that causes you to begin to be in what is to you an entirely new way of being.

The tendency, the slippery, confusing, unloving goal of the ego causes you to say, "Well, if God is all there is to me, I must be God." But this "I" is still the same "I" that you've been defining yourself as up until this moment. And if you leave it at that, "Well, God is all there is of me, so therefore I am God," you will simply attempt to be independent more powerfully, with more arrogance, and you'll still be in the middle of your dream. You'll define things more vehemently. You will determine how things are supposed to be with more force, and you will inflict your definitions on everyone else with a greater sense of authority. And you will have missed the point, and you will have missed the opportunity to make a shift. And God's Perspective will still be unavailable to you.

You know what? The key words for you to use as the premise for every single moment of Conscious Experience you're having are, "Thy Will be done." If this doesn't remain in the foreground of your awareness, you will easily slip back into the well-established habit of, "my will be done." And this "me," whose will is to be done, will be the same old you that you have been dallying with, we'll say, forever, although that's not absolutely true.

You want to get out of the rut! You want to skip the track! The point is to no longer have this repetitive experience, a struggle, a constantly reaching for fulfillment and never reaching it.

Every moment is your opportunity to say, "Father, what would You have me see instead of this? What would You have me see instead of what I'm seeing? What do You see here that it is my Birthright to be seeing and experiencing without any distortions, without any biases being applied to it? What is Your Perspective?"

Because God is all there is of you, it is your Birthright to be experiencing His Perspective. And so you must request It. You must ask for It to be given to you. And you must abandon your insistence upon seeing it your way. So I'm going to put it this way. For the next couple of hours, or for the next couple of weeks, or for the next couple of years, or I'm going to say, for the next couple of centuries or lifetimes, you cannot afford... you cannot afford to think that you have any other option in front of you than yielding to the Father, constantly saying, "Not my will be done, but Thine be done. What is Your Will?" You're not going to have to just do this for a couple of weeks and then you'll get it, and then you'll be able to take hold of things from a proper perspective. We're talking about making a shift back into your Right Mind and staying there forever because that's your Sanity.

Again, your Sanity isn't something that once you've gotten it back, you can employ to be better in an independent mode, which is insanity.

The experience of joining with the Father by saying, "Thy Will, not mine, be done. I yield to Your Will. I yield to Your Perspective. And I yield to it unequivocally forever.", that will move you into a brand new Conscious Experience of Being, a brand new Conscious Experience of Everything you've already been conscious of, plus infinitely more. And that experience will be the definition of you. You will Know What You Are. You will Know WHAT You Are. You will not Know What YOU are. Do you see what the difference in the emphasis is?

You will Know that You Are the Conscious Experience Of Creation, of All of Creation. You are the Conscious Experience of It, the recognizer of It, which is the recognizer of the Presence of God in every Infinite Aspect of His Being, meaning that All of Creation will be disclosed to you and embraced by you, including the Aspects of Creation that you're experiencing right here and right now.

So this is not an escape from what you're experiencing. It's an escape from the lens through which you are looking at what you're experiencing. The lens of isolated independence, isolated authoritative independence.

So to put it simply, at this point in your so-called journey of awakening, you must simply accept the fact that your task is to constantly yield to the Father's Perspective, is to constantly reach into that Place of Excellence in You, and yield to It, which you will not experience as an experience of what you are. You will experience it as though you're yielding into something you don't recognize as you. What you're doing is, you're yielding into the Harmony of God's Presence. God has to be more important to you than the question, "What am I?" So for all practical purposes, what I'm saying is, count on it that you will never have any other option available to you than yielding into that which you don't recognize as you yet.

And do not assume that doing this will help you find out who you are and what you are as an independent entity who, because of the investigation of Truth, will be able to be independent more efficiently and more successfully. You will not be returning to the "I" that you think you are right now.

Whether you like what I've said or not, do you understand what I've said? Is anybody confused about it still? Okay.

What better thing do you have to do than explore the potential that I've described of leaning into God? Remember that you've been trying the alternative. You've imagined that you had an option, and you've been exercising that option, and the result has not been bliss. The result has not been uninterrupted harmony. The result has not been the permanent absence of suffering, of sickness, of death. So if what you have been doing has involved all of those things that I've just mentioned, why would you give preference to continuing what will continue that experience?

You do not have something better to do than to explore yielding into that Place of Excellence in You that I've told you that you have, and which I guarantee you that if you will lean into, you will find will illuminate you and illumine your mind, and provide you with clarity that allows you to behave in a new way, because the basis for your actions will not be coming from your memory, your conditioned thinking, your habits, your ruts. You deserve more than you're experiencing, because your Birthright is far greater than what you are experiencing. Because What You Are is far greater than the definition you've given yourselves. And anyone who will begin to explore this will find within themselves confirmation of the Truth of what I'm saying.

Okay. Let's go to the book.

This next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: "To Have, Give All to All"

Like any good teacher, the Holy Spirit does know more than you do NOW, but He teaches only to make you EQUAL with Him.

RAJ: In a way that's what I've been describing so far today. It will be wise for you just to assume that the Holy Spirit will always know more than you, and therefore there will be no reason for you ever to stop learning from the Holy Spirit. There will be no reason for you to withdraw your attention from what the Holy Spirit has to share with you, or with what your Right Mind has to disclose to you about Who You Are.

As you persistently let the Holy Spirit define you by giving you the Experience of Truth, you will find the Holy Spirit occupying more and more of your Conscious Awareness until this puny little false sense of yourself that invited the Holy Spirit in becomes so much less predominant in the face of the increasing Presence of the Holy Spirit's Perspective in You, that you begin to forget the question, "What am I as an independent entity?" It will diminish until you begin to forget to think that what you're learning is something to bring back into the independent state you started out from so that you can be independent more effectively.

And when the last little bit of willfulness, the last little right to independence that you've been holding on to goes up in a wisp of smoke, all there will be to you is the Holy Spirit Whose Function is to serve God by glorifying God, by acknowledging God in every Aspect of the Experience of Being Conscious.

Again.

RAJ READING: Like any good teacher, the Holy Spirit does know more than you do NOW, but He teaches only to make you EQUAL with Him. This is because you had already taught wrongly, having believed what was not true. YOU DID NOT BELIEVE IN YOUR OWN PERFECTION.

RAJ: Now here's an interesting question.

RAJ READING: Could God teach you that you had made a split mind, when He knows your mind only as whole? What God DOES know is that His communication channels are not open to Him, so that He cannot impart His joy, and know that His Children are wholly joyous. This is an ongoing process, not in time, but in eternity.

Again.

RAJ READING: What God DOES know is that His communication channels are not open to Him,...

RAJ: It's sort of like God recognizing that you haven't called Him for a while, so there's no opportunity to chat, there's no opportunity to be in communion. Why? Because you're so preoccupied with this challenging and wonderful experience of being independent, and doing things your way, and defining things the way you want to define them, and enjoying the challenge of overcoming the difficulties you have in this state of mind, not realizing that you're having the difficulties because [laugh]... because you are functioning at odds with your Being.

God's Function is to impart His Joy. It's actually to extend All Of What He Is and know that His Children are wholly joyous, are experiencing What He Is Extending fully. This is an ongoing process. It never ceases, not in time, but in Eternity.

RAJ READING: God's extending outward, though not His completeness, is blocked when the Sonship does not communicate with Him as one.

RAJ: In other words, His Completeness can't be blocked, but the Extension outward, the Experience of His Extension outward is blocked when you, the Sonship, does not communicate with Him as One.

RAJ READING: So He thought,...

RAJ: God thought.

RAJ READING: ... "My Children sleep, and must be awakened."

How can you wake children better and more kindly than by a gentle Voice that will not frighten them, but will merely remind them that the night is over and the Light has come? You do not inform them that the nightmares which frightened them so badly were not real because children BELIEVE in magic. You merely reassure them that they are safe NOW. Then you train them to RECOGNIZE THE DIFFERENCE between sleeping and waking, so that they will understand they need not be afraid of dreams. Then, when bad dreams come, they will call on the light THEMSELVES to dispel them.

RAJ: That's the Function of the Holy Spirit. That's the Function of your Right Mind. It is the Presence of Love. And so, as Love, it addresses you in your dream lovingly. Not in a way that causes more fear. Not in a way that causes you to feel more guilty. But in a gentle, inviting way, which by its very nature communicates the experience of safety, the experience of kindness that doesn't have to be defended against. This is the Nature of your Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: A wise teacher teaches through approach, NOT avoidance. He does NOT emphasize what you must avoid to escape from harm so much as what you need to learn to have joy.

RAJ: He does not emphasize what you must avoid to escape from harm, so much as what you need to learn to have joy. You see a different emphasis?

RAJ READING: This is true even of the world's teachers. Consider the confusion a child would experience if he were told, "Do not do THIS because it might hurt you and make you unsafe, but if you do THAT you will escape from harm and be safe, and then you will not be afraid.” All of this could be included in only three words: “Do ONLY that!”

RAJ: You see? If you're giving directions, you don't say, "Now, don't go to the left, because if you go to the left, this will happen and that will happen and the other thing will happen, and you will be really sorry!" All you have to say is, "Go to the right." You see?

RAJ READING: ...“Do ONLY that!” This simple statement is perfectly clear, easily understood, and very easily remembered.

The Holy Spirit NEVER itemizes errors because He does not frighten children, and those who lack wisdom...

RAJ: And I will say: or Experience of What Is True.

RAJ READING: ...ARE children. Yet He ALWAYS answers their call, and His dependability makes THEM more certain.

RAJ: Now what does this mean in practical terms? It means that when you turn to the Altar within you, and when you invite the Consciousness of Truth to be revealed to you by the Holy Spirit, the very manner in which that provision is made, the very tone of it not only illuminates Truth, but conveys to you the wisdom of your making the request, and the fact that in making the request and receiving the answer, it doesn't punish you. It doesn't uncover guilt in you. It is done in a way that is perfectly comfortable, kind. And this increases your confidence in reaching out to the Holy Spirit. Everything about the experience is confirming of the wisdom of what you've done and the safety you can count on in the process of the provision being made.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Children DO confuse fantasy and reality, and they ARE frightened because they do not know the difference. The Holy Spirit makes NO distinction among dreams. He merely shines them away. His Light is ALWAYS the call to awake, whatever you have been dreaming. Nothing lasting lies in dreams, and the Holy Spirit, shining with the Light from God Himself, speaks only for what lasts forever.

RAJ: What does the Holy Spirit...? Your Right Mind, shining with the Light from God Himself, speaks only for what lasts forever. You see?

Why would you not choose to yield into that forever, and never once think about gathering the Truth so that you might stop leaning into that, and come back and be a better, more effective, more successful, independent authoritative entity?

Continuing.

[Editor's Note: Heading in first and second edition: To Have, Give All to All (T-#96/104)]

RAJ READING: When your body and your ego and your dreams are gone, you will know that YOU will last forever.

RAJ: When your identification with body, and your identification with your ego, and your identification with your dreams are gone, you will know that You will last forever.

RAJ READING: Many think this is accomplished through death, but NOTHING is accomplished through death because death IS nothing.

RAJ: It's part of the fantasy, part of the strange imaginings.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: EVERYTHING is accomplished through life, and life is of the mind and IN the Mind.

RAJ: Remember what we were talking about last week. That this piece of paper [rustling it] that I can hear, and that I can feel, and that I can see, is not out somewhere in front of me in space, but space and paper and sound and feel and appearance are all mental experiences. They are all going on in Conscious Awareness as Ideas being Experienced.

Again.

RAJ READING: EVERYTHING is accomplished through life, and life is of the mind and IN the Mind.

RAJ: Capital "M" Mind.

RAJ READING: The body neither lives nor dies because it cannot contain you who ARE life.

RAJ: And I will add that: Because You Are Life, then your body cannot live or die; it can only identify your Presence, just as All of Creation identifies the Presence of God.

Remember, "You are not God, but God is all there is of You." The tree is not God, but God is all there is of the tree.

When you abandon your obsession with awareness of body, you will be able to... you will be available to the experience of yourself as Mind in which body... the experience of body is occurring. And then you will not be able to do anything to the body, and the body will not be able to do anything to you. You will simply be observing everything without an obsessive identification with any one thing you're experiencing. When you're obsessed with effect, your mind is not available to experience the Cause. But when your Mind is available to experience the Cause, Effect is seen in its proper perspective.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If we...

RAJ: You and I.

RAJ READING: ...share the same mind, you can overcome death BECAUSE I DID. Death is an attempt to resolve conflict by not willing at all. Like any other impossible solution which the ego attempts, IT WILL NOT WORK.

God did not make the body because it is destructible, and therefore not of the Kingdom.

RAJ: I must make this clear. God did not make the body as you are presently perceiving it, because the way you are presently perceiving it is as something destructible, and therefore not of the Kingdom. The body, in other words, the body we're talking about here is the symbol of what you think you are. You see, throughout the Course, the distinction is consistently made clear. The body that is being talked about that God did not make is not the Visibility and Tangibility of an Idea of God; it is the symbol of what you think you are. And you think you're independent. And you think you are an authorizer. And you think you are alone. And you think you are vulnerable. And you think that you have to... that engaging in life is engaging in defense.

And from this crazy perspective, you look at the Visibility and Tangibility of your Divine Individuality which is God Presencing Himself right where you are, and you define the body as a means of defense, as your shield, as the vessel which contains your will, and therefore gives this presence of an imagined identity substance and force, so that it becomes the means of inflicting your independent will upon your others and your world, so as to what? Secure your safety.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read: The body is the symbol of what you THINK you are.]

That is the symbol of what you think you are, and that's the body that's being discussed here as not having been made by God because it's destructible.

RAJ READING: It...

RAJ: This symbol of what you think you are called the body.

RAJ READING: It is clearly a separation device, and therefore does not exist.

RAJ: This concept of body, this symbol of what you think you are, does not exist any more than the identity that you have defined for yourself separate and apart from What God Has Expressed of Himself right where you are that constitutes You which is Eternal.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit, as always, takes what you have made...

RAJ: This symbol of what you think you are.

RAJ READING: ...and translates it into a learning device FOR you.

RAJ: I want you to remember that I said before that when you take any part of Creation, any part of God's Omnipresencing of Himself, of rendering Himself experienceable, when you take any part of it and apply a definition to it, and commit yourself to your definition of it, you block the Experience of What That Thing Really Is. And What That Thing Really Is, because it will not function according to the definitions you gave it, will cause you to have experiences that challenge your definition of it. And therefore, the definition of it that you're looking at becomes a learning tool, or we could say, What It Really Is becomes a learning device for you to bring you back into the Conscious Awareness of What It Truly Is. What It Truly Is will not conform to your definition, and therefore will be eternally, or at least for as long as you're trying to hold on to the definition, a trigger to a revised and more correct perception.

Whatever of God you are denying will become for you a learning tool. Not because that's What It Is, but because that's what your denial of it causes it to be experienced as by you.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit, as always, takes what you have made...

RAJ: Takes what you have made-up.

RAJ READING: ...and translates it into a learning device FOR you. Again as always, He reinterprets what the ego uses as an argument FOR separation into a demonstration AGAINST it. If the mind can heal the body but the body cannot heal the mind, then the mind must be STRONGER. Every miracle demonstrates this.

We have said that the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...is the MOTIVATION for miracles.

RAJ: And we could say, the impulse for miracles.

RAJ READING: This is because He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...always tells you that ONLY the mind is real since ONLY the mind CAN BE SHARED. The body...

RAJ: The symbol of what you think you are.

RAJ READING: ...IS separate, and therefore CANNOT be part of you. To be of one mind IS meaningful, but to be of one BODY is meaningless. By the laws of mind, then, the BODY is meaningless. To the Holy Spirit THERE IS NO ORDER OF DIFFICULTY IN MIRACLES. This is FAMILIAR enough to you by now, but it has not yet become believable. Therefore, you do not understand it and cannot USE it.

RAJ: I want you to realize that when you identify yourself as a body, when you apply this strange definition to the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality, you find accompanying that definition a plethora of sub-concepts, an unending list of justifications for the definition. And so as you apprehend, perceive, this body that is the symbol of what you think you are, your mind is far from single. It's full of clutter. It is not pure, without anything extraneous to it. It is infinitely populated with justifications for defense, justification for the way you see things, justification for exercising authority, and on and on and on.

What you find when you turn toward the Altar and you invite the Holy Spirit in, is that the clutter dissolves and you become Single of Mind. And when you become Single of Mind, you experience Clarity. And you want to know something? You... this Clarity is Infinite. It seems to you that when you meditate and your mind becomes still, that your attention has been narrowed down to nothing. Right? Nothing is occupying your mind. But in valuing the silence and being willing to abide in the silence, you find Knowing beginning to be felt. Not thought, but felt. And you have the opportunity to find that this silence is Peace that is humungous, that is Infinite.

And if you will continue to insist upon abiding in that Peace, you will find that Peace to be the context for the Infinite Experience of Creation in which none of Creation is outside of you. And it will alter your direct experience of everything that is immediately in front of you. The petal on the flower. The branch on the tree. The glass on the table.

It is as though it's a paradox. When you abandon the clutter of the ego, and it seems as though your attention has become very narrow and focused on nothing, you are standing at the Threshold of the Conscious Experience of Peace that is the Context of the Infinite Experience of Creation Itself, the Infinite Self-Expression of God. That is what Singleness of Mind means.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have too much to accomplish on behalf of the Kingdom to let this crucial concept slip away.

RAJ: What crucial concept? That there is no order of difficulty in miracles.

[Editor's Note: Above, Raj used the word "critical" instead of the word "crucial," although "crucial" is the actual word in the HLC Text and Sparkly Book.]

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is a real foundation stone of the thought system I teach and want YOU to teach. You cannot perform miracles without believing it because it is a belief in perfect equality. Only one equal gift CAN be offered to the equal Sons of God, and that is FULL APPRECIATION.

RAJ: Full appreciation is appreciation without anything extraneous to it present. It's indivisible appreciation. It is singleness of mind, singleness of intent.

RAJ READING: Only one equal gift CAN be offered to the equal Sons of God, and that is FULL APPRECIATION. Nothing more and nothing less. Without a range an order of difficulty IS meaningless, and there must BE no range in what you offer to each other.

RAJ: Well, the only way you could have a range from difficult to easy, the only way you could have a range of anything to extend to your Brother is if you introduce something more than Peace into the picture. You see? It's only if you find a way to add something more than Indivisible Unity to the picture. Well, that's the problem of being you're already experiencing, right? [laughing]

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit,...

RAJ: Your Right Mind who what?

RAJ READING: ...Who leads to God, translates communication into being, just as He ultimately translates perception into knowledge.

RAJ: Communication seems to be made of up many things. Being is Pure, Single. Perception is made up of many perceptions, but it gets translated into Knowledge, or what I've referred to as Knowing with a capital "K". And that's Single, uncluttered with anything extraneous to the Conscious Experience of What God Is Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego uses the body for attack, for pleasure, and for pride. The insanity of this perception makes it a fearful one indeed. The Holy Spirit sees the body ONLY as a means of COMMUNICATION, and because communicating is sharing, it becomes communion.

RAJ: Again, a Singleness. A Oneness.

RAJ READING: You might argue that fear as well as love can be communicated, and therefore can be shared.

RAJ: It does sound reasonable, doesn't it?

RAJ READING: Yet this is not so real as it sounds. Those who communicate fear...

RAJ: And here's the point.

RAJ READING: Those who communicate fear are promoting attack and attack always BREAKS communication, making it impossible.

Egos DO join together in temporary allegiance,...

RAJ: Mutually-agreed-upon definitions.

RAJ READING: ...but always for WHAT EACH ONE CAN GET SEPARATELY. The Holy Spirit communicates only WHAT EACH ONE CAN GIVE TO ALL.

RAJ: The Holy Spirit teaches only that which embodies Unity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: He never takes anything back because He wants YOU to keep it.

RAJ: Who's this "He"? The Holy Spirit. What is the Holy Spirit? Nothing more than your Right Mind. Why would your Right Mind want you to keep what It has to give? Because it's your Birthright. Because it is something that you must be experiencing. Because that's the Experience that God impulsed into Manifestation of Himself right where you are.

RAJ READING: Therefore, His teaching...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's teaching.

RAJ READING: *...begins with the lesson: To HAVE, GIVE all TO all.

RAJ: "Ohh! But if you don't have all, how can you give all to all?" Remember, all has nothing to do with quantity. All has to do with Indivisibility.

The moment you manage to silence the thinking in your mind, and it seems to you as though your awareness has been narrowed down to not being conscious of anything, you have moved into a Singular Experience, the Singular Experience of Peace. And until you've done that for the very first time, you're unaware that your Peace is available to you without your having to govern your environment and get everyone around you to behave in a non-threatening way.

Up until that moment, you have believed that the only way you can get Peace is if you can control your environment, and those around you, into behaving in a way that is non-threatening so you can dare to relax. And your Peace has depended on not only what everyone else is doing, but your capacity to control them.

But the first time you meditate and you experience the absence of thoughts, and you experience the absence of fear, and you experience Peace that has nothing to do with anything other than where you have brought your attention to, you have taken the first step out of the need for defense. You have taken the first step out of a conviction that you have lived with that you must control everything. Why? Because you have brought your mind into a Singular Experience... no... you have brought your attention into a Singular Experience, and this Singular Experience of Peace is the ground of Conscious Awareness—Mind.

How do you give All to All? By giving a Singular Gift. Because in the Singularity of It, in the Purity of It, All awaits you and everyone else. The All that you can give away, the All that you are able to extend is that which has nothing extraneous to it in it. Peace is not the only Singular Experience. Joy emerges out of Peace. Love emerges out of Peace. Love is a Singularity. Joy is a Singularity.

So, the Holy Spirit's teaching begins with the lesson: To have, give All to All. Value the Singular Experience enough to have it. And then be with everyone and everything else from there so that everything you do embodies that Singularity. That's the first lesson of the Holy Spirit.

And then, [whispered] be careful, because you don't want to say, like Joan of Arcadia, [very amused voice] "I'm getting it! I'm getting it! Now I know how to do it without having to listen again." You see?

Being is Beautiful. Everything about Existence is Pure Artistry. Everything about the process of awakening, of you coming back into your Right Mind, is exquisitely orchestrated, if I may put it that way. And every step of the way is a step to enjoy because of the manner in which it uncovers your innate Integrity, replacing the sense of yourself that feels that it doesn't have any integrity and that it must create it. And it must create it by fooling everyone around it into believing that it has integrity, and getting their confirmation to confirm it, and on and on and on.

There is only ugliness in the ignorance of Truth. But the emergence from Truth is as exquisitely Beautiful and Artistic as Creation Itself. Open your eyes.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week. And again, I want you to look forward to my being with you all week. I hope you will be asking of Me, or the Holy Spirit, "What is the Father's Perspective here?"

Remember, my Function is the same as the Holy Spirit's. Each of your Guides has the same Function I have, and that the Holy Spirit has to gently, lovingly, and supportively nudge you with an experience of safety into a more Singular Awareness, one uncluttered by irrelevant static and crap.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the internet as well.

For those who are listening for the first time, you may notice differences from time to time between what I'm reading and what's in the first and second editions of the Course, and that's because I'm reading from the transcript as completed by Bill Thetford.

Last week we ended with the statement that the Holy Spirit's teaching begins with the lesson: To have, give all to all. And there was a particularly significant point brought out in regard to this, and that is it doesn't mean to give all, every thing, every little thing, every bit of the multitudinous things that you have. It means to give a Singularity. You remember? The simplest form of Singularity, of Indivisibility, that you can extend to a Brother is Peace.

And I'll tell you that you don't begin to have anything to share with your Brother until you have moved into your Peace. Prior to that, you're in a constant state of self-preservation, because you're not joined in any way with the Excellence in you, with the Altar within you, with the Holy Spirit, and therefore the Father. And so all you end up sharing from your state of independence is fear and self-protection and manipulation, all in the name of orchestrating some form of peace between yourself and your Brothers.

But that's an orchestrated peace; one where everyone has been badgered into behaving quietly. And ultimately if you manage to get everybody to behave quietly, it's because you've raised enough fear in them to cause them to recognize that it's in their best interest for them to be still, so they're doing it for themselves. It might look like agreement. It might look like cooperation, but it's still a bunch of little independent egos serving their own purposes for their own reasons, and not because there's been any communication, or any connection, or any real unity. You see? And that's because the gift you're giving isn't a Singularity. It's a gift of what the ego calls beneficent force, beneficent power, exercised on behalf of the good of everyone. But as long as there isn't any unity, any real connection between everyone, you don't have Peace. You have a stalemate. And it's still a state of conflict, but one that's kept down to a dull roar.

It's really important to understand that the first step in establishing connection between each other is for you each individually to go within, meditate, become still through whatever means you have available to you so that you might quiet the thinking busyness of your calculating mind, and come into the Silence where in the absence of the busyness of your thinking, it becomes possible for you to become aware of and experience Peace that has been there all along because, for lack of better words, it was placed there since the beginning by God as the Ground of your Being.

In this Peace, there is not the clutter of thoughts and concepts and mutually-agreed-upon definitions. And as I said, it seems to you in that experience that your focus has been narrowed down from the multiplicity of things that you've given your attention to, to silence or nothing. And it seems to you to be like an infinitesimal spotlight that is excluding everything. And yet, where you are when your attention is given there is at the threshold of experiencing your Wholeness because Peace is Infinite. The Fundamental Ground of your Being, which is Peace, is Infinite. Nothing else is present but it. And when you access it and you allow yourself to abide in it, what are you doing? You are embodying it.

There is no private experience of Peace. It's an all-inclusive, Infinite Presence of Pure Integrity, Pure Being. And when you choose to give your attention to it and make commitment to being with it, you are being Peace. More properly, you are allowing the Peace of your Being to be all there is to you. You are letting what God set in place be all there is to you. And because you're always teaching whether you are awake or dreaming dreams, because you are always teaching, you are now teaching Peace.

Whether it's for thirty seconds that it lasts, or whether it's for thirty minutes, or a fraction of a second, you are teaching Peace. And the key is that here you are teaching by being. Not teaching by thinking. Not teaching by expressing precepts. Not teaching by in an orderly fashion expressing precept upon precept upon precept until everyone gets it. You are teaching by being. And I'm going to tell you something else. All real healing that occurs is a result of being, is a result of your being. So you teach by being and you heal by being. You teach and heal by being nothing other than the Presence of Peace that is the Ground of your Being.

Learning has half a chance of occurring when you're teaching by being. When you're teaching by intellectual means, precept upon precept, learning is not what occurs. What occurs is others deciding that in their best interests they had better agree with you. And so although their mind hasn't changed, their behavior has for the sake of self-preservation. And that's what most of you call "learning."

You can imagine being in the presence of an enlightened being, we'll say, one who is not fazed by anything that happens. One who it is obvious is in Perfect Peace whether he's talking, or whether he's moving around, or whether he's engaged in a chore. Everything about him exudes Peace, and you feel it and you learn of Peace. And yet this one has not uttered a word about What Peace Is, or shared any concepts about What Peace Is, or expressed a koan that triggers an Awareness of Peace. His Presence teaches Peace. He teaches Peace by being. Now, this is what all of this is about.

We've been going through the Course for a year and a half. And we've talked a lot about precepts and ideas and thoughts, and so on. But what these ideas and thoughts are all about is each of you embodying something new, something different from what you have in the past. It's about being in a new way, not thinking in a new way.

Thinking which is based upon Truth can lead you to the point of feeling safe enough to let go of your thoughts and yield into your Peace. And that is the purpose that ideas and thoughts serve. At this point, that's their real and only use.

Now we're beginning to get into the implementation of the ideas we've been talking about. We're talking about making a shift in the way you approach life and in the way that you be quote "in the world" unquote. And obviously what I'm talking about is not at all typical of life as you have known it, or as the majority of those on your planet are aware of it. So what does that mean? It means that in a way you're being pioneers, and you're getting off the beaten track. You're leaving the well-established trails.

And what will the result of that be? Well you'll have new things to share, won't you? Will you have new things to share that you can use to force the world to change? You'd better be careful about that. You better be careful of thinking about becoming teachers of the new point of view. But you know what? When you choose for your Peace and are willing to be from there, this won't shock people. It may make them pay attention. But Peace isn't offensive. Try to cram peace down somebody's throat, they're likely to be offended, but also you will have had to leave your Peace in order to do that. It doesn't occur to you to do that when you're in your Peace.

When you are experiencing something which is Singular, and therefore Whole, there is nothing else which you can practice that experience on. But like the Light, darkness will disappear in Its Presence. Conflict will disappear in the Presence of the Peace that you are being, because your presence will be a demonstration to others that there's a different way of looking at things than the way they're looking at it because what they're looking at is causing them not to be in their Peace and to be defended, and here you are in your Peace unaffected by what is going on and at the same time not being rendered dysfunctional. And you're able to be in a way that doesn't aggravate the conflict.

Now, here's the thing. This is not the way you're used to being and it's not the way anyone else is used to being, and therefore you will find yourself in a situation where you're having to be at odds with your well-established habits, as well as being at odds with what everyone else expects of you. And so there is going to be great temptation to slip back into your old habits. But you must remember there is a reason you're doing this. And it has nothing to do with teaching anybody anything. And it has nothing to do with transforming and changing and blessing the world, even though that will happen.

At the bottom line, it has to do with your no longer having a suffering experience of existence because you're choosing not to... you are choosing to no longer use your minds to create a suffering experience by constantly being at odds with your very own Being. It's about you coming back into your Sanity which is a Singularity, not an infinitely confusing hodgepodge of disconnected and inconsistent ideas and precepts and concepts and images that you try to hold together in some semblance of order.

If not one other person is doing this, in other words, if everyone else is not doing this, it is no reason or justification for you not to persist in coming into a Singular, Conscious Experience of Being which is your Birthright to be experiencing, because it was set in place quote "in the beginning" unquote by the Father as the very, for lack of better words, structural Integrity of your Being. And it was set into place that way because it is the Embodiment of What The Father Is and the Father creates nothing unlike Himself.

Let us continue in the book.

Again.

RAJ READING: To HAVE, GIVE...

RAJ: That's the key word [GIVE].

RAJ READING: To HAVE, GIVE all TO all.

RAJ: Now...

RAJ READING: This is a very preliminary step, and the only one you must take for yourself.

RAJ: Remember we were talking about being the Commander? This is the only command you have to express, and it's the only one you will ever make. To make the decision to shift from getting to giving, from self-interest to Love extended, that shift, the decision to make that shift is the only decision you have available to you. It is the only expression of authority you will ever have available to you, because it is the way you shift from "my will be done" to "Thy Will be done."

RAJ READING: To HAVE, GIVE all TO all.

This is a very preliminary step, and the only one you must take for yourself. It is not even necessary that you COMPLETE the step yourself, but it IS necessary that you turn in that direction.

RAJ: And I will add: It is necessary for you to turn in that direction for your reasons.

You must make commitment to it for your reasons, not because someone else talked you into it. Because if someone else talks you into doing it and you do it because they said it, you still haven't taken the step. You're just acting.

The Commander commands something, feeling full authority for making the commandment and owning fully the responsibility for making the commandment. It's like I've said before, the only right use of will is to choose not to use it.

Again.

RAJ READING: It is not even necessary that you COMPLETE the step yourself, but it IS necessary that you turn in that direction. Having chosen to go that way, you place YOURSELF in charge of the journey, where you and ONLY you must remain.

RAJ: Once you've decided to turn in that direction, you must remain in that attitude. Attitude... in that positioning of yourself for Movement.

RAJ READING: This step APPEARS to exacerbate conflict rather than resolve it because it is the BEGINNING step in reversing your perception, and turning it right-side up. This conflicts with the upside-down perception which you have not yet abandoned, or the change in direction would not have been necessary. Some people remain at this step for a very long time, experiencing VERY acute conflict.

RAJ: These are not gentle words. They're not consoling words. They are very practical expressions of what really happens when you make this kind of decision. And it is stated clearly for you in a very nitty-gritty way so that you will not misunderstand what is happening and say, "Oh, I must be doing something wrong because I thought enlightenment was supposed to be easy. I thought it was supposed to be full of harmony." No. You don't abandon habits easily. Why? Because they are habits. Because you have made commitment to them over a long period of time. And you're having to undo a habit of commitment. You're having to undo a habit of honoring the habit. You're having to withdraw your faith in what you've placed your faith. And this requires attention, persistent attention, so that you don't slip back into the habit. You don't reach for those comfy shoes.

Again.

RAJ READING: Some people remain at this step for a very long time, experiencing VERY acute conflict. At this point many try to accept the CONFLICT, rather than take the next step towards its resolution.

RAJ: "I know I've got to do this and I am going to do it. I am going to take the next step. But right now I can't, I just can't bring myself to do it. I'm not gonna go back where I was even though it's hell where I am. I know I was less conscious before and I refuse to go back, but I refuse to go forward. And so I'm going to grit my teeth and just be with this very acute conflict. And you know, I'm going to say, Thank you, God. Thank you, God. I know that this suffering is going to bless me. I know that the Holy Spirit will turn it to my advantage. I know this suffering is only virtual. It's present because I haven't quite made the decision 100%. I know it isn't real. It's just because of where I'm choosing to stand at the moment. And the minute I choose to move off the tack, it will disappear. So I'm just going to just endure it for a while. Ooooh! [audience laughter] Yes, I'm going to endure it a while. [audience amusement] It's too scary to do anything else."

Again.

RAJ READING: At this point many try to accept the CONFLICT, rather than take the next step towards its resolution. Having taken the first step, however, they WILL be helped. Once they have chosen what they CANNOT complete alone, THEY ARE NO LONGER ALONE.

RAJ: Now you never were alone to begin with. But once you take that first step of reaching out beyond yourself you've said, "I am no longer going to deny the existence of the Holy Spirit. I'm no longer going to deny the Presence of God. I am no longer going to insist that I am the center and circumference of my life and I'm only going to pay attention to what's within the circumference of me as I've defined myself." You've arrived at a point of saying "No." An invitation has been made. A door has been opened, even if it was just a crack. And the Light is streaming in through the crack.

To have, give. To give means you've abandoned being alone. You've had to be willing to embrace at least one something else. You've abandoned your commitment to isolation.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: "To Have Peace, Teach Peace to Learn It"

RAJ: "Uh oh. Smacks of involvement to me. Smacks of not being able to ignore my Brother any more. Smacks of having to deal with him without controlling him. Whew! Wow! I don't know if I can take this."

RAJ READING: "To Have Peace, Teach Peace to Learn It"

RAJ: And what did I say? You teach by being. That's what we're talking about here. We're not talking about having a whole set of new words about peace with which you can cajole and badger and nudge and influence your Brother into a new set of ideas and a new, let's say, a new level of being peaceful together, even though it's still peace for the purpose of self-preservation. In other words, peace as a defense.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: All the separated ones...

RAJ: Those who aren't awake yet.

RAJ READING: ...have a basic fear of retaliation and abandonment.

RAJ: Do you ever wonder why the feeling of the potential for abandonment comes to you? It's because the one you think you are doesn't exist. And of course, if everyone finds out that you aren't what you think you are, well they're not going to pay any attention to you. They're not going to pay any attention to nothing, hardly.

But the wonderful fact is that underneath the definition you've given yourself, underneath and behind any thought you've had about yourself, there is this Pure Awareness, this Pure Consciousness, this Pure Consciousness of Being, Awareness of Being, that's Real, that's You. That is the Christ. That which predates, preexisted, any thought you had about yourself, any definition, anything anybody else thought about you. Something that preexisted it, can't change, and therefore, is, was, and always will be nothing but Eternal and God-derived.

So, again.

RAJ READING: All the separated ones have a basic fear of retaliation and abandonment. This is because they BELIEVE in attack and rejection,...

RAJ: Well, why do you all believe in attack and rejection? Because those are the two means you use to keep everybody in line, aren't they? Hmm.

"Well, honey, you were a real bastard today so don't ask to make love to me tonight." Or less words than that, "Honey, I have a headache." But it's because she's pissed off at him for something that happened during the daytime. You see?

Rejection is one of the best tools you have to keep others in line. And you can imply that you have something they really want, but they can't have it until they straighten up. Right? Whew! That's why you believe in it, because it's the tool you use on everyone else, even though it's the tool they all use on you. And you think that success comes at finding better means, more subtle means of rejection and attack.

So...

RAJ READING: This is because they BELIEVE in attack and rejection, so this is what they perceive and teach and LEARN.

RAJ: Every time you use it and it seems to work, you've taught yourself that this is good and you reaffirm your commitment to it. And every time it doesn't work, you say, "This was good but I just didn't do it well enough." And so you renew your commitment to it.

RAJ READING: These insane concepts are clearly the result of their own dissociation and projection.

RAJ: Meaning your own dissociation.

Oh, dissociation? Yes. Psychological term? No. Your bill of divorcement from the Father. That's the dissociation. That's the only dissociation. It's not a psychological term. It's not about something that goes on in your puny little mind. You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: What you teach you are, but it is quite apparent that you can teach wrongly, and therefore TEACH YOURSELVES WRONG.

RAJ: You see, you're never just teaching everyone else. You're always teaching yourself. And when you try to teach someone else something that doesn't work, they learn that it doesn't work and you learn that it doesn't work, and you don't try to teach that any more. You find something better to teach that works. You see? So you're always teaching yourself. You're always confirming what you choose to believe to yourself every time you try to hold another to what you believe.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Many thought that I was attacking them, even though it was quite apparent that I was not. An insane learner learns strange lessons.

What you must understand is that, when you do not SHARE a thought system, you ARE weakening it.

RAJ: This is very important because it seems to you that you're doing nothing when you're not strengthening a thought system. You aren't just letting that thought system be with whatever degree of strength it had before you neglected to respond to it. You're not responding to it constitutes a withdrawal from the mutual agreement. And when you withdraw from the mutual agreement, the mutual agreement is less strong.

Again.

RAJ READING: ...when you do not SHARE a thought system, you ARE weakening it. Those who BELIEVE in it therefore perceive this as an attack ON THEM.

RAJ: How many of you have had an experience of, let's say, a history of being abused by someone? And you have not objected. You have found ways to live with it. It's what is called enabling. And finally you arrive at a point where you feel a call for demonstrating more self-respect. And so now you withdraw your cooperation from this enabling relationship and you don't respond the same way. Now you aren't doing anything to this other one, but you are no longer doing things that you used to. And that one, because he is not clear, sees your behavior as a withdrawal from the partnership, you might say, as a withdrawal from the dance that the two of you were doing together. He sees it as rejection. He sees you as being unkind. He sees you as being no longer with him, which means against him. You see? And all of you have played both partners at various times in your life.

So:

RAJ READING: Many thought that I was attacking them, even though it was quite apparent that I was not.

RAJ: In other words, I was just not joining with them in their delusion, in their misperception.

RAJ READING: An insane learner learns strange lessons.

What you must understand is that, when you do not SHARE a thought system, you ARE weakening it. Those who BELIEVE in it therefore perceive this as an attack ON THEM. This is because everyone identifies HIMSELF with his thought system, and EVERY thought system centers on WHAT YOU BELIEVE YOU ARE.

RAJ: Ah, but what happens when you move into your Peace? What happens when you move into the Singularity, without the clutter of your thought systems? Well, in the quietness, what you believed you were, what you thought you were, is no longer predominant, or even occupying your attention. And you're standing at the threshold of finding out that at the bottom line Peace is what you are. And it's the opportunity for you to shift what you are identifying with. It's the opportunity to shift allegiance from your thought system and your belief about what you are to this new experience of What You Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If the center of the thought system is true, only truth extends from it. But if a lie is at its center, only DECEPTION proceeds from it. All good teachers realize that only fundamental change will last, but they do not BEGIN at that level. Strengthening MOTIVATION for change is their first and foremost goal. It is also their last and final one.

RAJ: The teachers, that is.

In the last year and a half as we've read through the Course, we've been addressing that which will alter your motivation, help you to withdraw your motivation from your past habits, and to let it become like the prow of an icebreaker moving in new directions where it seemed you couldn't move before at all.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Increasing motivation for change IN THE LEARNER is all that a teacher NEED do to guarantee change. This is because a change in motivation IS a change of mind, and this will inevitably produce fundamental change because the mind IS fundamental. The first step in the reversal or undoing process, then, is...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...the undoing of the GETTING concept.

RAJ: Therefore, the Holy Spirit's first teaching is, To have, give. That's the way the reversal begins, by addressing the crux of the issue, and the crux of the issue is getting or giving.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Accordingly, the Holy Spirit's first lesson was "To HAVE, GIVE all TO all."

RAJ: You have to have an object of your affection. "You can't just be like on a float in the rose parade throwing your petals, throwing your petals, broadcasting them to anywhere but no place in specific, no place specific." No, we're talking about giving to something specific, having an object of your gift, of your gifting.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We said that this is apt to increase conflict temporarily, and we can clarify this still further now.

At this point, the equality of "having" and "being" is not yet perceived.

RAJ: And that's part of the reason I've been talking about teaching by being and healing by being.

RAJ READING: Until it IS, "having" appears to be the OPPOSITE of "being." Therefore, the first lesson...

RAJ: To have, give all to all.

RAJ READING: ...SEEMS to contain a contradiction, since it is being learned BY A CONFLICTED MIND. This MEANS conflicting motivation, and so the lesson CANNOT be learned consistently as yet.

RAJ: And so, as long as it can't be learned consistently, learn it inconsistently by means of persistence in returning to your Peace even when you've lost it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Further, the mind of the learner projects its own split, and thus does NOT perceive consistent minds in others, making him suspicious of THEIR motivation.

RAJ: Now mind you, this does not mean that because the learner projects his own split that he does not perceive consistent minds in others in spite of the fact that they're not expressing consistency themselves. In other words, it doesn't mean that one should see consistency in the minds of their Brothers when there is still inconsistency held in their mind and being expressed.

What it means is, using myself as the example, the mind of the learner projects its own split and thus does not perceive consistent minds in me, did not perceive a consistent mind in me, making them suspicious of my motivation. And so the Jews in authority in the church did not see the Singularity of the Gift that I was giving, and therefore perceived it as an attempt to undermine their authority. They did not trust my motivations.

When you are coming from a conflicted mind and you meet someone who is expressing a lack of conflict, someone who is unconflicted and is therefore genuine and undefended, you are immediately suspicious. Not because they are conflicted, but because you are still. That's what this means.

RAJ READING: ...the mind of the learner projects its own split, and thus does NOT perceive consistent minds in others...

RAJ: When it is present in others.

RAJ READING: ...making him suspicious of THEIR motivation. This is the real reason why, in many respects, the first lesson is the hardest to learn.

RAJ: The reason being that your trust level is low. You know that you're not trustworthy and you know that you're teaching untrustworthiness in one way or another. You'll do what you need to do to get a good deal, even if it's to the disadvantage of another, just as long as it's not too flagrant. And you teach that by your behavior, and others are teaching you the same thing, so your level of trust is low.

RAJ READING: This is the real reason why, in many respects, the first lesson is the hardest to learn. Still strongly aware of the ego in himself, and responding primarily to the ego in others, he is being taught to react to both as if what he DOES believe is NOT true.

RAJ: In other words, the first lesson teaches you to react in a new way. To give in order to have, to be absent the use of control to secure your security.

And so...

RAJ READING: Still strongly aware of the ego in himself, and responding primarily to the ego in others, he is being taught...

RAJ: By virtue of the first lesson.

RAJ READING: ...to react to both as if what he DOES believe is NOT true.

RAJ: You're being asked to believe that the way you have believed up until this point is not true. You are truly being asked to abandon your faith in what you believed was true. That is the position this first lesson puts you in.

RAJ READING: Upside-down as always, the ego perceives the first lesson as insane.

RAJ: And I'm going to add this. Not only does your ego attest to that, but everyone else's ego will attest to it, too, and so you're going to have to get support for accepting this first lesson from the Holy Spirit, from a brand-new place, somewhere deep inside of you. Some place where you are able to be really divinely honest, in that place where you already Know that You Are Divine, that place where you Know you already have Integrity. And you must gather your strength for this from there, that Place of Excellence in You, the Altar right in the middle of You, the Holy Spirit.

Again.

RAJ READING: Upside-down as always, the ego perceives the first lesson as insane. In fact, this is its only alternative here, since the other one, which would be much LESS acceptable to it, would obviously be that IT...

RAJ: The ego.

RAJ READING: ...is insane. The ego's judgment, then, is predetermined by what it IS, though no more so than is any other product of thought. The fundamental change...

RAJ: Why are we talking about fundamental change? Because that's what this first lesson of the Holy Spirit addresses.

RAJ READING: The fundamental change will still occur with the change of mind IN THE THINKER.

RAJ: In other words, when you decide to accept the first lesson, and you reach out and you are joined, the Movement has begun. The Movement has begun and to a certain degree is already out of your hands.

RAJ READING: The fundamental change will still occur with the change of mind IN THE THINKER. Meanwhile, the increasing clarity of the Holy Spirit's Voice makes it impossible for the learner NOT to listen.

RAJ: Some of you get scared and you lose the connection, you think. And you think things have come to a standstill and you become depressed. But the fact is that once the Movement has started, the Movement has started. This is very important. Once the Movement has started, the Movement has started and you cannot stop it! And the Movement will persist in spite of your reluctance. And that's one of the reasons that the conflict seems to increase, because the Movement has begun, you're on your way Home, and if you become frightened, or reluctant, or upset, and seem to lose the connection, the Movement still continues.

Simultaneously though, the Holy Spirit, your Guide, is 100% present with you, facilitating your recognition of the Movement and present on your behalf to encourage and pacify you as you go through the apparently scary process of abandoning the exercise of control that you were never ever required to put into place in the first place.

Again.

RAJ READING: Meanwhile, the increasing clarity of the Holy Spirit's Voice makes it impossible for the learner NOT to listen. For a time, then, he IS receiving conflicting messages, AND ACCEPTING BOTH.

RAJ: You accept both because you haven't learned how to be consistent yet. Just understand that that's the way it works. So that you realize, "Oh. This is the way it works on the way Home." I'll tell you something. It's not the way it works on the way away from Home. If you understand that, then you will take the increasing conflict as a good sign, because that doesn't happen on the way away from home. And you'll say, "Okay. This means I'm still on the right track. But I'm not going to let this dissuade me."

Again.

RAJ READING: Meanwhile, the increasing clarity of the Holy Spirit's Voice makes it impossible for the learner NOT to listen. For a time, then, he IS receiving conflicting messages, AND ACCEPTING BOTH. This is the classic "double bind" in communication.

RAJ: Now,...

RAJ READING: The way OUT of conflict between two opposing thought systems is...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...clearly TO CHOOSE ONE and RELINQUISH THE OTHER.

RAJ: Now, this is not complicated. [single audience laugh] A three-year-old can comprehend this. I'm not saying this to insult you. I'm saying this to remind you of something that you've forgotten. And that is that coming Home is simple. And that's all... that's all the clarity that's needed is to know that it's between choosing for this and abandoning that. Choosing for giving, abandoning getting.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you IDENTIFY with your thought system, and you cannot escape this,....

RAJ: In other words, you do identify with your thought system.

RAJ READING: If you IDENTIFY with your thought system, and you cannot escape this, and if you accept two thought systems which are in COMPLETE disagreement, peace of mind IS...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...impossible.

RAJ: Simple. It's just simply impossible.

Okay. So if you choose for both, and you're experiencing conflict and you're uncomfortable, you know you're choosing to do something impossible. It's not justification for abandoning the Movement that already began that you can't stop.

RAJ READING: If you TEACH both,...

RAJ: Thought systems.

RAJ READING: ...which you will surely do as long as you ACCEPT both, you are teaching conflict and LEARNING it. Yet you DO want peace, or you would not have called upon the...

RAJ: Capital "V".

RAJ READING: ...Voice for peace to help you. His LESSON is not insane; the CONFLICT is.

RAJ: Keep this clear. Because the goal is not insane, the way you're trying to teach it is, so stick with the goal and change the means. Once again, simple.

RAJ READING: There can BE no conflict between sanity and insanity. Only one is true, and therefore only one is REAL. The ego tries to persuade you that it is up to YOU to decide which voice is true,...

RAJ: You see? Throws a little bit more of this suggestion of personal authority at you and suggests that you have a capability as part of an expression of your integrity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ...but the Holy Spirit teaches you that truth was created by God, and YOUR decision CANNOT change it.

RAJ: In other words, nothing's up to you at all. The only thing that's up to you is to be willing to recognize Truth for What It Is, but not to determine What It Is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: As you begin to realize the quiet power of the Holy Spirit's Voice AND ITS PERFECT CONSISTENCY, it MUST dawn on your minds that you are trying to undo a decision which was made irrevocably FOR you.

RAJ: Just like imagining that you can get a bill of divorcement from the Father is undoing a bond that can't be undone. It's just a purely insane thought—senseless. That's what insane means—senseless. Insanity... insanity has no organized structure to it. Insanity isn't a thing. Insanity is confusion believed to be orderly. Doesn't make it true. And it doesn't make insanity real. But there is something Real—your Mind. And it is Sane, Singular, not divided, therefore incapable of being in conflict, incapable of being confused.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: That is why we suggested before that there was help in reminding yourselves to allow the Holy Spirit to decide for God for YOU.

RAJ: Waking up is you deciding for God on behalf of God Being All. The Holy Spirit's task and commitment is to decide for God for you. The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. But as long as you are feeling disconnected, dissociated, from the Father, you may know that the decision for God has already been made for you. And therefore, it's not entirely up to the you, you presently think you are.

In other words, you've got help, and ultimately the help is coming from your Right Mind. And so the help and the acceptance of the help, the embracing of the help and the incorporating of the help is one integrated act of reintegration of you into a Singularity. Because ultimately, it will have been You deciding for God for the confused one that you seemed to be for a while. That's pure Integrity. It is not someone else doing something for you. It's not someone else bringing you into the Kingdom of Heaven on their shoulders. It's you riding into the Kingdom of Heaven on your own shoulders, you might say, because a reintegration of your Integrity has occurred, and the Singularity of your Mind has been returned to You for You as your Mind by You, with a capital "Y".

This is where the artistic, exquisite beauty of how it works becomes recognizable, because the undoing of something that never happened is accomplished by the unalterable Integrity of You, helping the dissociated sense of yourself that you're entertaining to come back into full appreciation of itself and back into its full capacity. So it constitutes healing that is the return to Sanity, a return that has occurred at the hand of the Divine Sanity of You Yourself. It's Pure Integrity. It's Pure Integration. It's Pure Empowerment. It's Pure Unity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are NOT asked to make insane decisions, although you are free to THINK you are. It MUST, however, be insane to believe that IT IS UP TO YOU to decide what God's creations ARE.

RAJ: See, that was the whole problem. "But, Father, I'd rather define it myself. But, Father, I'd rather see it my way. I would rather look at Your Infinite Expression and see it the way I want to see it." You wanted to decide what God's Creations are.

And so, again.

RAJ READING: *It MUST, however, be insane to believe that IT IS UP TO YOU to decide what God's creations ARE. The Holy Spirit perceives the conflict exactly as it is. Therefore, His second lesson is: To HAVE peace, TEACH peace to LEARN it.

RAJ: The Movement has begun.

I love you.

I don't want to disturb you in any way, but you will have ample opportunities during the coming week to learn peace by choosing to teach it. Nothing... nothing special has been arranged for you. [audience laughter]

And I look forward to being with you next week. Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, is the Course becoming more interesting, or more troublesome? In the recent weeks, you've all been put more and more on the spot in terms of involvement with the ideas, the implementing of the ideas, rather than the contemplation of the ideas in the Course, which has brought you to the threshold of having to make changes. That's what makes it troublesome. It's also what makes it interesting. Because the moment you are willing to make changes, or abandon old habits, things that had been available to you before, but which you did not recognize because of the habits you were employing, will begin to register with you. I mean, they will begin to register with you as opportunities. I'm speaking of it in a very positive sense. It's not that you will all of a sudden see how horrible everything is.

One of the key things that we've been discussing recently is the importance of your attention. You might think that it's necessary for you to begin to pay attention to what you're giving your attention to. But we have to back up a little bit from that, and the question has to be, "How are you using your attention?" Not what is your attention being placed on, but how are you using your attention? Why do you give your attention here and not there?

Then we have to back up even further to a more primary place. The question is, are you using your attention all by yourself, or are you using your attention in partnership with the Father? Are you using your attention as an independent entity? Or, in the process of giving your attention to whatever there is to give your attention to, are you conscious of doing it in tandem with your Guide, Me, or the Father, in which there's no sense of doing it alone, in which at the least there is the constant awareness that there is someone standing with you whose perspective is not governed by all the definitions you've given to everything, all the agreements you've made with everyone else, and whose perspective always has as its focus the recognition of and the glorification of God in whatever you're giving your attention to?

So, if you're going through your day, and obviously you are going to be giving your attention to something because that is the state of being conscious, if you are going through your day without ever having a sense of being companioned with, then you can count on it you're going through your day in your typical ego mindset of being a separated, independent, autonomous, self-regulating entity. That's called the human condition. That's called the ego frame of reference. It's you unconscious of Reality in the middle of a dream that you've dreamed up. And that is exactly what everyone will wake up out of, so don't value it.

It's really important to understand that it's this state of autonomy which constitutes your incapacity to recognize God. It therefore is what constitutes your prison. It's what keeps you in a state of ignorance, ignorant of the Truth that would set you free, ignorant of a Conscious Experience of Being that it's your Birthright to be having forever.

So, it isn't, what are you giving your attention to? It's how are you using your attention? And even before that, are you giving your attention to everything in tandem with, in cooperation with, in Brotherhood with, One Who Is Awake, your Guide, the Holy Spirit, Me, the Father?

I promise you that if during the past two weeks when I said you would have occasion to teach peace in order to learn it that those occasions arose because you chose not to be joined with One Who Is Awake while observing your world. You chose to look at it privately. When you look privately, all of God that is the only thing there is for you to see does not look like God. It looks like the fear through which you're looking at everything; a fear that you cannot avoid when you are pretending to be independent and on your own.

And you know what? You will see justification for your fear, and you will frighten yourself, and you will make yourself ill. Why? Because you're looking alone through the lens of fear, sending out messengers of fear that will return to you proclaiming the abundance of things to be frightened about. And if you're not careful, you will become preoccupied with the bad news, and in a greater state of fear, you will give even more attention to what you're looking at with even more fear until, if it's not squelched, you become obsessed with the awfulness of human will. Then, in the horror of that awful experience that you're having, you will find yourself faced with only one thing to do, which by now has become the hardest thing to do, and that is to find your peace.

Of course now you're severely upset, and maybe your body is even giving you strong signals of pain or illness, and you say, "How am I supposed to find my peace in the middle of this?" But you find that you have to find a way, because it hurts too much not to. And so now, finally, you do what you should have done in the beginning. You choose to withdraw your attention from the awfulness of human will and come back within. You soak in a hot tub, or you meditate. You find some way to become still within yourself and turn to the Altar, turn to the Voice for Truth, turn to the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind. And it's hard.

But, if you do it with singleness of purpose, it can happen almost instantaneously. The more undivided your intent, the more rapidly the awfulness of human will, will fade from your frayed nerve endings, if you will. And you will find peace returning. You will find inner stability returning. And you will find the capacity to look at your world, not alone this time, and find that there's another way to look at it.

Now it might mean that you will still see a call for correction in your world. The evidence of the awfulness of human will, will still be there calling for you to become clear about the Truth of what has to be there underneath the awfulness of human will that's being expressed, the Christ that is there underneath the behavior that looks un-Christlike, the intent of which is un-Christlike. And so the call for correction will still be there. But you will be free to deal with it with peace, so that your response teaches peace, and you learn it.

You know all of this, all this, the teaching in the Course, the movement along which you might call your spiritual path, all of it has to do with real fundamental change. Where? In you, so that you begin teaching something new and being an agent for change in the world. But you know what? The quote "being an agent for change in the world" unquote is something that happens spontaneously. It's not something you do. You attend to what? Where you're giving your attention, why you're giving it there, and whether you're giving it all by yourself, or in community with God, the Holy Spirit, Me, or your Guide. Not alone, in other words.

And what may not be sinking in yet is that this makes all the difference in the world to your experience of the world and of who you are. It really makes a difference. It really is transformational. And it really is essential. Don't wait until you're in excruciating pain before you're willing to acknowledge that it's essential. You can bring the same amount of devotion and commitment to what is essential when nothing excruciating is happening.

But the tendency is to [said in a funny high-pitched voice] play with your spirituality. "Ohhh. Life is so sweet. Ohhh. God is so wonderful. Oh, I know underneath, around, above the Everlasting Arms of Love are holding me." Oh, yeah. But what is this "me" that the Underlying Arms of Love is holding? Is it someone who is sweetly being independent; being independent and having all these spiritual thoughts? [said in the same funny voice.] "Ohh! I don't need to worry about just having fantasies of spirituality because I know God is holding me." Well, hell! God's been holding you since the Moment of Creation, and it hasn't done you a bit of good if you haven't been willing to say, "Oh! Hi, Father. Not only do I know that you're holding me, but I'm choosing to actually be aware of You as You're holding me here in Your Arms. I'm willing to actually acknowledge You and the fact that I have a relationship with You. I am consciously being with You. Like a nursing child, I look into your eyes and I connect with You. I acknowledge being with You, and because I am, I can see and feel the fact that You are connected with me. And I choose to stay in this Consciousness of Being while I participate in everything that You are unfolding, All of Creation."

You see what I'm saying? It takes practice. It takes persistence. You have an age-old habit of looking at everything all by yourself. It's second nature to you. Ah! Second nature? What's first nature? Second nature is a substitute. Your rule needs to be, "No substitutes allowed. No substitutions, please. I want the original, real experience." Well, you're not going to have the original experience until you choose well as to how you're going to use your attention.

And, you know what? The wonderful thing is that nobody can see where you're giving your attention. Nobody can tell you're doing anything different than you did before. It's not something that sticks out like a sore thumb. So you can't claim that people will think you're weird if you give your attention here or there. If you give your attention to the Holy Spirit first, and then look with the Holy Spirit at what's happening in your experience so that you may be in that experience out from the clarity that comes from the joining. You don't have to... you can't say, "I don't have time." Because you can do this in every moment, in every situation. Every encounter with your Brother or Sister is an occasion for not doing it as a private independent entity.

Okay. I'm losing your attention because I'm repeating myself and you would like something new and stimulating. And you need to pay attention to how you're using your attention right now. Don't worry. I'm used to people tuning me out. [single, brief audience laugh] And it's all right because I know, before long, I'll have your attention again. And every time I have your attention, it offers another opportunity for helping secure you in the place where you feel the blessing of existing more consistently. I also know that there really isn't any other way you can do it at the moment. And so I'm not frustrated because I'm not expecting you to do what you can't do. And I want you to give yourselves the same loving consideration.

Okay, we'll go to the book. We ended up with the sentence which is the Holy Spirit's second lesson: To have peace...

RAJ READING: To HAVE peace, TEACH peace to LEARN it.

This is still a preliminary step, since "having" and "being" are still not equated. It is, however, more advanced than the first step, which is really only a thought REVERSAL. The second step is a positive affirmation of WHAT YOU WANT.

RAJ: There's a little more involvement, in other words, on your part.

RAJ READING: This, then, is a step in the direction OUT of conflict, since it means that alternatives have been considered, and ONE has been chosen as MORE DESIRABLE.

RAJ: Again, a little more involvement on your part, a little bit more conscious intent on your part, a little more focus of your attention, and therefore a little more clarity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Nevertheless, the evaluation "more desirable" still implies that the desirable has DEGREES. Therefore, although this step is essential for the ultimate decision, it is clearly NOT the final one. It is clear, at this point, that the lack of order of difficulty in miracles has not yet been accepted, because nothing is difficult that is WHOLLY DESIRED.

RAJ: Again, something that is wholly desired is a desire that has nothing extraneous to it. It is purely itself, and is therefore what I've referred to as a Singularity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: To desire wholly is to CREATE, and creating CANNOT be difficult if God Himself created you AS a creator. The second step, then, is still perceptual, although it is a giant step toward the unified perception which parallels God's knowing.

As you take this step...

RAJ: Which step? To have peace... To have peace, teach peace to learn it.

So,...

RAJ READING: As you take this step and HOLD THIS DIRECTION, you will be pushing toward the center of your thought system, where the FUNDAMENTAL change will occur. You are only beginning this step now, but you have started on this way by realizing that ONLY ONE WAY IS POSSIBLE. You do not yet realize this consistently and so your progress is intermittent, but the second step is easier than the first because it FOLLOWS. The very fact that you have accepted THAT is a demonstration of your growing awareness that the Holy Spirit WILL lead you on.

RAJ: In other words, not only are you not alone, but the One that is with you has an intent to lead you Home, to not leave you abandoned, to not leave you with the feeling of nothing or no one significant being involved with you. It is the Holy Spirit's intent for you to experience being consciously loved for no good reason. Without justification. Just because.

RAJ READING: “Be Vigilant Only for God and His Kingdom”

RAJ: Ooooh! Here we go again. More work. Less unconsciousness. Less [in a funny, dragged out, sleepy voice] drowsy, comfy sleep. Tsk.

RAJ READING: “Be Vigilant Only for God and His Kingdom”

For your own salvation you must be critical, since your salvation IS critical to the whole Sonship.

RAJ: Wow. You make a difference. You thought this was all just about puny little you waking up. But puny little you waking up is the Christ That You Are coming back into his or her full Conscious Capacity To Reflect And Glorify God. And that constitutes a decrease in what we could call the unconsciousness of the Brotherhood of Man, the Sons and Daughters of God as a whole. Because while you're insisting on dreaming your dreams and you are out of touch with the rest of the Brotherhood, the rest of the Brotherhood... the rest of the Brotherhood misses you. It experiences a lack. And it's the Divine Right, it's the Birthright of all of the Brotherhood to be experiencing Itself in Its Totality. And so your waking up affects the whole, blesses the whole. It's not inconsequential.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We said before that the Holy Spirit is evaluative, and MUST be. Yet His evaluation does not extend BEYOND you, or you would share it. In YOUR mind, and your mind ONLY, He sorts out the true from the false, and teaches you to judge every thought that you allow to enter your mind in the light of what God PUT there.

RAJ: In other words, in Light of what God already put there before you added your own cute, little, particular biased perspective.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Whatever is IN ACCORD with this light He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...retains, to strengthen the Kingdom in YOU. What is PARTLY in accord with truth He accepts and purifies. But what is OUT OF ACCORD entirely He rejects by judging AGAINST.

RAJ: In other words, the Holy Spirit says "No!" to it.

RAJ READING: This is how He keeps the Kingdom perfectly consistent and perfectly unified.

RAJ: In other words, as you return Home, the Holy Spirit does not allow you to bring confusion and conflict with you. He helps you to see it so that you can release it, abandon it, neglect to reinforce it, so that your mind naturally comes into a state of alignment with the way the Kingdom works.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: What you must remember, however, is that what the Holy Spirit rejects the ego ACCEPTS.

RAJ: Which means that at the initial stages, the Holy Spirit is going to be rejecting most of what you believe. But you know what? Here's the key. In the rejection of what you believe, He doesn't reject you, and holds you up in your own face reflecting back to you that which has Integrity, that which is Love, that which is All Of What God Is Expressing right where you are that you had been ignoring because you gave preference to your fantastic, imaginative definition that you had created for yourself about yourself.

Again.

RAJ READING: What you must remember, however, is that what the Holy Spirit rejects the ego ACCEPTS. This is because they are in fundamental disagreement about everything, being in fundamental disagreement about...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...WHAT YOU ARE.

RAJ: In other words, you're not the definition you've given yourself.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego's beliefs on this crucial issue vary, and that is why it promotes different moods. The Holy Spirit NEVER varies on this point, and so the ONE mood He engenders is joy. He PROTECTS it by rejecting everything that does NOT foster joy, and so He alone can keep you wholly joyous.

The Holy Spirit does not teach your mind to be critical of other minds because He does not want you to teach errors AND LEARN THEM YOURSELVES.

RAJ: Remember what you teach, you learn.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: He would hardly be consistent if He allowed you to STRENGTHEN what you must learn to AVOID. In the mind of the THINKER, then, He IS judgmental, but only in order to unify the mind so it can perceive WITHOUT judgment. This enables the mind to TEACH without judgment,...

RAJ: And this is a key thing. You can recognize a call for Love, you can recognize expressions of lovelessness, without employing judgment. This is extremely important. They don't go hand in hand. You can recognize a Brother's pain that is being occasioned by his unconsciousness of What He Divinely Is, What He Truly Is, without judgment, without saying, "Boy, you're ignorant. Boy, what a fool you are to believe that. You can't be my friend." You can look at it without reaction, and you can see it for what it is—a call for Love, a call for correction—and be the presence of that which corrects, but without judgment.

So the Holy Spirit will not teach you how to correct others by pointing out their faults, because that is what you will learn. But the Holy Spirit will tell you how to be with that Brother in a manner that will provide the opportunity, the maximum opportunity for the light to go on in that Brother's mind. And in most instances, it's the last thing you as a puny little mind would think of. It's the last thing you would think would work.

Again.

RAJ READING: *This enables the mind to TEACH without judgment, and therefore to learn to BE without judgment. The undoing is necessary only in YOUR mind, so that you cannot project falsely. God Himself has established what you can project with perfect safety. Therefore, the Holy Spirit's third lesson is: Be vigilant ONLY for God and HIS Kingdom.

RAJ: It's another way of saying, "Be vigilant for the Voice for Truth, instead of the voice for fear."

But you know what? Don't be vigilant for the Voice for Truth all by yourself. Join with the Holy Spirit. Be vigilant only for God and His Kingdom with the help of the Holy Spirit. Remember you want to stop doing stuff alone.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is a major step toward FUNDAMENTAL change. Yet it is still a lesson in thought reversal, since it implies that there is something you must be vigilant AGAINST. It has advanced far from the first lesson which was PRIMARILY a reversal, and also from the second which was essentially the identification of what is MORE desirable. THIS step, which follows from the second as the second follows from the first, emphasizes the DICHOTOMY between the desirable and the undesirable. It therefore makes the ULTIMATE choice inevitable.

RAJ: Somewhere along the line, if you're actually going to change, if you're actually going to wake up, the way you used to do things is going to have to become obviously less desirable than being awake. But that's not enough. It will finally have come to the place where you find it to be totally undesirable, totally unacceptable. Then you will bring that Singularity of Intent to the issue, and you will have changed.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: While the first step seems to INCREASE conflict and the second step still entails it to some extent, this one calls for CONSISTENT EFFORT AGAINST IT.

RAJ: In other words, you have to come to a place where conflict in any form is untenable to you. Well, you know, most of you will say, "Well of course it's untenable to me! I don't like conflict." Watch what you give your attention to though. When you turn on the TV, what do you go to watch? When you pick up the newspaper, what do you give your attention to? When you're at the checkout at the grocery store, does the Inquirer get your attention? Does whose marriage is in trouble get your attention? Watch where you give your attention to and you will realize that you tend to be dishonest with yourself all day long if you think that conflict is untenable to you. Why, conflict is the spice of life that keeps your day from being boring, doesn't it? Just be aware.

Again because this is important.

RAJ READING: While the first step seems to INCREASE conflict and the second step still entails it to some extent, this one calls for CONSISTENT EFFORT AGAINST IT. We said already that you can be as vigilant AGAINST the ego as FOR it.

RAJ: Okay.

RAJ READING: We said already that you can be as vigilant AGAINST the ego as FOR it. This lesson teaches not only that you CAN be, but that you MUST be. It does not concern itself with order of difficulty, but with CLEAR-CUT PRIORITY FOR VIGILANCE.

RAJ: For not being sloppy in your mind, for not being lazy in your attentiveness, without disregard for what you're being attentive to. Wake up and be conscious, more conscious than you've been before. Not of how awful human will is, but whether you're choosing to give your attention to the awfulness of human will, or whether you're choosing to give your attention to the threshold of your capacity to see with the Holy Spirit and be the transformation of what you had called the awfulness of human will. You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This step is unequivocal in that it teaches there must be NO exceptions, although it does not deny that the temptation to MAKE exceptions will occur.

RAJ: Of course they will. It's the old crab barrel fear. You crawl out of the crab barrel, or try to, and the other crabs will grab you and pull you back in. And if you manage to get out, they'll whine, and they'll plead, and they'll cajole, and they'll try to convince you that, "It's dangerous out there. You'd better come back of your own free will.", even though they can't reach you any more.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Here, then, your consistency is called on DESPITE chaos.

RAJ: Just as when you've given your attention poorly and you've become fascinated with the awfulness of human will and you have begun to obsess on it, and you finally find yourself in excruciating pain, well, you find that your consistency is called on despite the excruciating pain, despite the distress. And now, because you're hurting so much, you're willing to say, "Oh! Okay! Okay! I got the message! As difficult as it is under these circumstances, I will give my consistency." Why? Because at that point you know it serves you well, even though in order for it to serve you well, you're having to give up any authority you thought you had on your own.

Again.

RAJ READING: Here, then, your consistency is called on DESPITE chaos. Yet chaos and consistency CANNOT coexist for long, since they are mutually exclusive.

As long as you must be vigilant against anything, however, you are not recognizing this mutual exclusiveness, and are holding the belief that you can CHOOSE EITHER ONE. By teaching WHAT to choose, the Holy Spirit will ultimately be able to teach you that YOU NEED NOT CHOOSE AT ALL. This will finally liberate your will FROM choice, and direct it towards creation WITHIN the Kingdom.

RAJ: In other words, from a different place than your independent self-authorizing mentality.

But, don't think that you can skip over the step of choosing one or the other and suddenly jump into the choiceless place, because you have to learn the difference. You have to learn the difference... you actually have to learn the difference between Love and a call for Love without judgment.

Again.

RAJ READING: As long as you must be vigilant against anything, however, you are not recognizing this mutual exclusiveness, and are holding the belief that you can CHOOSE EITHER ONE.

RAJ: But, you must begin the practice of distinguishing between the two and choosing one over the other, else you will not come to a point of recognizing what in your mind has expressed insanity, and what in your mind expresses Sanity. And until you can distinguish the difference, you can't make the choice for one or the other.

And as you begin to make the choice for one or the other, and are choosing for Sanity, Sanity increases. And as Sanity increases, it becomes more and more obvious to you that the other choice is not a choice at all. That in actuality, it's a fantasy choice. And in that recognition, you abandon the idea that there is a choice at all.

But I'll tell you something. You try to move into a place of making no choices before you've distinguished the difference between your Sanity and your insane thoughts, and the dream will continue. So you cannot avoid that part of the process, if you will.

The Holy Spirit is here to show you what isn't working for you. Why? So that you can see it. Because once you see it, you will abandon it, because none of you does anything that you see is useless.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Choosing through the Holy Spirit will lead you TO the Kingdom. You create by what you ARE,...

RAJ: In other words, by being instead of thinking, by being instead of talking.

RAJ READING: You create by what you ARE, but this is what you must learn. The way to learn it is inherent in the third step,...

RAJ: That being, "Be vigilant only for God and His Kingdom."

RAJ READING: The way to learn it is inherent in the third step, which brings together the lessons implied in the others, and goes beyond them towards real integration.

If you allow yourselves to have in your minds ONLY what God put there, you ARE acknowledging your mind as God created it. Therefore, you are accepting it AS IT IS.

RAJ: Well, I'll tell you something. Your mind, as God created it, is a far cry from your mind as you're using it! Because you're using your mind as a tool for defense against a conflicted world that appears to be conflicted because you are using your mind erroneously and causing the Kingdom of Heaven to register with you in a distorted way.

Again.

RAJ READING: If you allow yourselves to have in your minds ONLY what God put there, you ARE acknowledging your mind as God created it.

RAJ: Well, how does that happen? It happens by you shutting up all of your thinking, and in the silence paying attention to what's left in your mind. Well, you know, a lot of you do that. It's called meditation. And then you find that in that space, you find no authority for actions. "Well, that's pretty useless," you say. Well, you know what? Maybe you're not here to act in the way that you thought you were. Maybe you're here to pay attention. Maybe you're here to be the Conscious Awareness of What God Is Being, and not be a self-started provocateur of interesting life experiences.

Again.

RAJ READING: If you allow yourselves to have in your minds ONLY what God put there, you ARE acknowledging your mind as God created it. Therefore, you are accepting it AS IT IS. Since it IS whole, you are teaching peace BECAUSE you believe in it. The final step will still be taken FOR you by God, but by the third step, the Holy Spirit has PREPARED you for God. He is GETTING YOU READY for the translation of having into being by the very nature of the steps you must take with Him.

You learn first that having rests on GIVING...

RAJ: Here we're going to go through the three steps.

RAJ READING: You learn first that having rests on GIVING, and NOT on getting. Next you learn that you learn what you TEACH, and that you WANT TO LEARN PEACE. This is the CONDITION for identifying with the Kingdom, since it is the condition OF the Kingdom. You have believed that you are WITHOUT the Kingdom, and have therefore excluded yourself FROM it in your belief.

RAJ: In other words, in your imagination, and by the creation of definitions of yourself that bear no relation to Reality.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is therefore essential to teach you that you must be INCLUDED, and that the BELIEF that you are NOT is the ONLY thing that you must exclude.

The third step...

RAJ: The one we've been discussing today.

RAJ READING: ...is thus one of PROTECTION for your minds, allowing you to identify ONLY with the center, where God placed the altar to Himself.

RAJ: The center of what? The center of your Brother's mind so you can direct it well? No. The very center of you.

RAJ READING: We have already said that altars are beliefs, but God and His creations are BEYOND belief because they are beyond question. The Voice for God speaks only for BELIEF beyond question, which is the preparation for BEING without question. As long as belief in God and His Kingdom is assailed by ANY doubts in your minds, His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...perfect accomplishment is NOT apparent to you. This is why you must be vigilant ON GOD'S BEHALF. The ego speaks AGAINST His creation, and therefore DOES engender doubt. You cannot go BEYOND belief until you believe fully.

RAJ: Until you believe what? Until you believe the Truth. And until you abandon your belief in what you made-up. And that's what you need to learn to make the distinction between what God made and what you made-up.

Oh, I know, it sounds like that means that working with the Holy Spirit means going on an internal witch hunt uncovering all your flaws. No. You know what? It's letting the Holy Spirit walk with you through your mind so that the jewels of your Being might be pointed out where they had escaped your attention because they are crusted over with your lovelessness, your loveless self-definitions, your loveless definitions of creation.

And so It picks up this dirty rock, and you think, "Oh God! He's going to tell me that this is me. Nothing but a dirty clod." And the Holy Spirit holds it up and says, "Hey. Take your hand here and rub it." So you take it, this awfulness of yours, and you rub it because you've been willing to bring your attention to where the Holy Spirit told you to give it, this awfulness in you. He told you to rub it, and you rub it and the stuff flakes off. My goodness! There's sparkle. My goodness! There's depth. There's color. There's illumination. Wow! I'm beautiful! Wow! I'm not what it looked like I was.

Be willing to go for walks with the Holy Spirit right through the middle of you so that what isn't true about you can be looked at, and you have the opportunity to find that all it was, was a discoloration, a covering over of something that is True About You and has been forever True About You. It becomes a Joy to do this, truly.

But, you know what? You won't find out until you do it. And I need to be clear with you about that. Likewise, it will become perfectly clear to you when you do it. Now do you really have something better to do? [a little tiny audience laugh]

"Hey, you know, leave here, go out, investigate the awfulness of human will a little bit more. Be offended by it. Tie yourself up in a knot because of it. Find a way to retaliate. And then find a way to deal with the retaliation you get for the retaliation you gave. And then deal with how much darker everything got. Sure, go ahead!" You know what? You can do it. You have been doing it. And you still exist, don't you? You still exist because, in spite of all of this, you can't stop being the Direct Expression Of God That You Are. You still can't stop being the Christ, although you are very good at ignoring it. So you can go on and do it longer.

I'm telling you that you have an alternative. And I'm saying anytime you want to take the alternative, you can. And what the heck, why not do it now? I'm not going to tell you to get a rod and put it up your backbone. And I'm not going to get a cattle prod and walk around behind you. I'm telling you, you have another choice, and I'm encouraging you to explore it. I am encouraging you to implement it. I'm encouraging you to bring commitment to it.

I am encouraging you to learn how to become Single-Minded. I'm encouraging you to employ some self-discipline, so that you observe where you're giving your attention, and whether you're giving it alone. Why? So that you can choose to give it in tandem with the Holy Spirit. Why? So that you can learn to distinguish between what God made and what you made-up out of what God made, or what you made-up about what God made. Why? So that you can discern between your Sanity and your insanity so clearly that the insanity registers with you as exactly what it is so that you no longer find it attractive and can lose the obsession with constantly refreshing it, and make a whole-hearted, singular choice for your Sanity.

And you know what? I'm going to do it until all of my sleeping Brothers are awake.

I love you. And I hope this next week is a better one for you than the last two were. Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: It's wonderful to have all of you here. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Last week I invited you to consider the fact that you all say you want Peace and that you don't want to have conflict, but if you pay attention to what you are giving your attention to, you will find that you are lying to yourselves because conflict gets your attention much more easily than Peace. And yet, you might say that Peace is the threshold of the Kingdom of Heaven. Peace is the threshold of the Experience of Unity, unconflictedness. Peace is the necessary experience to waking up.

We've also talked about the fact that Peace is an Experience of Singularity. It's absolutely indivisible. Because it's indivisible, and therefore undivided, your choice to experience it and your persistence in getting to the experience of it by choosing to become still and setting aside your thoughts, brings your mind into perfect alignment with the fundamental nature of the Kingdom of Heaven.

Now the Course says that you can't take the last step into the Kingdom of Heaven by yourself; the Father does that for you. But the one essential thing in order for the Father to be able to do that for you is for you by your choice to have brought your mind into perfect alignment with the fundamental Nature of Reality, of the Kingdom of Heaven. You must bring your mind into an attitude that parallels Reality instead of going off at right angles opposing Reality.

Now, I understand that bringing your mind to this point of Peace is very difficult to do because your habit of seeking out conflict, you believe, is for the sake of self-preservation. And you feel as though if you stop seeking out where conflict is going on, you will become vulnerable and in danger. And because of the deep conditioning, every fiber of your being, you might say, which really means every fiber of your ego, avoids at all cost doing whatever will put you in a position of vulnerability and threat.

I understand that it's not easy. You must understand that it's not easy. You must also understand that the fact that it isn't easy doesn't mean don't do it. The fact that it isn't easy is not justification for continuing to suffer from not being in harmony with the Kingdom of Heaven, and thereby not being in the Kingdom of Heaven consciously. You must be willing to do the work. You must be willing to practice the discipline that goes against the deep grain of your conditioning.

Now, I've said it very, very clearly, and very, very simply. Don't let it get more complicated than that.

When you are in your Right Mind, the concept of fear and the concept, the idea, of conflict doesn't even occur for you. It's impossible for an experience of conflictedness to exist in any way, shape or form in the middle of Singularity, in the middle of that which is absolutely unconflicted.

If you are feeling threat, if you are wary of that which is threatening, if you are constantly on guard, it's not because there truly is something threatening for you to be watching for. The experience and the justification for being on guard arises from the fact that you're looking at everything alone, from your own so-called private mind, puny little separate private mind. Something that you have imagined you can experience because you got this bill of divorcement from the Father and said, "I'm not interested in the way You're seeing things, Father. I want to have the experience of seeing it on my own. And I want to have the experience of giving it my own definitions."

And the moment you got that divorce, the moment you stopped including the Father, you were instantaneously in a state of fear. This is very important to understand. And you must understand that when you turn to the Altar within you, when you turn to the Holy Spirit which is the Altar and which is nothing more than your Right Mind, you are choosing to abandon your isolation. And in the successful abandoning of it by joining with the Father, Peace becomes your experience while your intent is firm. And when you do that and you are willing to be in the world, you might say, from that Peace, you will find the movement of transformation occurring. You will find the movement of healing occurring. You will find reconfiguration occurring that more closely approximates Reality.

And so the simplicity of it lies in your realizing that if you're experiencing conflict, you are looking at everything alone. And that the answer to it, the resolution to the conflict and the justification for fear comes not from becoming a better defender of yourself against the world, but it's a matter of abandoning the independence and going within and joining with the Holy Spirit, with your Guide, with Me, or even reaching out to the Father. Understand also that when you do this, you're not going to get Guidance, you are not going to be infilled with illumination that will allow you to defend yourself better. This isn't about turning to God in order to be able to gather information that will allow you to be more successful as an independent, separate entity. It's about learning what the Father's Perspective is so that you can abandon the independent stance that you have taken, and by abandoning it, removing yourself from the state of fear that's inseparable from being separated, and being in a new way, being from a new place.

You could call the new experience a religious experience, but that might add some time to your process of awakening, because what it's all about really is learning to come from that Place of Excellence in you, learning to be from that place of indivisible Singularity right in the middle of your daily, secular activities so that ultimately being out from your Peace and being in the world joined with the Father, with the Holy Spirit, with your Guide, or with Me, becomes the definition of secular activity, becomes the meaning of your daily interactions with each other in the here and now of what you've been calling the human experience.

And you know what will happen? Because you're always teaching and you've moved into a Singularity, the Singularity of Peace, and you're embracing it, your behavior towards each other will become more humane. You will find yourself confronted by attack less and less. And you will also find yourself neglecting to hold harsh and critical thoughts about others in your experience. The subtle forms of attack that everyone engages in are constituted of having assessments about each other that haven't come at all from an attitude of love or embrace, but have come out of the fear that causes you to feel that defense is always called for, and that being on guard against your dastardly brothers and sisters is called for.

I cannot emphasize enough that waking up is not a way of rising above the world, or flashing out of the world, of letting it be so beneath you that it doesn't bother you. That is not what it's about! It's about being willing to be fully present with your Brothers and Sisters right here, right now. Why? Because underneath each of your self-definitions that are based on a sense of personal independence, you are all the Christ right here, right now, right today. And you need to start behaving like What You Are so that you might see everyone else as identically the same thing so that you're coming from Love and so that no matter what they are doing, you can see that Love is what is called for, and as a result the way all of you be together globally will begin to reflect Love rather than defense. That's what it's about.

It's about What Is Divinely True About You becoming the nature and the feeling of and the way you be in the secular world, in the world you're in. You know what? It's really not about becoming holy. It's really about becoming loving. Holy is spiritual, other-worldly. That's the definition that's given to it, and so it's transcendent. It's not related to your everyday world. Well, that's a sad definition. Holy means Whole. Ah! Whole. Indivisible. What is Whole is undivided. What is Whole is a Singularity. You see? And what is needed is for everyone to be from the Singularity of Peace right where you are. [a minute of silence]

Okay. To the book.

RAJ READING: Transfer, which IS extension, is a measure of learning because it is its MEASURABLE RESULT.

RAJ: When you move into your Peace, your very presence, your very being, teaches Peace. When you move into the Singularity of Love, your very being becomes that which teaches Love. Extends it, in other words. And there is always a recognizable evidence of the shift in where you're coming from. In other words, you could say, it is its measurable result.

Remember there will always be recognizable evidence of your standpoint. If you are conflicted, if you are claiming independence and you are being out of the inevitable state of fear that cannot be separated from an independence that cannot truly exist, you will have evidence of conflict—immediate, simultaneous. When you choose for the Singularity of Peace or Love, you will have simultaneous evidence of it in the form of healing, in the form of harmony, in the form of the absence of the seductive invitation of threat and the call for fear.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This, however, does not mean that what it transfers TO is measurable.

RAJ: Now this is very important.

RAJ READING: On the contrary, unless it transfers to the whole Sonship, which is immeasurable because it was created BY the Immeasurable, the learning itself MUST be incomplete.

RAJ: Now what on earth does that mean?

I've said before that you must have an object of your affection. You must have an unselfish reason for going within to the Altar. And so, when you recognize a call for Love from a Brother that looks like an expression of hate or an expression of lovelessness, instead of choosing to respond to it from your fearful, separated, defensive sense of yourself, you must choose for your Peace so that you might move into a Singularity and out of conflictedness. You must go into the silence, into your Peace, because you recognize the bad behavior, we can put it that way, as a call for Love rather than a call for defense. And then you must care enough to extend Love by first getting into your Peace, out of which arises Love.

What we're at a point of discussing on this page in the Course is the fact that you must have a specific object of your affection to be the justification for your wanting to know the Truth, because this further breaks your sense of isolation, not just from God, but also from your Brothers and Sisters.

Now if what we're going to discuss doesn't become clear to you, it does become possible for you to think that you by having chosen to have a specific object of your affection for whom you want healing, for whom you want beneficence, is something special you are doing for this one special problem in your life. If you get stuck there, your awakening will be delayed.

There are no private thoughts. We've discussed this over and over. There are no private thoughts. You are always teaching, and whatever you teach, you are learning.

So, you have an object of your affection and you're having no private thoughts by getting into your Peace. You are freeing yourself of conflict and you are extending that Peace because you are teaching it, and as you teach, you learn it. You are blessed further by it.

If you think that your blessing is going only to this one that you have used as an object of your affection, then you will think that you are special because of what you are doing for this one, single, poor bastard and so your Love is exclusive. It's inclusive of that one, but it's exclusively to that one.

But there are no private thoughts. And you know what? The Brotherhood is humungous, and whatever you teach, you teach to the whole Brotherhood.

Let's continue. I'm going to start at the beginning of the paragraph again for continuity.

RAJ READING: Transfer, which IS extension, is a measure of learning because it is its MEASURABLE RESULT. This, however, does not mean that what it transfers TO is measurable. On the contrary, unless it transfers to the whole Sonship, which is immeasurable because it was created BY the Immeasurable, the learning...

RAJ: Your learning.

RAJ READING: ...the learning itself MUST be incomplete. To teach the whole Sonship WITHOUT EXCEPTION demonstrates that you PERCEIVE its wholeness, and have learned that it IS one. Now you must be vigilant to HOLD its oneness in your minds because, if you let doubt enter, you will LOSE awareness of its wholeness AND WILL BE UNABLE TO TEACH IT.

RAJ: It's really rather logical. It's hard for you to find justification or understanding of what it means to Love the whole Brotherhood. At the moment, you're not even aware of the Brotherhood's Presence in Its Totality and so you must have, for lack of better words, something practical, something tangible, something that's in your face and in your experience to justify breaking your isolation and to be inclusive of and joined with. And so, you have your Brothers and Sisters, you have each other. You can find justification for this, sometimes without suffering involved.

But it becomes totally obvious to you that you must do something when suffering between you and your Brother occurs. And so you take advantage of that. You break the isolation. You break your commitment to separateness on behalf of your Brother so that you might actually take the steps that bring you into your Experience of Peace which is a Singularity and which is the threshold for inspiration and clarity and guidance to be provided to you.

You know, I spoke last week about the necessity of realizing that if while you're grocery shopping, or you are cleaning the house, or whatever, if you are doing it and having no sense whatsoever that anyone is with you, being conscious of it all with you, that you are companioned with in an active way, then you may know that you are asleep. You may know that you are unconscious. And that as long as you are, you're stuck.

Now you all find it difficult enough to just connect with the Holy Spirit. And so I'm not going to suggest to you that you will suddenly be able to experience your connection with the entire Brotherhood, but it is essential for you to know that all minds are joined, and there are no private thoughts. And whatever you are teaching, you are teaching to the whole Brotherhood. I need you to begin to understand that you're not just companioned with by the Holy Spirit, or your Guide, or Me. You are companioned with by All of God's Creations in an active way, where All of Creation is conscious of its connection with you in a direct, communicative sense.

When you're asleep, you seem only to be able to communicate with each other through language. When you are awake, there is infinite constant communication, or, more properly put, communion where everything about you is known by everyone else, and everything about everyone else is known by you, so that it is an infinite experience of the wholeness of every bit of Creation that the Father has set into motion.

Continuing or repeating.

RAJ READING: Now you must be vigilant to HOLD its oneness in your minds because, if you let doubt enter, you will LOSE awareness of its wholeness AND WILL BE UNABLE TO TEACH IT.

The wholeness of the Kingdom does NOT depend on your perception, but your AWARENESS of its wholeness DOES. It is only your awareness which NEEDS protection, since your being cannot BE assailed. Yet a real sense of being CANNOT be yours while you are doubtful of what you ARE. THIS IS WHY VIGILANCE IS ESSENTIAL.

RAJ: Doubts about what you are. What You Are is the Conscious Experience of Being. And the Conscious Experience of Being is the Conscious Experience of What God Is and your inseparability from it. What you are is unseparated from the whole Brotherhood in which there is no privateness whatsoever so that everything about every Creation of God is your Conscious Experience of it.

You are not the tiny, private, separated mind you have thought you were. You are the Conscious Experience of Infinity. You are the Conscious Experience of Communion with every Aspect of Creation, where nothing is withheld from your mind.

Do you see what we're talking about? We're talking about not being a little focal point of willingness to be the Presence of Love, embracing another little focal point that is the object of your affection that justifies your breaking the isolation, and by virtue of connecting with the Singular Experience of Love, teaching it, extending it so you have this tiny joining. We're talking about triggering in your mind that you are very big, not a little point of Love being extended to another little point of Love. You are that which, when you are allowing the Singular Experience of Love to be your experience, that which is unlimited. We're talking about you becoming aware that in that activity of extended Love, You Are Infinite. You are big, for lack of better words, so big that this teaching of Love by being Love is felt by and received by Creation infinitely.

So you see, again, we're not talking about your going to the Altar, connecting with the inspiration of Truth, so that you can come back in your tininess and deal better in your separated state. We're talking about moving into a State of Unity that is infinitely inclusive. It's a new way of being aware of What You Are. It's a new Awareness of What You Are.

And as long as you get stuck in reaching out to God to know how to be better, to find out how to be more successful separately, instead of that, you are reaching out to God so that your sense of yourself will be enlarged. And so that your sense of yourself uncovers the fact that you cannot give a tiny, private gift of Love. When you have let your Brother be the justification for extending Love and for opening up to it so that it might come through you, it goes to the whole Brotherhood and the whole Brotherhood receives it. And those who are awake feel it and are blessed by it. And it confirms their wholeness to them while it's confirming it to you, because what you teach, you learn.

We're talking about being big. It doesn't matter that you can't grasp at the moment what that bigness feels like. It matters that you know that this is the direction you're heading in so that you don't think that, somehow, you're going to be the Presence of God in a tiny way in the middle of the human experience, the awful human experience. You see what I'm saying?

Again.

RAJ READING: ...a real sense of being CANNOT be yours while you are doubtful of what you ARE. THIS IS WHY VIGILANCE IS ESSENTIAL. Doubts about being must not enter your mind, or you CANNOT know what you are with certainty. Certainty is OF God for YOU. Vigilance is not necessary for truth, but it IS necessary against ILLUSIONS.

RAJ: Vigilance for what? Vigilance for threats? Vigilance for what new, awful thing is going to occur? Vigilance for whatever will provide you with ongoing safety? No.

It's vigilance for the Father's Perspective. It's vigilance for the Experience of Truth with a capital "T". Truth that wipes away illusions. It's vigilance for being joined, and not engaging in idle thoughts, which means private thoughts. It's vigilance for the Thought of God.

It's vigilance on behalf of your having a fuller experience of What You Divinely Are, because as you have a fuller experience of it, it becomes obvious to you that What You Divinely Are is What Your Brother Divinely Is. And the moment you feel that, your attitude and behavior toward your Brother or Sister will change.

You are vigilant for Truth, in spite of what it says here. It says:

RAJ READING: Vigilance is not necessary for truth,...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: But you will be vigilant for Truth against illusions, so that the false definitions you've given to everything cannot continue to govern your behavior and justify to you that you can't afford to get into your peace and you cannot afford to be loving, truly loving, because if you do, you will succumb to the inevitable attack that is inseparable from the human condition.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Truth is WITHOUT illusions,...

RAJ: Ah. What does that mean? Truth is a Singularity. Truth is undivided. Truth is indivisible. If Truth is indivisible, it never has become divided.

So we're not about the business of putting Truth back together. We're about the business of abandoning illusions and our faith in them.

RAJ READING: Truth is WITHOUT illusions, and therefore WITHIN the Kingdom. Everything OUTSIDE the Kingdom IS illusion, but you must learn to accept truth because you threw it away.

RAJ: Threw it away. How? You threw it away by saying, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. Father, I would rather give the definitions to it." And so, in order to do that, you had to say, "The Father's Definition is not important to me." Well, the Father's Definition was the Truth. And when you said, "I'd rather define it myself," you threw away Truth. You put it out of sight and out of mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You therefore saw yourself AS IF you were without it. By making another kingdom...

RAJ: And we could say, by making up another kingdom.

RAJ READING: ...which you VALUED, you did not keep ONLY the Kingdom of God in your minds, and thus placed part of your mind OUTSIDE it. What you have made...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: What you have made has thus divided your will, and given you a sick mind which MUST be healed.

RAJ: It's a sick mind in that it is conflicted because there are two allegiances. And they are opposing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your vigilance AGAINST this sickness IS the way to heal it.

RAJ: Is this making sense? Your vigilance against a conflicted mind is the way to heal it. And how do you heal a conflicted mind? By bringing your attention into a Singularity and not letting your attention be divided between Peace and conflict.

Oh, you come home at night, your husband comes home at night, your partner comes home at night, and you have a mutual agreement to be pleasant with each other, to enjoy each other's company, and you have that kind of evening together. You have an intent to give your attention to Peace and Harmony and Love. One of the partners says, "Oh, I would love to have some chocolate ice cream." Or the other one says, "Oh, man, I have a real taste for pizza!" And there's mutual agreement to enjoying pizza together. And so one of them goes out in the car to get it. And while he's on or she's on the road, somebody cuts them off, and immediately there's swearing and anger and mental bullying of the bastard who was so inconsiderate as to be dangerous and cut him off on the home stretch, you might say.

Wow. That's a conflicted mind. That is a mind that's undisciplined. That is a mind that is not devoted to one thing only. It's devoted to two ways of being consecutively within... you know, within the moment of a loveless act occurring. Complete willingness to abandon the pleasure and the love and the companionship and the camaraderie, abandon it instantly for the sake of the pleasure of expressing vitriolic anger. You see?

Your vigilance against this sickness, your vigilance against divided devotion, vigilance against devotion to instability is the way to heal it. The way to heal it is to choose consistently and persistently to give your attention in only one place where the Experience of Singularity can be had. That takes vigilance because you are all sloppy in the use of your mind. And you let it serve one master in one instant, and another master in the next instant.

And then you get back home, you walk in, and you say, "Hey! The bastard out there on the road..." and share the story, but you look at your partner and you remember love. Oh, you know, you're so wishy-washy that you immediately drop your anger and get lovey-dovey and have a pleasant rest of the evening eating ice cream, and watching TV, and being together. No... no discipline whatsoever. I mean, hey, let's be hot or cold. Either be angry all the time or don't.

You see what I'm getting at? Discipline is needed. Vigilance is needed. Vigilance to see that you more and more consistently devote your attention to a Singularity like Peace, a Singularity like Love. And be vigilant enough so that you're not distracted from it, and so that you end up bringing your mind into alignment with the nature of Heaven so that you're prepared to let the Father take the last step.

Now, I've been talking as though you as you presently think of yourself need to accomplish these things. It's the Holy Spirit, it's You, it's your Right Mind, that will bring you into, prepare you for, the last step to be taken for you.

And so, you know, don't try to lift yourself up by your own bootstraps. Don't you in your present, separated sense of your self decide, "I'm going to be more vigilant. And I'm going to be more loving. And I'm not going to get pissed off when the guy cuts me off on the freeway." Well, wait a minute. Ask yourself, "Am I experiencing being companioned with at this moment while I'm being so determined and self-disciplined? Or am I just doing this all by myself and thinking I'm doing a really good thing because it's so intelligent to do this, it's so logical to do this?"

I don't care how many right things you do all by yourself, you're not going to wake up, because it's still you being in charge with no awareness whatsoever that God has already done everything for you. And it's your place, it's your function, to be conscious of that and appreciative of it, and to glorify God by saying, "Wow. I was not responsible for any of this." That's where the Singularity comes in. It's the Father's good pleasure to give you it all.

So let's be clear on that. This isn't going to be you, as you presently see yourself, using mental discipline so that you have a consistent mind. Why? Because you don't know what the consistence is in regard to. You don't know what you really need to be consistent about. And the only way you will know is when you have abandoned your isolation, you have abandoned your commitment to your independence, and you have let something else in. The experience of communion, the experience of joining, tells you that's what it's all about is joining and being vigilant enough not to abandon the partnership.

But you won't find that out, you won't have the fulfilling, deeply fulfilling experience of it if you are trying on your own to be well self-disciplined, doing all the right things, all the intelligent things, all the things I've been saying to do without being joined.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Once your mind is healed, it radiates health and thereby TEACHES healing.

RAJ: Why does it teach healing? Because you're teaching Singularity. You're teaching by virtue of what's revealed to you about you by the Holy Spirit, that which is not conflicted.

Sickness is conflict. Sickness in any of its forms is conflict manifest. And when you start teaching What Is Singular and unconflicted, the evidence of conflict—sickness, in other words—will disappear.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This establishes you as a teacher who teaches like me.

RAJ: Now, let's just be really, really clear here. I haven't set myself up as a teacher. I haven't conceived myself to be a teacher. I do not experience myself as being in a superior position to you, who's going to bless you with my beneficence. No. I don't have myself on my mind. Why? Because I have God on my mind. Because my devotion is to not have a mind separate from His, a perspective or perception different from His, and an experience of independence from Him.

By being the Presence of Mind that is Singular, What The Father Is Being finds expression through me. And I have no plan about it, because I don't have myself on my mind as something to have a plan, anymore than Paul has himself on his mind with a plan right now. No telling what he'll do right after the Gathering. [audience laughter]

Because you're all learning how to be consistent, including Paul. So, when you become a teacher like me, it means that there's no one there being quote "a teacher" unquote. All there is, is that which is reflecting God, which is Singular and is thereby healing, and is thereby transformational. But not by my design and not by Paul's design. I don't have a lesson plan to guide me in raising you up out of ignorance.

So don't get too crazy about the statement that this establishes you as a teacher, a teacher who teaches like me.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Vigilance was required of me as much as of you, but remember that those who will to teach the same thing must be in agreement about what they believe.

The third step, then,...

RAJ: The third step in the Holy Spirit's lessons.

RAJ READING: ...is a statement of what you WANT to believe, and entails a willingness TO RELINQUISH EVERYTHING ELSE.

RAJ: Now, it's going, at times it's going to feel like that means that you're throwing yourself in the toilet, throwing yourself away, abandoning yourself, because the only thing that you can throw away is what God didn't create. And the only thing God didn't create is what you made-up. And unfortunately, what you think you made-up is what gives you definition. And how well you made it up, gives you credibility and integrity. And how consistent you are in expressing it, gives you the reason to feel proud about who you are. And all of that is going to be abandoned because that is what is creating the whole illusion of a human condition, of a secular experience, that can have nothing to do with God, and therefore must necessarily be an ongoing experience of suffering.

Again.

RAJ READING: The third step, then, is a statement of what you WANT to believe, and entails a willingness TO RELINQUISH EVERYTHING ELSE. I told you that you were just beginning the second step, but I also told you that the third one FOLLOWS it. The Holy Spirit WILL enable you to go on, if you follow Him. Your vigilance...

RAJ: Vigilance for what? For staying joined. Vigilance for not being alone. Vigilance for not tolerating a moment of privacy where it's just you, and you alone, are pretending to be there.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit WILL enable you to go on, if you follow Him. Your vigilance is the sign that you WANT Him to guide you. Vigilance DOES require effort, but only to teach you that effort ITSELF is unnecessary.

RAJ: Do you get that? Until you put forth the effort to abide in a Singularity, the Singularity of Peace, and until you make commitment to be in constant communion with your most wonderful Companion, the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind, until you do that through vigilance and self-discipline, you will not come to the place where you realize What You Are, the Christ, that doesn't need to be vigilant about anything because, in your Right Mind, there is no experience of threat. Do you understand now?

Right now you experience a conflicted mind, and it makes perfect sense to you to have a conflicted mind. But having a conflicted mind causes you to expend a great deal of effort and energy being on the defensive. Why? Because you see enemies where they don't exist. You see enemies where all there is truly is God. You see others behaving in a threatening and harmful manner because they see themselves in an environment that is dangerous.

And so they see the constant need for defense that you see. Not because it's true, but because the state of independence includes the state of fear.

Now, you must use discipline. You must discipline your mind to undo the sloppiness, to undo the willingness to find nothing wrong with being conflicted and serving two masters in your own mind. You must be vigilant so that you recognize when you're beginning to think by yourself, when you're beginning to be conscious by yourself, so that you can stop it immediately and join with the Holy Spirit and companion with the Holy Spirit, until such time as you find that you've slipped and you're thinking alone again out of habit.

And then, because you're insistent upon using self-discipline, you become vigilant again to reestablish the connection. And when the connection is established, the Holy Spirit walks through your mind with you, revealing What Is True about everything in you, so that you learn that you're not this separated entity that you thought you were. And that you are not under threat. And that you don't need to protect yourself. And the Holy Spirit leads you into an experience of this, not an idea of it, but an experience of it within you, so that you realize that because there is no threat, there is nothing you need to be vigilant about any longer. Vigilance is required to break the habit, so that you might have a new experience in which you realize that you aren't the vulnerable one you thought you were, and therefore vigilance against threat is not needed. And because you are more in your Right Mind, vigilance against illusion isn't needed because you're no longer hoodwinked.

Now, does everyone understand now? If not, listen to the tape, because I have expressed it clearly, and it will sink in. It will begin to register with you. It's really simple.

Again.

RAJ READING: Your vigilance is the sign that you WANT Him to guide you.

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: Vigilance DOES require effort, but only to teach you that effort ITSELF is unnecessary. You have exerted great effort to preserve what you made...

RAJ: And I'm going to add the word "up."

RAJ READING: You have exerted great effort to preserve what you made...

RAJ: ...up...

RAJ READING: ...BECAUSE it was not true. Therefore, you must now turn your effort AGAINST it. Only this can cancel out the NEED for effort, and call upon the BEING which you both HAVE and ARE. THIS recognition is wholly WITHOUT effort, since it is ALREADY true and NEEDS no protection. It is in the perfect safety of God.

RAJ: What is? The being: Verb. The being which you both have and are.

RAJ READING: It is in the perfect safety of God. Therefore inclusion is total and creation is without limit.

RAJ: And you in your bigness are that which is all-inclusive and totally connected with All That Is, wherein everything that exists is the object of your affection, is what you teach by being, and which is extending to you its Conscious Acknowledgement of God right where you are, and thereby teaching you What Is True about you so that being is experienced as a Constant Extension of Love to the Sonship by the Sonship in the conscious recognition of its indivisibility.

So remember, you teach by being. And what you teach, you learn. And what you learn enhances what you teach. And although you will use a specific object of your affection to initiate the movement of teaching by being, the entire Brotherhood is taught. And this puts you in the position, because you will stand in receipt of appreciation from the Brotherhood for what you've been teaching, it puts you in the position of being available to a sudden shift of perception in which you realize you really are not alone and how infinite is the Love with which you are loved. I am describing the clearer Experience of What You Are that you will be having when you finally get it that your attention is God's Treasure. And your attention needs to become Singular, persistent, consistent.

Can you feel me loving you? So can the rest of the Brotherhood as well. Right now you are sitting, you are being, in the middle of a universal acknowledgement of Love being extended to you. I love you all, and I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of *these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

You'll have to forgive Paul. He's having to really abandon himself to me today [small laugh] because there's something I need to speak about. It's really not anything different from what we've been speaking of for the last three or four weeks, but in a way it brings the point home in the most practical of terms. We've talked about shifting, we'll say, operating systems; shifting from the habit and principle of getting to that of giving, to that of the Extension of Love. It's a wonderful idea, isn't it? It's pleasing to think about it, but it seems to be an entirely different thing to live it, doesn't it?

Getting is based upon the idea that the only way to survive is for relationships to be transactional. Why? Because the rules of transactional relationships provide you with a guarantee; a guarantee that you will not end up being shortchanged. This for that. I'll take care of you and all your needs if you will take care of me and all my needs. But you begin to fall short of meeting my needs and I'm out of here. This is [laughing]... this is really the practical bottom line of marriages, isn't it? Or of any somewhat harmonious and ongoing relationship.

But you know what? Another part of the bottom line of transactional relationships is the premise that each of you is perfectly individual—perfectly, independently deposited into the middle of the Universe. You're taught to grow up and learn to stand on your own two feet, aren't you? To be respectably self-sufficient.

Living that way is hell, because it's based upon a fundamental illusion. The Truth that counteracts and obliterates that illusion is that every single one of you is irrevocably one with every other individual, irrevocably one with the whole Brotherhood, and even more primarily than that, irrevocably one with your Source. Therefore, there's no way for you to be independent. There's no way for you to be successful, respectably successful in your own right. Whether you want to look at it or not, you are all dependent upon each other. Dependent upon each other not really because you're helpless, but dependent upon each other because you're incomplete without each other. You're incomplete without each other.

And you know what? The only thing that is going to move you into the experience of your unity with everyone else, and therefore the experience of the Wholeness of You, is going to be when you shift from getting to giving, when you shift from behaving so as to protect yourself, into behaving because you care about another and because you care enough to extend the very best, which means relinquishing your habitual way of reacting from memory to every situation, and instead, choosing to give your attention to that Place of Excellence in You and extend yourself from there.

Now, we've talked about this before. I haven't shocked you with anything new today. You might say that when we talked about it before, it's been like class work, and now today we're going to have a little lab work where what we've been talking about gets translated into practical application, if I may put it that way. And I have a specific focus, but this specific focus is easily transferable by all of you into every other area of your lives as well.

I've set up the work that Paul and I are doing together with all of you, I have set it up on a Gift basis, not a transactional basis. Not one of you can get what we're giving by paying for it. And not one of you will be deprived of what we're giving if you can't pay for it, because it is not transactional. It is a Gift of Love.

Now, it's easy for you to comprehend that I might be extending it because it's Love with no strings attached, that it is an Act of Love. But I've got to make it very clear. If you aren't recognizing that this extension of mine is happening because Paul is equally engaging in the Extension of Love, you're missing something essential. Paul is not in this to get. He's in it because he cares. He's in it and he engages in the extension because, in this one area, he is perfectly willing to be nothing other than the Presence of Love extending. Now that's the fact. In this respect he stands with me; not behind me, but with me. And he engages in it flawlessly.

Now, others observing him, coming from the getting place which is deeply ingrained in their psyche, you might say, because they are so completely committed to it, might look at Paul and say, "He's got something up his sleeve." They might look at him with distrust. "Well he has hidden motives. No one would be that stupid. No one would be that foolish." Well he is. [single audience laugh]

And I'm encouraging every one of you to become that foolish. Foolish enough not to abandon all common sense and go off into the wild blue yonder, but to be foolish enough to abandon the deeply ingrained habit of control for the sake of self-preservation, and instead, literally, and as consistently as possible, with as much commitment as possible, go within to that Place of Excellence which is the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind, and be spontaneously without a plan. Plans are there to keep you safe. No.

I'm encouraging all of you to do exactly what I'm doing and exactly what Paul is doing. Dare to find that Place of Excellence in You where the Experience of Love emerges in you as you, and naturally seeks expression or extension toward an object of your affection, to someone or many ones that it's your desire to care about, and to limit your expression of yourself to actions and words and behaviors that stand in support of everything that is excellent about everyone else that you come in contact with.

Now I am aware that when I say that the fundamental step of waking up is the abandonment of transactional relationships, is the abandonment of self-protection, is the abandonment of control, it's very hard to hear. It's very hard to hear. It's very hard to let it register. And yet, it literally is the act of separate self-protection that keeps you bound in what you call the human condition, which is a suffering condition, a stressful condition full of strife, full of overcoming, full of battle.

Now, I don't like calling it quote "the work that we do" unquote, Paul and I, but this activity, this Movement of the Extension of Love that we are engaged in is valuable. Is it arrogance for me to say that? No. It's important for me to say it because it's important for you to know that if you're willing to abandon self-protection and engage in defenseless Extension of Love, that what you will be doing will be valuable as well. You see? It won't be just a crazy thing that an eccentric person does. It will be valuable.

Now I could say that it will be valuable because you're not standing in the way of God's Self-Expression, and that would be true. But more than anything, it would be... it is valuable because when you engage with your Brothers and Sisters in this fashion, it changes the tone of the human experience. And it changes the tone of the human experience by bringing forth and illuminating all that is excellent in it. Period. It is valuable because it inspires a change of perception, and therefore a change in behavior, and therefore a change of what is embodied in families, in communities, in countries, in the world.

Now why am I bringing up? Where's the lab work here? Very simply, the lab work is that we're at a potential turning point. We, meaning myself,

Paul, Susan, Chris, those involved in the extension of this work, because support for the work is decreasing. Mind you, it's an interesting phenomenon. Support, and I mean by that financial support, is decreasing while interest in the materials is increasing. Gratitude for the materials is increasing. And it doesn't make sense, does it?

And here's the reason it doesn't make sense. When a gift is given and received and valued, but gratitude isn't expressed, the Gift of Love isn't fully actualized. What does it say in the first chapter of Genesis, 31st verse? "And God saw all that He had made, and behold, it was very good." In other words, Mind observed Its Creations and recognized Itself in It. In other words, for Creation to have been complete, there had to be Self-recognition. There had to be acknowledgement. Recognition by God of Himself in What He Was Being. And I will tell you something. That's when Joy came into Being in the Movement of Creation.

Now, you know, it's been suggested that if, indeed, I am the Christ, why don't I just make a miracle so that Paul can win the lottery, or a sudden, unexpected inheritance that will make him forever self-sufficient? Well, because that's not the miracle I'm working on.

The miracle I'm working on is that everyone recognizes the part they play so that having received the Gift, and being in an ongoing, constant receipt of ongoing Gifting, they abandon, you abandon, whoever you are, the transactional basis for relating, and let two things happen. One, recognize that if there is something that has great value to you, it probably will have great value to others as well, and you would like to support the availability and extension of what's of value to you to them as well. And the other thing, which is almost more essential, is to not slight Paul, or Susan, or Chris, in the recognition of what they are doing, how it relates to you, and finding a way to express gratitude as a consummation of the Movement of Love that you are benefiting by, so that the Gift comes full circle.

Now, it's very easy for your ego to say, "Well, that's just a different form of transaction. I'm still going to have to pay for it." No, you're going to get it whether you pay for it or not. And it's not going to be withheld from you if you don't pay for it.

You know what it's going to cost you? Here's what it's going to cost you. It's going to cost you your ability to remain aloof and independent and not be an active participant in the Movement of Love and Its Extension. Oh. You're going to have to be involved. You're going to have to participate. But until you begin to participate in the Movement of Love by recognizing It, acknowledging It, and expressing gratitude for It, the Love doesn't become a Singularity. It doesn't become a Wholeness. Just as Creation would not have become a Singularity or a Wholeness if God had refused to recognize Himself in Creation. That's where you begin to own Who You Are and that you are inseparable from your Brothers and Sisters. That's where you begin to recognize that transactional relationships are a fraud that keep unity from happening, that keeps unity from being experienced.

Now, practical brass tacks. There are three more days in the month. The bills, which have yet to be paid and which are now late for this month, amount to approximately $1,500.00. Part of that is for the telephone lines which are responsible for carrying all this information to everyone else via the Internet. That means every one of you who are listening right now. If the bill isn't paid, the telephone company turns off the line. Simple.

Well, some of you say, "Paul maybe ought to handle the finances better." Well let me ask you this. Let's be intelligent. If there aren't enough finances to cover utilities, electricity, telephone lines, and perhaps the mortgage, and as many of them are getting paid as there is money for, where is there money left over to mismanage?

Now the fact is, you see, and it is quite possible for One Who Is Fully Awake to point your eyes and your attention in the direction of what is practical, if you value what is happening here, and if I have set it up so that the only way it can happen is on the basis of the Extension of Love, on the basis of Gift, then if you value it, you better find out what your part to play is in it, and recognize that you can't skip over that one little point called gratitude and still have the full Meaning of the Gift of Love actualized for you.

It is also unkind for those of you who have not been supporting, to stand there as an observer and say, "Mm. It's gonna to be interesting to see how this works out. It's going to be interesting to see how God takes care of this. It's gonna to be interesting to see Paul and Susan twist and squirm as things get tighter and tighter. Oh, of course, it's none of my business. You know, it's all a gift anyway. So I accept the gift, and I appreciate the gift, and I value the gift, and I even make copies of it and share it with others, and so I am extending the gift." But all the while you're letting Paul and Susan dangle and twist and squirm because they've made the commitment to make the Gift and follow my directions, not to try to save their ass by getting control of the situation, turning it into a transactional thing, and thereby forcing you to say, "Thank you," which isn't a "Thank you" at all. It's just pure coercion and compliance.

What Paul and I are doing, and the others with us are extending, is not only the Truth, but the opportunity to find out... for everyone else to find out how they fit in, and to abandon the stance of the independent observer of an interesting phenomena. Because the Love that I am extending, which comes from the Father, has an Intent. And that Intent is to cause you to realize once again the Truth about yourselves, so that you might no longer experience quote "the human condition," so that it might be replaced with the Divine Conscious Experience Of Being, so that suffering might be over forever, so that struggle might be over forever.

So, the need is immediate at this end. And what I want everyone to see is that the need is immediate for you as well. Are we just talking about money? No. We're not talking about money at all. We're talking about understanding the Nature of Love, the Way It Works, and the fact that it's impossible for you to stand in receipt of Love and then to extend It without being involved yourself.

"Oh! I found this wonderful new material! Yeah. I am enjoying it so much. Here, let me make a copy of it for you and you pass it on." That's not involvement. That is not where you have come to a place within yourself where you've had to examine what degree you are going to participate by acknowledging the fount, if you will, the place where it's coming forth, and seeing to it that the place where it is coming forth does not become blocked, does not become inhibited, so that not only do you stand in receipt of the Gift, you nurture the place where it's coming forth by valuing it as much as the Gift and saying "Thank you" in the form that keeps the flow unblocked.

Now the fact is that if the recognition of the truth of what I've been saying does not occur, there will within the next two months have to be a change of form. The change of form is going to mean a cutting back of what is presently being done. And what is presently being done is minimal. The only extension there is at the moment is via the Internet. There is no way to provide audio tapes, or CDs, or books, or newsletters through regular mails to those who don't have computers. The next step is to delete the one form of extension that still exists. So you see, the immediacy of the need in Kingston is the immediacy of your need, not because anyone is going to withhold it, but because the means of extending it no longer exists because it couldn't be paid for.

But once again, if you say, "Well, I'm going to call them up and see if I can arrange to pay for it," ask them, "If I send you ten dollars, will you send me such-and-such because then you'll be able to go out and buy a couple of cassettes, empty blank cassettes and record them, and pay for the postage?" No. You can't do that. You have to participate and cooperate with, you have to participate in and cooperate with the Nature of the Movement of Love which is not transactional and has as Its basis giving to an object of affection.

If this premise for this work is altered from that, I promise you that awakening will be protracted because there will be a complete missing of the point; a complete missing of the point that will trigger the "Aha!" in your mind, the realization of everything that we have been talking about as we have been going through the Course. What I'm talking about is the embodying of a Singularity, rather than embodying what divides it. "To have, give all to all." Not, "To have, get all you can for the least you can give." It is a simple principle.

"Oh," I hear someone saying, "Well, Paul wouldn't be having these problems, these situations wouldn't be coming up if Paul were doing something better. There must be some block in his mind. There must be something hidden from his dark past [amused laugh] that he's unwilling to release." Well you know what? The one thing Paul can't do for you is thank himself. And for many of you, that's the one thing you're not doing.

Okay. Course in Miracles 101A lab session over. Let's go to the book.

And for those of you who may be listening for the first time, I am reading from the Course as it was finished by Bill Thetford, and so you will notice differences if you are reading from the first or second editions. The first thing you'll notice is that the title of the chapter is not the same. The title is:

RAJ READING: [Chapter 7] THE CONSISTENCY OF THE KINGDOM

RAJ: And again, just as a reminder. If you're in the first edition, it's page 104. If you're in the second edition, it's page 112. And if you're in the Sparkly edition, it's page 141.

RAJ READING: THE CONSISTENCY OF THE KINGDOM

RAJ: Hmm. Sounds a little bit like the Singularity of the Kingdom.

[Editor's Note: The following heading appears here in the first and second editions: The Last Step (T-#104/112)]

RAJ READING: The creative power of both God and His creations is limitless, but they are not in reciprocal relationship. You DO communicate fully with God, as He does with you. This is an ongoing process in which you share, and BECAUSE you share it, you are inspired to create LIKE God.

RAJ: Inspired. To have, give all to all. Hopefully, you are inspired to embody that because that's the way God creates.

RAJ READING: Yet in creation you are not in a reciprocal relation to God, since He created YOU, but You did NOT create Him. We have already said that only...

RAJ: ONLY.

RAJ READING: ...in this respect your creative power differs from His. Even in this world there is a parallel. Parents give birth to children, but children do not give birth to parents. They DO, however, give birth to THEIR children and thus give birth AS their parents do.

If you created God and He created you, the Kingdom could not increase through its own creative thought. Creation would therefore be limited, and you would not be co-creators with God.

RAJ: In other words, Creation wouldn't be the Eternal Movement of the Mind of God that never stops to repeat Itself, because it would be in a closed loop. That's the best way I can put it.

RAJ READING: As God's creative Thought proceeds from Him to you, so must your creative thought proceed from you to YOUR creations. Only in this way can all creative power extend outward.

RAJ: To have, give all to all. Extend it.

RAJ READING: God's accomplishments are not yours, but yours are LIKE His. HE created the Sonship, and you INCREASE it.

RAJ: And in a way, we've been talking about that today. You increase it by participating in a Singularity where you don't hold yourself separate from your Brothers and Sisters, and you recognize that they are essential to your Wholeness, and you to theirs. And you let that, I'm going to say, merging occur in your mind, so that you're no longer holding a unique definition of yourself that separates you specifically from everyone and everything else.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You have the power to ADD to the Kingdom, but not to add to the CREATOR of the Kingdom. You claim this power...

RAJ: The power to add to the Kingdom.

RAJ READING: ...when you become vigilant only for God and His Kingdom. BY ACCEPTING this power as yours, you have learned to be what you are.

RAJ: Once again that's what we've been talking about.

RAJ READING: BY ACCEPTING this power as yours,...

RAJ: Well, the moment you accept this power as yours, you've got to become involved with it. You can't say, like it's an object, "Oh! This power is mine. Isn't it pretty? It's not too big and it's not too small. It fits in with everything else wonderfully. Oh, isn't that wonderful?" No. By accepting this power as yours, you have learned what? To be What You Are. That's involvement. That's being in a new way. That's being from a new premise.

What You Are, with a capital "A", isn't a definition. It's what you be. It's what you be from the inside out. It's you putting away childish things, and doing... and being an adult. It's you being in a new way from a new premise. It's you being different from what you were.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your creations belong in you, as you belong in God. You are part of God, as your sons are part of His Sons. To create is to love.

RAJ: And I am going to reverse that. To Love is to Create.

And what I've been saying today is that what Paul and I are engaged in as we let the Father's Love flow through in language that can inspire and cause miracles to happen, sudden shifts of perception, is the Movement of Creation Itself. And this Movement that we are engaged in is your Function as well. And I'm inviting you constantly to find it in you, activate it in you, embody it in your activities. And let your desire be single of purpose in valuing that so much that you will do whatever it takes to abandon getting which keeps you bound in ignorance, and replacing it with giving because you care from the Place of Excellence in You.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Love extends outward simply because it cannot be contained.

RAJ: Not so that it can get something. Not so that it can accomplish something. Not so that it can provide safety for itself. Not so it can control others. Love extends outward simply because being of the Nature of Joy, it cannot be contained. And it's your Birthright to experience the Meaning of That, and being the Flow of That, and being illuminated by It yourself as you extend It to your Brothers and Sisters.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Being limitless, IT DOES NOT STOP.

RAJ: Like the energizer bunny [single audience chuckle], it keeps going, and going, and going, and going!

RAJ READING: Being limitless, IT DOES NOT STOP. It creates forever, but not in time. God's creations have always been, because HE has always been. YOUR creations have always been, because you can create only as God creates. Eternity is yours because He created you eternal.

RAJ: Okay. A little bit more practical spirituality. If He created you Eternal, then you are Eternal. You don't have to do anything to become Eternal. Right now you're Eternal. You don't think you are. You don't behave like you are. But you are! Right now you are Eternal.

If you would let that fact register with you that your Eternality is already a fact, then you would begin to look at why on earth you're indulging in birthing and dying, birthing and dying, getting sick and getting well, getting sick and getting well. Why are you creating these variations in something that's invariable? If you're already Eternal, then setting aside death [brief laugh] is really a non-event. You get that? If you're already Eternal, setting aside death is already a non-event. The Ultimate is already happening. The Kingdom of Heaven is the only thing going on. The Infinite, Indivisible Movement of God called Creation is what you are part of, what you are in, and what you are responsible for by virtue of the fact that your Mind is the Mind of God, because God's Mind is what He extended right where you are.

Now what this means is, if you would, imagine going to the store and buying a puzzle where every single puzzle piece fit with every other puzzle piece—every other puzzle piece. With that kind of a puzzle, you could put all the pieces together with the square or rectangular outline, and it could be a mess but everything fit together. No recognizable picture, but all the pieces are there. They're not recognizable because you chose to put them together without having a recognition of what the picture really was of.

And what I'm saying is that right now each one of you is the Christ, the Direct Expression of God, God embodied, experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven, the whole puzzle with every single part of the puzzle there, no missing pieces, and rather than recognizing what the picture is of, you, as the Christ, are putting the pieces together randomly, out of order, and creating a jumble. And you don't have to do that anymore. And you don't have to get another puzzle to have a better picture. The Ultimate is happening at this very instant, and all of the resources you have as the Presence of God embodied, you are using. You're just using them unintelligently. Why? Because you've forgotten Who You Are.

Once it begins to register with you after I keep saying, "Right now you are the Christ; you are the Ultimate behaving as though you're not and believing your behavior," once that registers with you really, you'll have the intellectual justification for saying, "Wow! That means I have some capabilities that I'm using but I'm using unwisely. And by damn it, I am really curious to find out how to use them wisely. And I'm delighted to find out that I don't have to go out somewhere and purchase these capacities, or involve myself in certain obediences so as to become deserving of them. They're already here. I'm already using them. I'm just using them unwisely. I'm as complete and whole as I need to be to wake up."

Once it registers with you that that's the case, you will begin to use your mind in a new way. And you won't be engaging in waking up as though you're the underdog, as though you're something less than, that by certain practices is going to become more than and different from what you were before. Your behavior will be different because your premise will be different. But you know what? There aren't any goodies you haven't already received. There aren't any capacities that are not already fully functional in you.

You really all are like set designers in a movie. And this particular movie is a war movie, and so you design ancient buildings that are demolished by war. You create brand-new ruins—brand-new ruins—using all of the skill and all of the capability that you would use to build a set depicting Heaven, depicting Love, depicting Beauty. You've all just become fascinated with creating demoralizing sets. But you're the fully Christed Sons and Daughters of God fascinated with that activity.

Again, I'm going back.

RAJ READING: To create is to love.

RAJ: Or: To Love is to Create.

RAJ READING: Love extends outward simply because it cannot be contained.

RAJ: Extends outward from where? From the Altar. Remember that? The Altar right in the middle of you, that Place of Excellence in You, that Place where your Right Mind is present and active and ready to fill you with the Conscious Experience of Who You Truly Are.

RAJ READING: Love extends outward simply because it cannot be contained. Being limitless, IT DOES NOT STOP. It creates forever, but not in time. God's creations have always been, because HE has always been. YOUR creations have always been,...

RAJ: Mind you, it's not talking about your ego's creations. The Creations, the Movements of Love that you have engaged in, in spite of your ego,...

RAJ READING: ...have always been, because you can create only as God creates. Eternity is yours because He created you eternal.

RAJ: The Ultimate is because there is nothing else. And as I've said before, you are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing towards it; it is at that point; you are at that point and you must understand yourself there from.

And I'll tell you something. Leaving operating system number one—the system of getting—and abandoning it for giving, because that's the only way you can have, is the one intent that you can engage in that will quickly bring to the focus of your awareness all of the things that keep you asleep, making it easy for you to identify them and abandon them, instead of re-energizing them. Remember that you are at this moment the Ultimate. You are at this moment exactly What God Is Being right where you are. You are the Fullness of God right now.

Less confusingly, the Fullness of What God Is right there where you are is All That Is Real about you, and it is the Wholeness of What Is Real about you. Accept that premise, and let everything follow from that premise, and you will stop wasting your time building brand-new ruins and reinforcing old, useless, mental habits and concepts. And when you stop reinforcing the old habits, the natural, spontaneous Movement of Creation, the Movement of the Presence of God will have a fair chance of registering with you. And you will begin to find your experience reflecting the phrase, "Behold, I make all things new."

So, you want to hear the depressing news? The depressing news is there's nowhere for you to go. The depressing news is that there's nothing new for you to get. The depressing news is that you don't lack anything essential for your Awakening. Why is that depressing? [small laugh] Because you no longer have an excuse for not waking up because you haven't refined your soul enough yet, or you haven't gotten to that point of development yet. You don't have that excuse. It's depressing because it means you've sort of got to take hold of What's True about you and start behaving as though it's True about you, and then believing it as you see the evidence of the Truth of it. But that's the wonderful news! The depressing news is the wonderful news, because it means that none of the ridiculous, silly, excuses you have been using for staying stuck will be meaningful to you anymore. And when they're not meaningful to you, you will let them go.

So, don't let your spirituality be irrelevant to your daily life and your relationships with each other.

I love you enough not to let you be satisfied in your stupid rest. [single audience laugh] I am just loving you. There is a wonderful Singularity. I don't want that word to become monotonous, but there is a wonderful unity this evening, a Unity of Conscious Awareness, and the Movement continues. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet. Before we begin, I would just like to say that even though next Sunday is Easter Sunday, we will still meet as usual.

And I would also like to take this moment to acknowledge with appreciation all of the Love that has been extended during this past week in terms of financial support. It has meant that those bills that were unpaid were able to be paid, as well as some of the bills for the month of April. I will be frank. That help got us over the ditch, so to speak. But I am asking everyone to keep it in mind that in order for us to continue and expand the outreach so that simple things like audio tapes and newsletters can be once again provided, there will need to be an increase of ongoing contributions. Where each of you fit into that picture is something you will have to listen for within yourselves. But I ask you to pay attention within yourself consciously, on purpose, as to where you might fit in to that. Thank you again.

Okay, let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: Bargaining versus Healing

RAJ: Well, we've already spoken at some length last week about bargaining, didn't we? There is a significant difference between bargaining between separated entities who engage in bargaining for purposes of safety and self-preservation, and Singularity. Bargaining is always something that takes place externally in a world out there amongst other separate, independent entities, Brothers and Sisters out there.

Mind you, there isn't anything going on out there at all as separated entities, as separate things. That's just the interpretation all of you have become accustomed to giving to a Singularity called Creation, a Singularity called the Kingdom of Heaven, in which every single one of you is inseparable from every other individuality and thing. The whole Brotherhood constitutes your Wholeness. Every single one of your Brothers and Sisters, every single Aspect of Creation is some aspect of the infinitude of your Being.

And it's not going on out there in space. It's going on, for lack of better words, in the within-ness of Consciousness, Mind. You tend to think that you have a private mind as well that has boundaries, and yet not one of you can demonstrate to me where these so-called boundaries are of your minds. And as you begin to withdraw your investment in the definition of the Kingdom of Heaven as a world and universe and Brothers and Sisters out there, as soon as you abandon that in favor of allowing for the possibility that it's all a Conscious Experience of Mind occurring in Mind and reflecting Mind and embodying all that Mind with a capital "M" is, you will begin to see everything fresh.

And you will begin to see everything as a Wholeness. And you will begin to see that your Brother is part of you, and you are not independent and separate from him, and that he is essential to you and you are essential to him. And that because you are not independent, you all reflect the same Source. And therefore, it is natural for you to get along with each other harmoniously, and you might even say instinctively. I'm using the word "instinctive" there so that you might know that I'm speaking of something that doesn't have to be learned. Good behavior expressed toward each other is natural to you. And you don't need to go out and take classes to learn how to relate to each other harmoniously.

So how does your behavior end up changing from what it is right now? And right now your behavior is defensive. It's bargaining. How do you get out of that? It's simple. And it's what we've been talking about since the beginning. There is a Place of Excellence in you. Whether you've believed it or not, there is a place of utter Excellence in you—Excellence with a capital "E", Royal Excellence, Divine Excellence—that in itself embodies Love, and in itself inspires the Extension of Love. And if you will abandon your defensive posture for just a short period of time and become quiet, and within yourself desire to move toward that space in your Being where this Place of Excellence is so that you might gather from it the sense of caring, you will find all of the elements of caring beginning to fill your mind.

Because you know what? No matter how much you deny it, you know how to love one another. And you know what is excellent. And then you let it flow into expression. You let it be embodied in your actions here and now, right where you are. And it's the doing of this that begins to illuminate the fact that what you're calling the world and universe is the Kingdom of Heaven seen through a glass darkly, but still it's what is being seen. And the illumination will relieve the darkness so that your sight is refreshed. Not only is your sight refreshed, but everything you see is refreshed by your fresh view. And because your fresh view will send out new kinds of messengers, they will come back reporting to you what you are looking with—new eyes.

And that's the way bargaining ends. That's the way defense ends. That's the way bartering ends and gives place to natural expressions of affection. Affection embodied. Affection rendered visible. It's the way your affections become enriched. And as a result of being enriched, enrich everything you look upon.

Because it's all a Singularity, because you can't actually do anything privately, everything you are doing is teaching. Everything you're doing, whether it's rotten or kind, is extended. And because it's a Singularity, it's not just extended to the one in front of you; it's extended to the whole Brotherhood. Do you realize that the whole Brotherhood is listening today? Not because something special is happening here, but because something is going on in the Kingdom of Heaven and nothing escapes their notice.

Think about it when you're inclined to snap at your sister or brother or husband or wife, to be irritated and short with them and embody frustration and anger, because it doesn't just go to them. It doesn't burden those who are awake, but while you're engaged in it, those who are awake know that you are not conscious of them. And the Singularity, the Unity of the Brotherhood is not being experienced. And they extend to you Love. They extend to you their clear perception of What You Divinely Are, in spite of what you currently think you are. They are sending out messengers. And you know what? Their messengers are returning to them confirming your Divinity and that is making it easier for you to wake up. That is making it easier for you to be willing to abandon the defense of bargaining. That is making it easier for you to stop behaving as though you're on the outside of the Allness of God struggling.

It makes it easier for you to say, "Wait a minute. Before I start trying to deal with all of these various challenges that I'm seeing because I've made the mistake of thinking I'm separate, I am going to go within to the Altar. I am going to go within to that Place of Singularity within me that is the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than my Right Mind. And I am going to abide there and gather the facts of all of my experience from there so that I might behave from there." That's the nature and the movement of healing.

If you stop and think about it, medicine is the way you bargain with your body to coerce it into health that it wouldn't otherwise naturally embody. Isn't that the truth? You think that it's something formed by a sperm and an egg that has nothing to do with What You Divinely Are, except that it's a temporary home for What You Divinely Are. And so it can do whatever it will without regard for your well-being. That's the belief. But it's not the Truth. And so you use medicines to bargain with it and to coerce it into health that it wouldn't naturally embody.

Now, if you want healing, you have to abandon the vantage point that is based upon an idea you have created that you can look at everything separate and apart from God, separate and apart from your Source, separate and apart from the Singularity, the Absolute Oneness of your Being which is all Being, Infinite Being. Healing is not the effect of returned health, but healing is the movement from separation to Unity, from tininess to Wholeness, and gathering the facts about your Being from there, and the facts about every one and every thing, all being. That's the healing.

And when the movement to Singularity occurs within you and you are honoring it rather than your agreed-upon definitions, what you will see will change. The Kingdom of Heaven that had looked to you to be a world and universe started from a big bang will begin to look like the Kingdom of Heaven. The scales will fall from your eyes. That which blocked your view of what the world and universe really was will fall away, and you will see perfection that had been there all along. And it won't be the result of bargaining with any aspect of the world and universe. Do you see what I'm saying?

Bargaining isn't just a matter of money. It isn't just a matter of getting the most for the least money. Bargaining is the way you use one thing against another so as to bring about a desired result. And you do that in many areas of your life; health and medicine being one of them. Healing—I'm going to play with words here—healing is a matter of Whole-ing (w-h-o-l-e-i-n-g). Healing means coming into Wholeness. Healing is that which Whole-izes. And Whole-izing brings you into a Singularity, doesn't it? Wholeness is complete, not broken up into parts.

Do you see what I'm saying? If you don't want to see separateness, you're going to have to abandon your claim to being a separate mind in a separate place from the only place there is to be. A sudden shift of perception. Miracles.

Back to the book.

RAJ READING: The ego demands reciprocal rights,...

RAJ: Well, I'm going to interrupt right there.

The only thing that would think it needed rights would be something that was incomplete, something that didn't include within itself Infinity and Eternity. If everything doesn't belong to it, then it needs to gain access to it. And it needs, in order to hold access, to establish certain rights to its possession.

RAJ READING: The ego demands reciprocal rights, because it is competitive...

RAJ: These are key words.

RAJ READING: ...competitive rather than loving.

RAJ: Let that sink in. Competition is not loving. Competition is not loving. Bargaining is not loving. Love does not include within itself competition or bargaining. Again, Love does not include within itself competition or bargaining. This is a very simple statement of fact.

Let it register with you so that the next time you find yourself beginning to engage in competition, you will recognize that this is not loving. Then remember that Love is your Nature. Love is the condition of your Being. And therefore, if you are engaging in competition, whether it's mild or fierce, it has the same effect. It is a flat out denial or rejection of You. So whether again, it's mild or fierce, competition... it is a flat out practice of Self-denial, with a capital "S". It isn't a little bit of Self-denial, or a lot of Self-denial. It's flat out Self-denial. Remember this so you can catch yourself and not waste time indulging in it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It...

RAJ: The ego.

RAJ READING: ...is always willing to make a "deal," but it cannot understand that to be LIKE another means that NO deals are possible. To gain you must give, not bargain.

RAJ: Why? Because that's the way God is, and you are His Presence expressed, and therefore your Function is identical to His. And anything else you try to engage in is totally useless, meaningless. Period.

Even though it's useless and meaningless, if you engage in it and find value in it and make commitment to it, you bring your energy into a highly focused expression of something that is impossible. And when you bring your energy into that arena of attempting to accomplish the impossible, you will be met with the impossibility of it flat out. And you will call it pain. You will call it stress. You will call it discomfort. You will call it illness. You will call it death.

The only thing is you'll call it death over and over and over, along with birth over and over and over, because you can't change What You Are. And so you can't die, even though you seem to put yourself through a dying experience, but you'll continue to have the ever-present opportunity to stop trying to do what's impossible and creating for yourself stressful, dying experiences.

Again.

RAJ READING: To gain you must give, not bargain. To bargain is to limit giving, and this is not God's Will. To will with God is to create like Him. God does not limit His gifts in any way. YOU are His gifts, and so your gifts must be like His. Your gifts TO the Kingdom must be like His Gifts to YOU.

RAJ: Well, until you get past the bargaining stage, the self-defense stage, you're not going to be thinking about making gifts to the Kingdom. [laughing] Heaven sakes! They're all your enemy. [laughing] That's why you're having to bargain. If they were part of you and you knew it, and they were as benign as you are, if you knew that's what you were, you wouldn't engage in bargaining at all, and you would extend your gifts that were extended to you and are being extended to you by your Father by virtue of His Embodying Himself right there where you are, and leaving no room for anything else right there where you are but What He's Being.

This is why it is so essential to get out of the self-defense of bargaining and making good deals, so that you might get back into the Movement of Wholeness that God Is Being right there where you are, and which it is your Function to be being and extending from where you are.

Again.

RAJ READING: Your gifts TO the Kingdom must be like His Gifts to YOU.

RAJ: Why? Because that's the way it works. Why? Because that's what's normal. It is not normal to be in a constant state of self-defense and self-protection, and to hold your Brothers and Sisters apart from yourself as being essentially different from you, and therefore you had better be on guard so that they won't take advantage of you while you take advantage of them.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I gave ONLY love to the Kingdom...

RAJ: Mind you, you're always giving something to the Kingdom. You're always teaching, and what you're teaching is reaching out infinitely.

RAJ READING: I gave ONLY love to the Kingdom because I believed that was what I WAS.

RAJ: Love.

RAJ READING: What you believe you are DETERMINES your gifts,...

RAJ: If you think you are separate, alone, isolated and vulnerable, the gifts you will give will be the gifts of defense. The gifts you give will be obtuse. The gifts you give will be unkind, because they say, "I acknowledge in you, my Brother, my fellowman, something quite different from me, something quite undependable, something untrustworthy." And that's the gift you give. Why? Because of what you believe you are. Because of what you believe you are.

And so we are talking incessantly about changing your mind about what you are, so that it will be easier for you to abandon the misperception of being alone, the misperception of being isolated. And by bringing home a very important point that your sense of isolation and aloneness is not a result of anything anyone else has done, but very specifically something you have done. You got a bill of divorcement from the Father because you preferred to look at everything on your own. You preferred to try out the experience, you might say.

The result of being aware of this is not that it condemns you, but it puts you back in the driver's seat where you've been all along, 'cause you've never stopped being the Christ. And because you can see, at least theoretically or intellectually, that maybe you did enact a bill of divorcement from the Father, you now know that you have what it takes to undo the bill of divorcement by reaching out to the Father consciously and on purpose once again, and inviting Him back in. And so you could say it empowers the Christ That You Are to come back into your Right Mind, because you're not a victim of anything other than a poor choice you made, which you, because of Who You Divinely Are, can reverse now.

Again.

RAJ READING: What you believe you are DETERMINES your gifts, and if God created you by extending Himself AS you, you can only extend YOURSELF as He did. Only joy increases forever, since joy and eternity are inseparable.

RAJ: Remember Eternity isn't endless time. It is Boundless Presence of Mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God extends outward beyond limits and beyond time, and you, who are co-creators with Him, extend His Kingdom forever and beyond limit.

RAJ: Well, you do if you're not engaged in self-defense. You do if you're not hung up on being private and tiny and having some force of will of your own to get satisfaction from.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Eternity is the indelible stamp of creation.

RAJ: And I'm going to add: Eternity is a Singularity, therefore Singularity is the indelible stamp of Creation.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The eternal are in peace and joy forever.

RAJ: That should be reassuring. It's not just Peace forever. Unending, boring Peace. Uninterrupted, unchanging, unyielding Peace and evenness. The Eternal are in Peace and Joy. Joy which cannot be contained. Joy which never stops extending itself. Joy which never stops overflowing. Forever.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: To think like God is to share His CERTAINTY of what you are, and to CREATE like Him is to share the perfect Love He shares with YOU. To this the Holy Spirit leads you,...

RAJ: When you turn toward the Altar within to that Place of Excellence, to that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, it leads you. It leads you to this:

RAJ READING: ...that your joy may be complete because the Kingdom of God is whole.

RAJ: Is a Singularity. A Singularity is indivisible, and therefore undivided. Therefore all of the Infinitude of Creation is of the same Character, of the same Nature, of the same Substance, embodying the same Purpose of Extension forever.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have said that the last step in the reawakening of knowledge is taken by God. This is true, but it is hard to explain in words, because words are symbols, and nothing that is true NEEDS to be explained.

RAJ: Now you might be frowning because as it just said, "It is hard to explain in words." So you're going to have to listen intuitively to catch the sense, because the meaning is not intellectual.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: However, the Holy Spirit has the task of translating the useLESS into the useFUL, the meaningLESS into the meaningFUL, and the temporary into the timeless. He CAN, therefore, tell you something about this last step, although this one you must know yourself, since BY it you know what you are. This IS your being.

RAJ: As the process of Awakening, for lack of better words, as the process of Awakening occurs, you will come into the clearer experience of What You Are and what your Function is. And initially, the biggest difference you will find is that it is not your Function to be in a state of defense. And it's not your Function to bargain. But you're going to have to put yourself out there in the non-bargaining place. You're going to have to put yourself out there in the place of giving, because you dare to care, because you dare to be involved in a new way where involvement is engaged in without the self-protection of defense and without the self-protection of developing new mutually-agreed-upon definitions with the one you're daring to be involved with.

It's going to require your attention. It's going to require discipline to hang in there as you learn to be in a new way, as you learn to be without being hooked by your traditional triggers that call for self-defense, without engaging the habit of self-defense just because you're involved with someone else. You're going to have to dare to trust into a new way of relating, with an intent to follow through until you get the hang of it. Not until you get the controls you need, but until you get the hang of it, like finding your balance on a bicycle when you're learning how to ride it.

No one can tell you ahead of time what balance feels like on a bicycle. You have to engage in riding it in order to find the place of balance that allows you to ride it freely without using defense for your safety. You use balance for your freedom. Training wheels on your bicycle are for safety. Balance is not. Training wheels are not for freedom, because they limit you. You see? Balance gives you freedom. And in balance there is no defense being employed. You have found the way it works. And you enjoy the way it works.

Continuing. And this is in light of the statement that God will take the last step.

RAJ READING: God does not TAKE steps because His accomplishments are not gradual. He does not teach because His creations are changeless.

RAJ: Mind you, we're getting into words here that you're going to have to listen for the sense of that goes beyond the words.

RAJ READING: God does not TAKE steps because His accomplishments are not gradual. He does not teach because His creations are changeless. He does nothing LAST because He created FIRST and FOR ALWAYS. It must be understood that the word "first" as applied to Him is NOT a time concept. He is first in the sense that He is the first in the Holy Trinity Itself. He is the Prime Creator because He created His co-creators. BECAUSE He did, time applies neither to Him NOR to what He created. The "last step" that God will take was therefore true in the beginning, is true now, and will be true forever.

RAJ: And that coincides with what I said last week, that you are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and must understand yourself there from. You don't exist in time. What God created doesn't exist in time. And All of Creation does not exist in time or space, even though you're conceptualizing your experience of it that way. It's all Mind experiencing itself infinitely and Mind has no boundary. And because it has no boundary, there is no such thing as space.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: What is timeless is ALWAYS there because its BEING is eternally changeless. It does not change by increase because it was forever created TO increase.

RAJ: No matter how much it increases, it's still itself. No matter how much Love is extended, it is still what it infinitely was when it was extended.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you perceive it as NOT increasing, you do not know what it IS. You also do not know what created it, or Who HE...

RAJ: The Creator.

RAJ READING: ...is. God does not REVEAL this to you because it was never hidden. His Light was never obscured because it is His Will to SHARE it.

RAJ: Not withhold it.

RAJ READING: How can what is fully shared be withheld, and THEN revealed?

RAJ: Now what is this saying? It's saying something very simple. It's saying what I was talking about last week about the puzzle. All of the pieces of the puzzle... all of the pieces of the puzzle are present, and the puzzle depicts Creation, the Kingdom of Heaven, and you're putting the pieces of the puzzle together in random order and making it look like chaos. Why? Because you don't remember Who You Are, What You Are, and therefore you've forgotten the Vision that would allow you to see where the puzzle pieces go that depict Reality.

I pointed out to you that all of the capacities of the Christ That You Are, you have now. But because you've forgotten Who You Are and you think you're just a human being with a material body that can and does get sick and well, sick and well, and finally dies and "what can you do about it?", because you've forgotten Who You Are and you believe these kinds of idiotic imaginations, you don't realize that you are using all of your Divine Capacities, which are all totally present with you now, in unintelligent ways that cause you to experience Reality in inharmonious ways.

But, you might say that all of the pieces of the puzzle of You and What You Divinely Are, are on the table, or are right where you are. Nothing's left out. Nothing's been lost some place in the past; now you've got to go and find them and gather them up and get them back in the puzzle box. They're all there. The Ultimate is happening right now. And you've got to dare to accept that as a fact and begin to approach every part of your day as though that were true, curious to understand how to use all of the capacities you already have more wisely, more simply, and in a way that causes the puzzle pieces of You to come together suddenly into a recognizable form of Self-recognition.

But the key is that all of these words are directing your attention to, that we've been reading, the key is that it's already done. The key is you are already at the Point of Perfection and you need to start observing yourself from there, instead of observing yourself from a place that's working up toward it. And you must approach it from the standpoint that what God set into place in the beginning, which has nothing to do with time, what God set into place in the beginning is now the fact. And the fact that God Is Being right now is Itself what will undo your commitment to your ignorance and cause a sudden shift of perception to occur in which you see yourself new—new to you—but eternally unchanged.

So, please, get the idea that what these words are aimed at is to snap your attention into a present in which the Ultimate is already the fact because it was always the fact. Do you see? You get a feel, a sense of what I'm saying. As I've said before, you will feel your way into the Kingdom of Heaven. You will feel your way into your Right Mind, not think your way into your Right Mind.

The Ultimate already is and you all are using every aspect of your capabilities as an Ultimate Being, if I may put it that way. At this moment, every aspect of your Divine Capabilities is functional right now and is being, are being, used right now by you. So instead of working toward having those capabilities, you can now give your attention to how to use these capabilities more constructively so they don't hide Reality from you, but rather uncover it to you, uncover a position that you're already in, and uncover the Kingdom of Heaven that is already in place and is being seen and interpreted by you to be nothing more than a material world and universe.

Okay. Continuing.

[The following heading appears here in the first and second editions: The Laws of the Kingdom (T-#105/114)]

RAJ READING: To heal...

RAJ: Or to make whole.

RAJ READING: To heal...

RAJ: Or to make a Singularity.

RAJ READING: To heal is the only kind of thinking in this world that resembles the Thought of God, and because of the elements which they share, can transfer TO It. When a brother perceives himself as sick, he is perceiving himself as NOT WHOLE, and therefore IN NEED. If you, too, see him this way, you are seeing him as if he were absent from the Kingdom or separated from it,...

RAJ: And I'm adding: Which of course can't be true.

RAJ READING: ...thus making the Kingdom itself obscure to BOTH of you.

RAJ: When you engage in looking at your Brother and adopting his sense of himself, and he's obscuring What He Truly Is from himself and he's obscuring the Kingdom of Heaven from himself, well now you've obscured him and the Kingdom of Heaven from yourself, too. Why? Because you borrowed your meanings from him, instead of going within to that Place of Singularity in you where your Brother's place in the Singularity of the Kingdom of Heaven can be recognized by you, and therefore extended to him no matter how he's seeing himself, thus introducing into his experience the opportunity for a sudden shift of perception to occur.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Sickness and separation are not of God, but the Kingdom is. If you obscure the Kingdom, you are perceiving what is NOT OF GOD.

RAJ: Let's try to make this a little more relevant. What does it mean, "you are perceiving what is not of God"? Well, if you don't really know what is of God, what on earth meaning can something "not of God" have for you? When you're perceiving what is not of God, you're perceiving what doesn't feel good to you. When you are uncomfortable, when you are stressed, when you are fearful, when you are jealous, when you are angry, all of these feelings don't feel good to you. You may know that you've lost your connection with your Source. And therefore, because you've lost connection with your Source, you've lost connection with that which gives you the Experience of Integrity within yourself. It's that simple.

Unplug the toaster, the toaster can't perform its function. "It's dysfunctional, poor thing!" [some audience laughter] Why? Because it did something wrong? Because it has some karma to work out? No! Because it's not plugged into the source.

So, if you obscure the Kingdom by choosing to see things your own way, you are perceiving what is not of God and it doesn't feel good. It feels dysfunctional because you're unplugged from your Source. You can't really unplug yourself from your Source. All you can do is imagine with all the power of the Christ That You Are that you are separate—something which is impossible. And as I said earlier today, anytime you try to do what is impossible, it will be uncomfortable. The discomfort you experience, and all of the thinking you do about it, and all of the complicated theories that you use to hold it together as though it were real, are not of God. Therefore, they're not of You. And you're in a state of Self-denial, even though you think that this act of will is an act of self-affirmation.

So if you obscure the Kingdom, you are perceiving what is not of God. You're not a happy camper. That's the best way I can bring home in practical terms what that means. You're not a happy camper.

The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Laws of Mind

RAJ: You could call this: The Laws of Singularity. The Laws of Wholeness. The Laws of Indivisible Wholeness.

RAJ READING: To heal, then, is to correct perception in your brother AND yourself by sharing the Holy Spirit with him.

RAJ: Well, how do you share the Holy Spirit? "Oh, this... Oh, the Holy Spirit. You're gonna share the Holy Spirit." Mm.

The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind right dead center in the middle of you, that Place of Excellence in you that is What You Divinely Are. To experience it, you must set aside your willfulness. You must set aside your commitment to your mutually-agreed-upon definitions. You must be willing to abandon your pet theories and listen beyond them. Listen for something entirely other than them. To be in that Place where the Holy Spirit can, your Divinity can, illumine to you What You Are more clearly so that you might more clearly see What Your Brother Is. And as a result of that, behave in a new way toward your Brother, behave in a way that arises out of and from the Holy Spirit.

Again.

RAJ READING: To heal, then, is to correct perception in your brother AND yourself by sharing the Holy Spirit with him.

RAJ: Well, what happened to bargaining? Mm. Anybody hear anything about bargaining with him to get him to see things better, to see who he is better; bargaining with him, coercing him using logic to make him see better; help him see he's creating his problems for himself? I didn't read anything about that in there. That's not sharing the Holy Spirit with him. That's being from the separated ego, bargaining between egos for the purpose of creating an end result. For the purpose of creating an end result that never ever involves connecting with the Place of Excellence in you and being from a new place in a new way that actually transforms. Why? Not because coercion was applied, but because the original and forever Truth has been able to be illuminated as already the Truth right now so that healing can occur by grace, not by control.

Again.

RAJ READING: To heal, then, is to correct perception in your brother AND yourself by sharing the Holy Spirit with him. This...

[Editor's Note: The next word in the book is "placed."]

RAJ: Places—correction of spelling. This places...

RAJ READING: ...you BOTH within the Kingdom, and restores its wholeness in your minds. This parallels creation because it UNIFIES BY INCREASING and INTEGRATES BY EXTENDING. What you project you believe.

RAJ: And vice versa. What you believe, you project. There's no choice about it. It's absolute. It's going on every moment of every day. What you believe, you are projecting. And what you are projecting, you believe.

RAJ READING: This is an immutable law of the mind in this world as well as in the Kingdom. However, the content is different in this world, because the thoughts it governs are very different from the thoughts in the Kingdom. Laws must be adapted to circumstances, if they are to maintain order.

The outstanding characteristic of the laws of mind as they operate in this world is that by obeying them—and I assure you that you MUST obey them—you can arrive at diametrically opposed results.

RAJ: Now, when I say "you must obey them," whatever you believe governs you absolutely. Whatever the laws are associated with what you believe, they govern you absolutely. Why? Because you believe them. And you bring all of your capacity as the Christ That You Are to everything you do, whether you're doing something ignorant or doing something enlightened.

Again.

RAJ READING: The outstanding characteristic of the laws of mind as they operate in this world is that by obeying them—and I assure you that you MUST obey them—you can arrive at diametrically opposed results. This is because the laws have adapted to the circumstances of this world,...

RAJ: In other words, this is because the laws have adapted to the circumstances of the definitions you have made about the Kingdom of Heaven that you are calling this world.

RAJ READING: ...in which diametrically opposed outcomes ARE believed in.

RAJ: "Believed" is the key word.

RAJ READING: The laws of mind govern thoughts, and you DO respond to two conflicting voices.

RAJ: You do respond to two conflicting voices. That's why it is essential to move into a Singularity in order to wake up, because that's the way you abandon the second voice, the voice for fear, and yield to the Voice for Truth.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You have heard many arguments on behalf of “the freedoms,” which would indeed have been freedom if man had not chosen to FIGHT for them. That is why they perceive “the freedoms” as many, instead of as one. Yet the argument that underlies the defense of freedom is perfectly valid. Because it is true it should not be FOUGHT for, but it SHOULD be sided WITH.

RAJ: Do you see the shift of perception there? We’re talking about one thing—two different ways of looking at it. One is from a standpoint of defensive, separated isolation, and the other is from the State of Singularity. You see, the capacity is there, but you’re choosing the unintelligent thing. You fight for something, instead of siding with it. And so many of the shifts of perception that you will experience will be subtle like that. Easily understood but subtle.

“Ah. I was simply putting the emphasis in the wrong place. I don’t have to fight for it. I have to side with it.” You see?

Waking up will be fascinating, really interesting. But you must not look for enlightenment to provide you with more refined defenses. Enlightenment will say, “Mm. You need to shift your weight to the right, instead of the left. You need to be willing to be defenseless and extend, rather than defensive and bargain.”

It’s, you see, it’s not a big earth-shaking thing. The result, though, will be very different. And it doesn’t call for a capacity you don’t already have. You already know how to shift to the left. If you know how to shift to the left, you already know how to shift to the right. If shifting to the left doesn’t contribute anything, you can easily see that you don’t want to do that and you can say, “Okay, I’ll shift to the right.”

And yet, something more than a simple shift has occurred. Something, a capability you already had. The more that happens is that shifting to the left was self-protective. The shift to the right is Loving. One is an Extension, and one is a securing of a small tightness. Those are significant differences that teach entirely opposing things. And the messengers they send out bring back entirely different confirmations. And the quality of your life is absolutely governed by such a simple shift of emphasis.

So I hope that clarifies for you what I’m saying when I say that all of your capacities as the Christ That You Are, are present, are functioning, and you are utilizing them. It’s just that you’re utilizing them in unconstructive ways. So we’re not talking about learning new startling capacities, but a more intelligent use of the capacities you already have.

My intent is to convey to you that you are already empowered fully to wake up. So you can abandon the ethic of self-improvement and begin to pay attention to what you will find revealed to you if you go within to the Place of Excellence, and listen to the Holy Spirit who can help you recognize the proper use of your Divine Capacities so that you may utilize them and claim them or own them as yours. And in that owning of them recognize that, "By golly, Raj is right. I am the Christ. I am the Son or Daughter of God. I really am. I'm experiencing it, not intellectually, but experientially." You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Those who are against freedom believe that its outcome will HURT them, which CANNOT be true. But those who are FOR freedom, even if they are misguided in how to defend it, are siding with the one thing in this world which IS true.

RAJ: You see, it's only your habit that thinks that something new will need to be defended. When you are learning how to ride a bicycle, you naturally want to know how to defend yourself against falling down. And the interesting thing is if you'll remember back, you never did find out how not to fall down. What you found out was how to ride a bicycle. You found from releasing yourself from a defensive standpoint and experimenting, I'm going to say, that you were able to find something you had never had an experience of before, and that was the experience of balance. And once you found the experience of balance, freedom was available to you, and defense against falling down left you.

Bargaining versus healing. Tininess, separateness versus Wholeness, Singularity. Bargaining, fighting for your safety versus yielding into a new way of Being What You've Always Been, with a new experience of balance that provides you with the simple awareness that all the defense that you thought was essential is unnecessary and meaningless in light of the freedom to be present with the Movement of Creation provides.

As I said before, nothing will more quickly put you in the position for forward movement, and nothing will put you in a position more quickly of recognizing what keeps you from moving forward, than making the shift from getting to giving as a practice, as an embodiment. As something you don't keep secret in your mind, but as something which you express in the world, in your actions toward others—an object of your affection as an expression of caring.

Enough said for today. I love you. And I look forward to being with you next week, Easter Sunday. Don't make a big deal out of it. [audience laughter]

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet as well.

Dare I say Happy Easter? Happy Resurrection Day. [small laugh] Happy Resurrection Day as long as it's my Resurrection you're talking about. [some audience laughing] [chuckling] Woe unto you who is about to engage in Resurrection. [laughing] Whew! And yet, the beginning of it lies in shifting from the principle of getting to the principle of giving, of extending. One of the reasons this seems daunting—I am speaking of Awakening or Resurrection—is the fact that you have to also shift from privacy to openness. And if you will give some attention to it, you'll find that it's in the privacy that you hold that you store all of your secrets, all of the secrets that are the truth about you, or what you think the truth about you is.

How many of you have bought a pair of sunglasses that have a mirrored surface so that you can see everything, but no one can see what you're looking at? It's different from wearing regular sunglasses, because knowing that no one can see what you're looking at, you look at things you wouldn't look at if you thought someone could see what you were looking at. And the activity of looking is an expression of what you really want to be looking at. [an audience laugh] And so in your privacy, you can be honestly yourself. You see what I'm driving at?

We've talked about the fact that whatever you believe, you project. That's from the ego standpoint. The fact is that whatever you Are, with a capital "A", you extend. So, whether you're Awake, or whether you're caught in a sense of private self-hood, you can't escape the Law. You can't escape the way it works. Even in your imagined privacy, you still teach what you think you are. And there are no secrets. And this is extremely important to understand, because if you realize that you're always teaching, that you are always broadcasting what you are, whether it's a belief about yourself, or whether it's the Truth about Yourself, it will be easier for you to see that in order to wake up, it is once again just a shift of emphasis. It isn't that you're actually going to have to learn something utterly new.

You might say that it's a matter of realizing that any privacy you thought you had is just an idea in your mind, which you can abandon in favor of realizing that you are utterly and infinitely joined with everything that exists, and that communication is occurring constantly in both directions, not just from you to everything and everyone else. Every thing and everyone else is likewise teaching. And everything is either teaching about God, or it's teaching about whatever personal concepts are being embraced at the time.

If you will simply realize that there are no private thoughts, literally there is nothing private going on anywhere—anywhere—if you will realize that and if you will dare to honor it, instead of trying to fool yourself even more completely, you will begin to behave in a new way. You will begin to monitor yourself, because you really don't want to be introducing into the picture conflict. You really don't want to be introducing fear, suspicion, doubt in everyone else.

I've mentioned in the last two get-togethers that you are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and must understand yourself there from. You must begin to conceive of yourself from a Place of Ultimacy, so that you might be open to the inspiration, the revelation, of what that You is that is at that Point. If you are at that Point, then whatever limitations you seem to be experiencing at the moment can't be legitimate. If they're not legitimate, something else is. And that will spur your curiosity to inquire, "What freedom is mine that I'm not experiencing at the moment? What freedom is already mine at this very moment which I simply haven't taken the occasion to grasp hold of and experience?"

You want to know something? The moment you actually abandon this sense of privacy that you think you have been able to create, first of all, what will happen is that all the little bits of who you are that you've hidden inside this privacy, will for the most part no longer be found to be of value to you. Secondly, you will be in a position of discovering that you and your Brothers and Sisters are all just like each other, aside from the little bits of specialness that you created about yourself and then hid in the privacy, in the secrecy. You see? And when there's no longer anything special about you, you'll be able to see there's nothing special about anyone else, and it will be easier to love them. It will be easier for your Natural Divine Function to come into play. Why? Because you won't be busy protecting these secret little bits of specialness about you that you're keeping from everyone else. You see?

Okay, let's go to the book. Okay.

RAJ READING: Those who are against freedom believe that its outcome will HURT them, which CANNOT be true.

RAJ: Interesting. Why do you all keep these little bits of specialness hidden away in privacy? Because they give you a sense of control. As long as you have them, you aren't utterly predictable and others can't peg you 'cause you know they don't have the full story. And that means you constantly have available to you the means to throw everyone else off balance. But you know what? You end up having to maintain these little secret bits of self-definition, and you have to utilize them to make sure that no one thinks you're just like them. And in this preoccupation, you have lost freedom. You have lost freedom to be. You've lost freedom to be new.

You know, there was a time when the printing press came along and they tried to keep it, they tried to ban it, because if everybody could have the written word, mm, the "dispensers of truth" would lose their control. Freedom was dangerous. Freedom of everyone to read was dangerous. It was even thought that perhaps freedom for everyone to vote was dangerous. So you see freedom can be perceived as a dangerous thing. And most of all, for each of you, freedom means the loss of control, and every single one of you knows that you do not want to lose control. And like I said last week, that's like saying, "I want to ride my bicycle with training wheels." And that's not freedom.

So, again.

RAJ READING: Those who are against freedom...

RAJ: And all of you are.

RAJ READING: ...believe that its outcome will HURT them, which CANNOT be true. But those who are FOR freedom, even if they are misguided in how to defend it, are siding with the one thing in this world which IS true.

RAJ: You see, whether you're awake or whether you're dreaming dreams, freedom is the one thing that is True.

RAJ READING: Whenever anyone can listen fairly to both sides of ANY issue,...

RAJ: And mind you, the key word is "fairly."

RAJ READING: Whenever anyone can listen fairly to both sides of ANY issue, he will make the right decision. This is because he HAS the answer.

RAJ: Why does he have the answer? Because he is able to listen fairly, without any bias.

RAJ READING: Conflict can SEEM to be interpersonal, but it MUST be intrapersonal first.

RAJ: Sounds complicated, but it's simple. You always think that conflict is something that goes on between two people (interpersonal), but the conflict must be intrapersonal first, which means it must be something you have defined within yourself. You must say what is going on is conflict. "I have determined that what is going on is conflict." And then you project it out there and it becomes interpersonal.

One who is, however, coming from the Place of Excellence within himself, one who is listening for the Holy Spirit, will not see conflict in what is occurring. They may see Love, and the call for Love. That's not conflict. So you see the difference? If you see conflict out there, you may rest assured you're looking at what's going on all by yourself, and you have made a determination in your mind about what is going on. And if you have determined that this is conflict, then you are misled and you will project it and try to deal with it as though your initial determination as to what was going on has nothing to do with its correction. You see?

And at the bottom line, no correction can occur when you don't realize the part you played in the initial definition that you gave to the circumstances. When you make the definition yourself and see conflict, you have abandoned your ability to see things fairly from both sides. There's only one place you can see things fairly from both sides, and that's not from either one of the sides. That's from the Place of Excellence in you where the Voice for Truth can be heard and respond because it sees Love and a call for Love, or two calls for Love, and recognizes that the answer is Love.

RAJ READING: The term "intrapersonal" is an ego term, because "personal" implies "of ONE person," and NOT of others.

RAJ: Do you see? That's a false picture because there's no such thing as one person alone. You are inseparable from every other one of your Brothers and Sisters. So any time that you think that you have a capacity to have a private thought of your own, a private determination of your own, you are deluded. If you're going to have an interpretation, it's going to be infinitely public. And you are going to teach it, whether you want to teach it or not, because what you believe, you project, just as truly as what you are, you extend.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: “Interpersonal” has a similar error, in that it refers to something that exists among different or SEPARATE people. When we spoke before of the extremely PERSONAL nature of revelation, we followed this statement immediately with a description of the inevitable outcomes of the revelation in terms of SHARING.

RAJ: Sharing is extension, not projection.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: A person conceives of himself as separate largely because he perceives OF himself as bounded by a body.

RAJ: You see, this is the old habit. “You are what you see,” instead of, “You are what you’re seeing with.” It is always this habit of overlooking the one essential point. Where is this perception of yourself as a body going on? It’s going on in your Mind. Therefore, Mind is what you are. Not only that, you’re not a private mind. Mind is infinite, all-inclusive. Right now you’re blocking yourself off from your all-inclusiveness by virtue of determining that you are a body, that you are therefore separate, that your mind is a matter of electrical currents in your brain, and therefore are as private as your body is and as separate from everything else as your body is. And you’re believing that with commitment. And I’m here to tell you repeatedly that this is not true. Your body and All of Creation is being experienced in your Mind. Your Mind which has no boundaries is the ground of your Being, not your body. Your Mind is the definition of your Being, not your body.

So, again.

RAJ READING: A person conceives of himself as separate largely because he perceives OF himself as bounded by a body. ONLY if he perceives himself as a MIND can this be overcome.

RAJ: Isn’t it amazing that this is not in the second and third editions of the Course?

RAJ READING: ONLY if he perceives himself as a MIND can this be overcome. Then he is free to use terms like “intramental” and “intermental” WITHOUT seeing them as different or conflicting because minds CAN be in perfect accord.

RAJ: Now, that statement, “minds can be in perfect accord,” is to some degree an accommodation to your still somewhat private sense of yourselves. And it is helpful for you to see that minds, if they really are at all separate, can be of one accord. It's important for you to be able to see that that's true, so that you might lend yourself to be more in accord with your Brothers and Sisters as long as you're still seeing yourself as separate. But ultimately, minds are in perfect accord because Mind is a Singularity that can't actually be divided, and therefore isn't actually divided. You're just not experiencing Its Indivisibility or utter Oneness, because you still are caught in the sense of self as being separate because you thought you were your body.

And you've become quite accustomed to reasoning everything out and thinking everything through on this false basis that you are independent and separate from each other, when you're not. So part of seeing that you're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it and that you're at that Point and must understand yourself there from, part of the understanding yourself there from is to consider the possibility that there is no privacy, and that you are not separate, and that you are Mind in which all experience of body and bodies and world and universe is going on. And that the Mind or Intelligence that every other thing embodies is likewise not a separate discrete mind, but is inseparable from this One Mind that you are that includes them, which means that those Minds include you, which means there is only One Mind.

So you see, this brings it back into the Singularity of Creation, the Singularity of Being. And all of this is part of Resurrection. All of this is part of Ascension—yours. It's abandoning the sense of privacy. It's letting go of all the little nonsensical secrets that made you special, so that you might discover that you're just like everyone else, except that you and everyone else are so much more than you conceived of in this fantasy of tiny private selfhood.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: OUTSIDE the Kingdom, the law which prevails INSIDE it is adapted to "what you project you BELIEVE."

RAJ: And of course, the Law which prevails inside it is, "What you are, you extend." Like Joy, it just keeps bubbling over. It just keeps going, and going, and going, not because direction has been provided to it, but because it Itself is expansive and uncontainable.

Again.

RAJ READING: OUTSIDE the Kingdom, the law which prevails INSIDE it is adapted to "what you project you BELIEVE." This is its TEACHING form, since outside the Kingdom teaching is mandatory because LEARNING is essential.

RAJ: Well, outside the Kingdom, outside of your Right Mind, inside of your tiny fantasy, you have excluded the majority of Creation and you have excluded from yourself your Infinite Experience, your Infinite Singular Experience of it all. And so there is a whole lot that isn't available to you that you must let back in little, by little, by little. As little as possible. And so you seem to learn again of Creation, learn again of Reality. You see? So outside the Kingdom, teaching seems to be mandatory because learning is essential.

RAJ READING: This form of the law clearly implies that you will learn what YOU are from what you have projected onto others, and therefore believe THEY are. IN the Kingdom there is no teaching OR learning because there is no BELIEF.

RAJ: What is a belief? It's something you made-up.

RAJ READING: There is only CERTAINTY. God and His Sons, in the surety of being, KNOW that what you project you ARE.

RAJ: That's another way of saying, "What you are, you extend."

RAJ READING: That form of the law is not adapted at all,...

RAJ: Is not adapted at all.

RAJ READING: ...being the Law of Creation.

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: God Himself created the law by creating BY it.

RAJ: In other words, God didn't sit down in the midst of the process of Creation and say, "Okay, today is the day I make up all the Laws by which Creation will work," and He lists the 10,001 Laws that will govern Creation. No. Mind, with a capital "M", moved. And the Movement was experienced by Mind, and Mind recognized Itself in the Movement. And because Mind was a Singularity incapable of conflict or difference, everything that Mind recognized Itself in embodied Perfect Harmony. It therefore obviously exists according to Principles. But the Principles were inherent in the Singularity of God, and didn't have to be defined, did not have to be set forth as precepts or as rules. You see?

RAJ READING: God Himself created the law by creating BY it.

RAJ: The Laws are the Principles that are inherent in any Singularity that moves. Now don't be misled. There can't be a lot of Singularities. If, or when, Singularity moves, there is Order to the Movement because it is a Singularity incapable of conflict or differentiation. You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: And His Sons, who create like Him, follow it gladly, knowing that the increase of the Kingdom depends on it, just as their own creation did.

RAJ: So who are His Sons? Who are His Daughters? You. And if you're not claiming a capacity to be independent, to have a point of view different from the Father that would introduce difference, if you don't do that, then the Harmony of the Singularity of the Movement of Mind becomes your Conscious Experience and you see with Singularity. That is when your eye is single. It's also when your capital "I" is single; single and therefore inseparable from every single one of your Brothers and Sisters.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Laws must be communicated if they are to be helpful.

RAJ: Well that statement only has meaning for those who are currently in a state of private selfhood. When you are Awake, Laws are not communicated; they are embodied spontaneously, because there's not a separate will to act at odds with them. But while you're having your dream, your fantasy of separate selfhood, Laws must be communicated if they are to be helpful.

RAJ READING: In effect, they must be TRANSLATED for those who speak a different language.

RAJ: Well, the moment you said, "Father, I'd rather see things my way. Father, I'd rather define everything myself.", you started using a new language. And so, God's Laws, the Laws of the Singularity of Being, must be translated to you and put in the language you're currently using—no matter how flawed it is, the language you're using. And that's what I'm doing. And that's what the Course is doing. And that is what happens when you decide to go within and inquire of that Place of Excellence in you, the Altar, "What is the Truth here?"

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Nevertheless, a good translator, although he must alter the FORM of what he translates, NEVER changes the meaning. In fact, his whole purpose is to change the form SO THAT the original meaning is retained.

RAJ: So the Holy Spirit, in working with each of you, takes the Divine Meaning and translates it into the rather flexible and rather unintelligent language form you all are using and does it in a way that its original Meaning is retained.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit is the TRANSLATOR of the Laws of God to those who do NOT understand them. You could not do this yourselves because conflicted minds CANNOT be faithful to one meaning, and will therefore CHANGE THE MEANING TO PRESERVE THE FORM.

RAJ: You know, even as you listen to me, or even as you read the Course on your own, you're always measuring what you're reading, or what you're hearing, according to your current definitions of yourselves, the current images you're holding of yourselves, the particular form in which you identify yourself. And you tend to alter what I'm saying, or what the Course is meaning, so that it doesn't violate your current image of yourself too much. You want it to confirm the image you have made of yourselves which you idolize. Fortunately the Course doesn't address just your egos, but addresses the Christ that each one of you is. And so, it transforms you, you might say, behind your ego's back. And it does promote your becoming freed from elements of your self-image that are keeping you unconscious of your Birthright.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit's purpose in translating is naturally EXACTLY the opposite.

RAJ: Meaning that it will not change the meaning to preserve the form.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit's purpose in translating is naturally EXACTLY the opposite. He translates only to PRESERVE the original meaning in ALL respects and in ALL languages. Therefore, He opposes differences in form as meaningful, emphasizing always that THESE DIFFERENCES DO NOT MATTER.

RAJ: You see? The Holy Spirit says, "Love is all," to an accountant, and the accountant says, "Oh, I understand that. I understand the way in which that applies to business practices." And the Holy Spirit says the same thing to an artist, and the artist says, "Oh, I understand that. I understand the way that applies to the formless coming into form." And yet, the artist and the accountant, if they were to talk to each other, would think that neither one of them understood what the statement meant, because the accountant and the artist both biased what they were hearing so that it would fit their particular current self-definition.

Now one thing should be becoming very clear over the last couple of weeks. And that is that the Holy Spirit has a Mission, has a Function, and it's far from passive. It's dynamic. And Its Purpose is to wake you up. Its Purpose is to disclose Itself to you as your Right Mind. Its Purpose is to bring you back into your Right Mind, which ultimately means that its your fundamental Sanity talking to you in your current insanity for the purpose of bringing you back into Integrity, so that you can recognize Who You Really Are, and having recognized Who You Really Are, be free to extend it spontaneously.

So do you see? This is not a matter of something outside of yourself coercing you into a new frame of mind. It's your Self, with a capital "S", asserting itself on your behalf the moment you will dare to let It in by inviting It and saying, "I will not continue to reinforce my independence. I will ask for help. And I will let something else into my space beside my current best definition of myself. I will stop hogging the space and filling it up with nothing more than my best imaginations of what I am, and what I can become, and how I can accomplish it."

Again, once you break the isolation from your capital "S" Self, the Holy Spirit, you automatically diminish your isolation from your Brothers and Sisters, because that's the Law. That's the way it works. The moment you stop establishing secrecy, establishing boundary, that which had been excluded will be present in your space. It's simple.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The meaning of His message...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's message.

RAJ READING: ...is ALWAYS the same, and ONLY the meaning matters. God's Law of Creation in perfect form does not involve the USE of truth to convince His Sons OF truth. The EXTENSION of truth, which IS the Law of the Kingdom, rests only on the knowledge of what truth IS. This is your inheritance...

RAJ: What is? To know the Truth. To know What Truth Is.

RAJ READING: This is your inheritance and requires no learning at all, but when you DISinherited yourselves, you BECAME learners.

RAJ: Why did you become learners? Because what you disinherited, what you disowned of yourself, remains there to be let back in. And because you cannot successfully forever be independent, you will automatically and unavoidably be in the position of constant confrontation by That of You which you have disowned, saying, "I am part of you. Let Me in! You cannot succeed at this insanity because you are the Christ. Let Me in. Let Me in. Let Me in." And so you are constantly and unavoidably confronted with not only the opportunity, but the demand to learn, to reaccept, to re-own that of yourself which you said that you'd rather temporarily do without. You see? What You Divinely Are that you've disowned is your inheritance and requires no learning at all, but when you disinherited Yourself, you became learners.

RAJ READING: No-one questions the intimate connection of learning and memory. Learning is impossible WITHOUT memory since it cannot be consistent UNLESS it is remembered. That is why the Holy Spirit IS a lesson in remembering.

RAJ: And remember this: Remembering is the calling back into Conscious Awareness that which you have known before. But also, re-mem-bering is to include again. Instead of being dis-membered, you are re-membered, put back together.

Again.

RAJ READING: That is why the Holy Spirit IS a lesson in remembering. We said before that He teaches remembering and forgetting, but the forgetting aspect is only TO MAKE THE REMEMBERING CONSISTENT.

RAJ: The forgetting has only to do with the letting go of that which doesn't fit, the letting go of that which isn't Real.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You forget in order to REMEMBER BETTER.

RAJ: You, when you forget everything that you introduced into the picture that distracted you from the Truth about yourself, suddenly you are able to remember better because there's less distraction from the Direct Experience of Yourself.

Referring to the Holy Spirit:

RAJ READING: You will NOT understand His translations while you listen to two ways of perceiving them. Therefore, you must forget, or relinquish, one to UNDERSTAND the other.

RAJ: Well, you only have two choices, two places to give your attention to—the Voice for Truth, the voice for fear—right? Everything I'm doing and everything the Holy Spirit within you does is to promote your forgetting... forgetting, becoming a... to procrastinate listening to the voice for fear.

RAJ READING: This is the only way you CAN learn consistency, so that you can finally BE consistent.

What can the perfect consistency of the Kingdom mean to the confused?

RAJ: Now this is not a rhetorical question or theoretical question. [laugh] What can the perfect consistency of the Kingdom mean to you, the confused? [single audience laugh]

RAJ READING: It is apparent that confusion INTERFERES with meaning, and therefore PREVENTS THE LEARNER FROM APPRECIATING it. There is NO confusion in the Kingdom, because there is only ONE meaning. This meaning comes from God and IS God.

RAJ: That's what you are—Meaning. It came from God and it is God, right there where you are. That is What You Are. And there is no confusion in you unless you believe what you see. And when you see a body and you say, "I am that," you become confused, because you have forgotten that you are the Mind in which that body appears along with all other forms, all other Aspects of Creation, that are therefore part and parcel of What You Are as well.

Again.

RAJ READING: This meaning comes from God and IS God. Because it is also YOU, you share it and EXTEND it as your Creator did.

RAJ: That's your Function. That's called glorifying God.

RAJ READING: This needs no translation because it is perfectly understood, but it DOES need extension because it MEANS extension.

RAJ: Just like Joy means overflowing.

RAJ READING: Communication is perfectly direct and perfectly united.

RAJ: Really.

RAJ READING: It is totally without strain because nothing discordant EVER enters.

RAJ: Now, mind you, we're talking about Resurrection. We're talking about you coming into this kind of Conscious Experience; one that is totally without strain because nothing discordant ever enters. Why doesn't it ever enter? Because you neglect to employ a capacity you thought you had to imagine something that doesn't exist, and then by virtue of some power you think you have, make it become real.

RAJ READING: It is totally without strain because nothing discordant EVER enters. That is why it IS the Kingdom of God. It belongs to Him, and is therefore LIKE Him. That is its reality, and nothing CAN assail it.

RAJ: You see? It's only to a private, self-important, little ego that it's insulting to say that the Kingdom belongs to God. Mm. Well, if the Kingdom is infinite and it belongs to God, then obviously none of it can belong to you. None of it can be your possession. You can't accumulate a certain large portion of the Kingdom so that you can say, "I have more than you have," to your Brother, or Sister, and get a sense of importance.

But again, it's when you acknowledge that it belongs to Him, it's when you acknowledge that you belong to Him and can have no independent importance, that you move back into this Singularity of Being that we've been talking about in which you once again experience being Whole and no Aspect of Creation is outside of you, different from you, or separate from you, and you are in an Infinite Intimacy, an Infinite Connection, an Infinite Conscious Experience of Meaning.

Now, if you'll just think about those words, if you'll just abide with those words and let them percolate, you will be able to conceive of the fact that what I'm talking about is something far more fulfilling than any of the definitions you've given to everything and the life you seem to be experiencing. Because what I'm talking about is that the loss of separate personhood is the loss of a limitation that it's never been your Birthright to experience. And therefore, it constitutes not a loss at all, but a gain.

And no, Robbie, I am not looking at you for any special reason. [audience laugh]

Your greatest fear is that if you abandon yourself to God, you will lose the experience of your value, that you will lose all experience of meaningfulness. And I am trying to convey to you that what you're experiencing in this specialness that you're hiding in the secret privateness is empty of meaning by comparison with the Experience of Meaning that you will let yourself into when you yield to God and abandon this divorcement that you've insisted upon.

Continuing. The subheading is:

RAJ READING: The Unified Curriculum

To heal is to liberate totally.

RAJ: Remember that I said that healing was shifting from bargaining to extending, from getting to giving. It's not something that happens out there, or even in the body. It's what happens in your mind. The shift from tininess to Infinite Singularity.

RAJ READING: To heal is to liberate totally.

RAJ: Ah! Freedom!

RAJ READING: We once said there is no order of difficulty in miracles because they are ALL maximal expressions of love.

RAJ: A Singularity. I'm adding.

RAJ READING: This has no range at all.

RAJ: A Singularity has no degrees, no divisions.

RAJ READING: This has no range at all. The non-maximal only APPEARS to have a range. This is because it SEEMS to be meaningful to measure it FROM the maximum, and identify its position by HOW MUCH it is NOT there.

RAJ: How far from the maximum it is. How much more refining of your soul there is ahead of you which will therefore give your picture of yourself, your image, more validity and more worth because you worked for it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Actually, this does not mean anything. It is like negative numbers in that the concept can be used theoretically, but it has no application practically. It is true that if you put three apples on the table and then take them away, the three apples are not there. But it is NOT true that the table is now MINUS three apples. If there is NOTHING on the table, it does not matter what WAS there in terms of amount. The "nothing" is neither greater nor less because of what is absent.

That is why "all" and "nothing" are dichotomous, WITHOUT a range. This is perfectly clear in considering psychological tests of maximal performance. You cannot interpret the results AT ALL unless you assume either MAXIMAL motivation or NO motivation at all. Only in these two conditions can you validly compare responses, and you MUST assume the former because, if the latter were true, the subject would not do ANYTHING. Given VARIABLE motivation he WILL do something, but YOU cannot understand WHAT IT IS.

RAJ: How is that valuable? Its value lies in the fact that when you say that you are this far away from Awakening, when you are this far away from Resurrection or Ascension, and that therefore there is that amount of distance for you to traverse, and that there is a certain amount of worth that you will gain from traversing the distance, and that the gaining of that worth is essential to your Awakening, it all means nothing. No matter how reasonable you might be able to make it sound to yourself or someone else, it's pure gibberish. This is why you need the Holy Spirit. Because you can cause yourself to believe anything you choose because you have no anchor in Truth. You can make anything seem to be true to yourself at the moment. That's why you need help.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The results of such tests are evaluated relatively ASSUMING maximal motivation, but this is because we are dealing with ABILITIES, where degree of development is meaningful. This does NOT mean that what the ability is used FOR is necessarily either limited OR divided. Yet one thing is certain; abilities are POTENTIALS for learning, and you will apply them to what you WANT to learn.

RAJ: Interesting.

RAJ READING: ...abilities are POTENTIALS for learning, and you will apply them to what you WANT to learn.

RAJ: Here's another point of self-honesty. You won't apply yourself to what you don't want to learn. And you will apply yourself to what you do want to learn. And no matter what it is you don't want to learn, you will apply yourself to not learning it. Which means that when another comes to teach you what you don't want to learn, even though they can see that you are suffering from not having learned it, their efforts will be fruitless. If you are not learning, if ignorance is not being replaced with enlightenment or greater understanding, there is no one to blame for it but you. Now a better way of putting that is there is no one who can be responsible for it except you. And the realization of that fact is the only thing that will be empowering to you. It is the only thing that will lead to your changing your mind and wanting to learn what you hadn't wanted to learn.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Learning is EFFORT,...

RAJ: It means replacing old habits. It means practicing skills that you were ignorant of before. It means doing things that before you had been too lazy to do.

RAJ READING: Learning is EFFORT, and effort means WILL. We have used the term "abilities" in the plural because abilities began with the ego, which perceived them as POTENTIALS FOR EXCELLING. This is how the ego STILL perceives them and uses them.

The ego does not WANT to teach everyone all it has learned, because that would DEFEAT its purpose.

RAJ: And so what it does not want to teach everyone, it keeps in that secret place, that private place that makes you special, that makes you different, and therefore unable to love your Brother, unable to care for your Brother or Sister, unable to extend Love.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Therefore, it does not REALLY learn at all. The Holy Spirit teaches you to use what the ego has made to teach the OPPOSITE of what the ego has learned.

RAJ: That's the purpose of translation.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit teaches you to use what the ego has made to teach the OPPOSITE of what the ego has learned. The KIND of learning is as irrelevant as is the particular ability which was applied TO the learning. You could not have a better example of the Holy Spirit's unified purpose than this course. The Holy Spirit has taken very diversified areas of YOUR learning, and has applied them to a UNIFIED curriculum. The fact that this was NOT the ego's reason for learning is totally irrelevant.

YOU made the effort to learn, and the Holy Spirit has a unified goal for ALL effort. He ADAPTS the ego's potentials for excelling to potentials for EQUALIZING.

RAJ: "Ohhh! That means taking away the specialness! Equalizing. Ahh. Horror of horrors. To be only equal. To be utterly equal. Ugh! To be simply common."

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...ADAPTS the ego's potentials for excelling to potentials for EQUALIZING. This makes them USELESS for the ego's purpose,...

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the rest the sentence: ..., but VERY useful for His.]

RAJ: So you see the ability has been taken and reapplied for God's Purpose, which makes the ability useless for the ego's purpose any longer.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If different abilities are applied long enough to one goal, the abilities THEMSELVES become unified. This is because they are channelized in one direction, or in one WAY. Ultimately, then, they all contribute to ONE RESULT, and by so doing, their similarity rather than their differences is emphasized.

RAJ: You see how it's bringing it all back into a Singularity?

I want you to do a review, if you so wish, during this coming week of the last ten or twelve pages, because I want you to see that although it seems different subjects have been discussed, they are all illuminating the Meaning of Singularity, Oneness, and therefore Wholeness, which provides a new Definition of You for you to embrace, to abide with, that corresponds more closely to the fact that you're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it but you are at that Point, and not only must understand yourself there from, but you can understand yourself there from. And therefore, it's a reasonable thing to give your attention to that, to give your curiosity to that, with a little discipline. With a little definite content, or maybe even a lot.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Ultimately, then, they all contribute to ONE RESULT, and by so doing, their similarity rather than their differences is emphasized. You can EXCEL in many DIFFERENT ways, but you can EQUALIZE in ONE WAY ONLY. Equality is NOT a variable state, by definition.

RAJ: Mm. There we come again; not a variable state. "Oh, evenness. Boring!" I know, it's the surprises, it's the unexpected which makes your life what? Hell. [audience laugh] Not interesting. Ahh. You know what? It may be tantalizingly scary to try to be independent, but I will tell you that it is infinitely fulfilling to experience your Intimate Infinite Oneness with All of Creation in which the incredible Divine Meaning that the Father is setting into place as All of Creation is available to you to feel fully. Yes, I'm enticing you.

And like the child who's learning how to ride a bicycle and no one can really explain to him what balance feels like, the words I use don't come close to conveying to you what the experience is like. But I can tell you and you can grasp the idea that once you take hold and embrace the Singularity, all of this stimulating exciting lifestyle that you have been engaged in will be experienced more like a mosquito buzzing around by your ear when you're trying to go to sleep. Not really anything consequential, not really anything significant, but just this ongoing miniscule disturbance that's all consuming. And you will wonder... you won't wonder, you won't even think about it anymore, but you could understand that you would wonder why on earth you found that so much more worthy of your attention than experiencing your Self and your Sanity, your Oneness with God, your Infinite Intimate Experience of the Meaning of All Creation. You'll wonder why.

So, I want to leave you again with this thought, this point, to use as your measuring stick or reference point. You are neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and must understand yourself there from.

And I know you don't know what that's going to mean, but have you lost all curiosity about potentially interesting things? And if this is something that it costs you nothing to try, to explore, then explore it. Well, I know, yeah. [little laugh] I'm sorry, I forgot. It's gonna cost you your independence. It's gonna cost you control. It's gonna cost you the exhilarating experience of fear. But I promise you, it won't cost you money. It won't cost you money. [single audience laugh] And you know what? If you're willing to look at what I am saying to you with a minimum amount of honesty, you'll have to agree that if you were to embody even a fraction of it, [laugh] everyone in your experience would be blessed.

But, I'm very well aware that you will not learn what you do not want to learn. But you know what? I don't mind expressing the Truth because it glorifies the Truth. It embodies the Truth. It puts the Truth in the air. It sends out Messengers of Truth, and those Messengers of Truth do come back to me, confirming the Truth about You. And I'm a happy camper.

I love you. Come out of your secret private closet and all of your little bits of specialness and play with me. I will look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet. I would like to add for those of you on the Internet who participated in the Online Gathering yesterday, I enjoyed being with you in that way and look forward to doing it again.

Okay. So we have been talking about the fact that Being, Creation, the Movement of God is a Singularity, even though it is infinite and is an infinite expression. God's Infinite Expression of Himself, although experienced in multiplicity, is never a manifestation or example of division. A little bit of God here that looks like a flower, a little bit of God here that looks like a human being, a little bit of God here that looks like a glass top on a table—each little bit of God being different from every other little bit of God. God does not express Himself infinitely by dividing Himself up into parts. So the Infinite Expression of God expresses Singularity—the Singularity of God.

This is important to understand. It means that every Aspect of Creation has one task, has one thing to be, and that is to be that which reflects its Source, to be that which glorifies that which is being it at that moment. So you call it a glass. You call it a glass-topped table. You call it a person. You call it a flower. But it's all God, God, God, God. God. Do you see what I'm saying?

Here's another way of putting it (and I've said it before): Everything you are looking at—the glass top on the table, the glass mug, the flower, the person sitting across the room—is some aspect of the Infinitude of your Being. It's all You. And here's another helpful aspect. You aren't what you see. You're what you're looking with. Therefore, You are Mind in which glass top on a table, mug, flower, human being, is being experienced. You are the Awareness that has no limits in which every single Conscious Experience of Being is going on. Therefore, everything you're experiencing is some part of

You. It takes All of Creation to complete You. Just be with that for a moment.

Without every Aspect of Creation, You would be incomplete. With just one Aspect of Creation snuffed out, you would be less. It's all a Singularity. It's all a Wholeness. And the Wholeness That God Is that is called Creation Moving is What You Are, is what is embodied in every single quote "Aspect" unquote of Creation. Therefore, no Aspect of Creation can be at odds with any other Aspect of Creation. They have... each Aspect has only one Function, and that is to re-present... represent That Which Is Being It, the Will of That Which Is Being It at that moment. And mind you, All of Creation is brand-new in every moment, because nothing is going on at all without God Being It—Being It, Being It, Being It—Being It New, Being It New, Being It New—Being It fresh and always embodying only That Which God Is.

Now, you're to turn to the Altar within which is, for lack of better words, the threshold of your connection with the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind. It's the threshold of your Right Mindedness. And I've said, your Right Mind, the Holy Spirit, has one goal, and that is to help you remember how to do only one thing, and that is to glorify God, to remember that your Function is moment, by moment, by moment, by moment, to embody only What God Is Being right there, right there, right there, now, now, now, now.

Now last week we ended up with this; it's the paragraph before the one I said we would start on.

RAJ READING: YOU made the effort to learn, and the Holy Spirit has a unified goal for ALL effort.

RAJ: For any effort that you put forth in any direction.

RAJ READING: ...the Holy Spirit has a unified goal for ALL effort. He ADAPTS the ego's potentials for excelling to potentials for EQUALIZING. This makes them USELESS for the ego's purpose, but VERY useful for His. If different abilities are applied long enough to one goal,...

RAJ: Mind you, if different abilities, if multiple abilities...

RAJ READING: ...are applied long enough to one goal, the abilities THEMSELVES become unified.

RAJ: That makes sense.

RAJ READING: This is because they are channelized in one direction, or in one WAY. Ultimately, then, they all contribute to ONE RESULT, and by so doing, their similarity rather than their differences is emphasized.

RAJ: Meaning the similarities of the multiple abilities, or different abilities.

RAJ READING: You can EXCEL in many DIFFERENT ways, but you can EQUALIZE in ONE WAY ONLY. Equality is NOT a variable state, by definition.

RAJ: Now, how could you equalize everything in your day, instead of seeing differences? You know, you gotta get up. You gotta be the cook and fix breakfast. You gotta be the mom and get the kids ready for school. You gotta be the mom and get them off to school, and then you have to be the accountant who gets in the car and gets to her job. And then she has to be the supervisor managing her group. And then she has to be a human being who stops and eats lunch; takes care of her nourishment. And then she has to go back to being the supervisor. And then, at the end of the work day, she becomes human being, mom, wife, all mixed together. On the way home stopping at the grocery store to see that husband, children, pets are cared for; their needs are cared for. Blah, blah, blah. So you see, you have many different roles, you might say, that you fulfill during the day. How can you equalize them? What does being an accountant have to do with being a mother, or a wife, or a cook?

Well, it's easy. I'm going to give you two prayers to start your day out with and to remind yourself of throughout the day. The first one is: I wish to see only the Evidence of Love. [repeating] I wish to see only the Evidence of Love. I'll give you a moment to write that down. [pause] Okay. And the second prayer is this: I wish to be only the Evidence of Love. [repeating] I wish to be only the Evidence of Love. Can you see that if you have these two prayers as your conscious intent, it will unify your whole day. Mom, supervisor, human being, wife, nurturer, driver on the freeway—all of these things can be unified with your desire to see only the Evidence of Love, and even more importantly, your desire to be only the Evidence of Love. If you desire to be only the Evidence of Love, then that means your desire is to embody What Love Really Is, which is God.

If you wish to see only the Evidence of Love, then the car in front of you or the car behind you on the freeway, the grocery clerk, your employee, your subordinate, your children, all become the focal point of messengers you're sending out that are looking for the Evidence of Love. It could even be one of your enemies. It can be somebody who's been a very difficult individual in your life and continues to be very difficult. But your intent is to see only the Evidence of Love, so that is the messenger you will send out to everyone and everything that you encounter in the day. That means you have a unified intent, a singular intent, and the messengers that will come back to you will confirm Singularity.

Now, if in addition to your wish to see only the Evidence of Love, you desire to be only the Evidence of Love, you can see that that will unify your behavior throughout the day, no matter what role you seem to be called upon to fulfill as you go through the day. Now all of these different seemingly disconnected things, roles—being an accountant and a supervisor that are different from being a wife and a cook—well the differences fade. The differences hold no significance because every single action you engage in comes under the heading of your desire to be only the Evidence of Love. You see? What I have said is simple and understandable. And if you don't see it yet, abide with it, please. Contemplate it, and ask for it to be embellished for you, illuminated for you.

If you are going to end up experiencing the Singularity of Creation, which is the unalterable fact of it, and thus escape from the apparent experience of diversity of intents and purposes and diversity of nature that you see all around you that makes life seem to be conflicted, you're going to have to start using your mind differently; with more Singularity. And you're going to have to withdraw your investment in your confidence that indeed you live in a conflicted world, because, as we've been saying, whatever you're confident about is what you're going to see. It's the lens through which you are looking.

You all forget that you're looking through lenses. You look and you say, "Oh wow! The world is doing this. Oh wow! This is going on in the world. Oh wow! Look what just happened out there." And you completely forget that you're looking with something, you're looking with attitude. If you're not in your peace, you're looking with attitude. In fact, in New Jersey they say, "You gotta have attitude." If you're not in your peace, you're looking with and through attitude, and attitude governs your view. Attitude governs how you are going to see Reality. And if you forget the part that your attitude plays, if you forget the fact that you're looking through lenses, you will forget the part you're playing in what you're seeing. And once you've lost sight of that, you have been dis-empowered, and you will be at the mercy of what you are seeing, or at least you will believe you are.

To become empowered doesn't mean to regain force, the presence of force in your world. To become empowered means to realize the part you're playing in determining how you're seeing Reality, so that you can withdraw the part you're playing. Get rid of the lenses so that you're looking with innocent minds—minds innocent, absent of preconceptions. That's the way your mind comes back into Singularity. And as your mind becomes back into Singularity and you're not sending out messengers looking for differences and confirmations that the differences are real, you'll begin to find that there are ways for you to be singularly, like desiring to see only that which embodies Love and to be only that which embodies Love.

Remember none of what we're reading about here is theoretical. It's all about you. It's all about Mind. And the very word "Miracles" on the front [cover of the book] refers to what? Sudden shifts of perception. Where? In your big toe? No, in your Mind. Because Mind is a Singularity and you've forgotten that. And everything that is going on that you are experiencing apparently "out there," you are experiencing as a Conscious Experience in your Mind. Therefore it's all a mental experience. Therefore everything you are seeing is nothing more than an Idea. And the Idea is Eternal, and therefore forever stable. So don't mistake and think that because we're talking about Ideas and because you can change your mind, that Ideas can change. Ideas are Eternal because the Source of the Idea is God.

Everything I've said, since I started talking today, is expressing Singularity, and expressing it in different ways so that you might catch the tone of it, the feel of it, so that you might have curiosity to relax into a greater experience of it. Why? So that your Conscious Experience of Being becomes more of a Singularity, and therefore more like God, more parallel to God. Because as we've talked about, it's as, we'll say, divergent points of view begin to parallel each other that God can take the last step, because where you're standing is so similar to What God Is Being that it's just a [snap of the fingers] slip away. Just a little loss of footing, you might say, and [snap of the fingers] oops, you're no longer parallel to God. You're experiencing the fact that God is all there is of You, and there's no inclination on your part to have a separate point of view ever again.

Okay. Again.

RAJ READING: You can EXCEL...

RAJ: As an ego.

RAJ READING: ...in many DIFFERENT ways, but you can EQUALIZE...

RAJ: Bring things into Singularity.

RAJ READING: ... in ONE WAY ONLY.

RAJ: And the prayer that I gave you identifies that way. The way is Love. I wish to see only the evidence of what? Love. I wish to be only the evidence of what? Love.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Equality is NOT a variable state, by definition.

That is why you will be able to perform ALL aspects of your work with ease when you have learned THIS course.

RAJ: I could say that is why you will be able to perform all aspects, or roles, of your day with ease when you have learned this Course. Because you will have found a way to bring it all into the Singularity of Love—the intent to see it, as well as the intent to be it. And I will tell you that there’s no moment in your day and no place you can be at any moment in your day, that doesn’t provide you with the opportunity to wish to see the Evidence of Love, or to wish to be the Evidence of Love.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: To the ego there appears to be no connection because the EGO is discontinuous.

RAJ: It is broken up into parts. It is fragmented. And it sees fragmentation, and it can prove that the fragmentation is real. “The tree is not the rabbit. Everybody knows the tree is not the rabbit. The grass is not the rabbit. The rabbit eats the grass; the grass doesn’t eat the rabbit. They are different. They have different functions. Blah, blah, blah.” It sees fragmentation because it is itself discontinuous, fragmented. It sees fragmentation because it’s looking through the lens of fragmentation, not because what it is seeing is actually fragmented.

That’s why when you go through your day and you see things that seem to be in conflict, you must remember that you’re looking at it through a lens. And if you’re seeing conflict, you have forgotten what you want to see and what you want to be, thus you have set that lens aside. Initially you can think about the wish to see the Evidence of Love and the wish to be the Evidence of Love as a new lens. You can fudge in that way because it makes it easier for you to conceive of giving yourself a new focus. But the fact is that when you are seeing and being the Evidence of Love, you have taken off lenses and you have said in so many words, “Thy Will be done, Father. I wish to see everything as You are seeing it, because that really is the only fundamental way there is for me to see anything. And if I’m seeing it in any other way, it’s because I have chosen to utilize lenses that distort my normal way of seeing and distort Creation, my experience of Creation.”

Again.

RAJ READING: To the ego there appears to be no connection because the EGO is discontinuous.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: The Reality of the Kingdom (T-#107/115)]

RAJ READING: Yet the Holy Spirit teaches ONE lesson, and applies it to ALL individuals in ALL situations.

RAJ: And I would add: All things.

RAJ READING: Being conflict-free, He maximizes ALL efforts and ALL results.

RAJ: Your intent to see the Evidence of Love, your wish, your desire to see the Evidence of Love and to be the Evidence of Love, maximizes everything you do and the results of everything you do.

RAJ READING: By teaching the power of the Kingdom of God Himself, He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit. Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...teaches you that ALL POWER IS YOURS. Its application does not matter.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the following sentence (although he did use part of it below): It is ALWAYS maximal.]

RAJ: Whether it's you dealing with your subordinates at work, or you dealing with your children, or you dealing with your parents, or you dealing with your mate, or you dealing with your enemy, the application of the power that is yours is always maximal. What is the power that is yours? The Power of Love.

RAJ READING: Your vigilance...

RAJ: In other words, your stick-to-it-iveness with your desire to see and be the Evidence of Love.

RAJ READING: ...does not ESTABLISH it as yours, but it DOES enable you to use it ALWAYS and in ALL WAYS.

RAJ: As I said, there will never be an occasion where you cannot be the Evidence of Love. And there's no occasion where you cannot wish to see the Evidence of Love. And I'm going to say also that there's no situation or circumstance in which the Evidence of Love is not present to be seen. In other words, there's no place in All of Creation, or even in all of your distorted experience of life, that has a capacity to be stubborn enough to resist your desire to succeed at seeing the Evidence of Love there. Why? Because no matter how much your private definitions of everything have been strengthened by commitment you have brought to them, Reality hasn't changed. The Presence of God has not been altered, and no substitute has successfully been brought in to replace it—the Presence of God. Therefore, there is nothing that can stand successfully against your desire to see the Evidence of Love there, and there, and there. Why? Because no matter how fragmentedly you have managed to see everything, it hasn't stopped being an uninterrupted, unchangeable, eternal Singularity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When I said, "I am with you always," I meant it literally. I am not absent to ANYONE, in ANY situation.

RAJ: And I am going to tell you this; I've told it to you before in other ways. You are with each other always. You are with the whole Brotherhood always. You cannot be absent from anyone, because absolutely everything is some aspect of the Infinitude of You, and you are some aspect of the Infinitude of everyone else. That's why I suggested that you use a little more self-discipline. Because since you're teaching all the time by simply being, you might want not to feel so free to be frustrated and angry and vent, because everybody gets it, because you cannot be absent from anyone anymore than I can be absent from you.

Now, you could say I just laid a guilt trip on you. But here's the flip side of it. It isn't a guilt trip. It's the Truth. And here's the flip side of it.

RAJ READING: BECAUSE I am always with you, YOU are the Way and the Truth and the Light.

RAJ: And because you each are with every other Brother always, that which is true about you is true about them, and establishes it. You might say keeps it established, doesn't violate it, doesn't try to alter it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You did not make this power any more than I did. It was created to BE shared, and therefore cannot be meaningfully perceived as belonging to anyone AT THE EXPENSE of another. Such a perception makes it meaningless by eliminating or overlooking its REAL and ONLY meaning.

RAJ: Do you see what that means? No. Well let me put it this way. When you said, "Father, I'd rather see it for myself," when you said, "Father, I would like a bill of divorcement. I would like to be and look at everything on my own.", and you shut the door on your Father, at that very moment you caused everything you were experiencing about yourself and about Life to become meaningless. Why? Because without a Father, you're not a Son, or a Daughter. Your Identity was lost to you, even though you couldn't actually lose it at all.

Do you see what I mean? The moment you embrace what is not true as true, in spite of the energy you put forth to try to make it true, you are in a meaningless experience. When you say, "Father, I'm going to look at things, all things by myself," and you perceive yourself as independent and you perceive everything in the unique ways you choose to perceive them, that perception makes what you're seeing meaningless by eliminating, or overlooking, the real and only Meaning of You. The real and only Meaning of You is that you are a Son, or Daughter, who therefore has a Father, and your Father is what gives you your Identity.

The next section, which doesn't appear in the first and second edition, is called:

RAJ READING: The Recognition of Truth

RAJ: The subject itself doesn't appear.

RAJ READING: God's meaning waits in the Kingdom because that is where He placed it.

RAJ: The Meaning He has embodied as each and every Aspect of Creation.

RAJ READING: It does not wait in time. It merely RESTS...

RAJ: Abides.

RAJ READING: ...in the Kingdom because it BELONGS there, as You do. How can you,...

RAJ: No. Mind you, I want you to notice how these words are embodying the meaning of the word, "Singularity."

RAJ READING: How can you, who ARE God's meaning, perceive yourselves as absent FROM it?

RAJ: Your Meaning is Sonhood, Daughterhood. But if you choose to say, "I've gotten a divorce from my Father and I'm now independent on my own," you are perceiving yourself as absent from that which gives you Meaning. It's simple. It's an illusion, but it's one you believe and one you fight fiercely for the right to have.

Again.

RAJ READING: How can you, who ARE God's meaning, perceive yourselves as absent FROM it? You can see yourselves as separated from your meaning only BY EXPERIENCING YOURSELF AS UNREAL. This is why the ego is insane;...

RAJ: And what's the ego? It's just the collection of beliefs and ideas that you're employing to give yourself definition while you are having a temporary lack of Identity.

Continuing. Repeating.

RAJ READING: This is why the ego is insane; it teaches that you are NOT what you ARE. This is so contradictory that it is clearly impossible.

RAJ: But it's not clearly impossible when you forget that you're looking at everything with that frame of reference. And when you forget that you're looking at everything through that lens, then the illusion no longer seems to be clearly impossible. It seems to be absolutely actual.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is therefore a lesson which you CANNOT REALLY LEARN,...

RAJ: You can't really learn that you're an independent entity. It's an impossible lesson.

RAJ READING: It is therefore a lesson which you CANNOT REALLY LEARN, and therefore CANNOT REALLY TEACH. Yet you ARE always teaching.

RAJ: Hmm. Interesting.

RAJ READING: You MUST, therefore, be teaching something ELSE as well, even though the ego DOES NOT KNOW WHAT IT IS.

RAJ: Well, just because the Son of God, the Christ—we'll speak figuratively—took off your golden robes, or your seamless robe of white, or your garment of loveliness, and dressed up in a costume of horribleness, you still remain, underneath this awful garment, the Son of God, the Christ. You might have distorted your perception enough to forget that's Who You Are, but it can't keep you from being What You Are. And so all the time you've forgotten, you're still the Christ being the Christ, and that's being taught as well.

Why is this important to know? Because you have this intense deep conviction in you that you're somewhere way behind the Point of Perfection working toward it, and it's going to be hard work, and it's going to take a long time. It's important for you to know that all the time you're thinking that and behaving as though that were true, you're still being the Christ.

You are. And the Christ that you are is at least teaching that it is being, that it is present. And that teaching is reaching all of your Brothers as well. Your ability to be the Christ is in action right now. It's not a long way off. It's not a capacity you lost and have to regain.

Again, it's a matter of a shift of perception. It's a matter of a shift of emphasis. It's utterly simple. And the more clearly you can—I'm going to say in the vernacular—wrap your mind around this idea, the easier it's going to be for you to recognize and feel that it doesn't have to take a long time, and it doesn't really require you to go through an intense learning process. It might just be something as simple as a shift of emphasis. And it will be easier to make the shift of emphasis now that you're being told over and over and over again that you're neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you're at that Point and must understand yourself—understand yourself, conceive of yourself, let yourself be conscious of yourself—from there, which is right here, right where you are at this moment, right What You Are at this moment, right here in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven that is the Kingdom of Heaven at this moment, even though you're still insisting that it's just a material world and material universe that started from a big bang.

I am making it easier for you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego, then...

RAJ: And I'm going to insert this. Because of what you're teaching about What You Really Are...

RAJ READING: ...IS always being undone,...

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego, then IS always being undone, and DOES suspect your motives.

RAJ: As I've said before, the Holy Spirit is always insinuating Itself into your Conscious Experience. Now you know that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind, the Christ That You Are. It's constantly insinuating Itself into your Right Mind. That's the teaching that's going on. But the ego doesn't know what it is. So the ego is always being undone and does suspect your motives.

RAJ READING: Your mind CANNOT be unified in allegiance to the ego, because the mind does NOT belong to it.

RAJ: Why doesn't the Mind belong to it? Because the ego is nothing more than a bunch of definitions and idea structures going on in what? The Mind. So how can the Mind belong to something that's in it? It can't.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Yet what is "treacherous" to the ego IS faithful to peace.

RAJ: And what is Peace? It's the word that brought up the first use of the word "Singularity" a few weeks ago.

Again.

RAJ READING: Yet what is "treacherous" to the ego IS faithful to peace. The ego's "enemy" is therefore YOUR friend.

RAJ: It's really more than your friend. It's You at the bottom line. It's the Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: We said before that the ego's friend is not part of you,...

RAJ: I know, someone is saying, "Well, what does that mean?" Well let's go on to the end of the sentence.

RAJ READING: ...since the ego perceives itself as at war, and therefore in need of allies.

RAJ: Well, what does it need allies against? You. That in you which can uncover its non-existence. That in you which has the capacity to nullify it completely by remembering Who You Are. That in you which actually does know What You Truly Are—the Holy Spirit.

Where does it go to get allies? It goes to the people you know and it says, "You know what?" It doesn't say, "You know what? I'm feeling very vulnerable, because I don't really exist and it's quite possible that my non-existence might get uncovered." No. It goes to others, your friends, your acquaintances, the people in your world, and it says to them, "You know, I know that you feel uncomfortable. I know that you feel unsafe." Which, of course, they do because they're not awake at the moment. And it says, "You know what? I don't either. And if we got together and made some agreements, we could form a power base in the world and secure some guidelines of behavior that would cause all of us to feel significantly safer than if we each did it all by ourselves." Really sneaky, isn't it?

But, mind you, at the bottom line, why is it engaging in this farce of concern for everyone's welfare? Because, at the bottom line, it's feeling vulnerable to the Holy Spirit in you that can uncover its non-existence. It doesn't say to others, "Help protect me against this insane part of my mind that thinks all there is to it is God." No. [laughing] You see? And in the process of doing this, it means that you find yourself dealing with your friends in ways of negotiation to build up mutually-agreed-upon definitions for codes of behavior that will make you feel safe. And all the time you're doing that, you're totally distracted from the awareness that you're looking through a lens, and that it's the taking off of the lens that needs to be dealt with. You see? And it just compounds itself.

Returning to the book.

RAJ READING: We said before that the ego's friend is not part of you, since the ego perceives itself as at war, and therefore in need of allies.

RAJ: Now, on the other hand...

RAJ READING: YOU,...

RAJ: The Real You.

RAJ READING: ...who are NOT at war, must look for brothers and RECOGNIZE all whom you see AS brothers, because ONLY equals are at peace.

RAJ: Or only equals are present in Singularity.

Now it doesn't say, "You, who are not at war, must look for OTHERS and recognize all whom you see... blah, blah, blah." It says that "you must look for BROTHERS." Why? Why the word "brothers"? Because Brothers are equals, Brothers are family, Brothers are bonded. Not because they grew up together, but because they are Brothers.

Divinely speaking, the word "Brothers," "Sisters," "Brotherhood," conveys connectedness, Oneness, Equality; a state of being bound together in holiness, wholeness. A Brother is not just an acquaintance. A Brother is never a stranger. You know your Brother. You know your Sister. Your Brother knows you. It's this Unity, this Singularity, that the word "Brother" is meant to inspire in you, so that you might understand that the relationship is not a loose relationship, or a casual relationship, or a shallow relationship, or a tenuous relationship. It also means that because you're Brothers, you have the same Father, which means that you both have gained your Identity from a single Source, and that your Identity, both of your Identities, if I may pluralize the word, that both of your Identities are identical in the sense of equal, and therefore there can be no occasion for jealousy. So the word "Brother" is important, just as the word "Father" is more important than you ever thought it was.

RAJ READING: YOU, who are NOT at war, must look for brothers...

RAJ: Not allies.

RAJ READING: ...and RECOGNIZE all whom you see AS brothers, because ONLY equals are at peace.

RAJ: Now when it says that “you, who are not at war, must look for Brothers,” it doesn’t mean that it’s a command. It means that you, who are not at war, have nothing else to look for but Brothers, because your mind isn’t conflicted.

RAJ READING: YOU, who are NOT at war, must look for brothers...

RAJ: Instead of allies.

RAJ READING: ...and RECOGNIZE all whom you see AS brothers, because ONLY equals are at peace.

Because God’s equal Sons...

RAJ: And Daughters.

RAJ READING: ...have everything, they CANNOT compete.

RAJ: And I’m saying that the very word “competition” is so much tinkling brass; nonsense, meaningless.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Yet if they perceive ANY of their brothers as anything other than their perfect equals, the idea of competition HAS entered their minds.

RAJ: Those lenses have been put on.

RAJ READING: Do not underestimate your need to be vigilant AGAINST this idea, because ALL your conflicts come from it.

RAJ: All of your conflicts come from this one single idea. Just like all of your illusions come from putting those lenses in front of your eyes, between your eyes and what you’re looking at. You put on the glasses, you put on your conflict glasses, your defense glasses, and you look out and see a thousand reasons to be defended. And yet there’s only one reason that you feel the need to be defended, and that’s the pair of glasses you’ve put on. So you must remember this so that you address what will solve the problem, which is how you’re looking at things, what you’re looking at things with. What you are looking at things with. And what you’re looking at things with will always be a wish. A wish to see conflict, or a wish to see only the Evidence of Love, the wish to only be the Evidence of Love. That’s what you're looking with is a wish. Remember that. We've come down to the utter simplicity of it.

And I don't want to hear anyone say, "Well, if it's that simple, why isn't anyone awake yet? No one is awake yet and that is a simple idea. Somebody must have thought of it before now, and we're not all awake, so what you're saying is a bunch of malarkey." It's not. Let those two wishes persist in you and they will join together as One, a Singularity. And when there's no backup wish, when you have no alternative wish stuck up your sleeve for an emergency, and your intent really becomes Singular, you will see the evidence of it and you will wake up.

And then it will become easier for everyone else to wake up, but they're going to have to say, "Wow! Mm. That simple idea really is the Truth obviously." And then they're going to have to look at themselves and find out just exactly what ace they have up their sleeve that they're really not too happy about having to abandon, but which they will have to, if their intent is going to become a Singularity and their willingness is going to be in complete harmony with it.

So again.

RAJ READING: Do not underestimate your need to be vigilant AGAINST this idea...

RAJ: The idea of competition.

RAJ READING: ...because ALL your conflicts come from it. It is the belief that conflicting interests are possible, and therefore you have accepted the impossible as TRUE. How is that different from saying that you are perceiving YOURSELF as unreal?

RAJ: It's not.

Now listen to this. Pure Singularity.

RAJ READING: To be IN the Kingdom is merely to focus your full attention ON it.

RAJ: To be in the Kingdom is merely to focus your full attention on it. Again, a simple shift of emphasis. And remember that all the time you think you're what you're dressed up to be in your costume, What You Are is perfectly unaltered underneath the costume and is teaching What It Is. It's not really that hard to shift the emphasis from the costume you're wearing to the one who's wearing it.

We're not even gonna go into all the reasons you can come up with as to, you know, in order to justify that you can't possibly be the Christ. There are hundreds of them, thousands of them. You know, it's an endless string of spaghetti. But it doesn't matter. Because no matter how much you blab untruth, you aren't the costume you're wearing, and that which is wearing the costume is the Ultimate You. And all you have to do is abandon the justifications and all the ways you distract yourself, and make a simple shift of emphasis from the costume to the one who's wearing it.

You know, before you can move into new territory, you have to have a hint that there is new territory, and what it is. And you're getting the hint. And it's making a difference.

Have an interesting and wonderful week. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet as well.

I gave you all two prayers and I'd like to talk about them for just a moment. The first one was, I wish to see the Evidence of Love. And the second one was, I wish to be the Evidence of Love. These are two very significant prayers. Significant because they are the means by which you can neglect the prayer you all say everyday which is, "I wish to see whatever it is I need to see in order to protect my ass." Watch your behavior and you will be able to tell what your real prayer is.

You get up late. You jump in the car, you rush down the freeway, and you watch to see if the police are behind you. You come into the office and you punch in one minute before start time, and you look to see if the boss noticed that you just made it. You sit down and you take a look at your day to see what? What good things are in store? No. You check to see what are the things that are going to be difficult so you can be prepared for them. You're constantly looking at your world to get your guidelines so that you can manage to get to the end of your day somewhat gracefully and without having made anything worse. Now that's a rather severe description, but you'll all agree that it's amazingly accurate and in one way or another describes most of your days.

Now, the thing to remember is that you will see what you're looking with. You always see what you're looking with. You will always find your world reflecting back to you the attitude with which you are looking at it. If you are depressed, the clouds are depressing. If you're full of joy, the clouds are beautiful. Or you say, "Oh wow! This is a good, chilly day. A great day to have a hot inside-warming dish. I've been waiting for this day, 'cause I can't have it on hot days."

What you're looking with is what you will see, and so these two prayers are significant. The first one: I wish to see the Evidence of Love. Mm.

Well, what is one of the outstanding characteristics of the Evidence of Love? Its loveliness. So you're asking to see loveliness in your world, the Evidence of Love, that which is a pleasure to see, a pleasure to experience. And when that is what you are looking with, I promise you that is what you will begin to see reflected back to you. I wish to see the Evidence of Love.

Now, God is Love, and so when you say, "I wish to see the Evidence of Love," you're really saying, "I wish to see the Evidence of the Presence of God." If that isn't included in the meaning of the words, "I wish to see the Evidence of Love," you're not being open enough. Because you don't want to just see the evidence of friends and neighbors and acquaintances being loving toward each other; you want to see the Evidence of the Love that God is embodying in and as the world. So your prayer not only gives your attention a direction, it also causes your attention to open up to something larger than whatever is already in your memory banks. It is an invitation to let something bigger in than just you.

Now when you say, "I wish to be the Evidence of Love," it establishes an intent in your mind about you. And how can you be the Evidence of Love? By letting the Love That God Is through you, extended to an object, or objects, of your affection. In other words, it's an intent on your part to extend love what? From your puny little mind? No. From the Source of Love, so that you might embody God, so that you might embody the Excellence that is in you. And so once again it's more than just you embodying Love; it's you opening the door for an Awareness of God in you flowing through you because you want to be able to embody it, extend it, give it presence in the world.

So prayer is never private. Prayer is always in one way or another, if it is real prayer, a joining with the Father, a joining with your Brother. Why? Just so you can feel better? Just so you can have a less strenuous day? No. 'Cause doing this causes you to become an agent for change; what you might call a dynamic, healing presence.

The Course uses the word "correction" often. This and that call for correction. And as I've said before, you've got to remember that correction isn't punishment; correction is healing. Correction is the uncovering of What Is Real right where something unlike God seems to be going on. Healing, or correction, is the uncovering of Truth. Healing, or correction, is the uncovering of Reality. Amongst Course students, the word "healing" receives far too little attention. And yet, if there is going to be redemption, there's got to be change. There's going to be change. There's going to be the replacement of that which is unlovely with that which is lovely, recognizably lovely; something recognizably pleasurable to be experiencing and sharing.

Okay, let's go into the book.

Again, if you're in the Sparkly Book, it's page 149, first full paragraph. In the second edition, page 117, first full paragraph. And the first edition, page 108, last full paragraph.

RAJ READING: To be IN the Kingdom is merely to focus your full attention ON it.

RAJ: There's the magic word "attention" again. Your attention is God's treasure.

RAJ READING: As long as you believe that you can attend to what is NOT true, you are accepting conflict as your CHOICE. Is it REALLY a choice? It SEEMS to be, but seeming and reality are hardly the same. You who ARE the Kingdom are not concerned with seeming.

RAJ: What does that mean, "you who are the Kingdom"? You remember last week I was saying that you are the Singularity, because you are the Conscious Awareness which is boundary-less, and therefore all-inclusive, and everything you're experiencing is going on within Conscious Awareness, or Mind. Mind is the Kingdom. And you've got to remember, you've got to keep reminding yourself that everything you are experiencing that you're calling material is only material by your definition, but in actuality it is nonmaterial. It is composed entirely and infinitely of Ideas. So whether it's the flower, or the book, or the fingernail, it's an Idea, and it's an Idea in Mind. It's an Idea which Mind formed. And I'm capitalizing the "M", because it's the Infinite Mind that is God that formed it. And that Mind is what constitutes yours. And it is discovering the Truth of that that we're calling Awakening.

So:

RAJ READING: You who ARE the Kingdom...

RAJ: You when you are, I'm going to say, being out from Mind, instead of being as a body.

RAJ READING: ...are not concerned with seeming. Reality is yours because you ARE reality. This is how having and being are ultimately reconciled, not in the Kingdom,...

RAJ: It's not reconciled in the Kingdom.

RAJ READING: ...but IN YOUR MINDS. The altar there...

RAJ: In your Minds.

RAJ READING: ...is the ONLY reality. The altar is perfectly clear in thought because it is a reflection of PERFECT Thought.

RAJ: With a capital "T". A Thought or Idea in the Mind of God.

RAJ READING: It sees only brothers because it sees ONLY in its own Light.

RAJ: Now, remember what we're talking about here is you. We're talking about you as the Conscious Awareness in which your body and everything else is being experienced. But you are the unbounded, Singular, Conscious Experience of Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God has lit your minds Himself, and keeps your minds lit by His Light because His Light is what your minds ARE.

RAJ: You see, Awakening is a matter of shifting what you are using to identify yourself. Awakening is a matter of shifting from identifying with and as the body, to identifying with and as Pure Conscious Awareness in which Creation infinitely is being experienced. It's a shift of vantage point. And again, a shift of what you are using to identify yourselves by.

And so again.

RAJ READING: God has lit your minds Himself, and keeps your minds lit by His Light because His Light is what your minds ARE. This is TOTALLY beyond question, and when you questioned it, you WERE answered. The answer merely UNDOES the question by establishing the fact that to question reality is to question meaninglessly.

RAJ: Now it says, "when you questioned it, you were answered," and the answer was what you're trying to do is meaningless, and if you insist upon doing it, you will have a meaningless experience. You may, if you wish, do it, but understand that you aren't accomplishing anything at all. You aren't accomplishing anything at all.

Again.

RAJ READING: The answer merely UNDOES the question by establishing the fact that to question reality is to question meaninglessly. That is why the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...NEVER questions. His sole function is to UNDO the questionable, and thus lead to CERTAINTY.

RAJ: So, you should be getting the idea that the Movement of Awakening will be a movement away from uncertainty and a million questions into Certainty in which only Knowing is going on.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The certain are perfectly calm because they are not in doubt. They do not raise questions because nothing questionable ENTERS their minds. This holds them in perfect serenity because this is what they share, KNOWING what they are.

RAJ: Now, this experience does not await you in the distant future. It awaits you in any moment in which you are willing to set aside concern, to set aside fretfulness, to set aside your confidence in your personal capacity to solve your problems, and to become still and to turn toward the Altar within you and invite something more into your experience than just you and your capacity to figure things out.

Now, you do this by saying, "Help," or you do this by asking a question. Mind you, as long as you are in doubt, you will have questions. And it's not a sin to ask a question; it's only a mistake to ask a question of yourself. You want to ask the question of something that has Certainty—God—or God's agent, if you will, the Holy Spirit; your Divinity which is held in trust while you dally with the ego.

I wish to see the embodiment of Love. I wish to be the embodiment of Love. That's the way you open yourself up in a relevant way—relevant to you and relevant to your world. That's the way you open the door to serenity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: As has so often been said, healing is both an art and a science. It is an art because it depends on inspiration in the sense that we have already used the term. Inspiration is the opposite of dispiriting, and therefore means to make joyous.

RAJ: When you say, "I wish to see the Evidence of Love," you are inviting the Experience of Joy. You're opening the door for Joy to come in.

When you are looking, when you are wishing to see that which will help you, or allow you, to protect yourself better, you are looking through the lens of fear, and fear is the motivation. And fear is enervating. It is dispiriting, which means you experience a loss of energy, and you also block the experience of inspiration.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The dispirited are depressed because they believe that they are literally “without the Spirit,” which is an illusion.

RAJ: It's impossible.

RAJ READING: You do not PUT the Spirit in them by inspiring them because that would be magic, and therefore would not be real healing.

RAJ: And this is important.

RAJ READING: You DO, however, recognize the Spirit that is ALREADY there,...

RAJ: The capital “S” Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...and thereby REAWAKEN it. This is why the healer is part of the resurrection and the LIFE.

RAJ: This is why you are part of the Resurrection and the Life.

RAJ READING: The Spirit is not asleep in the minds of the sick, but the part of the mind that can perceive it and be glad IS.

RAJ: And so healing is the reawakening of the awareness of Spirit in the one who is in need of healing, when he or she thought it was gone. And you haven't changed them at all. You've just shined a light on something that was there but hidden in the darkness, because they had closed the door on it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Healing is also a science because it obeys the laws of God, Whose laws are true.

RAJ: Healing is always a matter of you and the one being healed coming back into an awareness of the Order of Being, the Orderliness of Being, the Harmony of Being, that exists whether you want to pay any attention to it or not.

Referring to the Laws:

RAJ READING: BECAUSE they are true they are perfectly dependable, and therefore universal in application.

RAJ: In other words, at all times, in all places, under all circumstances, they always apply. Therefore, you are always in a State of Security, whether you know it or not. And when you say, “I wish to see the Evidence of Love,” you are saying, you're opening yourself up to the experience of this Security which is yours, you could say, by Law. But it's not a Law that's applied to you. It's the Law of your Being. It's the Flawless Order of your Being that has forever been.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The REAL aim of science is neither prediction nor control, but ONLY understanding. This is because it does NOT establish the laws it seeks; CANNOT discover them through prediction; and has NO control over them at all. Science is nothing more than an approach to WHAT ALREADY IS.

RAJ: Now think about this.

RAJ READING: Science is nothing more than an approach to WHAT ALREADY IS.

RAJ: Awakening is nothing more than an approach to what already is. And again, you are neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; you are at that Point and must understand yourself there from. You must approach what already is so that you may look at everything from there, including yourself.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Like inspiration it...

RAJ: Meaning "science."

RAJ READING: ...can be misunderstood as magic, and WILL be whenever it is undertaken as SEPARATE from what already is, and perceived as a means for ESTABLISHING it.

RAJ: You see, in healing, you're not busying yourself with establishing health. You're busying yourself with opening up to the already established order of everything that God has made, so that a misperception no longer gets in the way of the experience of it. It's you abandoning your heartfelt definitions that you have made-up that are by definition different from What God Is Being. Your definitions are always an aberration, are always a distortion, or a biasing, of Something Already Real. And in that sense, your definition constitutes a denial, to one degree or another, of That Which Already Is. Healing is being willing to abandon your commitment to your definition with a curiosity to what? See the Evidence of Love there, see the Evidence of God there.

And so, again.

RAJ READING: Like inspiration...

RAJ: ...science... [Editor's Note: Raj replaced the word "it" with the word "science."]

RAJ READING: ...can be misunderstood as magic, and WILL be whenever it is undertaken as SEPARATE from what already is, and perceived as a means for ESTABLISHING it. To believe this is possible is to believe YOU CAN DO IT. This can ONLY be the voice of the ego.

RAJ: [small laugh] You see, the ego says, "You can do it." The ego says, "It needs to be done." And God says, "It was done from the beginning. It has always been. You don't need to do it over. You don't need to establish health. Health is the Law of your Being."

Continuing.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: Healing as the Recognition of Truth (T-#109/117)]

RAJ READING: Truth can only be RECOGNIZED, and NEED only be recognized.

RAJ: When you know the Truth, when you recognize the Truth, I'm going to say when you recognize God's Truth, you know the Truth and you're no longer deluded, which means that you no longer suffer from distorted perception, and so you see the Truth. And the wart, or the rash, or whatever dis-ease you might be experiencing, will cease presenting itself to you because you're no longer deluded. And correction will occur, but it will be a correction in your mind of a misperception; a correction that spontaneously occurred the moment you recognized Truth and knew the Truth that rendered the misperception invalid and no longer valuable to you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Inspiration...

RAJ: Now where did that come from? We're talking about Truth. Well, Truth [snap of the fingers] recognized is experienced as inspiration. It is a shift from a tiny, tight, confined, defensive mental attitude and feeling into an open, singular, unlimited Experience of Reality, of Truth, that is a Joy to be experiencing, not only because you know you're knowing the Truth, but because you're no longer experiencing insanity. And you're feeling your Wholeness and you're feeling your natural invulnerability, and that is inspiring. That is the experience of the inspiration of recognizing the Truth and no longer being deluded.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Inspiration is of the Spirit, and certainty is of God according to His laws. Both, therefore, come from the same Source, since inspiration comes from the Voice FOR God and certainty comes from the laws OF God. Healing does not come DIRECTLY from God, Who knows His creations as perfectly whole. Yet healing is still OF God because it proceeds from His Voice...

RAJ: The Voice for Truth. The Holy Spirit. That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...and from His laws.

RAJ: From the unchanging, underlying, perfect structure, Integrity of God, which, because it is of God, finds expression in everything that is God Is Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is their result, in a state of mind which does NOT know Him.

RAJ: Meaning, as long as you are in ignorance and emerging out of it, healing, for you, is experienced as of God because it proceeds from His Voice and from His Laws.

RAJ READING: The STATE...

RAJ: Of mind which does not know him.

RAJ READING: ...is unknown to Him...

RAJ: [spoken with a slight laugh] He doesn't know that you don't know Him. He knows that you know Him. And you're pretending that you don't. And you like your pretension better than Reality. And because you believe that you are alone, you are holding onto that pretension for dear life because you think it's what's going to save you.

RAJ READING: The STATE is unknown to Him and therefore does not exist, but those who sleep ARE stupefied, or better, UNAWARE. BECAUSE they are unaware, they do NOT know.

RAJ: Or, I'm going to be a little down and dirty here, or they feign (f-e-i-g-n)... they feign not to know, because it's more satisfying to be in a state of a denial of knowing, so that you can join with your Brothers and Sisters in the camaraderie of conflict. You all do know better. You all do know better. You're just choosing to ignore it by hitting the snooze button on the alarm.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit must work THROUGH you to teach you He is IN you.

RAJ: "Oh, well, here comes that involvement stuff again." If the Holy Spirit must work through you, it means that you have to be involved with someone else for the purpose of embodying Love. I wish to be the embodiment of Love. When that's your prayer, then that's the invitation to the Holy Spirit to reveal to you how to be the Presence of Love that has one purpose—not to get something for itself, but to extend something of value to someone else.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit must work THROUGH you to teach you He is IN you. This is an intermediary step toward the knowledge that you are in God because you are part of Him. The miracles which the Holy Spirit inspires...

RAJ: Hear that?

RAJ READING: The miracles which the Holy Spirit inspires...

RAJ: Inspiration brings about change of perception. Change of perception, change of the lens that you're looking through, changes the way you see everything, and everything reports back to you in a new fashion that embodies more of perfection. And healing, you would say, has occurred.

RAJ READING: The miracles which the Holy Spirit inspires can have no order of difficulty because every part of creation is of ONE order. This is God's Will AND YOURS.

RAJ: God's Will and yours are one. They aren't two. You don't stand separate from God expressing a will identical to His. Your will and God's Will are one and the same once you dare to abandon your so-called right to a will of your own and what you have called a God-given right to express your own will.

Again.

RAJ READING: The miracles which the Holy Spirit inspires can have no order of difficulty because every part of creation is of ONE order. This is God's Will AND YOURS. The laws of God ESTABLISH this, and the Holy Spirit reminds you OF it.

RAJ: Now if the Laws of God establish this, then the Laws of God have established it. It's already established. You're already at the Point of Perfection and must understand yourself there from. It's already established. So you're not now going to become agents for change in the world so that you can establish the Laws of God, or the Presence of God, where it never was before.

This is about yielding up the idea that you have a mind of your own, and recognizing that if you have a mind at all, it must be the Presence of Mind which is God. Then in the abandonment of your so-called right to express your own mind, you let the Mind of God in and through you, you will find the Singular Experience of Order, Harmony, Perfection, Beauty, Loveliness, in you and in everything. And whether you're looking at yourself or looking at something else, you will feel the Singularity and know that it's You, or know that you're it. It's all One.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you heal, you are REMEMBERING the laws of God and forgetting the laws of the ego.

RAJ: And one very practical jog to your memory is to remember that you are under the Laws of God, not under the laws of physics. Just contemplate that from time to time during the week. You are not governed by, bound by, the laws of physics, because the laws of physics are nothing more than your misinterpretation of the Laws of God.

You think that the laws of physics keep you on the ground—gravity. No. The idea that you are and that you're... and the ideas that compose your body are where they are right now because a simple decision has been made to be there. Right now you think you have no choice but to be bound to the chair you're in by gravity until you exert an opposite force and stand up. It's not true. The chair is an idea. The planet is an idea. Your body is an idea. And you are the Mind in which all those ideas are occurring. And how they relate to each other has to do with a decision you, as Mind, are making. And you can reconfigure the orientation in your Mind and their relative positions will change because there's no matter to them to oppose it, and there are no laws of matter, laws of physics, to deny your decision as Mind.

Again.

RAJ READING: When you heal, you are REMEMBERING the laws of God and forgetting the laws of the ego. We said before that forgetting is merely a way of remembering BETTER.

RAJ: Or you could say, neglecting to reinforce your best definitions.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is therefore NOT the opposite of remembering,...

RAJ: Forgetting is not the opposite of remembering.

RAJ READING: ...when it is properly perceived. Perceived IMPROPERLY, it induces a perception of CONFLICT with something ELSE, as all incorrect perception does.

RAJ: Remembering and forgetting are not opposites. They're choices. If you neglect to remember your mutually-agreed-upon definitions, if you neglect to reinforce those, if you neglect to remember them because you desire to remember God's Truth that was placed in you because you are His Self-Expression, then your choice is to remember something outside your memory banks, outside your... the synapses in your brain that you think is the repository of memories. When you desire to remember what God placed in you from the beginning and is... is... and we could say, reconfirming eternally anew, your attention and intention is in a new direction and you will neglect to reinforce, or remember, your mutually-agreed-upon definitions, and thus you will weaken your bondage to them.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: PROPERLY perceived, it can be used as a way OUT of conflict,...

RAJ: As I just described.

RAJ READING: ...as all proper perception can.

ALL abilities, then should be given over to the Holy Spirit WHO KNOWS HOW TO USE THEM PROPERLY.

RAJ: Well, here we go again. Let's be very clear. Turning them over to the Holy Spirit sounds like yielding to the Holy Spirit, sounds like submitting yourself to the Holy Spirit, subjecting yourself to the Holy Spirit, abandoning self-authority, abandoning self-responsibility, abandoning all that stuff that makes you respectable, becoming a puppet of the Holy Spirit. Oh! But if the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind, then it's wise to submit to the Holy Spirit and yield to it, because you're yielding to your innate capacity to be utterly Sane.

RAJ READING: ALL abilities, then should be given over to the Holy Spirit WHO KNOWS HOW TO USE THEM PROPERLY. He can use them ONLY for healing because He knows you ONLY as whole.

RAJ: "Oh. Well there ya go. Here you thought you're gonna be able to be a healer and heal the world and be an agent for change." But the only way you'll end up being an agent for change is when you let the Holy Spirit's Vision of your Wholeness be communicated to you by It so that you might see your Wholeness and feel it, and you're the one that gets healed. And your healing is what gives you new eyes to look with. I wish to see the Evidence of Love. I wish to be the Evidence of Love.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: BY healing...

RAJ: Who's? Yours.

RAJ READING: ...you learn of wholeness, and by learning of wholeness you learn to remember God. You HAVE forgotten Him, but the Holy Spirit still knows that your forgetting must be translated into a way of REMEMBERING, and NOT perceived as a separate ability which opposes an opposite. That is the way in which the ego tries to use ALL abilities, since its goal is always to make you believe that YOU are in opposition.

RAJ: Remember:

RAJ READING: That is the way in which the ego tries to use ALL abilities, since its goal is always to make you believe that YOU are in opposition.

RAJ: Rather than that you are an indivisible, unconflicted Singularity as Pure Mind. Now you've got to remember.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego's goal is as unified as the Holy Spirit's, and it is because of this that their goals can NEVER be reconciled in ANY way or to ANY extent.

RAJ: Now why would the ego's goal be as unified as the Holy Spirit's? Because whether or not you are consciously fully aware of being the Christ, or you are seeing yourself as a partitioned off part of Creation that perceives everything through a lens of fear and defense and conflict, you are still the Christ. And so everything you do, whether it's in ignorance or not, is unified, because What You Divinely Are is a Unity.

The thing is that when that Unity is used to attempt the impossible, or when that Unity, when that Singularity, is used to try to establish an illusion, even though it is absolutely unified, it cannot succeed. Whereas the Christ who knows he, or she, is the Christ, cannot fail in unified intent. You see what I'm saying? Whether you're conscious or unconscious of being the Christ, you are the Christ. Whether you act consciously or unconsciously, the act will be a unified act. But when the attempt is to do something that is impossible, outside the Laws of God, no matter how unified the act is, the attempt cannot succeed. So the power of your Being as the Christ right now cannot bear fruit when it is applied to an impossibility.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego's goal is as unified as the Holy Spirit's, and it is because of this that their goals can NEVER be reconciled in ANY way or to ANY extent. The ego ALWAYS seeks to divide and separate. The Holy Spirit ALWAYS seeks to unify and heal.

RAJ: Now if you are the Christ and you are a Singularity, if I may put it that way, then you cannot use the, for lack of better words, authority and power of your Christhood and your Singularity to create division. Do you see that? It won't work because that which is Singular cannot make anything unlike Itself.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: As you heal you ARE healed because the Holy Spirit sees no order of healing. Healing is the way to UNDO the belief in differences, being the ONLY way of perceiving the Sonship without this belief.

RAJ: Without the belief in separateness where you're constantly in conflict with each other. You're constantly having to negotiate peace.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This perception is therefore IN accord with the laws of God even in a state of mind which is OUT of accord with His. The strength of right perception is so great that it brings the mind INTO accord with His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...because it yields to His pull, which is in all of you.

To OPPOSE...

RAJ: This is beautiful.

RAJ READING: To OPPOSE the pull or the Will of God is not an ability but a real DELUSION. The ego believes that it HAS this ability, and can offer it to you as a gift. YOU DO NOT WANT IT. It is NOT a gift. It is NOTHING AT ALL. God has given you a gift which you both have and are. When you do not use it, you do not know you HAVE it. By NOT knowing this, you do not know what you are. Healing, then, is a way of APPROACHING knowledge by thinking IN ACCORDANCE with the laws of God, and recognizing their UNIVERSALITY.

RAJ: Thinking in accordance with the Laws of God. Thinking, "Ah! I am neither behind the Point of Perfection, nor advancing toward it; I am at that Point and I must understand myself from there. Mm. Wow!"

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Without this recognition, you have made the laws themselves meaningless to you.

RAJ: The Laws of God.

RAJ READING: Yet the LAWS are not meaningless since all meaning is contained BY them and IN them.

Seek ye FIRST the Kingdom of Heaven because that is where the laws of God operate truly, and they can operate ONLY truly, since they are the laws of Truth. But seek this ONLY because you can FIND nothing else. There IS nothing else. God is all in all in a very literal sense. All being is in Him Who IS all Being. YOU are therefore in Him since YOUR being IS His.

RAJ: Your Mind is God's Mind.

RAJ READING: Healing is a way of forgetting the sense of danger the ego has induced in YOU by NOT recognizing its existence in your brothers. This strengthens the Holy Spirit in BOTH of you because it is a REFUSAL to acknowledge fear.

RAJ: Remember:

RAJ READING: Healing is a way of forgetting the sense of danger the ego has induced in YOU by NOT recognizing its existence in your brothers.

RAJ: Healing...

RAJ READING: ...strengthens the Holy Spirit in BOTH of you because it is a REFUSAL to acknowledge fear.

RAJ: And I'm going to say, it's a neglect to acknowledge fear. I don't want you to attack fear. Now we have polarization. We have conflict. Neglect to energize fear by having a different intent. "Ah! I wish to see the Evidence of Love." Well, as long as you wish to see the Evidence of Love, you are neglecting to energize fear. You're not trying to get rid of it. You're just neglecting to embody it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Love needs only this invitation.

RAJ: I wish to see the Evidence of Love.

RAJ READING: Love needs only this invitation. It comes freely to ALL the Sonship, being what the Sonship IS. By your awakening TO it, you are merely forgetting what you are NOT. This enables you to remember what you ARE.

RAJ: So, what do you do to remember Who You Are? You wish to see the Evidence of Love and you wish to be the Evidence of Love. This is the invitation to inspiration, which is an Experience of Joy. It's an invitation to the Experience of Loveliness—recognizable Loveliness. It's the invitation to That Which Is Real. And by virtue of your giving your attention and intention there, you naturally weaken whatever your mutually-agreed-upon definitions are, whatever you have made-up as a biased perception of Reality. It weakens it by neglecting to energize it.

Your healing comes with the healing of others. And the healing of others occurs by an intent on your part to see the Truth there where it seems not to be going on, to see the Truth there as God Is Being It there, regardless of appearances. Why? Because you don't want to be deluded. You wish to see the Evidence of Love. And you wish to see the Evidence of Love more than you wish to engage in the exhilarating experience of conflict and winning. A sign outside a casino says, "Come in and win." Oh. It could just as easily say, "Come in and lose." You see?

So, this week, remember the two prayers: I wish to see the embodiment of Love. I wish to be the embodiment of Love. And remember it in the context of healing. Healing will keep this from being an intellectual process and will ground it in what I'm going to call Creation. Your hand that has a wart, a blemish, that needs not to have a blemish because that doesn't express harmony, perfection, loveliness. I wish to see the embodiment of Love. It means I wish to see more of the Evidence of God here than I'm seeing. It doesn't mean I wish to engage in a contest with matter because Truth is more powerful than matter and Truth will win out.

It's not a contest because matter is like your lap. Where does your lap go when you stand up. Matter is just an attitudinal perspective, a way of perceiving. It's a way of perceiving something incorrectly. And what it is that is being misperceived is Pure Spirit, Ideas in the Mind of God that are perfectly recognizable and tangible to the Mind that formed them—the Ideas. Because what I'm looking at is not matter governed by the law of physics, and because it is an Idea which I know is intangible in the sense that I... in opposition to the tangibility of matter as I have defined it, I know that reconfiguration can occur because of the fluidity of Spirit, if I may put it that way.

And so when I say, I wish to see the Evidence of Love, or healing, you're saying, I wish to see the Evidence of Love on God's terms. I wish to see the reconfiguration from the way it looks to me right now to the way It Really Is. I wish to see that reconfiguration occur according to the Laws of God, which are not limited to the so-called laws of matter. Therefore, what I'm doing in wishing to see the Evidence of Love is freeing Creation up from the bondage of my definitions of matter and the laws of physics. I am freeing it up from those so that it can, in a completely unfettered manner, identify God [snap of the fingers] now and I am not holding it to a process in time. That's what you're doing when you say, I wish to see the Evidence of Love.

There are robots being developed, humungous, that a human being can get inside of and take hold of controls and the machine will duplicate the acts of the human being's body, but on a large scale so that things requiring a great deal more strength can be accomplished. Can you imagine climbing into one of those machines in the morning and, you might say, walking out to do your job with the power of this humungous machine and experiencing it all day long, and then at 5 o'clock, climbing out, and just being this puny little, in your mind, flesh-and-blood thing by comparison who can't lift more than 150 pounds and who gets tired out, can you imagine the depression that one would experience after being so powerful all day long, apparently through the use of this tiny body? Well, what I want you to understand is that right now you are feeling tiny, you are feeling powerless, you are feeling limited.

And waking up is the reverse of the illustration I just gave you; coming into the Singularity of your Whole Mind, of your Mind being Whole and infinitely all-inclusive, and that this is your Identity. Coming into this Awareness is, for lack of better words, an expansion into the Experience of Infinity, Wholeness, that is, for lack of better words, huge.

And the key lies in releasing everything from the bondage you have placed it under as a result of applying laws of matter to it and definitions of it that say it is capable of sin, sickness and death; deterioration is inevitable; blah, blah, blah.

Write the word "Healing" on a slip of paper and put it on your refrigerator all by itself, just to remind you of a focus for your attention this week. Mind you, I haven't given you hard work. It will take some self-discipline, but it doesn't take a monster robot for you to connect with in order to do it. It takes you doing even less than you've been doing. It takes you neglecting to energize fear. It takes you neglecting to determine that you're bound to die, or someone else is bound to die, because of an illness. It takes you neglecting to reinforce limitation. And it takes you, instead, to wish to see the Evidence of Love and to wish to be the Evidence of Love and nothing else, and to do this no matter what you're engaged in, in your day.

You can look at it and say, "Well, if this isn't matter, and if this isn't all ego dynamics going on here, and if it really is God and none of us are seeing it, what is the Truth here? I wish to see the Evidence of Love and I wish to be the Evidence of Love by caring enough to wish to see the Evidence of Love."

And with that I'll say I have enjoyed being with you again, and I look forward to being with you next week.

You might call this the fun part of the Course. Enjoy this next week. Enjoy observing healing. Enjoy seeing the embodiment of Love where it didn't seem like it was possible it could be embodied. And remember that the reason you're seeing it embodied is because you neglected to hold Creation to your puny, tiny, defensive, conflicted perception of it.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet as well.

How many of you have the feeling that when we get together like this, it's wonderful, but then you go home and what we've talked about seems so far removed from your daily experience that it's hard to see any relevance? Well, the idea that it's far removed is absurd. If it's not relevant to every single moment of your day, it's useless, and we might as well all go home right now. But it's far from useless, and it's absolutely relevant.

The last couple of weeks, we've been using the word "Singularity," indicating that your Mind is a Singularity, and it is inseparable from and identical with the Mind of God. And that's where you get in trouble, because you go home and you forget that your Mind is the very Presence of God, individualized by God as Himself Expressed right where you are. God does not express Himself and create an entity called you, and you, and you, so that there are a whole lot of created entities that God created, but are somehow distinctly different or separate from God. God is embodying Himself infinitely; infinitely individualizing Himself without dividing Himself up in any way, shape, or form.

Now perhaps an easier way to see your week in between these Gatherings, these meetings, as not so irrelevant to what we're discussing is to understand that you only have one Mind. You don't have two. You don't have a Divine Mind that God Is Being right there where you are, and then another mind called an ego. You don't have two minds. You are yourself a Singularity. That Singularity is pure Conscious Awareness—Mind—and it's either being used truly or it's being used poorly. But there's just one Mind. And what the Course does is to help bring you back into an awareness of this fact, so that you may choose to use your Mind well, instead of in a conflicted manner.

You are each the Christ at this moment, either fully aware of What You Truly Are, or you have filled your awareness with a concept of yourself and definitions you have made-up, and you're governing your lives, your consciousness of things, by means of those definitions or concepts. But it's a Singular Mind. It's the one and only Conscious Awareness that is the Presence of You. So, again, what you're beginning to learn to do is to use this one Mind that is the Christ of You well, instead of in a sloppy, careless and confused manner.

I've brought out that there is a Place of Excellence in each of you. Well, this word "excellence" can be used in a general way like, "Yes, I can choose to do things excellently." The word "excellent" has a small "e". Here's a real practical way of putting it. As you were growing up, your mom and your dad said, "Now you be a good girl. You be a good boy.", and then you would go and do things, "Oh, good girls don't do that. Good boys don't do that.", and so you began to acquire a set of ideas as to what a good boy does and what a bad boy does; and what a good girl does, and what a good girl doesn't do. Right? And, if you were a cooperative type person, you tried to embody all the things that a good boy and a good girl does, and if you were an angry girl or boy, you chose to do all the things that a bad girl does and all the things that a bad boy does, just to get even. Either way you were choosing to act on the basis of a set of rules. And in that way, let's say that you chose to be a good girl and a good boy, you grew up learning to do things in a way that you could call excellent.

Now, when I say there's a Place of Excellence in you, that's not the Excellence I'm talking about. Because that excellence is an educated excellence. You see what I'm saying? It's not something inherent in you as an unalterable State of your Being. The Excellence in you has a capital "E", because it's derived from your Source, That Which Is Being right there where you are—God.

When you get up and go through your day, most of you go through it... mm... trying to be a good girl or a good boy still, no matter how old this boy and girl are. And you can go through your whole week without ever thinking about God, without being aware that you have a Partner, at the least, that you have a present, active Source of your Being which is Being You each moment new.

The Course and I are encouraging you to remember God, to bring the Awareness of the Presence of God into your day so that you might remember that you have a resource that is really a Source, with a capital "S", that you can draw upon if you invite It in, that will allow you to be quote "in the world" from a Real Place of Excellence that is healing and transformational.

So if you go out, if you go home today, back into the world, and remember that it's a simple matter of choosing to come from a Place of Excellence in you, and then remembering that that Place of Excellence has a capital "E", that it is Divine, and therefore it is intrinsically Valuable, with a capital "V", then you will be able to bring that Excellence into a more relevant position in your mind as you encounter every activity of your day. And you will be able to do it without becoming spiritual, weird.

We're talking about healing. Healing of your mind. Healing of your mind means the transition from independent activity based upon the idea that you are an independent mind that somehow is lodged in a brain in your body, and all of it is purely physical, we're talking about transitioning from that to a renewal of your Connection with God, so that God becomes pertinent in the most practical of ways in your daily life. So that everything that you have been doing, because you have based your actions upon concepts and definitions of yourself that were learned, may begin to break down, dissolve, and yield to a new way of Being, which is really your original way of Being. So that you might be the Light of the world. So that you might be that which is a determining factor in uncovering the Kingdom of Heaven which is the only thing in your face right where you had been seeing a physical world with physical human beings, and nothing else. It's time for the Kingdom of Heaven to be re-illuminated to you and to your Brothers.

Let's go to the book.

The heading is:

RAJ READING: Healing and the Changelessness of Mind

The body is nothing more than a framework for developing abilities. It is therefore a means for developing POTENTIALS, which is quite apart from what the potential is used FOR. THAT is a DECISION.

RAJ READING: It is therefore a means for developing POTENTIALS,...

RAJ: What potentials? Well, the potentials I've been talking about. The Illumination of the Kingdom of Heaven. The Illumination of Reality. Where? Not out there, but in your Mind. Because the definitions you have in your Mind are determining what you're seeing out there. It isn't changing the Kingdom of Heaven that is out there, but it's determining whether or not you're seeing the Kingdom of Heaven, or a physical universe that has nothing to do with God and started from a big bang.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The effects of the ego's decision in this matter are so apparent that they need no elaboration here, but the Holy Spirit's decision to use the body ONLY for communication has such a direct connection with healing that it DOES need clarification. The unhealed healer OBVIOUSLY does not understand his own vocation.

RAJ: Well, do we have any healers in the room? Do any of you think of yourselves as healers? Not usually. But if you're looking at things and not seeing What They Really Are, and if everyone else is looking at them and not seeing What They Are and you all agree on what you're seeing, then there is a call for healing. And because it is your Birthright to be in your Right Mind, then it's your Birthright to be the ones who uncover Reality more clearly by becoming open to the direct experience of It right here and right now. So you're all healers. Why? Another reason is because you need to be healed, because you deserve to see What's Really Going On here.

RAJ READING: The unhealed healer OBVIOUSLY does not understand his own vocation.

RAJ: The unhealed healer doesn't even know he has a vocation.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ONLY minds communicate. Since the ego CANNOT obliterate the impulse to communicate because it is also the impulse to create, the ego can only teach you that the BODY can both communicate AND create, and therefore does not NEED the mind. The ego thus tries to teach you that the body can ACT like the mind, and is therefore self-sufficient. Yet we have learned that behavior is NOT the level for either teaching OR learning.

RAJ: Can you see that?

RAJ READING: ...behavior is NOT the level for either teaching OR learning.

RAJ: Your behavior expresses always the way you identify yourself. If you are identifying yourself as a private mind, or even a private "I", one that can see things the way it chooses to see them and can make-up imaginative descriptions and definitions of things and then believe them, and thereby make them true, your behavior will express that and healing can't come from it.

On the other hand, if you choose to go within to that Place of Excellence, because you know that Place of Excellence has a capital "E" and it means something beyond whatever your current best definitions are, you are choosing to join with something outside your memory banks. You are choosing to join with That Which Is Divine. Now because of that decision and choice, you prime yourself for inspiration, the influx of vision that is True, and when that happens, your behavior changes. But still, the behavior isn't what does the healing. It's the Clarity of Mind. It's the Movement of Conscious Awareness back into its natural Singularity where it is not choosing to act independent of the Father, and the inspiration of True Vision causes you to see with new eyes.

It is that inspiration which is then communicated to the Brotherhood, because there are no private thoughts and it blesses everyone because, remember, this Singularity is all-inclusive. Remember that I said when you move into that Singularity, although it feels as you do it as though you're becoming more private and more separate and more tiny, you find that as you move into that Experience of Singularity, it is huge, it's Infinite, and it does include All of Creation.

Again.

RAJ READING: Yet we have learned that behavior is NOT the level for either teaching OR learning. This must be so, since you CAN act in accordance with what you do NOT believe. To do this, however, will weaken you as teachers AND learners because, as has been repeatedly emphasized, you teach what you DO believe. An inconsistent lesson will be poorly taught AND POORLY LEARNED. If you teach both sickness AND healing you are both a poor teacher AND a poor learner.

RAJ: Now it's very easy for all of you to teach what it's like to be a human being. It's very easy for you to teach each other what foods are not healthy for you and what foods are. You can all teach each other how to avoid the illnesses, the sicknesses, that come around seasonally. It's very easy for you to teach how not to be sick as a defense against being sick. Right? That's confused thinking, because you are stating sickness is real. It's inevitable or very likely, but you can avoid it by behaving in such-and-such a way and doing such-and-such a thing.

But you know what? You have a capacity to teach each other how to overcome the liability to be ill. Period. That, however, comes not from training, not from learning, not from education, but from moving into that Experience of Singularity that occurs when you, with persistence and gentleness, choose to go within to the Altar and to open up to the Holy Spirit. In other words, to go into that Place of Excellence in you so that the Truth might be revealed to you, where you Know it down to the tips of your toes, and in that Knowing, are aware of your utter invulnerability to anything other than perfect, pure Harmony in which dissonance, or dis-ease, cannot occur.

Now, if you will let yourself into that Experience and nurture it by continuing to invite it, you will begin to teach how to—and this isn't the best word—overcome the liability to be ill. This is significant. You all have the capacity to use your Mind in an unconflicted way so that what you teach, you learn, and what you teach well, you learn well, because you're not teaching conflict. Because you're not teaching conflict, you don't learn conflict.

Now, every day, unconsciously, you teach each other how to be human beings. You do it without even thinking about it. It's pure habit. But what the world needs is someone who's willing to teach how to be Divine Being; not Divine Beings, but Divine Be-ing—a verb.

And again, you can do that without being spiritual and weird. I'm saying that repetitively today so that you might embrace what I'm talking about more easily, knowing that what comes forth within you to be taught will be recognizably of value, and will come across in a gentle and unsurprising way that will nevertheless be transformational, because it will not reinforce the mutually-agreed-upon definitions and will leave an opening for aha's to occur in those around you. And as you provide those opportunity for aha's, you learn the aha's yourself. You see, there's the Singularity of it again. What you give, you get. What you teach, you learn. The Love you extend is the Love that you receive. Why? Because there's only one thing going on—a Perfect Singularity.

That's why nothing works well when you give to get, because you've divided up a Singularity and you are being in an un-singular or divided way, and so what you get back is not a Singularity. What you learn is continued confusion. It's really very simple. It's not punishment. If you do something that doesn't work, it doesn't work. And when you change and do something that does work, it does work. Just because that's the way it is. Not because in one instance you were a bad girl, or a bad boy, and the next instance you were a good girl, or a good boy, and got a gold star. You see?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Healing is the one ability which everyone can develop and MUST develop, if he is to be healed.

RAJ: You see? You see why? Because it's all a Singularity. So if you want to be healed, you've got to be a healing Presence.

Again.

RAJ READING: Healing is the one ability which everyone can develop and MUST develop, if he is to be healed. Healing is the Holy Spirit's form of communication, and the ONLY one He knows.

RAJ: Why is that? Because it's the Holy Spirit's Function to bring you back into your Right Mind. It's the Holy Spirit's Function to disclose to you that It is your Right Mind. It is your Right Mind's Purpose to bring you back into full awareness of It so that you may be wholly (w-h-o-l-l-y) Sane.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...recognizes no other...

RAJ: Form of communication.

RAJ READING: ...because he does not accept the ego's confusion of mind and body. Minds can communicate, but they CANNOT hurt. The body in the service of the ego can hurt other BODIES, but this cannot occur unless the body has ALREADY been confused with the mind.

RAJ: What does that mean, "the body confused with the mind"? It's simple. When you think that your mind is a result of circuitry and synapses in a piece of flesh inside your skull called a brain, you think that your body is your mind. And you think that your mind is the seat of intelligence for your body telling it what to do, keeping it running. You see? Body and mind are synonymous. They're inseparable according to the current definitions of human beings. You see? Mind and body are seen as the same thing.

Again.

RAJ READING: The body in the service of the ego...

RAJ: In other words, in the service of the ideas and concepts which you believe identify you to you.

RAJ READING: The body in the service of the ego can hurt other BODIES, but this cannot occur unless the body has ALREADY been confused with the mind. This fact, too, can be used either for healing or for magic, but you must remember that magic is ALWAYS the belief that healing is HARMFUL.

RAJ: "Oh, my God, if I have a real healing, if I have a sudden shift of perception and a miracle happens to me, and I suddenly see things as they are and my life is transformed, my body is transformed, everybody will be able to see that I'm Divine, and that will utterly ruin my life. I won't fit in any more. I'll stand out like a sore thumb. I'll be the object of fascinated attention that I won't ever be able to get away from. I'll be the center of attention, because obviously in everyone else's eyes, I will be very special. Oh, my God! Don't let this happen to me. I don't want real healing. I'd rather have magic. I'd rather have a potion, a medication, a system of thought, do it for me so that nobody ever thinks that my own Clarity of Mind, my own Singularity of Mind, might be responsible for healing and transformation."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is its totally insane premise, and so it proceeds accordingly.

Healing only STRENGTHENS.

RAJ: Why? Because healing is a shift of perception that brings you back into Singularity, the absence of conflict. Singularity, without parts that aren't functioning well together, is another description of Integrity, isn't it? That which is integrated.

RAJ READING: Healing only STRENGTHENS.

RAJ: You might say, "Healing only integrates. Healing only uncovers Singularity."

RAJ READING: Magic ALWAYS tries to weaken.

RAJ: Why? Because it's always making one thing responsible for another. This against that. This for that. And it's always things doing things to things without one's mind having to change.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Healing perceives NOTHING in the healer that everyone else does not SHARE with him. Magic ALWAYS sees something "special" in the healer, which he believes he can offer as a gift to someone who does NOT have it. He may believe that the gift comes FROM God to Him, but it is quite evident that he does not understand God if he thinks he has something that others LACK.

RAJ: So when you think you have a gift of healing that someone else doesn't have, you are energizing a mind that is believing the impossible—that two opposing things can exist simultaneously, that there is not a Singularity which holds everyone and everything unalterably in equality.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You might well ask, then, why some healing CAN result from this kind of thinking, and there is a reason for this:

However misguided the “magical healer” may be, he is ALSO trying to help. He is conflicted and unstable, but AT TIMES he is offering something to the Sonship, and the only thing the Sonship can ACCEPT is healing.

RAJ: In other words, because You are the Christ, and because the desire to be good and the desire to have affection for your Brother and the desire to care for your Brother is inseparable from the Christ That You Are, then, if, even in your confusion about Who You Are, you have moments of truly caring for your Brother, even though at the same time you think you have a talent given to you by God that your Brother doesn't have, that which is genuine in your desire becomes embodied. In other words, you do manage to create with God that which is Eternal, even in the midst of your dreaming.

Again.

RAJ READING: However misguided the “magical healer” may be, he is ALSO trying to help. He is conflicted and unstable, but AT TIMES he is offering something to the Sonship, and the only thing the Sonship can ACCEPT is healing. When the so-called “healing” works, then, the impulse to help and to BE helped have coincided.

RAJ: In other words, the Extension of Love has been made, and the willingness of the magical healer to be blessed by the influx of Love passing through him, blesses him as well. Because, you might say in a moment of weakness, he didn't see himself as the source of the healing, and he was willing to be the recipient of the healing, just as the one needing healing was willing to stand in receipt of the healing. And so that willingness constituted a Singularity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is coincidental,...

RAJ: [laughing] Coincidental. And the magical healer might say it was a fluke.

RAJ READING: This is coincidental, because the healer may NOT be experiencing himself as truly helpful at the time, but the belief that he IS, in the mind of another, helps HIM.

RAJ: Here we have the Singularity again. The healer may not think that he's being truly helpful, but the one that he's extending the help to sees the healer as an agent for change, as being helpful. And so the one being healed, seeing the healer as helpful, is seeing something True about the healer, and that Gift is made, making it possible for the healer to be blessed. Why? Because it's all a Singularity. It's not this being done to that. It's a Wholeness always.

It's important to get this point because you're all, I'm going to say, bound in this Singularity of Being. You're all held in this Singularity of Being, and what you think and what you believe is communicated. So what are you going to be teaching? You better be teaching what you want to be learning. You better be giving what you want to stand in receipt of, because you shall surely receive it. Because whether you are ignoring the way things are Truly, or not, it's still a Singularity, it's still the Ultimate.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...does NOT work by chance, and healing that is of Him ALWAYS works. Unless the healer ALWAYS heals by Him,...

RAJ: Meaning the Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...the results WILL vary. Yet healing itself IS consistence, since ONLY consistence is conflict-free, and only the conflict-free ARE whole.

RAJ: Or, are a Singularity.

RAJ READING: By accepting exceptions and acknowledging that he can sometimes heal and sometimes not, the healer is OBVIOUSLY accepting inconsistency. He is therefore IN conflict and TEACHING conflict.

RAJ: You could say, "He is therefore inconsistent and teaching inconsistency."

RAJ READING: Can anything of God NOT be for all and for always?

Love is incapable of ANY exceptions. Only if there is fear does the IDEA of exceptions seem to be meaningful. Exceptions are fearful because they are made BY fear. The "fearful healer" is a contradiction in terms, and is therefore a concept which ONLY a conflicted mind could possibly perceive as meaningful.

RAJ: Or valuable.

RAJ READING: Fear does NOT gladden. Healing DOES. Fear ALWAYS makes exceptions. Healing NEVER does.

RAJ: Why? Because healing is the Idea and Fact of Singularity being extended for the Purpose of Conscious Reception and Conscious Awareness of It. And what is Singular has no variations, no exceptions.

RAJ READING: Fear produces dissociation because it induces SEPARATION. Healing ALWAYS produces harmony because it proceeds from integration.

RAJ: Here it is again. Integration. The coming into Conscious Awareness of the Singularity of Being that is all-inclusive.

With all of this talk about healing, is there any possible way that you could think that the Course is not about healing? Is there any way you could think that the experience of healing—physical, mental, the healing of a Brother or a Sister by virtue of your going within and listening for the Voice for Truth—is there any way you could think that healing is not inseparable from the Truth that we’re talking about, and that somehow you could experience a blissful state of mind in which the need for healing didn’t disappear, but you were no longer bothered by it, where you were at peace with your infirmity? Is it conceivable to you that such a thing is what the Course is talking about? I hope not.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Healing is predictable because it can be counted on.

RAJ: That’s like saying, “Awakening is inevitable.” It’s predictable because it is inevitable.

RAJ READING: EVERYTHING that is of God can be counted on, because everything of God is wholly REAL. Healing can be counted on BECAUSE it is inspired by His Voice, and is in accord with His laws.

RAJ: In other words, Perfection is your Birthright when? At every moment that you are Conscious. I’m not even going to say now as opposed to the future. It doesn’t have anything to do with time. It has to do with Mind. And every moment that you are experiencing Being, which is a an Experience of Being Conscious, is the time for healing, because Wholeness is what the Conscious Experience of Being is about. It is what it is an experience of. So it is inevitable that you will come into that experience because it’s the only one going on.

But it’s one that you don’t see and will not see as long as you are entertaining conflicted thinking. There is illness. There is disease. There are medical solutions to it which are called magic. You don’t have to be ill; all you have to have is antibiotics. You don’t have to be ill; just don’t get around somebody with a contagious disease. Let me ask you this. What more inspiring thing could happen than for someone to dare to be in the presence of another with a contagious disease, who not only has no fear of disease, or of catching it, because he's coming from a place beyond the liability to be ill, whose Peace and Equanimity, Balance and Love are so different from what this person with a contagious condition has been confronted by, because all he's been confronted with is fear of him, what more inspiring thing could happen than for this person, this fearless person of Singular Awareness, would present by being in the presence of the one with the contagious disease?

What singular thing might have a more profound effect for that one's healing than this kind of experience? Because if this person who everyone believes is subject to the communicable disease, whatever horrible one it is, if this person is not afraid, if this person is teaching invulnerability by being the presence of the absence of fear, what do you think the effect of that might be? That the person who has the communicable disease doesn't need to be afraid either. And if he doesn't have to be afraid, then in the absence of that fear, he can experience spontaneous remission or spontaneous healing. What needs to be taught is that one can get beyond the liability to be ill, beyond the conflict of threat of disease and successful battling of it and overcoming of it.

Again.

RAJ READING: Healing can be counted on BECAUSE it is inspired by His Voice,...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...and is in accord with His laws. Yet if healing IS consistence, it cannot be inconsistently understood. Understanding MEANS consistence because GOD means consistence.

RAJ: [laughing] That means that there are no lumps in God. The consistency is smooth.

RAJ READING: Understanding MEANS consistence because GOD means consistence. Since that is HIS meaning, it is also YOURS.

RAJ: Why? Because it's all a Singularity. Whether we're talking about God and you, or you and your fellowman, it's all one Singularity. So whatever is God's is yours, and whatever is yours is your Brother's, and whatever is your Brother's is yours. That's why your choice to let in Truth as your Conscious Experience, not as a fantastic thought but as your Conscious Experience, blesses your Brothers, because it's all a Singularity. And that's why your conflicted thinking tends to support your Brother's conflicted thinking.

Again.

RAJ READING: Since that is HIS...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...meaning, it is also YOURS. Your meaning cannot BE out of accord with His because your whole meaning, and your ONLY meaning, comes FROM His and is LIKE His. God cannot be out of accord with HIMSELF,...

RAJ: I said, "He's not lumpy. He's smooth."

RAJ READING: God cannot be out of accord with HIMSELF, and YOU cannot be out of accord with Him. You cannot separate your SELF from your Creator, Who created you by...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...sharing HIS Being WITH you.

RAJ: And I'm going to say, "as You."

RAJ READING: The unhealed healer...

RAJ: The worker of magic.

RAJ READING: ...wants gratitude FROM his brothers, but he is not grateful TO them.

RAJ: You see, when you think you have something that your Brother doesn't have, and you give it to your Brother, you think you have lost something, and therefore you have no reason to be grateful to the Brother you gave it to.

[To someone in the audience] Are you frowning? No.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is because he thinks he is GIVING something TO them, and is NOT receiving something equally desirable in return.

RAJ: In other words, the unhealed healer is not inspired by the Conscious Experience of Singularity, which is an Experience of Wholeness and Equality.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: His...

RAJ: The unhealed healer's.

RAJ READING: ...TEACHING is limited because he is LEARNING so little.

RAJ: You see? If you think you're giving something to somebody that doesn't have, and if you think you are losing something in the process, and if you think the process is not a Wholeness occurring, it's impossible to think that you're standing in a position of receiving anything in return. And so you won't see your act of giving as something you can stand in receipt of.

RAJ READING: His...

RAJ: The unhealed teacher's.

RAJ READING: ...TEACHING is limited because he is LEARNING so little. His healing lesson is limited by his own ingratitude, which is a lesson in SICKNESS.

RAJ: Remember that. Ingratitude is a lesson in sickness.

If you're sick, don't take an antibiotic, take a good dose of gratitude. No, give a big dose of gratitude. Embody gratitude yourself.

Again.

RAJ READING: His healing lesson is limited by his own ingratitude, which is a lesson in SICKNESS. Learning is constant, and so vital in its power for change that a Son of God can recognize his power in one instant, and change the world in the next. That is because, by changing HIS mind, he has changed the most powerful device that was ever created FOR change.

RAJ: And that device is the Mind, the Conscious Experience of Being. Now, when we use the word "Mind," you think of it as a noun, as an object. But Mind means the Conscious Experience of Being, which is a Living, Moving Experience.

Now this is important. Continuing.

RAJ READING: This in no way contradicts the changelessness of mind as GOD created it, but you think that you HAVE changed it as long as you learn through the ego. This DOES place you in a position of needing to learn a lesson which seems contradictory;—you...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: ...must learn to change your mind ABOUT your mind.

RAJ: You must abandon the confusion, the confused idea that mind and body are one and the same thing, that mind is a function of a brain, chemical interactions and electrical spurts, and that you have this mind because, in order for the body to be what it is, it requires government, it requires something disciplined to keep it all in order, and it's all physical. You need to be willing to abandon that. And you need to be willing to shift into the Conscious Experience of You as being Consciousness, being Conscious Awareness in which all form is being experienced, and, as I've said before, that every single form that you're experiencing is not physical, but is a pure Idea.

Again, whether it's the flowers in front of you, or the glass-topped table, or your fingernails, it's not matter. It's Ideas. And Ideas, again, are perfectly recognizable and tangible to the Mind that formed them. So they will be Experienceable, they will have Substance, they will have Tangibility, but it's simply the fullness of the Experience of the Idea. And just to keep you from becoming dense about what I've just said, because it's an Idea—the table—and because it's an Idea—your body—your body can pass through the table without interference. You can move through the table instead of bunting up your shin against it, because your body and the table are pure Ideas, even though they are experienced as having Substance and Form and Tangibility and what I'm going to call Endurance, they continue to be present.

Again.

RAJ READING: This DOES place you in a position of needing to learn a lesson which seems contradictory;—you must learn to change your mind ABOUT your mind. Only by this can you learn that it IS changeless. When you heal, that is exactly what you ARE learning. You are recognizing the changeless mind in your brother by realizing that he COULD not have changed his mind. That is how you perceive the Holy Spirit in him. It is ONLY the Holy Spirit in him...

RAJ: In other words, that which is only his Right Mind.

RAJ READING: It is ONLY the Holy Spirit in him that never changes His mind. He himself..

RAJ: Your Brother.

RAJ READING: ...must think he CAN,...

RAJ: Change his Mind.

RAJ READING: ...or he would not perceive himself as sick. He therefore does not know what his self IS.

If YOU see only the changeless in him, you have not really changed him at all. By changing YOUR mind about his FOR him, you help him UNDO the change his ego thinks it has made in him.

RAJ: And here we're talking about the Singularity again.

RAJ READING: By changing YOUR mind about his FOR him, you help him UNDO the change his ego thinks it has made in him.

RAJ: Again, this is because it's all a Singularity.

Every night Paul says a prayer. He asks for healing for everyone who has asked for healing, even if the desire for healing was only expressed as a hope with little faith. Do you see? Paul in his mind does not ask for healing and express the desire as a hope, and he does not bring little faith to it. But many do. Many hope things will get better, but they don't bring a lot of faith to that expressed desire. You and Paul can speak on behalf of the Brother who has only hope and very little faith backing it up. You can ask for your Brother from the confidence you have in the inevitability of healing that doesn't require hope, because you feel its inevitability. Because it's that one's Birthright to experience what God has set into place about him, and I'm going to say, by Law, according to God's Laws, according to the Perfection of God's Being.

And so you could say that you can have confidence for your Brother in the face of his lack of faith, and that someone is standing on behalf of him from a strength that he does not currently experience, blesses him and makes it easier for him to feel the influx of strength, and firmness replacing the infirmity. All of this because everything is a Singularity already.

Again.

RAJ READING: If YOU see only the changeless in him, you have not really changed him at all.

RAJ: Well, what have you done? You've acknowledged the Truth. You have seen What Is True about him, that he's already Whole. That no matter how successfully he thinks he obtained a bill of divorcement from his Father, it didn't work, and he's inseparable from his Father, and his Birthright is still his. It's still active. It's still sitting there, held in trust while he dallies in ignorance. And that which is held in trust is his Divine Self, and it's called the Holy Spirit, the Place of Excellence, the Altar that's in him. It's already there and it's already full of What He Has Always Been.

So:

RAJ READING: ...you have not really changed him at all. By changing YOUR mind about his FOR him, you help him UNDO the change his ego thinks it has made in him. As you can hear two voices, so you can see in two ways. One way shows you an image, or better, an idol, which you may worship out of fear, but which you will never love. The other shows you only truth, which you will love because you will UNDERSTAND it. Understanding is APPRECIATION, because what you understand you can IDENTIFY with, and by making it part of YOU, you have accepted it with love.

[pause]

RAJ READING: As you can hear two voices, so you can see in two ways.

RAJ: Let me promise you, those are the only choices you have. You can't see in three ways, or four ways, or ten ways, or a hundred ways. You can only see in two ways. One is clearly and one is unclearly. You can see Truly, or you can see What Is True in a distorted way. And those are the only two choices you have.

And the you that is making the choice is the one Singularity called Mind, or Conscious Awareness, that is absolutely Singular. There may be two ways of seeing things, but there aren't two minds to see them with. There's one Mind seeing clearly or unclearly. Now I'm trying to simplify this for you so that you are not confused. You are the Christ right now, behaving as though you're not, and believing your behavior. Now I've said it. I have described the problem of being and the answer of Being in one sentence, and I haven't violated the Fact of the Singularity of Being.

And if you will contemplate that sentence, you will find that it describes the problem that you're having, but it also states the unalterable Truth about You that empowers you to abandon the confusion that seems to govern you. Why? Because you aren't an unlearned mind trying to learn and refine itself through eons of time. You're the one and only Mind there is, being a little wacko at the moment, which you're quite capable of doing. It serves no purpose. It creates for you a meaningless experience which you can imaginatively apply meaning to. But you can't change the fact that right at this instant, you're the Christ, You are the Ultimate, and you don't have to behave wacko any more. Knowing that let's you know that a new decision now will give you a new experience now. You're not stuck in anything. This is the good news.

Again.

RAJ READING: Understanding is APPRECIATION, because what you understand you can IDENTIFY with, and by making it part of YOU, you have accepted it with love.

That is how God Himself created YOU; in understanding, in appreciation, and in love. The ego is totally unable to understand this because it does NOT understand what it makes; it does NOT appreciate it, and it does NOT love it. It incorporates to TAKE AWAY. It literally believes that every time it deprives someone of something, IT has increased.

RAJ: You all do understand that. You get somebody to take something, take less for more. You can either charge someone more than it's worth and so you've taken from them, or if they have something that they don't know the worth of that they're selling, you can buy it for the price they're selling it, knowing that you just gypped them out of a lot more, because they were ignorant of its real value.

RAJ READING: We have spoken often of the increase of the Kingdom by YOUR creations, which can only be created as YOU were.

RAJ: Again, here's the Singularity. By being the way you were created, you add to the Kingdom. The thing to remember, however, is that you can't do this all by yourself. You can only do this as you let the Movement of God move through you. And it's in that way that God expresses Himself through you, and your Gift of the Singularity, and all that it includes, becomes embodied.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The whole glory and perfect joy that IS the Kingdom lies in you to give. Do you not WANT to give it?

RAJ: Yes, you do. And it's pressuring to get out. It's pressuring to be given. It's pressuring to be extended. And you know what? As long as you're committed to your definitions of things, you feel that pressure as being against you, because it requires you to abandon the limits that you have imposed upon yourself. And it requires you to participate in the extension of something that you can't take personal pride in having created, because you know you weren't the exclusive author of it. And that's too great an expense, too great a cost for you to pay. And so you find yourself more and more miserable, trying to abide in your definitions, in your concepts, because the push of the more of What You Truly Are against the little that you're trying to be, is causing your littleness to be a painful experience.

RAJ READING: Do you not WANT to give it?

RAJ: Yes, you do. And the Holy Spirit is constantly insinuating Itself, constantly gently pressuring you, constantly, in an un-controlling way, getting your attention. And you treat It like a mosquito flying around your face, bugging you, bugging the hell out of you, bothering you, distracting you. But it will continue.

So when you leave here today, remember that it's not that unreasonable a thing to choose to drive home embodying in your driving habits that which comes from a Place of Excellence in You. Just let there be a desire to be in the Movement of God that everyone else on the road is in, whether they realize it or not. If they're behaving poorly, it's because they don't realize it. Somebody needs to be the one to realize it. Because when you truly realize it, you have also realized it for the one in the other car, making it easier for him to get it, whether he does or not. But the point is you're not joining him in conflicted confusion by coming from the same place he is. So what we're talking about truly is relevant. And you don't need to look at everything as though it's so completely different and completely at odds with what we're talking about.

Everything, because it is some Aspect of Creation, with a capital "C", everything, because it is the Visibility and Tangibility of God, is susceptible to the acknowledgement of God in it. Even when it thinks it's something else, it's still susceptible to the acknowledgement of What Is True about it by anyone who dares to engage in being conscious of it. You got it! I can tell. You've got the idea.

You see, this book isn't about words and concepts and ideas. It's about you, and it's about the way you're being. So this week, be a little bit more consciously.

And I look forward to being with you next week.

Okay. You are welcome.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet as well.

I'll repeat that if you're in the Sparkly Book, we're starting on page 155, second full paragraph. If you're in the second edition, it's page 122, second full paragraph. And in the first edition it's page 113, third full paragraph.

But before we go into the Text, I want to talk a little bit more about this word "Singularity" and its relevance to you. The simple fact is that you don't have two minds—an ego mind and a Real Mind—and you don't have two selves—an ego self and a Real Self that is somehow going to be so different from how you're experiencing yourself right now that you won't be recognizable to yourselves and you won't be recognizable to anyone else. You're experiencing It now. You're experiencing all there is to experience right now. It's the quality of your experience that needs improvement.

Your Mind is a Singularity. It's indivisible. You might be able to think of yourselves in many different ways. You do on this day [Mother's Day] think of yourselves as mothers, or you think of yourselves as daughters and sons. But you're also husbands and wives and business people; attorneys, counselors, garbage collectors, teachers, what have you. You have many ways of defining yourself to yourself, but there's only one Self that is wearing these different costumes. There's only one You. And this one You is not a body with a mind. This one You is Mind, Conscious Awareness in which all Conscious Experience of everything is occurring.

You are experiencing everything that is occurring well, or not so well; you might say, perfectly or flawed. But there aren't two different experiences. There's only Reality. There's only the Kingdom of Heaven. And you're either experiencing it clearly, or unclearly, or as it's said in the Bible, "through a glass darkly." But what you're experiencing is the only thing there is to experience—Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven, Creation, the Presence and Wholeness of What God Is.

Now the fact is that this one Mind, this Singular Experience of Conscious Being that you call Life, isn't yours. It's not a possession. It is the only Mind there is. It is God being all there is of You. And what is this You? It's not the body you see. It's the Conscious Awareness that is aware of body, chairs, floors, windows, trees, Creation. You are experiencing the Ultimate now. Write this down and put it on your refrigerator. You are experiencing the Ultimate now. You are either experiencing it well or not well. This is the wonderfulness of the idea of Singularity. It simplifies things, because it's not another mind you have to graduate into, it's not another world you have to graduate into. It's the one and only Conscious Experience of Being that you're having now, and everything that you're aware of, being experienced well or not well, clearly or unclearly.

Now, to be perfectly clear, if you look at these flowers, no matter how beautiful they might be and no matter how wonderful the fragrance they have, if you're not experiencing them as anything other than a tangible physical form; if you're not experiencing the Substance of each petal, each stamen, each leaf, as a Living Substance, I mean visually living, moving; if you don't experience it as illuminated beyond just the color, but emanating Light; if you're not experiencing that Light that is moving and identifying shape specifically, while at the same time radiating Light and having the experience that that Light that is moving and apparently giving definition, while at the same time extending, is Love that is loving you, that you can feel, then you're not seeing clearly yet.

I'm saying this so that you might understand that although I said, "You're experiencing the Ultimate right now," this isn't justification for sitting back and saying, "Wow! I've arrived! And whatever is happening and whatever I'm experiencing is the Ultimate. I can relax. Everything is as it should be." No. There is much more here, whether it's these flowers, or as I said last week, whether it's your fingernail.

The Illumination of Love that Lights every Idea that God is Conscious Of and Creating, awaits your recognition and experience. If you're not experiencing it yet, you're not in a State of Singularity yet, and this can either mean to you, "Well, then I might as well give up. Evidently only one person has done that and that's Jesus. And of course, the other awakened Brotherhood that I've never seen or heard from or know about, it's all hearsay to me, so what's the use?"

PAUL: I'm sorry.

RAJ: All it means is that you have reason to be curious. You have reason to be alive to Life as much as you did as an infant and a child that explored everything with curiosity. You have justification for being enthusiastic every moment of every day, because there is so much you haven't discovered. And it's not what your scientists are looking for. It's not a better understanding of physics. It's a better understanding of and experience of Creation, which it's your Birthright to be experiencing consciously.

And the only reason you're not experiencing it is because you're giving preference to the definitions you've given to everything. The only reason you don't experience it this way is because you're giving precedence to the definitions you have given to everything. And why do you give precedence to it? Because you think the definitions you've given everything are keeping you safe. You've created, between yourself and Brothers and Sisters, an infrastructure of definitions that make everything work, you think, that keeps everything going in a safe manner, you think. And you're afraid that if you let go of those definitions to let God's Experience of Creation in, so that it might register with you as yours, that everything will collapse and you will be vulnerable and in danger. That is how strong your faith is in your thinking, your definitions.

Mind you, when you're doing this thinking and when you're giving this allegiance to your thinking, you are most definitely expressing and embodying the opposite of Singularity. Not only are you claiming to demonstrate that you have a mind of your own independent of any God, you're also demonstrating that you have a mind of your own different from your Sister's or your Brother's. You are demonstrating and embodying separation, discreteness, independence.

And I promise you something and you should think about this. When in all of your independences, you come together and make agreements to behave in harmonious ways with each other, that harmony is not natural. It's educated. It's planned. And although the result may be orderliness, its practice keeps you absolutely blinded to the fact that Peace and Harmony is inherent in your Being, is intrinsic in your Presence. The peace and harmony you establish by mutual agreement can be broken. The agreements can be broken and the peace can be lost. But What Is Real is Eternal, and Peace is Eternal. And what you want is that Peace.

In order to have it, you're going to have to change the way you perceive everything. Instead of perceiving it poorly, you're going to have to find out how to perceive it well. And the only way to perceive it well is to perceive it from the Singularity of the Presence of Mind that is called You, which is God Presencing Himself right there where You are. That is all this book is about. The book is about You and how you're using your Mind, and how to use it in a Singular rather than a conflicted way, rather than a disintegrated way.

Your past education and habits would suggest to you that the best way to improve your experience of something is to watch your thoughts, to use self-discipline, and to think only happy thoughts, or think only orderly thoughts, or to think only principled thoughts. When the only discipline that's required is for you to consistently choose not to think for yourself, is for you to consistently choose to join with the Father, or the Holy Spirit, or your Guide, or Me, so that you're consciously companionship with One Who Is Awake who will constantly feed back to you the clearer picture of what is going on.

The discipline involves abandoning the mind that your past thinking would tell you, you must discipline into greater order, intelligence, and cohesiveness. The Conscious Awareness, the Conscious Experience of Being that is What You Are right now, is, because it is Singular and because it is the Presence of the only Mind there is which is God already Orderly and already manifesting its Order in and as everything. And there's nothing for you to do except to only pay attention to That. That's where the discipline comes in—to only do that, instead of everything else you've been doing.

So you don't have two selves. You don't have two minds. You right now are the Ultimate. You right now are the Presence of God being All There Is right where you are. Even in your apparent ignorance of your Divinity right here and right now, that still is the only thing going on right where you are, and you are experiencing it either clearly or through filters. But no matter how many filters the Light of You goes through, the Light of You doesn't stop being exactly What It Divinely Is.

You've all had the experience of apparently growing up, and even some of you, the experience of apparently getting older and not looking young anymore and discovering that you still feel like you felt when you were twenty. You still are you totally, completely, unaltered. You could say, in your mind, you're as young as you were when you were twenty. So you've apparently gone through a transition of experience, education and growth, and yet you still recognize yourself, don't you? And the self you're recognizing is still just as it was 20, 30, 50 years ago, whatever. Right? Why am I saying this? Because I want you to understand that as you allow yourself to come back into your Right Mind, as you allow yourself to become clear by using your Mind well, you will still recognize yourself. And I'm going to say, you will still recognize yourself as the self you recognized when you were 5 years old in this lifetime.

Do you understand what I'm saying? I'm saying that your Identity will be as unchanged after you're awake as it is now after you've lived 50, 40, 30 years. Do you hear what I'm saying? No radical change in Identity. At 50, 40, 30, you now... or 60, 70, whatever, that you now find that you are far less limited than you were at 5 or 10. And things that you thought you had to react to when you were 20 and 30, you now don't bother to react to because it's useless and you've learned it. Right? In a way you're a lot freer quote "the older you get," because you've learned to discern what's a waste of time and what isn't, and you no longer waste your time on irrelevant shit. Right? Exactly.

As you let yourself into the Experience of Singularity and use that Singularity well, you're going to find that you have far more freedoms, far more abilities, far less limitation. And you won't be bothered by irrelevant shit, like diseases, unhealthy attractions, grief, misperceptions of the Kingdom of Heaven, and reacting to your misperceptions. You won't waste your time trying to communicate with your fellowman to bring about mutual agreements so that you can be safe, because you'll know you are safe because you're experiencing safety, because you're not muddling up, disintegrating a Singularity through the use of your imagination, and then believing your imagination. That will be irrelevant shit that you just won't mess with any more.

In the absence of defining yourself as a body with a brain that has what's called a "mind" in it, you will no longer hold yourself separate from your Brothers and Sisters, from the Brotherhood of Man, and you will experience the Whole of the Brotherhood of Man, of All of Creation, as some Aspect of the Infinitude of You. And as I've said before, it will be very intimate, because you will not be holding yourself separate from each other by thinking that you have a personal private mind of your own that is discretely different from every other one's mind. You will be able to feel the Love of God being every Individuality, just as with the flowers, that is illuminated and extends and communicates the Message of Love to every other Aspect of Creation.

And I'll tell you, it's really a lot better experience than the one you're having right now. And yet because you are the Ultimate right now, you're not ever going to become more than You Truly Are right now, or a different Identity than you are right now. Because of that fact, everything that I'm talking to you about right now is available to you right now without a lot of learning. We do not have to finish this book in order for you to wake up. But don't worry, I'm not going to cancel the next Gathering.

Again, what will promote the shift of awareness is for you to remind yourself many times a day that you're not a body in a world, experiencing the world. You are Immovable, Omnipresent Mind that has no boundaries, experiencing Ideas. The flowers are Ideas; right now they are Ideas. And I will keep saying this to remind you of it so that you'll remember to look at it a new way.

And your ego can argue and say, "Well if it's an idea, how come it has a seed?" Well, the seed is an Idea. But you know what? The whole Idea of this flower includes the seed and the plant and the blossom. And they are all marvelous Ideas, and they aren't really present on a timeline where it starts from the seed and grows into the flower that makes new seeds. It's not really a cycle, although you experience it that way. The whole Idea is present. And as I've said before, you could just as easily look at the plant that brought forth these flowers and say that the flower drew the plant up from the seed; that the end elicited the beginning.

You see what I'm saying? It's just a matter of how you want to look at it. It truly is. And I'm not talking about getting imaginative and making things up. I'm just pointing out that you could just as easily assume that the completion of the idea drew forth the beginning and the interim and the end. Just as easily as you could say I'm not sure whether Jesus walked on the water, or the water held Jesus up. Was the water supporting Jesus, or was Jesus overcoming the laws of matter? It doesn't matter. Just know that the way you look at things governs how you determine what they are.

Anyone familiar with the Course is familiar with the phrase, "There must be... there is another way to look at this." That's what waking up is about. Another way of looking at what? Everything you're currently experiencing. And the key to this shift lies in this Idea, for lack of better words, this Idea of Singularity; that which is indivisible and undivided. If God is indivisible, then God is undivided. No division has ever successfully happened. No matter how much you think you can demonstrate that division has happened, it's never happened. So start looking for the Singularity. Start being curious to see the Integrity right where you thought it didn't exist. And again, I'm saying, look for the Kingdom of Heaven right where you are. It's not somewhere else. It's not other-worldly. It's the only thing in your face.

As thine eye becomes single, I said, your whole body becomes full of Light. Why? Because the Substance of your body is not matter; it is Light. Just as the Substance of the flowers is not matter; it is Light. And that Light communicates the specific Meanings that God has brought into play by virtue of the Idea of body or flowers.

You are Mind right now in which everything is occurring as a Conscious Experience. And everything that you are experiencing are Ideas which this Singular Mind has formed. Because none of it is matter, none of it is subject to the laws of matter, the laws of physics. This means that any experience of pain, disease, death, any experience of inharmony, dissonance, stress, isn't a fact, but is a misperception of something that is Indivisibly Single, Singular, and therefore the Expression of Perfect Integrity. And because laws of physics, or matter, do not govern it, you can have instantaneous shifts of perception that constitute the experience of new evidence, if you will—healing. And remember that the subject of this portion of the Course that we're reading is about healing.

Okay. Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT forget the Father because I am with you, and I cannot forget Him.

RAJ: Well that could sound like sheer egotism, couldn't it? Well, because I haven't forgotten Him and I'm with you, you're guaranteed of not being able to forget Him. Whew! Well, it's not an egotistical statement. It's not one I can take credit for. It simply expresses the Singularity that we've been talking about.

Likewise when you remember the Father and companion with Him, so to speak, inviting Him in, saying that you would like to experience His Perspective, and you let Him in, your Brothers cannot forget Him either. And your Brothers will have remembered Him better, even if they're resisting it, because the Truth that you know has to be the Truth that everyone knows, because there's only one Mind. And when you experience the Truth about you, one of the inescapable secondary, or almost instantaneously secondary awarenesses that you have is that this is true of your Brother as well. It just comes instantaneously and spontaneously, because you know you're not more special than your Brother. "Wow! If this is true about me, it's true about Mary. If it's true about me, it's true about so-and-so." And it isn't a matter of logical deduction that causes you to say that. It's an experience of knowing this in a far deeper, fuller way than just thinking something with confidence.

And like the 100th monkey principle, as the first 99 monkeys got the idea, all of the other monkeys got the idea, too, but not clearly enough to have the light bulb go on and cause them to change their behavior. And then the 100th monkey got the idea. The critical balance, you might say, was reached and all of the monkeys on all of the islands got the idea, and their behavior changed with no one apparently teaching them. This is because of the Singularity that we're talking about.

Again.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT forget the Father because I am with you, and I cannot forget Him. To forget ME is to forget yourself and Him who created you.

RAJ: It has been my job, you might say, to hold the anchor of your Divinity in Reality, while you insisted upon ignoring it. And as each one of you reaches for the Truth about you and lets it in, you anchor everyone else's Conscious Awareness of What They Divinely Are in Reality and make it easier for them to likewise experience the light bulb going on, having the "Aha!" and being forever changed.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Our brothers ARE forgetful. That is why they need your remembrance of me, and Him who created me. Through this remembrance you can change their minds about THEMSELVES, as I can change YOURS. Your minds are so powerful a light that you can look into theirs and enlighten them, as I can enlighten yours. I do not want to share my BODY in communion because that is to share nothing.

RAJ: That is not to say that it doesn't exist. But the visibility and tangibility isn't where it's at. It's what it's the visibility and tangibility of that's where it's at. The flowers, right now you see the flowers, you see them sort of as an end product of a seed growing, and so you just appreciate the flowers. And that's beautiful, but it's far from complete. What are the flowers the visibility and tangibility of? An Idea. A Divine Idea. An utterly creative and original Idea, the Nature and Substance of which are Love, Joy, Beauty, Harmony. And it's all Living Love, Living Joy, Living Beauty, Living Harmony. And that Love is loving you. And that Love that's loving you is you recognizing it loving you, and you recognizing it loving you, and you recognizing it loving you, and all of you having the experience of all these recognitions occurring.

So why would I share my body any more than I would share just the flower? Your body is the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality, and your Individuality is the Presence of God. I'm sharing the Presence of God with you so that you might [snap of the fingers] get the Idea that you're the Presence of God, that the Presence of God is What You Are, is What is being You. And I'll tell you something. When you get that Idea, I'll share my body with you as well. I'll let you see me. Except that you'll know that what you're seeing is just the Visibility and Tangibility of the Real Thing, not that the Visibility and Tangibility is unreal.

But what's important? The Presence of God expressed as Brotherly Love, as communion, as community, of the Infinitely Individualized Action of God, that didn't occur... did not occur by means of division, which therefore as an experience will mean that your Experience of Infinite Individualization will be a Singular Experience of your Being in which no aspect of anything is left outside your Conscious Awareness, or is in any way different from you, while at the same time still being the Father Individualized. That you will have trouble grasping, but I must put it into words so that the words become familiar and you will have something to hang the experience on when you have the experience. You'll say, "Oh, I know what he meant!" And you won't have to search for the words to express it.

Again.

RAJ READING: I do not want to share my BODY in communion because that is to share nothing. Yet I do want to share my MIND with you because we ARE of one Mind, and that Mind IS ours.

RAJ: Start thinking of the word "Mind" as something that the word "our" can be applied to, rather than "my" or "mine." Stop thinking "my mind." Think "Our Mind." That'll put you in a new perspective.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: See ONLY...

RAJ: That is where the discipline comes in. Don't do anything extra.

RAJ READING: See ONLY this Mind everywhere, because only this IS everywhere and in everything. It IS everything because it encompasses all things within ITSELF.

RAJ: Now isn't that what we've been talking about?

RAJ READING: It IS everything because it encompasses all things within ITSELF.

RAJ: There's the Singularity.

Remember a few weeks ago we came to the part where it said, "You need to change your mind about your mind," and that's what we've been talking about for the last few weeks.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Blessed are you who perceive only this,...

RAJ: There's that discipline again, meaning don't waste your energy doing extraneous irrelevant things. Be boring. Do only this.

RAJ READING: Blessed are you who perceive only this, because you perceive only what it true.

RAJ: If you want to perceive other things, go ahead. It just happens that none of them will be True. So do only this.

RAJ READING: Blessed are you who perceive only this, because you perceive only what it true.

RAJ: [said in a low-key, "in the doldrums" kind of voice] "Oh, isn't that boring. No excitement. Only can experience what is True." That's the perverseness of the ego. Only what is True will be boring and dull. No surprises.

Creation is constant surprise. Creation is, Behold, I make all things new. Creation is unprecedented.

RAJ READING: Blessed are you who perceive only this, because you perceive only what it true.

RAJ: Only what is unprecedented. Only what is surprising. And at the same time, never at odds with your Identity, with your Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Come therefore unto me, and learn of the truth in YOU.

RAJ: Does that mean read the Course a lot? Well, in a way you can benefit from it. But when I say, "Come therefore unto me," I mean directly where you can get a response from me in the now that wasn't written down 25 years ago.

RAJ READING: Come therefore unto me,...

RAJ: I'm inviting you. That's why I'm standing here and have been standing here for 2,000 years and will continue to stand here.

RAJ READING: Come therefore unto me, and learn of the truth in YOU.

RAJ: Not the Truth about you some time in the future. The Truth in you now. It's all here now in you as you, which you're either perceiving well or not so well.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Mind...

RAJ: With a capital "M".

RAJ READING: ...we share is shared by all our brothers, and as we see them truly, they WILL be healed.

RAJ: Why? Because it's all a Singularity. There's only one Mind that each one of you is the Presence of, each one of all of us is the Presence of. And when you see that, you might say you're using your Mind well. You're using it in an unconflicted way, a Singular way. And you have this ongoing light bulb flashing—the Experience of Knowing that this is True about your Brother as well. Whether he recognizes it or not, you know What's True about your Brother. And because of the Singularity of the only Mind there is, your Brother knows it, even if he resists recognizing it, embracing it. Each one of you who allows this Experience of Singularity undoes the strength of the habit of persisting in independence, universally wherever independence is attempting to be embodied.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Let YOUR mind shine with mine upon their minds, and by our gratitude to them, make them aware of the light in THEM.

RAJ: “Oh, yeah. Lot of gratitude I'm gonna feel. Yeah, you know, I've had moments before, and I've extended love and I've extended gratitude. All that happened is I got kicked in the teeth.” Well, you know, all that means is that you have further opportunity to extend gratitude and behave in a way that allows for transformation to occur.

And you know something? Every mother in this room and every mother who hears my voice knows what I'm talking about. Because what you do when your cranky, irascible, grouchy, impatient child screams and yells because you've said, “Order has to be expressed,” or “It's time to clean up your room,” or, “You know what? What Jimmy did to you, can't really hurt you. It depends on how you want to look at it.” And they say, “Oh, yeah! He did too hurt me. He did too hurt me. Don't tell me he didn't hurt me.”

Being a parent is one of the most effective ways for any of you to learn about the bottomlessness of the well of Love that you have available to you to continually share and shower upon your children knowing that it's in the persistence of expressing love and harmony and principle and order that learning occurs, even if the learning is slow.

It's perhaps the most effective means to learn what patience is. It's really patience with yourself when you feel like abandoning Love and using force in one form or another to effect change, or to give up entirely because this child is just too disruptive, too manipulative, too terrible. Mothers recognize the real call for Love more than fathers. And although role reversal isn't working too well these days with the women at work and the husbands at home, it is providing an opportunity for men to discover their Capacity to Love and the fact that Love is more productive than force or protocols.

Again.

RAJ READING: Let YOUR mind shine with mine upon their minds, and by our gratitude to them,...

RAJ: Why? Because they're giving us the opportunity to draw from the bottomless well of Love that's fuller than we thought it was and uncovers a deeper capacity than we thought we have.

RAJ READING: ...and by our gratitude to them, make them aware of the light in THEM.

RAJ: I am with you always. Do you realize that that's my expression of motherhood?

The feminine in each one of you is that which is willing to see the call for Love—where hate and disagreement seem to be being consistently expressed—without giving up, because something in you knows that Love is the only solvent there is, and that force won't do it. Protocols won't do it. Rules won't do it. Principles won't do it.

So, guys, you're not off the hook. Mother's Day is your day, too. And if you didn't think it was, get on the stick and find your opportunities to persist in sharing the Light, rather than being so damned businesslike.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This light...

RAJ: That you extend.

RAJ READING: ...will shine back upon YOU and on the whole Sonship because this is your proper gift to God.

RAJ: If you are your Father's Son, if you are your Father's Daughter, then embodying your Source is the Gift you give back. And now there's Integrity, not conflict. Now there's Wholeness or Singularity, not division. And that Gift to the Father becomes your Gift to everything and everyone, because of the Singularity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...will accept it and give it to the Sonship because it is acceptable to Him, and therefore to His Sons.

RAJ: This is just another way of wording, or giving verbalization to, what Singularity means.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is the true communion of the...

RAJ: Capital "S".

RAJ READING: ...Spirit...

RAJ: Capital "W".

RAJ READING: ...Who sees the altar of God in everyone, and by bringing it to YOUR appreciation, calls upon you to love God AND His creations. You can appreciate the Sonship ONLY as one.

RAJ: That means you cannot appreciate the Sonship as disjointed; a disjointed infinitude of discrete entities.

RAJ READING: You can appreciate the Sonship ONLY as one.

RAJ: Singularity again.

RAJ READING: This is part of the law of creation, and therefore governs ALL thought.

RAJ: Okay. The next section is called:

RAJ READING: From Vigilance...

RAJ: Remember we've been talking about the need for vigilance.

RAJ READING: From Vigilance to Peace

Although you can LOVE the Sonship only as one, you can PERCEIVE it as fragmented. It is impossible, however, for you to see something in PART of it that you will not attribute to ALL of it.

RAJ: Here is the beginning of a description of how What You Divinely Are and the Way Things Work Truly are incorporated in your illusion, in your delusions. And it's further demonstration of the fact that you only have one Self, which you're either expressing well or poorly. And this one Self is the Christ, the Presence of God.

Remember we just read:

RAJ READING: You can appreciate the Sonship ONLY as one. This is part of the law of creation, and therefore governs ALL thought.

RAJ: We're talking about truly, as things truly are here. This is part of the Law of Creation. It doesn't have a capital "C" [in the book] but it means Creation Itself.

RAJ READING: Although you can LOVE the Sonship only as one, you can PERCEIVE it as fragmented.

RAJ: Meaning that you've now managed to get your bill of divorcement from the Father and you're seeing things on your own. And as long as you are seeing things alone, on your own, separate from the Father, your choice to be separate is going to be an inevitable part of everything you see, and so you will see the Sonship as fragmented.

RAJ READING: It is impossible, however, for you to see something in PART of it that you will not attribute to ALL of it.

RAJ: Why? Because the Law of Creation is that you can appreciate the Sonship only as One. So now you've fooled yourself into thinking that you're seeing the Sonship as fragmented, but you're still required—because you have no other operating system to use—you're still required to see that whatever you attribute to one part of the fragmented Sonship must apply to all of it in your mind. You will apply it to all of the Sonship.

Do you see what I'm saying? Because you haven't stopped being the Christ and the Laws of Creation haven't been subverted or replaced, the Laws of Creation will still govern your illusion. And so, if you perceive part of the Sonship as fragmented, if you see flaws in part of the Sonship, it will automatically be applied to all of the Sonship in your perception.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: That is why attack is NEVER discrete, and why attack must be relinquished ENTIRELY.

RAJ: When your perception is biased, the bias gets applied to everyone you encounter in your day. Doesn't it? If you're in a foul frame of mind, everybody gets it because you can't turn off your attitude. Right? Attack is never discrete. Your attitude is never selective. It's gifted to everyone. And it's why attack must be relinquished entirely.

Do you see that? If you're going to limit your attack to just part of the Sonship or just part of your world, you're fooling yourself. You can't do it. Your bias will apply to everything. Therefore because you cannot apply attack discretely to a part of the Sonship, the only way to have attack disappear is to abandon it totally. You've got to give up the attitude. You know, they say, "You've gotta have attitude!" 'Specially if you're from New Jersey. "You've gotta have attitude!"

If you have attitude, it's gifted to everyone because you cannot gift it discretely. If you don't want attitude shared with everyone, you have to share with no one. You have to abandon attack. You have to abandon the bias completely.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If it is NOT relinquished entirely, it is not relinquished at all. Fear and love are equally reciprocal.

RAJ: Fear is exchanged reciprocally. Love is exchanged reciprocally. And here's the key to the solution, because you say, "Boy, how on earth can I give up attack completely?" By giving something else. You don't give up attack by self-discipline. You don't give up attack by getting hold of your mind and beating it into submission. You give it up by doing something else entirely. Do the only other thing that's reciprocal—wholly reciprocal—Love.

Make the choice. Then you're not in the state of denial of attack. You're in a state of affirming Love which in its extension is the Movement of Creation, which in its nature is the Singularity of Being being embodied, which puts you in alignment with the Father. And because of the alignment, allows the Father to take the final step, where to your sense, you will slip the groove and be at one with the Father, never to slip back again. But this is how it works.

Again.

RAJ READING: Fear and love are equally reciprocal. They make or create...

RAJ: Of course, it's the ego that makes-up.

RAJ READING: They make or create...

RAJ: Which is what Love does.

RAJ READING: ...depending on whether the ego or the Holy Spirit begets or inspires them, but they WILL return to the mind of the thinker, and they WILL affect his total perception. That includes his perception of God, of His creations, and of his...

RAJ: Meaning yours.

RAJ READING: ... own. He...

RAJ: The thinker.

RAJ READING: ...will not appreciate ANY of them if he regards them fearfully. He will appreciate ALL of them if he regards them with love.

RAJ: Do you see how we're not talking about some theoretical thing called A Course in Miracles? We're talking about you and how you're using your mind. Whether you're using it well, or not; clearly, or unclearly. How is this Singularity, this Ultimacy of You, finding Expression?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The mind that accepts attack CANNOT love. That is because it believes that it can DESTROY love, and therefore does not understand what love IS.

RAJ: When you attack, you want someone to hurt. When you attack, you want somebody to be impressed with the need to be miserable. Right? You want to kill their capacity to be loving. You want them to be distracted from it so that they will feel miserable.

If you think you can actually destroy that one's capacity to be the Presence of Love that the Father is being right there where they are, then you're confused about What Love Is, you're confused about what constitutes your Brother, and you're confused about what constitutes you. Oh, that's wonderfully singular, isn't it? You're ignorant, ignorant, ignorant. But you're not bad.

That's important. You didn't turn into a bad person. You're still the Christ expressing What You Are well, or not well. You're still a Singularity that isn't guilty of anything, because there's not a discrete, separate, bad person to be punished. There's just an expression of ignorance that needs to be replaced with understanding, with the Knowing of the Truth. So this Principle of Singularity allows for you to move forward while looking at what you were not doing well without getting caught up in guilt and punishment, because there isn't a discrete self of you that is bad.

You get that? Who cares how many lifetimes you've looked at flowers and thought they were just flowers? Who cares how many lifetimes, how many millenniums you've been ignorant of What's Really There. It's irrelevant. Because the whole time you've been the Christ and haven't stopped being the Christ. And whatever illusions you thought you created didn't actually get created. And the Presence of God expressed as You, didn't stop being the Presence of God expressed as You. It's just that unconsciousness was experienced for a time that doesn't need to be experienced any longer. So there's not any you who needs to be punished for the immense amount of life that you spent in denial of God. You see?

So you can engage in seeing things new as They Truly Are with enthusiasm, with real genuine curiosity and interest, because you don't need to be afraid that once having done it, you'll be told, " Now wait a minute! Not so fast buddy. Now you've been off the track for quite a while, and you don't think you're just going to get right into the Kingdom of Heaven, do you?" Nothing like that is going to happen. The moment you abandon your ignorance, you're not ignorant. No ifs, ands, or buts. No questionnaire to fill out. No test to pass. When you've abandoned ignorance, you're not ignorant.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If it...

RAJ: The mind that accepts attack.

RAJ READING: ...does not understand what love is, it CANNOT perceive itself as loving. This loses the awareness of being; induces feelings of unreality; and results in utter confusion. Your own thinking has done this because of its power, but your own thinking can also save you FROM this because its power is NOT of your making.

RAJ: If you created your own mind, that would be one thing. But your Mind is this Singularity that we've been talking about that is the indivisible, and therefore undivided, Presence of God. And because God is where the Power is, you in your indiscretions and foolish expressions of willful creation of illusions that you never really accomplished, have kept yourself from experiencing What's Real while not affecting What's Real, and while not actually creating a density that you have to move back through to get to Reality. And therefore the shift of perception can happen instantaneously, can happen now, and there is no other time than now for it to happen.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your ability to DIRECT your thinking as you will is PART of its power. If you do not believe you can do this, you have DENIED the power of your thought, and thus rendered it powerless...

RAJ: Where?

RAJ READING: ...in your BELIEF.

RAJ: Not as an actuality, but in your belief.

Now again, how is this power to be directed? This power is to be directed to only do one thing. And that is join with the Father, seek to be illumined by the Father's Perspective which is your Birthright for you to be experiencing, and therefore actually constitutes your Right Mind right now. And then let it in, neglecting to do anything else. Got it? Neglecting to have an opinion about it. Neglecting to think about it. Neglecting to wonder about the consequences. Neglecting to do anything else. Do only this.

We're going to end with this next sentence, even though it's the first sentence of the paragraph, because it's what I want you to rest with for the rest of the week.

RAJ READING: The ingeniousness of the ego to preserve itself is enormous, but it stems from the power of the mind which the ego DENIES.

RAJ: Do you see? Are you getting it? You are the Christ. You have the authority of God when you let God be the authority in you. That's you in your Right Mind. That's the only thing that exists right where you are.

The ego is a definition you've made up about yourself; is a definition that the Christ has made-up, you might even say, playfully. It doesn't have to be serious, calling for great consequences because it's an act of hate against God. It's something that can be done.

So the Christ—you—made-up a definition about yourself and chose to believe it, instead of the direct Experience of What You Are. And so now you're not the Christ to yourself. You're a human being. You came from a sperm and an egg. You know, the event being a natural progression from the big bang of a universe that is purely physical and has nothing to do with God. And you have a body. The body has a brain. And there are chemical movements and electrical movements, and aha, you have a mind. And it's your mind. It's private. It belongs to this body. It belongs to this body that is you that is different from him, and him, and her, and her, and her. Oh, man. You know?

And the Christ is doing all of this. And as a result, the ego, this definition of yourself is very ingenious in preserving itself. But the ingeniousness comes not from it, because it's pure fantasy. It has no presence, except the Presence you—the Christ—give it by giving your attention to it, in preference to giving your attention to God which is the Source of you and the Presence of you.

So the ego preserves itself ingeniously and it does it by using the Power of the Mind which the ego is the absolute denial of. The ego says, "You're not the Christ. You're not connected with a Wholeness, a Universalness. All of this that you're seeing isn't Creation. It isn't the Visibility and Tangibility of a Singularity. No. It's the manifestation of atoms, and electrons, and protons, and neutrons, and quarks, and chance. Everything is discretely different. And it's held together by a web of attraction—gravity." And it goes on and on with an exquisite description of how it is that everything can be discretely independent as further justification of the idea that you are discretely independent from God and from everyone else. Very ingenious.

And it does it by employing all of the Laws of Creation in reverse. It employs all of the Laws of Creation to demonstrate discrete, lawless, independence, which if left to itself will destroy existence. And then, it says, "Your job is to keep existence from being destroyed." And it keeps you busy and distracted from the Truth that would allow you to relax and find everything brought back into the Singularity and the Indivisibility of Creation, and the Joy and the Peace that it's yours to be experiencing, and the Love it is your Birthright to be the Presence of, the recognition of, the extension of, and the reception of.

The Ultimate is happening right here, right now. And you're either conscious of it, or unconscious of it. But you are a Singularity being aware well, or not well. And so there's no contest. There's literally no contest. There's no devil. There's no evil force that has power to keep you from being What You Are and remembering God. It's just a current embodiment of less than orderly mindfulness. That's all! That's not an indictment. It's just that's all it is. That's all it is.

And the answer to it is a curiosity to see things differently in terms of the already present Completeness of Being that each of you is already using, and which, if you were using it better, would absolutely change your Experience of Being by bringing it back in harmony with What It Truly Is and bringing you back into your Right Mind. And heaven help me if I'm making it sound so simple that it's not really that interesting to explore.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week, including all you men whose motherhood you're going to be letting in more this week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Sparkly Book – p. 156

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I could speak for Paul, but I won't. I will take this moment to let him speak.

PAUL: Okay. I, speaking for myself and Susan and Chris and Judy, want to thank everyone who responded yesterday. We're very, very grateful for the support that was extended. It is going to allow us to pay back the three loans we got this past week at the end of the day today, which is a great relief, and is greatly appreciated. And the Love that was extended in those gifts I promise you, it's felt. We feel it. Thank you.

No, I'm going to say something else. I've... because as I was being quiet and turning it back over to Raj, I realized that the support has been encouraging. I feel encouraged.

You know, I won't stop listening to Raj, no matter what happens. And in one way or another I won't stop, unless Raj says we're not going to do it anymore. I will not stop extending and sharing what Raj has to say. And it would never be my desire to crawl into a closet and just write books where I was never involved with anyone, but could sit cozy and shielded from the messiness of human relationships and just spout the Truth.

Okay. I don't know why it was important to say it, but the support has been encouraging. Okay.

RAJ: What is the one thing that can break isolation? What's the one thing that can violate and undo (well what I'm going to call) the strength of the ego frame of reference in you? It's gratitude. You can't feel gratitude and be upset at the same time. You can't feel gratitude and successfully employ defense. In fact, if you're going to be a warrior for the ego, it will be part of your credo to avoid gratitude, because it will undo your capacity [small laugh] to be able to defend yourself and engage in attack.

Gratitude is something that never exists in isolation. You must be grateful for something. The gratitude will have an object. And if you're experiencing gratitude, or if you are employing gratitude, you are in the act of defying and breaking any state of isolation or defense that you've been engaged in. That's why in the past I have suggested at times that you go on a diet of gratitude.

And you know, there's something else. You can engage in gratitude even if you're upset. Being upset does not make the state of gratitude totally unavailable to you and impossible for you to engage in. And the moment in your upsetness that you do begin to engage gratitude and persist in it, and I'm talking about real gratitude, the upsetness will begin to fade. Always your upsetness is the result of one thing only, and that is that you have crawled into a very private place that you are defending against intrusion. When you do that, you're uncomfortable. When you are uncomfortable, you have done that.

Now, at this point in the Course, we're looking at the way the ego works. But mind you, just because you understand the way the ego works, it doesn't mean that the ego is any more real than it was before you understood how it works. To understand how it works is to be able to see more clearly its meaninglessness. How silly, how ridiculous, how impossible the existence of such a thing as an ego frame of reference is. So, don't think that as you're gaining an understanding of the ego that it must mean that there really is an ego. [small laugh] What you're gaining an understanding of is that there isn't any such thing as an ego because its premise is illusory. It therefore has no foundation.

In other words, let's bring it home a little more, because right now I'm talking about the ego. Generally speaking, the ego is this, the ego is that. There's no "generally speaking" about the ego. The ego is your current sense of yourself that has been built upon the idea that you are the trigger, that you are the impulse from which you and your life come forth, that you're the alpha and omega of your experience. In other words, there is no God. There is nothing outside of you. There is nothing beyond you. There is nothing more than you, this body, which has developed a mind that can live a life, defend itself, succeed, and so on, which, of course, is a complete misunderstanding about your Identity and your Being.

And waking up, experiencing enlightenment is the way in which you get beyond the box of the definition you have of yourself, so that your Self can be seen in its original and only context, which is infinite. And which, because it is infinite, is all-inclusive, all-embracing, and in which all that is within it is involved with every other aspect of what is in it so that you are inseparable in actuality from every single one of your Brothers and Sisters, every flower, every tree, every manifestation of Life. And it's an intimate, infinite involvement. Now that's more than you can swallow in one swallow in terms of a shift of consciousness.

So how do you begin the process of getting out of the box so that you can become susceptible to the larger experience? Again, through the practice of gratitude. Through the practice of gratitude. What better word or act could I use to describe the meaning of the word "Love"? Love your neighbor. Love your Brother when he's in the midst of despair, when he's in the midst of what's called a terminal illness, when he's in the midst of turmoil.

Well, how can I Love? The easiest way to begin loving is to find something about them to be grateful for. What are the things about them that you appreciate? What are the things about them that you can express gratitude for? That's comprehensible, where the word "Love" can be inscrutable, you might say, and a little difficult to put your finger on. But gratitude, that you can cope with, that you can understand, and that you can bring into play.

And the interesting thing is that as you begin to express gratitude, even if it's for apparently silly things like I'm grateful for the fact that every day I see her she wears clothes that are lovely, I enjoy the clothes she wears, I appreciate the presence that she is in her choice of colors and textures, and so on. Or I appreciate her for being straightforward, honest, frank, gentle, tender. Or I appreciate my home, I appreciate the opportunity it gives me to express order and to express loveliness, and I appreciate the shelter it gives me. You see? We don't have to get otherworldly in terms of appreciation.

But if you're upset, if you're in a really bad mood, your starting with these simple things that you can genuinely feel gratitude for, and your continuing to find more and more of these things to be grateful for makes it easier and easier for you to find more things to feel grateful for, and the inclination for gratitude to pour forth doubles and triples and increases. And pretty soon you realize that you're not in the bad frame of mind that you were in; the reason being that you've abandoned the intellectual commitment to isolation and thoughts that confirm and support it. Because remember what you're hurting from is a decision to be alone. If you're hurting, you have made a decision to be alone. It's that simple.

As you abandon that and express gratitude, you are embracing, including, and extending yourself, and as you do that, the number of things to extend your gratitude to increases. The isolation is broken. You begin to feel better, and your action blesses everything that you have expressed gratitude for. Then, this new appreciative frame of mind that you are in allows you to become mobilized, where your isolation and misery had caused you to become immobilized. And now you're in a position where you can act. You can turn that gratitude into an action that might be a hug, or a thank you, or a wiping off of the counter that needs to be wiped so that it looks lovely again. Actions of appreciation expressed quote "in the world," not just embraced in the withinness of your mind.

The key is for the Truth to register with you, for the Love That You Are to register with you, so that it can emerge into action, acts in the world, so that it becomes visible in the world. And there is something whole and healthy and transformational to replace the ugliness, we'll say, that is managing to be acted out in the world, so that hope might be experienced by those who think that the acts of hate are normal. You can always use the words, "There is another way to look at this." But another way to be acted out in the world gives a visual, experiential example of the fact that there is another way to be. And that gives hope. That is inspiring.

You want to know what the ego is? The ego is a closet Christ; a Christ who hides what he is from the world. And you know what I'm doing? I'm outing every single one of you. With Love, I'm saying, "Come out of the closet. Show what you are, because the world needs to see it and you need to feel it." Because until you do, you're in a state of misery that is undeserved and illegitimate. How do you come out of the closet? By finding ways to express gratitude; first within your own consciousness, and then expressed in the world, so that new actions from each of you replace old actions that were confirming the ego in you and in others.

Waking up starts as an inside job, but it doesn't end as an inside job. It ends as that inside transformation becomes expressed in actions that will cause observers from space, let's say, to say, "Oh, something is happening there on planet Earth. Things are changing. Not only is there less conflict, there is a new energy emanating." Why? Because something is actually happening right in the middle of the human condition.

And you know what? It won't be a matter of these observers saying, "Wow! What's happening down there? Suddenly the population is becoming less and less. Hmm. It just disappeared. Hmm. Just poufed out of existence. What is going on?" It's never going to be a matter of flashing out and leaving this place. It's always going to be a matter of being in this place more fully in a way that embodies in words and deeds and feelings and thoughts What You Divinely Are, What Is Really True About You.

So waking up, that wonderful thing all of you seek, you say, is to know Who and What You Are, and what your Purpose is. Well, your Purpose is to be What You Are. And the only way you can be What You Divinely Are is to embody it in involvement with your Brothers from that awareness of What You Are, which is Divine, extending What You Are to your Brothers and Sisters whom you now recognize are also Divine, so that What You Are confirms What They Are. And in their discovery of Who They Are Divinely, they confirm What You Are, so that there's a Singularity. That's what it's about. And the same thing about the trees and the roses and the plants and animals.

You will get no support from me on any otherworldly ideas about what is involved in Awakening. Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God. Right here and now you are. So right here and now is where you will discover that that's What You Are. And right where you are now is the Kingdom of Heaven seen through a glass darkly. It's not anything else. And so right here is where you will once again re-discern the Kingdom of Heaven. And the key to unlocking the Kingdom of Heaven is your willingness to express and embody in actions gratitude, Love, by becoming involved with everything from your Love because you're beginning to have an awareness that what you're loving is also Love, is also Divine, is also God presenting Himself right there.

Actually, we're going to back up one paragraph just for review and context. We're going to the book.

RAJ READING: The ingeniousness of the ego to preserve itself is enormous, but it stems from the power of the mind which the ego DENIES.

RAJ: And we discussed last week that the power of the mind that the ego denies is the Christ Presence That You Are, which is pretending at the moment to be an ego, and believing its pretension.

RAJ READING: This means that the ego ATTACKS what is PRESERVING it, and this MUST be a source of extreme anxiety.

RAJ: In other words, that Which You Divinely Are is using its capacity to imagine that it is not What It Is. And because it is Divine, it manages to create a sense of not being What It Is as an experience. And this that it isn't, which is called the ego, must deny that which has created it, because if it doesn't manage to keep the Christ That You Are covered from your vision and you rediscover it, then that will be the end of the ego. So it's in a state of denying the very thing that allows it to seem to have existence. That can only be tension producing. It must walk a fine line so as to not actually to come anywhere close to destroying what is allowing temporarily for its existence through the use of imagination.

RAJ READING: ...this MUST be a source of extreme anxiety. That is why the ego NEVER knows what it is doing. It is perfectly logical, but clearly insane. The ego draws upon the one source...

RAJ: The Christ That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...which is totally inimical to its existence FOR its existence.

RAJ: Do you see why it is itself a state of conflict, a state of tension?

RAJ READING: Fearful of perceiving the POWER of this source, it is forced to depreciate it. This threatens its OWN existence, a state which it finds intolerable.

RAJ: It's like the saying, you know, "Don't bite the hand that feeds you." But the ego's job is to bite the hand that gives it life, because it must keep it out of sight. This is why you can never refer to the ego frame of reference as your friend or your ally, and you must understand that it is always acting not in your best interest. It is always acting to your detriment, which means it's always acting to the detriment of What You Divinely Are. You might say that's its job, because that's the only thing that will seem to keep it going.

RAJ READING: Remaining logical but still insane, the ego resolves this completely insane dilemma in a completely insane way. It does not perceive ITS existence as threatened...

RAJ: By what?

RAJ READING: ...by projecting the threat onto YOU, and perceiving your BEING as nonexistent.

RAJ: Now that which had only been an intellectual process has become an attack on your perceived sense of yourself. And you say, "Oh, I am feeling threatened. I am feeling uneasy. I am feeling uncomfortable. Mm. I don't like this so I'm going to try to overcome it." And then you try to overcome it by never... [small laugh] ... never discerning the fact that the feeling has been suggested to you, insinuated into your mind, you might say, as a threat that you're experiencing, rather than the threat that the ego is experiencing, and you never get around to undoing the ego itself.

RAJ READING: This ensures ITS continuance, if you side with it, by guaranteeing that you will not know your OWN safety.

RAJ: In other words, by guaranteeing that you will not remember that you are invulnerable because of What You Really Are.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot afford to know ANYTHING.

RAJ: Know anything.

RAJ READING: Knowledge is total...

RAJ: Or Knowing, with a capital "K", is total. It's a Singularity.

RAJ READING: ...and the ego does not BELIEVE in totality.

RAJ: Or Singularity.

RAJ READING: This unbelief is its origin,...

RAJ: You see, the ego originated from an idea of less than wholeness. The ego originated in an imaginative sense of limitation, tininess. If you're going to be different from the Infinite Singularity That God Is Being right there where you are as you, the only other choice you can have is to be less than that. Right? Because there's nothing greater than Infinity that you could choose from. So if you've chosen to have a point of view of your own, that point of view is always going to be smaller than the Singular Wholeness of Being. And therefore, the ego as a concept, as an imaginative thought, originated out of a sense of tininess. And that out of which it originated became the purpose and function of the ego, of that which came forth. And so the ego's function is to continue to create tininess, closets, little private spaces, and to ensure that no one else will suffer from the inspiration that would cause them to become bigger than the little space that the ego says it is confined to.

RAJ READING: This unbelief is its origin, and while the ego does not love YOU, it IS faithful to its own antecedents, begetting as it was begotten.

RAJ: Which is what I just described. The method by which something comes forth becomes the purpose and function of what comes forth. So if something is begotten in tininess, in limitation, then tininess and limitation will become its quote "creative" unquote function.

RAJ READING: Mind ALWAYS reproduces as it was produced.

RAJ: That's the Law of Being. So whether you have adopted a limited frame of reference or not, whatever proceeds, whatever follows, will be an expression, I'm going to say, of the matrix which is the source of what comes forth. So, if you are not claiming a private mind of your own, and you are letting that Mind be in you which is God, then your very Presence and Being will embody and express in actions Infinite Creativity, if I may put it that way. It will embody that by which it itself came forth, expressing the nature and character and quality of that which formed it. And likewise because you are unable to escape from Reality, even though you imagine that you can, if you adopt a biased, tiny, limited frame of reference, everything that follows will embody that.

What I am meaning to convey to you here is a fine point and it is this. Whether you are ignorant or Awake, ignorant or Enlightened, everything still functions according to God's Laws. And so because nothing can come forth from a source unlike its source, because of that, even when you are ignorant and creating ignorantly, that which comes forth will unerringly embody and express its source. Therefore, because the ego is a tiny, private, personal sense of yourself which holds itself apart from everyone else, everything that you do from that frame of reference will continue to embody and create and express those very same qualities of privateness, tininess, personalness, and so on.

Are you seeing what I'm saying? My point here is that whether you are Awake or asleep, God's Laws still govern and govern absolutely, and the Way Things Work still work absolutely. That's because everything is inviolably a Singularity.

So if you have two ways to be; one which, we'll say, generates harmony, and one... If you have two ways to be; one way that generates harmony, and one way that generates disharmony or inharmony, you may know that whichever you choose, it will work absolutely. And you will perfectly express inharmony. You will flawlessly express inharmony. And never while you are coming from that frame of reference will anything other than inharmony come forth. It will be impossible for you as an ego to become enlightened. It will be impossible for you as an ego to really express Love. Why? Because that requires involvement, and the ego is the embodiment of an idea of privacy, and so all it can generate is aloneness.

That's why miracles are called for. And what is a miracle? A sudden shift of perception. It will always be a shift of perception from tininess to Infiniteness, to bigness. It will always be a shift of perception from hate to Love. It will always be a shift of perception from defense to gratitude. Another way of saying it is that you can never solve the problem from the level of the problem, because from the level of the problem, all you can do is generate problems. So you must step out of the level of the problem into the level of the answer, which inevitably will beget the solution. And actually making the shift will have been the solution.

Is this making sense?

RAJ READING: Mind ALWAYS reproduces as it was produced. Produced by fear, the ego reproduces fear. This is its allegiance,...

RAJ: That's its programming, you might say.

RAJ READING: This is its allegiance,...

RAJ: That's what its operating system requires it to do.

RAJ READING: This is its allegiance, and this allegiance makes it treacherous to love BECAUSE you are love.

RAJ: That doesn't mean this allegiance makes it (the ego) treacherous to Love. It means that because its (the ego's) allegiance is to fear, it is treacherous to the ego for you to Love.

RAJ READING: Love is your power, which the ego must deny.

RAJ: Okay, so you know that because of what the ego is, it's always going to be denying the Truth About You, because the Truth About You, if you begin to have a glimmer of it in your awareness, will cause you to withdraw your faith in the ego's suggestions.

RAJ READING: Love is your power, which the ego must deny. It must also deny everything which this power gives you...

RAJ: The Christ That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...because it gives you EVERYTHING. No-one who has everything WANTS the ego. Its own maker, then,...

RAJ: Meaning the Christ That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...does not want it.

RAJ: Right now that which You Divinely Are does not want the ego experience. Now that which You Divinely Are is what? The Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. The Holy Spirit which is your Right Mind doesn't want the ego, and so it stands with you constantly on your behalf. Your Real Mind, your Right Mind, stands with you on your behalf constantly insinuating Itself through your defenses so that you might recognize It and begin to remember yourself. So that It, the Holy Spirit, your Right Mind, your Christhood, can inspire you with what? With the experience and remembrance of What You Are, so that your allegiance to the ego will begin to falter, because it begins no longer to make sense to you, because you're remembering Who You Are. Because Who You Are is managing to register with you. I've said before, the Holy Spirit is your Divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego.

RAJ READING: No-one who has everything WANTS the ego. Its own maker, then,...

RAJ: The Christ of You.

RAJ READING: ...does not want it. Rejection is therefore the only decision which the ego could possibly encounter, if the mind which made it knew ITSELF.

RAJ: But you didn't even know you had a Right Mind. You thought you were just you, and you thought your mind was just what it is. But now you know that you have a Right Mind. I've been telling you. Over and over I keep reminding you so that you don't forget and you don't slip back into ignorance of it and just waltz along following the traditional, habitual, ego patterns.

RAJ READING: Rejection is therefore the only decision which the ego could possibly encounter, if the mind which made it knew ITSELF. And if it recognized ANY part of the Sonship it WOULD know itself.

RAJ: If it recognized ANY part of the Sonship. Well, here's the wonderful thing. Every one of your friends, every one of your neighbors, every individual you run into every day, provides you with the opportunity to remember the Sonship. But you're pretty sure you know that the word "Sonship" applied to them does not have a capital "S", and so you're not open to the inspiration and revelation that awaits you in every encounter. Thank, God, you haven't met all of us yet. Because you have no opinion about an Awakened Brother, the only thing you know for sure is that you don't know anything about what an Awakened Brother is, except that an Awakened Brother has something you're envious of.

You at least know that there might... that there is something wonderful that might be gotten from an Awakened Brother. And so you have Guides which you can turn to and they become the one, the any part of the Sonship that you can recognize that would allow you to begin to know yourself.

You also have the Holy Spirit, something else you have no opinion about, except that It has something you probably want. And so there's a resource for you to turn to that you can't pooh pooh, because you haven't become familiar enough with it yet to think you know what its flaws are, and have an opinion, a judgmental opinion about. And so you have means of breaking the isolation if you are arriving at a point where isolation is beginning to be too uncomfortable for you to continue in.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego therefore opposes ALL appreciation,...

RAJ: Another way of saying that would be that the ego therefore opposes all gratitude.

RAJ READING: ...ALL recognition, ALL sane perception and ALL knowledge. It perceives their threat as total because it senses the fact that ALL commitments the mind makes ARE total.

RAJ: And this is True. Once again it is the Way It Works. It's one of the Laws of God.

RAJ READING: ...ALL commitments the mind makes ARE total.

RAJ: Whether you're enlightened or dreaming a dream, every commitment you make is total. And so if you have made commitment to the ego, it's total, and everything that comes forth from that frame of mind will engender and embody and attempt to continue embodiments of that which is of the nature and character of the ego—limitation, fear, defense, jealousy, hatred—all the things that firmly establish isolation and the ongoing need for securing that isolation.

Continuing, regarding the ego.

RAJ READING: Forced, therefore, to detach itself from you who ARE mind, it is willing to attach itself to ANYTHING else. But there IS nothing else. It does not follow that the mind cannot make illusions, but it DOES follow that, if it makes illusions, it will believe in them, because that is HOW it made them.

RAJ: It's like if you paint a picture with red paint, the picture will be red. That which you use to make something is what the something will be. And so, if you paint with the ego, the picture will be ego expressed, ego embodied, ego illustrated, and nothing else. How a thing is made is what it will be.

Now, on the other hand...

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit undoes illusions without attacking them merely because He cannot perceive them at all. They therefore do not exist for Him.

RAJ: And to bring it home again, this "Him" is nothing more than your Right Mind. It's you. Your Right Mind cannot perceive them at all—illusions. They therefore do not exist for your Right Mind.

Your Right Mind,...

RAJ READING: He resolves the APPARENT conflict which they engender by perceiving CONFLICT as meaningless.

RAJ: It would be wonderful to have a friend like that, wouldn't it, who can see that clearly, to help you see that clearly? It's even more wonderful to know that you have something closer than a friend. You have your very Self, your Right Mind, accompanying you every moment, having one Purpose on Its Mind, and that is help you become DISillusioned, free of illusions.

RAJ READING: We said before that the Holy Spirit perceives the conflict exactly as it is, and it IS meaningless. The Holy Spirit does not want you to UNDERSTAND conflict; He wants you to realize that BECAUSE conflict is meaningless, it cannot BE understood.

RAJ: You see the ego has set up a lot of straw dogs for you to attend to. And straw dogs are things that don't actually exist, but which you have been fooled into believing do. It's like kids sending other kids out into a field at night to go snipe hunting with a candle and a gunny sack, because if you hold the candle up, it will confuse the snipe and it will fly into the gunny sack. Well, that's a wild goose chase, or an attempt to attend to a straw dog.

And to try to understand illusion is a wild goose chase. And so your Right Mind helps you neglect to attend to foolish endeavors that can't be accomplished, and so it saves you time and energy. The ego, on the other hand, provides you only with straw dogs, only with wild goose chases.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We have already said that understanding brings appreciation,...

RAJ: And we could say gratitude.

RAJ READING: ...and appreciation brings love. Nothing else CAN be understood because nothing else is REAL, and therefore nothing else HAS meaning.

If you will keep in mind what the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...offers you, you cannot be vigilant for anything BUT God and His Kingdom. The only reason you find this difficult is because you think there IS something else.

RAJ: The ego has managed to convince you that there's such a creature as a snipe that you can catch in a weird fashion. And of course, you have to be sure no one else goes with you because that will scare them away. And then you end up being the lone fool out in the middle of the field with a candle and a gunny sack, while all of your knowledgeable buddies stand way back and laugh. The ego is not your friend.

Again.

RAJ READING: The only reason you find this difficult is because you think there IS something else.

RAJ: Besides God and His Kingdom.

RAJ READING: Belief does not require vigilance UNLESS it is conflicted. If it is, there ARE conflicting components within it which have engendered a state of war, and vigilance therefore has become essential. Vigilance has no place at all in peace.

RAJ: You could say, "Vigilance has no place at all in Singularity."

RAJ READING: It is necessary against beliefs which are NOT true, and would never have been called upon by the Holy Spirit if you had NOT believed the untrue. You cannot deny that when you believe something, you have MADE it true for YOU.

RAJ: And I'm going to add: But remember that you have not made it True.

RAJ READING: When you believe what God does not KNOW, your thought seems to CONTRADICT His, and this makes it appear AS IF you are attacking Him. We have repeatedly emphasized that the ego DOES believe it can attack God, and tries to persuade you that YOU have done this.

RAJ: Catch the shift.

RAJ READING: We have repeatedly emphasized that the ego DOES believe it can attack God, and tries to persuade you that YOU have done this.

RAJ: The ego is a buck-passer. It believes it can do something that it's impossible to do. It actually believes that it has done something that it's impossible to do. And then it persuades you that you're the one who did it. And if you buy that, then you're stuck with a straw dog to get rid of, and you're trying to get rid of something that doesn't exist and undo something that never was done. And you're like the kid out in the field walking through the wheat, or whatever is in the field, looking like you're doing something, when you're doing nothing except being a fool.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If the mind CANNOT attack, the ego proceeds perfectly logically to the position that you cannot BE mind.

RAJ: And in this instance I would have capitalized that "m". That you cannot be capital "M" Mind. That you cannot be the Christ. That you cannot be the Singularity that is the Conscious Awareness of Being that is God being the only Presence right where you are. That you cannot be the Christ.

RAJ READING: By not seeing you as you ARE, it can see ITSELF as it WANTS to be. Aware of its weakness...

RAJ: Because I'll tell you something, the ego does know that it is a fallacy, that it is purely imaginary.

RAJ READING: Aware of its weakness the ego wants your allegiance, but not as you really are. The ego therefore wants to engage your mind in its OWN delusional system because otherwise the light of YOUR understanding would dispel it.

RAJ: Okay. The Light of your understanding has been covered over to you, because you have adopted the belief that you're a personal private mind. Not only that, this mind is something that is physical going on in a brain in a skull in a body that's part of an evolutionary process that started with a big bang, and, as I keep saying, had nothing to do with God.

And what am I doing? And what is the Holy Spirit in each of you doing? It is intent upon and is engaged in reminding you that your Mind has a Light because it's not in a brain, and that it is a Singularity which is the Presence of God, and you are the Christ. You are more than you thought you were. You were more than you conceived yourself to be. You are more than you have imagined yourself to be. You are more than the definitions you have given yourselves. And if you hear this enough and if you are willing in the slightest to embrace it as a possibility and you reach out to it by turning toward the Altar and inquiring of it, you will break the isolation.

RAJ READING: The ego therefore wants to engage your mind in its OWN delusional system because otherwise the light of YOUR understanding...

RAJ: Your Real Mind.

RAJ READING: ...would dispel it.

RAJ: That's the power of your Being. The power of your Being is itself the nonexistence of the ego and its delusional system, because the ego and its delusional system are both delusions. They're both nonsense. And you... not any one of you is nonsense. You are valid, valuable Presence of God. And for you to be suffering from a belief that you're anything less is abominable. It's a travesty. And it calls for correction. It calls to be dispelled by the Light of your understanding. Your understanding will be enlarged. The enlargement, the increase of your understanding will be the natural and spontaneous effect or result of practicing gratitude.

You want to have a different kind of week this week? Go on a diet of gratitude. No matter what's going on, find something to be grateful for. No matter what distressing thing is happening or who is being distressing, find something you can be grateful for about that thing or that individual. Do not get locked into a pseudo-singularity of hate, or a pseudo-singularity of a definition of that thing or that person that disallows you from feeling gratitude. You see what I mean?

What I want you to be alert for is any tendency that you have to become single of mind about a lie, single of mind about an illusion. If you hear that so-and-so is ill, in your mind say, "Tain't so." That way you don't get into the singularity of accepting the statement as a fact that's unchallengeable and become a singular attitude that is incapable of healing or changing the status quo. Watch for it. Watch for any tendency to become locked in to a commitment to that which isn't Love. Because the minute you get locked into that commitment, you will begin to be the presence of that which generates the act, the impulse, that brought forth the lie that you're becoming committed to.

When you become committed to the lie, you become committed to increasing the lie. That doesn't mean the lie becomes more than it was, because 10,000 zeros are no greater than one [zero]. But, it does mean that you're unavailable as the Christ That You Are to the rest of the Brotherhood of Christs with the Singularity of Mind that undoes the general ignorance that your Brothers and Sisters have about What They Divinely Are, their Christhood. And you want to be that which is undoing illusion rather than confirming it.

This isn't anything new. This has been known for ages. So it isn't the knowledge that's important. It's the practice. The one thing that hasn't been general knowledge is that you are right now the Christ, that you are right now the Ultimate. You're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you're at that Point and need to understand yourself from there right now, right here. What you didn't know was that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind, and that it's right in the middle of you, and that it's your ally. And its Purpose is to uncover the nonsense that you're believing makes nonsense, to uncover it so that you can see the nonsensicalness of it, because you will never hold on to and value what you recognize as nonsense. And it does this so that you can become unhooked from your addiction to illusion.

What you didn't know was that the world and universe that you thought came from a big bang is the Kingdom of Heaven seen through a glass darkly. And the Kingdom of Heaven is not some place to go to, but to be attentive to right here and right now so that you can bring curiosity to your existence right now which is where it all awaits you. So you know some things that haven't been known down through the centuries.

Now you just need to continue to dare to explore it, investigate it, be open to it, persist in pursuing it further. And you're bound to be successful because that which is doing the search is the Christ, because you haven't stopped being the Christ. And as you begin to realize that it is the Christ in You that's looking, a disintegration of the structures will begin to occur. The ego structures, it is almost as though they will crystallize and break up into thousands of shards, crystals, whatever, and then disappear. They will just collapse and you will make the connection. The Christ that's looking for the Truth About You, which is the Christ, will see the Christ and make the connection, and you will come back into a Singularity. You're bound to succeed because that which is on the search is what is being looked for. It really does exist and it will find itself because it never did successfully get split up. The Singularity hasn't been violated. So you can dare to challenge the status quo, because right now the status quo is a denial of What's Real. But it can't make What's Real not Real. It can't get rid of it.

So what does it mean? It means you've got to abandon your bad habits. Your habit of believing that you know what a thing is, and reconfirming it, and reconfirming it, and keeping yourself in the dark. You've got to get in the habit of challenging the status quo, loving the unlovely, honoring the dishonorable, invalidating sin, sickness and death, and thereby becoming an agent for change. And because you don't have to do it all at once, you don't need to be afraid to begin.

Okay. I look forward to being with you next week and everyone on the Internet as well.

And I hope you're beginning to enjoy what's in this book, because what's in this book is a mirror that points to you and uncovers you to you. And that's got to be a satisfying and enjoyable experience. It needs to be. And that truly is the nature, the atmosphere, the context of waking up, of coming Home.

Okay. I will be with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet as well.

Over the past few weeks I've been using a word rather frequently, "Singularity." Singularity is like a glass of pure water. There's nothing extraneous to the water in it. It's all water. Mind is a Singularity. I will say Consciousness is a Singularity. But the preferable word is "Mind."

Each of you is likely to say that you have a mind, but as long as you use that phrase, you will almost inevitably hinder yourself from waking up. You don't have a mind. You are Mind. You're not a body that has a mind. You are Mind that has the Conscious Experience of body, world, universe. Mind, because it's a Singularity, has no boundaries. It's infinite and it's all-inclusive infinitely. You as Mind are that Awareness of All That Is Infinitely. You share the Perspective of God, because the Mind that is God that is the Movement of Creation is not different from the Singularity called Mind that you are.

At the moment you all know that you're not experiencing All of Creation infinitely at this moment. It's very localized, your experience of consciousness. But I'm telling you that this Mind that you are is infinitely all-inclusive, and all, universally speaking, is available for you to experience in addition to this highly localized awareness that you are limiting yourself to.

So this Infinite Mind isn't something for you to achieve. It's something for you to, I'm going to say, let happen to you. Let happen to you. Let it in. And what does this mean? In order to let in the Experience of Singularity which is an Experience of Wholeness because there's nothing left outside of It, you must in order to have the Experience of Singularity be willing to abandon, for lack of better words, your addiction to conflict. You have to be willing to abandon your commitment to thinking for yourself in inconsistent ways, we'll say, straddling the fence, or trying to embrace two opposing things simultaneously.

I've shared before the prayer that Paul says before each Gathering. "Thy Will, not mine be done. Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in me." Well I've already stated that Mind is a Singularity. There's no alternative to It. It's already a Singularity. So, the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love is already established in you. But the prayer says, "Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life, and Love be established in me." It's a way of saying, "I am willing to stop interposing something in addition to what's already established in me. I'm willing, I'm asking myself to let It be established in me, to let It be the only thing there is in me, because It really is the only thing there is in me."

"Let the rule of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in me..." And what? "...rule out of me all self will." Well, I know you all have ideas about what willfulness is, but willfulness is when you're introducing, is when you are trying to introduce something into the mix on your own. Whether it's a creative idea, whether it's an angry feeling, it's always something original to you. Self will is an expression of something that is original to you that has left God out of the picture entirely. Whether it's a pleasant thing or an unpleasant thing, it's when you are introducing stuff all by yourself. When you are introducing anything on your own, you're not being a co-creator with God. It's that simple.

"Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in me and rule out of me all self will." That expresses an intent to be Singular, which is another way of saying, "Be Whole."

If you have a glass of water that also has some oil in it, or some vinegar in it, or any other substance, there's water and vinegar. There's water and that other substance. And so there are places where there isn't water, and places where there is water. You have more than one thing going on in the same space. And it isn't a whole glass of water.

When something is Singular, it is Whole. It is wholly what it is (w-h-o-l-l-y). When there is an expressed intent and desire on your part to let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love, we'll say, the reign of What Is Real be established in you and rule out your apparent right that you think you have to introduce things on your own all by yourself as an independent authorizer, you are abandoning being an independent authorizer. And in the absence of your bringing something extra into the mix, Wholeness is what is left. Singularity is what is left. And the result of that is the Experience of Singularity, the Experience of the Integrity of Everything, and the way it all fits, and the way it is harmonious.

I did say this, "If thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of Light." Now that's a literal statement, because the Substance of Everything, including your body, is Spirit, which is Love, and Love is Light. And I've said it before and I'll say it again; when your eye becomes single, when your consciousness, we'll say, allows only for Singularity, you will find everything illuminated from within.

The Energy of Spirit that is Love is Light. And the Light has color, and it has colors you haven't dreamed of. And the colors express specific Intent embodied as every single Creation so that you know what a thing is by its color. You know who an Individual is by the colors. And I've said before, this Light that is Living Love, you experience as loving you. You are right now loved by absolutely every object you see, because it ain't matter. I say this over and over to remind you because you easily forget. The habit of treating it as though it's matter, dense solid matter, is very deeply ingrained. And you need to be reminded to be looking for something more than what you're seeing and what you're expecting to see because you're so sure you know what it is.

When the Course speaks of turning toward the Altar, it means doing what that prayer embodies, doing what that prayer expresses, embodying what that prayer expresses. "Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in me." If that's not your desire, then you're not turning toward the Altar. If you're turning toward the Altar, it's because you want to know the Truth. You want to be infilled with the Truth. You don't want to be suffering ignorance any longer. "Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in me as it already is, and rule out of me all self will."

If you think about it, you might come to the conclusion that if you're not going to engage in self will, and if self will is an expression of not being joined with the Father and not listening for His Will, then you probably won't end up talking, or acting, or doing anything that you've been used to doing because you've been doing it all by yourself. What will be left? What will be left will be what counts. What will be left will be you engaging in actions that are truly meaningful, even if they're not the ones you've been engaging in forever. You will be the Presence of Love that will bless everyone and that everyone will feel. And they will be grateful, and they will rejoice that you have abandoned engaging in self will. You won't become inactive, but you will begin doing new things and you will begin being in new ways compared to the old ways. It will constitute a shift.

And of course, the primary shift will be from getting to giving, from acting in your self interest to behaving in a way that embraces, includes, is sensitive to and blesses others. You see, Love is a Singularity, too. And getting isn't Love. Self love isn't Love; selfish love isn't Love. And again, until another is the reason for your giving Love, you won't know how to Love yourself because you won't know Who You Are.

And when you find out What You Are, you will find out that you're not a what. When you find out Who You Are, you will find out that you're not a who, but that you are a What. What I mean by that is that when you're willing to shift into a way of being based on extension, on giving, you find yourself infilled with the Father's Love. And you know what? You find out that you're not a who, but that What You Are is that which is worthy of the Father's Love, that you are the place where the Father comes into expression. You are a vehicle for all that God is Being. And you are also the Mind, the Singular Mind that recognizes that your Function is the recognition and acknowledgement of God in everything. You might say that the What that you are is, I'm going to say, the Function in the Mind of God of recognizing. In other words, God recognizing Himself in everything is What You Are.

When you get up in the morning, what is your expectation? Your expectation needs to be that from the moment you wake up, you're going to be discovering God everywhere. That's called a mind alert to Good, a mind alert to Reality.

On the other hand, when you get up in the morning, is this the day you're gonna get even with so-and-so? Is this the day you're gonna stand up for yourself and tell someone off? You see the difference? Mind you, I'm not talking about how anyone else is behaving. I'm talking about how you're intending to use your mind.

You do something, and somebody says, "You hurt my feelings." And you say, "I am sorry. I didn't intend to." And the question needs to be asked, "But did you intend not to?" A Singular Mind intends not to be the Presence of that which is different from Love. No matter how anyone else is behaving, you can intend not to behave in a way that is unloving, even though being the Presence of Love may mean saying "No" to someone else's behavior.

Okay. Because all there is, is Mind, and Mind is a Singularity, then what you would call the Laws of Being are the Laws of Singularity, and they govern your experience, whether you're conflicted or unified, whether you're disintegrated in the way you're using my mind... your mind or integrated. Therefore, if your mind is Single, Purely Singular, everything you engage in will embody and express Singularity, Harmony, Love. But also, because Mind is a Singularity, if you are choosing to be conflicted, if you are choosing to embrace conflicting feelings, "I love you [said to one person], but I hate you [said to another person],” as though you’re capable of doing both, then, because of the Laws of Singularity, that which is at the heart of the intent will be what is created. And so, if you’re conflicted, the irreversible result will always be division.

Do you see how that’s the same law applying? If you are of a Single Eye, if your Mind is Singular, everything that you do will express Unity, and you might even say that it will unify. But if you choose to be conflicted in your mind, everything you do will find expression in creating division—war, fights, arguments, the attempt to best someone else, to be better than someone else, division.

Why am I spending so much time? Because once again I’m trying to convey to you that now are you the Sons of God, Daughters of God. That you’re neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you’re at that Point and must understand yourself therefrom. Because you’re at that Point, you must begin to see that because you are, there are going to be certain results to your behavior. If you are going to behave as though you are the Son of God and you are at the Point of Perfection, if you choose for that, everything you do will manifest Unity. And because you’re at the Point of Perfection, and the Laws of Singularity are the only thing that exist, if you choose to be conflicted within yourself, then everything that you do, everything that will follow that will embody and seemingly create the effect of division.

So you’re not trying to become a Singular Mind. You’re not trying to become equal to an Awakened Being. You are the Ultimate right now. And it’s a matter... all it is, is a matter of choice as to how you’re going to use your mind. That demystifies the process of Awakening. It also makes clear to you that it isn’t about the future. It’s about the choices you’re making in the moment. And you can either behave as What You Truly Are, or you can behave as what you believe you are right now.

A miracle is a sudden shift of perception from, we’ll say, conflicted thinking to Singular Mind. This week go through your day and ask yourself whether you intend not to do anything that will hurt someone’s feelings, whether you intend not to do anything that is unloving, understanding that being the Presence of Love does mean saying “No” when inappropriate behavior is going on. I add that so that you don’t think that you’re suddenly going to become vulnerable to anyone’s behavior because you’re going to be the Presence of Love and not be bothered by it. I’m not saying that. That’s not Love.

Okay, let’s go to the book.

RAJ READING: The ego wants no part of truth because the truth is that the EGO is not true.

RAJ: It not only is not True, it's not Real. It exists only as a figment of the imagination, which you've chosen to believe is the truth and which you're honoring at the present.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If truth is total the untrue CANNOT exist.

RAJ: "Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in me, and rule out of me all self will." It really means to rule out of me that which doesn't really exist. Self will does not exist. Important point. Write it down. Self will does not exist. You have made it up, and you act as though what you have made up is true.

Again.

RAJ READING: If truth is total the untrue CANNOT exist. Commitment to either must be TOTAL, since they cannot coexist in your minds WITHOUT splitting them.

RAJ: Meaning your minds.

RAJ READING: If they cannot coexist in peace, and if you WANT peace, you must give up the idea of conflict ENTIRELY and for ALL TIME.

RAJ: Well, that sounds like a pretty big order. You don't have to try to do it for all time. All you have to try to do is be unconflicted in the moment you're in. Do I intend not to express something other than Love? Keep asking all through the day. See that your intent to be the Presence of Love, see that it means that you intend not to be the absence of Love. And just do it for now, because that's how you promote a shift of perception in practical, embodied ways.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: While you believe that two totally contradictory thought systems SHARE truth, your need for vigilance is apparent.

RAJ: "I know that I am the Presence of Love, but boy, George Bush sure gets my goat." You say things like that and you don't even question the logic of what you're saying is so obvious to you. But what you are overlooking is the use you are putting your mind to. You are saying that it is possible for you to be Love and yet not be Love at the same time. It doesn't matter whether you're talking about George Bush, or your wife, or the nasty next door neighbor. It doesn't matter what the subject of it is. It matters that you are overlooking the fact that you're trying to use your mind in oppositional ways—being Love and being hate, simultaneously, without noticing it or questioning it. And when you don't question it, when you don't notice it, you're not being the Singularity of Mind that You Really Are. And in that act of forgetting, you lose your Singularity, as well as the Experience of your True Identity.

So, again.

RAJ READING: While you believe that two totally contradictory thought systems SHARE truth, your need for vigilance is apparent.

RAJ: Not vigilance against George Bush, but vigilance against your unchallenged attempt to be conflicted, without remembering that conflict is absolutely impossible to you because of What You Really Are. The conflict and that use of your mind is insane. It is unintelligent. It is unreasonable.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your minds ARE dividing their allegiance between two kingdoms, and you are totally committed to neither.

RAJ: Now...

RAJ READING: Your identification with the Kingdom is totally beyond question except by you, when you are thinking insanely. What you are...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: What you are is not established by your perception, and is not influenced BY it at all.

RAJ: Now you can have millions of different perceptions of things, but it doesn't change the thing. "Rule out of me all self will." Rule out of me all perceptions that aren't true, so that I might experience what is established separate and apart from my perceptions, so that I might experience Truth, and so that I might be Singular Mind.

Again, this is important.

RAJ READING: What you are...

RAJ: And I'm going to add: And what everything else is.

RAJ READING: ...is not established by your perception, and is not influenced BY it at all. All perceived problems in identification at any level are NOT problems of fact. They are problems of UNDERSTANDING, since they MEAN that you believe what you can understand IS up to you to decide. The ego believes this totally, being FULLY committed to it.

RAJ: Perhaps one of the most difficult aspects of awakening is that you have to ask God what it is you're supposed to understand, and you have to ask God what the understanding is, without trying to figure it out for yourself, or without making up an understanding of it by yourself. You have to be willing to abandon, for instance, your allegiance to time, so that you might be in the Flow of Creation, honoring It and rejoicing in It and reveling in It, and being surprised by It on Its terms. Thy Will, not mine, be done. That's the stickler, at least for the ego.

I'm going to go back.

RAJ READING: All perceived problems in identification at any level are NOT problems of fact. They are problems of UNDERSTANDING, since they MEAN that you believe what you can understand IS up to you to decide. The ego believes this totally, being FULLY committed to it. It is not true. The ego therefore is totally committed to untruth, perceiving in total contradiction to the Holy Spirit and to the knowledge of God.

RAJ: Now, of course, it's going to perceive in total contradiction to the Holy Spirit because this imagined ego states that there is something going on besides the Singularity that is God. So it says there's something else in the water—vinegar—or, let's say something more pleasant—honey. It says that the Singularity is divided, therefore it's going to perceive everything in total contradiction to the Truth, because the Truth of everything is Singularity. It can't see any other way. That which arose out of an imagined postulate of division is going to see division, be division, elicit division, and try to manifest division.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You can be perceived with meaning ONLY by the Holy Spirit because your being IS the knowledge of God.

RAJ: Let's make this even more relevant. Your Being is the Acknowledgement of God. Your Function is the Recognition and Acknowledgement of God in each and every thing. Your Function is to be the awareness of What God Is Being. It is your Function to be that which glorifies God by seeing nothing else anywhere.

The book says:

RAJ READING: ...your being IS the knowledge of God.

RAJ: Well if you are recognizing, delighting in, recognizing and glorifying God, then you are the Knowledge of God.

RAJ READING: Any belief that you accept which is apart from this will obscure God's Voice in you, and will therefore obscure God TO you.

RAJ: Why will it obscure it? Because you're giving preference to an imagination. You're giving preference to a daydream. You're giving preference to a figment of your imagination. Your wrongly placed attention is obscuring God from you. It is also nullifying your Function, because you've abandoned it temporarily to indulge in the satisfaction of having a particularly original viewpoint about Creation, because you're choosing for a supposedly satisfying expression of self will.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Unless you perceive His creation truly you cannot know the Creator, since God and His creation are not separate. The Oneness of the Creator and the creation is your wholeness, your sanity, and your limitless power. This limitless power is God's gift to you because it is what you ARE.

RAJ: Again, you don't have a mind; you are Mind. Mind is a Singularity. It's Whole. It's Infinite. So there is only one, and that One is God. The Mind of God is the Mind you are experiencing. But as long as you're intent upon having an experience of your own that you're making up, you will not have available to you the Sanity of the Experience of your Unity with God.

Again.

RAJ READING: This limitless power is God's gift to you because it is what you ARE. If you dissociate your mind from it, you are perceiving the most powerful force in the universe as if it were weak because you do not believe YOU are part of it.

RAJ: Well not only do you consider it weak, some of you consider that it doesn't exist. There is no God. There's just us mortals doing the best we can to survive and maybe improve things a little bit for our children who are also nothing more than a product of our bodies, purely material, with a brain. And they will have minds of their own, and hopefully we will have improved things so that they have a head start further along than we did, and can do better than we did. You see?

RAJ READING: If you dissociate your mind from it, you are perceiving the most powerful force in the universe as if it were weak because you do not believe YOU are part of it.

Perceived WITHOUT your part in it God's creation IS perceived as weak, and those who see themselves as weakened...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...DO attack. The attack must be blind, however, because there is nothing TO attack. Therefore, they make up images, perceive them as unworthy,...

RAJ: Of course. You see, the whole result of this mindset is division. It's not going to characterize anything as helpful. And so:

RAJ READING: Therefore, they make up images, perceive them as unworthy, and attack them for their unworthiness. That is all the world of the ego is. NOTHING. It has no meaning. It does not exist. Do not try to understand it because, if you do, you are believing that it can BE understood, and is therefore capable of being appreciated and loved. That would justify it, and it cannot BE justified. You cannot make the meaningless meaningful. This can ONLY be an insane attempt.

RAJ: So, you know what? We, in a way, are talking about the forms of insanity that are being employed. But remember that it's not so that you can understand insanity, but so that you can see that it is insane, so that you can see that it doesn't hold up in the Light of Truth, so that you can see that it's not True about you, so that you can see that your definition of the world is not True about Creation. And as you begin to be willing to question the way you're seeing things, you will open the door for genuine curiosity to come into play to see things as they truly are according to God's Understanding of everything.

Which brings us back to that powerful word "Yield." Doesn't sound like power does it? You can't yield, you know, you can't wield yielding. Yielding is to your mindset, passive. It's not doing anything yourself. But it's a powerful word because it cuts through the dream. It cuts through the illusion. It cuts through the suffering, the sin, the disease, the death. It triggers miracles. It triggers sudden shifts of perception whereby you come back, step by step perhaps, into your Right Mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Allowing insanity to enter your minds means that you have not judged sanity as WHOLLY DESIRABLE.

RAJ: I know at one time or another, every single one of you have said, "If I were to yield to God's Will completely right now, I wouldn't fit in anymore. No one would understand me. I would be ostracized. I would run into difficulties. And therefore, it's not worth it to me!" So you have not judged Sanity as wholly desirable. Off the top of your head you would say, "Well, of course, I judge Sanity as wholly desirable, just don't tell me the details of what that means."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you WANT something else you will MAKE something else, but because it IS something else it will attack your thought system and divide your allegiance.

RAJ: If you want something else but God's Will, if you want something else but Truth, you will make something up. Now, when you make something up, the first thing you're going to have to make-up is some presence to make it up, and that's called the ego. And now we don't have pure water anymore. We don't have pure God anymore. We have God and this little speck of nothing that thinks it's something, that's trying to assert itself. And the result, whatever proceeds from that action, will attack your thought system, meaning the thought system of the Christ That You Are, and divide your allegiance. Division is the inevitable result of an intent that is conflicted.

RAJ READING: You cannot create in this divided state, and you must be vigilant AGAINST this divided state because only peace can BE extended.

RAJ: You can only give What Is Whole. Division cannot be extended. But division practiced in your mind will keep you from experiencing your Wholeness and the Wholeness of the Infinitude of your Being that is All of Creation.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your divided minds are blocking the extension of the Kingdom,...

RAJ: Why? Because they're creating division.

RAJ READING: Your divided minds are blocking the extension of the Kingdom, and its extension IS your joy.

RAJ: It's your Function. It's your Nature. It's you being in your Right Mind. And I'll tell you, it feels good. It's your Joy.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If you do not extend the Kingdom, you are not thinking with your Creator and creating as He created.

RAJ: In other words, the Singularity of you isn't finding expression where Light begets Light, and the Light that is begotten is harmonious, because it is arisen out of a consciously Singular Experience of Mind, of being Conscious Awareness.

RAJ READING: In this depressing state the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...reminds you gently that you are sad...

RAJ: It doesn't gloss it over. It says you're sad. It makes you look at the fact that you're sad. It makes you acknowledge that you're not really happy, even though in your giddiness you bubbled over with apparent happiness and fooled even yourself a little bit. It says, it reminds you gently that you are sad. Why? So that you can see that there's a call for correction that you haven't been paying attention to in the intoxication of your false sense of happiness.

RAJ READING: In this depressing state the Holy Spirit reminds you gently that you are sad because you are not fulfilling your function as co-creators with God, and are therefore depriving yourselves of joy. This is not God's Will, but YOURS. If your will is out of accord with God's, you are willing without meaning. Yet because God's Will is unchangeable, no REAL conflict of will is possible.

RAJ: You see, the expression of willfulness by that which doesn't exist does not create conflict between that expression of will and God's Will. The expression of willfulness by that which doesn't exist is not an expression of will at all. Nothing's happened. So nothing has happened that's at odds with God. You just think you're having this life where you're determining your lives by the conscious use of your will. But isn't it interesting that as you realize that you haven't been accomplishing anything, you haven't been doing anything Real, there's still this whole world and there's still all of you. Creation is untouched by it. But you're not seeing it as it is. That's all. You're just not seeing it as it is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is the Holy Spirit's perfectly consistent teaching.

RAJ: Teaching? Teaching you, teaching you that you're not accomplishing what you thought you were, because you're not what you thought you were. But you are Something. And that Something is Real. And that Something is the Christ. And that Something is Mind which already is a Singularity that doesn't have to become more pure. And it teaches you this so that you might begin to embrace this picture of yourself, because initially it's a picture that has to be given to you so that you might embrace this picture, and your old pictures which didn't represent the Truth might begin to crumble and lose your attention.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Creation, NOT separation, is your will BECAUSE it is God's, and nothing that opposes this means anything at all. Being a perfect accomplishment, the Sonship can only accomplish perfectly...

RAJ: There's the Singularity again. That which begets, begets that which embodies it.

RAJ READING: Being a perfect accomplishment, the Sonship can only accomplish perfectly, extending the joy in which it was created, and identifying itself with both its Creator and its creations, KNOWING they are One.

RAJ: This section is entitled, "From Vigilance to Peace." The section before was about vigilance. We're talking about a movement. We're describing the fact that vigilance is necessary because you are using your mind in extremely sloppy ways. Ways that allow conflict to be embraced side by side without recognizing that such a thing is absolutely impossible. And you are letting them exist side by side without challenging them and without making a choice, so that you are not believing Truth and error simultaneously.

This section we've been reading about is describing the fact that although vigilance is the starting point, it's not the ending point. Life is not about vigilance. And there will be a movement from vigilance to Peace. But you won't be able to move to the Peace until you begin to recognize that you're at the Point of Perfection and that you must understand yourself therefrom. That Mind is and can only be a Singularity—meaning without any impurities no matter how infinitesimal in it, no impurities of ignorant thinking.

No impurities of the sort that says, "I'm sorry if I hurt your feelings. I didn't intend to." You see? Did you intend not to? Because if you intended not to hurt someone's feelings, the occasion for the hurt feelings wouldn't have occurred, because there was a Singularity of Intent to be the Expression of Love, and a Singularity of Intent to not, not be the Presence of Love.

Now, we're reading about this movement that involves the recognition for the need for vigilance, and then we're moving on because you can read faster than you learn, and we're reading about graduating from vigilance to Peace.

Well, I'm never wasting my breath, but don't make me waste my breath by just learning the ideas that we're reading about. What we're reading about is embodying the Truth in involvement, in the way you behave with each other, and the fact that the premise from which you behave toward each other will have absolute results that are completely consistent with the Truth of Being.

If you are being out from the Singularity that Mind is, everything you do will express Unity and will unify. If you choose to come from a conflicted place, if you come from a frame of mind in which opposites can be held, believed and practiced simultaneously, then everything that follows will elicit, embody, and bring forth the effects of division. The Laws of Singularity work both ways. The only difference is that when you are willing to be conflicted within yourself and be from that divided context, what results isn't real, because your perceptions don't make your perceptions real. Your perceptions can never be actualized. And so it's all a waste of time even though you all do it so well. The point is that you're doing it with the only Mind there is, and all of What Is Real about that Mind is totally present right now as your Mind, because it hasn't stopped being a Singularity.

To sum up what I'm meaning to convey, Awakening isn't a process of getting better. It isn't a process of improvement. It is a process of learning to discern, for lack of better words, whether you're intending not to be loving, whether you're intending not to be Singular, whether you just love the thrill of the conflict. It's a choice. It's a simple choice. None of this is complicated. This book is a long book. It's filled with words. But it doesn't mean that what it's talking about is complicated. It simply goes through and uncovers just about every crazy thing you do so that you might look at it objectively and say, "Wow, that doesn't make sense, does it?"

I wish to see the Evidence of Love. I wish to be the Evidence of Love. I intend not to see the opposite of Love. I intend not to expect to see the opposite of Love. I intend not to be the absence of Love.

Does any of you think I don't love you? Does anyone think Paul doesn't love you? Nobody will think you don't love them if you're willing to let every Conscious Experience you have be the Conscious Awareness of God and the Conscious Awareness of God's Point of View, God's Perspective, God's Understanding about What Everything Is.

I look forward to being with you next week. I love you all.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Two prayers: I wish to see only the Evidence of Love. And: I wish to only be the Evidence of Love.

It's not just a wonderful intent. It is a substantial desire. I mean by that a desire that has substance to it, because it lifts you out of your habitual processes, the habits that keep you blinded to the Evidence of Love and keep you distracted from being the Evidence of Love which it's your Nature and Function to be.

How many of you succeeded this past week in the practice of wishing not to be the evidence of the absence of Love? The intent not to hurt another's feelings or not to be the presence of jealousy or hate or distress, you know, broadcast for everyone to hear. Paul will be glad to tell you that he was lousy at it this last week. What is it? What is it that can distract you so easily from a wholesome intent to see the Evidence of Love and to be the Evidence of Love? It's really easy. The answer is habit.

What is a habit? It's a response that is second nature to you. That's why it's a habit. It's second nature. Of course, first nature is to be the Presence of Love. A habit is second nature. And so you have the intent to be the Evidence of Love, and you're being loving and someone responds to you in a surprisingly awful way. That in itself can't be bothersome. But, the ego says, "Wow! They didn't grasp where I was coming from. Uh oh. We're in a state of lack of communication. They're not seeing me at all. Obviously they're not even paying attention, even though they're right here in front of me, and they heard what I said, and they should have felt what I was feeling. So, not only is there no communication, this person is actively ignoring me and that makes me feel left out. That makes me feel excluded from them, even though our being together implies that we are together, even though the fact that we're talking implies that there is communication.

But that person has an agenda of their own, and their agenda is not to hear me. Their agenda is for me to hear them. There's no respect for me. You know what? It's not worth it to be the Presence of Love. It's worth it to me to feel how badly I feel, and to mull it over and stew about it—the injustice of it."

Paul did this practically every day even though each morning he got up and tried to start out fresh. And so to be the Evidence of Love went way on the back burner. Self-protection, self-assertion, and the attempt to be recognized because he deserves to be recognized came up on the front burner. This is the way it happens with everyone. No one becomes defensive unless they feel hurt. If they feel hurt, they feel something has been taken away from them. And they believe their belief! You believe your beliefs. And then you begin to act from there—defended, separate. And you move into varying degrees of attack, varying degrees of expressing distress toward the source of the distress, and the attempt to change that one. And the experience is a miserable experience.

Now mind you, last week we talked about the fact that you think nothing of believing that you have a capacity to embrace and embody opposing thoughts at the same time, opposing intents at the same time. And you don't even question it. It's impossible, but you don't question it.

Paul felt hurt. [in a funny, whiny voice] You all feel hurt. And you think the hurt is genuine, and you respond on the basis of that ignorance. You forget that you have a choice. You forget that all you have to do is sit down and meditate so that you can discover that your Peace is available to you regardless of what you've been thinking, and regardless of what anyone else has done. The state of misery is not a fact. It's like your lap. It's an arrangement of your body that disappears when you stand up. Your lap is not a fact like your arm is. Your hurt is the result of an arrangement of conflicting ideas, of conflicting beliefs, that aren't facts. The moment you sit down and do a meditation and you get into your Peace, you find that the misery is gone. Why? Because you abandoned the arrangement of beliefs and concepts that you were holding on to that said, "That person can do something that can deprive me of my Peace. And they did it and I don't have my Peace! And it's their fault! And I'm stuck until I win this battle with them." You see, it 'tain't so. It's just an arrangement of ideas and concepts that have no actual... well, it is a configuration that isn't actual—purely imaginary.

The result of believing that someone else can and has taken something of yours away from you is pure insanity. It can't be done. And you need to be vigilant about the way you're using your mind, so that you don't accept an idea that has no basis in fact and treat it as though it does, and lose sight of the fact that no matter what they've done or said, you're still as Whole as God made you. You are still Mind, Singular Mind that has not been divided up, and therefore is totally intact. And because it's intact, not one part of it has disappeared, or been taken away. So this other one hasn't taken anything away from you at all.

You've abandoned the Conscious Experience of your Wholeness in favor of the pleasure of a state of reaction, while at the same time claiming that your reaction is justified, your hateful reaction is justified because you're such a loving person and they don't see it. Do you see what I'm saying? Do you see the inconsistency? But you believe it! You all believe it. Why? Because the arrangement of beliefs, the arrangement of concepts that you're employing have become a habit. And you slip back into the habit because more persistence is needed in abandoning it for the Truth.

Now I said, "Ye shall know the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free." If you're not careful, you might think that I'm saying, "You, whoever you think you are at the moment, whatever ego you are at the moment, if you will know the Truth, the Truth will make you free of all these other egos!" Ha ha! [laughing delightedly] No. The Truth is not an idea to be applied to the human condition. The Truth is not a tool to be applied to circumstances. Truth is when the light bulb goes on. Truth, the realization of Truth is when you say, "Oh, I see what he means!" Now you're knowing the Truth. And at that very moment, you have ceased to be subject to the lie about which the Truth isn't Truth. There's nothing left to apply the Truth to.

So don't think as we go through the Course that you're learning about Truth so that you may bring it to bear upon the human condition. You're reading the Course because it is put together in such a way by the Holy Spirit that it will trigger release from the habits, the particular configurations of beliefs that hold you bondage, by triggering an "Aha!" that undoes the configuration, that in effect causes you to stand up and see, "Oh! My goodness! My lap isn't permanent! In fact, it's only something that can be called a lap if I sit down. It isn't a thing at all." You see?

When you say, "I wish to be the Evidence of Love," you are saying, "I wish to have the Experience of Love that the Father is blessing me with constantly, so that I might extend it to my Brother or Sister, no matter how beautifully or awkwardly they are behaving." If you're saying, "I wish to be the Evidence of Love," you're saying, "I wish to be a healer. I wish to be the Presence of that which doesn't believe everything that my conditioned thinking tells me is going on. I wish instead to see beyond it with the Father's Eyes. I wish to see What Is Really There." That is an Act of Love—that wish, that desire.

A healer always looks beyond appearances, or beneath appearances, or behind appearances, to that which has to be really there in order for there to appear to be a costume covering it up. To be a healer, you don't give recognition or acceptance to the costume at all.

Well, that doesn't seem to be justifiable once you've been hurt, once they've hurt you. But the fact is it's hard to do when you have determined that they have succeeded in taking something away from you that they couldn't possibly have taken away, because there's nothing that can cause you at any moment to be less than Whole. Their behavior may need improvement. But no matter what their behavior is, they can't take anything away from you.

The reason you want to be a healer is because it causes you to begin to fulfill your Function. It causes you to move into a frame of mind that honors What Is True about you. The Love of the Father which gets extended to a Brother because you have desired to Love your Brother, blesses you, because it keeps you from being successfully distracted into confused thinking and actions based on confusion that will do nothing but keep you in the dark.

Whether healing occurs in every instant of your day or not as a result of this, don't abandon your intent to see the Truth. Don't abandon the intent to be the Evidence of Love in your world that blesses your world, because correction or healing is needed. If you want to feel good, then you must insist upon and persist in extending Love, the intent to extend Love, the intent to see behind the masks. And until anyone is awake, they're presenting a mask at all times.

Isn't that wonderful? It gives you constant opportunity to fulfill your Function and thereby remember not who you are, but WHAT You Are. And in remembering What You Are, you become disillusioned, free of illusions. You come back into your Right Mind and you lessen the density of the camaraderie of the dreamers by withdrawing from the group.

Vigilance and diligence are the key words here. You must be vigilant not to be the evidence of the absence of Love. And you must be diligent in your intent to be the Evidence of Love. You must be persistent in wishing to see only the Evidence of Love, because the Evidence of Love is behind every mask and underneath every costume, even the ones you're wearing. You see, I'm not talking to any of your costumes or any of your masks. I'm talking to You, the Real One that's there. And this is healing. And this is transformational. Whether you continue to come here and sit with blank stares, or twinkles of "Aha's," I persist. And you, all of you, along with Paul have the opportunity to embrace this natural activity so that the joy of experiencing the Father's Love loving you as it gets extended to your Brother, secures in you greater commitment to wishing to see only the Evidence of Love and wishing to be only the Evidence of Love.

Let's go to the book.

Remember I didn't say any of this would be easy. The Truth is simple, but the breaking of well-established habits isn't easy. This is why vigilance is necessary. This is why being conscious and not just floating through your day is so essential. To be drowsy and lazy in your mind is not a characteristic of Mind. The Characteristic of Mind is attentiveness, being fully attentive to All of Creation, to all that is included in Mind, which is All of Creation Itself. So, as I've said before, just because you might not find it easy is no justification for abandoning the nurturing of your Divine Birthright, the nurturing of capacities that are fully present in you at this very moment, that are not stunted, that are not weak, that are not shriveled up. They are fully present, fully functional, whenever you choose to employ them. And another way of saying that is whenever you choose to value the Experience of Singularity and not try to employ conflict as the means for coping with life. Conflicted ideas in your mind held simultaneously and acted upon as though they could be acted upon.

Okay. Let's start in the book. And the heading here in the Course as it was finished by Bill Thetford is:

RAJ READING: The Total Commitment

RAJ: Total commitment, that's moving into the Singularity. Without any conflict, without anything extraneous. The Wholeness of being Conscious.

RAJ READING: Whenever you deny a blessing to a brother YOU will feel deprived.

RAJ: I think by now everyone of you should be pretty clear on why. Your Function is to be the Presence of Love. Your Function is to be the place where the Extension of Love occurs and if you withhold it, you are denying your Function. You are blocking your Function and that will never be comfortable.

RAJ READING: Whenever you deny a blessing to a brother YOU will feel deprived. This is because denial is as total as love.

RAJ: Understand that because Mind is a Singularity, whether you try to be it in a conflicted, nonsingular way, because it is a Singularity, everything it does is wholly committed to what it's doing. And so, if you are choosing to be conflicted within yourself and determine everything about your world on the basis of that conflict, you will do that with total commitment because Mind cannot be polarized. It can't be divided into positive and negative. So you will be positively good, or you will be positively bad. You see? Because there is no way for there to be a mixture of the two. So denial is as total as Love. We could say hate is as total as Love. Anger is as total as Love. Dishonesty is as total as Love. Because whatever you are intent upon, all of the power of Singularity will be embodied in it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is as impossible to deny part of the Sonship as it is to love it in part. Nor is it possible to love it totally AT TIMES.

RAJ: Nor is it possible to love it totally at times.

RAJ READING: You cannot be TOTALLY committed SOMETIMES. Remember a very early lesson;—“Never underestimate the power of denial.” It has no power in itself, but you can give it the power of YOUR mind, whose power is without limit of any kind.

RAJ: Now, you must remember here that this is referring to the Christ That You Are, that you've never stopped being, even though you deny it. Your mind is, like we said last week, the only Mind there is. Mind is a Singularity. There is only One; that Mind is God; that Mind is gifted by God to every single part of His Creations; that Mind is the One Conscious Experience of Being Conscious that you are experiencing. It's the Christ-Mind because it's the Mind of God.

So denial...

RAJ READING: ...has no power in itself, but you can give it the power of YOUR mind,...

RAJ: The Christ That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...you can give it the power of YOUR mind,...

RAJ: And I might add, foolishly, of course.

RAJ READING: ...whose power is without limit of any kind. If you use it to deny reality, reality IS gone for you. REALITY CANNOT BE PARTLY APPRECIATED.

Again.

RAJ READING: REALITY CANNOT BE PARTLY APPRECIATED. That is why denying any part of it means you have lost awareness of ALL of it.

RAJ: If you get up in the morning and you say, "Boy, yesterday so-and-so was a real bastard and really wrecked up my day," well, as you get up and move into your day with that thought and that context, it won't be just so-and-so who is colored by your distress. It's going to be that the milk is not cold enough in your bowl of Cheerios. It's gonna be all the lousy drivers on the freeway. It's gonna be the circumstances that got you to work seconds before you would be late. It is going to color everything, because you really can't be a divided Experience of Consciousness. Mind you, this isn't because there's anything going on in Creation, or the world, that is true justification for your misery. But when you employ misery relative to one part of Creation, it will spread to every part of your Conscious Experience. Why? Because Mind is a Singularity.

You used to think of your Real Mind and the ego as though they were two different minds. Stop. Let go of that concept. The only difference between your Right Mind and the ego is the difference in the use you're putting your one and only Mind to use. You're either putting it to good use, or bad use, but there's only one Mind. I point this out to you so that you might understand that the ego is not a mind claiming to be your mind that you must escape from, and which you might not have a very good chance of escaping from because "Oh, it's a defense mechanism, and it is very excellent at what it does. And so it is going to be a struggle." No. It's a matter of choice between using the one Singular Mind that there is well, instead of poorly. It means taking responsibility for how you're using your Mind and being conscious enough not to slip into the sloppy habit of trying to be loving and angry at the same time.

"I'm a loving person who has a right to be angry. I'm a loving person who has a right to be pissed off at you. And boy am I pissed off at you! Now Susie Q over here, I love her. [kissing sound] Mmm. She's a sweetheart. But you, you're a bastard! I hate you!" And you have that all in one sentence. And you think you're feeling those things simultaneously, and it's impossible. And you don't recognize it, and you don't challenge it. And as a result, you block the Extension of Love that it is the Function of your Being to be, and you feel miserable. Loving little Susie Q doesn't really make ya feel good; it's just a nice contrast to how much you hate so-and-so. And it doesn't move you out of misery.

[Said to Susan, Paul's wife] Susan, I'm making no reference to you [slight audience amusement] when I say "Susie Q."

Continuing or repeating.

RAJ READING: REALITY CANNOT BE PARTLY APPRECIATED. That is why denying any part of it means you have lost awareness of ALL of it.

RAJ: You see, Paul isn't so different from all of you, and he thinks that he can be conscious of Reality partly, even if he's distressed. But the fact is that whatever consciousness there is of Reality that he thinks he has, is still under the shadow and gloom of the misery he's experiencing because he thinks he's been hurt. He thinks something has been successfully taken away from him that couldn't possibly have been taken away from him. And so, if you deny any part of it, you have lost awareness of all of it in its True Light.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: That is the negative side of the law, as it operates in this world. Yet denial is a defense, and so it is as capable of being used positively as it is of being used destructively.

RAJ: In other words, denial can be used on behalf of unifying, just as it can be used on behalf of dividing, of disintegrating. Don't look for that in the book. I'm saying that.

RAJ READING: Used negatively it WILL be destructive because it will be used for attack,...

RAJ: Another word for "attack" is "defense." When you are being defensive, you are engaging in attack against that which you are defending yourself.

RAJ READING: Used negatively it WILL be destructive because it will be used for attack, but in the service of the Holy Spirit, the law requires you to recognize only PART of reality to appreciate ALL of it.

RAJ: Well, let's bring that down to earth here. You come up to a friend, a neighbor, an associate, a boss, whoever, and as I said, unless they're awake, they're in a costume and presenting a mask. Denial is, positively speaking, your instant recognition that the mask and the costume aren't the individual. And you choose not to honor the mask or the costume, but to acknowledge the individual. You see, now you have denied the presentation, the costume, whatever means that one is using to defend himself or herself, because he or she, like you, knows that in the separated and alone state of mind that he or she is in, everything calls for defense. Because vulnerability is the bottom line of that experience. That person doesn't necessarily know that, but that one experiences it as though it's real. And that's why they employ a mask, and that's why they employ a costume, just as with you.

True denial is your unwillingness to respond to the costume or the mask, and to insist upon recognizing that there is Something Divinely Real behind and underneath the mask and costume, and that's the only thing you're willing to communicate with, to be present with, to witness for. That is the positive use of denial.

So, again.

RAJ READING: Used negatively it WILL be destructive...

RAJ: Or divisive.

RAJ READING: ...because it will be used for attack, but in the service of the Holy Spirit, the law requires you to recognize only PART of reality...

RAJ: The part behind the mask of that individual, or another individual. Not all of the Brotherhood. And...

RAJ READING: ... the law requires you to recognize only PART of reality to appreciate ALL of it. Mind...

RAJ: Your Mind. The Mind of the Christ That You Are.

RAJ READING: ...is too powerful to be subject to exclusion.

RAJ: And likewise Mind, the Mind that your Brother is, is too powerful to be subject to exclusion.

RAJ READING: You will NEVER be able to exclude yourself from what you project.

When a brother acts insanely,...

RAJ: And your Brothers will, and so will you until you're awake, but less and less.

RAJ READING: When a brother acts insanely, he is offering you an opportunity to bless him.

RAJ: Well, this week Paul wasn't interested in blessing anyone. After all, he believed he had actually been hurt, actually been deprived of something. Some part of him had been taken away by being ignored. Such insanity.

RAJ READING: When a brother acts insanely, he is offering you an opportunity to bless him. His need is YOURS. You NEED the blessing you can offer him.

RAJ: That doesn't mean you have the same problem he has. It means that since your Function is to be the Extension of Love that the Father Is Being through you, because that is your Function, you need to be engaging it. And he needs, your Brother needs the blessing. You need the blessing of fulfilling your Function and knowing that you are. Not knowing in your head, but experiencing the fact that you are and feeling the Integrity of You.

RAJ READING: You NEED the blessing you can offer him. There is no way for you to have it EXCEPT by giving it.

RAJ: Write this down and put it on your refrigerator.

RAJ READING: There is no way for you to have it...

RAJ: The blessing.

RAJ READING: ...EXCEPT by giving it. This is the law of God, and it has NO exceptions.

RAJ: In other words, this is the Way Being Works. That's what is so simple about all of this.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: What you deny you LACK, not because it IS lacking, but because you have denied it in another, and are therefore not aware of it in YOU.

RAJ: You've denied it in another. You've denied it in another by being unwilling to extend the Love that it's your Function to be extending. So you have denied it in another, but by virtue of not extending it, you've denied it to yourself. So, you see, this has nothing to do with whether or not another is worthy of your Love. It has nothing to do with what he seems to have done to you, or not to have done to you. It has nothing to do with whether he knows more or less than you, or you are in a worse position than him. It has nothing to do with all of these configurations of conflicting ideas that you've put together and are believing. It has to do with the fact that it's your Function to extend Love. And you won't experience being Loved until you extend it.

And that one will not experience it until someone is willing to extend it, and thereby not respond to the costume and the mask, and thereby provide an environment in which that one can more easily say, "Well, maybe I don't need this costume and this mask. Maybe I don't need this defense." He deserves the blessing because of Who He Is, or She Is, underneath the mask and the costume. And you deserve the blessing, because it's your Function to be in receipt of it because you are extending it. This is what brings you back into your Right Mind, and this is what brings you back into the True Experience of Reality.

Now, continuing.

RAJ READING: Every response you make is determined by what you THINK you are, and what you WANT to be IS what you think you are.

RAJ: It's simple. Whatever you're being right now, whatever way you're being, however you are identifying yourself right now, however you are conceiving of who and what you are right now, it is exactly what you want.

And if you are a person who is always a victim, if you are a person who can always find a parking space right in front of the place you're going, if you are a person who has generally happy relationships, or if you are a person who has generally frustrating relationships, it's because this is what you want. Because you don't do what you don't want. And if you're getting what you don't want, you have to be willing to look at the configuration of beliefs that you're valuing and holding onto.

"Oh, you know, [sighing] I'm in such a self-defeating situation. I'm on welfare, but welfare is set up so that it's almost impossible to get off of welfare, because once you start making money they decrease your welfare, and that isn't enough to keep you going. And to hell with it, I'm just gonna stay on welfare." Now there's a string of ideas, held in a context that you find valuable.

You would say, "I don't want this misery," but you won't let go of the ideas that continue to reinforce it. You are experiencing exactly what you want, and you are what you are currently defining yourself as. And until you want something different, you will have this, because you want it. Admittedly, you want it for crazy reasons, for inconsistent, illogical and conflicted reasons. But nevertheless, you have justifications right down to the dots on the "i's" and the crosses on the "t's."

Oh, I know this is insulting to your egos, but it is empowering to the Christ That You Are, because it tells you that you hold the key. In a way you hold the power—the power of decision, the power of vigilance, to choose once again in a new way and to use denial constructively by saying, 'This is inconsistent. This does not make sense. And I refuse to validate it because the Truth is I am the beloved Son, or Daughter, of God from whom He has withheld nothing. Therefore, nothing has been taken away from me. And I am not at a disadvantage, even though at the moment I cannot see where the advantage is. But I'm not going to continue to validate the justifications I have been using for staying at a disadvantage.'

Again.

RAJ READING: Every response you make is determined by what you THINK you are, and what you WANT to be IS what you think you are.

RAJ: At least for the time being. You can want to be something else.

RAJ READING: Therefore, what you want to be determines every response you make.

RAJ: Paul wanted to be miserable last week, and it governed every response he made. Just ask Susan. And he's no different from you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You do not need God's blessing,...

RAJ: You do not need God's blessing.

RAJ READING: ...since that you have forever, but you DO need YOURS.

RAJ: Again, as I said last week, "Let the reign of Divine Truth, Life and Love be established in me." That's your prayer. That's your prayer made to yourself. You are saying, "I want to let the Truth to be established in me. I am willing to let it be established in me because it already is established in me." That's you blessing yourself.

RAJ READING: You do not need God's blessing, since that you have forever, but you DO need YOURS. The picture you see of yourselves is deprived, unloving and very vulnerable.

RAJ: "No," somebody says, "oh no, it isn't. It's not all that bad." Well, as someone said earlier today, "Well everybody's gonna die!" Well, I'm sorry, but that's a deprived, unloving, and vulnerable idea that isn't true and needs to be rejected outright, instead of rehearsed and put into the air as though it's a fact. "Well everybody's gonna get sick once in a while. I mean, there are germs all over the place. Yeah. We're just human." Well, that's a deprived, unloving and vulnerable idea. And you subject yourself to it. And you don't challenge it, at least not consistently enough. The picture you see, therefore, of yourselves is deprived, unloving and vulnerable, if you're not awake. That isn't what it says here.

What it says is:

RAJ READING: The picture you see of yourselves is deprived, unloving and very vulnerable.

RAJ: Period.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT love this. Yet you can very easily escape from it, or better, leave it behind. You are not THERE, and that is not YOU. Do not see this picture in anyone, or you have accepted it AS you.

RAJ: If you accept it in anyone else, you have accepted it as you. If you haven't accepted it as you, or we'll say, as being true about you, then in looking at another who is claiming it to be true about them, you'll say, "No way, José!" Because that's not part of your picture of yourself. It's not part of your conception of yourself.

Listen to this.

RAJ READING: ALL illusions about the Sonship are dispelled together, as they were MADE together.

RAJ: Again, understand that when Paul chose to be miserable this last week, his whole world looked miserable to him. In other words, All of Creation was made to look miserable together at the same time, even though Paul was choosing only one or two individuals to be distressed about. So the illusion always affects the perception of everything simultaneously.

Again.

RAJ READING: ALL illusions about the Sonship are dispelled together, as they were MADE together. Teach no-one that he is what YOU would NOT want to be.

RAJ: Teach no one that he is what you would not want to be. Or what? You're teaching that that is your perception of yourself as well. If it wasn't your perception of yourself, you would contradict that other one by saying, "That's not the Truth about you. Here's the Truth about you."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your brother is the mirror in which you will see the image of yourself, as long as perception lasts. And perception WILL last until the Sonship knows itself as whole.

RAJ: Okay, everybody, that means that vigilance, diligence, separating the tares from the wheat, the masks and the costumes from the Individuality wearing them, is going to be an ongoing, ultimately permanent activity. Because, you know what? When as a result of your being the Presence of Love, being the Evidence of Love, your Brothers and Sisters take off their masks and costumes, you will still continue forever acknowledging the Christ that is there. So seeing the Christ in your Brother, seeing the Truth underneath the mask and costume, is not a temporary activity to make a correction. It's the beginning of you each being in your Right Mind, fulfilling your Function, that will bring you back into your Sanity where you will remain forever, doing the same thing and nothing else. You see?

So, again, this isn't about learning ideas of Truth that you can apply to the human condition until it's no longer needed. This is about you beginning to be What You Really Are, and never abandoning It again.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You made perception,...

RAJ: [in an amused voice] The moment you said, "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way," and you came up with a way to see it that was not the Father's Perspective, you made (or created) perception.

RAJ READING: You made perception, and it must last as long as you WANT it.

RAJ: And you will want it until it no longer serves your confused and silly motives.

RAJ READING: Illusions are investments. They will last as long as you value them. Values are relative, but they are powerful because they are mental judgments.

RAJ: And I'm going to add that not only are they mental judgments, but they are judgments backed up with an emotion. "He (or she) did me wrong, put me at a disadvantage, actually took away something valuable that was mine, and it hurt." And when you say, "it hurt," you are saying that you are experiencing an emotion. And that emotion is the fire behind your revenge. And it is the energy which, like a drug, distracts you significantly from remembering that your Peace is available to you and is only a choice away from what you are currently miserably experiencing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The only way to dispel illusions is to withdraw ALL investment from them, and they will have no life for you because you have put them OUT OF YOUR MIND.

RAJ: In other words, you have disregarded them.

RAJ READING: While you include them IN it, you are GIVING life to them. Except there is nothing there to receive your gift.

RAJ: You're giving life, you think you're giving life to something, but it's only an imagination. There's nothing actually there to receive the life that your attention is attempting to give to it. So, in effect, you're like the emperor with new clothes that has no clothes. You are giving life to something that isn't there, and so you're doing nothing, thinking that you're doing something and caught up in an illusion of simple emptiness.

Before we end for the day, I just want to reiterate the difference between emotions and feelings, as I use the words. I use the word "feeling" relative to Soul—your Soul Capacity, your Capacity as Soul to experience fully the Meaning of every Idea in the Mind of God. It is your Capacity, Soul is your Capacity to feel the Fullness of God in every Aspect of Creation. It is Soul which allows you to feel the Presence of God right where your Brother is, instead of the mask or costume he or she is wearing. Feeling is Soul Sensing the Meaning of Creation. Emotions, on the other hand, are not properly feelings. They are defensive reactions to a misperception of the Kingdom of Heaven. They are defensive reactions to a misperception of a Christ that is confronting you. Those are emotions. Real art never arises out of emotions. They arise out of Soul Sensing.

It's important to understand the distinction here, because the sloppy use of the word[s] "feelings" and "emotions" will keep you from being able to make the distinction between What Is Real and what is not real, what needs to be denied and What Needs To Be Affirmed.

"Oh, well. I feel hurt. I feel the pain of the behavior I was the recipient of. And because I feel it, it's got to be real." But you know what? Feeling unifies, and emotions divide. And so you take a good look at what the end result is of feelings and emotions, and you will be able to determine Which One Is Real and which one is not. And when you can see that an emotional response is not real, and therefore not valid, you will not confirm it and base your actions upon it, because you will end up looking like, and being, a fool temporarily. And it's not your Birthright to be experiencing yourself that way.

I love you. And I will continue to stand here with every single one of you that's behind the costume and the mask, to magnify that Which Is True And Real about you, so that you might feel comfortable in de-masking and disrobing, so that the gloriousness of the Creation of God that is what each of you is might bless everyone because it's no longer hidden.

Okay. I look forward to being with you next two weeks from today.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone joining us on the Internet.

Before we begin I just want to remind everyone that next Saturday, June 19th, will be our second Online Gathering. It's a time when those of you who are at too great a distance to attend a Gathering here can participate online, ask your questions, and dialogue with me. And I look forward to being with you next week. Watch the home page because there is a possibility that the hours will change from "2 to 7" to an earlier time, so keep your eyes open on the home page.

We're not going to let go of this word "Singularity" quite yet, because it's a very important thing to grasp the meaning of. Mind, your Conscious Awareness, is a Singularity. Mind, with a capital "M" referring to God, is a Singularity. You have nothing other than the Mind of God available to you. So your Mind is a Singularity. You tend to think of your mind as yours, a possession. But since it isn't something you can become dispossessed of, it isn't a possession at all. It is What You Are.

The Laws of Singularity, in other words, the Way Things Work divinely speaking, is the way things work humanly speaking. In other words, you may have said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way," and you may have engaged in looking at things your way, but no matter how poorly you use your mind, it still functions as a Singularity.

When you said, "Father, I'd rather give the meaning to everything I see," you sort of became exclusive didn't you? "Mm. I've decided that that's a tree and that it grows from a seed. And it's capable of maturing, and maybe living a very long time, but it will die." And so you have this very exclusive point of view about an Aspect of Creation. Exclusive means that something has been excluded, doesn't it? You've excluded the Father's Point Of View in favor of yours. But because Mind is still a Singularity, you find that you are the one who feels excluded from All of Creation, from the comprehension of All of Creation as It Truly Is, as well as feeling excluded from your Source.

“Oh! You’re alone. Tiny.” If you want to be exclusive and exclude something from your experience, you will feel excluded. Not only that; from that moment on All of Creation that you see, all of your Brothers and Sisters that you’re involved with, will feel excluded from you, separate from you, different from you. Different enough from you that it isn’t clear to you whether they are totally worthy of your love because they’re untrustworthy, they’re different. All of this because Mind is a Singularity and the intent you bring into play affects every aspect of your Conscious Experience.

You’ve conveniently come up with an explanation of the state of affairs that you’re in. You say not only that you have an ego, but that you are an ego. And it’s the task of this ego to cope with this fragmented world that you’re experiencing, which is fundamentally potentially threatening to your well being. It’s got to look that way because the intent is an exclusive intent. Everything is going to be experienced as different from and fundamentally at odds with you because Mind is a Singularity. Your explanation that you have an ego, or that you are an ego, is so much tinkling brass. It’s nonsense. But you believe it and you put your energy behind securing its safety, which always finds expression in forms of defense against this world—this world that is different from you. And all the time you’re doing this, you are reconfirming your intent to see things your own way. And all the time you’re doing this, you are insuring that you will not remember Who You Are.

What I’m harping on these past few weeks is that you must come to understand that you don’t have a mind of your own, that you’re not an ego, that you don’t have an ego, but you’re the Presence of Mind, a Singularity, conducting yourself as though you’re not. And waking up amounts to nothing more than recognizing that All That You Divinely Are, you are being right now. You’re just doing it poorly. This realization will allow you to develop a new intent to be Mind well, to be in a new way, to be in the only way you can truly be. And the only way you can truly be is to be the Presence of Love. And that’s why I gave you two prayers. I wish to see the evidence of Love. And I wish to be the evidence of Love. Love is inclusive rather than exclusive. Love unifies rather than divides.

The poor use you’ve been putting your minds to has been to do that which divides. It’s that simple. That’s all there is to the ego. You don’t have to escape from the ego because there is not any such thing as the ego really. There’s the Christ behaving as though he’s not the Christ. And the call is to start behaving as though you’re the Christ.

And as it has been expressed through the ages, the means of doing that is to engage in Love. Love is the answer. Love is inclusive. Because it's inclusive, it integrates what seemed to be disintegrated. It brings you back into the Conscious Experience of Singularity in which you no longer experience being tiny and defenseless, you might say vulnerable, into an experience of inclusiveness in which none of Creation is unavailable to you, in which you would feel as though your mind got big.

You see, we're not talking about good behavior, being nice to your Brother and Sister, being loving, and doing nice things instead of bad things, loving them in spite of their behavior. We're talking about not being divided in your mind, where your mind spontaneously moves into judgment about each other, which is divisive. Now, is it divisive between all of you out there, or is it divisive within you? It's your mind that is either promoting division, or it's your mind promoting Unity. Unity of what? Of Itself, so that in your Mind you're not confused or fragmented. Because you know what? Only you are looking through your eyes, therefore only you are responsible for what you're seeing. And if your intent is fragmented and confused, because of the Singularity of Mind, everything you see will be fragmented and confusing. And trying to fix up the confusion by better behavior is not going to change anything.

You are the Christ right now. You are the Ultimate right now. You need to remind yourself of that, and I will remind you of that, because you're sure you're something else. And you're actually ashamed to claim that you are the Christ, because after all, what will all these other independent separate people with questionable motives do with such knowledge that you think you're the Christ? But you are the Christ, at the moment, using your mind sloppily. And because you are the Christ using your mind sloppily, you have all that it takes to use your Mind well, because you are the Christ. This is why the Meaning of Singularity is so important for you to understand at this point.

You are my Brothers and Sisters. We are equals. We are the same. There is no difference between us, except in the way you're using our Mind.

Let's go to the book. I'm going to back up a couple of sentences just for context.

RAJ READING: The only way to dispel illusions is to withdraw ALL investment from them, and they will have no life for you because you have put them OUT OF YOUR MIND. While you include them IN it, you are GIVING life to them. Except there is nothing there to receive your gift.

The gift of life IS yours to give, because it was given YOU.

RAJ: Again there's the Singularity. Whatever God has extended to you as you, you are. And at the most basic, what he has given you is the Function of giving to all. If God has given you life by expressing you, then He has given you the Function of expressing it, extending it to everything else, to every other Aspect of Creation.

RAJ READING: You are unaware of your gift BECAUSE you do not give it. You cannot make nothing live, since it cannot BE enlivened.

RAJ: You can't give life to nothing. And there's nothing outside of God for you to give life to that God hasn't already given life to.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Therefore, you are not extending the gift you both have and are, and so you do not know your being.

RAJ: See, here again is the Singularity in another expression. If you don't give What You Are, then you do not know your Being. Well what's happening instead? Well, you're having an imagination about everything and about yourself, and that's what you think you are, that's what you think your Being is. But since it's all imaginary, it's actually nonexistent. In other words, you're being nothing. It's as though in actuality all the time you think you are being what you think you are, you are asleep, you are unconscious dreaming dreams of existence which aren't actually occurring at all. And all the time you're doing this, the Christ That You Are, because it can't be altered from What God Has Established It As, continues to be present, functioning fully. And it's called the Holy Spirit.

The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. And all we're talking about through all these months is turning toward the Altar, turning toward the Place of Excellence in you, which is the Holy Spirit, which is your Right Mind, where everything you are conscious of is Real and is established, and is given life by your attention to it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: ALL confusion comes from not extending life, since that is NOT the Will of your Creator. You can do nothing apart from Him,...

RAJ: And that means that you are doing nothing apart from Him when you think you are doing things on your own.

RAJ READING: You can do nothing apart from Him, and you DO do nothing apart from Him. Keep His way to remember yourselves,...

RAJ: His way is extension. When you engage in extension, you remember Who You Are.

Again.

RAJ READING: Keep His way to remember yourselves, and teach His way, lest you forget yourselves.

RAJ: That's the problem you're having at the moment is that you have forgotten yourselves, because you've given preference to an imagination of yourself. "You came from a sperm and an egg. You're the product of your environment. You're the product of your ancestors' concepts. You're the product of what you were taught in school." Bullshit. You are the product of God in every single moment of Conscious Experience. And that's the only thing you're a product of. And you are that right now. You are the Christ right now.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Give only honor to the Sons of the Living God, and count yourselves among them gladly.

RAJ: When? Now. It is What You Are right now, in spite of what you're convinced you are, which is that you're something different. I cannot put it clearly, or clearly enough. Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God. Now are you the Ultimate. Now are you the Christ. Now are you the Fullness of capital "B" Being. It's not off in the distance. It's not off in the future. It's not something to grow into. It's something to embrace consciously right now as the Truth About You right now so that your behavior can begin to change right now. The good news is the good news about this moment you're in because of What You Truly Are in the moment you're in.

And you're far more than you think you are. But you're not far more than you're capable of comprehending. You're not more than you're capable of comprehending. You're not going to have to stretch tall to be able to wrap your mind around What You Divinely Are. Your Mind is What You Divinely Are. See, you're not the idea you have about yourself. You are that which has the idea. You're not the concept you've created about what you are. You are the Conscious Awareness in which that concept was formulated. And that Mind is a Singularity. It's already not polarized. It's already not divided. It's already not fragmented.

Instead of wrapping your mind around some humongous, infinite concept of yourself that is of universal proportions, that maybe you won't be able to do, all you have to do is start identifying yourselves with your Mind instead of your body, so that you pay more attention to what's going on in your Mind. Your body just identifies what's going on in your Mind. And if your Mind is engaged in conflict, your body will reflect the conflict. Not just your body, but your environment. Those you live with, deal with, work with. The political situation, the international situation. They will all reflect the use you're putting your Mind to, because [it is] your Mind, and not the body, that's in these circumstances locally, nationally, internationally, et cetera.

Again.

RAJ READING: Give only honor to the Sons of the Living God, and count yourselves among them gladly.

RAJ: Not with shame. Not with reluctance. Gladly.

RAJ: ONLY honor is a fitting gift for those whom God Himself created worthy of honor, and whom He honors.

RAJ: Well, this certainly is going to involve an inner experience of Love that will be different from what you thought Love was. And it will involve a valuing of Love as your fundamental Function more than ever before. To Love is to honor a thing for What It Is.

And I'm going to tell you a little secret. Until you're willing to embrace the idea that right now you are the Christ conducting yourself poorly, but nevertheless the full Christ, until you are able to conceive of that as the Truth About You, you will not be able to extend that acknowledgment to your Brother. And yet extending it to your Brother is the only way you will make it your own.

Yes, there is a Place of Excellence in you. "Oh, but I don't want to expose it. I'll acknowledge it, but I want to keep it covered up. I don't want to be too public with my Excellence." Well, until you do make it public, it won't be extended and you won't feel it in you. You won't feel its Meaning as your Identity.

Again.

RAJ READING: ONLY honor is a fitting gift for those whom God Himself created worthy of honor, and whom He honors. Give them the appreciation which God accords them always, because they are His beloved Sons in whom He is well pleased.

RAJ: Well now that includes you too. You are His Beloved Sons and Daughters in whom He is well pleased. Why? Because He sees Himself in you. And He sees nothing else but Himself in you because He placed nothing else in you. Okay, here's the Singularity again. If that's what God is extending to you, then that is your function with each other. And until you begin to fulfill that function, you will not make it your own as your own Experience of Who You Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You cannot BE apart from them...

RAJ: Why?

RAJ READING: ...because you are not apart from Him.

RAJ: Singularity again.

RAJ READING: Rest in His Love, and protect your rest by loving. But love EVERYTHING He created, of which you are a part, or you cannot learn of His peace, and accept His gift for YOURSELF and AS yourself.

RAJ: Remember the Course is all about you. It's all about you coming into a new Experience of What You Are and always have been, but which didn't register with you because you were preoccupied with your concept of who you are. True, you had a lot of help in the formulation of that concept. Your parents helped you. Your educators helped you. Your society helped you.

And none of them said, "You are Mind. You are That Which Is Conscious of bodies, forms, world, universe. And this Conscious Awareness or Mind That You Are is indivisible. You have available to you for your Conscious Experience the experience of Peace, of Wholeness, of Unity, of Integrity. You are Excellence Itself. And it's your Function to be from that Excellence and to let it find expression, or extension, toward everything of which you are conscious. And if you will allow that extension to occur, you will find everyone and everything, and all of the universe, All of Creation available to you as a Conscious Experience in which the utter Harmony of Being is obvious and undeniable, in which Joy will occur, and in which there will be no misperceptions."

That's not what you were educated to believe. That is not your belief, but it's the Truth. So now you have an educator educating you properly, truly, so that you might find reason, deep inner reason for shifting the way you behave and shifting the use to which you are putting your Mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You cannot know your own perfection until you have honored all those who were created LIKE you.

RAJ: You hear this kind of sentence occurring more and more frequently as we go through the book?

RAJ READING: You cannot know your own perfection until you have honored all those who were created LIKE you.

RAJ: You can't have the experience of what you're not extending. Another way of putting it is, what you are not extending is what you will experience. If you are not extending Love, you will not experience being Love and you will not experience being Loved. What you do not extend, you will not have experience of. This is fundamental. And I want you to catch the sense of it each time it is expressed in different words here.

And why is it that you cannot experience what you're not extending? Because Mind is a Singularity expressed inclusively or exclusively. And if it's expressed exclusively, then because it's a Singularity, all of your experience will identify exclusion, separation, separateness. Why? Because you have excluded part of you. You have excluded the part of your Mind, if I may put it this way, that has been extended to you by God in His Creation of you and His Causing you to be the Presence of Mind that has as its Function the capacity to be aware of What Everything Is Truly.

But you've divided up your mind by saying, "But, Father, I'd rather see it my way." Now, did you manage to push God away? No. But you managed to become insane. You managed to put a circumference around a small part of the Totality of your Conscious Awareness and you said, "This little part is me and I have my exclusive view on everything. And because no one can get inside this circumference, no one can see things exactly as I see them. And that makes me the king of my experience."

And what have you done? You've created what I've referred to as a bubble; totally flimsy; a bubble in the middle of the Infinity of your Conscious Awareness of the Singular Mind That You Are. And you have excluded yourself from the rest of your Self—everything outside the bubble. And so now everything on the outside of the bubble is called the Holy Spirit, the rest of your Divinity in addition to the little bit circumscribed by the bubble you've created by the definition you've given yourself. And the rest of you is held in trust while you insist on playing inside the limits of this bubble.

But it doesn't just sit there, the Holy Spirit, the rest of What You Divinely Are. It won't let the bubble be. It doesn't recognize the existence of the bubble and so it insists on registering with you in one way or another. It insinuates itself into your Conscious Awareness. But most of you are stubborn, stubborn, stubborn. And you insist upon your bubble and you keep adding soap to it and water to it so that it won't pop. But you know what? This infinite, unbounded Mind or Conscious Awareness That You Are continues to be what is outside the bubble as well as what is inside the bubble. You're still the Christ. You're still the Ultimate.

And that's why it's so important for you to begin to be willing to acknowledge that right now you are the Ultimate. And you know what happens when you turn toward the Altar? You begin to push against the bubble you've created. You begin to have the intent to connect with the rest of What You Infinitely Are outside the bubble. And that weakens the bubble. And that's all we're engaged in here is the inspiration, the establishment of inspiration in you that causes you to want to reach outside the bubble, so that this Infinite Mind, this Singular Mind That You Are might once again experience its Singularity because the bubble pops.

"Oh, I want to wake up! I want to wake up! I'd give my arm and a leg to wake up." Well go ahead. There's nothing stopping you except that you don't really want to wake up.

You know what? The little gap is like the surface of the bubble. And when you as you perceive yourself to be inside the bubble begin to let your Mind to be in harmony with the Way Things Really Are, to be in harmony with God, and to be in harmony with your Function, you bring that of you, that of which You Divinely Are that's inside the bubble into greater alignment with God, with the rest of What You Are outside the bubble, so that you inside the bubble and you outside the bubble are in better alignment, are more parallel, you might say, so that with less difference between what's inside the bubble and what's outside the bubble, [snap of the fingers] the Father, as the Course says, can take the last step and pop the bubble.

All we're doing is helping you come to a place in your own mind where you are not as resistant to God, which really means where you are not as resistant to the Excellence of You, where you are more willing to be the Embodiment of God, of All That Is Good. Where you are willing not to bring defense into play, constantly reinforcing it by behaving as though you are what you think you are, and by behaving as though everyone else is like what you think you are, therefore untrustworthy, undependable, being that which calls for defense.

Love is inclusive. And I know you think in terms of inclusive meaning letting your Brother and Sister in, all them out there. But the place where the inclusiveness will be embodied, manifest, will be in your Mind, in the Conscious Awareness That You Are, when the bubble pops. And that which you thought you were Which Was Divine joins with that Which You Infinitely Are but were unconscious of. In that Unity of Mind, in that Singularity of Mind, you will see Everything As It Is, including your Brothers and Sisters. You will see that they are part of the Wholeness of you, and you are part of the Wholeness of them. And Love will pour forth from you, because it's the spontaneous response to the recognition of What A Thing Truly Is.

Now, until the bubble pops, you are going to have to use each other as the justification, in this instance between you and me, between you and me, between each other, use each other as the justification for an instant of defenselessness, an instant of being willing to see the other the Way God Is Seeing And Being Them. Why? So that you might have the experience for yourself as well.

Again.

RAJ READING: You cannot know your own perfection until you have honored all those who were created LIKE you.

RAJ: You can't have what you don't extend.

Okay. Continuing.

RAJ READING: One Child of God is the ONLY teacher sufficiently worthy to teach another.

RAJ: "Oh! Well you know I don't like to label myself. You want me to walk around Child of God, you know. I hate labels so I'm not going to call myself anything. But I'll be loving." No. You've got to acknowledge Who You Are. Child of God, the Christ, you've got to acknowledge What You Are. And don't hide behind this ridiculous phrase, "Well, I don't like labels." The ego finds all sorts of nonsensical justifications.

RAJ READING: One Child of God is the ONLY teacher sufficiently worthy to teach another.

RAJ: And the fact is that one Child of God is the only one who can teach another anything. Human beings can't teach at all. The human concept, how you conceive of yourself, what you think you are, is incapable of teaching anything, because it's just an imagination. You're not what you imagine yourself to be. And what you imagine yourself to be can't teach anything. There's nothing there to be a teacher.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: One Teacher is in all your minds, and He teaches the same lesson to all.

RAJ: Well who's this Teacher in your minds? The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: One Teacher is in all your minds, and He teaches the same lesson to all.

RAJ: What is the lesson? Unity. Singularity. The opposite of division.

RAJ READING: He always teaches you the inestimable worth of EVERY Son of God, teaching it with infinite patience born of the infinite Love for which he speaks.

RAJ: That of yourself which you have abandoned by creating a bubble around a small portion of What You Are, does not succeed in un-creating all the rest of What You Are outside the bubble. And because you are eternal, that of you which you are ignoring outside of the bubble, patiently, we could say, insinuates itself into your awareness, pushes against the bubble, doesn't honor the bubble because it doesn't exist as a fact.

So this patience isn't even really patience. It's the Eternal Function of your Divine Being eternally being What It Is, no matter how long you hold out for your right to have an independent point of view. And it doesn't express this Love toward you as a temporary means of dealing with your stubbornness until you abandon your stubbornness. It does it because it is its Eternal Function to be the Presence of Love that demonstrates the fact that Unity is forever Real.

So, as I said last week, remember that you're not being the Presence of Love in order to cope with each other's stubbornness until you all stop being stubborn, at which point you can stop being the Presence of Love. You're being the Presence of Love because it's your Function, and because when you are being the Presence of Love extending Love, you experience Who and What You Are, and you glorify God, and you dispel illusions.

Again.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The one Teacher that's in all of your minds.

RAJ READING: ...always teaches you the inestimable worth of EVERY Son of God, teaching it with infinite patience born of the infinite Love for which he speaks. Every attack is a call for His patience since ONLY His patience can translate attack into blessing.

RAJ: Only His patience can succeed in illuminating the illusory nature of an illusion so that you no longer find justification for valuing the illusion. At which point you don't want it anymore, and in not wanting it, the Singularity of the Mind That You Are will cause its appearance to cease to exist.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Those who attack do not KNOW they are blessed. They attack because they believe they are DEPRIVED. Give, therefore, of YOUR abundance, and teach your brothers THEIRS.

RAJ: How do you teach your Brothers their abundance? By extending yours.

RAJ READING: Do not share their delusions of scarcity, or you will perceive YOURSELF as lacking.

RAJ: There it is—the Singularity again. What you give, you get. What you're looking with, you will see. If you're looking with defense, you will see a call for defense. If you're seeing with Love, you will see a call for Love, and you will share the Love that you have, and by sharing it, demonstrate to your Brother that he has it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Attack could never promote attack unless you perceived it as a means of depriving you of something you WANT.

RAJ: In other words, attack from another could never promote attack or retaliation from you unless you perceived it (the original attack) as a means of depriving you of something you want.

RAJ READING: Yet you cannot LOSE anything unless YOU did not value it, and therefore did not WANT it.

RAJ: Is that difficult to understand? Go ahead and nod your head. [small laugh] Come on. Let that excellence shine forth as honesty. "I don't understand it. That's difficult." Okay.

When you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way," you did not value Creation As It Was. So you became exclusive in your viewpoint of everything, and you found yourself experiencing being excluded, alone, tiny, vulnerable, et cetera. In this state you had to grasp for your good. You had to claim it. You had to lay claim to it as though it wasn't yours. And once you claimed it and you possess it, because it wasn't yours to begin with, it still isn't really yours, and now you must defend it against being taken away from you. And you live a life in which you feel like your good is not permanent. Correct? And of course, who's going to take it away from you? All those bastards out there. All those other people who are defending themselves because they think they lack.

RAJ READING: ...you cannot LOSE anything unless YOU did not value it, and therefore did not WANT it.

RAJ: Not valuing Creation As It Is, you opted for your own private viewpoint and caused all that is part of the Infinitude of your own Being to seem to be different from you and something which you had to lay claim to. I am being repetitive here. And because you did not value it in the first place and gave preference to your private point of view, you now live, you think, you now perceive existence as a state of mild warfare and sometimes extreme warfare in order to possess and hold on to your possessions.

I'm going to go back to the beginning of the paragraph.

RAJ READING: Attack could never promote attack...

RAJ: In other words, retaliation.

RAJ READING: ...unless you perceived...

RAJ: ...the original attack... [Editor's Note: Raj replaced the word "it."]

RAJ READING: ...as a means of depriving you of something you WANT.

RAJ: Key word there—something you "WANT." You don't have to want something you have, do you? And yet the Father has withheld nothing of What He Is from you in His Creation of you by extending Himself in His Fullness as the very Presence of You.

RAJ READING: Yet you cannot LOSE anything unless YOU did not value it, and therefore did not WANT it. This makes you feel DEPRIVED of it,...

RAJ: See. You wanted an exclusive viewpoint. You created an exclusive viewpoint for yourself and the Infinity of You became excluded from you, and then you felt excluded from It. In other words, you felt at a loss.

Again.

RAJ READING: This makes you feel DEPRIVED of it, and by projecting your own rejection, you believe that others are taking it FROM you. One MUST be fearful, if he believes that his brother is attacking him to tear the Kingdom of Heaven from him.

RAJ: You see, you're all trying to reclaim the Kingdom of Heaven, you're trying to take possession of it again after having excluded yourself from it by saying "I want to say what everything is."

So...

RAJ READING: One MUST be fearful, if he believes that his brother is attacking him to tear the Kingdom of Heaven from him. This is the ultimate basis for ALL of the ego's projection.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "projections" instead of "projection."]

RAJ: You see that? You said, so simply, and from the Allness of your Christhood, your utter stability, your inviolable experience of invulnerability, you said, "Father, guess what? From today on I'm going to say what everything is, at least for me. If You want to say what it is, fine. If everybody else wants to just accept what You say a thing is, what You have meant by its Creation, fine. But you know what? I'm feeling really good. In fact, I'm feeling just wonderful and secure, and so don't call me, I'll call you." [sigh] And you rejected the Father's Point Of View. You rejected the clear, undistorted, Conscious Comprehension of All of Creation.

And then, after having excluded the Father's Perspective, you found yourself feeling excluded from All That The Father Was Being—Creation. And then you looked around at all the other Christs that were in your face and you said, "He took it from me," or "Now that I'm got a little bit of it back, I've got to be careful 'cause she's going to take it from me, because it's really valuable and they're going to want it." And all of this causes you to completely forget that all of this what I'm telling you is misperception occurred because of something you did—not something they did; not something they will do. Something you did when you said, "I'd rather see it my way." That's the way the ego works. [said in an accusing voice] "It's their fault! And I'm going to deal with them until I get this straightened out with them." Instead of getting it straighten out where the mistake was made which was in your own mind by saying, "I'd rather see it my way." You see? Again.

RAJ READING: One MUST be fearful, if he believes that his brother is attacking him to tear the Kingdom of Heaven from him. This is the ultimate basis for ALL of the ego's projection.

Being...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: Being the part of your mind which does not believe it is responsible for ITSELF, and being without allegiance to God, the ego is incapable of trust.

RAJ: What is the ego? It's the part of your mind which does not believe it is responsible for itself and has no allegiance to God. That's all.

RAJ READING: Projecting its insane belief that YOU have been treacherous to YOUR Creator, it believes that your brothers, who are as incapable of this as YOU are, are out to take God FROM you.

RAJ: Somebody else is going to have to be responsible, somebody else has to be blamed, instead of your taking a look and remembering that you said,

"Father, I'd rather look at it my way." And you've been fighting to look at it your way ever since; for so long that you've forgotten your original, radical, righteous intent to give meaning to everything yourself.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Whenever a brother attacks another, this IS what he believes. Projection ALWAYS sees your will in others.

RAJ: Why? Because Mind is a Singularity.

RAJ READING: If you will to separate yourself from God, that IS what you will think others are doing TO you.

You...

RAJ: Here we go.

RAJ READING: You ARE the Will of God.

RAJ: And I'm going to say again, you are the Christ. Your very Being is the Function of embodying What God Is Being right where you are. Right now it looks to you as though you have to make a conscious choice to do that, but it's only because you made a conscious choice not to do it and now you've got to retrace your steps. Once you make the conscious choice to do it, the bubble will burst and then you will experience your Real Function, for lack of better words, again.

RAJ READING: You ARE the Will of God.

RAJ: Well if that isn't Excellence, I don't know what it is.

Are you going to continue covering up your Excellence? Well you know what? You may succeed in thinking that you're covering it up, but the very Excellence of You, because it is a Singularity, will govern you nevertheless. And the Laws of Singularity, the Way Singularity Works, will be reflected in what I'm going to call excellent reproductions of conflict.

I've said before that the ego is a defense mechanism. I've said before that the only way, the only thing that the ego can't defend itself against is disregard, right? In other words, if you attack it, you will always lose. Why? Because Mind is a Singularity, and the Excellence of Mind as a Singularity when it creates a defense mechanism, it creates a defense mechanism that you can't win against. You see what I'm saying? That's why the only way you can become free of it is to disregard it.

Now I hope that you're beginning to grasp the fact that you are the Christ, that there's only Mind. You don't have two minds—a Real Mind and an ego mind. There's just Mind creating according to the Laws of the Singularity of Mind an Experience of Reality As It Is because you're yielding to the Father's Will, or an illusion of a conflicted world and universe that started from a big bang that is purely material and has nothing to do with God. You are either allowing the Fullness and Beauty of God's Creation to register with you because you're letting it in, or you are with excellence creating illusions that you can't escape from until you arrive at a point of disregarding them. Because the only way a fantasy or an illusion can disappear and cease afflicting you is when you disregard it.

We're going to end with the first two sentences of this paragraph.

RAJ READING: You ARE the Will of God. Do not accept anything else AS your will, or you are denying what you are.

RAJ: What I'm saying to you is that waking up is not complicated and it's not about learning facts. It's not about learning concepts. It's not about learning anything. It's about abandoning what you've been engaged in that has been causing you misery by learning—and I use that word carefully—by becoming able to recognize when you're using your Mind in a conflicted way that now you know will cause everything you experience to appear to be divided, conflicted, confused, disintegrated, so that you can make the choice for What Is True because you can see what isn't [true] and thereby stop using your mind in a conflicted way. Because as you abandon that, the Singularity of Mind will be what's left and you will be awake. More of the good news.

I embrace you and love you.

Let this abide with you, percolate. And again, pay attention during the coming week, moment by moment if necessary, be alert, be conscious, so that you can see whether the use you're putting your mind to as a divisive result or a unifying result. If it has a divisive result, no matter how much you can justify it, it is an invalid and I'm going to say destructive use of your mind; not that it can actually destroy anything but it can absolutely distract you from the experience of a miracle, a sudden shift of perception wherein you find yourself behaving in a way that unifies.

Okay. I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: Paul is noticing that I am feeling a little more enthusiastic and vital than he is in this heat. The best air conditioning is connection with your Guide. [audience laughter]

Okay. To repeat, in the Sparkly book, it's page 162, last paragraph. In the second edition, it's page 129, second full paragraph, paragraph number 10. And in the first edition, it's the second line from the bottom of the page on page 119. And without preamble, we'll go right into the book.

RAJ READING: You ARE the Will of God. Do not accept anything else AS your will, or you are denying what you are.

RAJ: Tell me something. During the last seven days, how many minutes did you spend being aware that you are the Will of God? I'm not going to force you to convict yourselves by answering the question. But if that's not what you were identifying yourself as, as you went through your week, then during your week, you were denying What You Are. You were in a state of Self-denial. A kinder way of putting it is that you were in a state of unconsciousness of your Identity. And if you are unconscious of Who or What You Are, it's impossible for you to express it.

It's a simple thing we've been talking about over the past few weeks—Singularity. And I want it to register with you as something simple. You hang on dearly to your concept of being a human being, your father's and mother's son or daughter, your children's parent, a human being, a physical organism who's arrogant enough to think it's at the top of the food chain. You see? And when that's the way you identify yourself, you leave out the best part. You leave out the Excellence of you. You leave out the Goodness, the God-ness of you.

And so, what it boils down to is something very simple. Let yourself during this coming week be as conscious as you can of the fact that you are more than your current definitions of yourself, that you are in actuality the Direct Expression and Presence of God in the middle of the Direct Expression of God. You call it the world and universe. It is the Kingdom of Heaven. It is Reality, with a capital "R", the Ultimate. You think it's arrogant to say if there's anything here at all where I see myself, it must be God presenting Himself. It may seem arrogant to you to do that, but that is the simple Truth. And as a result, as I have been saying, there is an Excellence present. You are the Presence of Excellence. And there's much more for you to give, to share, than you imagine or than you embrace in your current human definition of yourself.

You've got to dare to identify yourself correctly. Who to? To yourself, first. Because until you're willing to embrace it, you can't incorporate it. You can't let it in to register and settle with you, and become the more of you that you're capable of being, that you will then be able to extend and share; not as a sharing of arrogance, but of simple and genuine value that's meaningful to everyone in your experience.

As I've said before, you're all closet Christs embarrassed and ashamed to present Who You Really Are. And it's time to come out of the closet. And the only way you'll come out of the closet is to begin to remember in your mind Who You Are. And let it occupy more of your attention. That's what this is all about.

Again.

RAJ READING: You ARE the Will of God. Do not accept anything else AS your will, or you are denying what you are. Deny this and you WILL attack, believing you have BEEN attacked. But see the Love of God in you, and you will see It everywhere because It IS everywhere.

RAJ: And this is me. It is the only thing really going on.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: See His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...abundance in everyone, and you will know that you are in Him WITH them.

RAJ: In other words, the acknowledgement of What Is True about a Brother in your Mind causes what you see in him to be confirmed in you and you are blessed.

RAJ READING: They are part of you, as you are part of God. YOU are as lonely without understanding this as God Himself is lonely when His Sons do not know Him. The peace of God IS understanding this. There is only one way OUT of the world's thinking, just as there was only one way INTO it. Understand totally by understanding TOTALITY.

RAJ: Totality. Infiniteness that is Wholeness. That is a Singularity, in other words.

I have Paul on the edge of his seat. We're going somewhere he has no sense of. How does what I've just read relate to the specific human experience of your having to relate to someone who is unconscious of the Truth of themselves and who insists upon acting out defense when there is really nothing going on calling for defense, so that their behavior with you is obtuse, unpleasant, unkind without a cause. In other words, when someone is so unpleasant to be with that being with them and with their behavior constitutes such a distraction to you because it is so unpleasant that it is not possible to continue to be in their presence where you could be an active agent for change, where you could be the Presence of Love that heals.

Even more than this, what if this unpleasant someone, this well-defended someone who doesn't see that their behavior is an unpleasant experience for others, what if they know that you have a commitment to the prayer, "I wish to see only the Evidence of Love. And I wish to be only the Evidence of Love." What if this person knows that you have commitment to this, and although they don't see in what way their behavior is unpleasant, they know that you are experiencing it as unpleasant and they don't stop because they know you have a commitment to be defenseless? Do you stand there in the hurricane of their behavior and not object to it, but instead express the Truth about them? Or do you say to them, "Until you put the brakes on with this behavior, until you can settle down and stop being unpleasant, you will have to leave. Until you exert a little self-discipline and self-control so that I am not having to dodge the bullets that you are sending my way, we are not in a position to communicate and you can't remain."

Does your opting for the opportunity to be the Presence of Singularity in the face of attack something you are supposed to engage in without objection to the setting, the circumstance, in which it's occurring? Well, I will tell you something. There is a way things work. And the way things work is full of Integrity. And it is full of Kindness.

And I will give you an example. If any one of you is angry, defensive, pissed off, and you want to talk to your Guide, and maybe you're pissed off at your Guide because your Guide has been pushing your buttons encouraging you to expand beyond your comfort zone, and you approach your Guide full of emotion, vigor, criticism, judgment, you will not be able to hear your Guide. Why? Not because your Guide won't speak to you, but because the willfulness that you are bringing into play in the process of approaching your Guide, in so many words, makes so much static in your mind that you will not hear the answer. And you will not hear the answer until you bring into play a certain amount of self-discipline and you settle yourself down. And you arrive at a point where, still not having the answer to the thing that was frustrating you, you're willing to release the emotion because you know it's getting in the way. And you choose to set it aside, even though it is of extreme importance to you to be able to express it, so that you can go into the Silence where you can hear the answer.

Now, let's say that you are one of those who has said, "I wish to see only the Evidence of Love. And I wish to be only the Evidence of Love." And you have made commitment to that and someone else knows it, just like Paul knows that I will never stop being here for him and I will never become upset by his behavior and I will always respond, and yet this one insists upon acting out their sense of separateness, vulnerability, and a need for defense that they feel, and they insist upon doing it most obtusely. You might feel that you must answer, that you must be the Presence of Love in that environment without objection. And you would be wrong. And this is important for you to know. You must... it's absolutely necessary for you to say "No" to that kind of environmental circumstance, and you must tell them that they must leave if they're not going to stop, and they cannot come back until they've gotten hold of themselves and are willing to go into their Peace and choose for it, so that healing of the disturbance can be addressed, rather than protection from the disturbance needing to be employed.

The behavior is a call for correction, right? You've been hearing this ever since we started reading the Course. The behavior, the loveless behavior, is a call for Love. It is a call for correction. And the first part... the first part of the correction involves modifying the way the call is being made so that the call for correction has a little more Love in it, a little less lovelessness in it. Now then, you're in a position of having to wait until that one has come to the point of saying, "Okay, it's less important to me to be able to express my upsetness, it's less important to me, that is less important to me than being in the place where a relationship can occur that allows for healing to happen." And that may be months. It may be years.

Well now, that seems to take you out of the loop as far as your function is concerned because your function is to be the Presence of Love, to be that Singularity that heals. And now the setup is by virtue of your objecting to the uninhibited expression of anger or defense, you're not in a position of relating to them in a healing way. Well, you're not out of the loop because you've still got your own mind in which to be clear and in which to be the Presence of Clarity that gets extended.

In metaphysics, there is something that is called absent treatment. It is where healing work is done and you're not in the presence of the one who has asked for healing. And so you have the opportunity in your mind whenever this individual comes to your attention to ask God, to turn toward the Holy Spirit, to go within to that Place of Excellence in you, to ask, "What is the Truth about this one?" Not "What is the truth about his or her bad behavior?" but, "What is the God's honest Truth about him or her?" Because you want your mind filled with the consciousness of the Truth about them so that you are not conflicted, and so that every time you think about them, you are sending out messengers that will bring back confirmation of the Truth of them to you.

It is important to understand this, else you end up being the victim or victims of abuse. And you end up being the victims of abuse because you have an unintelligent concept of what it means to be the Presence of Love. "You're supposed to stand there and turn the other cheek when one cheek has been slapped." No. When lovelessness is expressed, you don't give lovelessness another opportunity to be expressed. You don't come back from the ego place that the slap came from. You come from the other vantage point. You come from the other Voice, the Voice for Truth, and you say, "No. This behavior is unacceptable. The truth that you need to hear right now is that you cannot continue this behavior in my Presence. And until this behavior stops, we have no basis for resolving whatever the distress is that's causing you to behave this way." That is turning the other cheek. It's coming back from the other Voice, coming back from the Place of Excellence in you that honors them enough to say, "I will not give you permission when you're with me to behave in a way that doesn't reflect the Truth about you. And at the same time I respect and honor What's True About Me enough not to join with you in your attitude and retaliate."

Let's continue.

RAJ READING: Perceive ANY part of the ego's thought system as wholly insane, wholly delusional and wholly undesirable, and you have correctly evaluated ALL of it. This correction enables you to perceive ANY part of creation as wholly real,...

RAJ: Any part of it, even if it's just the rose, even if it's just your fingernail.

RAJ READING: This correction enables you to perceive ANY part of creation as wholly real, wholly perfect, and WHOLLY DESIRABLE.

Wanting this ONLY, you will HAVE this only, and giving this only, you will BE only this.

RAJ: In other words, your mind will be in a condition of Singularity which is its normal state; it's only state.

RAJ READING: The gifts you offer to the ego are ALWAYS experienced as sacrifices, but the gifts you offer to the Kingdom are gifts to YOU. They will always be treasured by God because they belong to His beloved Sons, who belong to Him.

RAJ: Why? Because existence, the Conscious Experience of Being, Mind, is Singular.

RAJ READING: All power and glory are yours BECAUSE the Kingdom is His.

RAJ: Mmm. So the question comes, "Well, why can't I demonstrate this? Why with this particular individual, or that particular individual, can't I do something to aggressively change the situation; aggressively, lovingly, transformingly heal the situation?" And the simple reason is that you cannot make anyone... you cannot make anyone use their will in a way that is contrary to their current choice. And so, until their current choice changes, you must say, "No. You cannot behave with me that way. You will have to go find others who will accept it."

Well, but it's your son, or your daughter, or your parent, or your best friend. How can you just break it off? They're family, or they're loved ones. Well, I'm going to tell you something. You've got to pay attention to your common sense. And if being with them causes only discomfort, and nothing, no matter how loving you are, they will not change their behavior, you must ask yourself whether it is intelligent for you to remain in a situation where conflict is being employed consciously and purposely and be without your peace. And you must finally come to the point where you answer, "No, I refuse to be in the thick of battle where it is so noisy that I cannot experience my peace." And you must withdraw as I did to a mountaintop. You must withdraw from where you are being thronged by the crowds, by the dynamics, so that you may choose for your Peace and find it.

Now, I'm going to ask another question. You, who might be having situations like this, and all of you are to one degree or another, why are you picking on the one, or two, or three individuals who are insisting upon being hateful and being preoccupied by your inability to change them, when you have a hundred others in your experience with whom you can dialogue and communicate and grow together? What is your addiction to what you see as a call for help that you know is not genuine? What I mean by that is that although at the bottom line every call for help is a call for help, there are those who are calling for help because they're getting a hit from being unpleasant. They are getting a feeling of power which they are consciously choosing to employ because they know it's upsetting and they want to see you squirm. And they have no intent of letting you off the hook so that you can stop squirming.

Why do you have an addiction to trying to change them? What I'm trying to point out to you is that the practical fact is that there will be no... there will be no... not enough defenselessness for there to be a joining and a blending of the two of you where communication can occur. And you must wait until they open up and are willing to let someone in and they are willing to stop this behavior, at least with you. If they know that you have a commitment to being the Evidence of Love and they think that that means that you should stand there in the face of their ongoing attack that has as its purpose to make you uncomfortable so that they can watch you squirm, they must learn something about what it means for you to wish to be only the Evidence of Love. Because wishing to be the Evidence of Love and being the Evidence of Love will never involve your saying "okay" to that kind of behavior.

If you say "okay" to that kind of behavior, you're presenting no call for correction on their part. And so the first part of your expressing Love and being the Evidence of Love is to say "No" to the behavior absolutely, and that until the behavior changes, there can be no active relationship. Then, they will be faced with the fact that they must recognize that they must change their behavior. Just as when you're reaching out to God in anger and frustration, whether it's at God or whether it's at a Brother or Sister, you will have to arrive at a point where after having received no answer, that you decide to settle down your willfulness and your projection of hate so that there's enough peace and quiet within you to hear God's Answer, where there's enough absence of willfulness that the Will of God can register with you.

And every single one of you has to come to this point. Every one of you has to come to the point of yielding to God. And that always involves yielding up your so-called right to an independent expression of willfulness. Now if that's the only way you can approach God, that's the only way your Brother or Sister can approach God that is finding expression through you.

"Well that feels really hard-nosed. Oh, this is the tough-love love. I see. I understand." No. It's not tough love. It's just simple intelligence and it is a matter of coming to a realization within yourself that there really is a way that things work.

No little, private, separate egos are making up rules of any sort, even though that's what egos busy themselves with. There is a Divine Order to things. I'm sorry. Mind is a Singularity. And you know what that means? It means that no matter how hard you try to be fragmented, you can't succeed because that's the way it works. And so if you want to experience connection with God, with the Holy Spirit, with your Guide, with the Place of Excellence in you, so that you're feeling and experiencing it and inspired by it and enlarged in your Awareness of What You Are by it, you must abandon your insistence upon being some sort of really unique and interesting, complex, fragmented presence. Is that clear? Does that make sense? Why? Because that's the Way It Works. You must cooperate with the Way Things Are. And there is the larger context than the infrastructure of private, defensive thoughts and concepts that you have all developed. And that larger context is your Home.

Now, let's continue. The next section is called:

RAJ READING: The Defense of Conflict

We once said that without projection there can be no anger, but it is also true that without projection there can be no love.

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: Projection is a fundamental law of the mind, and therefore one which ALWAYS operates.

RAJ: How many of you thought the word "projection" was a dirty word? But it...

RAJ READING: ...is a fundamental law of the mind, and therefore one which ALWAYS operates. It is the law by which you create and were created. It is the law...

RAJ: Projection is.

RAJ READING: ... the law which unifies the Kingdom, and keeps it in the Mind of God. To the ego, the law...

RAJ: Of projection.

RAJ READING: ...is perceived as a way of getting RID of something it does NOT want.

RAJ: So it projects it out there as though it's not its own. It gets rid of it.

But... (I'm adding the word, "but.")

RAJ READING: To the Holy Spirit, it...

RAJ: Projection.

RAJ READING: ...is the fundamental law of sharing by which you GIVE what you value in order to keep it in your OWN mind.

Projection, to the Holy Spirit, is the law of extension. To the ego, it is the law of deprivation. It...

RAJ: The Law of Projection.

RAJ READING: ...therefore produces abundance or scarcity, depending on how you choose to apply it. This choice IS up to you, but it is NOT up to you to decide whether or not you will UTILIZE projection. Every mind MUST project because that is how it lives, and every mind IS life. The ego's use of projection must be fully understood before its inevitable association between projection and anger can be finally undone.

RAJ: And listen to this.

RAJ READING: The ego ALWAYS tries to preserve conflict. It is very ingenious in devising ways which SEEM to diminish conflict because it does NOT want you to find conflict so intolerable that you will INSIST on giving it up. Therefore, the ego tries to persuade you that IT can free you of conflict, lest you give the EGO up and free YOURSELF.

RAJ: How many times during the week might you find yourself in a position or situation that calls for correction and you say, "I know what to do about this. My experience tells me that if I do this and that and the other thing, I will be able to move things in a new direction." Well, somebody says, "Did you check in with your Guide?" "Oh! I can handle this one. I can... I don't... That's... that'll take too long. I can handle this one." The ego says, "I can handle this one. I can free you of conflict lest you give me up and free yourself." You get it?

RAJ READING: ...the ego tries to persuade you that IT can free you of conflict, lest you give the EGO up and free YOURSELF. The ego, using its own warped version of the laws of God...

RAJ: You see, there's the Singularity again. There are no other Laws to use. There's no other Reality to be in. You're in the Kingdom of Heaven which is governed by the Laws of God, and you're either experiencing it truly, or you're experiencing it through the lens of the definitions you have made-up about it. But because Mind is Singular, you will be using the Laws, the only Laws there are to accomplish, or to seem to accomplish, what you're doing.

And because the Laws of Being serve to support Being in Its Infinite Singularity without conflict in it, every attempt you make to do something unintelligent will have an unintelligent result. Every impossible thing you attempt to do will never be done.

And so, when you're trying to operate on your own, every experience will be a failure of one sort or another. Why? Because Mind is a Singularity, and therefore the intent set into motion by virtue of sharing, or extension, is going to bear identical fruit. The fruit will reflect perfectly the intent because Mind is a Singularity. And the intent to do something impossible will bear the fruit of failure. And the intent to be what you are not will be uncomfortable. To do what is not natural, and which is therefore impossible, will provide you with an experience that identifies its unnaturalness and its impossibility. And you call that suffering. And you call it the human condition. And your ego says it can free you of this. When what needs to happen is you need to abandon the ego's vantage point. You need to abandon attempting to do the impossible. You need to stop using the Laws of God to demonstrate that you can't succeed at using them improperly.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego, using its own warped version of the laws of God, utilizes the power of the mind ONLY to defeat the mind's real purpose. It projects conflict FROM your mind to OTHER minds,...

RAJ: "They did it! It's their fault! I wouldn't be having so much trouble if they weren't doing blah, blah, blah, blah."

RAJ READING: It projects conflict FROM your mind to OTHER minds, in an attempt to persuade you that you have gotten RID of it.

RAJ: "It's their fault. It's not my problem. I didn't cause it. They're the cause of it."

But remember we talked last week about the fact that, yes, you did cause it. You caused it by first of all saying, "Father, I'd rather see it my way." You didn't value the Father's Way of experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven as the Kingdom of Heaven. You said, "I'd rather experience it as something else." But then, you don't want to own, take responsibility for, the way you're experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven. So you do the only thing you can do because being is a matter of projecting. You project the cause of your suffering out there. Why? So that you can be squeaky clean. "You innocent little bastard, you." And the word "bastard" is not a dirty word. It's the truth because you have gotten a bill of divorcement, haven't you? Parentless. Fatherless. Motherless. You see, you thought it was so great to be asserting some self-authority, and you turned yourself into a bastard. You didn't expect it. And you don't want to acknowledge it either. So now everyone else... everyone else is the bastard. And now it's a dirty word. They are a bastard.

RAJ READING: This has several fallacies which may not be so apparent.

Strictly speaking, conflict cannot BE projected precisely BECAUSE it cannot be fully shared.

RAJ: The intent [small laugh]... the intent is to do something impossible, and so you can't succeed. Why? Because using the Laws of God which are Singular in an Infinite Environment which is Singular, the attempt to do the impossible is impossible. Now there is just pure and simple logic.

RAJ READING: Any attempt to keep PART of it and get rid of another part does not really mean ANYTHING.

RAJ: Why? Because you can't fragment or divide a Singularity that is absolute and unchangeable. You just can't. You might fool yourself into believing that you have. And that's called the human condition. But you can't do it!

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Remember that a conflicted teacher is a poor teacher AND A POOR LEARNER. His lessons are confused, and their transfer value is severely limited BY his confusion. A second fallacy is the idea that you can get RID of something you do not want by giving it away.

RAJ: Now, I'm going to add these words.

Because the Laws of God are Singular and because Being is Singular and because Mind is Singular:

RAJ READING: GIVING it...

RAJ: Now I'm reading.

RAJ READING: GIVING it is how you KEEP it.

RAJ: That's just the Way It Works. So, in your ignorance, thinking you are a private, separate, little mind with rights of your own and authority of your own, you think that if you have something that you don't want and you give it away, you will no longer have it. And you're dead wrong, because the moment you give something away, you have it. That's the Law of Singularity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The belief that by giving it OUT you have excluded it from WITHIN is a complete distortion of the power of extension.

That is why those who project from the ego...

RAJ: And you all know who they are, right? You.

RAJ READING: That is why those who project from the ego are vigilant for their OWN safety. They ARE afraid that their projections will return and hurt them. They DO believe they have blotted their projections from their OWN minds, but they also believe their projections are trying to creep back INTO them. That is because the projections have NOT left their minds, and this, in turn, forces them to engage in compulsive activity in order NOT to recognize this.

RAJ: Is that insanity or what?

RAJ READING: You CANNOT perpetuate an illusion about another WITHOUT perpetuating it about yourself.

RAJ: There is no way out of this. Why? Because it is impossible to fragment your mind. Why is it impossible to fragment your mind? Because Mind is a Singularity. Always has been. Always will be. Is now. Because there's no other condition of the existence of Mind available.

Now I've got to return to this sticky little subject about other people's behavior and how you respond, because this sentence can be used as a basis for your staying in a situation of continuing to be abused. Here it is.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT perpetuate an illusion about another WITHOUT perpetuating it about yourself.

RAJ: And the ego wants to come in and say, "Well if I'm saying that their behavior is unacceptable and they cannot behave that way in my Presence, am I not creating a picture that is untrue about them and projecting it on them, and thereby making it true about me? And is not the whole process one that continues the illusion, the problem, rather than healing it?" Is anybody not understanding me? Well, if you are, just rewind the tape and listen to what I just said over again. I'm not going to repeat it right now.

When you say to another, "We cannot continue this involvement until you're willing to modify your behavior, until you're willing to exercise a little self-control and stop behaving in such an obtuse way...", if you are going to say that to someone, it is not to say they are bad. It is not to say they are wrong. It is not a judgment. It is an observation of behavior that they are engaging in consciously, on purpose. And you are saying, "I will not join with you in agreeing with you that this behavior represents what is true about you. And so I will not let this false presentation continue in my presence. I will not honor its expression in my presence because I know the Truth about you. And until you're willing to express a little bit more of it with me, sayonara. I honor the Integrity of your Being too much to allow you to cover it up with this behavior and expect me to accept it." That is Love because it doesn't honor something in them that they want you to honor. And they want you to honor their right to be themselves in any fashion that they choose, whether it's loving or loveless. And you must say "No."

And when you say "No," it doesn't mean they're a bad person. It doesn't mean that you have a negative concept about them. It says that you respect What's True about them too much to allow them to present themselves this way and expect you to believe that that's them and accept that it is them. You won't do it.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT...

RAJ: I'm repeating.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT perpetuate an illusion about another WITHOUT perpetuating it about yourself.

RAJ: And if you stand without objection in the presence of another who is being insane and wanting you to accept their insanity as the Truth about them, you must say "No." Because if you do agree with them and you agree with their right to behave in a way that doesn't reflect What's Real about them, you are then agreeing that an illusion is real and you are confirming it in them, and you are thereby, because Mind is Singular, confirming it about yourself. Does that make sense? Do you see that? Good. If nothing else has been made clear today, that is a major step forward. And we are going to end there.

I know that the Idea of Singularity has been difficult to grasp the Meaning of, and I know that I have been very repetitive, but it's because it's so essential to understand. And it's because it is such a simplicity that if you don't get it in its simplicity, whatever we read from now on is going to seem complex. And you will think that waking up is a complex thing, when it's not.

"Can we get on to something fresh and new and stimulating?" Don't worry. We will. We will.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week. Thank you.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Sparkly Book – p. 164

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Once again, if you're in the Sparkly book, we're on page 164, last full paragraph. If you're in the second edition, it's page 131, first full paragraph which is paragraph number 5. And if you're in the first edition, it's page 121, the last full paragraph. And it starts out with something we could actually laugh at.

RAJ READING: DO NOT BE AFRAID OF THE EGO.

RAJ: You could well say why not? After all, it's, as we've discussed, a defense mechanism that does not have your interest at heart. And everything it does distracts you and is set to be a distraction from your Awareness of Truth, your Awareness of your Oneness with God. Why not be afraid of it? Many of you have thought, "Well, I wonder what my ego is going to do next?" And many of you have wanted to say, "The ego made me do it."

Why not be afraid of the ego? It's simple. Because all the ego is, is you wearing a mask. Are you going to let the mask scare you? The one that you have designed so well to be awful and surprising and shocking. Are you going to be frightened by the mask you're wearing? Or are you going to remember that there's only one you and there's only one Mind that you are, which you are either using well or using poorly. You won't be afraid of the ego if you remember what's behind the mask. It's You. The essential Real You, the Son, the Daughter, of God, the Presence of God and nothing else, even though you have crafted this mask and then you've gotten so used to seeing it that you think it's you; not what's underneath the mask.

And then because you can't avoid feeling guilty about wearing a mask, you think of the ego objectively as something other than you. "The ego made me do it. The ego, this thing that's separate from me, is influencing me." And then you're in the illusion. You're stuck until something or someone reminds you that all there is to the ego is you wearing a mask.

RAJ READING: DO NOT BE AFRAID OF THE EGO. It DOES depend on your mind, and as you made it by believing in it, so you can dispel it by withdrawing belief FROM it.

RAJ: The moment you remember that all there is to the ego is you wearing a mask, you take the power away from the mask. You take the power away from whatever interesting definition you've given to the ego that makes it seem as though it's different from you. And you're brought back into the clarity of knowing that you're the only one, let us say, in quotes "in authority" unquote here; not some ego that's controlling you and affecting you and turning everything to your disadvantage.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Do not project the responsibility for your belief in it onto anyone ELSE, or you will PRESERVE the belief.

RAJ: Remember the minute you give something away, you keep it. It's a Law. It's the Way It Works.

RAJ READING: When you are willing to accept sole responsibility for the ego's existence YOURSELF you will have laid aside all anger and all attack, because they COME from an attempt to project responsibility for your OWN errors.

RAJ: You use anger and attack to distract you from the fact that it's not your ego doing it; it's you doing it behind the mask and dissociating yourself from the whole matter.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: But having ACCEPTED the errors as yours,...

RAJ: And the use of the word "errors" is good. Having accepted the deeds you've done as yours, and not some ego out there, you're in a position to release them.

Again.

RAJ READING: But having ACCEPTED the errors as yours, DO NOT KEEP THEM.

RAJ: Well now, that sounds like you've got to give them away. But if you give them away, you keep them. No. There's a difference between projecting responsibility for what you've done on someone or something else and giving it away in that fashion, and not keeping them as it's described here.

How do you not keep them?

RAJ READING: Give them over quickly to the Holy Spirit to be undone completely, so that ALL their affects will vanish from your minds, and from the Sonship AS A WHOLE.

RAJ: Okay. So here we're abandoning the idea that there is an ego that can do something to you, which you can call yours, by recognizing that there's only one Mind right where you are and there's only one you, and so therefore the ego is nothing more than you wearing a mask. And we've also got this something called the Holy Spirit which you can talk about as though it's out there. And you can turn it over to the Holy Spirit. You can give it to the Holy Spirit. And yet we have found that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. So let's be very clear here. And this is further explanation of the Meaning of Singularity. There's only one thing going on; a Singularity; the infinite or unlimited, unbounded Conscious Awareness that you are which is called Mind, which you either use poorly or well. When it's used poorly, it's called the ego. When it's used well, it's called the Holy Spirit.

So, you're not turning it over to some "powers that be" out there. You know what you're doing? You're turning the problems, as well as your very own attention, toward the Place of Excellence in you, the Altar in you. And as you do that, you let go of the ego, and the Holy Spirit takes it away, you can say.

I want to go back to the beginning of the paragraph now.

RAJ READING: DO NOT BE AFRAID OF THE EGO. It DOES depend on your mind, and as you made it by believing in it, so you can dispel it by withdrawing belief FROM it. Do not project the responsibility for your belief in it onto anyone ELSE, or you will PRESERVE the belief. When you are willing to accept sole responsibility for the ego's existence YOURSELF you will have laid aside all anger and all attack, because they COME from an attempt to project responsibility for your OWN errors. But...

RAJ: And this is the way you keep from accidentally convicting yourself of doing something awful and wrong that you can then be fooled into thinking you have to pay a penalty for.

RAJ READING: But having ACCEPTED the errors as yours, DO NOT KEEP THEM. Give them over quickly to the Holy Spirit to be undone completely, so that ALL their affects will vanish from your minds, and from the Sonship AS A WHOLE.

RAJ: They'll vanish from the Sonship as a whole because you will have withdrawn your investment in them and you will stop introducing them as extraneous nonsense into the Singularity that can't actually be divided.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit will teach you to perceive BEYOND belief because truth IS beyond belief, and His...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...perception IS true.

RAJ: This is a unifying experience because the Holy Spirit, being nothing more than your Right Mind, is your Right Mind revealing to you Truth, which increases your experience of your Integrity, your Divine Integrity, and what you might call the eternal platform of your Being from which you be. And so it lifts you above what I'm going to call the poor thought models you have been employing relative to your definition of yourself into a broader, more infinite, and therefore more stable and permanent experience of your Eternality, of the Singularity of You.

Now, continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego can be completely forgotten at ANY time because it was always a belief that is totally incredible.

RAJ: Not credible.

RAJ READING: No-one can KEEP a belief he has judged to be unbelievable.

RAJ: Well, if you will during this next week remind yourself often that all there is to the ego is you wearing a mask, pretending to be what you aren't, it will be easy for you to say, "That is silly. That is a ridiculous thing for me to do. And it's even more ridiculous for me to look at myself in the mask and think that the mask is me and then be afraid of it." It's that simple. And it's that simple to abandon the attention you give to it so that you might feel yourself in your innocence behind the mask and underneath the costume you're wearing.

RAJ READING: No-one can KEEP a belief he has judged to be unbelievable. The more you learn about the ego, the more you realize that it cannot BE believed. The incredible cannot be understood because it IS unbelievable. The utter meaninglessness of all perception that comes from the unbelievable must be apparent, but it is not RECOGNIZED as beyond belief because it was made BY belief.

The whole purpose of this course is to teach you that the ego is unbelievable and will forever BE unbelievable. You who made the ego by believing the unbelievable cannot make this judgment alone. By accepting the Atonement for YOURSELF, you are deciding against the belief that you can BE alone, thus dispelling the idea of separation, and affirming your true identification with the whole Kingdom as literally PART of you. This identification is as beyond doubt as it is beyond belief. Your wholeness has no limits because being is in infinity.

RAJ: Now, when you are emerging from a state of mind in which you've been using beliefs as the criteria for your understanding and interpretation of life and of being, you have no means available to you within the realm of beliefs to experience what is beyond belief. You're looking through the lens of belief. And so, in order to get beyond beliefs, you have to be willing to take off the belief glasses you're wearing. You have to be willing to abandon the structures of belief as the valid criteria for determining what everything is.

And you cannot do this by yourself. You cannot do it from within the framework of being something separate, on your own, independent and capable of authorizing anything. And so you have to reach beyond belief. That's where turning toward the Altar, the Place of Excellence in you, comes into play. That's where turning toward me, or toward your Guide, or toward the Father, comes into play. When you reach outside or beyond everything that you believe and say "Help" and invite that which is Real and that which is in its Right Mind, that which is awake in to your environment, in to you. What happens when you do that? If you are genuine and if you persist in your desire to be infilled from that which is beyond belief, you will find the Divine One That You Are, underneath the mask and underneath the costume you've adopted, beginning to be highlighted, you might say, illuminated to you so that you have an Experience of Being that is different from the one you were getting when you were only observing the mask and the costume you had created, which left the You underneath it out of sight and out of mind, as it were.

I keep telling you that you aren't what you think you are. I keep telling you that because you do think you are what you think you are. And you're very certain of it and it's foreign to you to think that maybe you aren't what you think you are. And so I will constantly remind you of this so that you remember to be curious beyond your belief patterns.

You know, when the Truth is revealed to you as an experience, it isn't that you will now have a new and deeper and fuller and truer awareness of what believing is. You won't believe the Truth. You will be Knowing the Truth. It won't be belief at all. It won't be a new and better belief. It will be Knowing, with a capital "K", or what the Course calls Knowledge. But I prefer to use the word "Knowing" now because it's a verb, and not a noun. Knowledge can be accumulated because it's an object, you might say. But Knowing is a Living Movement of Mind, of Awareness, of Being Conscious. It's Living, and it's in the now, and it's about the now, and it's consistent with the Idea of Singularity that we've been talking about.

Singularity becomes confused when you think you can be a knower who's in possession of knowledge. But Knowing the Truth is the Conscious Experience of being it, of it being You, and of all that is characteristic of it, including the fact that it's Infinite, that it's all-inclusive, and therefore, because you are having an Experience of being Truth, you have an experience of not being tiny, of being the Infiniteness yourself. You see?

Again.

RAJ READING: The whole purpose of this course is to teach you that the ego is unbelievable and will forever BE unbelievable.

RAJ: Now it isn't trying to teach you this as a bit of knowledge. It's purpose is to move you into an inner act of willingness to yield to that which is outside the framework of your beliefs so that you will not be met with new knowledge to use, but so that you are met with an Experience that is undeniable, an Experience of the Truth of You, a Movement of Clarity called Knowing.

RAJ READING: You who made the ego by believing the unbelievable cannot make this judgment alone. By accepting the Atonement...

RAJ: In other words, making this invitation, and making room for the influx so that your very mind is returned to a Conscious State of Singularity.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the following words "for YOURSELF" this time, although he did read them above.]

RAJ READING: ...you are deciding against the belief that you can BE alone, thus dispelling the idea of separation, and affirming your true identification with the whole...

RAJ: [slight pause] ...with the whole...

RAJ READING: ...Kingdom as literally PART of you. This identification...

RAJ: And I'm adding, "when experienced."

RAJ READING: ...is as beyond doubt as it is beyond belief. Your wholeness has no limits because being is in infinity.

RAJ: I don't want you to worry if you're not getting every single word that I'm saying. What you need to catch is the feeling of the Meaning, and then pay attention to that feeling. Nurture it by giving it your attention, because then the feeling will grow in you and, you might say, uncover itself more fully to you as you continue to give your attention to it.

Now the next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Extension of the Kingdom

Only YOU can limit your creative power, but God wills to release it. He no more wills you to deprive yourself of your creations than He wills to deprive Himself of His. Do not withhold your gifts to the Sonship, or you withhold yourself from God.

RAJ: Again, you withhold your Love from someone else, a Love that isn't yours to give alone, but a Love that is yours to give if you let it in from the Father, if you withhold it from your Brother, you stop the flow from the Father, and so you withhold yourself from the Experience of God.

RAJ READING: Selfishness is of the ego, but self-fullness is of the Soul because that is how God created it. The Holy Spirit is the part of the mind that lies between the ego and the Soul, mediating between them ALWAYS in favor of the Soul. To the ego this is partiality,...

RAJ: Of course! It's leaving the ego out.

RAJ READING: To the ego this is partiality, and it therefore responds as if it were the part that is being sided AGAINST. To the Soul this is truth, because it knows its fullness, and cannot conceive of any part from which it is excluded.

RAJ: Soul. I know what everyone thinks the Soul is. It's something you have. It's something that survives death. It's something that came into your body when you were born. It's seen as an object, a thing. But I'm telling you that Soul is the sensing capacity of Mind. It is the Mind's capacity, with a capital "M", the Mind's capacity to sense/feel the capital "M" Meaning set in place by the Father in every Aspect of Creation. Soul is your capacity to recognize God in each and every thing.

RAJ READING: The Soul KNOWS that the consciousness of all its brothers is included in its own, as IT is included in God. The power of the whole Sonship AND of its Creator is therefore the Soul's own fullness, rendering its creations equally whole and equal in perfection.

RAJ: Its creations—and I'm not reading from the book—its creations are what you could call the affirmation of God that it senses/feels in each and every thing; its recognition of God in each and every thing as an experience, not an idea, not a thought, not a belief, you might say confirms Creation and extends it thereby. Soul, which is You, never creates separate from God. And I will keep bringing this to your attention because the ego in each of you would like to arrive at a point of having the power of God for divine good reasons so as to be able to do things on your own without asking God about it. And that will never be the experience.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego cannot prevail against a totality which includes God, and any totality MUST include God. Everything He created is given all His power because it is part of Him, and shares His Being with Him. Creating is the opposite of loss, as blessing is the opposite of sacrifice. Being MUST be extended. That is how it retains the knowledge of ITSELF.

RAJ: Soul extends Being by confirming God in everything, by being the constant Conscious... I will say, the constant Living Conscious Awareness of What God Is Being right there and right there and right there, and everywhere, infinitely. Creation which God Is Being is extended by the confirmation of it that occurs when Consciousness recognizes God somewhere. And when you are awake, Being Itself is the Conscious Experience of recognizing God everywhere simultaneously, fully, infinitely, gloriously. It doesn't matter that you might not be able to translate this at the moment into your daily experience. The premise must be laid before anything can be built upon it. And that's what is happening right now.

RAJ READING: Being MUST be extended. That is how it retains the knowledge of ITSELF.

RAJ: That's how the Singularity persists, if I may use that word.

RAJ READING: The Soul...

RAJ: Your capacity to feel/recognize God in each and every thing.

RAJ READING: ...yearns to share its being as ITS Creator did.

RAJ: It doesn't want to withhold the acknowledgement of it. It wants to express it infinitely. It wants to express the joy of the experience infinitely. And it does it spontaneously.

RAJ READING: Created BY sharing, its will...

RAJ: Meaning the Soul's will.

RAJ READING: ...is to create. It does not wish to CONTAIN God, but to EXTEND His Being.

RAJ: And it extends it, again, by sharing it. It is as though Soul is a light bulb that glows brighter and extends in Light the Joy of the Experience of the Meaning of God discovered in each and every thing forever. It is almost as though it broadcasts it in pulses of illumination—illumination imbued with Joy.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The extension of God's Being is the Soul's ONLY function. Its fullness cannot be contained, any more than can the fullness of its Creator. Fullness IS extension.

RAJ: Now...

RAJ READING: The ego's whole thought system blocks extension, and thus blocks your only function.

RAJ: You notice it didn't say the Soul's only Function. It's letting you know that the Soul's only Function is your only Function. Again, you can't project the Soul out there, along with the Holy Spirit, or the ego, and talk about it and what it does. None of this means a thing if it doesn't relate to you, if it isn't being brought home to you that Soul is You, that Love is You, that Mind, with a capital "M" that is God, is You, that You are the Christ.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego's whole thought system blocks extension, and thus blocks your only function. It therefore blocks your joy, and that is why you perceive yourselves as unfulfilled. Unless you create you ARE unfulfilled,...

RAJ: Well how do you neglect to create? By having something else more important to do than to discover, recognize and acknowledge God in each and every thing. You've got business to attend to. You've got concerns to deal with. You've got problems to solve. You see?

RAJ READING: Unless you create you ARE unfulfilled, but God does not know of unfulfillment, and therefore you MUST create. YOU may not know your own creations, but this can no more interfere with their reality than your unawareness of your Soul can interfere with its being.

RAJ: In other words, no matter how you define yourself, no matter how limited it is, What You Divinely Are continues to be What It Divinely Is and it continues to fulfill its Function. And it does this while you have a preoccupation with a daydream, so to speak, where you're not paying any attention at all to what is going on around you, and you give all of your attention to your imagination, just like a student looking out the window and daydreaming who doesn't hear what the teacher is saying, doesn't change the fact that the teacher is saying something and the student is actually at his desk in the classroom.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The Kingdom is forever extending because it is in the Mind of God. You do not KNOW your joy because you do not know your own self-fullness. Exclude ANY part of the Kingdom from yourself, and...

RAJ: Surprise! Surprise!

RAJ READING: ...you are NOT whole.

RAJ: And that's what you find yourself preoccupied with.

RAJ READING: Exclude ANY part of the Kingdom from yourself, and you are NOT whole.

RAJ: Well, how do you exclude the Kingdom? What? The Kingdom of what? The Kingdom of Heaven. How do you exclude Reality? By giving it a different definition. By calling it the world and universe; a material event in a physical universe. That's how you exclude the Kingdom. By refusing to see it for What It Really Is and giving preference to the definition you've made-up about it.

RAJ READING: A split mind cannot perceive its fullness, and needs the miracle of its wholeness to dawn upon it and heal it. This reawakens the wholeness in it, and restores it to the Kingdom because of its ACCEPTANCE of wholeness.

RAJ: Okay. Now we have another word that can help you to understand the meaning of the word "Singularity." It's Wholeness. Undivided Wholeness is Singularity. The miracle of the Wholeness of Mind needs to dawn upon the Mind and heal it.

RAJ READING: This reawakens the wholeness in it,...

RAJ: As a thought or an idea? No. As an Experience. An Experience that you can have in the grocery store, or wherever you are, where all of a sudden you are immense. And in the immenseness of What You Are, everything about the grocery store is included in You and is part of You, while at the same time being a part of God and being part of the Wholeness of Infinite Singularity of Infinite Being.

RAJ READING: This reawakens the wholeness in it, and restores it to the Kingdom because of its ACCEPTANCE of wholeness.

RAJ: Speaking of the Mind that let's the miracle of Wholeness dawn on it.

RAJ READING: The full appreciation of its self-fullness makes selfishness impossible and extension inevitable.

RAJ: Why? Why does it make extension inevitable? Because the Experience is so glorious that you can't keep your mouth shut. You can't keep your Being shut. Your Being pulses with the spontaneous generation of Light that is imbued with Joy, that is experienced, you might say, broadcast infinitely instantaneously.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: That is why there is perfect peace in the Kingdom. Every Soul IS fulfilling its function, and only complete fulfillment IS peace.

RAJ: Peace is the fundamental of the Singularity of Being. Peace that is not flawed by anything extraneous to it. Now it doesn't say that is why there will be perfect Peace in the Kingdom. It doesn't say every Soul will fulfill its Function.

It says:

RAJ READING: That is why there is perfect peace in the Kingdom. Every Soul IS fulfilling its function, and only complete fulfillment IS peace.

RAJ: I need to remind you again that the Divine One That You Are who's having this little fantasy of not being divine is fulfilling its Function perfectly and infinitely. It's important to understand this because as I've said before you're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you are at that point and must understand yourself therefrom. If you will accept this statement as an absolute fact, you will abandon any practices you have been engaging in to try to improve yourself and to become equal to something that you aren't yet, to become something more than you are at the moment.

Waking up is a matter of abandoning the doubt and the tiny sense of yourself so that you might have available to you the full experience of What You Divinely Are that you are at this moment. So this has less to do with learning than it does with a willingness to yield into a greater Experience of What You Are, which you can yield into because it's already present and fully functioning.

You know what? Ultimately problems are solved by abandoning the attempt to solve them, by abandoning the position of a presence that can solve problems by itself by virtue of skill it develops. And instead, right in the apparent presence of the problem desiring to experience What's Really Going On in its Wholeness right now, to experience What You Are in your Wholeness right now, rather than working out the resolution of all the little mistakes you have made in your mind that have brought about this situation that is a problem for you, so that you might rearrange your beliefs and improve your beliefs and correct all of these little misperceptions and thereby be free of the problem because you have been skillful on your own.

You abandon that whole attempt. You abandon every attempt to reinforce what you think you are and you say, "Holy Spirit—meaning my Self with a capital 'S'—Holy Spirit, I desire to experience the Wholeness of What I Am and the Wholeness of What I Am Being right now, in spite of that fact that I thought I was something else that was far less. I desire to be infilled and illuminated with What I Am Fully Being, divinely speaking, right now." Or even better put, "I desire to experience What The Father Is Being fully of Himself right here where I am."

And you invite it in. And you let the desire for the influx of the experience hold more importance, being more paramount to you, than the act of defense that you would go through by trying to improve your mind and your beliefs by correcting the beliefs with improved beliefs, and thus manipulating correction of the problem into being by virtue of an act of will on your part, and concentration and focused effort that afterwards you will be able to look back on and say, "I did well. I did well." And all the time you will never have abandoned the separated sense of existence, because you will have never desired to have the experience of the Infinite Divine One That You Are at this moment that God Is Being right there where you are at this moment in which you are being Whole and wholly involved in the joyous expression of it because of the spontaneous Joy that is experienced when you've let yourself be your Real Function.

Now, I am aware that these words could be called airy-fairy. But I am conveying to you a feeling that I want you to catch. It's a feeling about Reality. And it's also a feeling about What You Are. And it's a feeling of what the Function of being What You Are is, together with the very clear statement that I'm making that right now you, in spite of what you think you're doing, are engaged in being What You Divinely Are. Because you are and because it is going on, you can dare to be curious to experience it and invite the experience in. And give preference to inviting the experience over the preference to be a successful problem-solver on your own.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Insanity...

RAJ: Hmm. Insanity is forgetting that all there is to the ego is you wearing a mask and believing that your mask and costume are what you are and determine how you must be.

RAJ READING: Insanity APPEARS to add to reality,...

RAJ: Certainly it appears to add a mask. And it appears to add a costume, doesn't it, that God didn't make.

RAJ READING: Insanity APPEARS to add to reality, but no-one would claim that what it adds is true. Insanity is therefore the NONextension of truth, which blocks joy because it blocks creation, and thus blocks self-fulfillment.

RAJ: If you're miserable, you're having an insane experience. If you're miserable, it means that you have not been engaged in extending the Kingdom. It means you have not been engaged in desiring to be the Evidence of Love.

RAJ READING: The unfulfilled MUST be depressed because their self-fulness is unknown to them. Your creations...

RAJ: And I'm adding the word: "...however..."

RAJ READING: ...are protected FOR you because the Holy Spirit, Who is in your mind, knows of them and can bring them INTO your awareness whenever you will let Him. They are there as part of your own being because your fulfillment INCLUDES them. The creations of every Son of God are yours since every creation belongs to everyone, being created for the Sonship as a whole.

RAJ: When you have an "Aha!" experience in which the Divinity of Being has registered with you more fully than ever before and it is transformational in you, you spontaneously radiate the joy of that experience. And it is radiated without reservation. Like Light, it moves in every direction endlessly, just because. It's not directed specifically here or specifically there. The Joy of Being radiates to the Whole Sonship. It is therefore an all-inclusive act, not by design, but by virtue of the Nature of Joy which, like the Nature of Light, expands in all directions, just because.

Now this is important.

RAJ READING: You have NOT failed to add to the inheritance of the Sons of God, and thus have not failed to secure it for yourselves. If it was the Will of God to give it to you, He gave it forever. If it was His Will that you have it forever, He gave you the means for keeping it, AND YOU HAVE DONE SO.

RAJ: Now mind you, I want you to continue to feel for the Meaning of Singularity as I talk about it. What has just been said here is an expression of Singularity. Singularity has no ifs, ands, or buts; no maybes; no what ifs. Listen to this.

RAJ READING: If it was the Will of God to give it to you, He gave it forever. If it was His Will that you have it forever, He gave you the means for keeping it, AND YOU HAVE DONE SO.

RAJ: That's the Singularity.

Ooo! You know what though? That sounds like you're being controlled. Man, if God gave it to you, you've got it. No choice about it. And if part of what He gave you was the Function of extending it, and you're extending it because that's the Way It Works, well, that's being controlled too. There's no choice about it. This is why you don't abandon your egos quickly. Because, man oh man, you want options and you think you have a right to options.

But when you claim the right to options, you are actively denying Singularity. And when you deny Singularity and imaginatively opt for something else, you introduce chaos. You introduce fragmentation. And it's a miserable experience. By Law, it's a miserable experience. By virtue of the fact that everything operates according to the Laws of Singularity, when you attempt to do what you cannot do, it is a miserable experience.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Disobeying God's Will is meaningful only to the insane. In truth it is impossible.

RAJ: And I will add that since in Truth, it is impossible, you have not succeeded in doing it. And therefore you are not guilty of having done it, and you do not need to pay a penalty for being guilty. You simply need to stop behaving as though you are the mask you have put on in front of your real face and start behaving as the Real One that's behind the mask.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your self-fullness is as boundless as God's. Like His, it extends forever and in perfect peace. Its radiance is so intense that it creates in perfect joy, and only the whole can be born of its wholeness.

RAJ: Now, listen to this.

RAJ READING: Be confident that you have never lost your identity and the extensions which maintain it in wholeness and peace. Miracles are an EXPRESSION of this confidence. They are reflections both of your own proper identification with your brothers, and of your own awareness that your identification IS maintained by extension.

RAJ: This is the Truth about You now! It is as though you are a light bulb putting out a billion megawatts of light that has a cover over it with little holes in the cover, and so only twenty watts of light emerges. And the twenty watts of light is what you are confident you are. And I'm telling you that megawatts of light are What You Are already. And all you have to do is begin to conceive of yourself that way, begin to accept the Idea that the Ultimate is What You already Are. And that it is in full... for lack of better words, full effulgence at this moment. And all that's necessary is for you to remember that all there is to the ego is you wearing a mask so that you can determine to take off the mask. And you take off the mask by going within to that Place of Excellence in you, to the Altar, and you ask the Holy Spirit, you ask the Father, you say, "I desire to feel, to experience the Wholeness of What I Divinely Am at this moment, even though, to my sense that isn't what I am at this moment. I will make room for the experience because I want it and I ask You to help me have it."

And that is where we will stop today. If you think that I have said many abstract things today, don't be fooled. They might have sounded that way to you, but they were very specific and they were very pointed. And they will have the effect of triggering [snapping fingers] light bulbs going on in your mind as the week progresses. I'm simply asking you to be willing to consider the possibility that the abstract things you think I said might have the most profound and practical relevancy to the specifics of your life this week.

Okay. I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

July 11, 2004--A Course In Miracles Study Group with Raj/Jesus

Discussion Today

Topic: That you create an ego for yourself and you create an ego for everyone else. Also saying "No."

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Before I give you the page numbers, I want to take a moment to backtrack a little. It's very easy to become confused about the ego. And last week we read that you create an ego for yourself, and you create an ego for everyone else. Mm. So does that mean that when someone else behaves badly, it is as though you are behaving them badly because you are the one who created their ego? Are you responsible for their bad behavior? And if they are exhibiting bad behavior, are you responsible for correcting it? And if you don't correct it, are you guilty for not correcting it? If you don't pay attention to the obvious, if you get too much into your head, it becomes very sticky and complex and complicated. So let's back way up.

We're going to back up to the place where you said, "Father, I'd rather see things my way." We're going to back up to the place where you got your divorce from your Father, at that point where you said in so many words, "I want to give the definition to this and to that and to everything else. And I'm not going to pay any attention to the Meanings, You, Father, have embodied in everything that I'm now going to give a new definition to." As I said, in that act of separation, you lost your clear experience of your Identity. You became an orphan, so to speak. And the way in which that was experienced was that as you gave definitions to everything, you realized, "Mm. Something is here giving these definitions. I must be someone in my own right. Well, who in the heck am I?"

And of course, you're still asking that question, aren't you? "Who am I?" As you began to formulate a definition of who you were, who were as the author of new definitions of everything, you began formulating an ego, a definition of yourself. Each of you as you did this, you might say, gave definitions to things in different orders from each other. Each of you moved away from the Conscious Experience of Creation as God Is Being It in unique ways. And as a result, the body of definitions and the meanings you were giving them and how they related to each other became a unique complex of mental constructs of ways of looking at things and what things meant relative to each other. And so your formulation of your ego, your sense of yourself, is very, very individual; different from each other.

Waking up, as I've said before, is a matter of retracing these steps that each of you took and undoing the definitions that you gave to everything, as well as the meanings, and as well as how all of these things that you gave definition to explain life in a larger context. The only ego that you have created is the one you developed as a result of your bill of divorcement from your Father and your becoming an orphan. This is the only ego you can be responsible for undoing. You can only let go of, undo, dissolve, that which you have created in your imagination.

But now, we read that you also create an ego for everyone else. This is where it's helpful to be clear. Anyone else who is caught in an ego experience of being, is caught in their own set of self-definitions that they created as a result of their bill of divorcement from the Father. Just as, we'll say, when you were born you brought your baggage with you into this life experience, each of you have brought your own well-formed baggage with you into this experience. And no other one in this experience is responsible for the suitcase and its contents that you have brought with you with tight fists.

Now, if you have forgotten that you're connected to the Father, to God, if you have forgotten that you are Divine Being and you think you are the definition you have of yourself in which God and your Divinity has been entirely forgotten, you are going to make a spontaneous assumption that what you believe about yourself is true about everyone else. And so you will form a picture about them in your mind and a definition of them. And it will be absolutely colored by your own definition of yourself. In effect, you will in your mind create an ego for them which, mind you, has very little to do with the ego they've created for themselves. It's purely your own creation, this ego that you see out there and that you talk about and that has characteristics that you're so sure of.

And the fact is that you approach everyone on the basis of your definition of them, the picture you have of them. You approach them on that basis and you respond to what they say on the basis of how that fits in with the picture you have of them. And so you're never responding to them. You're always responding to them coupled with the picture you have of them. And you think you're having communication. And actually, they're doing the same thing with you. So you're not even connecting with their egos. Do you see what I'm saying? You're not connecting with Who They Divinely Are, but you're also not connecting with them as an ego, the ego they see themselves to be. That's how complete the separation is.

Now loving people, I'm going to put it that way, people with whom it's easy to be, people with whom it's easy to grow, and I'm saying this humanly speaking, are people who are willing to sidestep the picture they have because they want to get to know you. And this happens in most semi-permanent and permanent relationships. In other words, there is a desire to connect with the ego that's there, rather than the ego that you have pictured about them. And you all experience this kind of attention as pleasing and satisfying and fulfilling. You learn how to be vulnerable with each other, you say, how to be real, how to be together in an undefended way. But mind you, this is still you as an ego attempting to lower the barriers between you and another ego and find some harmony, and some joy, some pleasure. But always at the bottom line you are on guard because consciously, or unconsciously, you know that your position as an orphan isn't true, and therefore everything you're doing at the bottom line isn't trustworthy. And therefore, no one that you're trying to get to know and be undefended with is trustworthy either at the bottom line. And so, no matter how close you get, you still remain on guard and there isn't really unity.

There is a trap, you might say, there is a danger that you must watch for when you are studying the Course, especially the Course, because it is your natural habit to take whatever you bring into your experience and incorporate it into your present sense of yourself. And so you try to incorporate it into your present ego sense of yourself, your private separated sense of self, so that you might become a better private, separated sense of self. You don't realize that the function of the Course is to entirely invalidate your separated sense of self, not improve it. You don't realize that its function is to invalidate it so that you abandon it. Why? Or for what? In order to connect once again with the Divine One That You Are, with your Right Mind, with your... with the Mind That You Are that claims no separation from Its Source.

The dangerous trap here is that it's very easy to begin to think that because quote "you create an ego for another" unquote that everything another is doing is a reflection of something you're doing. And this is not true. It's no more true of you than it is of me. Your ignorant behavior, I am not responsible for. Your decision to give definitions to things by yourself, I am not responsible for. And I'll tell you something else. Correcting you is not a responsibility of mine which I've failed at for at least 2,000 years. It is not my responsibility to straighten you out because I have a poor perception of you. I am not creating you having a poor perception of yourself.

But you know what? I am your Brother and that means you are my Brother. It's not a one-way street. I am your Brother and you are my Brother or Sister. We're Siblings. We're Family. And so, I speak up if you're willing to listen. And those are key words. I speak up if you are willing to listen. Because I want you to experience your Birthright as Family. Because I don't want you to be suffering and hurting. I don't do it because I'm responsible for your suffering. And I don't do it because I'm responsible for seeing to it that you don't suffer any longer. I did not make your decision to get a divorce from the Father. And I can't undo that decision. You must. And you must do it because something in you wants to, not because someone has told you to, or told you to so well that you were so inspired that you couldn't help yourself. So that you couldn't help yourself.

Now, each one of you, like me, is responsible for abandoning the pictures you have created in your mind about each other. You do have the responsibility if you want to wake up, if you want to experience more fulfillment in your life. You must undo and abandon the convictions you have in your mind about your Brothers and Sisters, about your fellowman, so that they do not stand in the way of your opportunity to recognize What They Divinely Are. And also so that you have a better opportunity for communication, even at the level of egos.

I'll tell you something. Kindness is kindness whether it's expressed by One Who's Awake or one who sees himself as an ego. You can't alter what Love is. You can't alter what kindness is. And so it is valuable to abandon the picture you have created about another that you hold between you and them like a sieve that only lets through that of them which matches the picture you have of them. It's well to abandon that. And it's well, humanly speaking, to practice kindness more, and to be loving more. But that isn't the answer, that isn't the ultimate answer.

The ultimate answer lies in everything that I've been saying since we started going through the Course, everything I've been saying about you. That you are absolutely Divine. That you aren't behind the Point of Perfection, you're not moving toward it; you are there right now. And that's where you need to comprehend yourself from--at that Point.

I am reminding you that you are more than you thought you were so that it might really begin to register with you. Why? Because until it registers with you, you will not be able to conceive that it's true about your Brother either, and you will not have the justification for being open to a fuller experience of the Divinity of your Brother. And you will not be able to recognize that your Brother's flaws aren't real; [that they are] not actual. They're imagined and believed. And until you can see that, you will not... you will not be able to be an agent for change.

"Oh! Oh!" Now your ego grabs hold of that. "Oh! So I am supposed to be an agent for change. I am supposed to help my Brother. I am supposed to heal my Brother. I am responsible for my Brother. And I will be guilty if I don't, because I'm supposed to be an agent for change." No. You're supposed to be, what I'm going to call, an agent for confirmation, an agent for confirmation of What Is True.

An agent for confirmation of What Is True is one who is no longer joining in confirming what isn't true. An agent for confirmation is one who doesn't confirm a Brother's ego that that Brother thinks he has, and is, to him. You see? Because when you withdraw from participating in that kind of confirmation, you weaken the ego's game. And you weaken the ego's game, we're going to say, socially with each other as you disregard it, because you are giving preference to What Is True about them.

Now I mentioned that I respond to you when you're ready to listen. The fact is that when you're not ready to listen, you don't listen and so you don't hear. It's different in human relationships. And you must listen, you must learn to listen carefully. You must learn to observe carefully. And you must be willing not to abide in what you wish. I mean by that, don't abide in a picture you have of how you would like things to be.

You must pay attention to recognize the signs of whether when you're confronted by a call for help from a Brother that Brother is really wanting to change, or whether the call for help is the first move in a competitive game of "who's best," in a competitive game of struggle because they like the experience of struggle. Especially if that other one knows that you... it's your nature to give the benefit of the doubt, that it's your nature to want to see the best in them, that it's your nature to not doubt them, that you are wanting to practice these things, because then they can just wind you around their finger and yank and make you uncomfortable, and ask for more... ask for more help so that they can resist it even more and increase the dynamic. And your spirituality must not be so airy-fairy that you don't want to look squarely at the behavior and the motive behind this other one's behavior.

To try to be an agent for change for someone who does not want to change is foolish. And you know what? Your ego, and perhaps the ego of the other, says, "Oh! Well, you're not practicing what you preach. Oh! You're not being very Christian because you should be willing to hang in here with me. I know at least that much about the way you see things and what's important about you. And you're not being consistent with your very own standards." And they put the screw to you a little bit more and get you to feeling guilty and defensive, and then you really feel bad, if you're not clear about what the ego is.

Each one of you has to retrace your very own steps that you took away from your clear Mind, your Right Mind. I can't do it for you. I don't try to do it for you. I don't imply that I will or can do it for you. I make it clear to you that this is something you have to do. And you have to do it for your own reasons. I don't chase after you and say, "You need to change your mind." And although that's not very satisfying to those who think they know what a real helper is and how a real helper ought to be, I am telling you that from moment one with you, I am telling you that the power is in your hands and your hands alone. And you have the capacity to retrace your steps. And that's empowering, because at all times I am acknowledging that the power lies with you to undo what you did.

And let me tell you something else. You always have the capacity to undo what you did because it's something you did. You can't be overwhelmed by a task that's bigger than you're capable of dealing with because you're just undoing a step that you already took.

Now anyone who, for their own reasons, wants to remember What They Divinely Are and wants to wake up, I will speak to and I will companion with consciously. And we will, you might say, go Home together, or become more conscious of Reality right... together. But those who want to play games and tug-of-wars and battles in the name of waking up, I leave alone, because there's nothing I can do until their own willingness comes into play. Okay. So far, so good.

Now what if this someone whom you're willing to not engage with in a tug-of-war, or a battle, or a power play, won't leave you alone? What if they cry "Help!" louder and louder and more and more obnoxiously. Not for the purpose of hearing the answer that would stop their suffering, but for the dynamic of conflict and the sense of power that they get from it and to which they are addicted.

Well I'll tell you, here's where you have to really be... really be unchristian. What do I mean by that? I mean it in this sense. Being a Christian is an idea. It's a definition. It's a way of behaving that's been formulated through the development of ideas that aren't any more real about you than any of the other definitions you've come up with. When someone aggressively says, "I am an ego. I am what I believe I am. And I insist upon your acknowledging me for the ego I am. I require you to join me in understanding me this way and accepting me this way. And I will not give you any rest until you do so.", well, you're going to have to find a way to say "No." That's what I mean by being unchristian. You have to find a way to bring that style of relationship to an end.

And you know what? It isn't really that hard because there's only one element that will keep it from being broken off, and that's guilt. If you feel guilty in any way for saying "No," it will feed the other's fire. But when you come to that place in you where you are saying "No" without reservation in the slightest, when the "No" expresses a Singularity in you, the absence of guilt will be immediately recognized. And the one looking for conflict will have lost a mark. In other words, that one will recognize that you truly are no longer available to play the game. And that other one will not waste their time with you one more moment. They will go off looking for another mark; someone else who can be bamboozled.

That's why I said that there's a trap, a danger, in the way the ego would tend to use or tempt you to use the Course. Because if you can be fooled into thinking that you are actually yourself creating another's bad behavior, and that you are creating an ego there where they are, it will mean that you're responsible for the problem you see, or the problem that is being presented to you. And you will not be in a position to correct the dilemma because you will not place the responsibility where it is--in them--and call for them to correct their addiction to their ego sense of their self, their ego sense of themselves. And you will have taken the bait.

And it will be almost impossible to become free of it until perhaps you have arrived at a point where you are so miserable that you're willing to be unchristian and say "No" for the sake of your sanity, without reservation and without guilt. Until you say "No" to the games, the games will not stop. And until the games stop, there will be no opportunity for real change, real correction to occur.

Now, until you withdraw, until you abandon, in your own mind the ego you have created for another by having developed definitions of them, until you do that and until you have arrived at a point where you're willing to acknowledge that maybe, just maybe, you're an absolutely, utterly Divine Being that needs a clearer and fuller experience of his Divinity, you will not be in a position to recognize that that Divinity is there in your Brother as well, in spite of his or her bad behavior. And you therefore will not understand that that one has the capacity in his or her own right, just as you do, to retrace his or her steps, which is what is called for, which is the only thing that will constitute correction. And until that happens in you, you're liable, you're vulnerable, to being sucked into the games of manipulation. And you're unable to be in any way an agent for change.

Does any of this not make sense? I'm asking. Are you making your Brother behave badly? At the bottom line, no. Are you aggravating his bad behavior? All the time. And the reason you're aggravating his bad behavior is because you're looking from an ego frame of reference and you are seeing an ego out there, and you are not therefore responding to him, whether it's his actual ego, if I may use those words, or to the Divine One That He Really Is. And so your perceptions of him cause you to behave in a way that doesn't involve real communication, and will therefore always misrepresent you and misrepresent them and confound the dilemma even further. Does that make sense?

But, saying "No" to the game seems to meet with the same response as aggravating the bad behavior, because when you say "No," you're withdrawing from the game. You're not available for the game any longer. You're not in the game any longer. The other one who is into game playing says, "Foul! Foul! Foul play! You're not playing by the rules! You are bad. You are guilty of something." When that happens, you have to understand that your behavior, that this behavior, is not the behavior that aggravates and increases the ego sense of your Brother. Saying "No" is a disengagement from the game and it constitutes an act on your part that lessens the weakening effect that joining with a Brother in an ego game magnifies. And you must say "No" and disengage and remain disengaged, knowing that whatever wailing and crying and foul play is hurled at you, that nevertheless the act you have engaged in is the only sane thing you can do and is truly the only thing that will contribute anything to that other's opportunity to wake up. Is there anything unclear about that?

Now, if you're not responsible for your Brother, let me ask you this. Are you responsible to him? Do you have any responsibility to your Brother? Yes, you do. You have the responsibility not to weaken him. You have the responsibility not to behave in a way that nurtures increasing ignorance. You have a responsibility, you might say, to provide an environment in which he or she feels safe enough to let down his or her defenses and let something new in. From where? From you? No. From that Source that that one got a divorce from.

I am an agent for change. And I am a good agent for change to the degree that I make you feel comfortable enough to let go of control and explore the Experience of Peace and to dare to let yourself be guided by the Father, That Which Is Being You. But that's all I can do is to provide a sense, and perhaps an experience, of enough safety and security in your mind that you're willing to experiment with abandoning the ways in which you control so as to feel safe. So that you might have the opportunity to have the experience of safety that is not the result of what you've done. So that you might find that safety is the State of Being itself, just plain old Being, which means that nothing that you do has to be done out of defense or for self-protection.

All the ego is, is the particular ideas, concepts, and interpretations you have gathered together and used as the definition of you, in the absence of your clear and direct experience of your Identity which is God-derived. In other words, it is what you experience when you are ignoring God.

This past week Susan's guidance shared the clarity with her that the Holy Spirit is God Being You, and the ego is you being god. God Being You is not you being anything. God being you, God initiating you, God authorizing your existence, God being your existence is what you have to yield to. Being out of control is what is needed in order to have the experience of the fullness of what it means that God Is Being You, so that the Wholeness of God is your Conscious Experience Of Being, and All of Creation that God Is Being is your Conscious Experience of Being. So that in the absence of conflict of any kind, you feel and experience the Joy, the Harmony, the Fulfillment of no lack anywhere in you, in your Conscious Experience.

When you attend college, there are some courses that you take that have prerequisites, which means there's another course or two that have to be taken first before you can take this course. There are certain prerequisites that one must fulfill in order to get help. There's actually only one prerequisite, and that prerequisite is that you have to be willing to receive it. Simple. If the asking for help has any other purpose, if there is any other goal attached to the request for help, don't take the bait. And the moment you find out that there is some other motive behind the request for help, the call for help, disengage from the dynamic of the helping relationship. Be wise. Be clear. And don't let guilt creep in to the embodiment of your clarity, the actions that result from your clarity, when you say "No" and mean it. Nothing will promote the end of illusion faster than withdrawal from participating in it. Nothing will dispel illusion faster than withdrawal from participating in it.

Now I hope that what we've been reading in the Course has been made more relevant, practically speaking, in your lives, so that you know what is your responsibility and what is not, what can be done and what can't be done. So that you don't try to do what's impossible, and then feel guilty if you're not able to accomplish it.

There are those who will use your spirituality, your devotion to the Truth, for their own unscrupulous purposes so as to make you uncomfortable. Actually they'll use anything available to them that you offer for their unscrupulous purposes, whether it is your spiritual values or your love of Truth, or whether it's just your simple gullibility. And you must learn to recognize when this is happening and disengage.

Don't be so airy-fairy that you think that the idea that there's someone who will use the good about you for their unscrupulous reasons, don't believe that that thought creates it out there and that you're guilty of that creation. And also don't think that to be truly spiritual you must not see anything like that in your Brother or Sister. Because your Brothers and Sisters to one degree or another are not awake, and everything they do will be self-serving to their present sense of themselves.

And you must understand that so that you are grounded and not able to be fooled, and not be spiritually gullible, so that you can address the issue which really needs to be addressed. And the issue that needs to be addressed when another, for unscrupulous reasons, is asking for help is to provide "No" as a response and be unavailable. Because until their game playing has become so unfulfilling to them that they're willing to really look for a new way to be, there is no purpose whatsoever in your engaging with them in response to a call for help, because the call for help is a ploy, is not what it appears to be. You must be able to be grounded enough to recognize that, and sane enough to do what needs to be done. Until no one is willing to play that game with that person, they will not seek for something new to do with their time and their mind, then you respond. I can't be any more black-and-white, simple, straightforward, and helpful on this issue than that.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week. And I look forward to all of you being able to be perhaps more sober this week, unafraid to look at things straight. If you do, there will be more peace and less of an experience of vulnerability, which you all deserve. Everyone deserves it.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

It may seem a difficult thing to grasp this concept or this idea of what am I going to say? Singularity. But what you need to understand is that Reality is going on right now, Reality with a capital "R", and it's not going on somewhere else. And there is a Real You and it's not going on somewhere else. If it were, there would be fragmentation. There wouldn't be Singularity.

And so what we've been reading about, and what we will continue to be reading about, is what's really going on right here, right now, so that you might grasp the fact that the Experience of Reality and the Experience of your Real Self is only a perception away. It's not a lifetime away. It's not a dimension away. You could say it's only a MISperception away. It seems as though we may be talking about something irrelevant to your life; something [whispered] spiritual [regular voice] that's very different. And if you think that, you will distance yourself from a miracle, a sudden shift of perception in which you suddenly see Reality more clearly right here, right now, and at the same time have a new and clearer experience of What You Are right here, right now.

So let's begin.

RAJ READING: You have NOT failed to add to the inheritance of the Sons of God...

RAJ: In other words, you while you've been playing the part of an ego, in which you've actually been doing nothing while you think you are doing a lot, have in truth continued to be the full-fledged Son or Daughter of God, and you have continued to contribute to the whole, which is what it means by "the inheritance of the Sons of God."

RAJ READING: You have NOT failed to add to the inheritance of the Sons of God, and thus have not failed to secure it for yourselves.

RAJ: Remember again, what you give, you keep. What you extend, you make true for you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If it was the Will of God to give it to you,...

RAJ: Your inheritance.

RAJ READING: ...He gave it forever. If it was His Will that you have it forever, He gave you the means for keeping it, AND YOU HAVE DONE SO.

RAJ: In other words, Reality has continued unaffected by your fantastic daydream.

RAJ READING: Disobeying God's Will...

RAJ: Or, you might say, the idea of disobeying it, because you can't actually disobey it.

RAJ READING: Disobeying God's Will is meaningful only to the insane. In truth it is impossible.

RAJ: And I would add, as an expression of Singularity: In Truth it is impossible, and therefore has not been done.

RAJ READING: Your self-fullness is as boundless as God's. Like His, it extends forever and in perfect peace. Its radiance is so intense that it creates in perfect joy, and only the whole can be born of its wholeness.

RAJ: Now I'm going to tell you something. Even in the midst of every effort you make to be an authority over your life, a creator of your life, the definer of your life and everything in it, and even though for the most part it has all been an act of defense against being conscious of your God-ness, if I may put it that way, a denial of God in your affirmation of yourself alone, you still can't stop being What You Are. And so you still manage to express Love. And your expression of Love is an extension of something Real. Sometimes your motives aren't the best for extending it, but it doesn't change the fact that you still are extending Love.

And so you are still expressing the Fullness of You, and you are, if I may put it this way, substantiating the Fullness of the Brotherhood. There are times that you insightfully recognize Truth and express it. And in expressing it, you do make it your own, even though you tend not to pay as much attention to it or value it as fully as you ought to. But it remains a gift of extension that blesses the whole Brotherhood.

Now, continuing.

RAJ READING: Be confident that you have never lost your identity and the extensions which maintain it in wholeness and peace.

RAJ: We've talked about the fact that when you instituted the bill of divorcement from your Source, from the Father, God, you became an orphan in effect experientially and you lost your Identity, because that which gave you Identity was your Father.

But it says here:

RAJ READING: Be confident that you have never lost your identity and the extensions which maintain it in wholeness and peace.

RAJ: If you haven't lost it, you haven't become less than What You Truly Are. And therefore, you do not need to feel guilty just because someone has convinced you that you have become less than You Are. It can't happen. You can ignore it, the Wholeness of You, you can deny it and insist upon operating autonomously, but you can't get rid of it. And it doesn't stop being the Fact of You and so it's the Fact of You right now. And that's why I keep saying right now is where to pay attention for it.

RAJ READING: Be confident that you have never lost your identity and the extensions which maintain it in wholeness and peace. Miracles are an EXPRESSION of this confidence.

RAJ: Well, what does that mean? Well, what are miracles? Miracles are sudden shifts of perception in which Truth is clearer to you. Miracles occur when you dare to act on the basis that you've never lost your Identity, that you've never become less than You Are Truly. When you dare to feel some confidence that the Ultimate Truth About You is the Truth About You right now, you are primed for sudden shifts of perception, miracles, that transform your perception of yourself and your Brother, yourself and the world.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: They...

RAJ: Miracles.

RAJ READING: ...are reflections both of your own proper identification with your brothers, and of your own awareness that your identification IS maintained by extension.

RAJ: By extension. By daring to say, "I wish to see the Evidence of Love. I wish to be the Evidence of Love." Love, with a capital "L". Love that has its source in the Father, flowing through you and given away, as the willingness to acknowledge What Is Real, with a capital "R", in each and every thing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The miracle is a LESSON IN TOTAL PERCEPTION.

RAJ: Meaning perception that isn't private. It means perception that is inclusive of everything. Not only in that you're not holding everything away from you as a thing for you to define, but in that you are allowing yourself to be open to the experience of the fact that all of it is part of the Infinitude of your Being, which is without limits.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: By including ANY part of totality in the lesson, you HAVE included the whole.

RAJ: When you're willing to Love and allow that Extension of Love to be something more than a private personal gift you are giving as something standing apart from what is being given to, the Singularity of Being is able to pop into focus. And so, whatever it might be—a flower, the person sitting next to you, your pet, a tree—whatever individual thing you are willing to be undefended in the presence of, undefended against while you are in the presence of it, primes you to have a shift of perception in which you experienced the fact that that one thing that you were willing to be undefended against and to be inclusive of, has become a stepping stone for you to feel the fact that that gift has embraced everything and everything is embracing you back, so that you find that you're no longer being the initiator or the giver of good separate from everything, but that the giving and the receiving are, for lack of better words, circular, whole, not divided up into giving and receiving.

You don't realize it but absolutely every thing you see is the Presence and Substance of Love, the Father's Love, patterned in a way that is experienceable, including you, and every thing is loving you. Every thing is extending the Love that the Father has placed in it by creating it with His Love, because of Love, and therefore everything is extending Love, even if you don't think it's animate or conscious.

And so, when you are willing to be undefended against the Reality of the flower, or the Reality, the capital "R" Reality, of any object you are observing, you are not setting into a motion a chain reaction where you love it, and because of your undefendedness it decides to love you back in response. No. When you become undefended against it, you allow yourself to be receptive to the Love with which it has been loving you eternally. And so you come into an Experience of Something that has always been. You see? So you don't get love back from it because you've finally arrived at a point where you're willing to let the Father's Love flow through you, because you have an object of your affection, something you care about, and then you cause that object of your affection to [snap of the fingers] transform and love you back. You see, it's not a cause and effect thing.

It's that again—the willingness to be undefended with another, or with an object, any thing. The willingness to be undefended against it allows the Love of God to flow through you because that's your Function. And it causes your eyes to become opened to the Love with which every thing always has been, and is now, loving you with. And so you come into, not a cause and effect experience, but an experience of the stable, ongoing, permanent, active Movement of Love extended and extending that constitutes, for lack of better words, the fundamental Tone and Meaning and Fullness of Being.

Now this next sentence was directed at Helen, but it can apply to any of you who might have the same thought.

RAJ READING: You have said that, when you write of the Kingdom...

RAJ: In other words, as I was sharing with her these words.

RAJ READING: You have said that, when you write of the Kingdom and your creations which belong in it, you are describing WHAT YOU DO NOT KNOW.

RAJ: You see? And as you read the Course, don't you have the feeling that you're reading about what you do not know about something that's foreign, or different, or other-worldly, or out there, or in another lifetime, or in another dimension, and so on?

RAJ READING: You have said that, when you write...

RAJ: What I'm dictating to you.

RAJ READING: ...of the Kingdom and your creations which belong in it, you are describing WHAT YOU DO NOT KNOW. That is true in a sense, but no more true than your failure to acknowledge the whole result of the ego's premises.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: The Confusion of Pain and Joy (T-#124/133)]

RAJ READING: The Kingdom is the result of premises, just as this world is.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "the world" instead of "this world."]

RAJ READING: You HAVE carried the ego's reasoning to its logical conclusion, which is...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...TOTAL CONFUSION ABOUT EVERYTHING. Yet you do not really BELIEVE this, or you could not possibly maintain it. If you really saw this result, you could not WANT it.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "would not WANT it" instead of "could not WANT it."]

RAJ: And I'm adding, if you see something clearly for what it is and it's obvious to you that you don't want it, you release it. It's of no use to you.

RAJ READING: The only reason why you could possibly want ANY part of it is because you do NOT see the whole of it.

RAJ: In other words, the only reason you want your ego perceptions and an ego frame of reference and to function as an ego is because you don't see the whole picture of what the ego amounts to. And simply put, we've discussed two weeks ago that all there is to the ego is you wearing a mask. Now if you saw that, really, you would abandon it.

Again.

RAJ READING: You are willing to look at the ego's premises, but NOT at their logical outcome.

RAJ: Now listen.

RAJ READING: Is it not possible that you have done the same thing with the premises of God?

Your creations ARE the logical outcome of His premises. HIS thinking has established them FOR you. They are therefore there, EXACTLY where they belong.

RAJ: The Ultimate, I'm adding, the Ultimate is already present and functioning right now, right where you are.

I'm not going to ask you what you think God's Premises are because you don't have the faintest idea. But one way I can convey to you what the word "premise" means here is that there is a fundamental premise of Being. There is a fundamental premise of the Existence of God for God. And that fundamental premise is "I AM." Everything That God Is follows from that premise. And that premise is not fragmented into, "I think I'm this. And I think I'm that. And I'm positive I'm the other thing. And I'm positive I'm not that." The premise is Singular. I AM. That premise of the Conscious Experience Of Being is itself the initiator of the Movement of Conscious Awareness called the Movement of Being. Everything follows from It and is like It. The word "am" is a form of the verb "to be," and the verb is an action. Being is Movement. So, that gives you a sense of what the word "premise" means as its being used here—the premises of God.

RAJ READING: Your creations ARE the logical outcome of His premises.

RAJ: Well, your creations arise out of the fundamental element, if you will, of your being conscious, which is "I am." I'm going to put it this way. If the fundamental premise of your experience was "I don't exist," you would never get out of bed in the morning. You would never raise a finger. You would never attempt to think a thought and you would never be open to a True Idea. Your premise would be a block to the Conscious Experience Of Being.

Now, God is the fundamental presence/premise "I AM." And as I said that constitutes a Movement of Mind. And that Movement is experienceable, we're going to say, to God. It becomes observable to God. And God, Presence of Mind that is moving, because the premise is "I AM," sees everything that the Movement is causing to be extended into pattern and recognizable, for lack of better words, form. And God says, "That's Me. That's Me. That's Me." And God saw everything that He had made by virtue of the premise "I AM," and behold, it was verily God. God, Mind, recognizes Itself as that which is moving. And so God could say, "I am that. I am that. I am that." God recognizes Himself. That's different from giving definitions. Because God looks at what already is as a result of the Movement of the fundamental premise of Being and lets what His Being has brought forth say to Him what He is.

Are you following what I'm saying? It might become clearer as I explain to you how the ego does things.

Now, mind you, this fundamental premise of Being which is the Conscious Experience of I AM which God Is, as It, because It is a Conscious Movement of Mind, moves, the Movement is recognizable to that Mind which is moving. And it's observed by Mind and Mind recognizes that what It's seeing is the Movement of Itself. And so, let's say, if it looks like a tree or it looks like a butterfly, Mind says, "I am that." I am that—what that is, I'm going to put it this way, I have been Being. So what It has extended, It has given to Itself, and It keeps and provides It with Identity, an Experience of, again these are poor words, an Experience of Selfhood. God knows Himself. And God knowing Himself is Creation, the Movement of Creation.

Now, the ego doesn't have any other elements to work with than the Real Ones that I've just described. So the ego looks at the same things that God/Mind looks at and recognizes Itself in, and it (the ego) says, "I'm not going to let that define me. I'm going to define it." And the first premise is "It's not me." The second premise is that "That thing that's not me is a butterfly, or is a this, or a that." But the definition is being applied to an already existent Real Presence. And the ego is not letting that Presence tell it what it is. And the ego is not letting the gift from that thing to register with it as confirmation of It. The ego applies definitions to things. God lets the things that have arisen out of the Movement of the premise "I AM" reflect back to Him, with a capital "H", What He Is. That's why Creation is not a matter of cause and effect.

The Cause of Creation is the conscious premise "I AM," the Conscious Experience of existing, okay, that constitutes a Movement that can be recognized, and God/Mind recognizes It, and It, as I said, causes God to Know Himself. The Cause, the fundamental premise, is the Movement that is the Event, not the effect, the Event that is recognizable to Mind. So God is not creating secondary things called Creations. Mind is creating the Conscious Experience of Self-Awareness. Creation is the Movement of Mind recognizing Itself in the Movement. So the Cause of Creation is what is being observed and called Creation.

Now I'm putting this into words because you'll have the opportunity to listen to it again. Creation is not the Effect of God like the pottery is the effect of the potter and is different from the potter. Mind moves and experiences the Movement, and recognizes Itself in It, and what It's recognizing is Itself. So the Cause is the Event being observed. Creation is the Movement of Mind observed by the Mind that moved. That's the Singularity of it.

A cat walks in front of a mirror and sees something move out of the corner of its eye and looks and sees another cat, and with no experience with mirrors, it jumps because it thinks there's another cat there. You, having experience with mirrors, look in the mirror and recognize that this is not another person; it's you. And if there's something out of alignment in the image, you make the adjustment in you. Do you see what I'm saying? You are the event that you are observing that seems to be out there. And if you want correction in the image, you make it in that of which the image is an image, meaning you standing in front of the mirror.

The ego busies itself with trying to change images, not recognizing itself in it, because its premise is "I am not that."

So what's the upshot of this, the practical upshot? The practical upshot of it is that every waking moment of your life, you are seeing the Infinitude of You. But like the cat who doesn't make the connection, you think it's different from you. You think it's operating on its own. And because you cannot identify with it, you are wary of it. And because you do not recognize that it's you, you behave in an inconsistent way with everything, and bump up against it and hurt yourself against it. But you say, "I am in a hostile environment." And so you protect yourself and you become defensive.

The Experience of the Movement of Creation by Mind, with a capital "M", meaning God, is the only Experience you have available to you. And when I say you're seeing yourself, I'm speaking about the Christ That You Are, the Real One, that's right here, while you're playing with your own twisted perception of who you are. And so I'm not saying that each of you individually as separate entities are seeing yourself out there. Your ego is seeing what the Christ is being infinitely, while it (the ego), seeing it as that which is not itself, defends itself against everything and tries to manipulate everything so that it will feel safe while still being separate from it, and creates a hell of an experience of Heaven.

Now you have the opportunity to understand a little bit better why we're talking about turning toward the Altar, why we're talking about going to that Place of Excellence in You where your privateness and autonomy are meaningless. Because there is where the Holy Spirit awaits you, your Right Mind awaits you, and your opportunity to experience Reality on Its terms; the new culture as it were that we've been talking about; the new measurements, the new values; the new grasping of how things work and what their function is. But all it's going to be is you looking at everything from a new paradigm, if I may put it that way. And what that really means is you looking through your Christ Mind.

We could say that Reality is going on simultaneously with your dream. But that still suggests that there are two states and two different things, when the fact is you are experiencing Reality clearly or unclearly. And when you are experiencing it unclearly, it's because you have identified yourself unclearly by saying "I am not that. I am not that. That is different from me and this is the meaning I'm giving it." Whereas the Christ of You looks at everything and immediately recognizes Itself in It, lets It in so It can register, let's everything in so It can register as the Love that's being extended, which elicits the Conscious Experience that's it the same Love that You Are, that You The Christ Are, and that you are observing the Love that You Are in expression, in movement, as everything that you're seeing.

And why are you experiencing it this way? Because it's the only way to truly experience anything because that's the Way Being Is. That's What God Is. That's the only experience you truly have available to you to have. The only thing that makes what I'm saying seem deep or un-understandable is because it is so simple and the ego has made complexity out of singular simplicity.

I'm going to start again.

RAJ READING: Your creations ARE the logical outcome of His premises. HIS thinking has established them FOR you. They are therefore there, EXACTLY where they belong. They belong in your mind as part of your identification with His, but your state of mind and your recognition of what is IN your mind depends, at any given moment, on what you believe ABOUT your mind. Whatever these beliefs may be, they are the premises which will determine what you accept INTO your mind.

RAJ: Well obviously if the premise of the ego is "I am not that. That is not me.", that premise blocks letting that as What It Really Is into your Conscious Awareness.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is surely clear that you can both accept into your mind what is not really there, and deny what IS. Neither of these possibilities requires further elaboration here, but both are clearly indefensible, even if you elect to defend them.

Yet the function which God Himself gave your minds through His you may deny, but you cannot prevent.

RAJ: It's very important to understand this. You each may have, in your attempt to be autonomous, independent and self-sufficient, denied God, which can be called an attack on God, but you haven't succeeded. You can't do it. It won't work. And so you have not done it, and therefore you are not guilty. You have not sinned. And therefore you do not have a period of incarceration in limitation that you must fulfill before you deserve once again to have your Birthright available to you. Is that clear, even if other things I have said today are not?

Again.

RAJ READING: Yet the function which God Himself gave your minds through His you may deny, but you cannot prevent. It is the logical outcome of what you ARE.

RAJ: Not what you believe you are, not what you think you are, but What You ARE.

RAJ READING: The ability to see a logical outcome depends on the WILLINGNESS to see it, but its truth has nothing to do with your willingness at all. Truth is GOD'S Will. SHARE His Will, and you share what He knows.

RAJ: And I'm going to add: And you make it your own.

RAJ READING: DENY His Will as yours, and you are denying His Kingdom AND yours. The Holy Spirit will direct you only so as to avoid pain. The undoing of pain must obviously avoid pain. Surely no-one would object to this goal IF HE RECOGNIZED IT. The problem is not whether what the Holy Spirit says is true, but whether you want to LISTEN to what He says.

RAJ: Every time you say, "I'm getting older," you're saying, "I'm not the Son of God," you're saying, "I'm not the Daughter of God." Every time you say, "I'm angry," every time you feel pissed off at something or someone, you are saying, "I am not the Son or Daughter of God." Conversely, because you don't think you're the Son or Daughter of God, you feel justified to be angry and pissed off and retaliatory. And in your lifetime very few people have been telling you that you are the Son or Daughter of God, so you are positive that you're just a human being. And you don't know your Birthright. You don't know What You Really Are and so feel justified to continue what seems to be an endless pattern of hate, self-defense, war, attack, the right to be frustrated.

And then you have your good moments where things seem pretty good and you find in you a capacity to be something other than those things I've just listed. You find the capacity to be thoughtful, to want to do things, to want to be caring, to extend Love. Sometimes you feel safe enough to let those feelings register in your mind and you do express kindness. What you don't realize is that because you don't know Who You Are and you feel justified in all of the negatives, and you feel a necessity to express the negatives for the sake of your safety, you end up committing yourself to expressing these things, and you don't realize that you're doing nothing. That nothing is being accomplished.

And likewise, when you find justification for being thoughtful, caring, loving, inclusive, you don't realize that you are making a Gift, not only to the ones that you are specifically extending it to, you are making a Gift to the whole Brotherhood and something Real is happening, something Universal is happening, something Holy is happening. And you can understand it when I say that something Whollizing is happening. But it's happening... the Whollizing is not just happening in your one-on-one relationship where you've been willing to extend Love and to embrace. It is a Gift that is Universal because of What You Divinely Are, and you are engaging in Creation in that sense. And you need to know that there are times... that most of the time you are engaged in doing nothing, and some of the time you are engaged in doing something incredible, something far more infinite than you think.

And you need to be told that so that you might be inspired to withdraw your commitment to hate and defense and frustration and the willingness to feel bitter about your Brothers and Sisters. And replace that with a willingness, no matter how idiotic it seems to you to be because of what you have always believed, to extend Love, to be inclusive, to remember that you are Holy, to remember that the Ultimate of What You Are, you are at this instant, and that the only thing that blocks you from the experience of it is a misperception which is mental.

And miracles can occur. Sudden shifts of perception can occur. You're either experiencing the Singularity of Being clearly, or you're experiencing the Singularity of Being in a fragmented way, but there's only one thing to experience. And there's also only one thing to experience it, and it's you experiencing it clearly, or you experiencing it unclearly. Again I'm trying to illuminate the meaning of the word "Singularity," because the more clearly you can get it, the less complicated you will think it will be to wake up. And the less you will think you have to grow equal to something that's far greater than you are that will constitute an almost insurmountable thing to overcome. It's not true.

This section has been called, "The Extension of the Kingdom." The Extension of the Kingdom is the Movement that occurs, without any control being used, as a result of the Conscious Experience of the fundamental premise "I AM," the fundamental Conscious Experience of "I AM." God, the Great I AM, does not say, "I am a butterfly," and suddenly a butterfly appears. And God does not say, "I am a locomotive engine," and a locomotive engine appears. Mind be's What It Is—Awareness—and Awareness is the Experience of "I AM." And that Awareness is a Movement. And that Movement is experienceable. And God looks at the Movement, you might say, after the fact of the Movement and says, "Wow! That's Me." He lets What He's Being tell Him What He Is. While the ego takes what is recognizable and says, "That's not me, but I'll tell you what it is."

And these last few words I've just said are the simplest way in which to define the meaning of the word "Being," "Existence." And I'm going to leave you with that for today. Except I need to say one more thing. Oh yes, you will get it. Okay.

[Editor's Note: The following three sentences were apparently spoken by Raj because they are in Sun Rose's transcript, but they are not on the mp3.

RAJ: A request has been made to ask some questions. We will resume. Don't go away.]

SEEKER (Susan): I was just wondering whether I was the only one feeling like a dunce today. Everybody else kind of... I got a lot of it but there were some blank spots. And when I have blank spots in my learning then I seem to become preoccupied with utter frustration at where those spots I missed, why I can't, you know, get with it because we keep moving on. So it reminds me of my childhood, school days.

RAJ: So?

SEEKER: So, I can't even remember where those blanks spots were except... I seem, you know, we... the following week after each meeting we have experiences that seem to try to illuminate or elucidate these premises, but I just keep feeling like I'm having a learning failure, week after week. [laughing] I'm being honest. There are a few things I get. And I'm afraid I'm going to have another one of those weeks where I'm constantly given a puzzle.

RAJ: Well, first of all, let me tell you, this is a very long book, and what you don't get today, you will have the opportunity to get again. And there's no final exam. I want you to go ahead and take whatever amount of time it takes for you to...

SEEKER: Well there may not be a final exam but there sure is instant karma, and that's what keeps baffling me. I feel like I'm just missing something. And I ask my Guide what is this missing ingredient that I cannot recognize in my week that I can say, "Wow! That's just like me." I keep having experiences where I have to say, "No. That's not like me."

RAJ: Indeed. That's a sign of progress. When you see your own (or another's) ego premises governing, you do indeed have to be able to say, "No. That is not me." And you have to be able to say, "No. That is not them." Because if you don't arrive at a place where you are able to distinguish between What Is True and what is not true about you or another, you're in no position to be an agent for change. You're in no position to facilitate correction. You're in no position to promote improvement.

Now you think that because you're on your spiritual path you are supposed to less and less often look at your Brother and say, "There's something wrong there," as though saying quote "There's something wrong there," unquote is creating a problem there. Do you think that I would be of any help whatsoever if I were not able to distinguish between what is not true about you and What Is True about you, or what you are believing that isn't true that's fouling you up and What The Truth Is about you that resolves that dilemma? I must be able to see the difference between the tares and the wheat. And you must learn to make the distinction between the tares and the wheat so that you don't gather it all into the storehouse thinking it's all wheat when it's not, and where the tares will spoil the harvest.

You know what? If you're only getting two or three things a week that are gelling, thank your lucky stars and be grateful. And don't set a task for yourself that you're supposed to be doing better. For any of you to be seeing Truth more clearly in any respect, no matter how miniscule it is, it's the leaven that leavens the whole lump. It has an effect that is far reaching because it constitutes a Gift you are giving that is Real.

Now I know the weeks between these Gatherings are difficult and I know that what I'm telling you [sigh] is causing unsettling to occur within you. But what's become unsettled are the conceptual structures that have been keeping you bound. They are being weakened. And at the same time that they're being weakened, your capacity to know What Is True is increasing.

I know some of you feel like the further along we go, the less loving you seem to be able to be. Not because you're not feeling loving, but because you feel called upon to not join in the ego's invitation to mutually agree upon the truth of a lie. And you're presented with that practically all the time. So now it seems as though all the time you're not able to be sweet and you're not being able to be supportive because you're having to say, "No! I won't join you here. But here's where I will." And then you hear, "But that's not what I asked of you. I want you to join me here." And you have to say "No. I can't. I won't agree with you. I won't behave in a way that makes you... that allows you to be comfortable when you can't be comfortable because what you're doing doesn't fit with the Way Things Work."

You are not the only one confronted with this. Paul feels less fortunate than he thinks I am because I can say, "I won't join you in your illusion," and then you can't find me to disagree. [audience laughter] But they... you can find Paul. And it came out of his mouth. [more audience laughter]

But you know what? If I were in the room with you appearing to you the way Paul is appearing to you, I would still say "No! I will not join you. What you are doing is not an expression of intelligence. What you are doing, as I sometimes say, is stupid. You need to stop doing it." I would be as direct with you quote "in person" as I am right now. And I would be being the Christ. And you are being the Christ when you do not swerve from the Consciousness of Truth that will relieve suffering, even though the one confronting you says that being UNconscious of the Truth is what will preserve my comfort and stop the suffering. "I'm only suffering because you're confronting me with the Truth."

Well, if you're like me, you have no problem saying to them, "That's true. You are suffering because I'm presenting the Truth and you want to operate in a Truth-less arena. In other words, an arena in which lies are accepted as useful, meaningful, valuable, and not destructive, not undermining of all that is worthwhile. Do you see? That's what you're asking for? Do you see the destructiveness of it? Do you see the un-profitability of it? Do you see that it does not serve to do anything other than keep you absolutely in an experience of suffering?" I say, "No! No! No!" [slight pause] "No! No! No! It's the Truth. It's what you're trying to get me to see that is disturbing my peace. It's not what I believe that's disturbing my peace. It's the fact that you won't shut up and leave me at peace in the way I see things."

You have to be willing to be the Christ and continue to not join when the ego seeks agreement, wanting you to believe that a lie is true. And you have to recognize that it is a sign of your progress that you're no longer able to be sucked in, and that you're no longer willing to join in the mutual-agreements that don't upset the status quo and insure that healing won't happen.

Okay. Is there...

ANOTHER SEEKER: I was just going to say that I find that as we persist every week, that as my beliefs get undone and the way that I be feels like it gets undone, Sue, I don't feel like it's the same thing that would measure whether I'm getting the book is getting undone too. [laughing] So it just sort of feels like it's unraveling a lot of ways that I've measured whether I'm getting something or whether I'm a success at something or... Do you know what I mean? 'Cause like the thought structures that I operated within to measure that, feel like they're fading as well. So I just wanted to add that.

Raj, from what you have been saying today I'm getting the feeling that we have a two-fold function. And that is to become more clear of the vision of Who We Are and at the same time we're dismantling, we're dismantlers, of the structures that the ego has put into place.

RAJ: No. You're undoers of misperceptions that you, not the ego, that you have put into place and then chosen to believe.

SEEKER: Okay.

RAJ: Yes?

SEEKER: Yeah. And the way we're... and how we do this is critical. Umm...

RAJ: Well, the only thing that is critical is that you actually do it. Umm... If you have gone into a forest alone that you're not familiar with and you have marked with a rope, trees along the way so you could retrace your steps and get out of the forest, the only thing that's necessary to get out of the forest is, well, we're going to say in terms of awakening and undoing false steps that you took away from Home, the only way you can truly retrace your steps and undo the steps that you've taken is to come back to each tree and take the rope off and carry it with you out of the forest.

Many of you... many of you have marked well by your decisions your trek into ego structures. And many of you say I want to wake up and I want to undo these, and so you start back out of the forest, but you leave the ropes there so that you have a backup, so that you have a safety net, you might say, so you can get back to the part of the forest where you had managed to establish a certain degree of comfort. But as you come Home, you have to undo the marker. You have to undo the decision. You have to undo the definition you gave, and, for lack of better words, dissolve it. You have to take the marker with you so that the way back is no longer marked.

SEEKER: When you can't find your way, it's over.

RAJ: Exactly. Otherwise you're playing with the idea of waking up. "Oh, I'm on my way to the Pearly Gates. I'm on my way to the Gateway to the Kingdom of Heaven. But I know how to get back where I was if it gets to be too much for me." You see? That's what I was talking about yesterday when you dive into the pool without a backup so that you swim for your life. So that you make commitment to being where you are and coping with the experience of being from there, because then you bring yourself fully to the moment you're in and fully to the capacity to experience in what way the water does support you that is entirely different from the way the solid land supported you that you're familiar with.

So it isn't how you do it. It isn't how you come out. It's not how you undo it. It is that you actually undo it, that you untie the ribbon or the rope from the tree and carry it with you so that there is no marker to lead you back, because you have committed yourself to abandoning the old paradigm, abandoning the old values, abandoning the old attractions, abandoning the ways that you had sought for fulfillment that weren't fulfilling.

SEEKER: But at the same time I want not to be angry with those who are still involved. I mean this is where compassion now, because I remember you saying not putting the tips on the arrows when they come,...

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: ...when you disagree,...

RAJ: Indeed.

SEEKER: ...when you take your stand and you say absolutely no more. And then you get the argument feeding back. And this is where a lot of us have got tripped up. We get caught up into the drama again, because we don't know, or we haven't learned, or we haven't made the choice, or we haven't... whatever we haven't done to put the shield up that keeps us from putting the tips on.

RAJ: Look, but you see, when I look at you or I look at anyone else here, and I recognize when you're doing something unintelligent, I recognize that, but I don't get upset about.

SEEKER: Right.

RAJ: I recognize it and I don't ignore it, but I don't get angry about it and I also don't leave it alone. I speak appropriately in the process of facilitating correction, because correction still needs to occur whether I'm upset by your ignorance or not. You see what I'm saying?

SEEKER: Right. And you can even take a very harsh... I may be sounding harsh but you don't feel harsh inside. In other words, whatever the situation calls for in the manner that correction is to be facilitated, which you don't know except the Holy Spirit guides.

RAJ: You're moving into a "fringy" area here, because it has nothing to do with behavior. It has nothing... I have no intent to behave in a Christlike way, or to behave in a firm way, or to behave in a harsh way, or to be careful I don't behave in a harsh way. It has nothing to do with how it appears. It has nothing to do with behavior.

It all has to do with the simplicity of the absoluteness of Truth and that what is not true is not true. And whatever it takes to convey that what is not true isn't true so that its invalidity can be clear enough to register with the one I'm speaking to, I will do. But it's all relative to the Truth and its illumination, and has nothing to do with a "me" being an agent for change, or a "me" handling myself in this way or that way. You see?

SEEKER: Thank you for clarifying that because it gets confusing on how it's supposed to look at some times.

RAJ: Well, but I've never ever talked about that it's supposed to look like something.

SEEKER: No. I understand, but not all of us are there at... have gotten that yet.

RAJ: Now why are you asking this? What does this have to do with making one's way back Home? [pause] I'm going to put it bluntly. Did you ask this question for everyone else's benefit, or does it have something to do with you? Because if you asked it for everyone else's benefit, you're getting into territory that is irrelevant to your waking up and is none of your business. And I'm not just saying this to you.

You started out your question initially by referring to what it is quote "our function to do" unquote. I do want to pick up on those words, because if you're talking about a function other than being the unobstructed embodiment of God's Love moving into expression, if you're talking about any other function than that, you have also gotten into a fringy fuzziness that is not only dangerous, it's really meaningless. If you're going to talk about your function like as a Teacher of God, or our function with our Brothers, you have moved out of grounded connection with what Function means and the fact that your attention needs to be on the steps you're taking back in the undoing of what caused you to be ignorant of the Truth. I mention this because it ties in with your subsequent comments about how it appears to others.

SEEKER: I meant it as being appropriate. I mean that it all evolves around that.

RAJ: Appropriate in what context?

SEEKER: Appropriate in the way we stand up for what we see as true and how we deal with those who don't agree with us. Overreacting.

RAJ: If emotion doesn't enter into it, if reaction, in other words, does not enter into it, and you are paying attention to What The Truth Truly Is regarding the circumstance, you will end up conveying What The Truth Is, because you will be experiencing it clearly, and there won't be a "you" expressing the Truth. You won't matter. The other won't matter. Because it's the Awareness of the Truth that is the solution to the problem that you care about.

How offensive have you experienced me to be?

SEEKER: No.

RAJ: But I don't mince words. I'm straight. I call it for what it is. Why isn't it offensive? Because the focus is the Truth and the fact that the Truth shall set you free. The Truth is freeing. It's what isn't the Truth that's binding.

To whatever degree you have yourself on your mind in the process of being conscious of the Truth and extending it, your attention is not on the Truth and you are liable to have reaction. Not because the Truth draws reaction, but because the self that has itself on its mind is the ego and it has an investment. And its investment is self-defense. And its best means of self-defense is to express superiority because superiority puts people in their place. Superiority is frightening. Superiority can be overwhelming.

So, if you have a self on your mind, I'll put it this way, if Paul had himself on his mind right now, what you would hear would be entirely different. If you have a self on your mind, then indeed you need to worry about how you're going to do it, because this self that you have on your mind is going to see to it that there's an element in the picture, an element in the extension of Truth, that will draw attention away from the Truth to the one extending it and cause flak and cause disturbance. So be careful how much you have yourself on your mind in considering any of this that we're talking about, because it will elicit reaction when it's at play. And what we're talking about has nothing to do with self-consciousness...

SEEKER: Thank you.

RAJ: ...with a small "s".

ANOTHER SEEKER (Michael): Raj, I thought it was very simply and sweetly put about how you said that God is being and He sees Himself being and recognizes Himself in that.

How do we fit in as Creations of God? In other words, do we have the distinct ability or does all His Creations have the ability to be able to see ourselves as part of God and recognize that? Is that where our place in the scheme of things is as Function? 'Cause we're not God and we're not an Effect of God, so it's like we have the benefit of the full spectrum like he does.

RAJ: That is a fairly decent way of putting it. Yes.

SEEKER: Well, thank you.

RAJ: Your Function is to have the same recognition, the same experience of recognition that God is having. Now what does that mean? That you say, "Ah, I recognize myself. I recognize myself as a Creation of God in All that God Is Being." No. You, like God, recognize God in everything. You are here to be the acknowledgment of God.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

RAJ READING: The Confusion of Strength and Weakness

RAJ: It's interesting that the times when you feel like you're exerting the most strength is when you are bringing the full force of your will into play in order to accomplish something. And one of the things that you've all been learning as we've been going through the Course, and something that all of you learn who actually embark upon a spiritual quest, if I may put it that way, and you really pay attention to essential factors of yourself at the deepest levels of your honesty, you find that the great exertion of will that you try to express is actually when you're weakest, because it's when you're coming from a completely independent autonomous place where you experience no connection with Divinity, no connection with everything, no connection with God.

And ultimately what sets many people on quote "the path" unquote is the disarming and disillusioning discovery that all of the exertion of will that you brought to bear in your life has not led you to peace and security that has stability to it. And you say, "There must be something more. I am missing something here." When you arrive at this point of, for lack of better words, failure as an ego successfully exerting will [small laugh] and you accept it, you don't fight it any more. You fully acknowledge that the attempt has been a total failure. You give up. And we've talked about this before. If you genuinely acknowledge the fact that it's been a failure, you give up. But you can't give up for very long without saying "Help!" in one way or another and reach outside of your best judgments, your best theories, and your best sense of what your will is. And that's when connection can occur. And that's when breakthrough does occur. And then you find yourself companioned with by me, or the Holy Spirit, or the Father, or your own Guide.

And you find that in accepting the help that you receive, things begin to turn around. Your life literally takes a new direction. You're still in the same world. You're still with other people. But you're not doing it as a tiny, independent, autonomous entity. And as you find things beginning to stabilize and improve, you find, for lack of better words, that there is strength in numbers. Not just the number "one," meaning your best sense of yourself, but in companioning with One Who Is Awake, One who loves you, One who knows What Is Of Value and what is not, and whose Purpose it is to help you discover What Is Of Value and what is not, so that you can set it aside, set aside what is not of value voluntarily.

So that you find strength to be what manifests in your life when you've abandoned willfulness, an independent will that you call "yours." And so strength and weakness reverse themselves. And what you thought constituted weakness, you now find is your strength. And what you thought was your strength, you now find is your weakness. And so you don't energize what was weakness. You honestly look at your experience and see what happened when you were exercising personal will, personal strength, and you see, in effect, that you were accomplishing nothing, even though, for a while, it appeared that you were.

It's this kind of clarity that allows you to set aside what was a false estimate of strength, because you can see that it is valueless. Mind you, one does not have to be at the end of his rope in order to do this. But it's very often that that is when it occurs. You all can begin to express curiosity to know What Is Of Value and what isn't from the Father's Point Of View before you get to the bottom of the barrel.

So let's go into the book.

RAJ READING: You no more recognize what is painful than you know what is joyful, and are, in fact, very apt to confuse the two. The Holy Spirit's main function is to teach you TO TELL THEM APART. However strange it may seem that this is necessary, it obviously IS. The reason is equally obvious. What is joyful to you IS painful to the ego,...

RAJ: In other words, what is joyful to the Divine One That You Are is painful to the ego.

RAJ READING: ...and as long as you are in doubt about what YOU are, you will be confused about joy and pain. This confusion is the cause of the whole idea of sacrifice.

RAJ: Well, think about that. Why would anyone think that sacrifice would be valuable? Well, because, for example, you've been taught that the pleasure of the senses is purely physical and of a base, animalistic nature.

Now where on earth did that idea come from? Well, it came from the idea of evolution. After all, you're at the top of the food chain. You're the most advanced of all of the creatures on the planet that evolved from what? A big bang and an evolution of physical and chemical processes. So, you're just a higher form of a really base life process, life existence. And so at the bottom line your sole reason for being alive is that you have been a successful survivor; an animal that has succeeded in surviving long enough to lift itself up by its own bootstraps and develop a conscience, et cetera.

So now, now that you've developed a conscience, and you've been able to imagine and establish values, you've been able to think in terms of least value and greatest value. And greatest value has taken the form of an idea of God and an idea of existence beyond, or further in advance of, this highly developed stage of animal evolution that you've arrived at.

And now comes the coup de grace. Now the idea is that if you deny What You Are, you will get rewards in Heaven. If you deny the physical impulses, you will be rewarded in Heaven. If you, especially for very serious religious reasons, take a vow of poverty, this will advance you greatly. If you will take a vow of lack of some sort, a vow of silence, if you will not go for the gusto, if you will not go for the success in the world's eyes, you will get rewards in Heaven. Now you have used your minds to arrive at a point where sacrifice is a holy thing to engage in, Self-denial is a holy thing to engage in. The belittling of your present nature is a healthy thing to do because you're not preoccupied with worldly things. But you see, it isn't your body, it isn't your base self, it's not the world, that needs to be denied. It's the interpretation of the world and the interpretation of your self that has to be invalidated.

Now, in broad sweeping terms, you could invalidate it by saying, "The world doesn't exist." But that's not the answer. The answer is, "The way I'm seeing the world, the way I'm interpreting my body, the definitions I have created about myself, are not real. But I am Real and the world is Real. There is Something going on that is being misinterpreted by me, being misunderstood by me."

And so then, the way to get past the way you're interpreting it, the way you're defining it, is to have someone like me tell you the only thing confronting you is the Kingdom of Heaven. The only thing you're experiencing right now is the Only Thing going on—Reality, with a capital "R," God being All, the Kingdom of Heaven. And why do I keep saying that? So that you might be further inspired to look at everything, to look at yourself, to look at your body and your neighbor and your friend, with eyes of innocent—innocent of false judgments, innocent of false interpretations, innocent of definitions you have applied to everything. And you look at it with curiosity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Obey the Holy Spirit and you WILL be giving up the ego.

RAJ: Well, there is that hard word again, "Obey." "Oh! Obedience. There's where you let go of autonomy. There's where you let go of independence. These are good things," you say. "If I give up my autonomy, if I become obedient to somebody else, that's like going back to being a child. And I have become emancipated. I'm 21 or older. And I am now in the place in life where it's my right to assert myself on my own and enjoy the freedom in doing so." [said in a funny voice] Well, are you having a good time? [regular voice] So you're confused.

RAJ READING: Obey the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: You know what? The idea of obedience means fitting in; fitting in to Something. You want to be the one piece of the puzzle that's missing from the puzzle; the one that jumped out of the box and said, "Nobody's going to find me and put me in that tiny little spot!" Well, like you, who has a puzzle with one piece missing and is frustrated, you might say that the Whole Brotherhood is looking for you because you're missing from your spot. And the joy that would be experienced when you were there, if you were there, is not present yet because you're underneath the corner of the sofa. And they look forward to the joy, we all look forward to the joy, of your letting yourself fit in.

And you're missing out on the joy of being part of the Whole. And you're missing out on the joy of finding that once you let yourself be part of the Whole and fit in, all of what constitutes the Wholeness of Creation becomes your Consciousness Experience of Being, and you cease to be a tiny part of It, fitting in with It. But this Experience of Wholeness, this Experience of Being inseparable from the Mind of God, as God, including You, moves in the Act of Creation. This is your strength. This is your bliss. This is your Fulfillment of Purpose.

But because you're confused, you think that it will be a real and unjustified sacrifice to give up this imagined little bit of autonomy that think you have achieved. Because as long as you think you have achieved it and are committed to it, you will never feel your Wholeness and you will never feel your strength. And by that I mean your invulnerability. I mean, really, how invulnerable are you underneath the corner of the couch where the cat might get you, or the dog might chew you up? You see what I mean? Yes, you see what I mean.

RAJ READING: Obey the Holy Spirit and you WILL be giving up the ego.

RAJ: Now that's a doom-and-gloom statement for the ego. But it's a very clear statement about how to release yourself from the ego. You say, "Oh, I want to give up my ego." Or you would say, "Sure I want to give up my ego." Okay.

RAJ READING: Obey the Holy Spirit and you WILL be giving up the ego.

RAJ: "Oh, well, that's a different matter. 'Obey the Holy Spirit.' Can't I just give up my ego and still have fun being independent?" That's called confusion. That really is called confusion. No, you can't.

RAJ READING: Obey the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That means link up. That means join with. That means desire to know of the Holy Spirit. It means listening for the Holy Spirit. And since we have found out that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind, you don't have to be quite so afraid of joining with the Holy Spirit, because intellectually you can grasp the fact that doing so will be an active integration of you to you.

RAJ READING: Obey the Holy Spirit and you will be giving up the ego. But you will be sacrificing NOTHING. On the contrary, you will be gaining EVERYTHING. If you believed this, there would BE no conflict.

RAJ: Is there conflict? Then you don't believe it, yet. Explore believing it. Trek into the new territory. Stop paying lip service only to the idea that you want to wake up or that you want to give up your ego.

RAJ READING: If you believed this, there would BE no conflict.

That is why you need to DEMONSTRATE the obvious to yourself. It is NOT obvious to you. You believe that doing the OPPOSITE of God's Will can be better for you. You also believe that it is possible to DO the opposite of God's WILL. Therefore, you believe that an impossible choice is open to you, and one which is both very fearful AND very desirable.

RAJ: Listen.

RAJ READING: Yet God WILLS. He does NOT wish. YOUR will is as powerful as His...

RAJ: Why?

RAJ READING: ...because it IS His.

RAJ: You are the Son/Daughter of God. Your Inheritance is from your Father/Mother. His Will is yours. The only thing is, in the act of extending it to you, God didn't break off a little bit of His Will and deposit it in you. You are the Extension of God. You are the Presence of God Embodied. You are God Infinitely Individualized. All of the Brotherhood is God Infinitely Individualized, without ever being fragmented or broken up into parts.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego's wishes do not mean anything, because the ego wishes for the impossible. You can WISH for the impossible, but you can WILL only with God. This is the ego's weakness, and YOUR strength.

RAJ: "God! You mean I have to listen to God all the time? You mean I have to be connected with God all the time? What? You want me to become a nun? You want me to live in a monastery and be connected with God all the time and be abnormal?" No. I want you to cook dinner with God. I want you to sleep with God. I want you to make love with God. I want you to vacuum with God. I want you to deal with your Brother with God. I want you to look at your Brother with God. I want you to do all the things you're doing from the Place of Excellence in each of you, instead of from a place of confusion and ignorance that causes you to be miserable when it's your Birthright to be experiencing Joy.

I want you to start looking at the trees with God, or your fingernails with God. I want you to look with God so that you might see God in everything you observe. I want you to walk on water with God. I want you to swim to the depths of the ocean without scuba gear, or submarines, with God. I want you to do things with God that you haven't dreamed of doing, but which when you do them, will inspire your Brothers and Sisters to say, "Wait a minute. If they're doing the impossible,"—and I promise you they are doing the impossible,—"then what they're doing must be possible, and my belief that they're impossible must be wrong." And the moment they get it that the way they have been believing and defining things has been wrong, [snap of the fingers] they're immediately freed to explore walking on the water, or whatever it might be that they had previously determined to be impossible.

You're all bound entirely and absolutely by determinations you have made in your mind. It's my task to break those determinations, to inspire you to let go of the determination, the commitment, you bring to the meanings you've developed.

Now, listen.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit ALWAYS sides with you, and with your strength. As long as you avoid His guidance in any way, you WANT to be weak. Yet weakness IS frightening.

RAJ: Well, I'm going to add that it's not only frightening, it's exhilarating! And you get a rush from it, and you get addicted to the rush of the exhilaration of fear. And then you translate that into courage to stand in the face of what you fear and not feel overwhelmed by it, not be incapacitated by it, and to survive with a reasonable amount of peace without ever getting rid of it—the fear.

Again.

RAJ READING: Yet weakness IS frightening. What else, then, can this decision mean except that you WANT to be fearful?

RAJ: Exactly. You're getting a rush from it, and you like the rush, and you choose for it.

"Oh. You mean all I have to do is meditate?"

"Yeah."

"Uh, well, uh, what do I get from it? You know, I get a rush from fear. What am I going to get from the peace of meditation?"

"Mm. Well, let's see here. You're going to have the opportunity to see the Face of God."

"Oh, my God! That's the thing I'm most afraid of! That's the last thing I want. You say I'm not going to get a hit from peace?"

"That's right. But you know what? When you choose for that Peace, and you let yourself remain in it for any length of time, you're going to find two things emerging. You're going to find Joy welling up from a Source that is inexplicable and unidentifiable, except that it will be welling up from the depths of your Conscious Experience that you're having and Love that you cannot help but let overflow out onto everything you see and everyone you know and don't know. And as you do it, you will feel loved."

"Yeah, yeah, yeah. But, but, you know, will it give me a rev? Mm. Will it give me a rev?"

"No. No. It won't."

[sigh] "I'm sorry then I'm not interested because you know what? I've decided that if the Kingdom of Heaven is really the Kingdom of Heaven, it's going to be exhilarating. It's going to be exciting. It's going to always have a nervous edge to it, except that no harm will ever come from it. That's what the Kingdom of Heaven has to be. I'm going to hold out for that."

"Well, I'm sorry. But that isn't what the Kingdom of Heaven is. And that's not what it's your Birthright to experience. And as long as you hold out for it, you're still going to be accomplishing absolutely nothing. And you're still going to be constantly confronted with fear. In fact, your choice for the hit you get from fear actually creates the experience of fear and increases it, thus increasing the hit, but also increasing the pain and the suffering. If you choose for that, choose for that, but it's not the answer to your problem."

Each of you, in one way or another, has at one time or another said, "You know, if I got up today and everything happened perfectly, and every situation was a win-win situation, and there were utter harmony manifest throughout the day, I agree that it would be a profound experience. But without the thrill, I'm not going to choose for it. If the Kingdom of Heaven is nothing but bliss, then that means an ongoing experience of monotony." And you jokingly say, "Well, if being in the Kingdom of Heaven is sitting on clouds playing harps all day, I'll choose for what I have." And that's a way you jokingly say you don't want Reality.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit ALWAYS sides with you, and with your strength. As long as you avoid His guidance in any way, you WANT to be weak. Yet weakness IS frightening. What else, then, can this decision mean except that you WANT to be fearful?

RAJ: You know what? We'd get a large attendance in the Kingdom of Heaven if we would open up a new ride called "Hellhole, the scariest ride in the universe." [scattered few laughs from audience] I'm not even going to suggest that you're already on that ride. [more audience laughs] Yes, the billboards would say, "The only place where you can be scared to death without dying." [more audience laughter] I promise that if you thought that giving up your ego would let you have that ride, you would do everything you could to give up your ego. [more audience laughter]

RAJ READING: What else, then, can this decision mean except that you WANT to be fearful? The Holy Spirit NEVER asks for sacrifice, but the ego ALWAYS does.

RAJ: Well, except [amused laugh] you think that it's giving you something far more valuable than what you're having to give up. You think that the ego is saying that it can give you, this little puzzle piece, a life never dreamed of by other puzzle pieces who never thought beyond the puzzle that they are a part of. It asks you to sacrifice the remembrance of Who You Are. It asks you to sacrifice... it asks you to sacrifice the awareness that it is nothing more, the ego is nothing more than you wearing a mask. It asks you to think that all experiences are happening to you, when all experiences are You unfolding Infinitely, and you're not subject to It, and therefore, not vulnerable to It. It asks you to forget your Source, which causes you to lose your experience of your Identity. It asks you to sacrifice too much.

But you say that it promises you the satisfaction of overcoming limitations and proving your superiority to them. And you know what? You know what hooks you? The fact that you know at some level you haven't forgotten that you are the Christ and that you are, for lack of better words, omnipotent, and that you are superior to all illusion. But you see, the ego asks you to sacrifice the Conscious Experience of What You Are, your Real Identity, so that you might have this autonomous, independent experience; this scary ride. And so you don't have the capacity to actually overcome the illusions, to actually overcome the things that are fearful, because you have to remember Who You Are before you can have the experience of superiority over illusions that causes illusions to disappear.

And it causes you to not realize that you make the illusions disappear, not by an act of authority, but by an act of acquiescence to the Whole, by being obedient to the Holy Spirit, by yielding to God. And because it asks you to sacrifice that, you're attempting something that is impossible. You are attempting to accomplish what will never be accomplished. And as long as you may remain committed to the attempt, you will be stuck. And you are. Except that you are becoming inquisitive. Your eyelids are beginning to flutter a little bit. And you are asking to know the Truth. And you are willing to conceive that the Truth is outside the box of limitation that you've been operating in. And so Movement of Awakening is occurring.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit NEVER asks for sacrifice, but the ego ALWAYS does. When you are confused about this VERY clear distinction in motivation, it can ONLY be due to projection. Projection of this kind IS a confusion in motivation, and GIVEN this confusion, trust becomes impossible.

RAJ: It's very simple. When you don't know Who You Are, when you have forgotten Who You Are, when you have decided to commit your mind to an idea, or a definition, of what you are, instead of What You Really Are, you're in a state of Self-denial. And, in other words, you have put on a mask. The presentation of yourself with a mask on is fundamental dishonesty. And you know it. And you know that as long as you're doing that, you're not trustworthy. You can't dare to look at that for very long so you say, "The world out there is untrustworthy. My Brothers and Sisters are untrustworthy, and I've got to be defended against them." And now you're in a state of survival.

You won't begin to see who your Brothers and Sisters are until you're willing to look at What You Are. And you're learning that the only way to look at What You Are is turn toward the Place of Excellence in you, the Altar within, and inquire of the Holy Spirit, something outside your definition of yourself.

Ask yourself, how motivated are you to reinforce illusion? How motivated are you to commit to the experience of fear? And how motivated are you to becoming sane again? How motivated are you to finally, with conviction and commitment, say and embody the meaning of the words, "I am through with suffering. I am through with an eternal experience of conflict. I am through believing that the hit I get from suffering is valuable."

Again.

RAJ READING: Projection of this kind IS a confusion in motivation, and GIVEN this confusion, trust becomes impossible.

No-one obeys gladly a guide he does not trust, but this does not mean that the GUIDE is untrustworthy. In this case, it ALWAYS means that the FOLLOWER is.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "your GUIDE" instead of "the GUIDE."]

RAJ: Mind you, this "GUIDE" is referring to the Holy Spirit who never asks for sacrifice. I mean, after all, you've heard that there's such a thing as the Holy Spirit.

"But," your ego says, "For all you know, the Holy Spirit is pure imagination, something the church made up. Right? So you don't want to mess around with that. You know, that's intangible. Your mind? It's real because you're experiencing it directly, right? You're real. Holy Spirit? Mm. Can't be sure. Can't be sure. If you turn to the Holy Spirit, and you believe that you're actually doing it, you'll probably just be going insane, and they'll lock you up. So don't mess around with It. I mean, you may connect with one of the dark spirits. And Heaven only knows..." Oh, it uses the word "Heaven." Yeah, the ego says, "Heaven only knows what will happen to you then. Mm. This whole venture is untrustworthy. Don't trust it!"

This goes on all the time, every day, in one way or another, with each of you where you are distracted from trusting the good. You're distracted from voicing the good. You're distracted from embodying anything that smacks of too much goodness.

Again.

RAJ READING: No-one obeys gladly a guide he does not trust, but this does not mean that the GUIDE is untrustworthy. In this case, it ALWAYS means that the FOLLOWER is. However, this, too, is merely a matter of his own belief. Believing that HE can betray...

RAJ: In other words, if you are presenting yourself with a mask, you are in the act of betraying something. You're betraying the trust that the person you're speaking with would extend to you.

RAJ READING: However, this, too, is merely a matter...

PAUL: I'm sorry.

RAJ READING: No-one obeys gladly a guide he does not trust, but this does not mean that the GUIDE is untrustworthy. In this case, it ALWAYS means that the FOLLOWER is. However, this, too, is merely a matter of his own belief. Believing that HE can betray, he believes that everything can betray HIM. Yet this is only because he has ELECTED TO FOLLOW FALSE GUIDANCE. Unable to follow this guidance WITHOUT fear, he associates fear WITH guidance, and refuses to follow ANY guidance at all. The Holy Spirit is perfectly trustworthy, as YOU are.

RAJ: Key point. You will not be able to see the trustworthiness of anything else until you're willing to consider the possibility that there is a Place of Excellence in you. And that Place of Excellence in you is the Excellence of you. And until you're willing to acknowledge that and begin to honor it, you will not have the trust necessary to lean into the Holy Spirit, or to let yourself go into the underlying, everlasting arms of God and yield.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God Himself trusts you, and therefore your trustworthiness IS beyond question. It will always remain beyond question, however much YOU may question it.

We said before that you ARE the Will of God. His Will is not an idle wish, and your identification WITH His Will is not optional since it IS what you are. Sharing His Will with me is not really open to choice, though it may seem to be.

RAJ: In other words, you may not choose to listen to me in the quietness of your Being. You may not give me the opportunity to share the Truth about the Father so that you might find that as Brothers we both see things the same way. As Brother and Sister we both see things the same way. You may not give yourself the opportunity to share the Father's Will. But in spite of your ignoring It, we do share the Father's Will. We do. It's... the sharing of It is in place. It's stable. It's eternal. It's just the Way Things Are.

RAJ READING: Sharing His Will with me is not really open to choice, though it may seem to be. The whole separation lies in this fallacy. The only way OUT of the fallacy is to decide that you do not have to decide ANYTHING.

RAJ: I'm going to go back to the beginning of the paragraph.

RAJ READING: We said before that you ARE the Will of God. His Will is not an idle wish, and your identification WITH His Will is not optional since it IS what you are. Sharing His Will with me is not really open to choice, though it may seem to be. The whole separation lies in this fallacy.

RAJ: Now what is the fallacy? The fallacy is that you seem to have a choice. You think you have a choice to be the Expression of God, or to be an independent agent. That is a fallacy. And that fallacy, that belief, is the one thing that your whole confused experience arises from. "But Father, I'd rather see it myself. But, Father, I'd rather do it my way." It was never an option. Therefore, you have never succeeded at it. But you have imagined that you have succeeded at it. And you have lived things out through the lens of that imagination.

RAJ READING: The only way OUT of the fallacy is to decide that you do not have to decide ANYTHING.

RAJ: What does that mean? It means you don't have to make a choice between this and that. If you neglect to exercise the choice, you obliterate the possibility of an experience of an illusion. You see that? If you say, "Yes, Father. Yes, God," and you don't opt for the right to have a second choice, you wake up, or you never slip into a dream. You've slipped into a dream, so the answer is to neglect to make that choice further. And how do you neglect to make that choice? By saying, "Father, show me the Truth." Or if you don't want to speak to Father, you can say, "I, from the depth of my Being, want to experience the Ultimate Truth here, now."

RAJ READING: The only way OUT of the fallacy is to decide that you do not have to decide ANYTHING. Everything has been given you by God's decision. That IS His Will, and you can NOT undo it. Even the relinquishment of your false decision-making prerogative, which the ego guards so jealously, is not accomplished by your wish. It was accomplished FOR you by the Will of God, Who has not left you comfortless.

[Repeating.]

RAJ READING: It was accomplished FOR you by the Will of God, Who has not left you comfortless.

RAJ: And God accomplished it by being All There Is. So there is no option for anything else. You see? God accomplished it by not giving you another choice. God never set up choices for you to decide between. And in the true sense of Singularity, if He didn't provide you with a choice, you don't have a choice. And therefore, you never actually made a choice that caused for you a real illusion. And so you're still in your Holy Place as the Holy Son or Daughter of God untouched, fully present right now, right here in the middle of River City, right here in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: His Voice...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...WILL teach you how to distinguish between pain and joy, and WILL lead you out of the confusion which you have made.

RAJ: What is His Voice that will teach you how to distinguish? It's the Holy Spirit. And what is the Holy Spirit? Nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: There IS no confusion in the mind of a Son of God, whose will MUST be the Will of the Father because the Father's Will IS His Son.

RAJ: Even if you don't understand that or grasp it in its fullness, grasp the fact that it is saying there is only one thing going on. There is only one thing being done, if you will, and nothing else has been done. Therefore, waking up is not an undoing of something that has been done. It's a sudden shift of perception in which what you thought you did that you didn't do no longer fools you. You see that you didn't do anything and you didn't exist as a doer in that sense, that you're more than that and have been all along, even though you've committed yourself to being an independent doer so as to try to have an experience of being an independent authorizer, which has been a rugged experience because it can't be done. And you haven't been doing it. And you can't do something that you can't do, thinking you have done it, without some kind of alarm going off within you that's your Sanity saying, "Stop this! Stop this! Stop this ridiculous behavior."

RAJ READING: Miracles...

RAJ: Sudden shifts of perception.

RAJ READING: ...are IN ACCORD with the Will of God, Whose Will you do not know, because you are confused about what YOU will. This means that you are confused about what you are. If you ARE God's Will and do not ACCEPT His WILL, you are denying joy. The miracle is therefore a lesson in WHAT JOY IS. Being a lesson in sharing, it is a lesson in love, which IS joy.

RAJ: Remember I said when you go into the Peace, there are two things that emerge—Joy and Love—and that they, if they are allowed, inevitably spill over into your experience, blessing everything and everyone and blessing you at the same time while returning you to the Conscious Experience of What You Really Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Every miracle is thus a lesson in truth, and by offering truth you are learning the difference between pain and joy.

RAJ: By offering Truth. How do you offer Truth? You offer it by declaring it. You offer it by giving it voice. You offer it by putting it in the air. Not by quietly, peacefully knowing it without ever expressing it in a manner that can promote change. You dare... I invite you to dare to voice Truth, to give expression to Truth, offer Truth, instead of silly bullshit social talk that doesn't do anything to upset the status quo. Dare to offer the Truth and say to someone, "You know what? No matter what you think you are, no matter what you believe about yourself, I know that you're Divine, and that this cold you're experiencing, or this headache that you're experiencing, isn't your Birthright. And so I'm putting it in the air right now between the two of us that I know this isn't legitimate. And I know it doesn't have any means of prolonging itself. And I know that it can go away right away. And I invite you to believe that too." And then leave it.

Don't be afraid to express the Truth, whether it's met with acceptance or not. Make the Gift. Glorify God by expressing the Truth. You run into someone who feels worthless, who's really down in the dumps about herself or himself, convey to them that they are worthwhile. Spend enough time with them to express the worth that you see in them. Let your actions deny their worthlessness, so that they might be inspired to adopt your point of view.

RAJ READING: Every miracle is thus a lesson in truth, and by offering truth you are learning the difference between pain and joy.

RAJ: And you're learning that there's not just a difference between pain and Joy. They are, what I'm going to call, unlinked pairs. Everybody says, "Well, if you're gonna have love, you gotta have [hate]. If you're gonna have joy, you gotta have pain. How would you know what joy was if you didn't have pain?" Is this not idiotic? But you don't argue with that idea. "Oh, if it wasn't dark, you couldn't see the stars. Gotta be some darkness in your life so that the light fully means what it is." So you learn the difference between pain and Joy and the fact that they cannot coexist. Period. And so you abandon pain.

Well, the next section is called:

RAJ READING: The State of Grace

RAJ: Maybe next Sunday will be more enjoyable. [some slight audience amusement at the comment] I love you all, and I look forward to being with you next week.

AUDIENCE: Thank you, Raj. Thank you, Raj.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

How many of you have had a salesman come to your door with a brand new cleaning gadget, vacuum cleaner, steam cleaner, and actually succeeded in inspiring you to purchase the item, let's say, a steam cleaning unit which can do tile and floors and carpets and ovens and walls, the grooves in your sliding glass windows, so many things, and it can get them really clean, and so for the next week, you clean house like you've never cleaned house before just to test it out?

Well, in a way the Course can be similar. Oh! It's a wonderful way to clean up your act. It's a wonderful way to purify yourself. It's a wonderful way to cleanse the old bad habits. And you proceed to go through yourself with a vengeance and find every dark corner that you can possibly find and purge it with the truth that you find in the Course or whatever other teaching it is that is new to you.

I want to put this delicately. The only thing that's wrong with you is that you don't know something is right with you. You have forgotten that you're Divine. You have forgotten that you're the Direct Expression of the Creator, God, the Source, whatever word you want to use. And you have forgotten that there's no way for you to become more or less than that. You have forgotten that there's a Place of Excellence in you.

So what's left? [laughing] A mess to clean up. A mess to work on. An undeveloped or under developed entity that needs through an effort of will and focus and concentration and commitment to upgrade himself or herself, attempting to finish something that is unfinished.

Now some of you go to extremes with this so much so that you stay working with a psychologist or a self-improvement group, because if there's the slightest experience of uneasiness in you, you just know that it's something fundamentally wrong with you that is attempting to assert itself. And so, when in many cases all that would be appropriate would be to brush off the feeling, you get into a concerted self-improvement program or process. You just know that whatever is wrong with you will never be working to your advantage, and therefore something in you is always undermining anything good that might happen. It's always undermining any opportunity you might have for success or happiness. And you go around in a constant state of self-blame which justifies persisting in attempting to cleanse yourself with the truth.

I am oversimplifying things when I say the only thing that's wrong with you is that you have forgotten that there is something right with you. But it's absolutely true there are things that all of you do need to recognize and correct so that poor behavior is changed into behavior that is constructive, supportive and healing. But, the actual solution to your problem is not to attack the problem, but to remember that there is something fundamentally right with you so that you can bring your attention to that. So that you might invite that fact to more fully present itself to you in your experience, in your Conscious Experience of You. So that your inclination to demean and berate yourself and constantly be on an inner witch-hunt can be set aside. So that you're not constantly suffering from a poor self-appraisal.

Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God. And that's what needs to be remembered so that you might tap into the dynamics of What's True About You, rather than constantly trying to tap into the dynamics of what's wrong with you for purposes of correction.

Now I've said it before and I will say it again. You don't need to go on a self-actuated internal witch-hunt in order to improve yourself. What you need to do is turn toward the Altar, go within to that Place of Excellence, tap into it by desiring to know of it What Is True About You. And in the process of that being revealed to you as an inner experience, you will find resistances coming up in you to what you're hearing, and those are the things that are ripe for correction. And that's where to give your attention for purposes of correction.

And where do you get the means to correct it? From the very same place that you've been accessing that caused them to arise and present themselves in your face so that you can't ignore them and so that you can correct them—the Holy Spirit, that Place of Excellence in you. You say, in so many words, "Okay, Holy Spirit, you've been telling me the truth about myself. What you've been telling me is bringing up resistances in me. And there's this particular resistance right now. How do I deal with it?" And you listen, and as the answer is presented to you, you deal with correcting that and letting it go.

You can't wake up without correcting the things that have blinded you to the Kingdom of Heaven. But you let your journey Home uncover the things that need correction. You don't turn away from Home and go within into the dark places of you and clean it out first, because your unconnected sense of self is a maze of things to clean up, and most of the things there to be cleaned up are not the actual problem. And so when they get cleaned up, you haven't made any progress. Why? Because they didn't address the fundamental problem which is that you have forgotten that there is something right with you.

One of the attractive things about the Course is that for the intellectual, for the one engaged in an intelligent cleansing and purifying of himself, it provides many, many principles and ideas that can be used in a process of cleansing. And you know what? You can engage in this process of cleansing unjoined, still disconnected, and you can think that doing that is actually causing healing and change to occur.

But there's only one thing that will cause healing and change to occur, and that is through your conscious and conscientious intent to make connection with the Holy Spirit, to go within to that Altar and make connection with the Wisdom of Being that is right there in the middle of you, and to begin to lean on it and rely upon it and bring it into play relative to every aspect of your day. Because at the bottom line what you all really want is to find that every aspect of your day is some aspect of the Kingdom of Heaven which you had misinterpreted and which had caused you, therefore, not to see the Kingdom of Heaven. What you really want is to be able to look at anything and remember God right there, see God right there, because that is what is right there.

Well, here comes the first resistance. "But I've tried and I've tried and I've tried and I can't do it." Well, I'll tell you something. The Excellence in You didn't give you that message, and so when that thought comes, you say, "Holy Spirit, I'm being told, the suggestion is being made to me, that I don't have it in me to make connection with you, that I'm handicapped. What's the answer for that?" And if the feeling presents itself to you at that point, "Well, what makes you think now you will be able to hear?", you've got to deal right there with whether or not you want to wake up, with whether or not you are going to persist in spite of these suggestions of incapacity [that] present themselves to you. And then persist.

We read last week that the Holy Spirit is on your side. Well, when the thought comes "you can't do it," are you just going to forget what we read?

Are you just going to forget and abandon the fact that the Holy Spirit is on your side? Well, okay, that's the next thing for you to listen about. "Are you really so wishy-washy that you can't possibly hold your attention in one place long enough for what is there to register with you?" You see how insulting the ego is? The only thing is you usually agree. You say, "That's right. I don't have what it takes." And what that really means is: "I don't want to have what it takes, 'cause I think it's going to be too much work and I'm not that unhappy. I'm not that miserable yet.

All of these things I'm saying are different forms of the ego's resistance, of the ego's resistance to your uncovering the something that's right with you and remembering that's there's something right with you. And that the something that is right with you is itself the nonexistence of that which suggests that there is something wrong with you that you must give your full attention to. Again, the something right with you is the all-inclusive, omnipresent Something-ness of you that is the nonexistence of something wrong with you.

Now, I will keep telling you that there's nothing wrong with you. The Holy Spirit will keep telling you that there is nothing wrong with you. And we will both keep telling you there is something right with you which, if you will invite it into your conscious awareness, will uncover the fact, illuminate the fact, that there are no dark places in you.

So, beware when the next mental salesman presents himself to you with some new teaching, some new method, of purifying your soul. And stop using the Course as though that was its purpose. It isn't a super-duper Brillo pad to scour the inside of you to shiny brightness. It is the message of the Holy Spirit fundamentally and ultimately saying to you, "You are the Son or Daughter of God. You are the Direct Expression of God. You are God Embodied. You are God Expressed. And you've never become anything less. And this fact of you has remained the untouched fact of you for eternity and it will continue for eternity. It cannot be altered. And you do not need to continue suffering and experiencing the conflict resulting from believing otherwise.

So let's go into the book.

RAJ READING: The State of Grace

The Holy Spirit will ALWAYS guide you truly, because YOUR joy is HIS. This is His Will for everyone, because He speaks for the Kingdom Of God, which IS joy. Following Him is therefore the easiest thing in the world, and the only thing that IS easy, because it is not of the world, and is therefore NATURAL.

RAJ: Now let's be very clear here.

RAJ READING: ...it is not of the world,...

RAJ: Well, what world do you know of? The world that you have given definitions to, and that your parents provided definitions for, which were not descriptions or illustrations of What The World Really Is, which is the Kingdom of Heaven, because they weren't seeing the Kingdom of Heaven either. So it's easy because it is not of the world you are perceiving and is therefore natural.

RAJ READING: The world GOES AGAINST your nature, being out of accord with God's laws. The world perceives orders of difficulty in everything.

RAJ: Well I wonder, did a tree tell the writer that? Did the snail say it perceives orders of difficulty? Did the rock somehow communicate that everything of which it is a part has orders of difficulty? What world perceives orders of difficulty in everything? The world you made-up and that you are holding in your mind, that you are holding in a mind that has declared independence from the Father, from its Source, and therefore cannot perceive anything accurately because it doesn't know What It Is in actuality.

Again.

RAJ READING: The world GOES AGAINST your nature,...

RAJ: Your misperceptions go against your Nature, because your Nature is to experience with absolute clarity the Truth. The world you have made-up and the sense of yourself that you have made-up goes against your Nature. That's why listening to the Holy Spirit brings you back into alignment with your Divine Nature because the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind.

Again.

RAJ READING: The world perceives orders of difficulty in everything. This is because the ego perceives nothing as wholly desirable. By demonstrating to yourselves that there IS no order of difficulty in miracles, you will convince yourselves that, in your NATURAL state, there is no difficulty...

RAJ: Why?

RAJ READING: ...because it is a state of grace.

RAJ: What is a State of Grace? A State of Grace is you experiencing your Inheritance. And as I've said before, the Father has withheld nothing of What He Is from you in His Expression of Himself that is called you. Therefore, everything has been given, or, more appropriately, everything is being embodied as you right now with nothing left out. Therefore, you do not have to earn it, you do not have to become equal to it, you do not have to become worthy of it. It has already been given. It is already being given at every moment of Conscious Experience that you are having. That's Grace. It's a Gift. It's a Gift that has been given. It is a Gift that is being given. And that's why you experience existing.

Again, because this is important.

RAJ READING: By demonstrating to yourselves that there IS no order of difficulty in miracles, you will convince yourselves that, in your natural state, there is no difficulty because it is a state of grace.

Grace is the NATURAL state of every Son of God. When he is NOT in a state of grace, he is out of his natural environment and does not function well.

RAJ: Well what's your natural environment? It's your Right Mind. Your natural state is a state where there is no confusion, a state where there is no conflict, a state where there is no fear, a state of absolute, moving Peace.

Again.

RAJ READING: When he is NOT...

RAJ: When you are not in a state of grace, you are out of your natural environment and do not function well. [laughing] None of you needs an explanation of that.

RAJ READING: Everything he does becomes a strain, because he was not created for the environment that he has made.

RAJ: And I'm going to read it again and change the words.

Grace is the NATURAL state of every Son of God. When you are NOT in a state of grace, you are out of your natural environment and do not function well. Everything you do becomes a strain because you were not created for the environment that you have made. That you have made-up. You therefore CANNOT adapt to it, nor can you adapt IT to YOU.

I'm going to shift back to the wordings here in the book.

RAJ READING: He therefore CANNOT adapt to it, nor can he adapt IT to HIM. There is no point in trying.

RAJ: Do you hear that?

RAJ READING: There is no point in trying.

RAJ: The only thing that prolongs the dream is that you keep thinking there is a point in trying. You keep thinking that there is a point in trying to pull yourself up by your bootstraps. You think there's a point in trying to authorize things in the world and authorize things in your life and actually authorize your very own existence. The only reason you can seem to be able to try to authorize your own existence is because you already exist as an interminable State of Being, an unaffectable—unaffectable—State of Being. So, you're trying to duplicate what God has already done. And there's no point in trying. Why waste your time? There is no point in trying.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: A Son of God is happy ONLY when he knows he is with God.

RAJ: You might say, "on God's Side," instead of your side with your rights and your desire to be an authorizer. Again, it's called yielding. It's called fitting in. It's called letting someone find the little puzzle piece that you are underneath the corner of the sofa and put you into the puzzle, put you into your perfect spot where you complete the picture, and thereby the complete picture becomes you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: That is the only environment in which he will not experience strain, because that is where he belongs. It is also the only environment that is worthy of him, because his own worth is beyond anything he can make.

RAJ: I'm going to suggest something. When you read these words, change "he" and "one" to "you," to "me" or "I."

That is the only environment in which (if you were reading it) I will not experience strain, because that is where I belong. It is also the only environment that is worthy of me, because my own worth is beyond anything I can make, anything I can make-up.

Continuing with the words in the book.

RAJ READING: Consider the kingdom YOU have made,...

RAJ: Oh, you don't think you made a kingdom? You don't think you looked out there and decided what that tree was? Well unless you went within and God revealed to you what that tree is, then you did make it up. You are looking at a definition you have arrived at that you are satisfied with at the moment. That's not a condemnation. It's just a statement of fact that helps bring clarity into view so that you have justification for making a different choice. Not because you're guilty, but because if a choice you have made doesn't work, you really don't want to persist in it.

So again.

RAJ READING: Consider the kingdom YOU have made, and judge its worth fairly. Is it worthy to be a home for a Child of God?

RAJ: Well what do you see when you look out there? A hostile world. Is what you're seeing worthy of being a home for a Child of God? No. Even more, is that what's actually out there? Or, is that what you're believing is out there?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Is it worthy to be a home for a Child of God? Does it protect his peace, and shine love upon him?

RAJ: When you look out, not necessarily at nature, but at what you see on TV and what your fellowman is saying and doing, or your neighbors, et cetera, does it protect your peace? Does it shine love upon you? Does it keep your heart untouched by fear, and allow you to give always without any sense of loss?

I changed the words. I'm going to go back and read it the way it is in the book.

RAJ READING: Does it keep his...

RAJ: A Child of God's.

RAJ READING: ...heart untouched by fear, and allow him to give always, without any sense of loss? Does it teach him that this giving IS his joy, and that God Himself thanks him for his giving? That is the ONLY environment in which you can be happy. You cannot make it, any more than you can make yourselves. It has been created FOR you, as you were created for it.

RAJ: Just as with the puzzle, all of the rest of the puzzle was created for you, just as you were created for it. And together you all constitute the Wholeness of Being that God IS Being. And in yielding to that Function, to that State of Being, you become co-creators with God.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It...

RAJ: The only environment in which you can be happy.

RAJ READING: ...has been created FOR you, as you were created for it. God watches over His Children and denies them nothing. Yet when they deny Him they do not know this, because they deny THEMSELVES everything.

You who could give the Love of God to everything you see and touch and remember are literally denying Heaven to yourselves. I call upon you again to remember that I have chosen you to teach the Kingdom TO the Kingdom.

RAJ: Pretty sneaky, huh? You can't see the Kingdom of Heaven but it's all that is confronting you. And I'm asking you to teach the Kingdom to what you're seeing which doesn't look like the Kingdom to you. I'm telling you to bring your capacity to Love and to know the Truth, I'm asking you to bring that to bear upon what you have created, the definitions you've given to everything, and to Love beyond the definitions you've given.

Why? Because that's what will illuminate in your Mind the Truth of What's Going On. You've got to love what you've been hating and what you have been afraid of so that you can bring the essence of illumination to the spot where you had created a fog, a mist, a density, a darkness, that didn't let you see What Was Really There.

You could say I'm asking you to bring the Light to the Light, except that you thought that the Light you're bringing it to was darkness. It's pretty sneaky. It's gets you to give your attention where it's needed for a purpose that will undo, in spite of you, the meanings you've applied to everything, and thereby break your fog, break your illusion, break your misperceptions.

Again.

RAJ READING: You who could give the Love of God to everything you see and touch and remember are literally denying Heaven to yourselves. I call upon you again to remember that I have chosen you to teach the Kingdom TO the Kingdom. There are no exceptions to this lesson because the lack of exceptions IS the lesson.

RAJ: The lesson is that there isn't anything that can be left outside the Kingdom of Heaven in your Mind because there is nothing outside the Kingdom of Heaven. There are no exceptions. And as you begin to accept that and as you begin to be willing to look at everything inclusively, you will bring Singularity into view within you. And in Singularity there is no conflict, and so it will bring Peace into view as an experience within you. And as what you are giving the benefit of God to changes, so will your experience of yourself change. And you will find nothing there to demean or criticize or search for to scour out.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Every Son who returns to the Kingdom with this lesson in his heart has healed the Sonship and given thanks to God. Everyone who learns this lesson has become the perfect teacher because he has learned it of the Holy Spirit, Who wants to teach him everything He...

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...knows.

RAJ: Your Right Mind wants to teach you everything it knows, because everything it knows is everything you know. And it is not appropriate for you to be experiencing this artificial separation from everything you know. And so it is the Holy Spirit's intent, it is the intent of your Sanity, of your Right Mind, to inspire and cause integration to happen within you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When a mind HAS only light, it KNOWS only light. Its own radiance shines all around it, and extends out into the darkness of other minds, transforming them into majesty.

RAJ: I know. You say, "I genuinely wish I could do that." Well, then start with your own minds, start with the trees that you see, start with the things that are in your immediate experience, and ask the Holy Spirit to help you see what you're looking at through Its eyes. Because ultimately you know that they are your eyes and you don't want to be fragmented, and you don't want to be experiencing a dissonance that cannot really be there, even if the dissonance is only a matter of ignorance as to what a rock is, or what a flower really is.

Make the Gift of Love to the things that aren't resisting you. Don't pick the most resistant, most difficult person in your life to learn this on. Begin with those individuals and those things that are not providing resistance, and who might even be showing an interest. This does not mean that you should withhold the desire to see someone who is resisting as They Truly Are, but don't use them as a test case to justify whether doing this is worth it.

Mind you, whether there is great resistance or no resistance at all (and now I'm going to read):

RAJ READING: The Majesty of God is there, for you to recognize and appreciate and KNOW. Perceiving the Majesty of God AS your brother is to accept your OWN inheritance.

RAJ: And I'm going to say perceiving the Majesty of God as your Brother, whether he resists it like hell, whether he is unpleasant, unkind, hateful, in response, is to accept your own inheritance. Do it so that you might be blessed. And I'll tell you something. When you do it so that you might be blessed and you receive the blessing, your very presence, your transformed presence, will be an even more reasonable and acceptable justification from your Brother's vantage point for maybe believing you. He will find himself more willing to yield because he has an example, rather than someone trying to cram the truth down his throat against his will.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God gives only equally.

[short pause]

RAJ READING: God gives only equally. If you recognize His gift in anyone else, you have acknowledged what He has given YOU. Nothing is as easy to perceive as truth. This is the perception which is immediate, clear and natural. You have trained yourselves NOT to see it, and this has been very difficult for you. OUT of your natural environment...

[Editor's Note: Raj said "so easy" instead of "as easy." The Sparkly Book has "so" whereas the original HLC transcript has "as."]

RAJ: Or out of your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...you may well ask, "What is truth?" since truth IS the environment by which and for which you were created.

RAJ: And I will add: And which you have denied by virtue of choosing to think that you're something other than What You Are, an independent agent rather than a co-creator with God.

You might say that a co-creator with God is someone who stands with God but doesn't get in the way of God's Movement. How many of you who have had children who are watching you do something they're never seen you do before and who are very eager and curious, how many of you said, "The best way you can help me is just to stand there and watch. You can actually help me make this by not asking me so many questions and watch me make it so that it will be done sooner."? And the child becomes a co-creator rather than an interference.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You do not know yourselves because you do not know YOUR Creator. You do not know your creations because you do not know your brothers, who created them WITH you. We said before that only the whole Sonship is worthy to be co-creator with God because only the whole Sonship can create LIKE Him.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "be a co-creator" instead of "be co-creator."]

RAJ: The whole. So co-creation isn't an independent act of an independent agent, but is what the Whole Brotherhood does together. What does the Whole Sonship do together? It gives Evidence of God, and feels its Joy at fulfilling its Function, and thereby constantly stands at the threshold of the Movement of Creation, of "Behold, I make all things new." And you could say rejoices with God as God sees everything that He has made and recognizes Himself in it. By letting no other mind be in you but the Mind That Is God, you become the Conscious Experience of God recognizing Himself in the Movement of Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Whenever you heal a brother by recognizing his worth, you are acknowledging HIS power to create AND YOURS. He cannot have lost what YOU recognize, and YOU must have the glory you see in him. He is a co-creator with God with YOU. Deny HIS creative power,...

RAJ: In other words, [laughing] if you try to kick him under the corner of the sofa out of the puzzle box.

RAJ READING: Deny HIS creative power, and you are denying yours AND THAT OF GOD WHO CREATED YOU. You cannot deny part of truth. You do not know your creations because you do not know their creator. You do not know yourselves because you do not know YOURS.

RAJ: Of course, you got that famous bill of divorcement from your Father and lost your Identity. But all you have to do is annul it. All you have to do is annul it. Afterall, there was no way for you to engage in Creation after you did that. That's like having no sex and no valid state of being. So you won't get any arguments against an annulment; the church will let you have it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your creations cannot establish your reality, any more than you can establish God's.

RAJ: You all dream of making your mark on the world, or have at one point or another. You want your actions, your creations to register the fact that you were here and make your presence real. But you are Real before you take a breath, or lift a finger, or create anything.

So:

RAJ READING: Your creations cannot establish your reality, any more than you can establish God's.

RAJ: You see, your existing, your existence, doesn't establish the Reality of God. God is Real, and His Reality is what establishes your existence. Not the other way around. And God does not look at you to see how well He's doing. Thank God. [mild audience laughter] If He could see you the way you see you, existence would suddenly end in an infinite mental breakdown. God does not see you the way you see yourselves. That's why it is such an illegitimate imposition upon the Sons and Daughters of God That You Are for you to be experiencing things the way you're experiencing them.

Again.

RAJ READING: Your creations cannot establish your reality, any more than you can establish God's. But you can KNOW both. Being is known by sharing. BECAUSE God shared His Being with you, you can know Him. But you must also know all He created, to know what they have shared. Without your Father, you will not know your fatherhood. The Kingdom of God includes all His Sons and their children, who are like the Sons as they are like the Father.

RAJ: Here we are back to the subject of Singularity. Although there seems to be multiplicity, infinity of expression called Creation, it all remains one. It has not become fragmented, disjointed, disintegrated, by virtue of the Singularity of Being being infinitely experienceable. The very chapter we have been reading has been called, "The Consistency of the Kingdom."

Again.

RAJ READING: The Kingdom of God includes all His Sons...

RAJ: And I will add: Daughters.

RAJ READING: ...and their children, who are like the Sons as they are like the Father. Know, then, the Sons of God, and you will know ALL creation.

RAJ: Let the little puzzle piece that you are, hiding under the corner of the sofa, be found and brought back to your place amongst all the other puzzle pieces, all of the others of the Brotherhood, so that you might take your place, complete the picture, and lose this sense of boundary around a tiny little puzzle piece, so that you might experience your Identity as the Whole.

And then remember that the picture in the puzzle is a moving picture, not a still-life, and the Movement is Creation. And you will get a feel for what you are opening yourself up for.

The next chapter is called:

RAJ READING: THE JOURNEY BACK

RAJ: Well, I don't want you to be confused. We've talked today as though you're already Home, right? We've talked about the fact that the journey back, the journey back, is not the focus. We need to talk about the journey back, but we need to talk about it on the basis that you are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it; you are at that point and must understand yourself therefrom.

So I look forward to being with you next week. And I love you all.

You exist by Grace. Let that sink in. Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

This next chapter is called:

RAJ READING: [Chapter 8] THE JOURNEY BACK

RAJ: And I'll be frank with you. We may not get to the beginning of the chapter because there are some things that need to be addressed first; sort of as a review.

Imagine, if you will, a young man (young woman) who's grown up in a rough part of town. Life has been difficult. Life is a struggle for survival. There is little time for kindness. There's little time for giving one's attention to anyone else but oneself and what one's needs are, and how, in a hostile environment, to get those needs met. One who grows up in an environment like this is not provided with a language for healing, a language for, I'm going to say, behavior which contributes to the whole and uplifts it, transforms it positively. And before an individual who has grown up in this environment can begin to behave in a new way that is contributive, there needs to be a new language provided. In a dog-eat-dog world, the words "kindness," "thoughtfulness," "appreciation," "integrity," and "mutual consideration," these words don't show up in the everyday conversation. And what does show up in the everyday conversation confirms the status quo.

The Course, and everything I have been sharing with you, gives you a language of healing.

A language of healing. How many of you in here can think in French? If you don't know the language, you can't think in French. How many of you can think in English? Every one of you. Now, it's easy to understand that if you don't know how to speak French, you can't think in French. If you don't know how to think in language of healing, you can't have the evidence of healing.

Now, I have been providing language for healing. But there's not enough, for lack of better words, thinking in terms of healing going on. You're still thinking in the old language.

There are two instances that occurred this past week that I would like to highlight and amplify on. One of them, someone said, "Well, if you're not awake, you shouldn't bang your head against a wall if you don't want to have a headache. If you're not awake, you shouldn't do such-and-such if you don't want to suffer." Now this is language of confirmation for the state of ignorance that you're all experiencing. In a way it's like saying, "Well, if you're in the human condition, you can't expect more than such-and-such if you engage in particular activity." No. This is careless thinking. It's careless thinking when you know better, when you've had language of healing provided.

The current language says, "You all exist in the human condition." Well, that's a lie. You exist in the Kingdom of Heaven. You are Divine. And anything different from that that is being perceived is a misperception of What's Going On. I keep saying you're not in the human condition. I keep saying that you are in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven with your eyes all squinched up saying, "I cannot see the Perfection." In a way, it's like, the statement is like saying, "Well, because I cannot see the Perfection, I shouldn't expect to see the Perfection. I would be asking too much."

Now the other instance was that someone was asked, "How are you?" And this individual said, "Well, I'm not feeling very well. A cold must be coming on." The new language of healing, the new language of recognizing such, let us say, a physical experience as a call for correction wasn't brought into play. It was just sort of accepted. "I think a cold is coming on," as though there were such a thing as a cold that has a life of its own, that was going to come in and do its dirty work, and then go on its way, and no choice was to be had about it.

What I'm trying to point out is let's not be lazy. If you know the Truth, if the Truth is being presented to you, if language of healing is being provided to you, let's use it.

"Well," someone might say, "That's being proactive. And that sounds like willfulness to me. And I don't want to get willful here. And if I say, 'Well, you know, if you bang your head against a wall, you can expect a headache,' I'm not being proactive. I'm being really very passive about it. Or if a cold is coming on and, you know, that's just the way it is, I'm not being proactive. I'm really being very passive."

But I'm going to tell you something. Every thought is proactive. If you say, "If I'm not awake, I can't expect anything more than a headache if I bang my head against a wall," that is a proactive statement that sets into place or confirms your incarceration in an illegitimate environment of sin, disease, and death. Suffering! If you say, "I think a cold is coming on. I don't feel too well. I think a cold is coming on," that is a proactive statement. Every thought you think is proactive and either establishes your freedom, or re-establishes your incarceration. That's very important. Every thought is proactive. Another way of saying it is, every thought is causative.

Now a thought that is not based on Truth, a thought that is an error stated, doesn't actually create anything, except dissonance in you because you are attempting to function at odds with your Nature and at odds with your very Being, and you can't do that without being uncomfortable. So, it has an effect, you could say. But you know what? [laughing] It's like, if you kick God, Who is Immovable, your toe is going to come into the experience of the Immutability of God and that the attempt to kick against God can't effect anything. And that recognition is a strong recognition.

You say it hurts. And you say it's because you're in the human condition and you have a material toe, and blah, blah, blah. But it isn't because you're in the human condition. And it isn't because you have a material toe. It's because in your mind, you are acting at odds with the Way Things Work. And you can't do that without a reminder that you are attempting the impossible and you cannot succeed.

Now, we're going to go someplace else. We're going to go into a mental institution and we're going to visit the patients. And one thing that all of the patients will tell you is they want to go home. They want to go home. If they could go home, everything would be all right. They belong at home. They want to be there. But the interesting thing is that they are there because they are having misperceptions of reality that cause them not to be very functional in reality. "You see, when we're awake, we won't get a headache when we bang our head against a wall. When we're awake, we won't get colds. In the meantime though, don't bang your head against a wall, and don't think to challenge the first evidences of a cold as being illegitimate and not Divinely Real." For the person in the insane asylum, the call is for the abandonment of hallucinations right there in the insane asylum. They must become clear, lucid, reasonable, seeing clearly there before they can leave.

Why am I saying this? Because healing is not something that will happen after you wake up, after you go Home. The waking up occurs right where you are quote "in the human condition" unquote. Why? Because the human condition is nothing more than the Kingdom of Heaven misperceived and believed.

The language of healing is the language of correction. Correction of what? All the bad stuff that goes on in a material world? No. In the mind that is misperceiving the Kingdom of Heaven.

If, in your everyday thinking, you think that it's not a wise idea to bang your head against a wall because you will get a headache, you will not be prepared if you happen to fall down and hit your head on something. You will not be prepared to immediately say, "This is not true. There can be no injury where there is no matter. There can be no injury where the only substance there is of head, or table, or floor, or wall, is the Energy of Spirit which is Love, and therefore no injury can come of that interaction, let us say."

You will not be quick to challenge the first evidences of a cold, because you weren't quick to recognize the misperception in your mind that allowed for a definition to be given to the bad physical sensations that caused you to determine that a cold was coming on. You need to be alert. You need to be conscious all the time.

Do you realize that the person in the insane asylum who wants to go home, meaning to their family, to their house, to the community they live in, do you realize that they must come home in their mind first? Waking up is coming Home into your natural Divine Clarity so that you are not inserting misinterpretations of everything between you and everything you're seeing, which is in actuality the Kingdom of Heaven.

So, you might want to start saying, "I look forward to the experience of banging my head against a wall and having no negative results. I look forward to here and now to not being imposed upon by a cold coming on. I look forward to returning clarity right here in the middle of the insane asylum. It isn't going to happen out there when I'm back at home. I want clarity. And I want that clarity to be available to me in this instance, in this instant, in this place I find myself in, wherever that might be. And I expect to see different results; results different from the ones I had when I was not using language of healing in my thinking processes."

Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God. Now is when the Kingdom of Heaven is happening. And here is where it is happening. And you are each the Christ with the capacity to see it As It Is.

And you need to want to see it enough not to let yourself sloppily think in the language of conflict. And especially not to justify it. Don't justify suffering because "What can you expect? We're in the human condition."

That's language that needs to be [finger snap] kicked out. That is language not to be allowed. Why? Because it doesn't allow for healing. It doesn't allow for a sudden shift of perception. It constantly reconfirms the status quo, your current beliefs. So watch the language you use, because it will either confirm your freedom, or it will confirm your suffering, it will confirm your incarceration.

Remember this isn't all lovely words to benefit you in the sweet bye-and-bye. These are words of transformation. These are words of healing. These are words of correction right where you are, because right where you are quote "in the human condition" unquote is where the waking up will do, is where the going Home will do. And the going Home will be a matter of abandoning the language of suffering for the language of healing, and the thinking that accompanies that, and the responses that arise out of that, the responses that immediately correct a sloppy language of suffering thought.

Too proactive for you? Well remember that the thoughts that don't challenge the status quo proactively confirm it! Don't tolerate illness! Don't tolerate suffering because you're not awake yet! Else you hold on to the suffering and you confirm the dream a little longer. You've got to be willing to shake things up. In the world? No! In your thinking processes.

You're always giving voice to one of two teachers—the Voice for Truth, or the ego, the voice for fear. Whichever you are giving voice to, you are confirming. And whatever you confirm, you are bound to.

Would you not like to be bound to freedom? "Oh. Well, that requires me to take a stand." Well, when you say you're going get a headache if you hit your head against a wall, you're standing for something. You are standing for something. You're standing for suffering and for continuing to be locked into an illusion. At every moment you are standing for something.

The journey back is the journey back to your Right Mind. The journey back is a journey into your innate Divine Clarity, your Sanity. It's not a journey back to the Kingdom of Heaven somewhere off in the distance. The journey back is you desiring to see the Kingdom of Heaven that is in front of you as the Kingdom of Heaven, instead of what you have come to believe it is; a belief which you reinforce as long as you are not correcting it with the language of healing that you are learning.

"Well, I can feel a cold coming on. I'd better go get the Echinacea." Oh. Oh, you are interested in correction. Obviously you're interested in correction. But why not catch the thought and step back from the initial thought. "Oh, a cold is coming on." Step back from it. "No. That's not true. Beliefs come to me for life, and I give them all the life they have. I am not going to entertain this belief that a cold is coming on." You see? Correct it by stepping back from the thought and the definition you gave. Step back from it to an acknowledgement of the Truth that you have learned using the language of healing.

And be clear ahead of time that if you do hit your head against a wall, you don't need to suffer for one moment. Be clear about that ahead of time, because Spirit interacting with Spirit is purely harmonious, and there can be no injury from the interaction of the Energy of Love. It's your Birthright, if you happen to bump your head, not to suffer from it [finger snap] even for a split-second.

If you don't see that this language of healing that you are learning is giving you the capacity to be free here and now in what you're calling the human condition, from suffering, then you are as lost as you were before anybody gave you the language of healing. And that's not its purpose.

I want you all to become a little bit more indignant when something presents itself to you that suggests that suffering is inevitable because blah, blah, blah, blah, blah. Not the least of which is that right now you're in the human condition. No. You're not in the human condition any more than you're in this lifetime. It's bad language. It's language that will not free you. It won't free you because it's not the Truth.

The language of Truth will free you. Why? Because it will cause you not to be arguing against your own good. It will cause you not to be in a state of proactively denying Reality. And when you're not denying Reality, there is no dissonance between you and Reality. And that's when a sudden shift of perception can occur. You could say that's when the Father can take the last step.

Again, you're going to have to give up your illusions right here in the insane asylum. You're going to have to give up your illusions right in the middle of whatever definition you're giving to the Kingdom of Heaven, which is the only thing that's in your face. And you're going to have to do it consciously, alertly, with great curiosity, and an element of adventure. But don't put it off into the future. Bring it into play right here and right now because right here and right now is where you are deluded. And it's not because you're in an environment of delusion. You're not in an environment of illusions. You're in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven. If this isn't true, then we might as well stop reading the Course. You might as well stop studying it. You might as well stop considering what it's saying. It's not just a bunch of nice ideas to store away in your memory to draw upon to comfort you while you suffer through things that are not even real.

So, what am I saying? I'm saying be more proactive in terms of your healing. Be more proactive in terms of having very low tolerance for the imposition of suffering. And understand that the abolishment of suffering is going to happen right where you are, right now. And it will happen whether you're totally awake or not. It will happen whether you're deserving or not. So, cast your vote. Put your weight on the side that you want freedom, instead of putting your full weight, casting your vote, on the side of suffering and "What can you expect? We're in the human condition." It's like saying, "Well, of course I'm insane. I'm in an insane asylum. If they'd just let me out of here, everybody would see I was fine!" In the insane asylum is where the one who is insane will get well.

In the human condition, at whatever level of development you are, you will begin to have the evidences of waking up as you choose for clarity. And what happens? What happens in the middle of your inevitable suffering. You have [snap of the fingers] a healing, [another snap of the fingers] a healing, a clarification, a transformation. Maybe it's not earthshaking. Maybe it isn't universally impactful. But each time you have the experience of banging your head and not hurting, every time the sensation of a cold coming on occurs and you say, "I don't buy it. I object," and it goes away, you're demonstrating the fact that you will wake up right where you are. And each of those events will weaken tremendously the hold that the status quo has on you, that the language of suffering has on you.

So, instead of saying, "Don't be surprised if you get a headache when you bump your head against a wall," start saying, "Don't be surprised if you don't suffer at all when you bump your head against a wall." There's quite a difference there. One is an open door to expansion into total freedom—it undoes the status quo. So don't be lazy and sloppy. Start taking hold of your Birthright.

Let's go to the book.

RAJ READING: [Chapter 8] THE JOURNEY BACK

RAJ: For those of you who are in the first or second editions, just be patient. There is some text here that you do not have.

RAJ READING: You are hampered in your progress by your demands to know what you do NOT know. [no equivalent in the first or second edition of the Text]

RAJ: And I'm going to add, because it was implicit in what I was saying: You are hampered in your progress by your demands to know what you do not know before you will continue to move forward.

I was addressing this to Helen and Bill. It's true for everyone else as well. You are always hampered in your progress by your demands to know what you do not know before you will proceed forward.

RAJ READING: This is actually a way of holding on to deprivation. You cannot reasonably object to following instructions in a course FOR knowing on the grounds that you do NOT know. The need for the course is implicit in your objection. [no equivalent in the first or second edition of the Text]

RAJ: Now here's the correction.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: The Direction of the Curriculum (T-#128/138)]

RAJ READING: Knowledge is not the motivation for learning this course. PEACE is. As the prerequisite for knowledge, peace MUST be learned. This is only because those who are in conflict are NOT peaceful, and peace is the CONDITION of knowledge, because it is the condition of the Kingdom.

RAJ: It's a very simple thing. You cannot know the Truth if you're not in your peace. If you want to know the Truth, you must choose for your Peace first and get into it. Truth is a Singularity and it cannot be perceived through the lens of conflict.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Knowledge...

RAJ: Or what I have referred to as Knowing, with a capital "K".

RAJ READING: ...will be restored when you meet its conditions. This is not a bargain made by God, Who makes NO bargains. It is merely the result of your misuse of His laws on behalf of a will that is not His.

RAJ: When you say, "my will be done, my definitions be done, my word be done," what you're doing is playing at having a will, playing at being an independent will-er of things. The only thing is that that independent state, that so-called independent state, is something you have imagined. It isn't a state that can exist, because you can't be separated from your Source and Its Will which is your True Will. And so you are inevitably in a state of conflict when you are being willFUL.

RAJ READING: Knowledge IS His Will.

RAJ: God's Will.

RAJ READING: If you are OPPOSING His Will, how can you have knowledge?

RAJ: Any of you who has been in a state of worry and fear and conflict, who has chosen to set it aside temporarily in order to meditate and become still, has found that in the stillness clarity comes. Knowing what is appropriate comes. Knowing What Is True comes. And in knowing What Is True, you know what you don't need to be concerned about. You know what is illusory and is therefore not worthy of your attention, and you set it aside. And you realize that the very state of conflict that you were in was a result of being out of your peace in the first place.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I have told you what knowledge offers you, but it is clear that you do not regard this as wholly desirable. If you did, you would hardly be willing to throw it away so readily, when the ego asks for your allegiance.

RAJ: Well, part of the problem is that the ego asks for your allegiance in the language of suffering—a language you're well familiar with. And out of habit [finger snap] you tend to join with it, because the language of healing is not as firmly established in you and you have not arrived at enough clarity about it to give your allegiance to it no matter what is said to you in the old language.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The distraction of the ego seems to interfere with your learning, but the ego HAS no power to distract you, unless you GIVE it the power.

RAJ: I said earlier that beliefs come to you for life, and you give them all the life they have. Well, likewise, the ego comes to you for life and you give it all the life it has. The journey back is where you step back from giving it life to recognizing that you're the power. You are that which is valid which the ego must borrow from in order to appear to have life. And you do not choose to energize it any further and confuse the whole situation. That's the journey back.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego's voice is a hallucination. You cannot expect it to say "I am not real." Hallucinations ARE inaccurate perceptions of reality.

RAJ: You see, the world and universe—and whatever you mean by those words—are an inaccurate description of the Kingdom of Heaven. And what you're describing, you're creating for yourself, and so you're having an hallucination. About what? About Reality. About the Kingdom of Heaven.

RAJ READING: Hallucinations ARE inaccurate perceptions of reality. Yet you are not asked to dispel them alone. You are merely asked to evaluate them in terms of their results to YOU.

RAJ: Well, that's what we've been talking about. You hit your head against a wall, and you have a headache. Not too pleasing results, I would say. "I feel a cold coming on." And it comes on. Not too pleasing results, I would say. You've got to weigh the results.

On the other hand, if you feel a cold coming on, as you put it, as you define it, remember you're the one giving the words. You're the one giving the words that said, "If you hit your head against a wall, you're going to get a headache." You gave it the words. But if you give it a different word, and there is no suffering from banging your head and the cold doesn't come on, you have better results. And you need to pay attention to the results to see if you're getting what you want.

Now this isn't some spiritual, highfalutin stuff. This is down-to-earth, sensible, practical information, isn't it?

RAJ READING: You are merely asked to evaluate them in terms of their results to YOU. If you do not want them on the basis of loss of peace,...

RAJ: Meaning because you recognize that you will lose your Peace.

RAJ READING: ...they will be removed from your mind FOR you.

RAJ: Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: Every response to the ego is a call to war,...

RAJ: You might have thought that more appropriately it would have said, "Every invitation from the ego is a call to war." No. All the ego does is make suggestions like a hypnotist. Your responses are a call to war, because you're engaging with an illusion as though it's real, thereby giving it energy and seeming to make it real. And because it's a defense mechanism, it responds to you defensively.

RAJ READING: Every response to the ego is a call to war, and war DOES deprive you of peace. Yet in this war there is no opponent. THIS is the reinterpretation of reality which you must make to secure peace, and the only one you need EVER make.

RAJ: "Oh, if you hit your head against the wall, you're going to get a headache." That's what the ego suggests. And if you say, "Well, everybody, we'd better not hit our head against a wall so we won't have a headache," you've responded to the ego. You've engaged, instead of stepping away from it like you would a turd on the sidewalk.

"I feel a cold coming on." Be careful not to engage with that suggestion. I know you think you said it, but when you hear those words in your mind, be alert. Challenge it. Correct it. "Why that suggestion is the biggest bunch of bullshit I ever heard because colds don't have a life of their own. I would have to give it all the life it has and I'm not going to do that. It's not the Father's Will and therefore it's not my will." And you be quick about it. You be quick about making the correction. You be glad enough to have the language of healing, the language of Truth available to you, that you use it to correct these unkind and malicious suggestions that the ego makes solely for the purpose of creating conflict, so that you lose your Peace, which is the condition for Knowledge, the condition for Knowing the Truth.

You know, you could say that I'm inviting/encouraging you to become active students of the Course. Nothing could be further from the Truth. I'm encouraging you to become conscious, active Christs. I'm encouraging you to actively energize, we might say, What You Divinely Are. If you were going to become a student of Truth, you would have to go to the Teacher of Truth, wouldn't you? Well, this is not the Teacher of Truth. This is a record of the Teacher of Truth. But the Teacher of Truth is the Altar in You, is the Holy Spirit in You, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. So, that's where you go to be taught.

And as I've said before, the wonder of the way it works is that you go to your Essential Being to be healed of the misperceptions you have developed about yourself and which you believe and trust and reinforce. You go to your very own Divine Being to be taught the Truth, so that you might come into the full Conscious Experience of It once again, and lose your insanity, abandon your insanity, and become Integrated, Single, One, Indivisible, Undivided, as a Conscious Experience.

I'm being rather pushy today, like I'm saying get your ass in gear. But what I'm doing is saying in so many words, you're missing the Joy that's yours by delaying your awakening, by justifying suffering, by justifying the dream, because, after all, you're in the human condition, or you're in this lifetime, like some sort of a side trip from your Birthright that you've got to live with until you get back on the main road.

I'll tell you something. The Kingdom of Heaven is a wonderful insane asylum, because everything about it constantly makes the inmates ill at ease with their definitions. It constantly gives you feedback that the way you're looking at things, the way you're thinking about things, the language you're using, is falling short of your fulfillment. Why? So that you'll make a different choice.

If I've made nothing else clear today, let this be what is clear. You will wake up here. You will make the journey back right where you are. So right where you are is where you will, as they say, come in contact with communicable diseases and not catch them. Right here is where you will slip and bump your head and have no injury. Or if you don't catch it quickly [finger snap], then you might find an injury which is almost instantaneously healed. Right here is where you will have the experience of the journey back. Right here is where you will have the experience of the experiential re-definition of matter into Spirit. Right here in the middle of the human condition is where the Kingdom of Heaven will emerge in your Conscious Awareness.

So don't delay by saying, "Well, what can you expect?" You can expect miracles. But then you've got to implement your expectation by not lazily and sloppily going along with the old language of suffering. You see? "I feel a cold coming on. Better get the Echinacea." No. "Ah. I feel a cold coming on, but my healing can be faster than the amount of time it takes for me to get to the Echinacea because I'm stepping back one step from that suggestion and saying, 'I don't buy it. I object.' I correct this suggestion. I will not give it life by energizing it with my faith in what it's saying and the penalties that come along with believing it. I will not do that." Take the step back Home immediately. Take the step back in the direction of Home immediately. And have fun with it.

[Pause]

One last thing. Right in the middle of your ignorance is where your enlightenment will come. So now you can say, "Well, what can I expect in the middle of my ignorance?" Enlightenment! That's what you can expect. [finger snap] A sudden shift of perception that doesn't leave you where it found you, that doesn't leave you where you thought you were. Okay.

Please take what I'm saying to heart, because there's absolutely nothing going on in the so-called human condition that can actually object to and stand in the way of sudden shifts of perception. If I continue any further, I will belabor the point. It's in your hands. It's in your mind. Which language are you going to use to think with?

I love you all.

P. S. Those in the insane asylum do not see the characteristic of their insanity. If they did, they could set it aside. And when they do, they will set it aside. I will not always address what you think you need to learn. I will not always address what you think you need to know. But I will always address exactly what needs to be known for your release from the insanity that you know not the characteristics of. The Holy Spirit works this way and you must trust It.

I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

[long pause]

So, in the Sparkly Book, which for many is better known as the HLC Edition, the chapter is called, "The Journey Back," which was changed to "The Direction of the Curriculum."

[Editor's Note: Actually the chapter heading is the same, "The Journey Back." The section heading "The Direction of the Curriculum" was put in a different place.]

RAJ READING: The Direction of the Curriculum

RAJ: The curriculum in the book? The curriculum in A Course In Miracles? No. The curriculum is the retracing of the steps you took away from the willingness to be the function of recognizing God in each and every thing. Whatever course you took in leaving Home constitutes the course in miracles of going back Home, of the journey back. There's no objective Course In Miracles. And there's no objective curriculum for you to apply for yourself. The curriculum was set in place by you as you thought to be independent and original and in charge, and on and on and on.

The retracing of the course you took away from Home should be a joyous thing, because it's you coming into your Right Mind, you coming back into your Sanity. So the direction of the curriculum is toward Home. And it's an interior journey. Each of you will experience this course in unique ways. But there's one fundamental thing that all of you will participate in, and that is the relinquishment of the idea, the mad idea, you might say, that you have a capacity to think for yourself, that you have a capacity to give definition to every thing, that you have a capacity to be an authority independent of the Way Things Work.

And you might say that the undermining of the course away from Home is always brought into focus by the challenge you bring to the fundamental idea that you have a capacity to think apart from God, to see apart from God, to experience apart from God. Each step Home is the undoing of the first step away from Home, the undoing of the bill of divorcement. If you don't get this point that returning Home is an undoing of the bill of divorcement, you can become preoccupied with a lifetimes-long process of involvement with the undoing of each step that you took away from Home. You are finding that I am constantly undermining the first step away.

Now, in the book.

RAJ READING: Those whom you perceive as opponents are PART of your peace, which YOU are giving up by attacking them.

RAJ: This is one of those things you need to be very clear about because it's so easy to misunderstand. And as a result of misunderstanding, tie yourself up unnecessarily in grief until you become clear.

RAJ READING: Those whom you perceive as opponents are PART of your peace...

RAJ: It is quite possible for you to see someone who is not behaving badly, who is not behaving unpleasantly, as an opponent. It is quite possible for you to misperceive and misunderstand the presence of someone who is benign. It's possible for you to be confused about a friend, and see an opponent where there is none.

RAJ READING: Those whom you perceive as opponents...

RAJ: In this case.

RAJ READING: ...are PART of your peace, which YOU are giving up by attacking them.

RAJ: Well, attacking them? Yes. You're attacking them by seeing potential harm where benign-ness is, an opponent where a friend is, because you are confused.

Now, on the other hand, there are those who are themselves confused, who are experiencing fear because of their bill of divorcement, who are expressing their fear in antagonistic behavior toward you. You are not responsible for their behavior. Their own beliefs are responsible for their behavior. They are behaving in a way that causes you, out of habit, to respond with defense, because their behavior is an expression of attack. These, you could say, are opponents in that they are trying to upset you.

Whereas in the first case, it was a friend who was not behaving in an obtuse way and in whom there was no call for defense from you.

Now, the key here is that when someone is behaving in a way that is obtuse, unfriendly, unkind, thoughtless, hateful, when they are acting out their own great fear, you have a choice to either see them as an opponent, or to see their behavior as a call for Love from a Christ who has forgotten Who He (or She) Is. If you make the mistake of seeing them as an opponent, you are attacking them, because you are completely missing the point that they are a Christ who is confused by the fact that they are entertaining a sense of independence that will always be a fearful experience, and will cause them to behave toward their world as though it is hostile and something which they must protect themselves against.

There is never an occasion when anything that confronts you must be defined as an opponent. Again, there is never a situation in which anything in your world must be defined as an opponent. And again, if you determine that something or someone in your world is an opponent, you have sacrificed your capacity to see clearly and to be an agent for change, an agent for healing.

Now the big question is why, under any circumstance, would you determine that someone or something in your world was an opponent? Well, only when you yourself are seeing yourself as an independent agent, only when you see yourself as what you have defined yourself, you see them as an opponent, because they are challenging something in you that you have made-up about yourself that is pure bullshit, pure fantasy, pure illusion, which is vulnerable to being uncovered for what it is—nothing.

The fact that you see them as an opponent and decide to defend yourself against them, which constitutes attack, the fact that you do this means that before any resolution can occur, you must get your own mind straight. It means that you must within yourself consciously and conscientiously undermine your faith in the mad idea that you actually took a first step away from Home, that you actually could get a bill of divorcement and did get a bill of divorcement.

Your seeing another as a threat to you, an opponent, means that you are securely seated in a very definite belief about yourself and a very definite sense of what you are that has nothing to do with the Truth. You are responsible for correcting that. And until you correct that, you will not be able to engage the true idea that this one behaving in an objectionable way is really the Christ suffering from a belief that he or she is independent and vulnerable. At which point, you can begin to behave in a way that proves to them, or him, that he, or she, is safe and doesn't need to behave this way with you.

Until you do this, you're not in a position to state the Truth that uncovers what needs to change in their mind so that they are free to behave in a new way. It doesn't allow you to say "No" to inappropriate behavior without a hooker, a hidden hook, that constitutes judgment of some sort, which will absolutely block the miracle, the potential, for the sudden shift of perception for them. It doesn't allow you to recognize that they are not opponents and that they are part of your Peace.

And so again, those whom you see...

RAJ READING: Those whom you perceive as opponents...

RAJ: And I'm adding: Whether they're behaving that way or not.

RAJ READING: ...are PART of your peace, which YOU are giving up by attacking them.

RAJ: Meaning determining and defining them as opponents.

RAJ READING: How can you HAVE what you give up?

RAJ: If you give up your capacity to recognize the Christ in your Brother, you can't have the experience of the Christ in your Brother. And without that vision, both of you are stuck.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You SHARE to have, but you do not give it up yourself. When you give up peace, you are EXCLUDING yourself from it.

[Again followed by discussion.]

RAJ READING: When you give up peace, you are EXCLUDING yourself from it.

RAJ: In exactly the same way that when you said you wanted a bill of divorcement, you said it from the place of your inseparability from God, the Place of your strength, the Place of your invulnerability. And you had no idea that when you actually confirmed to yourself, as insane as it is, that you had got the divorce that you gave up the Conscious Experience of your Identity. You didn't know that you would be excluding yourself from That Which gave you Identity.

RAJ READING: When you give up peace, you are EXCLUDING yourself from it. This is a condition...

RAJ: The absence of Peace.

RAJ READING: This is a condition which is so alien to the Kingdom that you cannot understand the state which prevails within it. Your past learning must have taught you the wrong things, simply because it has not made you happy. On this basis alone, its value should be questioned.

RAJ: In other words, the curriculum that you have been engaged in, which has been one of taking a course away from Home, must have taught you the wrong things simply because it has not made you happy. If you are not happy, you need to be asking yourself asking yourself, "Why?" And you might even get more specific and ask the question, "Might it be because I'm moving in the wrong direction? Might it be that the course I'm engaged in isn't as valuable and wonderful as I thought it might be?" And then don't leave it there. Then, when you finally acknowledge that indeed you're not happy because you're not acting within your integrity, you're not moving in a direction that works, then you need to decide to change directions.

And there really is only one change of course to take. And that is the reverse of the one you've been on. It isn't just 3 degrees to the right, or 20 degrees to the left, of the direction you were moving in. It's 180 degrees—reverse. You see, it's not what direction you're moving in away from God that makes a difference. It's abandoning the course that takes you away from That Which gives you Existence and the Experience of Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If learning aims at change, and that is ALWAYS its purpose, are you satisfied with the changes YOUR learning has brought you? Dissatisfaction with learning outcomes must be a sign of learning failure, since it means that you did not get what you WANT.

RAJ: But I'm going to add also that dissatisfaction with learning outcomes is the beginning of the return to Sanity. Because until you realize that you're not happy with the outcomes, you can't make a decision to change anything. If you did not get what you want, then you were engaged in learning failure. But recognizing that means that you're beginning to learn.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The curriculum of the Atonement...

RAJ: And what is it? The undoing of each step you took away from Home.

RAJ READING: The curriculum of the Atonement is the opposite of the curriculum you have established for yourselves, BUT SO IS ITS OUTCOME. If the outcome of yours...

RAJ: Your curriculum.

RAJ READING: ...has made you unhappy, and if you WANT a different one, a change in the curriculum is obviously necessary.

RAJ: Now, we have talked enough for you to at least have grasped the idea that what is making you unhappy, what is causing you not to be able to be happy, is your own independent thinking, and the so-called pleasure or hit you get from pretending that you have some authority, and therefore a capacity to successfully control.

Well, in the process of utilizing this so-called capacity, you've given yourself definitions. Definitions that aren't the Truth About You, but definitions that are satisfying to any attempt to be an independent authorizer. And as a result, you have built up a backlog of memory of your experiences of everything, conveniently forgetting that the way you're experiencing everything is flawed by the fact that it's being observed by something that doesn't exist—a mind independent from God.

You now live your life based upon those memories, and the definitions you have applied to them. You see, first of all, you applied definitions to the experience of everything. That gave you a memory of things that allowed you to be able to come to conclusions. And thus you began to have definitions of definitions.

"Well, you know, I have experienced the fact that the people of a certain race have consistently expressed these vices, or these virtues. Therefore, on top of my seeing them as different from me, I can see that they are different from the race I'm a part of."

So now we have a definition of a definition. And you live your days out caught in the swirling of these definitions, and these definitions of definitions, and you never touch the edge of What's Really Going On. You've lost the capacity, by virtue of the definitions you've given everything, to recognize God in any of it, or to recognize the Christ in your Brother.

So, what does this mean? It means that the change in curriculum is the abandoning of the utilization of memory, of everything that you've been taught, of everything that you've taught yourself, because you weren't awake when you were applying the definitions to everything, and therefore your perception of it all is flawed. And yet you rely upon this every day, and use it as the means of governing yourself and everyone else you can.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The first change that must be introduced is a change in DIRECTION. A meaningful curriculum CANNOT be inconsistent. If it is planned by two teachers, each believing in diametrically opposed ideas, it cannot BE integrated.

RAJ: Is that clear? It cannot be integrated. If it means it can't be integrated, it means that what the Holy Spirit reveals to you cannot be applied to the world you're seeing, and it cannot be applied to the self you think you are. Therefore, it isn't going to help the self you think you are improve and have better control, or better anything.

Changing directions, turning around 180 degrees, means not relying upon yourself at all. If you are, you haven't changed direction 180 degrees, and you're still heading away from Home, and fooling yourself into believing that this direction doesn't take you away as far as fast and that's an improvement. That's the illogical thinking.

Again.

RAJ READING: If..

RAJ: The curriculum. [Editor's Note: Raj replaced the word "it."]

RAJ READING: ...is planned by two teachers,...

RAJ: In other words, who you think you are, and God or the Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: ...each believing in diametrically opposed ideas, it cannot BE integrated. If it is carried out by these two teachers simultaneously, each one merely INTERFERES with the other. This leads to fluctuation,...

RAJ: You might say UNevenness.

RAJ READING: ...but NOT to change. The volatile HAVE NO direction. They cannot choose one, because they cannot relinquish the other even if the other does not exist. Their conflicted curriculum teaches them ALL directions exist, and gives them no rationale for choice.

RAJ: Haven't you heard it? "Everyone has their own reality. All directions exist." And when you say that, it gives you no rationale for choice. And that's where the insanity lies in the New Age thinking that, "Everyone creates their own reality. That's the way it works. That's the truth. That is the key to your freedom." No. It's the key to the loss of your freedom because it gives you no rationale for choice.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The total senselessness of such a curriculum must be fully recognized before a real change in direction becomes possible.

RAJ: And you know, that's the hardest part, arriving at a point where you're clear enough to say that the choices you've been making aren't working, they can't work, and as long as you persist in that direction you will suffer, and that doesn't make sense for you any longer. Until that which you have cherished becomes recognizably unwanted, you will not change direction.

You say, "Well, I know people who are really demonstrating in their life that their choices are causing their suffering. They're in and out of jail. They're always having fights. They're disagreeable. They are anti-social. Everything they are doing is obviously creating suffering for them. But I'm not having that experience. The way I'm using my mind is keeping me from having those experiences. I've learned how to make better choices."

Well, not being as miserable as someone else doesn't truly mean that you're not experiencing misery. "Boy, I'm glad I'm not in their shoes. But, damn, how am I going to make it this month? Things are really tight and I'm very uneasy about it." You see? You're not experiencing joy. You're not experiencing freedom from need. You're not bubbling over with inspiration and insight, which when you express it makes everyone around you feel better, or which promotes greater clarity for them. So be careful of these silly comparisons that you use to say, "I'm not miserable."

"I not as miserable as so-and-so. I didn't spend 3 months in jail. I didn't get sodomized. I didn't get stabbed. And I didn't run into an old buddy when I was released from jail who immediately enticed me back into another situation. I've got it good." No. You don't. If you're still operating on a course that's 180 degrees out of sync with your fulfillment, you're not better off.

And you've got to arrive at a point where you stop being satisfied with just not having as much trouble as Joe down the street. You've got to arrive at a point where you say, "Although I'm not as miserable as Joe down the street, I am not consistently happy. I am not consistently free of fear. In fact, even though I'm generally happy, there is always an undercurrent of fear. There's always a feeling of vulnerability that may rear its head at any time and throw me off guard. Even though, well, for the last year, I've done pretty well at not having those kind of experiences."

You've got to arrive at a point where you say, "No matter how much less miserable I am than Joe down the street, it's not my Birthright to be miserable to any degree. And I am going to change direction and learn from a different teacher that brings me back into the fullness of What I Am and an untarnished and undistorted Conscious Experience of everything as It Truly Is."

Again. And mind you that this is speaking of your relatively good experiences of life, that for most of your life have been better than Joe down the street.

RAJ READING: The total senselessness of such a curriculum...

RAJ: A curriculum that says, "All directions exist."

RAJ READING: ...must be fully recognized before a real change in direction becomes possible. You CANNOT learn simultaneously from two teachers who are in TOTAL disagreement about everything.

RAJ: What you call "your ego" is in total disagreement with God. You didn't get a half-a-divorce from God. You got a whole divorce. You said, "I want to see things my way." You got a total divorce from God, and therefore the way you're being is in total disagreement with God. Well, what's another way of saying that? It means you're in total disagreement or misalignment with the Way Things Work. That is perhaps a little less threatening than saying, "You're in total disagreement with God."

If you are choosing to be at odds with the Way Things Work, you are in total disagreement with the Way Things Work. But at least in your mind, you are able to conceive of the fact that the words, "The Way Things Work," means something that is unchangeable, and that you are either going to cooperate with and experience harmony, or be uncooperative with and experience suffering.

You see, your ego might want to say, "But I'm not in total disagreement with God," and fuss about the words. But if you're not in agreement, if you're being feisty and trying to be original and not fit in to the Way Things Work, it's obvious to you that you will not be happy. And it's easy for you to see that at the bottom line you really don't want to fit in, because you'll become nothing. You'll just be a cog or a wheel in the machine. You won't stand out. And you don't want that. Well, if you want to change directions, you've got to start wanting that.

Again.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT learn simultaneously from two teachers who are in TOTAL disagreement about everything. Their joint curriculum presents an impossible learning task. They are teaching you ENTIRELY different things in ENTIRELY different ways, which might be possible, except for the crucial fact that both are TEACHING YOU ABOUT YOURSELF.

RAJ: They are teaching you opposite things about yourself.

Now if your ego is nothing more than you wearing a mask, then you are being one of the teachers incognito. And the only thing you can teach is what's stored in your memory. And what's stored in your memory is distorted, because it was being viewed by a self that doesn't really exist. And even in its supposititious existence had the task of defining everything differently from What The Father Was Being right there in everything. Therefore, everything that you behind the mask are teaching is false. It's not the end of the world to realize that. It's essential. Because until you realize that in the tips of your toes, you will not from the tips of your toes engage in reversing your direction and coming swiftly back into your Right Mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your reality...

RAJ: Your True Reality.

RAJ READING: ...is unaffected by both,...

RAJ: It's unaffected by—What You Divinely Are—is unaffected by the Voice for Truth or the voice for fear. Because the Voice for Truth uncovers What You Are. It doesn't change What You Are. It re-reveals you—What You Divinely Are—to you and reengages your mind in the Conscious Experience of What You Are. So it doesn't affect you, even though it heals your mind of the misperceptions that have kept you caught in suffering.

RAJ READING: Your reality is unaffected by both, but if you LISTEN to both, your mind will be split about what your reality IS.

RAJ: I'll tell you something. The Truth is self-confirming. And so, as you begin to head for Home, as you do an about-face and move in the direction of the only curriculum there is, which is the undoing of your steps away from Home, and Truth dawns in your minds more and more clearly, the teaching of the other voice is going to become more and more difficult to tolerate. It's going to be become more and more problematic. It's going to become more and more intolerable to you. It's going to be clearer to you that it doesn't work, and that it can't work, even though you slip from time to time and try to employ it. And what had been familiar to you, and a comfort to you, will now be more and more distressing.

There's a benefit in this, because if you don't resist the simple Truth of what I just said as you experience it, it will provide you with further conviction and commitment on retracing your steps, on engaging in the course in miracles. Miracles are sudden shifts of perception. Not only that. They are sudden shifts of perception about what you had been misperceiving, sudden shifts of perception about what you had been misunderstanding, so that you are no longer suffering about this particular misunderstanding or that other one, and you're not having the experience of misperception regarding this or that.

Is it clear to everyone that this Course is not a head trip? It's not some intellectual process. It's not the collecting of intellectual tidbits that are stimulating, but because they're never incorporated, promote no change. But, boy, they can sure make you the life of the party. They can sure create a lot of discussion and a lot of activity.

A Course In Miracles is not an intellectual process. It's about changing your mind. More correctly, it's about letting your mind be changed, because you're accepting a new teacher. And you're giving your allegiance to a new teacher. And you are undoing the steps you took away from your Sanity, from your Wholeness, and from the Joy of Being.

The next section is called:

RAJ READING: The Rationale for Choice

RAJ: You see, it's absolutely essential to make a choice.

You can't just say, "God is Love and God will take care of everything. And I will just flow. I'll just get in the flow. And I will be in my peace no matter what happens. I will be in my peace no matter how I misperceive things. It's all God. It's all God." No! It's not! Your misperceptions are not all God! And your misperceptions are blinding you to What IS All God. And your misperceptions about Who and What You Are, are blinding you to the Sane, Integrated, Singular Experience of What You Are.

"Oh, but I much prefer to be open-minded. I much prefer to have a much broader perspective in which everything is okay, in which I'm not called upon to make judgment about anything, because, of course, judgment is bad." Well, excuse me. How can you make a choice without judgment? How can you make a choice between What Works and what doesn't work without recognizing the difference?

Back to the book.

RAJ READING: There IS a rationale for choice.

RAJ: Well, so much for, "It's all God!" So much for, "Everyone makes-up their own reality. Everyone is experiencing their own reality and that's life." So much for that.

RAJ READING: There IS a rationale for choice. Only one Teacher KNOWS what your reality is. If learning that is the PURPOSE of the curriculum, you must learn it of Him.

RAJ: That Teacher.

Whew! Am I really making it too hard? Am I really encouraging you to want things to be too perfect? I mean none of you in this room are suffering that much. You're not that miserable. And yet I'm asking you not to be satisfied in your subtle misery. I'm asking you to be as intolerant of it as you would be of the pain you would feel if someone threw acid in your face.

"Oh, but it's not called for! I mean how perfect... how perfect do you want me to strive... how much perfection do you want me to strive for?" I want you not to strive for perfection, but I want you to be completely willing to allow It, which is already the Truth about you, to register with you consciously. It doesn't take struggle or strife, but it takes, for lack of better words, committed willingness. A willingness without reservation—that's a little bit easier to hear.

Willingness without reservation. That you can grasp. Commitment to willingness sounds like work. But willingness without reservation expresses exactly the correct meaning of those words. Willingness without reservation means you paying attention with innocent eyes, with innocent mind, not introducing anything from your memory into the Conscious Experience of the moment you're in.

Again.

RAJ READING: There IS a rationale for choice. Only one Teacher KNOWS what your reality is.

RAJ: The Truth About You.

RAJ READING: If learning that is the PURPOSE of the curriculum, you must learn it of Him. The ego does not KNOW what it is trying to teach.

RAJ: The only thing it teaches is what it supposes is true. The only thing it teaches is what it wants to be true. It is not able to teach What IS True, because it's a state of mind, you might say, that has already said, "I want to give what is true new definition." And therefore, everything that it has defined has been a distortion of Truth. So it doesn't know how to tell the Truth or to teach the Truth.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego does not KNOW what it is trying to teach. It is trying to teach you what you are WITHOUT knowing it.

RAJ: Without knowing What You Are.

RAJ READING: The ego is expert only in confusion. It does not understand anything else. As a teacher, then, it is totally confused and TOTALLY CONFUSING.

RAJ: And let's get a reality-check here. This teacher that is totally confused and totally confusing is you behind the mask, having become so familiar with the mask that you think it is what you are, instead of that which is wearing the mask. And it's in the having forgotten What You Are that everything that follows is and can only be the teaching of confusion.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Even if you could disregard the Holy Spirit entirely, which is quite impossible, you could learn nothing from the ego because the ego KNOWS NOTHING.

RAJ: Why doesn't the ego know anything? Why does the ego know nothing? Because its very existence is predicated upon defining All That Is as something different from What It Is. And in the making of the definitions and the committed attention it gives to its definitions, it is ignoring What Everything Is. Therefore, it cannot know What Anything Is.

When you are committed to your memory, and you operate only from within the confines of your memory, you cannot know What Anything Is. You cannot know What Anything Truly Is. Therefore, at the moment, you're not experiencing anything as It Truly Is, no matter how peaceful it may be at the moment. And it's your Birthright to be experiencing everything for What It Is.

And so it becomes my task, and it becomes the Holy Spirit's task, to get you to pay attention to the apparently irrational idea that everything you know is wrong, is not valid, and therefore is not truly valuable to you. And that it is the reason you're not happy. And it is the reason that you are never free from fear, anxiety, or the feeling of vulnerability in one way or another.

I don't want you to be experiencing pure misery in order for you to be willing to change directions. But the less misery you're experiencing, the more difficult it is for you to accept the idea that you in this state of relative peace and harmony are still experiencing Reality from an invalid place that does need to be denied completely, that does need to be abandoned completely. Because until you annul the divorce that was 100% divorce, you cannot be available for the 100% Experience of your Identity and of the Joy that it's your Birthright to be experiencing.

You might say that I'm saying no matter how happy you are right now, you can't dare to be happy, because your happiness isn't Real. You could interpret that to mean, "Wow! I should be upset. I should be uneasy. I'm so far off the track that I must be crazy and that is alarming." No. What I'm saying is whatever level of joy and harmony you're experiencing is not valid. It's only peace and harmony relative to someone else's chaos and suffering. And I'm saying Peace and Harmony that is Real is your Birthright and is available to you, but you won't experience it until you go to a different Source than your memory.

It's that simple. Stop using your memory banks to perceive everything and to determine whether you're safe or not, whether you're happy or not. Your memory is a closed system. Your Being is Infinite. [pause] One more time. Your memory is a closed system. Your Being is Infinite. Those are the only two teachers you have available to you. It's simple.

The Course In Miracles is the movement from the teacher that doesn't really exist to the One that does. And it occurs by withdrawing your investment of faith in your memory banks, and your willingness to abandon yourself to an Infinite Paradigm in which you're not in control, because no control is needed, and in which you be, not to survive, but to give conscious acknowledgment and recognition to All That Is Real and to Joy in It.

But you know what? Returning Home, the journey back, will not occur if you don't know that there's a choice. And it won't occur unless you make the choice. And unless you make the choice, you won't abandon what doesn't work and you won't withdraw your faith and commitment to your memory—a closed system.

So with that we will end for the day. We'll continue reading from the Course, but let it be understood that the course is this inner journey of undoing and really beginning to be in a different way from a different place in you. In other words, instead of being out from the mask and costume, you will start being from the standpoint and vantage point of That Which Is Divinely Real underneath the mask and the costume. And from there you will do and be, based upon the Way Things Work, based upon What Is True, because you will know the Truth, instead of acting on the basis of the mask and the costume and all of the definitions that you have created about it and about how this presence behaves and gains credibility and respect and manages to survive because it's skillful at surviving. You'll abandon all of the infrastructure of beliefs and ideas that you have built around the mask and the costume. And I'm going to say that you will be from, not a structure of ideas and thoughts, but from a Movement of Love because That is what's underneath the mask and the costume.

I love you all.

And I just encourage you to not make this course in miracles, this journey back, strenuous. The only thing that will make it strenuous will be waffling back and forth between one teacher and the other. That will make it strenuous. And it's not necessary.

I will stop for today. But I will never stop.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Sparkly Book – p. 175

RAJ: Good afternoon. Or should I say, "Good evening"?

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We're going to go right into the book. And actually I'm going to start reading a couple of sentences earlier than where I said so that we have a sense of continuity.

RAJ READING: The ego is expert only in confusion. It does not understand anything else. As a teacher, then, it is totally confused and TOTALLY CONFUSING. Even if you could disregard the Holy Spirit entirely, which is quite impossible, you could learn nothing from the ego because the ego KNOWS nothing.

RAJ: This next line is a very important question.

RAJ READING: Is there ANY possible reason for choosing a teacher such as this?

RAJ: And intellectually, all of you would say, "No. No, there isn't." And you might even say, "I'm going to have to think about that." And already you've missed the point, because if you're going to think about it, it means that you're still delaying turning to that Point of Excellence in you to learn of It. In other words, you've still neglected to turn to the only Teacher worth listening to, and if you haven't done that, the ego is still being your teacher. It's very black and white. And because it's very black and white, it's very simple. There's only one thing you need to do in order to wake up. There's only one thing you need to do in order to start your journey Home, and that is change teachers.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Does the total disregard of anything it teaches make anything BUT sense?

RAJ: "Well," you say, "It makes sense, but I don't know how to hear the Truth." It's like saying, "I don't know how to swim." Well, one of the best ways to learn how to swim is to jump in the water, whether you know how to swim or not. And you'll find that instinct takes over, and within moments, you will be swimming. In other words, the only way you're going to be able to hear is if you start listening with commitment to hearing, not just playing with the idea of listening and hearing. As long as you think you have an alternative, which is to think for yourself, then you won't make significant and determined commitment to hearing. You won't listen fully.

Continuing, and referring to the ego.

RAJ READING: Is THIS the teacher to whom a Son of God should turn to find HIMSELF? The ego has never given you a sensible answer to ANYTHING. Simply on the grounds of your own experience with the ego's teaching, should not this alone disqualify it as your future teacher?

RAJ: Well, you would probably say, "Yes." But the full impact of the meaning of that question doesn't register with you, as I've said before, because you're really doing all right at the moment. And so you don't say "yes" with the full force of conviction that causes you to right now shift gears and start listening to the Voice for Truth within you, let us say, with the intent not to act until the action arises from clarity coming from that Teacher.

"Well, you know what? I'll have to do this on a vacation where I don't have any other demands. And I will have plenty of time if it takes me 5 or 10 days before I hear anything." You see how your very thought is a thought of doubt, a thought of quote "it not working" unquote, and therefore you better give yourself a lot of time? And that's the way you'll listen when the vacation comes that you actually decide to do this. You see? You haven't jumped into the water yet where the only alternative you have available to you is to swim now. There's never going to be a good time to do it. And you can be like Paul was and wait until the circumstances got very dire and he was halted dead in his tracks with no option available except to listen, or you can decide that it's worth it to do it now while things aren't too bad.

Again.

RAJ READING: Simply on the grounds of your own experience with the ego's teaching, should not this alone disqualify it as your future teacher? Yet the ego has done more harm to your learning than this alone. Learning is joyful if it leads you along your natural path, and facilitates the development of what you HAVE.

RAJ: Or we could say facilitates the uncovering of What You Already Are.

RAJ READING: When you are taught AGAINST your nature, however, you will LOSE by your learning because your learning will imprison you.

RAJ: Please understand that even if things are going relatively well right now, you are still in prison. You are still not experiencing your Birthright of the Joy of recognizing Reality in everything and everyone around you. And you're making do to the best of your ability while still ignorant of your Birthright.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Your will is IN your nature, and therefore CANNOT go against it.

The ego cannot teach you anything as long as your will is free because you will not LISTEN to it. It is NOT your will to be imprisoned BECAUSE your will is free. That is why the ego is the DENIAL of free will. It is NEVER God Who coerces you because He SHARES His Will with you. His Voice teaches ONLY His Will, but that is not the Holy Spirit's lesson because that is what you ARE. The LESSON is...

RAJ: That the Holy Spirit teaches.

RAJ READING: The LESSON is that your will and God's cannot be out of accord BECAUSE they are one. This is the undoing of EVERYTHING the ego tries to teach. It is not, then, only the direction of the curriculum which must be unconflicted, but also the CONTENT.

RAJ: Now, I want to back up a little bit. We will say in time—not in the book—in the past I have shared with you that there is no such thing as free will and that the only right use of will is to choose not to use it. And yet we're reading here that your will must be free in order not to be bound by, or fooled by, the teachings of the ego.

Well, let me ask you this. If I have been advising you not to rely upon your best judgments and your thinking and your reasoning and all of your learning up to this point, if I have been telling you to be willing to abandon that in order to go within to the Altar to connect with the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your Right Mind and to yield to It, you're going to have an experience that you would call or describe as abandoning your free will. If you're going to be yielding to something else, you're going to be abandoning the capacity you thought you had to function independently. In other words, you will say you're having an experience of abandoning free will.

It sounds like my teaching is conflicted, but it's not. You don't know what your will is right now, because you have been letting the ego teach you. You have been relying upon your best sense of what you are with no Conscious Experience of What You Really Are. And so you literally do not know what free will is, even though you think that you've been expressing it your whole life.

As long as you are relying upon your own thinking and reasoning, and basing your actions upon the conclusions you come to, and asserting yourself on the basis of the conclusions you have come to you, you are expressing a will that is not only independent from God, but is also independent from each other. And I am telling you that that is imprisonment, because you're missing out on what the meaning of the word "Brotherhood" is. And you're missing out on what it means to fit in with the Brotherhood. And you're missing out on what it means that you are to find your own in another's good; meaning you're to find your own good in another's good; that the way to have is to share.

The word "we" is characteristic of free will, is characteristic of the experience of free will. But right now your experience of free will is "I, I, I." Therefore, because all your definitions that you have given to everything were made-up out of whole cloth, so to speak, rather than your having arrived at the definitions of What Everything Is from your connectedness with the Source of every thing, you have likewise given your own definition to the words "free will." And your definition of "free will" is as confused and incorrect as the definitions you've given to everything else.

That is why I have said the only right use of will is to choose not to use it. The only thing that can possibly mean to you is that the only right use of what you're calling "free will" must be abandoned, 'cause you have no sense of, or Conscious Awareness of, any other will. And you will not be open to and receptive to the Father's Will until you do abandon reliance upon this cherished right that you think you have to express free will, which constitutes your being independent from your Brother—"I, I, I"—without the experience of "We." That is isolation. Isolation is imprisonment.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego wants to teach you that you want to OPPOSE God's Will.

RAJ: And how does it do that? It tells you that there's great value in expressing your will. And the better you do it, the more respectable you will be. And the better you do it, the more powerful you will be. And the better you do it, the more influential you will be. And the better you do it, the more successful, or wealthy, or whatever, you will be. All of this, as you know, appeals to your ego, doesn't it? It piques your curiosity and causes you to pursue your independence, not only further, but more intently.

So:

RAJ READING: The ego wants to teach you that you want to OPPOSE God's Will. This unnatural lesson cannot BE learned, but the ATTEMPT to learn it is a violation of your own freedom, and makes you afraid of your will BECAUSE it is free. The Holy Spirit...

[Editor's Note: Raj emphasized the above as follows: The ego wants to teach you that you WANT to oppose God's Will.]

RAJ: Again, which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...opposes ANY imprisoning of the will of a Son of God, KNOWING that the will of the Son IS the Father's. The Holy Spirit leads you steadily along the path of freedom,...

RAJ: Meaning back Home along the very path you took away from Home, undoing the specific steps, acts, thoughts, that you used to establish a sense of yourself as independent from Truth, independent from Reality, independent from the Conscious Experience of What Everything Is.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit leads you steadily along the path of freedom, teaching you how to disregard, or look beyond, EVERYTHING that would hold you back.

RAJ: Now the Truth is that you haven't, none of you have forgotten Truth completely. But all of the definitions you've given to everything, and the great pride you take in being self-reliant, has caused you not to be able to discern the difference between What Is True and what you've made-up. And because you are not able to make the distinction, it is intelligent for you to devalue everything you know. Sort of like saying, "Okay, Holy Spirit, I'm going to bring every single one of my thoughts, every single one of my ideas, every single one of my beliefs, every single thing I know, and I'm not going to hold anything back, and I'm going to put it all out on the table for You to sort out. I am going to assume that absolutely nothing that I would put on the table is worthy of my keeping until You have said, 'Here, this is Real. You can have it back.'" That's intelligence. And that's what you have to be willing to do.

You have to be willing to say, "Here's everything. I don't know which of it is Real and which of it I've made-up. I'm asking You to sort it out for me with me so that I might know What Is Real And Eternal, and so that I may know what isn't and release it and become free of the confusion that its presence provides as to what is real."

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit leads you steadily along the path of freedom, teaching you how to disregard, or look beyond, EVERYTHING that would hold you back.

RAJ: What a Friend the Holy Spirit is. And what a friendliness Its Intent For Being is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: We said before that the Holy Spirit teaches you the difference between pain and joy.

RAJ: I want to take a moment here because this is a very pointed point.

RAJ READING: We said before that the Holy Spirit teaches you the difference between pain and joy.

RAJ: It allows you to make a distinction between what feels good and what doesn't feel good. It allows you to make a distinction between what you want and what you don't want. Why? So that you can make a choice.

Well, if you're going to make a choice, it means one is going to be selected and one is going to be rejected. Well, what does that mean in practical terms? It means that when you're having a rough experience, you're not going to say, "Well, this is just one of those things for me to have patience with." Or "This is one of those things that is here as a learning experience for me. And, of course, if it's going to be a learning experience for me, I'm not going to reject it. It must be the Father's Way of helping me grow." That kind of thinking keeps you bound in the dream because no distinction is made. And if the distinction is made and no choice is made, you're still stuck in the illusion.

If you want to wake up, you've got to learn the difference, make the distinction, and then you've got to make the choice. And then you have to remain committed to the choice.

RAJ READING: ...the Holy Spirit teaches you the difference between pain and joy. That is the same as saying that He teaches you the difference between imprisonment and freedom. YOU cannot make this distinction WITHOUT Him.

RAJ: That's why you must bring everything out on the table for Him to sort out for you. The ego will tell you that everything on that table is valuable—your pet theories, your best judgments, your skills at defending yourself in a hostile environment. It will tell you that all of these are treasures; some that were gifts and some that you worked very hard for, but all of which are contributing to the value of what you are. You see?

Are you going to listen to this teacher? No. You don't need to listen to this teacher because you now you know there is another Teacher. When you didn't know there was another Teacher, there was nothing you could do. But now you know there's another Teacher. And now you know that this other Teacher is teaching you the exact opposite of what your current teacher has been teaching you. And not only that, you know that this new Teacher teaches you the difference between imprisonment and freedom.

And I keep coming back to this because it's very subtle, but it's very pervasive. You say, "What you're telling me sounds like hard work. What you're telling me sounds like something that may be impossible for me. And you know what? I'm not suffering that much. What I'm experiencing really feels like quite a bit of freedom." That subtle suggestion causes you not to look clearly at what we're talking about.

It causes you to not be clear in terms of black-and-white about What Works and what doesn't. It causes you not to look at the fact that underneath everything that's happening in your life, you're not really experiencing what you want. You're not really experiencing the freedom you would like. You're not really experiencing Joy consistently and continuously and fully. You're not really experiencing Peace. And when I use the word "Peace," I mean What Peace Really Is, which is a State of Mind in which there is no experience of vulnerability. You're not experiencing that. And you know it!

Don't be afraid to look honestly and deeply into yourself in this way. Because if you will look honestly and deeply into yourself, you'll realize just how little freedom you're experiencing, just how little happiness you're experiencing, just how little invulnerability you're experiencing. And I wager to say that if you're really honest with yourselves, you find no place in you that's invulnerable. If you're not experiencing invulnerability, you are in prison. You are not experiencing freedom. You're not experiencing your Birthright.

And if you will not be fuzzy and lovey-dovey spiritual in your mind, "God is Love, He will take care of me, and I will abide in the cozy feeling those words give me," if you don't engage in that and you take a practical look, you will see that the payoff you've been fooling yourself into believing you're getting has been an emptiness, has been nothing. And when that registers with you and sinks in, you'll say, "Damn it! I'm not putting up with this anymore. I'm going to abandon my will. I'm going to abandon what I thought free will was. And my one last act of will that I'm going to engage in is to say, 'Father, show me Your Will. I am not going to introduce what I thought was my will into the mix anymore. I am here, Father, waiting to hear from You. I am here, Holy Spirit, waiting for your Guidance."

Your last act of will, will be to abandon it, to not use it. "Insanity," you say. No. Because if you will abandon it, really abandon it, like jumping into the deep end of the pool where there's no way to get to the side, you will become determined to do what it takes to hear. And as the Father's Will is revealed to you, the Father's Will for you is revealed to you, it will also be revealed to you, as an experience, that that's what you feel, that that's what you will also. And you will recognize yourself in it. And you will gladly express it from there. And you will be free.

Again.

RAJ READING: YOU cannot make this distinction...

RAJ: Between imprisonment and freedom.

RAJ READING: ...WITHOUT Him.

RAJ: The Holy Spirit.

RAJ READING: That is because you have taught yourself that imprisonment IS freedom.

RAJ: You didn't know you did that.

But if you want to know the Truth, the key to the door of your cell is the free will that you prize so highly, that you value because it promises to you that through its use you can achieve anything. That's the hooker. It says you can achieve and do anything you set your will to. Wow. What an ego trip. Now, in order to get out of the cell, you've got to take your will and put it in the lock and unlock the door and walk out leaving the key behind.

RAJ READING: ...you have taught yourself that imprisonment IS freedom. Believing them to be the same, how CAN you tell them apart? Can you ask the part of your mind that taught you to believe they ARE the same to teach you the DIFFERENCE between them?

RAJ: No.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit's teaching takes only ONE direction and has only ONE goal. His direction is freedom and His goal is God.

RAJ: Now, I know I'm beating this into the ground, but you need to hear it over and over again for clarity.

RAJ READING: His direction...

RAJ: Meaning the Holy Spirit's.

RAJ READING: ...is freedom and His goal is God.

RAJ: But the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. It's not something separate from you. It's the very Essence and Wholeness of You. So your Right Mind, your Right Mind's teaching takes only one direction and has only one goal. The goal of your Right Mind is constantly being implemented by it. In other words, the Sanity of You is constantly implementing it in your awareness to whatever degree you're willing to stand in receipt of it and embrace it. So, the Holy Spirit, your Right Mind, is intent upon integrating what seems to have become disintegrated.

And so you, in your tiny sense of yourself, retracing your steps Home, are not doing it all by yourself against overwhelming odds. You have an Ally—your very own active, present Sanity—which at the moment you're dissociated from and which you don't recognize. So I want you to understand that this process is a process of your very own capital "B" Being; a Movement of Integration that is intent upon accomplishing Its Goal. And the marvelous part about it is that when it's accomplished, your whole trip back Home into your Sanity will not be able to be attributed to anything else. And you will feel the Integrity of You in the Movement and, what I'm going to call, the Reawakening. Thus you will not get into the Kingdom of Heaven on someone else's shoulders. And you will not be where you're not ready to be.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit's teaching takes only ONE direction and has only ONE goal. His direction is freedom and His goal is God. Yet he cannot conceive of God without YOU because it is not God's Will to BE without you. When you have learned that your will IS God's, you could no more will to be without Him than He could will to be without YOU.

RAJ: Now here's a wonderfully distracting question; one that challenges the truth of what's being said, and one that could pique your curiosity.

RAJ READING: When you have learned that your will IS God's, you could no more will to be without Him than He could will to be without YOU.

RAJ: And the distracting question is, "Well, then how did I will to be without Him in the first place?" And I'm telling you it doesn't matter. Because you are in prison, and it is not your Birthright to be in prison. And so everything that could possibly be done needs to be done for you to regain your Sanity. So just accept it. It doesn't matter how you got in the mess. It matters for you to get out of it and know how to stay out of it. And so get about the business of getting out of it.

And don't delay getting out of it by saying, "I'm not going to move one inch until you explain to me how I did the impossible thing of managing to get a divorce from God." The simple fact is you didn't get a divorce from God. You only got a divorce from God in your imagination. And waking up is grounding you and getting you out of your imagination.

RAJ READING: When you have learned that your will IS God's, you could no more will to be without Him than He could will to be without YOU. This IS freedom and this IS joy. Deny yourself this and you ARE denying God His Kingdom because He created you FOR this. When we said, "All power and glory are yours because the Kingdom is His," this is what we meant:

[Editor's Note: Raj said "God and His Kingdom" instead of "God His Kingdom."]

RAJ: Because the Kingdom is His, because Creation is His, and you are His Creation, and His Creation is the Extension of All That He Is, then all power and glory are yours because the Kingdom is His.

RAJ READING: ...this is what we meant:

The Will of God is without limit, and all power and glory lie within it. It is boundless in strength and in love and in peace. It has no boundaries because Its extension is unlimited, and It encompasses all things because It created all things. By creating all things It made them part of Itself. YOU are the Will of God because this is how you were created. Because your Creator creates ONLY like Himself, you ARE like Him. You are part of Him Who IS all power and glory, and are therefore as unlimited as He is.

To what else EXCEPT all power and glory can the Holy Spirit appeal to restore God's Kingdom? His appeal, then, is merely to what the Kingdom IS, and for its own acknowledgment of what it is. When you acknowledge this, you bring the acknowledgment automatically to everyone because you HAVE acknowledged everyone.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "in strength and love" instead of "in strength and in love."]

RAJ: Your vision has become infinite, all-inclusive. And so what you are aware of, you bring, you share, with everything infinitely.

RAJ READING: By YOUR recognition you awaken THEIRS,...

RAJ: And in very practical terms what that means is that by your recognition of What Is True, you have withdrawn from the mutual agreements that keep the illusion or the dream going. And in that weakening of the dream, you contribute to their seeing the Truth.

RAJ READING: By YOUR recognition you awaken THEIRS, and through theirs YOURS is extended. Awakening runs easily and gladly through the Kingdom, in answer to the Call of God. This is the natural response of every Son of God to the Voice of his Creator, because it is the Voice for HIS creations and for his own extension.

RAJ: Well, I hear you saying that when you have "Aha's," when you have light bulbs that go on in your mind where What Is True is uncovered to you more completely and you share it, the awakening of it doesn't run easily and gladly through the Kingdom. So what in the hell does this mean? It sounds very unrelated to real life. Right?

Well, I'm going to put it this way. If you would, imagine Creation as a great circuit board where every Aspect of Creation was a point in the circuit board, and the circuitry of the circuit board connects every single point of creation. When Truth is known, when Truth is consciously experienced, it courses through the circuit board and every single point on that board receives the impulse.

Now some of those little points on the circuit board are still very intent on expressing their free will. They are practicing the blocking of the Conscious Experience of the impulse that's going through the circuit board, and so they don't feel it, they don't see it, except perhaps as a slight intrusion on their privacy, which they reinforce. So, let it be known that whether you see evidence of the good news running freely through the Brotherhood or not, the impulse has reached them.

Now, what if 50% of the Brotherhood are engaged in self-will? That means that 50% of the points on the circuit board are actively blocking the experience of the Impulse of the Conscious Awareness of Truth that the other 50% are consciously experiencing. They're blocking it, but they're still in receipt of it.

Every time you manage to listen and you feel the Impulse of Love and you extend It, the point you are on the board becomes illuminated. Even if it's just a little bit initially, it becomes illuminated. And it means that now, we'll say, 49.999% of the board is less illuminated. You are contributing to the lessening of the density of the dream, the lessening of the darkness. So do not let yourself become discouraged just because these beautiful words seem not to be relevant.

RAJ READING: By YOUR recognition you awaken THEIRS, and through theirs YOURS is extended. Awakening runs easily and gladly through the Kingdom, in answer to the Call of God.

RAJ: Well, it does run naturally and easy through the Kingdom, so don't stop. Because I promise you that each step you take lessens the density of the willfulness that those indulging in self-will have available to energize. And so, what you're doing counts.

Again.

RAJ READING: Awakening runs easily and gladly through the Kingdom, in answer to the Call of God. This is the natural response of every Son of God to the Voice of his Creator, because it is the Voice for HIS creations and for his own extension.

RAJ: The Father extends and it's called the Son. And the Son feels the Impulse and extends to his Brothers and Sisters, and in doing so, makes it his own. Your creations are God's Creations given away with Love that make what you've given away that was received from the Father's, yours. The Father extends Himself to you as You, but that doesn't make it yours. Until you give It away, you haven't taken a stand, have you? You haven't declared yourself.

"Well, today, I'm going to think for myself, and I'm not going to declare the Father's Will. I'm going to declare mine." So you haven't stood in receipt of What Was Given, even though it's in your lap to receive. And you give away your will, your determinations, not realizing that what you're giving away is nothing.

When you're willing to say, "Thy Will, not mine, be done," and you let yourself stand in receipt of the Gifts of God and accept Them by passing Them on to your Brothers, They become your Creations. Not creations that you made-up out of whole cloth, but God's Creations that you've made your own by not withholding Them from your Brother and Sister. And then your Brother and Sister pass It on. And Infinity is like an incredible Gifting Process that gives back to God the recognition of What God Is, making His Creation His. And there is the Singularity.

And in your fitting in, in this way, which violates your current definition of free will, you experience freedom. And the meaning of the words, "Behold, I make all things new," becomes your Conscious Experience. And you will no longer seem to be stuck in repetition, in cycles of life that repeat themselves over and over and monotonously over again.

You now have grounds for making the choice. And you now have the encouragement for making the choice. And instead of letting it sound like a bunch of unnatural hard work, let there be an awakening in you of a sense of exploration and delight at the discovery of things of great value for you so that you can proceed with enthusiasm.

I look forward to the day when you will have the full Conscious Experience of just how much I love you. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Chapter 8 – THE JOURNEY BACK
Section – THE HOLY ENCOUNTER
First Edition – p. 131 / Second Edition – p. 141
Sparkly Book – p. 177

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Before we begin I want to back up just a little bit and reconsider this statement.

RAJ READING: A meaningful curriculum CANNOT be inconsistent. If it is planned by two teachers, each believing in diametrically opposed ideas, it cannot BE integrated. If it is carried out by these two teachers simultaneously, each one merely INTERFERES with the other. This leads to fluctuation, but NOT to change.

RAJ: And the ultimate point in that discussion was that the necessity is to choose for one teacher or the other; that the call was for who your teacher was going to be. And even more specifically, it's necessary for you to pay attention to whether you're getting what you want, because if you're not getting what you want, then you need to stop listening to the teacher who brings you those kinds of results.

Very often, I hear people say, "Well, as long as we're here in the human condition we have to do this or that. We have to go to doctors." Or, "We have to expect problems." And so on. And I keep saying this over and over again. There's only one thing available to you for you to experience—Reality. There is only one thing going on—the Kingdom of Heaven. It really is necessary for you to get this point under your belt and into your mind.

Because there's only one thing going on, there's only one thing for either of the two teachers to speak about, to teach about. The Holy Spirit teaches about the Kingdom of Heaven and illuminates it to you. The ego, the voice for fear, teaches about the Kingdom of Heaven and calls it the world, the human condition, a physical manifestation of a big bang, evolution, and so on. But both teachers are talking about the same thing.

Depending upon which teacher you choose to listen to, you will have completely opposite experiences. But the opposite experiences will be here in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven and will be happy, pleasant, fulfilling, or miserable, deteriorating, chance-filled experiences of the Kingdom of Heaven. You are not here in the human condition. You were not born into the human condition. You are not a Spirit that was born into a physical experience. You are the Christ uninterruptedly, unchangeably, listening to one or the other of the two teachers, and experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven accordingly.

I keep reminding you that each one of you right now is the Christ, is the Direct Expression and Embodiment of God right here, right now, in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven. I keep telling this to you because it's so easy for you to just slip back into what I'm going to call a materialistic assessment of the Kingdom of Heaven. You slip back into your habit of perception, rather than being conscious with innocent attention—meaning attention free of memory—to the one and only thing there is to experience.

Now, what causes you to see the Kingdom of Heaven as a material world and the human condition are the mutual agreements that you have all made with each other and the definitions that were given by the voice for fear. You need to challenge these. And you especially need to challenge them when you are dealing with mutually-agreed-upon definitions that have become institutionalized—health care and all of the concepts associated with health care—that are absolutely based upon the belief that you exist in a human condition in a material world; [these definitions] absolutely blind you to your opportunity to experience health.

Oh, I know. Wonderful things are being done. And I'm not challenging the wonderful things that are being done that make those of you who are experiencing limitations... that are providing those of you who are experiencing limitations a better experience. But God isn't in the picture anywhere. It's not part of the theory. It's not part of the definition of you. And therefore, your association with institutionalized healthcare concepts, definitions and mutual agreements do not lead to correction, do not lead to healing, do not lead to the eradication of what? The liability to be ill. And you must be awake enough to not just treat the medical profession as though it's "God," even though it speaks with the "authority of God."

There are, of course, other institutionalized areas of mutual agreements. And what I want to point out to you today is that if you're going to break the old habits, you're going to have to start disagreeing with the institutionalized concepts and agreed-upon definitions.

You tell me if this wouldn't be an improvement over the current situation. You go into a physician and have an exam. He gets the results back. He comes out and he says, "Mr. Jones, it is obvious that you are conflicted in your thinking. There is obvious evidence of it here. And you need to go home and give this your attention so that the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality no longer reflects this conflict in you. You must pay attention to what you are blindly believing, whatever it is. And you must ask the Holy Spirit to help you see what it is so that you can set it aside. At the present time, the situation does not call for intervention from me, but it does call for correction from you." Wouldn't that be incredibly marvelous? It would be closer to the Truth.

I'm not telling any of you not to go to a physician, or not to have a physical exam, or not to get a medical opinion. But I am saying this: that the teacher that physicians are allowing to teach them is not the teacher you have chosen if you are on the path of Awakening. And you must understand that if you go to them, you are going to get assessments that do not express the Truth About You that will heal. And if you try to honor the physician and honor the Truth, you're going to have conflict. You will have fluctuation. But you won't have change. Who is your teacher going to be?

Now if you're going to go to a physician, and you're going to value and honor what the physician says, understand who the teacher is that is finding expression through the physician's words, and know which teacher you are choosing to honor. Do it clearly. Do it honestly with yourself, and make a choice, because you do not want to introduce fluctuation without change.

If you go to the other Teacher, the Holy Spirit is not going to speak to you of death. The Holy Spirit is going to speak to you of Who You Are—the present Direct Expression of God, the Christ, using his mind well or poorly—and will address the need to change your mind so that you are using your mind well. And so that you are choosing for your Peace so that you have available to you an Experience of Singularity, instead of conflict, which is naturally going to find expression in the Visibility and Tangibility of You called body as unconflicted functions or healing.

You can't operate from both standpoints simultaneously. Now that might be hard to take, but it's the Truth. And so what do I suggest? I suggest that you not wait until a crisis to make the choice. I encourage you to deal with the cold that you think is coming on, or the minor symptoms of discomfort, and make your choice of whether or not you're going to listen to the Holy Spirit within you, or whether you're going to listen to yourself.

You're not going to go to the doctor for a cold, but you know what? You are going to listen to your prior education which you've gotten through advertising. Mmm. "Get ready for the summer colds." Mmm. "Get ready for the winter colds. Take this medicine. Take that medicine." And you think, “Well, since I’m here in the human condition, what can I expect? Oh, I can expect winter colds and summer colds and hay fever and asthma, and, you know, after all, I’m in the human condition. But you know what? While I’m in the human condition, I’m sure enjoying reading about the Truth. And, boy, oh boy, does it stimulate my curiosity and interest. And it really gives me a neat high. And it’s so comforting.” Well, bullshit on comfort. If you’re not making the choice between the two teachers, and you’re trying to listen to both of them and be uncommitted to either one of them and feel good, you’re not getting anywhere. Nothing is happening. No change is happening. Fluctuation is. No change.

Your body is the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality. Your body is not matter. It is the Substance which is Spirit. It is constituted of Living Love arising out of the Singularity of the Peace of God. If you listen to the voice for fear, you’re going to be in turmoil. You’re going to abandon your Peace. The result will be that you abandon Singularity and you embrace confusing, opposing dynamics. As long as you are choosing for that teacher, you’re going to have evidence of the choice. Your perception is going to be confused as well. But what’s your confusion about? It’s about the only thing going on—Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven. Because whether it’s the voice for fear, or the Voice for Truth, the only thing they have to express anything about is the only thing available—the Kingdom of Heaven.

If necessity, let us say injury or accident puts you in a position of needing physical correction, the sewing up of a wound, a cut, or whatever, realize that when you go into the medical environment, you don’t have to see it as a medical environment, because all there is to anything happening there is the Kingdom of Heaven seen clearly or not clearly. But understand that those who are there who will be treating you and expecting you to honor their decisions are not listening to the Voice for Truth. They’re listening to their best judgments based upon a faulty premise that you’re just a physical organism, a piece of meat, in so many words, that has no permanence to it, that isn’t eternal because it has nothing to do with an Eternal Source that creates only like Itself. And so you move into that environment rendering unto Caesar the things that are Caesar’s, and rendering unto God the things that are God. In other words, you go in being very alert, so that your primary allegiance is with the Voice for Truth because it will tell you what will lead to correction, redemption—not just making the best of a bad situation.

The physicians will talk to you about making the best of a bad situation and will say there’s nothing more you can expect. Those are words that are said very often. And those words, if you are honoring the source, will cause you to forget that you have an option that goes beyond making the best of a bad situation. And you will go to sleep and you will forget to expect a miracle. So you must be very alert so that you don't buy into the belief system of the ones who are perhaps providing you with very beneficial help.

If I may put it this way, every single one of you can go and learn transcendental meditation, but it's not necessary for you to adopt the whole thought system behind it. So you can go and you can have a wound stitched up, or a bone set, or something removed that needs to be removed under the circumstances, but you do not have to buy the whole attitude and physical, medical infrastructure of beliefs associated with it. You can remain joined with the Holy Spirit and meet the immediate need, and leave without ever shifting your allegiance to the institutionalized practice of the belief of a universe in which God has nothing to do with it.

This is just an example, but it's a very practical rendering of the meaning of the fact that if you employ both teachers simultaneously, there will be no change. There will be fluctuation. There will be no correction.

Everything the Holy Spirit tells you flies right in the face of every single mutually-agreed-upon definition that arose out of your decision to think for yourself and to be independent of your Source. Every single one of those mutually-agreed-upon definitions needs to be challenged. Now, this doesn't have to be a huge battle or war. It's as I've said before. You look at the glass, or the mug of water, and you say, "What is the more of What God Is Being here that I'm not presently seeing?" That's how you challenge your very definite beliefs about a glass mug of water. And you have them, but there's more there.

So you start being curious. You say, "Father," or you say, "Holy Spirit, what's the more of What God Is Being there that I'm not yet seeing?" When you ask that question, you're withdrawing your allegiance from your current best definitions of it, thereby weakening their control, you might say; the control they seem to have by virtue of the commitment you're giving to them. When you say, "What's the more of What God Is Being there?", you're withdrawing your investment of trust in what you already think it is.

When you stand in front of a mirror looking at yourself and you say, "What is the more of What God Is Being right there where I see myself?", you are abandoning whatever sure-nesses you have about what you're seeing. And you open the door for insight, for revelation. That's the way you challenge the status quo. You don't go out to that teacher and say, "You're a liar!" You turn your attention away from that teacher to the other Teacher and express curiosity. You say, "I want to know What The Truth Is here. I don't care what the physician's assessment was, or what his prognosis was, because whatever it was, it didn't include what the Holy Spirit has to say. It didn't include the fact that there is God that is omnipotent and more powerful, you might say, than the effects of any accident, or injury, or illness. What's the more of What God Is Being right here than what I'm seeing? And I'm more interested in knowing the Truth of that than I am what anybody else has come up with as an explanation or a definition."

You see, it is about making choices. It's not about, "Ah! It's all God. Anything goes." It isn't. As long as you are not awake, there's a choice to be made between waking up or making further commitment to being asleep. And remember that, although it calls upon you to make a choice, and then back it up with your commitment, causing you to be proactive, this is pleasurable. Don't make it work. Don't make it laborious. Don't conceive of it as being that way. Because the moment you genuinely say, "What is the Truth here? What is the more of What God Is Being here than what I'm seeing?", the more of What God Is Being right there will be revealed to you and that is pleasurable. That is a joyful experience. To be experiencing more enlightenment and less endarkenment is a pleasurable experience. Just because I'm saying, "Don't be wishy-washy about it. Be direct about it. Be firm about it. Be decisive about it," doesn't mean get tense about it. It really just means be very clear.

Okay. Let's go to the book. Okay. This next section is called:

RAJ READING: The Holy Encounter

Glory be to God in the highest, and to YOU because He has so willed it. Ask and it shall be given you because it has already BEEN given.

RAJ: Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God. You're neither behind the Point of Perfection nor advancing toward it; you're at that Point and must understand or experience yourself therefrom.

RAJ READING: Ask for light and learn that you ARE light. If you want understanding and enlightenment you WILL learn it,...

RAJ: Ah. If you want it, you will learn it. If you want to listen to the voice for fear, that's what you'll learn—fear. If you want the Truth, that's what you will learn, because that's where you're giving your undivided, unconflicted attention. It's automatic. You're all getting exactly what you're asking for. What we're bringing out here is the way for you to ask unconflicted questions from unconflicted premises. And when I say, "unconflicted premises," I mean a place in you where you're not sitting on the fence.

RAJ READING: If you want understanding and enlightenment you WILL learn it, because your will to learn it is your decision to listen to the Teacher Who KNOWS of light, and can therefore TEACH it to you. There is no limit on your learning because there is no limit on your MINDS. There is no limit on His will to teach because He was created TO teach.

RAJ: Okay, here we go again. When you decided to be an independent thinker, an independent agent, an independent authorizer, and you forgot Who You Were because you blocked your Father from your sight and therefore lost your Identity, you stopped being conscious of What You Are. But because What You Are can't change, it remained and got a new name. The part of you that you disowned became the Holy Spirit, your Right Mind. And as I've said many times, the Holy Spirit is your Real Identity held in trust while you dally with the ego, a different sense of yourself, an independent sense of yourself.

Obviously, your Right Mind now has been put in the capacity of being that which will reawaken you, provide you with the fuller experience of What You Are until you're so yielding that you'll let in the fullest experience of What You Are. And so it exists solely for the purpose of returning your Sanity to you. And so it knows how to do it perfectly. Why? Because at the bottom line, even in the middle of your dissociated sense of yourself, you are Whole.

Again.

RAJ READING: There is no limit on His will to teach because He was created TO teach. KNOWING His function perfectly He wills to fulfill it perfectly, because that is His joy and YOURS.

RAJ: Now, why does it say "and yours"? Because the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. And for you to come back into your Right Mind at the hand of the Holy Spirit's teaching is therefore the Holy Spirit's Joy and yours, because in Whollizing you it brings you back into the Conscious Experience of your Wholeness, of the Ultimate of You.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: To fulfill the Will of God perfectly is the only joy and peace that can be fully known because it is the only function that can be fully EXPERIENCED. When this is accomplished, then, there IS no other experience. Yet the WISH for other experience will block its accomplishment because God's Will cannot be forced upon you, being an experience of total WILLINGNESS.

RAJ: God's Will is an Extension. It's a Gift. It's the giving of What God Is to What God Is Being. God's Will is not a command. God's Will is a Conscious Expression of Creativity, the motive of which is Love. It's like God letting out a sigh of pleasure, making a sound of pleasure. And in that sound of pleasure, worlds are formed. You were formed. You are being formed constantly. That's not an act of will. That's not a command. That's not a directive. It's an Experience of Joy and Bliss from which spills forth Creation.

Now, if, as His Creation, you have all decided to experiment with being divorced from Him and having a little fun at pretending that you're independent and creating things on your own, and you forget Who You Are, and you determine to make things happen by sheer acts of will on your part, which is the way you live your lives, then you are not reflecting God's Will which is a willingness. It's a Gift of Love.

And since you have become committed to a lifestyle, you might say, of being assertive and authoritative and commanding things into existence by acts of will, coming Home seems difficult because you have to re-embrace willingness. And you have to abandon the hit you got, or that you thought you were getting, from asserting yourself to make things happen. So you have to abandon something that you have come to think of as being very valuable, if not essential, to being successful, or to surviving. And that's why it doesn't feel natural to you to yield, to say, "Thy Will be done, Father. What is Your Will? I prefer to know what Your Will is more than I do what my will is." Of course, when you go to the doctor and the doctor gives you his prognosis, then it's easy for you to say, "Father, I'd rather know what Your Will is than what the doctor said!"

You want to know what the Father's Will is because it's so much more than anything you through a puny act of will on your own can bring forth. And the most significant part of the more that you would experience will be your Peace and the Experience of Invulnerability that sees nothing in any form that could or would challenge it. An Invulnerability that doesn't protect you from anything, but an Invulnerability which is the absence of anything that one would need protection against.

Again.

RAJ READING: To fulfill the Will of God perfectly is the only joy and peace that can be fully known because it is the only function that can be fully EXPERIENCED. When this is accomplished, then, there IS no other experience. Yet the WISH for other experience will block its accomplishment because God's Will cannot be forced upon you, being an experience of total WILLINGNESS. The Holy Spirit knows how to teach this, but YOU do not. That is why you need Him and why God GAVE Him to you. Only HIS teaching will release your will to God's, uniting it with His...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...power and glory, and establishing them...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...as YOURS.

RAJ: Why? Because you are His Son or Daughter. You are His Expression. And in the remembering of God as your Father, your experience of your Identity returns to you.

RAJ READING: You share them as God shares them because this is the natural outcome of their being.

RAJ: Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: The Will of the Father and of the Son are One together...

RAJ: And these are the key words.

RAJ READING: ...BY THEIR EXTENSION.

RAJ: It's one thing to think the Truth. It's one thing to relish the True Meaning of Love. It's another thing to embody them. They say, "Put your money where your mouth is." Well, I'm saying put your mouth where your heart is so that you give evidence of what you love in your actions. That's the extension. And until it's extended, you haven't stood up and been counted. You haven't declared yourself. You're a closet Christ. Nobody will ever know it except you. And, oh, how you love to contemplate What You Are Truly in your closet. It's hypocrisy. It's a bunch of things. But most of all it's you not doing what will make the Truth true for you. Because until you extend it, until you give it, you don't have it. And neither does anyone else.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Will of the Father and of the Son are One together BY THEIR EXTENSION. Their extension is the RESULT of their Oneness, holding their unity together by extending their JOINT Will.

RAJ: Now we are talking about the real meaning of "being co-creators with God." We are not talking about your independent will moving in consonance or harmony with the Father's Will, so that there are two things moving in harmony with each other. We're talking about one thing.

RAJ READING: The Will of the Father and of the Son are One together BY THEIR EXTENSION. Their extension is the RESULT of their Oneness, holding their unity together by extending their JOINT Will. This is perfect creation by the perfectly created in union with the Perfect Creator. The Father MUST give fatherhood to His Son because His Own Fatherhood must be extended outward. You who belong in God have the holy function of extending His Fatherhood by placing NO limits upon It.

RAJ: And I've said before, when you let yourself be infilled with the Father's Love, it is such an exquisite and wonderful experience that it overflows, it bubbles over, and you couldn't hold it back if you wanted to. You give it away out of sheer Joy and an inability to say, "I'm going to give it there, but not here. I'm going to give it a lot there, and medium here." The concept can't even enter your mind because the influx and the overflow is so spontaneous.

RAJ READING: Let the Holy Spirit teach you HOW to do this, for you will know what it MEANS of God Himself.

RAJ: But you're not going to have the experience until you choose who your teacher is going to be, and give your committed, full attention to that Teacher. But the moment you do that, the Movement will begin. As long as you're listening to two teachers, all you get is fluctuation. "Oh, today is a little better than yesterday, but who knows what tomorrow will bring, you know. But, generally speaking, I'm feeling better. Generally speaking, things are going pretty well. I can't complain." You get fluctuation, but not change.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you meet anyone, remember it is a holy encounter.

RAJ: Well it's not going to look like it unless you are encountering your Brother with the Teacher who can remind you of Who You Are and Who Your Brother Really Is. And if you're not listening to that Teacher, and you're listening to the other teacher, you're not going to know Who Your Brother Is. You're going to know who he has become defined as, not only by his associates and yours—your associates who know him—but also by yourself. And ultimately it will be a conglomeration of everyone's opinions that you have adopted as your definition of him. And that will be a holy encounter that will be pure misery for you.

All encounters are holy encounters, just like the only thing for the two teachers to teach about is one thing—the Kingdom of Heaven. Every encounter is a holy encounter, but if you're listening to the teacher for fear, the voice for fear, you are not going to feel the holiness of the encounter.

And you will not be a presence which will transform any ignorances that still may be prevailing in your mind, or your Brother's mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: As you see him you will see yourself. As you treat him you will treat yourself. As you think of him you will think of yourself.

RAJ: And we can reverse this. As you treat yourself, you will treat him. As you think of yourself, you will think of him.

Well, if you are being informed about yourself by the Holy Spirit, you will naturally know that What Is True About You is true about your Brother. And it won't be an intellectual head trip. It will be a heart experience, because when you let the Holy Spirit speak to you, when you let the Holy Spirit in, you have an Experience of Innocence; not a thought of innocence, but an Experience of Innocence that is indisputable. At first, it will be amazing to you, but nevertheless, indisputable. Just a simple, pure, utter Truth. And in that realization about you, you will know that it's true about your Brother, anyone you come in contact with. And when that's your frame of reference, that's the way you will behave toward your Brother. You will extend it, and in extending it, make it true for you. Make it true for you because you have dared to embody it by expressing it, by extending it, in the treatment you give, or that you give your Brother.

[Aside to someone in the audience] Could you turn those lights on?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Never forget this, for in him you will find yourself or lose sight of yourself. Whenever two Sons of God meet, they are given another chance at salvation. Do not leave anyone without giving salvation TO him, and receiving it yourself.

RAJ: Until you give it, you can't have it. Until you give it, you haven't embodied it. You haven't stood up and been counted. You haven't come out of the closet yet.

Again.

RAJ READING: Do not leave anyone without giving salvation TO him, and receiving it yourself. For I am always there with you, in remembrance of YOU.

RAJ: Give to your Brothers what I give to you.

You don't always hear what I say. Sometimes you hear what I say and you tuck it away for future reference. And sometimes you embrace it and dare to embody it and grow, or change, or experience a miracle. How you respond makes no difference to me in terms of my willingness to ongoingly, interminably extend it to you. And I don't feel frustrated because I'm not employing an act of will in extending it to you. It's much more satisfying to extend it, and by extending it, embody it. And by embodying it, have the experience of Who I Truly Am. You see?

That is where we will stop reading.

As you go through this next week, let there be a willingness to want to see the more of What God Is Being right there in front of you, no matter what, what is in front of you looks like to you, or is determined by you to be based upon your prior definitions. Let there be a willingness to be from a Place of Excellence in you that you don't normally, or certainly not habitually, come from. And let there be a desire and a willingness to not cover over your Christhood, your Identity as the Direct Expression (the Son or Daughter) of God whose Nature is Love, whose Value is Truth.

Just let there be a willingness, enough of a willingness that perhaps throughout the majority of your day, you might ongoingly be aware of your desire to look and see with innocent eyes. Because in doing that, it will constitute a more consistent choice of who your teacher will be. And in making that choice more consistently, you will find yourself less and less subject to institutionalized bodies of concepts and mutual agreements that seem to function as though they were "God" and keep you in the dark. It portends to be a marvelous week if you do that.

And I look forward to being with all of you next week. Thank You.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Last week we talked about the importance and the necessity of not joining with institutionalized mutual definitions, mutual agreements, mutual concepts, because that's the only way the pattern of the habit of misperception can be effectively broken. And it requires definite self-discipline. It requires conscious attentiveness to what? To what you're thinking, to what you're choosing to occupy your mind with.

You know, there's a commandment that says, "Thou shalt not bear false witness," and ordinarily you think that means don't tell lies about your Brother. Don't misrepresent your Brother. Don't tell others that he's done something that he hasn't done, or that he's thought something he hasn't thought. But, you know, there's a more significant means of bearing false witness that actually has more impact. It's what you're thinking about your Brother or your Sister.

I've talked before about the fact that there are two ways to utilize the sense of sight. You use vision for one of two reasons: to gather information or to give acknowledgement. When you use your vision to gather information, you can count on it you're in an independent, self-protective mode. You are assessing the situation to find out whether you're safe, and to decide how to handle yourself depending upon the circumstances. When you look at your Brother, you look to either gather information about him or her, or to acknowledge something, to give something.

You notice that he or she's cranky or unfriendly today, or whatever it might be, and you assess the situation. "Mmm. I'd better watch myself with this person." And you have added to your current definition of that person. In that process, you've never checked with God to find out What's True about that Individual. You've worked entirely in the ego realm, you might say. And so your assessment and the added definition that you've given to yesterday's definition of that one is a misrepresentation. It is a bearing of false witness. Your behavior then will be governed by the assessment you have made. You will embody or share your assessment; an assessment that is incapable of being part of a healing, whollizing, clarifying encounter.

Now, all of you can see that intellectually. And basically all of you know when you're being unkind, when you're thinking unkind thoughts. But since you think it's private, there's no call for you to change. It's not hurting you. But the point is that whatever gift you make is the gift that becomes yours. And if it's an act of lovelessness, lovelessness becomes your experience. If you are bearing false witness against your neighbor, you're bearing false witness against yourself and you are keeping yourself from the experience of your joy, of the fact that your presence is itself truly the Presence of Love. And you cannot stand in receipt of the real purpose for your having an encounter with anyone else, which is to find and experience your Unity in the context of What The Two Of You Divinely Are.

Is that really the experience you all want? No. But you have to look at it squarely. And then dare to treat it honestly, so that you can become grounded in what counts, so that you can become grounded in what gives impetus to transformation.

Now there's another aspect of bearing false witness that is especially important if someone else that you're encountering is ill. And that is that when you assess their health and you come to the conclusion that they look terrible, that you had better steer clear of them because you don't want to catch what they have. You notice that their skin is sallow, and that they're perspiring, and their hair is a mess, and they should've stayed home in bed. And you add this, as I said, to your definition of them. You modify their definition to a worse status than it was yesterday. You are, in effect, embodying the voice of the other teacher. And you are making it more difficult for healing to occur. And you are making it impossible for you to be a part of healing. It is very important not to rehearse, in other words, to repetitively mull over or speak, the appearance of illness, or the processes of disease.

I'm sure every one of you at one time or another has gotten together at a family gathering where someone is describing their last illness, or their last operation, and goes through all of the details of it. Every time you give your attention to the details of the misperception of a Child of God, a Divine Idea the Father expressed, you incarcerate yourself more firmly in what I referred to last week as the institutionalized mutual agreements about health, health care, and, we'll say, health problems and what their impact is. And you densify the human condition, so to speak, thereby. You are not making it easier for anyone to wake up. And you are acting at odds with the very thing you are professing to love and to be interested in by virtue of your studying the Course, or the Bible, or any religious or spiritual teaching, aimed at quote "overcoming the human condition" unquote.

You know, if you run into someone who has been through a health trauma, we'll say, and they start to tell you all the gory details of their encounter with it, you can and should interrupt them and say, "You know what? I really don't want to hear all the details because whatever you tell me is drawing a picture, painting a picture, in my mind of you in an unhealthy state. And because I don't want that to occupy my time, I am going to have to take time, because I don't want that to occupy my mind, I'm going to have to take the time to reintroduce the awareness of the Truth About You. I'm going to have to clear my mind of those images so that when I think of you I am sending forth thoughts and meanings that embrace you in health, so that I'm not burdened by a sad and awful picture of you, but might have in my mind a spontaneous capacity to acknowledge you and embrace you in the Perfection that God made you with."

Now, you don't have to use the words "God" and so on. But you can convey the idea that you believe that your thoughts about them have impact on them. And that therefore, the thoughts you want to have in your mind you want to be as close to the perfection of them as they can be. You don't tell them this, but you let this be the basis for your encounter, or the basis for the remark I'm going to make. You don't have time to be distracted from your clear perception of them as What They Divinely Are. Because anything other than that will only compound the problem, lengthen its disturbing energy in their experience, and deprive you of the peace and joy of your Clarity, because you're staying in alignment with the Truth About Them, the Father's Being Of Them right there and then when they think something else is true about them.

Now this may sound like I'm saying that by your clear correct thoughts you can make change happen. No. But the closer your thinking is to the Truth About Them, the more parallel your mind comes to the Mind of God, the less blocked you are to the [snap of the fingers] flash of insight when the Father takes the other step and reveals to you, as an influx of insight, the Truth, with a capital "T", about them that will be healing.

Watch your thoughts because they bind you and they bind others. And then if you're going to think, let the thoughts be as close to the Truth as you are aware of the Truth as they can be. And they will deny the evidence of illness. They will deny your friend's perception of himself or herself. And that's okay. You're not there to agree with their ego's perceptions of themselves. And it will bring your thought into close enough alignment so that the little gap can be crossed/bridged and you can have an “Aha!” experience, a Direct Knowing of the Truth as supplied to you by the Father, an influx of you in your Right Mind, you might say, that will be an agent for change and will lessen the density of the dream of the human condition.

Watch yourself and stop yourself when you find yourself rehearsing misperceptions. You make the gift of a misperception, and you get the gift of misperception, and you’ve increased the misperception. And just like any grapevine works, your misperception will get passed on. And it will become the misperception of the one who passed it on. And the one they’ve passed it on to stands in receipt of something that they’ve either got to challenge or they will embrace and pass on as well. So be alert.

As we’ve been saying, you’re teaching all the time. And your teaching has far-reaching effects. And even if you don’t repeat in words what you would teach if you did speak, the teaching you are embracing will govern your attitude, thoughts and actions. And you will not behave in the way an agent for change would behave. And thus you will reinforce the status quo.

Okay. Let’s go into the book.

RAJ READING: The goal of the curriculum, regardless of the teacher you choose, is KNOW THYSELF.

RAJ: Now, mind you, when you read the word “curriculum” here, you generally think it means the curriculum of the Course, the curriculum that’s set forth in printed words on pages in a book. But remember the Course is the retracing of the steps you took away from Home. It’s the undoing of the very specific addition of misperceptions upon misperceptions that got you further into the dark about your Birthright. So the curriculum was established by you by each step you took away from Home, each step you took into ignorance, each step you took into ignoring the Truth more and more.

RAJ READING: The goal of the curriculum, regardless of the teacher you choose, is KNOW THYSELF. There is nothing else to learn.

RAJ: You could say that waking up is remembering Who You Are. And you remember Who You Are only by remembering Who Your Father Is. Because as long as you are fatherless, you are without a clear experience of Real Identity.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Everyone is looking for himself, and for the power and glory he thinks he has lost. Whenever you are with anyone you have another opportunity to find them.

RAJ: [small laugh] As opposed to the definition you've created about them.

RAJ READING: Whenever you are with anyone you have another opportunity to find them. Your power and glory are in him BECAUSE they are yours.

RAJ: You see they can't have something you don't have. And you can't have something they don't have. Remember we said last week that "we" is characteristic of abandoning the right you think you have to express free will independent of anyone or anything else. And so throughout the Course you find statements like this.

RAJ READING: Your power and glory are in him BECAUSE they are yours.

RAJ: It's a reminder that the Eternal Constant of Being is WE, equality, inseparable Wholeness in Union. So...

RAJ READING: Your power and glory are in him BECAUSE they are yours. The ego tries to find them in YOURSELF because it does not know where to look. The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: The other Teacher.

RAJ READING: ...teaches you that, if you look ONLY at yourself, you CANNOT find yourself because that is not what you ARE.

RAJ: Interesting. It didn't say that is not where you are. It says that is not what you are.

What does that mean? Well, it means you aren't a body. It means you aren't a localized spec of life. What You Are is Mind, the Conscious Experience Of Being, including and inseparable from everything you are conscious of. This means that everything you are conscious of is also the Conscious Experience Of Being in which is embraced all there is to be conscious of, which includes you. Which means that everything shares wholly and equally because all is Mind. All is one thing. The Infinite Conscious Experience Of Being.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Whenever you are with a brother, you are learning what you are because you are TEACHING what you are. He will respond either with pain or with joy, depending on which teacher YOU are following.

RAJ: And depending upon which teacher you are following, you will either be bearing false witness, or you will be bearing witness to the Truth about them and yourself.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: HE...

RAJ: Your Brother.

RAJ READING: ...will be imprisoned or released according to your decision, AND SO WILL YOU. Never forget your responsibility to him because it is your responsibility to YOURSELF.

RAJ: You don't really believe this. But I promise you that if you will take this as your practice for the coming week to remember that what you are giving you are getting, what you share you get to keep, and you take responsibility for which teacher you're going to look at your Brother with and choose for the Holy Spirit, you're going to be able to report back to me next week, even though I will not ask you to, quite a transformation in you and in your experience with your Brothers, because it's the Truth.

Again.

RAJ READING: Never forget your responsibility to him because it is your responsibility to YOURSELF. Give him HIS place in the Kingdom, and you will have YOURS.

RAJ: On the other hand if you give him his place in the human condition, you will give yourself your place in the human condition. And I ask again, is that what you want?

Now here's the key.

RAJ READING: The Kingdom CANNOT be found alone, and you who ARE the Kingdom cannot find YOURSELVES alone.

RAJ: Again, the word "we" comes to mind.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: To achieve the goal of the curriculum, then, you CANNOT listen to the ego. ITS purpose is to DEFEAT its own goal. The ego does not know this because it does not know anything. But YOU can know this, and you WILL know it if you are willing to look at what the ego has made of YOU.

RAJ: Well, what has the ego made of you? Well, it's made an orphan of you. It's made a miserable son of a bitch out of you who struggles through life in a world that is at odds with it, a world that is constantly threatening. And it does all of this right in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven because the Kingdom of Heaven is the only thing the ego has to teach you anything about. And it's convinced you, the Christ, that you're just a puny, little, insignificant, separate mortal in the human condition. And you believe it.

But now you would say, "Well, I don't believe it completely anymore."

This is kick-ass week. [some audience laughter] And I'm saying to you that you're too complacent. You're not as ignorant as you were, but you're not as aggressive as you could be in disciplining your thoughts more, so that you are bringing your thoughts into alignment with the truth intellectually speaking as best you can. So that the intent of the way you are using your mind is more in harmony with God's Purpose, which makes it possible for you to slip into clarity at least momentarily now and then enough to supply you with Vision, with a capital "V", that spurs you on to be even more aggressive, more committed in abandoning what doesn't work.

So you can know that the ego's purpose is to defeat its own goal. And you will know it if you are willing to look at what the ego has made of you.

RAJ READING: This IS your responsibility because, once you have really done this, you WILL accept the Atonement for yourself.

RAJ: It's what I said in different words. You will find more commitment, more resolve. And you will accept what is your Birthright for yourself more willingly, because you just don't find it valuable to play with things that sting you. To play with things that may be curious and interesting, but which never give you a moments peace. What would it be like to stand on an ant hill? Or what would happen if I hit that hornet's nest with a stick? It's interesting, but unpleasant. Why do it?

Again.

RAJ READING: This IS your responsibility because, once you have really done this, you WILL accept the Atonement for yourself. What other choice could you make? Having made this choice, you will begin to learn and understand why you have believed that, when you met someone else, you had thought that he WAS someone else.

RAJ: You know, someone really different from you. And because he's really different from you, his motives, his attitudes, his goals may be different from yours, incompatible with yours. And so because he is truly totally different, you better be careful. You better be constantly on guard. You haven't said a word to that person but your behavior will bear out your quote "on-guard-ness" unquote.

Again, repeating.

RAJ READING: Having made this choice, you will begin to learn and understand why you have believed that, when you met someone else, you had thought that he WAS someone else. And every holy encounter in which YOU enter fully will teach you THIS IS NOT SO.

RAJ: So, do you want to have an encounter that teaches you that it isn't so? Or do you want you to have an encounter that teaches you that it is so? If you want to have an encounter that teaches you that it is so, then look with your eyes to get. And make an assessment based upon your defensive attitude which was expressed in looking to get. And be miserable.

On the other hand, if you look with the intent to give, when you're looking at anything with an intent to give by virtue of your attention an acknowledgement of God, an acknowledgement that if anything is there to experience at all, it must be part of the Kingdom of Heaven, it must be more than you're presently seeing, and you wish to acknowledge as much as you are able to of God there, and you are interested in seeing the more of God that is there in the branch, or the pine needle, or the trunk of the tree, or the clouds behind the tree, there you're looking to give, not to get. There you are looking to acknowledge and be curious about What Is True, which constitutes a desire for illumination. Where? In your mind. What? A sudden shift of perception, a miracle.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You can encounter ONLY part of yourself...

RAJ: Emphasize the word "yourself." Don't emphasize the word "part."

RAJ READING: You can encounter ONLY part of yourself because you are part of God, Who IS everything. His power and glory are everywhere,...

RAJ: Why? Because everywhere and everything is God expressed, is the Visibility and Tangibility of God expressing, making the Gift of His Attention upon His Own Infinitude and recognizing Himself in it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: His power and glory are everywhere, and you CANNOT be excluded from them. The ego teaches that your strength is in you ALONE. The Holy Spirit teaches that ALL strength is in God and THEREFORE in you.

RAJ: Ah. There you go. You've got to remember Who your Father is. You've got to abandon the pleasure and the satisfaction you're getting out of being an orphan who is overcoming the odds that stand always in the way of an orphan.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit teaches that ALL strength is in God and THEREFORE in you. God wills NO-ONE suffer. He does not will anyone to suffer for a wrong decision, INCLUDING YOU.

RAJ: Now, that statement needs to be written down and posted on each of your refrigerators. It is essential for you to know that God is Love, that no matter how ignorantly and stupidly the Christ That You Are has behaved once having decided to look at everything privately and independently, God does not will you to suffer for a wrong decision. Therefore, you have no penalty to pay. You will not be sentenced for your stupidity, having to serve time as it were before you can receive the Father's Love once again.

God does not will anyone to suffer for a wrong decision, including you. Therefore, no matter what suffering you might be going through right now, it is not at the Hand of God. It's at your own hand. It's the result of the poor use of your mind, which just now you are beginning to understand can be put to a better use. And you're being called upon to make the change where it will be effective, which is in your own mind, and which amounts to your neglecting to bear false witness against your Brother or yourself by rehearsing the misperceptions about your Brother or yourself. And also being able to disregard the expressions of other's misperceptions about you.

Again.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...does not will anyone to suffer for a wrong decision, INCLUDING YOU. That is why He has given you the means for UNDOING it.

RAJ: You see, instead of punishing you, the Father gave you the means of undoing the stupidity. And what was the means? This is where the sheer beauty of Reality and God comes into play. Your means for undoing it is the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your Right Mind, which has been held in trust, because it couldn't go anywhere, while you chose to dally with and identify yourself as an ego. The beauty of it and the integrity of it is that the answer to your problems is your Self, with a capital "S".

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Through His power...

RAJ: God's Power.

RAJ READING: ...and glory all your wrong decisions are undone COMPLETELY releasing you AND your brothers...

RAJ: There's the "we" again.

RAJ READING: ...releasing you AND your brothers from EVERY imprisoning thought ANY part of the Sonship has accepted. Wrong decisions have no power BECAUSE they are not true. The imprisonment which they SEEM to produce is no more true than THEY are.

RAJ: You see? How could you possibly be punished for something that hasn't happened? Or punished for something that you never did because what you thought you did was impossible and was never accomplished? You see? That's part of the Joy of Awakening is discovering that everything you thought you ever did that was opposed to God you never did and it never was accomplished. And that's why it doesn't take time for it to be undone. That's why there can be instantaneous healing. That's why there can be [snap of the fingers] light bulbs going on, an "Aha!" and sudden perception of the Truth. Because that which blocked it isn't Real.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Power and glory belong to God alone. So do YOU.

RAJ: There's "we" transformed into "us" which is more of a oneness.

RAJ READING: Power and glory belong to God alone. So do YOU. God gives WHATEVER belongs to Him because He gives of Himself, and EVERYTHING belongs to Him. Giving of YOUR self is the function He gave you.

RAJ: You see? Your Being is not different from God's Being. That is the State of Being—giving of your Self—that is What Being Is. And that's why the art of getting, if I may put it that way, the goal of getting is so out of place, even though it's almost the entire bottom line of your present sense of existence.

Again.

RAJ READING: Giving of YOUR self is the function He gave you. Fulfilling it perfectly will teach you what you HAVE of Him, and this will teach you what you ARE in Him.

RAJ: There, you see, you've got to annul the divorce. [You've] got to say, got to be willing to look like a fool, "In a way I've recognized my mistake. I want an annulment. I'm going to annul the divorce I imagined I got. And I am not going to behave stupidly anymore. It was an interesting experiment in the impossible. And I'm finally willing to acknowledge that it was something that could never be done. And, you know what? I've got better things to do. I'm no longer interested in pursuing the impossible."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You CANNOT be powerless to do this because this IS your power. Glory is God's gift to you because that is what HE is. See this glory everywhere to learn what YOU are.

RAJ: This week, if you choose, I invite you to use your eyes as consistently as possible for the purpose of making a gift—a Gift of Recognition of the Divinity of the One you're with or the thing you're looking at, a gift of willingness to see more of God there than you've seen so far.

What you sow, so also shall you reap. What you give, you will be able to keep. No. What you give, you will unavoidably have. So be careful what you give. Be care full, be full of care in what you give.

You know, practicing a little self-discipline is like cleaning your glasses. It gets rid of everything extraneous to what's essential. Yes. It's going to be more work than the sloppy way you had been using your mind so far. It's like saying, "Well, [sigh] I never washed my glasses before! You know, I'm going to have to go all the way into the bathroom. And turn on the water and dry them off and make sure I get them totally dry so they don't rust. What a pain!"

You'd better start doing something different from what you've done before if you want to have a different experience, and if the experience you're having now is specifically due to the way you're using your mind right now. And you'd better make a choice for a different teacher if the experience you're having right now is a result of the teacher that you're currently employing.

You know what? No matter how aggressively bad news presents itself to you, no matter how aggressively bad health presents itself to you, be diligent. Refuse to entertain the presentation, the gift, that's being given to you. Contradict it. And contradict it with the Truth that you know; the best Truth that you know at the moment. Why? So that your thinking is more parallel, your mind is more parallel to the Mind of God. So that the bridging can occur more easily. And it will occur if you persist.

Ye shall know the Truth. Okay? Meaning you employing your mind to be conscious of the Truth, the highest and most true Truth that you are aware of. Ye shall know the Truth and in that parallel alignment with the Father, it allows the Truth, with a capital "T", to bridge the gap and make you free. It isn't a matter of ye shall know the Truth and the Truth that you know will make you free. You shall know the Truth because you've made a choice for God. And the harmony of your mind will allow the penetration of Truth, with a capital "T", to occur that illumines Truth to you, setting you free.

So, let this be a week of discovery. Discovery of the benefit of not bearing false witness against your neighbor, or yourself; of not rehearsing the misperceptions, the illusions, and painting pictures for yourself, or allowing other people to paint pictures for you, that you must immediately sit down to purge, to correct, to replace with the Consciousness of Truth. And realize that in order for the Consciousness of Unity to replace the consciousness of confusion that you're experiencing, you must include and embrace your Brother as yourself, as not different in any way from you. Meaning that What Is True of him is in no way different from What Is True of you. And therefore, there is no reason, no justification, for standing away in an attitude of defense from him.

You may have to disagree with his misperceptions. But you will do it knowing that he is the Christ just as you are, and that in your disagreeing with his misperception, you are not joining with it, confirming it, and keeping him in the dark. But you are joining in Brotherly Alliance with What Is Divinely True About Him from What Is Divinely True About You, confirming It.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week. Next week is going to be fun, too. [audience laughter]

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good afternoon.

AUDIENCE: Good afternoon.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet, as well.

Let's ask this question, "What is the Purpose of Being?" Another way we could ask that is, "What is the Intent of Being?" Or, "What is Being, the State of Being, determined to be?" Very simply, the Purpose of Being is to be. Not to be something, but to be. The intent to be is the meaning of the word "will." Being, with a capital "B", is another word for God. Now what is Being determined to be? Itself and nothing else. That's why Being is a State of Singularity.

Fundamentally, Being is Mind. Being is the Conscious Experience of Being. Or you could say existing is the Conscious Experience of Being. That's what God is—Infinite Mind in the act of being aware of Itself, observing the movements and characteristics of What Mind Is. And because Mind is Singular, it... just a moment... its movement is, as I've said before, the recognition of What It Is Infinitely. And it looks like this, and more.

The Movement of Mind is a Movement of Ideas. In other words, the State of Being Conscious is the Movement of Ideas recognized as Oneself by the Mind that is moving, which is God. All That God Is, is embodied in every single Idea that God is conscious of in the act of recognizing the Movement of His Being, which is the Movement of Mind. But remember, the Intent To Be is the meaning of the word "will." And it is the Intent To Be Which God Is that, for lack of better words, results in the Conscious Experience Of Being. In other words, Creation.

Now, you are the Expression of God, and you embody all that God is. And so everything that I've just described about God is a description of you. Now I'm saying this because it's very easy to misunderstand the meaning of the word "will." You have learned recently that you must have free will, that you do have free will. And you think you do have free will. And you do think that you have always been exercising it, and that you have even been developing greater skill at exercising free will.

Will is another word for your Purpose for Being; not your personal, private purpose for being, but the Purpose that is already embodied in the fact that you are conscious and conscious of everything. Your will is already in play before you ever had a thought to exercise it. The only reason the words “free will” exist to express something is because in the process of your getting a divorce from your Father and deciding to be independent, an independent authorizer, an independent asserter of authority, you moved into a private, separated sense of self separated from the fundamental State of Being that is your natural State of Being. And you didn’t then begin to express free will. You began to express self-will. And there is a difference. You began to express a will that was representing this independent self that you created for yourself by separating from the Father.

Now the interesting thing is that self-will has only one function, and that is to assert itself on its behalf only against that which it just got a divorce from. Self-will is an assertion of independent willfulness. And so actually self-will is, and always has been, a defense against God and a defense against the Way Things Work, a defense against your Birthright. And it has become a constant act that has kept you so far permanently unconscious of your Birthright, and permanently unable to cooperate with and flow with the Purpose of Being, the Kingdom of Heaven, Reality. This is important to understand.

As you go through your day and you are defending yourself against the events of your day, or the people in your day, on your behalf in order to survive, you are in a constant state of defense against the Conscious Experience of Reality, a defense against the Conscious Experience of What You Really Are, what your Real Identity is.

You don’t have a will. You, by being, are Will. Which means that you are the Presence of a Purpose, an Intent, which is To Be. To be what? To be conscious. To be conscious of what? Reality—and not a figment of your imaginations. So keep this in mind, because in the process of waking up, you are not abandoning free will, you are abandoning self-will.

Do you see that if you are practicing self-will, which is a denial of What You Truly Are and a denial of the Father which is the Source of your Being, and that the exercise of self-will keeps you unconscious of what your Real Will is, then self-will, your self-will is not a practice of free will. Your will is not free. The Will that is the Intent To Be is not free in you to be fully experienced as the uninhibited capacity to experience Reality As It Truly Is. And so, when you think of self-will as an expression of free will, you are confused and you have no reason to challenge the practice of self-will. But if you can see that the practice of self-will is itself not free at all because your Real Will isn't available to you, then you will have justification for beginning to invalidate it and look beyond it to discover your Will which is inseparable and not different from the Father's Will. They are one!

Your Will is not there to establish your freedom. Your Will is not there to govern your experience. Your Will is not there to improve your experience, or to build a better defense. Your Will is there as the Intent To Be Conscious of Reality without anything present to blur it, without anything present to distort it by virtue of being that which is at odds with Reality, inserting its own personal interpretation of Reality in place of Reality. This is important to understand in light of what we're going to be reading about today.

And the heading is:

RAJ READING: The Light of the World

RAJ: Right off the bat you might jump to the conclusion, and correctly, that the practice of self-will dims your Light.

RAJ READING: If God's Will for you is complete peace and joy, unless you experience ONLY this you must be refusing to ACKNOWLEDGE His Will.

RAJ: Well, as I've just said, the only way you refuse to acknowledge His Will is by valuing and honoring and practicing self-will, which is a denial of His Will because it's an assertion of a willfulness that you think you have to have your own original interpretations and perceptions of the only thing there is to experience—Reality or the Kingdom of Heaven.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: His Will does not vacillate, being changeless forever. When you are not at peace, it can only be because you do not believe you ARE in Him. Yet He is all in all. His peace is complete, and you MUST be included in it. His laws govern you because they govern EVERYTHING. You cannot exempt yourself from His laws, although you can disobey them.

RAJ: Well, how do you disobey them? By having your own point of view and saying, "I prefer this point of view to Yours, Father."

RAJ READING: Yet if you do,...

RAJ: Disobey them.

RAJ READING: ...and ONLY if you do, you WILL feel lonely and helpless because you are denying yourself everything.

I am come as a light into a world that DOES deny itself everything.

RAJ: Well, let's be careful here. For a clearer understanding of that statement, it could read:

"I am come as a Light into a mind that does deny itself everything."

"I am come as a Light into a frame of mind that does deny itself everything."

"I am come as a Light into a set of perceptions that cause Reality not to be seen As It Is."

It isn't saying that I am come as a Light into a material world of planets and stars and universes. That is not its meaning.

RAJ READING: I am come as a light into a world that DOES deny itself everything. It does this simply by dissociating itself...

RAJ: Getting a divorce.

RAJ READING: ... dissociating itself FROM everything. It is therefore an illusion of isolation,...

RAJ: Important point. No matter how imaginative you get, you can't create a real isolation. You can only create for yourself an illusion of isolation.

RAJ READING: It is therefore an illusion of isolation, maintained by fear of the same loneliness which IS its illusion. I have told you that I am with you always, even to the end of the world.

RAJ: Well, even to the end of the frame of mind that you're caught in by virtue of valuing and practicing and exercising self-will that is itself the denial of your capacity to see everything As It Truly Is. I have told you that I am with you always, even to the end of the world in quotes "that you made-up" unquote. You see?

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the following sentence: That is WHY I am the light of the world.]

RAJ READING: If I am with you in the loneliness of the world, THE LONELINESS IS GONE. You CANNOT maintain the illusion of loneliness if you are NOT alone. My purpose, then, IS to overcome the world.

RAJ: In the book it's followed by a period, but I'm going to say it this way. My purpose then is to overcome the world you made-up. Where? In your mind! I am coming in your mind to overcome the world you made-up in your mind that you are holding between you and What Creation Really Is which causes you to be unable to experience Creation As It Really Is.

What is Creation As It Really Is? It's Visibility and Tangibility, or the Conscious Experience of the Will of God, the Purpose of Being, successfully Being. Your Will is the Intent to see and experience everything as It Truly Is, because everything as It Truly Is, is the Visibility and Tangibility of your Will, because your Will and the Father's Will are one and the same. Not two cooperating wills. Not two wills in perfect harmony with each other. They are one and the same.

Again.

RAJ READING: My purpose, then, IS to overcome the world. I do not attack it, but my light must dispel it because of what it IS.

Light does not attack darkness, but it DOES shine it away. If my light goes with you everywhere, YOU shine it away WITH me.

RAJ: Well, as you know, we've been talking it seems like for ages about breaking your isolation and that the way for you to break your isolation is to be willing to say, "Help," to reach beyond... to reach beyond the boundary of your self-will, and to reach beyond the boundary of your limited definition of yourself, to reach beyond the limits of the capacity you have said you have and which you insist on functioning within.

When you break the isolation and let in the Holy Spirit, or Me, or the Father, you have joined, no matter how tentatively you've done it. And you have broken the isolation. And to that degree you have begun to be the Light of the World that overcomes the world you made-up. And because it does, that causes you to be in the presence of everyone else you know in a new way that does lead to the possibility of everyone else making the same choice and adding to the Light. Not just the Light that overcomes the world they made-up, but the world that those who are joined in dreaming have made-up and are still continuing to reinforce. It weakens the resolve of all the rest who are engaged in reinforcing the world they have determined on their own.

So...

RAJ READING: ...YOU shine it away WITH me. The light becomes OURS, and you cannot abide in darkness any more than darkness can abide wherever you go. The remembrance of me IS the remembrance of yourself and of Him Who sent me to you. You were in darkness until God's Will was done completely by ANY part of the Sonship. When this was done, it was perfectly accomplished by ALL.

RAJ: In other words, when I did it perfectly, it was done perfectly by every single one of the Brotherhood, even those who were still asleep because of What They Really Are. And What They Really Are is the Will of God, the Intent or Purpose To Be, and to be nothing other than Itself which is a Singularity. That is why it was accomplished successfully by all.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: How else could it BE perfectly accomplished? My mission was simply to unite the will of the Sonship with the Will of the Father by...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...being aware of the Father's Will myself.

RAJ: Now you could say, "Well, not all of the Brotherhood indulged in dreams, so why didn't their State of Perfect Being not accomplish it perfectly for all of us who were dreaming?" The reason is that, for lack of better words, a trail home needed to be blazed from the place of dreams. Someone in the dream, someone obviously and provably in the human experience had to demonstrate that there is a way Home from there. That was what was accomplished perfectly.

Again.

RAJ READING: My mission was simply to unite the will of the Sonship with the Will of the Father by being aware of the Father's Will myself. This is the awareness I came to give YOU, and your problem in accepting it IS the problem of this world. Dispelling it is salvation, and in this sense I AM the salvation of the world.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "the world" instead of "this world."]

RAJ: What world? The world you made-up that you're giving preference to in place of the Kingdom of Heaven, Reality As It Truly Is.

Now...

RAJ READING: The world must despise and reject me because the world IS the belief that love is impossible.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "this world" instead of "the world."]

RAJ: Well, let's bring this home a little further. This world you have made-up must despise and reject you—the Real You. Why? Because it's the evidence of the fact that you don't know Who You Are and you're not claiming your Birthright. And in your insistence upon being independent authorities, you are actively denying your Self. You are actively keeping your Real Selfhood out of sight. And you've done this, as I've said before, by denying your Source and claiming in so many ways that you are your own source, that you truly are a self-starter, that you truly are an independent embodiment of life that exists and acts on the basis of a will that is its own, and only its own.

And then, because it's not the Truth of You and you are denying What You Truly Are, you experience being afraid, because you can't be in a state of capital "S" Self-denial and be comfortable. Your innate Sanity, with a capital "S", will be a constant reminder to you that you're trying to do what's impossible. And so your Sanity becomes an alarm system that constantly says, "Stop doing this. Stop doing this. You're moving in the wrong direction. You can't accomplish this. Don't waste your time." Et cetera, et cetera.

Again.

RAJ READING: The world must despise and reject me...

RAJ: And you.

RAJ READING: ...because the world...

RAJ: That you made-up.

RAJ READING: ...IS the belief that love is impossible. YOUR reactions to me are the reactions of the world to God. If you will accept the fact that I am with you, you are DENYING the world...

RAJ: You made-up.

RAJ READING: ...and ACCEPTING God.

RAJ: Again, I'll read it as it is here.

RAJ READING: If you will accept the fact that I am with you, you are DENYING the world and ACCEPTING God. My will is His, and YOUR will to hear me is the decision to hear His Voice and abide in His Will.

RAJ: In other words, it's the first step in your annulling the divorce.

RAJ READING: As God sent me to you, so will I send you to others. And I will go to them WITH you,...

RAJ: You don't think I'd send you out alone, do you? I will go with you because together you are in a state of willingness to hear the Truth, and thereby extend the Truth to your Brothers.

RAJ READING: As God sent me to you, so will I send you to others. And I will go to them WITH you, so we can teach them peace and union.

RAJ: Do you realize that you on your own can't teach peace and union? You see, there's no "We." And if there's no "We," there's no union. Total independent purity, let us say, does not constitute union. Total independent flawlessness, or a flawless state of independence, does not constitute union because there's no "We." And how can you teach "We" and "Us" if you are insisting upon being something independent, if you're insisting on being "I, I, I"?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Do you not think the world NEEDS peace as much as you do? Do you not want to GIVE it to the world as much as you want to RECEIVE it? For unless you do, you will NOT receive it.

RAJ: You see, you can't receive it if you don't pass it on. You see? You can't embody the Christ when you're a closet Christ. You can't embody the Christ when you're still in the closet and you haven't put your mouth where your mind is, or where your desire is. And so if you say, "I am the Christ," but you won't let it show, then you are not embodying the Christ.

RAJ READING: If you will to have it...

RAJ: Meaning peace.

RAJ READING: ...of me, you MUST give it. Rehabilitation does not come from anyone else.

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: You can have guidance from without, but you must ACCEPT it from within. The guidance must be what YOU want, or it will be meaningless to you. That is why rehabilitation is a collaborative venture.

RAJ: Rehabilitation is not something any one of you can do by yourself on your own in the privacy of your mind. Period. Why? Because the rehabilitation that has to occur is the falling down of the walls that are keeping you separated from everything else. That's the rehabilitation that has to occur.

RAJ READING: I can tell you what to do, but this will not help you unless you collaborate by believing that I KNOW what to do.

RAJ: Oh. Wow, there comes this call for trust. And trust is involvement, isn't it? Because you have to express faith, and you have to yield your authority and agree to work together, and to entrust yourself to One who knows better than you. Because what use is there to entrust yourself to somebody who doesn't know more than you?

RAJ READING: Only then will your mind choose to follow me. Without YOUR will...

RAJ: Your making the choice to follow me.

RAJ READING: Without YOUR will you cannot BE rehabilitated.

RAJ: So you see, when I have said the only right use of will is to choose not to use it, you could have assumed that your will is an illusion and that you will be giving it up forever. But the fact is that the only thing you will be giving up is a misuse of your will called self-will, which is always self-protective and a defense against everything that is not you, when truly everything is the Infinitude of You, of What You Divinely Are.

RAJ READING: Without YOUR will you cannot BE rehabilitated. MOTIVATION to be healed is the crucial factor in rehabilitation.

RAJ: Well, whose motivation? Yours. If you don't bring motivation to it, there will be no movement. If you are not motivated to move, I promise you, you are motivated to stay stuck. You can't be without motivation. If you're stuck, it's by your will; you are motivated to not move one inch further ahead than where you are. So let it be clear that you're going to be involved, that you are going to change. And that without your willingness, you won't change. Nothing will happen. Rehabilitation will not occur.

Again.

RAJ READING: MOTIVATION to be healed is the crucial factor in rehabilitation. Without this,...

RAJ: Oh.

RAJ READING: ...you are deciding AGAINST healing,...

RAJ: What did I just say? I just said, if you're stuck, it's by your will. It's by your determination. You are deciding against moving forward.

Again.

RAJ READING: Without this, you are deciding AGAINST healing, and your veto of my will for you...

RAJ: My Will for you.

RAJ READING: ...MAKES HEALING IMPOSSIBLE.

RAJ: Makes waking up impossible. If you do not join with One Who Is Awake, who stands with you on your behalf, you cannot wake up. If you do not join with the Holy Spirit, which is what? Nothing more than your Right Mind, you cannot wake up. If you don't join with me when my Function is the same as the Holy Spirit's, you cannot wake up.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If healing IS our joint will, unless our wills ARE joined you CANNOT be healed.

RAJ: What does that say there? It says that joint will, or joined will, is healing, and nothing else. Nothing else is healing.

Well, you can think all the spiritual thoughts you want all by yourself, but because you're doing them all by yourself, you're not undoing the one thing that has caused you to have an experience of being that's called the human condition. And therefore, you're doing nothing to eliminate the liability to be ill.

RAJ READING: If healing IS our joint will, unless our wills ARE joined you CANNOT be healed. This is obvious when you consider what healing is FOR. Healing is the way in which the separation is overcome. Separation is overcome by UNION. It cannot be overcome by separating.

The WILL to unite must be unequivocal,...

RAJ: Well, you may not be able to be unequivocal for more than a few seconds at a time, 5 or 10 minutes maybe, before you slip back. But the moment it is unequivocal, there is transformation. There are instantaneous healings. Lives take a new direction effortlessly, amazingly, miraculously. Why? Because a sudden shift of perception has been able to occur.

RAJ READING: The WILL to unite must be unequivocal, or the will ITSELF is divided, or not whole. Your will...

RAJ: Not your self-will, but the Purpose of your Being.

RAJ READING: ...is the means by which you determine your own condition because will is the MECHANISM of decision. It is the power by which you separate or join, and experience pain or joy accordingly. My will cannot OVERCOME yours...

RAJ: So don't wait for me to overcome your will. It won't happen. And don't try to tell me, "If you were the Christ, you could heal me. If you were really the Christ, you could illuminate to me Who I Am." Wrong! You will not see anything you do not choose to see, because you have that power of decision in you.

You want to know something? If I could actually override your free will, I would have limited it. And if I successfully limited yours, the Will of the Brotherhood, the Will of God, would have become limited.

RAJ READING: My will cannot OVERCOME yours because yours is as powerful as mine. If it were not so, the Sons of God would be unequal.

RAJ: All of the Brotherhood.

RAJ READING: All things are possible through our JOINT will, but my will alone cannot help you. Your will is as free as mine, and God Himself would not go against it. I cannot will what God does NOT will.

RAJ: And, actually, neither can you. You've tried to. And you've moved into a world of imagination. And you've treated that world of imagination as though it was real, which has constituted a demented state of insanity which you are all suffering from, but which you think is normal, and which you want me to help you improve by.... Well, I'm not even going to go into it.

RAJ READING: I cannot will what God does NOT will. I can offer you my will to make YOURS invincible by this sharing, but I cannot OPPOSE yours without competing with it, and thereby violating God's Will for you.

Nothing God created can oppose your will, as nothing God created can oppose His.

RAJ: So, it should be clear to you now that you have will. And it's not a dirty word. And you are going to have to employ this will to participate/collaborate with me, or with the Holy Spirit, so that you break the isolation which has been the one thing that has caused all of the distorted perceptions of Reality that you're experiencing. You are going to have to participate. And the participation is going to cause you to have new experiences of What You Are. And those new experiences of What You Are, are going to force you to come out of the closet and claim publicly your Identity. You're going to have to stand up and be counted as What You Really Are. Because until you make that gift of an announcement to the world, you haven't really made it yours yet.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God GAVE your will its power, which I can only acknowledge in honor of HIS. If you want to be like me I will help you,...

RAJ: Help you what? Be like me. Not help you accept your dream.

RAJ READING: If you want to be like me I will help you, knowing that we ARE alike. If you want to be different, I will wait until you change your mind.

RAJ: Oh, I know. "Well, if you were really the Christ, you wouldn't say that. And the very fact that you're saying that tells me you're not the Christ. You would help me. Undyingly you would help me. You would try to get me to change my mind. You would do everything in your power to get me to change my mind. The Christ would be willing to do that." Bullshit! [small laugh] Every single one of you knows that one of the most powerful games you can play is, "Just try to get me to change my mind." Except you don't say that, because if you said that to somebody, they would walk away. So what you say is, "I'm so miserable and I know I'm not seeing things right. Please help me change my mind." Sounds good, but it's still the same game.

RAJ READING: If you want to be different...

RAJ: From me.

RAJ READING: ...I will wait until you change your mind. I can TEACH you, but only you can choose to LISTEN to...

RAJ: Stand in receipt of. Let in.

RAJ READING: ...my teaching. How else can it be, if God's Kingdom IS freedom? Freedom cannot be learned by tyranny of any kind, and the perfect equality of ALL God's Sons cannot be recognized through the dominion of one will over another.

RAJ: And that's a nice way of saying it cannot be recognized through the domination of one will over another. Because dominion isn't over another; is nothing but domination.

RAJ READING: God's Sons are equal in will, all being the Will of their Father. This is the ONLY lesson I came to teach, knowing that it is true.

RAJ: Don't any of you tell me you can't do it. Your whole lives are expressions of your determination to be what you think you want to be. You are all determined individuals. And that's not a putdown. Of course, you're all determined. You are the Christ with purpose, with will. And if you didn't have the determination to be, you would not have what you call conscious experience.

The problem is that at the moment you're determined to be something that's it's impossible for you to be. And through guilt you are afraid to violate the code, the mutual agreements, by which you came to the determination to be what you're trying to be. And so you're caught by virtue of the characteristics of your determination. But you can become free by being willing to be determined to be something else. And the first thing you need to be determined not to be is alone. That is the bottom line crux and key to your Awakening.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When your will is NOT mine, it is not our Father's.

RAJ: It's self-will.

RAJ READING: This means that you have imprisoned YOURS, and have not LET it be free. Of yourselves you can do nothing because of yourselves you ARE nothing. I am nothing without the Father, and YOU are nothing without ME because, by denying the Father, you deny YOURSELF. I will ALWAYS remember you,...

RAJ: The Real One That You Are, the Divine One That You Are.

RAJ READING: I will ALWAYS remember you, and in MY remembrance of you...

RAJ: In my remembrance of What You Truly Are.

RAJ READING: ...lies your remembrance of YOURSELF.

RAJ: You see, you have forgotten. Somebody has to remember for you so that they can remind you. And that's my Function, is to remind you of What You Are so that [snap of the fingers] the light bulb, the remembrance within you can occur so that you have justification for abandoning your commitment to your current definition of yourself and your current commitment to staying isolated.

Again.

RAJ READING: I will ALWAYS remember you, and in MY remembrance of you lies your remembrance of YOURSELF. In our remembrance of EACH OTHER...

[Editor's Note. Raj accentuated it as "OUR remembrance."]

RAJ: Now we're talking about being joined. Not being isolated.

RAJ READING: In our remembrance of EACH OTHER lies our remembrance of God. And in this remembrance lies your freedom because your freedom IS in Him.

[Editor's Note. Raj accentuated it as "OUR remembrance of EACH OTHER."]

RAJ: I'll tell you that your very existence is in Him. Your... the state of Being that you are experiencing is Being, with a capital "B," Itself—God.

RAJ READING: Join, then, with me...

RAJ: Break the isolation.

RAJ READING: Join, then, with me in...

RAJ: What? The only thing there is for us to join in.

RAJ READING: ...praise of Him...

RAJ: Which means acknowledgement of your Source so that you're no longer claiming a private, independent sourcing of yourself.

RAJ READING: Join, then, with me in praise of Him AND you whom He created. This is our gift of gratitude to Him, which He will share with ALL His creations, to whom He gives equally whatever is acceptable to Him. BECAUSE it is acceptable to Him...

RAJ: Our remembrance of each other and our remembrance of Him. And in our remembrance of Him, a coming into Singularity.

RAJ READING: ...it is the gift of freedom, which IS His Will for all His Sons. By OFFERING freedom, YOU will be free.

Freedom...

RAJ: And this is what we will end on.

RAJ READING: Freedom is the only gift you can offer to God's Sons,...

RAJ: To each other, in other words.

RAJ READING: Freedom is the only gift you can offer to God's Sons, being an acknowledgment of what THEY are and what HE is.

RAJ: So while you sit neatly and tidily in your closet, claiming to be the Christ, knowing in your mind that you must be the Christ and being willing to not argue the point in your mind, you're still not being the Christ because you're still not declaring yourself. You're not letting anybody know. The knowledge is private knowledge. That's aloneness. That's separation. That's isolation. And no matter how comforting the thoughts are to you, there will be no rehabilitation, no transformation, no healing, no awakening, no change, that will occur. And so, don't fool yourselves any longer thinking that your private, wonderful thoughts have some capacity to transform your life or anything in the world you made-up, because it doesn't and it won't.

Don't wait until you're utterly miserable to take the steps of joining. I invite you to join with me, or to join with the Holy Spirit, when you're not under stress. But I promise you that even when it's not stressful, it's still going to take commitment from you. You're still going to have to bring your will into play. You're going to have to bring your willingness into play and act on it. Not just think about it. Thinking the Truth is not acting on it. Thinking the Truth is not embodying the Truth. You will have to participate fully in the commitment you make. But I'll tell you something. You're assured of success when you do it, whether you can believe it or not, whether you can see it or not. And really you can all understand that if you don't bring commitment to something, nothing is going to happen.

Truth is simple. Be willing to look at it.

And there's more good news to come. And I look forward to being with you, all of you, next week.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

RAJ READING: Freedom is the only gift you can offer to God's Sons,...

RAJ: Well, what is freedom? Simple answer: Freedom is the experience of not being bound. But it's difficult to gain your freedom if you don't know what's binding you; especially if what's binding you is something that you have called the practice of freedom. If your practice of freedom is what has bound you, you're not likely to discover that fact on your own. Because your motive and application of your will in your life you're now discovering is keeping you in the dark.

Last week we discussed the fact that there's a difference between free will and self-will, and that what you all have been calling free will and which you have designated as an innate right that each of you has and therefore a divine right that you have, we've uncovered the fact that that is not free will, but is self-will, and that self-will is always acted out as a means of self-defense, of self-protection. Its practice is predicated upon the idea, the single mad idea that you exist independently on your own and your independence is your birthright. And yet, for months now we've been discussing the fact that this independence is not only a flawed idea; it is false. It simply isn't true.

If you're going to give freedom to your Brother, you're going to have to have experienced it yourself. It's that simple. In order to experience freedom, you're going to have to abandon that which is binding you. And what has become abundantly and perfectly clear is the fact that your practice of free will has been a practice of self-will, and this is what has bound you. And this is what you're going to have to abandon.

So, how are you going to abandon it? Well, I gave you two prayers some time back. These are very helpful in abandoning the practice of self-will.

The first prayer was, I wish to see the Evidence of Love. That desire expressed, embraced by you and not resisted, constitutes a willingness to see something other than what you're generally seeing. Because, as you look around, you do not seem to see the Evidence of Love. You say it's because it isn't there. But I'm telling you, you aren't seeing it because you're not wishing to see it. You're in a state of self-defense all the time. You're protecting yourself against failure of all sorts. Plus you're protecting yourself against a world that you believe is basically hostile, and brothers and sisters who are basically hostile—unlike you.

When you see someone who is ill, you believe it's true. And then you take steps to defend yourself against their illness. And if you are of a spiritual bent, you will even help them with quote "the truth," defend themselves against this real illness that's part of the human condition. And so now both of you are engaged in defense against an enemy. If you're still engaged in defense, you're engaged in self-will and you're not experiencing your freedom. And so you reinforce quote "the human condition." You reinforce the illness. You reinforce for yourself this hostile world.

You have to find a way to step outside of that deeply ingrained, habitual practice of claiming your independence from your Brothers and from your world and from God. And you have to wish to see something new. You have to wish to see something Real. You have to wish to see something that at the moment your eyes aren't seeing. You have to wish to see healing. I wish to see the Evidence of Love. I wish to see beyond what my conditioned thinking is allowing me to see. I wish to see that which is there which is greater than what my conditioned responses cause me to see, and even what my Brother or Sister is presenting to me in their own ignorance.

And the second prayer: I wish to be the Evidence of Love. I wish to be, I wish my actions to express Love, not fear. I wish for my behavior to embody Love, not fear. I wish to be the place where the Truth flows out through me and illuminates Truth out there as healing, as regeneration, as redemption.

Now we also found out last week that you can't do this alone because your conditioning does not allow for the greater perspective that is where Truth lies. And that's why I'm here. And that's why every single Brother and Sister of the Brotherhood stands with you because they are Awake. They know the Truth. And what do they know the Truth about that's most significant? They know the Truth About You. I know the Truth About You. And so we stand in a position of remembering for you what you have forgotten and which you have become determined to not experience.

You say [small laugh], "Why, I don't have a determination not to experience it." But I'm telling you that as long as you are acting out from fear in a defensive manner through the use of self-will, you are expressing determination not to remember because in that state you cannot be conscious of the Truth About You. You cannot remember it because it is an active practice of denial of What You Are. You haven't known this, but now I'm telling you. And this is the way I help you remember.

Now, your task is to extend this same thing to your Brothers and Sisters, even if they are presenting to you manifestations of illness, manifestations of distress that come out in the form of hate and jealousy and all of the forms that seem hurtful. Someone needs to remember for your Brother, just as someone needs to remember for you.

So how do you... how do you gain your freedom? You gain it by remembering Who You Are. And Who You Are is the Son or Daughter of your Father. You're not an orphan. You're not independent. You've got to become humble enough to say you're willing to abandon your insistence that you're an independent agent and that is a God-given thing that it's your responsibility and right to express as fully as possible. You've got to become humble enough because of the arrogance of the belief of independence to say "Help," to let your Father in so that you might remember your Identity.

I wish to see the Evidence of Love, instead of what I'm conditioned to see. And I wish to be the Evidence of Love, instead of the evidence of self-will. And then you don't sit there and strain with all of your might to see the Evidence of Love all by yourself. You say "Father," you say "Holy Spirit," you ask your Guide to help you see the Truth that you know must be there. And you let the influx of the clarity come because your desire to see the Evidence of Love is as pure as you're able to let it be at the moment, and your commitment is greater to seeing more of the Truth that is there than it is to your conditioned perceptions.

I cannot express it strongly enough that every single day and in every single moment only the Kingdom of Heaven confronts you and only the Brotherhood confronts you. And so, no matter how the Brotherhood is presenting themselves to you, those that are in your experience, there is more there. And if they are presenting themselves to you in a way that is offensive, because they mean to be offensive because they're in a state of fear and need to protect themselves, you have to be willing to stand there and remember that in spite of what they're presenting which can't be the Truth About Them, there is What They Really Are present right there. And you ask to help remember, you ask for help to remember What Is The Truth About Them, so that you might be the place where the Truth About Them makes entrance into their experience.

RAJ READING: Freedom is the only gift you can offer to God's Sons, being an acknowledgment of what THEY are and what HE is.

RAJ: There's the Fatherhood acknowledged that causes the experience of Identity to return to you or to your Brother.

RAJ READING: Freedom is creation because it is love. What you seek to imprison you do NOT love.

RAJ: "Boy, she really looks bad today. She shouldn't to be out here spreading her germs. He shouldn't be out here spreading his germs. He ought to be, she ought to be, home confined to her room, confined to her bed." Imprisoned.

"Wow! He's really being obtuse today. Wow! She's really being down and dirty mean. Shame on him! Shame on her! Exclude them. Exclude him. Exclude her."

RAJ READING: What you seek to imprison you do NOT love.

RAJ: You see the difference? Healing is not going to arise, correction is not going to occur if you believe what you are perceiving on the basis of your thinking you're independent and vulnerable and in it in need of always practicing self-defense. I promise you, if you don't dare to embrace what your perceptions tell you is your enemy, you will not be in a position to have revealed to you the True Nature of what you're willing to embrace.

I wish to see the Evidence of Love. I do not wish to reinforce my perceptions of something that is the opposite of Love and convict that one by my convictions as to their unworthiness. I wish to see the Evidence of Love. I wish to give a willingness to acknowledge the Christ right there where that one is behaving so horribly. I wish to feel the Truth of their Christhood so that I might be entirely undefended in his or her presence and reflect to them my remembering of What They Truly Are; not of the history they have provided to me over months and months as to their guilt and that they really are obtuse and offensive, threatening, and therefore an enemy.

RAJ READING: What you seek to imprison you do NOT love. Therefore, when you seek to imprison anyone,...

RAJ: In other words, when you seek to hold them to their history.

RAJ READING: Therefore, when you seek to imprison anyone, including YOURSELF, you do not love him, and you cannot identify WITH him.

RAJ: The isolation is reinforced. The difference is reinforced. And you are practicing and embodying polarization.

RAJ READING: When you imprison yourself, you are losing sight of your true identification with me and with the Father.

RAJ: Well, what does that mean? In practical terms, it means that you are losing sight of your True Identification with your Guide, or with the Holy Spirit, that which is your Right Mind, and with the Father, and reconfirming your lack of Identity, your orphan-hood.

RAJ READING: Your identification IS with the Father and with the Son. It CANNOT be with one and not the other. If you are part of one, you must be part of the other because they ARE One.

RAJ: You see? You say, "Okay, Father, I'll let You back in. And I will acknowledge You as my Father so that I might experience my True Identity." You can't say that and then say, "But [laughing] these bitches and bastards around me, I don't want to acknowledge them as my Brothers and Sisters!" Well, if you're not willing to do that, you're not willing to accept the Fatherhood of God that means that you have Sisters and Brothers, that you are part of a Wholeness—part of a Wholeness, something which fits in with a Wholeness—an Infinite Expression of God that constitutes the Infiniteness of You. You see?

Unfortunately, you can't have a private relationship with God. The minute you have a Real One with Him, you have a Real One with everyone and everything. That's the prize! [laughing] That's what you stand in receipt of—finding yourself not separated in any way from anyone or anything. And in your willingness to stand in Brotherhood fitting in with everything, you truly experience your Divinity and the Divinity of Everything. And the Singularity of Infinity becomes your Conscious Experience and you're Awake.

But I'll tell you something. You've got to start today pushing against your mindsets, your habitual thinking, your well-established perceptions. You've got to be willing to abandon your relying upon your memory of your world and your memory of your Brothers and Sisters, and the habit you have of holding it all to your memory of it, and not being available in the moment of Conscious Awareness of them to the experience of What They Truly Are as Creation continues to be the Movement of quote "Behold, I make all things new" unquote. God does not repeat Himself. Therefore, whoever is confronting you or whatever is confronting you at this moment is not out of the past. And in its presence... (I'm sorry)... in its present, it is glorious. It is an Experience of Glory.

RAJ READING: The Holy Trinity is holy BECAUSE It is One. If you exclude YOURSELF from this union, you are perceiving the Holy Trinity as separated. You must be included IN It because It IS everything.

RAJ: It is That Which nothing is excluded from.

RAJ READING: Unless...

RAJ: Oh boy! And the ego does not like this.

RAJ READING: Unless you take your place in It and fulfill your function as PART of It, It is as bereft as YOU are.

RAJ: Why doesn't the ego like that? Because it loves its imagined autonomy. And it loves the hit it expects to get from verifying its independent capacity to authorize things. "Fit in? Not be the kingpin? Be equal with all of my Brothers and Sisters? Love them unconditionally? Give them the benefit of the doubt from a clarity that's available to me about What's Divinely True About Them when they have been behaving so badly, or when I made such a fool of myself in front of them?" Yes.

RAJ READING: Unless you take your place in It and fulfill your function as PART of It, It is as bereft as YOU are.

RAJ: Now you must understand that although you have to acknowledge that you're just part of the Whole, a part that must fit in, and unless you yield to that, you won't abandon the practice of independence. And you won't... your mind will not be present to experience the Singularity of Creation in which All Of Creation Is You, and you do not experience being a part of it. But you will not get to the place of experiencing your Integral Connection with the Whole until you're first willing to recognize and accept the fact that you're a part of it. And that it's your Function to fit in. It's not your Function to be different from it all. That is not what your Birthright is. And that is not what free will is all about.

Free will isn't a capacity you have to stand up and be different from everything else. Free will, as we talked about last week, is the Will that doesn't bind you or anything else. It is the Father's Will To Be. It is, therefore, the Will To Be that is at the very center of you. Not the will to be something, but the Will To Be. To Be. And, you might say, letting the chips fall where they may.

It's not a will to be with control. It's a will to be conscious of whatever there is to be conscious of. God be's as Mind. Mind cannot be Mind without being conscious, without being conscious of something. And the only thing there is for it to be conscious of is the Movement of Its Will To Be. And so Mind/God discovers at every moment anew What It Is. And the Wholeness of It is captured by the words, "And God saw," I'm going to say, "And God sees everything that He is Being. God/Mind sees the Movement of Mind and recognizes Itself in It." And you know what? God/Mind stays with that experience without attempting to apply controls to it.

"Oh, I want that thing over there that's exquisite to be a little bit different. Oh, I want to look at it through lenses that distort it a little bit."

God and you, when you're not practicing self-will, allow God and you, allow for Creation, the Movement of Being to occur, and notice it, acknowledge it, and recognize yourself in. And never does any act of coercion come into play.

Again, referring to the Holy Trinity.

RAJ READING: Unless you take your place in It and fulfill your function as PART of It, It is as bereft as YOU are. No part of It can be imprisoned if Its truth is to be known.

RAJ: If Its Truth is to be known rather than your preference.

RAJ READING: Can you be separated from your identification and be at peace?

RAJ: Can you forget your Identity, seem to become an orphan, and be at peace? Well, [laughing] are you at peace? Is life a dream? Is life wonderful? Is life full of uninterrupted bliss and harmony? No. Your experience of life right now answers that question.

RAJ READING: Can you be separated from your identification and be at peace? Dissociation...

RAJ: Divorcement.

RAJ READING: ...is not a solution; it is...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...a DELUSION.

RAJ: It's not even real! It's a [laughing]... it's like a universal misperception. It isn't that it's actually universal, but it is that the only thing you have to be conscious of is the Universal and you're having a misperception of the Universal.

RAJ READING: The delusional...

RAJ: Those who insist upon the right to practice free will, which really means self-will.

RAJ READING: The delusional believe that truth will assail them, and so they do not SEE it because they PREFER the delusion.

RAJ: Well, why would you think that Truth would assail you? Well, if Truth is going to reveal to you that your definitions that you've given everything are not true, that will seem to call the integrity of you, the authorizer of those definitions, into question. That's an attack. It's seen as a means of undermining your capacity to be an independent authorizer. And, of course, it is. [small laugh] But it's not attack. It's the Truth bringing the Truth to your Conscious Awareness so that you might become free of a delusion, so that you might become free of a bondage that it's not appropriate for you to be experiencing.

And you know what? The Truth that's being revealed to you now is incredible, because it is saying with utter clarity to you that what you have called the practice of free will is what binds you, because in actuality it's a practice of self-will. And this practice of self-will is nothing more than a practice of self-defense which reinforces your delusion that you are independent and separate, and absolutely blinds you to the place you hold in the Wholeness of Creation in which no part of the Wholeness of Creation is unavailable to you. And therefore, in which you can experience the Singularity of Creation and find yourself at One with It all, and It all at One with you, causing you to experience Selfhood as Infinite. And because it's Infinite, it's incapable of standing apart from anything. Because there's no outside to Infinity for you to stand up and be tall in, or bigger than Infinity.

RAJ READING: The delusional believe that truth will assail them, and so they do not SEE it because they PREFER the delusion. Judging truth as something they do NOT want, they perceive deception and block knowledge.

RAJ: And where do they perceive deception? Right where Truth is present. Where do you guys see deception? You see it in each other. You look at each other and you believe that all of you are deceptive to one degree or another with each other, and therefore you've got to be on guard. They look at Truth, they look at God, they look at me, they look at their Guide, and they perceive either deception or potential deception. You see? "God is going to nail me. God says He's Love, but He is going to nail me." You see deception there.

You look at Truth which says there's a different way to be that is more fulfilling, but in order to experience it, you're going to have to be willing to abandon the right you think you have to authorize things, to be the authorizer of things. You're going to have to abandon the acts of independent authority that you have come to believe give you credibility and respectability and success. And you see that as deceptive. And here is where you love to bring out the biblical statement that if the spirits speak to you, test them; test them because you don't know whether they're evil spirits, or really Spirit, with a capital "S." And so you justify not taking the risk of exploring what Truth reveals to you because you are afraid that Truth is deceptive.

RAJ READING: Judging truth as something they do NOT want, they perceive deception and...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...block knowledge.

RAJ: Knowledge means Knowing, with a capital "K." It means the Divine Awareness of What Really Is. You block it. You simply block it. That's the result.

RAJ READING: Help them...

RAJ: Your Brothers and Sisters.

RAJ READING: ...by offering them YOUR unified will on their behalf,...

RAJ: Be willing to remember for them.

RAJ READING: Help them by offering them YOUR unified will on their behalf, as I am offering you mine on YOURS.

RAJ: And as has been brought out, whatever you give becomes yours.

RAJ READING: Alone we can do nothing, but TOGETHER, our wills fuse into something whose power is far beyond the power of its separate parts. By NOT BEING SEPARATE, the Will of God is established IN ours and AS ours.

RAJ: And that's where self-will goes out of the picture. And that's what the ego screams loudly to you to ignore, because it knows it's the end of it.

RAJ READING: By NOT BEING SEPARATE, the Will of God is established IN ours and AS ours. This will is invincible BECAUSE it is undivided. The undivided will of the Sonship is the perfect creator, being wholly in the likeness of God, Whose Will it IS.

RAJ: You are all so afraid of disappearing... disappearing into the mix if you yield, if you abandon your right to private self-existence, self-authorized self-existence. And what you don't realize is that your insistence upon your self-authorized self-existence is bondage.

RAJ READING: The undivided will of the Sonship is the perfect creator, being wholly in the likeness of God, Whose Will it IS. YOU cannot be exempt from it, if you are to understand what IT is and what YOU are. By separating your will FROM mine, you are exempting yourself from the Will of God Which IS yourself.

RAJ: Now the human condition that you seem to be experiencing is a result of already having done that. And so we could say, instead of saying, "By separating your will from mine," we could say, "by not joining your will with mine now that you know better, now that you know that is possible, you are exempting yourself from the Will of God which IS yourself."

So now you know that you have an option to the human condition. Now you know you have an option to what you call "free will," which now you know is really self-will, and which is the means by which you bind yourself to isolation. You know you have an option now. And intellectually you can grasp the wisdom of taking that option, but until you do it, you will be exempting yourself from the Will of God which is yourself. You will be exempting yourself from the Conscious Experience of What You Really Are. And you will be exempting yourself from remembering Who You Are. And until you remember Who You Are even a little bit, even a glimpse, you won't be in a position of extending freedom to your Brother.

I know, it seems like there are so many things for you to re-see—to look at and see again with new eyes. There are so many things that seem unlovely. There are so many whom you feel are not worthy of your love quote "because of what they did" unquote in the past. There are so many things to see anew, to re-see, that's it's overwhelming and you couldn't possibly accomplish it. That is an illusion. All you have to do is begin to break the habit of misperceiving. Just begin to break the habit by doing something new with this little one, and this little thing, and that little thing. And see the transformation and the renewal. Just begin with the little things.

But remember the goal is, I wish to see the Evidence of Love. Not the evidence of hate. Not the evidence of fear. And I wish to be the Evidence of Love. Not the evidence of frustration. Not the evidence of fear. Not the evidence of hate. Why? Because I wish to see the Evidence of Love here—meaning I wish to see healing here. I wish to see transformation in my world. I wish to see redemption—mine, my Brother's, the world's.

You really do want to see something different from what you're experiencing right now. You want to experience it in a way that's different from the way you're experiencing it right now. You really do. So it's not hard if you don't forget that you really do want to see things differently. It's not hard to begin to take the small steps.

I wish to see the Evidence of Love. I wish to be the Evidence of Love. Say those prayers and mean them. And remember that meaning them means that you will not continue to have the right to hold your Brother to his past, or to hold your Brother to your memories of the past. You will lose the “freedom” to be reactive to your misperceptions, whether they’re relative to you, or to your Brother. Because you want to see the Evidence of Love and you want to be the Evidence of Love. Because you want to remember Who You Are. [softly said] And I, and each of your Guides, are here to help you remember. So refer to us when you’re confronted by this opportunity, or that opportunity, or the other opportunity to see in a new way.

Okay.

I love you all. Why? Because I know Who You Really Are. And it’s not who you think you really are. I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet. We're talking about making the Gift of Freedom. And last week I shared with you two prayers that I had shared with you earlier. I wish to SEE the Evidence of Love and I wish to BE the Evidence of Love.

In order to see the Evidence of Love, you must be willing to see the Evidence of Love. But sometimes, your Brothers or Sisters consciously choose to be unlovely; I'll put it that way. They do it out of fear. They do it out of desperation because they have this false experience of being alone, just as all of you do to one degree or another. And the question is what do you do with a Brother who insists on engaging in activities and language that is UNloving?

Remember, again in the context of making the Gift of Freedom, Real Freedom means to be free of that which binds you. And remember that we're talking about the fact that the expression of self-will which everyone thinks is the meaning of free will is what binds you. And so, when you come to a Brother with the desire to make the Gift of Freedom, you're coming to that Brother to say, "Freedom means something different from what you believe it is. And at the bottom line, it means that you're going to have to abandon what you have called freedom. You're going to have to abandon what you call freedom." Well, not everyone wants to do that. In fact, at the bottom line, none of you are awake because none of you is willing to abandon the expression of freedom, by your definition, which is the right to express self-will.

So you are likely to be met, not by willing agreement, but you are likely to be met by resistance. So how do you not become discouraged? Well, the easiest way not to be discouraged is not to try to force an understanding of True Freedom on someone who is adamantly committed to expressing self-will. It's only when you try to do the impossible that you get frustrated and discouraged, right? Those who are not willing to listen to me in the within-ness of themselves do not hear me, even though I am willing to speak, even though I do speak. So you must be willing to back off from those who vehemently refuse to consider that there's another way to look at the meaning of freedom and there's another way to look at the meaning of free will, which, as we've been discussing, means yielding to the Father's Will, letting the Father's Will be your will, which in Truth it is.

Now, in extreme cases where you're dealing with those who are caught in an ethic of expressing self-will, who see it as the be-all and end-all of existence, and when their behavior is obtuse, unpleasant, hateful, when it expresses jealousy, and they don't want to shut up, they want the freedom to express it endlessly, loudly, to anyone who will listen, you must say, "No." You must say, "You cannot continue this behavior in my presence." And in effect they become excluded from your company. What that amounts to is an intelligent action of restraint that is being applied to an uncontrolled expression of that which is unlovely.

And don't ever think that the Course teaches that there should never be restraint of any kind. That amounts to sheer stupidity. When this happens and you have to say "No" and an apparent exclusion occurs, it's because you have good reason for it. You have intelligent reason for it. You will not participate in enabling that which doesn't express the True Nature of the one who wants to be hateful or unlovely.

So you have a picture of them in your mind regarding an accurate assessment of their current behavior, and you know that until the behavior changes, the restriction must stay in place. Now comes the important part. You've set up the restriction. The exclusion is in place and you understand why the exclusion is in place. The reason can in your mind become a definition you have about that individual. And here's the place where you will make a mistake, because you can't allow the description of their current behavior to become the definition of them in your own mind. Why?

Because the minute it becomes the definition of them in your own mind, you have forgotten Who They Are. They are not their behavior. None of you are your behavior. But your bad behavior can't continue.

Why would you make the Gift of Freedom to your Brother? Because you love your Brother. Another reason you would give the Gift of Freedom to your Brother is because as you're in the process of waking up, healing becomes your goal. The correction of misunderstanding, the correction of misperception is your goal because that constitutes healing.

You have forgotten Who You Are and I am remembering for you. And because I continue to remember What You Really Are for you, I can share it with you so that you can remember. You're here to remember for your Brothers and Sisters.

And so if you set a limit on behavior and if you use the reasons for the limit as a definition of them, you will no longer be able to remember for them Who They Are. And you will not be able to be an agent for change, and in effect you and that Brother will become locked in a picture—a picture that is not the Truth. And you will have gone to sleep a little bit more, instead of having woken up a little bit more. And you will not be able to be an agent for change.

Where a brother or a sister or a parent or a child insists on behaving in ways that are destructive/harmful, you must set the limit. And then in the quietness of your mind when they come to your thought, you must take that opportunity to remember for them Who They Are. You don't confront them with it, but you nevertheless remember consciously. For you to remember What They Are is an Act of Love.

To remember the definition you've applied to them is an act of hate. To hold them to the definition you have of them, to hold them to the picture they have presented of themselves is an act of hate. It is not healing

So remember, you give the Gift of Freedom because your goal, your intent, is to heal. Healing someone doesn't mean controlling them into their good. It means acknowledging What Is True About Them in your mind so that you are not confused. And in that acknowledgement of What They Truly Are, you are remembering the Father, you are remembering God. And by remembering God in your mind relative to your Brother, you are glorifying God right there and that is your Gift.

And you know what? There's never a time to abandon that activity. That doesn't mean you have to sit there twenty-four hours a day remembering God right there where they are, because there's a whole Universe. All of your friends, all of the things in your experience deserve that acknowledgement, because that's how you glorify God. And that's how you make the Truth about you yours, because you haven't forgotten to remember Who Your Brother Truly Is.

I can remember Who You Are but that won't change you. As I remember Who You Are and it filters into your awareness, you have the opportunity and the obligation to extend that recognition on to your Brother, and then change occurs for you. That's why there's never a time to abandon your Brother, even if you have had to exclude or set limits so that abuse can't occur, and so that the enabling of an abusive attitude doesn't become acceptable. You see? So it's a fine line.

Remember though that if you're getting discouraged, it's because you're trying to enforce another's good on him. You're trying to enforce another's freedom on him. And that doesn't make sense, does it? [in an amused voice] How can you enforce freedom on another? You cannot force another to be free. [laughing] You see? That's control and the absence of freedom for your Brother.

Remember your Function is to be the Evidence of Love, and so your very being is healing. And that's the goal. The uncovering of That Which Is Real right where the unreal seems to be presenting itself.

I'm going to back up one sentence from where we left off.

RAJ READING: By separating your will FROM mine, you are exempting yourself from the Will of God Which IS yourself.

Yet to heal is still to make whole. Therefore, to heal is to UNITE with those who are like you because perceiving this likeness IS to recognize the Father. If YOUR perfection is in Him...

RAJ: Your... the Father.

RAJ READING: ...and ONLY in Him, how can you KNOW it without recognizing Him?

RAJ: And I'm going to add: Where are you going to recognize Him? In your Brothers. In your Sisters. In All of Creation that's all around you.

But you're going to have to be willing to see it there right where someone is saying, "No, I'm not the Evidence of God. I'm the bastard I am proclaiming to you is what's here. I am the unpleasant person you see here. And I will devote myself to convincing you of just how awful I am." You can't dare to believe that one because then you'll forget Who He Is and then you won't make the Gift of the Truth of him. You won't remember for him. And you won't make your own... you won't make your own my remembering of Who You Are. And you will lose the blessing of my remembering Who You Are because you refuse to remember Who Your Brother Is, because you chose to believe the awful picture he or she was presenting.

RAJ READING: If YOUR perfection is in Him...

RAJ: The Father.

RAJ READING: ...and ONLY in Him, how can you KNOW it without recognizing Him? The recognition of God IS the recognition of yourself.

RAJ: You see how useless it is to go off into the ethers or go off into a mountain all by yourself and look for God? You need a Brother next to you.

You need a tree next to you. You could find that on a high mountain. But the point is you can't look away from everything you're experiencing into the vast unknown to find God. You've got to look right in front of your eyes.

RAJ READING: The recognition of God IS the recognition of yourself.

RAJ: That's when you get to keep your gift. And that's when you become the embodiment of What You Truly Are.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: There IS no separation of God and His creation.

RAJ: That means the word "and" there is inappropriate because there isn't God and His Creation. There is God being All There Is.

RAJ READING: You will learn this as you learn that there is no separation of YOUR will and MINE.

RAJ: You see? Free will has been thought to be an expression of will that is independent and different from every other one's expression of free will. That's not true. That is a definition of self-will. And that's why awakening occurs so slowly. Because each of you is so reluctant to give up your right to an independent expression of will, and because it is humiliating to this ego definition of yourself to think that Real Will, your Real Will is shared by all equally because it isn't yours; it's derived from your Source—God the Father.

RAJ READING: Let the Love of God shine upon you by your acceptance of me.

RAJ: By letting me in as a Brother, really as a Brother, [sigh] and not trying to be different from me, and not trying to see me as different from you, so that the simple Love of our Brotherhood might surge and grow and become paramount, more important to you than your so-called independence.

RAJ READING: MY reality is yours AND His.

RAJ: Meaning the Father's.

RAJ READING: By joining your will with mine, you are signifying your awareness that the Will of God is One.

RAJ: Now how could we arrive at that?

RAJ READING: By joining your will with mine, you are signifying your awareness that the Will of God is One.

RAJ: Well, by joining with me and abandoning your attempts to be independent, self-willed, self-authorized, you break the sense of isolation which has been binding you and which has been utterly false, unreal, pure fantasy. And you have the experience of truly not being alone. In that experience of, for lack of better words, Family, of belonging together, you're acknowledging our Brotherhood, and therefore the fact that we have a common parent, or, if you wish, common parents—Father/Mother/God. And now God and you and me are joined in one experience as one experience.

And so:

RAJ READING: By joining your will with mine, you are signifying your awareness that the Will of God is One.

RAJ: Not divided up.

RAJ READING: God's Oneness and ours are not separate because His Oneness ENCOMPASSES ours. To join with me is to restore His power to you BECAUSE we are sharing it.

RAJ: You see, sharing is the one thing that egos don't do. They stand apart from each other, and they barter with each other, and they manipulate each other into behaving in a way that fits whatever the current definition of good is. And, of course, the word "good" means "what's good for me." "What's good for us" would involve a sharing attitude, wouldn't it? An involved attitude.

RAJ READING: To join with me is to restore His power to you BECAUSE we are sharing it. I offer you only the RECOGNITION of His power in you...

RAJ: You see? By remembering Who You Are, by remembering that you are our Father's Son or Daughter, I am recognizing His Power in you.

RAJ READING: I offer you only the RECOGNITION of His power in you, but in that lies ALL truth.

RAJ: So you get a lot more than what you would expect by letting me in. And your Brother gets a lot more than just your gift when your Brother lets you in. It's a Family Reunion. The Whole Family is received. The Whole Family becomes yours. All of the Brotherhood becomes available to you.

And you see how you fit in. And you see that you belong. And you see that you're not alone, and therefore, you're not vulnerable. And in the relief and Peace that you experience, you abandon your desire to express what you've called free will, which has meant self-will.

And then, as I've said before, you don't continue to have this experience of fitting in. You have the experience of the recognition that all of God's Creation is the Wholeness of You. And the experience of All of Creation and of the Brotherhood of Man becomes the Infinite Wholeness of You. And the experience constitutes a completing of your Wholeness in your Conscious Awareness. And what? The Movement of Creation, the Movement of God becomes the uninterrupted and undistorted and integrated Conscious Experience of your Being. And we have a Singularity in which you haven't been swallowed up, but in which you can relate to all of Creation intimately, beautifully, lovingly.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: As WE unite, we unite with Him.

RAJ: You see, it's more than just you and I uniting with each other.

RAJ READING: Glory be to the union of God and His holy Sons! All glory lies in them BECAUSE they are united.

RAJ: I will tell you this. As long as you're insisting on being independent, the Glory of God is dim. Not that it can actually dim, but it becomes dim to you. It slowly becomes forgotten, which is why someone must remember It for you, and why you must remember It for someone else.

RAJ READING: The miracles we do...

RAJ: Meaning when we're joined, when you've let me in, when you wish to know the Truth, instead of what you had believed the Truth to be, and you're willing to hear of Truth from me and yield to it and trust me, miracles will occur.

RAJ READING: The miracles we do bear witness to the Will of the Father for His Son...

RAJ: In other words, we're fulfilling our Purpose. We're fulfilling God's Purpose for us. Your Purpose is to let God's Purpose be fulfilled in you. You're here to be the Glory of God. Surprise!

RAJ READING: The miracles we do bear witness to the Will of the Father for His Son, and to our joy in uniting WITH His Will for us.

RAJ: Well, that's something you probably hadn't anticipated was that uniting with His Will for us would constitute an Experience of Joy—spontaneous, unexpected, but actual. And it's been a long time since you've had the experienced Joy. And yet it's your Birthright and you deserve to be experiencing it. And it waits for your simple willingness to not value autonomy, to not value independence, to not value having an interpretation or a definition of things different from what the Act of Creation has placed there in expression.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you unite with me,...

RAJ: I'm going to interrupt.

We're talking a lot about uniting with me. Uniting with me. What does "uniting with me" mean? It means letting go of the sense that you are special in your own right. Because to whatever degree you think you are special and therefore unique, and therefore different from me, it means you're different and unique, you're unique and different from What The Father Is and What His Will Is for you and What He Is Expressing Of Himself as you. "Uniting with me" simply means that the call is for breaking the independence by reaching outside of your specialness and of your rights, what you have called your right, which has amounted to self-will.

RAJ READING: When you unite with me,...

RAJ: In other words, when you break your isolation. When you break your imprisonment. That's what it means. It's not even that I'm special. Uniting with me doesn't mean yielding to someone superior. Uniting with me doesn't mean yielding to someone in higher authority. "Uniting with me" means just being willing to be undefended with me, present with me, not holding yourself aloof so that you miss out on the wonder of Brotherhood.

RAJ READING: When you unite with me, you are uniting WITHOUT the ego because I have renounced the ego in myself, and therefore CANNOT unite with yours.

RAJ: Uh oh. That means your ego gets excluded. "Tsk, tsk, tsk. Naughty, naughty, naughty. I know, I should embrace your ego. It's the Christian and loving and Course-like way to do things. I shouldn't judge your ego. I should let it be and forgive it." Well, I can't do it, because [laughing] it isn't real. It isn't really there for me to join with. And it isn't really any part of the You that can join with me. And so it is excluded.

RAJ READING: OUR union is therefore...

RAJ: Get this!

RAJ READING: ...the way to renounce the ego in YOURSELF.

RAJ: Now, each of you has a Guide. Someone of the Brotherhood is assigned to each one of you. And each one of them is Awake. And so it isn't just me that you can unite with and have the same result. You can unite with your Guide and everything that we've been reading here will apply equally.

RAJ READING: OUR union is therefore the way to renounce the ego in YOURSELF. The truth in both of us is BEYOND the ego.

RAJ: Is beyond the definitions you have created about yourself for yourself and which you have chosen to believe is the truth about you.

RAJ READING: The truth in both of us is...

RAJ: Beyond that.

RAJ READING: ...BEYOND the ego. By willing that, you HAVE gone beyond it toward truth. Our success in transcending the ego is guaranteed by God, and I can share this confidence for both of us and ALL of us.

RAJ: And I'm going to add that you can share this confidence for you and your Brothers and all of us.

RAJ READING: I bring God's peace back to all His Children because I received it of Him for us all.

RAJ: And when you receive it from me and extend it on and make it yours, you receive it for us all.

RAJ READING: Nothing can prevail against our united wills because nothing can prevail against God's. Would you know the Will of God for YOU?

RAJ: That means, "Would you like to know what it is?"

RAJ READING: Ask it of me who knows it FOR you, and you will find it.

RAJ: Ask it of me who remembers it for you and you will find it.

What does this all amount to? It amounts to not going through your day without being joined with a Brother who's Awake, who can help provide you with a clearer perspective of Reality as you encounter your Brothers and Sisters who are not coming from a clear experience of What They Truly Are and need someone to remember for them.

RAJ READING: I will deny you nothing, as God denies ME nothing.

RAJ: And if I deny you nothing, and you make a gift of not denying anything of What Is True with your Brother, you embody and make your own the Gift I have made to you. And just like the leaven that leavens the whole lump, your embrace of the Gift I have for you and your extension of it so that it becomes your own, makes it easier for those who continue to dream to wake up.

RAJ READING: Ours is simply the journey back to God, Who is our home. Whenever fear intrudes anywhere along the road to peace, it is ALWAYS because the ego has attempted to join the journey with us, AND CANNOT DO SO.

RAJ: Do you hear that?

RAJ READING: ...AND CANNOT DO SO.

RAJ: The exclusion is absolute! You don't say, "Oh, we'll give ya, we'll give you another chance. We know that if we give you enough chances, you'll change." No. The ego isn't real. It's a fantasy. It's a[n] imagination. Treat it as though it's real and it's an illusion. Illusions can't go Home. And if you think you are that illusion and if you have commitment to that illusion, you will keep yourself from seeing Home, even though you're right in the middle of it.

Again.

RAJ READING: Whenever fear intrudes anywhere along the road to peace, it is ALWAYS because the ego has attempted to join the journey with us, AND CANNOT DO SO. Sensing defeat and angered by it, the ego regards itself as rejected and becomes retaliative.

RAJ: Mm. Sounds to me like we're talking about what I started out with today. What do you do when you make the Gift of Freedom to someone who's committed to his or her free will, which is really self-will, and insists upon being unpleasant, unloving? The Invitation to Freedom means abandoning what is of value to the one who's identifying with the ego. And when a limit is imposed, it senses defeat and is angered by it. It regards itself as rejected. And what? Becomes retaliative.

Just understand that that's the dynamic at work, so that you're not fooled by it, so that you understand that that which has no existence actually is upset because it's being faced with the fact that it has no actual existence. And it's going to try to get you to come back into the crab barrel. It's going to try to get you to say to yourself, "Oh! I'm an ego. I remember this. I know how to deal with this. I'll attack back. He is a bastard but I know how to deal with him." You see? And so you abandon the journey Home with me for a while.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are invulnerable to its retaliation BECAUSE I AM WITH YOU.

RAJ: Now, this is the thing you must understand because when the retaliation comes, you need to remember who you're with. You need to remember who you choose to be with. Do you wish, do you choose to join with the one retaliating by countering his attack and getting stuck with him for a while? Or, do you choose to remember that you're with me, and that in our union you have available through me the means to not be touched, not be snagged by, not be hooked by, the invitation to forget Who You Are that is embodied in the retaliation? You've got to remember that you're with me, and then you've got to choose to stay with me.

RAJ READING: You are invulnerable to its retaliation BECAUSE I AM WITH YOU. On this journey, you have chosen me as your companion INSTEAD of the ego. Do not try to hold on to both, or you will try to go in different directions, and will lose the way.

RAJ: And I will say you will try to go in different directions simultaneously and you will disintegrate yourself. Your integrity will crumble as far as your experience of it is concerned.

Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: The ego's way is not mine, but it is also NOT YOURS. The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: And I'm going to remind you, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit has ONE direction for ALL minds, and the one He taught me is YOURS.

RAJ: The direction.

RAJ READING: Let us not lose sight of His direction through illusions, for only illusions of another direction can obscure the one for which God's Voice speaks in all of us.

RAJ: What's the direction that God's Voice speaks for in all of us? It speaks for the Excellence Of You. It speaks for the Truth About You, just as I do. It speaks for your Awakening, because it has been held in trust while you have dallied with the ego.

And what has it been held in trust for? To be there to remind you, to remember for you What You Are. It is What You Are standing ready to address the you you think you are and help you remember that you're more than what you think you are, so that you can come back into your Right Mind, so that Sanity can return. So that you are not split into the Holy Spirit that you don't think is part of you and an ego that you think is what you are.

The Holy Spirit speaks of one direction and that is the return of your Sanity to your Conscious Awareness. Reintegration.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Never accord the ego the power to interfere with the journey because it HAS none, since the journey is the way to what is true. Leave ALL deception behind,...

RAJ: Hm. Where'd that come from? Deception?

RAJ READING: Leave ALL deception behind,...

RAJ: Well, when you say, "Hm. This table is matter. It has nothing to do with God. It was made out of the elements of the earth which came from the big bang," oh, if you don't think you're deceiving yourself, you've got another think coming. That's pure deception. You said, "I choose to look at this without God." Or, "I wish, I choose to look at that tree without God. And without God it appears to me to be such-and-such. And I believe it. And I agree with that. That is what it is." That's pure self-deception. Anything you do, anything you think which leaves God out of the picture means you are having a misperception. And you're deceiving yourself when you choose to believe that that's all there is to what you're looking at.

RAJ READING: Leave ALL deception behind,...

RAJ: Well, that's where the first lesson of the Course comes into play. "Nothing that I see means anything." You've got to be willing to look at everything and say, "What I think that is doesn't mean anything. That doesn't mean what I think it does. The meaning I've given to it is meaningless."

So you leave all deception behind by saying, "Father, or, Holy Spirit, what is this? What is this table truly? What is going on there where I see a tree?" That's the way you...

RAJ READING: Leave ALL deception behind, and reach beyond all attempts of the ego to hold you back. I go before you because I AM beyond the ego. Reach, therefore, for my hand because you WANT to transcend the ego.

RAJ: Well, that simply means you want to transcend illusions. You want to get out of the realm of deceptions. You don't want to be ignorant. You don't want to be insane.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: My will will NEVER be wanting, and if you WANT to share it, you WILL.

RAJ: In other words, as impossible as you think it might be to connect with me, as much as you might wish that this is a special talent or a special gift given to Paul, you will not reach for me and you will not have the experience. It's not special.

RAJ READING: ...if you WANT to share it, you WILL.

RAJ: It will happen.

RAJ READING: I give it willingly and gladly because I need you as much as you need me.

RAJ: And don't tell me that if I was Whole, if I was truly Awake and knew of my Wholeness, I wouldn't need you.

Why would I need you? What would that mean? It means that it is clear to me that you are me. I am you. We are One. And for you to be holding yourself incommunicado, at a distance, doesn't represent Reality, doesn't represent the Truth. Dare to let yourself feel the need of your Father and your Brothers and Sisters and of All Creation As God Is Being It. Let yourself feel the need.

And quit going through your day as though you are truly self-sufficient, unto yourself, and as though you understand what everything is, and you are correct, and that therefore the misery and the stress and the strife that you feel is normal. And there's not really an alternative to it. Don't get stuck there for the sake of independent self-righteousness, or self-righteous independence, which constitutes a prison, not Freedom.

I am here to make the Gift of Freedom. You are here to make the Gift of Freedom. You are here to embody the Truth, rather than misperceptions, illusions and deceptions. And you are the only ones who can cut through the illusions, misperceptions and deceptions by doing something new, by doing something dependent. [said softly and gently] Come on. If you're suffering from independence, the healing will come through dependence. I know you're capable of comprehending that.

I'm going to say something in closing. Give up on asking, "Why did he talk about that instead of this? Why didn't he talk about what I needed him to talk about? Why didn't he talk about with what I thought would be the next logical step?" That's not called yielding. That's not called trust. We're coming Home purposely and consciously with intelligent intent and in a manner that will work.

I love you. I remember Who You Are. I know Who You Are because I have not forgotten. And I make the Gift of my remembrance, not just in the words that come out of Paul's mouth, but in the within-ness of you and in your hearts. And I'm doing that all the time. I am with you all the time. I am with all of you all the time. No one gets slighted. You might wonder how on earth I could be with everyone at the same time. And I'll tell you, it's not only easy; it's, for lack of better words, automatic when you stop holding yourself apart from everything in your commitment to independence.

I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Chapter 8 – THE JOURNEY BACK
Section – THE TREASURE OF GOD
First Edition – p. 137 / Second Edition – p. 148
Section – THE POWER OF JOINT DECISION
Sparkly Book – p. 184

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the Internet.

Remember as we're reading this section that all of this discussion is going on in a chapter entitled, "The Journey Back," which could also be called "The Journey Home," or which could be called, "You coming back into your Right Mind."

This section won't deal with complex psychological concepts and ideas. You might not even think it to be particularly deep, but it's meant to convey a feeling rather than an understanding—a feeling that you may not be able to easily put to words. Remember that waking up is not an intellectual process. All the words are ever for is to bring you to a point where you can dare to relinquish control, where you can arrive at a point of daring to relinquish the exercise of authority, because in the absence of the exercise of authority and control, you immediately become susceptible to that wonderful experience called inspiration. Indeed, revelation.

This section is called:

RAJ READING: The Power of Joint Decision

RAJ: And of the two subjects—the one in the Sparkly Book and the First and Second Edition—this is the preferable heading rather than "The Treasure of God."

RAJ READING: WE...

RAJ: Meaning you and I. Or, "WE" meaning you and your Guide. But right now we will say "WE" meaning you and I.

RAJ READING: ...are the joint will of the Sonship, whose wholeness is for all.

RAJ: The Joint Will of the Sonship is a Singularity. It's not a conglomeration of wills. It's not an accumulation of individual wills that have all decided to work in harmony with each other while still maintaining their autonomy. The Joint Will of the Sonship is each Son and Daughter of God experiencing being not intelligent but Intelligence, experiencing being Wisdom, experiencing being Joy—things which cannot in actuality be independent experiences because they can't be a possession. They are What You Are, not what you have.

You are Intelligence. You don't have Intelligence. And Intelligence is the experience of, for lack of better words, mental balance, mental equilibrium, a capacity to be conscious of everything without losing your balance, the experience of being conscious of everything and being aware that it's all you. Not you having an independent experience of it, but that Intelligence is the constituting Presence of you and of every thing. And no one thing has more or less of it. And no one thing has any different aspect of it. When you're experiencing the Joint Will of the Brotherhood, you're experiencing a Unity with everything together with the Conscious Experience that every thing is having a Conscious Experience of Unity with you without division or separation of any kind.

When you join with me, when you yield up the belief and practice of a separate will, and you do not hold yourself apart from me and I am not holding myself apart from you, we are Intelligence. We are Intelligence. We are Love. And we are the Joint Love of the Sonship, the Joint Will of the Sonship. In other words, when you do it with me, you do it with all of the Brotherhood. You don't get to have a special relationship with me. The moment you have a Real Relationship with me, you have a Relationship with the Whole.

RAJ READING: WE are the joint will of the Sonship, whose wholeness is for all. We begin the journey back by setting out...

RAJ: How?

RAJ READING: ...TOGETHER,...

RAJ: Not independently side by side, but TOGETHER.

RAJ READING: ...and gather in our brothers as we CONTINUE together.

RAJ: Another important point. This joining between you and me is not for a little hit of inspiration, not for a little hit of enlightenment whereby you can go back walking along the path by yourself with some fresh insight. It's the beginning of a permanent Union.

RAJ READING: We begin the journey back by setting out TOGETHER, and gather in our brothers as we CONTINUE together. Every gain in our strength is offered for all, so they, too, can lay aside their weakness and add their strength to us.

RAJ: Now this isn't strength to overcome anything. It's strength in the sense of the Conscious Experience of Integrity, of being integrated, of not being DISintegrated. It's the strength, you might say, of the Indivisible Unity of the Brotherhood, of the Sonship, that is true of the Whole Sonship. It's an Experience of Invulnerability. Invulnerable because it is obvious as a Conscious Experience that there is nothing opposing it.

Of course, when this is offered for all so that they can lay aside their weakness, it is going to seem to them as though they're having to lay aside not their weakness but their strength. They will think that they're going to have to lay aside their authority. They think they're going to have to lay aside self-defense. They think they're going to lay aside everything that has caused them to be fairly invulnerable or safe, which is going to mean to them that they're going to have to move into an unsafe arena. And there will be fear.

There is fear with you. But you have come with me far enough to find that your fear, that your belief of fear, of being vulnerable, was not entirely true. And so you dare to risk the chance a little bit more than newcomers. You dare to risk the chance more that there will be safety in your joining with me, or your joining with the Holy Spirit, or your joining with your Guide, and relinquishing the private autonomous authority that you have come to believe is all-important to your safety.

And so, as we move along and others come into view and the opportunity is for them to join, it is going to take compassion and understanding on your part, so that you might persist in the face of their fear and encourage them to see that it just might be safe. And there just might be, for lack of better words, a payoff bigger than they're expecting if they will risk the chance that there is a God and let Him back in, and begin to rely upon Him and yield to Him with ongoing commitment.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: God's welcome waits for us all, and He will welcome us as I am welcoming you. Forget not the Kingdom of God for anything the world has to offer. The world can add nothing to the power and the glory of God and His holy Sons, but it CAN blind the Sons to the Father if they behold it.

RAJ: Now, let's continue to be clear here. The world that this is referring to is the world you have made-up as an independent viewpoint, an independent concept, an independent definition created by you after you got the bill of divorcement from the Father and forgot Who You Were. What you have created in your mind and overlaid upon the Kingdom of Heaven can add nothing to the Power and the Glory of God and His Holy Sons. But, this world that you have made-up, imagined, and defined, can blind the Sons to the Father if they behold it.

RAJ READING: You cannot behold the world and know God.

RAJ: Or, you cannot behold the world you have made-up in your mind, you cannot behold the definitions of the Kingdom of Heaven that you have made-up that are different from What The Kingdom Of Heaven Is and know God.

RAJ READING: Only One is true.

I am come to tell you that the choice of which is true is not yours.

RAJ: Your great acts of independent creativity, the creativity that has come up with definitions of the Kingdom of Heaven that are at odds with What the Kingdom Of Heaven Is are just that—imaginative illusions. You can't choose for it to be real. But you can choose to ignore What Is Real in favor of your definition because you think it feels so good to have been able to be creative on your own.

RAJ READING: I am come to tell you that the choice of which is true is not yours. If it were, you would have destroyed yourselves. Yet God did not will the destruction of His creations, having created them for eternity. His Will has saved you, not from yourselves, but from your ILLUSIONS of yourselves.

RAJ: And I would add: Not from your world, but your illusions of the world.

RAJ READING: He has saved you FOR yourselves. Let us glorify Him Whom the world denies, for over His Kingdom it has no power. No-one created by God can find joy in anything EXCEPT the eternal. That is not because he is deprived of anything else, but because nothing else is WORTHY of him. What God and His Sons create IS eternal, and in this and this only is their joy.

Listen to the story of the prodigal son, and learn what God's treasure is and YOURS: This son of a loving father left his home...

RAJ: You've got a bill of divorcement.

RAJ READING: ...and thought he squandered everything for nothing of any value, although he did not know its worthlessness at the time. He was ashamed to return to his father because he thought he had hurt him. Yet when he came home, the father welcomed him with joy because only the son himself WAS his father's treasure.

RAJ: Not the wealth that the son thought he had squandered.

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: The father.

RAJ READING: ...WANTED nothing else.

God wants only His Son...

RAJ: God wants only you.

RAJ READING: ...because His Son is...

RAJ: You are.

RAJ READING: ...His only treasure. You want YOUR creations as He wants HIS. Your creations are your gift to the Holy Trinity, created in gratitude for YOUR creation. They do not leave you any more than you have left YOUR Creator, but they EXTEND your creation as God extended Himself to YOU. Can the creations of God Himself take joy in what is not real?

RAJ: No. And that's why you don't experience a lot of joy. Because you're insisting on making what isn't real, real. And you do it all for the sake of trying to save your right to be autonomous. And at the bottom line to prove to God that because you are his Son or Daughter, you can speak with God's Authority without including God. It is amusing. And it's good to know it's amusing rather than to think it is a sin for which you will spend eternity damned in hell. It's an amusing foible of the mind which is easily correctable. Correctable by breaking the isolation and deciding to join with the Holy Spirit, or to join with me, or to join with God. And then leaning into that decision, you might say, so that more and more of your day is spent not making decisions by yourself.

RAJ READING: Your creations are your gift to the Holy Trinity,...

RAJ: To the Whole, in other words.

RAJ READING: ...created in gratitude for YOUR creation.

RAJ: Well, let me put it this way. When you break the isolation and you begin to experience the influx of inspiration, of inspired consciousness, there is a Joy that you feel that overflows the boundaries you might have thought there were to your mind and get extended to everyone and everything. And I mean by that that you are aware of having a brand-new experience of everyone and everything that is illuminated by the inspiration that has flowed through you. That Gift is your Creation. And it's a Creation that happens because you have spontaneous gratitude to God for What You Are, for what you are finding you are in that State of Inspiration.

RAJ READING: They...

RAJ: Your Creations. In other words, the extension of joy and gratitude that flows uninhibitedly out embracing everything.

RAJ READING: They do not leave you any more than you have left YOUR Creator, but they EXTEND your creation as God extended Himself to YOU. Can the creations of God Himself take joy in what is not real? And what IS real except the creations of God...

RAJ: Meaning you.

RAJ READING: ...and those which are created like His? YOUR creations love you as your Soul loves your Father for the gift of creation.

RAJ: Your Soul loves your Father for the Gift of its Creation. That experience is what occurs when you annul the bill of divorcement from the Father and let Him in once again. Your Soul loves your Father for the Gift of its Creation and for the Gift of Creation as the spontaneous Movement of Being that It/You is.

RAJ READING: There IS no other gift which is eternal, and therefore there is no other gift which is TRUE.

RAJ: Now what we're talking about here is that as you abandon autonomy and you join with me, or the Holy Spirit, or the Father, you move into a Conscious Experience of Singularity in which Creation is a Shared Experience. You and God constitute a Shared Experience of Creation. You share the Movement of Creation that God Is Being. And out of gratitude and out of joy it bubbles forth and overflows from you. And together you be the Singular Movement of Creation.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: How, then, can you ACCEPT anything else or GIVE anything else, and expect joy in return? And what else but joy would you WANT? You made neither yourself nor your function. You made only the DECISION to be unworthy of both.

RAJ: You see, the only decision that you individually could make would be a decision to act at odds with the Father. The moment... because there is no decision to be made as the Son or Daughter of God, you joined with the Father find yourself not faced with decisions—just the emergence of Joy and Gratitude and Awe and Bliss and Love that embraces everyone and everything. That is your Gift. And that is what you create. That is your Creation. But your Creation is only the Illumination of the Movement of God in you. I say “only” and that might make it sound minimal. [gentle laughing] It is only that but that is an Infinite Gift.

RAJ READING: You made only the DECISION to be unworthy of both. Yet you could not make YOURSELF unworthy, because you are the treasure of God. What HE values IS valuable.

RAJ: Do you hear that?

RAJ READING: What HE values IS valuable.

RAJ: Because He is the One Who determines the Meaning of everything. And therefore, at this very moment, no matter how you are thinking of yourself, no matter how poorly you are defining yourself in your mind, you are wrong!

Ann! Wake her up. I want you to hear this.

No matter what you are thinking about yourself, no matter how you might be perceiving yourself, no matter how poorly you might be defining yourself, you are valued by God. And that means that your current definitions of yourself are not true.

You are welcome.

RAJ READING: What HE values IS valuable. There can BE no question of its worth...

RAJ: In other words, there can be no question of your worth.

RAJ READING: ...because its value lies in God's sharing Himself with it, and ESTABLISHING its value forever.

RAJ: You are the Visibility and Tangibility of God. Therefore, you are valuable. And that's unchangeable. And it is not egotistical or arrogant to think of yourself that way. It is unworthy of you for you to think poorly of yourself and believe your belief.

RAJ READING: YOUR function is to add to God's treasure by creating YOURS.

RAJ: Well, what would your treasure be? Your treasure would be to let the Fullness of the Perfect Movement of Creation of God to find expression through you. And not minimize it or distort it by some bias or personal tiny preference that you might bring to bear upon the Movement of God's Presence.

RAJ READING: YOUR function is to add to God's treasure by creating YOURS. His Will TO you is His Will FOR you. He would not withhold creation from you because HIS joy is in it. You cannot find joy EXCEPT as God does. HIS joy lay in creating YOU, and He extends His Fatherhood to you so that you can extend yourself as He did.

RAJ: Well, there isn't anything for you to extend but what the Father has extended to you: Intelligence, Love, Wisdom, Joy, Peace—in as many ways as come to you for expression.

RAJ READING: You do not understand this because you do not understand HIM. No-one who does not know his function can understand it, and no-one CAN know his function unless he knows who he IS.

RAJ: Who are you? Well, in spite of your bill of divorcement, you are the Son or Daughter of God. You are that which has the Function of embodying All That God Is Being right where you are, and letting it out into expression. That's What You Are. The place where God shines through. The place where all that is Good and Holy, meaning Whole. The place where Love shines through, is embodied. The place where Intelligence is embodied. The way... the place where embrace occurs, inclusion occurs, joining occurs.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the following sentences: Creation is the Will of God. His Will created you to create.]

RAJ READING: Your will was not created separate from His, and so it wills as HE wills.

RAJ READING: An "unwilling will"...

RAJ: Which is the definition of an ego.

RAJ READING: An "unwilling will" does not mean anything, being a contradiction in terms which actually leaves nothing. When you THINK you are unwilling to will with God, YOU ARE NOT THINKING. God's Will IS thought. It cannot be contradicted BY thought. God does not contradict HIMSELF, and His Sons, who are like Him, cannot contradict themselves OR Him. Yet their thought...

RAJ: Your thought.

RAJ READING: ...is so powerful that they can even imprison the minds of God's Sons, IF THEY SO CHOOSE.

RAJ: And so if you choose to imagine that you've gotten a bill of divorcement from the Father and you can act and decide and define what everything is on your own, you can blind yourself to Reality. You can imprison the Son Of God That You Are in a costume that says you are mortal, subject to sin, disease, and death, living in a hostile world which you must use your wits to protect yourself from and survive in, and perhaps achieve some form of success.

RAJ READING: This choice DOES make the Son's...

RAJ: It does make your Function unknown to you.

RAJ READING: This choice DOES make the Son's function unknown to HIM, but NEVER to his Creator. And BECAUSE it is not unknown to his Creator, it is forever knowable to him.

RAJ: In other words, because your Function is not unknown to your Creator, it is forever knowable to you. And it's available at every moment.

RAJ READING: There is no question but one you should ever ask of yourself; — "Do I WANT to know my Father's Will for me?"

RAJ: Well, I'll tell you that very often Paul says, "No!" And very often you say, "No! But, Father, I'd rather do it myself. I know how to handle this. I don't need you to hold my hand when I take a pee. I know how to do that." Whew! Hey, why not have a Friend with you when you take a pee? Why not have a Friend with you all the time? Why endure the experience of loneliness that always accompanies acts of independence and isolation?

RAJ READING: There is no question but one you should ever ask of yourself; — "Do I WANT to know my Father's Will for me?" HE will not hide it. He has revealed it to me because I asked it of Him, and learned of what He had already given.

RAJ: And this is why I can remember for you. And when you let it in, that will be why you can remember for your Brother. And that's how the dominoes begin to fall and Awakening becomes an epidemic.

RAJ READING: Our function is to function together because, APART from each other, we cannot function at all.

RAJ: When you act on your own, Creation isn't occurring. When you act on your own, nothing is happening of the sort you think that you've created as an event. Creation As The Father Is Being It is... continues to happen right in the face of your attempts to act independently and authoritatively and creatively. Mm. You can sit in your living room and close your eyes and imagine that you're bungee jumping off of one of the highest bridges, and you can create for yourself all of the sensations of falling, and even of fear. And you can imagine that you come as close to hitting the bottom as is possible without hitting it and you can get a real thrill from it. But the fact is through it all nothing happened.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The whole power of God's Son lies in all of us,...

RAJ: And this is the important point.

RAJ READING: ...but not in any of us alone.

RAJ READING: The whole power of God's Son lies in all of us, but not in any of us alone. God would not have us be alone because HE does not will to be alone. That is why He created His Son, and gave him the power to create with Him.

RAJ: Is that clear?

RAJ READING: God would not have us be alone...

RAJ: That means that every idea you have embraced that suggests that you are an independent entity and it is something to be proud of, will be undermined, broken down, and disintegrated. And you must allow it to happen.

And you must be willing to question the idea that competition is valid and valuable. Because competition can only occur between independent entities who have the function or purpose of developing skill that is always greater than someone else and which believes that the strenuousness of the exercise of competition improves you.

RAJ READING: God would not have us be alone...

RAJ: Let that sink in and give it your attention so that you can realize how far reaching that is and the way it flies in the face of a great deal of what is taught to your children in schools. It's competition. It's a form of survival of the fittest. You'd better work hard, so you can rise to the top of your class, so that you can get into the best college, so that you can demand the highest salary, and be the best in your world, towering over everyone else if at all possible. You see?

RAJ READING: God would not have us be alone because HE does not will...

RAJ: HE does not will.

RAJ READING: ...to be alone. That is why He created His Son, and gave him the power to create with Him.

RAJ: Now your capacity to create includes as one of your Creations the ability to make the Gift of the recognition of the value of your Brother because you both have the same Father. And you are both equal in the Father, because the Father has given ALL That He Is, embodied ALL That He Is in each of you. And each of you taking your place in that equality allows you not to possess a better intelligence than others, but it allows you to be Intelligence Itself which cannot be compared, and in which there is no potential for evaluating different Aspects of Creation and finding some to be better than others, and some to be faulty, and some to be lacking.

RAJ READING: Our creations...

RAJ: The gifts that we give. The capacity to recognize God in everything we see. That's our Creation—the Gift of That Recognition.

RAJ READING: Our creations are as holy as we are, and we are the Sons of God Himself, and therefore as holy as He is. Through our creations we extend our love, and thus increase the joy of the Holy Trinity. You do not understand this for a very simple reason. You who are God's own treasure do not regard yourselves as valuable. Given this belief, you cannot understand ANYTHING.

RAJ: Why? Because you can't see anything As It Is.

RAJ READING: I share with God the knowledge of the value HE puts upon you. My devotion to you is of Him, being born of my knowledge of myself AND Him.

RAJ: We could put this another way. Your devotion to your Brother is of Him, being born of my Knowledge of myself and Him which has been extended to you, and therefore has become your Knowledge of yourself and Him.

RAJ READING: We cannot BE separated. Whom God has joined cannot be separated, and God has joined all His Sons with Himself. Can you be separated from your life and your being?

RAJ: That's What You Are. You are Being. You are the Movement of Being. You are the Conscious Experience of Being. You're not a being. You're the very Movement of Life Itself.

RAJ READING: The journey to God is merely the reawakening of the knowledge of WHERE you are always, and WHAT you are forever.

RAJ: We could say the Journey to God is merely the reawakening of the Knowledge of where you always have been and what you have forever been.

RAJ READING: It is a journey without distance, to a goal that has never changed.

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: The journey to God is merely the reawakening of the knowledge of WHERE you are always, and WHAT you are forever. It is a journey without distance, to a goal that has never changed.

RAJ: The return Home is a return to a State of Mind in which you are included, everything is included. And it is all embraced in an unwavering, unchanging, and uninterrupted Love. It is your own Mind experiencing Sanity, Integration, Integrity, Invulnerability because there is nothing beside It, in which All of Creation, including every single one of your Brothers, is experienced, as I've said before, as Family, not opponents.

Your journey Home, like that of the Prodigal Son, is one of coming closer and closer to the Conscious Experience of the fact that the Father's Love for you has never changed. And that what you thought He loved is not what He loved. And what you thought He didn't love, namely naughty little you, He never stopped loving.

So this movement Home is a movement which is enveloped in Love. One in which you should increasingly feel the experience of being loved for no good reason. I mean by that that you should find yourself experiencing love not because you have done something well, not because you have acquired enough skill and have spiritualized yourself enough to be worthy of it as you get closer to Home having lifted yourself up by your own bootstraps. No.

Be willing to remember Who You Are, the Divine and Holy Son of God, God Embodied. By you? No. By God. Therefore the Gift of God is fully given to you as you. And that is what it's your Birthright to be experiencing. And in the experience of it, finding yourself unable to withhold that same embrace from your Brothers and Sisters. And thus engage in Creation by the extension of your Gifts.

We're going to stop there for this evening. And I want you to abide in the feeling that has been conveyed. And I suggest to you that you read this section over during the coming week to remind yourself of the feeling. Because the feeling is part of what will help you dare to abandon the practice of self-defense, and to abandon the practice of control, and the practice of being totally committed to the definitions you have given everything, so that in the absence of that commitment you might be inspired.

I love you. And I look forward to being with you next week. It's always good to be with you.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Very important first sentence.

RAJ READING: Truth can only be EXPERIENCED.

RAJ: I've talked about this before, the fact that Truth isn't a linear, intellectual explanation of something that through reason you understand. Truth is an experience. I'm going to put it this way. Truth is the experience of What A Thing Is, an experience in which the whole of What That Thing Is is fully disclosed to you. And what that thing is not finds no abiding place in your awareness. Truth, therefore, is the undistorted, unbound Conscious Awareness of Something. I have referred to it as Knowing, with a capital "K", which is different from understanding.

When you see the table, when you see your Brother or Sister, when you see your fingernail, when you see the sky or the trees, and your experience of what you're seeing is utterly and completely whole, you are experiencing the Truth. And as I've also said before, when you have that experience, that undistorted experience of something, you unavoidably have the experience of your oneness with it. That's part of the whole experience of a thing. You will never be left out of the experience of a thing. You will never find yourself to be an observer of the thing. You will have—and the word "experience" is a shallow word compared to the experience—you will have the experience of What A Thing Divinely Is from which you will in no way feel separated. And you will also know that it's an Experience of God. That is the Experience of Truth.

RAJ READING: Truth can only be EXPERIENCED. It cannot be described, and it cannot be explained.

RAJ: So if somebody says, "Well, let me tell you what the Truth is," you know that whatever follows cannot possibly be the Truth. You want to speak to someone who says, "I will be with you from the Place of Excellence in me that uncovers the Place of Excellence in you, so that you might be susceptible to the Experience of Truth." Whether that person says that or not, that's who you want to be with.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: I can make you aware of the CONDITIONS of truth, but the experience is of God.

RAJ: In other words, Truth is a revelation.

RAJ READING: Together we can meet its conditions, but truth will dawn upon you of itself.

RAJ: Now let me ask you something. If It's not something that can be explained or understood, how are you going to approach the Experience of Truth? By trying to figure out What It Is? No. The only way you're going to be able to approach It is by becoming quiet and abandoning everything you ever thought the Truth was about whatever you're considering. And you must then make an invitation for What The Truth Is about that thing to reveal Itself to you. And then be unconditionally open to the reception of the revelation. You must invite Truth to reveal Itself to you, and then you must be open enough to let It reveal Itself. It is a call for enough humility to shut up and set aside your best theories, and be ready to experience the unexpected.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: What God has willed for you IS yours.

RAJ: It's already been willed to you for you. It's already yours. And what has God willed for you? Truth. The Experience of Truth. It is God's Will for you to be experiencing everything, including yourself, As It Is and As You Are. The experience is already yours to have.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: He has given His Will to His treasure,...

RAJ: And you are His Treasure.

RAJ READING: He has given His Will to His treasure, whose treasure It is.

RAJ: What He has willed to you is your Treasure.

RAJ READING: Your heart lies where your treasure is, as His does. You who are beloved of God are wholly blessed.

RAJ: Already. Already. Whether you're acting lousy or not, you're already blessed. You're not likely to experience the blessing until you're ready to abandon whatever false perceptions of yourself you are entertaining that are causing you to behave badly. But the blessing is yours, has been extended to you, and is awaiting your providing the conditions under which the revelation of the Truth About You and the Truth About What God Has Willed For You can register with you.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Learn this of me, and free the holy will of all those who are as blessed as YOU are.

RAJ: The minute you learn it about you, again without a conscious, linear, reasoned thought, you will immediately be aware that What Is True Of You is True Of Your Brothers. And you will never again consider your Brothers in a less... in a more limited fashion. And so your Brothers are blessed. Why? Because you will have withdrawn from whatever mutually-agreed definitions had been arrived at by you and your Brother that confirm ignorance, confirm misperception.

RAJ READING: Learn this of me,...

RAJ: I can also say learn this of your Guide. But understand that the only way you'll come Home is together with One Who Is Awake.

RAJ READING: Learn this of me, and free the holy will of all those who are as blessed as YOU are.

RAJ: Okay. The next section is called:

RAJ READING: Communication and the Ego-Body Equation

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: The Body as a Means of Communication (T-#151/140)]

RAJ: For those of you who are in the First and Second Editions, you have a different heading. But this heading, "Communication and the Ego-Body Equation," identifies the content of the coming section more explicitly and more upfront.

RAJ READING: Attack is ALWAYS physical. When attack in any form enters your mind, you are EQUATING yourself with a body.

RAJ: Well, I imagine some of you are thinking, "Mm. Attack is always physical? Well, I know when I've experienced being attacked mentally. I know when I've experienced having my beliefs attacked. I've experienced having what I understand attacked. I've had experiences of having my peace undermined and that's not physical. What do you mean, 'attack is always physical'?"

RAJ READING: When attack in any form enters your mind, you are EQUATING yourself with a body.

RAJ: Well, let's make this even more clear. When attack in any form enters your mind, it means that you are not identifying yourself as One with the Father. It means that you are identifying yourself as post-divorce self—after you've divorced your Father. It means you are identifying yourself as what you are experiencing yourself to be. And naturally, you identify yourself as a body born of a woman, et cetera.

So if you are experiencing attack, it means that you are in a state of mind in which you are defining yourself as separate, alone, autonomous, and, if at all possible, enjoying the autonomy to the max, and the thrill, as I've said before, of overcoming this conflicted world you find yourself in, which only appears to be conflicted because you are seeing through a lens of selfhood that isn't the Truth. You are looking at everything through a lens of self-denial, meaning a denial of What You Truly Are, and therefore an attempt to exist in a state that is at odds with What You Truly Are. And that conflict is what you find confronting you when you look through that lens at what? Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven, the only thing there ever is for you to be experiencing.

RAJ READING: When attack in any form enters your mind, you are EQUATING yourself with a body.

RAJ: Mind you...

RAJ READING: This is the ego's INTERPRETATION of the body.

RAJ: Don't miss that point. This is the ego's interpretation of Something that's Real.

RAJ READING: You do not have to attack physically to accept this interpretation.

RAJ: Of the body.

RAJ READING: You are accepting it simply by the belief that attack can GET you something you want. If you did not believe this, the idea of attack would have no appeal for you.

RAJ: When you are so absolutely positive that you're just a physical organism with a capacity to understand spiritual things, you are in a state of lack. First of all, a lack of comprehension of Who You Are. Secondly and automatically, a lack of Peace. And thirdly, an experience of everything that is conflicted which you must constantly defend yourself against. And everything is not yours as it was when you were awake. And so you must claim your good, you must take possession of your good. And since from this standpoint, from a physical standpoint, there is a limited amount of physicality to possess, then you must take it at the expense of someone else who would possess it.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: When you equate yourself with a body you will ALWAYS experience depression.

RAJ: Again, when you equate yourself or define yourself as separate from your Source, you will always experience depression. Again, because you're in a state of self-denial.

RAJ READING: When a Child of God thinks of himself in this way he is belittling himself and seeing his brothers as similarly belittled. Since he can find himself ONLY in them, he has cut himself off from salvation.

RAJ: Now I know we've talked about this before, but let's look at this again.

RAJ READING: Since he can find himself ONLY in them, he has cut himself off from salvation.

RAJ: The only way you are ever going to be able to break the isolation from God is to extend God's Love to your Brother whom you are holding yourself separate from, and who you see is holding himself or herself separate from you. And so your salvation lies in having an object of your affection to whom you extend something True, to whom you extend the Truth, to whom you extend the Vision of What He Really Is, because in your extending that Vision to him, you make it True of you. You make it your own. Why? Because you have accepted it for yourself, and you have been willing to declare your position, publicly extend the recognition to your Brother in acts and words and deeds.

Now...

RAJ READING: Remember that the Holy Spirit interprets the body only as a means of communication.

RAJ: Now the word "only" is not a belittling word there. It means that the Holy Spirit's interpretation of the body is pure. It is not a combination of disintegrated ideas. And so there's nothing confusing about the Holy Spirit's interpretation of the body.

RAJ READING: Remember that the Holy Spirit interprets the body only as a means of communication. Being the communication link between God and His separated Sons, the Holy Spirit interprets everything YOU have made in the light of what HE is. The ego SEPARATES through the body. The Holy Spirit REACHES THROUGH it to others.

RAJ: It doesn't say here that the Holy Spirit sees the body as an illusion. It doesn't say that the Holy Spirit sees the body as nonexistent. It says that the Holy Spirit sees it only as What It Is—a means of communication.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You do not perceive your brothers as the Holy Spirit does because you do not interpret their bodies and yours solely as a means of...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...joining their MINDS and uniting them with yours and mine. This interpretation of the body will change your mind entirely about its value. Of itself it has NONE.

RAJ: In other words, separated from its Function, separated from its Meaning, it has no Meaning. So it does exist, but it doesn't exist as what you have believed it existed for.

RAJ READING: If you use the body for attack, it IS harmful to you. If you use it only to reach the minds of those who believe they are bodies, and teach them THROUGH the body that this is not so, you will begin to understand the power of the mind that is in both of you. If you use the body for this and ONLY for this, you CANNOT use it for attack.

RAJ: You could ask yourself right now, "What is Paul using his body for right now?" To reach through it with the Truth. To your bodies? No. To your Mind. To that which your bodies are simply the Visibility and Tangibility of.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: In the service of uniting, it becomes a beautiful lesson in communion, which has value until communion IS.

RAJ: Meaning until Communion is the permanent Infinite Conscious Experience Of Being.

RAJ READING: This is God's way of...

RAJ: Unmaking.

RAJ READING: ...of making unlimited what you have limited.

RAJ: You have limited your body by thinking it's a physical organism, a product of evolution, rather than the Visibility and Tangibility of you which, while you're feeling separated, you can only truly use in order to express and embody Love, in the extension of It to your Brother for the purpose of helping your Brother remember Who He Or She Is, which is not a body, but the Mind that has no boundary, in which the Conscious Experience of body is.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit does not see the body as you do...

RAJ: It doesn't say, "The Holy Spirit doesn't see the body at all." It says:

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit does not see the body as you do because He knows the ONLY reality anything can have is the service it can render God on behalf of the function He has given it.

RAJ: That's called glorifying God, praising God. Except you know what? Praising God doesn't mean singing beatitudes. It doesn't mean saying "Glory to God in the Highest." What it means is looking at your Brother and recognizing the Truth About Your Brother, having the Experience of Truth About Your Brother, because you're not harboring private definitions of your own creating that are getting in the way of it. And as a result of the clear Experience of the Truth About Your Brother Or Your Sister, you behave in utterly loving ways. I said, "Behave." I didn't say, "Think." I mean acts and words and deeds that embody the meaning of the words, "I love you." That's glorifying God. Because at the bottom line the experience is... the Experience of Truth is one of remembering God when you look in your Brother's eyes.

And so it's in the saying, "I love you." It's in the behavior that embodies "I love you." It's in the attitude and feeling that conveys that you see the utter Infinite Value of your Brother that constitutes glorifying God.

So if you're thinking about ending up sitting on a cloud strumming a harp, glorifying God by talking to God about God, forget it. If that's what you think it is, you're going to walk past your Brother every day and not recognize the fact that here's your opportunity to glorify God. Here's your opportunity to fulfill your Purpose For Being. And you're missing the opportunity to wake up, because you don't realize that glorifying God is not some string of religious words sung to religiously slanted music with pipe organs and instruments that are associated with and chord progressions that are associated with religious experience. It's you blessing your Brother because you're recognizing God in him, and then behaving accordingly.

Again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit does not see the body as you do because He knows the ONLY reality anything can have is the service it can render God on behalf of the function He has given it.

RAJ: Now why on earth would we be talking about the only Reality anything can have or the only Reality something can have is the service it can render when it's talking about the body, if indeed as so many believe, the Course is saying that the body doesn't exist, that the body is illusion? No. That is, as you can see, not what the Course is saying. But the definition you've given to the body, misperceived from the vantage point of being an orphan, someone divorced from its Source, that is an illusion. And that perception does not exist as a fact, even though it blinds you most definitely from experiencing the Divinity, the Reality of What The Body Is.

Here it is and I'm going to say it again.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit does not see the body as you do because He knows the ONLY reality anything can have is the service it can render God on behalf of the function He has given it.

Communication ENDS separation. Attack PROMOTES it.

RAJ: Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: The body is beautiful or ugly, holy or savage, helpful or harmful, according to the use to which it is put. And in the body of another you will SEE the use to which you have put yours.

RAJ: If you are using your body for the purpose of attack, if you are using your body for the purpose of demeaning or minimizing the value of your Brother, you will find your Brother returning attack for attack. And you will see in his behavior exactly what you've been doing.

RAJ READING: If the body becomes for you a means which you give to the Holy Spirit to use on behalf of union of the Sonship, you will not see anything physical except as what it is.

RAJ: Again, a subtle thing here.

RAJ READING: ...you will not see anything physical except as what it is.

RAJ: Spirit. You will not see anything that you have determined to be physical and not of God. You will see it As It Is—Spirit. Again, you will see the parts of the Kingdom of Heaven that you have determined to be a physical world and universe As It Is—the Kingdom of Heaven.

Again.

RAJ READING: If the body becomes for you a means which you give to the Holy Spirit to use on behalf of union of the Sonship, you will not see anything physical except as what it is.

RAJ: Except as What It Truly Is. You won't see the misinterpretation of it anymore.

RAJ READING: Use it for truth, and you will see it truly. MISUSE it, and you WILL misunderstand it because you have already done so BY misusing it. Interpret ANYTHING apart from the Holy Spirit, and you will mistrust it. This will lead you to hatred and attack AND LOSS OF PEACE.

Yet all loss comes only from your own misunderstanding. Loss of ANY kind is impossible.

RAJ: Well, your bodies seem to age. They seem to become ill. They seem to be unstable. And there seems to be no security in it, no permanence to it. Well, that experience of it is nothing more than the perception you must have if you are not seeing What It Truly Is. If you're thinking that it is just a physical organism from a sperm and an egg, you are misunderstanding What It Is. Because What It Is is the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality. And your Individuality is the Presence of God. And so your body is Divine, and it has a Divine Function. And it's Divine Function is Communication. Of what? Communication of the fact that you are discerning Truth, and extending to your Brother the Truth, the Divine Truth That You Know About Him, together with the Love that you cannot possibly lack, having the experience of What The Truth Of Your Brother Is. The Truth About Your Brother is irresistibly lovable. And you can't... you just can't avoid letting the Love that is arising within you from the Awareness of What He Truly Is from being extended to him, or extended to her, your Sister.

RAJ READING: Loss of ANY kind is impossible. When you look upon a brother as a physical entity, HIS power and glory are lost TO YOU,...

RAJ: You can't... you can't possibly see his Divinity when you are seeing a physical entity there—a result of a sperm and an egg.

RAJ READING: ...HIS power and glory are lost TO YOU, and so are YOURS. You HAVE attacked him,...

RAJ: Why? Because you have withheld the acknowledgement of What He Truly Is. You're insisting on seeing him according to the definitions that have been given to you that you have accepted and adopted since you forgot Who You Were. And so by withholding the acknowledgement of the Truth Of Him, but still trying to relate with him, you have no choice but to relate in terms of attack, in terms of demeaning What Is True About Him, because the expression of What Is True About Him will never come out of your mouth. Do you see? By never stating the Truth, by never communicating the Truth to your Brothers, but still relating to your Brothers, that relating must be a constant rehearsal of what isn't true about your Brother. It's that simple. And that is an attack.

"Oh, well. What do you expect? You know, you're just a human being. What do you expect? You know, some brains are faultier than others. You know, what can you expect? Of course you're going to behave the way you are. Of course you're not going to have better experiences than you have. You know, you're likely to be one of the people who will have Alzheimer's and get it early. You know, what can you expect? You're just a physical organism, you know."

Or maybe not quite so bluntly negative. "Oh, I love you, you poor dear. And you know what? No matter what happens, I'll be here for you. It's gonna get rough, I know. But you know what? I'll always be here for you. My love is undying for you. Right up to the last minute I'll be with you!" [laughing] Isn't that encouraging? [laughing] Doesn't that give you a wonderful sense of enduring love and a real meaning of what can give you peace? See, it's a friendlier thing to say, [laughing] but it's depressing, isn't it? Isn't that an attack?

It's an attack when you finally find out that there's something else you can be doing instead. When you didn't know there was anything else you could be doing instead, you were doing the best you could under poor circumstances. And yes, it was loving kindness that was being expressed, but it's not your Birthright to deteriorate and die. And therefore, you need someone who will stand with you in the horribleness of what life turns out to be because your Birthright is to be experiencing What You Divinely Are, the Eternality of Life, the ever-present Vitality of Life, together with the experience of the awesomeness of every little Aspect of Creation that is thrilling and invigorating, and which causes you to have an unchallengeable experience of the worth and value of all Existence. This is your Birthright. And this is what needs to be communicated to your Brothers and Sisters. And this is not attack.

Again.

RAJ READING: When you look upon a brother as a physical entity, HIS power and glory are lost TO YOU, and so are YOURS. You HAVE attacked him, but you MUST have attacked yourself first.

RAJ: You must have demeaned yourself first. You must have defined yourself and accepted the definition as being something less than What You Truly Are.

RAJ READING: Do not see him this way for your OWN salvation, which must bring him HIS. Do not allow him to belittle himself in YOUR mind, but give him freedom from his belief in littleness, and thus escape from YOURS.

RAJ: To have, give all to all. Give in order to have. What you give away, you make yours. Over and over again this lesson.

RAJ READING: As part of you, HE is holy. As part of me, YOU are. To communicate with part of God Himself is to reach beyond the Kingdom to its Creator, through His Voice Which He has established as part of YOU.

RAJ: In other words, you reach to God in your Brother. You reach to God in your Brother with the Love that God is revealing to you. And thus you have what I will call a circular completion of communication. God recognizing Himself. God communicating to Himself All That He Is, and nothing but What He Is.

RAJ READING: To communicate with part of God...

RAJ: Your Brother.

RAJ READING: ...Himself is to reach beyond the Kingdom to its Creator, through His Voice Which He has established as part of YOU.

Rejoice, then, that of yourselves you can do nothing. You are not OF yourselves.

RAJ: Yet that's the definition the ego gives you. "You are of yourself. You have created yourself. You are here to make something out of yourself. You are here through your... you are here to become something that you choose to be through the exercise of your will. You are of yourself and there is nothing else. And you know what? There doesn't need to be anything else. You are sufficient. And you can make of yourself whatever you will. The sky is yours. You don't need anybody else. You don't need anybody else. You are sufficient unto yourself." And it tells you this, and tells you this, and tells you this. If you're not careful, you believe it.

RAJ READING: Rejoice, then, that of yourselves you can do nothing. You are not OF yourselves. He of Whom you ARE has willed your power and glory FOR you, with which you can perfectly accomplish His holy Will for you, when you so will it yourself.

RAJ: When you say, "Okay, Father," instead of saying, "But, Father, I'd rather do it myself."

"Okay, Father, I will accept you as my Source so that I might remember Who I Am as the Expression Of You, and so that I might have the fullness of the Experience of the Truth Of Me, and not experience false imprisonment any longer."

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: God.

RAJ READING: ...has not withdrawn His gifts from you, but YOU have withdrawn them from Him. Let no Son of God remain hidden for His Name's sake, because His Name is YOURS.

RAJ: Let no Son of God remain hidden from you. When you look at your Brothers and Sisters, do not let the Son of God that he is remain hidden from you because you're insisting on, like pin the tail on the donkey, pinning a false identification on him that's been determined by you to be what that one is. Don't cover up God with your favorite preconception of your Brother or Sister.

RAJ READING: Remember that the Bible says, "The Word (or thought) was made flesh." Strictly speaking this is impossible, since it seems to involve the translation of one order of reality into another. Different orders of reality merely APPEAR to exist, just as different orders of miracles do. Thought cannot be made into flesh except by belief, since thought is NOT physical. Yet thought IS communication, for which the body CAN be used. This is the only NATURAL use to which it CAN be put.

RAJ: So when it says, "The Word was made flesh," you can understand it to mean: "The Word was made communication. The Word is a Movement of Communication. And the means of Communication is the body. God's means of communicating What He Is to Himself is called the Kingdom of Heaven. And It looks like Something. And It's experienceable as Something to God."

And the ego calls the substance of it "matter." But the Truth is that the Substance of the Infinite Forms of Creation is Spirit. So you could say, "The Word is made communicable, identifiable, experienceable." That's the True Meaning of, "The Word was made flesh."

RAJ READING: Thought cannot be made into flesh except by belief, since thought is NOT physical. Yet thought IS communication, for which the body CAN be used.

RAJ: For which the Visibility and Tangibility of the Idea or Thought can be used.

RAJ READING: This is the only NATURAL use to which it CAN be put.

RAJ: And that's because that is What Its Function Is. What you call a rose has the appearance it has because it perfectly identifies the Function of communicating the Meaning the Father is embodying in that form. You see?

RAJ READING: To use the body unnaturally...

RAJ: In other words, for attack. And self-defense is attack.

RAJ READING: To use the body unnaturally is to lose sight of the Holy Spirit's purpose, and thus to confuse the goal of His curriculum.

RAJ: Now what's the goal of the Holy Spirit's Curriculum? What is the Holy Spirit? Nothing more than your Right Mind. What is the goal of the Curriculum of your Right Mind? It's to return your Sanity to you so that you're experiencing nothing other than your Right Mind. And you become once again fully integrated with What You Already Are, but which you aren't experiencing fully because you've cordoned off a little section of it and you've said, "This little part is me and all the Rest Of Me is not me." And when that happened, all the Rest Of You got a new name—the Holy Spirit—which remains there with one goal on its agenda, and that is to break down the boundary which you have created to cordon yourself off, separate yourself off, from the Rest Of You.

RAJ READING: To use the body unnaturally is to lose sight of the Holy Spirit's purpose, and thus to confuse the goal of His curriculum.

There is nothing so frustrating to a learner as to be placed in a curriculum which he cannot learn. His sense of adequacy suffers, and he MUST become depressed.

RAJ: Well, what might this be referring to? Well, remember there are two teachers—the Voice for Truth and the voice for fear—the Holy Spirit and the ego. The ego puts you in a learning situation which can't be accomplished. And so it puts you... calls you a learner and it gives you something you cannot learn. You really can't learn that you're an independent, self-governing, self-created and self-creating entity. You cannot learn that because it isn't true.

RAJ READING: There is nothing so frustrating to a learner as to be placed in a curriculum which he cannot learn. His sense of adequacy suffers, and he MUST become depressed.

RAJ: And you know what? That is called the human condition. That is what life is when you're not awake. That's what you're in the middle of, or beginning to emerge from.

RAJ READING: Being faced with an impossible learning situation, regardless of why it is impossible,...

RAJ: Why is that in there, "regardless of why it is impossible"? Because the ego [laughing] can tell you all kinds of reasons, it can distract you by providing you with all kinds of justifications for not seeking God, for not waking up.

RAJ READING: Being faced with an impossible learning situation, regardless of why it is impossible, is the most depressing thing in the world.

RAJ: You see, you don't want to get sidetracked on discovering all of the reasons why it's impossible.

RAJ READING: In fact, it is ultimately WHY the world is depressing. The Holy Spirit's curriculum is NEVER depressing because it is a curriculum of joy. Whenever the reaction to learning is depression, it is only because the goal of the curriculum has been lost sight of.

RAJ: The purpose of everything I'm doing and the purpose of the Course is to re-illuminate the goal, and to re-illuminate the means of accomplishing the goal. The goal is for you to wake up, to come back into your Right Mind. And the means of doing that is breaking the isolation and the treasured concept of autonomy and authority, independent authority, so that what? You might be willing to release yourself into that which you don't know, so that you might express curiosity that reaches beyond the boundaries of the thought system you're in. So that you might reach beyond the boundaries of the structures that have been created that hold your prison in place and give you a false sense of comfort in a place that's not your Home.

Like it says here:

RAJ READING: Being faced with an impossible learning situation, regardless of why it is impossible, is the most depressing thing in the world.

RAJ: Regardless of why it's impossible. Don't begin to ask yourself, "Well, how did I get into this situation? How did I get to be in this impossible situation? How could I possibly have gotten that screwed up if I was the Christ, the Son or Daughter of God, to begin with?" It doesn't matter! Why doesn't it matter? Because you're not in it. You're not in an impossible learning situation. You are the Son or Daughter of God in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven who has the means, through desire not to be alone, to reconnect, for lack of better words, the disintegrated parts of yourself.

It depends entirely on which teacher you're listening to whether you experience yourself as being in an impossible learning situation or not. So don't ask yourself, "How did I get into this impossible learning situation?" You didn't. You're not in it. But you're listening to a teacher who is describing to you an impossible learning situation and inviting you to take the course. There's another Teacher. And you can reach out for the other Teacher. You see what I'm saying?

Okay. A lot of meat tonight. Last week was comforting. Tonight is meat/potatoes night and that doesn't mean you need to have indigestion. I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

Chapter 8 – THE JOURNEY BACK
Section – THE BODY AS A MEANS OF COMMUNICATION
First Edition – p. 142 / Second Edition – p. 152
Section – COMMUNICATION AND THE EGO-BODY EQUATION
Sparkly Book – p. 189

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

For those of you who may be joining us for the first time tonight, I am reading from the Course as it was completed by Bill Thetford before any major changes were made. And as a result, if you're reading from the First or Second Edition of the Course, you will notice differences. If you find that I am reading something that is not in the book you're reading from, just stay in the same place and it will pick up. Don't begin flipping pages or you'll lose the place.

Okay.

RAJ READING: In the world, not even the body is perceived as whole. Its purpose is seen as fragmented into many functions which bear little or no relationship to each other, so that it appears to be ruled by chaos.

RAJ: Well, in the world. In the world. In other words, when you're not experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven as the Kingdom of Heaven but as the world, you are experiencing everything from a place within yourself that experiences no union with God. In other words, from an independent, autonomous place. This causes the absolute Harmony and Unity of Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven that's the only thing confronting you to appear to be fragmented. Your experience is fragmented into you and not you—everything else. And it causes your body to be experienced by you as made up of fragmented parts, so that the growing of your toenail seems to have nothing to do with the skin on your elbow, or your kidneys can seem to decide to function at odds with the rest of the body because it has its own capacity to cooperate or not cooperate. And so on.

So:

RAJ READING: In the world,...

RAJ: In other words, in the frame of mind in which you're not seeing the Kingdom of Heaven and you're not experiencing your Real Identity.

RAJ READING: ...not even the body is perceived as whole. Its purpose is seen as fragmented into many functions...

RAJ: Digestion, breathing, elimination, assimilation, and so on.

RAJ READING: Its purpose is seen as fragmented into many functions which bear little or no relationship to each other, so that it appears to be ruled by chaos. Guided by the ego, it IS. Guided by the Holy Spirit, it is NOT.

RAJ: As I said earlier, there's only one thing for you to be experiencing and it's Reality. Depending upon the teacher you are listening to, it will either appear to be a material world or the Kingdom of Heaven. Well, likewise, guided by the ego, the other teacher, the body appears to be ruled by chaos, but guided by the Holy Spirit, it is not. One and the same thing. Just like the only thing there is for you to experience is Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven. There's just one thing experienced in two contradictory ways depending upon what is providing you with the perception of that thing. If it is the ego, it appears to be chaotic. If it is the Holy Spirit, it is seen and experienced... it is seen for and experienced as What It Is, a communication device, the means to extend your Function.

Again.

RAJ READING: Guided by the Holy Spirit, it is NOT.

RAJ: Ruled by chaos.

RAJ READING: It becomes only a means by which the part of the mind you have separated from your Soul can reach beyond its distortions, and RETURN to the Soul.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "of your mind" instead of "of the mind."]

RAJ: We have discussed at some length the fact that your present sense of yourself is a small circumscribed part of What You Infinitely Are, a small part which you're saying is you, separated and bounded off from All The Rest Of What You Infinitely Are. And All The Rest Of What You Are that you no longer experience as you is called the Holy Spirit.

Now, it's important to understand this because when your body is guided by the Holy Spirit...

RAJ READING: It becomes only a means by which the part of the mind you have separated from your Soul...

RAJ: From the Rest Of What You Are.

RAJ READING: ...can reach beyond its distortions, and RETURN to the Soul.

RAJ: In other words, become reunited.

Now, if the Purpose of the body is to be the Means of Communication of Truth, who is it going to be communicated to? What is it going to be communicated to? Your Brothers and Sisters and your world. So the means by which you come back into your Sanity, into your Whole-mindedness is through the extension of Truth as you're letting it be revealed to yourself, to your Brother, and to All of Creation—the world.

Again, you are not going to wake up by going on an individual journey Home to God, a journey that has nothing to do with your Brothers and Sisters. There is no private means of waking up through a private connection and devotion to God. Your devotion to God will only be genuine and real when it's a devotion to extending the acknowledgement of What Is True About Your Brother to your Brother publicly, not secretly in your mind, but in your words and your acts and your deeds, the conscious expression of affection to each other and your world.

Now...

RAJ READING: The ego's temple...

RAJ: The material body.

RAJ READING: ...thus becomes the temple of the Holy Spirit, where devotion to Him replaces devotion to the ego.

RAJ: Now remember again, the Holy Spirit is not some infinite entity side by side with God, separate from you, that you are subserviently reaching out to from your humble smallness. The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind. When devotion to your Right Mind replaces devotion to the ego, what had been seen as the ego's temple becomes the temple of the Holy Spirit. Your body becomes the illumination of, the manifestation of, the Visibility and Tangibility of your Divine Presence. And that Function of your body was set into place by God when He, for lack of better words, thought you. Because everything that God creates is experienceable, and therefore, to the Mind that formed it, it is Visible, Tangible and Experienceable.

Continuing.

[Editor's Note: Raj did not read the following sentence: In this sense the body DOES become a temple to God, because His Voice abides in it by directing the use to which it is put.]

RAJ READING: Healing...

RAJ: Whole-izing.

RAJ READING: Healing is the result of using the body SOLELY for communication.

RAJ: Well, what do you mean? Instead of what? Well, instead of defense. Instead of as a means of building yourself up. Instead of as a means of exercising authority and control over other parts of the Infinitude of your Being that's called Creation.

RAJ READING: Healing is the result of using the body SOLELY for communication. Since this is natural, it heals by making whole, which is ALSO natural. ALL mind is whole, and the belief that part of it is physical, or NOT mind, is a fragmented (or sick) interpretation.

RAJ: Interpretation. Your body is constituted of Ideas. They are not matter. And the Energy of those Ideas is Spirit, which means the Energy of any part of your body is Spirit. It therefore is not physical. But it does exist as an Idea, or as a collection of Ideas which are Real and Tangible to the Mind that formed them. And they are therefore Eternal, as Eternal as the Mind that formed them. To see it otherwise is to be indulging in an interpretation that is being overlaid upon Something That Is Real. And if you insist upon your interpretation, you block the experience of What It Really Is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Mind CANNOT be made physical, but it CAN be made manifest THROUGH the physical if it uses the body to go BEYOND itself.

RAJ: To go beyond the body.

RAJ READING: By reaching OUT, the mind extends itself. It does not STOP at the body, for if it does, it is blocked in its purpose.

RAJ: Now think about it for a moment. If you are feeling threatened, if you are feeling vulnerable, you're always feeling vulnerable as a body. And so you spontaneously withdraw your natural inclination to extend and you shield yourself. You let your body be the boundary that you protect, because you think that the boundary of the body is the boundary of you. When that happens, the mind does not reach out. It reinforces itself in a picture it has of what it believes it is, which is a body, and extension stops and your Natural Function is blocked.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: A mind which has been blocked has allowed itself to be vulnerable to attack because it has TURNED AGAINST ITSELF.

RAJ: How has it turned against itself? It has refused to perform its Function. It's refusing to be What It Is, which is communication.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The removal of the blocks, then, is the ONLY way to guarantee help and healing. Help and healing are the normal expressions of a mind which is working THROUGH the body, but not IN it.

RAJ: The fact is if you will, any of you will sit there for a moment, the fact is that you will realize that your body is an experience you're having in your mind. Not one of you has had the sensation or any approximation of an experience of your mind being in your body. You can create a picture of that in your mind, thinking that your mind is in your brain within your skull, but not one of you have had such an experience. Everything that is going on in your life is going on in your mind. It's going on in the Experience of Consciousness, of being conscious.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: If the mind believes the body is its GOAL, it WILL distort its perception of the body, and by blocking its own extension beyond it, will induce illness by fostering SEPARATION.

RAJ: And I would go further than that and say it's not just by fostering separation, but by confirming it to you in your mind. So when you get in the state of defense where you're unwilling to extend Love, when you're unwilling to embrace and include your Brother with the goal of, to the best of your ability, recognizing What Is Divinely True About Them in them, you're in a state of blocked Function. And when that happens, it's not comfortable. And that act of self-protection and self-defense reinforced by an armor that you pretend is there at the boundary of your body, you begin to experience a body that is chaotic. Why? Because you're standing opposed to its Function. Because you're standing opposed to your Function.

You turn the water on in your hose and then run over the end of it with your car and stop so that the passage of the water can't continue, and what happens? Why it begins to back up, and it begins to stretch, and obvious tension is observed until you can tell that it's almost at the point of blowing, exploding. When you block your Function, you create dissonance, tension, chaos, and suffering in the form of all... in the form of illness.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Perceiving the body as a SEPARATE entity cannot BUT foster illness, because it is not true.

RAJ: When you make commitment to what isn't true, you are engaging in embodying or attempting to embody what isn't true. And you cannot do that comfortably.

RAJ READING: A medium of communication...

RAJ: Your body or any medium of communication.

RAJ READING: ...will LOSE its usefulness if it is used for anything else.

RAJ: If you take a woofer from your speaker and try to use it as a dish to serve potato salad in, it will lose its function, won't it? Because it has only one function. That one function isn't a limitation. When that one function is what it's used for, it can reproduce any kind of music, any kind of sound, infinite expressions of harmony without limit.

RAJ READING: A medium of communication will LOSE its usefulness if it is used for anything else. To use a medium of communication as a medium of ATTACK is an obvious confusion in purpose.

RAJ: And in the attempt to use it that way, you will create dissonance for yourself. It fosters illness.

RAJ READING: To communicate is to join, and to attack is to separate. How can you do both simultaneously with the SAME THING, and NOT suffer?

RAJ: Can you imagine what Beethoven's Fifth Symphony sounds like when it tries to come through a mound of potato salad?

RAJ READING: How can you do both simultaneously with the SAME THING, and NOT suffer? Perception of the body can be unified only by ONE purpose.

RAJ: You see, it's part of the simplicity of Singularity. A newcomer says, "Oh, you mean the only thing there is for me to do is glorify God? That's the only thing there is for me to do? It sounds like a limitation." It would be like the speaker saying, "Oh, you mean the only thing I can do is give evidence to music? I can't be a bowl and hold potato salad? What a limitation!" But its function isn't to hold potato salad. It isn't to serve as a bowl of water for the family pet. And if those things are put in it, the speaker will lose its capacity to perform its function.

Yes. You have only one Purpose and that is to glorify God. And what did we say last week? Glorifying God means seeing the Truth About Your Brother so that your behavior, your acts, your words embody the acknowledgement of the fact that you're experiencing a Divine Event where your Brother is. And it's a Holy Experience, meaning that it fulfills... it fulfills your Reason for Being because it is your Function to see and recognize God, that which is Real, with a capital "R", in each and every thing. In that Singularity of Purpose, as I've said before, the Conscious Experience of Everything as the Kingdom of Heaven opens up to you. It's no longer hidden from view, covered over by the definitions you have overlaid upon the Kingdom of Heaven.

So it's not a limitation to only do what it's your Function to do. And it's not a limitation to use your body for only one Purpose. When you open up to letting the only Purpose you have and the only Purpose your body has be the only thing it's employed for, you will experience the Revelation of Reality. You will get it all! Not in fragmented parts, but unified. And in that Experience, you are part of that Unity.

Again.

RAJ READING: Perception of the body can be unified only by ONE purpose. This releases the mind from the temptation to see the body in many lights, and gives it over ENTIRELY to the One Light in which it can be really understood at all. To confuse a learning device with a curriculum GOAL is a fundamental confusion.

RAJ: Remember that I told you that any Aspect of Creation upon which you overlay a definition and you give preference to that definition causes What It Really Is to be obscured to you. And because it is not possible for you to be in conscious denial of What A Thing Divinely Is successfully, What It Is will pressure against your definition in order to break through it and reunite you with What It Really Is. And thus the definition that you are currently giving to Something That Is Real becomes a learning device. Whatever The Thing Really Is becomes a learning device because its intent is to get your attention, redirect it, clarify it, and reconnect you to some Aspect of your Wholeness that you are in a state of denying.

So:

RAJ READING: To confuse a learning device...

RAJ: Meaning the body.

RAJ READING: ...with a curriculum GOAL is a fundamental confusion.

RAJ: Your body and its defense is not your goal. Your body and its safety is not your goal, is not your purpose. Your body is a means of communicating beyond it to your Brothers and Sisters and your world an acknowledgement of What They Truly Are. It's the communication that is the goal, not the preservation of the body, and not the preservation of a self you think you are that is bound by the outlines of the body.

Again.

RAJ READING: To confuse a learning device with a curriculum GOAL is a fundamental confusion. Learning can hardly be arrested at its own aids with hope of understanding either the aids OR the learning's real purpose.

RAJ: Now the meaning of that might escape you.

RAJ READING: Learning can hardly be arrested...

RAJ: Halted.

RAJ READING: ...at...

RAJ: Or by.

RAJ READING: ...its...

RAJ: Learning.

RAJ READING: ...aids...

[Editor's Note: Raj replaced the words "its own aids" with "its learning aids."]

RAJ: As long as you are defining your body as different from What It Truly Is, your body becomes a learning tool, a learning aid.

Learning can hardly be stifled by the learning aid itself...

RAJ READING: ...with hope of understanding either the aids...

RAJ: What the aids are.

RAJ READING: ...OR the learning's real purpose.

RAJ: But when you are engaged in your daily life in protecting yourself against disease, the flu that there aren't enough shots for, the weather, your Brother, you are caught up with a preoccupation with that which is only a learning aid, the protection of your body. And it's only a learning aid because you have not remembered What It's For. When you remember What It's For, a Means of Communication through, you will stop trying to protect it and it will no longer be for you a learning aid. It will be the Means of Communication. The Communication of what? Of whatever Truth you are aware of about those things in your experience, so that your body becomes the Means through which the Acknowledgement of What A Thing Truly Is occurs.

RAJ READING: Learning can hardly be arrested at its own aids...

RAJ: By trying to protect those aids, or understand them, or make them what they're not.

RAJ READING: ...with...

RAJ: And I'm going to add the word "any." ...with any...

RAJ READING: ...hope of understanding either the aids OR the learning's real purpose.

RAJ: And the learning's real purpose has nothing to do with the body. It has to do with your making the shift from self-protection to the Extension of Love through the body. That's the learning. The learning is consummated when you actually love your Brother and your Sister in thought, word and deed.

RAJ READING: Learning must lead BEYOND the body to the re-establishment of the power of the mind in it. This can be accomplished ONLY if the mind extends to other minds, and does not ARREST itself in its extension.

RAJ: "Oh, well. Okay, so my body is supposed to be the Means of Extension. Well, I better be sure and take a shower today. And I better be sure and shave. And I better dress it well so that I make a good presentation while I am being the Extension of Love." Well, you're arrested at the aid. You're caught up with your attention focused on the means of communing, of communicating, and you're not engaged in communication. And I'll tell you something. When you're not caught up with (in preoccupation with) the aid, the Extension of Love that you actually engage in will cause you to be beautiful to whoever stands in receipt of it, whether you shaved or not.

RAJ READING: The arrest of the mind's extension...

RAJ: Listen to this.

RAJ READING: ...is the cause of ALL illness...

RAJ: Again.

RAJ READING: The arrest of the mind's extension is the cause of ALL illness because ONLY extension is the mind's function.

RAJ: Body-identification indulged in causes you to forget that you are Mind. And indeed, I keep reminding you that you are not a body with a mind in it. You are not even... you do not even have a mind which is in the body. You are Consciousness, not a body. I am encouraging you all to persistently remind yourselves that you are that Conscious Awareness of Being in which everything you are aware of is embraced. You are big. You are as Infinite as Creation is Infinite for you to be aware of.

If you were to get into a space vehicle and go to the end of the universe, where would you be? You would be nowhere. You would be the place, the Conscious Awareness, in which that part of the universe was being experienced. It isn't as though you would have gone somewhere in the universe, but as though you shifted your attention from one part of your Conscious Awareness to another part of it.

When you get up and go to work every morning or when you take a trip, you get in the car and your attention shifts from where you were to where you're going, always as a gradually changing awareness of where you are. Are you taking your mind from one place to another in a skull in a body in a car on a highway? No. You are Mind with its attention shifting. That's the fact. That is the actual experience. But if you are insistent upon a body-identification, that will escape you. And the Sanity that results from proper identification as Mind will also elude you.

Again.

RAJ READING: The arrest of the mind's extension is the cause of ALL illness because ONLY extension is the mind's function. The opposite of joy is depression. When your learning promotes depression INSTEAD of joy, you CANNOT be listening to God's joyous Teacher, and you MUST be learning amiss.

RAJ: Who is God's Joyous Teacher? The Holy Spirit. What is the Holy Spirit? Nothing more than your Right Mind. Your Right Mind is the Joyous Teacher that will uncover to you your Joy by breaking down the barrier that you have erected imaginatively that seems to cause the Majority Of You to be outside and different from you who's in this nice little tiny cocoon experiencing misery.

RAJ READING: To see a body as anything except a means of pure extension is to limit your mind and HURT YOURSELF.

RAJ: Not permanently, of course. But a... you know, as long as you are squelching your Divine Nature, which is an impossible thing to do, you will feel like the garden hose that's filling up with water that's blocked from coming out the end of the hose.

RAJ READING: Health is therefore nothing more than united purpose. If the body is brought under the purpose of the mind, the body becomes whole...

RAJ: Now did it say the body disappears because it's not real? The body vanishes because you'll experience it for the illusion it is and you won't be fooled by it anymore? No.

RAJ READING: If the body is brought under the purpose of the mind, the body becomes whole because the MIND'S purpose IS one.

RAJ: The opposite of Whole is fragmented.

RAJ READING: Attack can only be an ASSUMED purpose of the body, because APART from the mind the body HAS NO PURPOSE AT ALL.

RAJ: Does that mean the body doesn't exist? No. It just means that apart from the Mind, the body has no purpose. It has no self-existent, independent purpose. That which identifies God, called Creation, has as Its Purpose the Identification of God. But by itself it has no Purpose at all.

RAJ READING: You are NOT limited by the body,...

RAJ: Why? Because you're not in it; it's in you. As a material form? No. As a Conscious Experience of Tangibility and Experience-ability and Visibility. And I've said before, when you feel your body, it's Mind feeling the Tangibility of the Idea in It, in the Mind that is experiencing it. And the Substance is Spirit. It is not matter. And it has Substance because every single Thought in the Mind of God is substantial.

RAJ READING: You are NOT limited by the body, and thought CANNOT be made flesh. Yet mind can be manifested through the body if it goes beyond it, and DOES NOT...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...INTERPRET IT AS LIMITATION.

RAJ: What isn't real about your bodies is the interpretation you apply to it, the definition you've given to it that didn't arise out of a clear Experience of What It Divinely Is, and therefore obscures to you What It Divinely Is. These are very important points because of All of Creation must be brought back under the jurisdiction of God as a recognition of God Manifest if you are going to wake up.

And as I've said before, if you think your Brother is just a physical organism, just an ego, just what the current definition of your Brother is, you will not see your Brother as the means of coming Home. And you will walk by your Brother or Sister every day and not avail yourself of the means of coming Home because you're looking for another avenue. And that is exactly the way the ego distracts you from Awakening.

And the misinterpretation of what the Course is saying about the body that allows it to remain conceived as an illusion and something that is nonexistent, will not allow you to bring it back under the jurisdiction of God in your mind so that you provide the environment in which the Revelation of Truth can occur and you can wake up. And so I'm spending time here making very clear what is being said, because it is not my wish and it's not the intent of the Course to in any way delay your Homecoming by means of your misunderstanding what the Course is saying.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You are NOT limited by the body, and thought CANNOT be made flesh. Yet mind can be manifested through the body if it goes beyond it, and DOES NOT INTERPRET IT AS LIMITATION. Whenever you see another as limited TO or BY the body, you are imposing this limit ON YOURSELF.

RAJ: If you knew better about yourself, you wouldn't make that presumption about your Brother, or Sister.

So...

RAJ READING: Whenever you see another as limited TO or BY the body,...

RAJ: As though he or she was a body with a mind in it.

RAJ READING: ...you are imposing this limit ON YOURSELF. Are you willing to ACCEPT this, when your whole purpose for learning should be to ESCAPE from limitations? To conceive of the body as a means of attack of any kind, and to entertain even the possibility that joy could POSSIBLY result, is a clear-cut indication of a poor learner.

RAJ: Well, shall we talk about what poor learners you are? Shall you get arrested in your learning by becoming focused on that? Or shall you ask, regardless of whether you're a poor learner, what teacher you're listening to and whether that's the teacher you want to listen to? Because the ego as a teacher gives you an impossible learning task which inevitably is going to make you look like a poor learner. Isn't it? Because the more you try to accomplish an impossible task, the more obvious to you it will become that you're failing. Why? Because you're really failing? No. Because the teacher you listened to has told you to do something you can't do. And so you could say you're succeeding as What You Truly Are, because as What You Truly Are, you can't accomplish what's impossible.

So, it doesn't matter whether you're a poor learner. What matters is that you ask, "Who's the teacher I'm listening to?" Who's the teacher you want to listen to? Now that you know that the Holy Spirit is nothing but your Right Mind, that it's the Rest Of You that you've blocked off in preference to the definition you've given of yourself, you can willingly change teachers, because it's obvious to you that for you to reunite with your Teacher, the Holy Spirit, means you are reuniting with your Self in your Totality, in your Wholeness. And you can all recognize logically that that is a constructive and good thing to engage in. One that will not take your dignity away, but will reestablish it.

RAJ READING: To conceive of the body as a means of attack of any kind, and to entertain even the possibility that joy could POSSIBLY result, is a clear-cut indication of a poor learner. He has accepted a learning goal in obvious contradiction to the unified purpose of the curriculum, and is interfering with his ability to accept its purpose as his OWN.

RAJ: No curriculum. The curriculum in this book? No. The book simply helps you provide the conditions under which the Revelation of Truth can occur. The Revelation of Truth that occurs will be the undoing of the steps away from Home that you took. The curriculum is constituted of the specific undoing of the steps you took away from Home. It's the unlearning of what you chose to learn that was at odds with the Truth.

So a poor learner...

RAJ READING: ...has accepted a learning goal in obvious contradiction to the unified purpose of the curriculum,...

RAJ: Your path back Home.

RAJ READING: ...and is interfering with his ability to accept its purpose as his OWN.

RAJ: You see, the purpose of this curriculum, which is the undoing of the steps you took away from Home, is your purpose. Retracing those steps is your purpose. Not a purpose assigned to you by anyone else. It's your purpose to be Whole. It's your purpose not to be insane. It's your purpose not to be fragmented and suffering. It is your purpose to be in Joy, in Peace, Whole and Healthy.

RAJ READING: Joy is unified purpose, and unified purpose is ONLY God's. When yours is unified, it IS His.

RAJ: When you stop claiming the right to have a little private place in which you are your own little private self with power to do exactly what you choose to do without consideration for anything else, you are not in a position to experience What You Truly Are. And you are not in a position to experience Joy because you don't have any Joy all by yourself. If there is Joy in you as an inherent part of your Being, it's because Joy is in God and God is All There Is Of You. God is All There Is To You. God is the Wholeness of You.

RAJ READING: Joy is unified purpose, and unified purpose is ONLY God's. When yours is unified, it IS His.

RAJ: But you know what? When your Joy is experienced as His, when His Joy is experienced as yours, the Awakened Experience of Creation is suddenly available to you. And you get the Whole of What You Are by neglecting to ever again claim a right to a private perspective on it all. And so, it is no loss. The only loss there is, is that of a tiny, distorted perspective of everything that caused you grief and suffering—unnecessary grief and suffering.

We will stop here for tonight. But I want you to keep in mind these points. You are not a body. You are Conscious Awareness in which the Experience of All Creation Is, including body. The function of this body that is going on within the Conscious Awareness That You Are is communication of what? Of the Truth you become aware of because you care enough about your Brother or Sister to want to know What God's Truth Is About Them. And when you don't get arrested by the body, by the learning aid, when you don't become preoccupied with it, but simply let it serve its function of your extending the Acknowledgement of Truth, you engage in the one act of glorifying God that will bring you back into your Right Mind. That's the lesson for tonight.

I love you all. And it is a source of Joy that you are hearing/comprehending what I'm saying. Don't sit there and say, "Well, I'm not really getting it." Don't get hung up on a you that's not really getting it or partly getting it. I am telling you that you are hearing and comprehending what I'm saying. And whether you're doing it well or not, gracefully or not, is irrelevant.

Okay. I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

As we go through the book, there's basically only one thing we're talking about, and that is making a shift of identification from body to Mind. I have pointed out from time to time that body, world, universe, all of the things that you are aware of, you are aware of with and in your Mind. It is your Mind which is conscious of it all, not your body. It is your Mind which is conscious of your body and your home and your world. But you all identify with the body.

Mind is ever-present, isn't it? As long as you are conscious it's present. But you give it little attention. You say, "I use my mind" in the same way that you would say, "I use my hands," as though it's one of many possessions, instead of the Ground of your Being, the fundamental of your Conscious Experience Of Being.

Body and Mind have both been present in your experience, but you have weighted your attention on the side of your body. There's a good reason. It's really a bad reason. But there's a reason you do this, and that is that when you got your bill of divorcement from the Father, when you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way," and you abandoned the Father's Perspective consciously and conscientiously by means of developing your own meanings for everything in your experience, you, as I've said before, lost your Conscious Experience of Oneness with everything. You said, "I'd rather see it myself," and you drew a boundary around yourself and suddenly All The Rest Of What You Infinitely Were became something different from you.

Well, now you look and the only thing that's you is the specific identification of you, which has always been but it was part of the Infinitude Of You, but now it's all there is of you. And so you had to begin to redefine yourself. And your definition of yourself was based on, built around, this one little part of the Infinitude Of You that you call your body. So you equate yourself with the body. And if this equation is carried to its logical conclusion, you believe that when the body ceases to be alive, you cease to be alive. And so, many of you, not that many of you here, but many of you in the world believe that "from birth to death" is all there is to you. That's how definite and binding your identification with body has become.

Now, I'm reminding you that this other thing that's in your experience called your Mind isn't just another thing. It is an unbounded and therefore Infinite Presence of Mind, Presence of Conscious Awareness, in which body, world and universe is going on. And I keep pointing you in the direction of going through your day being more aware of yourself as Mind, reminding yourself that you are the Consciousness in which all Conscious Experience is occurring, so that you might have the opportunity of having that awareness trigger for you what you would call a reinterpretation of the daily events of your lives. Because depending upon what you are identifying yourself with, your experience of everything will be different. And you all deserve a different experience than the experience of bondage you're presently in.

Last week we spoke... last time we were together we spoke extensively about the body being a Means of Communication. It doesn't exist on its own, for itself. It exists as a vehicle for the Extension of Communication, the Extension of Meaning, the Extension of Value, with a capital "V". At the bottom line, it is the means of your engaging in acknowledging What Is True about your Brother, your Sister and everything that you see. It is the means you have for recognizing God in each and every thing. That is its Function. But when you get caught up in preoccupation with the body, you lose its Function, you become distracted from extending the Acknowledgement of What Is Real in each and every thing, and you have moved into an attitude of self-defense. Because as long as you have no contact with the Infiniteness Of You, you can only be in touch with the limits of you, the finiteness of you, and consequently your utter vulnerability to everything. So when you are identifying yourself with your body, you are engaged in defense.

But you say, "I don't feel like I am engaged in defense." But the simple fact is that when you are preoccupied with yourself as a body, and making it in the world as a body, and earning respect as a body, and learning how to be in charge through force that can be brought to bear by your body, you are not engaged in connection. You are not engaged in extension. You're not engaged in the act of recognizing and acknowledging everything That Is Real in everything that you're looking at. You're preoccupied with self. If you're not engaged in inclusion of it all, but are engaged in being separate from it all, you are in a state of defendedness. It is that simple.

Now let's go to the book. We ended with the statement:

RAJ READING: Joy is unified purpose, and unified purpose is ONLY God's. When yours is unified, it IS His.

RAJ: This means that you will never have, on your own, unified purpose. There's only one thing called Unified Purpose, and that is God Being. And if your purpose is unified, it means there is nothing present blocking or interfering with God's Purpose. You are being a transparency for God.

So...

RAJ READING: When yours is unified, it IS His. Interfere with His purpose, and you NEED salvation.

RAJ: Well, that's what's called the human condition. You have interfered with His Purpose by having a purpose of your own, by having a purpose of wanting to be able to determine what everything is, to determine how you're going to deal with it, to determine how you're going to defend yourself, to determine how others better behave, and on and on.

When you chose to be an authorizer, you chose to ignore the capital "A" Author. And you have interfered in His Authority. Now the fact is you can't interfere with God's Authority. But when you try to insert an authority of your own between you and God's Authority, you interfere absolutely with your capacity to experience the Father's Authorship. You interfere absolutely with your ability to experience the Source of your Being, and therefore the Reality of You. And it says here:

RAJ READING: ...you NEED salvation. You have condemned yourself, but condemnation is NOT of God. Therefore, it is not true. No more are any of the RESULTS of your condemnation.

RAJ: What are the results of your condemnation? Sin, sickness and death. They're not true. They're simply not true.

RAJ READING: When you see a brother as a body, you are condemning him BECAUSE you have condemned yourself.

RAJ: In other words, you are seeing him in no larger a way than you are allowing yourself to see yourself. And if you are allowing yourself to see yourself in a larger way, you will automatically include your Brother in that larger view.

RAJ READING: When you see a brother as a body, you are condemning him BECAUSE you have condemned yourself. Yet if all condemnation is unreal, and it MUST be unreal since it is a form of attack, then it can HAVE no results.

RAJ: But you know what? [laughing] If you're identifying yourself as a body and someone else is identifying themselves as a body, and the two of you look at each other and see the other as a body, and you all agree to this illusion, you can have a pretty good knockdown, drag-out, artificial fight. I say "artificial" because none of it is real. It's a fantasy that the two of you are playing out with each other. But it isn't real. And the consequences... the apparent consequences of it cannot be real. And as a result, when one of you breaks the agreement to play this game of fantasy with each other and one of you remembers the Truth, instantaneous healing of the apparent results can occur. Why instantaneous? Because there never was an actual effect that has to be undone. And this is important to understand because it means that no matter what you might be suffering from at this moment, you can experience instantaneous relief without going through some process of healing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Do not allow yourselves to suffer from the results of what is not true. Free your minds from the belief that this is POSSIBLE. In its complete impossibility, and your full awareness OF its complete impossibility, lie your only hope for release.

RAJ: Remember that in order to break the sense that something impossible is possible, you have to shift from body-identification to Mind-identification, shifting your attention from the definition of yourself as a body to your Conscious Experience of Being as the definition of you, and abiding there and observing everything from there.

Again.

RAJ READING: In its complete impossibility, and your full awareness OF its complete impossibility, lie your only hope for release. But what other hope would you want? Freedom from illusions lies only in not BELIEVING them. There IS no attack,...

RAJ: As an actuality.

RAJ READING: ...but there IS unlimited communication,...

RAJ: But you won't shift into unlimited communication as long as you are identifying yourself as a body.

RAJ READING: There IS no attack, but there IS unlimited communication, and therefore unlimited power and wholeness.

RAJ: Well, Wholeness is a State of Invulnerability. It's a State of Being What God Is Being right there where you are, with the awareness that it is God Being What You Are right there, with God's Perspective. There is no vulnerability in that Perspective.

RAJ READING: The power of wholeness is...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...extension.

RAJ: Using the body as a Means of Communication. Communication of what? Extension of what? The Acknowledgement of What Is True in what you are seeing. And how do you see What Is True there? By abandoning your belief about what is there and asking within of the Father, "What are You being there? What is the Divine Meaning of what I'm looking at?"

RAJ READING: The power of wholeness is extension. Do not arrest your thought in this world, and you will open your mind to creation in God.

RAJ: Extension of the Acknowledgement of What Is Real, which is another way of describing Love. It's something that happens through the body. If on the way you become preoccupied with the body, the extension will be arrested. Your attention on that which you are seeing What Is Real in will be arrested, will be interrupted, because there's an attention being given to the body.

RAJ READING: Do not arrest your thought in this world,...

RAJ: Or in this body.

RAJ READING: ...and...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...you will open your mind to creation in God.

RAJ: You will open up your mind to the experience of the extension of the Acknowledgement of What Is Real and the Joy of the experience of making that extension. And in that experience, you will find God revealed as your Conscious Experience Of Being. And because you will be introducing nothing extraneous to it, you will find yourself being the Movement of Creation. Let me put it this way. You will find yourself being with the Movement of Creation. And in being with it without introducing anything extraneous to it, it will be All There Is of you.

It is in this way, and this way only, that you become co-creators with God. It's not an independent act you do along with God. It's the absence of independence that allows you to be absolutely at One with God, and therefore experiencing nothing but What God Is Being. In a way, this is what Paul is doing right now. So don't think that in doing it you will suddenly be swept into some nebulous indescribable experience. What will happen will be that everything you engage in will be infinitely meaningful. And so here and now is the place to start.

RAJ READING: Do not arrest your thought in this world, and you will open your mind to creation in God.

RAJ: You will experience your body as What It Is, not as what you have come to believe it to be. And you will experience your world as What It Is, the Kingdom of Heaven, and not what you have come to believe it to be.

The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Body as Means or End

Attitudes toward the body are attitudes toward ATTACK.

RAJ: Well, let me put it this way. Because I know some of you are wondering what in the "you know what" that means?

RAJ READING: Attitudes toward the body are attitudes toward ATTACK.

RAJ: If you have an attitude toward the body, your attention has been arrested. You're already preoccupied with something other than making the extension through Communication of the Acknowledgement of God in whatever it is you're looking at, the Acknowledgment of the Real capital "M" Meaning of the thing that you're looking at. If you have an attitude toward the body, your attention has already been arrested. And therefore, you are in a defense-mode, which is the flip side of saying attack-mode. When you're in defense-mode, you're defended against something.

And just because you're preoccupied with the defense doesn't mean that the opponent isn't there as an integral part of your mindset, because if the opponent weren't there you wouldn't be thinking about defense. "Oh, but I'm not thinking about attacking anybody." [small laugh] It doesn't matter. If you are busy calculating your defense, being preoccupied with your steps of defense, etc., even though you're thinking of no one in particular, everyone in general is the reason that you're engaged in preoccupation with defense.

Again.

RAJ READING: Attitudes toward the body are attitudes toward ATTACK. The ego's definitions of EVERYTHING are childish, and always based on what it believes a thing is FOR.

RAJ: And of course when you've gotten your bill of divorcement and said you'd rather see things your way, you have decided what a thing is for, you have adopted it, and you believe your definition.

RAJ READING: The ego's definitions of EVERYTHING are childish, and always based on what it believes a thing is FOR.

RAJ: Again, not what it believes a thing is. What a thing is for.

RAJ READING: This is because it is incapable of true generalizations, and equates what it sees with the function IT ascribes to it. It does NOT equate it with what it IS.

RAJ: What your body is, is a Means of Communication. What Creation, your world, is, is the Kingdom of Heaven, not a physical world and universe that you have defined. But, of course, the ego has as its function not to see what it is, because the predicate of it all was, "Father, I'd rather see it my way, not the way it is."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: To the ego, the body is to ATTACK with. Equating YOU with the body, it teaches that YOU are to attack with because this is what it believes. The body, then, is not the source of its own health. The body's condition lies solely in your interpretation of its function.

RAJ: Now that's not true. But as long as you are in that mindset, that will be your experience. You see, when you're not in that mindset, you could say that the body is the source of its own health. Because the body in itself is neutral, is benign, it has no function relative to itself. It only has function relative to the Communication of Love—Love being the recognition or acknowledgement of That Which Is Real in each and every thing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The reason why definitions in terms of function are inferior is that they may well be inaccurate.

RAJ: And, of course, any definition that has been applied to something that is different from What The Father Is Being there is an inaccurate definition.

RAJ READING: Functions are part of being since they arise from it, but the relationship is not reciprocal. The whole DOES define the part, but the part does NOT define the whole.

RAJ: Which is another way of saying, "You are not God, but God is All There Is of you."

RAJ READING: This is as true of knowledge as it is of perception.

RAJ: Now listen to this.

RAJ READING: The reason to KNOW in part is to know ENTIRELY is because of the fundamental DIFFERENCE between knowledge and perception.

RAJ: And you could look at it this way. You can grasp the idea that "to know in part is to know wholly" is illustrated in a hologram. Because if you cut a small part of a hologram away, you'll find that the whole picture that was in the entire hologram is present in the part.

So...

RAJ READING: ...to KNOW...

RAJ: And I would use a capital "K" there.

RAJ READING: ...to KNOW in part is to know ENTIRELY...

RAJ: And...

RAJ READING: The reason to KNOW in part is to know ENTIRELY is because of the fundamental DIFFERENCE between knowledge and perception. In perception the whole is built up of parts, which CAN separate and reassemble in different constellations. Knowledge...

RAJ: Or capital "K" Knowing.

RAJ READING: ...never changes, so ITS constellation is permanent.

RAJ: And I would add: Its constellation leaves nothing outside of it. It is all-inclusive. It is Whole.

RAJ READING: The only areas in which part-whole relationships have ANY meaning are those in which change is possible. There IS no difference between the whole and the part where change is impossible.

RAJ: The only place where change is apparently possible is from the frame of mind in which body-identification predominates. And the only place where change is impossible is in the frame of reference where it is Mind, the Conscious Experience Of Being, that identifies you or is your Identity. If you want variableness, stay with body-identification. If you want, let's say, permanent harmony, if you want forever stable experiences of Being, identify with and as Mind. It doesn't mean stability in which the Movement of Creation doesn't occur. It isn't God frozen. But it's God, and nothing but God, in constant Movement, unchanging in Nature, Character, Intent or Actuality. The Movement of Creation is unchangeably What It Is.

RAJ READING: Knowledge never changes, so ITS constellation is permanent.

RAJ: Continuing from where we left off.

RAJ READING: The body exists in a world which SEEMS to contain two voices which are fighting for its possession.

RAJ: "Seems" is the key word.

RAJ READING: In this perceived constellation, the body is regarded as capable of shifting its control from one to the other, making the concept of both health AND sickness possible.

RAJ: Now when it says here that "the body is regarded as capable of shifting its control from one to the other," it means the same thing as you regard yourself as capable of shifting your attention from one to the other, from one voice to the other, "making the concept of both health and sickness possible." There's where you get into change. That's where you get into fluctuation. Because you think you actually have a choice to think for yourself or yield to God.

And when the going gets rough, you yield to God. And when things straighten up, you think for yourself again. And when you think for yourself again, you find things getting difficult and you arrive at a point where you have to decide to yield to God. And you know what I'm telling you? I'm telling you that this sense of self that thinks it can shift its attention from one to the other doesn't really exist, except in your imagination. You haven't stopped being the Christ. You haven't stopped being the Evidence of God.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego makes a fundamental confusion between means and ends, as it always does. Regarding the body as an end, the ego has no REAL use for it because it is NOT an end. You must have noticed an outstanding characteristic of every end that the ego has accepted as its own. When you have achieved it, IT HAS NOT SATISFIED YOU. This is why the ego is forced to shift from one end to another without ceasing, so that YOU will continue to hope that it can yet offer you something.

RAJ: This is why waking up can feel like failure. Because it means abandoning the quest for success as an independent agent. And it's very humiliating to that which tried to build itself up out of nothing into something, which was forever an impossibility. Intelligence, dawning upon the mind, realizes this and doesn't bother to feel guilty and get sidetracked, but immediately chooses for Sanity and lets go of the attempt to be something on its own.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It has been particularly difficult to overcome the ego's belief in the body as an end because this is synonymous with the belief in ATTACK as an end. The ego has a real INVESTMENT in sickness. If you are sick, how can you OBJECT to the ego's firm belief that you are NOT invulnerable?

RAJ: You see? Being sick isn't real. It's something you have a right to be free of. And it's something you can be free of instantaneously because it isn't real. But the ego needs it to be real, so that it can convince you that you are vulnerable, and therefore need to defend yourself. And once you take the bait, you're caught on a merry-go-round that goes nowhere, but exhausts you.

Again.

RAJ READING: The ego has a real INVESTMENT in sickness. If you are sick, how can you OBJECT to the ego's firm belief that you are NOT invulnerable? This is a particularly appealing argument from the ego's point of view because it obscures the obvious ATTACK which underlies the sickness.

RAJ: What's the underlying attack? The belief that you're a body. The belief that you're independent. The belief that you are an orphan and have no source, and that you are what you're experiencing yourself as at the moment, which is a body. The attack is body-identification.

RAJ READING: If you accepted THIS, and also decided AGAINST attack, you could not give this false witness to the ego's stand.

It is hard to perceive sickness AS a false witness because you do not realize that it IS entirely out of keeping with what you want. This witness, then, APPEARS to be innocent and trustworthy because you have not seriously cross-examined him.

RAJ: Cross-examined sickness.

RAJ READING: If you did, you would not consider sickness such a strong witness on behalf of the ego's views. A more honest statement would be as follows:

Those who WANT the ego...

RAJ: In other words, those who want to be authorizers, those who want the thrill, the hit, of creating meaning out of nothing and making it become truly something.

RAJ READING: ...are predisposed to defend it. Therefore, their choice of witnesses should be suspect from the beginning. The ego does not call upon witnesses who would disagree with its case, NOR DOES THE HOLY Spirit. We have said that judgment IS the function of the Holy Spirit, and one which He is perfectly equipped to fulfill. The ego, as a judge, gives anything BUT an impartial judgment. When the ego calls on a witness, it has ALREADY made the witness an ally.

RAJ: I'm going to back up.

RAJ READING: The ego does not call upon witnesses who would disagree with its case,...

RAJ: Now when you are confronted by someone who is identifying himself or herself as a body and is engaged in defense, being with you as though you are an opponent whether you're asserting your opposition at the moment or not, you will find that they will not address What's True In You. But they will address any little ego beliefs which you treasure. And, of course, these ego beliefs will not be true. And because they are beliefs that you as an ego—one identifying with a body—treasure they will call it into question. They will demean it. They will insult it. Why? So as to call out from you an ego witness to the one calling it forth.

You may be doing quite well in being clear about the Truth. You may be doing quite well in staying in your Peace. You may be doing quite well in staying with the Holy Spirit and letting the Holy Spirit reveal to you His Perspective, which at the bottom line is your True Perspective.

An ego in defense approaching you, will not want to call forth witnesses for your Clarity. They will... the ego will call forth ego dynamics in you that are not yet put to rest; ego beliefs that you still intend to defend because you treasure them. This is very important to understand, because when this happens, it's an invitation for you to abandon the Holy Spirit or your Right Mind. It's an invitation for you to crawl back into the crab barrel and react from the old habit of personal self-protection, and the old habit of somehow finding a way to be equal to or better than the one challenging you, so that you can once again attempt to have the satisfaction of truly being something on your own. The ego of another will never seek in you a witness to that which is in balance in you. And so you must be alert when you find yourself losing your balance and becoming reactive and willingly engaging in defense, because the ego of another is making an ally of that which isn't even real in you and that which you really do not wish to reengage. But that is the way it happens.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: It is still true that the body has no function of itself because it is NOT an end.

RAJ: You know what? It's a reflection. It's a reflection of the Movement of God. It's like the leaves on the trees moving as the reflection of the movement of the wind.

RAJ READING: ...the body has no function of itself because it is NOT an end. The ego, however, establishes it AS an end because, as such, it will lose its TRUE function.

RAJ: Its True Function of what? Being a Means of Communication. It causes your attention to become arrested and preoccupied with the body.

RAJ READING: The ego, however, establishes it AS an end because, as such, it will lose its TRUE function.

RAJ: And if it loses its True Function, you lose your Real or True Conscious Awareness of Who And What You Are. And so it's very important to this little impostor, this state of self-defense, defending the existence of something which doesn't exist.

RAJ READING: This is the purpose of everything the ego does. Its sole aim is to lose sight of the function of EVERYTHING. A sick body does not make any SENSE. It COULD not make sense because sickness is not what the body is FOR. Sickness is meaningful only if the two basic premises on which the ego's interpretation of the body rests are true. Specifically, these are that the body is for attack, and...

RAJ: Two.

RAJ READING: ... that you ARE a body. Without these premises, sickness is completely inconceivable.

RAJ: And if it's inconceivable, it's impossible to experience. If you are going to continue to try to maintain this divorce from your Source, you are going to be faced with these two premises and these two premises only. That the body is for attack. And that you are a body.

So as you proceed in this coming week, once again, have some fun exploring the experience of identifying yourself as Mind, the Conscious Awareness in which every single experience you will have this week will be going on. Which means that every single experience you have this week will be a mental experience, not an independently existing experience of a physical world.

You see, considering the body as an end rather than a means, means you're arrested at the Movement of the Acknowledgement of God, the Acknowledgement of What Is Real in everything you're seeing. That Movement has become arrested at the point of its expression because you've become preoccupied with yourself as a body.

So this week practice not letting your attention become arrested at the body. But let your attention persist in fulfilling the intent to recognize God in everything you see, to extend or give acknowledgement to God in everything you see.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Sickness is a way of demonstrating that YOU CAN BE HURT. It is a witness to your frailty, your vulnerability, and your extreme need to depend on EXTERNAL guidance.

RAJ: Well, external. External to what? External to the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, which is, for the lack of better words, right in the middle of you, the central core, actually the center and circumference of your Being, which is not different from God and is therefore Infinite.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego uses this...

RAJ: The need to depend on external guidance.

RAJ READING: ...as its best argument for your need for ITS guidance. It dictates endless prescriptions for AVOIDING catastrophic outcomes.

RAJ: And...

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit, perfectly aware of the same data, does not bother to analyze them at all. If the data are meaningless, there is no point in considering them.

RAJ: How many of you fuss over the possibility, how many of you fuss over the nature of the ego that means that you'd better be alert, constantly second-guessing what the ego might do next, taking in, classifying, categorizing ego data, instead of saying, "Father, what's the Truth? What's really going on here? And I don't mean what's really going on here with all of these ego ploys that are going on all around me, but what is the Truth of Reality right here? I'm willing to consider the possibility that all of these ego ploys and dynamics that are parading themselves in front of me most vocally and forcefully, I'm willing to consider the possibility that they are not actual, that they are not real, and therefore don't require my attention. And I want to know, Father, what is really going on here? What is the Movement of Creation that is going on here and being the nonexistence of this ego folderol?"

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The function of truth is to collect data which are TRUE. There is no point in trying to make sense out of meaningless data. ANY way you handle them results in nothing. The more complicated the results become, the harder it may be to recognize their nothingness, but it is not necessary to examine ALL possible outcomes to which premises give rise to judge them truly.

RAJ: You can learn to recognize ego ploys. And knowing, as you do, that the ego is a liar and the father of it, meaning the father of the lie, you will realize that there truly is no useful reason to examine the lies, to understand the lies, to find out the motivation for the lies, and so on.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: A learning device is NOT a teacher. IT cannot tell you how YOU feel. YOU do not know how you feel because you have ACCEPTED the ego's confusion, and YOU think that a learning device CAN tell you how you feel.

RAJ: Well, what happened here? Where did this learning device come up? Well, we're talking about the body, and as long as you think you are body and that it is an end rather a means, What It Truly Is escapes your notice. And therefore, because there is a call for correction so that you might experience What It Truly Is and not lose out on the fulfillment of it, it becomes a learning device for you. Whatever of What Is Real you have obscured from your sight becomes a learning device. It becomes the focal point for correction of perception.

The body is not a teacher. A learning device, meaning the body, is not a teacher. No learning device is a teacher. But it is the means by which the correction of misperception can occur. You know what? It doesn't tell you What The Truth Is, but it makes you want to know What The Truth Is, so that you will open up your mind to the Father, or to the Holy Spirit, your Right Mind, to reveal to you What The Truth Is. And then What That Thing Truly Is no longer needs to be a learning device for you because you've come back into your Right Mind.

Now...

RAJ READING: A learning device is NOT a teacher.

RAJ: And specifically we're here talking about the body.

RAJ READING: IT cannot tell you how YOU feel.

RAJ: And yet you get up in the morning, don't you, and you check your body to see how you feel. Sometimes you do that to see if maybe you have a justifiable reason for not going into work.

So...

RAJ READING: A learning device is NOT a teacher. IT cannot tell you how YOU feel. YOU do not know how you feel because you have ACCEPTED the ego's confusion, and YOU think that a learning device CAN tell you how you feel. Sickness is merely another example of your insistence on asking the guidance of a teacher WHO DOES NOT KNOW THE ANSWER. The ego is INCAPABLE of knowing how you feel. When we said that the ego does not know ANYTHING, we said the one thing about the ego that IS wholly true.

RAJ: The only thing about the ego that is wholly true is that it is incapable... is that it does not know anything.

RAJ READING: But there IS a corollary; if knowledge is being and the ego has no knowledge, then the ego has no BEING.

RAJ: It's an impostor. A figment of the imagination. But the problem is that that figment of the imagination you believe is real. And so, everyday you identify yourself as a body. And everyday you live in a state of defense. That's your habit.

It's a long standing habit which we are in the process of breaking. And we're in the process of breaking it by means of your being confronted over and over again with the Truth that you are Conscious Awareness, not the body. That the only thing confronting you is the Kingdom of Heaven, not a physical universe that came from a big bang. That you are the Christ right now, not the mortal sinner you think you are. That you are in a forever State of Invincibility, and not vulnerable. That the Substance of everything you see is Spirit, not matter. And that every thing you see is an Idea, not a physical form, experienced by Mind. And you are that Mind. That Mind is you. That everything going on is purely mental.

And this keeps being presented to you as a means of arousing your curiosity beyond the definitions you have accepted, so that you might dare to let yourself be beyond the definitions of everything that you have accepted, beyond the capacities that you somewhere along the line decided have boundaries. You are being invited to let yourself into the fuller Conscious Experience of Being that is not only your Birthright to be experiencing, it's your capacity at the present moment to be experiencing. It's just that you're not pushing the envelope.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You might well ask how the voice of something which does not exist can be so insistent. Have you ever seriously considered the distorting power of something you WANT even if it is NOT true? You have had many instances of how what you want can distort what you see and hear.

RAJ: If you want to see an acquaintance or a friend as mean-spirited, as selfish, or as overgenerous, or unreasonably kind, you will miss what that one is actually being, because you will interpret everything that one does according to the definition you hold. And if you are holding the definition, you want the definition.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: No-one can doubt the ego's skill in building up false cases. Nor can anyone doubt your willingness to listen until YOU will not to tolerate anything EXCEPT truth. When YOU lay the ego aside, it will be gone. The Holy Spirit's Voice is as loud as your willingness to listen.

RAJ: And I promise you that as long as you are insisting upon harboring in your mind a definition of your Brother or Sister that is not true, your willingness to listen for What Is True is absent. And the Holy Spirit's Voice will not be loud at all to you.

Listen to this.

RAJ READING: It cannot be louder without violating your will,...

RAJ: Such respect. It's a little bit more than respect. It's the fact that you walked away from the Father, you divorced your Source on purpose, and the only way you can return to your Sanity is for your own reasons and because you have your own commitment and you are willing to take responsibility for every step you take on the way Home, so that there will be no confusion in your Mind. Your arrival at Home will be, and can only be, the result of your own Singularity of Purpose.

RAJ READING: Joy...

RAJ: We started out today.

RAJ READING: ...is unified purpose, and unified purpose is ONLY God's. When yours is unified, it IS His.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit's Voice is as loud as your willingness to listen. It cannot be louder without violating your will, which the Holy Spirit seeks to free, but NEVER to command.

The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...teaches you to use your body ONLY to reach your brothers,...

RAJ: To reach your Brothers, not attack your Brothers.

RAJ READING: The Holy Spirit teaches you to use your body ONLY to reach your brothers, so He can teach His message...

[Editor's Note: Raj said "so you can teach" instead of "so He can teach."]

RAJ: The Holy Spirit's message.

RAJ READING: ...THROUGH you. This will heal them and THEREFORE heal YOU.

RAJ: Because you get to keep what you give.

RAJ READING: Everything used in accordance with its function as the Holy Spirit sees it...

RAJ: And this includes the body.

RAJ READING: ...CANNOT be sick.

RAJ: You hear that?

RAJ READING: Everything used in accordance with its function as the Holy Spirit sees it CANNOT be sick. Everything used otherwise IS.

RAJ: If you identify with the body, you will see the body as an end, instead of a means to an end, and sickness, sin and death will be your experience. If you see it as a means to an end, your body will be incapable, and you therefore will not have the experience, of sickness, sin and death.

RAJ READING: Do not allow the body to be a mirror of a split mind. Do not let it be an image of your own perception of littleness.

RAJ: Why? Because it's not real? No. Because it is Real as a Means of Communication. What? To glorify God.

RAJ READING: Do not let it...

RAJ: The body.

RAJ READING: ...reflect your will to attack. Health is the natural state of anything whose interpretation is left to the Holy Spirit...

RAJ: Your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...Who perceives no attack on anything. Health is the result of relinquishing ALL attempts to use the body lovelessly.

RAJ: And let me be very clear about something. When the word “health” is used here, it means identifiable health. It means the disappearance of sickness. It means the disappearance of blemish, the disappearance of damage, the obvious, I’m going to say, recordable evidence of regeneration.

RAJ READING: Health is the beginning of the proper perspective on life under the guidance of the one...

RAJ: Capital “T”.

RAJ READING: ...Teacher Who knows what life IS, being the Voice for Life Itself.

RAJ: That Voice is the Voice for Truth, the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, and that which is What You Are—Mind, not body—Mind in which the Experience of Creation is going on, in which everything that is experienced is recognized as an Idea set in place by the Will of the Father which is the Infinitude of your Being.

So remember again this week, the simple concept is you want to make a shift from body-identification to Mind-identification. Not a tiny pea-brained mind. Even that is a concept. “Oh, your mind is in your brain, and your brain is in the skull, and it only weighs a certain number of pounds which isn’t very significant, and therefore it’s a small mind.” No. That’s an interesting idea, isn’t it? But not one of you has found the edge of your Mind. Pay attention to the obvious. I will say not all of it is fully illuminated to you at the moment. But when you have explored the extremities of your Mind, you have found you can keep going and going and going, like the energizer bunny. Pay attention to the obvious, and then take hold of the obvious and begin to live your life consciously according to the obvious.

Let that Mind be in you which was also in me. Why? Why let it? Because it already is. And you might as well stop objecting to it. Let it be in you. Agree with what the Father already set in place. You see? Don’t let that Mind be in you which was also in me because I did it, or because it’s a good idea, or it’s better than anything else. Do it because it’s the Truth About You. It’s already been done. It already is you. Do it so that you will be in total internal consistency with yourself, instead of at odds with yourself. Do it because it embodies the Integrity, the already existing Divine Integrity of You. Do it because it means coming back Home into your Right Mind so that you might enjoy the fullness of your Sanity.

I love you, Who You Really Are already. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We've been talking about the purpose of the body and the use to which you put it, and the fact that when those two things are out of sync, you have problems. The body is a means, not an end. It is a means of communication. And the only worthy communication that you can engage in is the acknowledgement in another, or in a thing, of That Which Is Divine about them; the acknowledgement of What They Truly Are; the recognition of God right there. The purpose of the body is to be the means by which the communication of such acknowledgement occurs.

Now let's talk for a moment about body as an end. You might not think I'm aware of things like this, but if you walk into any department store into the kitchen section these days, you will find toasters that are styled in a 1930's and 1940's theme. Now you tell me what the style of the appearance of a toaster has to do with browning bread so that you can enjoy it with your eggs and bacon in the morning? [laughing] It serves a purpose of being an end in itself—a decoration in your kitchen. And, of course, if you're one of the first ones to have it, wow, you can be proud of being up-to-date in a modern kitchen—which is really ridiculous because it's a design from the 1930's! I mean, you see the senselessness of it? When a toaster becomes a fixture in your kitchen so that it (the kitchen) has a pleasing appearance, and even makes some statement about you [sparse scattered audience laughs], it's lost its purpose, hasn't it? It has become an end in itself. And, at the bottom line, the purpose of it having an end is to make a statement about you. This is always what using a thing as an end means.

Now, I've mentioned before that there's really only one Function, or one Purpose, for Vision, for seeing. It's much the same as the function of the body, in that the Purpose of Vision is to allow you to be able to acknowledge That Which Is Real in whatever you're looking at. In other words, the Purpose of Vision is to give something.

But I've mentioned before that you generally use vision to get, to gather data, to know if you're safe, to know how to behave under the circumstances. And when you're doing that, you're not making the Gift. When you're doing that, you are involved in self-consciousness—not other-consciousness—self-consciousness. And the only reason any of you ever engage in self-consciousness is for self-protection, which means that you have identified yourself as body, rather than Consciousness/Mind. Whenever you are not identifying yourself as Consciousness, giving your attention to making the Gift of acknowledging the Truth of everything you're seeing, you're engaged in self-defense. You are identified as a body. Your body has become an object that you call you. And you're like the toaster that has some other purpose than browning bread. You've lost your purpose.

You see, we've used the phrase "using the body as a means or an end," and you might not have quite understood practically what that meant. But when you are self-conscious and you are using vision to get, you have shifted to using the body as an end. How is that? When you are gathering data to find out whether you're safe or not, you try to do this data-gathering skillfully and unnoticed. Right? I mean, you don't really want everybody to know that you don't trust them.

And so, you use your body to distract them by making a presentation that has a certain effect. One of the ways you do it is that you dress nicely to make a good impression. You don't walk in with guns on your hips, and bullets across your chest, and a knife in your hand. You walk in looking as benign as possible, with as much elegance as is appropriate under the circumstances. You don't want to look like a slob, because you want to appear to be credible, decent, respectable. Right? But still, you use your body to make an impression. That's not a Gift because it's selfish. You're protecting yourself while you engage in surreptitiously gathering information.

You roll over in bed in the morning and turn to your wife, or husband, and in a soft voice you say, "Did you sleep well?" You see? Benign. [laughing] What you're really asking is [laughing], "Is it safe for me to get up out of bed without being on guard?" You see? But you have a presentation. And this act of apparent caring is totally selfish. Why? Because you think that you may be in danger, that you may be confronted by somebody who's still mad at you for what happened last night. You see? That's what is characteristic of self-consciousness.

Now, I want to shift here. Creation is an UN-self-conscious, exuberant, joyful, spontaneous Expression of Being. If something happens that tickles your funny-bone and causes you to burst out laughing, you suddenly move into a state of total un-self-consciousness. And if you want to find out what happened, how you behaved, you would have to go back to a videotape; some sort of picture that you could watch. You would have to find out what you were being after the fact, because you were in a state of un-self-conscious self-expression. In other words, the impression you were making, or how you looked, was the furthest thing from your mind.

God doesn't BE FOR anyone else. Creation is not a movement to impress. Creation is not a movement to create an impression. It is a spontaneous Movement of exquisite perfection, because as we've been talking about, God is a Singularity. Creation is that Singularity rendered Visible/Recognizable/Experienceable to the Mind that moved that was the Act of Creation.

When you are using your body properly, you're not self-conscious. You're not into any level of conscious awareness of what kind of an impression you're making. You are engaged in the on-the-spot recognition of the Presence of God moving in whatever you're looking at, whether it's a Brother, or a Sister, or a plant, or a table, or a leaf, or a fingernail. It's a pure Gift without strings. And you know what? You can bring that Purity of Being, you can bring that Conscious Experience Of Being into any and every aspect of your day. It's not a holy, or spiritual, or religious thing to be relegated to a synagogue, or a church, or a temple.

So we will continue. But at least now you have a better understanding of how it is that you can slip into using your body as an end, rather than a means.

Your habit, your persistence of perception would hold your body as something separate from you; something not you that you inhabit for a period of time, and then abandon. Or it abandons you, it would seem. But this is not the Truth. It is the Visibility and Tangibility of your Individuality which is God presencing Himself right where you are. And your body must be brought back into your recognition of your Self, just as the world must be brought back into your recognition of your Self, so that there is not this split perception in which some of your conscious experience is yours and you, and the rest of it is not yours and is not you.

The ego's goal is for you to keep this separation, to keep this artificial division in place in your mind, because that's the one thing that can keep you from remembering Who You Are. It's the one thing that can apparently successfully distract you from waking up. And so it's very important, it's essential to become clear about body, world, universe, and you.

Okay. Next section:

RAJ READING: Healing as Corrected Perception

We once said that the Holy Spirit is the ANSWER. He is the answer to everything, because He knows what the answer to everything IS.

RAJ: And once again, let's not forget that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: The ego does not know what a real question is, although it asks an endless number.

RAJ: Well, what would be a real question? A real question would be something that uncovers and undoes a misperception. The questions the ego asks distracts you from asking such pertinent questions.

RAJ READING: The ego does not know what a real question is, although it asks an endless number. Yet YOU can learn this as you learn to question the value of the ego,...

RAJ: Wow! There's a good question. One that will tend to undo the illusion or the misperception.

RAJ READING: ...YOU can learn this as you learn to question the value of the ego, and thus establish your ability to evaluate its questions.

RAJ: Now this is an example of the absurdity of an ego's question.

"Where does your lap go when you stand up?"

"What is the sound of one hand clapping?"

They are questions that can't be answered. But the ego asks them, together with the suggestion that there is an answer, and that it would be well for you to engage in finding it. It's very much like the children's game where they send an unsuspecting buddy out on a snipe hunt, knowing that there aren't any snipes, you see, and taking advantage of the buddy's ignorance. It's a... so we're talking about learning to distinguish answerable and unanswerable questions, evaluating the ego's questions, so that you can recognize that going for that answer is going to be futile and will not uncover anything that will displace a misperception.

RAJ READING: When the ego tempts you to sickness, do not ask the Holy Spirit to heal the BODY, for this would merely be to accept the ego's belief that the body is the proper aim for healing.

RAJ: See [small laugh], when the ego tempts you to sickness. You see, the proper place to give your attention is the undoing of the temptation—the recognition that you're being tempted—so that you may turn your back on the tempter, and say, "Get thee behind me. Get out of my sight. I do not choose to embrace you and give any part of my attention to you." You see?

RAJ READING: When the ego tempts you to sickness, do not ask the Holy Spirit to heal the BODY, for this would merely be to accept the ego's belief that the body is the proper aim for healing. Ask, rather, that the Holy Spirit teach you the right PERCEPTION of the body, for perception alone can be distorted. ONLY perception can be sick, because only perception can be WRONG.

RAJ: Now, there's an important point in here.

RAJ READING: Ask, rather, that the Holy Spirit teach you the right PERCEPTION of the body,...

RAJ: It doesn't say ask the Holy Spirit to help you see that the body isn't real, or that it doesn't exist. You ask for the right perception of the body, because something is going on there That Is Real, and you want the right perception.

This next sentence is very important.

RAJ READING: Wrong perception is DISTORTED WILLING,...

RAJ: It's a distorted use of will.

RAJ READING: Wrong perception is DISTORTED WILLING, which wants things to be as they are not.

RAJ: The ego would say, "Your body is acting up. Your body is at odds with you. Correction of your body needs to occur. You need medication. You need to coerce it, one way or another, into better, more harmonious behavior. Understanding, of course, that it's not really you. And it's only a temporary abode. And therefore, doesn't really care about you, doesn't have your best interests at heart. So you need to coerce this that is perfectly willing to function at odds with you and not in your best interest. You need to finesse this enemy into better behavior." And all the time that this dialogue is going on, you are being tempted not to give your attention to the tempter and still his voice by withdrawing your attention from it.

Your body cannot be at odds with you. It cannot be your enemy, your opponent, because it's sole Function is to Identify the Presence of your Individuality perfectly. It is nothing less than your total ally. But the ego says that it is something that it is not, and wants you to deal with it on that basis.

Now...

RAJ READING: The REALITY of everything is totally harmless, because total harmlessness is the CONDITION of its reality.

RAJ: The Reality of your body is totally harmless, because total harmlessness is the condition of its Reality. The Father moved. The Father moves and the Movement looks like you. What do you mean, “looks like you”? Looks like you. Is experienceable as you. And because the Movement of God was harmless, the Visibility and Tangibility, the Experienceability of you, is harmless. Not only that, it is also harmlessness.

RAJ READING: It is also the condition of your AWARENESS of its reality.

RAJ: In other words, you don't really have a mind that is capable of being successfully split, and therefore conflicted; that actually has the capacity to look at something and see something that isn't there; see something different from What's Really There.

It's important here, not only is the Course bringing your attention to the fact that every Aspect of Creation is harmless, in spite of the apparent danger that you can see in it; your Mind is also harmless—not truly capable of creating a conflicted world to see. It may distort your perception, but it can't make God's Creation actually be harmful. Your capacity to see the Kingdom of Heaven is intact. That's the point. Your capacity to see Reality As It Is speaks to the harmlessness of your Mind. The fact that no matter how conflicted you seem to experience it, that is not its true state. That is an illusion as well.

Do you see that what it's saying here, the Reality of everything observed—I'm inserting that word—the Reality of everything observed is totally harmless, because total harmlessness is the condition of Its Reality. It is also the condition of the observer of Its Reality. You see now?

Harmlessness is the nature of the observed and the observer. So don't be too proud of yourself if you are one of those who can quickly and easily recognize something is wrong. Got it?

If you are going to fly in the face of the ego's suggestion that you do indeed live in a hostile and harmful environment, you are also going to have to challenge the idea that you actually... actually have a capacity to recognize danger, a capacity to see evil. Because if you want healing, you've got to recognize the benign-ness of that which needs to be healed, together with the benign-ness of your Mind in the act of observing the thing that needs healing. That is the only way you bring Singularity into the picture. And Singularity is the only thing that causes instantaneous transformation of illusion into the Conscious Experience of Reality that's called healing.

How on earth could you stand making a Gift of acknowledging the Truth of what you're seeing, if you hold out for the right to not only see Truth, but error as well? If your mind is split, you're going to give the gift of a split mind. And so you'll say, "There's a real something going on here called cancer, but I know that cancer isn't real. I know that cancer isn't ordained by God. And so I am going to give my attention to acknowledging what has to be the Truth right there. And I am going to thereby invalidate the seeming evidence of a lie there, of something untrue." But if you don't do that and then, as well, correct the idea in your mind that you, because of your spiritual advancement, are able to see the difference between a real problem and the Truth, and that's what gives you power to heal. You've got to get past that, because you don't actually have a Mind capable of seeing an illusion needing to be corrected.

And as long as you claim that capacity to be able to clearly see Truth and error—"real error" that the Truth can destroy—you haven't moved into an unconflicted State of Mind in which you are being the spontaneous, uncalculated Giver of the recognition of Truth. You will not have moved into Singularity. If you're going to see the benign-ness, the harmlessness of the thing you're observing, you need to also claim the benign-ness of you as the observer.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You do not have to seek reality. It will seek YOU and find you, when you meet its conditions.

RAJ: Now I've just talked about meeting its conditions. The conditions are your willingness to acknowledge and embrace the fact that the Truth Of You is that you are Pure Consciousness which is benign, because it's not divided. It's not split up into a capacity to see good and evil. And you have to be willing to embrace the fact that no matter what out there seems to need to be healed, there still is only one thing going on there, and that is God presencing Himself as Creation, and that this Creation is, in spite of the way It is perceived at the moment, utterly and awesomely Perfect.

When you bring the observed, and yourself as the observer, into that kind of Singular alignment of Intent, your will becomes identical with the Father's, and there is only One Will present. And this constitutes Singularity. In other words, don't mess around with the word "Singularity" and wonder what it means. It means un-conflicted-ness, Pure Harmony, Pure Peace. When you are experiencing Peace, Real Peace, there's no conflict. That's Singularity. Singularity is not some sort of universal not-quite-understandable meaning. It's an experience where nothing extraneous to It is present, like Peace.

Reality will seek you and find you when you meet Its conditions.

RAJ READING: Its conditions are part of what it IS. And this part only is up to you. The rest is of Itself.

RAJ: Truth reveals Itself the moment you are presenting nothing to block Its presentation of Itself, and you get rid of the blocks to Its experience by being the benign observer of a benign world. A benign observer and a benign world that are benign because you aren't a shitty little ego, and you aren't living in a shitty world, because God is All That Is Going On, and you're not separate from that Going-on-ness of God.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You need do so little,...

RAJ: So much less is called for from you than you think.

RAJ READING: You need do so little, because It...

RAJ: Truth. Reality.

RAJ READING: ...is so powerful that your little part will bring the whole TO you.

RAJ: The moment you're undefended against Reality, it will flood you.

RAJ READING: Accept, then, your little part, and LET the whole be yours.

RAJ: Yes. I know. Sounds so simple, and it can't possibly be that simple.

RAJ READING: ...LET the whole be yours.

RAJ: How do you let the Whole be yours? See how quickly you forget. You let the Whole be yours by not reinforcing the definitions of everything that you've always been using. You let it in by getting up in the morning saying, "I don't know what anything means. I think I know what it means. I thought I knew what it means. But I am willing to make the assumption that I don't know What Anything Really Means because I'm quite positive I'm not awake yet. And therefore, there is more here for me to see. And so today I am going to dedicate myself to the best of my ability in every single situation to be looking for the more of What Is Going On than what I'm seeing. I am going to stop defending my confidences in what I think everything is."

All you have to do is neglect to reinforce what you believe. You should write that down. All you have to do is neglect to reinforce what you believe. That is how you let the Whole be yours.

The minute you take down the dike, the minute you remove the wall, what's on the other side of the wall fills up the space, rushes in, infills you. And what's on the other side of the wall? The Rest of You that's been called the Holy Spirit. The Answer. That which is the Answer because It knows all the Answers, because It is the full Consciousness of Truth that is yours.

You all already know the answers. You've just been playing around at, "What would it be like if I didn't know all the answers?" I'm going to play being ignorant for a while, and see what the experience is like. And so, you block off All The Rest Of You that Knows all the Answers. Take this little tiny piece of the Infinity Of You and you say, "This is me. And only that which is inside that small area is what I know. And so there's so much that I don't know that it's going to be a pure adventure to discover it." You see?

RAJ READING: You do not have to seek reality. It will seek YOU and find you, when you meet its conditions. Its conditions are part of what it IS. And this part only is up to you. The rest is of Itself.

RAJ: Reality.

RAJ READING: You need do so little, because It is so powerful that your little part will bring the whole TO you. Accept, then, your little part, and LET the whole be yours.

RAJ: Now...

RAJ READING: Wholeness heals because it is of the mind. ALL forms of sickness, even unto death, are physical expressions of...

RAJ: What? Surprise! Surprise!

RAJ READING: ...the FEAR OF AWAKENING.

RAJ: Don't shake your head.

As I've said before, you're afraid of waking, Awakening, for a number of reasons; not the least of which is that you're afraid it's going to be too much work. It's going to require too much of you, that you're going to have to be too conscious, that you're going to have to be too alert. And being alert, because it's always been a part of defense for you, has not been something you've been able to recognize as so absolutely natural to you that you rest in alertness. That alertness, that Consciousness, is an Experience of Peace. And so you push Awakening away from you for fear that it will be so demanding of you that you would rather put up with, tolerate, the dissonance of life that you're experiencing because it's not so demanding.

Being Awake is absolutely UNdemanding, because a Mind that isn't experiencing disintegration is in a State of Perfect Peace. And Mind moves infinitely in Perfect Peace, and work is a concept entirely foreign to It. It is effortless. And your fear that it will be too demanding keeps you from discovering and having the experience of Effortless, Peaceful, Infinite, Conscious Awareness.

Again, all forms of sickness, even the one that seems most impossible to deal with, death, are physical expressions of the fear of Awakening.

RAJ READING: They are attempts to reinforce UNCONSCIOUSNESS out of fear of...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...CONSCIOUSNESS.

RAJ: Again, because you do not realize that the Experience of Consciousness is an Experience of Rest. Creation, the Movement of Creation occurs in the context of effortlessness. Therefore, rest.

RAJ READING: This is a pathetic way of trying NOT to know by rendering the faculties for knowing ineffectual. "Rest in peace" is a blessing for the living, not the dead, because rest comes from WAKING, not from sleeping. Sleep is withdrawing; waking is joining.

RAJ: Making One.

RAJ READING: Dreams are ILLUSIONS of joining,...

RAJ: What? [laughing] The crazy dream of that you have woken up and you're getting ready for work, while you're still sound asleep in bed.

RAJ READING: Dreams are ILLUSIONS of joining,...

RAJ: Dreams are illusions of doing anything.

But dreams are specifically illusions of joining,...

RAJ READING: ...taking on the ego's distortions about what joining means if you are sleeping under its guidance.

RAJ: Well, joining while you're sleeping under the ego's guidance amounts to data gathering, constantly making moves against your opponent. Maybe even making moves against your opponent that are so close to being for your opponent that your opponent doesn't realize that you're really seeing him as an antagonist. You see?

RAJ READING: Dreams are ILLUSIONS of joining, taking on the ego's distortions about what joining means if you are sleeping under its guidance. Yet the Holy Spirit, too, has use for sleep, and can use dreams on behalf of WAKING, if you will let Him.

RAJ: In other words, the Holy Spirit can turn every single one of your dreams to your advantage. How? By helping you to question what you're looking at so that you're asking questions that help break misperceptions. Misperceptions? Well, the only place misperceptions are going on are in your dream, your current state of unconsciousness of Truth. So the ego uses your misperceptions to keep you asleep. While the Holy Spirit uses your misperceptions to help you wake up, by not distracting you from questions, the answers to which will undo misperceptions and release you from the bondage of your commitment to them.

RAJ READING: How you wake is the sign of how you have used sleep.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "wake up is" instead of "wake is."]

RAJ: And I'm going to say how you wake up is the sign of how you went to sleep, as well. In other words, your Awakening, as I've said before, is going to be you retracing the steps you took away from Home. So the trip will be unique to each of you, because you all used different reasons for arriving at the same place, and you will undo those reasons, one by one, as you go back Home.

Again.

RAJ READING: How you wake is the sign of how you have used sleep. To whom did you give it? Under which teacher did you place it?

RAJ: It doesn't make sense. Let me ask it this way to help clarify [it] for you. Who are you giving your dreams to now? Who are you giving your sleep-time to now? Are you giving it to the Holy Spirit? To the best of your ability, aren't you taking your experience and turning it over to the Holy Spirit and asking the Holy Spirit, "What's the Truth here?" So now you are giving your sleep experience and your dreams to the Holy Spirit asking for clarification. But until you did that, you were giving it to the other teacher. And, of course, the other teacher kept telling you to push the snooze button. You see? "Stay asleep a little bit longer. Stay asleep a little bit longer."

So...

RAJ READING: How you wake is the sign of how you have used sleep. To whom did you give it?

[Editor's Note: Raj said "wake up is" instead of "wake is."]

RAJ: And I'm saying, "And to whom are you giving it now?"

And...

RAJ READING: Under which teacher did you place it?

RAJ: And I'm adding, "Under which teacher are you placing it now?" You know. "Holy Spirit, here is my dream. Here's my sleepiness. Help me see the Truth." Which teacher are you giving it to now?

RAJ READING: Whenever you wake dispiritedly, it was NOT of the Holy Spirit. ONLY when you awaken joyously have you utilized sleep according to the Holy Spirit's purpose.

RAJ: Now this can be used metaphorically, as well as actually, we'll say. When you go to sleep at night, do you turn your rest over to the Holy Spirit? Or do you just say, "Wow! I'm a very tired body. It's been a rough day, and I know it's going to be rough tomorrow. And so I'm going to get to sleep as quickly as I can so that my poor, tired, physical body can go through a process of rejuvenation. And so that I can have a certain appropriate number of dreams that cause my mind to come back into better balance. And I sure hope I have that appropriate number of dreams because I know I need to be able to be ready to deal with tomorrow." You see? Is that the way you've gone to sleep? Or have you turned it over to the Holy Spirit?

But, likewise, in terms of truly waking up to the Conscious Experience of What You Are and your Birthright, you must turn that over to the Holy Spirit. And inevitably your Awakening, even if it seems to be in little increments, will be invariably an Experience of Joy; not one of dispiritedness.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You can indeed be "drugged by sleep," but this is always because you have MISUSED it on behalf of sickness.

RAJ: And I'm going to say here, sickness in terms of a wish to have things be what they are not. A wish to have things be what you've defined them as, rather than asking the Father to disclose to you What It Really Incredibly Is.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Sleep is no more a form of death than death is a form of unconsciousness. UNCONSCIOUSNESS IS IMPOSSIBLE.

RAJ: It's impossible for you to become less than What You Divinely Are. It's impossible for you to become less than What God Is Being right there where you are right now. It's impossible! Because it's impossible, you haven't accomplished it, even though you believe your imaginations. And because you haven't accomplished it, you can wake up right now.

RAJ READING: You can rest in peace only BECAUSE you are awake.

RAJ: Because Creation moves in Peace. Creation moves effortlessly.

RAJ READING: Healing is release from the fear of waking,...

RAJ: "Help me, Father, to no longer be afraid of waking up. Help me be willing to risk the chance that the experience of being Awake will be an absence of personal demand on me to keep everything together, and to keep my mind in such perfect order that nothing bad can happen to me in an infinite world that I can't be positively assured is benign." You see? "Help me see that that's not what I'm faced with. Help me risk the chance that if I abandon my control, that if I abandon my need to be in charge, I will experience being inseparable from the Movement of Creation, and that it will be an experience of pure effortlessness, while being more Conscious than I ever remember having been." Let this be your prayer.

RAJ READING: Healing is release from the fear of waking, and the substitution of the WILL TO WAKE.

RAJ: The will to wake. You see, it's really simple. The will to wake isn't some sort of will you've got to screw up the courage to express. The will to wake is simple. The will to wake is the will to Love. That's not foreign to you.

RAJ READING: The will to wake is the will to love,...

RAJ: And what is Love? It's you using your body as a means of communication in acknowledgement of That Which Is Real in each and every thing.

Again.

RAJ READING: The will to wake is the will to love, since ALL healing involves replacing fear with love. The Holy Spirit...

RAJ: That which is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: ...cannot distinguish among degrees of error, for if He taught that one form of sickness is more serious than another, He would be teaching that one error can be MORE REAL than another. His function...

RAJ: Your function.

RAJ READING: ...is to distinguish ONLY between the false and the true,...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...REPLACING the false with the true.

RAJ: You don't just see it—the difference. You see it, and because you see it, the false gets replaced by What Is True. What are you doing when that happens? You're allowing yourself to be the benign observer of that which is observed as being benign. And we've brought the Singularity into place where you're recognizing the harmlessness of your world together with the recognition that you, the observer, are engaging in harmlessness by not seeing in a conflicted manner.

RAJ READING: The ego,...

RAJ: On the other hand.

RAJ READING: ...which always WEAKENS the will, wants to SEPARATE the body from the mind.

RAJ: The observer from the observed.

RAJ READING: This is an attempt to DESTROY it, yet the ego actually believes that it is PROTECTING it. This is because the ego believes that MIND IS DANGEROUS, and that to MAKE MINDLESS is to heal.

RAJ: You could say to make unconscious is to heal. And, of course, for the mind to become unconscious of the Truth secures the ego's existence. And that is healing from the ego's vantage point, because anything which undermines its existence is an enemy that it needs to be healed of so it's not present in its experience, and there is no threat of its annihilation.

The ego sees True healing the way you see disease in your ignorant state. Anything that will undermine it is an enemy, is a—what do you call it?—a terminal disease, which it can't afford to catch. So healing of the potential of this terminal disease, for the ego, would be for the terminal disease to disappear. And yet what is a terminal disease for the ego is nothing more than, and nothing less than, Truth—Reality. Because Reality will make it obvious that the ego had no existence and was just imagined.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: But to make mindless...

RAJ: Or to make, to render unconscious.

RAJ READING: ...is impossible, since it would mean to make nothing out of what God created.

RAJ: As long as you are experiencing ignorance, and as long as you are looking through the lens of ignorance at your world, and you're not experiencing It as What It Is, and you're not experiencing yourself as What You Are, isn't this making nothing out of what God created? Because why?

There's no Gift occurring. There's no body being used as a means to an end—that end being the recognition and acknowledgement of the Presence of God in each and every thing, as well as in yourself. You see? And so while you're not recognizing God, all of you are, in effect, making God nothing and nowhere. It doesn't make God disappear, but it does make your experience like that.

Now, if you can't make nothing out of God, then you haven't been made mindless. You haven't been made incapable of recognizing and acknowledging God. And so your capacity to do that is totally intact. And you need to know that so that you can be curious to know how to reinstate it as your Conscious Experience by asking, "Holy Spirit, God, how do I renew my Birthright of being able to see Reality as it is right now?" See, that's one of those questions that the ego will not direct you to ask. And it's one of the questions that will, when the answer is heard, undo misperception.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The ego DESPISES weakness, even though it makes every effort to INDUCE it. The ego WANTS only what it hates. To the ego this is perfectly sensible. Believing in the power of attack, the ego WANTS attack.

RAJ: Why? Is anybody wondering why? Why? Because it thrives on the hit of believing that it can succeed through attack in overcoming the Consciousness of God that would remind you of Who You Are, so that it (the ego) through your faith and commitment in it, may become enthroned as the equal of God, because it has succeeded in causing you to forget God. And that's it in a nutshell.

It's just an insanity. It's... let's put it this way. It's not a big problem. It's just a misperception, which is being held to so tightly that it seems to be insurmountable. It seems as though it will be impossible to wake up, but it's not. It's a little problem. It's a little misperception. It sounds terrible.

RAJ READING: The ego DESPISES weakness,...

RAJ: Mm. Wonder where it got the substance to feel and despise something. It didn't.

RAJ READING: The ego DESPISES weakness, even though it makes every effort to INDUCE it. The ego WANTS only what it hates.

RAJ: This could be quite an indictment on all of you, if you all accept the idea that you are an ego. But you're not—that you are, is a little misperception.

RAJ READING: Believing in the power of attack, the ego WANTS attack.

RAJ: Sounds serious, doesn't it? It's just a little misperception about what you are. There is no ego that has a capacity to desire anything or want anything. The ego is an imaginative collection of thoughts, draped around a Christ. That's all. And if there's any impetus to anything, if there's any will, if there's any feeling, if there's any commitment, it's borrowed from the Christ around which this flimsy collection of ideas is draped. Because you put on your ego garment for an impression, like the modern 1940's toaster that will make your kitchen look so good. You see?

So just remember, you are the Christ right now wearing a garment that you are tempted to believe and be committed to, but the garment is nothing but a collection of spurious ideas that express no intelligence whatsoever. But you are quite capable of believing unintelligent things.

The way out of this dilemma is the one we've been talking about, and talking about, and talking about. Have an object of your affection. Find anything, find as many things, find everything, if you can, in your experience worthy of an inquisitiveness on your part, an inquisitiveness to see the more That Is Real right there than what you're seeing. Because somewhere you heard that there's a God, and that this God is All in All, and that everything that is occurring is the Reality of the Movement of Him, His Mind, including you.

And you want the clearer experience of you, as well as your world. You want the clearer experience of what being the observer means, as well as the clearer experience of what the observed is, so that there is healing. You ask for that, so that in the influx of the inspiration of Truth that comes because you asked for it, you will be ready to spontaneously give the acknowledgement of that to that which you are observing.

So, it boils down to the centuries old answer to the problems of human existence—Love. And you all understand What Love Is. So, what you're being asked to give, in order to have the experience of waking up, is something not foreign to you. And although we have hundreds of page here yet to read, and even though every Sunday night I can turn three pages into seventeen pages of text [audience amusement], the answer is simple. And we will continue as long as we need to in discovering the simplicity of it, so that you allow it to happen.

I look forward to being with you next week. Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We'll go right into the book.

RAJ READING: You have surely begun to realize that this is a very practical course, which means EXACTLY what it says.

RAJ: Indeed, most of the problems you have when reading the Course is that you try to interpret what it is meaning—"What? What is it saying?"—when it's saying very specifically What It Means.

You all have the tendency to approach everything in your day on the basis of your past experience. You explore new territory within the context of your past experience. You listen for the Truth in the context of your problem, when what's needed is, in the latter case, to be more interested in What The Truth Is that you need to know than you are in getting the answer to the problem which is fixed in your mind.

You have a problem. You're suffering, and you want not to suffer. And so you must turn within and you must ask, "What is the Truth that I need to know? To heck with my problem at the moment. What's the Truth? What's the Truth about me? What's the Truth about What God Is Being Right Here, Right Now, that I need to be aware of?" You see? You want to have the Vision, the Experience of What God Is Being Right Here, Right Now, in place of, not in the context of, but in place of the distress you're experiencing, the problem you're having. You need to untie yourself from the misperception that you're suffering from. You're not here to get a better understanding of the misperception you're having.

Many people say, "Wow! Raj doesn't say what I've read in the Course," and therefore discount what I'm saying, instead of saying, "Why might he be saying this? What might he be saying that is consistent with the Course that I don't see as being consistent with the Course because I've been reading the Course on the basis of my prior experience, my prior frame of reference, my expectations?" You need to disentangle yourselves from your old mindsets, which at the bottom line are responsible for your distresses.

RAJ READING: You have surely begun to realize that this is a very practical course, which means EXACTLY what it says.

RAJ: Now, a very practical course. The tendency is to read it as though it's otherworldly; as though it's talking about things unrelated to your present experience. But I promise you everything in here is relevant. Why is it relevant? Because your present experience is a limited experience of the Kingdom of Heaven. And so, if the Course is addressing the Kingdom of Heaven, it's addressing the Kingdom of Heaven right here, right now, that you're right in the middle of. It's not necessarily relevant to the way you're looking at the Kingdom of Heaven right now. But right here and right now is what the Course is about. And you are what the Course is about. And you are the Christ that the Course talks about; the Christ entertaining a far more limited belief about what you are than What You Are in your Fullness at this very instant.

So again.

RAJ READING: You have surely begun to realize that this is a very practical course, which means EXACTLY what it says. So does the Bible, if it is properly understood. There has been a marked tendency on the part of many of the Bible's followers, and also its translators, to be entirely literal about fear and ITS effects, but NOT about love and ITS results. Thus, "hell-fire" means "burning," but raising the dead becomes allegorical. Actually, it is PARTICULARLY the references to the outcomes of love which SHOULD be taken literally because the Bible is ABOUT love, being about God.

The Bible enjoins you to be perfect,...

RAJ: And what does it actually say? "Be ye, therefore, perfect, even as your Father in Heaven is perfect." Be ye What You Already Are because God already is the Author of you.

RAJ READING: The Bible enjoins you to be perfect, to heal ALL errors, to take no thought of the body AS SEPARATE, and to accomplish all things in my name. This is not my name alone, for ours...

RAJ: Yours and mine.

RAJ READING: ...is a shared identification.

RAJ: Why is it a shared identification? Because we all have the same Father. Our Being is derived from the Father.

RAJ READING: The name of God's Son is one, and you are enjoined to do the works of love because we SHARE this oneness. Our minds are whole BECAUSE they are one.

RAJ: In other words, not fragmented into many little parts.

Now, listen.

RAJ READING: If you are sick, you are withdrawing from me.

RAJ: Then, I would likewise say, "If you are sick, you are withdrawing from your Brothers and Sisters."

There's an excellent book entitled, Illness Or Allness. They are the two ends of the spectrum of one thing. Even the sound "ill" is a tightened form of the openness of "all." Illness or Allness. Illness is a tightening up, a making smaller, a withdrawing, a making of oneself isolated from everything else. And when one does this, one is inevitably uncomfortable, because it is as though you are trying to constrict something that is Infinite—Yourself.

RAJ READING: If you are sick, you are withdrawing from me. Yet you cannot withdraw from me alone. You can only withdraw from yourself AND me.

RAJ: When you say, "Father, I'd rather see it my way," and you're withdrawing from the Father, and you lose the experience of your True Identity, you have withdrawn from Who You Truly Are. If you withdraw from me, you are withdrawing from What You Truly Are because we are the same—the Sons and Daughters of the Father that we all have in common, Who is the very Presence of each one of us always. And there is no other Presence where we are than the Presence of the Father embodied, expressed, experienceable.

RAJ READING: I would not ask you to do things you cannot do, and it is impossible that I could do things you cannot do.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "do the things" because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as "do things" as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: So, you know what? Instead of looking at me as though I am something grand and far beyond you, instead of seeing me that way, and making yourself feel small, you should look at me and see in me the potential in you; not just the potential, but the Actuality of You at this moment. You should see in me how much more you are than you've been allowing yourself to believe that you are. It should be an inspiration, rather than something that demeans you. It should cause you to let yourself be like me, because we are the same, rather than letting it make you feel small, inconsequential, and worthless, and eventually hopeless.

RAJ READING: I would not ask you to do things you cannot do, and it is impossible that I could do things you cannot do. Given this, and given this QUITE LITERALLY,...

RAJ: You hear that? Quite literally.

RAJ READING: ...there can be nothing which prevents you from doing EXACTLY what I ask, and everything which argues FOR your doing it. I give you no limits because God lays none upon you.

RAJ: But what has God laid upon you? Infinite capacity. Undisturbable Singularity of Mind that It cannot be fragmented. That's what God has laid upon you.

RAJ READING: When you limit YOURSELF we are NOT of one mind, and that IS sickness. Yet sickness is not of the body, but of the MIND.

RAJ: It's all in the way you're looking at things. It's all in what you are choosing to believe.

RAJ READING: ALL forms of dysfunction are merely signs that the mind has split, and does not accept a unified purpose.

RAJ: If you realized that when you become defensive, you are completely blocking your avenue of escape from the need for defense, you would abandon defense, no matter what was confronting you. The act of defense isolates you more than you were before you brought it actively into play. It reinforces the sense of a split mind. It reinforces the experience of vulnerability that comes from fragmentation. It does exactly the opposite of what you want and need, which is coherence, Singularity, undisturbable Oneness that constitutes Peace. What you want is the Singularity that demonstrates to you where in your Mind that you are invincible, because it is impossible for there to be anything separate or different from you against which you need to be prepared to defend yourself.

RAJ READING: The unification of PURPOSE, then, is the Holy Spirit's ONLY way of healing. This is because it is the only level at which healing means anything. The re-establishing of meaning in a chaotic thought system IS the only way to heal it.

RAJ: And that's what I meant in my first remarks. If you're having a problem and you ask God to give you an understanding of the problem so you can understand how to control yourself and your circumstances better to make the problem go away, you're not asking for the Truth. You're asking for better control. You're not asking for the answer which would render the problem, I'm going to say, unintelligible, meaningless to you, leaving nothing there to deal with or handle.

You cannot bring order to chaos by bringing God into the chaos in a form that would allow you to organize the fragmented pieces of chaos into a better format. You've got to arrive at a point where you are not valuing the problem more than you are valuing the Experience of Truth in which you will inevitably find the problem dissolving because it wasn't real. It was nothing more than a series of fragmented thoughts jumbled together, and then an attempt has been made to make sense of it.

RAJ READING: The re-establishing of meaning in a chaotic thought system IS the only way to heal it.

RAJ: The re-establishing of Meaning. Meaning is always Singular. The re-establishing of What Is True in a chaotic thought system is the only way to heal it.

RAJ READING: We have said that your task is only to meet the conditions FOR meaning, since meaning itself is of God.

RAJ: Meaning itself is not of the problem. Meaning exists entirely separate and apart from the problem, entirely separate and apart from confusion in your mind, entirely separate and apart from the appearance of chaos itself. Meaning is found always in Peace, the Experience of Peace, which is the Experience of Singularity, and is available to you constantly, if you will choose for It, rather than the rehearsal of the problem in your mind.

RAJ READING: We have said that your task is only to meet the conditions FOR meaning, since meaning itself is of God. Yet your RETURN to meaning is essential to HIS because your meaning is PART of His. Your healing, then, is part of HIS health since it is part of His Wholeness.

RAJ: We're speaking of God here.

RAJ READING: Your healing, then, is part of HIS health since it is part of His Wholeness. He cannot LOSE this, but YOU can not KNOW it. Yet it is still His Will for you, and His Will MUST stand forever and in all things.

RAJ: You can not know it, meaning you cannot know it alone. You cannot know it standing all by yourself. You cannot know it when you don't know Who You Are Truly.

Your Function, your Function, your Function is to embody Love. Embody Love—the Acknowledgement of What Is Real in each and every thing. A capacity you have because you are able to abandon the definitions you've given everything and ask of God what the Meaning of everything is so that the influx of inspiration and True Vision about a thing is there for you to give to that thing by means of your body. And your engaging in this activity which is your Function will constitute healing, not just of perception, but of what you would call your body.

Again I reassure you that there is no such thing as healing that isn't evidenced. If you do not have the Manifestation of Perfection, correction is called for, and healing is called for. And that healing will be recognizable, experienceable, recordable by a camera, able to be seen by everyone. It won't be bliss in the midst of disease, or a body that isn't perfect.

[Editor's Note: In the first and second editions, the following heading appears here: Chapter 9 THE ACCEPTANCE OF THE ATONEMENT]

The next section is entitled:

RAJ READING: The Acceptance of Reality

RAJ: Well, by now hasn't it become clear that if you are suffering, you're in a state of non-acceptance of Reality. If you're looking around and saying, "It's nothing but a material world," it's like saying, "There's no Santa Claus," at Christmas time and the Spirit of the event is lost. When you're looking around and saying, "It's just a material world," you are standing in the non-acceptance of the Kingdom of Heaven, which is What's Really There, and which you're having a false interpretation of, and which interpretation you are choosing to believe is valid. So, if right here and right now you are not seeing God in everything, and you are not recognizing the Kingdom of Heaven, then you are not in a place where you are in acceptance of Reality yet.

Please remember the obvious. The only thing there is to confront you is Reality. There is nothing else going on. And you're seeing it either clearly, or unclearly.

RAJ READING: Fear of the Will of God is one of the strangest beliefs that the human mind has ever made. This could not possibly have occurred unless the mind were ALREADY profoundly split, making it possible for the mind to be AFRAID of what it really is.

RAJ: Every single one of you truly does believe that if you yielded completely to God, you would lose valuable things. Maybe never to sew again. Maybe never to cuddle with your cat. Maybe never to be able to touch and smell and be fully aware of your partner. All because all of a sudden you're going to turn into something utterly spiritual, and intangible, and incapable of having a tactile experience, or a Conscious Experience of Substance. So, you'll hold off a little while. You'll justify pushing the snooze button on the alarm, because these things are too valuable to you.

You are afraid to let your good in. You simply are. What is it? Nobody likes a good guy. You have all kinds of thoughts and sayings that keep you in your place, that keep you ignorant.

If you were going to let Truth in, Truth with a capital "T", you'd have to, you think, recognize... you would have to recognize all your flaws, wouldn't you? The Truth would uncover all of the error in you. What a bummer. Why would you want to wake up? Why would you want to know the Truth? You see how the ego perspective works.

You know what the Light of Truth does? It illuminates the Truth in You, and leaves you filled with the Conscious Experience of everything that is valuable in you, which God laid upon you by virtue of extending Himself right where you are. And so you need to find ways to abandon your fear of good occurring, to abandon your fear of God appearing in you and in your experience.

RAJ READING: It is apparent...

RAJ: It really is apparent.

RAJ READING: ...that reality cannot "threaten" anything EXCEPT illusions, since reality can only uphold truth.

RAJ: Now that's obvious. But you'll scuttle this little bit of information back under the carpet, because it's much easier to believe that Truth will uncover the awfulness in you, or that the Experience of Truth, as I said before, will require of you that you be too conscious. And it will be too much work. When the fact is that you will rest in the Infinite Conscious Experience Of Being. It will not be work.

RAJ READING: The very fact that the Will of God, which is what you ARE, is perceived as fearful to you demonstrates that you ARE afraid of what you are. It is not, then, the Will of God of which you are afraid, but YOURS. Your will is NOT the ego's, and that is WHY the ego is against you.

RAJ: You know, you go 'round exercising your will, and you think your will is your private capacity to exert force and make things happen. And that is what you think gives you your individuality and creates a place of realness in the world of you. And so it seems like a great sacrifice to have to let go of that. But that is not your will.

Your will is the Will of God that God embodied right where you are. And that Will is a Singular Will. It's undivided. It isn't Him and me; God and me. It's Us. And it's so Us that it's indivisible, and it doesn't constitute a conscious experience separate from the Father's.

So...

RAJ READING: What seems to be the fear of God is really only the fear OF YOUR OWN REALITY.

RAJ: Now it doesn't make sense, does it, to fear your own Reality? You didn't set out to fear your own Reality, but as I said, the moment you said, "I want a divorce. I want to look at things my way for a while," you imagined a new reality. And in abandoning the old one which was Real and which couldn't be altered by your abandoning it, you nevertheless created for yourself a so-called independent experience. And you grew to love it. You grew to love the thrill, the excitement of overcoming everything you found yourself afraid of, which was All The Rest of the Kingdom of Heaven.

And so, because you began to take so much value from the experience of independence, you saw anything else which would have to be All The Rest Of What You Divinely Are, you began to see everything else as that which would undermine and deprive you of that which was of ultimate value to you—your assertion of your independent self.

So you didn't do it on purpose. You did it because in the act, the imagined act of independence, you forgot Who You Were. And in forgetting Who You Were, all that you... all of your Self that you weren't embracing became that which was your enemy. Why? Because the Rest of You is always insisting on reincorporating the little independent sense of yourself that you're holding apart from the Rest back into the Rest.

So, the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your Right Mind, That Which Is The Rest of You, because It cannot help but engage in reintegration of Its Wholeness, is experienced by you as a threat, as a danger, as that which is intent upon upsetting the status quo, and disturbing whatever sense of peace you've managed to achieve in the middle of a conflicted world, a polarized world, which you believe you have the capacity to whip into shape; to temper, to train into better forms of obedience.

Something else obvious here.

RAJ READING: It is impossible to learn anything consistently in a state of panic. If the purpose of this course is to help you learn what you are, and if you have already DECIDED that what you are...

RAJ: Truly.

RAJ READING: ...is fearful, then it MUST follow that you will NOT learn this course.

RAJ: This is so obvious.

RAJ READING: Yet you might remember that the reason FOR the course is that you do NOT know who you are.

RAJ: You do not know Who You Are. That's the reason for the Course to remind you.

RAJ READING: If you do not know your reality, how would you know whether it is fearful or not?

The association of truth and fear, which would be highly artificial at most, is particularly inappropriate in the minds of those who do not know what truth IS.

RAJ: [laughing] If you don't know what the Truth is, on what basis would you justify being afraid?

RAJ READING: All that this kind of association means is that you are arbitrarily endowing something quite beyond your awareness with something you DO NOT WANT. It is evident, then, that you are judging something of which you are totally UNAWARE.

RAJ: You see, when you become so preoccupied with what you think you are, and when you are so certain about what you believe you are, and when you have such confidence, it doesn't matter what else might enter the picture; you cannot allow it. And even though you don't know what it might be, you still can't allow it.

But something—the Course, someone, me, and your Guides, and the Holy Spirit in each one of you—has come and is telling you what is beyond what you're conscious of, so that you're not ignorant and you're not making a decision against it ignorantly any longer. You may still choose to ignore it, to distance yourself from it, but you won't be doing it in total ignorance.

On the other hand, because you are not totally ignorant that the Truth about you, the Conscious Experience of Who and What You Really Are, is available to you, and because it is Truth, all that it will illuminate in you is the Truth of What You Are, [which] can give you the courage to explore, to allow for that which you had steadfastly disallowed for, because it wouldn't have mattered what it was to you that was outside of your experience, you couldn't let it in.

Now that I'm telling you the Truth will illuminate the Truth about you and free you from the illusions about you that you've been bound by, you do have a justification for letting in a fuller experience, for saying to the Father, "Father, Thy Will be done. Share with me what it is." Or to say to the Holy Spirit, "Help. I invite You in. I make room for You. And I make room for You by giving my attention to You, instead of my best interpretations, my best definitions, and the strange love I have for ruminating about nonsensical, fragmented arrangements of things at the expense of gaining my access to the Truth that it's my Birthright to be experiencing."

So again.

RAJ READING: It is evident, then, that you are judging something of which you are totally UNAWARE. You have set this strange situation up so that it is completely impossible to escape from it WITHOUT a Guide Who DOES know what your reality is. The purpose of this Guide is merely to remind you of what you WANT. He is not attempting to force an alien will UPON you.

RAJ: Now this is very important. Your fundamental Guide is the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is not attempting to force an alien will upon you, but to uncover that it already is, and always has been, your will, which you have been denying and blinding yourself to the experience of by choosing to attempt to be a private, autonomous presence with an ability to have force in your world all by yourself. It's your Right Mind that is insisting on rejoining with you; not an alien will. It's You!

RAJ READING: He...

RAJ: Your Guide.

RAJ READING: ...is merely making every possible effort, within the limits you impose on Him, to RE-ESTABLISH your own will...

RAJ: Your Real Will.

RAJ READING: ...in your consciousness.

RAJ: And yet [laughing], it cannot be forced upon you, not even by that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. This little rebellious speck of the Infinitude of What You Are must rejoin the Whole voluntarily by abandoning whatever means it is using to convince itself that it actually can be separate.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You have IMPRISONED your will in your UNCONSCIOUS, where it remains available but cannot help you. When we said that the Holy Spirit's function is to sort out the true from the false in your unconscious, we meant that He has the power to look into what YOU have hidden, and perceive the Will of God there. HIS perception of this Will can make it real to YOU because He is in your mind, and therefore He IS...

RAJ: What?

RAJ READING: ...your reality.

RAJ: He is nothing more than your Right Mind.

RAJ READING: If, then, His perception of your mind brings its reality to YOU, He IS teaching you what you are.

RAJ: That Which Is Whole has no choice but to be Whole, because its Wholeness was set in place by the Father, by the Father's Will. Therefore, that of you which has been held in trust while you dally with an ego sense of yourself, which is nothing more than your Right Mind, is constantly insisting on being Whole because it is Singular. And so it's constantly inviting you, not coercing you, not forcing you, but inviting you to let it back in. Constantly inviting you to abandon your insistence upon being tiny.

That means that you're already surrounded by help. You already stand supported on behalf of your Wholeness, on behalf of your Conscious Experience of your Perfection. Everything that is going on is geared toward the miracle, the sudden shift of perception. You are not alone. You have never been abandoned. You are never out of reach because [laughing] you carry with you at all times that which is nothing more than your Right Mind. The Whole of You accompanies you everywhere you go.

But you must arrive at a point where the Truth is more important to you than your problem, or the Truth is more important to you than your current belief system; where the Truth is more important to you because you've heard that it will, if you let it in, illuminate the Truth about you, and relieve you, release you, from the ignorances that you have been bound by inappropriately and unnecessarily. You are all so constantly accompanied by that which will make you Whole and that which is intent upon uncovering your Wholeness to you. And you know what? This stranger that is accompanying you is nothing more, no one more than your Self in your Totality.

As I was saying earlier...

RAJ READING: The only source of fear in this whole process can ONLY be what you think you LOSE.

RAJ: "Yeah. Pretty [clicking sound], pretty awful to have to lose sin, sickness, and death. I agree. That's quite a cost. And misery and confusion that accompanies it. Oh, my."

RAJ READING: The only source of fear in this whole process can ONLY be what you think you LOSE. Yet it is only what the Holy Spirit sees that you can possibly HAVE. We have emphasized many times that the Holy Spirit will never call upon you to sacrifice ANYTHING.

RAJ: You see, isn't it wonderful here in this marvelous experience of independence, and the thrill and the excitement of overcoming the odds? You don't realize that you have already sacrificed your peace and the Conscious Experience of your Wholeness; your capacity to be anywhere in Infinity in an instant, which you call teleportation; your capacity to experience the Whole of Infinity in the Singularity of one Conscious Experience and yet, at the same time, to experience the Infinite Specificity, the infinite minutiae of details of Creation; to have simultaneously the experience, the Conscious Experience of being Universal, as well as Specific.

You sacrificed a lot, but since no one has come along and said to you that the Rest of What You Are, the Rest of Infinity, is present and available to you right now because right now you're more than you thought you were, you just plodded along, plodded along in your ignorance.

But now someone is telling you that you already are the Ultimate, that you don't have to plod ahead any further. You simply have to, let's say, abandon the trek. Pause a moment. Choose for your Peace, and desire to know the Truth irrespective of the problems that are going on, which your ego would just love to get a better understanding of so that it could manipulate everything into better order without ever allowing you to remember Who You Are. And no longer experience the sacrifice of the Truth About You together with the bliss and the Peace and the Joy and the Love, together with your capacity to look at each other and recognize Ultimate Value there, so that in the recognition of it, the making of the Gift of the recognition of it, you make it your own.

RAJ READING: We have emphasized many times that the Holy Spirit will never call upon you to sacrifice ANYTHING. But if you ask the sacrifice of reality OF YOURSELF, the Holy Spirit MUST remind you that this is not God's Will BECAUSE it is not yours.

RAJ: Wow! The Holy Spirit confronts you, not with the fact that you're trying to be a bad boy, or a bad girl, but confronts you with the fact that, because it's not God's Will, it's not yours either, leaving you in your Integrity, inspiring your Integrity to come forth, rather than become buried further.

RAJ READING: There is NO DIFFERENCE between your will and God's.

RAJ: Now I am not talking about what you would call your human will. I am not talking about any capacity you think you privately, personally have to be forceful, manipulative, and successfully controlling of circumstances and people.

There is no difference between What Your Will Truly Is and God's.

RAJ READING: If you did not have split minds, you would recognize that willing is salvation BECAUSE it is communication.

RAJ: What is it your will to do or be? Well, don't try to figure out the answer to that question, 'cause any answer you figure out will be wrong. Your will is to fulfill your Function. That's the only thing your will can be.

"Oh, I know. Well, that doesn't tell me a hell of a lot, does it? The expression of my true will is to embody my function. Thanks a lot! Anybody mind telling me what my function is?"—with a little bit of sarcasm and righteous indignation.

I'll be happy to tell you what your will is. Your will is to recognize God in each and every thing. Your Function is, I'm going to put it to you gently, is to be like God. And God saw everything that He had made, and behold it was verily God Himself. God does nothing less than recognize Himself in the Movement of Being. Now what makes you think you might have a function different from that? Your Function is to see What's True. Your Function is to see What's Real. Your Function is to extend it and make it your own, so that you feel the Singularity of Being with no fragmentation associated with it, and therefore no confusion associated with it, and therefore with utter Peace. And a capacity to be Joyful; not just happy, happy, happy. The capacity to be Joyful, which is no small thing, because that which is Singular, when it is Joyful, is, for lack of better words, a Joy which resounds through Infinity without ever losing any aspect of the substantiality of Itself.

Talk about a hit the ego would get if it could have that experience. It shouts, but what it shouts fades out as it goes through space. But the Joy of Being extends Infinitely, without ever fading out, without the Full Substance of What It Is being fully experienceable. [Laughing] You will never have the experience of wondering if you've been heard.

RAJ READING: If you did not have split minds, you would recognize that willing is salvation BECAUSE it is communication.

RAJ: The extension of the acknowledgement of What Is Real in each and every thing; which is another way of saying the recognition of God in each and every thing; which is another way of saying that the Experience of Being is the experience of glorifying God. That's what the words "glorifying God" mean. A holy, religious experience? Yes, but you know what? It's like looking at the poinsettias here and experiencing them fully. And you never really think of any spiritual words. It means being present with whatever is going on. The African violets over there. Each of you sitting in your chairs and experiencing the capital "M" Meaning, the significant Meaning, the Divine Meaning of each of you, of each thing. That's what glorifying God is. It's recognizing a thing for What It Really Is and enjoying it to the max, experiencing it to the max. And, by virtue of having the experience, broadcasting/communicating the experience to all the Rest of Infinity.

Don't worry. You'll never lose the opportunity to smell the roses. You just think you know what smelling the roses means. And it's a hint. It's a hint of the Ultimate.

RAJ READING: It is impossible to communicate in alien tongues.

RAJ: Weird thing to stick in there, isn't it? Hmm. Well, when any one of you speaks from an ungrounded and unconnected place, you speak "in alien tongues." And you think in alien ways—fragmented, distorted, unintelligent. But communication never actually occurs. Whenever you are dealing with your neighbor, or your family, or your friends, and it's not your intent to be glorifying what is of value about them, you are not only speaking to them in alien tongues, and they are not only speaking to you in alien tongues, but no communication is actually occurring. Nothing of significance is happening. So talking to each other from independent, autonomous stances is not your function.

But here's your Function.

RAJ READING: You and your Creator can communicate through creation because that, and ONLY that, IS your joint Will.

RAJ: There will never be joint creations (plural). There will only ever be joint will where you and the Father constitute a Singularity—not a duality; not a friendly, chummy duality—but a Singularity in which neither one of you is claiming an independent vantage point. And you become One in Intent, One in Will.

To not claim a presence different from the One Infinite Presence That You Are, a Presence which is constantly Conscious, and therefore constantly in the Movement of Consciousness, which is therefore experienced as All That Is—the Kingdom of Heaven, the Universe, Infinity. The acknowledgement of That. The recognition of your Self in That. Where the full Meaning of the redness of the poinsettia is communicated Infinitely, for lack of better words, through the Universe, which is some Aspect of the Infinitude of You in your Singular, Universal Oneness, as well.

Now, I'm going to stop there.

You may think that I'm getting way out there. But what I'm trying to convey to you is that what you call "way out there" is the right here, right now. And right here, right now, is where you'll experience it.

I love you.

Abide with what I've said. If anything, wonder, "Why did he say that? What were his reasons? What were the Divine Reasons for this being said, and not something else? And if it doesn't jive with what I read in the Bible, or what I've read in the Course, why did he say it? Where might the compatibility of the two be found?" It will be found not in trying to magnify the difference, but in asking, "What might the Divine and Enlightening Reason have been for him saying what he said?"

And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

RAJ: Good evening.

AUDIENCE: Good evening.

RAJ: And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We were last talking about the fact that your will and God's Will are one; are the same; are identical; are the one and same Singularity, if you will. But this is only true when you are... when you're willing not to hold yourself separate from God, when you're willing to yield to the Father's Perspective because it's the only True Perspective about everything.

It does not mean that your practice of free will, or of a private will of your own, is one with the Father's Will. In your independent stance, separate from the Father, formulating what you want, what your goals are, how you're going to accomplish them, and how you're going to convince others of the reasonableness of what you want so that they won't stand in the way of it, you are practicing willfulness, which simply means the practice of force in the attempt to sway other minds to be in agreement with you. Your will is always, always, always a manipulation of events, circumstances, and people through an expression of intense and unyielding energy, if I may put it that way, through commitment that is unyielding to a single idea which you have imagined, which you have made-up, and which does not coordinate with, does not fit in with everyone else, which is, of course, why you have to bring force to bear upon the situation to get everyone to agree with you.

The Father's Will is a Movement of Mind. It is not the attempt to accomplish anything. It's not a means of accomplishing a goal. It's the Movement of Mind. It is a Movement of That Which Is Perfect. It is the Movement of That Which Is Undivided, Unfragmented, Singular. And that Movement is Creation. Creation that embodies and reflects Perfection, Harmony, the Loveliness of Love called Beauty, exquisiteness, perfect coordination of every Aspect of the Visibility and Tangibility of the Movement of Mind that is called Creation. No force is brought to bear. It is not an expression of strength. Omnipotence is not infinite power. Omnipotence is simply Presence unopposed. You got that? Omnipotence is simply Presence unopposed. Singularity again.

It's your Function, as we've said before, to be in such harmony with God, to be in such a state of dependence, rather than independence, a state in which you are present with God without any other intent in place, so that you can experience, we'll say, God in you, so that you might experience What God Is Being from His Perspective. Because I'll tell you something. His Perspective is His Gift to you. His Mind is His Gift to you.

You get fouled up by thinking you have a mind of your own that you must use well. And you try to do that. And as long as you are doing that, you are preoccupied with your concepts about yourself, about your duties, about your responsibilities. And you're not available. You're daydreaming, in effect, and not available to That Mind in you which is God; which is your salvation, of course, because it's you experiencing your Right Mind.

The last sentence we read was:

RAJ READING: You and your Creator can communicate through creation because that, and ONLY that, IS your joint Will.

RAJ: You communicate through creation through conscious participation in the Movement of Mind that is Creation. It doesn't mean you can communicate through creation by taking a creation, such as these flowers, and making a gift of them to your girlfriend, or your boyfriend, or your wife, or your lover, or your friend. It doesn't mean using creation to communicate with. It means, as I said, your not standing apart from the Mind of God that is your Mind, and participating in the Conscious Movement of Mind that is Creation, so that you with God might look at everything that has been made and recognize yourself in it. That's the Singularity. And that's the creation that you communicate through.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Divided wills do not communicate because they speak for different things TO THE SAME MIND.

RAJ: They... One says, "Yes." One says, "No." One says, "I agree." One says, "I disagree." One says, "This is true." The other says, "That is not true."—constantly, simultaneously, in the same space, to the same mind.

RAJ READING: This loses the ability to communicate simply because confused communication does not mean ANYTHING.

RAJ: What would happen if you walked into a room and the person in the room says, "Quick! Help me! I've lost my lap. I can't find my lap. It was here just a moment [ago], and when I got up, it disappeared. You've got to help me find my lap." This person is not speaking sense. But it sounds like sense. And if you think, "Oh, my God! I didn't even think about it, but I've lost my lap, too. Yeah. I'll help you find your lap. Sure." And now you appear to be in agreement. And you're both apparently engaged in a mutual task to find this other one's lap. And along the way you say, "As soon as we find yours, you've got to help me find mine, because, you know, tit for tat. I helped you. You'll help me." "Oh yeah, I'd be glad to help you." And my goodness, it sounds like communication is occurring, doesn't it? It sounds like interaction is occurring. It sounds like meaningful relationship is occurring. And yet, nothing is happening. No lap has been lost. No lap can be found. And the search for it is the accomplishment of nothing.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: A message cannot be said to be communicated UNLESS it makes sense. How sensible can your messages be when you ask for what you do NOT want?

RAJ: What would be an example of asking for what you do not want?

"Father, help me to see how to close this multi-million dollar deal quickly, easily, harmoniously."—And then the unsaid part of it is, "Even though I know it's taking advantage of many organizations, many people."—"Help me. Help me to conduct my business deal here in a swift, succinct, business-like and fair way." In other words, you're asking God to help you act in an independent way, independent from God, in that you didn't ask God whether the deal the way it was set up was really fair. And, also, because you're holding yourself apart from your Brothers with whom you're making the transaction, and seeing them as different from you, and seeing them as someone whom this deal could cost something, but for you, it would make you a great deal of money and cost you nothing.

You're asking God to help you be successful at functioning independent of Him and independent of your Brothers, which means alone. You're asking for what you do not want. You're asking to have your separateness confirmed to you, which is very lonely, and full of fear and suffering when you get right down to it. You're asking for what you do not want.

But you appear to be including God by praying to Him. You appear to be joining with God, but you're joining with God to have Him confirm your unjoined state. You see?

You're asking for what you do not want. You're asking for what you want to get—the carrot out there. But you're asking for what you do not want.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Yet as long as you are AFRAID of your will,...

RAJ: And here we're talking about your Real will.

RAJ READING: ...this is precisely what you WILL ask for. You may insist that the Holy Spirit does not answer you, but it might be wiser to consider the kind of ASKER you are.

RAJ: Are you really asking a sensible question, making a sensible request? Are you expressing an intent that the Father placed in you that therefore truly expresses your will?

Continuing.

RAJ READING: You do NOT ask only for what you want. This is SOLELY because you are afraid you might RECEIVE it, AND YOU WOULD.

RAJ: What do you really want?

You really want Peace. You really want the Experience of Wholeness. You want the Experience of Perfection. You want the experience of guiltlessness. You want the absence of suffering. That's what you really want.

But in order to have what you want, you have to sacrifice being an orphan. You have to sacrifice the independence that you so highly prize.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: This is really why you persist in asking the teacher who could not possibly TEACH you your will.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "That is really" because that is the way it is in the Sparkly Book. But the original HLC Text has it as "This is really" as shown in the exact HLC Text quote above.]

RAJ: You persist in inquiring of your best judgments. You insist upon inquiring of your capacity to reason. You insist upon requesting of your memory and your experience. You insist upon inquiring of the learning about human nature and life as you have been defining it, that has occurred in you by virtue of your putting bits and pieces of information together in a manner that makes sense to you, and seems to hold water, and helps you to feel secure.

You ask of the sense of self that you have created in an imagined state of independence from your Source, which cannot solve your problems, because independence from your Source is the only problem you have. And this sense of self that has been developed on the basis of independence, exclusivity from your Source, has not the capacity to reconnect you to your Source, and so it will always confirm your independence, and ultimately thereby, your suffering.

Again.

RAJ READING: This is really why you persist in asking the teacher who could not possibly TEACH you your will. Of him you can NEVER learn it, and this gives you the illusion of safety.

RAJ: Why? Why safety? Because it's not going to upset the apple cart, is it? It isn't going to... it isn't going to upset the status quo. It isn't going to upset the developed sense of a decent personality, or human being, that you have created. It doesn't violate your very best sense of yourself that you have worked so hard to create.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Yet you cannot be safe FROM truth, but only IN it.

RAJ: Again, you're all afraid of Truth because you think it's going to uncover all that's erroneous in you. And so Truth becomes something you must be safe from. But Truth reveals what? All that is True about you. It uncovers God right there where you are. You can only be safe in Truth.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Reality is the ONLY safety. Your will...

RAJ: We're talking about your Divine will.

RAJ READING: ...is your salvation BECAUSE it is the same as God's.

RAJ: You see, when you got your divorce from the Father, and you set up house on your own recognizance, so to speak, on the basis of your own best thinking, you moved into an unsafe realm—a place where you cannot feel Peace because you have cut yourself off from the Source of your Peace. And what is the Source of your Peace? Knowing What You Are.

Now you are devoted to this sense of self. And you believe that you can somehow in this unsafe existence, this unsafe world you find yourself in, that somehow you can through a sheer mental forcefulness, determination, and commitment to consistency of your thoughts and ideas, create safety for yourself. And you think that's your salvation, and you struggle very hard to accomplish it.

Again, back tracking.

RAJ READING: Yet you cannot be safe FROM truth, but only IN it. Reality is the ONLY safety. Your will is your salvation BECAUSE it is the same as God's.

RAJ: And what you're calling your will, your right to free will, your right to forcefully and determinedly accomplish things, is not your salvation. It deprives you of your salvation. Why? Because it deprives you of being united with your Whole Mind as Mind, instead of a mind with beliefs that constitute its reality.

RAJ READING: Your will is your salvation BECAUSE it is the same as God's. The separation is nothing more than the belief that it is DIFFERENT.

RAJ: The belief that what is different? Your will. That you have a will that's your own. And the excellent exercise of it is what gives you respectability, and worth, and value, and meaning.

RAJ READING: The separation is nothing more than the belief that it is DIFFERENT.

RAJ: Now, continuing.

RAJ READING: No mind can believe that its will is STRONGER than God's.

RAJ: It's simply an impossibility.

RAJ READING: No mind can believe that its will is STRONGER than God's. If, then, a mind believes that ITS will is different from His,...

RAJ: Not stronger, but different.

RAJ READING: ...it can only decide either that there IS no God, or that GOD'S WILL IS FEARFUL.

RAJ: In other words, if a mind cannot believe that it's will is stronger than God's, then it's a given the Omnipotence of God's Will cannot be done away with. And so, if you say, "I'm going to have a will different from the Father's," you're going to have to do something with this thing that won't go away—this undeniable Omnipotence of God's Will. And so, in order to survive in some degree of equilibrium, some sort of what the ego calls "sanity," we're going to call it "stable insanity," something has to be done with this thing that won't go away—the Omnipotence of God's Will.

And one of the things that can be done is to wipe it out of mind completely; to ignore it completely and say, "There is no God." You see? Either you wipe God out completely by totally blocking it from your awareness, and disallowing it from occupying your mindsets and your beliefs and your words that you use, et cetera, or, you arrive at the determination that God's Will is fearful. Why fearful? Because, if you accept the idea that there is a God, in other words, if you don't block out the unavoidable Conscious Awareness that God's Will is Omnipotent, then you're face-to-face with the fact that your will is lesser; a lesser will than God's. Right? That you stand in second place, so to speak. And because God's Will is stronger, it is a constant threat to yours. And, therefore, it is automatically fearful, because if it's stronger, it will inevitably overpower you, inevitably overpower your will, your decisions, your determination, and all of the mental constructs that you have built to confirm your existence as an independent, worthwhile, real, meaningful entity.

So, again.

RAJ READING: If, then, a mind believes that ITS will is different from His,...

RAJ: God's.

RAJ READING: ...it can only decide either that there IS no God, or that GOD'S WILL IS FEARFUL. The former accounts for the atheist, and the latter for the martyr.

RAJ: So, [laughing] there ya are! None of you here are atheists, so that means that you've all adopted the role of martyrs. Meet yourselves.

Why would you do that? Again, because it's your belief that when Pure Love looks upon you, it won't find anything lovable in you. It's because you think that when Truth illuminates you, it will uncover everything that is awful. And you don't want that. And so you hold yourself even more firmly separate from God, and that makes you a martyr, because you have to find a way to exist, to survive, to have continuance of conscious experience of life in the face of Something that stands opposed to you, you think.

And it's only because you believe yourselves, it's only because you believe the stories and the pictures you've created about yourselves—that you're unlovable; that you're flawed; that there's very little Truth in you. Or even if there is Truth in you, there's so much that's not lovely and not truthful, that there will be great penalties to pay. And so you fight for the right to struggle on your own. That's being called a martyr.

Now, this is not a judgment on you, because it is perfectly understandable. And you must be willing to accept the perfection of its understandability. The understandability of it is that you have practiced this independence for so long that you really have forgotten Who You Are, and you really have forgotten the Way Things Work. Otherwise, you wouldn't for a moment imagine that Truth shone on you would do anything less than uncover everything that is perfect and flawless about you, because you are at this moment The Christ. You are at this moment the Expression of God—God presence-ing Himself/Herself right where you are. You see? And it wouldn't occur to you for a moment that when Perfect Love came your way, it wouldn't find the Loveliness of God in you and embrace it. It wouldn't occur to you that it would see you as unlovely, and reject you, and thus convict you maximally. Because if Perfect Love rejected you, how great a rejection would it be? An awful rejection.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Martyrdom takes many forms, the category...

RAJ: Meaning martyrdom.

RAJ READING: ...including ALL doctrines which hold that God demands sacrifices of ANY kind. Either basic type of insane decision...

RAJ: Meaning atheism or martyrdom.

RAJ READING: ...will induce panic because the atheist believes he is alone, and the martyr believes that God is crucifying him. Both really fear abandonment and retaliation, but the atheist is more reactive against abandonment, and the martyr against retaliation.

[Editor's Note: Raj said "include panic" instead of "induce panic."]

RAJ: Now, are you going to get hooked in another side-track, [another] distraction? Are you going to look at yourself and say, "Well, now, am I the atheist, or am I the martyr?" And then, are you going, like the person who's says, [laughing] "Please help me. I've lost my lap," are you going to say, "God, please help me understand how to grow out of my martyrdom. God, please help me not be an atheist." You see? That's like saying, "Help me find my lap. I lost my lap."

You see [laughing], you couldn't have this concept of being an atheist, someone who doesn't believe in God at all, or a martyr, if you didn't, if you weren't entertaining one single false belief, and that being that you really are an independent entity separate from God. You see, it isn't martyrdom that you need to be healed of. And it isn't atheism that you need to be healed of. What you need to be healed of is the idea that you really are something different from What God Is Being of Himself, Right Here, Right Now, right where you are. You see? You need to be healed of a false sense of selfhood, which secondarily can be called "atheistic" or "martyr." You see what I'm saying?

So don't get hung up, "Oh, my God! How am I practicing being a martyr?" No. [laughing] Ask God, "Help me abandon the idea that I'm separate from You, and could be either one of these two things that I then would need to be healed of. Help me correct the fundamental problem, which is that I think at the moment that I'm not joined with You. And I'm looking at everything on the basis of that idea." You see? "God, I'm willing to make a place for You. I'm not going to mess around with trying to improve my atheistic behavior. I'm not going to try to abandon my addiction to being a martyr. I'm not going to tackle the situation at that level. God, I'm going to make room for You in me so that What You Are, the Love That You Are, and the Truth (with a capital "T") That You Are might illuminate in me to me the Loveliness, the Innocence, the Perfection, the God-ness of me. I'm going to attend to that. I'm going to stick with that. I'm going to be determined not to waver from that conscious intent. I'm going to attend to this rather than healing myself of martyrdom, or atheism." You see? So don't get side-tracked.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The atheist maintains that God has left him, but he does not care. He will, however, become very fearful, and hence very angry, if anyone suggests that God has NOT left him.

RAJ: Why? Well, because then [amused] he would have to acknowledge this thing that won't go away, this Conscious Awareness of the Omnipotence of God's Will, which would mean his sense of his own personal, private will would be under siege; that it would be threatened by a Will that is Omnipotent. And he or she would have to abandon the private, autonomous claim to selfhood that has made existence reasonable to him, or her.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The martyr, on the other hand, is more aware of guilt, and believing that punishment is inevitable, attempts to teach himself to LIKE it.

RAJ:P "Things are rugged, but I can take it. You know, I know I have a rough life, but you know what? I have what it takes to cope with it. I really do. And come hell or high water, I'm going to continue, no matter how rugged it gets."

Continuing.

RAJ READING: The truth is, very simply, that no-one wants EITHER abandonment OR retaliation.

RAJ: See, that's what you want. What you want is neither abandonment or retaliation. You want Inclusion. You want Love. You want Kindness. These are things you really want. And if you would ask for them, you would get them. But in order to ask for them, you would have to ask from a place outside your best reasoning, and your best judgments, and your best thinking. You'd have to let God in again.

And so, I will again remind you that Truth shining on you illuminates everything That Is Real about You to you. And Perfect Love embracing you, will uncover to you your worthiness of that Love, and inspire you spontaneously to extend it to others. It will not reject you. And it will cause you to stop rejecting everything else and everyone else.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Many people SEEK both,...

RAJ: Abandonment and retaliation.

RAJ READING: ...but it is still true that they do not WANT them. Can you ask the Holy Spirit for "gifts" such as these, and actually expect to RECEIVE them? He cannot make you want something you do NOT want.

RAJ: And let's be clear here. The only things that you can want are the things God has placed in you for you, because those are the only things that exist. You can try to get things that you have made-up. But you can't want something that God hasn't placed in you, and Whose Will it is for you to have and experience.

The Holy Spirit, again, quote:

RAJ READING: ...cannot make you want something you do NOT want. When you ask the Universal Giver for what you do not want, you are asking for what CANNOT be given BECAUSE IT WAS NEVER CREATED. It was never created because it was never your will for YOU.

RAJ: You see, it's not your will to suffer. It is your demand, at times, to have things that you have made-up that God did not make. But those things were never the Father's Will for you. And therefore, they were never your will for you. And every attempt you make to secure them will fail, because the whole plot, if you will, to achieve it, is fantasy.

Continuing.

RAJ READING: Ultimately everyone must remember the Will of God because ultimately everyone must recognize HIMSELF. This recognition IS the recognition that HIS WILL AND GOD'S ARE ONE.

RAJ: But the plaintive cry is, "But I can't see what it is. I've never seen what it is." That's another bit of the nonsense. "I've lost my lap! Help me find it! I've lost my Experience of God's Will. Help me find it!" No. You, the you that you think has never experienced it, is an imaginary you that you are carrying around in your mind and believing is the "real you." And then this "real you" asks for help. This unreal you asks for help in finding the Will of God. You see?

You know what yielding to God means? It means abandoning the ethic of this unreal one that you think you are; the ethic of this one to become something real. It means giving up trying to be something on your own, and praying.

Praying daily, saying, "God, fill me up with All Thou Art. I make room for You. Raj says I know the Truth. It never left me because You placed it in me. You laid it on me as me in Your Expression of Yourself right where I am. And it's more important to me to remember it than it is for this unreal me to try further to secure an existence it doesn't have and make it real. I'm willing to consider the possibility that I'm already Home. I'm willing to consider the possibility that I already am the Ultimate. And I'm asking everything about What I Divinely Am, as well as You, God, to illuminate in me the True Conscious Experience of my Being, and of my Brother's, and of my world, that now, I am told, is really the Kingdom of Heaven seen through a glass darkly. I no longer am asking You to help me clean the glass, but to put the dark glass down entirely, and just let the influx of the Experience of Reality fill me spontaneously. I no longer ask to be fixed up." You see? "I no longer ask to be fixed up. I'm willing to abandon the unfixed, the broken person that I imagined myself to be. I'm willing to abandon that whole perspective so that nothing stands between me and the Birthright of my experiencing my will, which is Your Will, my true perspective, which is Your Perspective, Your Vision. Help me. Help me abandon the task of fixing myself up."

Continuing.
