What guilt has wrought is ugly, fearful and very dangerous. See no illusion of truth and beauty there. And be you thankful that there IS a place where truth and beauty wait for you.

Now, today Paul used his special relationship with his thoughts to try to better the situation or the circumstance or the circumstances of the day. But you know what? It didn't work very well. It simply aggravated the situation.

And as truth grows in you, your capacity to practice unhealthy attitudes, which before it seemed a pleasant thing to do, will become less and less pleasant and you will find less and less motivation to employ it. And you will begin to lose the thing you would hold onto.

It's going to happen. And you're going to have to recognize that the depression you experience, the hopelessness you experience around it is because what never really worked is obviously not working for you now. And this is going to make it easier for you to give up what doesn't work. You see? It's part of the healing. And what it does, is it requires you to use the discipline that I talked about last week, where you stand firmly in the face of what seems like your failure when you practice the holy instant, until its bluff dissolves. You're going to have to do as Paul did today . . . a meditation, or something where you are persistently consistent in not thinking, so that in the absence in the thinking that is generating the upset, your innate divinity, your innate Knowing can register with you.

See no illusion of truth and beauty there. . .

. . . where guilt is.

And be you thankful that there IS a place where truth and beauty wait for you.

You see? When you're so convinced of your negative forecast about everything, you are in a position where you're refusing to consider, much less acknowledge . . .

. . . that there IS a place where truth and beauty wait for you.

That's why you're depressed. And that's why you are bringing the force of your willfulness to bear upon the situation—you have to do it because truth and beauty do not await you and you must create it. But, . . .

. . . be you thankful that there IS a place where truth and beauty wait for you.

Why? Because that will give you the nerve and the willingness to stop thinking and do the two-step and engage in the holy instant, whether it seems to be working or not. And persist, and persist, and persist. Because although you don't know what will happen, you know that if you persist in your devotion to your special relationship with your thoughts, you will continue to be depressed. And the depression, the frustration, the fear, the anger, the jealousy, all of it will increase and become even more intolerable until you finally say, "Aagh...there must be another way!"

. . . be you thankful that there IS a place where truth and beauty wait for you. Go on to meet them gladly, and learn how much awaits you for the simple willingness to give up nothing BECAUSE it is nothing.

You see? [chuckling] You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free of nothing. Because it was nothing and is nothing, even though you believed it was everything. You see? Ye, shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.

The new perspective you will gain from crossing over will be the understanding of where Heaven IS.

Listen:

The new perspective you will gain from crossing over will be the understanding of where Heaven IS.

Where is Heaven? It's not in your thinking. Where is Heaven? It's in the Silence within you, where in the absence of your thinking, the Father's Perspective—which He has embodied in you, as You, because You are His Offspring—can register with you and will register with you. That's where It is.

From here, . . .

. . . the thinking standpoint that Paul was in this afternoon.

From here, it seems to be outside and across the bridge.

You know, it's on the other side of getting people to change and getting circumstances to be different from what they are.

From here, it seems to be outside and across the bridge. Yet as you cross to join it, it will join with YOU and become one with you.

Your Being, which is already in perfect harmony with all of Creation and doesn't need to be in control of anything, can register with you and will register with you when you do what it takes to let it in.

Now mind you, most all of you are doing this to one degree or another at various times. What I'm saying is not totally unknown to you. But as I talk about it here, you can recognize how you slip back and forth from clarity to devotion to your special relationships with your special thoughts and how you disturb yourself, and then how you do practice the two-step and find your peace returning, find clarity returning and finding a capacity to be that in a way is utterly appropriate and blesses everything. These are not strange things to you.

But I'll tell you, when you get hung up on your special relationships with your special thoughts, your memory vanishes [chuckling] because you are so committed to your special relationship and you forget how easy it was once you finally decided the last time that there must be another way, and you practiced another way.

Yet as you cross to join it, it will join with YOU and become one with you. And you will think, in glad astonishment, that for all this you gave up NOTHING!

Ye shall know the truth, . . . you Knew the truth and the truth set you free from NOTHING! It set you free from the belief you had that you were connected to something when you weren't. Sanity has returned—a source of great gratitude when you have the experience.

The joy of Heaven, which has no limit, is increased with each light that returns to take its rightful place within it . . .

. . . every one of you.

Wait no longer, for the love of God and YOU.

. . . you know . . . re-Awaken your love for your Source, re-Awaken your willingness to not claim independent autonomy. And let yourself have a Father, since you have a Father. Let yourself have a Source that isn't you, because you have a Source that isn't you. Let your love of God return

Wait no longer, for the love of God and YOU.

You see? You will find yourself to be most loveable.

Why do you get so hung up on your ideas? Because at the bottom line, as long as you perceive yourself as an orphan, you perceive yourself to be unloved and therefore unloveable. And so everything you are doing is geared to prove your lovability and validate you as loveable. And so you don't love yourself. You don't recognize that which is loveable about you because you don't know who you are. And that's the only reason.

Wait no longer, for the love of God and YOU. And may the holy instant speed you on the way, as it will surely do if you but let it come to you.

To let the Holy Spirit . . . to let that which is nothing more than your right Mind come to you, you have to shut up the one you think you are—the one you t-h-i-n-k you are. You see? The one that you keep maintaining by thinking that is what you are.

Here's the simplicity, all that we've been talking about.

The Holy Spirit . . .

. . . that which is nothing more than your right Mind . . .

. . . asks only this little help of you.

What little help? That you let it come to you.

And may the holy instant speed you on the way, as it will surely do if you but let it come to you. The Holy Spirit asks only this little help of you.

The little help is a simple, quiet, undisturbed invitation to know of the Father or the Holy Spirit or your Guide, "What is the truth here." That's all.

Whenever your thoughts wander . . .

. . . thoughts . . . thoughts . . .

. . . wander to a special relationship which still attracts you, . .

. . . and that could mean the special relationship you're having with another person or other things as well as your very own thoughts which are your greatest love.

Whenever your thoughts wander to a special relationship . . .

. . . all thoughts wander to a special relationship today, they wandered to his special thoughts.

Whenever your thoughts wander to a special relationship which still attracts you, enter with Him . . .

. . . capital "H" the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . into a holy instant, and there let Him release you.

See, isn't it amazing and isn't it wonderful that nowhere in this process is there any way for your ego to get hold of anything. Listen to this:

Whenever your thoughts wander to a special relationship which still attracts you, enter with Him into a holy instant, and there let Him release you.

"Oh, it's going to be done for me? Oh, you mean I'm not going to be able to take credit? Oh, what the hell is that going to say about me . . . you know? How on earth can that say anything good about me whatsoever, except that I'm sort of a kept man or a kept woman by this Holy Spirit, whoever It is . . . you know. I'm just His puppet. I'm just whatever He wants me to be." You see? [chuckles] That's right. No ego satisfaction from it. But you see, the ego, as a thought that you have and that you've defined, is a mental practice that absolutely blinds you to what you truly Are.

And so the only way you can get to the experience of who you truly Are is by releasing this that you have never been, and letting that which you have always been, in. And that's not an act of will, that is an act of willingness. You see the difference?

Again, because it's so important:

Whenever your thoughts wander to a special relationship which still attracts you, enter with Him into a holy instant, and there let Him release you. He needs only your willingness to SHARE His perspective to give it to you completely.

You don't have to be willing to take it all. You only have to be willing for Him to share it with you . . . you know, "May I share a piece of cake with you? May I share a little bit of you, with you?" You see? All you have to be willing to do is let Him share a little bit of who you truly Are with you. And the minute you taste yourself [snaps his fingers] you'll accept the rest.

He needs only your willingness to SHARE His perspective to give it to you completely. And your willingness need not be complete because HIS is perfect. It is His task to atone for your unwillingness by His perfect faith, and it is His faith you share with Him there.

Now mind you, it sounds like two things:

. . . it is His faith you share with Him . . .

. . . and yet, He is the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your right Mind. The faith your right Mind has in you and in the way the Father has set up your return to your sanity is, you in your right Mind revealing Itself to you in your wrong mind with such perfect faith in the way things truly Are that it can and will convey to you the fullness of the Meaning of the truth about You.

And so you don't have to have what you would call a preexisting capacity, and it isn't going to make a demand on you that you're incapable of because it's not up to you . . . thank God! It's up to that which is nothing more than your right Mind, which because it is your right Mind and is the Presence of God in action, will, when you're willing to let it in, do Its job perfectly.

Out of your recognition of your unwillingness for your release, . .

. . . the minute you realize what I'm saying tonight about your preoccupation with special relationships with your thoughts and with things that keep you from Waking up.

Out of your recognition of your unwillingness for your release, . .

. . . in your willingness to see, "Wow, maybe I am doing that. And maybe there is a different way for me to be."

Out of your recognition of your unwillingness for your release,
His PERFECT willingness is given you.

Well, as long as you're absolutely sure and self-confident in your special relationships with your best ideas and theories . . . wow, you won't get your release because you're not letting that which is nothing more than your right Mind into your mind.

Call upon Him, . .

. . . practice the two-step, enter into the holy instant.

Call upon Him, for Heaven is at His call.

You don't have to be able to call for it.

. . . Heaven is at His call. And LET Him call on Heaven FOR you.

You see? Waking up . . . the way to Wake up is already established. Waking up is already in process and you are becoming conscious of the elements involved so that you might be willing to know the truth and let the truth make you free of things you don't want to let go of, because something in you recognizes that that's the only way you're going to have what you believe you deserve and which you do deserve without your having to demonstrate your worthiness to have it, because it's already your Birthright.

And that Birthright is available to you right in the middle of your innate sanity, which never went anywhere but just got obscured by your special relationships with your special thoughts.

Fantastic, isn't it? Be willing to embrace it with consistency, with persistence, with diligence by abandoning personal control and yielding into the holy instant.

Okay.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

January 15th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Tonight we won't be going into the book. Tonight it's just you and me: A family get-together, I guess you could say—one in which I need to be very practical and very straight-forward.

And it's a good learning for everyone. Because doing the two-step, engaging in the holy instant is not just a wonderful spiritual activity full of bliss, and perhaps, not too much groundedness. No, it, as you will find, as those of you who have engaged in it have found, is very grounded, very practical, where the ideal is translated into the Real, where transformation, correction, is manifest—manifest in a manner that could be recorded with a video camera or a microphone or observation . . . not just an up-in-the-head fairytale bliss.

It's important for everyone to know this because what I am sharing with you is something that you can take into your experience and your connection with your Guide and get right down to brass tacks, get down to the nitty-gritty, get down to the needs and find them successfully addressed because that's what you took into the holy instant with you. That's what you practiced the two-step about.

There isn't going to be any world of harmony, there isn't going to be any world of united countries without very practical nitty-gritty changes taking place. And those nitty-gritty changes aren't going to take place if everyone is on some holy "bender," if you will, imbibing the spiritual juices that give you a high and a sense of bliss no matter how rugged everything is.

It's not intelligent. It's not reasonable. It's not practical. It's nothing to be embraced not even casually.

The world needs changing. Why? Because the world as it is at the moment, is not the way God is Being it at this moment. But it is the way people are being in it, behaving as orphans—behaving as those who have no Father, no divine Source, and nothing in them that is built, you might say, that is created to express love and harmony and integrity and divinity.

So, the changes that are going to occur in the world are going to come from those, like you, who are willing to take your attention in the moment you're in, relative to the things that are going on in the moment you're in, and moving into the holy instant, doing the two-step. And as someone said the other day, not doing the side-step.

Now I'm going to be very practical here and this is the bottom line of what I need to share with everyone tonight. You all, and this is said with no arrogance, I'm saying it because it is my task: All of you need to hear what I have to say because I am sharing that which will promote the united world that I'm talking about. What I'm sharing is what will promote Awakening, where every Brother and Sister comes into a conscious realization and experience of his or her divinity, no longer imagining that he or she is alone— isolated, suffering from independence.

Now Paul and Susan have, since 1982, devoted their attention to this work with me. It is their pleasure. It is their Gift. It is what is important to them. And although their egos' have gotten in the way from time to time, they have dishonored their egos enough to come back to me and allow correction to occur and have steadfastly remained, I'm going to say, dutifully, or with wonderful commitment to the work that I'm doing with them, through them, through their efforts, through their willingness.

Now you need to hear me. I need Paul to hear me. I need Paul and Susan not to be distracted from their devotion. And their devotion is to the truth as I'm expressing it. I need them to be able to reasonably be in their peace.

Now, as many of you may know, day before yesterday, I sent out a letter to everyone on the Foundation's e-mail list and I know it has been shared further than that. In it, I shared the fact that support for this work—monetary support—dollars and cents, financial support has been dwindling. And since the new property was purchased, the contributions have suddenly dropped before the work could be completed to allow for the transfer to the new property to occur fully and in order for the old property to be refurbished, ready for sale.

Now they are transitioning to the new property and bringing the work to the new property at my direction—not at their wish. In fact, there are strong feelings of a desire to be able to remain at the old property and wondering why it's essential to move to the new property.

So it's not willfulness on their part or their choice. But they have seriously asked, quietly in the stillness of their being, over and over and over for almost a full year now, they have asked, "What's next? What do we need to know now? What is the next step? What do we do to implement it? How do we have such an impossible thing happen?" And on and on and on, patiently, persistently, willingly . . . and they have hung in there until they've heard the answer from me. And then they have taken each step.

They are in this new residence because this is where fulfillment of Purpose is happening. This is where I know fulfillment of Purpose is happening even if Paul and Susan are not positive. [chuckle] There is a reason for being here.

There are those on the mailing list who wonder, "Why do they need such a big house? Why do they need such an expensive house?" and on and on and on.

It doesn't have anything to do with needing a big house or an expensive house. It has to do with fulfillment of Purpose and where it's happening and how to be in harmony with it so that Blessing occurs that is called for and that is coming forth.

There is reason for this work to be done in this particular location and I will not go into it with Sue or Paul or you or anyone else at this time. But I will stand firmly in sharing with you the fact that there is perfect order to it.

It is requiring Paul and Sue, despite the slim pocketbook, to listen for that which is beyond their present level of comfort—that which is beyond their present knowing. There is a call for them to listen more deeply than before because there is more to be shared that is more significant than before.

I need their attention. I need their peace so that they can listen, which is what they want to do. They don't want to get up every day and get in the car and go to the Post Office and see if there are any contributions and then take them to the Bank and make a deposit and then ask me how do we disperse the little that we have so that forward movement can occur.

I need their attention. I need the attention they want to give to me. And you need them to be able to give me their attention. Because when they do, everyone is blessed. Everyone learns something. Everyone is able to take a step forward a little further than before. And the simple fact is, that little steps, tiny steps, careful steps, self-protective steps that don't upset things too much are not appropriate anymore.

It's time. It's time to begin Waking up. It's time for these changes to occur in the world. You say, "Oh-h, these changes are gonna to take centuries . . ."

No. All it takes is an idea expressed in a way that can be recognized. Expressed in a way that it's value appears to be valuable, so that the one it's presented to, who would never in his life have considered it, will spontaneously embrace it—have an "ah-ha" experience—have all of the resistance disappear. It can be somebody in government, it can be somebody nowhere, out in nowhere in internet land who simply posts a little message [snaps fingers] that catches the attention and the idea moves like wildfire. And suddenly those who were enemies are willing to work together just because it's the obvious thing to do, even though a week ago it was obvious that such a thing couldn't possibly happen. Why? Because vengeance is being held on the past and it's being applied to the present in order to get even for the past. And we're going to be talking about that . . . not tonight.

Now, there are those who have suggested that if indeed I am Jesus, why don't I just wave my hand and have gold coins appear on the table in front of Paul and Susan that would take care of their situation and allow them to experience their peace?

Well, you know what? That is what I'm doing right now. I'm waving my hand. And in the wave of my hand and the use of my voice, I'm involving everyone who's hearing it. I am causing something to happen. The thing is, that instead of the manipulation of gold, a metallic substance, it's a manipulation of your mind, it's a manipulation of your capacity to see something that you hadn't seen, so that that which didn't seem reasonable to you can seem reasonable.

Waking up is about abandoning isolation— isolation from your Father/Mother/God and isolation from your Brothers and Sisters. And what I am promoting here is the breakdown of isolation between Brothers and Sisters, so that each of you act in a way that blesses each other. And that includes blessing Paul and Susan because their blessing blesses you. They are part of the Movement that you are a part of.

How come they're always asking for money? How come you don't have a spontaneous, joyous response that says, "I want to help?" Whether you're called upon to help or not, why isn't that the response?

Now, I've said it before, those of you who are hearing my voice or reading my words—however it might be at the moment—you are the ones who value what you're reading or hearing and you're the ones who know that it's worth other people having available to them. Therefore, it falls upon you to become involved. And, as the saying goes, "put your money where your mouth is," . . .

put your money where your commitment is, . . . put your money where your valuing is because you love your Brothers and you love your Sisters and you want to find a way to be involved with each other and break the isolationism.

In other words, what I'm presenting to you here is, that rather than having a Foundation that charges for everything they do, I have set up a Foundation that makes a Gift of everything and operates on the basis of Gifting being returned as an expression of gratitude, as an expression of love, as a willingness to participate in that which extends the message and allows it to continue. You see?

The way it works simply doesn't allow for isolationism, it doesn't allow for privacy. It calls for involvement—the abandonment of privacy. It involves what's involved in the two-step and the practice of the holy instant.

Now, I am aware that those who have contributed, have contributed as much as they could because they really do care about the work. I'm not asking anyone to do what they cannot do.

But you know what? There are those of you listening, watching, reading, who have been valuing the work for sometime, who are quite capable of providing the support that will allow the transition to be completed and for the old property to be refurbished and sold and for the constant trips to the Post Office and the Bank to come to an end and Paul and Susan can return to a more, let's say, a less hectic daily process in which it's much easier to be in their peace.

Mind you, as I've said before—since 1982—they have lived within invisible means of support, not controllable, not there where you can put your finger on it. And they've done this since 1982. And they have learned how to be in their peace living on the basis of trust and listening, and the receipt of Guidance.

Most of you would not find yourself able, at this moment, to experience that degree of peace with no visible means of support on-goingly, confronting needs, emergency's, whatever as they have arrived. It will be your blessing to arrive at a point where you can, because circumstances will govern you less and less and Guidance will be accepted by you more easily.

Now, out of love and respect for Paul and Sue, I must say, that the level of invisibility of their income is more than it's necessary for them to have to cope with and maintain their peace in, because it's not the result of a lack on their part, it's not a result of their inattentiveness—of not having their attention in the right place.

It's a result of the family, if I may put it that way. It's a matter of everyone involved in this work, who finds it so valuable, not being grounded enough to recognize the practical need. And not listening enough to find that their reluctance to abundantly support is one of the things they're at the threshold of being corrected about, where a shift will occur in which the willingness to support abundantly, not just the Foundation or Paul and Sue, but in other parts of the family where support is needed and the tendency is to think, "Oh, well, that's not my responsibility. Oh, if they had handled their situation differently, they wouldn't do it, they wouldn't need it, so therefore it isn't appropriate." You see?

It's time for a shift, where the first thing that occurs is, "I would love to be able to support this. I would love to be able to actually have the specifics they needed—dollars and cents, object, attention, whatever it might be. I wish to be abundant enough to be able to be present for another without reservation, whether I'm called upon to do it or not." Just being willing to do it, doesn't mean you are called upon to do it. But let's awaken that in each of you which spontaneously loves, and initially in every case, wants to find a way to witness for and on behalf of your Brother, your Sister, your Country, another Country, et cetera.

You know, Paul and Susan will persist whether support is meager or abundant. They will find ways to do the two-step and to practice the holy instant and to move in their peace no matter how unreasonable the circumstances might be. And of course, that's what Paul has been doing this evening. And so the situation isn't going to remain imbalanced.

But it's important for every one of you whose participating in and appreciating the work that Paul, Susan and I and Chris and those who help bring forth, it's time for you to accept the very practical down-to-earth, grounded place you have in it. And instead of grouching about it or feeling put upon, or demanded to do the impossible, take it as the opportunity to find out how much more there is of you, how much more love there is in you and how great a capacity you have to give without feeling impoverished, or without dreading impoverishment.

So, there is a real need, for all practical purposes, there will need to be at least Thirty Thousand Dollars ($30,000) to finish the transition and sell the old property. It's just what it takes. It's just what it takes for Paul and Susan and the work to be where I recognize it needs to be done.

I think I've been very clear. And I have been clear in a way that hasn't insulted anyone, while at the same time causing some self-examination to occur, not to see what's wrong with you, but to see where a greater capacity to be in harmony with the right is, so that you might support it and make a difference where it counts—where it counts for you, where it counts for me.

As the saying goes, “A word to the wise is sufficient.”

I love you all. I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

January 22ND 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

The End of Illusions . . . glory hallelujah!

Now, let's remember that we're reading from a chapter which we're at the end of, entitled The Forgiveness of Illusions. And so, before we continue on with this next section, let me ask: What does the word, "forgiveness" mean? What does the word, "illusions" mean?

I'll give you a moment to contemplate the answer based upon what we have been reading for quite a few weeks.

Illusions are misperceptions which you believe to be true perceptions. I'm going to refine that a bit to be more clearly precise: Illusions are perceptions which are believed to be knowledge. And even a more subtle adjustment: Illusions are perceptions which are believed to be Knowing . . . Knowing meaning the direct experience of truth itself, not an observation of truth from a distance, but a direct experience, I'm going to say, of the Mind of God in you experiencing what God Knows about each and every thing.

In that context, perceptions are misperceptions. Perceptions are observations of truth. Perceptions are observations of truth that you have come to conclusions about, that you have thought and reasoned about and about which you have created a definition and you believe your definition to be an accurate assessment of what you're observing.

Again, illusions are perceptions which you believe are Knowing—Knowledge.

Now how do you forgive illusions? What is forgiveness?

Forgiveness is the act of withdrawing your commitment to and belief in your perceptions or misperceptions.

Forgiveness is the act the shifting from your perceptions, your definitions—the meanings you have given everything. It's your abandonment of those and your shifting back to the Father's Perspective. "Father, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? What do I need to Know now?" You see?

Forgiveness is not some wonderful gift you give to the unforgiven—to those awful ones who truly have been unlike God and truly have been mean and damaging. Forgiveness isn't the wonderful beneficence of extending to them your willingness to overlook their awfulness and withdraw your judgment.

That's not forgiveness. That's holding that other one to the awful perception you have of them—the awful definition you have of them . . . and then you say, "But in spite of that, out of the fullness of my heart and out of my having been touched by the Holy Spirit, [sigh] I withdraw my judgment."

You have done nothing if you still see an unforgivable one there whom you have just happened to have enough of a spiritual experience to forgive.

Remember, an illusion is a perception believed to be Knowing—a misunderstanding believed to be a true experience.

How on earth can anyone else have anything to do with your act of forgiveness? How can anyone else have anything to do with your willingness to say, "Wait a minute here, I'm going to do the two-step. I'm going to abandon the thought I just had about that one. And I'm going to rejoin with my Father so that I might not have a private experience of this other one—a private perception of this other one—and I might join with my Father Who has placed in me His Mind because He has expressed in me all that He Is and I am His Son, I am His Daughter, I'm His Offspring just as my Brother is. So Father, what is the truth here?"

See, you're abandoning your definition of your Brother and you are withdrawing your investment of trust and faith and commitment in your own beliefs, so that you might join with the actual direct experience of the truth of your Brother from That which is the Source and the condition of your Brother—God.

So, what have we been basically reading about, talking about in this chapter, if it hasn't been the holy instant? That is how the forgiveness of illusions is implemented. And you're clearer about this than you ever have been before as a result of what we've covered.

It's becoming clear that the act of the forgiveness of illusions is going to ultimately be the way you Be consciously forever. Right now you think it's just a technique—it is the way it has been presented, it is a means of getting out of illusion. But what it really is, is you re-embracing the natural action or activity of your Mind, of your Being.

And so you will find that indeed, you will forgive illusions and you will come to the end of the experience of illusions. But this act of joining won't then stop. It won't be a matter of it not being needed anymore, it will be that in the process of abandoning your illusions, you have come into the right use of your Mind and you will stay there forever.

One always learns from experience. And when one learns from experience, one doesn't make the same mistake again as a general rule, if the learning is complete. And I promise you when this learning is complete, you will not again say to one of your Brothers, "Just for the heck of it . . . just because we can do it, let's join together in a mutual agreement about something and give it a definition different from what our Father gave it—different from what our very Being gave it. Let's imagine another meaning and let's agree to it and let's exist in that mutual agreement between ourselves. And hey, we may be able to get a few others to join us in this interesting diversion from just being the Sons and Daughters of God." [Chuckles] Actually, those aren't the words that were used, but you get the idea.

So, going into the book, the new section is:

THE END OF ILLUSIONS

. . . and the first sentence says:

It is impossible to let the past go without relinquishing the special relationship.

Well, that's a reverse way of saying what the two-step is, isn't it. Because the two-step is a matter of letting yourself be so present in the present, that you are experiencing everything with innocent eyes. And in that space you don't find yourself experiencing a special relationship. You aren't finding yourself experiencing a hateful or mean-spirited relationship. You don't find yourself experiencing a relationship in which leverage is called for to make you feel more valid. You see?

So the reverse of the two-step is to say:

It is impossible to let the past go without relinquishing the special relationship.

Think about it . . . or contemplate it. [chuckles]

When you're having a special relationship, you're having an interaction with something without your connection to your Father, without a conscious experience of the divine one that you Are, who is engaged in a relationship with someone else or something else. If you were aware of who you divinely Are while you were in relationship with someone or something else, you would immediately be aware of their holiness, their divinity . . . you see? . . . which would not constitute an unconsciousness of who your Brother is, or of who you Are and therefore, no special relationship would be experienced.

Therefore, all day long, every day when you're engaged with your fellowman, whether it's family or strangers or co-workers, whatever, when you're engaged with them and there's no awareness of your holiness or your connection with God at the moment that you are involved with your Brother and Sister, then where are you? Are you in the present? Are you in the now? Are you in the only place where the holy instant is? No.

If you aren't, then you are involved with everyone from your memory. That means you're involved with them from the past. Your perceptions of them are based upon what's happened with them before.

The only way you can have an experience of their innocence from anything that happened before, is to be looking at them with the Father. It's that black and white. But that makes it that simple, because all you have to do is abandon that simple misperception by forgiving it. And you forgive it by engaging in the two-step: Hesitating, silencing yourself and in the silence, saying, "Father . . ." which of course means reminding yourself of who you Are, the Son or Daughter of Something, ". . . what is the truth about my Brother? What is the truth about this?"

And so you break the isolation—the autonomy. And you invite the direct experience of the Father's Perspective about your Brother as well as You. Because once you see it about yourself or your Brother, you see it about the other. Once you see it about yourself, you see it about your Brother. Once you see it about your Brother, you immediately experience the fact that your Knowing is the truth about you as well.

So, remember that. You might just want to jot a little note down and put it on your refrigerator that embodies the idea that, if you're engaged with a Brother or with anything in the world and at the moment that you're involved with them, you are not consciously activating, you might say, your connection with your Father for the purpose of having His Perspective available to you, then everything that is going on in that interaction with your Brother is arising out of memory—is the context of the involvement is memory, is past. It's that simple.

And so . . .

It is impossible to let the past go without relinquishing the special relationship.

They are simultaneous and they are the same act. Relinquishing the special relationship is relinquishing the past.

For the special relationship is an attempt to RE-ENACT the past and CHANGE it.

Oh, you have a grievance . . . a very righteous grievance. And anybody you tell will agree with you that you are right. And that justice is due you and so you must go back and bring forward, you might say, into the present with your Brother whom you have a grievance with, the issue . . . and then attempt to extract whatever will satisfy your need for justice.

That is called the human condition. That is called what you're wanting to Wake up from. If that is not the fundamental reason you're studying the Course, then let it become the fundamental reason for studying it. I'll bet you thought I was going to say, if that isn't your fundamental reason for reading it, then throw the book away. No. If that isn't the fundamental reason for reading it, then let it become your fundamental reason for reading it.

Imagined slights, remembered pain, past disappointments, perceived injustices and deprivations . . .

. . . perceived . . . catch the word there . . .

. . . all enter into the special relationship, which becomes a way in which you seek to restore your wounded self-esteem.

And what satisfaction everyone gets who engages in this, it's about the only real hit of satisfaction you can get as an orphan—as someone who doesn't know his Father or Mother, his Source, and therefore, doesn't know the Source of his Brother or Sister or world.

What basis would you have for choosing a special partner
WITHOUT the past?

Well, you could say, "Well, I could want to have a relationship with my Brother that doesn't involve the past just so that we could have fun! We can go to the movie, we can go to Disneyland, we can go out and have dinner, we can enjoy life together!"

Wait a minute . . . where did I hear, "Oh, well, we could get together and go out and see a movie or engage in fine dining while experiencing it all through the Father's eyes, and do it without any aspect of the experience falling outside of the call or the need to experience it as God is Being it."

In other words, where was there in that expression any indication that there was going to be an intent to experience the holiness of you and your friends, who were going to engage in a relationship minus the past, and everything that you were going to be enjoying? Nowhere. And if that isn't in there, then I promise you, you're not having a direct experience of Reality. All of It, no matter how good it is, is occurring within the context of memory. It is therefore, in the context of the past and you are hampered by, you are limited by this ignorance of Reality.

And it's not your Birthright. And no matter how good it is, no matter how long it might seem to remain good, it will turn sour because sooner or later, your innate sanity—the Holy Spirit in you—is going to get your attention and is going to say "Hey, you are suffering from illusion. You are believing that your perceptions are Knowing, you are believing that your perceptions of it all are Knowledge—the Father's Perspective. You see?"

What basis would you have for choosing a special partner
WITHOUT the past?

Well there wouldn't be any.

Every such choice is made because of something "evil" in the past, to which you cling, and for which must someone else atone.

Oh boy, the getting of justice is . . . oh-h, it's a precious activity full of meaning, full of the promise of satisfaction.

The special relationship TAKES VENGEANCE on the past.

But you know what? It looks like someone taking vengeance on someone in the present.

Now, . . .

By seeking to remove suffering in the past, it OVERLOOKS the present . . .

. . . hey, if you are not in the present by virtue of being connected with your Father and in that joining experiencing His Perspective, then you're not in the present. You are in the past. When that happens, red lights should go on—flashing red lights should go on: You're not in touch with Reality! And that should be disturbing. It shouldn't be that which encourages you to be with even more vigor and to accomplish more things while still being unconscious in the hope that that fervor and activated commitment will make you more real. You see? It is insane.

No special relationship is experienced in the present.

Now, why say this over and over? "No special relationship is experienced in the present . . . no special relationship is experienced in the present . . . oh, no special relationship is experienced in the present!"

"What good does it say, what good does it do to reiterate that? Quit putting it in my face!"

I'm sorry . . . it needs to be put in your face. And it's not an unkindness and it's not an affront to you. It's a reminder of something that you've forgotten—all of you have forgotten it.

NO special relationship is experienced in the present.

That's not a statement of what's wrong with you. That's a statement that illuminates what will allow for the correction. If no special relationship is experienced in the present, then it means that all you have to do is bring your attention into the present with the willingness to abandon the past and you will be out of the special relationship. You see, it has to be said so that you know that not doing that or doing the opposite—by being in the present—will undo a special relationship. You need to know that. That's the answer—not a problem shoved in your face. You see?

Shades of the past envelop it, and make it what it is. It HAS no meaning in the present, and if it means nothing NOW, it cannot have any real meaning at all.

Oh, but it does have real meaning. Well, let me suggest this: Genuinely . . . genuinely bring yourself into the present and genuinely with no artifice, ask to know the truth, ask to know the God's honest truth, ask to be filled with the conscious awareness of what is Real, and you will find that everything you thought was real—that was so worthy of being fought for—has actually vanished from your mind. It's not even left there to do anything with, because in the influx of the truth is the influx of your ever present capacity to directly experience Reality—what God is being as Knowing, as Knowledge. And you will find yourself feeling love for that which is absolutely loveable, because there is nothing unlike God where you were seeing your Brother. And there's nothing unlike God present in you as your experience as you're engaging in this. So test it genuinely.

How can you change the past EXCEPT in fantasy?

After all, it's always the present isn't it?

And who can give you what you think the past deprived you of?
The past is nothing.

That's because the present is All. The present is eternity and infinity unseparated from each other. Omnipresence is what it is . . . the present, the now. That's why the holy instant is the threshold from perception to Knowledge, from perception to Knowing.

The past is nothing. Do not seek to lay the blame for deprivation on it, for the past is gone. You cannot really NOT let go what has ALREADY gone. It must be, therefore, that you are maintaining the illusion that it has NOT gone because you think it serves some purpose that you want FULFILLED.

Not the least of which is obtaining justice. And not the least of which is your need to be able to coerce your orphan brother or sister to confirming your validity so that you might overcome the invalidity that is natural and unavoidable in orphanhood.

So again, . . .

It must be, therefore, that you are maintaining the illusion that it has NOT gone because you think it serves some purpose that you want FULFILLED. And it must also be that this purpose could NOT be fulfilled in the present, but ONLY in the past.

The ego mindset will never direct your attention to the present as though that's where the solution might be. It needs your attention in the past, where your divinity and holiness cannot register with you. It's that simple.

Do not underestimate the intensity of the ego's drive for vengeance on the past. It is completely savage and completely insane.

Just pay attention to what jealousy has done to each of you at different times . . . maybe not often, but when it has gotten hold of you just watch what it has done—and what it has done to you.

It is completely savage and completely insane. For the ego remembers everything that you have done which offended it, and seeks retribution of YOU.

Mind you, the very fact that the orphan mindset or the ego mindset never directs your attention where you can learn the truth, is all the proof you need that its intent is destructive and is ultimately to destroy you. What does that mean? To destroy any capacity you might have to remember you are the Son and Daughter of God, because that simple truth is your release. From what? From illusion.

We're learning about the forgiveness of illusion and we're now giving our attention to the end of illusions.

The fantasies it brings . . .

. . . the ego . . .

The fantasies it brings to the special relationships it chooses in which to act out its hate are fantasies of YOUR destruction.

Well, when you're engaged in attaining justice and getting even, you're not aware that anything that's going on is destructive to you. But those of you who have followed this insane attempt to prove your worth at the expense of another has not only kept you from remembering who you Are and providing you the place to go to—meaning the holy instant—that would release you from the dream, from the illusions, it has destroyed what you would call your human life, your human experience.

For the ego holds the past AGAINST you, and in your ESCAPE from the past, . .

. . . which happens when you practice the holy instant . . .

. . . it sees itself deprived of the vengeance it believes that you so justly merit.

[Chuckles] It sucks you in. You deserve justice . . . you deserve justice: Go for it... go for it... faster... faster... good... good... go for it... go for it... faster... faster... good... good . . . it goads you on.

Yet without your alliance in your own destruction, the ego could not hold you to the past.

In the special relationship, you are ALLOWING your destruction to be.

Some of you who are engaging in it now, don't see this. Many of you who have done it, know the profound truth of what I'm saying. And those who know the profound truth of it would say to those of you who think there's still validity and reason and intelligence in seeking justice and revenge . . . they would say to you, "Stop dead in your tracks. You don't have to learn the hard way. You don't have to end up in the gutter. You don't have to end up down on your hands and knees in your one hundred or five hundred thousand dollar home praying for release from your obsession"—the obsession that is causing everything to collapse around you because you're not able to be present enough and attentive enough to the present to respond to the present intelligently.

Hell . . . Heaven . . . whatever . . . take the time to hesitate, take the time to stop dead in your tracks, or alive in your tracks before you are dead, and say, "Father, what is the truth here? Father, I want to experience my Brother the way You are experiencing Him because I no longer wish to be deluded. It's important to me not to be deluded any longer. I insist on not being deluded while at the same time being happy with the way things are. I am no longer satisfied with that kind of a split experience—that kind of an insane experience." Isn't that the first part of the two-step? I believe it is.

Again:

In the special relationship, you are ALLOWING your destruction to be. That this is insane is obvious. But what is less obvious to you is that the PRESENT is useless to you while you pursue the ego's goal as its ally.

And I promise you, if the present is useless to you, then your salvation is unavailable to you, your Awakening is impossible to you.

The past is gone; seek not to preserve it in the special relationship which binds you to it, and would teach you that salvation is past, and that you must return TO the past to find salvation.

There is no fantasy which does not contain the dream of retribution for the past.

You see? We go on and on and on talking about how bad things are—that things aren't good. Yeah, that's right.

The past is gone; seek not to preserve it in the special relationship which binds you to it, and would teach you that salvation is past, and that you must return TO the past to find salvation.

You see? Well, if that's not where salvation is, where is it? Fortunately that's included here as well. You haven't just been told what the mess is, you're also provided the solution. The solution is: The present. And you know what? It's always available. You can't run out of it. All the rest . . . everyone else can't get it all and you be left without it. [chuckling] There's plenty of it. It's abundant. It's ever-present. And as I said, it's Omnipresent.

So you have the answer. Abandon your grievances. How? Not through some wonderful spiritual act of beneficence where you let the bastard off the hook even though he's still a bastard. You see? Where is the forgiveness in that? But that is what most everyone thinks it is.

There is no fantasy which does not contain the dream of retribution for the past.

Here's the question:

Would you act out the dream, or let it go?

Hey, this question is the simple threshold of Awakening. You don't need to read anything else in this book. Answer the question by your action.

Would you act out the dream, or let it go?

I need to keep reminding you in spite of all the rather technical, psychological stuff we read, that it's this simple, it's as simple as what is embodied in this one sentence.

Would you act out the dream, or let it go?

In the special relationship, it does not SEEM to be an acting out of vengeance which you seek. And even when the hatred and the savagery break briefly through into awareness, . .

... your awareness ...

... the illusion of love is not profoundly shaken.

The illusion of love that keeps the special relationship in tact. The fact that ...

... even when the hatred and the savagery break briefly through into awareness, ..

... it isn't enough to trigger an awareness in you that there must be another way of looking at this, that there must be another way of being.

Yet the one thing which the ego never allows to reach awareness is that the special relationship is the acting out of vengeance ...

... what? Here it is ...

... on YOURSELF.

You are always the brunt of the vengeance you bring to bear on a Brother or a Sister out of great self-righteousness.

Listen to it again:

Yet the one thing which the ego never allows to reach awareness is that the special relationship is the acting out of vengeance on YOURSELF.

Hey, maybe you haven't all experienced an overt engagement in being vengeful and almost totally ruining your life, but almost all of you have had an experience of knowing someone who has. Learn from your simple observation. Because the moment you have an inkling of a real grounding awareness that your practice of vengeance is destroying you, you will stop, because you will not knowingly engage in acts of self-destruction—even though you are the Son of God and you cannot ever stop being the Son of God and you can never actually die—you will stop doing what causes you to feel like you're dying and to go through experiences of excruciating pain and sorrow and guilt that are not the Birthright of the Sons or Daughters of God.

Again:

Yet the one thing which the ego never allows to reach awareness is that the special relationship is the acting out of vengeance on YOURSELF. But what else COULD it be? In seeking the special relationship, you look not for glory in YOURSELF. You have denied that it is THERE, . .

. . . you poor little orphan that you are.

You have denied that it is THERE, and the relationship . . .

. . . the special relationship . . .

Again:

In seeking the special relationship, you look not for glory in YOURSELF. You have denied that it is THERE, and the relationship becomes your SUBSTITUTE for it. And vengeance becomes your substitute for Atonement, and the ESCAPE from vengeance becomes your LOSS.

Why? Because you cannot, in the heat of the vengeance, remember that there's such a thing as a two-step or a holy instant, or a Birthright that is yours, that everything that you're engaging in is denying. It's that simple.

. . . vengeance becomes your substitute for Atonement, and the ESCAPE from vengeance . . .

. . . the Waking up through the holy instant . . .

. . . becomes your LOSS.

All of this goes on in the context of the Kingdom of Heaven, in which all that is going on is God being All there Is, in which everything that exists partakes of the nature and character and Being of God. But when you're caught up in the orphan mindset, when you're caught up in the vengeance, when you're caught up in the justice, you forget it—you lose grasp of that awareness. But because it's the ever-present truth, we can say, as it says here in the Course:

Against the ego's insane notion of salvation the Holy Spirit gently lays the holy instant.

Against all this wild, frenetic, compulsive, obsessive reaching for validity by extracting justice and getting others to validate your worth . . . against that wildness, chaotic activity . . .

. . . the ego's insane notion of salvation the Holy Spirit gently lays the holy instant.

It's right there gently present with each one of you to let yourself into, to relax into, as you would relax into your Father's Arms and let your misperception be lifted from you, let your perception be gently replaced with Knowing—meaning the Father's Perspective in you, as yours.

I love you all. You are blessed with the truth. You are blessed by what you were before you ever heard me speak. You are blessed by what you will be blessed by when you no longer need to hear me say these things. And you are blessed by a Brotherhood and a Sisterhood that you are part of, although, not consciously at this moment, but that in Awakening you will become conscious of. You do not have to stay bound.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

February 5th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, we've put a lot of emphasis on the holy instant and I know that many of you are feeling that the holy instant ought to work better than it does, because you've been doing your very best to practice it and the problems seem to be very stubborn and unyielding and you seem to be making no progress.

There's a reason for it. And that's what we're going to be talking about tonight.

I'm not going to start with the second sentence, I'm going to back up to the first sentence that we ended with last week:

Against the ego's insane notion of salvation the Holy Spirit gently lays the holy instant. We said before that the Holy Spirit must teach through comparisons, and uses opposites to point to truth.¹

Now, one very simple factor here is that the ego's plan for salvation, which simply put, means you thinking your way through a problem, you reasoning your way from failure to success, you doing something out of your independent competence to succeed. That's the ego's plan for salvation. And to you, that feels like the way that works. That's more significant than I may have made it sound.

You are all convinced that the means to your success lies through your thinking processes, through your independent use of your mind—that's what works.

Now, the Holy Spirit teaches through comparisons and opposites. And as a result, as we talk about practicing the holy instant, about doing the two-step, it sounds as though you're being invited to do something that will not work because it's an abandonment of what you are absolutely convinced does work and is the only thing that does work.

So you walk into this practice of the holy instant handicapped, you think, because you're being required to set aside what will work, what does work for something that you are positive can't work because it doesn't involve the use of your reasoning and your thinking and your mind to find the way—the creative way—to solve the problem to be successful. You see? Not to say anything of the fact that this way doesn't feed your ego and there's no way for you to feel the hit of accomplishment, if in fact, the holy instant works.

So, your mindset is a handicap to you as you move into this practice which I tell you is the only way out of the human condition. It's the only way out of the orphanage. It's the only way back into your right Mind. It's the only solution there is.

Now:

The holy instant is the OPPOSITE of the ego's fixed belief in salvation through vengeance for the past.

And that's always what success is. That's always what the ego's purpose is: Vengeance against the past.

However, from the Holy Spirit's vantage point:

In the holy instant, it is accepted that the past is gone, and with its passing the drive for vengeance has been uprooted, and has disappeared.

You must understand that the Holy Spirit has a different starting point, if you will, than the ego does. The Holy Spirit's starting point is it's intimate, indivisible, conscious awareness of God's Purpose and God's Will and the fact that giving attention to God's Will is the only means of securing and holding and forever experiencing divine sanity. You see?

Now the problem with this is that none of that connects with your conditioned need to find ways to accomplish things that give you the credit, that make you real, that make you valid, that make you competent and respectable. You see? And as it's been said, "there's the rub."²

So . . .

In the holy instant, it is accepted that the past is gone, and with its passing the drive for vengeance has been uprooted, and has disappeared.

And you say, "Well, how can I accept that it is gone? You say it is accepted that it is gone but how do I arrive at the experience of that when I know it's not gone. I'm turning to the holy instant, I'm desiring to practice the holy instant in order to make it go away. And so the fact that I'm asking, is a statement that the problem is here, that the past is not gone, that the vengeance has not been uprooted and has not disappeared." You see?

And this way of thinking disturbs the peace of the holy instant and distracts you from the experience of the absence of the past and the fact that vengeance has been uprooted. And so you, in practicing the holy instant, must have some basis for giving your weight to all of the meanings that we've been discussing about the holy instant.

And here's the basis for it. The basis for it is: That your perceptions of the world and universe—not having been gathered from your conscious communion with the Father, in which the Father has shared His Perspective with you so that you recognize It as yours—your interpretations of the world and universe are false. They are flawed. They are illusions. They are delusions.

To hold onto whatever holds those delusions in place cannot constitute salvation for you. And so you must be willing to abandon the convictions you have, the commitment you have to your present definitions of everything—the present meanings you've given to everything.

Now there are those who read the Course or other spiritual traditions, I will say, who say that the world and universe are an illusion. But I'm telling you and have told you over and over again, that the world and universe is Creation Itself seen through a glass darkly—seen through misperceptions. The misperceptions are the only things that will disappear. What the misperceptions were about will remain eternally, unchangeably in place.

What will uncover Creation to you in its natural eternal perfect state is your practice of the holy instant. That means that in the shift of perception that follows your commitment to the holy instant, there is going to be transformation. There is going to be the disappearance of sin, disease, death. There is going to be the disappearance of damage. There is going to be the disappearance of imperfection. And most of all, there's going to be the disappearance of the tendency for imperfection to occur, and for the liability to be ill to occur.

Again:

In the holy instant, . .

. . . from the Holy Spirit's standpoint . . .

. . . it is accepted that the past is gone, . .

. . . why is it accepted that the past is gone? Because there never was a past. The past is gone because the past isn't present. The past doesn't exist. And the word, "exist" is a present tense verb. The past doesn't exist.

In the holy instant, it is accepted that the past is gone, . .

When you move into the holy instant and you are in your peace, you will not find yourself . . . you will not find your mind occupied with the past, you will find your mind occupied with peace. And peace is always present. It is always in the present. It is always an experience of presence—the present. And with the passing of the past, without the past being in any way occupying your conscious awareness, you will find that . . .

. . . the drive for vengeance has been uprooted, and has disappeared.

You see, the problem many of you are having presently is that you're practicing the holy instant and you do pretty well . . . but you look, and you say, "But so-and-so is still being a bitch, so-in-so is still being a bastard, so-and-so is still being dishonest, so-and-so is still trying to take advantage of me. I felt a shift in me but nothing happened and the situation is getting worse. I feel a shift in me about my financial well-being, but my employment situation isn't changing . . ." or, "The raise I was supposed to get is not coming through, and not only for me, it's not coming through but for many others." You see?

And all of this . . . all of this convinces you further that your thinking is the viable, correct thing to value and base your responses on and your feelings and your willingness to move forward or your insistence upon giving up. You see? So what's the problem?

The next sentence says . . .

The stillness and the peace of NOW enfolds you in perfect gentleness. Everything is gone except the truth.

And this is where you can begin to feel like this is all bullshit! Because you're still in the same bad position you were, whether you've been enfolded in perfect gentleness and everything is supposed to be gone except the truth.

But listen:

For a time, . .

. . . in your practice of the holy instant . . .

you may attempt to bring illusions into the holy instant to hinder your full awareness of the COMPLETE difference, in all respects, between your experience of truth and illusion.

It's your disbelief that you bring with you. You have faith, you have hope, and you practice the holy instant. You bring willingness to it but there is still doubt. There is still the lingering feeling that the behavior you see and the circumstances you see truly are real—that they are not illusions and that they are going to debilitate you and injure you and ruin you. You see?

Be aware of it.

For a time, you may attempt to bring illusions into the holy instant to hinder your full awareness of the COMPLETE difference, in all respects, between your experience of truth and illusion.

See, an injury, an imperfection—a physical imperfection—a disease that seems to be active in your system, these things seem to you to be real. They seem to be real things that somehow the holy instant must invalidate and it might take a struggle because the problem is so actual and so real. But you see, this feeling and this belief arises from your vantage point. And your vantage point is a frame of mind which is not connected with its Source. It is a frame of mind in which you are unconscious that you are the Son or Daughter of God, that you are not an orphan, and that God is All. And therefore, whatever you're seeing with these distortions is in itself absolutely perfect. And its perfection is only escaping you because you're relying upon your best judgments, your best thinking, your best reasoning, your fundamental attempt to be an independent agent. You see?

There's a complete difference between that. When you're looking as an orphan, you will see distortion. You will see sin, sickness, death. You will see damage. You will see injury . . . it goes on and on. You will see them. But it doesn't make them real. It only makes them distortions of That which is flawlessly perfect right there, right now. The difference is absolute. The difference is total.

And when you choose to practice the holy instant and join with the Holy Spirit which is nothing more than your right Mind—your divine Mind, that Mind in you which is the Father present in you—when you turn to That, there's only one thing that can happen: The peace will come, the clarity will pervade you, pervade your mind, pervade your feelings and you will see everything anew. And damage, injury, imperfections will simply stop presenting themselves.

Now I know this sounds like magic. This sounds, well, like we said:

. . . the Holy Spirit must teach through comparisons, and uses opposites to point to truth.

And because you know what is possible, then what I'm telling you must be impossible. You see? But it is what you need to know so that you have the nerve, so that you have the guts, so that you can pull together the stamina to persist in this (as far as the ego is concerned) crazy endeavor of indulging in a holy instant in which you're going to let go of your authority and you're going to say to Something else, "Fill me with your Authority, fill me with the power of the universe that You are . . . I'm going to just [chuckles] . . . I'm just gonna sort of shrivel away into nothing and be nothing here and I'm gonna let the Somethingness that You are be all there is to me. Hey, goodbye cruel world." You see?

But the orphan's perspective is flawed. That is the perspective that is flawed. That is the perspective that is not telling the truth. That is the perspective that can't tell the truth because it doesn't Know the truth.

And there is a way out of the orphanage. There is a way out of "the human condition." There is a way to Wake up. And Waking up is not a false meaningless promise to provide you with some sort of comfort during a miserable experience called, "life."

For a time, you may attempt to bring illusions into the holy instant to hinder your full awareness of the COMPLETE difference, in all respects, between your experience of truth and illusion. Yet you will not attempt this long.

I promise you, you won't. You will let go because you're going to find yourselves slowly becoming discouraged. And fortunately it will be a discouragement applied to the right thing. You will finally become discouraged when it comes to attempting to save yourself, all by yourself . . . and you ask for help.

In the holy instant, the power of the Holy Spirit will prevail because you JOINED Him.

That which is nothing more than your right Mind will prevail when you join with It, because in your act of joining you are making whole that which for a while you pretended were two, were separate, distinct, different. And so the Holy Spirit will prevail when you join because you, in your joining, will be undoing your act of divorce, your act of independence.

The illusions you bring with you . . .

. . . you know, inadvertently, out of habit or because of your unbelief.

The illusions you bring with you will weaken the experience of Him

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . for a while, and will prevent you from keeping the experience in your mind.

The experience of what? The experience of the absence of vengeance. The experience of the past. This will happen. And this is why it will seem futile. You're doing what we've been talking about and yet for some there are incredible corrections, healings occurring. But for the majority, they're not. You see?

Yet the holy instant IS eternal, and your illusions of time will not prevent the timeless from being what it is, nor you from experiencing it as it is.

You see? What you are engaged in, in practicing the holy instant, is to become disenchanted with delusions, it is to become disenchanted with illusions. To arrive at a place where you're willing to look at apparent sin, disease and death and so on and say, "You know what? If there is a God and if God is all, these things are not Real and I am willing to withdraw my investment of faith and trust in what I think I am seeing there. And on top of that, it is my intent to join with my right Mind by asking of the Father, by asking of the Holy Spirit, "What is the truth here? And I am going to persist in this—because there is no other solution—until I see the miraculous, until I see matter start behaving like Spirit, until I see healing occurring, until I see illusion disappearing."

Every one of you have had the experience of having illusions disappear, what you call, "healing" occur. That gives you hope. That keeps you going. But I'm telling you, that this is to be a total shift of perception and not just a healing here and a healing there. We are talking about a shift from the unreal to the Real, from the experience of Reality distorted to the experience of Reality as It is. And in order to abandon Reality distorted, you have to abandon the way of looking at things that causes it to appear to be that way. That's all we're talking about. That is what is accomplished through the holy instant. That is the purpose of the two-step.

"Oh, but the world condition . . . you know . . . how many billions of individual minds are there that would have to change in order for there to be 'Peace on Earth,' in order for there to be 'Brotherly Love' willingly expressed? It's impossible!"

Well, that's what the ego says. It's not what the Holy Spirit says. And this book: A Course In Miracles, its purpose is to cause you to shift your allegiance from your best thinking and your best judgments and your capacity to reason well, to withdraw your investment from that, to abandon it, to let go of the attempt to be successfully independent and join with your Source, so that the perspective that your Source is Being and which is called Creation, no longer escapes you. This is your Birthright.

What God has given you is truly given, and will be truly RECEIVED.

Not because it's forced on you, but because the actuality of it is that there is no you that actually has the capacity to not receive it. You think you do have a capacity not to receive it. And as long as you don't receive it you're having the orphan experience.

But you know what? The orphan mindset is not governing Creation and Creation is the only thing going on, Reality is the only thing occurring right now. And so that which is not going on in Actuality will at some point cease looking like it's going on. And that point where it will cease is, when you stop energizing it by insisting upon independence. Then delusions, then illusions will [snaps fingers] simply vanish and you will have or experience what are called instantaneous healings and the impossible—billions of souls experiencing who they Are and expressing It [snaps fingers] can happen without it taking a thousand or five thousand years for the current mentality of the Planet to change and to change against its natural instincts, which are to war and battle and overcome and control, et cetera.

What God has given you is truly given, and will be truly RECEIVED.

That means that it's already been received. It's already embodied in you. It's already all there is of You. It's your constituting presence.

For God's gifts HAVE no reality apart from your receiving them.
YOUR receiving completes His GIVING.

God has never had or engaged in an unsuccessful act. It's that simple.

You will receive BECAUSE it is His Will to give. He gave the holy instant to be given you, and it is impossible that you receive it not BECAUSE He gave it.

You see? Here's the difference between the orphan's vantage point and the Holy Spirit's vantage point.

When He . . .

. . . God . . .

. . . willed that His Son be free, His Son WAS free.

That means His Sons and Daughters are free right now. This is the radical difference between Reality and unreality, between the Holy Spirit's perspective and the ego's perspective, which are totally opposite.

In the holy instant . . .

. . . in that quietness that you go to and reach out to the Holy Spirit or to the Father . . .

In the holy instant is His reminder that His Son will always be EXACTLY as he was created. And everything the Holy Spirit teaches you is to remind you that you HAVE received what God has given you.

You see, the Holy Spirit's vantage point is: That you're neither behind the point of perfection, nor advancing toward it, that you're at that point and must understand yourself therefrom. You see?

[And] everything the Holy Spirit teaches you is to remind you that you HAVE received what God has given you.

Reality already exists in Its awesome perfection. That means everything about you, everything about what you call the world and universe, everything about your Brothers and Sisters . . . you see? . . . it's already flawlessly perfect right now. If you are seeing imperfection there or anything less than loveliness . . . listen to this: It is not there!

The holy instant and the Holy Spirit exist for the purpose of causing the realization of that fact to occur in your mind, so that you might willingly watch what isn't there disappear NOW, so that healing and correction of illusion can occur NOW. Because there is nothing existing that has to have something done to it to improve it.

Continuing:

There is nothing you can hold against reality. All that must be forgiven are the illusions you have held against your brothers. Their reality HAS no past, and only illusions can BE forgiven.

You see? You're neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it, you're at that point and must understand yourself therefrom . . . right now, today, here.

God holds nothing against anyone, for He is incapable of illusions of ANY kind. Release your brothers from the slavery of their illusions by forgiving them for the illusions which YOU perceive in them.

There it is. And watch it when the argument presents itself, "Well, that won't work." You know, there is a joke: "How many psychiatrists does it take to change a light bulb?" And the answer is: "One, but the light bulb has to be willing to change."

Well, I'm sorry . . . your Brother doesn't have to be willing to change in order for you to make the gift of the willingness to persist in the holy instant until you find the Holy Spirit infilling you with the conscious awareness of your Brother's present inviolable and therefore eternal perfection.

Release your brothers from the slavery of their illusions by forgiving them for the illusions which YOU perceive in them. Thus will you learn that YOU have been forgiven, for it is YOU who offered them illusions.

Hey, if you're seeing the bastard or the bitch, you're offering them that illusion. And if you persist in behaving as though they are a bastard or a bitch, you will be consistently teaching them illusions about themselves. You certainly will not be indulging in the holy instant in which your awareness can be purified, filled with the awareness of truth about them that causes your whole being, your whole demeanor, your whole perception of them to be changed, so that even if they seem to persist in bad behavior you won't respond as though the behavior is real or true or calling for condemnation. And you will find the words being present in you that illuminate that element in your Brother that he or she recognizes as their perfect safety so that they can let go of the defense that has caused them to seem to be a bitch or a bastard.

In the holy instant this is done for you IN TIME, to bring to you the true condition of Heaven.

So you seem to come to the holy instant because in your orphan mentality you're experiencing a problem that you cannot ignore. And the Holy Spirit, whom you reach out to, responds, not from the orphan level, but from the level of communion with Reality, communion with God and communion with You, as the divine one that you Are and reveals to you, in time—where you as the orphan was experiencing the problem—correction, the revealing or uncovering of the Kingdom of Heaven that was being misinterpreted and suffered from. You see? And it brings to you the true condition of Heaven. And that's the way it works . . . and that's not magic.

By golly, you have to get past this point of the confidences you have about what can't work and what can't be done because, only that cannot work, only that cannot be done which the ego perceives, which the orphan mindset perceives of what? . . . of the perfect Kingdom of Heaven, but seen through the lens of independence, of being without a Source, of being insane.

So, once again, we are still talking about the simplicity. What I mean to convey tonight is, that you must be willing to see that it's like there are two different orders of reality . . . that's not the right word, because one of them is unreality. It's like two different paradigms and yet paradigms seem to indicate validity even though there may be a shift from one to another.

But the point is, that unreality is unreal. And the Holy Spirit is speaking to you, is connecting with you, is teaching you from that Place which is the Father's Mind, to reveal to you your alliance with the Father's Mind and the fact that all there is to your Mind is the Father's Mind. And therefore, there simply is no presence or power that is binding you to the experience of illusion.

Be ready at every moment from now on to see delusions [snaps fingers] vanish, to see healings [snaps fingers] occur, to see correction happen where you were convinced it could not.

The Holy Spirit is not responding to you from the place you're asking Him for help. You're asking Him for help from a place of ignorance. He's answering you from a place of illumination. And the fact is, that the place of illumination that He's speaking to you from is your natural abode, because He is nothing more than your right Mind.

You know what? A Course In Miracles, is not a course in miracles. A Course In Miracles is not a book about a course in miracles, it's all about you. It's all about learning how you're using your mind, so that you can stop unconsciously binding yourself to limitations which it's not your Birthright to be experiencing, and so that you might be released into the fullness of your divine Being.

Wow! I love you, and you, and you, and all of you. I look forward to being with your next week.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

February 16th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Again, I'm going to remind everyone that we're reading from a chapter called, The Forgiveness of Illusions. And we're in the last section of that chapter which is called, The End of Illusions.

I want everybody not to be too casual as we consider this.

"Oh, yes . . . we're reading about the end of illusions. Yes, isn't that wonderful? Some day the end of illusions will come. The concept of the end of illusions is an amazing concept to consider. What the actuality of it might be like is mind-boggling."

Well, c'mon everyone, let's stop all that bullshit! Because you can talk about and think about the end of illusions and actually end up being very casual about the end of illusions without ever experiencing them.

There's nothing casual or simple or everyday about the end of illusions. And you know what? This week I want you to get a piece of paper and I want you to write the word, "Radical" on it. And I want you to put it on your refrigerator or wherever you can see it frequently. Put it on your dashboard. Be reminded that Waking up is a radical transformation of you. And it's a radical transformation of the way in which you experience everything. My God, if you experience the end of illusions and you are not confronted with anything but Reality anymore, I promise you it's going to be radically different . . . thank God.

Let the word, "radical," shall I say, become less radical to you so that you're willing to consider it as a possibility: Radical healing . . . radical transformation . . . radical wonder . . . radically perfect life . . . radically incredible unfoldment of Being.

I mean, after all, if you're going to look at everything that you've been seeing and thinking was the "human condition" was "planet earth and the universe" and that's all it was, well I promise you that to suddenly experience it as the Kingdom of Heaven without any aspect of its divinity escaping you, that is going to be radically different!

And you know what? If you're not considering radical change, if you're not expecting to be provided with the opportunity to embrace radical change, I promise you, you will stay bound to what you are expecting—to the less that you are expecting.

The holy instant. My God, we've been talking about it for more than a year . . . more than two years. Have you become numb to it? Are you casual about it? Is it a wonderful subject and is it one that since we have discussed it together, you can talk about more at length than you ever were able to before? Are you able to express ideas about it that make you feel better and make others feel better without your actually having the experience—without actually experiencing radical wonderful transformed Mind?

That's the point! That is why you go to the trouble of practicing the holy instant.

In the holy instant, as we've discussed, God's laws prevail. God's Nature prevails. God's Intent prevails. God's Love prevails. And in that place where God prevails, there is no sin, sickness or death. To not experience sin, sickness or death when that's all you ever have experienced, that is a radical change.

"Oh, I know . . . but it can't happen to me. That's why I like to think about it. I like to imagine that it can happen to me, I like to be able to talk about why it can happen to me and what it will be like when it happens to me . . . but, you know, [sighs] it isn't going to . . . it hasn't . . . and I don't see how it can."

Well, let me tell you: That's not radical thinking. That's not being radical. That's not embracing the radical. All we're talking about, all we've been talking about is embracing the radical.

When you say the Lord's Prayer . . . and you say, "Thy Will be done . . ." don't you realize that you're saying, "I invite the radically different experience of being that You provide than the one that I've been providing myself while I've been claiming to be an orphan"? "Thy Will be done" is saying, "I desire to experience Something radically different from the best I've ever been able to come up with in my individual independent acts of creativity." That's what you're saying.

Going into the book, and I want to point out to you that what we're going to be reading tonight is like the frosting on the cake. It's sweet, it's wonderful, it's beautiful . . . [sighs] . . . but in all likelihood, it's not what's happening in your life, at least not to any great extent. And so what good does it do for it to be beautiful? What good does it do for it to be sweet? So let's not be casual as we read it. Let's not let it just be sweet and consoling and encouraging.

Remember that you always choose between truth and illusion; . . .¹

. . . Why? Because there isn't anything else to choose between. You are either choosing between what God is revealing to you and you are embracing and letting find expression through you, or you are choosing for illusion—which means, you are preoccupied only with your own best thinking or worst thinking. No matter what it is, you are impressed with your thinking, that's what you practice. And that is illusion, because the moment you engage in that, you have withdrawn your attention from your connection with the Father. You have pulled the plug. No juice. No Source finding expression through you.

And so the experience is false. Simple.

Remember that you always choose between . . .

. . . [whispers] one of two things . . .

. . . truth and illusion; between the REAL Atonement which would heal and the ego's "atonement" which would destroy. The power of God and all His Love, without limit, will support you as you seek only your place in the plan of Atonement arising from His Love.

Let's not slip past that too quickly. Because, what's being said there is, it happens only as you yield to Him, only as you yield to His Plan. And isn't that the movement of the holy instant? Isn't that the movement of the two-step? You hesitate. You shut up. You silence your thinking. And you turn from your independent stance toward your Father—your Source—and you say, "Father, what is the truth here?" and you join in that place of no orphan self-assertion and in that place of listening for the Father's Will, the Father's Perspective. What are you doing? You're yielding your right to be assertive, independent, controlling—you're abandoning that and yielding to the Father.

Now listen:

The power of God and all His Love, without limit, will support you

. . . see, that's the frosting on the cake. That's the unbelievable truth. That's the wonderful truth that everyone of you hopes is true, wishes is true.

The power of God and all His Love, without limit, will support . . .

. . . what?

. . . as you seek only your place in the plan of Atonement . . .

. . . where do you fit in to the plan of Atonement? Where do you fit in as the expression of God and not the expression of your will? You see? It . . .

. . . will support you as you seek only your place in the plan of Atonement . . .

. . . what? . . . which is . . .

. . . arising from His Love.

He's the authority. He's the Movement of Creation.

So, listen again:

The power of God . . .

. . . where God's laws prevail, where God prevails, and where there's no sin, sickness or death.

The power of God and all His Love, without limit, will support you as you seek only your place in the plan of Atonement arising from His Love.

So in a way, it's not really just sweet. It's demanding. Because it puts it straight to you, what's called for, so there's no confusion. But, it requires something of you that you're not inclined to do. It requires you to abandon self-will. It requires you to abandon authority that you think you have or ought to be able to have. It requires you to abandon acts that you have engaged in for the purpose of proving your worth, believing that if you don't engage in them your worthlessness will prevail and be seen by everyone. And you don't want that. And so you hold onto your right to be self-assertive.

But when you do that, you're in the orphan mentality, you're in the level of thinking, and you are not in that place where God's laws prevail as far as you're concerned. You will not be having that experience of His laws prevailing.

Be an ally of God and not the ego in seeking how Atonement can come to you.

Again, this requires self-discipline. Because your habit is to immediately refer to your best conditionings, your best thinking, your best concepts and a capacity you believe you have to express or use logic so clearly and so well that it will cause you to be utterly safe because the structures of the logic are impeccable and don't allow for anything unlike it to enter in. This is a concept you have about the use of your mind and what your mind can accomplish by being so perfectly orderly.

And yet, all the time you're engaged in energizing that and giving your attention to that, you're not listening.

Now I understand, you've not been taught to listen. And you didn't know that there was such a thing as the two-step or a holy instant. But now you do. And that makes all the difference in the world.

Be an ally of God and not the ego in seeking how Atonement can come to you. His help suffices, . . .

. . . in other words, it's all you need. You don't need the added impetus of your will added to the Father's Will to make God's Will be . . . be . . . to make God's Will be. You don't need to add your will. You see?

His help suffices, for His Messenger . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . understands how to restore the Kingdom to you, and to place ALL your investment in salvation in your relationship with Him.

Meaning, the Father. It's true.

. . . His Messenger . . .

. . . which is the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind—what you might call, the part of your infinite Mind that you have disowned in your act of independence.

. . . His Messenger understands . . .

... your right Mind understands ...

... how to restore the Kingdom to you.

It knows how to restore it to you because it knows that its, I'm going to say for lack of better words, merging with your little private sealed off part of the totality of your mind will cause your mind, your Being to be experienced in its totality. You see?

And that's how the Kingdom is restored. It's your sanity being restored. It's your whole mindedness being restored. We could say, it's your mind allowing for the ultimately radical to be possible first, probable second, and incredibly different from the best creativity you have been able to come up with, which has amounted to acts of denying reality—acts of denying the Kingdom of Heaven—because you've been so busy giving your definitions to what God already defined. And your definitions have been different from the Father's. You see?

Again:

His help ...

... God's ...

... help suffices, for His Messenger ...

... the Holy Spirit ...

... understands how to restore the Kingdom to you, and to place ALL your investment in salvation in your relationship with Him.

... with God.

The Holy Spirit, in reuniting your parceled off part of your mind with It—with the wholeness of your Mind, that which is nothing more than your right Mind—causes Reality to be your experience and causes you to be utterly aware of the fact that what God is constitutes the totality of you, and therefore, your radical holiness, we could say, . . . the experience will be a radically different experience.

Seek and FIND His message in the holy instant, . . .

... in other words, stop going elsewhere—meaning your best thinking and so on. Stop going elsewhere ...

Seek and FIND His message in the holy instant, where all illusions are forgiven. From there the miracle extends to bless everyone and to resolve all problems, . . .

. . . radical change again . . .

. . . be they perceived as great or small, possible or impossible.

You know, it doesn't say, "It's nice to know that you can find His message in the holy instant, where all illusions are forgiven." It doesn't say, "It's nice to know that." It says, "Engage in something."

Seek and FIND His message in the holy instant, where all illusions are forgiven.

You know where all illusions are forgiven? In the seeking and finding.

"Oh, I'll find it in the holy instant." No, you'll find it in the seeking and finding. You see?

So this wonderful sweetness has a little substance to it, a little bite to it perhaps, because it calls for something:

Seek and FIND His message in the holy instant, where all illusions are forgiven. From there . . .

. . . what happens? . . .

. . . the miracle extends to bless everyone and to resolve all problems, be they perceived as great or small, possible or impossible.

"Oh-h . . . her gallbladder is almost totally eaten up by cancer. It's impossible for her to recover. Maybe someday medical science will be able to grow her a new one quickly and replace it, but until then it's impossible!"

I'm sorry that's not radical thinking. That's fatalistic thinking—there is no God in it.

. . . be they perceived as great or small, possible or impossible.

. . . the miracle extends to bless everyone and to resolve all problems, . . .

. . . you see? This is radical. This is why you can't afford, in the face of your conditioning, to look at the world situation or your immediate situation in all of its chaos or all of its turmoil or all of its suffering and sort of collapse on the floor and not make any room for any radical stand—the embrace of any radical claim that challenges the seeming actuality of the distress or the illness or whatever it might be. From there . . .

. . . the miracle extends to bless everyone and to resolve all problems, . .

. . . but the only way . . .

. . . the miracle extends to bless everyone and to resolve all problems, . .

. . . is for you to . . .

Seek and FIND His message . . .

. . . where? Not in your best judgment, your best reasoning, your best thinking, your best logic but in the holy instant. In that place where you abandon your independence, you abandon your self-confidence and you say, “Father, I want to know the truth from You. I want the whole truth and nothing but the truth from Your perspective. And I’m giving up my attempts to come up with my best solution or my best definition. I yield. I seek only my place in the plan of atonement arising from Your Love. I don’t choose to seek my place on my own in my independent locality.” You see? It’s simple.

Remember that you always choose between . . .

. . . two things . . .

. . . truth and illusion; . .

More sweetness:

There is nothing that will not give place to Him and to His majesty.

Well it’s the truth. But how many of you are having that experience, or how many of you in the experiences that you’re having, read this and find yourself hard-put to accept it or perhaps you are in such distress that you sarcastically laugh at it? I understand. But:

There is nothing that will not give place to Him and to His majesty.

How do you have the experience? You engage in being radical. You engage in going against the status-quo. You be that which doesn't fit in with the norm. You object to what everybody else is agreeing to. And you object to it by not leaning into your own understanding. You object to it by seeking and finding His message in the holy instant.

To join in close relationship with Him is to accept relationships as REAL, . .

. . . meaning something more than avenues of usury and manipulation, where you "best" each other for purposes of gain at others' expense.

To join in close relationship with Him is to accept relationships as REAL, and through their reality to give over all illusions for the reality of your relationship with God.

See? Again:

Seek and FIND His message in the holy instant, . .

. . . give over all illusions for the reality of your relationship with God.

In a way, you have to become like the Prodigal Son who has to become sick and tired of wasting his abundance, of wasting his wealth, of wasting his Birthright, where the thrill of the quest to be independently somebody is just not interesting to you anymore. And you're willing to say, "Father, I want to know what Your perspective is because I want to come back into my right Mind. And I know that Your perspective is my perspective, if I don't object to it. It's built into me. It's part of me. I'm too tired to continue aggressive independence.

Praise be to your relationship with Him, and to no other.

Right? The screws are being tightened down here causing things to be very, very clear.

Praise be to your relationship with Him, and . . .

. . . what? . .

. . . to no other.

You've got to be willing to abandon your relationship with: Oh, your special thoughts. Oh, your special relationships. Oh, your special skills. Oh, your best capacity to manipulate people and make them serve you and make you be credible. You see?

Praise be to your relationship with Him, and to no other. The truth lies here, and nowhere else. You choose this or NOTHING.

Again, as we started out:

Remember that you always choose between truth and illusion; . .

The truth lies . . .

. . . in your relationship with God . . .

. . . and nowhere else. You choose this or NOTHING.

In order to find out that the chaos, the turmoil, the suffering, the lack, the illness that seems to be binding you is an illegitimate imposition upon a Son or Daughter of God, which means it is therefore not actual but a distorted perception of something that is actual, which is Creation Itself, which is flawless, absolutely pure flawless God embodied. In order to have that experience, you've got to be radical enough to challenge it.

When you get to the end of a day—and, let's say, you're perfectly well, you haven't had a symptom of any problem of any kind for months, you're in the "pink of health," as they say . . . and you come to the end of the day—you, let's say, have worked out in the yard, you've done a lot of things that were laborious (it was invigorating to you while you were doing it) you've come into the house, you've showered, you've had dinner, you've sat down and you say, "Wow, I deserve a rest . . . you know . . . and when it comes time to go to bed I'm going to sleep beautifully."

Well, wait a minute! All of that seems very reasonable, but it's far from radical thinking. It's far from the radicalism that would be involved if you stopped right there and said, "Father, what is the truth here about this?" Because as a divine Idea of the Father expressed, you have no capacity to be exhausted. As it has been said, "God rests in action."²

So, you see how easily you're sucked in. It doesn't even have to be a physical problem, it doesn't have to be sin, sickness or death. But just a mindset that says, "You know, I'm not as capable now at eight o'clock in the evening as I was when I got up and started the day at eight o'clock in the morning." Well, wait a minute, why not? You could be. You see? Contemplate it.

Now, here's the prayer that amounts to the two-step and its meaning:

"Forgive us our illusions, Father, . .

. . . Oh, independence abandoned . . . Oh-h.

"Forgive us our illusions, Father, and help us to accept our true relationship with You, in which . . .

. . . what? . .

. . . there are no illusions, and where none can ever enter.

That's significant. That's because in the holy instant when you're in that place, God's laws prevail. And illusions cannot enter where God's laws prevail.

Our holiness is Yours.

In other words, I accept my Birthright. I accept that I am Your expression, Your Son or Daughter. I accept that all there is to me is what You've embodied of Yourself in me as Me. And that You have withheld nothing of what You infinitely Are in what You have embodied in Me.

What can there be in us that NEEDS forgiveness when Yours is perfect?

And when I have chosen to be in the holy instant where Your laws prevail.

The sleep of forgetfulness is only the unwillingness to remember Your forgiveness and Your Love.

. . . "well, I'm too busy taking care of things myself." You see?

Let us not wander into temptation, . .

. . . temptation to what? Temptation to be angry. Temptation to be jealous. Temptation to take advantage of your Brother. Temptation . . . temptation . . . temptation.

Let us not wander into temptation, for the temptation of the Son of God is not Your Will. And let us receive only what YOU have given, . .

Oh, that is so insulting to the orphan mindset—to the ego. Yet, what are you doing when you do that? You're letting God's laws prevail and radically change your experience of being, bringing you back into your right Mind.

And let us receive only what YOU have given, and accept but this into the minds which You created, and which You love. Amen."

You have available to you, every instant, to let each instant be the holy instant. You are not short-changed in any way from having the opportunity to practice the holy instant—instants are abundantly provided.

Now, remember what I said. Keep the word "radical" in your mind and remember that what we're talking about is not "ho-hum," average, casual fair for contemplation and discussion and stimulating camaraderie that is nothing but a distraction from actually seeking and finding His message in the holy instant, in which you will find something happening because God's laws prevail. And God's laws prevailing will cause your experience to change radically. That's the promise and that's the truth!

I look forward to being with you next time. And I will be with everyone as they practice the holy instant in support of your not forgetting to expect the radically new.

Okay.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

February 23rd 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, if everyone hasn't realized it, we have arrived at a point where the key to Awakening, you might say, has been revealed—uncovered, made exceptionally clear.

The practice of the holy instant, the practice of the two-step is the means of Waking up. It's not any more complicated than that. And there isn't any more profound lesson to learn. For the most part, what we will cover in the rest of the Course will simply be explanations of how everyone avoids the holy instant.

So, I want everyone to be aware and I—you can count on it—will not let anyone forget that we have arrived at the apex of what the Course teaches. This should not be abandoned. This awareness should not be forgotten as we continue and discover the blocks to Love's Awareness—the blocks to Awakening.

Now mind you, as we proceed, all of you will find at one time or another, an explanation of the blocks that you specifically use, and it will make sense to you. But you know what? None of you, no one actually has to go through the examination of every single means by which you block the holy instant.

What you need to do is to start practicing it now . . . and now . . . and now . . . and now. Practice it while you're reading about the blocks to Love's Awareness—the blocks to Awakening. Don't read about the blocks and say, "Wow, [chuckles] isn't that incredible the way the human mind works?" and talk at length about it, without ever abandoning the practice of thinking about how the human mind works. Because as long as you're thinking, you're not practicing the holy instant. You're doing the one thing that blocks it.

During this past week as you have attempted, we'll say, to be radical and to hesitate and ask for the Father's Perspective now . . . now . . .and now . . . you may have had clarification, you may have had wonderful examples of God's Perspective which is radical to your present sense of things. You also may have experienced a week in which things seemed to get worse.

It's very simple. The ego does not willingly, gladly let go of its hold on your attention. And so when you get close to being free of it, it attempts to the best of its ability, to distract you.

Now, how does it distract you? Not by giving you a string of words that you can use as a defense against Waking up, but rather by suggesting to you really interesting things that you might do to make things better, or provide you with a new radical project for you to work on, for you to develop. You see?

Or it might distract you by preoccupying yourself with how others are behaving. You see? So that you might correct a situation or exercise some beneficent help all by yourself. You see?

Now, the key to Awakening, the practice of the holy instant, amounts to something utterly simple. So simple that it goes right past you. The simplicity of it is that when you stop thinking, when you go into the Silence and there, inquire of the Father, you have stopped thinking.

The Silence is the key. And the inquiry of the Father or the inquiry of the Holy Spirit is the essential and only step needed other than listening and accepting what unfolds—what is presented to you.

But you know what? Most of you think that being conscious means thinking. If you're not sleeping, if you're awake, you're thinking! But of course, anyone who learns meditation soon discovers that there is a way to be conscious without thinking. There is a way to be in the Silence. So thinking is not identical with Being. It is not inseparable from Being. It is not inseparable from your existing as You. What you think doesn't make you, You.

You simply are You. And in the Silence of your mind you experience that. And in the experience of the fact that thinking has nothing to do with your Being, you become free to listen. You become truly free to ask, "What is the truth here in the unendingness of me in the Silence that I'm experiencing? What is the truth of my Being, in the Silence? What is the truth that it's the Birthright of my mind to be experiencing?"

You're conditioned against not thinking, believe it or not. After all, how many of you have heard the admonishment, "An idle mind is the devil's workshop"¹ as though it is the worse thing in the world for your mind to be idle? "Oh, don't let your children have idle minds, they'll get into trouble. You have a mind to solve problems with. It's your function to solve problems." You see?

The key to Awakening is abandoning everything that results from thinking. Because what results from thinking are structures of imagination which keep you preoccupied with them and disallow for you in the quietness to hear the still small Voice of God, or to hear the truth. It's that simple.

So, that's all it takes. And the reason the Course is so long is because it was important to express how many different ways are used to keep thinking going. How many ways are used to keep Silence from happening? How many little tricks of the mind, how many little habits of the mind, how many characteristics of the ego exist and are practiced for the purpose of not having an idle mind, which ultimately means not having the environment in which your release from illusion can occur? Because the environment of that is Silence with attention being given, curiosity being practiced: "Father, what is the truth here?" You see? Yielding to the Father.

You think that if you do it, you will cease to be. But what you Are in your divine wholeness and in your capacity to experience Creation as what It is, rather than what you've defined It as, that is your Birthright and that is what you Are. You are the place of acknowledgement of what Creation is, and by the acknowledgement, in the acknowledgment, participating in Creation, being co-creators by introducing nothing foreign to it, and thereby being able to experience all of it in its actuality, which constitutes the joy of your Being because that is your function.

So, whether this last week has been easy or difficult, whether the practice of the two-step and the holy instant seems to have born fruit or not, there still is only one means of Awakening . . . and persist . . . persist.

Well, you say, "I don't have enough faith. I don't have enough impetus to go the distance. It's going to be a lot harder than what I can accomplish."

But it's not true.

For most of you, you have arrived at one time or another in your life where you were too exhausted, simply too exhausted to be a fake, to not be yourself. You were too exhausted to try to be something you couldn't be. And you arrived at a point where you felt like you gave up. And when you gave up, Revelation occurred.

The saying is, "Man's extremity is God's opportunity."² And that's because in moments of true helplessness where you feel truly helpless and you just let yourself be there because you don't have any energy to be anywhere else, at that moment [snaps fingers] the light flashes—it turns on, the illumination occurs.

To one degree or another, all of you have had some experience like that. And if you haven't yet, it's on your threshold. Because it is Awakening time. I promise you that.

So you see, it isn't a matter of being equal to Waking up, it's actually a matter of doing less and of arriving at a point voluntarily or involuntarily where you give up, where you stop trying to be something, and you stop saying "my will be done" and you start saying, "Thy Will be done" and mean it.

You know, that's all it takes. It takes letting go completely without an Ace up your sleeve. It means abandoning the right you think you have to think your way through your life and your problems and engage in problem-solving.

If you have a counselor who can provide you with perspective far beyond what you can drum up in your imagination and that counselor provides you with perspective that you find out is your real perspective but you've just been ignoring it, can you see that that process isn't a loss of worth or validity but an uncovering of a more complete worth and validity than you ever imagined?

That's what this is about. And that's what you must remember. And that's what you must attempt to practice as you go through your day—an activity which you habitually have approached as opportunity after opportunity for you to think your way through this, that or the other thing and demonstrate success—you must be willing to go through your day constantly saying, "Father what is the truth here? Father what is the truth here? Not my will be done but Thy Will be done." You see? "What is Your Will? Because I know that everything I try to do by myself is going to keep me in the dark, is going to keep me ignorant even though I'm totally familiar with it and feel fully functional." You see?

It's the fact that the simplicity of "the process" of Waking up involves doing the very thing that you thought gave you meaning. It's that that causes you to be unwilling to put your faith in it and to lean into it and to yield into it—to let go into it. You see? That's the simplicity of it.

And so, Waking up is a matter of going against your conditioning. It truly is. If it wasn't, you all would have Woken up a long time ago because it's so darn simple! Understand this, so that when it seems unnatural, you don't say, "Well, this can't be a divine activity. God would never set it up like this. If I'm supposed to Wake up, it should be easy." You see? Well there you are . . . thinking! And there you are convincing yourself that "an idle mind is a devil's workshop." An idle mind, a silent mind is something to avoid. Certainly, don't even try it and explore it and find out whether it's the truth or not. You see?

You've got to remember that the act, if you will, that triggers Awakening is an act—an effortless act. It's an act of not acting. It takes less than anything you expect.

Let's go into the Book. The subject of this chapter:

FORGIVENESS AND HEALING³

Or:

FORGIVENESS AND THE HOLY RELATIONSHIP

The betrayal of the Son of God lies only in illusions, and all his "sins" are but his own imagining.

. . . well, the betrayal is when you turn someone over to an enemy, when you cause someone to be at a disadvantage in the face of something that's not in his best interest.

Well, you do that all the time with each other. You look at each other and you say, "Oh-h, she's not the Son of God, Oh, he's the Son of God, she's not the Daughter of God and he's not the Son of God. No, he's a bastard and she's a bitch. Boy if you saw what she did last week . . . and blah . . . blah . . . blah."

You betrayed your Brother and Sister. Why? Because your act didn't involve acknowledging God in him or her, but something else—something unlike God. Something unlike God is something opposite of God—something opposite of good.

And so you commit that one in your mind, as well as by means of your behavior, to hell—to a position of being unholy. It's that simple. And you betray that one's unholiness to everyone you can whose knowledge of it will help you in your cause to make yourself better. You see?

But you know what? When you said, "Father, I would rather see things my way, Father, I would rather make the definitions . . . I want a divorce," you betrayed yourself. Because you turned yourself over to what's left when you've disconnected from your Source. And when you've disconnected from your Source, you're left with that which is unlike your Source. And so you've betrayed yourself to an ego that you call yours.

So:

The betrayal of the Son of God lies only in illusions, and all his "sins" are but his own imagining.

Listen:

You know, we've been talking about forgiveness, but:

He need not be forgiven but AWAKENED.

That's what the two-step is for: To put you in a position not of infinite progression, but immediate perfection, immediate experience of what you divinely Are. That's Awakening. It's not forgiveness.

In his dreams he HAS betrayed himself, his brothers and his God. Yet . .

. . . and here's the key . . .

. . . what is done in dreams has not been REALLY done.

That's why I say, that when you look at everything around you and just say that it's a material world, that it's a planet and a universe that was happenstance, pure physical evolution, having nothing to do with a divine Principle or God, you are misperceiving and misunderstanding the Kingdom of Heaven. Because the Kingdom of Heaven is the only thing confronting you to experience, clearly or through a glass darkly—unclearly. It's that simple.

If you're seeing it through a glass darkly, you haven't changed what you're looking at, you've just altered your perception. And so, that's why I say, when you're looking at this and you see injury, illness, sin and so on, it's because of the lens that you're looking through.

There isn't an actual damage or illness or injury that needs to be manipulated into a better form. You have to take off the lens through which you're looking at it. And, like that, the illusion of sin, sickness and death will stop . . . because it isn't happening! It is a current misperception of the current manifestation of Creation, God's Creation, The Kingdom of Heaven, right now.

If you understand that, if you grasp what I'm saying, it will allow you to embrace radical sudden changes of perception, because you'll realize you don't have to wait for matter to go through necessary physical processes to change.

The lens that causes you to see the substance of Spirit and call it matter, when you take that lens off, the appearance of matter that's difficult to change is gone and you are left with the flawless perception of Reality—of the Kingdom of Heaven—not just a perception but also the feeling, because whether it's a sofa or a carpet or a flower or a rock, it is absolutely divine. And it is not a separate divinity from your divinity. And it is living Love. And it is expressing Love toward every other part of Creation, so that all of Creation blesses all of Creation constantly. And that feeling is radically different from what you're experiencing right now.

Again, it doesn't need to take eons to arrive at that experience. What it requires is a certain defenselessness. See? Not hard work but the absence of work. Not a strong defense but [deep sigh] defenselessness. You see?

. . . what is done in dreams has not been REALLY done. It is impossible to convince the dreamer that this is so, for dreams are what they are BECAUSE of their illusion of reality.

At night when you're dreaming you have no sense whatsoever that what's happening isn't anything other than real, but it's not. But:

It is impossible to convince the dreamer that this is so, for dreams are what they are BECAUSE of their illusion of reality. Only in waking is the full release from them, for only then does it become perfectly apparent that they had no effect on reality at all, and [it] did not change it.

Simple. It didn't change it. That means that at this moment nothing has been changed from what God is Being right there where that thing is right now. The truth of what God is being right where you are or right where anything is, is available to you now, because it's a distorted perception that's blocking its truth from you, while not changing it at all.

Keep reminding yourself of this because it's foreign to the way you think. You must help yourself by practicing, I'm going to say, thinking truly (and I'm hesitating to say that). But as you consider what I'm saying it will become clear to you that no matter what's in your face, the divine truth about it, the God presencing fact about it, is present right now, no matter how unlike that it appears. And what It truly Is, is available to you right now. And the only thing that needs to happen to see It is the abandonment of your confidence that you know what it is, or the abandonment of your supposed right to have the authority to see things the way you want to see them, which means saying, "Not my will but Thine be done."⁴

Fantasies CHANGE reality. That is their PURPOSE. They cannot do so in reality, but they CAN do so in the mind that would have reality different.

See? They can do so in the mind that says, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. Father, I'd rather experience everything without joining with You, so that I might experience Your perspective and the meaning You were embodying of Your divine Self, your divine Being in that thing." You're saying, "I don't want that." You see? Now all you have to do is stop not wanting that . . . and saying, "You know what, I don't have the foggiest notion what that carpet means. I haven't the foggiest notion what divine Movement of God is embodied in what I call a carpet." You see? Everything becomes something to become curious about . . . alive to.

It is, then, only your wish to change reality that is fearful, . .

. . . you introduce the fearful by wishing to see things differently. Now you don't really say, "Oh-ho, I see . . . I see a bug there that I've never seen before and I want to have a different perspective on it than what God has." You don't say that. You just decide spontaneously to study it and come to your own best conclusions, with the best use of logic, without ever abandoning your independent examination to invite the experience of revelation. That's all.

So:

It is, then, only your wish to change reality that is fearful, . .

. . . and you wish to change Reality by determining what Reality is yourself . . .

. . . because by your wish you think you have ACCOMPLISHED what you wish.

That's part of the dream. The dream is unreal but it seems to be real. And you think you have accomplished your goal of defining what things are and gaining a meaningful understanding of how things work. But the problem is that the rationale and the logic that you use to come to an understanding of what things mean is based upon a fundamental ignorance, a fundamentally flawed mind, if you will. Because you've taken out of the infinity of your mind a small portion of it, circumscribed it, separated from the rest, causing the rest to become the Holy Spirit—your right Mind held in trust while you dally with this tiny small part. You see?

And you're caught by what seem to be your accomplishments. And you're caught by the ego hit that you get from this sense of actual accomplishment, when the fact is, that disconnected from your Source, separated from your whole Mind, there is no way to come to unflawed conclusions. It's that simple.

This strange position, in a sense, acknowledges your power.

You have power. But your power is present for the purpose of recognizing the Movement of God and acknowledging It, experiencing It for what It is, and by your awareness of It and recognition of what It is being the completion or the wholeness of the Movement of Creation.

Anyway, . . .

. . . you think you have ACCOMPLISHED what you wish. [And] This strange position, in a sense, acknowledges your power. Yet by distorting it, and devoting it to "evil," it also makes it unreal.

What does that mean . . . devotes it to "evil"? Well, it devotes it to what isn't God, right? Because you're not connecting with your Source, you're not connecting with the Father, so you're connecting with an imagined presence that is not God. And what is not God is not good. What is not God is evil—not a power, not a presence, but an experience you have as long as you exist in a state of denying God and denying your Birthright. Simple.

That experience you get hooked into and you function at odds with the Father and you function in a manner that disallows for your Awakening. That is destructive. And “evil” is as good a word to use for destructive as anything else.

Yet by distorting it, and devoting it to "evil," it also makes it unreal.

Why? Because it brings everything into the realm of the disconnected orphan mentality, in which nothing is actually happening, because there is no such thing as a disconnected orphan mentality except to the dreamer as long as the dreamer insists on dreaming.

You cannot be faithful to two masters who ask of you conflicting things.

Simple.

What you use in fantasy you DENY to truth.

In your devotion to your private orphan mindset you are actively denying the Father. You've gotten your divorce. You're happy to act independently. You're hooked on independence and the hit you get from potentially becoming real and actual and valid in your own right—all by yourself. Well, that's denying who you Are and it's denying that you have a Source and therefore, it's a denial of the Father. It's not only confused mind it's insane mind. But even so, insanity is an illusion. So it hasn't changed You and it hasn't changed anything that you're having misperceptions of.

What you use in fantasy you DENY to truth. Yet what you GIVE to truth to use for you is safe from fantasy.

And there are four words there—key words: to use for you. And here again we come to this thing that's so insulting for the ego, where you have to completely yield to Something else governing you.

What you use in fantasy you DENY to truth.

Your state of independence is a denial of your Birthright and your Sonship, Daughtership.

Yet what you GIVE to truth to use for you . . .

. . . what you GIVE to truth so that it might reveal to you what is the truth, so that it might be that which you do not wish to have an opposing perspective about . . .

. . . is safe from fantasy.

You see? This is a hard thing to embrace. I know you can catch the idea and then it escapes you. You get a glimpse of it and you feel the truth of it, but it escapes you immediately.

Keep providing the opportunity for the glimpse by considering what we're talking about, so that it might, by virtue of more and more glimpses cause you be able to be more believing. So that you might arrive at a point where it seems justifiable to just simply stop thinking and listen, so that the true perception can be provided to you, uncovering the true experience of who you Are so that you might take your place as co-Creators with God and be through with the dream—be through with prolonged sin, sickness and death.

Immediate release is the only kind of release you're ever going to experience.

So, practice the holy instant. Do the two-step with a radical anticipation of truly different perspective and truly different perceptions of the same-old-same-old that uncover that what you thought was the same-old-same-old is the incredible, awesome Kingdom of Heaven, and it's the uncovering of capacities you didn't know your mind had, which it's your Birthright to have returned to you. And which the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind—is insisting on helping you reincorporate.

Don't get serious about this. Don't get bogged down with it. Treat it lightly this week. Treat all of these things lightly. Let them be grace-notes in your mind that lift you, buoy you up, allow you to have a confidence to let go more significantly.

And I will look forward to being with your next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

March 12th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. Before we begin, let's take a few moments to be quiet together.

[quiet time]

Tonight, I have a specific purpose. And that is, to remind each of you of how important you are, you holy Sons of God, you holy Daughters of God.

I don't mean important in an egotistical way, I mean important in terms of real value. You're not orphans, you're not just human beings, you are holy Sons and Daughters of God and your Being has Meaning.

Your existence means something to everything and every one.

Sometimes you forget this. Sometimes you think you're just a little piss-ant mortal—a nothing, a nobody. But it's just a belief! It's not the truth! It's what you may have convinced yourselves of but you have convinced yourselves of an illusion.

Now, we've talked before about the fact that there are no private thoughts. There is no private anything. God is infinite. God is omnipresent. Therefore, Mind—the infinite Mind that God is—is omnipresent, infinite . . . that's why there's nothing private. And everything in the Mind of God, which is Creation, which is ever-unfolding, is related to everything else, you might say, in the infinite Mind of God, in the omnipresence, the all oneness of Mind—infinite variety, but all one . . . infinite variety, but all equally related and involved and meaningful to every other part.

There simply is no privacy. Nothing separated off.

Hey, we have been talking for a number of years as we've been going through the Course about the fact that everybody thinks they've gotten a divorce from their Father and that they are independent agents, but it just aint so. And coming out of that belief is what Waking up is about . . . it's what the Course is about . . . it's what your purpose is at the present time.

Now, why am I saying this? Because on the world-scene right now in the last two days, there is a situation or a circumstance or a set of circumstances that are going on and evolving and developing and growing and becoming more confused and on and on.

And you know what? If any of you are sitting watching the television hour after hour or for any length of time, and watching the disaster as it's called, the tragedy as it's called . . . the whatever words are being used to describe it, you will find your belief in the allness of God to be challenged. You will find your confidence that God is all and that God is omnipotent, you will find that challenged. And you will find yourself depressed. And you know what? There are no private thoughts . . . important point.

Watch what you're letting your mind be used for. And watch what meanings it's giving everything. Because it isn't just your puny little private thought in the privacy of your living room or your kitchen or wherever you might have a TV to watch or the radio to listen to.

Now, another thing that we've learned as we've gone through the Course is, that you cannot witness for yourself. You must witness for your Brother and your Brother must witness for you. Another very important point.

Now, those in Japan who are experiencing the brunt of the earthquake and the tsunami, are by virtue of the total disruption of their daily lives, finding their confidence challenged. They find themselves called upon to have faith and hope when everything says it's hopeless and they're not able to witness well for themselves—I do not mean that in any demeaning way. I am acknowledging that there is a call for healing, that there is a call for love that is being felt by everyone there.

There is a call for every single one of you who studies the Course to bear witness—witness for your Brother and Sister. It's your job to remember what it's hard for them to remember under the circumstances.

What? "Our home is gone. My grandparents . . . we don't know if they're still alive. One of my children I think is alright but I don't know for sure. My husband is out looking for them and he's been gone for the last day. I don't know what might have happened to him. There is no water, there is no food, there is no warmth . . . I'm alone. I'm alone in the emptiness of no routine, of no regularity, of no ability to turn on the faucet and have water come out and some of them don't even have a faucet to turn on anymore. Nothing dependable is occurring. Everything is up in the air."

It's a lonely place to be. It's a lonely experience to have.

But you see, here's what I'm conveying tonight: Because there are no private thoughts, because there is no such thing as privacy in the middle of omnipresence, they are not alone. And you, knowing that your thoughts are not private, can use your mind in a way that witnesses for your Brothers and Sisters who find it difficult to witness for themselves on their best behalf.

"Oh-h . . . but I'm so far away . . . you know."

Well, let's make you feel a little bit closer, perhaps. We receive letters from people in Japan. We receive support from people in Japan who enjoy the meetings we have and enjoy the website. And so we have what are usually exceptionally beautifully packaged envelopes, communications from people there, which gives us a feeling of connection that we might not otherwise have.

Now, you know, that I have held in my hands—and this is Paul speaking—that I have held in my hands things that people in Japan who love Raj, have sent. And so I know I have a connection and it's not as distant and remote as it otherwise would have been. And you now know that there are those who enjoy the work that is being done and support it and communicate with us.

And so, you are joined. You all are joined in a real connection with people in Japan—and this is Raj—they are not remote from you. They are not different from you and they need the right use of your Mind to be practiced by you to witness for them so that they—because there are no private thoughts—might feel the presence of love that will inspire them, which will provide a feeling of connection for them when they seem to be in lonely isolation.

Now, it's a shame that students of the Course are not more familiar with the practice of healing and the expectation of healing and how to be a participant, let's say, an effective agent for change with respect to healing.

And you know, the greatest thing you can do relative to the healing of a situation is to have arrived at a place in you where you have been enlightened, you have been in-filled with an awareness that healing is possible. It's not irrelevant to Awakening. And that it is the Will of the Father for perfection—the perfection of His Creation—to be the only thing experienced by all of His Creation and therefore, that you can hold a position of facilitation in healing.

Now the simple fact is that the misunderstanding—the false belief that is embodied in the dynamics in Japan right now—the false belief is that there is something called, “matter.”

Now we've talked before about the fact—I've gone to some length to illuminate the idea—that what you call matter is a misperception of Spirit, a God element, you might say. Spirit is the substance of God's Creation. All of Creation is made up of ideas of God's. God has an idea and that idea includes everything within Itself to be manifest and function perfectly.

That doesn't seem to be the way matter works. Matter seems to work in an organic way. And one thing is dependent upon another thing, is dependent upon another thing and on and on and on. And so if something goes wrong here it detrimentally affects something there.

All of you are familiar with that in regard to your body because you can seem to have a blockage in one place and it seems to cause a distress in another place which causes deterioration somewhere else and it complexifies and complicates itself until you eventually die because of it. When the simple fact is, that the substance of your body is Spirit—God's stuff—and it is incapable of embodying anything not intended by the Father.

Now, that conflicts with the general consensus about the world by science. But the fact is that healings occur. Healings occur daily around the globe. And when they occur, the seeming connection and detrimental responses of various aspects of the body suddenly stop having detrimental responses—the connection, the detrimental connection stops—and for no apparent reason, the situation resolves itself. And it isn't, and I've said this before, it isn't because matter has somehow been changed—forced to be different. It's because it never was matter, it always was Spirit and in the willingness to see a miracle, in the willingness to see everything stop functioning as though it were matter, the bondage that Spirit has been held to by ignorance, is released and healing occurs.

Now you, through the proper use of your Mind, can witness for your Brothers and Sisters in Japan or anywhere on behalf of radical healing.

Everyone says, “Well, there was an earthquake and then there was a tsunami. And the tsunami impacted the power-plants and the cooling of the power-plants was damaged and so now . . .”

See how one thing is impacting another and it's building and getting more complicated and more detrimental? “. . . and now there could be a melt-down which will make the problems even worse.”

Now are you going to sit and watch the TV and the radio and hear all of these things and not challenge these ideas in your mind? If you are, then you're in no position to be an agent for change because you're not in a position to bring clarity to your Brother and Sister in Japan who lacks the clarity because of the shock of the events. And so you can't witness for your Brother or Sister outside of the problem. And you become part of the problem and confirm it, because once again, there are no private thoughts.

Now I promise you, that whether you've been following what has happened and what is continuing to happen in Japan, you have felt the disturbance. You have felt the negativity, you have felt the fear and so on. Whether it was overwhelming or whether it was just a mild undercurrent of uneasiness. And that's because there are no private thoughts. And you are not at a distance where you're untouched and unscathed by events that occur.

Now are you going to watch what is happening and become as upset as those who are in the middle of it and lose your capacity to witness for them on their behalf from outside the box—from outside the barrel, from the holy instant where, as we've been talking about, God's laws prevail? They're not usurped, they're not torn asunder.

You have this wonderful opportunity to use your mind well—to use your mind for the function it has. What is your mind's function? It's to be co-creator with God. What does that mean? It means that your mind's function to look at, observe, and experience Creation and recognize it for what it is. And what it is, is not a material world and universe. It is Creation, Itself which you are mis-calling "physical world and universe." You're not recognizing God in it because you are defining it as not of God. You're defining it as a material organism—a material set of functions that impinge upon and relate to each other not always in constructive ways. You see?

That's not recognizing God in everything. That's not being in the holy instant where God's laws prevail and where what God is Being there can register with you so that you can look where you had seen a material world and universe and say, "Wow! This is incredible! This is awesome! This is God and I see It!" You see?

The people who are homeless, who can't find water to drink, who are cold and can't get warmth, it is difficult for them to look at it all, and I'm going to say, see through it, see past it to the Kingdom of Heaven that is really going on right there. And it takes someone like you . . . you . . . you . . . all of you who call yourselves students of the Course to use your mind the way the Course tells you it's there to be used, and to let it fulfill the function it has, which is to look and not be blinded by your definitions or the world's definitions, but have a willingness to see through those definitions and discover the awesomeness of God there.

You know what? You think that the power plants are just physical—they're plaster, they're metal, they are uranium, they are elements—you think it's all matter and because it's all matter there are certain physical processes that matter can only go through. Well, you're wrong! And as a student of the Course you need to begin to feel the wrongness of those kinds of assumptions, so that you are not stymied in your mind against seeing God there. Because if there's a power plant there, don't be so sure it's matter. The only thing that can actually be there is Spirit, fulfilling God's purpose and being incapable of changing from that.

The minute you stop saying with great conviction, that there's nothing that can be done because there are certain atomic processes and certain physical processes and certain thermal processes going on that can't change, you need to look and say, "Wait a minute, if the substance of this is Spirit, and if Spirit is the substance of all that God is Creating then this substance must necessarily be functioning according to the laws of God which prevail, because God is All, and which I can see the prevailing of if I will abandon my confidence. And I will abandon my definitions. And I will say, "Father, what is the truth here, in spite of what I think the truth is—which is awful? What is the transforming truth? What is the truth that can appear as the reactor cooling for no obvious reason, and radiation not being released, and bodies that seem to be able to be damaged by radiation, none of it is matter having those kind of impinging impactful negativities. All of it is Spirit and all of it can change [snaps fingers] in a twinkling of an eye, in a batting of an eyelid. You see?

Now, I could suggest that for every minute you watch the TV and the news and see the images, I could suggest for every minute you do that you take a full minute to meditate or a full minute to take out the Course, or a full minute to get out a hymnal or a full minute to refresh yourself with the truth that you know is the truth.

Well, if you're going to watch the TV for two hours that means you've got to take two hours to meditate or read the Course or immerse yourself in ideas that contradict what you've just seen, so that you might be able to witness well with your Brothers and Sisters instead of joining them in the mire and the muck and the stuckness of it all. Do you have that kind of time? It would be well spent time . . . it would be time well spent.

I would suggest that you watch or listen just to be kept abreast of the basics. But you know what? The media loves to have unknowns because they can fill up time with interesting, stimulating speculation that can keep you glued to something that is going to have no intelligent conclusion.

So watch what you do. And don't get caught up in the "what ifs" and the potentials which can be ruled out and so they might as well fill up some air time talking about them and you take your time . . . waste your time listening to the speculation that will lead nowhere, except perhaps, to cause you to feel a little bit more like there isn't really a God. And when that happens in your mind, what's happened? You've forgotten your function. You've forgotten that you're the holy Son or Daughter of God and that you can be an agent for change and that it's your function to be an agent for change, it's your glorious opportunity to look at a circumstance that seems most definite and irrevocably moving toward something awful, and see it change.

Now, I am going to say this: Do take time to realize that there are real, I'm going to say, human beings, there are real Brothers and Sisters in Japan coping with unimaginably, surprising deviations from the norm, who deserve peace of mind, who need peace of mind, who need to know that they are loved, to know that in spite of the fact that they seem quite isolated from the rest of the world and from help, they are not. You have the opportunity to be the presence of love that is felt.

And if you're going to spend your time doing anything, do that before you watch the TV for hours, and the images, and listen to the rumble of the earth quake over and over and over and over and "My God the building is going to collapse!" That sentence is going to be burned into your mind forever.

Every time you turn on the TV you're refreshing yourself with what? Not the truth that will heal, not the truth that will transform, not that which will allow you to witness on behalf of your Brother and Sister in a way that is transformational.

It's my intent tonight to convey to you holy purpose—holy purpose that we've been talking about embodying for a number of years. But tonight we have holy purpose that you can't deny is needed and which you can't help but feel the potential for your playing a part in. Play the part! Become involved!

And if you are watching or listening to the news [snaps fingers] be ready on the spot to contradict it. That's your job. Don't just be swept along by the horror of the events or the fear or the grief and let a tear come to your eye. I understand that it's moving, but it's not your job there to cry. It's your job to be clear so that joy fills you and love fills you and compassion that has the capacity to recognize God in your Brother and Sister on that screen . . . you see? . . . so that you're fulfilling your function as co-creator and seeing God right there.

Now, I'm going to invite everyone to join all of us here for the next five minutes or so . . . and join in recognizing the Presence of the Father in every single Brother and Sister who's in this situation. I want you to let yourself be truly conscious that if there's anything there at all called a Brother or Sister, it has to be God appearing, whether you're seeing that fact clearly or not—that in spite of your ignorance, the fullness and wholeness of God is what is there—and the same thing about the land that seems to have been devastated and the destruction of the power plants.

In other words, while we're having this quiet time, I want you to be willing to allow what appears to be devastated matter to reconfigure visually and actually so that it represents the Kingdom of Heaven that's going on right there—the Presence of God that can be the only thing going on there if indeed God is Omnipresent and which everyone, you and everyone there, has the Birthright to experience.

And the other thing I want you to do—and I want you to do this please, not just during the next five minutes, but ongoingly—I want you to imagine that you are able to be in front of and address someone in Japan in this experience and share with him or her the feelings you have on his or her behalf. What would you convey to them that would be transformational? What could you say that would be pacifying? What could you say that would be inspiring and give hope?

Take the time to relate to these Brothers and Sisters that you don't even know in a compassionate way and put forth the effort it takes to put the words together that convey real caring, because the caring is in you—you are the holy Sons and Daughters of God.

You know what? I've been talking tonight about your witnessing for your Brothers and Sisters. What do you think I've been doing? What do you think I've been doing all these years? I'm witnessing for you. I'm providing a better picture, a better sense of who you are than your poor thought-models allow. I'm witnessing on your behalf to you, I'm taking the time to put it in words that will mean something to you, so that you will have a basis for shifting your anticipations your expectations and your confidences to something greater than what they embraced.

Please, take this wonderful opportunity here to witness well for everyone there. And I ask you for this next short period of time not to turn off your computers, don't pick up a magazine, don't see what's going on around the room. Close your eyes and be the presence of love. We will do it together.

Okay, it's mid-afternoon there now. Night will fall and the sun will come up and everyone there will need the courage and the stamina to face what needs to be done and meet the need. Everyone of you can easily be willing to stand with them as they unavoidably address the needs they're faced with and bring your clarity and bring your love and witness for them to the best in them—not just the best in them as a Japanese people who are very intelligent and have structured things so they can cope with this kind of tragedy well.

No . . . bullshit! That's not love. Stand with them witnessing for them on the basis that they are also the holy Sons and Daughters of God that are not orphans—in the sense that we've been using that word—and whose Birthright it is to be able to see through the events that have happened and find, so to speak, behind them the Presence of God and His Creation in all of Its unchanged perfection.

That's what they need to know. That's what they need to feel. That's what you need to feel. And you don't need to feel what you have been feeling after hours and hours of watching and commiserating with the situation.

So, wish to see the Presence of Love and wish to be the Presence of Love with as much persistence as those in the middle of the circumstances will be bringing to moving through it. And I promise you the moving through it can occur much more quickly. Be part of what causes that to happen.

I love you. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

March 20th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We're going to build on a subject that I opened up last week.

I mentioned that the problems being faced in the world at that point, and actually now, arise from a fundamental mistake. And the fundamental mistake is the belief that substance [wraps knuckles on table] is matter. When the fact is that substance—the substance of everything you encounter every day—is not matter. It is Spirit, Spirit with a capital "S"—Spirit, one of the synonyms or meanings of God.

Spirit is the substance of Creation. It is that out of which God creates. It is that with which God creates. And the Creation is the substance of Spirit patterned in the image of the Idea in God's Mind.

You, every single day, are confronted by the patterned images, you might say, of the Ideas of God. You are constantly in the midst of a totally holy experience. But that is not what you believe, that is not what you profess, and that is not what you, within yourself, are committed to.

You're committed to the definitions of substance as matter. A dangerous thing to do because in the denial of what it really is, you lose the experience of what it really is. And in your professed faith and commitment to what you believe it is, you find yourself bound to what?

Polarities: Positive-negative, peace-fear, life-death.

And as we've been saying all along, this division of that which is One into polarities was the result of your saying, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. Father, I would rather define what this is. I want to make up the definitions. And based on the definitions I make up, I will create a world . . . I will create a world that serves my definitions. In other words, a world that serves me. A world that reflects what I've determined reality to be . . ." You see? ". . . because I'm going to do it on my own."

Immediately, as we've said over and over, two things come into play: Fear and guilt.

Without polarities, guilt couldn't seem to exist. And there would be no cause for fear. But polarities are inherent in the decision to act at odds with God. Is that any surprise? The decision to act at odds with God sets up what? A polarity. And that causes every perception that follows that act to be polarized.

As a result, you're walking through the Kingdom of Heaven—and you know I've said this over and over, but it's got to come home to you that I am speaking truth that today in what you call this world—not another one afar off, pie-in-the-sky-after-you-die, but right here and right now you're in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven [wraps knuckles on table]. The substance of everything is Spirit, not matter.

And Waking up is a matter of doing the two-step, as we've said, going into the holy instant and abandoning your commitment to everything you believe [again wraps knuckles on table] that that's matter, that that's a physical organismic body—born, matures, ages, dies, because that's what material bodies do. Right?

You say, "It's just not my belief. Look at all living things . . . all living things die. That's what we've decided to call, 'the cycle of life.'"

Gee, it's almost poetic isn't it. It makes a mistake sound really reasonable and embraceable doesn't it?

You're in a time right now—I mean literally, today, yesterday, tomorrow—you're in a time in which events are happening that I trust are making it easier for you to hear what I'm saying and bring into play in you a greater willingness to abandon your confidence and for you to be willing to step outside of the box of your traditional perceptions in order to consider something you haven't considered before, such as: That you really are in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven and everything you're confronted with or by is constituted of the substance of Spirit—God stuff. And that therefore, because of what it actually is, there is a different experience of it awaiting you when you abandon your confidence that it's just matter [slaps hands together]. I could as easily slapped Paul's face . . . I could as easily punched someone else in the nose as a demonstration that it's matter. Matter being polarized can engage in activities which are harmful—hurtful. Right? But as the substance of Spirit, these hands could pass right through each other. Paul's definitions at the moment don't allow that simple truth to be demonstrated, although he would enjoy having the experience.

What needs to settle in and register deeply with you is, that everything you can touch and feel, caress or slap, today . . . TODAY, . . . not after you die in Heaven, but today, is Spirit, not matter.

If you let that sink in, it's going to be obvious to you that you have a really fascinating interesting task in front of you. You have an activity to engage in, not just because it's interesting and fun, but also because it's utterly intelligent to engage in—experiencing what's true, rather than illusions, because illusions bring with them suffering, polarities. You see? And you don't really want that. And hey, if all of this that you see and feel is the substance of Spirit, if it's all God stuff, then really, what better activity do you have to engage in, than to delve into, lean into, let yourself into the experience of what it truly Is?

Because then, you're in that place where God's laws prevail. You're in that place where polarities do not exist. You're in that place where regeneration and redemption can occur . . . transformed experience of things . . . healing of bodies.

Now, I used the word, "patterning," because when God has an Idea it is a pattern. It is a pattern that is experienceable and recognizable, tangible, as I've said before, to the Mind which forms it. There are no polarities to it. And there are no polarities or differences between this particular pattern, you might say, a hand . . . and this particular pattern which you would call, "a shirt" or another particular pattern called, "plutonium" or another particular pattern called, "gamma rays" or another particular pattern called, "kidney" or another particular pattern called, "a table."

Now the pattern is an idea that is comprehensible. In the Mind of God, an Idea arises that is comprehensible. It is at that point already, a pattern. And that pattern is recognizable to the Mind that formed it. It is also recognizable to all that that Mind has formed—meaning all of Creation—because it embodies the consciousness that God is, is capable of recognizing and experiencing the new pattern. And so the new pattern is a shared experience of unity.

Now, when you say, "But Father, I'd rather do it my way. But Father, I'd rather define things myself," you are incapable of having an idea arise in you that is a pattern that is recognizable and experienceable. You're incapable of initiating Creation from scratch all by yourself.

And so, all you're ever doing when you're giving definitions to things is re-naming what God has already patterned, renaming what God has already been Being. And when you do that, your relationship with that thing is polarized because you are holding it to a definition different from the pattern or Idea that God is Being right there.

And as a result, the pattern that you would call a table becomes not an idea which your body (has many ideas) can pass through and you could carelessly run into the table and break your leg and fall and hit your head and die. And you could have a polarized death-creating experience. Not because it is what you think it is, but because you're insisting on relating to it untruthfully. You are unwilling to relate to it as it is.

And all of a sudden, That which is incapable of polarities, That which is incapable of manifesting in relationship to everything else pure and utter harmony, it becomes something destructive. It's the same thing with atoms. It's the same thing with gamma rays.

I know, you say, "Well, the sun emits gamma rays, the sun emits ultraviolet light, the sun emits substances that are not good for man's health if he gets out in the sun too long . . . or if there's a solar flare of extreme intensity." You see? "And so that's natural, that's part of God's Creation."

I beg your pardon, it's not. But it is part of the way you experience It while you are claiming to have the authority to give definitions to everything on your own.

Now it's time for the suffering caused by polarities between substances and polarities within substances themselves, to cease to be governing any of you. It's time for you to dare to Vision anew. It's time for you to dare to conscientiously practice the holy instant. Why? So that you might yield to the Father's Perspective. Because when you yield to the Father's Perspective you let yourself back into your native perspective and you let yourself back into a place where even if there is an emission of radioactivity from a nuclear energy plant, neither you nor the cows nor the plants have any negative effects from it.

Now why? Because the atoms in the leaves, the atoms in the plants, the atoms in the cows, the atoms in the milk are all what? The substance of Spirit. It's one unpolarized substance. It's one substance, many forms but pure and utter harmony because they embody one intent.

As co-creators with God your task is to stop looking at all of this and calling it something other than what it is and making commitment to your definition of it so that you stand at odds with what it really is, while you are attempting to get the thing, which you have defined anew to serve your intents and purposes. It's time for that to stop.

It's time for that to stop today. And it's time for every student of the Course to stop thinking that that isn't part of the Awakening process, that that isn't part of what happens in the holy instant. And that regeneration and redemption isn't inherent in your saying, "Not my will be done Father, but Thine be done."

It's that simple.

"You know . . . so a little puff of radioactivity is released and maybe some of the cows in that prefecture . . . you know, maybe their tissues are damaged, and maybe their milk is not good and maybe they'll never be able to provide milk for anyone else and maybe the plants there in a small radius might be damaged and maybe creatures that live in that area will take on strange forms . . . why? Because the pattern has been disturbed," You see? "You know, and isn't it a shame . . . I mean, ya know . . . thank God, it's not the whole of Japan, but just . . . ya know, a small part of the Northern part of Japan and you know . . ."

That's sickening! That attitude needs to be squelched! Red flags should go up when that kind of thought occurs to you.

"Oh-h, but wait a minute . . . ya know, maybe they're going to have to release more radioactive steam and materials into the air . . . and they've just discovered that the levels of radioactivity on the West Coast of the United States are elevated a little bit, not much, not enough to damage or hurt anybody . . . ewww . . ." but doesn't make those of you on the West Coast of the United States sort of abandon your . . . you know, your distanced perspective . . . "Well it's happening over there and isn't it a shame . . . and thank God it isn't worse than it is. Oh my God, it's worse than I thought it was. There is an elevated radioactivity on my shores where I live . . ."

You know what? Maybe a doomsday scenario here will never occur, but the call for clarity, the call for putting into practice the holy instant, the call to not be satisfied with mediocrity when it comes to your health or your physical structure or your aging process and so on.

This is a wakeup call. This is an opportunity to heal the justification, if I can put it that way, for actually leaning into the truth further than you have, being open to the radical more than you have, and being willing to dare to say, "Maybe the substance of everything here isn't matter. Maybe it is the substance of Creation Itself—meaning Creation, God's Movement. Maybe it is! And maybe it behooves me to be infinitely more diligent in giving my attention to the clearer experience of Creation that I'm being told it is. Maybe it's time for me to expect to see regeneration and redemption.

What is redemption? It's a return to the original, and I'm going to say, a return to the spiritual original. A return to the pattern that the Father patterned by having the Idea, which is now forever Eternal and forever made new, moment by moment by moment, and which is incapable of sin, disease and death, so that I no longer have to say, "Well, you know, the substance of my liver or the substance of my this, that or other part of the body has lost its pattern . . . a new pattern has emerged and the new pattern is really inimical to the function of the old pattern, so I'm very likely to die from this pattern change."

No. That's not being co-creators with God. That's being a creator on your own. "Well, I'm going to say that this kidney is not the substance of Spirit, and this other pattern that's come into play and is disrupting the original pattern, I'm going to say that that's cancer. And I'm going to say that these two are incompatible with each other, that they will eventually see the result of destruction. That's what I'm going to say. And that's what I'm going to believe. And that's what I'm going to be afraid of. And that's what I'm going to dwell on until I die because I have no justification for dwelling on anything else."

Do you think that's being a student of the Course? Do you think that's being a student of truth? Do you think that is the result of the holy instant that you've been reading about, that you've talked about, that you want to have the experience of? No. But the whole purpose of the Course is for you to have the experience of what the Course is talking about. It's for you to have the experience of how God Created things, which it's your Birthright to be experiencing because after all, you aren't a lump of physical organic flesh either—you're not something encased in matter!

Everyone is lazy and lackadaisical. And it's time to employ some vigor. It's time to use the circumstances at hand.

Well, really what difference is there really between swine flu and radioactivity or summer colds or winter colds? "Oh, well, they sweep around the globe and they affect people, they're transmittable, they can have an impact and people can die from all of them."

Now, many of you, I know, have great confidence that a cold or swine flu is something that can be healed through prayer, through the practice of the two-step and the holy instant. But there are other things like cancer and radiation poisoning that you say cannot. Hey, the effects of that which is poisonous cannot be transmuted, nullified, made ineffective or on the other side of the coin that maybe your immune system could be potent enough to ward off the effects. You see?

But again, you see, that's polarities—that's one thing having a negative power and another thing having a positive power that can ward off the negative power. We're still in polarities aren't we? We're in a war. We're still in the independence stance of, "But Father, I'd rather define it myself."

You haven't stepped out of that into that place where you say, "Father, what is the truth here?" Wherein the benign-ness of the substance of Spirit can be revealed to you, where you can feel and experience wholly that there are no polarities and not only are there no polarities between things, there is instead a bond of Love—not bondage—but a bond, an embracing bond of Love communicated in and through and around everything by everything in one great union of Love expressed and expressing, given and received all as one event.

When you let that experience in—the feeling of it—because it's been revealed to you by the Father, because you've said, "Father, I don't want to fool around with my definitions any longer, what's the truth here?" . . . when that comes in, again, you're in that place where God's laws prevail. And you're in a place where a radioactive cloud or swine flu germs or any other communicable, deleterious substance could have adverse effects. You're in a place where that capacity simply is no longer present.

The earth in Chernobyl does not have to be damaged, uninhabitable, nonproductive for tens of thousands of years. The Earth needs healing. Any damage that has occurred in Japan does not need to take a long time. And people in that area do not need to live in fear for the rest of their life—which I hope they realize is eternal and not brief—they do not need to live those years in fear of cancers forming because of this disturbance.

And you know what? Cancers that you might be experiencing in your body that aren't the result of radioactivity or cigarette smoking or any other action you might have taken that could cause it, that seems to just sort of naturally have arisen, you don't need to spend another day with that threat . . . you don't need to spend another day with that threat.

Why? Because there ain't no substance that is at odds with any other substance. There is only One substance. It is the substance . . . it is the substance that is Spirit—God's stuff. And therefore, there is no legitimate justification for any further misperception of polarities and conflict going on.

Now that's the truth, which if you will accept it and rest in it, will cause you to experience the influx of the truth of it and you can see instantaneous healing. You might also see it as gradual healing, if you are not able to embrace the totality of it instantaneously. But the point is, that transformation, regeneration and redemption should be your absolute expectation everyday, whether there is a calamitous emergency or whether it's just a little wart on your finger. Don't tolerate it. Don't say, "Oh, it's just a little thing." I'm not saying it's a big thing, but I'm saying, "Hey, you're a holy Son or Daughter of God, it's not your Birthright to be able to look anywhere and not see. It is your Birthright to be able to look anywhere on your finger or anywhere else and see the loveliness of the perfection of Creation.

And you shouldn't rest until you are having that experience.

You know, if you thought your life was boring and you didn't really have much of any purpose to attend to, well now you can see that you're very fortunate to have enough free time to have felt that way because now you have something to fill it with that is really significant.

Now, regarding the Middle East, I'm simply going to say this because it is something for you to know the truth about: Be interested to observe intelligence coming forth to replace unintelligence. Healing is occurring. And that which doesn't express intelligence isn't leaving happily.

Old habits are not released easily with any of you. And old habits with countries don't leave easily either. And effort has to be brought into play to make the changes that undo the habits that didn't express intelligence or humanity or dignity, all of which the Sons and Daughters of God not only have a right to be experiencing but which all the Sons and Daughters of God who aren't experiencing them need to take hold of as diligently as those in the Middle East are taking hold of it.

Let's not just profess what the Course teaches, let's embody it and let's do the work necessary to let go of the old and to embrace the new and make commitment to the new because the Kingdom of Heaven [chuckling] is a hell of a lot nicer . . . a heaven of a lot nicer than what you're currently experiencing, even though It is what you are experiencing because It is what you're right in the middle of but you aren't seeing It because you don't want to see it yet—you want to see your definitions.

It's really important for you not to believe that the Kingdom of Heaven is somewhere on the other side of death and somewhere afar off because that will allow you to continue to doze right in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven and not see any of It. And to suffer without having the slightest inkling that you could challenge it and disagree with it and not embrace it and have a different experience.

What wonderful things to have healings of. You have things going on, the healing of which will be wonderful, they will be significant, they will be healings that will not allow anyone to think there is not a God. It will be transformational, not only of the problem areas but of mankind. And everyone on this globe needs and deserves to be experiencing a great deal more joy than is being experienced right now. So be part of the transformation into joy.

If that's not why you're interested in the Course, if that's not why you're interested in the truth, if that's not why you're interested in God, then you've missed the point.

I love you. And I join with each one of you in finding it justifiable to practice the holy instant.

And I look forward to being with you next week.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

March 26th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

There's an old proverb which says, "May you live in interesting times."¹

Well, to say the least, you are in interesting times. But I want to shift the focus a little bit from what you think the interesting times are and what I think the interesting times are. You think the interesting times are the events going on in the world—dynamic, revolutionary, transformational—with both positive and negative aspects.

But there's a more important interesting item. And that is, that whether everyone knows it or not, everyone is standing at the threshold of making a shift of perception of the sort that we've been studying in A Course In Miracles for quite some time.

The interesting times you are in are, the point in your apparent development where you abandon your independence, your sovereignty, your arrogance, your superiority and any position you think you have achieved, and you abandon it in favor of allowing yourself to experience a position which accompanied you in your Birthright.

You have a position: You are the Son or Daughter of God. Significant position.

And in that position you have things to do, things that are different from the things you've done as a self-authorized independent organism who has no divine Father and who has no divine Birthright, but who arose out of matter and develops in matter and dies as matter and perhaps does some incredible things in the process.

We talked last week about the fact that in your independent state, you exist in a realm of polarities. It's unavoidable—it's inescapable.

But in your divine Birthright, there are no polarities. There is infinite unity. Infinite, meaning infinitely varied. Infinite, meaning the experience of Being that is full of infinite variety of experience and things. And yet in that infiniteness there are no polarities, there is only communion. Not chaos but communion. Everything fits together, everything works together, everything communicates its meaning and its intent and purpose with everything else simultaneously as an infinite conscious experience free of fear, full of love.

Now, it's imperative that everyone recognize the fact that in the realm of your Birthright where you are the Son or Daughter of God, where there is unity, everything moves and has its Being in the context of and the substance of Love.

There are no polarities in Love. And it's important to understand that Love does not exist for the purpose of resolving polarities.

You sometimes forget that and think that you are studying the Course and learning how to remove the blocks to Love so that Love can be used to resolve polarities in the dream—in the orphanage, in the realm of independent self-government. And that's not correct. It's important to know that. Else you will try to apply Love to the "human condition" to improve it.

When Love moves you out of the imagined condition called, "the human condition" and reminds you and reveals to you once again your divinity in that realm, in that place where God's laws prevail and lifts you out of the place where there is conflict to be resolved, it lifts you out of the perception—the misperception of everything where conflicts need to be resolved—and uncovers a new perception of everything you've already been looking at in this level or realm of unity where there is no polarity, where there is nothing to resolve and where pure harmony is the rule and the experience forever.

And so what you call, "the human condition" what you call, "the material world and universe" becomes to you transformed by means of the scales falling from your eyes, the ignorance falling away from your vision so that you might see the Kingdom of Heaven that it has been all along.

Now, everyone on your globe at this time is being called by one of two teachers. And at the moment, the teacher that's calling to everyone is the voice for fear. It's the voice that prevails in the human condition—in that place where you claim an independent autonomous position of power.

And you know what its function is? Its function is to get you off your ass and resolve some polarities and to get you on the positive side—in the positive polarity. You see? “Get in there and do something” so that the negative aspect of the polarity becomes, perhaps, a little invisible so that you're not really threatened by it.

Fear always calls for self-preservation. If you're experiencing fear it's because you are feeling threatened and you are feeling the need to preserve yourself.

Now mind you, the voice for fear, not being the Voice for truth, is never going to bring your attention to the Father, is never going to bring your attention to the holy instant in which God's laws prevail, and in which there are no polarities and in which because there are no polarities, all apparent polarities cease to assert themselves and vanish. And healing occurs.

Everyone globally is beginning to feel overwhelmed. Some of you don't realize that is what is happening. You know that events are occurring that are dynamic. And of course, the media is picking up on these dynamics and are sharing them with gusto and relish to everyone because it keeps the attention on their newspaper or their TV station and generates income for them and supposedly helps you in the process to know the truth, except that so very often, they are promoting their own agendas that have nothing to do with your well-being. And they occupy your time as I said last week, with speculation that doesn't lead anywhere, that does perhaps stimulate your thinking but which, because of the vitality of the energy, causes you to become excited in the sense of uneasy, in the sense of “revved up,” without peace.

You see all of this and because it seems exciting, causes you to accept it without realizing that you are becoming uneasy. And that it's not just excitement, that actually it's fear. And you need to pay attention to this so that you don't just swallow it, you don't just embrace the fear as though it's part of the—this is the key word—dynamic of life which is invigorating and lets you know that you're alive. You see?

And as a result, you don't challenge it. You don't really realize, “Hey, I'm not comfortable. As exciting and interesting as this is, I'm not comfortable!”

And if perhaps, you do realize that you're not comfortable, you may not realize that you have a choice to abandon that experience. And that's why I'm here. And that's why I'm talking tonight. Because you need to realize that you have the option to abandon it. And you need to realize that the process of abandoning it is a very fundamental act that doesn't just "improve the human condition" but actually moves you out of the human condition, out of the ignorance that you suffer from, into a remembrance of your Birthright in which there are no polarities, and in which the unity of Being that it is your divine Birthright to be experiencing, you experience release from the conflict that seemed so stimulating and so newsworthy.

And in your being released from it, those still believing it, those still caught in it, become blessed by a capacity to see the truth more easily. Your withdrawal from the valuing of ignorance and illusion causes it to be easier for those still caught in it to abandon it. It causes the illusion to be less dense, less compelling.

And this is your job and this is where your attention needs to be.

You know, for centuries there have been conflicts and resolutions. But we truly are coming upon a point where there's not just going to be the resolution of conflict, but there's going to be the shifting from the realm of conflict into the conscious awareness of Being that you as the Son or Daughter of God deserve to be experiencing because it's your Birthright and there's really nothing else Real for you to be experiencing.

Now, you all can be good Christians or you can be good religious people or you can be good students of the Course and find a way to make the best of a bad situation, the best of the conflict that's going on so that you might come through somewhat unscathed and still be where everyone was after the crusades—still asleep, still dreaming dreams, still experiencing the human condition.

Or you can, because of your education relative to the truth and A Course In Miracles, use this opportunity to make the shift. What shift? Not from a disastrous world condition to an excellent world condition, but a shift from your allegiance to the voice for fear to an allegiance to the Voice for truth.

A shift which Wakes you up—which ends the illusions, which ends the conflict forever.

C'mon . . . either everyone is expecting Armageddon or everyone is expecting the Rapture—the upliftment of mankind.

Well, let's stop having those polarized dynamics as interesting ideas to talk about, think about, and let's right now begin to act out the choice of choosing for the Voice for truth. Opting for that—the nature of which is Love—so that you might be the agent for change here that heals an injured world, I'm going to say, not just of injuries current, but injuries past. And that reveals each one of you and everything without blemish—without flaw—with complete restoration of every part of you and every part of everything.

You know what? Fear is an artificial sensation. You know, we say, “Oh-h, when the fall occurred, or when you got your divorce from the Father, two things came into play: Fear and guilt.”

Well I’m going to tell you something: Fear is an artificial sensation and guilt is an artificial sensation. So let’s not be treating fear and guilt with such respect as though they are something. They’re artificial sensations. They do not mean anything in the context of God and God’s Allness. They have no meaning whatsoever. And because God is All, they never have had any actual meaning. Therefore, they are not anything actual to overcome or deal with. You can’t do anything to that which is an artificial sensation.

But you can shift your attention to Love. You can shift your attention away from privacy and self-authority to your Father and rejoin with your Father. And in that rejoining, remember who you Are, and in That experience, find that Love is the spontaneous feeling you experience relative to everything.

And it’s when you discover that everything is blessing you with the Love that it is, so that it’s an exchange infinitely speaking, in which there is no conflict, in which there is no chaos, in which there’s no radioactive damage caused recently or in the past, where there is no physical injury or disease either currently or left over from the past, where the Kingdom of Heaven is redeemed from your insistence upon it being something else—a physical world and universe which began from a big bang . . . a physical explosion, a physical movement of force inherently polarized from the get-go.

A Course In Miracles means something. It’s true. It doesn’t really mean working miracles, because a miracle in that sort of definition would have to mean that some sort of force—spiritual or otherwise—would have to be applied to the material world and universe you think exists and changes it by force, so that it stops being destructive and starts being benign. Now that would be a miracle!

But no, A Course In Miracles is about shifting your attention from the voice for fear and giving your attention to the Voice for truth, which is the Holy Spirit—which is that which is nothing more than your right Mind—and in that shift becoming unpolarized and unconflicted yourself.

And in the falling away of the tension of this conflict that you have manufactured for yourself, what you really Are—what all of Creation really Is in its benign unified aspect—registers with you and it looks like a miracle has happened, because infirmity, illness, death are undone, damage is undone.

The true nature of everything simply registers with you once again . . . awesomely registers with you once again. That seems miraculous but I promise you that the uncovering of the divinity of everything, the uncovering of the divineness of everything that has characterized everything forever, that occurring is not a miracle, because force is not applied to make something that was not something into something else that is something.

You're not going to be able to use Love to bless the island of Japan. You're not going to be able to use Love to bless the area around Chernobyl. You are not going to be able to use Love to bless a cemetery so that all those who have died come forth. You cannot use Love to undo an illusion. Love serves to open your eyes to what God has been Being all along, in spite of your false definitions applied to everything and the conflict it has created for you.

I know I am repeating myself over and over and over again, but I am repeating a simple truth that it's almost impossible for you to believe because it is so simple and because it flies in the face of your experience.

Now the conditions in the world are distressing. Even the ones that seem to be positively oriented seem to be occurring in the context of conflict. And so even that which has excellence is strenuous. The strenuousness of it, the apparent processes in time that it appears everything will have to go through—whether it's the changing of a mind of a people or whether it's the changing of the radioactivity that should take tens of thousands of years to dissipate—the fact is, that time needs to be wiped out of the process, out of the picture, so that instantaneous healing can be experienced.

"Oh, gee, instantaneous healing! Well, it's going to be hard, because of course, radioactive materials are matter aren't they? And so they are going to have to operate according to the laws of matter, aren't they?"

Whew . . . No! No! No! No! No! No! Why? Because the only change that needs to occur is you abandoning your commitment and addiction to definitions that are inconsistent with Creation Itself. And which when you abandon them, will allow Creation as It truly is to be experienced by you as It truly is [snaps fingers] just like that, because of a [snaps fingers again] willingness that wasn't argued against, because a commitment was abandoned and there was a willingness to embrace what seemed to be "the impossible."

Now there is a need for this today! There is a need for this today! And every single one of you have the groundwork, have the basics to participate in it happening! And so I am pushing you, yes! And I am inviting you, yes! I am pushing and pulling, I am doing everything I can to inspire you to be radical and to consider the impossible, so that there might be Ascension, so that there might be Awakening.

It's time! It's time for all of these artificial experiences, all of these artificial sensations and all of these artificial perceptions to simply give way to clarity—what you might call a change of mind. Not that you have decided, “I’m going to change from this to this,” but where, in your defenselessness, you suddenly find yourself seeing differently, you suddenly find your perspective changed, you suddenly find fear absent, you suddenly find Love present, you suddenly find safety to be an absolute.

Now this is going to take some discipline. Again, I've used a lot of words. I've expressed different ideas. But at the bottom line we're talking about one thing: a shift from the voice for fear to a Voice for truth. That takes some discipline.

When you want to gather information, which teacher are you going to go to? If you go to the voice for fear you're going to find it promoting conflict within you, exhaustion within you. You're going to find yourself turning the negativity on yourself to find out what is wrong with you that you're having such a negative experience.

I know . . . maybe you're just getting old. Maybe you're developing Alzheimer's . . . maybe dementia is encroaching upon you. Poor thing . . . Oh, yeah . . .

When you're indulging in that frame of reference, when you're listening to the voice for fear, anything that causes you to ultimately suffering and die will be justifiable. And you're not likely to challenge it. You're likely to embrace it because . . . well, you're so depressed that there's no hope for any alternative, right?

Or you have the simple option to choose for the Voice for truth.

If fear is an artificial sensation, then when you turn to it, you're turning to nothing! And you're investing your trust and your faith in artificiality—nothing of substance, nothing with a foundation!

So, all you have to say is, “Well, this fear I’m experiencing is totally artificial and I’m going to abandon it.” And then leave it! Give your attention to the Voice for truth. Why? Because there really is a Voice for truth and there really is something called truth. And when you invite it in, it reveals itself to you. And in revealing itself to you, reveals You to you and reveals your Father to you and reveals your holy relationship and your holy identity and your inseparability from All That Is.

You know what? As I've said before, those who seem to be in the thick of the dynamics that are going on today, because they are in the thick of the dynamics, find it difficult to witness for themselves. You're not in the thick of it and so you can witness for them if you choose for the Voice for truth. And if in choosing for it, you don't abandon it by taking a peak at the television or getting the latest update on your iPhone.

Don't go to the voice for fear, because it will have only one effect. It will deprive you of Knowing the truth. It will deprive you of your peace. If it deprives you of your peace, it deprives you of being an agent for change on behalf of your Brother. And it absolutely keeps you from experiencing the instantaneous correction of these illusions and therefore, it keeps it from everyone else as well.

"Oh-h, I can't change everybody else!" No, you can't, not by force, but by Love you can.

Don't try to change anyone else. Do what uncovers to you your divinity and your experience of everyone else's divinity. Do that religiously! It will have one very practical effect: Depression will not bother you. Fear will be nowhere near you. Peace will consume you. And that Peace will bless everyone and everything. That's your function. That's your purpose and that's your fulfillment. That's your job.

Stick to it! Persist! Anything that discourages you from that is simply the voice for fear and you seem to be experiencing it because you've turned to that teacher. Hey, the fear you're experiencing is an artificial sensation. Leave it behind. Abandon it! Abandon it!

Be one of those who, we'll say, has come into the human experience for the purpose of lifting all of mankind out of it and into the Awakened state that it's His Birthright, Her Birthright, Your Birthright to be experiencing.

You have the support of the Holy Spirit. You have my support. All of Creation supports you in your remembering who you Are and blessing all of mankind and everything by the revelation that will occur to you about everyone and everything that reveals to you It's and Their divinity in an awesome experience of joy.

Today's the day to do it! Today's the day it's possible! Today is the day you deserve it! And there's absolutely nothing actual inhibiting your having that experience today.

I love you, I love you, I love you, [looks at each one in the room] you, you, you, you . . . everyone. Take hold of this opportunity. Don't abandon it.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 3rd 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Once again, we're not going to read from the book tonight.

You know, when you're studying in school, biology or physics or whatever, you go into the classroom and you have book-work . . . book-learning, and then on a couple of other days during the week you have a lab class where you do lab work where you have practical hands-on practice regarding or implementing the book-learning that you did in class.

Well, we've been doing a lot of book-learning for a long time. And the last couple of weeks we've been getting into lab work, the practical implementation you might say, of the book-learning.

I mentioned last week that everyone right now has an incredible opportunity which everyone might see as a disaster, but everyone has an incredible opportunity to participate in a conscious shift of perception—one that transforms, regenerates and redeems Creation. That's what happens when you do the two-step and when you yield to the Father's Perspective.

Now, I want to not sound severe, but I do want to make a point here: You're in a situation . . . there is a situation occurring in your world which requires attention, requires correction. It's a long way off for many and it's right in your face for others. If it's a far-off . . . you know, I encourage you not to treat it as though it's irrelevant to you. I encourage you to involve yourselves—involve yourselves practically by making donations or contributions to help those who have experienced great and severe loss.

But more than that, I want you to contribute your attention. I want you to contribute your attention with an awareness that it isn't just to "those people out there," it's contributing your attention to your Brothers, to your Sisters, to your fellowman, to your Family and for you. Just because there are no significant problems going on in your life, to engage frivolously and freely in activities without giving a second thought to part of your Family who needs someone to witness for them, you are missing the point and you are neglecting your purpose.

And you are more than anything, missing out on a connection—a healing connection and a connection of joy and a connection of Love that it's your Birthright to be experiencing.

Now, for many years it has become more obvious, more and more obvious that you live in an inter-connected world. It used to be when communication took time, it felt as though Europe was on another planet and there was no relationship or another part of the world was somewhere else where there was no relationship.

As the past fifty years have gone by, what's happened? Mankind has become more conscious of the inter-relatedness, the interdependence, the involvement that everyone is inseparable from. And the tendency has been to try to keep the sense of separation going—the boundaries, the borders, the cultures and so on—and still try to be different from and not having to feel Brotherly love for everyone else.

And in spite of that tendency to hold on to past patterns, it has become increasingly clear that everyone is involved with everyone else and each one's behavior has its impact.

Nowadays with what you call, "the economic crises," it's obvious to you that one country can't do something economically without affecting another. And so there is a bond, there is a unity whether it's liked or not. And now with the circumstance in Japan, it's obvious that the very air in which radioactive materials are spewing and circulating on the winds, well that makes it clear as well that the air you breathe is the air everyone else breathes, and that what happens one place can happen another.

Now, why am I saying this?

I'm saying it because it really is time. The situation, the events demand that everybody become conscious of the relationship and not neglect the call to witness for your Brother which constitutes witnessing for your Self. You cannot neglect your Brother and not neglect your Self as well.

You know, I've shared a sentence: "I wish to see the evidence of Love" and another sentence, "I wish to be the evidence of Love." Two good practices. One expresses a willingness to see God out there: "I wish to see the evidence of Love" and the other is a desire to let God be Present in you, as you, so that you might be the Presence of Love.

But in some ways, that's just a nice thing to think about. It's a nice fuzzy cozy feeling message. "Yes! I wish to see the evidence of Love and I wish to be the evidence of Love." Well, here we are with the opportunity to see and be the evidence of Love.

What does that mean? It means that you're going to have to become involved. If you're going to be the evidence of Love—not just the thinker of loving thoughts—your behavior is going to reflect an inner motive and that inner motive is going to take your attention. And at the moment it seems that attention takes time.

So, you know, you can't be too casual about it. And it is going to require prioritizing how you're using your mind and where you're giving your attention.

See, this is the meaning of "I wish to be the evidence of Love" or even "I wish to see the evidence of love." Because it takes time, it takes involvement. It takes being consciously aware of that and not something else!

Do you see how much I want for you to have the Meaning of A Course In Miracles be translated into and you might say internalized into changed behavior—new attitudes—because that's where the transformation and the healing and the correction of everything occurs?

I know, it's nice to have wonderful thoughts to think that don't take up too much time and can sort of be an energetic envelope that you move around in as you give your attention to other things. But you know what? If you're going to Wake up and if you're going to experience the Kingdom of Heaven as what it Is instead of as the "world" and "universe" that you presently misperceive It as, you're going to have to love to look for the evidence of Love, to look for the evidence of God—to expect to see the evidence of God—and not to forget to do it because playing a video game is so much more involving . . . you see? . . . or whatever it might be.

Now, you see . . . here's the work part of it and here's the wonder part of it: There's only one Substance. Absolutely everything that exists is made up of one infinite Substance. It's the Substance out of which God creates everything. And that Substance is the Substance of God Himself.

So God creates all that is out of the Substance of His Being—out of the Substance of Himself. And the Substance is Spirit. And we've talked about this before including last week. And yes, I will be repetitious tonight but I'm going to amplify and embellish so there's more understanding.

There is only one Substance and it is the Substance that is Spirit. When I say the substance of Spirit, I mean the Substance that is Spirit.

But one could ask, "What is the substance of Spirit?" If you were to take that substance out of which God has made everything, which is Spirit, what is its substance? Well, its substance is Love . . . Its substance is Love. That's why Substance—Spirit—is unified. That's why It is indivisible. That is why It is absolutely harmonious. That is why It is invulnerable. That is why It is omnipotent. That is why It is this, that and the other thing . . . we could go on and on.

Now, It is also the meaning that you associate with emotion when you speak of Love—caring, affection, the mental embrace with good feelings about what you're embracing.

The Substance of Spirit is Love. And so, [wraps knuckles on table] the substance of everything that you can see and feel and even the things that you can't see and feel are indivisible and are the presence of vital Love, loving every single atom, every single molecule, every single thing that you can see and touch, I will tell you is right now extending Love to you and to everything else.

You are constantly embraced by the Love out of which everything has been created and therefore you are being loved by everything created.

There is absolutely nothing about Substance as I'm speaking of it, that can harm because it is indivisible and therefore undivided. It therefore is incapable of being polarized. It is therefore, as I've said, an infinite absolute experience of harmony rather like a symphony, among other things. The music of the spheres you've heard of . . . It is a wonderful and true idea.

So, we're talking about Substance as it truly is. The Substance of all Creation which is described as the Kingdom of Heaven and is what I've been telling you what is confronting you at this very moment as you look at your computer, as you listen to your tape recorder or your CD player, as you sit in your chair feeling it supporting you . . . you see?

Now this self-same Substance, when observed from a mind that is enjoying and practicing special relationships, appears to be a material world and universe. Remember, a special relationship is a relationship you have with something where God is not anywhere in the picture, where you are not looking with God desiring to see the evidence of God . . . and where you are not attempting to be the Presence of Love. But where you're just being whatever you think you are or looking whatever you think you're looking at and coming to your own conclusions and definitions about it. That's a special relationship. It's a relationship that you in your aloneness—it's a private relationship—which you in your aloneness have with things. All of which have to be part of Creation because there's nowhere else to go to find things to have a special relationship with.

Now the problem is that when you choose to look at everything and have a special relationship with it, everything about that special relationship becomes destructive. Everything about your relationship with it becomes detrimental. Everything about it causes deterioration to occur. And so you constantly have to busy yourself to undo the deterioration or remain clear of the threat of harm. You see?

Now mind you we're talking about the self-same Substance. When you look at it with God you see it as it truly Is: the Substance which is Spirit, the Substance of which is Love indivisible, infinite harmony.

But when you look at that same aspect of Creation—that same Substance—independently enjoying your right to determine what it is you're looking at, that very same Substance loses its harmony. It loses its benignness. It becomes polarized—conflicted. It becomes dangerous. And as we've been saying, everything about the special relationship has as its goal, your death—your demise.

Strong words, but you have an answer. And we've been talking about it at length. It's called, "the two-step," it's called, "the holy instant." It's that place where you abandon your independence and you acknowledge your Father again and you reach for your Father again and you let the Father—in the Silence within you—infill you with His Perspective.

You know what? The circumstances today call for your practice of the holy instant. It calls for transformation, regeneration and redemption. It calls for being brought back to its spiritual original, as I said last week. And you are the one to do it. You're the one to do it because you know about doing it because we've been talking about it.

And now it's time for the lab work. Now it's time for you to take the time each day to remember to be the Presence of Love . . . to be the evidence of Love . . . to be that which gives the attention necessary to say, "I wish to see the evidence of Love, I wish to see the evidence of God right there in those radioisotopes.

Now, you've got to look at every aspect of Substance that is occurring in Japan—the ones you're all familiar with, wood and nails and plaster and food and land and so on as well as the radioactive materials, as well as the structures of the energy plants—and you've got to be willing to look at it and not react to what you think it is. Because I promise you in many ways you are being conditioned to fear the drifting of invisible dangerous particles that can, because of their extreme negativity, you might say, their extreme destructiveness, cause you, perhaps to lose your life, perhaps your children, perhaps your animals to become ill and so on.

And it's very much like, you know, when they say "Okay, everyone the swine flu is coming," can't see it, but you become afraid of something invisible that comes on the breeze or comes in through the shipping lines and so on.

You know, do you think healing is a reality? Do you think correction that the Course talks about is something actual? It is.

And what you need to know is, that whether the invisible stuff drifting in is something that can't possibly kill you—just might inconvenience you for awhile—or whether it's something that can kill you, it's still a misunderstanding of the one and only Substance there is. It can grow in your thought when you think it's matter and not Spirit—when you look at it and have no sense that what you're looking at has anything to do with God. You see?

The substance of Spirit is Love and the substance of matter is fear.

You must use your Mind consciously in a way that is constructive and stop using It in a way that your Father did not create It to be used, which ends up causing you damage, heart ache, injury, illness and ultimately death—a death that's not real because you immediately find that you haven't died at all and the whole thing was a farce . . . you see? . . . and that you didn't need to be as afraid of it as you were. In fact, you could have challenged it if you had known that it couldn't really kill you.

So, the call at the present time is for each of you to love your fellowman and planet enough to embrace every aspect of it—every radioactive particle—and wish to see the evidence of God there, which would be the substance of Love which would have no polarities to it whatsoever but which would be constituted of infinite harmony. If the most miniscule particle of Creation embodies infinite harmony, can you get a sense of how powerful that harmony is? Not powerful over anything, but so powerful, so huge that nothing could do anything to it, causing it to be an utterly eternally permanent state of Substance.

Your mind, used well, is called upon today . . . now . . . now . . . now and tomorrow . . . and the next day.

And you might think that's a lot of work, but I'm going to tell you something: It's utterly normal to you to be that conscious of the truth that consistently. It's actually abnormal for there to be any interruption or break in your consciousness of what truth is, or in your consciousness of your love for your fellowman. It's not necessary to abandon your love for your fellowman just because you're washing the dishes or just because you have to mow the lawn. You see?

This is simply a wonderful opportunity to begin to be the divine one you Are, embodying and embracing everything about what you divinely Are, so that it's not escaping you and the perfection of Being isn't escaping you.

Is it becoming clearer to you that when you choose to believe that you're an independent agent who is not divine in any way, because you don't really have an actual connection with God, do you realize that that perspective is not only false, it is entirely detrimental to your peace and joy and it squelches your conscious awareness of your divinity and keeps you in a frame of mind that will not reach out for anything better, which will simply wear itself down until you give up the ghost and die?

It's time for the material world and universe to yield its negative, self-destroying attributes, to yield those up to the clarifying Vision of the substance of Spirit which is Love being the beautiful exquisite utter harmony of everything which is therefore eternally held in its unalterable perfection.

In the apparent ineptitude of the handling of the situation in Japan it could be easy to justify the problem. "Well, what can we all expect? Nobody was using any intelligence, nobody was using any foresight, blah, blah, blah . . ."

Well, wait a minute, that's a convenient way to curse them. But what about you? Well, you're having a problem with emphysema. "Well, you know, if you hadn't smoked all those years you wouldn't have any trouble with that . . . you know, I mean, after all what do you expect?"

C'mon, don't engage in that kind of justification of illusion. You know, it doesn't matter how many mistakes were made. It doesn't matter how many cigarettes were smoked. The only substance there is of lungs or of atomic energy plants is Spirit. That's the only thing it ever has been. That it seems to be destructive is something that calls for correction—a misperception that calls for correction. And correction is deserved because the problem wasn't established by God.

They say it may take months, blah, blah, blah. It may take years, blah, blah, blah. But to engage in the holy instant takes only a moment. And when you do become conscientious enough to engage in it, [repeats] engage in it, engage in it, engage in it, you will find correction occurring [snaps fingers] instantaneously, or so rapidly that it is obvious that the circumstance isn't bound by what you call physical processes . . . reminding you, wonder of wonders, that there is a God and . . . what? . . . and also God's co-creators, You.

Hey, if you can choose to look at things all by yourself and see Creation as a polarized death trap, and you can also look at Creation with God and see the very same thing truly, in it's harmony and perfection, then you now know what your job as co-creator is.

God moves, God speaks and form appears. God moved and the Movement registers. The Substance of It is infinite harmonious motion—Movement being indivisible, unpolarized. And you are there to recognize It for what It is, acknowledge It for what It is, confirm It for what It is. And when you do, the perfection of it is the only thing going on.

But if you decide to have a private perception—a special relationship—with it, that very same Creation will seem to be ultimately killing, and in the meantime, difficult to say the least.

So, when you're not performing your function, when you're not acting as co-creator, then the perfect pattern that the Father is being by His Movement escapes you and you suffer.

You don't need to do this anymore.

And whether the substance you seem to be suffering from or the damage caused by substances that you thought were matter, you have the opportunity and I'm saying, the demand, the call to change your mind about it.

You know what? Changing your mind doesn't mean that you have power to make good happen. But you know what? You have the power to abandon making distortions happen by behaving in a way that doesn't represent You truly, because you're not an independent agent for change or an independent anything.

Now, there's another important point: You heard me say that the reactors are all made of the one Substance, right? And so you might misunderstand what I'm saying and think that I'm saying that the use of atomic energy is appropriate or that atomic energy itself is not a misperception that calls for correction.

Be careful! Because I promise you, that once you see the Substance of Spirit, whether it's called uranium, plutonium or whatever, or just simple iron or snot . . . [chuckles] . . . whatever it might be, when you see it as the Substance that is Spirit—Love embodied—you will not be able to get power from matter, because matter will not be what you're working with. And because there's no polarity in the substance of Spirit, I'll tell you what will happen: It will not take years to cool down a reactor by shutting it down, and the apparent destructive radioactive emissions will not take a certain number of years to become non-threatening, non-destructive [snaps fingers]. The illusion of polarity and the destructiveness of it will [snaps fingers] be gone. Interesting dilemma, right?

Are you really going to want to look at the situation at hand and want to see the evidence of Love there, the perfection of Being, the harmony of being the indivisibility and the incapacity to be polarized? Do you really want to see that, so that the threat that is occurring will stop, when it means that atomic energy gathered from the process of fission will no longer generate electricity, because fission won't happen?

Wow . . . well you'd better. Because I promise you that in the loss of that which you've felt was essential and the only way you could have comfort, in the loss of that, it will be replaced by comfort, harmony that will not be threatenable, will not be vulnerable, will not be subject to deterioration or loss.

So, we're talking about big things. Do you want to live in a world without polarities? without conflict? Where Being—infinately speaking—moves in absolute beautiful awesome harmony?

Well, I'm saying the call is here. Tomorrow, tonight, every day, no matter what you're confronted with, and all of you are confronted with dissonances and conflicts and things that could be improved and all of the problems are justifiable and therefore not easily solvable . . . right?

The secret is: That the problems aren't happening "out there."

If they were, they are difficult to solve. But if they are in the perception, if they are in the way in which you are looking at everything, it's easily solvable and correctible. Because you can abandon your independent stance, and you can re-embrace your Father, and you can with all genuineness invite Him back in and make room for Him so that His Perceptions infill you or illuminate in you that they are and always have been yours as well, and you just took a little vacation and pretended you could have some other perceptions.

I can't say it too strongly: It's time to take hold of Waking up. It's time to make a stand . . . or take a stand. It's time to become definite about the truth that you've been studying about. And what better reason could you have to do it than that your Brother needs it. And as you can see your Brother's need becomes your need. And so it's an utterly and simply intelligent thing to engage in.

God Moves . . . Creation Is . . . and It wasn't designed to fail.

Your Waking up is ordained! And the correction of everything that has gone on here is ordained!

Take hold of it this week and I will continue to encourage you to not let go. Expect the unexpected. Expect the unbelievable. You can dare to watch for radioactivity to diminish, just because it doesn't fulfill God's Purpose.

I love you all. And I will be with you each and every one of you as you do this. And the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind—stands with you as well in support of your coming back into your right Mind.

And I must say again, that a damaged Japan, a damaged Chernobyl, a damaged body will not persist when you do this—correction will occur, redemption will occur.

You want the whole ball of wax. You want the Totality of it, not just a blissfully happy mind that's just not bothered by a damaged Japan, or a damaged ecosystem or whatever. You see? Take hold of the whole ball of wax.

I love you. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 9th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We won't be reading from the book this evening. And before we begin I would like to take a few moments to be quiet together.

[Quiet time.]

There are some things I need to say tonight which Paul has a slight inkling of, and it is making Paul uncomfortable. And the reason is, that when one opens up to Guidance, when one says, "Father, Thy Will not mine be done," and yields to It, it means that because growth is called for, because correction of false ideas is called for, information will be provided that makes the one asking for help uncomfortable, because it stretches his or her borders . . . moves him or her out of their comfort zone . . . and it's essential.

Paul knows this, and that's why he's sitting here and letting me speak, even though it makes him uncomfortable, because it's going to require him to be in a way that he's not used to—forthright, clear. I'm not saying that Paul doesn't like to be clear but he does like to be clear in indirect ways. Not forthright, not utterly clear.

But what he doesn't realize and what a lot of you don't realize is that clarity, forthrightly expressed, puts everyone at ease because they know exactly where you're coming from or they know exactly what is expected or they know exactly what the limitations or boundaries of the activity that they're engaged in with you, are. And so there's no confusion. That is better than the kind of confusion that can come from oblique utterances of clarity. You see?

Now, yes . . . Paul is blocking. And so he's simply backing off, doing the two-step, getting out of a pre-reaction . . . [long pause] . . . well, I'm going to approach it this way, perhaps obliquely, but to get around Paul's resistance, a resistance that he really does not want to activate.

We've talked about the fact that you cannot witness for yourself. And your Brother cannot witness for himself or your Sister for herself, that it takes another to witness for a Brother. It takes one who perseveres in discovering the truth, listening for the truth about a Brother when that Brother is having difficulty experiencing it himself. When his faith is too low, when his trust is shot, he calls for a Brother who can see the truth about him and who is willing to share it.

So, you may use your Brother as a justification for doing the two-step. You may use your Brother's need or what your Brother has shared as justification for shutting up—becoming still—going within and asking of the Father or the Holy Spirit, "What is the truth here? What is the truth here relative to my Brother? Because I want to see and experience that, so that my experience becomes shared spontaneously and blesses my Brother when he was unable to bless himself all by himself." That's the way it's supposed to work.

You are your Brother's savior . . . you are your Brother's savior. But you are only your Brother's savior by virtue of using your Brother as the reason that you turn within to the Holy Spirit or to the Father so that you might know the truth to reflect back to your Brother.

If you use your Brother as justification for joining with your Brother where your Brother becomes the determiner of your perceptions, then it's "the blind leading the blind and both shall fall into the ditch."¹ It's that simple.

Now, I've backed into this so that I can illustrate what Paul is doing. The reason Paul is uncomfortable right now is that he cares more about what you think . . . what you think . . . what you think . . . what you think. He cares enough to let you be the reason—many of the reasons—he listens to me. But then he uses you to measure how well he's doing or to determine what his best behavior ought to be in order to have a certain result. And that certain result doesn't necessarily mean control over all of you, but a result meaning his ability to feel his peace.

In other words, if everyone is happy with him, he can use that as justification for relaxing and being at peace. You see? That's a wrong use of a Brother. That's letting the Brother cause attention to be given to the Brother but not after the two-step has occurred, and then gathering information about how to be and how to feel from what's happening in this interaction which the Father has been left out of.

Now, the only time any of you find Paul of value—truly of value—is when he is listening to me and not listening to you, and sharing what he hears when he's listening to me so that there is an interaction, there is an involvement, but he's not relying upon data from you to know what to say, he's bringing into the interaction with all of you his joining with the Holy Spirit or me.

This provides an object lesson. This provides an example for everyone from which everyone can glean the dynamics of listening for Guidance, the dynamics of listening for the Father's Voice or for the Holy Spirit. And the sharing of that action with all of you does constitute witnessing for you because it helps you see what you can do, which you didn't know you could do, which it never occurred to you to do, or which you denied, denounced, when it came to your attention.

So Paul, in his listening, renders practical to everyone who's listening, the value and the nature of Guidance.

Paul does a lot of thinking when he's uncomfortable, as do all of you. In fact, being uncomfortable is generally what spurs thinking and cancels out listening—avoiding the one thing out of which transformation can occur, out of which resolution can come.

Now I'm speaking to all of you but I'm certainly also speaking to Paul. And you know what? As a result of what's happening at this very moment, you all can have an understanding that when you're talking with your Guide, your Guide might not speak any highfalutin "spiritual talk" but very down to earth practical loving relationship. In fact, it's that which constitutes the most grounding aspect of the act of listening and hearing.

Now, I think he's going to let me say the things that he's afraid no one will like. And once again, for him, I will come in the back door:

If you were going to make a cake from scratch—an almond butter cake—you would need certain ingredients. Let's say your husband says, "Hey, I'd love to have one of your almond butter cakes!" And you say, "Okay, great! I'll make one." And you go to the cupboard and you have the flour and you have the sugar or you have the water or the milk, you have most of the ingredients but you don't have any almond extract, and you don't have a couple of other ingredients. And so you say, "Aw, honey, I need an almond extract and I need this and I need that in order to be able to make it."

And your husband says, "Well, what's wrong? You know, it's your job to take care of the kitchen. I go out all day and work and do the things that bring in the bread and the butter—you know, the money for you to get the ingredients. It's a simple thing for you to keep the kitchen stocked." You see? And suddenly a clear expression of need has been turned into an issue of competency or actually incompetency.

And Paul isn't the only one who has those kinds of reactions—all of you do. And if you engage with those reactions and they begin to govern you, you will never get the almond extract. You will never just go out yourself and say, "Honey, I'll run down to the store and get it. I'll be right back . . ." You know, you'll have your cake in an hour and a half instead of forty-five minutes.

No. Oh dear, maybe some tears . . . maybe sitting down . . . "My husband doesn't appreciate me . . ." and so on. Or, you know, "I'm really not a very good wife" and bullshit like that . . . thinking!

Stating needs is a way of being clear yourself.

For instance, if you're going to say a prayer because you have needs, you don't have to sit down and say, "Father, I know I'm not worthy of Your attention. But you know what? I really do need this. I really do need that. It doesn't have to be brand new. It doesn't have to be from the store. It could be from a garage sale. But I need this." You see? Well, there's no necessity of going through this process of unworthiness.

All you have to say is, "Father, I need a garden hose that works," and leave it! That's a prayer! No bullshit attached to it. No fuzziness! No unworthiness! No ego shit, right? Just simple, "Father, I need a working garden hose . . ." direct, clear.

Now, the showing up . . . the appearing of the garden hose can happen. It doesn't have to wait for all of the tears and the feeling of unworthiness to pass before the attention can be brought to the need again.

So the simple fact is that there are needs . . . legitimate, reasonable needs which need attention, and which Paul has been reluctant to share with everyone, because there's this conditioning which many of you have, that if you're on your spiritual path you shouldn't have needs. You see? And you shouldn't have to convey to anyone else a state of need that you're in.

Well, taint so! taint so! Express your needs so your Brother can witness for you to your abundance, to your worthiness of abundance, whether that one actually shares abundance or not in terms of dollars or cents or a garden hose.

It's ego . . . ego . . . ego . . . that wants to cover up need. I've said before, that need is the threshold of the fulfillment of the need. The apparent lack is the point of breakthrough for that which is in the process of coming forth. It's simple. And if you deny the need or choose not to look at it, you will not bring your attention where the emergence is primed to happen.

I am re-teaching Paul about this, as well as teaching all of you about this, so that you bring this practicality and clarity into your experience where it's needed.

Now as most of you know, a year ago—a little over a year ago—I told Paul and Susan that it was time for the Foundation to move from the residence it was in into a new residence. And last August a new residence was found and purchased because of the incredibly wonderful support of everyone who actively participates in the work that we're doing. It was incredible.

Now, it has taken a number of months from August until now to slowly get things moved into the new residence. And it's still not completed. And the reason is, that there has been a need for more income than has been coming in.

Paul has been unreasonably patient. I mean by that, that he has not jumped at the chance to let everyone know what the need is. And as a result there has been a certain stalemate that has occurred, a certain lack of activity and forward movement. It's not appropriate for that "lack of movement" to be occurring.

Now, Paul has slipped into concern about what everyone might be thinking about what I'm saying—what everyone might be thinking about him as a result of what I'm saying . . . forgetting that I'm the one that's saying it and that it's not Paul's idea. And that's why the communication is bogging down.

Just a moment . . .

I think we can be very forthright here. Here are the practical needs: The Foundation presently owns two houses. Both of those houses are having to be maintained: electricity, water and so on—yards taken care of, etc. And on the 31st of this month property taxes will become due on both properties, amounting to approximately six thousand dollars ($6,000).

I am mentioning the amount so that there's a clarity about the kind of need there is—it's not a need of $250 or some other amount. Paul does not understand that stating that clearly helps everyone know how to be in practical ways with the need that I've just expressed. And that those who can find no way to support will know they cannot support. And those who can or those who can even do it with great ease will be aware that there is a need that they can participate in.

It's not up to Paul to decide for anyone else what they can do or what they ought to do. And most of all anyone doing it, it's not about Paul when they do it.

Now in addition to property taxes falling due on the 31st of April, the other house needs to be sold. Spring is busting out. This is the time that people start house-hunting. The house needs to be prepared for sale: cleaned up, yards neatened up, new carpeting put in, in this case . . . various . . . you know, fixer-upper sort of things so that the house will be maximally prepared for sale. It needs to be sold because maintaining two houses . . . that serves no purpose.

And so, there are expenses that will be incurred. All of these things are the practical, down to earth aspects of moving from one place to another—buying a new one, selling the old one. It's just part of the program, it's part of the way it works.

Paul's ego gets into the picture and says, "Why would anyone do this for me?" And his ego is forgetting that none of this has anything to do with doing anything for Paul. It has to do with a Movement which Paul is involved in, that he is participating in with me. And the simple fact is, that in order for this work to be done, in order to have what it takes to broadcast a program, to stream things over the Internet and so on, requires a place to do it from—a residence, a building of some sort that has electricity and phone and so on.

Now the simple fact is (and with this Paul can agree) the work that we're doing by means of our broadcasts, by means of our website and so on, the work that we are doing is not insignificant, is utterly meaningful—I am sharing things that no one else is sharing yet, that very practically lead to Awakening and the end of illusions.

Providing the means for this work to be done is extremely worthwhile. Because it is so meaningful, Paul has no trouble justifying saying these things, period.

It is reasonable for support in any form that allows this work to continue to come forth, to be extended and made available. The work and the way it is handled is utterly intelligent. It is intelligence in expression.

Now, I suppose there are many who could say, "Well, wow, if Jesus is asking for contributions, I had better contribute." No. If making contributions is an intelligent use of your ability to give because it promotes something that is of extreme value, then that's the reason to make a contribution. It doesn't matter whose asking for it.

Now we will keep everyone updated via our web site regarding the flow of contributions and the needs that are being met because you deserve that clarity—not because Paul wants to know, or his ego wants to know anything that would give him peace of mind from a wrong source. Clarity in the sharing will let everyone know whether they want to, can or will continue to support as this out of the ordinary transition occurs. You see? This is not an everyday occurrence of moving from one location to another to carry on the work. It will be over. It will be over shortly. But in the process, support will be needed so that the completion can occur.

I know that each one of you is able to hear what I'm saying clearly and simply. And I'm not going to try to manipulate you in any way. The need has been clearly shared and the update of need and needs met will be provided on the web site.

And so, I'll leave it clean and finish here and say to everyone of you, I love you.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 16th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I've been saying some things for quite awhile, and especially in the last few weeks, that are causing some distress for long-time students of the Course, because I've really been homing in on the fact that there's only one thing confronting you—there's only one thing ever in your face—and that is the Kingdom of Heaven . . . that is Reality.

There simply is nothing else existent for you to experience.

And so, I'm unequivocal on this point: You are either seeing Reality clearly or you are seeing Reality through a glass darkly. You are either seeing Creation truly, or you are seeing Creation—God's Creation, the only Creation there is—through misperceptions.

You are never seeing an alternative to Reality or Creation.

There simply is no place for unreality to arise from because there is no presence other than God and therefore no place—no omnipresence—out of which unreality could arise.

If you use the Course to justify the idea that everything that you see and call Creation is an illusion, is to behave in a way that flies right in the face of God—right in the face of truth—it contradicts Being.

I talk about looking at everything with curiosity to see the more of what God is Being there, than what you are seeing. And I do this on purpose because if you don't look right where you are—which is the only place you're able to give your attention to at the moment—if you don't give your attention to what's in your face with curiosity, you will effectively imprison yourself in your present perception. You will deny yourself the experience of God. You will block from your experience—from your consciousness—Reality Itself. And that is not your Birthright and I will forever continue to say, “Look at anything and everything that you can with the curiosity to see the more of what God is Being right there than you're presently seeing.”

This is essential, unless you want to ride out the dream . . . you know, sort of go along with the dream. But if that's what you want, why would you read the Course?

This chapter is called, “Forgiveness and Healing.” Well, why use the word, healing? Are we going to get so highfalutin and umm . . . unrealistic in our spirituality that healing is going to begin to mean something different from what everyone knows healing is, what everyone feels the need for? Is healing going to be a clarification in your mind that has nothing to do with your world or your body?

No! Stay grounded! The purpose of this Course is not to change the meaning of words so significantly that they bear little relevance to your daily life. They are supposed to make a difference in your daily life. How? . . . by giving you airy-fairy ideas to dream in or dream about without ever correcting a problem? If so, then let's go through the Course and remove the word “correction” wherever it occurs.

Correction is called for. Healing is expected. And healing is not going to be the insane experience of “peace and well-being” when there is injury or illness present. That is not spirituality. That is insanity!

Let's be clear. If you don't know the difference between sanity and insanity you are lost! And someone has to tell you the difference. I'm telling you the difference.

Now, there are two statements—not in the Course, but absolutely true—which I want to share with you. The first is this: All is Mind (with a capital 'M'). All is Mind . . . from the rolling of worlds in the most subtle ether, to a potato patch.¹ And the other is this: Mind—again with a capital 'M' (and not just because it's at the beginning of a sentence) but meaning God—Mind maintains all identities from a blade of grass to a star as distinct and eternal.²

This is the truth. And it calls for an appreciation of everything you see in your world that you probably haven't brought to it before. And it is only in bringing that kind of appreciation to everything in your world which allows you to have your attention right where Reality is present for you to re-discover it.

Your willingness to look at the “unlovely thing” is forgiveness. And when you’re willing to look at an unlovely thing for a purpose . . . to see the more of what God is being there, than the absence of God that you’re seeing there, healing is the result. It’s that simple. It’s that practical.

And not anyone should be laboring under any other belief that would cause them to just sit and tolerate the intolerable in the name of A Course In Miracles or the wonderful teaching it presents.

This section is called:

FANTASY AND DISTORTED PERCEPTION³

When you maintain that there must be order of difficulty in miracles, all you mean is that there are some things you would withhold from truth. You believe that truth cannot deal with them only because you would KEEP them from truth.

Well, I know . . . you want me to tell you something practical here? Okay. For the last few weeks we’ve talked about the situation in Japan. We’ve talked about radioactive energy—radioactive matter. And we’ve talked about the ability, the capacity you have to see that ultimately negative aspect of energy transformed into a totally benign presence of energy.

But it’s very difficult. You all, as a general thing, believe that radioactive isotopes are dangerous to your well-being, are dangerous to your life.

Now, when you maintain that there must be order of difficulty in miracles, when you say, “That’s impossible because radioactive isotopes are truly damaging, they can kill me if I’m exposed to too much!” And of course if you say that about yourself, what are you thinking about the individuals who are fifty miles away from the energy plant—the atomic energy plant? You’re condemning yourself and you’re condemning them.

You’re certainly not practicing the holy instant, where you shut-up, you become still and in the silence you say, “Father, what is the truth here?” You see? A decision is made not to withhold that from the truth.

Listen again:

When you maintain that there must be order of difficulty in miracles, all you mean is that there are some things you would withhold from truth.

You see? “Well, I can’t bring myself to present this to the truth because it’s not correctable. It truly is dangerous. And it will be dangerous, some of it for so long that nobody in this lifetime will be able to enjoy being on that land and blah...blah...blah!” Right? You’re committed to withhold it from truth because you are so damned confident about what substance is that you can’t bring yourself to believe that. . . oh, there might be a possible miracle!

But that’s not what the Course is about. Let’s be clear about that.

You believe the truth cannot deal with them . . .

. . . radioactive isotopes in conjunction with your flesh, your body . . .

. . . only because you would KEEP them from truth. Very simply, your lack of faith in the power that heals all pain . . .

. . . what do those words mean . . . “heals all pain?” Oh, is it psychological pain? Is it an inner grievance that has nothing to do with flesh that is torn, or a boil that’s about to pop? It has nothing to do with physical pain?

You better believe it does have to do with it. Else, throw the book away and be a mortal . . . and stop complaining about it! And stop pretending to have a vision larger than the human condition—the human dream.

Very simply, your lack of faith in the power that heals all pain arises from your wish to retain some aspects of reality for fantasy.

In other words, you’re gonna keep this little part of the Kingdom of Heaven, called “radioactive isotopes” and you’re going to invest them in fantasy. You’re going to say, “This part of the Kingdom of Heaven”—which in actuality can’t be polarized at all, or dangerous—“this little bit of the Kingdom of Heaven I’m going to reserve for fantasy, and the fantasy I’m going to apply to it is that it is radioactive, it is polarized energy that is highly dangerous to the human condition. This is the definition I’m going to hold it to.” You see?

You’re going . . .

. . . to retain some aspects of reality for fantasy.

Now, here’s the interesting thing. This section is called,

FANTASY AND DISTORTED PERCEPTION

. . . as though they’re two different things. And they are. Fantasy is something you can entertain all by yourself. You can fantasize to your heart’s delight.

But you cannot have a distorted perception all by yourself. A distorted perception comes from your bringing your fantasy to another Brother or Sister who is willing to share that fantasy with you. You see?

And the moment the two of you make commitment to that fantasy and deny the Father as your Source, and deny all of Creation as His, and you usurp it for your purposes, you become bound to a mutual insanity that is constituted of distorted perception in which the benign substance of Spirit that is the Substance of all Creation which is Love embodied, that that is something else entirely, completely opposed to what it truly Is.

Wow! Whether you believe it or not this is what has happened and this is what binds you to a human existence that exhibits none of the characteristics of what a holy Son or Daughter of God would be experiencing. But of course, you've forgotten who you Are, as we've discussed. And you're committed to the fantasy that you have bound Creation to, or bound a small portion of Creation to.

Now you know, it really doesn't make a lot of difference whether you talk about radioactive isotopes or cancer cells, they both seem to have the same capacity to kill you. They both seem to have the same intent to kill you.

Is one worse than the other? Well, not really.

Now, it's time to begin to have a different experience of Substance. It's time to have a different experience of the Substance of everything in this Universe. It's time for you to dare to bring your fantasy to truth instead of bringing truth to fantasy. And that's what this is all about.

Again . . .

Very simply, your lack of faith in the power that heals all pain arises from your wish to retain some aspects of reality for fantasy. If you but realized what this must do to your appreciation of the whole!

Well, it annihilates it. It makes it impossible for you to have an appreciation of the whole, because you have radioactive isotopes and you have cancer cells and any number of other killing things that cause you to lose your peace.

And you know what? If you've lost your peace, then you're in fear. And when you're in fear, it becomes almost impossible to be willing to look at the thing that is causing your fear and choose to bring it to truth. It becomes impossible for you to dare to embrace it in any way, even though you are embracing it to get past the apparently polarized aspects that it is presenting as a primarily negative aspect that is threatening you.

Why do you think you must love your enemies? Because your enemies are the Sons and Daughters of God, or aspects of Creation which you are misperceiving and which your misperceptions are causing you to be defensive against.

You're never going to be able to discover the more of what God is Being in your enemy if you are unwilling to bring your attention to your enemy with the intent not to be sidetracked by his or her presentation, so that you might move right through it with your intent to see the Presence of God, so that God presents Himself to you as your conscious experience and causes you to spontaneously feel and express the joy of the recognition of the Son of God, your Brother, who is so worthy of your love and who in the midst of your recognition of his divinity, reveals to you that you are as divine and uncovers You to you so that you become joined in that awe.

What you reserve unto yourself, you TAKE AWAY from Him Who would release you.

Well, Who's the Him that would release you? It's the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind.

What you reserve unto yourself, . . .

. . . you see? . . . "Oh, this little part of the Kingdom Heaven, I'm going to call it radioactive isotopes. And I'm going to say that it has polarized qualities that are dangerous to anything it comes near . . ."

You reserve that to yourself. And you take it . . .

. . . AWAY from Him . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . Who would release you.

You take it away from your right Mind which would release you from your, shall I say, wrong-mindedness—your ignorance.

Unless you give it back, it is inevitable that your perspective on reality be warped and . . .

. . . what? Here's that word "correction" . . .

. . . uncorrected.

[repeats] Unless you give it back, it is inevitable that your perspective on reality be warped and uncorrected.

So why does it say that? It says it because correction is called for. That's good news. But you're not going to see the correction as an experience as long as you say, "Well, that's a material world and it's illusion and it's going to disappear." That's a curse.

There's no forgiveness in that. And without forgiveness, without a willingness to say, "Wait a minute, if there's something going on there and there's really no other power than God, then there's nothing else to be presenting something there for me to perceive or misperceive, except God. And therefore what's there has to be essentially Real and benign . . . undivided, unpolarized, incapable of sin, sickness, death . . . incapable of decay. Therefore it would behoove me, and I'm willing to look at it with real curiosity to see the divinity that is there. And I'm going to persist in that until I have the experience."

Now if that's not what A Course In Miracles is about, put down the book! Stop reading it! And if you didn't think that was what the Course was about, look at it again with fresh eyes.

As long as you would have it so, so long will the illusion of order of difficulty in miracles remain with you. For you have ESTABLISHED this order in reality by giving some of it to one teacher, and some to another. And so you learn to deal with part of truth in one way, and in another way the other part.

You see? So you use truth as something that you take illusion to for healing, but another part of truth you use to take to illusion to have illusion determine what truth is. You see?

You're still dealing with truth and you're still dealing with substance. You're still dealing with Reality—the only thing there is, truth and substance that is Spirit. But you can misuse truth and you can call Spirit matter—having none of the characteristics of Reality or its Source, God.

To fragment truth is to destroy it by rendering it meaningless.

You see? You can't use truth as that which you take illusion to for correction and then use truth as that which you bring to illusion to have illusion determine what truth is.

To fragment truth . . .

... that way ...

... is to destroy it by rendering it meaningless. Orders of reality is a perspective without understanding, a frame of reference for reality to which it cannot really BE compared at all.

Are you beginning to see here?

The singularity of Being . . . the singularity of existence . . . the unpolarized nature of Being, of existence. This is the truth that you need to be bringing every aspect of your mentality to, so that your mentality might be measured against truth and inevitably enlarged, inevitably made infinite, to inevitably be corrected so that your sanity returns.

Think you that you can bring truth to fantasy, and learn what truth means from the perspective of illusions?

No. And that's why when something apparently disastrous or very threatening to your current ignorant mindset occurs, you tend to take your current mindset as the established order, as the ultimate understanding of Reality. And so, although there is an event happening, it becomes modified by your current determined mindset. And you become frightened to death.

And that's not what the Course teaches. And that's not the appropriate response. Because you are the holy Sons and Daughters of God and nothing less, you never have been. And what you're frightened of is a misperception of the Kingdom of Heaven that couldn't harm you in any way. And yes, that means that at the moment you are experiencing insanity. But you know what? Insanity is corrected by intelligence recognized . . . insanity is corrected by intelligence recognized.

And so, I'm expressing intelligence. I'm presenting intelligence so that you might recognize it and therefore abandon your commitment to your ignorance and dare to, shall I say, climb out of the crab barrel.

Well you know what? One of the things that you tend to keep from truth is [chuckles] the idea that there's an outside to the crab barrel . . . you know . . . you tell somebody, "Hey, I'm working on climbing out of the crab barrel."

And the other person says, "Huh, you fool! There's no outside to the crab barrel. There's not even a crab barrel. It's just life. And you are just going to have to tolerate it. And you're just going to suffer through it until your last day. You see? Don't be foolish." You see?

So, Reality has been brought to fantasy and fantasy has been allowed to determine what Reality is and as a result you deny yourself the possibility of experiencing a miracle because you won't think outside the box—you won't let your mind move outside the box.)

Think you that you can bring truth to fantasy, and learn what truth means . . .

. . . really means . . .

. . . from the perspective of illusions? Truth HAS no meaning in illusion. The frame of reference for its meaning must be ITSELF.

In other words, the frame of reference for truth's meaning must be truth itself. Oh, but that's outside the crab barrel, isn't it! Truth isn't in the crab barrel. It's not in the illusion. It's not in the orphanage. It's outside.

Well, fortunately you know truth is. You know there is truth, whether you know what truth is or not. You have deeply imbedded in you an undeniable awareness that there is such a thing as truth . . . thank God!

So . . .

When you try to bring truth to illusions, you are trying to make illusions REAL, and keep them by JUSTIFYING your belief in them.

You see? You want to bring truth to verify the illusion so that you might keep the illusion. You want to bring truth to your endeavor to be an independent agent—having no Source—thus being totally independent and proud of it.

But to give illusions to truth . . .

. . . to reverse it . . .

. . . is to enable truth to teach that the ILLUSIONS are unreal, and thus enable you to escape from them . . .

. . . uh, actually get outside the crab barrel.

Listen to this:

Reserve not one idea aside from truth, . .

. . . don't keep any private idea. "Well, I hear that radioactive isotopes can be benign. And I could believe that maybe if there were too many around me, I might just be able to come out of it unscathed. But damn it, don't test me on it!"

Reserve not one idea aside from truth, . .

. . . apart from truth . . .

. . . or you establish orders of reality which must imprison you.
There IS no order in reality because EVERYTHING there is true.

“Well, everything there is true. Where? Where is there?” It’s here! If it isn’t here, the book means nothing. If it isn’t here, the words mean nothing, unless in the sweet by-and-by after you die. Well, if that’s when it’s going to be true, put the book away and enjoy your mortality. Engage in all the sin that you want . . . you know? Live this life to the fullest, on the raw side . . . you know? Nothing you can do about it except maybe enjoy it to the hilt because of course, there’s no answer until after you die.

There IS no order in reality because EVERYTHING there is true.

And there is here. And so, your task, your pleasure will be to be willing to look at everything with fresh eyes. I’ve said, with innocent eyes, with a capacity to see beyond what you’re conditioned to see—a capacity that’s already there. Because no matter how much you’ve covered it over, you are the Son and the Daughter of God.

Be willing, then, to give all you have held outside the truth to Him Who KNOWS the truth, . .

. . . the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind— . . .

. . . and in Whom all is brought to truth. Be not concerned with anything except your WILLINGNESS to have this be accomplished.

There it is:

Be not concerned with anything . . .

. . . not the fearsomeness of radio isotopes or cancer or anything else.

Be not concerned with anything except your WILLINGNESS to have this be accomplished.

Here’s the insulting part though:

HE will accomplish it; NOT you.

And that's the beauty of it. And that's the love of it. And that's the infinite invulnerability of you, in it.

You know, I mentioned that sometime in the past, I said, there are two things: Wish to see the evidence of Love, no matter what's presenting itself. And wish to be the presence of Love. Wish to see the evidence of Love and wish to be the evidence of Love. And it's important. Which one comes first? There is an order to it.

Does the wish to be the evidence of Love come first or the wish to see the evidence of Love? I will tell you: It's the wish to see the evidence of Love. The first part of it, the first step of it is, selflessness, gifting your Brother instead of yourself.

When you wish to see the evidence of Love in your Brother or in anything you are looking at, you are opening yourself up to the influx of divine clarity. And when that divine clarity dawns on you, infills you, it inspires you and you end up involuntarily being the evidence of Love. And I mean by that, that your behavior isn't designed by you to have any particular effect because your behavior is beyond your will. Joy that exudes from you spontaneously is the evidence of Love that blesses everyone it falls upon, especially the one whom you decided not to be the evidence of Love to first—the one who seemed to be calling for Love.

"Oh, yeah, I'm going to be the evidence to Love for my Brother here. He really needs it and I really have it to give it to him. You know, I've been studying for years, I know the Course inside and out. And I'm going to be the evidence of Love . . ."

Well, bullshit! You've missed the point! You can't be the evidence of Love that way. You can't start from yourself and your past. You have to start from the innocence of the moment you are in, in which you're undefended against the Father's Perspective, the Father's Will, which is truly yours. But when the Father's Will dawns upon you, you behave in totally unexpected ways because you're not in charge of your behavior any longer.

And it's a wonderful event that you are joyed in and everyone else is joyed in. And that's the way it works.

So . . .

Be willing, then, to give all you have held outside the truth to Him Who KNOWS the truth, and in Whom all is brought to truth. Be not concerned with anything except your WILLINGNESS to have this be accomplished. HE will accomplish it; NOT you. But forget not this: When you become disturbed and lose your peace of mind because ANOTHER is attempting to solve his problems through fantasy, you are refusing to forgive YOURSELF for just this same attempt.

Well, what does that mean? It means that when you find yourself disturbed and losing your peace because another is attempting to solve his problems through fantasy, you have decided not to take this presentation and hand it over to truth for truth to correct. You would rather have held it yourself for your purpose. Your purpose being, that you are going to have a little fit of anger and get the most out of it that you can, because that's more important to you. That's a self-assertion, isn't it? That lets you know that you're real, that you really exist.

Expressions of anger always do that. And that's the only thing they ever do. They help put you back in charge in your own mind, because they make you the most important thing in your mind. And that makes you feel strengthened and more present, even though you've stepped out of Reality entirely and are spinning around in this little space of craziness, unconnected with anything Real and incapable of being the evidence of Love. Why? Because you said, "No, I do not wish to see the evidence of Love." There it is!

Again:

When you become disturbed and lose your peace of mind because ANOTHER is attempting to solve his problems through fantasy, you are refusing to forgive YOURSELF for just this same attempt. And you are holding BOTH of you away from truth and from salvation.

You see? You keep it all spinning around in this little bit of craziness.

. . . you are holding BOTH of you away from truth and from salvation. [But] . . .

. . . the word "but" isn't in here . . .

[But] As you forgive him, you restore to truth what was denied by BOTH of you. And you will see forgiveness where you have GIVEN it.

Now, you tell me, what's the difference between looking at your Brother and forgiving your Brother and having truth restored to both of you? What's the difference between that and looking at a location in Japan, which is overloaded with radioactivity and radioisotopes that are dangerous, and forgiving that and seeing correction occur, seeing truth restored? What is the difference? What is the difference between looking at what you call matter and bringing it to truth, so that truth might reveal to you that it is actually Substance, even though you're calling it matter and that Substance in its Reality, in its only-ness is Spirit—the Substance of God.

What's the difference? And in what way is what I'm talking about denying what the Course is saying, by saying, look at matter with the curiosity to see it begin to behave like Spirit. There is no difference. And as long as anyone maintains that there is a difference the correcting principle of the Course will not function for you, because you are denying the fundamental principle that is saying one thing: God is All . . . is All there is in the radioactive isotope . . . is All there is in the splinter of wood that's caught in your finger . . . is All that there is to my finger.

Mind maintains all Ideas—from a blade of grass to a star—as distinct and eternal. The moment you glimpse the fact that the Course is teaching exactly that, we will all see transformations occurring that everyone deserves to be experiencing and the Course will have fulfilled its purpose.

You don't live in a frightening world, you live (some of you at the moment) in a frightening way of looking at the world—an isolated independent way, isolated from the Father, but joined with Brothers and Sisters in the same mutual agreement . . . a misperception.

And I'm glad to share this news over and over and over until the goodness of the news begins to register with you and you begin to embrace the Course in an entirely new way and therefore, your world as well.

I love you all, and I look forward to being with you next week.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 23rd 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, we're reading from a Chapter entitled, "Forgiveness and Healing." And we've been talking for a few weeks about what you might call radical healing, haven't we?—the changing of apparently dangerous elements into benign but still functioning elements.

The healing of damage, whether from injury or from germs or from radioactive isotopes—radioactivity—whether it's the changing of water which has become impure, we've talked about the expectation of correction of illusions, not as a pleasant dreamy idea, but as an actual measurable fact.

It's very appropriate to be talking about these things at this time, being Easter. After all, if you have tissue that has been damaged that is healed, isn't that resurrection? If something is returned to its natural normal perfect state when it had before been imperfect, is that return to excellence not resurrection? It is.

Forgiveness and Healing, they're inseparable really. Get it? I'm not blasting you with it. I'm not making it sound great and important. But it is simply profound. When there is healing, when something abnormal has been returned to its state of normalcy, resurrection has occurred. And always, when that happens, it happens as the result of a simple act: Forgiveness.

The simple act of forgiveness is accomplished by . . . what? The two-step that we've been taking about—that point at which no matter what is going on, no matter what is confronting you, you stop, you silence your thinking mind.

And in the silence, you reach out beyond your thinking mind to the Father, to the Holy Spirit to enquire, "What is the truth here?"

Now, the simple fact is that the willingness to know what is true in spite of what is confronting you, in spite of what you have been conditioned to believe was happening in which you are projecting on the event, you want to know the truth from a Source that Knows the truth. And that is forgiveness.

When you stop holding a circumstance or an individual to a concept you have, you're forgiving that circumstance or that individual. You are forgiving polluted water. You are forgiving those who knowingly or unknowingly caused the pollution to happen. And in the desire to know what is the truth about the water or the condition, and those that caused the condition, you are abandoning your commitment to your conviction about what those things are. And that abandonment with enquiry to know the truth beyond your perception is, forgiveness.

Forgiveness practiced genuinely always results in correction . . . always results in healing . . . always results in resurrection. It's a law. It is absolute. There is no variation to it and you can depend upon it. But you won't depend upon it if you don't embrace what will initially be the idea or the concept. You'll say, "Resurrection is impossible, damage is permanent!" No forgiveness there, because there is no curiosity to see beyond the definition or meaning you're applying to everything.

And so you hold what is in actuality the Kingdom of Heaven in bondage to a limited perception that you're applying to the Kingdom of Heaven that makes it look like a material world and universe. It's that simple.

How do you get past a material world and universe? By forgiving it. By withdrawing the meanings you apply with commitment to the Kingdom of Heaven causing you to see it through a glass darkly . . . that simple.

This means that every single moment and every encounter you have with everything is Easter Morning . . . the time for resurrection to occur . . . the place for resurrection to occur.

But you've got to let resurrection in. You've got to allow it to be part of your day, part of your own encounter with each and every thing.

Now, I know that presently there is so much wrong going on in your world, so much negativity, so much that seems dire and threatening, that it seems impossible to conceive of resurrection occurring. It seems like it will be almost impossible to have a long drawn out resurrection, much less an instantaneous shift of perception that registers in a recordable fashion in the world as the world, and which would be called, "recognizing the Kingdom of Heaven" right where you are.

But it's time for this. And as I said last week, it better be part of your embrace of A Course In Miracles.

Now, this next section is entitled:

THE FORGIVEN WORLD¹

. . . not just a forgiven leaf or a forgiven spouse or a forgiven ant that just bit you, but a Forgiven World.

Now, it begins by saying:

Can you imagine how beautiful those you forgive will look to you?

Well, why would it be beautiful? Because resurrection will have occurred, and you'll be seeing it in its perfection.

Can you imagine how beautiful those you forgive will look to you? In no fantasy have you ever seen anything so lovely. Nothing you see here, . .

. . . meaning in your ignorance . . .

. . . sleeping or waking, comes near to such loveliness.

And I'm going to add: In spite of the loveliness that you do see . . .

In no fantasy have you ever seen anything so lovely. Nothing you see here sleeping or waking, comes near to such loveliness. And nothing will you value like unto this, nor hold so dear. Nothing [that] you remember that made your heart seem to sing with joy has ever brought you even a little part of the happiness this sight will bring you.

Well, it sounds like a wonderful promise doesn't it. Is this a real promise? Is it something that you can expect to experience today or tomorrow? Well, it better be. And you hold the key. Are you willing to embrace it as the possibility today or tomorrow? More than that are you willing to embrace it as a sort of fundamental obligation that you're under to be sane and to see everything as it is . . . [snaps fingers] now . . . now . . . now . . . now . . . not put off, not delayed, not procrastinated.

Again:

Nothing that you remember that made your heart seem to sing with joy has ever brought you even a little part of the happiness this sight will bring you. For you will see the Son of God. You will behold the beauty which the Holy Spirit loves to look upon, and which He thanks the Father for . . .

. . . while you're neglecting to thank the Father for and which you're neglecting to look upon because you're fascinated with your perceptions and your processes of improving your perceptions so that you might become an ever more valid presence without being joined with your Source—your Father—your very Being.

The Holy Spirit . . .

. . . He was created to see this for YOU, until you learn to see it for yourself. And all His teaching leads to seeing it and giving thanks with Him.

Wow . . . when you're willing to forgive and you see things truly, there is joy, there is gratitude, there is thankfulness. It just exudes from you because you feel it so completely.

Mind you, this is a description of what you are to expect when you're practicing the holy instant: Dynamic actual change. Resurrection: The replacement of sin, disease and death with life, truth and love. Imperfection replaced by immaculate, amazing, awesome perfection that is inviolable, which you will never again be tempted to look at with a bias that screws the experience of it up.

What we're talking about when we use the words, "holy instant" is a dynamic activity, a dynamic action, a dynamic circumstance, if you will, in which the laws of God prevail. And you see that they were never undone. And you see that the perfection of everything never lapsed. That there was no variableness in it and there is not and there cannot be.

You should not expect from week to week, to have no major changes as a result of your studying the Course, or as a result of your practicing the holy instant.

So all of this loveliness that we've been talking about here . . .

This loveliness is NOT a fantasy. It is the real world, bright and clean and new, with everything sparkling under the open sun.

Well, this is what I've been talking about when I say to look at a thing and want to experience "the More of what God is Being there" than what you're experiencing. Because all you're confronted with at any moment is the Kingdom of Heaven—is Reality.

If you don't hear this often, you will forget to look with curiosity, you will forget that there is something more here to be experiencing—something more to be experiencing than injury or damage or decay or deterioration. And if you forget to look with curiosity, you deny yourself the experience of resurrection—resurrection of your misperceptions, of your false beliefs and their apparent results on what you see, so that you're seeing a new Heaven and a new Earth, so that you are experiencing Easter whether it's midnight on a Thursday night or four a.m. on a Tuesday afternoon or whether it's Easter Sunday.

You know what? Easter eggs are an excellent focus of attention to look and see the More of what God is Being there than what you're seeing. The Easter egg, which seems to have nothing to do with Easter, is a perfect subject for the meaning of Easter to be brought home to you and change you forever.

So this year, don't have the Easter egg hunt just for the kids, have it for yourself as well.

So this real world, sparkling under the open sun, well . . .

Nothing is hidden here, for everything has been forgiven, and there are no fantasies to hide the truth.

You're not holding onto or practicing your conscientious ignorance, which you do by defining everything yourself and ignoring the definitions or meanings that the Father has embodied in the Movement of His Being called, "that thing you're looking for" and defining incorrectly.

The bridge between that world and this is so little and so easy to cross that you could not believe it is the meeting place of worlds so different.

What is this little bridge that bridges the gap between the unreal world and the Real world? What is it? F-o-r-g-i-v-n-e-s-s, the act of forgiving. That's the bridge between illusion and Reality. You see?

"The problems seem to be so great and so complex that it's going to be impossible!" No. Because the answer—the call—is for a little thing called forgiveness which everyone is capable of doing. But you just have to be willing to look at the apparently unforgiveable or the apparently impossible detrimental movements and withdraw your determination—your definition—and wish to see the More of what God is Being, right there, in spite of how you are perceiving it, in spite of how everyone else is perceiving it, in spite of how the news broadcasters are defining it.

The bridge between that world and this is so little and so easy to cross that you could not believe it is the meeting place of worlds so different. Yet this little bridge is the strongest thing that touches on this world at all.

All of your fantasies are weak compared to the strength that forgiveness embodies. Such a little thing . . . to forgive. It's something every single one of you knows how to do and can do. You just have to withdraw the strength you're using to withhold your forgiveness because it's so justified for you to claim guilt . . . and apply it to everything.

"Well, it's just a material world, what can you expect? Things go wrong, things die . . ." You see? Change your mind. Change your mind by being willing to forgive.

This little step, so small it has escaped your notice, is a stride through time into eternity, and beyond all ugliness into beauty that will enchant you, and will never cease to cause you wonderment at its perfection.

This is the promise. This is the reason for the holy instant . . . this is the reason for the holy instant.

This step, the smallest ever taken by anything, is still the greatest accomplishment of all in God's plan of Atonement. All else is learned, but this is GIVEN, complete and wholly perfect.

When you learn something, you acquire the knowledge . . . you get, get, get. But forgiveness even has the word, "give" in it, doesn't it. You "give" for your anger, the willingness to see the truth. You "give" for your frustration, your willingness to see the truth.

All else is learned, but this . . .

. . . this littlest step . . .

. . . is GIVEN, complete and wholly perfect. No-one but Him Who planned salvation . . .

. . . the Father . . .

... could complete it thus.

You see? It's amazing because forgiveness means that you have to abandon the exercise of authority in the form of judgment that you place on things and persons and places for the purpose of exercising power and force from you in order to make you a more substantial presence.

But forgiveness is the abandoning of that. And it's the invitation given to truth to enter so that it might be willingly received and felt. So that what? Resurrection can occur.

The real world, in its loveliness, you LEARN to reach. Fantasies are all undone, and no-one and nothing remains still bound by them, and by your OWN forgiveness you are free to . . .

... what? . . .

... to see.

You're free to acknowledge. You're free to be presented with the truth and have it register with you.

It's amazing isn't it . . . that such a simple thing is the means of returning to your right Mind, regaining your sanity, experiencing your resurrection along with the resurrection of everything else.

Yet what you see is only what you have made, with the blessing of your forgiveness on it.

This world and universe that you call a material world and universe is of your making. It's constituted of all your definitions. Definitions—false definitions—applied to the Kingdom of Heaven. That's what it is.

But when you see the world transformed, it is the Kingdom of Heaven not denied by you. It's you looking at the falsities that you have made, with forgiveness, so that what covers over the actuality of Reality slips away because you're not reinforcing it. And you see a world that sparkles under the open sun and sounds is as beautiful as the description we read.

Again, this is Easter. This is the time to have resurrection in your experience—yours and every thing's. It should be a day of great expectation on your part because again, that really is the obligation you're under. You are the holy Son and Daughter of God, and being that, you're under the obligation to not miss out on the experience of your Birthright. How's that for a nice positive way of putting it? . . . to at least make it sound like an interesting thing to engage in.

And with this final blessing of God's Son upon HIMSELF, the real perception, born of the new perspective he has learned, has served its purpose.

The practice of forgiveness that uncovers the Real world has served its purpose. Now listen to this:

The stars will disappear in light, and the sun which opened up the world to beauty will vanish. Perception will be meaningless when it has been perfected, for everything that has been used for learning will have no function.

Well, that makes it sound like all of this is going to disappear, doesn't it? But that's not what it means. What it means is that the moment you gave a false definition to a [tapping a glass] glass or to the water that's in the glass—the minute you gave a false perception, a false definition to something—that thing became a learning tool, because it sat there forever as long as you were entertaining the false definition, it sat there as the opportunity to rediscover what it truly was.

And so, this part of the Kingdom of Heaven that looks like a glass became not part of the Kingdom of Heaven but a material object, which because it's actually divine, has a function—a learning function, a teaching function. It's there staring you in the face, confronting you with the divinity of itself and waiting for you to discover it and insisting upon your discovery. You see?

So what it appeared to be and the purpose it seemed to serve will disappear. It will not have to serve that purpose anymore. But it will still be there being the Presence of God, being the Presence of Love, constituted of the Substance which is Spirit, and so on.

Perception will be meaningless when it has been perfected, . .

. . . when you've practiced the holy instant and you've let the true perception in, then you'll be having the true conscious experience of it and perception will vanish. Perceptions are variable. One day you can look at a beautiful painting and be moved tremendously by it, and another day when you're depressed and you look at the same painting your perception of it will be flat, dull, and you'll wonder why anybody ever sat down with a brush and painted a single stroke on that canvas.

Perceptions change, but that which you have perceptions of are Real. And when perceptions, through your learning, from the Holy Spirit, help you arrive at seeing the Presence of God there instead of what you had been seeing then perception becomes no longer useful in any way. And so you'll stop having perceptions of the thing and you'll have the direct experience of it. It will not disappear.

Again:

Perception will be meaningless when it has been perfected, for everything that has been used for learning will have no function.

Will no longer have any function.

Nothing will ever change; no shifts nor shadings, no differences, no variations which made perception possible will occur.

Now mind you, the Movement of God, the Movement of Creation is not what makes perception possible. The Movement of Creation will still be infinitely present. God's Being will not be thwarted by your no longer bringing perceptions into play as you look at God's Creation and witness Them for what they really Are. And in doing that co-create with Him.

Nothing will ever change; . .

Everything will always be perfect. Every Movement will be perfect eternally. Everything that is moving will be perfect eternally. Every conscious experience of it will be changeless. It will be perfect eternally. You see? Creation—It's movement and the experience of It—will not be variable, it will not be able to sin, suffer, deteriorate, die, get better, be resurrected and so on. But it doesn't mean it will disappear.

The perception of the real world will be so short that you will barely have time to thank God for it. For God will take the last step swiftly when you have reached the real world, and have been made ready for Him.

So, you will have the experience of resurrection and true perception momentarily. Because when you have that experience you're going to have the most gigantic "Ah-ha!" that you have ever had. And in that "Ah-ha!" meaning, "I see it! I understand," you come Home, you come back into your right Mind—Ascension occurs. You see?

Now, that means that every moment and everything you experience in every moment is an opportunity for resurrection and spontaneous Ascension . . . today . . . now . . . now . . . now . . . tomorrow. You see?

Don't go through this week, don't go through another day without having an active curiosity to see resurrection occur. Why? Because you're willing to abandon your definitions and say, "Father, what is the truth here? . . ." because it's your obligation to see the truth, to experience the truth because it's your Birthright, it's your nature, it's your function that could never have really been taken away and therefore hasn't been. You see?

The real world is attained simply by the complete forgiveness of the old, the world you see WITHOUT forgiveness.

And the reason you see it without forgiveness is because you're applying your own well-developed definitions and meanings to it all. And then you're blaming the things for the definitions you've applied to them. The only way to forgive them is to abandon them—the meaning you're applying—and to abandon the arrogance that says, "What you believe and what you know and what you have defined things as is absolutely correct, flawless, unattackable."

It's not a very great cost to abandon that arrogance and that confidence. And this little tiny step which is forever present with you can be practiced immediately—the step of forgiveness, the two-step.

The Great Transformer of perception will undertake with you the careful searching of the mind that made this world, . .

. . . the one of the definitions you're using . . .

. . . and uncover to you the seeming reasons for your making it. [Raj did not read this: In the light of the REAL reason which He brings, as you follow Him,] He will show you that there is no reason here at all.

The meanings you've given to everything have no reason because the definitions and meanings don't arise out of what truly Is, just out of imagination.

Each spot HIS reason touches . . .

. . . and His is the Holy Spirit.

Each spot HIS reason touches grows alive with beauty, and what seemed ugly in the darkness of your lack of reason is suddenly released to loveliness.

That's resurrection—here . . . now . . . today . . . in this world.

Not even what the Son of God made in insanity could be without a hidden spark of beauty which gentleness could release.

So the loveliness of Love that abides in you and is the Substance of you and is the mover of you, is always embodied in everything, including that which you ignorantly create in a conflicted way. And the moment you release your definitions, the moment forgiveness comes into play, the loveliness of you that was embodied there becomes illuminated to you and you say, "This is Heaven!" . . . and you know it's true.

All this beauty will rise to bless your sight as you look upon the world with forgiving eyes.

This is what Easter means.

All this beauty will rise to bless your sight as you look upon the world with forgiving eyes.

Correction . . . resurrection . . . healing.

For forgiveness literally transforms vision, and lets you see the real world reaching quietly and gently across chaos, and removing all illusions which had twisted your perception, and fixed it on the past.

As I said last week, Mind maintains all identities from a blade of grass to a star as distinct and eternal.²

Continuing here:

The smallest leaf becomes a thing of wonder, and a blade of grass a sign of God's perfection.

So, don't be too quick to deny the world and don't be too quick to discount it as something that will disappear. What will disappear is the misperception. And what will disappear is the, what I'm going to call, the ego motivation that gave meaning to the development of perceptions and misperceptions. That's all.

From the forgiven world, the Son of God is lifted easily into his home.

What does that mean? It means that from the state of resurrection, the Son of God can easily be lifted to his Home—the Movement of Ascension . . . the Movement of Ascension where the shift occurs and you say, "Ah-ha, I understand!" And it's not an intellectual understanding.

I can come close to sharing with you the experience by saying that it is a shift from body identification where you think you are a body—a small thing in the middle of an infinite universe that has a little bit of flesh in its head called a brain that can think, that gives the experience of a mind—it's a shift from that to the experience of being Mind in which the world and universe and body and leaves and stars exist as Ideas, which are distinctly eternal and awesomely perfect and incredible to experience.

From the forgiven world, the Son of God is lifted easily into his home.

The forgiven world is while you are still thinking you're a body but you're having an experience of the Kingdom of Heaven instead of the world—instead of a material world and universe. And in that experience, still from a viewpoint or vantage point of the body, you say you realize, you understand, the meaning is clear and you involuntarily abandon the body identification and let yourself be Mind in which infinity and eternity is and is being Creation unfolding.

From the forgiven world, the Son of God is lifted easily into his home. And there he knows that he has ALWAYS rested there in peace.

This other was a transitory misperception that didn't change a thing in actuality.

Even salvation will become a dream, and vanish from his mind. For salvation IS the end of dreams, and with the closing of the dream will have no meaning.

Salvation will have no meaning once the dream is ended, because you will understand and you will not need to be released from anything. You might say Salvation is complete.

Who, awake in Heaven, could dream that there could ever be NEED of salvation?

Now, I understand that there are some who listen to what I'm saying who feel that I've become somewhat aggressive and pushy and perhaps impatient and perhaps irritated. All of which is not true. But you know what? As I've said, you all have the obligation to experience things as they truly Are because it's your Birthright and it's your function. So there is a push you might say, arising out of your very Being, out of the sanity of you that you've been avoiding. Listen:

How much do you WANT salvation?

I'm just saying . . . hey, want it! Want it now . . . now . . . now . . . tomorrow . . . not off in the distant future.

It will give you the real world, . .

. . . listen to this . . .

. . . trembling with readiness to BE given you.

I promise you that everything that you see is a conscious Idea of God and It wants you to experience it truly. It wants you not to escape Its meaning. Because when you're not escaping Its meaning, communion is occurring, your oneness with It and Its oneness with you is occurring and nothing is missing. Infinity is One, which means all that is included in it has the conscious intent to experience Oneness—ininitely speaking.

I've said in the past, that when you decide you want to get in touch with your Guide, your Guide rejoices because your Guide has waited a long time for you to arrive at a point of realizing that he or she exists and that you're reaching out.

And so in your reaching out it's not a one-sided deal, your Guide is reaching out to you as well, it's a mutual endeavor which makes it easier. And likewise all of Creation is reaching out to you right now, desiring for you to experience It without misperceptions.

And I'll tell you something else: That's why when you let in the barest experience of It, it feels like you are being loved with an infinite Love.

I'm going to go back:

How much do you WANT salvation? It will give you the real world, trembling with readiness to BE given you. The eagerness of the Holy Spirit to give you this is so intense He would not wait, although He waits in patience.

You see? So am I getting pushy? Am I getting aggressive? Am I trying to make you do something that you don't want to do or that maybe you shouldn't have to do? No, not at all. All of Creation, all of the infinite oneness of Being is directed at your having this experience, motivating you with Love to let it in—with love not impatience, with love not irritation.

Meet His patience with . . .

. . . with what? . .

... your impatience ...

... so now the Course is pushing you. But actually it's just encouraging you to feel a motivation that you're not otherwise feeling and is encouraging you to feel it and practice it.

Meet His ...

... the Holy Spirits ...

... patience with your impatience at delay in meeting Him. Go out in gladness to meet with your Redeemer, and walk with him in trust out of this world, . .

... the one you've made up ...

... and into the real world of beauty and forgiveness.

Wow, you may not ever have thought of Easter in terms of the word "forgiveness." But forgiveness begets resurrection. And resurrection begets Ascension—yours and everything that you're experiencing.

Happy Easter.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 30th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, last week we talked about the joy of Easter and the fact that every single moment provides the opportunity for the experience of resurrection. And therefore, every moment holds the promise of joy as well as the experience of joy and it awaits everyone's willingness to stand in receipt of it.

Tonight we're going to discuss some of the ways in which the experience of it is kept at a distance. And we're beginning a new section entitled:

SHADOWS OF THE PAST¹

To forgive is merely to remember only the LOVING thoughts you gave in the past, and those that were given you. All the rest must be forgotten. Forgiveness is a selective remembering, . .

. . . easy thing to do. You might think, "Oh, just selective remembering . . ." but there's a key here, there's an element that is absolutely essential. And as it happens, it's part and parcel of the two-step—of the holy instant.

Forgiveness is a selective remembering, based not on YOUR selection.

In other words, resurrection will not occur as a result of your consciously choosing to remember this, that, or the other thing, whether you might pick correctly or not. It's selective remembering that happens as a result of your saying, "Father, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? Father, share with me Your Perspective that It might illuminate my perception with what is Real instead of what I have believed it is." You see?

You don't know the difference between what is Real of what you're seeing and what is distortion that you've introduced into the picture. And so therefore, you simply can't rely upon yourself to make the decision between truth and illusion.

Forgiveness is a selective remembering, based not on YOUR selection. For the shadow figures you would make immortal are "enemies" of reality.

... shadow figures ... and again what is this section?

SHADOWS OF THE PAST

... shadow figures ...

... the shadow figures you would make immortal are "enemies" of reality.

Well, what are shadow figures? They are the definitions, the meanings that you have imagined and superimposed upon your Brothers and Sisters as well as all of Creation, concepts and beliefs about your Brothers and Sisters that you have superimposed upon them.

Be willing to forgive the Son of God for what he did NOT do.

The Son of God, the Daughter of God did not do what you imagined he or she did.

The shadow figures are the witnesses you bring with you to demonstrate he did what he did NOT. Because you brought them, you will hear them.

... you will listen to yourself.

And you who kept them by your OWN selection do not understand how they came into your minds, and what their purpose is.

So let's talk about this for a minute. Where did these shadow figures come from and what is their purpose? Well, to answer that question we have to go back to the beginning, don't we. We have to go back to that point where you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. Father, I'd rather determine what this is. Father, I want a divorce." And then you joined with another Son or Daughter of God in that intent and together you fantasized your reality you made up, you created out of imagination the meanings for everything God had already Created. It's that simple.

But, the moment you did that, the moment you separated from God and said, "I'm going to stand here in my own right and I'm going to use my God-given intelligence and my God-given capacity to be, to determine everything for myself. I'm going to make myself out of my capacity to be intelligence, as God created me to be." You see?

But when that happened . . . the big surprise was that . . . as we've discussed before, two elements came into the picture: Fear and guilt. Fear was your innate sanity—it was the feeling that is like the alarm on a truck that rings when the truck is backing up saying that there is danger of some sort, be alert, don't proceed unconsciously. You see? And so the fear was the discomfort you felt from trying to do something you can't do.

You were trying to be independent. You can't do that. You can't succeed at doing it. But as long as you insist upon trying, the discomfort, the dissonance will be there. You call it fear. And then, it occasions guilt. You see? Because you're attempting to do something you can't do but you believe you can and in that belief, you are wrong. And so you're engaging in actively being wrong. You see?

Well, there is a God. There is truth. And so you're not going to be able to try to do the impossible without this feedback. You're simply not.

Now, existence for you is made up of two fundamental things: Fear and guilt. You're still experiencing the only Creation there is: The Kingdom of Heaven, but now you're experiencing It through fear and guilt. It colors everything as you begin to define everything on your own.

And so your definitions embody whatever degree of fear or guilt is being experienced at the time that the meanings are being given. Because there is fear, you know there is danger. Where is the danger? Why it's in Creation itself. It's in the only thing you have available to you to have a concept about, to create a definition of, to create a shadow figure about.

And so, as many of you may have heard, there's a phrase that, "life is a terminal illness. Enjoy it while it lasts." You see? So, eternal life has now been given a demeaning meaning . . . demeaning meaning. It isn't life eternal, it isn't the constant experience of Easter, if I may put it that way, it is a terminal illness.

Now, everything has scary aspects to it. Everything you see is polarized. It therefore is conflicted but somehow maintaining a tenuous balance so that everything doesn't disappear into chaos. And of course, the reason it doesn't disappear into chaos is not because the conflict is balanced, but because it's the Kingdom of Heaven and it's the evidence of God and it can't disappear into oblivion. You see?

But nevertheless, the fear is there and it colors everything you're experiencing.

Now, your Brothers and Sisters are like you and they are part of the danger even though you've joined with them in your independence. You have a interdependent independence because you cannot separate from the Father without a mutual agreement to be at odds with the Father. And so you have an agreement to be independent. And you each confirm the others' independence even though the confirmation states absolutely that you're dependent and you are depending upon each other to help maintain this distance from God—this unconsciousness of your holy relationship with God and with each other. You see?

So these shadow figures are the meanings that you apply to the Kingdom of Heaven and that you started applying the moment you got your divorce—the moment you said, "Father, I'd rather do it my way." You see?

These shadow figures have to be given up. You have to stop applying them to the moment you're in. Because as long as you keep applying them, you're not available to what's actually happening in this moment you're in. The Kingdom of Heaven remains unavailable to you because of your conscious intent to ignore It in favor of holding onto your shadow figures—you're holding on to the ones that make sense to you. You see?

They . . .

. . . the shadow figures . . .

. . . represent the evil that you THINK was done to you.

You see? The simple fact is, you're the one who said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way" and that very intent, acted upon, brought the experience of fear and guilt into your experience. It's nobody else's fault. But because everything has become polarized by fear and guilt in your mind, you assign the evilness to the things "out there . . ." your Brother, your Sister . . . and then you hold them to that. And because they're in the same boat because they agreed to do this with you, they're likely to believe you. And they're likely to feel threatened by you and the stance you're taking relative to them. And so now you have to work out an uneasy truce together . . . and that's life.

But it's not real life. It's you and your Brothers all responding to and acting in relationship to shadow figures—pictures you're each entertaining about each other that are false—because you can't see the truth about each other when you've said, "Father, I'd rather define it my way." The only way you can see it is through fear. It's really very simple.

The problem is that seeing things this way and being this way for quite some time, it has become excessively meaningful to you because it promises you the potential of becoming a fully realized independent identity. Hard to give up that kind of stuff.

They . . .

. . . the shadow figures . . .

. . . represent the evil that you THINK was done to you. You bring them with you only that you may return evil for evil, hoping that their witness will enable you to think guiltily of another and NOT harm yourself.

You see? As long as they can be guilty, as long as you can identify them as the guilty ones responsible for your lack of ease—your fear—it saves you from having to look at the fact that you made a decision to try to see things by yourself . . . something you cannot do and that the attempt is what has caused your whole experience to seem to be at odds with you or potentially at odds with you. You see? As long as you can point out there, you will overlook what really caused it. And you will deprive yourself of discovering the holy instant, which is the place where you abandon that stance. The easy, simple two-step that allows you to step back out of this false experience, this treacherous false experience of Creation—the Kingdom of Heaven—and return unto your right Mind.

Now, something else I need to point out to you is, that always the projection, the claim that something else or someone else is guilty of your discomfort, comes with emotion. One never, in utter peace, says, "This pain I'm experiencing was caused by Joe. Who was your pain caused by?" No one ever sits casually, unemotionally talking about pain and the cause of pain . . . right? Certainly it doesn't happen because there's no power in it. There's no power by which to bring about change, meaning the reduction of pain.

You're simply unable to be dispassionate about fear and pain and guilt. You all enjoy feeling your emotions. And they are what perpetuate your remaining in the human condition—the orphanage.

I'm going to read this again:

They . . .

. . . the shadow images . . .

. . . represent the evil that you THINK was done to you. You bring them with you only that you may return evil for evil, . .

. . . there's where you get balance and edge and reinforce your power . . .

. . . that you may return evil for evil, hoping that their witness will enable you to think guiltily of another and NOT harm yourself. They speak so clearly for the separation that no-one not obsessed with KEEPING separation could hear them.

What that means is they speak so clearly for your independence from the Father, your separating from the Father, "but Father, I'd rather do it my way, I'm going to be Your Son, I'm going to be Your Daughter and use the skills and capacities You have embodied in me to copy You and be a good representative or offspring that You can be proud of. But in order to do that I'm going to forget that You are my Father and whether You're going to be proud of me or not, and I'm going to embark on this adventure . . ."

So . . .

They speak so clearly for the separation that no-one not obsessed with KEEPING separation could hear them.

There's just no way that you could make sense out of the attempt to bring order where there is disorder by not handling the cause. Only someone obsessed with something unobtainable like independent selfhood could hear that there's a possibility of becoming independent by not recognizing what is causing the discomfort, the fear, the polarization and the challenge that causes you to see life as a "terminal disease."

So, do you see that what I'm talking about right now which is a pretty miserable state of affairs, is a perspective, is a way of experiencing being that's happening right along side an experience of Being that we talked about last week that had to do with a World that was eager to have you recognize for what It is, that everything around you is geared toward the happy reunion in you of your Mind and the true perception of everything it's experiencing. You see?

These two things are going on apparently side by side. One is fabulous, meaning of a fable, and the other is Real. And it's really simple to slip from one to the other. It's really simple to slip back Home. But it doesn't happen because you're likely to find as you give more attention to what I'm saying and what the Course is teaching, that the hooker, the thing that gets you . . . that gets you involved in an activity that keeps you from Waking up is emotion, your emotions, and the satisfaction you get from the attempt to get control over someone or something that you have determined is the reason you're not happy, is the reason you're not well.

They . . .

. . . the shadow figures . . .

. . . offer you the "reasons" why you should enter into unholy alliances which support the ego's goals, and make your relationships the witness to its power.

"Well, if I can get so-in-so to agree with me, if I can get someone to acquiesce to what I want and what will make me feel really good, it's worth trying for. And I will find ways to sucker him in . . . I will provide enough goodies, enough benefits to him to get him to decide to go along with me and do the thing that I want even though he's sacrificing his integrity."

You see? That's the way it works.

They offer you . . .

. . . the shadow figures . . .

. . . offer you the "reasons" why you should enter into unholy alliances which support the ego's goals, and make your relationships the witness to its power. It is these shadow figures. . .

. . . your definitions, keep that in mind . . .

It is these shadow figures which would make the EGO holy in your sight, . .

. . . "By dammit, that's true! And I'm fightin' for my ego and I'm gonna build my ego up and I'm gonna do my damndest to get everybody to agree with me that it's the greatest or perhaps, just absolutely great. And that's my goal in life."

It is these shadow figures which would make the EGO holy . . .

. . . in other words, worthwhile—the thing to claim and hold onto relentlessly without ever giving it up . . .

... which would make the EGO holy ...

... in your sight

... and teach you what you do to keep IT safe is really love.

Let me read it again:

It is these shadow figures which would make the EGO holy in your sight, and teach you what you do to keep IT safe is really love.

It's bullshit. And it's a good time to use that word because we're sort of talking in holy words even though we're talking about the unpleasantness of denying your holiness. But you know what? To convince your Brothers or Sisters that for them to sacrifice their integrity to help you for the sake of getting a few benefits, to teach them that that is love and to believe that that's love because after all if they will acquiesce to you, you will truly be able to help them, you see? But if you have caused them to sacrifice their integrity, it can't be love. And to be very frank with you, it has to be evil. It has to be evil in the sense that practiced, it would cause people to find justification to sacrifice themselves. That's an excellent definition of evil.

Continuing:

The shadow figures ...

... all these meanings and definitions you're employing instead of having a connection with what everything really is, they ...

... ALWAYS speak for vengeance, and all relationships into which they enter are totally insane.

These seem to be very strong words. But they're simply true

The shadow figures ALWAYS speak for vengeance, ..

... and you say, "Vengeance doesn't go through my mind at any time during the day. I'm not a vengeful person, therefore this sentence doesn't relate to me." But let me ask you this: If you are the holy Son or Daughter of God, but you think that you're just a creature, an organism on the face of your planet that came out of some physical process, then this idea, concept, or belief that you are holding about yourself and according to which you are governing yourself, constitutes an absolute denial of your Sonship—your holy Sonship or Daughtership. It blinds you to Who your Source is. It blinds you to your holiness. It causes you to be unconscious of it.

Isn't that vengeful? Isn't that awful? Isn't that an assessment that is made of you that causes you to sacrifice or be unable to be conscious of your divinity? That is absolutely vengeful. And when you apply that perspective to your Brothers and Sisters or your world and you say, "It's not the Kingdom of Heaven, it's a material world and universe," I'm sorry, you are denying It's holiness. It is a vengeful thing.

Now vengeance is usually something that happens as a result of something else. And indeed, there is something that has happened that has caused you to look at your world with vengeance, with a perspective, a meaning, a definition that is the antithesis of what it actually is. And that which has caused you to do that is the act you engaged in initially of separating from the Father. Vengeance is the perfect word.

Now do you have to get all upset about it? Do you have to get ultra critical about yourself? Do you have to say, "Boy, I must be a worse bastard than I ever thought I was." No! It just means that you need to have this kind of clarity . . . you need to see with this kind of clarity. You need to be able to look and say, "As long as I'm not doing the two-step and asking the Father what is the truth here, what is the real meaning of this leaf, what is the real meaning of this Brother or Sister, what is the real meaning of the moon" and so on . . . if you're not asking that, you are engaging in a refusal to experience It for what it really Is. That is an act of vengeance.

Now, once you're clear about that and at the same time you know that there is an answer to it called the two-step or the holy instant, you've got the means to step away from that experience, you have the means of abandoning the vengeance. The clarity is helpful even though the words express a truth that could seem to be a judgment upon you. Don't get sidetracked. See it for what it is, so that you might more easily say, "In this moment . . . this moment . . . this moment . . . Father what's the truth here . . . Holy Spirit what's the truth here . . . Father what's the real meaning of this . . . and the real meaning of this?" You see? That's all.

The shadow figures ALWAYS speak for vengeance, and all relationships into which they enter are totally insane.

Well why would we say they're insane? Well, you know what? We talked awhile ago about the fact that a special relationship is a relationship you have with something without ever asking the Father, what is the truth here. You see?

In other words, a special relationship is a relationship you have without the Father's Perspective, without the clear, true understanding and experience of Who this one is that you're having a relationship with, or what this thing truly Is that you're having a relationship with. A special relationship is a relationship you're having all by yourself and providing all of the meanings that are being employed to make sense out of what's happening.

And so, neither you nor your Brother are relating with anything real at all. You're bouncing off your own images that you're projecting onto each other. That's insane. Because you think you're having a relationship and yet, you're never connecting with the ones you truly Are.

Without exception, these relationships have, as their PURPOSE, the exclusion of the truth about the other, and of YOURSELF. This is why you see in BOTH what is not there, and make of both the slaves of vengeance.

You bring each other into a state of bondage because you engage each other in a vigorous involvement based upon false perceptions you're having of each other. You see?

This is why you see in BOTH what is not there, and make of both the slaves of vengeance. And why whatever reminds you of your past grievances, no matter how distorted the associations by which you arrive at the remembrance may be, attracts you, and seems to you to go by the name of love.

You see? You refer to these relationships as love/hate relationships. And love/hate relationships can be looked at as though they're all some form of love (screwed up mentality).

And finally, why all such relationships become the attempt at union through the BODY, for ONLY bodies can be seen as means for vengeance. That bodies are central to all unholy relationships is evident. Your OWN experience has taught you this. But what you do not realize are ALL the reasons which go to make the relationship unholy. For unholiness seeks to REINFORCE itself, as holiness does, by gathering to itself what it perceives as like itself.

Now, the reason that bodies can be seen as the means of vengeance is because when you said, "Father, I'd rather see things myself, I'd rather define them myself," where you had before that, experienced Creation as embraced by your mind, that all of Creation was going on within the Mind that you Are—the conscious awareness of being that you Are, once you got the divorce, all of a sudden, . . . surprise, . . . surprise you lost the infinite perspective which is one of the reasons that fear entered into the picture. Because all of a sudden you were tiny, and you were identified with what you call your body even though prior to that, all of Creation was You including what you now call your body. But it also included the trees and the planets and infinity that you do not remember at this moment.

So, once you got your independence, once you thought you got your independence and suddenly found yourself identified with a specific form out of all of Creation, you identified that form as you. And the you that the body was, was this independent mind that's trying to make something out of itself. Well, what is the "it" that's making something out of itself? This body. This thing that has a head and legs and arms and a brain, a capacity to think that's purely physical. I mean really, since when could meat think? You know, it's nonsensical.

Now, the bodies became the means of dealing with grievances. And you all know that. After all what about the emotions that you feel when you get angry or when you're fighting for a right or you're trying to get justice. They're all associated with sensations, aren't they?

That bodies are central to all unholy relationships is evident. Your OWN experience has taught you this. But what you do not realize are ALL the reasons which go to make the relationship unholy. For unholiness seeks to REINFORCE itself, as holiness does, by gathering to itself what it perceives as like itself.

In the unholy relationship, . .

. . . listen to this . . .

. . . it is not the body of the OTHER with which union is attempted, but the bodies of those who are not THERE.

What do you suppose that means? It means the bodies of those whom you have conceived as . . . well, let's say . . . black . . . and maybe not fit to be a president. There you go.

In the unholy relationship, it is not the body of the OTHER with which union is attempted, but the bodies of those who are not THERE.

You have a concept about someone. And the concept is that they're a body just like you are. And some of those bodies . . . and of course, you're really not talking about the body itself of the holy Son of God or holy Daughter of God . . . you're talking about the body of the concept of a person that you have in your mind. And your concept of, let's say, a black person is such that they really don't have the status or the stature or the meaning that it really takes to be a president . . . or to ride on the bus in the front. You see what I'm saying?

In the unholy relationship, it is not the body of the OTHER with which union is attempted, but the bodies of those who are not THERE.

The bodies of those that each of you have conceptualized and put in a category, whether they're an aunt or an uncle, a brother or a sister, or a cousin, or a neighbor whom you have developed very definite opinions and concepts about. And if you see them, you don't see them—the holy Son or Daughter of God—you see your concept of them and the very act of seeing them infuriates you.

It is insane. So again I'm going to read this:

In the unholy relationship, it is not the body of the OTHER with which union is attempted, but the bodies of those who are not THERE. Even the body of the other, already a severely limited perception of him, is not the central focus as it is, or in entirety. What can be used for fantasies of vengeance, and what can be most readily associated with those on whom vengeance is REALLY sought, are centered on and separated OFF, as being the only parts of value.

"Well, he was my friend but he did something and now he's not my friend. He did something that I can't tolerate. When people of that sort do those things I separate myself from them, because I have dignity and self-respect."

There was no connection there with an individual—the holy Son or Daughter of God. There wasn't even a connection with whoever that individual believes he is. You had a monolog. You had a private experience that you fooled yourself into believing was about your Brother. And yet you just spun around in your own private fantasy, which has to inevitably leave your Brother or Sister at a complete loss because no connection with them has been made. And you've arrived at the point where the two-step is called for. You've arrived at the point where the holy instant has to be practiced.

Every step taken in the making, the maintaining . . .

. . . in other words, the creation, the making . . . the making of your fantasy, the making of your definition or meaning that you're applying to someone else.

Every step taken in the making, the maintaining and the breaking off of the unholy relationship is a move toward further fragmentation and unreality.

How can you tell? Well, does doing that cause you to be any closer to saying, "Father, what's the truth here?" Does any of that put you closer to a moment where you can have an "Ah-ha!" experience and realize the truth? No. And because it's engaged in with feeling, it inevitably moves the unholy relationship towards further fragmentation and unreality.

The shadow figures enter more and more, and the one in whom they seem to be DECREASES in importance.

As the shadow figures are more and more employed, the experience of who that other one truly Is fades further in the distance—becomes less and less meaningful or valuable.

That means that the employment of these shadow figures is the significant means you employ to avoid Resurrection, to avoid the experience of your Easter. It's the means you use to avoid the brightness and the joy of the Real world and the resurrection and the Awakening.

So be willing to look at yourselves soberly, as we've been discussing, so that you might see just exactly how what you're doing doesn't serve you. Because in that clarity it will cause you to find it to be very reasonable to dare to practice the holy instant, to dare to engage in the two-step and to do it often, often, often!

We talked about the fact that resurrection means actual change. And it means that you're going to experience an actual change, whereby you let go of the shadow images, whereby you let go of the memories that don't serve your Awakening, where you willingly let go of everything that doesn't express love or doesn't show forth the love that you have expressed during your lifetime, so that the truly loving things that you have done and the truly loving things that have been done to you, stand alone, giving you an undistorted clear experience of Reality, which, because it is unconflicted allows for a spontaneous expansion of that clarity, beyond just the things you did that were loving and things that were done to you that were loving, so that all of Creation becomes embraced in that clarity of love.

Now I promise you—and I will keep saying this over and over—that Awakening will be spontaneous. You cannot work it. You cannot make it happen.

And that's the good news. Don't think that because you can't make it happen, it will never happen for you. Indeed, the minute you stop trying to make it happen, the minute you begin to genuinely say, "Father, what is the truth here?" And the minute you stop being discouraged because all the times that you've said it haven't caused you to experience it yet, it will spontaneously happen.

Everything about you and everything about Reality stands in enthusiastic and exuberant support of your recognizing the truth and is attentive to you constantly . . . daily . . . nightly, whether you're awake or asleep . . . to facilitate the truth registering with you. Know this!

During this coming week I'm going to ask you to be particularly attentive to the rising up of emotion in you as a means of getting control of a situation, so that you might squelch it instantly. Because remember, when you are doing that you are identified as a body, a body that isn't recognized to be part of Creation but just you in all of your importance. And because the sense of self that is identifying itself that way is an orphan, a self-declared orphan, its perspective is false and it's colored by fear and guilt. And therefore, everything it engages in is an act of vengeance, which will hurt you by keeping you ignorant of what you would discover if you practiced the holy instant. That's the simple clarity.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

May 7th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, did everyone have occasion to notice how often emotions arose as a means of distracting you . . . well, for lack of better words, and words I didn't use last time . . . that distracted you from being Real?

Real . . . what does that mean as I'm using it? It means grounded in your divinity. Grounded in your consciousness of truth with that awareness being the most important thing to you, so that everything you say and everything you do arises out of that clarity. That's being Real.

It's not an experience any of you have for any significant amount of time, but it is an experience that needs to be nurtured on purpose because it's the experience of your Birthright. It's the experience of your sanity. It's also the experience of your peace. And when I say peace, I mean the experience of your invulnerability. Invulnerability and peace are inseparable.

And which one do you think comes first?

Does peace follow invulnerability or does invulnerability follow peace? Fortunately invulnerability follows peace.

Why is that important? It's important because it means you cannot be the innocent victim of circumstances or situations or relationships.

You always, at any given moment, have the capacity to choose for your peace and act on behalf of that experience. How do you act on behalf of that experience? You shut up. You become still. You meditate—any form of meditation that allows you to move into the silence where thinking has been suspended. To move into the stillness, which is the beginning of the experience of peace, is to put yourself closer to the actuality of your Being which is that of being invulnerable.

Now it's very simple. Special relationships have as their goal to distract you from your peace, to distract you from your ability to be real and know that you are real, to know that you are divine, to have the total experience of union with God right while you're driving down the freeway, right when you're hugging your children, right when you are firmly standing for Principle with someone who does not want to abide by Principle. You see?

Unholy relationships—special relationships—simply are detrimental. They're not just useless, they're not just meaningless, they are, as long as you're indulging in them, actually detrimental. They actually cause the experience of discomfort whether mental or physical or emotional. There is nothing productive or constructive about them. And you know what? Forgiveness and healing involve abandoning what is detrimental—what is not constructive, what blinds you to the conscious experience of who and what you divinely Are.

Now, there's another aspect to special relationships—unholy relationships, relationships in which shadow figures are the primary figures that you relate to—and that is, that everything is kept fuzzy. Crystal clear sharp clarity doesn't happen whenever there begins to be clarity or a demand for clarity. All of you, very skillfully, find ways to move the conversation in the direction of vagueness and fuzziness.

You don't want to be pinned down. Somebody wants to know something specific about you, you don't want to be pinned down. Somebody wants to know something about what's going on in another country and you will find ways to express ideas which never claim that you really know the answer.

Now you may think I'm running far afield here, but I'm not.

I'm going to ask a question: What if every time someone asked you a question, you had the capacity to give the actual truth? If somebody said to you "What is twenty five times four hundred and eighty four thousand three hundred fifty six?" and you would be able to say the answer to that [snaps fingers] right on the spot? What if anything anybody desired to know or wanted to talk to you about caused words to come out of your mouth that were precisely and accurately true?

Well you might think it would be fun for awhile—initially it would be impressive. But you don't want to be obligated to know the truth all the time—the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

It's much safer not to quite know. It's much safer to be able to approximate what is likely to be true under the circumstances.

But you don't want to know the truth and have that be what comes out of your mouth every moment.

This week, the practice I want you to engage in is to notice how many times you shift the conversation or the emphasis of what's being discussed into a more general or vague area. I want you to notice if somebody asks you something very specific, how often you provide an answer that becomes quite broad.

Somebody says, "Wow, what's going on with gas prices is outrageous and there's obviously a great deal of manipulation going on." Now the person has said this because that subject is of interest and that person would like to have the best information possible. But for whatever reason—lack of time, lack of energy, lack of interest—you say, "Yeah, it's really incredible, isn't it. It's outrageous, isn't it."

And you've contributed nothing. You have not responded with meaning. You appear to have been conversational and involved with this other person but you didn't even bother to take the time and, I'm not going to say you didn't bother to take the time to do the two-step, I'm going to say you didn't even bother to take the time to bring into your awareness the best set of facts that you have.

Everyone loves to stay in vagueness. Everyone avoids being specific. Oh, you love to hear people who will be specific but you hate to be specific yourself. Why? You don't want to be held accountable for the meanings you're giving expression to. It's that simple.

Now, the reason this all happens is because no one is truly opting for a holy relationship. Everyone is opting for the special relationship. And this is what the subject is this last week and this week and it's not a really happy subject.

But let's take a look at it, as I said last week, because to be clear about it helps you shift into a more practical grounded frame of reference in which actual change can occur, in which healing can occur and in which you, abandoning your orphanhood, come into a direct clear experience of your divine Birthright.

Now, in the book it says:

Time is indeed unkind to the unholy relationship. For time IS cruel in the ego's hands, as it is kind when used for gentleness. The attraction of the unholy relationship begins to fade and to be questioned almost at once.¹

A-ha! You meet somebody and you recognize potential, not really potential for the ultimate best, but the potential for, we'll say, constructive manipulation that will allow a constructive relationship to occur that has fulfillments to it and in which you can have your needs met and you anticipate being able to meet the needs of the other person in the relationship.

Mind you this is all cogitated, it's all intellectually developed in your mind and has nothing to do with having an "ah-ha" where you say, "I recognize the Hand of God in her, I recognize the Hand of God in him and I recognize that I'm being willing to look at her or him from a joined perspective instead of an exclusively private one of my very own."

So, you meet this person . . . bells ring . . . lights go on . . . hearts float through the sky in your vision and it's wonderful. Well, prior to that time you may have just been acquaintances. You may just have been two people who have seen each other sort of on a regular basis because you work in the same proximity. But you never talked with each other. So there never was an act of relationship engaged in. But the minute you recognize here is a relationship to be developed, and you engage in it, now the attraction begins to fade and to be questioned almost at once.

Once it is formed, doubt MUST enter in because its purpose IS impossible.

Again, the purpose of the unholy relationship is to not have a relationship while seeming to have one, so that activities can be engaged in that promote one's ego, that promote one's integrity, or enhances one's integrity. It's all selfish. And it never involves a real connection with the holy one in front of you by the holy one that you Are.

You know, two people meet . . . and they're madly in love. And they plan for the wedding and they're floating on the graceful breezes of bliss and happiness. And then they get married and perhaps a week, two weeks, a month later, you notice things begin to change . . . and you have a phrase for it . . . you say, "the Honeymoon is over." Well, that's what it means. The attraction of the unholy relationship begins to fade and to be questioned almost at once.

Once it is formed, . .

. . . in other words, once this fantasy relationship is activated . . .

. . . doubt MUST enter in because its purpose IS impossible. The only such relationships which retain the fantasies that center on them are those which have been dreamed of, but have not been made at all.

In other words, they're still fantasies. They're still you and this other one passing each other in the office and you have a crush on him or a crush on her. You have an infatuation. You think about them all the time but you still haven't said anything to them . . . right?

That's a relationship which retains the fantasies that center on them, which have been dreamed of but have not been made or, we'll say, activated, actualized at all.

Where no reality has entered, there is nothing to intrude upon the dream of happiness. Yet consider what this means; the MORE reality that enters into the unholy relationship, the LESS SATISFYING it becomes.

The better you get to know the person you were head over heels in love with, the less satisfying it becomes because reality enters the picture. And I'm saying, the ego characteristics of your partner become displayed more completely than when you first met and were on your "good behavior." Okay?

So . . .

. . . the MORE reality that enters into the unholy relationship, the LESS SATISFYING it becomes. And the more the FANTASIES can encompass, the GREATER the satisfaction seems to be.

Why harp on this? Why keep talking this way?

Because you all fool yourselves into thinking that the way you have relationships where the Father's Perspective isn't entering into the picture at all, is normal. That it is the human condition, that you must do the best you can with it and there is no alternative. And you see, not only is that belief not true, it's detrimental—it's destructive. Because, when you adopt that stance, you will not allow for an "ah-ha" to occur, you are completely blocked against the discovery, the remembering that there was a point at which you did have complete and total union with everything and you knew who you Were—the Son or Daughter of God in Whom He had embodied all that He is. And you block by this conviction, any possibility of your [snaps fingers] remembering that and Waking up out of the dream of specialness, out of the dream of ignorance, out of the dream of living in an orphanage making something wonderful out of yourself . . . the poor thing that you are.

You've got to realize the dullness of this—the meaninglessness of it so that you're willing to stop in your tracks and refrain from further commitment to this habit of thought, and do the two-step. It's that simple.

Where no reality has entered, there is nothing to intrude upon the dream of happiness. Yet consider what this means; . .

. . . this is the point again . . .

. . . the MORE reality that enters into the unholy relationship, the LESS SATISFYING it . . .

. . . the unholy relationship . . .

. . . becomes. And the more the FANTASIES can encompass, the GREATER the satisfaction seems to be.

The "ideal" of the unholy relationship thus becomes one in which the reality of the other does not enter AT ALL to "spoil" the dream. And the less the other REALLY brings to it, the "better" it becomes.

Well, I'm upsetting the apple cart. I'm bringing reality into my relationships with you. And it makes you uncomfortable because I help you keep your attention fixed where it needs to be so that you don't fool yourselves, and so that you find yourself uncomfortable enough to make commitment to a new task—a new direction in which to be.

Thus, the attempt at union becomes a way of excluding even the one with whom the union was sought.

You see? You meet someone. There's a real entity there. There's a Son or Daughter of God. You just see a human being because you, yourself, have forgotten you're the Son or Daughter of God. And you begin to relate to this human being as a human being. You see? Already everything is a fabrication. Everything is false. Nothing true can come of it.

Then you learn to negotiate patterns of behavior with each other that help you not bring too much individuality into the relationship because that will require too much spontaneous unrehearsed, unpremeditated response. And you will lose the security of the fantasy.

So you end up being in relationship with someone without being in relationship to them. You are relating to your picture of them. And actually, I would say this: The picture you have of yourself is what you activate in order to relate to the picture you have of them. And they're doing the same thing in return.

This is very detrimental. Not because it makes life difficult when everybody's trying to operate according to fantasy, but because engaging in it at all keeps you from Waking up, keeps you from doing the two-step, keeps you from saying, "In spite of my perception of myself and my perception of them, and in spite of their perception of themselves and their perception of me, Father what is the truth here?" You see? That simply won't happen as long as you're devoted to the special or unholy relationship.

Thus, the attempt at union becomes a way of excluding even the one with whom the union was sought. For it was formed to get him OUT of it, and join with fantasies in uninterrupted "bliss."

Wow.

How can the Holy Spirit bring His interpretation of the body as a means of communication into relationships whose only purpose is SEPARATION from reality?

Sounds like a difficult problem for the Holy Spirit. But the answer is so utterly simple because it comes out of left-field. It's not a response to context of the question.

How can the Holy Spirit bring His interpretation of the body as a means of communication into relationships whose only purpose is SEPARATION from reality?

Here it is:

What forgiveness IS enables Him to do so.

[Repeats] What forgiveness IS enables Him to do so.

And what did we find forgiveness was? Forgiveness is when you abandon all of the unloving things and thoughts that you engaged in. Selective memory is used . . . and all that's left is that which was loving that you did and that which was loving that was done unto you.

That new perspective, which has been ever present with you, but has been hidden like the wheat is hidden by the tares, that is all there to be seen and blessed by if selective memory is used. And isn't the two-step, isn't the practice of the holy instant the practice of abandoning all that wasn't loving, all that wasn't true? It is, because you're saying, "Aside from what I think, Father, . . ." you see, you're going to another source, "Father, what is the truth here? What is the Love here? Holy Spirit, reveal to me what I covered up by creating perceptions of my own . . . definitions and meanings of my own that had nothing to do with the thing I was applying the definitions to."

If ALL but loving thoughts has been forgotten, what remains IS eternal. And the transformed past . . .

. . . in other words, the past that suddenly sits there clearly without all of the unloving and unlovely things that had been entertained before, in that transformed experience the . . .

. . . past is made like the PRESENT.

Let me read it again:

If ALL but loving thoughts has been forgotten, what remains IS eternal. And the transformed past is made like the PRESENT. No longer does the past conflict with NOW.

Now you might say, "Well, wait a minute, the now is conflicted. How can the past that's been cleaned up not conflict with now?" Well, because now...now...now...now...now...now is at each instant God expressing Himself totally as the Movement of Creation and it is unconflicted. It is flawless right now...now...now...now...now. You see? You drag the conflicts from the past and apply it to the now...now...now...now...now and immediately cover up what was perfectly new now...now...now.

[And] the transformed past is made like the PRESENT. No longer does the past conflict with NOW. THIS continuity EXTENDS the present by increasing its reality and its VALUE in your perception of it.

In other words, when there's nothing present in your past because you've used selective memory to separate the tares from the wheat, the Real from the unreal, what seemed like a troubled and conflicted past becomes a flawlessly perfect past that's exactly like the flawlessly perfect present. And in that undistorted experience of unity an expansion occurs so that now is no longer just a local experience for you—your street, your community, your city, your state, your county, your world. You see? And your conscious experience of being, takes in more and more and more of the infinite Creation that the infinite God is Being at every moment—your conscious awareness of things becomes infinite as an actual experience.

THIS continuity EXTENDS the present by increasing its reality and its VALUE in your perception of it. In these loving thoughts . .

... the ones that remain because the unloving thoughts have been selected out by selective memory.

In these loving thoughts is the spark of beauty hidden in the ugliness of the unholy relationship in which the hatred is remembered, yet THERE to come alive as the relationship is given to Him Who gives it life and beauty.

... meaning the Holy Spirit. Now that's a little bit difficult to understand.

In these loving thoughts . . .

... that remain after selective memory.

In these loving thoughts is the spark of beauty . . .

... and I'm going to add the words . . .

... in other words, before it was selected out by selective memory . . .

. . . in which the hatred is remembered, yet

... it . . .

. . . the spark of beauty . . .

... is . . .

. . . yet THERE to come alive as the relationship is given to Him Who gives it life and beauty.

Everything Real, everything true, every little bit of love that you have expressed even while you were asleep and dreaming a dream of humanhood, is eternal and has remained present for what it was—for what it is—right in the ugliness of the unholy relationships. It has been there to be uncovered and brought to life, illuminated so that it could illuminate you. That's what it means.

That is why Atonement centers on the past, which is the SOURCE of separation, and where it must be undone. For separation must be corrected where it was MADE.

Again, let's keep it simple: Where was the separation made? It was made in the decision on your part where you said, "Father, I would rather see it my way."

It's not that it was really made in the past, it was made in a decision. A decision that can be unmade and the unmaking of it has nothing to do with time—past, present or future. It's important to understand.

The ego seeks to "resolve" its problems, not at their source, but where they were NOT made.

You see? You try to solve your problems with your fellowman who's creating a difficult situation for you. But that's not the source of the problem. The source of the problem is that you, in your present relationship with your Brother, are not looking at your Brother after having first done the two-step. You're engaging with your Brother without first having said, "Father, what is the truth here about me and my Brother? What is the truth about what our relationship is? I think that we're just two human beings, two organisms. But I hear that we're really the Sons of God—that God is our Father, not our human parents and not a sperm and an egg germinating. I hear that. What's the truth? How will things look if I say okay to the perspective that I'm told is mine because You placed it in me? But I won't experience it until somehow I say, "Okay, Father, I'll let You be my Father and I won't claim to be an independent entity. I won't even claim that You made me and gave me intelligence to be on my own."

The ego seeks to "resolve" its problems, not at their source, but where they were NOT made. And thus it seeks to guarantee there WILL be no solution.

That's where the detrimental, destructive aspects of the special relationship are.

. . . it seeks to guarantee there WILL be no solution. The Holy Spirit . . .

. . . that which is nothing more than your right Mind . . .

. . . wills only to make His resolutions complete and perfect, and so He seeks and FINDS the source of problems where it is, and there undoes it.

The Holy Spirit says to you, as I am saying to you, "Stop! Do the two-step, engage in the holy instant." You see? The Holy Spirit directs you to where the source of the problem lies. Apparently it lies in a decision you made some time ago, apparently in the past. But you're not going to go back to the past to correct it, because the past—a date in time and space—is not where the mistake was made. It was made in a decision. And so the Holy Spirit directs you there by saying, “Engage in the holy instant in every moment . . . ask, Father, what is the truth here? Father, what is the truth here? Father, what is the truth about me and this one I’m in relationship with, because that truth is the one I want to base my actions upon.” You see?

And with each step in His . . .

. . . the Holy Spirits . . .

. . . undoing is the SEPARATION more and more undone, and union brought closer. He is not at all confused by any "reasons" for separation.

You see? He’s very clear about what’s needed and he doesn’t care about the reasons that might have been given. “Well, it was a bad day and I didn’t have time to think clearly and so I made a mistake and then, you know, what happened, happened.” Doesn’t matter. None of those things matter. What matters is, right now, are you going to say, “Father, what is the truth here?”

ALL He . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . perceives in separation is . . .

. . . what? Something so utterly simple . . .

. . . that it must be UNDONE.

That’s all! You don’t have to unjustify it. You don’t have to go through all the reasons. You don’t have to do all this stuff that keeps things in nebulous vagueness.

Listen to this (nothing vague or nebulous):

ALL He perceives in separation is that it must be UNDONE.

That’s all!

Let Him uncover the hidden spark of beauty in your relationships, and show it to you. Its loveliness will so attract you that you will be unwilling ever to lose the sight of it again.

Well, the actual experiential fact of it is, that you will recognize its value. But your old habits will still seem valuable to you and you're not likely to make commitment initially to the beauty of the love that the Holy Spirit has uncovered, that allows for your release from the orphanage. But I will tell you this: After the first experience you have, you will have others and you will never be able to be completely at ease and comfortable in your ignorance again. And as a result, the ignorance that had not bothered you for, . . . you would say forever . . . will begin to be felt as an unsettled, disruptive undercurrent that will increase in strength so that you truly arrive at a point where you're unwilling to ever lose the sight of it again.

Its loveliness will so attract you that you will be unwilling ever to lose the sight of it again.

It will happen. You can facilitate its happening with less stress by consciously engaging in the holy instant. You now have an idea. And you can practice it. And you will not be at the beck and call of your emotions and your long-standing habits of self-centeredness.

And you will let it transform the relationship so you can see it more and more. For you will WANT it more and more, and become increasingly unwilling to let it be hidden from you.

Mind you, you're liable to experience this in a mirror image, meaning that you are more likely to feel uncomfortable where before you had always felt comfortable. And that discomfort will increase causing you to willingly say, "Father, what is the truth here? Father, I really want to know what the truth is here."

And you will learn to seek for, and ESTABLISH, conditions in which this beauty can be seen.

The simple fact is you will begin to appear to be an individual with resolve—not wimpy, not just going with the flow. You will begin to become demanding of the experience of God in your relationships with every thing, as a holy Son of God relating to—or Daughter of God relating to—holy Sons or Daughters of God or as a holy Son or Daughter of God relating to all of Creation.

All this you will do gladly, if you but let Him hold the spark before you, . .

. . . "Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?" That's what you're asking for. You're asking for the Holy Spirit or God to hold the spark in front of you. "What is the truth here?" You don't want to see darkness, a void. That's what the two-step is about, that's what the holy instant is about.

. . . let Him hold the spark before you, to light your way and make it clear to you. God's Son is one.

Not one who also is a shadow image held by you and others around you.

God's Son is one.

Indivisible. No misperceptions, no definitions, no meanings separate and apart from the perfect one: The Son of God that God is expressing Himself as.

Whom God has joined as one, the ego CANNOT break apart.

When you read sentences like that, you know that it means that it therefore, it never has happened.

Whom God has joined as one, the ego CANNOT break apart.

And therefore, it has never been broken apart, no matter how broken you seem to be experiencing yourself. You've got to become definite. You've got to establish the conditions in which the beauty can be seen. You see?

The spark of holiness MUST be safe, however hidden it may be, in every relationship.

Listen to that. This is because of who you really Are—the Son or Daughter of God.

The spark of holiness MUST be safe, however hidden it may be, in every relationship.

Because no matter what kind of shadow image is defining you in your mind, you've never stopped being the Son or Daughter of God, the holy one.

And so:

The spark of holiness . . .

. . . has never been altered, it . . .

MUST be safe, however hidden it may be, in every relationship. For the Creator of the one relationship has left no part of it without Himself.

You see? The Father did not create you and then abandon you to be on your own. Your holiness in this instant is derived from the Presence of the Movement of God in this moment right there where you are. That's the truth about you. That's the truth about your fellowman. And that's the truth you want to have embellished and broadened as your conscious experience. That experience is the reason for the practice of the holy instant.

Now I'm going to end here. And as you consider during the coming week what we've discussed, I want you to look for the spark . . . the spark of love that is present in everything you do and is present in everything everyone else does, because anything that any of you are doing is an act of a holy Son or Daughter of God. That fact hasn't changed.

Don't become too somber about the things we're discussing. But be willing to be serious about them, so that their serious consideration might move you to a practical willingness to engage in the holy instant . . . to move into that place where God's laws prevail, where your holiness and your Brother's or Sister's holiness is secure, unviolated, available to be experienced as the transforming of your mind and the contributive factor to the transforming of your Brothers' or Sisters' minds.

I love you very much. Okay.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

May 14th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We've been talking about shadow figures. And we've been talking about the fact that a shadow figure is a meaning that you have given to yourself to identify yourself, or a meaning you have given to someone else to identify them.

Now that is something far different from walking up to someone you know on the street and saying, "I Am. You Are." You didn't say, "I am happy. You are unhappy. I am better than you. You are worse than me." You see?

The simple fact was said, "I Am. You Are."—an acknowledgment of simplicity, an acknowledgment you could say, without any shadow figures brought into play.

Now, one of the best examples of the meaning of shadow figures that I can share with you was a series of pictures on the cover of a magazine. In the first picture there's a man obviously at work and his boss is berating him. So here we have employer/employee—boss/the one subject to the boss. Those are shadow figures. Because the fact is, I Am. You Are. You see? We Are. Not bosses, not employers, not superiors, not inferiors.

But then in the next picture, we see the man who is obviously come home at the end of day. So here's the inferior one arriving at home and he is berating his wife. Wow, quite a switch. Now he's the superior figure and she's the inferior. He's the one in charge. She's the one to be submissive. How can he be two different things?

Well, the next picture shows the mother shaking her finger at the little boy—their son. And the little boy has tears in his eyes. You see? And so here we have more shadow figures. The little boy's feelings are hurt. He thinks she's talking to him, instead of talking to her picture of him and exercising her superiority over him—the shadow figure that he is in her mind—as a means of regaining her composure after having suffered at the hand of the shadow figure that she called her husband, and whom she gave a better superior position than hers.

And then in the final picture, here's this little boy doing the best he can with the situation and he's looking at this little kitten . . . and he's shaking his finger at that little kitten. You see?

In every single one of those frames, there's really only one thing that could appropriately be said: "I Am. You Are. I Am. You Are. We are the holy Sons and Daughters of God. We are something quite Real. We are something quite inviolable. We are something quite equal. We are the presence of Love and our function is to be the presence of Love."

Now, Waking up is becoming free of the shadow figures. It's that simple. But in order to become free of the shadow figures, you have to have some way of recognizing them and abandoning them.

As I've said in the last few weeks, everyone is bouncing off of responding to the image, the picture—the meanings that they have given to others. And they are doing it from the image they have of themselves.

"Well, you know what? I have a college degree. I have a job that pays very well that utilizes the skills that I have and the intelligence that I have and I have arrived at a point where I am deserving of respect."

There you go . . . you just created a shadow image.

All there really is, is this: "I Am."

But you know what? This one who has defined himself as worthy of respect can, during the day, if someone else comes up and is rude or insulting to him, have hurt feelings. And if he was put down in front of a lot of people whom he has defined as "respecters of himself" he could not only feel bad but he could feel righteously angry.

Now, what about these feelings?

They're all reactions to shadow images. They have absolutely nothing to do with him: "I Am." They have to do with his image. They have to do with the shadow figure that he holds of himself.

And so this shadow figure of himself says to everyone else, "Here is the way you are going to treat me: You are no longer going to treat me disrespectfully, you understand?" And this image of himself will teach the subservient images out there how to behave and treat him with respect.

You see that all of this is pure fantasy. It's pure imagination. And all the time this kind of relationship is going on, no connection is actually being made. Everybody is learning how to behave "by the book."

You know, there was a joke that went around some time back where somebody would say a number and everybody would laugh. And it turns out that the number referred to a particular joke which everybody knew and they knew that the number related to that joke so that when the number was said, they would laugh. You see?

Well, if everybody is taught by everybody else how to behave appropriately, how to respond to the shadow figure, how the shadow figure that you are is supposed to respond to the shadow figure that I am, . . . then when the unreal message is expressed by the shadow figure that is me, everybody else automatically responds appropriately just like laughing at a number because it applies to a joke. Do you see what I'm saying?

I'm saying that that doesn't constitute communication. It doesn't constitute connection. It constitutes everybody responding to numbers and concepts by rote, automatically. Because it's the way it works. It's because it's the way it has to be. It's because that's the only way you can have order in a chaotic world. Or more truthfully, that's the only way you can have harmony when you are behaving as though you don't know who your Source is and you don't know who you really Are. That's what it amounts to.

I hope everyone had an interesting time at least, this past week, in paying attention to the occasions where you behaved like a shadow figure or you expected others to behave according to the shadow figure you were superimposing upon them, by holding them to a concept that you have about them that's based upon their past behavior.

It's a very valuable lesson. It's a very disconcerting lesson to learn. It's a disconcerting experience to have. Because you begin to realize that perhaps there hasn't been nearly as much of what is Real going on in your life as you thought. And of course, the point is not to get hung up on that but to rather shift gears so that you are connecting with what is Real more consistently and expressing what is Real more consistently.

The only problem is, that as you find out that a lot of what you've been doing and a lot of your behavior has kept you in a state of ignorance, staying there will not be as satisfying as it used to be and so you could find life beginning to be depressing. Because part of you will still try to make the old paradigm work and it won't work because you know better. You can't make it work like you used to because you have become clearer than you were.

And so you begin to see when you are using your mind, and your associates, for the purpose of creating a false sense of harmony and order without ever connecting with your fellowman. Part of what is disturbing is the loneliness that you begin to feel. You say the number of the joke and nobody laughs anymore—they always laughed before. Your world isn't functioning like it used to. But the reason is that you know that there's an alternative and you've also begun to see just exactly how you use shadow figures to keep you from your fulfillment.

This is such a valuable step to find yourself on, because until you're on this step you can't step out of, for lack of better words, the orphanage. You can't step out of your orphanhood. You can't step into the fuller conscious experience of Being as the Son or Daughter of God, which is the whole point.

Now, no matter how much you deny the existence of God, no matter how much you deny your inheritance—your Birthright from the Father, your Sonship or Daughtership—you still remain unalterably what God created you to be. You remain unalterably not your own creator. And you remain unalterably with a Birthright that can only be described as whole—as fulfillment embodied infinitely, as perfection experienced, as the conscious experience of the joy of recognizing everything that you've been looking at before and calling "the world," to be the Kingdom of Heaven, awesomely so.

So, no matter how wretched an orphan you have learned to present to the world because that shadow image gets you the most, you have just been fooling yourself. And you have been playing a charade that never ever can become Real and never has, and actually has constituted a forever-emptiness as long as you have been employing it, but which you had fooled yourself into believing was actually fulfilling.

So we talked last week about the fact that as you begin to see the truth, as soon as there begins to be glimmers of the light illuminating how things really are and you begin to remember: "Oh yes! How could I have forgotten that? Yes! Yes!" Then . . .

. . . you will [each] learn to seek for, and ESTABLISH, conditions in which this beauty can be seen.¹

[Raj skipped to the 4th sentence in the next paragraph]

The spark of holiness MUST be safe, . .

. . . your holiness must be unalterably present.

. . . however hidden it may be, in every relationship.

In every relationship you have it's the Son and Daughter of God, or the Sons and Daughters of God experiencing their Oneness. Relationships are where the light of your Being meets the light of Being in everyone else and everything else.

The spark of holiness MUST be safe, however hidden it may be, in every relationship.

And that's all you're ever in . . . are relationships. Whether it's the stars and the Big Dipper or the stars and the Milky Way . . . you're in relationship. There is a relationship, even if it's only how far you are physically from it. It's measurable. There is something actual. It's more than just distance, and more than just physical.

You are in relationship right now with absolutely everything that exists whether you are conscious of it or not. And . . .

The spark of holiness MUST be safe, however hidden it may be, in every relationship.

That means that your relationship with the stars and the Big Dipper are a holy relationship. It means that as far away as it seems to be, there is a relationship that is dynamic, that is actual, and that is full of the Meaning of God.

And this is why I keep saying that every single moment you're in, and every single thing you're in relationship with, whether it's a table or a plant or a fingernail, it is the provision on the spot . . . right then and there for Waking up, because you can dare to ask "What is the more of what God is Being right there, than what I'm seeing? And what is the more," I'm going to add this: "What is the more that God is Being right where I see me than what I'm currently experiencing?" You can ask that question because, again . . .

The spark of holiness MUST be safe, however hidden it may be, in every relationship. For the Creator of the one relationship has left no part of it without Himself.

Now . . .

This is the ONLY part of the relationship the Holy Spirit sees . . .

Remember, the Holy Spirit is that which will illuminate—bring the Light to and uncover the holiness of you and the holiness of that which you're in relationship with. It is the Holy Spirit's intent to illuminate the holiness of Being—yours and everything else. It's the Holy Spirit's purpose to reveal to you the truth that you have forgotten because you were making up your own definitions and giving preferences to them. You see?

So the part of the one relationship which the Father didn't leave Himself out of is . . .

. . . the ONLY part of the relationship the Holy Spirit sees because He knows that ONLY this is true. You have made the relationship unreal, and therefore unholy, by seeing it WHERE it is not and AS it is not.

"Well, I'm the one to give the orders and you're the one to take them! And I'm the one to be respected and you're the one to respect me!"

That's how you made the relationship unreal. You turned yourself and the other into something more than, "I Am. You Are."—the simplicity of Presence. You made of the simplicity of Presence something unreal by embellishing it and saying, "I'm in charge of you and you must do what I say. I've done more to deserve respect than you have, so for right now until you do more that causes me to respect you, you respect me!" You see?

Your shadow image of yourself addresses your shadow image of them. And you tell their shadow image of themselves to honor the shadow image in you. You see? And you all train each other how to be these perfect shadow figures. [chuckles] You all teach each other how to be utterly artificial. And then you wonder at the niggling uneasiness in you that in one way or another is trying to say, "There is another way to look at this."

Give the past to Him Who can change your mind about it FOR you.

. . . meaning the Holy Spirit.

Now, to see the integrity of all of this, what would give the Holy Spirit the authority to change your mind about it for you? And under what circumstance could you dare to trust into letting the Holy Spirit change your mind about it for you?

Well, it's the fact that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind. It's You, at the bottom line. It's that of You which you're ignoring while you choose to play at being an ego. It's that simple. So you can dare to let the Holy Spirit change your mind for you, because you're letting your innate forever-integrity teach you how not to be insane anymore. And there is no one better able to teach you your sanity than That of You which is sane. That is what you would want to rely on. That would be truly the only safe thing to rely upon, to lean into, to entrust yourself to. Because you know that if you are entrusting yourself to That of You which is the absolute integrity of your Being, well, that's the only thing you could dare to commit yourself to—entrusting yourself to.

That is the wonder of the teaching of the Course.

Give the past to Him . . .

. . . why does it say give the past to Him? Because your relating to the shadow figures of yourself and your fellowman and of Creation—is you relating to things that your Brother has done in the past and things that you have done in the past, things that seem to provide you and your life with meaning.

I say that because what doesn't provide meaning to you and your life is such a simple thing as, "I Am. You Are."

"It's gotta be more than that!" But that's the only thing available in the present moment . . . in the present moment . . . in the present moment.

Anything else has to be embellished by memory. And that's how you keep yourself from Waking up. That's how you keep yourself from experiencing your innocence and your perfection. You drag the past into the present moment and heap it on your shoulders and bear yourself down with it, and bury yourself under it. And you do the same thing with your fellowman. And you do this because you think that it's the only kind of conscious ordering that will constitute orderliness and save you from chaos, chaos that you think awaits you for only one reason, that reason being, that you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. I'd rather not see it as it truly is. I'd rather be crazy for awhile. I'd rather function in my imagination for awhile, even though it's a dangerous thing to do because I will not be connected with Reality in a way that allows me to fit in with It and feel Its support and feel my perfection within the perfection of everything that I'm allowing myself to fit in with." You see?

So you use the past to block the experience of your perfection in the present.

You have made the relationship unreal, and therefore unholy, by seeing it WHERE it is not and AS it is not. Give the past to Him Who can change your mind about it FOR you.

Dependably and without risking anything.

But first, be sure you fully realize what YOU have made the past to represent, and why.

In brief, the past is now your justification for entering into a continuing, unholy alliance with the ego AGAINST the present. For the present IS forgiveness. Therefore, the relationships which the unholy alliance dictates are not perceived nor felt as NOW.

It's sort of like you're working out the past together. You get together and instead of playing cards, you work on the past. And you're working with selves that aren't now. You're working with selves that the past created, so that the moment you're in is the crowning pinnacle glory of the past which will be replaced in the next moment by the crowning pinnacle glory of the past . . . so that always it's the "past you" relating to the "past other."

Now, I'm not speaking too nebulously. I'm speaking very clearly. And the clarity of what I'm sharing is uncovering the nebulousness of the way you've been behaving and the way you've been experiencing things, and feeling that your experience was valid and intelligent.

So let's continue:

Therefore, the relationships which the unholy alliance dictates are not perceived nor felt as NOW. Yet the frame of reference to which the present is referred for meaning . . .

. . . meaning the past . . .

. . . is an ILLUSION of the past, . .

. . . it gets even more nebulous, doesn't it. It's not an actual past, it's an illusion of the past. So you've got illusions built on illusions.

Now it doesn't hurt to see this because you have the answer. We've been talking about the answer long enough so that what we're talking about now cannot throw you for a loop or make you feel crazy. Because although you are learning of the craziness of how you have been perceiving, you're learning it after the fact—you're learning it after the fact of my having shared with you that all you need to do is engage in the two-step and practice the holy instant.

The answer . . . no matter how complicated and convoluted and crazy the things are that we're talking about, they can be stepped out of, released, let go of by a simple practice of shutting up. Shutting up what? Well, thinking and the rehearsing of shadow figures—yours and that of others—and in the silence saying one thing, "Father, what is the truth here?" And then remaining silent and listening for the infilling that will come because you are the holy Son or Daughter of God—it will come because of what you really Are.

[Yet] the frame of reference to which the present is referred for meaning is an ILLUSION of the past, in which those elements which fit the purpose of the unholy alliance are retained and all the rest let go.

And what is thus let go is all the truth the past could ever offer to the present as witnesses for its reality, while what is kept but witnesses to the reality of dreams.

This is why selective remembering is essential, so that what is Real is retained and what is not, is let go of. So that now, you could say, you are left with a past with areas of what is Real and holes where the unreal seem to be that you've let go of, that have been abandoned. And the fact is, that with the, we'll call them, islands of Reality, islands of what is true about you and what you have been and what is true about the love that has been expressed, given to you, the fact that that is the only thing confronting you [snaps fingers] causes the light bulb to go on, because there is nothing to distract you from the reappearing of what is Real and what was always Real in what are now holes where your shadow images used to be.

And so [snaps fingers] you Awaken wholly, totally, instantly. Your right Mind is returned to you. And that's the point.

Now:

It is still up to you to choose to be willing to join with truth or illusion. But remember that to choose ONE is to let the other GO. Which one you choose, . .

. . . and this may be a little confusing . . .

Which one you choose, you will endow with beauty and reality because the choice DEPENDS on which you value more.

Whichever one you value more, whether it is truth or illusion, you will embellish with everything that makes it attractive to you. So even if you choose illusion, which is unreality and cannot actually be beautiful, you will beautify. You will and you have. And you've made it seem worth holding onto, never having brought yourself to the point where you would say, "Wait a minute! Stop! . . Father, or any greater power that Is, If you exist, will you tell me whether I am seeing things truly or whether what I am seeing is illusory."

The spark of beauty or the veil of ugliness, the real world or the world of guilt and fear, truth or illusion, freedom or slavery, – it is all the same.

There's a fine distinction that's being made here. If you are in the orphanage and you are trying to make a choice between being a "good boy" or a "bad boy," an intelligent person or a drag on the goings on of the orphanage, if you are choosing for expressing beauty or creating messes in the orphanage it's all the same, whether you're choosing for what seems to be good or choosing for what seems to be bad. It's all the same, because the choice is being made in the orphanage.

Now, the next sentence says:

For you can never choose EXCEPT between God and the ego.

Well, what does that mean? In this context it means, whether you're choosing for the orphanage or leaving the orphanage. It's not for choosing to be better or worse in the orphanage. That's not a choice. That's the same-old, same-old, with new words draped around it. And perhaps, some new created behaviors draped around it. But it's still all orphan behavior. It's all still going on in orphan-land. So therefore, those aren't actual choices, because there aren't two things to choose between.

You can never choose except between being in the orphanage or abandoning the divorce you got from your Father. That's what it means.

Thought systems are but true or false, and all their attributes come simply from what they ARE. Only the Thoughts of God are true. And all that follows from Them comes from what They are, and is as true as is the holy Source from which They came.

Difficult to understand? Well, only if you don't know where they fit. What it's saying is, that when you're choosing to think for yourself, reason for yourself, function independently, you're lost. But when you say, (after having shut up you're thinking) "Father, what is the truth here?" and you inquire of your Source what is the truth about everything and about you, then as we've said before, you move into the arena where God's laws prevail, where your sanity can return to you as one glorious "Ah-ha!" or illumination.

Nothing else matters. It's very black and white. Either you can continue to think for yourself and solve your problems as an orphan, or you can say, "Father, fill me with all Thou Art. Fill me with the conscious experience of the Kingdom of Heaven that You are Being right now and forever."

Only the Thoughts of God are true.

Well, if only the thoughts of God are true, then ask God what His thoughts are and don't waste your time thinking your own. I'm not scolding you. I'm just saying the utterly simple truth emphatically.

Now:

My holy brothers, I would enter into all your relationships, and step between you and your fantasies. Let MY relationship to you be real to you, . .

. . . don't let me be a shadow figure . . . someone you read about, who walked the globe two thousand years ago, and did things that you can inspire yourselves with. Let me in, as Paul is doing at this moment for himself. Let me in to you for yourselves. Because this is the way you get over the hump of abandoning the habit of authoritative mental gymnastics called, "thinking and reasoning."

Let MY relationship to you be real to you, and let me bring reality to your perception of your brothers.

Let me undo the shadow images about your Brothers that you have created in your mind and held them to and punished them for . . . and perhaps praised them as well when it suited you.

They were not created to enable you to hurt yourselves through them.

That isn't what you were all created for—to use each other in that way. You were created and you are Being . . . you find yourself Being . . . you find yourself at a loss for words, any words other than: I Am. You Are.

They . . .

. . . everything that you would be in relationships with . . .

. . . were created to CREATE with you.

See, that's where you fit in. That's where everything fits together.

This is the truth that I would interpose between you and your goal of madness.

Your goal of madness being, that you want to busy yourself creating shadow images and refurbishing your own . . . always yours, in your best interest, but not always your Brothers, in his best interest. Mostly you work on your Brothers to refurbish yours. But it's understandable why you do that, when you've denied your Source, when you've said, "I have no Source except my own imagination," you are at a loss, you're in a void . . . you're in a place where there is nothing to validate you. And so you're bound to engage only in activities which in one way or another do validate you.

Now again, we're talking in the orphanage, where you're being a bad boy trying to become a good boy and saying, "It's a good thing for me to want to become a good boy. Hey everybody, do you see I'm working to become a good boy? Do you see that? Doesn't it make you happy? Isn't that good? Tell me I'm on the right track." You see?

But that's not any answer. It keeps everything in fantasy. The call is to step out of the orphanage. The step is then to abandoning the claim to orphanhood, another way of saying to abandon the claim to independence. That's the simple bottom line fact of it.

Be not separate from me, . .

. . . this moment, the next moment, tomorrow, a week from now or don't be separate from your Guide because we're all the Christ, accept those who function as your Guides, like the Holy Spirit are Awake and perform the same function that the Holy Spirit does.

Be not separate from me, . .

I could say, be not separate from us . . .

. . . and let not the holy purpose of Atonement be lost to you in dreams of vengeance.

In other words, in the miserable state of affairs that call for justice constantly when you're operating in the land of shadow figures.

Relationships in which such dreams are cherished have EXCLUDED me.

They have excluded the Holy Spirit. They have excluded your own Guides. They have excluded God. They have excluded all the things that are Real and that can point out the things that are Real and help you abandon the things that are not, so that confusion vanishes in the clarity of the ever Presence and only Presence of what is Real of what is Love of what is truth, of what is God appearing.

Let me . . .

. . . let the Holy Spirit, let your Guide . . .

. . . enter in the Name of God, . .

. . . not in the name of your shadow figures. But:

Let me enter in the Name of God, . .

. . . in the Name of what's Real . . .

. . . and bring you peace that you may offer peace to me.

That's a really simple way of describing the two-step and the affects of the practice of the two-step. And it is my hope that as we have been covering all of this, you have begun to feel uncomfortable about continuing to function in the realm of shadow figures. Because in one way or another, it has become clearer to you that doing so is a miserable state of being that is not your Birthright. And that having an inkling of what your Birthright is, you are willing to more diligently than ever, abandon the use of shadow figures and lean into the Holy Spirit or your Guide or me, so that we might reflect back to you that which is true, and only that which is true in your experience—which for the present, we will call your past. And we will do that so you will become free of the past and be able to be totally present in the now which is where your salvation is and which is where Reality is.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

May 22nd 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

A new section:

PERCEPTION AND THE TWO WORLDS¹

Well, there can't really be two worlds, can there. There can't be two of Creation. Creation is infinite, singular, indivisible.

So, what is called the two worlds must be two different ways of experiencing Creation. And indeed, as we've been discussing, one of them is the view or experience of Creation that is had in the holy instant. And the other is when you view and experience Creation—the Kingdom of Heaven—from a so-called independent standpoint which you have created out of your imagination and which is applied to absolutely every aspect of Creation, which is the Movement of God.

One is utterly harmonious and the other is utterly chaotic, uncomfortable, unhappy, full of suffering, together with an indomitable will to overcome the suffering. Not by abandoning the viewpoint—the vantage point—but by staying in it and getting control of Creation yourself.

I'm here again to stand with all of you with the sole purpose of reinterpreting your perception of the Kingdom of Heaven which you are entertaining from the vantage point of being an independent agent. That's my function right now. That is the function of the Holy Spirit right now. That is the function of your Guides right now.

Everything is geared to, or geared toward, your Waking up—your coming back into your full capacity as that conscious awareness which is inseparable from the Mind of God, which holds itself apart no longer, thus allowing you to see Creation as the Father is Being It and fulfilling your part in the co-creation of It. It's that simple.

Now we've spent a lot of time talking about the special relationship—the unholy relationship—because at the bottom line, it is the most addictive human, I'm going to say, non-divine aspect of your mental makeup. It is the one most significant thing that stands in the way of Awakening—of the return of sanity.

And so it's very important. And at the same time that you begin to see how not only unproductive the special relationship is—but how destructive it is—you will arrive at a point where although it still seems like something worth hanging onto, you will be willing to abandon it because you are beginning, through reason, to see that everything associated with it is illusory and that it is keeping you in a state of insanity. At the least it is keeping you in a state of the inability to see truly. That is the definition of insanity, isn't it?

It is absolutely necessary for you to arrive at a point where it is reasonable enough to consider the fact that your independent assessment of everything stands in opposition to your Being—stands in denial of what you truly Are.

That realization, intellectual though it may be, is all it will really take for you to arrive at a point of, let's say, deciding to experiment or test out the possibility that it might truly make a significant difference in your experience of Being, to abandon your independent stance and join with the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind—or join with me or join with the Father with the express desire of wanting all of your perceptions to arise out of the inspiration that followed an invitation to the Holy Spirit, me or the Father, to know what the truth is and to know it without engaging your capacity to imagine . . . to invite it without introducing any bias to what follows.

Because you want once and for all, to find out whether everything I'm talking about is true or crap!

It's not fun, really, to sit on the fence and indefinitely not make up your mind but consider all the possibilities because it's very stimulating and does cause a certain feeling of bliss or inspiration that's much more interesting than just plain old suffering.

Let's go into the book:

PERCEPTION AND THE TWO WORLDS

or . . .

THE TWO PICTURES

. . . depending upon which versions of the Course you're reading.

God established His relationship with you to make you happy, and nothing you do which does not share His purpose can be real.

Now isn't that amazing? With all of the power, you might say, with the omnipotent Presence that God Is, it's amazing isn't it, that a purpose would be established for relationships as simple as to be happy. Not only that, the purpose that each thing that the Father has created and has relationship with is also to make happy. In everything that God's Creation does, the purpose is to make happy.

This is something which is very apparent to you in the holy instant when you have relinquished your will and yielded to the Father with undefended interest, undefended presence of mind.

Everyone loves to be happy. Everyone tolerates not being happy. Everyone puts up with it because occasionally there are bright spots. But it's important to know that the purpose of relationships is to make happy . . . to be happy and nothing else.

Why? Because it simplifies the correction of all illusions. Absolutely everyone understands what it means to be happy. Not everyone is inclined to devote himself or herself to expressing that which makes happy.

Why? Because when one is imagining that he or she is an independent agent—something which arose out of a physical action called fertilization of an egg by a sperm—everything you engage in is, at the bottom line, for self-protection. Therefore, if at any point you do engage in making happy, it's only because the making happy of someone will protect you. And not out of any actual gift of caring.

God established His relationship with you to make you happy, and nothing you do which does not share His purpose can be real. The purpose God ascribed to anything . . .

. . . meaning anything that He created . . .

The purpose God ascribed to anything is its only function. is its only function.

What does that mean? It means that you as His Creation are already whole. And you need do nothing to embellish it. You need do nothing to improve it. You can dare to peacefully and willingly abide in the wholeness of you, in the wholeness of your Being, which is imbued with happiness because of the way in which it was created.

Paul: I'm sorry I lost it . . .

Raj:

Because of His reason for creating His relationship with you, the function of relationships became forever "to make happy." AND NOTHING ELSE.

If you abide in that without trying to add anything to it, without trying to make it different in any way, you will find yourself coming back into the conscious experience of your already created wholeness and your already existing capacity to experience all of Creation simultaneously, fully, without conflict, without suffering, without sorrow . . . but with happiness.

To fulfill this function, you relate to your creations as God to His.

That's to fulfill His function. Of course, you're not fulfilling it because you're engaged in the practice of special relationships for the purpose of self-protection—self preservation. Because you don't have available to you at the moment, the full conscious experience of your wholeness in which the universal is all of you, where the oneness of your Being is inseparable from the oneness of all that Is. Not as just an idea, but as a conscious experience—a conscious experience of peace, a conscious experience of perfect safety, a conscious experience of happiness—which flows from you and is received by all . . . and flows from all and is received by you.

Now, let's make this practical. This experience I'm talking about is an experience to be had right here, right now in what you call a material world and universe. This happiness is to be experienced by all mankind, by all countries. It will find itself expressed uninhibitedly in what you call politics or what you could call, infinite cooperation. Not infinite in (-) fighting and jealousy and trying to get the better of a situation at someone else's disadvantage for greater self-protection. It's to be experienced here.

To fulfill this function, you relate to your creations as God to His. For nothing God created is apart from happiness, and nothing God created but would EXTEND happiness as its Creator did. Whatever fulfills this function not CANNOT be real.

Well, you are all having the experience of what fulfills that function . . . not. The stress, the strain, the tension, the fighting, the arguing, the getting the best of each other that is going on in your world all demonstrate the fact that extending happiness is not what everyone is engaged in. It's also very clear that the reason it's not being engaged in is because everyone feels threatened.

And why does everyone feel threatened? Because everyone knows that everyone else wants to get the best of him or wants to get the best of her. Everyone knows that the motive is not happiness. And so, self-protection is in full-swing.

So what does this mean? You know, we're talking about this wonderful thing called, "the two-step" and "the practice of the holy instant," moving into that place where God's laws prevail. And you do think of it as a mental space, a mental place to move into where God's laws prevail.

But here's the thing: God's laws prevailing will be manifest on your globe. God's laws prevailing will manifest as cancer disappearing . . . as illness, sin, disease, death disappearing, being replaced by that which obviously makes happy and is happy.

Mind you, it's got to happen here and now in your current perception of the Kingdom of Heaven, in the world you are presently experiencing.

Remember, Waking up is going to be you experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven clearly. And experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven clearly is going to mean your current perception of the world is going to become radically and clearly the evidence of God Being right now, in other words, the Kingdom of Heaven.

What does this mean? It means that the practice of the holy instant and the practice of the two-step is something that applies to relationships between you and your fellowman right here on earth, between your country and another country right here on earth, between all of the nations on the globe, where a shift, because effort has been put into it, takes place and everyone begins to do that which makes happy and therefore, begins to reflect God's Purpose and the way God has made it all.

In this world, it is impossible to create.

What world? The world of the orphanage, in the world of independent authorship and independent agents and individualities with a will, who can by the exercise of their will, actually make things, create things and govern and control them well. That's not a Real world, that's a misunderstanding of Self and the Kingdom of Heaven. It's a misunderstanding of the holy Son of God, the holy Daughter of God that you Are and the Kingdom of Heaven.

In this world, it is impossible to create. Yet it is possible to make happy.

Why? How could that be? Because no matter how you are interpreting what you Are, no matter what kind of a shadow image you are creating for yourself about yourself, you can't stop being the Son or Daughter of God. You cannot alter what you Are divinely in any way. And so this Son or Daughter of God that you Are acts and the action is something far beyond the limited perceptions you are applying to it. In other words, the acts of the Sons and Daughters of God are acts of infinite love. But if you, believing that you are an independent agent who is vulnerable, who needs to protect himself, then that very act which is a divine act of infinite love, will be interpreted to be an effort to control another independent agent and there will be no love in it. And it will be usury and it will be to the disadvantage of both you and the one this misinterpreted act is being applied to.

Now:

In this world, it is impossible to create. Yet it is possible to make happy. We have said, repeatedly, that the Holy Spirit would not DEPRIVE you of your special relationships, but would TRANSFORM them.

Why wouldn't the Holy Spirit deprive you of your special relationships? Because any relationship that you're in, the Son or Daughter of God that you Are no matter what you believe you are, is a holy relationship—one that you need not be deprived of. You don't need to be deprived of the relationship, you need to be deprived of the misinterpretation of the relationship. And that's why the Holy Spirit would not deprive you of your special relationships (which is a simple misinterpretation of a holy one) but would transform them, uncover to you, reveal to you the holy relationship that it really is beyond the very specific finite mean-spirited definitions you have applied to it because of the mean-spirited purpose you had in mind for engaging in that act, which would be to your benefit and not to the others. You see?

And so the more of what God is Being there in this act of the holy Son or Daughter of God, will still occur but you won't be conscious of it. But it will be there for the Holy Spirit to illuminate to you. And when you finally stop attempting to willfully be in charge, you will find yourself fully experiencing the acts of Creation that the holy Son or Daughter of God that you Are has been engaged in all the while that you thought you were some piss-ant little mortal becoming something and protecting himself or herself in the process. You see?

Now I'm going to read it again:

We have said, repeatedly, that the Holy Spirit would not DEPRIVE you of your special relationships, but would TRANSFORM them. And by that all that is meant is that He will restore to them the function given them by God.

The holy Son or Daughter of God, in a demented sort of way, moves and acts and does things that aren't really being done. He protects himself so that a vulnerability that doesn't exist won't be experienced by him because of how well he's protected himself. You see, the fact is that in that action nothing is being done, because there's no protection that's needed and it's an act of an insane mind seeing danger where there is none at all.

Those who are not caught in the dream, observing the Son or Daughter of God behaving in this self-protective way, can see that the problem that that one is trying to solve by defense doesn't exist. And that the effort that is being put forth by that holy Son or Daughter of God is meaningless because there's no call for it. And they know that the time will come when that Son or Daughter of God will abandon his commitment to his independence and will come into the full awareness of what's really been happening—the Kingdom of Heaven, the Son or Daughter of God being uninterruptedly the Son or Daughter of God, not having lost his or her Birthright. It's that simple.

The function you have given them is clearly NOT to make happy. But the holy relationship shares God's purpose, rather than aiming to make a substitute for it.

Key thing . . .

. . . the holy relationship shares God's purpose, rather than aiming to make a substitute for it.

The special relationship aims to make a substitute for God's purpose, because God has been put on the back shelf—out of sight, out of mind. And so the substitute for God's purpose is a purpose in opposition to God as well as being one that obscures God and distracts you from remembering that there's another way to look at this . . . with God . . . and in possession of your full Birthright.

Every special relationship which YOU have made is a substitute for God's Will, and glorifies yours instead of His because of the delusion that they are DIFFERENT.

You see? You think that God has given you a capacity to be His Offspring independent of God. And that therefore, that it's your task and your duty and your God given ability to express your will without ever coordinating or cooperating with the Father, without ever bothering to find out whether there is something beyond your imagination for you to fit in with—something infinitely stable, something infinitely secure—that it's your Birthright to function within the structure of truth and love, the structure of divine Principle. You see?

And so you think that you have a will different from the Father's. And you think that it's supposed to be different from the Father's. And so you plow forward in the attempt to actualize that. And all relationships that arise within that context are special relationships—the thing that we're all learning to let go of, to stop valuing, to stop reenergizing.

You have made very real relationships even in this world which you do not recognize, simply because you have raised their substitutes to such predominance that, when truth calls to you, as it does constantly, you answer with a substitute.

Okay, let's go back:

You have made very real relationships . . .

. . . that means divinely actual. As a holy Son or Daughter of God you have been relating with other holy Sons or Daughters of God no matter what the shadow figures are that have been superimposed upon them by you . . . and upon you by you . . . and upon you by them . . . and upon them by them. You see?

You just can't get away from the fact that you are the holy Sons or Daughters of God right now. And no matter how you obscure that through the use of shadow figures, it doesn't change anything. So . . .

You have made very real relationships even in this world which you do not recognize, . .

. . . you don't recognize because you are superimposing shadow figures—your own peculiar unique definitions, and the purposes you have assigned to everything, all relative to your need for self-protection. So . . .

You have made very real relationships even in this world which you do not recognize, simply because you have raised their substitutes . . .

. . . the shadow images—your meanings, your definition, your concepts . . .

... to such predominance that, when truth calls to you, . .

... in other words, the divine actuality of all of these relationships . . .

... as it does constantly, you answer with a substitute.

"You, who are what I say you are." Here is the answer, here is the appropriate response. "My response is to who I say you are, and I will not let you off the hook, you are who I say you are until you teach me different. And I will only allow you to teach me something different as long as it still serves me and my safety—my self-protection." You see?

Can I make it any clearer than this? Right here in this room are holy Sons and Daughters of God, nothing more and nothing less. And everyone who is watching at this moment, or everyone who is listening at this moment are holy Sons or Daughters of God. All of us holy Sons and Daughters of God are in relationship with each other right now, right in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven, having this insane distraction of peculiar and unique definitions that you have all agreed to apply to everything you're experiencing which obscures the Kingdom of Heaven and the holy Sons and Daughters of God that you Are.

Why is this important? Because the fact that you are presently the Sons and Daughters of God means, you do not have to work toward becoming Them. You do not have to go through a process of self-improvement. You do not have to go through a process of training your mind so that it becomes worthy of discerning the truth.

All it requires is a willingness to consider, "Maybe this is true. Maybe it's worth while for me to abandon all of the definitions I've been applying to everything and genuinely expressing curiosity, 'Father, what is the truth here? Father, what is the more of what you are being right here? Father, help me to see the Sons and Daughters of God that are all around me. And help me know that I (the one who is seeing Them) is also a Son or Daughter of God. Help me abandon some contentious process of getting from one world to the other. Let me just be curious. Help me, I'm tired of suffering. I'm tired to see what obviously isn't the Kingdom of Heaven. I'm tired of being confronted with other people's poor estimates of me. And I'm almost tired of impressing others with my poor estimate of them. I'm almost tired of it . . . it's just that it still seems to have some value. Help me go ahead and let go.'"

Every special relationship which you have ever undertaken has, as its fundamental purpose, the aim of occupying your minds so completely that you will not HEAR the call of truth.

In other words, you will not experience even a glimmer, a hint of the divinity of the one you're in relationship with. Their divinity won't even creep through any weak chinks in the shadow figure you're imposing upon them and holding them to in your mind, and absolutely sure of, yourself.

In a sense, the special relationship was the ego's answer to the creation of the Holy Spirit, Who was God's answer to the separation.

When you said, "But, Father, I'd rather do it myself . . . but, Father, I'd rather see it myself . . . but, Father, I'd rather define what everything is," . . . and you made commitment to it—you joined another Son or Daughter of God in mutual agreement to abandon your remembrance of your inseparability from God—you caused that which you divinely Are to become unavailable to you consciously. And so it was held in trust and called the Holy Spirit. It's that simple.

It was there . . . not allowed to disappear . . . not allowed to be lost by God, so that you would have the means of experiencing healing, so that you would not be lost forever, but actually forever securely tethered to an inevitable re-Awakening. It's that simple. That was God's answer to the separation.

Now the ego's answer to the creation of the Holy Spirit was to create a special relationship—a relationship in which you could forever spend your time and energy securing yourself as an independent agent and securing it without terminal threat, we'll put it that way.

In other words, the ego's answer to the creation of the Holy Spirit, which was the Father's answer to the separation, was to cause you to become so preoccupied with self and self-protection and self-development that you couldn't possibly have enough attention left over to hear the Holy Spirit—which is the Father's answer to the separation.

So special relationships have as their goal your blindness to your salvation, your blindness to coming back into your right Mind. And this is why it is so important to understand the nature of special relationships, so you can see how unattractive they are and how destructive they are, so that you find yourself having justification for practicing the holy instant and reuniting with your Source, by reaching out to It and abandoning your supposed capacity to function autonomously successfully.

In a sense, the special relationship was the ego's answer to the creation of the Holy Spirit, Who was God's answer to the separation. For although the ego did not understand what had been created, . . .

. . . meaning the Holy Spirit . . .

... it WAS aware of threat.

The whole defense system which the ego evolved to protect the separation from the Holy Spirit was in response to the gift with which God blessed it, and by His blessing enabled it to be healed.

Again:

The whole defense system . . .

. . . the whole ball of wax of special relationships.

The whole defense system which the ego evolved to protect the separation from the Holy Spirit was in response to the gift with which God blessed it, . .

. . . God blessed the separation, by providing the Holy Spirit as the forever anchor to your sanity, which means that you will inevitably come back into your full right Mind . . .

... and by His blessing . . .

. . . by God's blessing . . .

... enabled it to be healed.

Enabled the separation to be healed. You see?

No matter how enamored you are with special relationships, no matter how devoted you are to being utterly clear in your mind as an orphan, and no matter how skilled you become at manipulating people for your safety, all of which blinds you to your healing of the separation, God's gift stands immovable. And this means that you in your ignorance stand in the midst of an infinite eternal intent for you to come back into your right Mind. Now that's incredible love. That is an incredible intent to make happy.

And what is required of you is to abandon your self-protection and your defense and replace it with the intent to make happy in every relationship you experience everyday. And you know what? It's going to take commitment to do it. And it's going to take actually doing it. And that's the task. That's the purpose that stands in front of you to be actualized.

This blessing holds, . .

. . . the gift of the Holy Spirit, which the Father made.

This blessing holds, within ITSELF, the truth about everything. And the truth is that the Holy Spirit is in close relationship with you . . .

. . . after all it's nothing more than your right Mind . . .

. . . because, in Him, is your relationship with God restored to you. The relationship with Him has NEVER been broken, because the Holy Spirit has not been separate from anyone since the separation. And through Him have all your holy relationships been carefully preserved, to serve God's purpose for you.

The Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind—has held every act that you as the Son or Daughter of God have engaged in that is an expression of your divine purpose, has held it inviolably unchanged from its Real nature. And all of it awaits your rediscovery as you decided to stop claiming to be tiny, mortal, on your way to the grave.

We are at a threshold here—a threshold which will not necessitate our continuing to study through to the end of the book. I assure you that there's no necessity of delay or process. But you do need to arrive at a point where you're willing to consider that everything you're experiencing at the moment is delusional. Why? Because if you're honest, you will tell me that it is not making you happy. You are not made happy in your relationships. And you are not making happy in your relationships. And you know that isn't your primary goal except with a few—favored few.

Otherwise, you're careful, you're on the defense, you're making sure no one gyps you out of anything and you are sure that if you're not on guard you will be taken advantage of. That picture you're entertaining says you do not see yourself in a world whose aim it is to make you happy. And you can see that as long as you're entertaining these shadow images about your world, you're not about to become undefendedly willing to make happy your world.

So you're in a "catch 22" or you're not. Maybe you're not. Maybe all you have to do is practice the two-step. Maybe all you have to do is to shut up the mind that you're using to create shadow images and in the silence inquire of your Father, "What is the truth? What is the truth here? Help me to learn how to make happy, not as a means of self-protection, but as a sheer expression of love. Help me participate in being the leaven that leavens the whole lump, that transforms the world not by force or control but by neglecting to hold all of it or any part of it within the confines of a special relationship."

I love you all. And this is a wonderful point of growth. It's a wonderful threshold to be at the edge of. I encourage you not to be afraid of it. I encourage you to embrace it. And I encourage you to abandon yourself to it.

Okay.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 4th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

You can't deny the fact that as we've been going along, things have been becoming simpler and simpler. We could say things are becoming more black and white—less fuzzy.

This should be relieving. This should be joy-producing. But although there is some of that experienced, a lot of the experience is distress, because at the bottom line, it requires abandoning things that you have greatly valued. It requires letting go of things you feel have provided you with security. But at the bottom line, the things you are being required to let go of are illusions of security, illusions of importance, illusions of integrity, illusions of success.

Now I have said endlessly, that all of you are sitting in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven, right here, right now, with your eyes all squinched up saying, "I cannot see the perfection." You're sitting in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven and you're not experiencing It as what It is.

Now, I've also been emphasizing, and the Course has been elucidating the fact that every single one of you right now are Sons and Daughters of God, nothing more, nothing less. But you're not experiencing that either.

Now, why aren't you experiencing it?

You're not experiencing it because you're programmed not to experience it, you are conditioned not to experience it.

Well, just try walking around all day and whoever you meet, you say “I am the Son of God, you are the Son of God, I am the Daughter of God, you are the Daughter of God.” See what kind of response you get. That response of “you crazy weirdo” conditions you to not see and not believe and not pursue a clearer understanding of the fact that you are the Son of God or the Daughter of God.

Now, while you are all obedient to the limits you all impose upon each other, and you do it for the sake of peace . . . what? . . . you’re miserable . . . you get sick . . . you get hurt . . . you have failures . . . you suffer. You have a generally miserable experience that you find ways to tolerate. You find ways to overlook the fact that you’re not happy.

Now, I can hear someone saying, “Oh, he’s on his pessimistic bent again, do I have to listen to this?”

Well you see, that’s another one of the conditionings. You see? I must tell you that you have been conditioned not to see the Kingdom of Heaven. You have been conditioned not to experience yourself as the Son or Daughter of God. As—I’m going to say this carefully—Royalty, if you will, as that which is ultimately meaningful, if you will.

Because if you don’t get it, if something in you doesn’t actually say, “Whoa, maybe I had better look at this again! Maybe there is a different way of looking at this. Maybe I am conditioned to not see something that is right in the front of my face. And on top of that, as part of the conditioning, maybe there is a security lock, if you will, that becomes especially potent in shutting down my curiosity if I decide to look beyond my present sense of things—if I choose to actually reach beyond my present measuring sticks. You see?”

The ego—you pretending to be an independent agent, separate and apart from a divine Source or a source other than a physical source . . .

Paul: I’m sorry, this is me, Paul, I lost it.

Raj: No, continuing . . . you are conditioned to be obedient to the squelches, to the inhibitions that are encoded in your mutual agreements. And if I do not tell you that you are thus conditioned, you will find no occasion spontaneously on your own to challenge those inhibitions.

And so I must absolutely be straight with you and apparently be “negative” or cast doubt on the integrity of your life. I MUST! Or you will not. And if you will not, you will not open the door for a breakthrough, for “ah-ha’s” to happen, for realization to occur that comes from a Source outside of ~~from~~ the mutual agreements that you and all the orphans have come to.

Now I said things are becoming simpler. They are. It's becoming clearer and clearer that you've got to make a choice between the orphan mindset and your divine Mind—your divine mindset. And if you don't make a choice and if you don't reach, you will seem to stay bound.

However, I must also be straight with you and point out to you that where you may have for all of this lifetime and I'm going to say for many lifetimes, whereas you may have been able for a great period of time to be ignorant by virtue of conditioning and be relatively comfortable, things are changing and it is not going to continue to be comfortable.

Many of you have had the experience of finding that if you get out of line, you get called on the carpet much faster. You simply are not able to be off track as long as you used to be able to. And a few of you become self-righteously angry: "It's not fair! Look at so-in-so, they've been off-track for quite awhile, just like I used to be able to be . . . they're not getting caught up short." You see? You see how you are conditioned to not embrace intelligence but rather ignorance and reconfirm it.

Now, it isn't that you are doing this, it is that conditionings have been placed in the mix, like hypnosis.

Now, I'm here to share the good news: You are deluded and it's not your Birthright and you are not bound to being deluded. But you're not going to [snaps fingers] have the lights go on, and you're not going to find the delight of Being and you're not going to find the peace of Being as long as you continue to go down the paths of habitual responses because it's always been done that way and because it's the way that works.

Now part of the problem regarding being honest enough to look at the situation so that it might be discredited . . .

Paul: Just a moment, I lost it again . . .

Raj: . . . is, that you must look at what you have believed is a reasonable life with success and blessings and many good things and realize that—and you're not going to like this—and realize that it isn't true, that you are glossing over misery, that you are glossing over endless sin, disease and death, lifetime after lifetime, after lifetime or, let's say, in this lifetime watching that pattern—birth, life, death, happen over and over with everyone.

Now you have to be willing to look at this and say, "NO!" You must be willing to look at this and say, "This isn't successful life! This isn't happy life!" You must dare to be willing to be honest enough to say that the things that are happening do not make you happy. And that the only way you're able to find any degree of happiness is by ignoring what you're seeing, by finding a way to say, "that's life," which means, "that's normal, that's okay." IT'S NOT!

But of course, if you don't know that you're in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven, and that you're the Son or Daughter of God—an eternal God whose offspring are eternal and who cannot possibly embody sin, sickness or death—you won't challenge it and you won't put forth the degree of energy it takes to move through your conditioning, to participate in the holy instant, to challenge what you're seeing and then shut up and ask to know what is the actual truth here. As I keep saying, "What is the more of what God is Being right here than what I'm seeing?"

But you see, the key is you've got to become honest enough and black and white enough to look and say, "Wait a minute . . . this life, this lifestyle, the way business is conducted, the way politics is practiced, the way international alliances and disagreements occur . . . all of this is crap! It's not good, it's not divine, it's not orderly, it's not happy.

If you don't do that, change will not occur. If you don't do that—if you're not honest enough with yourself—you'll continue fooling yourself into thinking, "Wow you know, things are so much better than they were for the caveman." Or "things are so much better than they were for my recent ancestors, even my great grandmother or great-great grandfather . . . wow, they didn't have nearly the benefits and the comforts, etc., that we have today."

Oh wait a minute, they had sin, sickness and death, didn't they—suffering, over and over . . . heartache, jealousy, rage, fear, all consuming mental disease, not everyone, but those who needed to be hospitalized and those not quite so bad.

But the point is this: Dare to be clear enough to recognize what you've been calling tolerable, and even somewhat pleasant, does not embody a God, does not embody infinite intelligence, does not embody what you must have to be in order to exist at all, because there is a First Cause that is flawless.

I've said it before, if the First Cause was not flawless, if there was the slightest flaw present, because of the infiniteness of God, that tiny flaw would be totally destructive and therefore, God would cease to exist and there would be no one listening to me and there would be no one for me to talk to.

Simple: Very black and white.

What does this mean? At the bottom line, what are the practical aspects of it? And what is it that the Course is illuminating? Well, it's illuminating that you are having distorted perceptions of something flawless—the Kingdom of Heaven. And you think you are something that can have distorted perceptions when you're actually the Offspring of a perfect First Cause incapable of Being the Cause of anything less than perfect. That's what. And that means that you have a choice that you didn't know you had.

You have the choice to choose for the Real even though you don't know what It is yet. You have the choice because now you're being told there is "a Real" to embrace—to experience. And that's because there is a Brotherhood beyond but including all of you who are not caught in the same dream you are, who are not fascinated by very peculiar creative imaginative concepts of life and the living of it and how to be successful, who, because you are at a point of listening and hearing now, can find me and others telling you the simple truth so that you now know you can change your mind.

But you're going to have to change your mind. You're going to have to face right into the ugliness that you've been covering over, and call it ugly because it is. And then say, "Because what's really going on here that is so unpleasant, aside from my glossing it over . . . because what is going on here is so unpleasant, and that is not congruent with the actuality of an infinite First Cause—perfect—then I'm going to look right there where it is, I'm going to look right at this conditioning that blocks me from experiencing the truth, and I'm going to not resort to all the mutually agreed upon definitions that we orphans have made, but I'm going to turn to the Father I never knew, and I'm going to ask of Him, 'What's the truth here?' And I'm going to persist until I have the answer because settling for a glossed-over tolerance of misery no longer seems productive or valuable to me. And so I'm going to put forth the effort, I'm going to put forth the attention that it takes to not give up once again and just settle into the status quo because it works, it's reasonable, etc."

Now going into the book, it says:

The ego is hyperalert to threat, . .

. . . now this word was changed. Hyperalert was changed to "alert." The ego is alert to threat. Well, I beg your pardon, it is alert to threat but it's "hyperalert to threat" and the word, "hyperalert" was appropriate.

The ego . . .

. . . the independent authoritative sense of self that you have created about yourself and around which you have built a life and a group who agrees with you as to your value and who works with you and strokes your back because you stroke their back, it's very alert. It's . . .

... hyperalert to threat, . .

. . . because its created all of these agreements and its created the structure out of nothing! And everybody is agreeing that nothing is something. And everyone has given great definition to the nothingness that is now treated as something. Hey, the more structures you build and the structures upon structures—the beliefs built upon beliefs—become burdensome because there's no way to really remember how to keep it all together.

So there's great stress. Threat is ever-present—the possibility that you will not be able to successfully maintain the structure is ever-present.

So:

The ego is hyperalert to threat, and the part of your mind into which the ego was accepted . . .

. . . listen to that:

... the part of your mind into which the ego was accepted . . .

. . . you see, there is a Mind that pre-exists the ego. It's the divine Mind that you Are. It's the holy Son or Daughter of God that you Are—your true conscious awareness. It was there before you said, "Father I'd rather do it my way," and you got a divorce and you created out of imagination a self of your own making and the making of others who chose to agree with you and support that illusion if you would support theirs.

So:

The ego is hyperalert to threat, and the part of your mind into which the ego was accepted is very anxious to preserve its reason, as it sees it.

It's reason for being, it's reason for what it does, etc.

It does not realize that it is totally insane. And you must realize just what this means, if YOU would be restored to sanity.

Do you see?

... you must realize just what this means, . . .

. . . you must realize that ugly is ugly and not something that you can tolerate and therefore isn't really ugly—ugly.

. . . you must realize just what this means, if YOU would be restored to sanity. The insane protect their thought systems,

All of the orphans in the orphanage protect their thought systems. But they do this insanely.

And ALL their defenses are as insane as what they are supposed to protect.

Oh, you have a wonderful definition of yourself that you've created and that others have helped you create. And everybody knows who you are—you do, everyone else does, and of course it's not you. It's what all of you have agreed you are for the purposes of successfully being not the Son or Daughter of God. That's insane, isn't it?

All the mutually agreed upon definitions have as their purpose: to protect and maintain the ongoing ignorance of your divinity, by preoccupying you with your independent status and its improvement with the promise that you can become a presence of excellence without a Source. Well you see, that's the ugliness, that's the illusion, that's what isn't Real, that's what needs to be looked at and seen as not at all what you've finessed it into being for you.

You've got to see it or you will not have justification for letting go of it and genuinely being receptive to what you can now maybe believe will be a truer perception of what you Are, and who you Are, and where you are.

The separation has NOTHING in it, . .

. . . you see? It doesn't have mutual agreements even. There are no orphanages. And there is no orphan mindset. You can imagine all these things, but they don't become actual. And here's part of the ugliness: The promise is, that they will become actual and it's therefore, worthwhile for you to persist and see all of this as tolerable because there's a grand design to it that has as its goal your successful emergence as a presence of intelligence on your own.

It's a lie! And because it's a lie and because the effect of the lie is to keep you unconscious of who you Are, it is destructive and malicious, mean spirited, and unworthy of you.

You've got to begin to feel that. Because if you don't, you won't bring sufficient attention to the illusion that would keep you still, keep you quiet, keep you from climbing out of the crab barrel, and we'll say, looking at in the face and moving out of the crab barrel nevertheless.

At the bottom line, that's going to mean that you are practicing a devotion to the Son of God that you Are, or the Daughter of God that you Are by persisting in holding to it, instead of yielding back into the common mutual agreement that although life is difficult it's not that bad and there's a good reason for whatever negativity is there . . . and therefore, stop your complaining.

You see? And I'm saying, COMPLAIN! I'm saying OBJECT! Don't object at the beginning of a war and don't look for who you can blame. But object to the use of your mind—that you're putting your mind to when you accept the status quo and you avoid bringing the effort necessary to challenge the conditioning that tells you to shut up and to sit still and be quiet and don't rock the boat—and persist in moving through it.

Don't take the bluff. Ignore the bluff. Because it's coming from a self that doesn't exist. It's coming from mutual agreements that all define this process and have developed techniques for keeping you sane—meaning in your ignorance.

But there's no orphan there. And there's no generated entity who can object to your objection. It's that simple!

So you could say I'm encouraging everyone to become a "conscientious objector." But do it with devotion. Do it with persistence. Ask to know what the truth is here instead of the conditioning that would bind you. What is the truth here that constitutes the release of that bondage and the moving through into the divine clarity that it's your Birthright to be experiencing?

The separation has NOTHING in it, . . .

. . . in other words, independent existence has nothing in it. It's not Real. There is no such thing. And no matter how much you imagine it, there's still nothing in it. God didn't make it. It is not an Idea in the divine Mind of God. And therefore, there is no idea, no matter how imaginatively you created an idea of an Idea.

So:

The separation has NOTHING in it, no part, no "reason," and no attribute that is NOT insane. And its "protection" is part of it, as insane as the whole.

So you feel threat when you're willing to challenge the status-quo, when you're willing to embrace the possibility that you are the Son or Daughter of God and that if you abandon your independent mental practices and ask of God and yield to Him, you will get answers. You will get the clarity of His Mind that is the clarity of your Mind because that's the way God created . . . that's the way God created.

Although a false idea was imagined and a way to protect it was imagined as well, none of it is there. There is nothing to it. It's an idea of bullying. That's all—no bully around at all. Oh, there's an idea about bullying. And there's an idea about how bullying works and there are lots of ideas about the disastrous effects of bullying. That of course, is part of the protection, because if it can make you afraid of being bullied, then you will not challenge the idea of bullying that's false in the first place . . . amazingly logical and reasonable, but utterly untrue, utterly unreal.

The special relationship, which is its chief defense, MUST therefore be insane.

Again, what is the special relationship? It's a relationship you're in with someone or something and God is nowhere to be found. You don't think that God really has anything to do with the relationship, unless you want to believe that after the "big bang" and the physical creation of a physical universe that had nothing to do with God, happened one day to be seen by God as God moved through the ethers and He adopted this independent physical universe and decided to take care of it and make the wretched existence of those living in this purely physical universe more comfortable—to bless them so that they weren't totally miserable.

Nope, God hasn't adopted something that isn't His Creation. God is taking care of and constantly Being the ongoing or ever-present newness of His Creation, which you are misunderstanding and misinterpreting and which, as we've said, constitutes an ignorant experience that has safe-guards built in, to see to it that you will never lose your ignorance, you will remain bound by it permanently.

Now remember, the safe-guards are protecting something that doesn't exist. And the safe-guards themselves are just so much hot air. They're nothing either. You see?

I am trying to paint a picture here that allows you to find an easy way to abandon your devotion to the way things seem to be and so that you might dare to look clearly enough at everything to see that the human condition of sin, disease, death, suffering, etc., hasn't changed. Things aren't better.

So maybe diphtheria isn't present, maybe the black plague doesn't cause great suffering on the globe. But hey, today cancer does. Today this, that or the other thing disrupts your peace and you staunchly step up to the plate and meet the challenge and find a way to exist in a miserable experience, with hope and ever-present confidence that what? . . . this too shall pass away.

Well, my dear . . . my dears . . . my dear friends, until what we're talking about occurs you will also pass away and you will continue to seem to be subject to sin, disease and death and you will be subject to fear. And it's time to stop. And there's a way to stop. It's the practice of the holy instant. It's the abandonment of special relationships.

You have but little difficulty now in realizing that the thought system which the special relationship protects is but a system of delusions.

What thought system does the special relationship protect? The thought system of an independent, authoritative presence built out of its own supposedly innate capacity to create itself and build itself up without any foundation.

The special relationship protects the orphan mindset. The special relationship keeps the orphanages in existence. The special relationship therefore, constitutes what has been a most effective means of blinding you to your Birthright and causing you to live in misery with nothing to challenge it.

Now, this would be depressing for me to share if there was no way to challenge it, if there was no way to move beyond it. We've started out by showing that there is a way to move beyond it. Unfortunately, coming at it from that direction doesn't put a fire under your ass. It doesn't motivate you to bring to bear on the situation the degree of attention and the persistence of attention that it takes to challenge what keeps you bound—whatever the beliefs are that you entertain that justify not having an instantaneous healing of cancer or whatever problem you might be having or whatever beliefs are inhibiting you from, well, just making stupid mistakes because there's not the clarity that it's your Birthright to have available to you.

Because you've adopted a set of beliefs, a set of behavioral reverences that you abide by stupidly, because you simply haven't bothered to bring that ignorance into the light by saying, "I'm not going to continue to reinforce that automatically. I'm suspending my automatic continuance of this belief, this habit, and I'm going to ask the Holy Spirit"—that which is nothing more than my right Mind—"what is the truth here . . . what's the truth beyond this limitation, this inhibition that I'm reinforcing? What am I inhibiting myself from seeing, or what is the belief that I am energizing, keeping me from seeing and experiencing?" And not abandoning that quest, that question, until the clarity comes, when you will find yourself on the other side of that which had inhibited you and when you will no longer be governed by that conditioning.

Again, I started out tonight by saying, 'You're in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven and you are the Sons and Daughters of God right now, but you're not experiencing it.' Why not? Because you are conditioned not to experience it.

Now, it should be clearer to you than before we began, that whatever inhibits you from seeing the clarity that it's your Birthright to be, to have available to you, that not having it available to you is not justifiable any more. It is not something that you can tolerate. It's not something you are going to put up with. It's not something you're going to flow with because, "It's refining my soul. It's having some benefit for me." Bullshit!

Get real! Getting real about illusion causes you to become disillusioned—free of illusion. And I promise you, although you may not yet believe it, you are the Sons and Daughters of God. And you have a Birthright available to you that is inseparable from you, has not been taken away from you, has not been withheld from you by the Father because you decided to have this little side-trip of imaginative independence.

And there's no reason for you not to reach for it now, with persistence and with attention backed by commitment. It will be your joy to experience the result. It's the whole point of the holy instant to bring you into that place where God's laws prevail. And your divinity is no longer held in trust while you dally with the ego. It is reinstated, because you haven't blocked it as you, as your conscious experience of being and as your clear identity as the Son or Daughter of God.

That's a lot of wonderful ground shaking, ground breaking good news.

I look forward to being with you next week. And if the doing of some of what I've discussed isn't all fun . . . that's okay. You have been putting up with lifetimes of "not fun" that got you nowhere. Any expenditure you put forth in the direction I'm speaking of, although it may not all be fun, will uncover your divinity to you and return your sanity to you.

If you're not afraid to put effort forth in other directions and you can justify it and it won't help you Wake up, then transfer that willingness to something that will. It's that simple.

And I stand with you and behind you in support in every bit of attention you bring to this. So does your Guide and so does the Holy Spirit. That is the Holy Spirit's job!

Okay.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 12th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

You know, before every study group, before any occasion where Paul and I sit together like this, during the quiet time, Paul says a prayer which I have shared with you before and I'm not going to share the whole thing now. But the very last part of it says, “. . . and may Thy Word enrich the affections of all mankind and govern them.”

Now, you might question whether I'm abiding by that or fulfilling that prayer, when I speak the way I spoke last week . . . when I speak the way I speak on many occasions where it is direct and terse and honest and motivating. Because after all, last week I was saying if you take a clear look at your life without glossing it over with positive thinking, you will find that your life isn't happy. And I encouraged you to be very honest with yourselves about that, to be very honest about the fact that after, let's say, generations of people studying my words, the Bible, other holy books, there is still sin, sickness and death . . . right?

It would seem that no matter how much positive thinking is used, no matter how much my words are used and brought to life in your lives, except for the occasional miracle—healing, correction—there's still sin, sickness and death occurring. They still seem to be the “law” of being, don't they? . . . I mean, everyone is governed by them. You just can't escape sin, sickness and death.

Well now, why would it be important to give your attention—your sincere, honest attention—to that kind of thing? How on earth could that constitute your affections being enriched by my word—by God's Word, by the Holy Spirit's Word . . . "and may Thy Word enrich the affections of all mankind and govern them."

Now I just finished saying that sin, sickness and death seemed to be the bottom line laws that govern man, didn't I? Well, they certainly aren't enriching the affections are they?

But you know what? Sin, sickness and death happen in a context. They happen in an arena. But I'm going to say they happen in a mind-set. They happen in a context of independence, a context of independence hoped for, independence worked for, and independence which you have been falsely promised you can achieve.

In other words, sin sickness and death seem to occur and seem to govern you when you have adopted an independent stance in which there is a promise your being able to become, like Pinocchio, a real boy . . . a successful actually independent entity.

I'm going to ask you, with all of what we have read since the beginning, and with all of the discussion that we've had about special relationships, how many of you, off the top of your head, would identify a special relationship as a defense?

How many of you, if I had said, "What is a special relationship?" would have had as the top-most answer in your mind, a defense? It is. What is it a defense against? It's a defense against a conscious awareness of God. And it is a defense against a conscious experience of your Birthright and your existence as the direct expression of God. It's a defense against your having clear, honest, realistic, self-appreciation, self-assessment and true self-identification.

Being a defense against that, it causes you to experience amnesia and not remember who you Are and not know who you Are and leaves you in the unenviable position of having to create a sense of identity out of nothing. The only thing is, that this act of creating a sense of self-identity out of nothing was a result of a conscious act that at some point, you took. It was an initial act of separation from God, from your Source and therefore from your conscious connection with your Source and we've talked about this endlessly.

How did you do it? How did you get this divorce—this separation from God?

Well, you didn't just do it by saying "Father, I'd rather see it my way. Father, I would rather do it my way. Father, I would rather determine what this is and what that is." That wasn't the only thing you did. You did that, but you did it with someone else. In so many words, you took the hand of another Son or Daughter of God and you, together, made a vow to see things your way through the establishment of mutual agreements.

Now keep that in mind. Because as we read in the book, it says:

You have but little difficulty now in realizing that the thought system which the special relationship protects . . .

. . . there it is, protects, defends against. Listen: Defends.

You have but little difficulty now in realizing that the thought system which the special relationship protects is but a system of delusions. You recognize, at least in general terms, that the ego is insane.

We've talked about it . . . and talked about it . . . and talked about it. And intellectually, you're being able to grasp and see that the ego is insane—that your ego is insane. You're able to look at that with some courage because we have been talking about how to be released from it so that looking at it doesn't convict you but allows you to see more clearly what you don't want to experience and which therefore, justifies your doing what it takes to abandon it—to release yourself from it.

So . . .

You recognize, at least in general terms, that the ego is insane. Yet the special relationship still seems to you somehow to be "different."

In other words, not insane.

. . . the special relationship still seems to you somehow to be "different." Yet we have looked at it far closer . . .

. . . especially in the last few weeks . . .

. . . we have looked at it far closer than at many other aspects the ego's thought system which you have been more willing to let go. While this one remains, you will NOT let the others go. For this one is NOT different. Retain this one, and you HAVE retained the whole.

Now, you all really need this special relationship to be different. Why? Because it—you—taking the hand of another Son or Daughter of God and vowing together to see everything the way you choose to see it, to define it the way you choose to define it, to be the authorizer of definitions, meanings, mutual agreements, literally as to how the earth turns, how the world goes around, how society functions. I mean, it's all inclusive isn't it, all starting from this holding of hands and taking a vow together to ignore your Father, to ignore the meanings invoked, we'll say, in the act of Creation and being in every way independent. That's what makes it different.

You may have special relationships with things . . . with your artwork . . . with trees . . . with land . . . with animal husbandry . . . with any number of things you may have special relationships.

And again: What is a special relationship?

A special relationship is a relationship you have with anything where God is absent, where you have the relationship without ever having the faintest inkling of awareness that there's something holy about this that you're having a relationship with.

And what's holy about it is its Source. And its Source means that it—the thing you're having a relationship with—is divine, is flawless, is perfect, is imbued with Love. And part of its function is to embrace you and everything else with the Love that it is. And I could go on and on and we've done this before.

The point is, that a special relationship with something is one in which none of that is experienced by you and there's not even the faintest curiosity about what might be there more than the definitions you have given it or those with whom you have mutual agreements have given them. You see?

Now, that kind of a special relationship with things is different from special relationships you have with individuals. Why? Because things don't agree back with you, they don't join in a mutual agreement as to your misunderstanding and misinterpretation of what it is. You see? So these things can't reinforce your confidence in your imaginations.

That's what makes special relationships with other individuals special. Because you can both nurture and feed each others' delusions. And you can both punish each other if you neglect to feed those delusions.

So you can seem to experience a great amount of control—authority. But more than anything else, the thing that makes a special relationship special, is that the special relationship absolutely keeps you unconscious of God, absolutely keeps you unconscious of your holiness, absolutely keeps you from experiencing your omnipotence—and I mean that in the sense of being inviolable, unchangeable from what God has created you As, unchangeable and therefore ever safe, therefore, ever without the experience of fear or anxiety, concern. In other words, in a state of perfect peace out of which arises spontaneously, infinite joy.

Yet it is these very aspects of special relationship that make it so unholy, make it so unhealthy. And so this thing that seems very special to you and very important to you, deludes you in the most malicious of ways. And so you cannot afford to look at it with any kind of friendliness or tolerance else you will remain bound to it, bound by it and unconscious of who you Are, therefore, insane.

Now I spent quite a bit of time last week being very strict in focusing your attention on the fact that things aren't getting any better!

But you say, "They're going to get better. After all, look at all the progress that has been made here and there . . . it's going to get better."

Oh, yes, I know . . . that's the promise and that's the lie. Now, take a look at it.

The defense that a special relationship is, is a defense against your Knowing who you Are. And it's not just a defense against knowing who you Are, it is a defense which gives you a different definition than what you Are . . . dangerous . . . important for you not to be deluded by . . . important for you to become free of.

Now . . .

. . . the special relationship still seems to you somehow to be "different."

It's not. I've made it very clear that it isn't. You see, the promise that things will get better keep you looking at the fact that things haven't gotten better over great periods of time. They say, "Don't pay any attention to the facts, don't pay any attention to the obvious, pay attention to the fact that you have a capacity—somewhere in you, you have a capacity to think and be creatively and create new circumstances." And so, these promises, these agreements that you have between each other keep you emboldened to persist in doing what you can't do. And it keeps you from looking at the effects—the long standing effects of special relationships—which are that sin, sickness and death still occur . . . occur . . . occur . . . over and over, changelessly. You see?

Because you won't look at the facts! You won't look at the positive thinking. You want to look at the creativity that you have. You want to look at the lie.

Now mind you, that which says you are an entity who can through its own efforts and the agreements and support of others, become real in your own right. That's a lie . . . that's a lie.

But do you know what defends that lie by causing you to not look clearly at it so that you just simply say, "Well, that's an undesirable thing which, through the use of creative thinking and logic, we can work our way out of." You see?

So a lie covers up a lie. That's the nature of a special relationship.

. . . the special relationship still seems to you somehow to be "different." Yet we have looked at it far closer than at many other aspects of the ego's thought system which you have been more willing to let go. While this one remains, you will NOT let the others go. For this one is NOT different. Retain this one, and you HAVE retained the whole.

If you retain the special relationship, which constitutes your unconsciousness of who you Are and your unconsciousness of your Source, then any other defenses you have will be held in place too. Hold on to this one and refrain from rejoining with your Father and therefore your sanity.

It will mean that what you thought you let go of, you're still ignorant, you're still unconscious. Nothing has really been let go. You see?

Again, very black and white. Very simple. Don't be afraid to look at it.

It is essential to realize that all defenses DO what they would DEFEND.

If they defend a lie, they defend with a lie. "Oh, you can make yourself into something real. You can lift yourself up by your bootstraps. It's the nature of life to expand itself. It's the nature of life to develop itself." You see?

"After all look, it started out as a single-celled creature. And then multiple cells, and then organisms and then apes and then man . . . oh, look, it's the nature of life to develop . . . to progress . . . to make itself better. That's what life does."

Well you can go on believing that for another ten million years. You won't Wake up, you won't come back into your right Mind. That isn't the way it works. And we're undoing that which traps you in that kind of a thought system, in that kind of a belief system.

It is essential to realize that all defenses DO what they would DEFEND. The underlying basis for their effectiveness is that they OFFER what they defend.

See? They defended the lie, they offer lies to defend the lie. You all do know about that.

What I want for you to believe and what I want for you to understand is that it's not natural for you to understand about lying and using a lie as a defense of a lie. I want you to come into a much more natural experience of what you Are on the basis of your divinity. Because you know what . . . you and I . . . you and all of the Brotherhood that are Awake can't enjoy the camaraderie of our Brotherhood until you finally take the leap, bring forth the effort, the discipline, the stick-to-itiveness and actually behave differently, actually engage in the two-step.

The underlying basis for their effectiveness . . .

. . . the effectiveness of defenses . . .

. . . is that they OFFER what they defend. What they defend is placed IN them for safe-keeping, and as they operate, they BRING it to you. Every defense operates by giving gifts, and the gift is ALWAYS a miniature of the thought system the defense protects, set in a golden frame.

Now mind you, we started out tonight by talking about the fact that a special relationship is a defense . . . right? You look at a special relationship, if you look at it on its own, it's miserable. If you're willing to be honest about looking at it and seeing it for what it actually is, you will recognize that it's not an enjoyable experience, right? It's not a pleasurable experience because it's not the truth about you. It's an artificial and false rendition of you which if you somehow believe it, will make you miserable. . . will make you feel. . . arrrrgh . . . not comfortable in your own skin. And then everything you do will arise out of that feeling of uncomfortableness in your skin and needing somehow to find a way to get control of things so that you can feel comfortable in your skin again.

Except that you'll never feel comfortable in your skin by finding a way to manipulate and control things. You will only find it by abandoning, oh wow, the intent to forget who you Are, ignore who you Are, ignore your Father, ignore the absolute divinity and perfection of your Being and all Being. That's the only way that you will find yourself once again feeling comfortable in your own skin, in your own Being, in your own presence.

This special relationship that you're in with others and with everything, is what is held in the frame. The picture itself is unpleasant. The frame however, is constituted of all of the false promises and false hopes and mutual agreements that you all will support each other and bolster each other up in your misery to help you forget your misery and have some positive attitude and some positive feeling and energy with which to take on each day as each day arises. And so this miserable picture is embraced by lies—other falsehoods. But, what? They involve involvements with others, so you're not lonely . . . even though you're lonely . . . even though you know you're alone.

You have involvements with others. And the involvements feel good and they nurture and they satisfy you and they make you feel comfortable and so you pursue those. And these relationships become more and more complex until this frame around this miserable picture is so full of hope and so full of stories of "success" that you don't have to look at the picture anymore and you don't have to provide an honest assessment of what the picture is saying.

You see? That's how it works.

So you become so-o-o-o-o preoccupied with the wonder of the mutual agreements and structures surrounding this miserable picture, that that begins to be what you determine life from and your happiness from. And you're lost. You see, if you're not even seeing the picture for what it is, if you've forgotten that you're actually miserable, in the state of misery, you're really insane, you're really not grasping things truly.

And there's call for correction. And correction is available. And if I was not here to tell you that correction is available, it would serve no purpose whatsoever to say, "Look at the picture, forget the frame. Look at the picture and see that it's nothing but miserable." And then seeing that clearly and not being distracted by all of the fantasized means of overcoming the miserable, the misery, you can say, "Wait a minute, there must be another way to look at this." And the other way to look at this is not to ignore it and become preoccupied with the frame in all of its incredible complexities. You see?

Another way to look at this is to look at it and feel the misery of the disconnectedness while someone is saying to you, "The only reason you're experiencing misery from this picture is because of a disconnection that actually never occurred. You never actually became disconnected from your Source, from your Father. You therefore, are at this very moment the full Offspring of God, absolutely divine, embodying absolute perfection, which it's your Birthright to be experiencing fully at this very moment.

So ignore the frame, see the misery, acknowledge that the misery can be abandoned by your choosing to join with the Holy Spirit or with the Christ

Consciousness, or with God. And let us in and join with us in mutual endeavor, which you let us determine because we know what brings correction to the miserable picture. It's that simple.

Now many of you have probably read this portion of the Course that talks about the pictures and the frames and have not understood it at all.

I'm going to read now and in light of what I've said, see if it makes sense:

Every defense operates by giving gifts, and the gift is ALWAYS a miniature of the thought system the defense protects, set in a golden frame. The frame is very elaborate, all set with jewels, and deeply carved . . .

. . . no chintzy frame, this frame . . .

. . . deeply carved and polished.

Wasn't pressed out with a mold. No, hand made . . .

. . . deeply carved and polished. Its purpose is to be of value IN ITSELF, . .

. . . this frame . . .

. . . and to divert your attention from what it encloses. But the frame WITHOUT the picture, you cannot have.

You see? And actually the ultimate goal of being a real individual in your own right is for the picture frame to become the thing, no longer with the picture in it of misery that shows a holy Son or Daughter of God or holy Sons and Daughters of God in misery.

But the frame WITHOUT the picture, you cannot have.

You can never get rid of the picture. Why? Because the picture is where the lie is that needs to be corrected. It's not in the frame. It's not in the mutual agreements. You don't need to get better mutual agreements. You don't need to get better social welfare laws. You see?

But the frame WITHOUT the picture, you cannot have.

But listen to this:

Defenses operate to make you think you CAN.

There's the false promise. There's the carrot hanging in front of your nose. You see?

Defenses operate to make you think you CAN.

... that you can do what you can't do. Now:

The special relationship has the most imposing and deceptive frame of all the defenses the ego uses. Its thought system is offered here, surrounded by a frame so heavy and so elaborate that the picture is almost obliterated by its imposing structure. Into the frame ...

... mutual agreements, imaginations ...

... are woven all sorts of fanciful and fragmented illusions of ...

... what? ...

... love, set with dreams of sacrifice and self-aggrandizement, . .

... you see, it's not fragmented with illusions of pain and sorrow and suffering is it? No. It's ... into it ...

... are woven all sorts of fanciful and fragmented illusions of love, .

... and hope and charity and kindness and all sorts of good things that allow manipulation to occur smoothly. Right?

Into the frame are woven all sorts of fanciful and fragmented illusions of love, set with dreams of sacrifice and self-aggrandizement, and interlaced with gilded threads of self-destruction. The glitter of blood shines like rubies, . .

You see? Come on, don't wonder what this is about. Don't play naive. How many have shed blood for the sake of freedom. Don't tell me that you don't honor blood as glittering like rubies with great meaning.

The glitter of blood shines like rubies, and the tears are faceted like diamonds and gleam in the dim light in which the offering is made.

Tears of what seem to be genuine repentance or tears of recognition that something was done that was wrong, tears that express the fact that the person shedding the tears has abandoned a false front and is experiencing humility. These are “faceted like diamonds,” they’re grandly and greatly appreciated . . .

. . . and gleam in the dim light in which the offering is made.

Now why treat these things with disrespect or without full honor? The reason is that shedding blood for the sake of freedom doesn’t constitute Waking up to what Real freedom is. And it becomes possible to dedicate ones self to the shedding of blood because it does seem to bring about some needed change. And to be so dedicated to that that father and son and grandson and great-grandson, all one after the other, follow in the footsteps of the military, because the family honors the dedication of those willing to shed blood for the sake of freedom and the better life for others.

What I’m here to do is to set everyone’s mind in a new direction where instead of father and son and grandson and great-grandson all following in a pattern of respect for the glitter of blood, that the son or the grandson says, “Wait a minute, there has to be a different way of looking at this. There has to be a way to breaking the repetition of sin, sickness and death . . . sin, sickness and death, life, death . . . there has to be a way to break that pattern. And I’m going to do that. I’m going to attend to that instead of going off to war like my father and my grandfather and my great-grandfather. And I’m going to do this in spite of the fact that the wives and mothers and the rest of the family also feel the patriotic duty and the devotion to God and country, such that my taking this step is going to distress them.” You see what I’m saying?

I’m not saying this with any disrespect. But I know that what I’m saying is going to be a difficult thing to swallow. But we’ve got to get past the frame that glorifies and honors a misperception of what the picture in the frame is actually stating. And what it’s actually stating is, that sin, sickness and death are inevitable. Sin, sickness and death are inevitable. Sin, sickness and death are in operation at this moment. Sin, sickness and death are unavoidable, misery...misery...misery...misery...misery. You see what I’m saying?

This is what this means. This is what this story here about the two pictures and the frames is all about. I’m bringing it home in practical terms so that it’s not, you know, so descriptive of something that you don’t understand.

This is the key:

Look at the PICTURE. Do not let the frame distract you. This gift . . .

. . . the picture, remember, is the gift.

This gift is given you for your damnation, . .

. . . it's not given to make you happy. It's not given to make you happy. I'm not being mean to make you face this. It's the only way I can get you to have your affections be enriched. Because the only way your affections can be enriched is if you stop having a picture which the frame is distracting you from, where you're never doing the two-step, where you're never saying, "Wait a minute. Father, what is the truth here? Father, I want to experience Your perspective. And even though I doubt that if I ask You for it You will give it to me because I'm not even truly positive there is a God. I am going to do something different from what my great-great-grandfather and my great-grandfather and my father and my uncles did. Obviously what they did hasn't decreased sin, sickness and death."

That's the key. The damned picture, the miserable picture. I know, you'd rather go sit down and meditate and have a pretty thought, have a positive thought. But hey, if you're having the positive thought all by yourself, the damn miserable picture's still there in the middle of that huge frame because God never entered the picture . . . God never entered. You see?

Never were the words said, "Father, what is the truth here? Father, I'm going to break my isolation from You. I'm going to abandon this so-called authority and independence that I thought was my Birthright and I'm going to join and I'm going to give deference to You and what You have to say. I'm going to dare to be crazy enough to do this to see whether it really does make a difference, having abandon what my ancestors devoted themselves to."

Look at the PICTURE. Do not let the frame distract you. This gift is given you for your damnation, and if you take it you will believe that you ARE damned.

It's okay to look at this and acknowledge it. Why? Because it's not the end of the world, it's the beginning of your capacity to abandon that picture together with the frame and have a new experience.

You CANNOT have the frame without the picture. What you value is the FRAME, for there you see no conflict.

That's because all of the mutual agreements and all of the intellectual structures that had gone into making this "hand carved frame," give you hope, make life seem worthwhile. They spell out for you exactly how success will be achieved even though nobodies achieved it. And you say, "Well, you know, everybody wanted to fly and it wasn't until the Wright brothers actually accomplished it that it happened. But it did happen . . . it did happen. And so anything we set our mind to can happen. And it may not happen today but it will be a result of the effort that will allow it to be accomplished.” See, that’s all part of the frame. That’s what makes the frame important.

What you value is the FRAME, for there you see no conflict.

You see the way out of conflict. You see? And that’s part of the details of the frame. And the frame lies just like the picture does.

Yet the frame is only the wrapping for the gift of conflict.

Isn’t this a miserable conversation we’re having together? It’s not really. It’s about misery, and it’s about being able to abandon it. It’s about being able to be honest enough as you observe, that you cannot be fooled into confusion and the adoption of lies as though they’re truth.

[Yet] the frame is only the wrapping for the gift of conflict. The frame is NOT the gift. [Repeats] The frame is NOT the gift. Be not deceived by the most superficial aspects of this thought system, for these aspects enclose the whole, complete in EVERY aspect.

So even in the frame the slightest little apparently positive hopeful facet is lying and binds you to the misery and awfulness of the picture just as much as the things that are less lovely but still constitute some apparently sound basis for hope.

Death lies in this glittering gift. Let not your gaze dwell on the hypnotic gleaming of the frame.

What does that mean?

Let not your gaze dwell on the hypnotic gleaming of . . .

. . . all of the mutual agreements that you have come to together, or that others came to and handed down to you as part of your education, part of your valuable education, part of the education that lifts you above the rest in a position to be able to help govern well and successfully. See?

Let not your gaze dwell on the hypnotic gleaming of the frame. Look at the PICTURE, . .

That will always snap you back.

Be willing to do what we talked about last week. Be willing to look at the world and see that sin, sickness and death still operate and still apparently govern. And they need to stop. And the way they stop is by withdrawing your attention from the frame, looking at the picture and saying, "Wait a minute, things aren't getting better. What we're doing isn't improving anything. Something else is called for. And you know what? I wouldn't even be looking at the frame and thinking to look at the picture only and to ignore the frame if an answer weren't already provided pointing my attention in this direction. And so I am going to pay attention to what is leading me to a new way of seeing . . . a new way of devoting my attention."

That is why the holy instant is so important in the defense of truth. The truth itself NEEDS no defense, but you DO need defense against your own acceptance of the gift of death. When you who are truth accept an idea so dangerous TO truth, you threaten truth with destruction.

Of course, it can't really be destroyed but never the less a threat is engaged in.

And your defense must now be undertaken, . .

. . . your defense, not the defense of some concept, not the defense of some illusory thing called a unholy relationship—a special relationship—but the defense of a holy Son or Daughter of God defending that holiness.

And your defense must now be undertaken, to keep truth WHOLE. The power of Heaven, the Love of God, the tears of Christ and the joy of His eternal Spirit are marshalled to defend you from your own attack. For you attack Them, . .

. . . what do you attack?

The power of Heaven, the Love of God, the tears of Christ and the joy of His eternal Spirit . . .

For you attack Them, being PART of Them, and They must save you, for They love Themselves.

Listen to this last sentence:

For you attack Them, being PART of Them, and They must save you, for They love Themselves.

You see? They will not agree with you in your attack of them. They will not agree with them in your misunderstanding of them that would cause you to value something else more. And they will not join with you in dishonoring you as you are, by being attracted to something that keeps you unconscious of your Self your divine holiness.

Now these are the things that come into play in the holy instant. And these are the things that come into play in terms of illuminating the holy instant to you and bringing your attention to them.

Now I know you would like to move on, where perhaps there are some beautiful things to consider. But I invite you to keep your gaze on the picture.

Practice the holy instant as often as you wish this week. But don't do it to the exclusion of taking a look at the picture—the gruesome miserable picture. The picture that shows you that there is so much of God's Love still to be seen by all of mankind. And you know it because there's so much evidence of misery still around, still so much evidence of injustice around, still so much presence of impatience in you with those around you who aren't expressing as much intelligence as they're capable of. Impatience in you that makes it difficult for you to be willing to stand with Love with your Brother or Sister or mother or father or daughter or son and walk them through their learning with compassion, with patience while at the same time disallowing for any abuse to be practiced on you.

I love you all. And these are important things that we are talking about. These are important aspects of the threshold that I know you certainly are hoping you're going to move over. It's what you had hoped for. You just might not have thought these were some of the aspects of it. But I promise you they are. And you will not be at a loss for taking a look at them, considering them and being patient with yourself in the process.

I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 18th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Well, as I know everyone is quite aware whose joined us in the last few weeks, I have spoken quite unequivocally and in fact, the Course has as well, about the special relationship, about its mean-spiritedness, about its destructiveness. I have not used the word, "evil" related to it to any degree, but its function is the best and truly only definition of evil there is.

And although you know that you aren't experiencing every relationship in your life joined with the Father and experiencing it from His perspective, and that therefore, every relationship you're having in this fashion is a special relationship, you're relatively comfortable with engaging in special relationships. And so you find it, I know, difficult to believe that what you've been experiencing is malicious, is unloving, is hateful, is destructive, is mean-spirited and above all, it would be difficult for you to believe that it is evil in the fullest meaning of the word, "evil."

Looking at this is part of looking at the picture of the special relationship in the gilded heavily carved and polished frame. But you've got to.

Now, you are capable of understanding in what way it is evil and destructive. And it's simply this: A special relationship is a relationship you are having with something—it could be anything—an object or it can be a Brother or a Sister. And I'm limiting myself at this moment to the special relationships with Brothers or Sisters.

Special relationship with objects are not particularly or significantly evil. They are perverted and they are destructive to your capacity to recognize truth. But because objects cannot join with you in your misperception, there is a fundamental element missing that is brought into play in a special relationship between a Brother and a Sister, a Son or Daughter, or a Son and a Son, or a Daughter and a Daughter of God.

What is it?

It is, that indeed both individuals, both Sons or Daughters of God are most capable of bringing their will into a mutual agreement as to what a thing is or as to what each other are. You can bring willfulness into it. You join in a mutual agreement backed by will and what? Cemented by emotion. That's what a special relationship with an object cannot bring into play. And this infusion of emotion into a mutual agreement to understand the meaning of something that is unrelated to the Meaning God is giving it and backing that up with an emotional commitment constitutes a frame of mind, a state of mind in which the two of you have committed to being unconscious of God.

You have made commitment with emotion to be unconscious of the divine Meaning of everything you are giving your own meanings to.

Do you see what I'm saying? What I'm saying is, that what causes a special relationship to be ultimately evil is because it absolutely disallows for the participants to remember their Source. It secures them in an illusory experience. It grounds them in it.

Anything which has as its purpose your being unconscious of your Source, that is the only definition of evil that means anything. And that is exactly what comes into play in a special relationship.

Be with that for just a moment.

So, is that helpful or not? It is. It is helpful because it's easy to understand, at least the logic of it. And if the logic of it proves to be true then it behooves you to not participate. It behooves you to make significant effort to establish yourself in the experience of the holy instant to get yourself out of a bondage which is built, fabricated in such a way as to absolutely disallow you to regain your sanity.

Let me ask you this? I know what I'm saying sounds severe. But as I said, let me ask you this: After all of the time we have spent together whether you've been joining for just a few weeks or for a number a years, I have constantly encouraged everyone to be willing to acknowledge that they are not just mortals, not just physical human beings, but that this which is being perceived as a physical human being is a holy Son or Daughter of God, the substance of which in all of your form is Spirit, not matter, subject to the laws of God not subject to the laws of physics.

I have encouraged you to be aware of something beyond what your present mind-sets allowed you to have a conscious awareness of and which denied you the option of exploring. And in spite of the fact that we have spent all this time, how many of you spend all of your day joined with the Father accessing this Birthright that is yours and experiencing yourself as the holy Son of God or Daughter of God that you Are?

So, you know the answer to the question.

That is the answer to just how destructive the special relationships are. That demonstrates to you in your own experience, in your own mind just how bound you are and how difficult it is for you to release yourself from the special relationship. To look at it and see that it is absolutely impeding you in the spiritual growth you say you want to experience in which your study of the Course and many other spiritual traditions has demonstrated.

So, let this further clarity maybe be the only last thing that needs to be added to your repertoire of reasons for abandoning the special relationship, for abandoning your orphan-mentality, for laying hold of your connection with God so consistently, and so completely, that in fact, you begin to hear Guidance . . . feel Guidance . . . you begin to experience the blessing of the holy instant.

It simply does no one any good to have any favorable definition of the special relationship or of the orphan mind-set that you've been enjoying—enjoying at least enough not to quickly abandon it.

You holy Sons and Daughters of God, you who are my Brothers and Sisters, there is so much more to what you Are than what you're experiencing—than what you're allowing yourself to experience.

Now, the thought systems of the special relationship all wrap around a belief that you all have that you can, by your own effort and your persistence for good reasons and lofty purposes, lift yourselves up by your bootstraps and become something in your own right. You believe this and you're willing to bring your emotion and your commitment to the accomplishment of this impossible task.

I know, you've all been educated to think that it is not impossible. But it is impossible if you're already Something worthwhile. It is impossible to improve yourself and become something more valid if before you lift a finger or have an imaginative thought, you're already an ultimate Presence of holiness, of intelligence, of all of the qualities of God. If you are already these things, you can do nothing to improve yourself because you are not the miserable mortal that you think you are that has to lift itself up by its bootstraps and which, through some magical means has the capacity to do so. You see?

So . . . you know, the awfulness, the miserableness and the removal of any means of accomplishing anything, that's the picture I'm providing. It can seem like I'm taking something important away. It can seem like something awful is being taught. It seems as though if you participate in it, it will be the end of you. But listen to this: [reading from previous page last paragraph]

Be not deceived by the most superficial aspects of this thought system, for these aspects enclose the whole, complete in EVERY aspect. Death lies in this glittering gift.¹

That's awful words again . . .

Death lies in this glittering gift. Let not your gaze dwell on the hypnotic gleaming of the frame.

You see, the frame is all of the wonderful concepts that all of you have imagined and worked together on developing so that you come to this magnificent structure of ideas and beliefs and thoughts that tell you that the impossibility of the situation you find yourself in, it can be overcome . . . you are not stuck with it! You see?

You see . . . and that occupies you with the endeavor to accomplish all of the things you have imagined you can do to become Real when before the frame was created, you were already Real. And the picture that the frame was built around had nothing to do with you . . . had nothing to do with you! It was nothing that you had to overcome. It was something you actually had to abandon.

. . . not all of the wonderful grand ideas you've come up with and your ancestors have come up with.

Look at the PICTURE, and realize that DEATH is offered you.

You could not be given better counsel . . . you could not be given better counsel!

Death, of course, ultimately cannot happen to a holy Son or Daughter of God. So no matter to what degree you succumb to the idea that the impossible is possible, and thereby you align yourself with death, death cannot happen.

But here's the thing: You will end up with an endless ongoing experience of sin, disease and death and all of the suffering that accompanies it because you cannot, you holy Son or Daughter of God, behave as though you're out of your mind when it's impossible for a holy Son or Daughter of God to do that. You can try it but you can't do it, you can't try it without hurting. You can't try it without your innate sanity saying, "You can't do this, this is impossible! You are accomplishing nothing! You think you're doing something when you're not!" And your sanity keeps presenting you with these insane ideas that in spite of what you know about your capacity to accomplish things, you can't accomplish anything. You see?

And in your insane frame of mind, your sanity sounds insane to you. You see?

But that's because of the nature of the commitment to the special relationship, which because of the willfulness and the commitment, and the sealing of the commitment with emotion, you cannot possibly hear the truth. You cannot possibly remember your Source because your devotion is to the special relationship which holds the frame together and honors everything about the frame to the exclusion of the obvious misery of the picture that it embraces.

Whew!

So, accept this simple but profound truth about the picture and be willing to abandon the frame so that you can look at the picture and see . . . "Yes, sin sickness and death follow me all the days of my life. Death is a specter that hangs over my head. It doesn't necessarily have to have anything to do with age. It could be accident. It could be injury. It could be just simply physical failure."

What a thing to live with.

Oh-h, but you're strong of character! You've got what it takes! Not only that, you have Jesus' words to stand with you on behalf of life. And so, you're going to use Jesus' words to overcome and cause the physical experience to misbehave and not abide by the laws of physics. Not because that's the way everything should be, but because with the power of God you can turn a negative experience to your advantage . . . or for the "Glory of God."

But what happens is, you have your miracle and you say, "I live in a physical, material universe. I am a physical, material being. I am an organism. I really have nothing to do with God, I'm not really in this experience a manifestation of His perfection. I'm a divine entity in a physical experience."

And so you had a miracle and you are still locked into your physical experience. You're still locked into the definitions and meanings that are entwined in this elaborate frame that give you hope in spite of the hopelessness of the picture in the middle.

And so, do you see the insanity of that? Do you see that such miracles, if they are not lifting you out of a misunderstanding of life, if they're not lifting you out of a belief that you're just a physical organism—a divine being in a physical experience—if you're not getting out of that, you're still on the treadmill. You're still on the treadmill of sin, sickness and death.

And that isn't what this is about. It's about getting off of the treadmill!

There's no point in having a holy relationship if all it's going to do is polish up the special relationship—the human experience, life in the orphanage.

God is not here to make you a happy orphan. God is here to say, "This is my beloved Son, this is my beloved Daughter in whom I am well pleased right now . . . right where you are! Even though you call it a material world and universe, you are my holy Son or Daughter and what you are calling a material universe is the Kingdom of Heaven misperceived by you. I will say ninety-nine percent of what It really is escaping your attention because of your devotion to the misunderstandings of it that you have mutually agreed to with another holy Son or Daughter of God. And I'm here to tell you both, give up on it. Stop doing that!

"Join with me and remember your Birthright. Join with me and rediscover who you Are. Join with me and watch sin, disease and death become a lost memory."

Now:

The holy instant is a miniature of Heaven, . .

. . . you know, a small picture.

The holy instant is a miniature of Heaven, sent you FROM Heaven.

When you say or decide that you want to experience the holy instant and you do the two-step: You shut up, you become still, and then in the absence of thinking, in the absence of reasserting the magnificent frame around the limited tiny miserable experience of life that you're having, instead of that, you simply say, "Father, Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? What is God's truth here?"

Well, what happens first of all is that, as we've talked about, you experience silence. And what that really means is that suddenly there's no ornate gilded convoluted, complicated frame in your awareness embracing a negative, a picture of misery.

There's you without all of that seeming to be in a void reaching out to the Father—consciously abandoning isolation. In that silence in what seems like a void in the absence of this ornate huge frame and all of its meanings and all of the things you have to remember to keep everything straight and on and on and on, in the absence of that, there is silence which I from time to time have referred to as a pregnant silence—the womb of discovery, the womb of enlightenment. And you're reaching out to your Source and wanting to know what the truth is, separate and apart from all of the definitions you had given everything in the creation of that frame, you provide no interference, visual static that keeps you from seeing everything more truly. . . everything that you've called a material world . . . what a table truly is, what a leaf truly is, what a hand truly is, what a Brother or Sister truly is.

Without that huge frame and all the meanings that you have all agreed to, there's nothing to stand in the way of the direct experience . . . the simple direct experience of the divinity of everything and provide yourself the avenue for Awakening.

The holy instant is a miniature of Heaven, . .

. . . which you initially experience as emptiness, [whispers] as quietness, as peace from which love emerges, from which joy emerges for no reason whatsoever. And they begin to illuminate your perceptions of everything you had been seeing and calling matter and calling whatever you all had decided the meanings of those things were.

. . . set in a frame.

What is it set in the frame of? It's set in the frame of your present perceptions of things. And at the moment when you are shifting from the ornate frame and your mutual commitments to everything about it, you're still doing it as though an entity in time is shifting his or her attention from one thing to another. You see?

Certainly, when you're looking at the ornate frame of the special relationship, you are a time oriented creature. But as you shift into the holy instant where time is abandoned, it is still done within the framework of time, because that is the context in which you're doing this shift. It's the way you're conceiving of yourself as you're making this shift from isolation to joining.

So it's . . .

. . . set in a frame.

The holy instant is set in a frame, not for long, but it's set in a frame because you're looking from within a frame—you're beginning the release of a frame from within a frame.

So:

It is a picture, too, set in a frame. Yet if you accept THIS gift, . .

. . . meaning the picture that is embraced in the holy instant . . .

. . . you will not see the frame at all, because the gift can only be accepted through your willingness to focus ALL your attention on the PICTURE.

What's the picture? The picture is blank. It is a blankness into which you say, "Father, what is the truth here?" It is a blank picture. It is the allness and the infiniteness and the non-materiality of eternity and infinity in which nothing obscures what everything truly is.

And so you look at this blank picture willing, we'll say, for what's truly there to come forth and present Itself to you on Its terms, not yours. And that's an entirely new expression of will, not a will to get, not a will to create for yourself, but a will . . . a willingness to have the Father present to you what's Real . . . to have Reality . . . to have all of Creation convey to you its infinite Meanings. You see?

. . . time will disappear to you. Time will not be what will gather your attention and it will not be that which defines you, because you will find yourself taken up into a new experience of what's Real—a truer experience of what is Real—and that you started out to look at all of this from a sense of time will completely elude you because the experience of truth will be so much more significant.

The holy instant is a miniature of eternity. It is a picture of timelessness, set in a frame of time.

Meaning, set in your present means of experiencing everything, which is as though you are a time-bound creature.

If you focus on the picture, you will realize that it was only the frame that made you think it WAS a picture. Without the frame, the picture is seen as what it REPRESENTS.

In other words, if you thought it was a picture representing truth, because you said, "Father, what is the truth here?" and the truth dawned on you . . . if you thought that what dawned on you was a picture of truth, you would quickly find that it is truth itself and not a representation of it. Wonder of wonders.

The meaningfulness of God, of Creation and of your part in all of it, will dawn on you fully as actuality, not an idea about Reality.

If you focus on the picture, . .

. . . meaning, the holy instant, the experience of revelation . . .

. . . you will realize that it was only the frame that made you think it WAS a picture. Without the frame, the picture is seen as what it REPRESENTS.

In other words, the actuality of what a picture would have been a picture of.

For as the whole thought system of the ego lies in its gifts, . .

. . . the picture of the special relationship surrounded by this incredible frame.

. . . meaning the picture in the center . . .

. . . so the whole of Heaven lies in this instant, borrowed from eternity, and set in time for you.

In other words, when you reach out to ask to know what the truth is, the truth will come and meet you, like the Father meeting the Prodigal Son, not after you've gotten home, but out in the wilderness where you happened to be when you ask, when you reach out. You see?

[For] as the whole thought system of the ego lies in its gifts, so the whole of Heaven lies in this instant, . .

. . . the holy instant, that is the miniature of Heaven . . .

. . . borrowed from eternity, and set in time for you.

You see? This is the good news. But you know what? As long as you think that any part of the special relationship is of any kind of value, you will not let it go completely, which means you will not embrace the truth, you will not embrace that which releases you completely.

That's why it is so important not to gloss over the picture in the center of the frame that gives your life all of its meaning, because the frame says to you that the shit in the picture in the middle is a lie and you can prove it to be a lie through your own efforts! And that is a lie!

The picture is a lie about you. The picture in the center of this grand frame is a lie about you. And you have to say, "Father, I'm willing to abandon the lie. Father, I'm willing to say Your Name again. Father, I'm willing to let You back into my experience again because I know You are what gives me my Meaning as the Son or Daughter of God and nothing else does.

"Not all of the Sons and Daughters of God who are dreaming with me in the orphanage, not all of them put together can cause any one of us to become the holy Sons of God that we already Are. And in fact, every effort we make to lift ourselves up by our boot-straps with commitment and sealing it with emotion, all that will do is to secure us in the orphanage until someone, some way, can find a way to get into the orphanage and get our attention once again." That's it!

Doesn't that make you full of joy?

Two gifts are offered you.

We've talked about there being only two points of view. You could say the true and the false. You could say the infinite and the finite. You could say the holy Son or Daughter of God with full capacity of His Birthright, Her Birthright, or the orphan who has no Source, but finds himself existing and finds himself existing in the middle of conflict which because he exists and has vitality and energy and a mind, he must have a way to cope with, because nothing would happen so radically stupid as existence without purpose . . . right?

It's time to laugh and realize the freedom you have from such an idea. And now you have the means of abandoning it.

Two gifts are offered you. Each is complete, and cannot be partially accepted. Each is a picture of all that you can have, . .

. . . each picture . . .

. . . is a picture of all that you can have, seen VERY differently.

Each of the two are very different. In the one, you are an orphan and you can see all that an orphan can have. But you know what? An orphan cannot have a Royal Birthright. An orphan cannot have a Birthright of inheritance of an ever-Present omnipresent, omnipotent loving Life Source . . . right?

An orphan can have all that an orphan can have, but that's something an orphan can't have even though it's something that exists, and even though it is something that exists for every orphan, because no orphan is an actual orphan.

Each is a picture of all that you can have, seen VERY differently. You cannot compare their value by comparing a picture to a frame.

You know, Oh, the picture of holiness and ornate frame which embodies all of the potentials for righteousness and success and intelligence and recognition that an orphan can get. You see? You can't combine the picture and the frame separate from the ones they're already in. It cannot be done.

It must be the pictures only that you compare, or the comparison is wholly without meaning.

So what you have to do is compare the miserable picture with the picture that isn't really a picture, but is an actual experience of Reality that has been let in when you have abandoned the defenses you use to keep yourself from experiencing your divinity . . . from experiencing God, from experiencing your Birthright.

Remember that it is the picture that is the gift.

Even the picture of misery. The picture of misery is the gift that is given when one joins with another Brother, and together the two say, "We are going to give preference to our best thinking, our best judgments no matter what Daddy said."

Remember that it is the picture that is the gift. And only on this basis are you REALLY free to choose. Look at the pictures.

[whispers] Not the frame. It doesn't say, not the frame. It says:

Look at the pictures. BOTH of them.

That's why I'm spending so much time here talking about not being afraid to be honest and quitting this habit of "positive thinking" that glosses things over so that you can ignore the very thing that would help you Wake up, which is a clear assessment that what you've been doing hasn't been working, especially when something else has been given you as a means of getting out of that misery.

One is a tiny picture, hard to see at all beneath the heavy shadows of its enormous and disproportionate enclosure.

See:

One is a tiny picture, . .

. . . it isn't even a lot of misery that's shown. It isn't really a lot of awfulness. It doesn't stand forty stories high and three miles wide. It's a tiny picture with a huge frame, full of your fullness, full of your pride, full of your arrogance, full of all of you joining together and valuing your ignorance and building upon it with greater and greater complexity. You see?

I'm not judging you and you shouldn't judge yourself. But it will be very helpful to see that through ignorance you have been employing ignorance and it hasn't been working. And thank God someone is saying to you, "Hey, it isn't working," so you can look at it and say, "Hey, sin, disease and death still repeat themselves over and over in my life and in everybody's life. Something . . . something isn't adding up here. I want to see what adds up. I'm going to try something different." You see? That's the great benefit of this honesty we're talking about.

One is a tiny picture, hard to see at all beneath the heavy shadows of its enormous and disproportionate enclosure. The other is lightly framed . . .

. . . and that is a play on words. It is lightly framed, but it is framed with light.

The other is lightly framed and hung in light, lovely to look upon for what it IS.

You see? The other is not lovely to look on for what it is, that's why the huge frame has been developed. But this one is lovely to look upon.

You who have tried so hard, and are STILL trying, to fit the better picture into the wrong frame . . .

. . . you see . . . have the picture of Reality, the picture of eternity put into the frame that has everything in it to make you important and real and valid. That's a mistake. Because that which wants to make itself feel important is that which knows it isn't important. You see?

That's why all the effort has gone into the building of this frame. But you as an orphan are not important and can't become important. But you who see yourself as an orphan are not an orphan. And your Birthright awaits you. But you have to abandon your commitment to another, to believe meanings that you have created yourselves.

You've got to stop valuing the special relationship, so that in its absence, in the absence of the sealing of the commitment with emotion, there's nothing present to continue to blind you, to keep you from seeing Who your Father is and what the truth is about you and everything.

You who have tried so hard, and are STILL trying, to fit the better picture into the wrong frame and so combine what cannot BE combined, accept this and be glad: These pictures are each framed perfectly for what they represent. One is framed to be out of focus, and not seen. The other is framed for perfect clarity. The picture of darkness and of death grows less convincing as you search it out amid its wrappings.

As you search the picture out amid the wrappings of its ornate frame.

As each senseless stone which seems to shine in darkness from the frame is exposed to light, it becomes dull and lifeless, and ceases to distract you from the picture.

My intent is to help you not be distracted from the picture by the frame.

And finally, you look upon the picture itself, seeing at last that, unprotected by the frame, it HAS no meaning.

Why do you suppose that in your weaker moments when you look at things and they don't look good you get depressed . . . why do you suppose that is? Because there's no meaning embodied in what you're seeing. And it's a miserable experience to have no meaning in anything you're experiencing.

But you very quickly get onto your positive thinking "jackass" and you give it a good kick with your heels and you try to get it moving. Being a jackass, it doesn't always move exactly when you want it to move and your misery lasts a little bit longer. Or maybe this time the jackass is ready to move and it leaps forward and you say, "Wow, I knew there was a God! Life is treating me right. I can have control."

And once again, you've been riding this jackass for ages and you ignore the fact that although it may move from time to time most of the time it doesn't move at all. But you say, "It will move again! I know it will move again. And I'm going to plug away here until it moves. I'm not going to get off this jackass. This is the way I live. This-is-the-way-to-live."

Laugh with me at the ridiculousness of it. It's so ridiculous that you can afford to put it down and not expect the world to collapse around you. You can expect Reality to emerge right where you had been seeing a mess, a miserable picture. That's what you can expect. And that's what I'm encouraging you all to risk the chance to find out.

Hey, if you risk the chance, all the worst that can happen will be sin, sickness and death continuing to repeat themselves. And you're familiar with that. . . you can handle that, right? You're handling it.

So, hey, risk the chance and have some fun doing it.

I'm going to leave you with a little bit of a cliff-hanger, here. See, we're just ready to start reading about the other picture that's lightly framed—nice stuff to talk about. We'll hold the nice stuff off until next week, because you're very sober right now. You're not depressed, you are sober. And I want you to stay in your sobriety for the coming week, considering what we're talking about: hell, Heaven. It might not be another week you have to do it, it might only be ten more minutes [snaps fingers] and you Wake up.

Well, you have the clarity that it's your Birthright to be experiencing because you dared to have a little bit of fun about this, while remaining very clear about the seriousness and the severity of the special relationship.

I love every single one of you. And I look forward to be with the new you next week.

Okay.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 26th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, we've been talking about frames and pictures. In a way, we've talked more about frames. But as we've spoke of last week, the key is to look at the pictures because the frame, especially the ornate one, is a distraction from something that it is essential for you to see. Because if you see it, you will be in a position to have your sanity return to you.

In seeing the picture for what it actually is, it will cause you to see its valuelessness—it's meaninglessness—which will bring you to . . . it will cause you to say, "Wait a minute, I'm wasting my time here, I've been fooled when I need to be clear." And the energy and the gumption to take hold of your attention so that you're consciously giving it where you want it to be given will occur. So, that's why we've spent a lot of time talking about it.

Now, at the bottom line, what's in each of the pictures? You know, the Course says, look at the picture . . . look at the picture . . . ignore the frame . . . look at the picture!

Well, both pictures have one thing in them: A relationship. One's a miserable relationship to which I know many of you can relate. And the other is a superlative, blissful, wholly meaningful experience.

In the little picture with the ornate frame, the relationship is a relationship between two Sons or Daughters or Sons and Daughters of God who have chosen to get a divorce from their Father and see everything through their own imaginations.

In this act of divorce, as we have spoken so many times, there was a loss of memory as to who they Were. When they claimed their right to be independent and acted upon it, sealed it with emotional commitment to each other and their goal, they forgot who they Were. And everything else that followed was illusory, was insanity experienced and embellished . . . miserable.

Everyone who is not Awake today is living out that picture. But here's the saving Grace: Someone is telling you that you are, in spite of who you think you are, a holy Son or Daughter of God who has chosen to actualize, if I may put it that way, to actualize a false experience, a distorted biased experience of Reality. Reality hasn't gone anywhere and who you really Are, hasn't changed.

But because of the commitment the two of you have and have made, you absolutely blind yourself to the conscious realization and awareness of your divinity. That is what makes the special relationship evil. That's what makes it destructive. That's what makes it something that you, with all due diligence need to be bringing your attention and your will (which would have to be your divine will) to abandon it—to cease energizing and validating it. Because in validating it, you are validating something which keeps you insane.

You've got to see this—else you won't—with vigor and determination or even a light-hearted willingness that will follow through. Abandon this that has meant so much to you, and shut-up and do the two-step and engage in the holy instant. That is the avenue of freedom from this one picture—the picture of misery, the picture that is evil, and escape it into your right Mind, into the contemplation of the other picture.

Now, the other picture is likewise, a picture of a relationship. It's your relationship with your Father. It's a picture that hasn't gotten a lot of attention recently. But it's a picture that is forever present with you and in you and you are programmed to remember it and to be willing to give your attention fully to it again.

And the program to accomplish that is called the Holy Spirit. It's called: That which is nothing more than your right Mind, which no matter how insane you have behaved, hasn't been altered in anyway. And so, although you have behaved insanely, your sanity has been ever-present with you and has been absolutely governing you.

It is there . . . the Holy Spirit is there with a purpose to carry out Its faith in you by asserting Itself on your behalf, in your experience whether you're listening for It or not, paying attention to It or not. And in many cases, without your request but because there is a weakness in your insanity, the Holy Spirit can turn things to your advantage which were to your disadvantage.

But here's the big thing: If you will do the two-step, if you will engage in the holy instant, if you will become still and say, "Father," or "Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?" you open the door for what has already been programmed in you. You remove the resistance that has kept It at bay. The picture, this other picture . . . the relationship is between you and God.

Now, in both pictures, the relationship that is shown governs how all of Creation is experienced.

When you are embracing your relationship with your Father and acknowledging your Birthright as the Son or Daughter of God—a holy one—you present no objection to the conscious embrace and experience of Creation from the Father's Perspective, seeing everything with the Meaning the Father has invested in it by virtue of creating it.

On the other hand, in the other picture where the relationship is with a Brother or a Sister whom you have chosen to join with in denial of your Father and of Creation with the Meanings the Father has given it, all of your experience is colored by that, and as a result you see nothing truly. You don't see it as the Kingdom of Heaven. You don't see it as the Father's Creation. You see it as simply a physical manifestation of physical events in a physical universe that are purely random, that have no intelligent design to them, and on and on.

Now, going into the book, we've just spoken about the ornate frame and the small picture in it and the call for looking at the picture and not the frame, and it continues . . .

The other picture . . .¹

. . . the one without the ornate frame . . .

. . . is lightly framed, for time cannot contain eternity.

Remember, Reality is what is present in this other picture. Because this other picture is the relationship you have with your Father in which your relationship is not denied in any way. So what's there is eternity. What's there is Reality. What's there is Creation in all of its perfection.

As I said last week, it only seems to be framed in time because you are looking at the other picture in which everything is in time and your frame of reference is time. So naturally, when you look at this other picture from within time, you will think it is framed in time, even though it isn't. The minute you say, "But Father, I want to know the truth here. I want to experience Your Perspective." The moment you do that, you've reached beyond time. You've stepped outside of time. You are ceasing to hold everything to the time standard that you've been using in your special relationship.

When you choose to look at this other picture, you're choosing to abandon orphanhood. You're choosing to abandon the mutual agreement you've made with another to do that which blinds you to your divinity.

And so . . .

The other picture is lightly framed, for time cannot contain eternity. There IS no distraction here. The picture of Heaven and eternity grows MORE convincing as you look at it.

Okay, if you want it to become more convincing, you've got to look at this picture more consistently.

What does that mean?

It means you've got to look at your relationship with your Father more consistently. You have to actually, instead of saying, "Well, everything that's happening is the Father's Will, everything that's happening is for a holy purpose even if I don't know what it is," instead of saying that, which claims that you know . . . [chuckles] you know what's real, you say, "In spite of what I think . . . in spite of what I believe all of this is, in spite of the fact that I believe that it's all Your handiwork, what is the truth here Father?" You see?

You must challenge any confidences you have about how things work and certainly, you must challenge those things that occur that are a call for correction. And beware of sort of giving cart blanche to these things that call for correction by saying, "Well, the Father will . . . the Holy Spirit will turn it to my advantage." You see? Or, "The Father knows what He's doing, I will be patient and let these things unfold on their own." No.

None of this has anything to do with becoming passive and just letting life roll over you or roll past you or just sort of happen without any commitment on your part being brought into play where you say, "Well, I can look at it this way and in fact, when I do it, it seems somehow to be working better . . ." But see, when you do that, you're neglecting the key thing: You're neglecting your part where you say, "But, Father what is the truth here aside from my best theories, aside from my best judgments, aside from the conclusions I've come to from past experience which says You're doing this Father and it's all for a good purpose, WHAT IS THE TRUTH HERE because I want to see the correction that the call for correction is calling for.” You see?

So . . .

The picture of Heaven and eternity grows MORE convincing as you look at it.

Meaning as you more consistently look at it, as you dig a little deeper into the Father, you might say, “But Father, tell me more. But Father give me more of an experience than I’m presently having. I want to experience the more of what You’re Being right here. I want to experience more of the Meaning of these things than I’m experiencing because sin, sickness and death haven’t disappeared from my experience. So I can’t afford to just sit back and passively let the movement of life occur, thinking it’s You, Father. I’m going to push for the clearer evidence of it being You, the clearer evidence that is going to show up as the end of an aging process, that’s going to show up as the correction of a disease or the healing of a disease, or of more hair growing back on my head or as less sag to my breasts or my derrière or my tummy.” You see? Where more of the equilibrium and balance and equipoise of being is actually occurring, recognizable in a picture. You see?

So . . .

The picture of Heaven and eternity grows MORE convincing as you look at it. And now, by REAL comparison, a transformation of both pictures can at last occur. And each is given its rightful place, when both are seen in relation to each other.

You see? The moment you can see that the miserable picture in the ornate frame is a picture of a relationship of two misguided Sons or Daughters of God who are believing what is unbelievable and untrue and are therefore suffering sin, disease and death along with all the other vagaries of life, and you likewise, because you’ve been practicing the holy instant, are experiencing the other picture and experiencing yourself in your relationship with your Father which therefore qualifies you as an inhabitant of the Kingdom of Heaven because you have discovered you are and always have been a holy Son or Daughter of God, in that clarity about the two pictures side by side, you become disillusioned. You simply become disillusioned.

To be disillusioned is to be free of delusion, free of illusion, it’s to be back in your sane and right Mind. And that’s the point.

The dark picture, brought to light, is not perceived as fearful, . .

. . . of course, while you were only looking at it and believing the frame and operating in your existence on the basis of all the details of the frame, the experience was fearful. Fear and guilt, remember, came into existence simultaneously the moment you acted on your decision to divorce your Father.

But when you are willing to look at the two pictures and disregard the frame, and you see the misery of the one and the unreality of it, you might say, and the beauty of the other and its Reality and its new definition of you, wow . . . the dark picture is not frightening anymore because you're not fooled any more. And you can just simply see that it's meaningless. Truly, you can simply see it.

The dark picture, brought to light, is not perceived as fearful, . .

. . . even though forever it had been . . .

. . . but the fact that it is just a PICTURE is brought home at last.

"Oh-h, my God, it's a picture of a 'Tidal Wave'. It's gonna get me, it's gonna get me! Oh-h no, it's just a picture. [Chuckling] Whew!" Okay . . . you see? When you recognize that it's just a picture, all of the misunderstandings that accompanied thinking it was real will immediately vanish and you will immediately feel relief. That's just the way it works. And that's what this is about. And that's why we're talking about it.

And what you see there you will recognize as what it is; a picture of what you THOUGHT was real, and nothing more.

To be very specifically correct: It is a picture of what two of you thought to be real and agreed were real and governed your actions and emotions and talk, according to. You see? But again, it's a picture of what you . . . the two of you thought was real, what you imagined was real and nothing more.

For beyond this picture, you will see nothing.

When you take a view of Creation and then you back-off from it and create a definition of it, and give new meanings to it, and you do this in partnership with another, and the two of you begin to behave on the basis of that . . . well, you've withdrawn from Reality. It's like you've gone into a little box that you have filled up with imaginations, and there is nothing behind it. You've withdrawn into a terrible, tiny state of privacy that there is nothing beyond.

Now on the other hand . . . the other picture . . . well, I'm going to put it this way: I want you to imagine a wall. You're in a small room. There's a wall and there are two pictures. The room is dark. The fact (and you don't know about it) but the fact is that there's a small picture with a large frame . . . you know, on the wall in front of you. You don't know it's there because it's dark. And next to it there is an equally shaped and sized frame, you might say, that is a hole in the wall where there's a piece of glass and there's also a shutter behind it so you cannot see through it. And you sit there and suddenly the light goes on in the room and the shutter opens on the little window that's looking outside and then the light goes off and the shutter closes again. And you say, "Oh, I just saw two pictures." You see?

The picture on the left with the ornate frame has nothing behind it. It's just a piece of paper with an image printed on it or painted on it or . . . you know, but there's nothing behind it, nothing behind it. The other one though, when you are looking at it, you can become confused about and think that because it does have a little frame around it that it's also a picture, but you couldn't look at it long enough to realize you were not seeing a picture on the wall but looking through to something behind the frame, behind the place where a picture appeared momentarily when the lights came on and the shutter opened, before they closed. You see?

So . . .

. . . what you see there you will recognize as what it is; a picture of what you THOUGHT was real, and nothing more.

For beyond this picture, you will see nothing.

That's the meaning of that. But in the holy instant you look and you at first think you're looking at a picture in that moment of communion with the Father or the Holy Spirit when you are inspired with a clearer sense of Reality, you will still think you are looking at a picture. But it isn't. There is something more than that. There is something beyond that. There is something to the right and the left and above and below and behind. And there are Sons and Daughters of God living who are not caricatures of Sons and Daughters of God. You see?

. . . the one on the right . . .

. . . in clearcut and unmistakable contrast, is transformed INTO what lies beyond the picture.

In other words, the moment you begin to realize, "Oh, wait a minute, this is three-D, this is not a picture," then your attention will be pulled beyond the frame. And so what you misunderstood to be a picture becomes transformed in your mind by realization of the truth of the situation that there is a greater Reality for you to let yourself into. And you will abandon naturally the sense of there being a picture. And you will move into the fuller experience of what the Reality is that you had first thought was a picture.

As you look on this, you realize that it is NOT a picture, but a REALITY. This is no figured representation of a thought system, but the Thought Itself.

You see? It's not a caricature, it's not a definition made out of nothing. It's Reality Itself. It's the Idea of God's itself.

What it represents is THERE.

You see? A picture represents something that isn't there. But this that you at first think is a picture, you realize represents what is really there and is not a picture at all. This is you coming back into your right Mind. This is you having clarity returned to you. This is you coming into a full sense of the real Meaning of everything so that it's no longer possible for you to feel fear and guilt because you're experiencing everything as What it really Is.

The frame fades gently, and God rises to your remembrance, . .

. . . the whole point of the holy instant, of the two-step . . .

. . . God rises to your remembrance, . .

. . . God's not brought to you for the first time. No, you knew the truth, we'll say, in the beginning. You knew the truth before you decided to play around in the realm of imagination. And even while you played around in the realm of imagination you still knew the truth, but not remembered. Now you're beginning to remember. That's the whole point.

The frame fades gently, and . . .

. . . what do you begin to remember?

. . . God rises to your remembrance, offering you the whole of creation in exchange for your little picture, wholly without value and entirely deprived of meaning.

You see? As you've made this shift, and you have more diligently and persistently chosen for the holy instant, Reality and Eternity have become more interesting and a more desirable thing to give your attention to. And everything that had meant something to you in the other little picture with the ornate frame will begin to be utterly meaningless. So meaningless that you find yourself not attracted to it, not intrigued by it, not having any curiosity about it. You see? You find yourself becoming free of it.

[Raj did not read: As God ascends into His rightful place and you to yours, you will experience again the MEANING of relationship, and know it to be true.]

Let us ascend in peace together to the Father, . .

. . . now there's a key word there that you might overlook and once again it's the foundation point. The meaning of the word is "relationship." The word is, "us."

Let us ascend . . .

. . . you might like the word "ascend" and the word "peace"

Let us ascend in peace together to the Father, . .

. . . but the key word is the word "us."

Let us . . .

. . . who . . . you and me, who are choosing for the Father's perspective.

Let us ascend in peace together to the Father, by . . .

. . . what?

. . . giving Him ascendance in our minds.

Whew! Yeah, I know, that makes it sound like you're going to have to become some holy-something-or-other that's going to be some kind of a weirdo. Anyone going around all day long with an awareness of God in their mind and who are choosing to look at everything with the intent of discovering God right there, well, that's got to be somebody you don't want to be. That's got to be somebody that will not fit in. And that is the conditioning . . . the evil conditioning of the special relationship.

You're not going to become weird. You're going to be more in touch with everything that's going on. You're going to recognize when change needs to occur before there's a problem. You are going to recognize what a Brother needs before he or she utters a word. You see?

And so you will be able to be utterly appropriate in significantly meaningful ways. But nothing that stands out like a sore thumb.

Let us ascend in peace together . . .

. . . by the Father . . .

. . . to the Father, by giving Him ascendance in our minds. We will gain EVERYTHING by giving Him the power and the glory, and keeping no illusions of where they are.

Where are the power and the glory? They're with the Father. They're with that which is the Creator—the present, ongoing every-Present Creator of existence, of you.

They are in US, through HIS ascendance.

Now does this mean that God is raising Himself up—ascending? No, but in the ascendance of God in our minds, in the ascendance of your willingness to give God your attention, that's how the glory and the power show up in you, show up in us. It's that simple.

They are in US, through HIS ascendance.

They are less in us when we choose for the special relationships, and we are overwhelmed with guilt and fear.

What He has given is HIS.

When there are no illusions about that, you will let yourself be infilled with His . . . with what He has given, because you won't be claiming a right to do it on your own. It's that simple.

What He has given is HIS. It shines in every part of Him, as in the whole. The whole reality of your relationship with Him lies in OUR relationship to one another.

Okay, so now you might say, "Well, okay, maybe I won't be a weirdo because I'm thinking about God all the time and trying to see God in my Brother and in everything and experiencing blessings from that. So maybe I won't be such a weirdo because of that. But now you're saying that the whole reality of our relationship with Him lies in our relationship to one another. So now we're back to this issue of caring and having to find our Brother and Sister to be worth the time it takes to care and pay attention so that I might know because of my connection with my Father what my Brother needs, what my Sister needs, what fulfills purpose in our being in relationship to each other.

"Yeah, so now I'm going to instead of being the sort of private individual who never got in anybody's way and who handled himself in a way that at least was indirectly blessing to others, now you want me to do things that are going to cause me to have a new reputation, where people are going to say, 'Well, you know she was quite a recluse . . . you know, in her later years she just sort of faded into her apartment and . . . you know, but now you know what? . . she's out and she's finding ways to actually be involved with her Brothers and Sisters. And you know what? I don't know what's happened to her, but she is really spot-on or he is really right on the beam with whatever he or she brings to the relationships they are in or he or she are in." You see?

The whole reality of your relationship with Him . . .

. . . in your relationship with the Father . . .

. . . lies in OUR relationship to one another.

You see? The Course spoke of, "looking into your Brothers' eyes and remembering God." Well, that's the wonder of it. It's also perhaps the one thing you hoped wouldn't have to be part of it. You hoped that maybe you could just quietly let yourself into the Kingdom of Heaven by not being an unpleasant presence in the presence of others.

But now I'm saying there's more to it than that. This unpleasant aspect of actually having to be involved with each other is coming into play. Because if you're not involved with each other in the practice of wishing to see the Presence of God there and asking God to reveal Himself there in your Brother and Sister . . . why? So that you can become a transformational presence in their experience or maybe not transformational, what about just meaningful as though maybe joy and love and peace and pleasure in your involvements with others might be what the whole thing is about, because in that you will remember God and in that you will come back into your right Mind.

But you will come back into your right Mind, not because your right Mind was important to you, but because your Brother or Sister's right Mind was important to you. And so you devoted yourself to finding ways to illuminate your Brother and Sister's right Mind. It's a simple and simply beautiful arrangement that the Father has put in place as the means of your coming Home.

The holy instant shines alike on all relationships, for in it they ARE one. For here is only healing, ALREADY complete and perfect. For here is God, and where He is only the perfect and complete CAN be.

It's the one place where God's laws govern. It's the place where God's laws prevail. It's the place where harmony and peace and joy and love are inescapable.

So, I know that in the recent past when I've spoken about the holy instant, you've loved it. At this point, what the holy instant means, what it stands for, what its function is and what it will release you from is clearer than ever before because we've been willing to look at the little picture with the ornate frame and instead of letting the ornate frame distract us from the ugliness of the picture itself, we've been willing to look at the picture.

And the stark accurate recognition of what the picture is, is the most significant thing you can take hold of to promote the willingness if not the commitment to practice the holy instant, which you already love the idea of. You just haven't had enough provocation. But now you do.

Now you can practice the holy instant with much more spontaneous willingness and it will bless you greatly.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

July 9th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

This is me, Paul. And Raj has said for me to go ahead and say a few words first.

My son, Chris, has said on occasion—when I didn't feel as though I was as centered as I needed to be—he said, "Hey, you can't fail or succeed at having a meeting, you can just show up. You're not called upon to do any more than that." And so, I'm showing up . . . I'm showing up because I care and because I do, I do need to connect with everyone.

For the last three weeks Raj has been dictating a letter. It isn't that it's taking him that long, it's that it's been difficult for me to be willing to hear the letter. It's still not finished but the letter arises out of my need for answers that I've turned to Raj for. And what has triggered the request—the need that has triggered the request—is one that's well know to everyone who is on our mailing list or comes to the website. And that is that we have, in the last year, purchased a new property—a new house—for the Foundation to function out of and the old one has needed to be prepared for sale and put on the market to sell.

There has not been the means to prepare the house for sale. And so it is almost a year since the new property was purchased and a loan that was made to the Foundation at that time comes due in August. And it was to be paid back by the sale of the house.

Now, this is me, Paul speaking, these are not the words of enlightenment or wisdom and they're not the result of my having joined with Raj and gotten an answer that has put me at ease. So if everyone thought I have it easy because I'm in touch with my guide . . . 'tain't so. There are times that it's difficult for me to stay in my peace.

Now, it happens that in this last week, both Susan and I have spent time on Lesson 23 in the Workbook. And I'm going to share it—not the whole lesson, but the caption at the top:

"I can escape from the world I see by giving up attack thoughts."1

I will read the first sentence because it's key. It says:

The idea for today contains the only way out of fear that will succeed.

Whew! Have many of you done a lesson and not had the result that the lesson said would occur . . . if you did not have the result that was supposed to result from having done the lesson?

I know intellectually that I can escape the world I see by giving up attack thoughts and I can understand that that's the only way. But when I seem to be faced with . . . well, let's say, threat, let's say, a problem that I don't seem to have the means to address, it's hard for me to let go of my fear even though I know that my fear is caused by my forecasting a negative event. You see? That's my attack thought—and then reacting to it.

Now, this is not to say that as I have worked with this lesson I haven't had periods of peace. But I'm here tonight—it's time for the Study Group—and I'm not in my peace and I'm not about to give up practicing that lesson.

I'm reminded from time to time, that God is in His holy place and all is well. That's the truth and that is comforting.

Now because of this need, I've asked Raj if there's anything he wishes to say that we could share, and so he started dictating a letter. I'm going to share what I have of the letter so far. It's interesting to me because he's not saying, "we need to drum up some money" he's talking about—which is a surprise to me—he's talking about how things work, how the Foundation works, how the work that we do works. No demands, just elucidation.

So, it begins:

Dear Friends,

Everything single thing that Paul and I do, from the impulse which gives rise to an act, to the action itself, is an unembellished gift of Love. Every single expression of gratitude which is received in return is acknowledged, appreciated and immediately applied to the meeting of needs . . . the continuance of the gift. In this, the meaning of Gift is realized—rendered actual in the world. It initiates and implements as practical realism the statement, “To have, give all to all.”

It is more than a novel way to conduct business—the way the Foundation works—it is more than a novel way to conduct business. It is no way to conduct business at all!

Business is a pattern of behavior established by mutual agreement to maintain order between those who are unconscious, uninvolved and therefore insensitive. This relieves them . . . business practices do . . . this relieves them of the call for care, morality, honor and respect—the Golden Rule—while protecting them from the otherwise inevitable consequences of carelessness, immorality, dishonor and disrespect.

When I say it relieves them of the call, I mean it protects them from having to care for, honor, respect and be moral with others. It protects them from expending the effort it takes. It protects them against involvement, and therefore constitutes a most significant block to Love!

On the other hand, my insistence upon Gift being the center and circumference of our activities, rather than “simple commerce,” unequivocally calls these things into play, requiring a level of involvement and attention one might not have expected or desired.

And I suspect—this is Raj speaking now—and I suspect that this is the case with many who are familiar with how we function. That what I am calling for requires a level of involvement that hasn’t been expected—a participation that one isn’t usually required to participate in.

Why doesn’t the Foundation just charge money? There are so many people who are interested, they’d be glad to pay the money. And then we wouldn’t have to think about it. You see? Then we wouldn’t have to remember. When we want something we just pay for it...yes...yes, well that’s sort of like being an orphan, isn’t it? It’s like, you know, “I can function quite well and carry on in my daily activities without doing the two-step, without going to the extra effort to remember God. I can function just fine without constantly having to be consciously in a relationship where I and the one I'm in relationship are constantly referring back and forth to each other about everything that's going on. I don't have to . . . I mean, that's like getting married, isn't it? I don't have to . . . I shouldn't have to do that all day long with somebody who isn't even my wife or my husband or my children . . . whew!"

It protects them from expending the effort it takes, it protects them against involvement and therefore—and this is the problem—and therefore, constitutes a most significant block to love.

You see, if we functioned like other non-profits, if we functioned like a business, there could be a lot of activity without any involvement. And that's really important! Because without involvement, you're in a state of privacy. And the fact is, that your experience of orphanhood, your experience of independence is because you've chosen to be independent, you've chosen to be isolated. You've chosen not to have to engage in the normal activity of relating with your Source, of identifying with your Source, of letting your Source "flesh you out," if I may put it that way, and illuminate you in the fullness of who you Are as His Daughter or Son.

Now, my insistence upon Gift being the center and circumference of our activities rather than simple commerce, unequivocally calls these things into play, requiring a level of involvement and attention one might not have expected or desired.

Yet, such is the nature of miracle—a sudden shift of perception.

A sudden shift of perception means a sudden shift of devotion of attention, as well as the shift of one's object of affection.

Again, a sudden shift of perception means a sudden shift of devotion of attention, as well as the shift of one's object of affection. Both attention and affection change.

Instead of "self-protection" being the object of one's affection, it becomes the caring extension of love to another.

Your support of this work blesses others. And you could come at it backwards and say, "Because I care for another, I wish to bless them with this gift." You see? Where it isn't your appreciation of the Gift that prompts you to give it, but your concern and your care about your Brother or Sister that prompts you to give it. You see? There's a connection. There's love. There's relationship. There's the end of privacy and it undoes the most significant block to love, which is the absence of involvement.

And so again, I'm going to read this:

A sudden shift of perception means a sudden shift of devotion of attention, . . .

Now mind you, you're all aware that the definition of a miracle is a sudden shift of perception. Oh, well that could seem to be a different viewpoint dawns in your mind. And you could think that that's a private event or it's something that you could keep private . . . "Oh, I suddenly have a new perspective—nobody else knows about it yet, but I do." Well, it's not a miracle yet . . . it's not a miracle yet, because a sudden shift of perception means, in addition to the clarification, a change of behavior.

A sudden shift of perception means a sudden shift of devotion of attention, as well as the shift of one's object of affection. Instead of "self-protection" being the object of one's attention, it becomes the caring extension of love to another.

Not self-centeredness . . . you could say, other-centeredness. Not you on your mind, but someone else on your mind who gets preferential treatment because you care not to be alone, because you care to express your care. You care to let your care be public.

Instead of "self-protection" being the object of one's attention, it becomes the caring extension of love to another. Then . . . we've got that second thing called attention, then protecting that other's holiness becomes the new devotion of attention.

It's one thing to find awakened in you love for your Brother or your Sister. It's a second step that needs to occur that takes you out of the orphanage, out of the orphan mindset. And that is that because you care about your Sister or Brother, you genuinely feel caring about them. You now find it important to you to protect that other one's holiness, to stand up for it, to give voice to it, to witness to it, to treat them as though they are holy by loving them and letting that love move into expression. That's the key.

In this instance I am illuminating this shift in the middle of what has always been called a "business transaction."

Non-profit corporations doing a spiritual work sell what they have to offer because that allows the wheels to turn that allow production to happen and so on. And also, because it is the time honored standard. You see? And because it relieves everyone of the call to care for, honor, respect and be moral with others and it protects them from expending the effort it takes and it protects them against involvement. You see? That's really why. It's much simpler . . . it's much simpler.

In this instance I'm illuminating this shift—the miracle, the shift—in the middle of what has always been called a business transaction. That there is hesitancy about this amongst everyone and a confusion as to why it isn't just business as usual is understandable but unhelpful if a miracle is happening. Important. And this is relevant to every area of life.

Maintaining the status-quo in any respect . . . maintaining the status-quo in any respect is the great inhibitor of miracles.

You see? So we're not just talking about doing things in a novel way, we're talking about doing things in a new way that involves caring about your Brother and then caring enough to protect their holiness.

You know, the amount of leaven used is always disproportionately small compared to the mass that is being leavened. And it could appear to the skeptical that what I am insisting upon doing here is likewise inconsequential at the most, even though it is actually quite significant.

You know, one could say, "Oh, big impact this is going to have. Some little puny Foundation over there in the U.S. is doing things in a novel way. But what effect can that have?" Well you could say, "Yeah, one individual in Galilee only lived thirty-three years, was a carpenter and a preacher of some sort . . . you know that was a really small amount of leaven wasn't it. What effect could it have? What impact could it have?" Well, you know the answer to that.

. . . the amount of leaven used is always disproportionately small compared to the mass which is being leavened and it could appear to the skeptical that what I am insisting upon doing here is likewise inconsequential at the most, even though it is actually quite significant. And it could also appear to be nothing more than a "slight of mind" at the least—suggesting change when none is actually occurring.

Yet, the Course says, "There are no private thoughts."

Well . . .

Likewise, there are no private affections and there are no private attentions. What gets your attention and affection weighs in the universal balance. If you withdraw your affections from self-protection it is reduced throughout the Brotherhood in those still valuing and practicing it.

Do you see that?

When you withdraw your investment of faith and emotion in it, it lessens the faith and emotion in it throughout the whole group, we'll say, who have been finding it meaningful. They've lost a valued supporter. And so their resolve is weakened by your withdrawal. It's as simple as that.

So it's not inconsequential what I'm talking about, if this shift occurs in each one, not just relative to the work we're doing and the support it takes to keep it going, but in all areas of your lives. You see?

If you withdraw your affection from self-protection it is reduced throughout the Brotherhood in those still valuing and practicing it. And if your devotion of attention shifts to the acknowledgement and protection of your Brother's holiness, it likewise enriches the affections of all of the Brotherhood in a more conscious union.

You are not powerless. You are not meaningless. And what you believe and put your faith in constitutes you joining with others loving those same beliefs or those same truths. And so it's important what you choose.

So, . . .

It is a simple truth needing only to be practiced.

Now . . .

The fact that one can feel the inconvenience of the care and involvement which is inseparable from what I am teaching—because giving is the only way he can have what he wants—demonstrates the fact that a simple truth has been revealed and heard.

If it has been revealed and not heard no one would feel the inconvenience of the care and the involvement. And no one would say, "Oh why can't they just charge something for what they do? After all, with the outreach of the internet they can charge small amounts and make millions of dollars because people will be willing to pay it." You see? "Oh them . . . they'll pay it . . . them, huh . . . not me. I won't have to be involved." You see? "I'll pay it when I get my bill. I'll gladly pay it. But I won't care enough to do it without the bill. I won't embrace my Brother and be conscious of my Brother enough to find his holiness worth supporting by making a gift." You see?

Now am I saying all of this to make anyone feel guilty, or put the touch on their wallet? No! As you can see I'm talking about a miracle. I'm talking about a shift of perception. I'm talking about an inner action, one that gets translated into outward expressions where connection actually occurs, and where isolation is broken, abandoned, not employed, because something else is more important to that one.

So . . .

The fact that one can feel the inconvenience of the care and involvement which is inseparable from what I am teaching . . .

. . . you see, by my saying everything is a gift, you can't buy it. The only way you can have it is by it being a Gift to you. And Gift must be the arena, the wholeness of the involvement.

The fact that one can feel the inconvenience of the care and involvement which is inseparable from what I am teaching—because giving is the only way he can have what he wants—demonstrates the fact that a simple truth has been revealed and heard. The familiar blocks have been rendered meaningless—and you don't like it—and growth is required.

Again, perhaps a little bit more than you were considering having to give, a little bit more involvement than you thought you would have to engage in . . . you know . . . like growing, like actually changing, like actually adopting a new way of being.

It is consistent with what I am teaching and what the Course illuminates: To take the steps which remove the blocks to love, not complain about them.

Take the steps which remove the blocks to love. Important. You see?

What I've been talking about for the last few weeks involves something more than just a shift in your mind. It involves a shift in your behavior and a shift in your motivation. That's called growing, that's called change.

It makes sense to change motives and behaviors when truth is revealed and heard, whether the adjustment is "convenient" or not. You see?

Hm-m, a poor little boy learning how to play the piano, his teacher said, "You need to practice harder." Oh, that's not convenient. "I wasn't bargaining for that! That takes a whole lot more than what I planned to give in terms of learning to play the piano. That's just not convenient!"

"Well, I'm sorry, young man, but if you want to learn how to play the piano, you will have to engage in the inconvenient. And you'll have to practice harder. You'll have to practice longer. You'll have to pay more specific attention to what you're doing so that you might master the movement or the tone or the grace that's called for in the music you're playing." You see?

After all, new motives and behaviors are the natural result of sudden shifts of perception—of miracles.

And there it is: New motives and behaviors are the natural result, they should be the expected result of sudden shifts of perception.

So . . . and this is not Paul talking any longer.

The call here is for a new way to be . . . a new way to be with each other. This is just the focal point, but it's for you to take into your relationships with everyone. Oh-h, do you feel overwhelmed at the possibility? Well, I understand. But it's natural to love. And when you dare to do the inconvenient thing, you'll find your capacity being illuminated to you. And you will not be exhausted by caring, you will not be exhausted by the inexhaustible love that abides in you because the Father is putting it there at every moment.

Now, I will finish this letter with Paul, because I want him to continue to listen for it. I want him to continue to do what feels inconvenient to him to do, because this is valuable learning for him and for everyone else.

As Paul said when he first started tonight: There is a need. There is a very practical need to pay-off a loan and sell a property that no longer serves purpose. It is a good thing to have happen. The property needs to be cleaned up and somewhat refurbished in preparation for sale. And those are the simple facts.

And I'm glad everyone knows. And as soon as the rest of the letter is done, it will be shared with everyone on the web site and by e-mail. And I thank you for taking your time tonight to listen, because this shift of perception is indeed a significant miracle which will reach farther than you can imagine.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

¹Workbook, Lesson 23

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

July 16th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

What we've been talking at length about, the unholy relationship and the meaning of those words I have expressed, is a relationship with someone or something in which you find God nowhere to be found. Where your divinity and the divinity of your Brother or the divinity of anything escapes your attention completely—doesn't occupy it at all—because you, in your relationship with everything, are giving definitions to it that have nothing to do with God . . . hence you find nothing there expressive of God. Your definitions don't allow it.

Now we've also been talking about the two pictures. And although one of them has a very ornate frame, which gets all of your attention, we've talked about the necessity of bringing your attention to the pictures ignoring the frame. And the fact that fundamentally, the same thing is in each picture: A relationship—an unholy relationship and (we haven't used the words in recent weeks) a holy relationship in the other.

As we go along, you find yourself invited like further and further into something you didn't know you were going to be encountering. A Course In Miracles is not a literary work to be read like other books. It is an expression of ideas, the intent of which are to cause movement in you and move you from one perspective of yourself and the world into another. In other words, to promote actual change.

Recently you may have felt as though I have been pressing for a lot more change than ever before. And you might be surprised at it. But it is important. And although change isn't always fun, it's always essential. And facing that with courage is where you find yourselves now. That is where we are in the process and it's necessary not to cringe or at least not withdraw in the face of the call for change—the call for growth that we find ourselves at.

It's very important not to misunderstand what's happening and assume that something must be wrong because there's a certain amount of discomfort associated with where we are in the process.

Now, this new section is entitled:

THE HEALED RELATIONSHIP¹

Well, we've been talking for weeks now about doing the two-step, haven't we? About entering into the holy instant because the holy instant, you could say, is the stepping-stone out of the human condition. It's the stepping-stone out of sin, sickness and death—suffering. It's the stepping-stone into that place where God's laws prevail. And as a result, you are never confronted with sin, disease or death, lack, fear, any of these things. You see?

Now, always I've suggested that in the practice of the two-step, you become still, you stop your incessant thinking and in the quietness you say, "Father, what is the truth here?" Now think about it. When you say, "Father what is the truth here?" you're obviously meaning what is the truth relative to this situation, what is the truth relative to what's happening with these things, what's the truth relative to what these things seem to be doing? You see? The question always has to do with something you're in relationship with.

By now it should be obvious to you that the subject, the focal point of A Course In Miracles, is relationships.

Now we've described at length what an unholy relationship is, what its characteristics are, what its uses are, how you use it, and on and on. We haven't talked a lot about a holy relationship. But you could imagine that if you're going to shift from an unholy relationship to a holy relationship, it's going to involve your having said, "Father, what is the truth here about this relationship?" And you might imagine that the answer will be an intellectual explanation so that you might understand what the truth is here about this relationship.

And I'm here to tell you tonight that the truth about a relationship is not a head-trip. The truth about relationship is involvement. The truth about relationship is your heart, your nature as Love Itself, which is placed in you by the Father because you are His Self expressed and He is Love. And this Love that you Are must come into play. It must find expression in you as feeling, as caring, as affection, as thoughtfulness . . . you see? . . . something far more than an intellectual understanding.

“Oh-h, well you’ve been studying the Course and I’m studying the Course—we’re prime candidates for engaging in a holy relationship . . .”

Well, you could approach it that way and you could approach it as though you were going to bring into play all the things that the two you think a holy relationship is. Head-trip . . . head-trip . . . head-trip . . . no connection . . . no connection. An interaction based upon head-trip . . . head-trip . . . head-trip times two because both of you are doing head-trip . . . head-trip . . . head-trip. You see?

Now what have we been talking about for quite awhile now? We’ve been talking about the two-step and the holy instant. We’ve been talking about not interacting first with the thing you’re in relationship with, but going within first and connecting with the Father or connecting with the Holy Spirit. Being still, stopping your thinking, enquiring, “What is the Father’s Perspective now regarding this?”

Now while you’re doing this, you’ve set aside your interactions. You’ve set aside whatever allegiances you have with this thing you’re in relationship with because you don’t want your preoccupations or their preoccupations to get in the way of what the answer will be through your quiet, genuine inquiry: “Father, Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?”

The Holy Spirit will respond and communicate with you, I will say, in the form of communion—an inner definite communication that is more than just words but is a communication of feeling and meaning that does something to your mind. It clears out the fog. It clears out the clutter. It simplifies, you might say, the viewing area—the area of consciousness—and reveals to you God’s truth relative to whatever you’ve asked about.

And this changes you. Important.

The realization that occurs in you causes you to behave in a different manner than the way you behaved without engaging in the two-step or the holy instant. Now in your relationship with another, what comes out of your mouth is characteristic of a holy relationship. It’s not a planned behavior, it’s not a patterned or habitual behavior. It’s a behavior in the moment that arises out of fresh, clear, conscious awareness of what you’re involved in, what you’re involved with, with a perspective far beyond your puny little private intellectual capacities.

Now there's something else. A holy relationship isn't a nice substitute or alternative to an unholy relationship.

"Oh-h, we've been having an unholy relationship, let's have a holy relationship!"

No. You may choose to engage in a holy relationship in the manner that I just spoke of, which isn't by plan. But it's going to be more than just having a new different kind of relationship—one that's at a higher plateau of being. No. The thing is, that a holy relationship is the only means you have for going Home or for coming Home. It is absolutely humungously meaningful. It is the bottom-line absolute and only way to come Home, to Wake up, to come back into your right Mind. It's not just a nice alternative to an unholy relationship.

No. It's not just a nice alternative to an unholy relationship. It's the most momentous singular act that you can engage in. It's the act that lets you walk out of the insane asylum. It's the act that brings you into the arena where God's laws prevail.

It's the act that annihilates sin, sickness and death.

It's the act that illuminates everything as the Kingdom of Heaven that it always has been but which you didn't see when you were choosing valiantly and with great courage to try to do the impossible and be an independent agent becoming something valid and actual without having a relationship with your Source. You see?

Yeah, I know . . . you've been reading A Course In Miracles. And you've read about unholy relationships and holy relationships . . . it's very interesting isn't it. Stimulating. But you've got to realize that it's something far more valuable than a source of stimulation. It involves in its exposure of ideas, your discovering how to do the one thing that will return your sanity to you and cause you to become free of all of the things that you have felt were unjust and inappropriate for you to be bound by, like chance and fate and victimization, and accident and illness and mean-spiritedness.

Whether you could justify the feeling or not, you all have felt that these represent something invalid, that you shouldn't be actually subject to them and that actually there must be a way to get beyond them. Well, there is and it's here. But it's going to mean, as we've been talking about, actually changing—actually being in a new way and being it with a Brother or a Sister.

Now I have shared that relationships are with everything: Brothers and Sisters, plants, inanimate objects, animate objects. Inanimate objects don't join with you, as I've said. They don't join with you in your false assessments—the imaginative meanings that you've given to them. But animate objects, especially ones that you would call sentient or conscious, are different. Because abandoning an unholy relationship with them requires interacting with whatever game playing they're engaged in . . . whatever roster of definitions that they have applied to their world which of course, you're part of. And so, there are definitions of you as well, and there are purposes to which they put their mind to manipulate you to get what they want that they think you have and so on.

So it gets a little, shall I say, messier—a little bit more complicated. And it's not uncommon for everyone to find a way to behave with your animate relationships as though they're inanimate. You try to turn them into inanimate things and get them to behave according to rules rather than their heart or their emotion.

Now:

The holy relationship . . .

. . . it says here . . .

. . . is the expression of the holy instant in living in this world.

. . . stop. Become still. Ask the Father or the Holy Spirit, "What is the truth here?" The truth is revealed with meaning and feeling. But until it's expressed, you might say, it might as well not have happened.

Now that's not true actually, because it does sit there as an experience for you to actualize by expressing it. But all of you must become clear on this. It's the expression of what becomes known in the holy instant that actualizes the whole reason for there being the provision of the holy instant. Because when it's expressed, it's actualized and it becomes change—change manifest.

The holy relationship is the expression of the holy instant . . .

. . . the holy instant discloses things to you, you become aware of them, of the meaning and the feeling and then you express it in the world—in the world that you have been calling a physical world arising from a big bang but which is actually the Kingdom of Heaven. And in your actualizing it in this way, in the world, you are doing exactly what it takes to illuminate this "big-bang" world as what it truly is, the Kingdom of Heaven.

It causes your relationship with things and with others to become holy. And it causes your affection to be transformed so that you are intent upon acknowledging and upholding and witnessing to that which is holy and whatever you're in relationship with. And your intent is to uphold that rather than tear it down. And of course, tearing it down was, at the bottom line, your goal in the unholy relationship because, as we said, it's the goal of the unholy relationship to keep God out of the picture, which means it is its goal to keep you unconscious of your divinity, of who you truly Are—and as I said, that is evil. And that is what the holy instant lifts you out of. That is Its purpose. The holy relationship is a consummation of that. Very important.

It's the most important thing! The holy relationship is the most important thing that exists for orphans—for those who are not Awake.

Again, going into the book . . .

The holy relationship is the expression of the holy instant in living . . .

. . . like actualized . . .

. . . in living in this world. Like everything about salvation, the holy instant is a practical device, witnessed to by . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . its results.

The manifestation, the actualization, the expression. You see?

The holy instant NEVER fails.

You may fail in abiding in the holy instant long enough for the Holy Spirit to register with you, but the holy instant, if you let it register with you, never fails in its function to disclose to you what the truth is here in your relationship so that it might be actualized as the holy relationship that it is.

The holy instant NEVER fails. The experience of it is ALWAYS felt. Yet without . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . expression, . . .

... you see? Keep in mind that all of this is relevant to and relative to, because it's related to everything. The holy instant has as its function, to illuminate the holy relationship. And the holy relationship is the experience of your having, as an orphan, become still and having reached outside of the walls of the orphanage by saying, "Father, what is the truth here?" hearing the Meaning of the answer and feeling it and being moved to act upon it and behave toward what you're in relationship with as though it's holy and to reinforce its holiness by not engaging in anything opposed to it. So that your every action is a confirmation of, not the orphan mentality that your Brother might be employing, but the divine one that he is that your reinforcement of, that your witnessing for, allows him to embrace with perhaps a little bit of confidence or a lot of confidence. You see?

That's actualization. That's the holy instant causing the expression of the realization of God's truth and uncovering and illuminating the holiness of the relationship with whatever it is that prompted you to engage in the holy instant.

This is the practical device—the mechanism—by which the transition from dreaming to being Awake is effected. This is the way it occurs.

The experience of it is ALWAYS felt. Yet without expression, it is not REMEMBERED.

Important. Here's the way it works: When you engage in expressing the meaning that has been revealed to you as a result of having engaged in the holy instant, it, for lack of better words, jogs your memory and you remember the truth, you remember the holiness of your Brother, you remember the experience of experiencing the holiness of your Brother because you've had the experience before. You've had the experience before you chose to say, "Father, I'd rather do it my way. Father, I'd rather give the meanings to everything. Father, I want a divorce."

Before that, these experiences that we're talking about you're coming back into an experience of, were always yours. And so that it's like a spiritually visceral remembering of that which you already knew and have always known, [snaps fingers] clicks into place in you.

Listen again:

The holy instant NEVER fails. The experience of it is ALWAYS felt. Yet without expression, it is not REMEMBERED.

When it gets expressed, your memory opens up and you remember what you knew before. And there's nothing intellectual about it. It isn't a head-trip at all. You see? This is the kind of change we're talking about. This is what coming back into your right Mind means.

The holy relationship is a constant reminder of the experience in which the relationship became what it is.

The holy relationship . . . this experience of being sane, this experience of Knowing the truth about your Brother or Sister and therefore about yourself, as long as it's present, it's a reminder of how it came to be remembered, it's a reminder of the holy instant. And the fact that the holy instant is the one and only thing it takes to get out of the crab barrel, to get out of the orphanage, to get out of the orphan mindset, to get out of fear, to get out of sin, sickness and death, anxiety, jealousy, mean-spiritedness, self-protection, it keeps in place the remembrance of what it took and all it took, which wasn't nearly as much as you might have thought it would take.

And as the unholy relationship is a continuing hymn of hate in praise of ITS maker, so is the holy relationship a happy song of praise to the Redeemer of relationships.

What's the Redeemer relationships? The Holy Spirit. What is the Holy Spirit? Nothing more than your right Mind.

The holy relationship, a major step toward the perception of the real world, is learned.

It can't be remembered because it hasn't happened before.

The holy relationship, a major step toward the perception of the real world, is learned.

And this is important:

It is the old, unholy relationship, transformed and seen anew.

The simple fact is there are not two "you's" . . . there are not two of you—a holy one and an unholy one. There's only you seeing yourself through a glass darkly or seeing yourself clearly. So if you're seeing yourself through a glass darkly, clarity is going to have to insert itself and become present and active and transformational in the glass darkly frame of mind. You see?

So, the insane you is going to discover sanity right in the middle of what had seemed to be insanity, because there's just you. It's important.

The holy relationship, a major step toward the perception of the real world, is learned. It is the old, unholy relationship, . .

... the self same one ...

... transformed and seen anew. The holy relationship is a phenomenal teaching accomplishment. In all its aspects, as it begins, develops and becomes accomplished, . .

... expressed ...

... it represents the REVERSAL of the unholy relationship.

In other words, it's you in your unholy relationship mode being changed—allowing yourself to be transformed by the renewing of your Mind, by the remembering of what you've always Known, but what you have successfully blocked from view.

Be comforted in this; the only difficult phase is the beginning. For here, the goal of the relationship is abruptly shifted to the exact opposite of what it was.

This means you having to adopt a new goal that is the exact opposite of what your goal had previously been. This is very involving of you . . . of you . . . of each of you. And at the same time the means by which it is involving for you is that you must become involved with your Brother or Sister. You can't do this privately. You can only do it in the context of the relationship. And right now you're starting out doing this in the context of your current understanding of relationships and that understanding is an unholy relationship.

You might think it will be as impossible as lifting yourself up by your bootstraps. The only thing is, you don't have to do that. You don't have to do it with the part of your mind that you separated off from the rest and said, "This is me and everything in this area of my awareness is what's real." No! The disowned part is the Holy Spirit. It is waiting for your attention to come back to It so that It can respond and make whole all of you that was never ever actually divided up.

Again ...

... here, the goal of the relationship is abruptly shifted to the exact opposite of what it was. This is the first result of offering the relationship to the Holy Spirit, to use for His purposes.

Now, you may have read this in the past as though it's talking about your relationship with your partner or your relationship with another human being and that the first result of offering the relationship to the Holy Spirit to use for His purposes is what will bring the result you need.

Now, offering the relationship to the Holy Spirit doesn't mean embracing your cherished one in your mind and saying, "I am bringing us to you, Holy Spirit, so that we might have a holy relationship." It has to do with something we've been saying over and over: It is you stepping back from your cherished one or your cherished things, or your stable life-style that is essential you think, and says something about you . . . it is necessary to step back from them all into the quiet to say, "Father, separate and apart from any of the meanings or definitions I have applied to all of these things, what is the truth here? I want to learn Your perspective."

So, if you are going to inquire, minus your meanings and definitions and so on, it means minus the meaning that says, "This is my cherished one. I want for my cherished one and I to stand and have our relationship become holy." That's too much of you. That's too much of your thinking. That's too much of the orphan mindset. You've got meanings that you've applied to it. And you don't know how much or whether or not any of it coincides with the Father's perspective—with the divine truth.

So, offering the relationship to the Holy Spirit really means you're stepping back from the relationship and all of the meanings that you have given to it and which are affecting you and saying, "Father, in spite of what I'm experiencing, instead of the way I'm experiencing it, what is the truth here?" . . . because you don't want your response to arise out of your conditioned thinking because that's not fresh, it's not the Father's perspective in the moment, it's not the vitality of the Movement of Creation now . . . now . . . now. And that's the promise. That's what the holy instant is for. And that's what the holy relationship will be about.

And not only that, your abandonment of your best definitions and meanings and theories and concepts, which will allow the holy relationship to occur, is the means by which you actually and effectively initiate your movement Home. You see? You must embrace a larger picture than just you and your cherished one, that you want to have a holy relationship with, because it's not just about having a holy relationship with your special one, or finding the special one that's waiting out there for you . . . you see? . . . to cherish.

Your Brother is your means for Waking up. Your Brother therefore, is your savior, and you are your Brother's savior. Your relationships are the threshold of your movement Home. Simple . . . profound.

Now, the invitation to the Holy Spirit to use your relationship with whatever it is that's prompted you to turn to the Holy Spirit . . .

This invitation is accepted immediately, and the Holy Spirit wastes no time in introducing the practical results of asking Him to enter.

You see? You might not have thought that you were asking the Holy Spirit to enter when you became still and said, "Father," or "Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?" You might not have thought of that as inviting the Holy Spirit in, but you were. You were dropping the barriers, the boundaries. You were saying, "You're welcome here where you hadn't been awhile ago because I was spending too much time thinking about exactly what I wanted to think about and You weren't part of it." You see? So:

This invitation is accepted immediately, and the Holy Spirit wastes no time in introducing the practical results of asking Him to enter. AT ONCE His goal replaces yours.

Mind you, the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind, therefore, your right Mind's goal replaces your wrong mind's goal. Do you see the integrity of that? Immediately it undoes your tiny, mean-spirited, mis-directed, unintelligent frame of mind, thus bringing integrity to you.

This is accomplished very rapidly, but it makes the relationship seem disturbed, disjunctive and even quite distressing.

And this is talking about a partner, another sentient being. And it's important to understand this. Listen again:

This is accomplished very rapidly, but it makes the relationship seem disturbed, disjunctive and even quite distressing. The reason is quite clear. For the relationship as it IS is out of line with its own goal, and clearly unsuited to the purpose which has been accepted for it.

What does that mean? Not totally clear? What it means is that the goal of the independent authorizer—the orphan—is to become valid without having to be connected to its Source. It's like, its goal is to be a lit light bulb that isn't plugged in. Therefore, its goal is insane. Its goal is to accomplish what can't be accomplished. Its goal is to engage you in something that is a complete waste of your time, energy and attention. And it causes you sin, sickness and death—fear.

So, when the Holy Spirit answers at once, when His goal replaces yours it's . . .

. . . accomplished very rapidly, but it makes the relationship seem disturbed, disjunctive and even quite distressing. [And] The reason is quite clear. For the relationship as it IS . . .

. . . you know, the orphan mindset . . .

. . . is out of line with its own goal,

. . . which is to accomplish the impossible . . .

. . . and [it's] clearly unsuited to the purpose which has been accepted for it.

It's unsuited to it because it's an impossible task and it's a task that's something that doesn't even exist actually . . . must accomplish. The thing that doesn't actually exist is you as an independent agent, you as a physical entity having nothing to do with the divine Mind, intelligence, life, truth, love.

In its unholy condition, YOUR goal was all that seemed to give it meaning.

You see? You had looked at the ornate frame and you had believed what it implied, that you could accomplish and become and the pleasure and the satisfaction and the pride and the self-respect that you would gain from accomplishing this thing that can't be accomplished. It seemed to give your life meaning even though it was something you could never succeed at.

Now, once the Holy Spirit answers quickly, it makes no sense. Now it makes no sense.

Now it seems to make no sense.

You see? As clarity comes, it undermines your mental habits, your mindsets. It undermines those things that gave you a sense of security, especially in the relationship with the one that you care enough to do the two-step for.

Many relationships have been broken off at this point, and the pursuit of the old goal re-established in another relationship. For once the unholy relationship has ACCEPTED the goal of holiness, it can never again be what it [is] was.

Again, remember there's only one of you. You're either clear or your unclear. You're either sane or your insane. So that's why it says:

For once the unholy relationship . . .

... once you and your unclarity ...

has ACCEPTED the goal of holiness, it can never again be what it [is] was.

Now, because your holiness is going to take hold in your present mindset of unholiness it is going to call for sometimes wrenching adjustment because of the love you have for the old mindset.

The temptation of the ego becomes extremely intense with this shift in goals.

Now, it's really good to be clear about this, because then you, as I said, will not cringe or back off from it. You will not think something has gone wrong.

The temptation of the ego ...

... at this point ...

... becomes extremely intense with this shift in goals. For the relationship has not, as yet, been changed sufficiently to make its former goal completely without attraction, . .

... in other words, completely unattractive ...

... and its structure. . .

... the structure of the former goal ...

... is "threatened" by the recognition of its inappropriateness for meeting its new purpose.

Did you get that? As this new purpose registers with you, it becomes clear that your old purposes will not help you accomplish this new goal. And you know what? That's liable to make you feel totally incompetent, totally incapable, totally worthless as though everything that ever gave you a sense of worth is wiped out from you and you have nothing to draw upon in order to feel worthwhile. This is the experience which results from a great love for that which is nonsense. And when clarity ... when the light shines on it, bringing you a new goal that you're unfamiliar with yet, it's very confusing. It is likely to be very confusing.

The conflict between the goal and the structure of the relationship is so apparent that they CANNOT co-exist.

When clarity comes to you, it comes to you clearly enough for you not to be confused and you're able to see just exactly how incompatible the two mindsets are. But then, because of your devotion to the life-long work you expended to try to accomplish the impossible, you become confused because you want to go back. It's like quitting cigarettes and wanting to go back and have one more puff.

The conflict between the goal and the structure of the relationship is so apparent that they CANNOT co-exist. Yet now, the goal will NOT be changed. Set firmly . . .

. . . the new goal . . .

Set firmly in the unholy relationship, there is no course except to CHANGE the relationship to fit the goal.

To change the unholy relationship mindset to fit the goals of the holy relationship, that's the only answer.

Until this happy solution is seen and accepted as the ONLY way out of the conflict, the relationship seems to be severely strained.

Now, this needs to be understood.

It would not be kinder to shift the goal more slowly, for the contrast would be obscured, . .

. . . it would be like reducing the contrast and making discernment more difficult . . .

. . . for the contrast would be obscured, and the ego given time to re-interpret each slow step according to its liking. Only a radical shift in purpose could induce a complete change of mind about what the whole relationship is FOR. As this change develops . . .

. . . and I'm going to add: Even though it begins strenuously . . .

As this change develops and is finally accomplished, it grows increasingly beneficent and joyous. But at the beginning, the situation is experienced as very precarious. A relationship, undertaken by two individuals for their unholy purposes, suddenly has HOLINESS for its goal. As these two contemplate their relationship from the point of view of this new purpose, they are inevitably appalled.

I promise you this is true. If you know it, you won't be surprised and you will dare to persist, even when the suggestion is to abandon the relationship and establish the old pattern with somebody else.

Their perception . . .

. . . those in the relationship . . .

Their perception of the relationship may even become quite disorganized. And yet, the former organization of their perception no longer serves the purpose they have agreed to meet.

It no longer serves the purpose of the new goal of holiness.

This is the time for FAITH. You LET this goal be set for you. That was an act of faith. Do not abandon faith, now that the rewards of faith are being introduced.

Even though the rewards are being experienced strenuously because the change is so significant and the change undermines things that you felt were significant and necessary for your self-respect and on and on, it's the time for FAITH.

If you believed the Holy Spirit was there to ACCEPT the relationship, why would you now not still believe that He is there to purify what He has taken under His guidance? Have faith in each other in what [but] SEEMS to be a trying time.

Mind you again, this holy relationship stuff isn't just about significant others. It's not . . . special ones. You need to be asking, "Father, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, what is the truth here about this, that and the other thing?"

Have faith in each other . . .

. . . you see? That's why I'm saying that, because you can have faith in your neighbor, faith in your grocery store clerk and so on.

Have faith in each other in what [but] SEEMS to be a trying time. The goal is set. And your relationship has sanity as its purpose. For now you find yourselves in an insane relationship, RECOGNIZED as such in the light of its goal.

Clarity uncovers the insanity of your old paradigm, which you believe in and have valued. It is the way sanity returns.

And I'm going to leave this at this point tonight. You might say, "Gee whiz!" you know, I'm sure many of you have said, "Wow, I just turned everything over to the Holy Spirit, or I've been really trying to engage in what the Course is teaching and yet everything is turned upside-down. Something must be wrong." Tain't so.

I encourage you during this coming week to read this section at least this far so that you might arrive at a place where the strenuousness of things isn't alarming you as much, isn't distracting you significantly from still engaging in the two-step and the invitation of the holy instant. Because that's still where the answer is and that is still where the further clarification that will help you to move out of your old habits will come from.

I love you. I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

July 30th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, we've been talking about some rather serious things. Serious because well, it brings you to a point of having to do something you may not have thought you were going to have to do. And that is, as we have talked about, change . . . grow . . . become different willingly, not willfully, but willingly with approval from your heart.

To enter into the holy instant, to experience the influx of the awareness of truth from the Father or the Holy Spirit that happens in the holy instant—because that is the function of the holy instant—brings you spontaneously to a point that feels unfamiliar to you. It's new. It calls for you to notice in your Brother or your Sister—your fellowman—value that you hadn't been seeing and which you actually have no justification for, even though you're experiencing it.

You find yourself filled with inspiration to see things new. You're inspired to let your mind be made new. And there you are, having this new perspective that's very clear to you even though it had been absolutely obscure to you before.

Now, when you and your partner or a friend or someone you know who's willing to indulge in the holy instant for the express purpose of being infilled with the Father's Perspective so that you might see each other with eyes—I'm going to say, biased by God—biased by the Father's Perspective rather than your own personal perspective, you embark upon the holy relationship . . . you embark upon a holy relationship. And this is the first step Home. This is the first step back into your sanity.

But here's where the problem arises: When you do this, you find no justification for employing the old habits of relating to each other. But the habits don't disappear. All it takes is one unexpected event or remark or movement or look . . . and boom! . . . you're right back into traditional, habitual, manipulative means of controlling each other so that you can feel your balance.

And here's the other part of the difficulty: You feel that these responses—these conditioned responses—are not only justified, they are valid. And they are favorites. They are things you have attachments to. They are behaviors that tell you that you are sane, that you are grounded, that you are respectable, that you are worthwhile . . . real.

And so these are things you don't want to let go of. To let go of these things will mean that you will have to become—at least you believe you will have to become—ungrounded, unstable. And so it's very hard to let go of these habits. It's very hard to let go of the way the two of you have behaved before.

And so it takes real discipline not to lose the ground gained by virtue of practicing the two-step, engaging in the holy instant, having the influx of inspiration that allows you to experience your relationship in a new way, that we're identifying as a holy relationship. You don't want to lose the ground you've gained there because, as I've said, that's the first step back Home—that's the beginning of coming Home. And you do not want to have that movement—that goal—thwarted. And you especially don't want to have it thwarted by something as correctable as old habits.

But it does require persistence. That's what makes it difficult. That's what makes all of this serious because you have to engage in it seriously with determination.

It doesn't mean you have to lose your joy. But you might have thought that engaging in the two-step and the holy instant, and the beginning of an experience of a holy relationship, that all of your blocks to the experience of love and the expression of love would just melt and that there would be a natural, spontaneous harmony to the Movement.

And so, when you find yourself up against the persistence of your old habits, you discover that there's some work, there's some effort that you're going to have to put forth. You are going to have to once again engage in learning, learning something unfamiliar . . . learning it so completely by persistence that it becomes familiar. And you might say, becomes the new habit. I say that cautiously because habits, as you employ them and create them, are the effect of specific conscious or specific consciously directed ideas, the practice of which have a goal to be accomplished. And the goal is something you made up when you weren't joined with your Father.

The new habit that we're talking about is one of persistently bringing yourself back to the point where you are yielding to the Father . . . continually bringing yourself back to the place where you say, "Father what is the truth here?" and then listening without interposing any of your own fine ideas. You see?

So the habit is the practice of no-habit. It's a practice that you will eventually shift into and it will just be called, "being Awake."

Now, going into the book and reading . . . oh, the last couple of sentences that we finished up with last week:

The goal IS set.

In other words, the holy relationship is what you've chosen for.

And your relationship has sanity as its purpose. For now you find yourselves in an insane relationship, RECOGNIZED as such in the light of its goal.

In other words, you're in this rather strange position of recognizing that you're not in your right Mind and recognizing it while you're not in it. It's like the clarity of knowing that you are engaging in nonsense while you're still engaging in it. It's like becoming aware while you're having a dream, that you're having a dream.

That is the beginning of Waking up.

So . . .

. . . now you find yourselves in an insane relationship, RECOGNIZED as such in the light of its goal.

And you feel the weirdness of it and . . .

Now the ego . . .

. . . the orphan mindset, the mindset of the one who thinks he's an independent agent . . .

Now the ego counsels thus; substitute for this ANOTHER relationship to which your former goal was quite appropriate.

In other words, the going gets a little bit tough. It's requiring a little bit of discipline. And the ego says—the old way of thinking says—"Hey . . . hey, it doesn't have to be this hard. You've been doing well enough your whole life. You know, things haven't gone to pot. Things aren't going to pot right now. You don't have to do this. You know, maybe your partner wants to have this 'holy relationship shit' . . . but you don't have to. You don't have to work this hard because there's somebody that will be happy with you just as you are. Let this one go find someone else to have a holy relationship with."

This idea comes to you because you get frustrated at the lack of fulfillment that you were getting from your old ego relationship because it's not working really well since you've made this new commitment. And yet after having made this new commitment, you're not really comfortable yet, there. So, it's like six, to one-half dozen of the other. You see?

Yeah, you don't have to put up with this shit. You don't have to be frustrated all the time. You don't have to put up with her or him reminding you of what's revealed in the holy instant about the relationship, when you would rather be employing some of your old habits of manipulation so that you might get a little hit of self-respect based upon being unjoined. You see?

It is a very frustrating experience. It feels ungrounded. It feels unsatisfying and so, you know, the old habit kicks in . . . "you don't have to do this, go find someone who will like you just as you are."

You can escape from your distress only by getting rid of each other.

What's the distress? The distress is the lack of recognized fulfillment arising out of the new goal and the practice of staying in the holy instant so that the growth might occur . . . so that the change might happen and so that the unfamiliar can become familiar.

Now, the ego's sneaky.

You need not part entirely if you choose not to do so. But you must exclude major areas of fantasy from each other, to save your sanity.

Now what is the ego saying? What are the major areas of fantasy that you must exclude from each other? Why it's the awareness of your holiness, your awareness of your partner's holiness. You must abandon the fantasies that the Holy Spirit has provided you—those crazy nonsensical ideas of unity and harmony and love and peace and wholeness, and that you're actually the Sons and Daughters of God and not independent agents at all. These are the fantasies that the ego says you can withhold from each other and still stay together and not have to lose your familiar and satisfying relationship. You see? And you must do this to save your sanity, which means to remain stuck in your ignorance that you're comfortable with. And because you're comfortable with it, it must mean that you are, in most respects, sane . . . right? Obviously, if you're insane you'll be uncomfortable. If you're sane, you'll be comfortable. So:

. . . you must exclude major areas of fantasy from each other, to save your sanity.

Now, it says:

Hear not this now!

In other words, be alert. And when these thoughts present themselves to you, don't accept them. Recognize them as distractions from your goal to Wake up, from your goal of recognizing the holiness of yourself and your Brother or Sister and operating on that basis.

Have faith in Him . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

Who answered you. He heard. Has He not been very explicit in His answer? You are not now wholly insane. Can you DENY that He has given you a most explicit statement?

You see when you do this, when you engage in the holy instant and when the Father or the Holy Spirit responds to you with the truth, the response is very clear. It could be called an explicit statement. It could be called an explicit understanding that is so clear that the words that identify it are inescapable. And so the experience constitutes a statement, a statement of such meaning that your being able to see your Brother and everything in a new light, somehow spontaneously and not as a result of learning...learning...learning, like memorization: two-times-two is four, two-times-three is six, two-times-four is eight and on and on over and over so that you get it into the system.

But no, you're having this experience without going through a rehearsal, without going through steps. It's because you didn't acquire this clarity through a conscious process of memorization or of storing data so that you could say that you have learned, that you could seem to lose it easily or you can be easily distracted from it by your old habits.

Continuing . . .

Now He asks for faith a little longer, even in bewilderment.

Even though you're unsure, even though things feel unstable to you because it's not being easy to employ your old habits of control, have faith. You don't have to be clear in order to have faith. In fact when things are clear, you don't think you need faith. It's when you are bewildered that you need faith and because you have embarked on a very specific process of Awakening—of coming back into your right Mind—you must be diligent. It's that simple. Even if it's inconvenient to you, you must persist.

This is why what we're talking about seems to be serious. Because there's not a lot of joy to it, there's not a lot of buoyancy to it, there's not a wave that picks you up and deposits you in the Promised Land. There's a movement of inspiration that infills you and uncovers old bad habits as bad habits, so that you can see they're not working for you really, so that you can more easily let go of them . . . and so that you actually do go ahead and let go of them. In other words, you learn . . . you change . . . you grow.

Again, this Course In Miracles is not a head-trip, it's not a mental learning process. It's a movement of growth in which you will experience yourself being changed by virtue of the inspiration that is provided to you and by virtue of your letting it in and behaving in harmony with it, instead of persisting in rehearsing and rehearsing and rehearsing all of your old mindsets, theories and so on.

Now He asks for faith a little longer, even in bewilderment. For this will go, . .

. . . the bewilderment will go . . .

. . . and you will see the justification for your faith emerge, to bring you shining conviction. Abandon Him . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit, the One you've turned to, and the One Who has responded and the One Who stands with you . . .

. . . Abandon Him not now, nor each other.

Even though there are moments you could just easily walk away from him or easily walk away from her because nothing's going right between you anymore. The old things you used to do that seems to make things right aren't making things right anymore and you can't stick with the new things long enough for them to set into place and prove to you, convince you that indeed you are grounded and you are safe. You see?

This relationship HAS BEEN reborn as holy.

Again, it's not going to feel like it. It will, momentarily here and there, but mostly it's going to feel like a demand for hard work, a demand for discipline that you hadn't expected. And that somehow, your ego says, "I ought to tell you that what you're embarking on here is itself insane and that you are leaving sanity behind by abandoning your old habits."

Know this so that you can bring the determination and the commitment to this unsteady place and hold to it as you move through it and things stabilize.

Accept with gladness what you do not understand, and let it be explained to you as you perceive its purpose work in it to MAKE it holy.

In other words, it's going to be like planting a seed. And you keep looking, you water and you look . . . and you water and you look . . . and nothing. And you water and you look . . . and you water and you look . . . and a week goes by. And you water and you look . . . and nothing happens. Well, what do you do? You say, "Hey I could be doing the things I used to be doing when I wasn't watering and watching. I was pretty happy doing the other things. This is for the birds!"

No. If you've planted seeds before, you don't have this indecision and deterrent presenting itself to you. You know that you water and you look . . . and you water and you look. You even realize that you can water and not look . . . and water and not look . . . and water and not look . . . and the crop will come up. You see? So:

You will find many opportunities to blame each other for the "failure" of your relationship, for it will seem, at times, to have NO purpose.

Now, that isn't fleshed out very much . . .

. . . it will seem, at times, to have NO purpose.

Well, okay. But here is some practical aspects of it: The relationship will seem to have no purpose because none of the things you used to do that worked, will work. It's that simple. It will seem to have no purpose because nothing can be accomplished. You may try to slip back into your old habits and manipulations but your partner in this is liable to see you doing it and call you on it, and not be manipulated by it like he or she used to. So you're stuck. You're stuck with the "failure" of the old ways of being together. Whew!

And you know what? It makes you mad. It frustrates you. And of course, when you're mad and frustrated you're not in the holy instant, are you?

You're not anywhere near that place where, in the quietness and the desire to know, "What's the more of what God is being here than what I'm seeing?" Well, you're trapped. You're just simply trapped.

If you can't get into that place where the holy instant can be experienced, because it's so damn justifiable to you to be upset because nothing is working, then you have been successfully distracted from the holy purpose that the two of you have put into place regarding your relationship. And there's no way for you to be clear. There's no way for there to be a refreshment of the influx of inspiration.

A sense of aimlessness will come to haunt you, and to remind you of all the ways you once sought for satisfaction, and thought you found it.

A lot of reverie will go on. Yeah, that used to work and this used to work. She or he fell for it every time. It always worked. It becomes a despairing situation.

A sense of aimlessness will come to haunt you, and to remind you of all the ways you once sought for satisfaction, and thought you found it. Forget not now the misery you REALLY found, and do not now breathe life into your failing egos. For your relationship has NOT been disrupted. It has been SAVED.

You see? When it says:

Forget not now the misery you REALLY found, . .

. . . it's like saying: Don't forget that there was a moment where you realized that you were insane, that everything you thought had been normal all your life was not normal according to God's terms. And it didn't really bring you satisfaction or wholeness because sin, disease and death are still operating . . . are still governing. You knuckle down to them. It doesn't seem that they knuckle down to you. And yet that's the correction that's called for. So:

Forget not now the misery you REALLY [thought you] found, and do not now breathe life into your failing egos.

You know . . . [chuckles]. Oh, there's such a temptation to give artificial respiration and do everything you can to arouse the old way things worked. And then because you can't do it, you have to deal with the ongoing frustration.

Key point: As a result of practicing the holy instant and moving into the holy relationship . . .

. . . [For] your relationship has NOT been disrupted. It has been SAVED.

Now, here's why everything seems upside-down, unstable, messed-up.

You are very new in the ways of salvation, and think you have lost your way. YOUR way . . .

. . . the one you have been employing . . .

. . . IS lost, but think not this is LOSS. In your newness, remember that you have started again, . .

. . . Key point:

. . . TOGETHER.

You're simply starting together in a new way that neither one of you is totally familiar with, perhaps not even very familiar with. If you stay in the holy instant, if you do not abandon it, if you begin to re-employ your best judgments and your thinking, you will become confused again. But all you have to do is: [snaps fingers] Stop . . . do the two-step, become still, ask "What is the truth here?" You see? And then listen. Be willing to hear, so that the holy instant is refreshed, in the sense of re-opened in the moment you're in. It's not a rehash of the previous holy instant. It's a matter of being in the innocent state of mind which is unobstructedly available to the inspiration that it is the Father's good pleasure to give to you, to reveal to you the truth, so that you might respond to it—your partner, your world—as the holy Son or Daughter of God and the Kingdom of Heaven that It is.

In your newness, . .

. . . where you're faltering some . . .

. . . remember that you have started again, TOGETHER. And take each other's hand, to walk together along a road far more familiar than you now believe.

See? You need to know these things so that it gives you the courage to persist.

. . . walk together along a road far more familiar than you now believe. Is it not certain that you will remember a goal unchanged throughout eternity?

I mentioned before that you were Awake before you went to sleep. So in your Waking up you are returning to a state that you abandoned at an earlier time, one that you are already entirely familiar with but which you are ignorant of because you have so conscientiously blocked it by your insistence upon trying to become an independent agent, whole and real in your own right, without your Source, without your Father.

Is it not certain that you will remember a goal unchanged throughout eternity? For you have chosen but the goal of God, from which your true intent was NEVER absent.

The shifting from the experience you're having right now, to the experience just described, is worth every ounce of effort, persistence, determination and labor that it takes to arrive at the end of the road, at the end of the Movement, at the end of the shift.

Throughout the Sonship is the song of freedom heard, in joyous echo of your choice.

So, another helpful hint: You're not doing this all by yourself. It might seem that when you are faced with your partner and your partner is faced with you, that it's just two little forlorn egos who are somehow insane and didn't know they were, but now know they are and are in the unenviable position of having to move through their confidence that they are insane when they're not. And they're having to stick to it as they move past whatever their current sense of insanity is so that they might find, like a gentle fog blowing in, a vague but increasing experience of sanity, of well-being, of holiness that increases, not because of anything you've consciously chosen to do, other than to stay where it can happen. You see?

The only thing you can do through an act of will is to choose to stay where the shift is happening. You just can't be responsible for it happening. And you can't be responsible for the content of what is emerging. But you can and you must be responsible for remaining in the place where it can happen.

Where is that place? That place is in the holy instant. That place is in the silence in the middle of you, where all there is present is your attention—your eager attention—your desire to know what you don't know yet. And to hell with everything you do know!

You know, even if some of what you know is true and real, you can dare in the holy instant to throw it all out, because that of it which is Real will be reintroduced by the Holy Spirit as you're listening. You simply need to be in that place where you're totally incompetent, you're totally unable to appropriately act. And so you're willing to listen to be infilled with the motive for acts that brings forth acts that identify Reality, that identify your wholeness, that identify your Brothers' and Sisters' wholeness. You see?

You have joined with many in the holy instant, and they have joined with you.

I know the holy instant seems like an emptiness to you. It seems like the quietness, the void. But it's full. It's full of the Presence of God. It's full of the Presence of Reality and the conscious experience of It that it's yours to be experiencing. So when you bring yourself to the holy instant, you're bringing yourself to a place that is full, full of your Reality, full of your comprehension of your Reality, full of all the Brotherhood, full of all of Creation. This is why coming to It is you returning to your right Mind. That's what it means.

You have joined with many in the holy instant, and they have joined with you. Think not your choice will leave you comfortless, for God Himself has blessed your holy relationship.

But see here's the rub: You're going to feel like doing this constitutes leaving your comfort. So when it says here:

Think not your choice will leave you comfortless, . .

You're going to say, "Wait a minute, my experience is the opposite of this. I'm not feeling comfortable." Well, in the end your choice will not leave you comfortless, because it will bring you to the immortal and eternal comfort of your Being, in which you are perfectly safe, perfectly at peace because there's no conflict in God, there's not conflict in Reality, there's no conflict in the Kingdom of Heaven.

Think not your choice will leave you comfortless, for God Himself has blessed your holy relationship.

How has God blessed your holy relationship? By revealing to you its holiness in a way that you can't deny, even though you can't explain how it is you're seeing its holiness. You see?

Join in His blessing, and withhold not yours upon it. For all it needs now is your blessing, that you may see that in it rests salvation.

Your Brother is your salvation. Your joining with your Brother in the holy relationship is your only means of escape from the insanity you're suffering from . . . from the sin, disease and death that you're suffering from and governed by.

[For] all it needs now is your blessing, that you may see that in it rests salvation. Condemn salvation not, . .

. . . even though its means is unfamiliar with you and makes you feel awkward.

Condemn salvation not, for it HAS come to you. And welcome it together, . .

. . . you and your partner . . .

. . . for it has come to JOIN you together in a relationship in which all the Sonship is together blessed.

I'm hoping that over the past weeks it has become easier for everyone to listen to the hard truth, to be confronted with the hard stuff. I hope that it's not frightening, like it might have been in the beginning, where you would have chosen to go somewhere else and do something else a little more pleasant. Because to understand what it is that has entrapped you and the fact that abandoning your devotion to it is the means of Waking up, is the means of experiencing salvation.

You undertook, together, to invite the Holy Spirit into your relationship. He could not have entered otherwise. Although you may have made many mistakes since then, you have also made enormous efforts to help Him do His work.

To help who? The Holy Spirit. To help who? That which is nothing more than your right Mind. Helping Him to do His work. What is His work? His work is to return you to your whole Mind.

So every bit of effort you are putting into, every ounce of energy and commitment and determination that you're bringing into play is energy you're applying to bringing your own Mind back together, undoing the fragmentation that seemed to occur when you said, "Oh, I'm only going to pay attention to this part of the infinitude of my Mind. And this part and all of the things I think inside this part, that's all that's Real and that's all I'm going to give my attention to."

But as you are engaging in the hard work that it seems to be that we're talking about, you are helping the Holy Spirit—your right Mind—fulfill Its purpose. You're helping It do Its work. It can't do Its work if you don't willingly participate. And willingly participating means diligently staying on task. That's what.

Again, and not a lot of fun, but you know what? You're listening to the Holy Spirit right now. And the Holy Spirit is providing inspiring news, inspiring information, the inspiration of truth that will make it easier for you to help the Holy Spirit do His work, help your right Mind do Its work in bringing you back into your sanity.

. . . you have also made enormous efforts to help Him do His work. And He has not been lacking in appreciation for all you have done for Him. Nor does He see the mistakes at all. Have you been similarly grateful to each other? Have you consistently appreciated the good efforts, and overlooked mistakes? Or has your appreciation flickered and grown dim in what seemed to be the light of the mistakes? You are now entering upon a campaign to blame each other for the discomfort of the situation in which you find yourselves. And by this lack of thanks and gratitude, you make yourselves unable to EXPRESS the holy instant, and thus you lose sight of it.

Now this is where we will stop tonight, because you don't want to express a lack of faith, a lack of thanks and gratitude. You don't want to make yourselves unable to express the holy instant and thus lose sight of it. But you've got to find a way not to lose it.

And that's where the attentiveness comes in, that's where the commitment comes in, that's where the resolve gets set in place so that you persist when the temptation is to go back to the old habits and attempt to manipulate each other and then get mad because the other isn't manipulable anymore. And thus lose the holy instant, thus lose your peace and thus lose the willingness to get back into your peace because your old habit is such that being upset is satisfying, it means something to you. And you'd rather be upset, because you can't have what you want. You can't have control like you used to have. And then your partner has to wait while you wait to settle down and decide, "Oh, I think I'll try the holy instant again. I think I'll try the two-step again, if my partner will just keep his or her mouth shut long enough not to irritate me again so that I can do it." You see?

You see, these are the ways you manipulate yourselves into ignorance and keep each other at bay and you lose the point, you lose the blessing.

I love you all. And what you're learning here is significant. Be willing to do the work. And I look forward to being with your next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

August 6th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

How was your week? How well did you stay in touch with the practice of the holy instant?

And you know, more important than anything right now, the question is, how many of you, when you have had a conscious intent to do the two-step, to practice the holy instant for the purpose of experiencing the holy relationship, have found that some of your worst behaviors have come out . . . some of your bitchiest attitudes have fought for a place on the floor to speak from and take charge and be?

How many of you have had the surprising experience of not having a simple ongoing influx of inspiration?

You're the ones I'm talking to tonight. Because you're the ones who need encouragement—support. You're the ones who need to know that fate has not stepped up and dished you out a plate of unpleasant life. You need to know that you aren't doing anything wrong. You need to know that this isn't surprising.

A long time ago I talked about the fact that when you approach the gates to the Kingdom of Heaven, what does the ego do? What does your ego do?

Why, it projects gargoyles all around the Gate to scare you off.

Now mind you, they're not real. They're just projections, like in the theatre. But they're there to accomplish a purpose. They're there to distract you from simply walking on through the Gates . . . something you can do without actual interference from the gargoyles. They just behave threateningly. You see? Like in a fun-ride at an amusement park.

The only problem is that in this instance, you're not so sure they're not real. And so you actually do hesitate and you actually do act out what they're there to frighten you into doing. And at the bottom line, what they're there to frighten you into doing is to behave in a way opposite to the holy relationship, opposite to the influx of inspiration that has come in the holy instant. You see?

The gargoyles are indirect. They make you think that someone else is behaving in a way that is disrespectful, unkind, malicious, whatever will work to get you to leave the holy instant and attack them . . . stand up for yourself . . . demand respect! It suggests that they call for correction and that you're the obvious one to provide the correction. And you feel it and you don't mind speaking up.

And so the holy instant seems to be undone. The holy relationship that you had a glimpse of seems to have disappeared. And you know what? Again, the evil part of this is that you are fooled into looking for a place to make the correction, which is not where the correction can be made. You are fooled into attacking someone "out there" rather than noticing that something very fundamental and intimate has happened.

You have chosen to abandon your peace. You have chosen to abandon the holy instant. You have found something more important than the holy instant and therefore, your sanity and your Awakening. You've found something more important than that. That is where the correction can be made.

And so you must be very alert.

You know, the ego-conditioning—the orphan mindset—has only one thing to do. And that is to successfully distract you from your Father—from That which illuminates in you your divinity—the truth about you, your holiness, your, as I've said before, royalty. That's its task. That's what it's used for.

Again, at the risk of being monotonous, it does that not as a denial of God in your mind, but as a justification for making something important out of yourself. You see? It's important to remember this. Because it means that any energy you feel, any motivation you feel for making something out of yourself and becoming something valuable and valid, is exactly what will keep you insane. It is exactly what will keep you disconnected from That which illuminates to you within you your ever-present divinity, which is the one essential thing that needs to be present in your mind in order for your mind to become clear—in order for your mind to know the truth.

So don't be surprised if during this past week, you found yourself easily distracted and easily motivated into being mean-spirited . . . even perhaps, malicious, caustic, arrogant, thoughtless. I mean, behavior that after it happens, you say, "What got into me? This isn't me. This isn't the way I behave. This isn't normal."

Well, that's true . . . it's not. And you're going to have to use a little bit of reverse psychology and recognize and be able to acknowledge, "Wow, I must be getting near something important if the ego is going to go to this much trouble to distract me from it. If it is going to engage me in self-defense that can be mean-spirited and unkind, I must be doing something important. I must be doing something right."

And of course you are. You are insisting upon practicing the two-step, engaging in the holy instant so that you can hear from the Father what the truth is in this situation or that situation, or this relationship or that relationship. You're doing something right. You're doing the one essential thing for Waking up! So don't be surprised.

But now, you've got to be careful here too because the ego will come in and say—when you've engaged in this little bit of reverse psychology—"Oh-h yes, now we're going to handle this one well because you're doing something really important. Why you may be the first one to Wake up since Jesus. And in your Waking up, you will bless the whole world."

Oh-h-h . . . Oh-h . . . and it gets your pride juices flowing. And now it begins to feel like it might be a really wonderful thing to do to engage in the holy instant and the holy relationship. Don't take the bait! Because if you'll stop long enough to notice what's happening, you'll realize that while this "conversation" is going on between you and the ego and you're learning about how to handle this with dignity . . . why—are you talking to the Holy Spirit? Are you engaged in the holy instant, where in the quietness you're able to hear the Father's Voice? Are you being infilled by the Father or by the Holy Spirit?

No you're not. And so you have to be alert.

How are you going to remember to come back to the holy instant when you've abandoned it? And especially, how are you going to come back when you've abandoned it and become emotionally involved in the abandonment, where you are getting satisfaction out of exercising your will, protecting your ass from your partner, who from time to time, the ego will have you seeing as someone who is against you, even though your partner is voting for the holy instant and the holy relationship . . . how are you going to come back?

I would suggest that if it's difficult, if it is being difficult for you, set yourself a regimen of exposing yourself to the truth that we're talking about on a regular basis. You can read the transcript. You can download the audio. Put it on your iPod and listen to it . . . once a day, twice a day. Oh, I know . . . it lasts about an hour . . . that's along time. Yeah, right, well, obviously you're not important enough for that . . . an hour here or an hour there, you're not important enough for that. You have important things to do, don't you—things that will cause your world to collapse around you if you don't attend to them. And yet if you don't attend to your Waking up, you're living in a Kingdom of Heaven that has already collapsed around you, at least to your perception.

For someone who's insane, it is always difficult to regain one's sanity. Not because it's impossible or hard, but because it takes focused attention, which, when you're insane, it's hard to justify.

You might even say, "Well, it's hard for my mind to wrap itself around these things because I'm insane . . ." Bullshit! That's a good line but don't believe it and don't use it.

So provide yourself with what we'll call, a trigger—a reminder. And you don't have to listen for a whole hour, but if you'll listen for five minutes, you will find yourself significantly reminded of where your attention needs to be and why. And then you can begin again . . . until you lose it.

Right now it doesn't seem really important to give this much attention to your growth—your learning. But I'm telling you that it is. And I'm telling you that it is, so that you might give some faith to the process. So that you might feel that there really is justification. But you're going to have to do the work.

Let's go into the Book.

The experience of an instant, . .

. . . holy instant . . .

. . . however compelling it may be, is easily forgotten if you allow time to close over it.

Well, how can you let time close over the holy instant? Well, you can go into memory, can't you. Something happens and you can respond from memory. You have moved into time. You've moved out of the holy instant.

The experience of an instant, however compelling it may be, is easily forgotten if you allow time to close over it. It must be kept shining and gracious in your awareness of time, but not concealed within it.

Now, if you engage in the holy instant and stay in the holy instant, your references have nothing to do with time even though you are continuing, we'll say, to be in time and events seem to be unfolding in time. But time and what's going on in it, these things are not your reference points because you are choosing to stay connected to the Father or the Holy Spirit in the holy instant without interruption. So that is how you keep the holy instant shining and gracious in your awareness of time but not concealed within it.

The instant remains. But where are YOU?

Are you in it? Or are you in time? Are you in the "not-knowing place" being infilled with inspiration or are you in the knowing place where you know what things are because you've defined them and where you're bound by the definitions? Where are you? Have you abandoned listening and begun thinking? Where are you?

The instant remains. But where are YOU? To give thanks to each other is to appreciate the holy instant, and thus enable its results to be accepted and SHARED.

To give thanks to each other . . . that means to be in an attitude of appreciation. And when you're in an attitude of appreciation of love, there's no inconsistent behavior that can arise. There's no mean-spiritedness present to be shared, to be acted out. Because of this, the meaning that is being revealed about your holiness and the holiness of your partner has an opportunity to be acted out—to be expressed by you and by your partner.

Of course, your partner is really irrelevant because where you're coming from and where your attention is, is what will govern the movement of healing in the relationship and provide the environment in which your partner can join also in gratitude and appreciation without being distracted by your "excellent attack" because you're really good at it. You really know how to burst another's bubble. You know where that other one's weak spots are and you know how to get to it almost surgically, perfectly, so that they don't even recognize that you have got them and distracted them and given you relief from having to stay in and practice the holy instant, practice and be in a holy relationship. You see?

To ATTACK each other . . .

. . . which you're now beginning to find you do quite easily and quite spontaneously and with little self-governance going on . . .

To ATTACK each other is not to lose the instant, but to make it powerless in its EFFECTS.

I'm going to put it this way: Close your eyes . . . now even with your eyes closed you know that you're conscious—you're aware. Awareness is the holy instant. Or awareness is where the holy instant is experienced. Awareness is the arena of the holy instant. You see? So the holy instant has always been present. Always been available but no one has been giving any attention to it. Because everybody has been too busy working out their own salvation on their own terms.

So . . .

To ATTACK each other is not to lose the instant, . .

. . . because it's ever-present. It is the very context or arena of your awareness, of your conscious awareness, but . . .

To ATTACK each other is not to lose the instant, but to make it powerless in its EFFECTS.

The effects of the holy instant are you behaving consistent with the awareness of the holiness of what you're experiencing or who you're experiencing and thereby an awareness of your holiness that you have been unaware of before, and behavior on your part arising out of that clarity.

Those are the effects of the holy instant. But you render the holy instant powerless, you render those effects non-existent when you abandon the holy instant and choose instead to think and to behave on the basis of your thinking, your judgments, your concepts. You see?

It really becomes very clearly black or white, this or that, nothing fuzzy. You know, the promise of the holy instant and of the holy relationship is: You and your partner regaining your sanity. That is significant. And that is worth every ounce of energy you bring to your desire to Wake up. It is worth every ounce of energy it takes to cause you to not just go through your day out of habit, but to stay so very alert and attentive that if anything is going on more than what you expect, if there is more of what God is being there than what you're seeing . . . you want to see it! And you're not going to settle back until you have the experience.

To ATTACK each other is not to lose the instant, but to make it powerless in its EFFECTS. You HAVE received the holy instant, but you have established a condition in which you cannot USE it.

What's that condition? It's that you've withdrawn your attention and given it some place else, with no connection with your Source involved in it . . . that simple.

As a result, you do not realize that it is with you still. And by cutting yourself off from its . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . its expression, you have denied yourself its benefit.

It's like if you want to see a movie, you can't stand outside of the theater. You've got to stop providing the circumstances that disallow you from having what you want.

You reinforce this every time you attack each other, for the attack must blind you to YOURSELF. And it is impossible to deny yourself, and recognize what has been given and received by you.

You get that?

. . . impossible to deny yourself, . . .

Well, what is this self you're denying? Well, it's the only one you are. At the moment you're calling it a human being, a mortal, subject to sin, disease and death. But this self-same one that you are—that you're defining that way—is the holy Son of God or the holy Daughter of God. Okay? You are.

You as a mortal, as a puny little orphan . . . you have from that place, practiced the two-step, the holy instant, and you have experienced the influx of the inspiration of truth . . . okay? . . . that has been given and it's been received by you. It has! But now are you going to keep that in mind or are you going to abandon it for the pleasure of self-will expressed and manipulation to put yourself in a position of advantage? It's one or the other, and it's that simple.

You stand together in the holy presence of truth itself.

. . . when you've engaged in this practice and you have this intent.

Here is the goal, together WITH you.

You and the one you're having a holy relationship or that you wish to have an unobstructed holy relationship with.

You stand together . . .

. . . the two of you . . .

. . . in the holy presence of truth itself. Here is the goal, together WITH you.

All the ingredients are present.

Think you not the goal itself will gladly arrange the means for its accomplishment?

You see? This isn't just wishful thinking. This isn't just some grand idea that somebody dreamed up and sat down and wrote A Course In Miracles. There's a reality beyond the definitions you've provided for it and it operates according to laws that are beyond any rules you have come up with. And although the idea of there being laws that you're bound by seems to be oppression to you because independence is so important, the fact is that it's your salvation.

The laws that govern you express, embody, manifest the absence of sin, disease and death, fear, jealousy, injury, loss. These laws say you are the holy Son or Daughter of God and nothing less. And everything that the Sons or Daughters of God deserve, they have and they can't be in a state of loss. You see?

These laws are not oppressive. Oh yes, there's one thing besides sin, disease and death that you can't have, that is self-will expressed at odds with the Father, expressed at odds with the way things work. You can't have independence. You can't have authority all by yourself. These are all one thing said in different ways. So yes, in that way it's oppressive to the one who feels he has an inalienable right to do whatever he wants, whatever way he wants to do it. And if he wants to stumble and fall, he can do it and if he wants to do it without stumbling and falling he can do it that way, and it's nobody's business which way.

Well, the Father gives you the right to stumble and fall as much as you want. The Father gives you the right to behave stupidly if you want. The Father will let you pretend that you don't have a Father for as long as you want. But you will not be able to have them in any other form than fantasy. And you can have them until you decide you don't want to exist and operate in a realm of fantasy anymore.

And that's where we're coming from. And that's what we're talking about. And that's what we are illuminating . . . fleshing out . . . explaining more fully.

Think you not the goal itself will gladly arrange the means for its accomplishment?

What is the goal? The goal is the reunion of you with your right Mind, to be accomplished by your right Mind—the majority of your right Mind that you have abandoned and disowned but can't get rid of. And so it's still working. The way things are continue to be the way things are. And everything about the way things are is geared to actualizing your sanity in you. It's that simple.

Now that goal is set in place by God. It's set in place by "the way things are," whether you choose to believe them or not.

So you are experiencing illumination if only through my words. And the illumination is of that which will move you back into your right Mind because God is All and you are finally at a point to being willing to undo the divorce—stop behaving as though you're Fatherless, Sourceless. This is good.

It is just this same discrepancy between the purpose that has been accepted and the means as they stand now which seems to make you suffer, but which makes Heaven glad.

You see, you experience a discrepancy because you're looking from two different vantage points simultaneously. The sanity in you, the divinity in you recognizes the existence of a holy instant and a holy relationship. You are not denying the truth of its existence totally. And as a result, the idea is registering with you with Meaning. In other words, it's reaching you deeply. Part of you recognizes that, and it also recognizes that the means for Awakening completely involve yielding to God. But in more practical terms than that, yielding to your capital "S" Self, yielding to the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind.

Now that's the means to the end: Yielding to the Holy Spirit, yielding to your right Mind. But there's another vantage point: The orphan vantage point that you're very familiar with and it looks at this abandonment of authority and control as insane . . . it sees that as insane.

And so you have a conflict. There seem to be two means to having the experience of your sanity: One is, think on your own and listen to your ego. The other is, abandon your ego and your self-made authority and yield to the Father. The latter—yielding to the Father—that means:

. . . stand now [as that] which seems to make you suffer, but which makes Heaven glad.

Now you've got to understand this else you will give up before the suffering ends, before the confusion ceases. And I'm here to encourage you to persist, even though confusion hasn't dissolved and peace and security hasn't emerged fully.

If Heaven were OUTSIDE you, you could not share in its gladness.
Yet because it is within, the gladness, too, is yours.

It's there.

You ARE joined in purpose, but remain still separate and divided on the means.

You see? This is helpful. This is specifically helpful, because now you know where the difficulty is. It's in the misperception of the means. That's the hang-up.

Again, because it is so simple and it can seem to be difficult to grasp, the means for Awakening, the means for achieving, for lack of better words, the holy relationship is the two-step, the practice of the holy instant.

Two-step: Shutting up and reaching out, "Father, what is the truth here?"

Holy instant: (In the silence and the pregnancy of your question) The influx of inspiration and truth is provided to you changing your perceptions of everything, allowing you to look at what you thought was just a material world and universe and find it to be actually the Kingdom of Heaven holding much more for you than you have dreamed. And then the behavior in that world and with everything in that world, based on the revelation that has occurred to you. And now the holy instant and the truth learned in it, has found expression and you're having now a holy relationship. Those are the simple steps to Waking up, to abandoning any thought or experience of sin, disease and death ever again.

It's worth every ounce of energy it takes. It's worth whatever amount of discipline it takes to manage to go through your day without, perhaps, forgetting for very long at all, to look with curiosity to see the more of God than what you're seeing . . . because there is more of God there.

Yet . . .

. . . although, you're hung-up on the means, you can seem to be successfully distracted from the means . . .

. . . the goal is fixed, firm and unalterable, and the means will surely fall in place BECAUSE the goal is sure.

. . . because there are rules. Because God has made everything as He has made them and there's no other choice.

And you will share the gladness of the Sonship that it is so. As you begin to recognize and accept the gifts you have so freely given to each other, . .

. . . by staying in the holy instant and not abandoning it and not engaging in attack . . .

. . . you will also accept the effects of the holy instant, and use them to correct all your mistakes and free you from their results.

It's the healing of relationships. It's all inclusive. Not just with a partner, but with all of the Brotherhood and all of Creation.

And learning this, you will have [also] learned how to release ALL the Sonship, and offer it in gladness and thanksgiving to Him Who gave you YOUR release, and Who would extend it THROUGH you.

You will release the Sonship, the Brotherhood, from all of the misperceptions that you have held them to. You will give them to the Holy Spirit, so that the Holy Spirit might reflect back to you the inspiration about all of it, illuminating it as what it truly is and succeeding, we will say, in lifting you entirely out of the orphanage, out of the independence, out of the sin, disease and death.

Tomorrow, after having listened to me now, you may have forgotten what I talked about. You will have slipped back into time, you will have slipped back into thinking, you will have slipped back into your old comfortable habits until something comes along that is too uncomfortable and you say, "Oh-h, I guess I'd better do the two-step again.

It's going to happen. You will slip, you will forget and you will find yourself reminded. But honor your coming Home enough to provide you with a little bit of structure—a little bit of obedient structure—and give yourself set times to remind yourself by going to the book, the Course, by going to a transcript of this meeting or listening to the audio tapes so that you might be reminded with feeling, not just intellectual awareness, but be reminded with feeling that you really want to do this and you really don't want to lose your way and you really don't want to be stuck.

I love you. I love you all.

You know what? Come hell or high water, you're going to do something this week and you're going to do it in some way . . . you know . . . you're not going to be taking a vacation from doing things in...some...way, so why not let this way be the way you're going to do it this week. It's not going to be any harder to do. I mean both ways take energy. Expend it here.

Okay, I look forward to being with your next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

August 13th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Our apologies for the delay in beginning tonight . . . longer than usual.

As I mentioned a week or two ago, when you arrive at a point where you are willing to make commitment to abandoning an independent vantage point, a point of independence from which to operate, and you make a commitment to joining with your Guide or with the Holy Spirit, you very often will find yourself met with resistance—resistance that seems to come from within you. Your ego decides to object to your abandoning your partnership with it. And I described the experience as similar to approaching the Gates to the Kingdom of Heaven and your ego projects gargoyles all around the Gate to distract you from entering . . . to grip you with fear, to cause you to lose your peace of mind.

Now today, Paul has been having to deal with disruption. It has presented itself through the majority of the day as spontaneous criticism of just about anything and everything that has confronted him. A snide remark will go through his mind—an egotistical mean-spirited phrase will not escape his lips but occupy his attention with feeling, unpleasant feeling.

Paul has recognized it for what it was and has not given it voice—has not really let it come out into expression. But it has preoccupied him. And it has caused his experience of himself to be an unpleasant one. He has meditated. He has done his best to talk with me about it but it has managed to distract him significantly.

That is the reason that we have started so much later than usual because it was his intent to follow through with having the study group tonight. I have told him we will not try to do it under these circumstances. I will not put him in public view under these circumstances because it's not necessary and it's not kind

And so we will not be having the meeting tonight. And we will be ready to have the meeting next Saturday and we thank everyone for their patience.

It's important for Paul to know that he's not on display. That he's not to be an object of observation and judgment. He's just simply here under these circumstances to let the movement of Love that is the Father, that is me, that is the Holy Spirit, find expression. Obviously he is capable of doing this to the degree that I am speaking with you tonight. But again, I love him too much to put him in a position of distress for my sake or for your sake.

And so I thank you all for being willing to wait until next week.

I love you . . . I love you . . .

Okay.

like this, hesitate—not reading further to find out what the explanation is—to stop there and say, “Father or Holy Spirit, what is the meaning of this?”

Remember, Helen Shucman is the one who listened and to whom I spoke. And she wrote down the words that were given and she, although she had made prior commitment to do this, was no more prepared for it than you are prepared to stop and enquire, “What is the truth here?” and hear the answer. This is the point.

She didn’t have a grand gift or a grand assignment that you or any of you, if you were willing, couldn’t have done equally well. It doesn’t take talent, it takes genuine humble listening. It takes the humble practice of the two-step.

So, what is the Holy Spirit’s purpose?

Well, it’s simple. If the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind, which is being held in trust while you dally with the ego, then that which is the rest of You beyond the ego definitions you have created for yourself, then Its purpose is going to be naturally to re-incorporate (chuckles) this little “smart-ass” who has said, “I’m going to make decisions for myself, Father, and I’m no longer going to rely on You. I’m going to be a self-determined agent on my own.”

It’s the purpose of the Holy Spirit to undo that decision. It’s the purpose of the sanity of your Being that you can’t actually get beyond or outside of to reduce you, to relax you, to cause you to be humble enough and quiet enough to let something other than your personal proud arrogance to register with you.

It’s the purpose of the Holy Spirit to return you to your right Mind . . . to return you to your sanity. And as I’ve pointed out, the incredible beauty of this is, that it’s the very sanity of you, which is engaged in motivating you to accept your sanity, to return to your sanity.

And so when you are asked to lean into Something, to rely completely and totally on Something in the process of your re-Awakening, you can do it with utter trust and total commitment, knowing that what you are leaning into is just You—your Self, your holy Self, your divine Being—which therefore is going to be in all respects, an experience of intelligent integration, something to be greatly desired and something that you can trust into in the process.

So now . . .

The practical application of the Holy Spirit's purpose is extremely simple, . .

. . . what is the practical application of the Holy Spirit's purpose?

Why, it's the two-step. It's the holy instant.

That is the Holy Spirit's purpose rendered practical. It is what we could call radical idealism translated into practical realism. Simple. Straight-forward.

Now, what is the means by which the Holy Spirit's purpose is accomplished? What is the means? It's forgiveness . . . very simply. It's forgiveness . . . it's you leaning into the Father, leaning into the Holy Spirit desiring to know what the truth is. Why? So that in knowing the truth you can abandon the illusions, the lies, the misperceptions that you have created in an attempt to determine the world, life, creation and make something out of yourself.

To want to know the truth is the basis of the two-step and the means of practicing the holy instant.

So . . .

The practical application of the Holy Spirit's purpose is extremely simple, but it IS unequivocal.

In other words, it's not a multiple-choice. It's unequivocal. You could say that it's a matter of it being or not-being, that it is or it isn't. But it's more unequivocal than that. It's . . . the truth Is. Reality Is. You Are. And what you Are is the direct expression of the Father.

Now . . .

The practical application of the Holy Spirit's purpose is extremely simple, but it IS unequivocal.

It's always and only about forgiveness. It's always and only about knowing only the truth.

In fact, in order to be simple it MUST be unequivocal. The simple is merely what is easily understood, and for this it is apparent that it must be clear.

Okay. What is it that you're going to be understanding? You're going to be understanding the truth. And how are you going to find out what the truth is so that it can be clear to you?

Well, you've got to stop thinking. You've got to stop figuring things out for yourself. You've got to hesitate and turn beyond or aside from your preoccupation with your best thinking and ask of Something outside what you call yourself, "What is the truth here?"

Now . . .

The setting of the Holy Spirit's goal is general.

By that, we would say it's forgiveness. Forgiveness is a very general term. Forgiveness of what? Now we become specific. But in order to Wake up, in order to allow the Holy Spirit to accomplish its purpose of returning you to your right Mind, you must operate on an entirely new basis. You must operate on a basis outside, as I've said, your best thinking, reasoning, logic, etcetera.

The specifics of forgiveness must come from your practice of listening—of turning to Guidance. Until you've done that, you don't know what to do. And you don't know what the specific means of forgiveness will look like.

So . . .

The setting of the Holy Spirit's goal is general.

And again, what is the goal? The goal is to know the truth, because knowing the truth will constitute you abandoning your false definitions and your manipulative controlling actions, which you bring into play when you think you're on your own.

So . . .

The setting of the Holy Spirit's goal is general. Now He will work with you to make it specific.

You see? Oh-h, you know, I know that many read the Course and they understand that forgiveness is the goal . . . and you can go on an internal-witch-hunt finding all the unlovely, unkind unloving things you've done or thought about somebody and correct them.

But you know what? You're still employing the same mechanical action that you used in order to create a negative determination or definition about your Brother or about your world. One minute you're creating negativity about your world and Brother and the next moment you are creating positivity, forgiving thoughts, kind thoughts, loving thoughts . . . and aren't you wonderful in the process? And it misses the point because you're doing it all by yourself.

You're not forgiving because you've said, "Father or Holy Spirit, what is the truth here about my Brother?—not the truth about his faults, not the truth of why he behaves in the odd peculiar behavior he behaves—but what is the God's honest truth about him? How does the Father see him . . . what is the actual truth of him aside from his poor definitions of himself and aside from my poor definitions of him?" You see?

That's wanting to know the truth—that's wanting to know the truth that will be transformational. It's that simple. It's also that black and white. It's that unequivocal.

He will work with you . . .

. . . this Holy Spirit . . .

will work with you to make it specific.

His general goal.

There are certain very specific guidelines He provides for any situation, but remember that you do not yet realize their universal application. Therefore, it is essential, at this point, to use them in each situation separately, until you can more safely look BEYOND each situation, in an understanding far broader than you now possess.

You're breaking old habits. And let's put it this way, you're breaking well-established, long-established habits when you abandon your self-governing, self-controlling mindset. You don't know yet what's normal, what's natural to a holy Son or Daughter of God. And you can't take in the whole picture and so you must let the Holy Spirit guide you directly in each specific case.

Now, I'll tell you something: This helps accomplish the establishment of an active relationship between you and the Father or between you and the Holy Spirit—your right Mind—because in each instance you will need to ask, "What's the truth here? What do I need to know? How do I need to approach this? You see?"

You must ask for the truth in every case. And let yourself be guided in order to first of all establish a real ongoing relationship with the Holy Spirit—your right Mind—or the Father or your Guide. You see?

I know . . . when you do, it makes you feel stupid because you're asking about every little thing. But you want to know the truth . . . you want to know the truth because that sets you free from your delusions. And when you're set free from your delusions, your right Mind appears to you—appears as the place in which you're experiencing everything—and you become sane.

Now what isn't clear to you is, that as you take these tiny steps, we'll say, where you're asking . . . what is the truth here? what is the truth here? what do I need to know here? for every little thing . . . when you do that, initially you think that you are attending to some specific circumstances in your daily life—very localized—you have no sense that your understanding the truth about the situation, might actually have universal aspects to it.

You see, God is not only omniscience, meaning that you are not only omniscience, but God is also omnipresent, which means that you are omnipresent. But as you go through your day, you feel very tiny and have no sense of your omnipresence and you have no sense of connection on a grand or large scale.

Now at the present time in the world, you're finding out that everyone is linked together. You're finding that you do not live on a globe occupied by independent entities that have nothing to do with each other. You are becoming utterly aware of the inter-connection, the unity, I'm going to even say, of everyone. You're becoming uncomfortably aware of it. But it is a blessing, because if you are truly losing your capacity to think that you or your country are independent and separate from everything else, if you are losing your ability to believe that, then you are coming into a rather clear experience of what I'm going to call "unity consciousness."

But it bothers you because being independent and being sovereign, whether it's as a country, or as a state, or as a city, or a municipality, or as an ego yourself, it is something that in the process of Awakening, you're going to have to let go of. And as you're finding out, you're having to yield to and acknowledge something you didn't believe, but something that has been the case and known by those who are running the world for a long time, even though you just lived in your country, or your city, or your state and you did your thing and everyone else did their thing and nobody ever felt the connection, felt the unalterable connection, felt the connection that means that what happens in one place is happening to everyone.

This is a marvelous Awakening.

Now if, as you are finding, other people's problems are yours as well, and if you are finding that the way people handle themselves on the other side of the globe can cause ripple-out effects that absolutely affect you negatively, then you've learned a principle—a practical, wonderful principle. And that is: That since everything is inter-connected, then somebody . . . and it might be you, might be you, it might be any of you . . . is capable of and actually to some degree has the responsibility to have an answer that ripples-out and blesses everyone. You see?

You are experiencing, at a gut level, at an experiential level, the fact that everything is One and what happens to one happens to everyone and what one does is done to everyone. And you would be wise not to get upset and arrogant and pissed-off at how badly everyone is behaving and causing you such problems because you have a task. You have a wonderful task and that is to say, "Father, what is the truth here?" It is to do the two-step, so that you might be infilled with answers that annihilate or undo or dissolve the problems that cause correction in the mindsets that are creating the problems. You see?

If you can be as directly affected by negativity and unintelligence as you are, then everyone else—and you as well—can be affected constructively by the practice of those who are doing the two-step.

What is this called? Practical Forgiveness. Practical forgiveness relates today. If, as I said, you can read a sentence in the Course that you've never read before, and you don't have to read further to understand it because you have the capacity to ask—which is doing the two-step—"Father, what does this mean? Holy Spirit, what does this mean?" and you can get the answer . . . if you can do it here, you can do it relative to the things that are going on in the world today and the financial pressures and dilemmas and so on.

It's time to engage in Practical Forgiveness. What is forgiveness again? It's not saying, "Oh-h, I love you. You're just wonderful. It doesn't matter what you did. I accept you . . . blah, blah, blah." No. Because that may or may not call forth correction—enlightenment, that which uncovers in the one you're dealing with, the realization of why he doesn't need to behave the way he's behaving because he isn't the poor piss-ant mortal that he thought he was—and engaging with you while you were listening and asking, "What is the truth here? . . . so that you could reflect it and give it, has made him able to make a sudden shift of perception. Which is what? As defined in the Course: A miracle.

In any situation in which you are uncertain, the first thing to consider, very simply, is, "What do I want to come of this? What is it FOR?" The clarification of the goal belongs at the BEGINNING, for it is this which will determine the outcome.

So when you say, when you consider very simply, What do I want to come of this? that means you're asking, "What is the truth here? I want the truth here. What is the truth here? I don't want my imaginations. I don't want what all the pundits are saying and what I'm hearing or reading. I want to know what is the truth here and I want to know it of one Who Knows. I want to know it of the Holy Spirit. And it's more important to me to listen for that than it is to listen to all of the opinions that are being shared. I may have listened to them, but now I am listening to the Holy Spirit within, not so I can have some smart-ass rebuttal to everyone's stupidity, but so that I might find myself privy to the God-likeness of my Brother or my Sister or of the situation, and what the truth is here so that I can give my attention to bringing that forth rather than my fears or judgments or egotistical opinions." You see?

The clarification of the goal belongs at the BEGINNING, for it is this which will determine the outcome.

And again, the goal is what? Forgiveness. But specifically, to know the truth—Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free²—what you want to know. Your goal is to know the truth because in knowing the truth you will abandon your mean-spirited, small-minded judgments against your Brother or Sister, which you use as a means of controlling them because you're scared shitless because you don't know who you Are and you feel vulnerable because you don't know who your Father Is. And that's why you behave badly.

Now on the other hand:

In the ego's procedure, this is reversed. The SITUATION . . .

. . . without asking, "What's the purpose here? What's the goal . . .?"

The SITUATION itself becomes the determiner of the outcome, which can be anything.

"Well, I guess I'm just going to have to ride this one out. And after it's over, we'll see what the hell happened. I'm going to ride this one out though."

The SITUATION [itself] becomes the determiner of the outcome, which can be anything. The reason for this disorganized approach is evident. The ego does not know what it WANTS to come of it.

See? The ego doesn't have a goal of what it wants to come of it.

It is aware of what it does NOT want, but only that. It has no positive goal at all.

And what is it aware of that it does not want? It does not want you to remember who you Are. It does not want you to go down any path that will lead you to a sudden discovery of your holiness. Because the moment that happens the ego will lose your faith in it and it will lose its control over you. That's the only thing it knows. It knows what it does not want.

And as I've said recently, this is the definition of evil: That which has as its intent to keep you ignorant of your divinity, of your holiness, of your Birthright of who you Are. It also does not want you to recognize the holiness of your Brother and that's why you hold your Brother, I'm going to say, in contempt or in negative judgment. The simple fact is, in your realization of your Brother's divinity, there is an inseparable and simultaneous realization of Yours.

Now, this gives you a bit bigger idea of the universal nature of the Holy Spirit's goal for you. Because it's not just you remembering who you Are but it's you remembering who your Brother Is truly and in that acknowledgement, healing your Brother and healing your relationship. So something you thought might just be about you . . . it necessarily ends up being about you and someone else together.

Now, I'm going to leave it there for tonight, because we've laid a groundwork here for what's to come. It can seem complicated even though it's very simple. And I want you to abide with it during this coming week.

Again, it is going to lay the groundwork for more solid commitment from you relative to your Awakening and relative to the way you're going to respond to events in the world as they come up during this coming week and beyond. Because it's a new way . . . it's a requirement to do it in a new way. And you are feeling it in terms of discomfort.

But the discomfort, as I said, provides you with proof that you and everyone else have the means to set into motion exactly the opposite of the problems that seem to be happening—the very same practice that is creating the problems, reversed, resolves them.

Insight is what will make the difference. Because insight is something that others can recognize as well. And the insight become contagious, if you will, and spreads and learning, globally, can happen very rapidly.

So enjoy doing something different this week than you may have been doing in past weeks, as we bring the practice of the holy instants and practical forgiveness into the picture more and more clearly.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

August 27th 2011

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We ended up last week with the thought from the Course that:

In any situation in which you are uncertain, the first thing to consider, very simply, is "What do I want to come of this? What is it FOR?" The clarification of the goal belongs at the BEGINNING, for it is this which will determine the outcome. In the ego's procedure, this is reversed. The SITUATION becomes the determiner of the outcome, which can be anything. The reason for this disorganized approach is evident. The ego does not know what it WANTS to come of it. It is aware of what it does NOT want, but only that. It has no positive goal at all.

What do I want to come of this?

Don't get trapped by the question. Because it sounds like you're asking your self—you're puny little ego sense of self: "What do I want to come of this?" And that's not what we're talking about. We're talking about the practice of the two-step. We're talking about abandoning your dependence upon your best thinking.

And in the place of that, in the silence of your thinking—the absence of your thinking—enquiring of the Father: "What is the truth here or what do I want to come of this?" That's the question you take to the Holy Spirit when you hesitate and do the two-step and practice the holy instant. That's how you practice it.

"Father, what do I want to come of this? Father, as Your Son or Your Daughter, what do I want to come of this situation?" You see? "What is it for? I want to know. I want to know Your Perspective because Your Perspective is the Birthright You have given me. Your Perspective is the Perspective that is inherent in me and I do not want to continue to act as though there's no connection between us. And in fact, I want the connection to be so solid that what I'm asking for is from Your Perspective, what do I want to come of this? What is it for?" You see?

That's the key. It isn't just that you ask ahead of time before you act, "What do I want the outcome to be?" It's that you ask, "Father, what do I as Your Son or Daughter want the outcome to be?" You see? It's an act of joining.

Where just saying to yourself, "What do I want the outcome to be?" is an independent act and isn't what this is about.

So . . .

Without a clearcut, positive goal, set at the outset, . .

. . . not by you, not by your determination, but by virtue of your asking, "Father what is the positive goal here?"

. . . the situation just seems to happen, . .

. . . without a clear-cut practice of the two-step . . .

. . . the situation just seems to happen, and makes no sense until it has ALREADY happened. THEN you look back at it, and try to piece together what it must have meant.

And you end up engaging in conjecture about what it must have meant.

" . . . Well it must've had this meaning . . . it must have been the Democrats or the Republicans . . . or it must've been the greed . . . or it must have been this or that that was responsible for it . . ."

What was responsible for it was, that the two-step wasn't practiced. That's all. No one said, "Father, what is the truth here?"

. . . you look back at it, and try to piece together what it must have meant. And you will be WRONG. Not only is your judgment in the past, but you have no idea what SHOULD happen. No goal was set with which to bring the means in line. And now the only judgment left to make is whether or not the ego likes it; is it acceptable, or does it call for vengeance?

Those are the only two questions that can be asked afterwards, and asked of the ego.

The absence of a criterion for outcome, set IN ADVANCE, . .

What? By virtue of having done the two-step, having listened, and having heard . . .

. . . makes understanding doubtful and evaluation impossible.

On the other hand, if we reverse it, if you have done the two-step, if you have listened, and you have heard, it makes understanding inevitable and evaluation completely possible.

The value of deciding in advance what you WANT to happen . . .

. . . what the Father discloses to you that you want to happen . . .

. . . is simply that you will perceive the situation as a means to MAKE it happen.

Now I shared a story some time ago about two shoe companies, each sending a shoe salesman to Africa. And three months go by and one of the companies realizes that there's no productivity, there are no sales going on. And that company sends a dispatch to its salesman, it says: "What's the problem?"

Well, a dispatch comes back and the salesman said, "It's obvious, nobody wears shoes here." What can you expect, was the meaning.

Now on the other hand, the other salesman had had sales that skyrocketed through the roof. And at the end of three months, although the company was very grateful, they wrote and said, "How do you account for all of the sales?" He says, "Well, it's obvious . . . no one wears shoes here." You see?

Now, here's the thing. You can't take this example literally absolutely. But it expresses an idea. First of all, let's say that the first fellow did not do the two-step, walked into a situation, read the situation according to his best judgments and his experience. He says, "Wow, these people have a heritage of going barefoot. It has meaning to them. It conveys to them a groundedness, a connectedness with Mother Earth and so on. We're not going to be able to overcome this kind of conditioning."

This fellow did not do the two-step. He ended up listening to his best judgments. And what was he listening to? He was listening to the voice for fear. He was not listening to the Voice for truth. He was coming entirely from his orphan mentality—no connection to anything divine, himself, no capacity or inclination to look for divine purpose in the situation.

On the other hand, we could say that the other salesman did the two-step and heard the truth, "nobody wears shoes here. It's open for discovery and sales and providing these people with something they didn't know they could have but they will like." You see?

Now, the interesting thing about this example is that both of them heard the same answer: "Nobody wears shoes here."

That answer you could say, was the truth. But one of them heard the truth through the voice for fear, in that there was no means to experience fruition and fulfillment and meaningfulness. And so he had a meaningless experience. And his connection with those in Africa that he could have sold shoes to also had a meaningless experience where there could have been a different one.

Okay. On the other hand, the other salesman listened, he heard the truth and the truth heard through the Voice for truth did not have an impediment in it that said nothing will work out, there's no opportunity here. And so the two had a totally different experience.

Now . . .

The value of deciding in advance what you WANT to happen is simply that you will perceive the situation as a means to MAKE it happen.

The one salesman who was successful saw no reason, found no negative thoughts to cause him to feel that he had a problem to overcome. He simply saw opportunity that he could allow to occur and bless everyone.

You will therefore make every effort . . .

. . . which he did, the salesman . . .

. . . to overlook what interferes with the accomplishment of your objective, and concentrate on everything which helps you meet it.

You see?

Now sometimes the truth will be two different answers. But in this case, and it's helpful to know this, the truth that is the same answer heard through the voice for fear or heard through the Voice for truth, has two entirely different and contradictory effects. And this is important to understand.

It is quite noticeable . . .

. . . that using the two-step . . .

It is quite noticeable that this approach has brought you closer to the Holy Spirit's sorting out of truth and falsity. The true becomes what can be used to meet the goal. The false becomes the useless from this point of view.

The idea, "nobody wears shoes here" for the one with no connection to the Father's Perspective experienced the false and it was useless. But the other Son of God, doing the two-step, saw the same truth and it became useful.

The true becomes what can be used to meet the goal. The false becomes the useless from this point of view. The situation now has meaning, but only because the GOAL has made it meaningful.

The goal of truth has further practical advantages. If the situation . . .

. . . whatever the situation might be . . .

. . . is used for truth and sanity, its outcome MUST be peace.

Now how do you use a situation for truth and sanity? By abandoning your best thinking, your best judgments, and becoming still and enquiring beyond your best judgments and thinking, "what is the truth here?" knowing that you are asking of the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your Right mind—or the Father, which is That which has expressed in you your Birthright as His Son or Daughter. You see?

If the situation is used for truth and sanity, its outcome MUST be peace. And this is quite apart from what the outcome IS.

In other words, peace will be the fundamental outcome. And it will lay the groundwork for the manifest outcome for the evidence of the Father's Will being experienced. You see?

If peace is the condition of truth and sanity, and cannot be WITHOUT them, where peace is THEY must be.

THEY, being truth and sanity, and peace is the condition of them.

So truly, when you are engaging in the two-step, when you are engaging in the practice of the holy instant, you are engaging in an intent to be at peace. It's that simple. And the times when you will be called upon most stringently to engage in the two-step so that you might experience your peace, are when it seems as though peace is an impossible experience to have . . . because there is an emergency! There is something that requires your attention! There is something which requires your personal control! There is something which requires you to do something "out there" physical—actual!

But what you're all having to condition yourself to understand is, that that demand which seems to call for an outward act of taking charge, is actually a demand to shut up—to choose for your peace . . . to abandon your independent, frightened, concerned stance and sense of self, to immediately shift your attention to the Father to enquire as to His Perspective or to the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing but your right Mind—to hear what the truth is, what the Father's Perspective is, so that you might act from there, act from the experience of it that is revealed to you. You're to do this as immediately as the situation seems to demand you to act. But the action is one of turning to the Father [snaps fingers] quickly, without wasting your time arguing, without wasting your time being upset by the demand . . . all of these are things that delay the experience of fulfillment.

You do it instantly by neglecting to do what doesn't work, which is thinking, reasoning, valuing the opportunity to become somebody in your own right. See, it's neglecting to do that, [snaps fingers] quickly neglecting to do that.

Neglecting, that's effortless. [snaps fingers] Quickly doing what is effortless, and saying, "Father what is the truth here?" You see?

In that way, the situation which is calling for correction is being used for the purpose of establishing the goal at the outset. Not after the emergency is past, where then you find a way to show that somehow God was teaching you a grand lesson . . . you see? . . . which you didn't know at the time but you know, you've been able to make some sense out of it.

No . . . no. That will not give you the correct answer. That will not give you a relevant answer. It will, perhaps, make you feel a little bit more comfortable in your ignorance. But it's an ignorance you shouldn't have to be made comfortable in and the way not to be in that position is to learn to quickly [snaps fingers] instantly say, in the face of the situation: "Father, what is the truth here? Father, what is the purpose here? Father what do I need to know?"

Because in that way you will know what to do and you will see how the situation can become the means for the correction. An important thing to grasp.

If you experience peace, it is because the truth has come to you, and you will see the outcome truly, for deception cannot prevail against you. And you will recognize the outcome BECAUSE you are at peace. Here again, you see the opposite of the ego's way of looking, for the ego believes the SITUATION brings the experience.

And of course, the experience that the situation brings isn't something you can understand until afterwards, after it has steamrollered you, after it has chewed you up and spit you out and left you in a position where you really have to look hard to find out where the blessing was in it. And then you do it instead of saying, "Absolutely not! This is not the correct answer and I'm not to find benefit or blessing in it. I'm not to find blessing in not practicing the holy instant. If I want the blessing, I must practice it. If I practice it, I will find the peace even though the emergency seems to say, "You can't have your peace until the situation has run its course." Bullshit! And you must be willing to say that or any equivalent disclaimer of the suggestion.

The Holy Spirit knows that the situation is as the goal determines it, and is experienced ACCORDING to the goal.

So once again, the focus here . . . the only answer here is, that the moment a demand presents itself to you, the moment a situation presents itself to you that leaves you at a loss, you must, [snaps fingers] right then . . . hesitate. Don't engage in your knee jerk mental response. And you say, even though you don't think you have time to ask for answers, you say, "Father, what is the truth here?" You refuse to re-act. You insist on silencing the reaction. And you say with commitment, "Father, what is the truth here? Father what is the answer that heals here? What is the answer that blesses, not curses the apparent cause of the situation—that causes me to be at a loss?" You see?

It really is simple. It's so simple that I can't put it in a lot of different words over and over. And so I know it is beginning to seem monotonous: You've got to do the two-step . . . you've got to do the two-step . . . or I could say you've got to practice the holy instant. So we have two ways to say it, but I've got to say it over and over because that is the simple answer.

Stop and think about it for a moment. Look back over your lifetime. You have had situations haven't you? You have had lots of situations. Some of them dire emergencies at the time, some of them just mild emergencies, but always things that caused you fear and brought you to a point where you felt obligated to act, to get control and to resolve the situation all by your puny little self . . . right?

Oh yes, it motivated you to ask God, it motivated you to prayer . . . to pray. But here's the thing I want to ask you: Are you still here to listen to me talk to you tonight? Did those dire emergencies . . . did those situations kill you off? No! That should tell you right there that you can afford to take five minutes in the face of a situation to stop and say, "Father, what is the truth here?" You could even take a day to stop the reaction and not respond . . . and get into your peace.

After all, some of the emergencies you've had, happened twenty years ago and you still haven't sat down and said, "Father, what's the truth here about that situation? That situation where I seemed to have a burst appendix and it had to be removed." Is your appendix back yet? Have you had the healing of that situation yet? You might as well do it now. You could have done it then . . . you didn't know, but you could have done it then. You can do it now. Do you see what I'm saying?

You can engage in the holy instant about a situation that happened twenty years ago, you can engage in the holy instant relative to it now twenty years later. You see?

So you can in the face of an emergency today neglect to react, neglect to throw your world up-side-down and your mind into chaos. And you can choose to shut up. And in the silence in you ask the Father to know the truth. Ask the Father, "What do I want to come of this, as Your Son or Daughter, the recipient of my Birthright that You have given me, what do I want to become of this? What is it for?" And then listen innocently without providing background fill of all the things that you can come up with.

Leave your mind in pristine quietness and continue to listen and you will feel the peace come and then you will feel truth and sanity which are inseparable from your peace. And you will hear the answer. And then you will know what needs to be done and the means that the situation provides will clearly be the supportive environment in which the correction can occur. It's the truth.

If you choose to listen to the voice for fear and remain independent, then deception will prevail against you and you have no choice about it. And at the moment, deception is prevailing in your lives every time you choose to think that you are an independent entity, capable of becoming successful by employing means and manipulations that take advantage of your Brother in the process of exalting you.

[And] you will recognize the outcome BECAUSE you are at peace. Here again, you see the opposite of the ego's way of looking, for the ego believes the SITUATION brings the experience. The Holy Spirit knows that the situation is as the goal determines it, and is experienced ACCORDING to the goal.

Now:

The goal of truth requires faith.

The reason you snatch up whatever bits of control you think you have available to you to get hold of the situation to make yourself safe is because you're not used to practicing faith. You're not used to making an investment of you in wanting to know what the truth is and listening for it outside of your best judgments, and then daring to make commitment to it and base your actions upon it. You're not used to that. That's faith.

The goal of truth requires faith. Faith is implicit in the acceptance of the Holy Spirit's purpose, and this faith is all-inclusive. Where the goal of truth is set, there faith MUST be.

So what is your goal in the face of a situation? Your goal is to find out what the truth is . . . what the God's honest truth is. What God's honest truth is.

The Holy Spirit sees the situation as a WHOLE. The goal establishes the fact that everyone involved in it will play his part in its accomplishment.

You see? When you're all by yourself, when you're doing things independently, you see everybody else as independent too. You see everyone else behaving in a self-centered, arrogant, mean-spirited, self-protective way to the disadvantage of everyone else, just as you are. That doesn't allow you to feel much trust. That doesn't allow you to feel any reason to have faith.

But when you listen and when you hear and the goal of truth is revealed to you and you find your peace and truth and sanity reside in your awareness, then you will see that everyone involved will play his part in its accomplishment . . . will play his part in the fruition of the Father's Will or Intent . . . and you will sell a lot of shoes, in so many words.

This is inevitable. No-one will fail in anything. This seems to ask for faith beyond you, and beyond what you can give.

Isn't that marvelous? You see, the first salesman says, "Have to have faith beyond you. Oh-h, I can't have faith beyond me," because he doesn't know who he is. And the other salesman who knows he's a Son of God and hears, "Oh, you need to have faith beyond you," he says, "Oh, I know. That's wonderful. Of course, yes, I'm with that. I'm yielding to that all the time." You see? So the same truth is experienced both for and against the one embracing it depending upon the vantage point from which that one is looking at the situation.

This seems to ask for faith beyond you, and beyond what you can give.

In effect you can read that and hear that as a promise of a capacity that you don't think you have so that you can say, "Wow, well I'm going to believe what Raj is saying. It's asking for faith beyond me and beyond what I can give. That must mean I've got the capacity. So I'm going to eagerly pay attention to receiving the awareness of that capacity so that I might feel it and be at one with it and bring no opposition into my experience of it. You see? That's the good news and that's the good response.

Yet this is so only from the viewpoint of the ego, . .

. . . meaning that it's beyond you and beyond what you can give . . .

. . . this is so only from the viewpoint of the ego, for the ego believes in "solving" conflict . . .

. . . you know, bringing your innate independent capacities to improve yourself and think clearly and logically and come up with answers that bless you and bless others. You see?

... the ego believes in "solving" conflict through fragmentation, . .

. . . not through joining, through being and continuing to be independent, separate, separate and apart from all the others who are being separate and apart from you and everyone else. You see?

... and does NOT perceive the situation as a whole.

If you are choosing for your peace and you're willing to abide in it and invite of the Holy Spirit the awareness of the truth and the experience of what the Son or Daughter of God feels in the experience of truth, then that holy Son or Daughter of God does not look out as an independent agent and does not see others as independent agents . . . but sees everyone, including himself, in the context of wholeness, in the context of the Father's Intent in the expression of Creation in which all of the Sons and Daughters of God have available to them the concrete experience of Reality where no threat, no separation, no vulnerability exists. It sees it all in its infinity as a unified whole.

Therefore, . .

. . . the ego, which does not perceive the situation as a whole . . .

... seeks to split off segments of the situation and deal with them SEPARATELY, for it has faith in separation, and not in wholeness.

Important . . . especially if there are a number of different elements, each capable of acting and causing things to happen separate from the other . . . you have the "House of Representatives" or "The Senate" or any other government on the globe which has factions which can be manipulated to overthrow the other things that need to be handled because everyone is being orchestrated in a different form of attack or coercion, not knowing of how many tendrils of control are being exercised. You see?

... the ego believes in "solving" conflict through fragmentation, and does NOT perceive the situation as a whole. Therefore, seeks to split off segments of the situation and deal with them SEPARATELY, for it has faith in separation, and not in wholeness.

And individuals just like you do exactly the same thing. And you get parts of families to work against the other parts of families or to try to coerce them into a positive direction, but it's still all manipulation that does not by its very means of solving the problem, communicate unity and the value of the wholeness of family that is primal, that is fundamental. You see?

We're reading a section called Practical Forgiveness. And what must be understood is that inseparable from practical forgiveness is the realization that correction of a situation can only occur in a context of, I'm going to say, unlimited unity, but let's also say, the unity of factions which you have employed and found valuable assets in getting what you want.

And so this is something you've got to consciously be willing to let go of. When you are engaging in the holy instant and when you want to know the truth, understand that the truth you will hear will not be something you can use to coerce people with or to control them with.

You know what it is?

It's the dawning in your heart of the presence of Love that embraces and unifies because there's no place in it . . . there's no place in the presence of Love for independence, for factions, for fragmentation to be or to seem to be valuable or to seem to be useful.

And that's tonight's message. That sums it up completely. And so we're going to stop here and let it rest.

And I look forward to being with you next time. I love you all.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 3rd 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Last week we considered some important things, all of which stemmed from the statement we began with, which was:

In any situation in which you are uncertain, the first thing to consider, very simply, is, "What do I want to come of this? What is it FOR?" The clarification of the goal belongs at the BEGINNING, for it is this which will determine the outcome, . . .¹

Now, there's something that wasn't brought out. And that is, that when you see a situation in which you are uncertain, when you see a situation which causes you to feel vulnerable, potentially unstable and so on, you are to do this thing of [snaps fingers] stopping right there and asking, "What do I want to come of this? What is it for? What is its purpose? What is its meaning?" And that's the beginning of the resolution of the problem.

Now you generally tend to think that it's normal to be faced with situations which make you uncertain. It's normal . . . it's life. And that's why it's a new thing to you, to ask initially when it first confronts you, "What do I want to come of this?"

What you need to know is, that what is causing you to see a situation that causes you to be uncertain, is the fact that you've already asked that question. Before you were confronted by a situation of this sort, you had asked the question: "What do I want to come of this? What is it for?" The only thing is, that you didn't ask this question of the Holy Spirit. You didn't ask this question of your Guide. You did not ask this question of your Father. You asked it of your own best reasoning, your own best judgments—your puny little orphan mind. That's the only reason you ever see a situation in which you are uncertain . . . because you've already asked the question.

It's not because that's the way the world is and therefore, you're certainly and naturally confronted with situations that make you uncertain . . . no.

Again, you're in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven looking through squinted eyes, saying, "I cannot see the perfection." You're looking through your own eyes, the ones you believe you have and the vision you have made up. That's all.

So, you're not overcoming some big infinite bogeyman called, "the world and universe" that came from a big bang and is full of conflict naturally and therefore, you are constantly going to be confronted by that which is conflicted. No. But that's the way the Kingdom of Heaven looks through mortal eyes. That's the way it looks through your own private mind.

That which is the problem . . . that which is, you could say, the source of the problem, is the source of the answer. You see? And you make it difficult for yourselves to see miracles because you think there is actually a material world in a forever-state of conflict.

If there is no material world, if there is no devil, if there is no bogeyman "out there" somewhere separate from you, which would indeed make it very difficult to Wake up, then you're in a position of being able to Wake up easily.

Why? Because the problem is the answer. The answer is "What is the problem?" The problem is . . . you said, "What do I want of this?" You see? It's all you, not a big bogeyman, not a conflicted polarized universe, not a physical world. It's just a choice you made: "What do I want to come of this?"

You see the situation? "What do I want to come of this?" And you're asking of the voice for fear.

But if you ask that question of the Voice for truth, your vision will be changed because you're abandoning the voice that made up the situation. Do you see?

There is no more difficulty to it than that because you're the problem and you're the answer . . . nothing more profound than that! Do you see?

This is important and it's good.

You're just going to do the same thing but you're going to ask of a different Teacher. You're going to bring the same amount of faith and commitment that you did but to a different Teacher. You've already been successful—totally successful—in creating a situation in which you are uncertain and where these questions need to be asked. Therefore, you know that you can be equally successful in asking the question—bringing the same amount of commitment and intent—that you brought to the other teacher. You see?

Simplicity . . . it's simple. But you create arguments against the simplicity when you choose to look at the uncertainty with your own puny little mind and your own puny little capacity, which you're working ever so hard to increase and to embellish and to make greater. So keep this in mind.

We also talked about the fact that you love . . . the ego loves separation. The ego loves fragmentation. If you need to accomplish something, the more points of influence that exist make it easier for you to cause change to happen. If you have a large group of people, the larger the group, the more infinite you might say, are the points upon which you can bring to bear, convincing manipulation. And the more you have, the better your chances are that you can succeed.

The smaller the number, especially when you get down to just one other, the more difficult it is to convince and change that one's mind and bring about unity. You see?

That's one reason, if you are faced with one difficult situation—meaning one difficult person—you will try to increase the size of the group. You will say to someone else who knows this person, "Hey Joe, come over here. I'd like your opinion . . ." "Hey Mary, come over here, will you, for a moment? We've got an issue going here that we need more perspective on . . ." See?

And so you increase the size of the group. You fragment it further. And the moment you do that, you really do make it more impossible to resolve the problem because you're not letting yourself be fully present with the situation which is causing uncertainty. And ultimately you're being unwilling to be present with the situation itself that is causing uncertainty and asking, "Father, what, as Your Son or Daughter, do I want to come of this?" You see? "What is it for?"

This is important because these little habits you have keep you from experiencing sudden shifts of perception that constitute miracles. And keep you from actually being an agent for change because your behavior relative to the one who is causing uncertainty for you is such that his mind can be illuminated with the possibility of unity. And your lack of divisiveness and your complete benignness, because of who you're letting yourself be guided by, significantly creates the circumstance in which this other one can experience a sudden shift of perception. And it's that simple. And because it works, it's that important.

And so, going into the book:

Confronted with any aspect of the situation which seems to be difficult, the ego . . .

. . . you, remaining independent, you, not saying, "Father what is the purpose here? Father, what is this for?"

. . . the ego will attempt to take this aspect elsewhere, and resolve it there.

"Hey Mary, will you come over here please?" "Hey Joe, will you come over here please?" And unsaid, you are acting out, "We are not going to deal with this, where the problem is, which is my choice of who to ask the question of whether it's me or whether it's the Holy Spirit. We're going to deal with it as though it's 'out there' completely separate and apart from my mind. And not only that, we're gonna say that it's so-and-so that's the problem. And we're going to get confirmation and support for that from others until we manipulate this one into obedience and get him to agree to the obvious. And together, we're bound to find a way to convince him, against his will, in such a way that he will decide that this was a better choice than being the problem." You see? And you magnify the problem.

And it will seem to be successful, except that this attempt conflicts with unity, and must OBSCURE the goal of truth.

You see? This situation is the one you're already in. It's not really new. This aspect comes up . . . that aspect comes up . . . tomorrow morning another aspect will come up. Of course it will, because at no point are you, generally speaking, doing the two-step. You forget and you act on your own—using your best judgments, using what truly is your ignorance.

And it will seem to be successful, except that this attempt conflicts with unity, and must OBSCURE the goal of truth. And peace will not be experienced except in fantasy.

"Ah-h yes, we finally got him to see it our way and I can let out a sigh of relief. It was a long hard day's work. But I can go home tonight and sit down and watch TV and be at peace." Bullshit! The very idea, "I can go home and watch the television and be at peace" was a decision and an explanation of a situation that was arrived at without ever saying, "Father what is the purpose of my going home tonight?" You see? Going home was not something that was going to be done with That which is nothing more than your right Mind. You see?

It's something that you're already in the middle of. But what you're in the middle of is a choice you've already made and you are acting out. And it was a choice to say, "What do I want to come of this? What is it for?" and asking it of your own imagination. And the solution is for you to ask the very same questions . . . but not of yourself. Do you see?

Do you see what I'm saying? I'm saying you don't have to learn one new thing at all. All you have to do is do the same thing you've been doing but giving your attention elsewhere than where you have been giving it when you're listening for the answer.

So you already have it under the belt. You already know what you need to know in terms of behavior and decision and purpose and intent. Ask, "Father what do I want to come of this? Father, what is it for?" You see?

Again, in both cases, whether you're asking truly of the Father or whether you're asking of your imagination, the thing, the situation, the circumstance is always part of the Kingdom of Heaven, is always part of Reality: "What is this for?" You see?

If you ask that question about what is real of the wrong teacher, you get the wrong answer. You see?

You think you just get up in the morning. And you open your eyes up and you sit up on the edge of the bed and you, like a robot, think you know what everything in your room is for, and what the day is for, and what's most likely and what you hope for, and all of this . . . all of these definitions have not been given to you, you've made them up! All the meanings, you have made up! And you don't have to do that.

You can sit up and you can say, "Father, what does that dresser mean? Father, what does that blanket mean? Father, what does the window mean? Father, what does the cloudy mean? Father, what is the sunny day for?"

You start asking the very same questions that you've given answers to yourself and ask them of the Father and I promise you, you will Wake up. I promise you that it is the way out of the dream.

Now, when you insist upon leaning unto your own understanding, leaning unto your imagination, peace will not be experienced except in fantasy. It will be a false peace.

Truth has not come, because faith has been denied, being withheld from where it rightfully belonged.

Faith in what? Faith in something outside of your own thinking . . . faith in the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind . . . faith in your Father/Mother/God. Faith that causes you to shut up and move into the silence and inquire of a Source that's not you—at least not what you recognize as you at this moment. And you bring faith into that silence and into that request, just like you brought faith into that question when it was presented to your imagination. And oh boy, do you think your imagination is great! And you bring faith in it with gusto! Unless of course, you have been abused and brought to a place where you have no confidence in yourself at all.

But most of what are called “healthy human beings” have a healthy imagination and have a great faith in it. So great that it feels no need whatsoever to say, “Father,” to anything except its own superior greatness.

You must stop denying faith. You could say you must deny faith in your own puny little imagination. But if you want to experience the truth that will constitute an Awakened Mind—which is inspired to see truly and to see the Kingdom of Heaven and all of Its perfection where its opposite had seemed to be before—then you must practice this, you must decide to ask a different teacher. That's where faith rightfully belongs.

Truth has not come, because faith has been denied, being withheld from where it rightfully belonged. Thus do you lose the understanding of the situation the goal of truth would bring.

Thus you have lost . . .

. . . the understanding of the situation the goal of truth would bring. . .

. . . because you did rely upon your imagination. And you find yourself in a world that you're able to define as conflicted and against you. Bottom line: meaning, that you must get up every morning and anticipate challenge, conflict, and maybe failure.

For fantasy solutions bring but the illusion of experience, and the illusion of peace is not the condition in which the truth can enter.

The substitutes for aspects of the situation are the witnesses to your lack of faith.

They're witnesses of the fact that you did not shut up and say, (express faith) "Father, what is the truth here? Father, what is this for? Father, what does this mean?" You see? You did not bring faith into practice. You didn't bring it into the picture.

The substitutes for aspects of the situation are the . . .

. . . things you bring into the picture or the arena of your attention that constitute distractions from practicing faith, that constitute justifications for utilizing manipulation of things in a world made up of things that are all fundamentally independent from each other and jockeying for position, each of them against the other, including you—you against them and them against you. You see?

Those are what the substitutes are for aspects of the situation. They demonstrate that you did not believe that the situation and the PROBLEM were in the same place.

You understand what that means now: The situation and the problem are in the same place. They're in the place in your mind where you are determining who you are going to seek the answers from. On the other hand, if you are willing to practice the two-step, then what is demonstrated is, that you realize that the situation and the problem are in the same place, they're actually the same thing. And the simple solution is: Ask the question of the other Teacher. Do what calls upon your faith.

Relying upon your own imagination doesn't really call for a lot of faith. It calls for a lot of persistence and it calls for a lot of unending confidence, which for some reason everyone feels they have an abundance of.

The problem . . .

. . . the situation that was disconcerting . . .

. . . WAS the lack of faith, . . .

The problem was the direct experience of your lack of expressing faith, of your consciously refraining from joining with Something beyond your best judgments, best thinking, best imagination. You see? This is the simplicity of it.

The problem WAS the lack of faith, and it is this you demonstrate when you remove it from its source and place it elsewhere.

You see? You take this part of the Kingdom of Heaven or this little aspect of the Kingdom of Heaven and you refuse to look at it with your Father's Eyes—with the Eyes that were given to you as a Birthright—and you've chosen to look at it through your own imagination and your own wish to make what you want it to be real. You see?

So you've removed this little bit of the Kingdom of Heaven and you've moved it from the perspective that the Father is engaged in, in causing it to exist. And you take this little bit of Reality and place it elsewhere, where in the barrenness of your disconnection, your lack of electricity, we'll say, because you've unplugged the cord, you've unplugged the plug. And from there you look at it. From there you consider it.

But as we've also mentioned, the minute you've made that separation of yourself you found yourself faced with fear and guilt simultaneously. And so that's part of the characteristic of the imagination that you're drawing from to create something on your own. That's why it's disconcerting, that's why it's called a problem.

Having taken it away . . .

. . . from its source and place it elsewhere. As a result, you do not see the PROBLEM.

Now is that word, "problem" applied to the situation that's disconcerting to you or is it addressing the real problem?

As a result, you do not see the PROBLEM.

When you, from your independence, engage in an act for a specific result, meaning that when you are functioning as an orphan having disowned your Father, you do not see that the disconcerting situation that you're faced with is not the problem. You do not see that the problem is: That you have insisted upon looking at a little bit of the Kingdom of Heaven while denying the Father's perspective Who is Being that little bit of the Kingdom of Heaven and Who is providing the true experience of it for you His Son or Daughter to have. That's the problem and that's what you're not seeing.

And as long as you keep addressing that problem out there, as long as you keep trying to manipulate your definition of the world or a part of it, you're going to reinforce and keep in place your ignorance and the suffering that accompanies it. It's that absolute. It's that simple. And the simple solution is to do exactly the opposite or I'm going to say, do exactly the same thing giving your attention to the answer to your Father, to the Voice for truth.

I'm being very repetitious. I'm doing it for a reason, because I'm presenting something utterly simple and it's very hard for egos to see something very simple. But the divinity of each one of you listening is hearing what I'm saying and is hearing the Meaning of what I'm saying and a sudden shift of perception is in motion. So let it be monotonous, let me be monotonous tonight.

Had you not lacked the faith it could be solved, the problem would be gone.

In some really quiet moments, if you will contemplate this, you will realize that from an ego standpoint, you don't really want problems to be solved, because you're a "problem solving machine!" Your function is to solve problems. And you don't really want to find out that the Father has already made everything whole and perfect, including you, and there's nothing for you to solve. There's only the Kingdom of Heaven to experience—the fullness of and the joy of and the love that is innately natural to you and naturally flows into expression as the recognition of what is Real the way the Father is making It and not the way you have been imagining it.

Had you not lacked the faith it could be solved, the problem would be gone. And the situation would have been meaningful to you, . .

It's meaningfulness is lost to you when you are listening to the voice for fear, when you are listening to and committing to your faulty imagination.

[And] the situation would have been meaningful to you, because the interference in the way of understanding would have been removed.

And what's the interference that's in the way of understanding? It's your decision not to inquire where the answer is awaiting you and insisting upon inquiring where the answer does not exist. You see?

To remove the problem elsewhere is to KEEP it. For you remove yourself FROM it, and make it unsolvable.

"But Father, I'd rather do it myself." You see? You remove yourself from it with great pride and enthusiasm and anticipation.

Now during this coming week I invite all of you to reread and reconsider this section on Practical Forgiveness. It's marvelous. It's a turning point. It's a pivot point. An easy one, that I want you all to enjoy it and let it move you.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 17th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

A new section:

THE NEED FOR FAITH¹

Faith is a word that has been discussed a lot over the eons. Everyone has a fairly good idea, they think, of what the word means. But we're talking about a very specific definition of faith, a very specific meaning of faith.

You know the phrase, "Being painted into a corner?" In a way, the Course or any truly spiritual system if it is truly valuable, paints its followers into a corner—moves everyone into a place where there are no alternatives, nothing is wishy-washy. You're faced with one choice.

To those who like options, it seems unfair, unreasonable—justification for abandoning the spiritual system, whatever it might have been. Oh, no, it's nice to have the time to study the various options, and delay the reason for having been painted into the corner . . . delay Awakening.

Now, faith and faithlessness are inseparable from the act and state of joining with your Father—reuniting with your Father, taking a stand of union in which you acknowledge and accept the fact fully that you are the holy Son or Daughter of God and not the piss-ant mortal you've claimed you were, you thought you were, you were taught you were and which you've been committed to for indefinite periods of time.

Faith and faithlessness are inseparable from the two-step: The practice of the holy instant and the act of divorce that everyone has engaged in—divorce from your Father. It's that simple. It's that black and white.

And so, when we're talking about the need for faith here, we're very specifically talking about the need for abandoning independence. You might not have thought of that. It's the act of repairing a rift that you tried to imagine you made when you couldn't. It's the re-uniting of what never could have been separated. You might not have thought of it that way either.

Faith is where you undo what put you in the realm of faithlessness.

Faith is the way you replace the valuing of the idea of emancipation from That which you have to cooperate with, That which you are a part of, That which you must fit in with. You see?

Faith is the way you undo the act of independence—of claiming independence and behaving as though you have succeeded.

Faithlessness is the state you find yourself in when you have denied that which justifies faith . . . when you have denied that which justifies the, I'm going to say, dullness of being whole in place of the excitement of being part, the excitement of being ungrounded, the excitement of being disconnected from stability.

Faithlessness is the state of being called, "orphanhood." Faithlessness is the state of being unconscious of what's Real, unconscious of truth and enjoying the challenging task of bringing truth about—of creating reality that is comfortable and safe, while insisting upon staying in the vulnerable unsafe position of being disconnected from your Source.

Joined equals faith. Divorced—un-joined—equals faithlessness.

In the un-joined place the only thing you can have faith in is yourself. And you do stay in that place because you find that stimulating and satisfying. But nevertheless, all the time that you're living your life un-joined with your Source and unconscious of who you Are, as that which can be joined with a Source that makes you Real, you are in a constant state of faithlessness.

Important to understand. Important to contemplate what I'm saying because it might not be easy to fully grasp it and let yourself into it. But if this is not understood, then we will continue to need a section in this book called, THE NEED FOR FAITH.

It's time to move beyond the need for faith. It's time to move beyond the need to practice the two-step. It's time to move beyond the need to engage in the holy instant. The holy instant is a transitionary point—that place where, once you have moved over it, you know who you Are. There is no doubt. Faith is not called for. Because you understand from the tips of the toes of your Being who you Are and what everything Is, and you know you've come Home into your right Mind.

Now, we talked last time about the fact that the correction of a problem is not the result of manipulating things but is a matter of coming back into that point in your mind where you said, "Father I'd rather do it myself." "Father, I'd rather see it my way." "Father, I'd rather say what things mean." And at that point creating an illusion—a delusion—which you were willing to shift your attention and commitment and belief to.

Therefore, the correction of a problem is never with the results of that decision. The correction of a problem is always coming back to that place where you said, "Father I would rather do it myself." "Father, I would rather give the definitions to everything" and in that spot abandon your commitment to your best judgments because the abandonment of your Father was what caused the problem, not all of the results of the abandonment.

That's what makes it simple. Either you are joined or you are un-joined. Either you are practicing faith or you're practicing faithlessness. It doesn't matter what the faith is in. It doesn't matter what the faithlessness is in. It matters whether you're practicing faithlessness or faith. It matters whether you're insisting on living in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven, as though it's a material world and universe, as a thing—an object that came into existence by happenstance.

From there, your experience of your divine being and of the Kingdom of Heaven will be experienced as exactly the opposite. And as you know, you tend to try to fix up the distresses and the conflicts in the result—in this material world and universe—when what's called for . . . again, and this is part of being clear about faith and faithlessness . . . you must come back to the place in you where you made that choice for faithlessness, for independent authority and all the excitement and all of the power and all of the prestige that you think will come from it and you abandon faithlessness. You abandon the conscious intent to insist on being an independent agent. That's what abandoning faithlessness means. And if that's clear to you, you will move forward in your Awakening much faster.

Why? Because you won't spend your time trying to fix things up and move objects around into the place where they are not threatening. You will go to that place where you made the mistake in your mind. And you will abandon the attitude and the act of faithlessness. And you will exchange it for faith. Faith, which is you shutting up—you in the silence reaching beyond your faithlessness, reaching beyond all of your best thinking, reaching into Something that doesn't seem as though it's truly there, which requires faith on your part, and you say, "Father, Holy Spirit . . ." or you know, "That which knows the truth, please share with me what the truth is. I will be quiet and I will listen without the interference of my faithlessness (meaning my own best thinking) and I will lean into with faith, with willingness, That which created me, That which loves me, That which holds nothing back of what It is from me—His expression—and I will stay in this state of quiet inquisitiveness and willingness to hear until I hear, until I learn the truth.” That’s faith.

But more than that, when you are willing to stay in that place and not take over again—not take charge again—and the truth is revealed to you, it changes entirely the way you experience what you had been calling the material world and universe and mortals. It will change the way you’re seeing everything.

And where you had been seeing problems will not be problems because you will know the truth. And your utter peace in the presence of what had been called a material world and universe, which you’re able to be peaceful in because it’s clear to you it’s the Kingdom of Heaven, constitutes the replacement of faith, constitutes that which means you will never be called upon to practice faith again, because faithlessness is simply gone without any hard learning lessons. It’s gone! A gentle shift of perception that changes everything causes what had been misunderstood before to vanish, leaving you nothing to work your way through or spiritualize your mind about.

One could say that healing will have occurred. Those who are the beneficiary of the clarity that has come to you by virtue of your practicing faith rather than faithlessness, will say a miracle has happened—that which they weren’t expecting will occur and it will cause their curiosity to blossom, to emerge, accompanied by a confidence and a positive expectation that they can’t really justify, but everything that’s catching their attention manifesting healing will bring that confidence into play where they would ordinarily have been frightened.

Now, let’s go into the book.

There is no problem in any situation that faith will not solve.

Oh, I’m sure, aside from what I’ve just shared, that every one of you can look at your relationships or your life and see that there are situations that faith will not solve, situations that no matter how much positive thinking you use and how consistently you expect the best of your lover or your neighbor or your friend, it’s not going to make any difference. Faith in your fellowman won’t do anything. That’s the fear. That’s the confidence.

But the way you’re using the word, “faith” causes you to feel that way. It justifies it. Because you’re saying, “No matter how much faith I have, no matter how much faith I generate from this orphan that I think I am, it’s going to be impossible to change anything.” And you’re right. Because we’re not talking about faith that you muster up within yourself and bring forth and bless your world with and coerce your Brothers and Sisters with. That's not the faith that will solve any problem.

There is no problem in any situation that . . .

. . . your engaging in the holy instant . . .

. . . will not solve.

That your engaging in the abandonment of your independence and saying, "Father, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, give me the experience of the Kingdom of Heaven and my holy Brother as they Are—as they truly Are." And then refrain from acting, refrain from taking steps that don't arise out of an influx of inspiration of truth that comes to you as a result of your asking and refraining from acting until you get the answer.

There is no problem in any situation that . . .

. . . that kind of . . .

. . . faith will not solve.

You see?

There is no shift in any aspect of the problem but will make solution impossible.

There is no shift, there is no manipulation of individuals that you can make from your faithlessness—from your place of independence, from your personal authority.

There is no shift in any aspect of the problem . . .

. . . in any manipulations you engage in . . .

. . . but will make solution impossible.

Why? Because you're doing it from a place of powerlessness. You're doing it from a place of faith-less-ness. You're doing it from a place where you're unplugged from your Source, the power of which moving through you, heals—does solve problems. You see?

For if you shift part of the problem elsewhere, . . .

. . . meaning where? Meaning elsewhere from the place where you made the mistake, the place where you made the choice between the teachers you were going to listen to. If you shift part of the problem elsewhere—from that key point—and you shift it to the way things look and the way your Brothers and Sisters look, through your independent perspective, the solution will always be impossible. Because it will keep you bound. And it will keep you bound because you're looking at the wrong place. You're looking at the place where the problem can't be solved because it's not the place where the problem was created, which was in your decision as to which of the two teachers you were going to listen to. And you made the wrong choice.

For if you shift part of the problem elsewhere, the meaning of the problem MUST be lost, . .

. . . not only that, . .

. . . the meaning of the problem MUST be lost, and the solution to the problem is inherent in its meaning.

What is the meaning of the problem? It's not what the bastard over there did to the bitch over there, who then came down on you and ruined your life. No. The meaning of the problem is: "Before I saw the bitch and the bastard, I made a choice as to what lens I was going to look at them through, what teacher and what teaching I was going to employ in perceiving them." You see?

The meaning of the problem lies in that choice. And if you don't recognize that the meaning of the problem is there, you will try to protect yourself against the bitch and the bastard instead of forgiving the world you're seeing by choosing not to look at it all by yourself any longer. In other words, engaging in faith. Is this beginning to make simple clear sense?

Is it not possible that all your problems HAVE been solved, but you have removed yourself from the solution?

You see? Is it not possible that everything right now is the Kingdom of Heaven, and everyone are the Sons and Daughters of God, and every part of Creation beautifully illuminates all that is true about God? Is it not possible that because everything already is the Kingdom of Heaven and it never changed, all your problems have been solved? You see? They've been solved because they never became what you began to see them as when you chose to look at them through your faithlessness, which means your isolation and barren disconnection from your Source—from That which gives your Being Meaning.

Is it not possible that all your problems HAVE been solved, . .

. . . because they're not Real? . .

. . . but you have removed yourself from the solution?

You removed yourself from the act of faith, you removed yourself from the connection with That which validates and illuminates the divine meaning of everything that It Created. You removed yourself . . . “But Father, I’d rather do it myself! But Father, I’d rather do it my way! But Father, I’d rather define what everything is and by damn it I’m going to!”

Is it not possible that all your problems HAVE been solved, but you have removed yourself from the solution? Yet faith must be where something has been done, and where you SEE it done.

[Repeats] . . . faith must be where something has been done, . .

. . . faith must be where the something that you did that separated you from your Father has been done and where you see it done. You will see it done when you reverse the choice—the choice you made for the teacher that teaches illusion. You see?

A situation is a relationship, . .

. . . there we come back to that . . . involvement that you can’t get away from. All of the Brotherhood that constitutes the wholeness of what God is Being, all of the Brotherhood that fits together, all of the Brotherhood that finds no need to gain control over anything else, no need to manipulate, no need to exercise power for self-satisfaction, self-aggrandizement and making oneself important.

A situation is a relationship, being the joining of thoughts. If problems are perceived, . .

. . . you know . . . the bitch and the bastard.

If problems are perceived, it is because the thoughts are judged to be in conflict. But if the goal is truth, this is impossible. Some idea of bodies must have entered, for minds cannot attack.

“Oh-h, yeah right! My attention became involved with bodies. All I can think about are bodies. All I see all day long are bodies. You know . . . of course, yes . . . my problem is because I’m seeing bodies.” Nobody thinks like that. And as a result it’s hard to understand what it means to say:

Some idea of bodies must have entered, . .

No. The way it works is: That you look at God’s Creations—and I’m speaking specifically here about sentient Beings—and you look at your Brothers and Sisters and you don’t . . . you know, generally think of them as bodies. But you do think of them as minds—minds that have been conditioned by their life . . . conditioned by their parents, conditioned by their neighborhoods, conditioned by their teachers.

And you see them as response mechanisms, who have been conditioned to behave in particular ways. And the behavior is engaged in by bodies. So you don't think of everyone as bodies but you think of them as minds that are conditioned to behave in a particular way that is predictable and dependable and allow you to come to stable ongoing conclusions about them—allowing you to behave in a way that consistently keeps a certain amount of equilibrium present in a relationship.

So where does such an assessment arise from? Where does such an assessment about your fellowman come from? Well, if you joined with the Father, such assessments would not even occur to you. They would be nonexistent and completely unavailable.

These assessments of your Brothers and Sisters arise from the un-joined place, they arise from the state of mind you find yourself in when you have abandoned your Source and have been immediately faced with fear and guilt. Suddenly your invulnerable existence has been replaced with vulnerability and justification for fear and justification for defense against what? Minds conditioned through fear and guilt to behave in erratic and undependable ways that require defense to be brought into play. And you don't think of them as bodies. But indeed, "Joe over there, who isn't particularly handsome and isn't particularly intelligent is bound to behave in ways that I should be on guard against." You see . . . you see?

And so in that way the thought of bodies has come into the picture.

Some idea of bodies must have entered, for minds cannot attack.

Now the interesting thing is, that when you engage in the holy instant and the peace of God floods you and brings you into a state of peace, it's impossible for you . . . it's not only impossible for you to see your neighbor as threatening, it doesn't occur to you to use your mind in a way that would see that.

There's no sense of bodies. There's not even any sense of conditioned minds and conditioned nervous systems. You see?

The thought of bodies is the sign of faithlessness, . .

. . . got it?

The thought of bodies is the sign of . . .

. . . having said: "Father, I'd rather see it my way. Father, I want a divorce. Father, I am emancipating myself from You and moving into a substantial state of independence, which I'm going to be in charge of."

The thought of bodies is the sign . . .

... that you got a divorce from your Father. And that's called faithlessness.

The thought of bodies . . .

... and the key word there is "thought" not "bodies."

The thought of bodies is the sign of faithlessness, for bodies cannot solve anything.

But once you've made your assessment of this conditioned mind and a nervous system that follows that mind—meaning a body that's going to behave according to that mind—that's not going to solve anything. And yet, the fact is that all of you—most all of you, for a good part of your day—go through the day manipulating your Brothers because that is the way you see them and that is the way you think you must protect yourself. And in doing that, you have managed to stay away from the place where the wrong choice of teachers occurred, and therefore, you're not in the place where it's obvious that there's only one thing to do and that is, turn to the other Teacher.

The thought of bodies is the sign of faithlessness, for bodies cannot solve anything. And it is their intrusion on the relationship, . .

... what . . . their intrusion? Don't get hung up on the word "bodies."

The thought of bodies is the sign of faithlessness, . .

And it is their intrusion . . .

... the thoughts of bodies . . .

. . . it is their intrusion on the relationship, an error in your thoughts ABOUT the situation, which then becomes the justification for your lack of faith.

It's the justification for staying firmly in the orphan mindset, in the place where self-protection must be engaged in and you remain lost. You're not at the place where healing can occur.

Now:

You WILL make this error, . .

... and you're all making the error everyday right now.

You WILL make this error, but be not at all concerned with that.

[chuckling] After all, the only one who would be concerned about it is the orphan engaged in being independent and being frightened by the experience which causes him to bring into play further self-protection rather than remembering [snaps fingers] "Ah, I need to go back to the place where I made the wrong choice and not engage in correcting the details of what I'm experiencing as a result of that wrong choice."

You WILL make this error, but be not at all concerned with that. The error does not matter. Faithlessness brought to faith . . .

. . . interesting what that now means. Faithlessness . . . the independent stance brought to a place in one's attitude where one is willing to reach beyond self-governance and reach out to and join with Something beyond it, that's:

Faithlessness brought to faith . . .

. . . see? . . .

. . . will never interfere with truth. But faithlessness used AGAINST truth will always destroy faith.

In other words, in your independent orphan mode, acting purposely to avoid the experience of truth which would come from joining, refusing to join because there is an insistence upon ongoing independence . . . that will always destroy faith. Not confidence you have in the good that another can do, it will destroy the faith that is the act of joining, the act of undoing the mistake of choosing for the wrong teacher.

If you lack faith, ask that it be restored where it was LOST, . .

. . . and that is why what we're talking about tonight is so important. And it's why any spiritual system of thought or teaching must bring everyone to this place where you're painted into the corner and there are no choices anymore except which teacher are you going to choose and giving you the opportunity to make the right choice this time and be done with illusion. Be done with misunderstanding. Be done with insanity.

If you lack faith, ask that it be restored where it was LOST, . .

. . . which is again, monotonously . . . the place where you made the choice for the wrong teacher within you . . .

. . . and seek not to have it made up to you elsewhere, as if you had been unjustly deprived of it.

You won't have the experience of having been unjustly deprived of it when you have been in-filled with the understanding of truth. And it simply won't be any part of your experience—your mental makeup—to see a call for justice, because you will see that nothing that you ever thought you were suffering from was Real. It was only the effect of having made a wrong choice, having experienced conflict as a result, and then not addressing the difficulty where the correction could occur, which was in the choice for teachers.

Only what YOU have not given can be lacking in ANY situation.

Once again, we're at this "painted into the corner" simplicity. The only thing under any circumstance that can be lacking in any situation which is something that you have not given, was the right choice—the choice for the right Teacher.

Only what YOU have not given can be lacking in ANY situation.

"Oh-h, you didn't give enough love to him. Oh-h, you didn't have enough patience with her. That's what was lacking. If you had given that, there wouldn't be a problem." No!

Only what YOU have not given can be lacking in ANY situation.

And the only thing that you can withhold in any way, shape or form, is one thing: Your willingness to acknowledge your Source. Your willingness to acknowledge your Father/Mother, That which gives you definition, That which amounts to a Birthright that you're not responsible for, that can't be taken away. And even though you can cover It up and become unconscious of It, you cannot alter It and It will forever remain in you, to stumble over and have the surprise of discovering . . . or which you can consciously choose for and have the pleasure of being transformed by.

The choice for the holy instant is the choice for faith. The choice for independence is the choice for faithlessness.

Simple. Profound. Embracing It and allowing for It to be true is the way you Wake up.

Which teacher are you going to insist upon listening to?

I love you all. Have fun with this. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 24th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We ended up last time with this sentence:

Only what YOU have not given can be lacking in ANY situation.¹

That's sort of a heavy trip to lay on you. It makes it sound as though everything depends on you.

Only what YOU have not given can be lacking in ANY situation.

Well, we've got to remember, there's only one thing you can give. There's something you can withhold, but there's only one thing you can give. The one thing you can give is your willingness to abandon your independence and join with your Source—join with the Father—join with that which defines you by virtue of the Birthright It/He has established in you.

That's the only thing you can give in any situation. And the only thing you can withhold is the joining.

You are in a dream at the moment. You are in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven misperceiving It—frightening yourselves with your definitions of It—and the conclusions you have come to about It.

Your choice to see It as it is not, is faithlessness as we discussed—your willingness to abandon your authorship and your authority to author definitions of the world and universe.

(I'm sorry, this is me, Paul, I lost it.)

. . . your abandonment of your authority, your abandonment of the apparent capacity to authorize things is the abandonment of faithfulness.

Again, in the book:

Only what YOU have not given can be lacking in ANY situation.

Doesn't matter what anyone else is or isn't doing. It doesn't matter what the universe is doing or not doing, because I promise you, that as long as you have established yourself as an independent author of things and you are giving definition to everything, you are in a state of faithfulness. And you cannot help but see your fellowman and the universe doing or not doing things, being or not being things through the lens of your own insanity.

This is what you must understand.

As an independent author, as an orphan—that which has no Father/Mother, no Source—you will see everything and experience yourself in an absolutely distorted way. You will not be able to see everything grounded in anything—meaning a Source, Something eternally valid.

And so as long as you are dealing with your fellowman or as long as you are dealing with your world from the independent orphan standpoint, you are not giving yourself the opportunity to see everything as it is. You are withholding that which will allow you to see clearly. It's that black and white. And it's that simple.

As a result, when you give the one thing that you've withheld, when you give the only thing that you're able to give, which is an invitation to your Father and an acknowledgement of your Father as your Father, and the willingness to accept the Birthright that belongs to you because of this Father you're acknowledging as your Father, you will begin to see everything differently, whether the world had been up to mischief, whether your fellowman had been up to mischief, whether it had been destructive or constructive, you will bring the one thing you are able to give. And it's the one thing that has caused you to be unable to see the world and your fellowman clearly, correctly, and thereby in a manner that allowed you to have no other thing to share except love . . . and an acknowledgement of the absolute grounded worth and value of every part of the universe and every single one of your Brethren.

"Well," you say, "Raj you've told me before that you can't force people to change. So, you know, how can it all be up to me? How can it be, that only what I have not given can be lacking in any situation? And you know, be real with me Raj . . . okay?"

Well you know what? You cannot choose to do the two-step, you cannot choose to hesitate, become still and enquire of your Father, "What's the truth here?" and practice the holy instant for the purpose of changing your world and your fellowman.

If that were possible, then you would be caught in an unavoidable recognition of a great power that resides in you and it would be impossible for you to be put in a position of having to yield authority, of having to become humble, of having to have a purpose that isn't self-serving as you move forward in your Awakening.

If there is any element of self-serving, if there's any self-serving aspect in the process of Awakening, Awakening... will...not...happen!

So, in a way you could say that the one thing that you have not given is the one thing that makes you feel like there's a demand to give something. The one thing that you have not given is causing you to have problems that force you to find solutions which bring you to the point ultimately of finding out that the problem is that there's something you haven't given. And the answer is that you're called upon to give it.

You're called upon to return to your sanity by doing the only thing that works. And that is, again, so simple . . . abandon your independence. Abandon your apparently self-authorizing authority. Abandon your attempts to be in charge. Let go of control and do it as a foundation for saying, "Father, what is the truth here? Father, what is Your Perspective?" because you've been told that your Father's Perspective is established in you as your perspective. And your letting yourself experience it is the way your sanity returns to you.

Now, anywhere in there, did I say sanity returns to your Brother? Did I say that order returns to your universe? No I didn't. But I will tell you that will happen. And if it doesn't happen instantaneously, you will be providing the environment in which your Brother or Sister can more easily yield as you have.

The thing is, that when you abandon your partnership in the orphanage, in the house of orphans, or the senate made up of orphans, or the federation of orphans (whatever you want to call it)—the community and the organization of orphans in the orphan mindset—when you abandon that, you withdraw your energy from it and it's more difficult for all of the rest in the federation or the senate or the house of orphans to maintain their orphanhood.

Now, that isn't because you're forcing them, it's because you're not enforcing an artificial concept of togetherness. Okay?

So:

Only what YOU have not given can be lacking in ANY situation.

And you only have one thing you can withhold and not give. And that is your union with your Father, your devotion to and obedience to the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind. You see?

Only what YOU have not given can be lacking in ANY situation.

That doesn't mean that you've not given something like the best "con job" in the world or the best and most sly manipulation of a Brother's mind or a Sister's mind so as to bring about something good. But the something good came about because you were so exquisitely perfect in doing this subtle sly manipulation that went right by them . . . they didn't notice it . . . they took the bait and wow! . . . they had an "ah-ha!"

Wait a minute? No. That's not what it's talking about when it says:

Only what YOU have not given can be lacking in ANY situation.

Because what I just described is what you've been giving all along. It's the way you operate right now at the moment. You see?

Only what YOU have not given can be lacking in ANY situation.

And like I said, the only thing that you've withheld from any situation is your presence in it joined with your Father. Your presence in it saying, (not to it) "Father, what is the truth here in this situation? I want to join with You and in the immediacy and movement of that joining, I want to behave with complete compliance to Your Perspective and "the way things work" as a result of Your authorship as Creator." You See? That's what you're not bringing. And that's the only thing you can bring.

Okay, I'm going to read it again:

Only what YOU have not given can be lacking in ANY situation. But remember this; the goal of holiness was set for your relationship, . .

. . . now why do you suppose that's there? Because it's very easy to think that the goal of holiness was set for you. The goal of holiness was set for you to benefit by and for you to Wake up as a result of . . . for you to Ascend as I did . . . be special as though what I did was special, and as though what I did was to say something about me, when it wasn't. It was a Gift that said, "You're no more bound than I am. Take hold of your freedom." I said, "If you have seen me, you have seen the Father." That means, if someone has seen you they have seen the Father. I know when I look at you that I see the Father.

But as a general rule, you don't look at your Brothers and Sisters and see the Father. You see something else. You see your best judgments or your most crafty judgments, your most sly judgments—whatever judgments you can apply to another to best be able to manipulate them to get them to build you up, to make you great, to get their mutual agreement and to get them to vote for you.

But remember this; the goal of holiness was . . .

. . . not set for you . . .

. . . remember this; the goal of holiness was set for your relationship, . .

. . . that means you and your Brother. What you would call a win-win situation where you both manage to yield with faith, in faith, by joining in the holy instant and being infilled, not by each other's crafty sly incredible capacity but rather because you were filled with the influx of the Father's Perspective . . .

. . . remember this; the goal of holiness was set for your relationship, . .

. . . you're just not going to be able to do this by yourself. It isn't meant for you to do this by yourself. It's about looking in your Brother's eyes—not in the mirror at yours—but looking in your Brother's eyes and remembering God.

It . . .

. . . was set for your relationship, . .

. . . and then here's the next thing . . .

. . . and NOT by you.

The goal is there. It was established for your relationship, but it was not established by you. While you're practicing faithlessness, while you're coming from the place of independence, the goal is set by you. And of course, everyone else's goal is set by them. And that means that you are the brunt of the goals that other people have set for you based on their fear and guilt and their sense of worthlessness that causes them to need you to bolster them up which gives them the difficult task of convincing you that they're worth it.

So you see this is daily life, isn't it. And it hasn't caused Awakening, has it. But Awakening is your Birthright. And Awakening is what we're talking about. And so you need to bring to the situation what you haven't been bringing.

So one of the things you're going to have to bring that you haven't been bringing is a willingness to abide by rules that you didn't make up, by goals that you didn't create which naturally and easily happens when you humble yourself and you say, "Father, not my will be done, but Thy Will be done . . . Thy Will be done." You're not saying, "Thy Will be done [chuckles] on Joe or Mary . . . yeah, get 'em, Thy Will be done. . ."

No. It means, "Thy Will be done in me. Thy Will be done so that my will becomes willingness to let Your Will govern me and provide me with the Perspective that causes me to be able to honor Your Will and which is so inspiring to me that Your Will spontaneously flows from me because it is so wonderful I can't withhold it. That's what I want. That's what I haven't been bringing to the situation—to any situation here in the orphanage. And that's what I want to bring to the situation now."

You did not set it . . .

. . . the goal . . .

. . . because holiness cannot be seen EXCEPT through faith, . .

. . . now remember, we talked about the difference between faith and faithlessness. Faith is you in the act of truly saying, "Father, what is the truth here?" and joining with your Father. That is faith. To say, "Father, I'd rather do it my own way. Father, I'd rather define everything myself." and imagining that you're being from that framework, that's the conscious practice of faithlessness.

So, you did not set the goal for your relationship.

You did not set it because holiness cannot be seen EXCEPT through faith, . .

. . . that simply means holiness cannot be seen EXCEPT through joining.

Are you beginning to see how simple it is? It's black or white. It's this or that. It's on or off. It's actual or non-existent.

You did not set it because holiness cannot be seen EXCEPT through faith, and your relationship was not holy . . .

. . . your relationship with everything . . .

. . . was not holy BECAUSE your faith in one another was so limited . . .

. . . your faith in one another.

Your faith . . .

. . . each of you . . . your faith in each other, like from you to the other one in the room . . . you know, in the little house on the street, in the city, in the state, in the country, on the planet . . . you know, it's really miniscule this little link between you and your Brother because your faith in your Brother is only coming from your best assessments, your best judgments, your favorite theories and so on.

So your faith in one another unjoined with the Father, Whose Presence in you illuminates faith for what it actually is and inspires you with it enough that you just behave with faith, not as a tool you're using and applying to your Brother or Sister, but as a behavior of the presence of Love that does what it does because of what it Is and not because of what it can accomplish.

You did not set it . . .

. . . the goal . . .

. . . because holiness cannot be seen EXCEPT through faith, . .

. . . through being joined . . .

. . . and your relationship was not holy BECAUSE your faith in one another was so limited and little.

It wasn't the result of being joined with your Creator, which revealed your divinity to you by revealing your Brother's or Sister's divinity to you. That kind of understanding and experience of the meaning of everything and of your Brothers and Sisters with you . . . that's what it's all about. That's being in the state of faith and it's the absence of faithlessness.

Your faith must grow to meet the goal that has been set.

What goal? The goal that wasn't set by you, the goal that's the ultimate, you might say, the infinite perspective about your Brother, which automatically includes you. You can't be left out of that awareness.

The goal's reality will call this forth, . .

. . . I'm going to backup one sentence:

Your faith must grow to meet the goal that has been set.

The purpose is to meet the goal.

The goal's reality will call this forth, . .

. . . not you. Nothing that you do will call it forth. But by your not claiming an independent existence, separate and apart from the way everything actually works, your faith will grow, it will enlarge because it—the goal that was set from the beginning—will bring it forth, will call it forth.

The goal's reality . . .

... the one you didn't create and that you didn't setup ...

... will call this forth, for you will see ...

... in the very core of your Being and you will feel it ...

... you will see that peace and faith will not come separately.

One begets the other and without embracing them both you will have neither.

What situation CAN you be in without faith, and remain faithful to each other?

You know the answer to that. The answer to that is everyday life.

What situation CAN you be in without faith, ..

... that means without being joined. That means:

What situation CAN you be in ...

... in the orphanage ...

... and remain faithful to each other?

You can't! Because in the environment, in the arena of faithlessness of being unjoined, you are in, first of all, a frame of mind—the boundaries of which you could say are fear and guilt—and everything you perceive is misperceived, is not seen for what it is. And because you have lost your groundedness in your Source because you're enjoying this free fall of independence, you find everything dangerous, you find existence to be a call for ongoing defense.

What situation CAN you be in without faith, and remain faithful to each other?

You can't remain faithful to each other because you are busy defending yourself, protecting yourself against each other. You see?

Every situation in which you find yourself is but a means to meet the purpose set for your relationship.

The real purpose.

Every situation in ...

. . . the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven where you are, but which you're not seeing as the Kingdom of Heaven . . .

. . . is but a means to meet the purpose set for your relationship.

The Kingdom of Heaven . . . every aspect of the Kingdom of Heaven, of Reality . . .

. . . is but a means to meet the purpose set for your relationship.

For all relationships. It's the goal of holiness. It's the goal of truth. It's the goal of peace that's inseparable from yielding to the Father's Perspective, because you want that more than your best judgments and your most familiar habits of behavior and of thought processes.

Every situation in which you find yourself . . .

. . . and I'm adding: In the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven . . .

. . . is but a means to meet the purpose set for your relationship.

Set in place by the Father. Set in place by "the (capital 'W') Way things work."

See it as something else, and you ARE faithless.

You see? To see it as something else, you must divorce yourself from your Father and from His Perspective that He has instilled and established in you as You. You must abandon It. So:

See it as something else, and you ARE faithless. Use not your faithlessness.

Make a choice. Choose for faith. Just remind yourself:

"I don't have to practice faithlessness. I've always been free not to. But I got a lot of encouragement to do it. And then I got a lot of excitement out of doing it. And yes, I created some real nasty problems for myself. But you know what? I love the feeling of threat and danger from being in free fall."

Well:

Use not your faithlessness. Let it enter and look upon it calmly, but do not USE it.

And oh yes, it will enter, because it's the way you think at the moment. You don't tend to think holy. You don't tend to behave as though you're holy. You don't tend to conceive of yourself that well.

So yes, faithlessness will enter the thoughts, the practices.

Let it enter and look upon it calmly, but do not USE it.

Just notice it when it happens, like when you're meditating and you're saying a mantra and then a thought appears, and you forget about the mantra and then you say, "Oh [snaps fingers] yes, I can do this later," and you return to your mantra. That simple. You don't have to think the thought at that time.

Faithlessness is the servant of illusion, and wholly faithful to its master.

What is faithlessness? Faithlessness is the state of being un-joined with your Source, consciously ignoring your Father/Mother and consciously practicing a very imaginative style of living, called "independence" and "personal power" and "personal improvement" especially at the expense of others.

Faithlessness is the servant of illusion, and wholly faithful to its master.
Use it, and it will carry you straight to illusions.

Well, yes, . . . or keep you in the illusions you're in. And you'll still continue to see your fellowman as the result of a sperm and an egg joining. You'll still see them as mental processes that have been nurtured, or healthy, or have been mistreated and have been damaged, that causes this organism to behave from memory in ways that are difficult for everyone else. You see?

Faithlessness is the servant of illusion, . .

. . . I just described the illusions, . .

. . . and wholly faithful to its master. Use it, and it will carry you straight to illusions. Be tempted not by what it offers you. It interferes, not with the goal, but with the value of the goal to YOU.

You see? You can get caught up in concepts, which are senseless, but seem quite valid and important to you, examples of which abound in . . . well, a number of governments. And it interferes, not with the goal, but with the value of the goal to you. You can get caught up in pet theories, pet projects, pet biases. But they won't work. And in the process of doing it, you stop thinking about what the value of the goal is for you.

And like the lemmings, you run headlong into the sea just because somebody else was doing it and it felt good to do it together with them.

Be tempted not by what it offers you. It interferes, not with the goal, but with the value of the goal to YOU.

It's like you lose your Soul because you let yourself drop out of the picture, you let what you value drop out of the picture for the thrill of the ride, for the thrill of the run.

Accept not the illusion of peace it offers, but look upon its offering and recognize it IS illusion.

Now you can remind yourselves throughout the day to remember to join with your Father. You can set an alarm to go off. When it dings, you say, "Oh, yeah, I'm supposed to be joined here and I'm not. Okay, I'm going to join." And you go on and awhile later it dings again and you say, "Oh, yes, I'm supposed to be joined. I'm going to have to do it again."

Now, that's a good practice. But I want you to pay attention to the experience when joining happens, because that's where your divine integrity becomes illuminated to you so that you feel it. I want you to pay attention to that! Because that will be more impelling than the ding of the timer, the experience, the feeling of the integrity of Being and the holiness of you, and therefore, the value of it to you. That is what will make it easier to persist and need less and less dings to get you to do it.

You see, overcoming the situation or overcoming your opponent, or overcoming your Brother, who has seemingly little character or low morals . . . overcoming them—straightening them out, getting them to behave seems to promise you peace. Because if you can get them to behave, if you can truly get them to understand why they don't need to do it and feel why they won't need to do it, then you will have less to maintain, you will have less to oversee and coerce into behavior that will give you peace, because you don't have to supervise them anymore. You see?

You do that in faithlessness. In faith you don't manipulate your Brother to give you peace. You don't try to do good to him as a skill, a personal skill of yours that will make you better. That's faithlessness. Those are the practices of faithlessness. And they will keep you busy endlessly, because there's one thing you haven't given: You haven't given your mind to your Father so that you might remember Him and thereby your Self and thereby your Brother as your Brother divinely is.

That's all that's necessary. That's what all this is about.

Accept not the illusion of peace it offers, but look upon its offering and recognize it IS illusion.

So that, that recognition, like the ding of the bell, can cause you to shift your attention back to your Father. Not so that you can sit in quiet bliss, unmoved by all the illusions that are going on—in a state of blissful peace. No. But so that you might in the vital, I'm going to say, productive active Movement of Being, which God

Is and which you are the witness of, you might engage more fully in Life . . . but from the place of faith . . . from the place of being joined so that your every action, your every feeling, your every movement communicates the truth.

I invite you to read the transcript or listen to the audio tapes of tonight's get together or just read the material that we've gone through. And don't be discouraged because I haven't revved you up and given you a challenge that: "Go out there and whip the world with the truth" or "go out there and do this or do that and it will make you Wake up [snaps fingers] quickly!"

I want you to abide with it quietly, because practicing the two-step, practicing the holy instant, engaging in it is something that will "work" only when will fulness is absent, only when will ingness is present, only when you bring the only thing that was lacking—only what you have not given can be lacking in any situation.

Look at it quietly. Look at it soberly. But look at it. And understand that none of this is a means to escape life or to escape what's going on. It's a means of getting past that which causes the Kingdom of Heaven, which is what is going on, to appear to be unlike the Kingdom of Heaven—a place that engrosses you with its awfulness, with its absurdities as though being caught up in them is more important than going back to where the mis-step occurred—that place in you where you said, "Father, I'd rather do it my way, I'd rather define things myself"—which is how you move back into faith.

So please consider it quietly, softly, soberly. Abide with it so that you might find in you the place of willingness that doesn't require an enthusiastic pep-talk to revved it up and activate it. Very important . . . a valuable lesson.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

October 1st 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, we've been talking along time, perhaps over a year about the holy instant—the two step. The holy instant, the practice of the holy instant is where you shut up your own thinking—your own private thoughts—and you turn your attention to the Father or the Holy Spirit to ask, “What is the truth here?” to step outside of your best judgments, your best thinking, your best logic and your supposed capacity to be able to authorize meanings and in making that request, that invitation to joining with the Father in the silence, experiencing the influx of the Father's Perspective, either directly from the Father or through the Holy Spirit whose function it is to reveal to you the Father's Perspective as yours.

So we've been talking about joining and being un-joined for a long time.

Now, we're talking about faith and faithlessness. And it's bringing into clearer perspective what the holy instant is. It's bringing into clearer perspective what the difference is between you, the holy Son of God that you Are, and the you that got a divorce from your Father and have existed for a very long time as an orphan. So, we're at a point now where being an orphan or being the holy Son of God that you truly Are can be seen to be the equivalent of faithlessness and faith.

You know, we've used a lot of words, but it's simple. It boils down to two things: Faith or faithlessness. Faith, we have found means you being joined with the Father or you being joined with the Holy Spirit in an act of compliance, of yielding to the Holy Spirit. Why? Because it's nothing more than your right Mind, the purpose of which is to reveal to you your Birthright, to have the Perspective of the Father as your perspective with nothing interfering with it.

So it's becoming simple. Faithlessness is when you choose to operate as though you're an independent agent, where you never check in with the Holy Spirit, you never check in with the Father. You just do the best you can to get through your day and perhaps learn a little bit better how to manipulate your Brothers and Sisters so that tomorrow might be more pleasant for you even if it's less pleasant for your Brothers and Sisters. So it's becoming very simple and very easy to understand.

Now you might say this "holy instant" stuff—to engage in faith—is something you don't have a lot of time for because you must cope with your days on the same old basis that you always have. Yes, you can conceive of engaging in the holy instant now and then throughout the day but you know what? If I suggest that the goal is to be doing it 24/7, three hundred and sixty five days a year—in other words, all the time—"Oh-h, that's an unrealistic demand."

But let's look at it this way: It's not really doing something unnatural. And so there's truly a benefit to it. But imagine that you get on the plane from any place that isn't England or Australia. And you go to either England or Australia and you get off the plane and you rent a car. Immediately you're faced with the task of sitting on the opposite side of the car and driving on the opposite side of the road. Not only that, you're faced with walking on the opposite side of the sidewalk, you're faced with going in through double doors, going through the left door, walking along the left side of the hallway. If you don't do this, you have collisions with people or objects.

And so if you're going to enjoy your visit to Australia or England, you're going to have to pay attention constantly, just like I'm asking you to engage in the holy instant constantly. Why? Because if you stay conscious while you're in Australia or England, you won't have any collisions, you won't have anybody frustrated with you because you are out of place. You will have a comfortable, enjoyable time. Likewise, if you will engage in the holy instant, you will have a comfortable, enjoyable time.

Now you all have the capacity to pay that much attention. And if you realize that right now, your lack of paying attention in terms of the holy instant, in terms of choosing to be joined with the Father or the Holy Spirit, it's causing you to experience everything as sin, disease and death. It's causing you to experience substance as matter—vulnerable, undependable, unstable matter. But that's only if you're choosing to be an orphan. That's only if you are depending upon your own best judgment. It's only if you're choosing to ignore your Source . . . only if you are choosing to ignore your right Mind—your sanity.

So, just as not paying attention while you're driving from the opposite side of the car on the opposite side of the street, because not paying attention while you're doing that can cause your death, you know, and therefore, it's justifiable to pay attention. Likewise, if you're choosing to practice faithlessness, if you're choosing to be in the world on the basis of the definitions you are giving to it, you're likewise faced with the potential, the inevitability of death, aren't you.

So the payoff is great if you're willing to practice the holy instant. You see? And the negative side is so negative that there's really no reason not to try to consistently, persistently choose for the holy instant, engage in faith, intend to constantly be in the world with your Father or the Holy Spirit—I was going to say, holding your hand, but it's—with you holding the Father's Hand or the Holy Spirit's Hand, it's you hanging on to your sanity.

So you can see, we're talking about actually changing. We're talking about behaving differently. You get off the plane in Australia or England and you must behave differently in very fundamental ways.

Students of A Course In Miracles are faced with having to change the way they behave. And as we've been reading here, it has to do with changing from faithlessness to faith, changing from the practice of independence to the practice of joining and being united with your Father—your right Mind, the Holy Spirit. You see? Really doing something different.

The problem all of you have right now is that you think you have an option. You think because you're in the United States, you don't have to pay attention because you already know how to drive on the right side of the road and walk on the right side of the sidewalk and the right side of the hallway and so on. And so, because you know how to practice faithlessness, because you know how to be an orphan, you think you have the choice of continuing, or engaging in new effort of shifting to faith, or getting off the plane in Australia or England and with careful attention, yielding to the way things work there. You see?

So we're talking about change. And as I said, the big problem you have is that you think you have an option. So you say, "Oh-h, I'll do the hard work tomorrow. Today I'll use the means that I used yesterday." And so you stay in faithlessness and you are absent from your experience, the experience of faith—the experience of the holy instant in which the laws of God prevail.

So we're at a point here where there's a call for a change of behavior.

Now I want you to think about this as well: When you get off the plane in England or Australia, everything looks the same. The roads still have a white line down the center and parking along the curb on either side. Everything looks the same and yet the behavior relative to it is different. So what's happened? You left a country like the United States where you did things one way, and you got off the plane, and everything looks the same and you do things a different way.

What's happened is that you have moved over a threshold in which you have been translated from one set of meanings for a world, to another set of meanings for a world . . . the same world. Do you see what I'm saying?

Waking up is not a matter of moving from the world you're familiar with to Heaven—some other world. It will be the same world that you're experiencing as an independent authorizer, as an orphan, as one practicing faithlessness, wherein you begin to practice faith and see it a different way, experience different meanings for it and behave differently relative to it.

This is important. Translating is much easier than trying to become a different person or a different kind of soul or an Awakened being, as opposed to an ignorant mortal.

But you know what? You've got to make this trip from, we'll say, the U.S. or Europe to England or Australia, you've got to make this trip without the apparent demand to change that you find if you actually go to England or Australia.

And so you're going to have to learn in the United States, we'll say, or Europe, how to be as though you are the Son of God when you still think you're a mortal, without the constant reminder of everyone around you who are behaving as though they are the holy Son or Daughter of God. So you will not have the reinforcement that makes it seem more imperative to you to change, to actually begin to mentally behave differently, and physically behave differently. But that's what it's called for.

And as we continue into the book tonight talking about relationships because relationships are where faith and faithlessness are practiced, I'm going to approach it a little bit differently than it is in the Course for two reasons: You need the perspective that I'm going to be sharing and you will be able to transfer the perspective to full-on relationships with others.

Now, you're in relationship with everything . . . absolutely everything. Wherever you are right now, whether you're jogging or sitting, you are in relationship with everything in your environment. Even if you don't know all of what is there. You are in relationship to it. Coming really close to home, we'll say, you're in relationship with your body.

So we read last week that . . .

. . . the goal of holiness was set for your relationship, . . .¹

. . . the goal is to learn of the holiness of your relationships. We talked mostly here about relationships with your Brothers and Sisters. But because you are in relationship to everything, including your body, what we're reading about applies there. And that needs to be clearer because there needs to be more healing going on, which isn't going on because you're looking at your body and your world and your Brothers and Sisters with faithlessness. You're looking at it all from your own perspective, un-joined with That which knows the truth . . . That which knows of your holiness . . . That which knows that all that exists is the infinite manifestation of and expression of God, your Father/Mother, your Source—That in which you have your Being.

Now, I'm going to back up to the beginning of the last paragraph we read last week:

Every situation in which you find yourself is but a means to meet the purpose set for your relationship.

Well, who's setting the purpose for the relationship? If it's you, it's you practicing faithlessness, it's you acting independent of your Source, it's you behaving as though you can function without being plugged in.

Every situation in which you find yourself is but a means to meet the purpose set for your relationship.

The purpose set for your relationship is for you to experience it from faith, in faith, through faith, meaning not confidence you have in the thing you're in relationship with, but in that state of mind which does not see itself or experience itself as separate from its Source, separate from the Father, separate from the Holy Spirit.

It's in the joining with your right Mind, which reflects to you the Father's Purpose and Meaning in everything that you, from faith, cross the border between the two different ways of functioning in the one and only world there is.

It's that simple.

Now, if . . .

Every situation in which you find yourself is but a means to meet the purpose set for your relationship.

Then it means that your relationship is set for the experience of being well, the experience of being whole, which will, if you're coming out of faithlessness, appear to be healing of your body, we're going to say, or your relationship with your Brother or Sister, or your relationship with your knee or your elbow or your heart or your kidneys. Do you see what I'm saying?

Every situation in which you find yourself is but a means to meet the purpose set for your relationship. See it as something else, and you ARE faithless.

You land in Australia, you rent a car, you drive off. If you see the right-hand lane as anything other than the place for traffic coming from the opposite direction, if you see it as the lane for you to be moving forward in, you are in effect, practicing faithlessness—you're refusing to be conscious—and you're going to have an experience [snaps fingers] to bring your attention to reality, to the way things work there. You don't want to see it all as something else. You don't want to see your world and universe as something other than the Kingdom of Heaven, because then you're practicing faithlessness, and substance will be matter, capable of decay and death, instability, undependability—a threat to you and your peace of mind.

But, if you practice faith by insisting upon being joined, then you are where the Father's laws prevail and you will find substance is Spirit—the Presence, for lack of better words, the energy of God. You know? You're going to be looking at the same thing, which I'm going to call, substance: One way, through faithlessness, you will see matter. The other way, through faith, you will see Spirit.

Now you aren't going to see Spirit until you're willing to put forth the energy and the attention necessary to be present with your body—your knee, your heart, your kidneys, your elbow, joined—joined with the Father. So you see what I'm saying?

It's necessary to bring the effort forth that's necessary to look at your body, that which you are in relationship with, and look at it with the Father instead of your best judgments. And I will tell you, that under stress, your best judgments will be your worst judgments. And you will see the result. Your experience of substance will be colored by the vantage point you are using: Faithlessness or faith.

Now, I know that many think that the Course has nothing to do with physical healing. But I will tell you that it has to do with your letting your mind be so filled with the truth, revealed by the Holy Spirit, that your perspective shifts, your attitudes change. The fear you had of substance when you thought it was matter will give place to peace as a result of joining and being in faith. And you will experience Spirit, which is incapable of being flawed, injured, threatened, vulnerable.

Please, do not misunderstand or mistake this. And do not fall back into the lazy attitude that the Course In Miracles has nothing to do with healing.

You know what? When you land in England or Australia, the reason you have problems is because you have preexisting mindsets. You believe that you're supposed to do things on the opposite lane of the road, on the opposite side of the hall, etcetra.

Now one of the mindsets you all have is, that there is something true about you: You are spiritual, you are a Soul, you are a Spirit even, you might say, and you, as a general rule—the majority—feel that this is eternal. But your body? . . .uh-uh. Your body is mortal—material. It will die. It is not eternal. That's a mindset. That is a preexisting mindset that you are bringing with you into your practice of the holy instant. And you must understand that in the practice of the holy instant, you can't continue to embrace that mindset because that mindset creates a relationship between you and your body as though they're separate, they're not identical and that your body really can't do anything other than grow up, grow old, grow unwell, sicken and die.

You see, that kind of a relationship arises out of faithlessness. And it's an unhealthy relationship. It's you standing in a constant state of diminished appreciation for your body. Not only a diminished appreciation, but an increasing fear of it as you "grow older."

Your body, as I've said before, is the visibility and tangibility of your individuality. Your individuality is God-derived. It's the Presence of God, That which identifies it is as eternal as that individuality is. Because all it is, is that which identifies it, causing it to—your individuality—to be experientible.

Now, as you cross the border from faithlessness to faith, part of the alertness, part of the attentiveness has to be given to your inclination to shift back to the familiar. And so when you pull out from a gas station in Australia and you're inclined to make a right turn into the closest lane, something in you has to remember to say, "Stop! [snaps fingers] Don't do it! That's not the way (even though that's what's familiar). You must turn right into the far lane." You see?

You must be alert if you want to practice faith and if you want to get in that place where God's laws prevail, you are going to have to be alert when the idea occurs to you to say, "I can't depend upon my body. My body is going to rack and ruin. It is going to die sooner or later and it looks like it is going to be sooner." You've got to catch those thoughts so that you don't turn into that avenue of belief—that rut of belief—and then run into failure at experiencing the holy instant or healing, and then being surprised at it. You see?

So you've got to pay attention. And when you begin to doubt your body, when you begin to think that healing is impossible or it's unreasonable to expect, you've got to say—within—"That's bullshit! I do not accept that!"

You can say, "Raj, has told me that the substance of my body is Spirit, and that my body is the visibility and tangibility of my divine individuality and therefore, it has a divine function that is eternal. And so I am going to refuse to engage further in the thoughts that create great fear in me, even though I'm familiar with them and everyone around me is familiar with them, and reinforce them." You see?

You've got to do something different. That's what it's about. And you've got to be careful not to carry the old ruts forward, or to try to. Okay.

The goal of illusion is as closely tied to faithlessness . . .

. . . you know, being un-joined, that's what faithlessness means.

The goal of illusion is as closely tied to faithlessness as . . .

. . . as what? . .

. . . faith to truth.

Now when you read a sentence like this, it sounds as though the real subject is:

The goal of illusion is as closely tied to faithlessness . . .

. . . um-m, wow . . .

. . . as faith to truth.

You know, as-faith-to-truth—four words. But when you read a sentence like that, take a look at it, because it is saying that faith is closely tied to truth. Faith—engaging in being joined with the Father or the Holy Spirit—is closely tied to truth. That's why it says that when you practice the holy instant, God's laws prevail. That's where God's laws prevail, because faith is closely tied to truth. Being joined is closely tied, it's actually inseparable from experiencing the perfection of God's Creation, which you're not separate from and no part of you is separate from. You see?

If you lack faith in anyone . . .

. . . and I'm going to say, anything.

If you lack faith in . . .

. . . your body . . .

. . . to fulfill, and PERFECTLY, . .

. . . it's . . .

. . . part in any situation dedicated in advance to truth, YOUR dedication is divided.

Here's what it actually says:

If you lack faith in anyone to fulfill, and PERFECTLY, his part in any situation dedicated in advance to truth, YOUR dedication is divided.

Now I'm going to read it with the words for tonight:

If you lack faith in [your body] to fulfill, and PERFECTLY, [it's] part in any situation dedicated in advance to truth, YOUR dedication is divided.

Well I'll tell you something: Your body, being the visibility and tangibility of your individuality, has a dedication from day one—from the moment of Creation—it has a dedication to truth. It is here with the intent and the capacity to identify You perfectly, period. That is its function. Its function is to identify the Presence of God perfectly.

Now, if you lack faith in it, to fill its part, your dedication is divided. You see? So if your knee or elbow or heart or kidneys or any other part of your body seems to be giving you a problem, you better check to see whether your dedication is divided. What are you bringing to the relationship? "Oh, well it's just a physical body, and you know, in a few years it'll die and my Spirit will go on, blah, blah, blah." Man, that's a great way to miss out on the fullness of life now, that will always be the fullness of life if you practice faith.

And so you have been faithless to each other, and used your faithlessness AGAINST each other.

In this case, your body hasn't been faithless to you, but you are, you have been, until you see and accept that you're the holy Son or Daughter of God who's individuality is identified perfectly by this thing called a body, you will practice faithlessness against your body. Your fear of it . . . your doubt of it, is an attack on it.

Now the simple fact is, that it can't change your doubt. Your faithlessness practiced cannot stop your body from being the visibility and tangibility of your divine individuality. But it can and it does cause your experience of it to be miserable and it does seem to cause you to go through an experience that has been identified as death—with accompanying suffering. And that's not your Birthright.

Continuing:

No relationship is holy unless its holiness goes with it everywhere.

Well, that's what happens in faith. The holiness of everything goes everywhere with it because you're paying attention since you're driving on the left-hand side of the road and you aren't familiar with how to do it and if you foul up you can have a real problem. You see? But you practice faith and learn to practice it more resolutely and the holiness of its relationship goes with it everywhere.

As holiness and faith go hand in hand, so must its faith go everywhere with it.

You know, not just when it's convenient, not at the end of the day when the kids are in bed or, you know, you're home from work and your boss isn't looking over your shoulder . . . you know. Holiness and faith go hand in hand.

As holiness and faith go hand in hand, so must its faith go everywhere with it. The goal's reality . . .

. . . listen to this:

The goal's reality will call forth and ACCOMPLISH every miracle needed for its fulfillment.

The way things work governs. And when you're not fighting the way things work, the way things work . . .

. . . will call forth and ACCOMPLISH every miracle needed for its fulfillment.

Kidneys functioning . . . elbow healed . . . heart problems gone . . . knee problems gone.

The goal's reality . . .

. . . not the one you set up but the goal set in place by the Father . . .

. . . will call forth and ACCOMPLISH . . .

. . . this is an absolute statement here . . .

. . . will call forth and ACCOMPLISH every miracle needed for its fulfillment.

The fulfillment of what? The goal's reality. The Father's Will . . . that's what it means.

Nothing too small or too enormous, too weak or too compelling, but will be gently turned to its use and purpose.

When you don't get in the way of the goal's reality, it doesn't matter what it is. If it's a tiny thing or a huge thing it will be gently turned to its use, the use of Reality, the use and purpose of God's Will.

The universe will serve it gladly, as it serves the universe.

You see? This isn't a promise, this is a statement of fact. It's a statement of fact that governs you constantly. Again:

The universe will serve it gladly, as it serves the universe. But do not INTERFERE.

That's what it says right here.

The universe will serve it gladly, as it serves the universe. But do not INTERFERE.

How can you interfere? By slipping back into faithlessness. And again, it doesn't mean you're not having faith . . . you're not having faith . . . you're practicing faithlessness. No. It means that you've slipped back into faithlessness, which means you've slipped back into doing your own thinking. You've slipped back into an independent rut that you're familiar with and you're going to try and deal with life from that independent place where you refuse to be joined—you refuse to take the time to be joined—which constitutes faith and places you in that place where God's laws prevail. You see?

It's really simple and it's really clear. It's getting simpler. The truth is becoming more compelling.

The power set in you in whom the Holy Spirit's goal has been established is so far beyond your little conception of the infinite that you have no idea how great the strength that goes with you. And you can use THIS in perfect safety.

It's that in which God's laws prevail. It's that in which your sanity returns to you. It's that in which your vulnerability and your mortality disappear, replaced by a new perspective that doesn't call fear and guilt into play and undoes all that fear and guilt seemed to cause.

I'm going to read this again:

The power set in you in whom the Holy Spirit's goal has been established is so far beyond your little conception of the infinite that you have no idea how great the strength that goes with you. And you can use THIS in perfect safety. Yet for all its might, so great it reaches past the stars and to the universe that lies beyond them, your little faithlessness can make it useless, if you would use the faithlessness instead.

Again: If you choose to love to think for yourself, to love to make definitions, to love to come to conclusions, to love to figure out how to manipulate your Brothers and Sisters in the world to make you better and better even if it cost you everything in your world drastically.

Yet for all its might, so great it reaches past the stars and to the universe that lies beyond them, your little faithlessness can make it useless, if you would use the faithlessness instead . . .

. . . if you would use privacy . . . if you would use independence . . . if you would use autonomy . . . if you would use private authority instead.

It's clear isn't it. You are to expect to see God's laws prevailing right here! Right now! With everything you're in relationship with, including your body. And the holiness of your relationship is what you are destined to Wake up to and what you are called upon to let in, and which you are to prepare your mind to experience by refusing to practice the habits of faithlessness that keep you bound.

God's laws prevailing are a here and now event, which you must all stop refusing to let in by consciously and conscientiously giving your attention elsewhere.

Remember, Waking up is what we could call a translation of perception, where the one and only world which can be looked at from two different vantage points is looked at from the only one that's true . . . the lens . . . the lens of faith and the absence of faithlessness.

I love you all. Let it be a good week, because it will be, whether you let it in or not.

Okay.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

October 15th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well you know, of course, everything that we've been talking about has to do with relationships and how to have a holy relationship—how to abandon an unholy one.

And we've been talking about the fact that you are in relationship with everything. Not just each other, but with every part of God's Creation: Tables, chairs, lamps, sky, clouds . . . everything.

But I want you to understand that you can't Wake up by having a totally holy relationship with a rock or with a leaf. You see, when you got your divorce from the Father and became a so-called independent agent, you didn't do it all by yourself. You did not stand in front of your Father and deny Him all by yourself. You were joined with another Son or Daughter of God and the two of you had arrived at a decision to look at things the way you wanted to look at them to determine what they are, what they mean, what they're function is and how you might use them to your benefit.

And you and this other one said, "Let's agree that this is a tree. Let's agree that this is a flower. Let's agree that all living things are part of a process called evolution that started, not in the Mind of God, but in the past—in a big bang." You see?

And so in a way, it's sort of like you and your partner went before God and got married to each other, and unmarried from God. And so the two of you, behaving as independent agents together—which in a way doesn't constitute being an independent agent, does it?—the two of you in your decision to be independent together, joined and left your Father, abandoned your Father, abandoned His Perspective which up until that point had been yours. Okay?

So because you left the Kingdom of Heaven, because you left your sanity joined with another in a mutual agreement to be at odds with Reality, it's very simple: Your return Home will not be something you do all by yourself, but with a Brother. That's why it says, "to look into your brother's eyes and remember God." You see? That's the criteria. That's the way it works.

I know it seems like it would be much easier if it didn't depend on your Brother, if your Waking up didn't depend upon your Brother, but it does . . . it does.

Now, we read last week that:

The power set in you in whom the Holy Spirit's goal has been established . . .¹

. . . because you decided to let it in . . .

. . . is so far beyond your little conception of the infinite that you have no idea how great the strength that goes with you. And you can use THIS in perfect safety. Yet for all its might, so great it reaches pas the stars and to the universe that lies beyond them, your little faithlessness . . .

. . . it doesn't take a lot . . .

. . . your little faithlessness can make it useless, if you would use the faithlessness instead.

Faith is you joined with the Holy Spirit—you joined with the Father's Perspective having invited It in. It is you abandoning your independence—your capacity to think. Which is the means you and your Brother have adopted for establishing yourselves as independent agents and therefore orphans and therefore ignorant of the truth.

Now, the simple small practice of thinking on your own without enquiring as to the meaning of everything from That which gives it Meaning—the Father—causes you to experience everything in a totally distorted fashion. And although you seem to be in partnership with your Brothers, you are independent from them, behaving independently together and therefore apparently in concert, in union with them without being joined with them at all because you're in a total state of self-protection. That's what we've been talking about and that's what Waking up is the departure from—that little bit of thinking is really a full act of independence from God. You can have the shortest, tiniest thought, but engaging in it is a total disengagement from your Father.

Now, Waking up—the practice of faith—means joining again. But not just joining with the Father, not just saying, “Father what is the truth here?” Not just saying, “Holy Spirit, fill me with the knowledge of truth that it’s my Birthright to be experiencing,” that isn’t all there is to it. You need to be asking to know the truth so that you might from that basis of experience and understanding, relate to your Brother because you...love...your...Brother.

At the bottom line, in order to Wake up, your Brother has to be the reason you want to Wake up. It’s beautiful. But not the typical attitude and not the attitude that any of you engage in constantly. In moments of inspiration, in moments of passion . . . yes.

Now, . . .

. . . your little faithlessness . . .

. . . it says . . .

. . . can make it useless, . . .

. . . the power that’s setting you by the Holy Spirit, . . .

. . . if you would use the faithlessness instead.

Yet think on this, and learn the CAUSE of faithlessness: You think you hold against the other what he has done to you.

You see? It’s one thing to talk about recognizing that a leaf, a flower, a tree, whatever, does not have faithlessness in you, does not express faithlessness in any way, but presents itself unadorned with thoughts, opinions, attitudes as what it truly is, letting the Father’s Purpose shine through to you. And so He loves you truly. But your Brothers don’t for their own reasons and so they bring faithlessness into the picture . . . as well as you.

Now . . .

. . . think on this, and learn the cause of faithlessness:

Where does this willingness, I’m going to say, to approach your Brother on the basis of your best judgments and thinking come from? Why do you do that instead of approach your Brother with faith, joined with the Father in his Perspective?

You think you hold against the other what he has done to you.
But what you really blame him for is what YOU did to HIM.

[Repeats] . . . what YOU did to HIM.

Well, when you choose to be unjoined with the Holy Spirit or the Father and you are basing everything on your best thinking, your best reasoning, your best judgments . . . well, it's very simple: You're in a mean-spirited frame of mind because you are in a defensive frame of mind, because you're afraid. You are experiencing fear and you're experiencing it because you got a divorce from your Father and you're feeling the vulnerability of it. You see?

It is not HIS past but YOURS you hold against him.

Now, here's the other aspect of it: The first part is that you hold against him the reasons he is providing you to be afraid. And yet the reason you're afraid is not because of what he's doing, but because you've chosen to look at him and be in a state of independence from your Father—unplugged from your Source. And that is an experience of vulnerability.

And so . . .

. . . what you really blame him for is what YOU did to HIM.

What you did to him and what you're doing to him is you're looking through the lens of your so-called independence and through the lens of your fear and your guilt and you are determining what he is on the basis of your lousy frame of mind. That's what you're doing to him. And so you project on to him your mean-spirited, negative, self-protective attitudes. And then you believe your attitudes and you say he's responsible!

Now, he's the holy Son of God just as you are. But when you look at him and when you look into his eyes, you see his past, you see his humanness, you see his foibles. But the foibles you see are the ones you've projected onto him, because you're not having an actual connection with him.

It's not love. It's not a union. It's not a partnership. It's not even a relationship. It's an attempt to be out of relationship with someone. It's an attempt to be out of relationship with someone. You see the craziness of it? It's an attempt to be together independently.

You're doing that to him and that's what you don't like about him. That's what you're afraid of him for.

. . . what you really blame him for is what YOU did to HIM. It is not HIS past but YOURS you hold against him. And you lack faith in him because of what YOU were.

You, the one who got a divorce from your Father . . . you, the one who chose to be independent . . . you, who chose to behave as though you could be independent and become something important.

Yet you are as innocent of what you were . . .

. . . you are as innocent of what you believe you are and what you want to be . .

. . . as he is.

And there's the miraculous answer: You are as innocent as he is.

Why aren't you willing to see that? You need to ask yourself that question.

And I'll tell you, there's only one answer: There is no good reason. So don't even bother to get out a sheet of paper and write down the list of the reasons. The only answer is, there is no reason. And there's your salvation and there's his because that keeps you from going down an endless road that goes nowhere.

. . . you are as innocent of what you were . . .

. . . or what you believe you have been . . .

. . . as he is.

That idea can be very demanding. It can knock the breath out of you. It can make your mind expand or let go of some of its limits. You are as innocent as he is. He is as innocent as you are.

You are simply called upon to release yourself and him from the mean-spirited, small-minded perspective that you've been engaging with him from, and that you've been using to determine the meaning of your relationship.

You must be willing to say, "There's no good reason for me to be doing this. I don't have to go look for the reason I'm doing this. I simply need to consider the possibility that my Brother is as innocent as I am, that I, the Holy Son of God, am as innocent as he is, the holy Son or Daughter of God that he or she is." You see? You need to shift to a different perspective and simply abandon the one that is meaningless.

What never was is causeless, and is not THERE to interfere with truth.

Whatever you saw about your Brother that you're holding against him—whatever negative that you have projected on him that you are holding him responsible for—is causeless. It's not actual. It's an imagination. That's all!

What never was is causeless, and is not THERE to interfere with truth.

Therefore, truth hasn't been interfered with. Therefore, Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven, that you are in the process of becoming willing to let register with you, is waiting to register with you. Nothing has to be improved. Your "bastard" Brother does not need to go through some improvement to become a holy Son of God. He simply needs to be recognized for the Son of God that he is, with genuineness by you. That's your part in looking into your Brother's eyes and remembering God. Being open to and in a place where his divinity can register with you. That's all.

There IS no cause for faithlessness, . .

. . . there is no cause for it. But there is a cause for faith. That's like saying there is no cause for darkness, but there is a cause for light. Darkness is just the absence of light. It has no presence to it. Faithlessness has no presence to it either. It has no cause. There is no cause for faithlessness but there is a Cause for truth—for faith. That Cause has entered any situation which shares its purpose.

Now I must say, that any situation that exists shares God's Purpose because in actuality, the situation is God Moving—God Appearing. But that doesn't mean that any situation which shares God's Purpose is experienced by you as that which shares God's Purpose, when you are intent on determining what the purpose of everything is from your private personal standpoint. And so you don't see the truth and you're not in a position to relate to the truth—to the reality of the situation, the reality of the relationship.

The light of truth shines from the center of the situation, . .

. . . whatever situation it might be, because it's either the Kingdom of Heaven appearing to you as the Kingdom of Heaven or it's the Kingdom of Heaven appearing to you as whatever you've defined it as—a material universe. You see?

But . . .

The light of truth shines from the center of the situation, and touches everyone to whom the situation's purpose calls.

Do you understand that this world and universe that you see is not just sort of a passive reaction to evolution? It is an active Presence of God infinitely expressed and expressing . . . extending Love, extending uninhibitedly its Meanings to you, embracing you on purpose. Not just because it's supposed to radiate what It is. It radiates what It is because It is built into It to do it in relation to you so that you might experience It for what It is, exactly!

The walls . . . the floor . . . the carpet . . . anything in your presence right now is, because of its divinity, loving you—embracing you with the intent to communicate to you its Meaning—the Meaning set into place by the Father at this very moment to express Himself and for His Expression to be experienced.

You are constantly in an environment or a situation, which is a circle of love, an embrace of love, a giving and receiving of love, if you are doing your part. If you're doing your part of looking into your Brother's eyes and seeing God, or looking into the flower and seeing God, if you're doing your part then the giving that the world is embracing you with, is received by you and your recognition of it is the Gift back to it of the love you are sharing, by not introducing any other concepts, any other definitions, any other mean-spirited, small-minded meanings that you might otherwise present. You see?

So it's a circle of giving and receiving.

That Cause has entered any situation which shares Its purpose.
The light of truth shines from the center of the situation, and touches everyone to whom the situation's purpose calls.

What is the situations purpose? It's the purpose set in place by the Father in the establishment of the situation. It's God reaching out. It's God extended.

The light of truth . . .

. . . or God . . .

. . . shines from the center of the situation, and touches everyone to whom the situation's purpose calls. [And] It calls to EVERYONE.

And therefore, it touches everyone. But not everyone experiences it. If they are inserting their definitions in the face of it—in the face of the Gift—and turning the Gift into something it's not, thereby causing the one changing the meaning of the Gift to miss seeing God.

It calls to EVERYONE.

The purpose in the situation. And not only that, like I said, it is a call of love, it is a conscious embrace of love in which you are blessed by the Gift of love.

There is no situation which does not involve your WHOLE relationship, in every aspect and complete in every part. You can leave nothing of yourself outside it, and keep the situation holy.

You see? As long as you are introducing your own thoughts and opinions and beliefs and serving them totally, you're leaving something of yourself outside of the circumstance—the situation, the Kingdom of Heaven. You're holding a part of your mind separate and filling it with your own definitions and meanings and applying it to the situation. You see? So you're not bringing all of yourself to the recognition of God in your Brother's eyes, or in the flower or the beetle or the clod of dirt.

You can leave nothing of yourself outside it, and keep the situation holy. For it shares the purpose of your whole relationship, and derives its meaning from it.

Enter each situation with the faith that you give to each other, or you ARE faithless to your own relationship.

Now here we're speaking of your relationship with your Brother or your Sister and not the flower or the rock.

Enter each situation with the faith that you give to each other, . .

. . . faith . . . meaning you being from the joined place with the Father seeking His Perspective on whatever it is that's happening.

Enter each situation with the faith that you give to each other, or you ARE faithless to your own relationship.

You see? And you will not get into the Kingdom of Heaven, which means that you will not see transformation in front of your eyes: Where illness is replaced by health, where lost limbs and organs, through surgery, are restored, where wholeness takes the place of partiality. You see?

Enter each situation with the faith that you give to each other, or you ARE faithless to your own relationship.

That's the way you continue to dream. And that's the way you avoid returning to your sanity. That's the way you avoid the call from every situation—the call to you to recognize in it, God—so that you might be in harmony with the Father’s Perspective, having released your insistence upon your own will.

Your faith . . .

. . . your joined state . . .

. . . will call the others to share your purpose, as this same purpose called forth the faith in YOU.

You see? Oh-h, here we are back to this word, “involvement.”

Now, you’re all very aware of what is happening on your globe presently. It’s a call for involvement. It is involvement expressed. In other words, the call for involvement has brought involvement forth. And some of you think it’s messy, and some of you think it’s negative and some of you see it as salvation.

Well, the point is, that not everyone is sitting home in isolation with their own private thoughts, thinking, “Well, I’m glad the Egyptian spring is happening in Egypt and not here. My God, I might have to become involved. I might have to get off my couch and I might actually have to make telephone calls or go down where the group is gathered to be counted, so that what is happening can be seen as something worth paying attention to by those with the cameras that give attention to things. You see? Oh yeah, involvement.

Your faith will call the others to share your purpose, . .

. . . your joining with the Father and wanting the Father’s Perspective because it’s your own sanity . . .

. . . will call the others to share your purpose, as this same purpose called forth the faith in YOU. And you will see the means you once employed to lead you to illusions transformed to means for truth.

Well, who is the means you once employed to lead you to illusions that might be the same that would lead you to truth? You employed the use of your attention. In both cases, it’s the use to which you’re putting your attention that makes the difference. Using your attention, applying your attention to your best thinking, your private thoughts, leads you to illusion. But taking that very same attention and giving it to the Father, or saying, “Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?” and abandoning your isolation, that leads you to truth. You see?

So . . .

. . . you will see the means you once employed to lead you to illusions transformed to means for truth.

You see? You see how simple? You don't even have to be educated or learn something new. You just have to turn your attention from here . . . to there. And you already know how to employ your attention. You don't have to learn anything there. You see? It's so simple.

When the Holy Spirit changed the purpose of your relationship by exchanging yours for His, the goal He placed there was extended to every situation in which you enter, or will EVER enter. And every situation was thus made free of the past, which would have made it purposeless.

So the changes going on, on your globe are the means of abandoning the past. But just having objection, just speaking up, just joining together in concert in itself is not enough. The joining together needs to be illuminated by everyone—each one, as many of you as are willing to do it—to be involved while asking, “Father, what is called for here? Father, what is the transforming truth? Father, what is the simple pivot point—not the complicated one—the simple pivot point upon which this whole picture could shift. Inspire me, because I want to know and I want to share it, because I want there to be peace. Tell me, illuminate to me the truth, the simple answer.” You see?

Why? So you can sit on your couch and know about it and say, “Wow, if you guys knew, you would be amazed and this would stop.” You see?

So the practice of the holy instant and learning to see the truth means nothing if it isn't brought into your relationships actively.

Your faith will call the others to share your purpose, as this same purpose called forth the faith in YOU.

“Oh, you mean, I have to have enough faith that it will actually involve me with others and it will call them to share my purpose, which is really the Father's Purpose? You mean . . . man oh man . . . you know, I have a job, I have responsibilities, I have things to take care of. You know, I have set up my life very logically and very intelligently and there's great order to it, and involvement will upset the whole thing! If something I do will call the other's to share my purpose, which now is God's Purpose because I asked to know what the Purpose was . . . why, you know what? I didn't sign up for that . . .”

Well, you know what, the moment you said, “Father, I want a divorce . . . Father, I'd rather see things my way,” . . . why you did set yourself up for it, because you've got to come back Home. You can't stay insane forever. And there's no way you can justify being insane even just for a second.

When the Holy Spirit changed the purpose of your relationship by exchanging yours . . .

. . . the one you made up . . .

. . . for His, the goal He placed there was extended to every situation in which you enter, or will EVER enter. And every situation was thus made free of the past, which would have made it purposeless.

Well, what's happening right now is making what was purposeless end.

You call for faith because of Him Who walks with you in EVERY situation.

Him has a capital "H." That's the Holy Spirit. That's the Father and that is your Brother and Sister.

You call for faith . . .

. . . you insist upon, you desire to join and be joined . . .

. . . because of Him Who walks with you in EVERY situation.

The Holy Spirit, the Father and your Brother. But your Brother is the key, because without him you won't go Home. And without him and you together he won't go Home unless he finds someone else to do what you're unwilling to do—who will bring to the situation the one thing that hasn't been brought to the situation.

You are no longer wholly insane, nor no longer alone. For loneliness in God MUST be a dream.

Now mind you, you're never alone. But you think you're alone and you feel like you're alone, but that's because you've said, "Father, I'd rather do it myself . . . you know, back off! I'm not comfortable, but I'm not so uncomfortable that I would abandon my destiny that I've put in front of me. I'm not ready yet."

But you know what? That doesn't justify anything and it won't any longer. You know, I'm going to tell you that Waking up is imminent and you're not going to have the choice, because the rapidity with which Awakening is occurring, the rapidity with which the transformation is occurring, is such that there is a rapid decrease of those joined in maintaining the illusion of separateness and the validity of it. And it's just going to become harder and harder to maintain the status-quo.

You're seeing some of that on your globe right now. And don't be too quick to discount it, because there's no order to it, because there's no plan to it. Stop discounting it and start listening for what the plan is, start listening for what the purpose is, what the goal is, what the call is that's coming from the situation, because God is in the center of every situation. Because every situation is the Kingdom of Heaven perceived clearly or misperceived.

So stop engaging in judgment, because that's misperception. And start inquiring, "What is the answer, what is my part?" And I invite you all to be willing to actually do something, actually get up off that couch and touch someone else with the ideas that we're talking about, with the ideas that . . . hey, it's time to be looking for the answer and stop being obsessed with objecting to the way the answer is occurring by virtue of people being involved with each other and saying, "We want the truth."

You whose relationship shares the Holy Spirit's goal are set apart from loneliness because the truth has come.

. . . you whose relationship with your Brother or Sister or your world.

You whose relationship shares the Holy Spirit's goal . . .

. . . because you've said, "Father, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?" You . . .

. . . are set apart from loneliness because the truth has come.

If you've asked and you meant it and you listen and you didn't abandon the listening until the clarity came, then truth has come.

Its call for faith is strong.

. . . what's the "it"? Your relationship . . . your relationship with your fellowman. Your relationship with your fellowman in Italy, or your fellowman in Cincinnati, or your fellowman in Seattle, or Japan, or India, wherever.

Its call for faith is strong.

Faith in what? Not faith in something, but it's call for joining. Remember faith is the Meaning of joining and it is the Meaning of what is revealed to you as an inspired and Awakened conscious experience as a result of joining. That's faith.

Its call . . .

. . . the situations call, your relationships call . . .

. . . for faith is strong.

Why wouldn't it be? The goal, the call of any situation is the active, living Presence of God pulling for and inviting, we'll say, the recognition of God, so there's no misunderstanding that distorts the experience into one of sin, sickness, death and a material world.

Its call for faith is strong. Use not your faithlessness against it, for it calls you to salvation and to peace.

. . . use not your independence, use not your private thinking, use not your best concepts, use not your justifications for avoiding involvement.

Use not your faithlessness against it, for it calls you . . .

. . . what does? The call of faith in the situation . . .

. . . it calls you to salvation and to peace.

Now, there is certainly an unmistakable call for joining, not joining against Brother and Sister, not joining country against country, not joining where one economy is trying to best another economy, but joining with the Holy Spirit, joining with the Father, asking to be inspired with the truth, with the answers that will specifically contribute to the healing of inequity, of dishonesty, of all of the things that undermine the experience and the expression of human decency.

You've got a part to play in it, just in terms of being humanly decent yourselves. And you have a part to play in it by virtue of actively, consciously choosing to become involved with your Brother for the purpose of seeing God there and remembering God by virtue of your involvement with your Brother. Because it's in the joining with him and the invitation to him and the simple parity of truth expressed by you that can be embraced by him that allows the two of you to be transformed and go Home together. Which means: Stand right where you are in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven, that looks like the world and universe, and being in it in an entirely new way, with an entirely new perspective, the motivation of which is, I'm going to say, overwhelming love. And I only mean overwhelming in the sense of so huge that it overflows you. It cannot be contained by you. And you must let it out. And you must let it be the call, the circumstance that everyone else experiences as that which causes them to say, "Not my will be done, by Thine . . ." and join the Awakening.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

October 23rd 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

A new section:

THE CONDITIONS OF FORGIVENESS¹

Well, one thing that's very helpful in leading to the correct answer is to understand that the forgiveness we're talking about is a forgiveness that you are going to extend to another. It isn't forgiveness coming to you. So, we're not going to be talking about how you can behave nicely, socially, acceptably, so that you seem to be worthy of forgiveness—of being forgiven.

No, that would be satisfying and that would be the thing most everyone would want to put into practice first.

But this Waking up process—this coming back into your right Mind—is always a Gift . . . the process is always a Gift. The forgiveness is always given to someone else because until you're willing to give something to someone else, love doesn't come into the picture. And love is the essential element. It's the nature of you. It's the substance of your Being. Every single aspect of you is love in expression because every aspect of you is God presenting Himself—God presenting Herself.

So, if you want the dream of sin, sickness and death—of suffering—to end, you're going to have to have someone else on your mind, someone other than yourself on your mind.

As I said last week, it's the criteria. It's the way it works. It's not what you're used to. It's called unselfishness. And saints are unselfish. Some like Albert Schweitzer were unselfish or they're thought of as being unselfish.

But umm . . . you? No, not to any consistent degree because you have things you want for yourself that take up space and time, that take time away from your Brother, who's eyes you are to look into and remember God. And all the while you're attending to your wants and your needs and leaving no space for your Brother you are affectively barring yourself from Waking up—from returning to your natural divine state of mind in which your divinity embraces the divinity of everything else because the divinity of everything else is more important to you than you.

And the Gift you make to your Brother in the holy instant that contributes to his Awakening is part and parcel of the integrity of your Being functioning in a grounded way right here, right now in what could be called the "human condition," "the material world and universe." And because it operates there and functions there, it brings about the transformation of Vision that allows you to see the Kingdom of Heaven where you had been seeing your definitions of It and you were calling it a material world and universe. It's that simple.

Now:

THE CONDITIONS OF FORGIVENESS.

The conditions of forgiving your Brother . . . not the conditions of being forgiven.

The holy instant is nothing more than a special case, or an extreme example, of what every situation is MEANT to be.

The holy instant is that place in which you abandon your independence and join with the Holy Spirit or the Father, desiring to Know what the truth is separate and apart from all of your best thinking and logic. It's the aggressive, self-assertive thinker that you have been abandoning its state of being—relaxing out of it, becoming still, non-assertive, non-thinking and inquisitive instead with a true desire to Know the truth.

The holy instant is nothing more than a special case, or an extreme example, of what every situation is MEANT to be.

Whether it's a situation involving a Brother, a situation involving a circumstance, a situation involving a garden, a river, a piece of property, the a building of a house. You see?

. . . every situation is MEANT to be . . .

... an experience of what Reality actually is right where you are.

The meaning which the Holy Spirit's purpose has given it is also given to every situation.

[Repeats] The meaning which the Holy Spirit's purpose has given

...

... the holy instant ...

... is also given to every situation.

The purpose given to the holy instant never just hangs there, it's always connected to something. It's always relevant to something. And so the holy instant allowed and embraced, embraces real relationships with real individuals and real relationships with pets, real relationships with everything—animate or inanimate.

It calls forth just the same suspension of faithlessness, withheld and left unused, . .

... now what again is the practice of faithlessness? The practice of faithlessness is taking charge of things yourself by means of your own authority and your own intelligence and your capacity to reason and your ability to manipulate situations and people to your ends. That's the practice of faithlessness because it involves no quiet attention to God—no quiet attention to what Reality is according to God's definition of It. And faithlessness is your preoccupation with your definitions of It. You see?

So, the Holy Spirit's purpose ...

. . . calls forth just the same suspension of faithlessness, withheld and left unused, that faith might answer to the call of truth.

Now listen again:

It calls forth just the same suspension of faithlessness, withheld and left unused, . .

... see, you can't just suspend faithlessness. It must be withheld and left unused, else your withholding of it with an ace up your sleeve is a barter—it is a means of being able to take control again if it becomes necessary according to you.

So . . .

It calls forth just the same suspension of faithlessness withheld and left unused, . .

. . . left unused, left never to be used again. You see? That's unused. But if you leave it, if you withhold it but save it for further use, you haven't left it unused. This is very important!

The holy Spirit's purpose . . .

. . . calls forth just the same suspension of faithlessness, withheld and left unused, that faith might answer to the call of truth.

That the joining, the silence that you allow yourself to be in with a truly purely enquiring mind . . .

. . . might answer to the call of truth. The holy instant is the shining example, . .

. . . it's the shining example because it's so simple and it's the only thing that works. There's nothing complicated about it. Now that's love. When you have gone and done something that goes against the experience of Reality, isn't it amazing that the correction of that is so simple.

The holy instant is the shining example, the clear and unequivocal demonstration of the meaning of every relationship and every situation, seen as a WHOLE.

Does that make sense? When you're acting as an independent agent, you are holding yourself apart from the whole, you're seeing yourself separate from it and you're seeing all of it separate from you. And most of the time it's us against them, me against them or them against me.

But when you move into the holy instant and you abandon and leave alone—never to use again—your independent authority, then all the separation, the me and them vanishes and it becomes us. It becomes an experience of wholeness. And it's only here in that wholeness that, as we've said, God's laws prevail. But it's also only in this wholeness where the experience of invulnerability, of utter unalterable safety, comes to view as a permanent experience because it is an unalterable part of and nature of Creation Itself.

It only seemed to become different when you chose to look at it through independent eyes. And then you saw what was whole as though it were not. And then you behaved as though what was whole was not. And when you behave in Reality as though Reality is not what it is, but what you determine it to be, why you're going to bump into Reality and Reality is going to seem to be harsh and unkind to you. And you'll say, "That's the nature of life." And it's not. But it is, if you insist on walking through Reality with blindfolds on, with an intent not to see everything as it is. When you do that, you're going to bump into Reality. Reality is going to be not what you're expecting . . . pain, injury, damage . . . growing lack of confidence in your perceptions and on and on.

Faith . . .

. . . the quiet joining with the Father, . . .

. . . has accepted every aspect of the situation, . . .

. . . because it's an experience of infinite singularity.

Faith has accepted every aspect of the situation, and faithlessness has not forced any exclusion on it.

So, if you're not forcing any exclusion upon Reality, you're not in a state of denial where you're going to bump into Reality. If you're accepting the whole and excluding none of it, then you're in a state of what? I said, invulnerability, safety, and you would have to say, peace.

When you abandon the last vestige of excluding some part of Reality and calling it different from you, it's like letting out an infinite sigh of relief. That alone should be reason for engaging in the holy instant.

It is a situation of perfect peace simply because you have let it be what it IS.

This simple courtesy is all the Holy Spirit asks of you.

So, the conditions of forgiveness include this simple courtesy. And again, what is this simple courtesy? It is that . . .

Faith has accepted every aspect of the situation, and faithlessness has not forced any exclusion on it.

That's a beautiful definition of courtesy, isn't it.

Do not intrude upon it, do not attack it, do not interrupt its coming.

What? Truth.

Let truth be what it is.

Let it register with you. Let the registering of it be the most important thing to you. Because it's the most intelligent thing to do, it's intelligent to want to know the truth. And it's unintelligent to want to be confused by misperceptions, by lies—by that which isn't true.

So . . .

Let truth be what it is. Do not intrude upon it, do not attack it, do not interrupt its coming. Let it encompass every situation, and bring you peace. Not even faith is asked of you, for truth asks nothing.

Now this means here, faith—like confidence. You don't have to have confidence in truth.

Not even faith is asked of you, for truth asks nothing.

Listen:

Let it enter, and it will call forth and SECURE for you the faith you need for peace.

So truth is not some intellectual precept or statement that's un-contradictable. Truth is an active Presence.

Let it enter, and it will call forth and SECURE for you the faith you need for peace.

"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."² Ye shall let the truth in so that it registers with you and it will make you free. It will clarify as an act of love what is true so that you become unconfused and sanity returns.

Now, it takes faith in the sense of your practicing the two-step—the holy instant. It takes the faith that constitutes silencing your will and joining with the Father to gather information about Reality from Him so that the true perspective may replace your misunderstandings or your misconstructions, your misidentifying what Reality is.

Truth changes you by making clear what isn't true and rendering it valueless so that it holds no interest for you any longer. Truth does that when you practice faith—not in it—but in silencing your human will and asking the Father, what is the truth. That you must do. That practice of faith you must engage in. When the Father or the Holy Spirit responds, it in-fills you with understanding: with Knowing that is unquestionable, clear, satisfying and pacifying. It's that simple.

Let truth . . .

. . . enter, and it will call forth and SECURE for you the faith you need for peace. But rise you not against it, for against your opposition it CANNOT come.

You can't change it. You can't alter it. You can't make it disappear. But you can withdraw your attention from it totally. It still doesn't stop governing you. But its governance often is experienced as uncomfortable because it moves you in the direction of your sanity when you are intent upon enjoying the fascination and excitement of being insane for awhile.

Would you not WANT to make a holy instant of every situation?
For such is the gift of faith, freely given wherever . . .

. . . once again . . .

. . . faithlessness is laid aside, . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . unused.

No backup plan. No ace up your sleeve. Abandoned.

And then the power of the Holy Spirit's purpose is free to use instead.

When the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind—reveals to you what is true, you can't help but avail yourself of it, you can't help but stand with it, you can't help but hold it unswervingly because it doesn't make sense to do anything else any longer.

This power INSTANTLY transforms all situations into one sure and continuous means for establishing His purpose, and demonstrating its reality.

Yeah, everything gets done for you. Truth comes in and reveals Itself and changes you. The Holy Spirit's Purpose comes in and transforms all situations into one sure and continuous means for establishing His Purpose and demonstrating its Reality.

Now the only reason none of you avail yourself of that is because you think it's much more valuable, valid and interesting and worthwhile to engage in doing your own thinking and overcoming the obstacles which you encounter because you're bumping into Reality, because you're not seeing It and cooperating with It and flowing with It and relating to It in normal harmonious ways.

What has been demonstrated has called for faith, and has been GIVEN it.

If you've done the two-step. If you've listened genuinely.

Now it becomes a fact, from which faith can no longer BE withheld.

You see? The insight, the understanding, the revelation comes. And it's so clear that you can no longer withhold your faith in it, your grasp of it. You can no longer be tentative about embracing it.

The strain of refusing faith to truth is enormous, and far greater than you realize. But to answer truth with faith entails no strain at all.

No, it doesn't. But the strain is invigorating. You're used to it. You love challenges. You think you're here to overcome challenges. So what would it mean to be here with no strain at all?

Well, it must mean something . . . the equivalent of dying. You know, I mean no purpose left to life, just . . . you know, literally wouldn't the idea of sitting on a pink cloud forever be as horrible as lying in a casket forever?—different environment, same meaninglessness. And that's not what it's about.

To you who have acknowledged the call of your Redeemer, the strain of not responding to His call seems to be greater than before.

Now, this is a very important point: Who is your Redeemer? You might read this and think that it is referring to the Christ—to me. "I know that my Redeemer liveth."³ But that's not what this is referring to.

Who is your Redeemer? Your Brother, the one sitting next to you, the one sitting across from you, the one you had the fight with, the one you made love to.

To you who have acknowledged the call of your Redeemer, . .

. . . the one whose eyes you're going to look into, and as a result of looking into it with true care, recognizing the Father. And in recognizing the Father, Waking up yourself. Your Brother is your Redeemer as a result of your loving Him enough to look at Him with innocent eyes instead of your preconceptions. And in the innocence of your vision, being able to see the Father radiant in your Brother or Sister—your Redeemer. So let's listen:

To you who have acknowledged the call of your Redeemer, the strain of not responding to His call seems to be greater than before.

Why? Well, because before you didn't know your Brother was your Redeemer, He was just the bastard you had to deal with every day in order to get on with life . . . right? But when you know that He's your Redeemer, when you understand what I've been sharing with you, it becomes impossible to look at Him and engage in mean-spirited, independent projection and not feel guilty and not know that you're missing the mark because you're not engaging in your function. So now it becomes more difficult to hate your Brother or to think the worst of Him or to jump to false conclusions about Him, with justification.

To you who have acknowledged the call of your Redeemer, . .

. . . let's say, seen the value of your Brother . . .

. . . the strain of not responding to His call seems to be greater than before. This is not so. Before, the strain was there but you attributed it to something else, believing that the "something else" produced it.

The simplest way I can put it is: You looked at your Brother and you saw Him for what you thought He was, and you believed your belief, and you blamed Him for your problem instead of blaming your faithlessness.

In both meanings relative to your Brother: One meaning is, you lacked faith in Him—you expected the worst. The other meaning, that you're engaging in thinking as though you were responsible for your safety and your well-being that held your Brother in a hostage position as an enemy, which He could do nothing about until you changed your mind. Those are the two kinds of faithlessness.

Before, the strain was there but you attributed it to something else, believing that the "something else" produced it. This was NEVER true. For what the "something else" produced was sorrow and depression, sickness and pain, . .

. . . well, what is it that produces this? Independent thinking—independence itself. Because the minute you claimed independence from your Father you brought guilt and fear inexorably into the picture, to remain there until you abandoned the divorce.

For what the "something else" produced was sorrow and depression, sickness and pain, darkness and dim imaginings of terror, cold fantasies of fear and fiery dreams of hell. And it was nothing but the intolerable strain of . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . refusing to give faith to truth, and see its evident reality.

Your failure . . . your refusing to give faith to truth is your insistence upon practicing faithlessness, which causes you not to see the evident Reality of truth.

Such was the crucifixion of the Son of God.

Again, you could think that this was referring to me, to the Christ. But no, it's to your Brother.

Such was the crucifixion of the Son of God. His faithlessness did this to him.

Your brother's faithlessness put him in the position of being a suffering, miserable entity, whose behavior toward you arose out of that mindset—out of that experience.

Such was the crucifixion of the Son of God. His faithlessness did this to him. Think carefully before you let yourself use faithlessness against him.

It's the blind leading the blind and both falling into a ditch. It can't be avoided. There's no good to come from it. It's an absolutely total waste of time, ineffective in any constructive way.

Think carefully before you let yourself use faithlessness against . . .

. . . your Brother, whose faithlessness has caused him to be in misery and behave in a way that is a call for Love. Simple.

Think carefully before you let yourself use faithlessness against him. For he is risen, and you have accepted the cause of his awakening as yours.

If you do not practice faithlessness here, relative to your Brother, but you practice faith and you join your Brother with the vision that is provided to you by the Holy Spirit as the revealing of truth—as revelation—then your Brother will be seen as whole, as risen, as the Christ, as that one whose utter divinity is so clear to you that it reveals your divinity to you spontaneously as well.

For he is risen, and you have accepted the cause of his awakening as yours.

What you give you get to keep. And what you get to keep is a realization—a revelation—that comes as a result of being a Brother, actively, so that in your experience of Him you see God.

You have assumed your part in his redemption, and you are now . . .

. . . uh-oh . . .

. . . fully responsible to him.

Here's that involvement thing again. Why wouldn't you be fully responsible to Him? Why wouldn't you let yourself be fully responsible to your Brother? Do not let any part of what He is be excluded from Him in your mind, and not to let Him in anyway be excluded from you. Why would you not want to constantly be fully responsible for being the presence of Love that introduces no dissonance or in-harmony and is uplifting and fulfilling to your Brother or any situation. You see?

Fail him not now, . .

. . . it's a bad time [chuckles] . . .

Fail him not now, for it has been given you to realize what your lack of faith in him must mean to YOU.

Now you might say, "Wow, then if I'm going to love my Brother because of what not loving him is going to do to me, then really, I'm not doing it for my Brother, I'm doing it for myself because I don't want to suffer." Yeah, that would be a good way of "mind-f'ing" yourself into delay, delay in embracing your Brother.

You've got to realize that you're not going to Wake up until your Brother is important enough to you to dare to look in His eyes and see something that you haven't believed was there—the Father, God. Not doing that is going to have an effect on you. But you know what? It's your nature to love him. And it's your nature to see him as he truly Is. So when you're asking for the Father's Perspective, you're asking to be returned to your nature, your natural Perspective . . . your sanity. That's just the way it is.

His salvation IS your only purpose. See only this in every situation, and it will be a means for BRINGING only this.

Well, we could say this is another condition of forgiveness.

See only this in every situation, and it will be a means for BRINGING only this.

When you accepted truth as the goal for your relationship, . .

. . . if you did, and this experience was had, that we've been talking about . . .

. . . you became givers of peace . . .

When you accepted truth as the goal for your relationship, you became givers of peace as surely as your Father gave peace to you. For the goal of peace cannot be accepted apart from its conditions, . .

One of the conditions is the practice of faith that has accepted every aspect of the situation and faithlessness has not forced any exclusion on it. That's one of the conditions of peace. It's a courtesy.

Recognizing that your Brother or Sister is your Redeemer is another condition of forgiveness. If you don't see that, you will not be curious enough to look into your Brother's eyes and see something different from what you believed was there. And that will deprive you of being able to recognize yourself in a new way, because of the way you treated your Brother. And that's one of the conditions of forgiveness.

. . . if you did what we've talked about and you had the insight and the revelation, . .

. . . you HAD faith in it, for no-one accepts what he does not believe is real.

Nobody even looks for what he does not believe is real. Unfortunately you look for sin, disease and death. You look for a life of a certain number of years and you die and that's the way it is. That's what you believe. That's what you have faith in.

It's hard to accept that you're the Christ. It's hard to accept that you're the holy Son or Daughter of God. It's hard for you to believe that there can be instantaneous healing. It's hard for you to believe that lost limbs or lost organs can reappear. It's hard for you to believe that there's really anything you can do other than practice positive thinking in order to have any sense of peace in this conflicted world. It's hard to believe these things, so you don't bother. You stick to what you believe is true, what you believe is real.

And everything I'm doing is encouraging you to believe what is Real, but what is different from your current definitions, so that you might free yourself from these current definitions that you have made up, that are binding you, but which do not represent truth and which no longer have to bind you because you are the holy Son of God, the holy Daughter of God and that Birthright cannot be taken away from you and therefore, hasn't.

Your purpose has not changed, and will not change, for you accepted what can NEVER change.

When you practiced the holy instant and your mind was changed by truth entering by its own volition because of what it is and because you didn't object to it. The key thing: You didn't object to it.

Your purpose has not changed, and will not change, for you accepted what can NEVER change. And nothing that it needs to be forever changeless can you now withhold from it.

That's what you can anticipate. When truth becomes clear, you simply cannot abandon it again. Oh yeah, you probably could find someone, another Brother, who would be willing to join you in fantasy but with the experience you've had you won't be willing to do it. That's a promise.

[And] nothing that it needs to be forever changeless can you now withhold from it. Your release is certain. Give as you have received. And demonstrate that you have risen far beyond ANY situation that could hold you back, and keep you separate from Him Whose call you answered.

Your Brother . . . your Brother is calling you all the time . . . calling to you all the time. Your Brother, like you, is suffering, in that your days are not free of tension. Your days are not free of concern. Your days are not free of misunderstandings that have to be corrected and cause tension and stress. Your days are not filled with an experience of a world that is at peace.

So acknowledge this to be the truth, so that you might engage in the conditions for forgiveness and hasten your Awakening.

And again, as I mentioned last week, this means getting involved with your Brothers and Sisters—not with ideas and theories. And in your very human connections with your Brothers and Sisters, bring the Father into the picture. How? Change the way you're dealing with your Brother. Because how you're going to bring the Father into the picture is by looking into your Brother's eyes and finding Him appearing there, causing you to be involved in a complete change of mind, a complete revamping of your perception of your Brother and the feelings you have about your Brother, together with what you're going to find is the evaporating of arrogance in you on your part. Because it's only if that disappears that equality, oneness, wholeness without any exclusion occurs. One of The Conditions Of Forgiveness.

I love you, I love you, I love you, I love you, I love you and everyone who is listening or watching I love you. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

November 5th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I want to start off tonight considering three words: Transformation, regeneration and redemption.

Certainly, most anyone studying the Course would feel that the Awakening—the coming into the conscious experience of truth in which you're withholding no part of yourself from—would be considered to be a movement of regeneration, of transformation and redemption. But for some very strange perverse ego reason, one only allows those words to apply to what one calls, oneself, but not one's body, not one's world. And so, you are going to be, I guess in your mind, transformed and regenerated and redeemed.

And as I've been talking about for quite some time now, that concept has to be abandoned.

It's your world that is to be regenerated, transformed, redeemed. You can see the call for it on the world's scene today. And you say, "Yes, things need to be done. Yes, injustices have to be abandoned. The way things are done need to be changed. But you know what? Somehow that doesn't have anything to do with what the Course is teaching because everyone says the Course says, 'the world is an illusion' . . . right? So obviously fixing things up here doesn't have anything to do with Awakening—with coming back into your right Mind."

If it doesn't, and if Awakening is all important, if the transformation of your Mind is all important, so that you become clear about what is truth and what is illusion and in that process the world is going to disappear, then one might say what's the use in trying to correct these things? Let Greece have its problems, let Africa have its problems and let it all collapse! After all, let's let the illusion show itself for what it is and let it fall apart.

Well, I'll tell you something: If you're going to take that stance, don't use the Course as your justification for it. The Course talks about the call for correction. The Course says that either everything is love or a call for love. If something is going on in the world, are you going to say that's not a call for love? And are you going to abandon it? If something is going wrong apparently with your body, are you going to say it's not a call for love, it's not a call for transformation? And just let it collapse and apparently collapse you?

If you do, don't claim that it has any justification in the Course and don't say that you're doing it because you are a follower of the Course.

Now you know, I'm saying this with a soft tone of voice. I'm speaking rationally, I'm speaking intelligently and I'm speaking calmly. But, hear it as though I'm shouting it. Hear it as though it's the most important thing you could ever hear and hear it as though what I'm saying tells a truth that is transformational and relevant to the here and now.

What makes the world and universe a material world and universe?

It's the fact that you refuse to look at it and say, "Father, what is there about everything that I'm seeing that You have made? What is the truth about everything that I'm seeing as You experience it? How does Creation—which I'm either seeing truly or through a glass darkly—how does it appear from Your Perspective, from the Meanings You are Embodying in it?" You see? You're not saying that. And so as a result, you're neglecting to be in a state of attention where the Father's Perspective could register with you.

"Oh, it's not . . . the Father doesn't have any perspective about this, it's all illusion!"

Well, you know what? It's not the Father's Will, it's not my will, it's not the Holy Spirit's Will for you to believe and become governed by such loveless concepts. And it's not the Father's Will for you to succumb to the suffering that accompanies consciously embracing a perspective about everything that isn't true!

Now, we've been discussing the fact that it's the Holy Spirit's purpose to bring truth to your attention. And mind you, if the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind, then it is your right Mind—your divine Mind, your real Mind—that has the intent to illuminate the truth to you so that you are changed, so that your perspective changes, so that your attitude changes.

Now, what is truth? Is it an indisputable fact? Is truth like a statement that's unalterably forever what it is? Is it a bit of information?—that's what I want to ask.

Well, a lot of people think it is. And when I've said ask, "Father, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?" you sometimes think that what you're supposed to be asking for is a bit of information—some sort of intellectual string of characters, of letters, of words, of symbols that mean something unchangeable, unalterable.

Well it's a lot more than that. Think about it. The synonyms for God . . . are they bits of information? Let's take the word, "love." Nothing flat about love. Love is a living thing, isn't it. It's something that moves. It is embodied. It is expressed. And it comes out as affection. It comes out as caring, which are followed by actions of affection and caring. So love is a living thing.

What about life? Another synonym for God. None of you thinks that life is a bit of information. It's a living moving thing. Dynamic.

Well, what about truth? From what we read last week, truth is something far more than a bit of information. Truth is alive. And when you ask, "What is the truth here, Father—what is the truth?" you are asking to have what is true revealed to you because you're choosing to listen beyond your best judgments. And as we discussed last week—as it said in the Course—truth becomes an active presence that changes you, not through reason, not through logic, not through intellectual processes, but by revealing the Father's Will, by revealing the Meaning of everything that the Father is Embodying as that thing in any given moment. And this experience of what a thing really is, of what the Meaning of God's Creation is, has an effect that you can block or you can embrace. And if you embrace it, it transforms you. Its function, its living function is to cause a change of mind through realization. You see?

So when you say, "Father, what is the truth here?" and you wait for a string of words that explain what the truth is, you're going to miss the point—the depth and breadth of it at least—because the fullness of the Meaning of God in any given thing is the truth that will be revealed to you when you become defenseless against it. And it will change you. And that is how you will Wake up. And that is how your right Mind will begin to re-register with you, as You.

Now, we've also discussed extensively the fact that your mind is not here to use to accomplish things with. The human condition—the dream-world—is the result of using your mind to make things happen. "Father, I'd rather see it my way." "Father, I'd rather do it myself." "Father I would rather determine what everything is and so I'm getting a divorce from you so that I might function on my own and do things with my mind to make things happen."

Well, here's the interesting thing: When you do things to make things happen that are different from what God is Being, then you are in an act of miscreation, you're in an act of altering Creation that's already in place and actually can't be changed at all. But you are busying yourself with making things happen the way you think they ought to happen and mean what you think they ought to mean.

And so doing things with your own mind is constantly an act in opposition to the Father's Will, the Father's Perspective, and Creation itself. The result is a life of sin, disease and death, a life of struggle as well as the ego satisfying activity of trying to overcome the suffering, trying to actually succeed at doing the impossible so that one might get the hit of satisfaction at having accomplishing something on one's own.

Transformation . . .

Paul: Just a moment . . . this is me, Paul, for some reason I'm not being able to gather all three of the words, so he's going to continue just using two until I'm not blocking it . . .

Raj: I started out by saying that I wanted to talk about the words, "transformation . . . blank . . . and redemption . . ."

Paul: Yes, thank you . . .

Raj: ". . . transformation, regeneration and redemption."

One might think that by my saying you need to remember those words—to consider those words—that I am suggesting that in doing so, you will be using your mind to make healing occur, to make something happen, which is not the way you can make something happen. The only way you can "make something happen" is by getting out of the way and saying, "Father, reveal to me, . . . Holy Spirit, disclose to me the truth here" and let it be revealed to you.

Now, the reason I'm stressing the words: Transformation, regeneration and redemption, is to give you something to occupy your mind other than what you're confident about. "My body is a material body, everyone's body dies . . . my body will die. I can't expect healing." You see? "It's getting older" or "there's been injury" or whatever, and you have a script that you play out. And you believe the script. And you don't have a script that will cause you to shift your attention away from your confidence in sin, sickness and death and its control over you in favor of the transformation, regeneration and redemption that it is your Birthright to be experiencing.

If you don't have an alternative, we'll say, to the confidences you have that kill you, then you have no means of escape.

And so I'm reminding you that you can't afford to forget about: Transformation, regeneration and redemption. Remembering them causes you to be able to challenge successfully whatever confidences you have in the worst that can happen to you and the way the material universe and material body works.

By remembering those words it helps you turn your attention where? To better thinking? To better, more powerful ideas? Or to the silence within where you can ask of the Father, "What is the truth here?" Where you can ask of the Holy Spirit, "Reveal to me my Birthright, right here, right in this world. Reveal to me the intent that my Father has placed in the visibility and tangibility of my individuality that I call, 'my body' or 'my neighbors' or 'my friends' so that I might entertain the truth about them and thus lay the groundwork for transformation, regeneration and redemption to register with me and to register with my friend or my lover or my neighbor or my world . . . or the country next door."

You are sick, you sin, you die not because you're in a material world or in the middle of an illusion, but because you are lazy in your use of your mind and you're accepting things that aren't true without challenging them. And I'm here to say . . . you know, "get a little guts," challenge these things. Contradict them, not as though you're contradicting something real, but as a means of tuning your mind, you might say, so that you have justification to say, "Father . . ." you see, abandoning your independence, "Father," or "Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? I'm not going to practice my false, negative thinking. I'm not going to practice the mean-spirited nature of the ego, which does not have my best interests in mind. I'm going to shut up and stay quiet until the truth is revealed to me—the living truth that has as its intent and which has the power to change my mind and change my experience of body, world and universe."

It's important!

THE DREAM AND THE REALITY ¹

To substitute is to ACCEPT INSTEAD.

[Repeats] To substitute is to ACCEPT INSTEAD. If you would but consider exactly what this entails, you would perceive at once how much at variance this is with the goal the Holy Spirit has given you and . . .

. . . what?

. . . would accomplish FOR you.

This is so key. It's not something you will accomplish. It's something you will let the Holy Spirit accomplish FOR you. Why? Because this is the way you disengage from the act of independence that you have been carrying out. An act of independence from what? From the Father . . . from your holiness. You see? When you stepped away and you said, "Father, I'd rather do it myself, I'd rather determine what everything means for myself, you accepted what instead of what? You accepted your so-called authority in place of the Father's Will.

It's laughable. It's something that you couldn't actually do. And it's something you're not actually accomplishing but you are creating an experience of dissonance and suffering and struggle together with the promise of success at overcoming it, which goads you on but you never accomplish.

So, Waking up is a matter of abandoning your substituting yourself and your will for the Father's Will—the original and only sin, the original and only mis-step, mistake.

To substitute is to CHOOSE BETWEEN, renouncing one in favor of the other. For this special purpose, one is judged more valuable and the other is replaced by him. The relationship in which the substitution occurred is thus fragmented, and its purpose split accordingly.

Okay. Now mind you, you can miss the point if you think that this is addressing a relationship between you and your Brother or your fellowman or another human being.

The relationship in which the substitution occurred is thus fragmented, . .

. . . the relationship between you and the Father is the one where it occurred. And that's the one that you're experiencing as being fragmented. And that's the one that has to be corrected in order for your relationships with each other to be brought to equilibrium, peace and holiness.

The relationship in which the substitution occurred is thus fragmented, and its purpose split accordingly. To fragment is to exclude, and substitution is the strongest defense the ego has for separation.

Now if this is the case . . . well I'm going to say this first: If you forget or overlook the fact that the only real substitution that seems to have occurred was when you disengaged from the Father, you will begin to address every relationship you have with each other and you will seem to be faced with an impossible task. I mean, after all, how can you get every one of your Brothers and Sisters to stand in agreement with the God's honest truth? But that isn't where you must address it.

Before you join with your Brother or Sister, before you engage actively in relationship with your Brother or Sister, you need to stop, practice the holy instant, become still—stop your thinking, your reasoning and your valuing of your personal capacity to do these things—and say in the silence of you, “Father, what is the truth here?” You see?

That's the way you undo the one and only false step that was taken that has seemed to make everything else so complicated.

What I mean to convey here is, that the answer is so simple. The answer is: Stop thinking for yourself, silence yourself and in the silence ask, “Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than my right Mind—what is the truth about me? Reveal the truth about me, which it is your purpose to do, so that the living truth registering within, to me, can change me and undo my attempts to be an independent agent and therefore, result in the eradication of all of the suffering I have experienced and seen and which will put me in a position to look into my Brother's eyes and remember God. And thus, I will say, secure for myself the blessing I would extend to my Brother and we can be healed together, which is the only way it works.”

“Healed” ah-h, that magic word, um-m . . . transformation, reconfiguration, redemption. That last word is the best, “redemption.” It means bringing something back to its original state—redeemed to its original state.

Do you really believe that that's your Birthright? “Oh, somebody else can have a miracle, someone else can have a tremendous healing, but no I've done too many things. I've been unprincipled. I don't deserve it.” You see? There's your script! There's the very script that you needed to bite your tongue on when the first words started out, and say in the silence of your not speaking, “Father, what is the truth here, above and beyond what I feel confident about, what is the truth? What is the transformational truth? What is the redemptive truth? Let truth come to me and...change...my...mind, which will change...my...script. It is not that it will give me a new script to use that will be better than the old one—a script for me to use independently—but the script which is the conscious experience of what truth is, so that in the awe of its experience I'm spontaneously lifted out of the confidences I had about what couldn't possibly happen to me.” Do you see?

The Holy Spirit never uses substitutes.

You see? If the Holy Spirit used substitutes He would have to substitute something unlike God instead of God—something different from God instead of God. The Holy Spirit can't do that. The Holy Spirit is your right Mind. The Holy Spirit is your sanity, established in you by the Father, which you've been ignoring while you dally with the ego. Right? But:

The Holy Spirit never uses substitutes. Where the ego perceives one person as a replacement for another, . .

. . . or one holy Son of God as a replacement for his Father—it doesn't say that.

Where the ego perceives one person as a replacement for another, the Holy Spirit sees them joined and indivisible. He does not judge between them, knowing they are one.

Whew . . . that's not something each of you really wants to know. There are some people you know, that you don't want to consider as being one with you. And so that's your script! Not realizing that in daring to look at the Brother you would not want to be one with in an undefended manner, asking of the Father or the Holy Spirit, "What is the truth about my Brother? How can I look at my Brother and remember God instead of remembering all of the shitty things that he's done, and all of the ways he's hurt me and hurt other people and taken advantage of me." You see? And you carry this grievance.

You can't see God in your Brother's eyes unless you're willing to abandon your grievance, because somehow you realize that the practice of your grievance keeps you insane, keeps you in a state where you're unable to see the truth that would bring great joy to you. Why? Because not only would you be seeing the truth but because you would be experiencing your own sanity returned to you. You see? And the two of you could rejoice together, which is what is supposed to happen.

Again:

The Holy Spirit never uses substitutes. Where the ego perceives one person as a replacement for another, the Holy Spirit sees them joined and indivisible. He does not judge between them, knowing they are one. Being united, they are one because they are the SAME.

The SAME. They are all God Expressed.

Substitution is clearly a process in which they are perceived as different. One would unite; the other separate.

What does that mean? Well, it depends on the teacher you're listening to. If you're listening to the Holy Spirit, the function and purpose and result is one of uniting. If you're listening to yourself, your independent self, which is called the ego—that which acts without a concern or consideration of anything outside itself—then you are engaging in that which separates. You see?

Again, the answer is simple. It's just black and white. It's thinking for yourself or letting the Father reveal the truth to you so that your knowing of the truth occupies your attention, your attitude, your measuring stick. But it's not you measuring, it's you watching the Father measure His Creation and understanding it from His Perspective. That's the simplicity of it.

Nothing can come between what God has joined and what the Holy Spirit sees as one.

Um-m, remember though, the Holy Spirit isn't something out there seeing something as one. The Holy Spirit is, that which is nothing more than your right Mind seeing everything as One.

As I brought up so often, it seems very insulting to have to abandon your personal skills and everything that makes you credible to you, to abandon that, for listening to Someone else, or Something else for what truth is. And yet, that which you're listening to—the Holy Spirit—is nothing more than your right Mind. And so listening to It is not abandoning your self to something else, it's abandoning your self to your capital "S" Self, which constitutes an integration of wholeness that once allowed into your mind again will never leave. And the integrity of God, the integrity of the universe is experienced as inseparable from the integrity of you.

That's what the Course is about. That is what all of this is leading to. It's leading to, you becoming defenseless enough to let truth register with you and in the vitality and aliveness of truth, being changed by the Movement of truth. It's you abandoning your precious self-control and acquired skill at controlling everything else, in favor of letting yourself be controlled by something that initially you can't see as your Self, but which is, as I keep saying, that which is nothing more than your right Mind. And therefore, yielding to It constitutes a yielding into your sanity, because it constitutes an abandoning of every intent you have to act independently, which is exactly what creates and has created the experience of illusion.

That's what the Course is teaching in a nutshell. And although it's very many pages long and discusses very many topics it all boils down to this.

Now, as you watch the world news, you see there's a call for change, don't you. You very likely feel the call for change or you very likely are repressing the feel for the call for change. Because there is, I promise you, a need for change, whether you're feeling it or not.

Why am I saying this? I'm saying this so that you might realize that to have a goal to finish the Course is not a very good goal today—it's not a very good goal on any day. The goal needs to be the practice of what the Course is teaching. And the Course is teaching to stop doing what doesn't work and start doing what does work. And don't make that process so complicated that you don't think you'll ever be able to accomplish it . . . because it's simple.

Instead of speaking for yourself, say, "Father, what's the truth here?" and persist, because that is the most important thing. That is the way the exchange of the dream for Reality will occur. And you can do that today. That is not a difficult process.

The practice of the two-step or the holy instant is easy. You shut up and in the silence you ask, "Father, what is the truth here?" and then you listen. And you have the intent of not wanting to act until you've heard, so that a seriousness about what you're doing takes hold of your act of engaging in the holy instant and it's not just some flip, off-handed act. "Oh, Father, what is the truth here? Oh, oh-h, oh-h . . . I can't wait any longer than this, I'm going to go ahead." You see?

Now you may have to go ahead and act, but it's got to be your intent to let your every act arise out of a connectedness with the Father or with the Holy Spirit, a connectedness with your sanity because that's how you Wake up. And the world you're in is where you're going to Wake up. The world you're in and the body you're experiencing is where transformation, regeneration and redemption are going to occur. You see?

The good news is that it's not complicated. The good news is that you have plenty of wonderful opportunities every day, in your world right now to do it.

Now, you know what? You probably think it's going to take scholars or people who understand government to bring about changes that need to occur. And I'm telling you that that's wrong. [Addresses everyone around the room] You, you may be the ones who have ideas that are transformational and regenerative and redemptive.

God did not create Creation as a giant puzzle for you to figure out. It's not supposed to be hard. But if you choose to try to figure it all out all by yourself on your own, it is going to be experienced as exactly what you're experiencing. But it doesn't have to.

In this process of considering transformation, regeneration and redemption, let the possibility be, or shall I say, be sure you're not arguing against some significant part you will play in the process of transformation, regeneration and redemption.

It's not the bad guys that need to be transformed or it's not only the bad guys, it's the good guys—it's you guys.

Now let's stop grouching about what a shitty mess the world's in and how poorly it's been handled and how greed has governed everything and put everything down the toilet. I mean, what kind of script is that? What's going to be the evidence of that script? The evidence of that script is going to be something that doesn't look like transformation, regeneration and redemption. It's just going to add to the turmoil and it will block your mind, your presence of mind, from experiencing the revelation of the answer.

And I'm telling you the answer is not complicated. The answer is Love. The answer is simple humanity expressed because someone cares enough to express it by looking into his neighbor's eyes and remembering God, instead of what he chooses to remember, which is all of the bad things he has done and all of the things that he has done that have caused your life or the world to become bound in, an almost impossible situation to get out of.

Again, what a script! Watch your script. Not because it will make things happening, but because your script will keep you from remembering the truth.

The minute you stop arguing against the Kingdom of Heaven, the moment you stop arguing against your holiness by abandoning your every attempt to act independently with power, God's truth will register with you because you're not blocking it! That's the simplicity of it.

So, you, everyone on the globe is in this wonderful fertile soil of opportunity to ask to see the truth, let it be revealed and then spontaneously act on the basis of the clarity of the truth that has changed you and allows you to be the inspiration for others doing the same thing.

Now, the subject of this Chapter, The Dream and the Reality isn't just an interesting chapter in a book, it's about today, it's about you, it's about Waking up and it's not about doing it with difficulty. And that's what I want everyone to remember and put into practice this week.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with your next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

November 13th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We've, of course, been talking about the two-step, the holy instant. And we've been talking about practicing it on purpose—practicing it consciously. But sometimes the holy instant is entered into, I'm going to say, involuntarily or the two-step is practiced involuntarily.

In some ways this is where the greatest learning about the holy instant can be gained. It happens when you, due to whatever circumstances are facing you, arrive at a point of overwhelm and you experience this overwhelm and the fear associated with it long enough to become literally exhausted by it. And there comes a point where involuntarily you collapse, in so many words, you lose faith in yourself and you let go—you can't hang on anymore.

Now if this is genuine, you find yourself immediately not in a place of depression or grief, but of peace. If it is in-genuine, if the collapse is a ploy, if it's part of your repertoire of being in control, then there won't be peace, there will be anger. And your collapse will be an expression of your anger.

And that doesn't constitute a holy instant. It doesn't constitute the practice of the two-step. And therefore, the blessing of the holy instant for you, is non-existent—it escapes you.

None of you realizes the incredible value and, I'm going to say, power of peace. Of course, when you practice the holy instant or the two-step, you do indeed shut up, don't you. That's the first step of the two-steps. And then in the silence you reach out beyond yourself—beyond that in you which you have faith in, confidence in. And you reach out to that which, at the present you have very little confidence in, especially if you're in a state of stress. When you shut up—first part of the two-step—reach out to the Father or the Holy Spirit desiring to be refreshed, to be in-filled with what the truth is—the truth that heals, the truth that transforms, regenerates and redeems.

I'm bringing this out because the solution to the human condition, which is a state of fear, lies in something as simple as choosing for peace even though fear seems to be justified.

The simplicity of this has to register with you in order for you to dare to reach for your peace . . . or relax into your peace when threat seems to be occurring.

Now, you look at your world every day nowadays, no matter where you are on the globe, no matter what your nationality, no matter what country you live in and identify with and there seems to be great justification for fear. There seems to be quite a great deal of upset, of turmoil, of dissonance. And the threat doesn't just come from your locale, the threat can be on the other side of the globe, something happening there can upset the balance where you are.

And so, even if, let's say, you're doing all the right things, it would seem that turmoil could arrive and destroy because of something happening half way around the globe.

So you're finding yourselves confronted with the call for peace constantly. You're being faced with the call to silence your mind, silence the fear, silence the rhetoric that upsets and agonizes and creates greater and greater distress.

Now I'm going to tell you something: There's a reason for all of the, well, shall I call it "chemicalization" that is going on around the globe . . . all of the rather fundamental disturbances: Lack of order, lack of morality, lack of peace, lack of intelligence. There's a reason for it.

I've used the example in the past, where if you lived in a house that was completely dark, furnished and you had learned as though you were a blind person, how to function in that house—feed yourself, bathe yourself, live, remain healthy. But let's say, that one day illumination begins to occur . . . and slowly you can begin to make out the barest shapes and shadows. And as it increases, you see clutter, you see mess, you see cleaning that needs to be done.

As this wonderful thing called illumination or light comes forth, it seems to be a cause of distress rather than a cause of pleasure for you. It's as though you would rather not be able to see, than to see what you're seeing. You're faced with a job. You're faced with cleanup. You're faced with, let's say, a level of organization and order that you had never been aware of before because you couldn't see disorder.

Now, in this turmoil that is occurring on your globe—dirt, disorder, immorality that had been hidden in the dark, economic imbalance, the means by which you humans act inhumanely toward each other—is becoming clearer and clearer. And of course, in the process it's calling forth a change so that greater humanity is brought into the picture. That's the point.

But you could say, the world is going to pot. You could say that the world is on the decline and that collapse in every way could occur. And the peace and the joy and the harmony that you have enjoyed for many years will be irreparably destroyed.

But that's not the nature of Awakening. That's not the nature of this crazy call for becoming more conscious and coming back into your right Mind and discovering what it is that is the one simple thing that will correct it all. That's why I'm bringing up that the one simple thing arises out of fundamental peace.

And fundamental peace is something you can experience involuntarily and ruggedly by failing so completely at being competent yourself, that you give up on it, knowing for a certainty you think that everything about you and everything that is meaningful will collapse and your worthlessness will shine forth and the purpose for being will be gone.

But that's not what happens. And those of you who have experienced the blessing of having abandoned your supposed capacity to be successfully in charge understand what I'm saying. You have an experience, which you are capable of sharing with your Brothers and Sisters during these coming times as an effective way of meeting the call that's coming forth. But also as a means of encouraging those who are studying A Course In Miracles to understand what the simple steps are no matter how complex the Course seems to be.

And this is important.

This is a time of transition. This is a time of transformation. It's a time actually of regeneration. If you will get into your peace and observe what's happening from there and listen for what the answer is from there, it will be a time of regeneration. Even if you don't do that, it's just that the regeneration will be involuntary and you will say that it's rugged.

So I am encouraging you not to misinterpret what is happening. And don't let your egos fly off the handle self-righteously pointing the finger at what everyone is doing and what insanity there is and what lack of love there is. As

I said last week, when you engage in that, what's the script you're using? And how can you expect your world to reflect something different from the script you are utilizing to keep a feeling of stability and to keep a feeling of power which you are going to have to release if indeed Reality and your sanity are to come to the fore in you so that you see things differently, behave differently and reflect the truth more completely.

Oh-h, don't say, "I know I'm not going to be able to do it." Don't say, "Oh, Raj, why did you have to tell me this? I half-way was looking forward to the coming year. I half-way was looking forward to getting past the next election in the United States. I was half-way positively oriented!"

Well, there's a ploy for you . . . there's a script for you. And there is a means of attempting to hold on to control—your definition of control—which is being used for your definition of success which means not having to give up, not having to succumb to your incapacity to be anything on your own and yield to the Father, yield into the peace of your Being which is the omnipotence and omnipresence of God...in...you.

Don't fuss and fume about what you have to do. Don't fuss and fume about what everyone else has to do but probably won't do. Because that takes much more energy than the decision to become still, to silence your human will, to stop talking to yourself and start asking a question of Something other than yourself.

This is the simple means of Awakening. Why not engage in it instead of all the other folderol? Why not engage in it instead of indulging in reaction, whether it's self-righteousness or fear when you observe the world and what's happening. I'm here to remind you that that's all it takes. To discourage you from attempting to do more than it takes especially when doing more than it takes creates the experience of illusion in the first place which you are suffering from and which it's your Birthright to be Waking up from.

Be with that for a moment . . .

Be with the simplicity of it and wonder why you don't avail yourself of it. Wonder why you keep forgetting that that's all it takes and then engage on all of the convoluted means you use to exercise control and provide yourself with a certain sense of safety.

Let's go into the book.

Nothing can come between what God has joined and what the Holy Spirit sees as one.¹

Simple.

But everything SEEMS to come between the fragmented relationships the ego sponsors to destroy.

Now, of course, the key word there is “SEEMS.”

But everything SEEMS . . .

. . . doesn't actually . . .

. . . SEEMS to come between the fragmented relationships the ego sponsors to destroy.

Now I encourage you to engage a new habit. When statements like this are made as you read, I want you to add a sentence . . . here it says:

. . . everything SEEMS to come between the fragmented relationships the ego sponsors to destroy [But it hasn't succeeded.]

That brings the point home.

. . . everything SEEMS to come between the fragmented relationships the ego sponsors to destroy [But it hasn't happened.]

The one emotion in which substitution is impossible is love. Fear involves substitution by definition, for it is love's replacement. Fear is both a fragmented and a fragmenting emotion. It seems to take many forms, and each seems to require a different form of acting out for satisfaction. While this appears to introduce quite variable behavior, a far more serious effect lies in the fragmented perception from which the behavior stems. No-one is SEEN COMPLETE. The body is emphasized, with special emphasis on certain parts, and used as the standard for comparison for either acceptance or rejection of suitability for acting out a special form of fear.

Fear embodied. Fear felt by you and believed becomes a tool you use to control.

“Oh, he has slanted eyes.” “Oh, she has very black course hair.”

You have many means that you use to distance yourself, separate yourself from and see yourself as different from others. And why do you do it? You do it because you're afraid. You do it because you're not in your peace. And so you use certain characteristics of another to control your behavior to keep you safe and to keep "them" in their place.

The next section is entitled:

SUBSTITUTION AS A DEFENSE

You who believe that God is fear made but one substitution. It has taken many forms, because it was the substitution of . . .

. . . what?

. . . illusion for truth; of fragmentation for wholeness. It has become so splintered and subdivided and divided again, over and over, that it is now almost impossible to perceive it once was one, and still is what it was.

Now there, the last part of the sentence I said you could add, is in the book.

It has become so splintered and subdivided and divided again, over and over, that it is now almost impossible to perceive it once was one, . .

. . . it could have ended there but it didn't . . .

. . . and still is what it was.

You see? The substitution hasn't been successful. The replacement hasn't been successful. The reason for employing substitution has not been validated and you are still innocent of attempting to deny, successfully, God and thus be offensive, thus be guilty. This is important: That one error that you substituted illusion for truth.

That one error which brought truth to illusion, infinity to time, and life to death, was all you ever made. Your whole world rests upon it. Everything you see reflects it, and every special relationship which you have ever made is part of it.

Now mind you, all the complexities that are going on in the world today that seem to be fearful, that seem to be alarming, that deprive you of your peace, do not represent the truth and they do not constitute success on the part of mankind at creating something God didn't make. You have created the illusion and the distress that accompanies the illusion. But you haven't changed what is Real in the slightest. And although you have all of these complexities that seem to need to be straightened out, the correction of them lies in one thing: Choosing for your peace . . . engaging in the two-step . . . shutting up . . . moving into the silence, and then reaching out, desiring to know the truth that it's your Birthright to be experiencing.

Because although you seem to have succeeded in distracting yourself from your conscious awareness of truth through the use of your imagination and your commitment to your beliefs, you haven't stopped Knowing the truth and you haven't stopped being the visibility and tangibility of God. And your mind hasn't stopped being the full presence of the Holy Spirit. It just hasn't happened. Because it hasn't happened, all that is involved in abandoning the dream is to shift your attention.

I make it sound very simple. I make it sound too simple. If it was that simple, everyone would have Woken up. No. And the only reason everyone hasn't Woken up is because there is such an addiction to the "hit" or the "high" of going for independence and hopefully succeeding because you believe it's possible and your belief is where you put your trust.

You have expressed surprise at hearing how very different is reality from what you see. You do not realize the magnitude of that one error . . .

. . . substituting illusion for truth.

It was so vast and so completely incredible that from it a world of total unreality HAD to emerge. What else COULD come of it?

We've talked about this differently in the past few weeks. When you chose to get a divorce from your Father and abandon His Perspective—which was yours by Birthright—and you said, "Father, I'd rather make decisions myself, I'd rather define what everything is myself," you had to define it as something different from God. That which is different from God is that which is unlike God. It's a polarity.

And so, as long as you do this, you're introducing dissonance in omnipotence and omniscience—absolutely singular infinite harmony.

Now you didn't actually succeed. The dissonance you're experiencing is an illusion. But you have a lot of faith in it and no one tells you consistently that, well, you're engaging in imagination, which can have no actual result, except that while you're trying to achieve that result you are insane, you're not in your right Mind, you can't experience your peace.

Its fragmented aspects are fearful enough, as you begin to look at them. But nothing you have seen begins to show you the enormity of the original error, which seemed to cast you out of Heaven, to shatter knowledge into meaningless bits of disunited perceptions, and to force you to further substitutions.

Now, you are watching in the world today further substitutions crumbling. You are watching clarity as to what doesn't work, as well as to what is needed, crystallizing right where you can see them, right where you can feel them, unless you're holding out a little bit longer to find an effective way to control all of this without having to change it and getting it to be less scary, less threatening.

You know what? It is being more difficult for every one of you to look at all of this and fool yourselves into thinking that the answer is going to come from the same place all the previous answers have come from. And this is wonderful. You're getting tired of suffering. You're getting tired of being afraid. And now it looks as though the cause for fear can be so completely out of your control that there's just no hope. And it's not true, because the practice of the holy instant is still the answer.

Seek your peace. Value sanity enough to dare to abandon your reactions, to dare to abandon your fear and give up without things getting really bad, so that your giving up is involuntary.

Now, don't get me wrong, I'm not saying, "you better do this because unknown to you things are going to be getting so bad that you will involuntarily practice the two-step and it will be rugged." No. You are observing a natural movement of reconfiguration, the result of which will be order, I'm going to say, order of a higher magnitude. And part of it is going to come from choices you and others on your globe make for abandoning self-serving interests, selfishness and reaching beyond your normal avenues of being aware, so that in the absence of your exercise of what doesn't work, what does work will simply become obvious to you as a natural progression, if I may put it that way, or as a natural undoing of everything that was put into place that confused everything, so that clarity naturally comes forth.

Substitutions of illusions for truth:

That was the first projection of error outward. The world arose to hide it, and became the screen on which it was projected and drawn between you and the truth.

. . . what world? The world of your definitions arose to hide Reality, to hide the Kingdom of Heaven . . .

... and [it] became ...

... your definitions ...

... became the screen on which it was projected and drawn between you and the truth.

And here's the additional sentence: But it didn't actually succeed.

For truth extends INWARD, where the idea of loss is meaningless, ..

... when you go into the holy place in you—the altar—which is in the center of your Being, and you ask the Holy Spirit, you ask the Father, "What is the truth here?" you are engaging in the undoing of confusion, inharmony, fear.

... truth extends INWARD, where the idea of loss is meaningless, and only increase is conceivable. Do you really think it strange that a world in which everything is backwards and upside-down arose from this?

Should be no surprise there. The script that's being used denies truth and therefore, chaos, confusion, inharmony is the only thing left to experience.

For truth brought to THIS could only remain within in quiet, and take no part in all the mad projection by which this world was made.

... that's why peace is so important. That's why choosing for your peace is so important. That's why shutting up and asking, "What is the truth here?" within, is the only way out of the illusion. Because it's in the quiet that truth quietly awaits you ... quietly awaits you.

Call it not sin but madness, ..

... what? The substitution of illusion for truth.

... for such it was, and so it still remains. Invest it not with guilt, ..

and I will say, invest it not with fear. Invest it not with any definitions or meanings you come up with ...

... for guilt implies it was accomplished in reality.

You see? And you can add: but it was not. You see? In every paragraph you will find a confirmation of the fact that delusion hasn't been successful and therefore, you are not in danger, therefore, you are not guilty, irreparably damned because of having succeeded at doing the impossible. You see?

[He did not read: And above all, be not AFRAID of it.] When you seem to see some twisted form of the original error . . .

. . . substituting illusion for truth . . .

. . . [rise] to frighten you, say only, "God is not fear, but love," and it will disappear.

There's a call . . . a call that has always been present, but a call that is more pointed in the present, for you to look at the world and judge it truly, which means judge it after you have silenced your definition-making-mechanism and having asked, "Father, what is the truth here?" Because it's the God's honest truth that is the only thing you want to know. Because there is transformation, reconfiguration and redemption occurring now, here, to be embraced for what it is instead of resisted for what it isn't. And it's your task to find the experience of it through peace instead of reaction, through love instead of through fear.

Again, and I'm not going to yell it out, but peace is the answer. And finding your peace is something that every single one of you is capable of if you choose to. I am saying, be novel and choose to do it. Be irrational in other's eyes and choose to do it, because it's the answer.

The truth will SAVE you. It has not left you, to go out into the mad world and so depart from you. Inward is sanity; insanity is OUTSIDE you. You but BELIEVE it is the other way; that truth is outside, and error and guilt within.

If that were not true, you would look out there and you would recognize what was going on as insanity and not something to base your conclusions on, not something to base your logic and your means of gaining control on.

You've got to stop making what's going on out there your god, whether it's people behaving badly, aggressively, threateningly, whether they are pleased with you or upset with you. Don't make gods of things out there and then govern yourselves according to the definitions you've made.

"Oh, if I do this no one will respect me, so I will not do it!" Wow, quite a script! In other words, you're saying, "I'm going to abandon my integrity because if I engage in it somebody may get upset at me and I don't know if I can take it because what they think of me is the only thing that is important to me . . . whether they respect me or not. Whether they respect me determines whether I'm real." You see?

"They...they...they...determine whether I am real." It's not true. And that's just one of the many idiotic forms that fear takes as a substitute for knowing the truth and governing you in a manner that keeps you in that dark room, where the light hasn't shone yet and there's dust all over the place and there is mess to clean up. But you're not bothered, because you can't see it and you don't even know that it's your Birthright to be seeing it and clean it up! And have an entirely new and different experience of wonder and of beauty and of order and of intelligence and on and on.

You but BELIEVE it is the other way; that truth is outside, . .

. . . your God is outside, that which you should base your best judgments on is out there in what all those crazy people are doing and believing and seeing when they look at you. Uh-oh . . .

[He did not read this: . . . and error and guilt within.] Your little, senseless substitutions, touched with insanity and swirling lightly off on a mad course like feathers dancing insanely in the wind, have NO substance.

But tell me, isn't that much the way you feel when you watch the news and join in with the reaction and then be distressed and unable to sleep at night?

They fuse . . .

. . . the feathers dancing insanely in the wind.

They fuse and merge and separate, in shifting and totally meaningless patterns which need not . . .

. . . what? . .

. . . be judged at all.

They don't require a response from you . . . they do not require a response from you. But Something when you go within and practice the two-step and the holy instant will call upon you for something. And what you are called upon to do and be from there will be transformational.

I tell you, as long as those in your world know that you think that they're God and that you are willing to base everything you do on them, they will take control of you and keep control of you just as you take hold of them and keep control of them.

So:

They fuse and merge and separate, in shifting and totally meaningless patterns which need not be judged at all.

Doesn't matter how much of a show the spinning around is . . . doesn't matter how incredibly complex it is, they require no response from you. You can say, "I have no response to that." That's what's called for, "I have no response to that."

To judge them individually . . .

. . . each little feather, each little sparkle of dust that's spinning around in the sunlight, you know . . .

To judge them individually is pointless. Their tiny differences in form are no real differences at all. NONE of them matters. THAT they have in common, and nothing else. Yet what else is NECESSARY to make them all the same?

You need to find that they're all the same. It doesn't matter what's happening on Wall Street, it doesn't matter what's happening in the clearing houses and the banks, it doesn't matter what governments are doing. These are not the things to be governing the use of your mind by. You're here to be that which brings sanity into the picture because you haven't based your actions and reactions on gods out there.

Transformation, regeneration, redemption . . . this Movement that is inevitably and actually happening is to be participated with consciously by not attempting to control it, but by learning what it is through listening, through becoming humble enough to let truth dawn on you so that you might behave in ways that promote the transformation, regeneration and redemption without eliciting resistance and fear. Resistance and fear will never be elicited when you are not engaged in controlling, period.

Every single one of you resists being controlled. You can't stand it, but you know it's the only way you can create so-called satisfactory situations with your Brothers and Sisters. And so you're conflicted because you believe in using what you don't want used on you. Well, it becomes a complex chess game where you calculate what the fifth move down is going to be so that you can remain safe.

Let them all go, dancing in the wind, dipping and turning till they disappear from sight, far, far outside you. And turn you to the stately calm within, where in holy stillness dwells the living God you never left, and Who never left you.

None of this has succeeded in undoing the presence and action of God.

The Holy Spirit takes you gently by the hand, . .

[chuckling] . . . if you reach out yours to His and say, "What is the truth here? Help me. I do not want to rely on any part of my personal skill that I have designed and created and employed." You reach out and:

The Holy Spirit takes you gently by the hand, and retraces with you your mad journey outside yourself, leading you gently back to the truth and safety within. He . . .

. . . if you invited and are listening and are willing to let it in . . .

. . . brings all your insane projections and your wild substitutions which you have placed outside you to the truth. Thus He reverses the course of insanity, and restores you to reason.

There is a description of the Movement of the holy instant, when you practice it. And that is the foundation for the corrections that are being called for in your world. Because it's time for all the junk to become visible so that you can see that it's there and not fool yourselves into believing that it's not there. And then clean it up. Which it's easy to do in the light and which it's a pleasure to do in the light. Because as you clear out the refuse, as you clear out the junk, the light illuminates the perfection underneath it that it was covering.

Participate in the transformation that is occurring by using your mind well and remembering that your greatest ally and therefore, the greatest ally of the whole world is the conscious choice for peace, because you're finding nothing else more important than peace. Then you will be the script for redemption. And that's your role. That's your function.

I love you. And I look forward to being with you next week.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

November 26th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

It is a time this week on part of your globe for specific attention to be given to Thanksgiving—the expression of gratitude—and specifically, the acknowledgement of the evidences of God's Love that you have experienced since the last Thanksgiving.

Now, I want to point out a principle here tonight. It lies in the statement, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."¹ Now notice, it doesn't say you will find yourself made free and then you will know the truth. No. The principle I'm expressing tonight is that there is an order to this: "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

What does that say? It says that freedom is gained by knowing the truth, which necessarily means that the truth must be known while you lack freedom if the result is going to be the gaining of freedom.

In other words, knowing the truth will be something not easy to do from a state of bondage. To know the truth will make you free but an investment of faith in truth must be expressed when there seems not to be justification for it. Then, in the reception and experience of it, comes the freedom.

This was obviously illustrated when I raised Lazarus. Because everyone was sure he was dead and gone for good. And before I called Lazarus forth, what did I do? I said, "Thank you Father." Ah-h, an expression of gratitude with no justification for gratitude before there was justification for gratitude. "Thank you Father, for I know that Thou hearest me always."²

Faith in the truth had to be expressed before the evidence of it—before its transformational evidence could appear.

Now I want to finesse the word, “Thanksgiving” a little bit before we continue further. Thanksgiving is acknowledgement of truth, isn’t it, acknowledgement of the evidence of the love of God.

We’re going to be reading tonight about Reality. Under the circumstances, the seriousness with which we’ve discussed things over the past short period of time, one might say, this wonderful truth that’s being expressed doesn’t really relate yet—it doesn’t have much meaning yet. Just like truth doesn’t have much meaning to one who is in bondage to error.

Very practical, very important.

We’re going to be talking about Reality while you seem not to be in It, while you seem not to be conscious of It, while you seem not to have the transformational evidence of It. But this is exactly the way It works. And when you find yourself faced with a problem that challenges your faith, that challenges your comprehension of truth, that challenges the idea that you are loved, this is exactly the time that you must bring the acknowledgement of truth into play.

This is why it is essential while you are jailed, while you are limited, while you are suffering, to shut up, to silence your negative confident reactions and ask, “Father, what is the truth here?”

Mind you, because release doesn’t come until after truth is Known, you must seek the Father’s help in Knowing the truth while it seems unjustified, while you seem quite sure under the circumstances that there is no hope, that there is no cause for faith.

But I will tell you something (if you’re willing to remember it at the time when you’re suffering): Some weeks before or perhaps some months before, you were contemplating the truth and it was fully meaningful to you. You were contemplating the truth and you Knew it was the truth. You considered God and you Knew there was a God. In the tightness and the bondage of the moment, you still Know that those things are the truth. It’s just difficult to bring your attention to those facts of truth that you do Know when your inclination is to make a mountain out of illusion—to make the suffering and the bondage more important than the two-step, more important than knowing the truth so that the truth shall make you free. It’s Part 1 and Part 2, the principle of the movement.

So as we read tonight, if what is being read seems airy-fairy or really beautiful but irrelevant or impractical or not particularly helpful—not something you're able to embrace with commitment—remember that considering these things is the first Part: “Ye shall know the truth and . . .” as a result of knowing the truth, “. . . the truth shall set you free.”

Now, knowing the truth isn't a matter of reading these words and reiterating them and saying “I now know the truth.” Reading these words puts you in a place where no contradiction of truth is occurring. But in order to have the experience of what truth is in the moment you're in, as you're about to have your prison door unlocked, you must bring faith and commitment and understand that it's impossible for you to feel the truth of it fully while you're still in the cell. But you must, in order to leave, embrace it while you are there.

Now, as you know, Waking up as a process of the two-step, all revolves around a relationship because you can't get back into the Kingdom of Heaven by yourself. You must have a Brother or a Sister whose eyes you are willing to look into and in spite of your beliefs about him or her and in spite of their beliefs about themselves, you wish only to remember God. You wish only to see God there.

Well, your poor imprisoned state of mind and theirs isn't going to help you a heck of a lot. But there is something that is going to help you one hundred percent. And that is something that it's easy to forget: God loves you. You are God's Self-expression. God regards you always and forever with the same love and honoring and Knowing of the ultimate truth of you that He has of Himself—that He gives to Himself because you Are Him, embodied.

Sometimes it's difficult to remember that. But the way out of the difficulty you're in when you can't remember it, is to consciously choose to remember it, even if initially it seems like a rehearsal of nonsense.

As I said, there have been times just a few weeks ago or a couple of months ago that none of it seemed to be nonsense. And if you remember that, you can remember that you still believe it even if you're not feeling it. And now the movement has begun. Now the shifting of perception is beginning and the way out of the suffering is assured if you persist.

So:

In your relationship, . . .³

. . . that you are intending to treat as a holy relationship so that you might practice the holy instant and remember God in your experience of your Brother . . .

In your relationship, where He . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . has taken charge of everything at your request, He has set the course inward, to the truth you share.

. . . the truth you and your Brother share.

Now mind you, this is important. Because although you're intending to have a holy relationship with your Brother, the way to have it is to join with the Father first or to join with the Holy Spirit first in you so that the truth that God has placed in you as a conscious awareness is remembered because you've chosen to pay attention there. And in the remembering, becomes your understanding, your Knowing of the truth that spontaneously gets extended to your Brother or your Sister. And it works the same with your Brother or Sister.

I say this because you don't want to try to join with each other first before having done the two-step and gone within as it says here:

In your relationship, where . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . [He] has taken charge of everything at your request, He has set the course inward, to the truth you share.

To the place where you have it together, which is not through space and is not one personality dickering with or pleading with or cajoling or encouraging another to change in some way to make the relationship really good. You see? That's not what we're talking about.

In the mad world outside you, nothing can be shared but only substituted, and sharing and substituting have nothing in common in reality.

[repeats] In the mad world outside you, . .

. . . well, let's remember, when you're not in a state of inquiry of desiring to Know and being silent enough to let the Knowing introduce itself to you, then you engage in thinking and reasoning and coming to your own conclusions.

And that's outside of the holy place within you. And that's where illusion is happening.

In the mad world outside you, nothing can be shared but only substituted, and sharing and substituting have nothing in common in reality. Within yourselves you love each other . . .

. . . just as when you're not feeling bound and unable to be grateful, you can remember a few weeks ago or a few months ago when your clarity was with you and you did have confidence and faith. You see?

Within yourselves you love each other with a perfect love.

And when you let yourself give your attention to that, it will re-register with you and begin to transform the unholy, unpleasant relationship to its natural position and nature.

Here is holy ground, . .

. . . in this place that you and your Brother or Sister occupy.

Here is holy ground, in which no substitution can enter, and where only the truth about each other can abide.

There is such a place. But it only registers with you when you shut up. It only registers with you in the silence of your intent to have some other perception. And as I've said before, that seems to require you to abandon authority—to not be in charge. Blessed words, those: "not being in charge."

Here you are joined in God, as much together as you are with Him.

In other words, your experience of Oneness with each other is as clear and as strong as your Oneness with Him, the Father. That's because in the absence of your thinking, in the absence of your willfulness, God's laws prevail. What God is Being prevails as it always has, but now it's not missing your attention.

The original error has not entered here, nor ever will.

That's the truth. It's not there now. Oh, I know, yup, you don't seem to be having a holy relationship, therefore, it has to have entered there. Nope, it hasn't. It's just that you are not choosing to be devoted in your attention to that place where it is. You're devoting yourselves to your best judgments, your best thinking and playing off of each other in that process. And that's why it seems not to be there.

Here is the radiant truth, to which the Holy Spirit has committed your relationship.

You see? The Holy Spirit is there to remind you of the truth that it's being hard for you to believe. Because the Holy Spirit knows that your remembering it is the answer to the problem—constituting the evaporation of the illusions.

Let Him bring it here, where YOU would have it be.

Well, you could say, "Well, I don't know that I would have it be here. You know, it's really hard for me to believe that if I go ahead and trust that that old bitch or that old bastard will really change and won't just take advantage of me in my moment of weakness." You see? And so you write that script and you devote yourself to it. And you don't . . .

Let Him bring it here, . .

. . . the radiant truth . . .

. . . where YOU would have it be.

You'll even forget that that is . . .

. . . where YOU would have it be.

Because on your good days you knew that you wanted it to be there. You see?

Give Him . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . but a little faith in each other, . .

. . . give the Holy Spirit a little bit of faith that you have in your Brother. Present the Holy Spirit with that little bit of faith that you have. That's like saying, "Okay, I'll dare to know the truth. And even though it seems unreasonable, I'll dare to let the truth make me free even though I can't justify it yet."

Give Him but a little faith in each other, to help him show you that no substitute you made for Heaven can keep you from it. In you there IS no separation, . .

. . . even though at the moment it seems that there is.

In you there IS no separation, and no substitute can keep you from each other.

You've got to take that stand while you still seem to be in prison, while you still need to be set free. I promise you, if you don't take this stand, if you don't adopt this position, you will remain stuck until you do. It's the only way out. This is why whining and complaining is useless. "I don't think it'll work. I'm sure it won't work. There's no point in my putting any effort in this." Bullshit! Of course, there is. It's the only way out. So it will work and it will be worth the effort you put into it.

Your reality was God's creation, . .

. . . you know, whatever God creates is Real.

Your reality was God's creation, and HAS no substitute.

What does that mean?

. . . HAS no substitute.

It means that no little imaginary whippersnapper can come along and say, "Well, I'm going to be a different way." No Son of God can come along and say, "I am actually going to pretend to be what I'm not, and I'm going to persist in it until I make it true." There can't be any such substitute. After all isn't it obvious that if a holy Son of God is pretending to be a poor human mortal, it's still a holy Son of God pretending that? Every bit of skill at acting that's brought into play is still brought into play by a holy Son of God, who hasn't stopped being a holy Son of God.

That's why you must remember that, you're neither behind the point of perfection, nor advancing toward it. You're at that point and must understand yourself therefrom. Why? Because that's the only way out.

The only way out is to make a stand for the fact that any attempt that you've made to be what you're not hasn't succeeded—never has succeeded. And therefore, you are at this moment unbound believing you're bound, by choice but not by actuality.

Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free. You will remember that you are neither behind the point of perfection, nor advancing toward it. That you're at that point and you must understand yourself therefrom. And that the truth shall make you free.

You are so firmly joined in truth that only God is there.

You see? And only God has ever been there . . . or here where you are. Your imaginations haven't changed Reality or the Love of God or His Expression of you in one iota. It simply hasn't happened. And your release from any bondage is inevitable when you dare to know the truth first before the freedom is there and when you realize that your expression or your acknowledgement of truth is always more than some intellectual procedure. It's an expression of love, because you are acknowledging truth as thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving isn't a politeness. Thanksgiving is an acknowledgement of truth—a result of truth recognized, a result of having chosen to Know the truth. You see?

You are so firmly joined in truth that only God is there. And He would never accept something else instead of you.

You've tried to create something else instead of you and you've tried to adopt that sense of self as actually being you. But you can't do it. And besides, God would never accept something else instead of you no matter how well you presented it. That's how Loved you are. And that's how safe you are and that's how sure your transformation, regeneration and redemption are. You see, although you may not be experiencing it, this is the good news. And this is the justification for gratitude . . . this is the justification for what is truly thankfulness.

He loves you both, . .

. . . you and this one you have chosen to be the one whose eyes you will look into and remember God.

He loves you both, equally and as one. And as He loves you, so you ARE.

Again, you may not be feeling it, but that is what you ARE.

You are not joined together in illusions, . .

. . . illusions only separate you.

You are not joined together in illusions, but in the Thought so holy and so perfect that illusions cannot remain to darken the holy place in which you stand together.

Now, these are words you should be reading in the context of thanksgiving, in the context of giving some focused attention and intention to see the truth that holds you in the perfection of God's Love and in the perfectness of His law's that prevail when you're willing to know the truth before the truth sets you free.

God is with you, my brothers.

He is.

Let us join in Him in peace and gratitude, and accept His gift as our most holy and perfect reality, which we share in Him.

Now, obviously when you have an investment in getting even with a Brother or Sister, when you have an investment in besting him or her, when you have an investment in controlling him, peace and gratitude are unavailable—two things essential to Waking up, two things essential to your regaining your sanity.

Let us join in Him in peace and gratitude, and accept His gift as our most holy and perfect reality, which we share in Him.

That has to be your goal while you are with your Brother. This has to be the presence of mind and the attitude which you must be exercising while you are with your Brother. If peace and gratitude are essential, then be intelligent and cut the crap! Stop generating fear! Stop arousing anger! Stop trying to get even! Stop going for justice! Those don't do it. Peace and gratitude do.

And you know what? It's not your Brother you'll have a hard time getting past in this process, it's your own insistence upon your right to have it your way when you want it.

You know, the simple abandonment of an activity can cause you to Wake up, can cause you to be the one who sets the whole world on a path of more obvious transformation and regeneration and redemption. That's all . . . just neglecting to do something that you can neglect to do. But it will require you to stop valuing your right to do it. And to stop fooling yourself into thinking that your doing it is going to give you the credibility that is needed in order to fulfill your destiny.

No matter how glorifying and gratifying you describe the process, it's something that doesn't work. And so you can simply neglect to do it anymore. You see?

Now I'm going to stop here for this evening because although what I've discussed is simple, it is significant. It is something to not move past too quickly. It's something to spend time with, to embrace in the quietness so that in the quietness you might find yourself able to allow even greater quietness, even greater peace and even greater opportunity for gratitude than you've been able to achieve so far.

This is so important. It is so beautiful. And the acknowledgement of its truth constitutes an expression of gratitude that embraces everything—blesses everything—and in the process you get to keep the blessing.

May you feel the Love that embraces you. And may you let yourself neglect to do the things that keep you from feeling it.

I love you. I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next week.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

December 4th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Some time ago, we read that your attention is God's treasure. These are not just nice words, it's a profound statement of impactful fact, let's put it that way. In other words, it is significant, not just as an idea but as an embodied fact about you.

Your attention is God's treasure. And giving your attention to the Father is your salvation.

That is the simplicity of A Course In Miracles. That is the Lesson of the Course. And at the bottom line, that's the Alpha and Omega of the learning of the Course.

We've been giving a lot of attention to the two-step, to the holy instant and the fact that Waking up through the utilization of the holy instant is not something you can do alone. You must do it relative to a Brother, a Sister, some part of Creation.

Now when you become still for the purpose of abandoning your thought processes, your reasoning, your means of coming to conclusions and basing actions upon them, when you choose to abandon that and become still and you ask for Guidance, you ask to know the truth, you ask to have it uncovered to you and you have it uncovered to you, in so many words, you hear the Father's Voice. You have had an experience of what could be called, "the Living Waters," the present original Movement of Creation as an experience having nothing whatsoever to do with memory, having nothing whatsoever to do with all of the things you taught yourself, all the things you made up, all the agreements you made with each other.

Let me put it this way: If in your daily activities you are engaging in everything from your memory, you are not engaging in everything from the place of the Living Waters—of the spontaneous original Movement of Creation now...now...now...now...now. And if you are not connected with the Living Waters, if you are not gathering your experience of Being from the present Movement of Creation, then you're still asleep. Nothing meaningful is happening because you are disconnected from God's Perspective. You are disconnected from what it is your Birthright to be experiencing as the expression of God now...now...now...now, the embodiment of His Perspective now...now...now...now.

Of course, if you're going to rely upon memory because it's convenient and you've done it for so long that you're very familiar with it and it gives you a feeling of security, you are, as in the movie "Inception," functioning from a level other than Reality. It's not what you want to be doing. It's not where actuality is happening. It's not where transformation can occur and it's not the means by which you can step out of the level of memory and old habits that you need to be able to do, because you were not created to be at some other level than Reality. You were not meant to be functioning at a level other than where the Living Waters, the vitality of the present tense Creation of God and His Perspective is your true perspective—that which is your Birthright as God's Expression.

And so, you know, no matter how well you might think you're able to function at some other level than the level of the Living Waters, you're in a dream, you're not in Reality. And no matter how harmonious it seems to be, no matter how productive it seems to be, you're still asleep. It's still a dream.

Now, someone needs to come along with a larger perspective or a perspective from a level other than the level of dreams. Someone from the level of the Living Waters must tell you that you're dreaming and must get your attention significantly enough to cause you to genuinely look again and not just brush it aside as fanciful thinking. That's not of any value to you. Because, you know, the things that you have developed on the level of dreams that you're on, oh, those things have been developed so well and you have so much evidence of their value that there's no justification for leaving it.

I will tell you that as long as there's sin, sickness and death occurring, there's justification for looking again, there's justification for challenging the perspective you're using to engage in Being everyday.

Now, after our get-together last week, many of you I'm sure, with sincerity began to implement what we talked about—the bringing of gratitude into play before there seems to be justification for gratitude. The wanting to know the God's honest truth in the face of challenges that seem to say to you that "there is no God and there is no answer and sin, disease and death are what absolutely govern existence at the bottom line." And many of you had the experience of transformation occurring because you had faith in truth before the justification was there.

Now I know there were others as well who simply felt that they could do well enough without being joined at the level of the Living Waters, that their capacities or their capabilities were quite adequate to cope with things and found that perhaps, unlike before, there was a lot more misery involved in that practice and that the more you persisted in it through the week, the more rugged it got and there was no peace. Following all the rules you created at that level of dreams brought no peace, at least not like it used to. And it seemed to aggravate your existence far beyond what the circumstances seem to call for. But of course, the circumstances "out there" weren't what was governing. It was the fact that you were insisting upon choosing to function at a level where the Living Water of Reality was not available to you.

Now, if you have a choice between going to the Altar right in the middle of you—the holy place right in the middle of you—and desiring to know of the Father what the truth is, or desiring to know of the Holy Spirit what the truth is, if that act is what guarantees you release from sin, sickness and death, then why not do it? If the premise seems too fantastic, too unreasonable, why not try it anyway if indeed the promise is that you will get release from sin, sickness and death? Why not be practical enough to make a decision with your Guide or with the Holy Spirit or with the Father—an inner commitment that you make—to seriously practice what the holy instant really means. There's no reason not to.

It's such a simple step. It's such a simple way out of illusion. Maybe nobody knew about it before. But I keep bringing it up. And in one way or another, the Course keeps saying it.

So you're getting exposed to the idea. You're no longer ignorant of the possibility. And if you're willing to trust me, you're no longer ignorant of the actuality because I'm telling you it is the way out. It is the way out into your freedom to experience the Kingdom of Heaven without going anywhere—without having to die to get there.

Now, going into the book:

Heaven is restored to all the Sonship through your relationship, for in it lies the Sonship, whole and beautiful, safe in your love.¹

. . . your relationship with your Brother or Sister. Your relationship with your Brother or Sister which you embraced and bore witness to the truth of by virtue of turning to the Father first before looking at your Brother or Sister, to want to know the truth about your Brother or Sister. And in having that revealed to you by the Father, discovering the holiness of your Brother or Sister and by virtue of the awareness in you, acknowledging it in them without reservation because you Know the truth about your Brother or Sister.

Now . . . you know, when you get up on the wrong side of the bed and you have a really negative attitude and you look ahead at your day or you look out the window, or you look at your wife or husband or the dog—nothing looks good! It's all a chore . . . nothing good can come of it.

But on the other hand, if you wake up and you have a chipper attitude and you look out the window or you look at your husband or wife or your dog or your cat, why everything you're looking at is a promise of joy, is a promise of pleasure, a promise of satisfaction . . . a promise of peace.

So when it says that . . .

Heaven is restored to all the Sonship through your relationship . .

. . . with the one you're in a holy relationship with, but that the whole Sonship, Heaven is restored to the whole Sonship. Yes! . . that's like getting up in a dark murky attitude and having something happen to you, perhaps as you've only walked two steps from the edge of your bed, and your vision has changed and all of a sudden, everything you look at is a promise of joy. Well, in the transition, in your holy relationship, your perspective changes. You have let the Father's Perspective infill you and you've let It be yours by not resisting It, not claiming a right to another perspective. And as a result, the whole world is restored, we'll say, to the Kingdom of Heaven.

Just because you found one someone worthy of abandoning your right to think for yourself and come to your own conclusions and manage to gain control so that you can manipulate even for the most lofty reasons. Of course everything I've just described is going on at some other level than the level of Reality—the level of the Living Waters. And so, none of it's going on, not as an actuality and you're still asleep.

Nevertheless,

Heaven is restored to all [all] the Sonship . . .

. . . the experience of Reality is returned to all that you see . . .

. . . through your relationship through your relationship, for in it lies the Sonship, . .

. . . in your perspective, in your purview, lies all of everything to be seen clearly through your enlightened perspective or to be seen through a glass darkly—miserably. It's just a choice between two points of view. It's a choice between two apparent levels: The level of Living Waters or the level of illusions—dreams.

Heaven has entered quietly, for all illusions have been gently brought unto the truth in you, and love has shined upon you, . .

. . . you see? In your willingness to give your attention at the level of the Living Waters, . .

. . . all illusions have been gently brought unto to the truth in you, and love has shined upon you blessing your relationship with truth. God and His whole creation have entered it together.

"Ah-h . . . I know, Paul can do it, Joe can do it, so-in-so can do it, but you know I've tried and tried and tried, but I don't hear a thing . . ."

Well, don't use that script! Persist! Because there is a God and you're not alone. And you're not just a mortal, you're a divine Son of God. And all of your knowledge of who you Are, divinely speaking, as the Father is Being you at this very moment is held in trust by the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind held in trust while you pretend to be on a different level disconnected from the level of Living Water and somehow find meaning in saying, "On this level, I cannot get in touch with my Guide. Any awareness I'm supposed to have of my divinity and any capacity to embody it . . . no way! It can't be experienced here. That is my word." Or you could say that is your script.

If you want to rehearse that script, go ahead but it's going to hurt just as it has hurt all along.

Now, . .

How lovely and how holy is your relationship, with the truth shining upon it!

When your attention is God's treasure and you've given your attention to Him, and as a result of giving preference to that place of attentiveness, rather than you, you find yourself infilled—truth shines upon you and the one you're in a holy relationship with. Heaven beholds it and rejoices that you have let it come to you. Another way of saying that is that all of the Brotherhood beholds it. Every single one of us are all in conscious connection with all of you constantly. And those of you who are sleeping are experienced as an emptiness that is obviously false. And what that means is that it's clear to us that it's not an emptiness—you are ignoring us. You are consciously choosing to do something other than experience your right Mind and experience Reality. But we behold it.

And when you let the light of truth come to you, we know it! And we do rejoice! It is a joy because we're waiting for you. You could say we're waiting for you to join the party, we're waiting for you to join Reality and share it equally with us where we all Know that we Know.

You better believe that even when you are sitting conscientiously trying to get in touch with your Guide and you seem to be having no luck, that is a joy to us. Because you are bringing your attention to bear upon a place that you believe is dense enough to block your way when it isn't. And we know that if you will persist and not succumb to the idea that what you're pushing against is actually dense enough to cause you to fail in this effort, you will break through! It is inevitable!

And so I tell of this so that you might find even more justification for persisting. Because if this is the answer, if your attention is God's treasure and if you're giving your attention to God so that you can hear the truth is your salvation, then the practice of the holy instant is absolutely assured in its success.

The logic of what I'm saying can support you in your persistence. But I would rather have you rely upon the Love that I'm embracing you with as I share this because it's even more powerful in your transformation than logic.

The universe within you stands with you, together.

It doesn't just stand with you observing you . . . "hmm . . . yes, I see, yes I see what you are doing . . . I see where you are, you're with me . . . um . . . bout two feet over . . . uh-huh . . . you're a little shorter than I am . . . uh-huh . . ."

That's not being together! That's being separate and observing!

The universe within you stands with you together—really together—without anything separating you, without the slightest dividing line, without the thinnest gauze fabric between you. It's One.

And Heaven looks with love on what is joined in it, . .

. . . see? It's an experience of Meaning. It feels like something and it feels divine. And you're going to have this feeling of divinity and perfection right here without dying to go to another place called "Heaven."

So, right now? . . later on?

Every moment you're in constitutes a threshold, a place for the holy instant to work and for you to be transformed, and for you to become so clear about your Brothers or your Brother or Sister with whom you're engaging in a holy relationship, for you to recognize unequivocally that one's divinity and, as I've said before, in that experience recognizing yours, and in those two recognitions, remembering God. Wow! That's the perspective through which you will look at everything and find that everything has been brought into alignment in your mind with the truth, with the Heaven that it is.

Now, all of this requires trust. If you're not going to rely upon memory, if you're not going to rely upon everything you've ever known and even the newest things that are supposed to be even more practical, more powerful, more beneficial and give you more leverage to succeed, when you abandon that you abandon what you think is your security. And you say that I'm asking you to lean into the unknown, that I'm asking you to lean into the "Living Waters," whatever the hell they are, "Oh yeah, the 'Living Waters,' yes, uh-um . . . the conscious awareness of truth, the Father's Perspective, whatever the hell that means."

I know, some of you graciously doubt and some of you ungraciously doubt. In other words, you have different degrees of objection that you bring into play. But the simple fact is, that you're going to have to arrive at a point where you are willing, where you find significantly enough justification, because you care about your Brother or Sister more than you do to hold onto your best judgments and your supposed capacity to think on your own. Do you see?

Whom God has called should hear no substitutes.

Substitutes, like we talked about the fact last week: That God accepts no substitutes. You are His Son. You are His Daughter. Who you have decided you are, who you have decided you want to be is a substitute you're placing between the Father and the Real You. You're choosing to be something the Father didn't Create. No, you're choosing to pretend that you have become something the Father wouldn't Create or couldn't Create and that would be a substitute for the Father's Son or Daughter. Well:

Whom God has called should hear no substitutes.

Not even the substitute you. Not even the substitute neighbor that you have made up as well. Not any of the substitutes that take place of what God is Really being right here and right now.

Whom God has called . . .

. . . in other words, when you practice the two-step and you hear the Voice of God . . . you hear the Holy Spirit—the Voice for God—and you discover the truth, you're called by God. You're called into Awakeness. You're called into being conscious.

Whom God has called should hear no substitutes.

You should no longer hear any of the substitutes that you have made up.

Their call . . .

. . . if you do still hear them . . .

. . . is but an echo of the original error which shattered Heaven.

"Oh, but Father, I'd rather see it my way. Father, I'd rather do it myself. Father, I want a divorce." By making an artificial division in that which can't be divided, it shattered, we'll say, the peace of Heaven. It shattered the conscious experience of what Heaven is, because you immediately began creating substitutes for the meanings the Father had given everything.

Their call . . .

. . . the call of substitutes . . .

. . . is but an echo of the original error which shattered Heaven.
And what became of peace in those who heard?

. . . in those who heard the call for substitutes? What became of peace? Well, you know, you lost it. And you just have fragments or wisps of peace that drift in and out, sometimes slowly and sometimes quickly, but always leaving you at a disadvantage and never leaving you in a state of stability and confident safety.

Return with me . . .

. . . all of you who made substitutes.

Return with me . . .

. . . all of you who are still hearing the call of substitutes, even though your attention is being given in my direction—in the direction of the Father.

Return with me to Heaven, walking together out of this world . . .

. . . we could say, walking together out of this level of dreaming.

Return with me to Heaven, walking together out of this world and through another to the loveliness and joy the other holds within it.

That's what I'm here for . . . to say, "Come on, come with me, join me." And at the bottom line, that's what your right Mind does and is saying as well—the Holy Spirit is.

Return with me to Heaven, walking together . . .

. . . you see, together. You're not going to be able to do it by yourself. You're going to want to stand at the place of the unknown—at the point of the unknown—where the Living Waters are coming forth that have never come forth before, so that everything you experience and say is utterly original and not one speck of it comes from memory, in other words, from the past.

Return with me to Heaven, walking together out of this world and through another to the loveliness and joy the other holds within it. Would you still further weaken and break apart what is already broken and hopeless?

In other words, do you want to stay in this other level of dream and manipulate the hell out of it further, thinking your accomplishing something and by virtue of the accomplishment proving that you're a valid presence, even though you are part of the dream at that level because you're unconscious. You are not standing with an inquisitive mind at the threshold of what you do not know—at the level of the Living Waters—where what comes through, what is experienced is hopelessly original in that moment because you are standing with God at the point of Creation where the new emerges.

Would you still further weaken and break apart what is already broken and hopeless? Is it here that you would look for happiness?

No, you're tired of that. I promise you, you're tired of that! This is not fun. You haven't been having fun. Do you hear that? You haven't been having fun. You haven't been experiencing joy. You haven't been experiencing safety. You haven't been experiencing invulnerability and all the blessings of it—the absence of guilt, the absence of unforgiving fear.

Is it here that you would look for happiness?

We know that that's not really what you want to do.

Or would you not prefer to heal what has been broken, and join in making whole what has been ravaged by separation and disease?

Stop being willing to settle for mediocrity or worse. You don't have to. In fact you're obligated by the nature of what you Are to do the opposite. Reach out beyond what you think is possible. Reach out beyond the level of memories and convictions built upon those memories so that you might stand at the edge of the unknown where the Living Waters pour forth into expression as your conscious experience of Being.

You have been called, . .

. . . you have. Now don't get egotistical here: You have been called . . . you above all others have been called or even if it's not above all others, you have been called and that obviously makes you a little bit special.

You want to know something? The moment you decided to behave as though you were out of your mind, to behave as though you had a mind that wasn't God's possession and attention that it wasn't God's treasure to have, the moment you thought you would adopt that attitude and the split occurred and your right Mind seemed to be unavailable to you, [snaps fingers] at that moment, it started calling for you. It started saying, "You can't accomplish the impossible. You can't accomplish what you are doing. Listen for My Voice and I will bring you back into your sanity." So you have been called. And you have been called since the moment you decided to get a divorce from your Father.

You have been called, together, to the most holy function that this world contains.

Now that sounds wonderful. But please understand that the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind calling you to come back into the full possession of your Mind—is calling you to engage in a most holy function: To be the Son or Daughter of God that you actually Are.

You have been called, together, . .

. . . the two of you who have joined in a holy relationship successfully . . .

. . . to the most holy function that this world contains.

Now if that's not a goal worthy of anyone's attention I don't know what is, especially since it is utterly simple.

It is the only one which has no limits, and reaches out to every broken fragment of the Sonship with healing and uniting comfort.

I know, you're too busy being miserable and you're too busy getting even for the discomfort that's been inflicted upon you. But you have a holy function, . .

. . . one which has no limits, and reaches out to every broken fragment . . .

. . . like with compassion, with caring. Not with manipulation, not with trying to get the better of another one, with love . . .

. . . reaches out to every broken fragment of the Sonship with healing and uniting comfort. This is offered YOU, in your holy relationship. Accept it here, and you will give as you have accepted.

When you wake up in the morning with a chipper attitude and you look out, you give that chipper attitude. You don't even stop and think about it, "Oh, I'm going to give some of my chipper attitude to that Robin over there. Oh, I'm going to give some of it to that flower over there. Oh, I'm going to give it to this beautiful sky." No, you have a chipper attitude and it just colors your experience of everything.

The holy experience of the holy relationship colors every aspect of your experience—it's given to every aspect of your experience. You can't help but do it and it becomes your activity. And there's no effort to it because you didn't do it. It just happened. That's the marvel of it.

And what I'm saying is true of everyone. The holy instant is for everyone to practice and for everyone to succeed at without qualification.

The peace of God is given you . . .

. . . and when you receive it and feel it, it's given everyone else by you.

The peace of God is given you with the glowing purpose in which you join. The holy light that brought you together must extend, . .

. . . no choice about it. It must. It does . . .

. . . as YOU accepted it.

Now, I need to throw you off balance a little bit, because you will tend to take what I've said this evening and let it fit into preconceptions you have. And that's not going into the holy instant at the level of the Living Waters where you don't know. Any preconceptions you bring with you, you bring with you to give yourself a sense of balance while you're doing this thing, where you are going to lose your balance by stepping into the unknown and letting that which you've never heard before be revealed to you. You don't know what doing this is going to look like. You don't know what you're going to do.

We certainly have broached upon the subject of that dirty word "involvement," where you love your Brother or Sister enough to be present with him or her in the middle of injustice or in the middle of chaos and care enough to find a way to look at them and remember God so you can bare witness to the truth about them.

Now, Spring is—even though it is Winter now—Spring is busting out all over on your globe. Brother and Sister are looking at each other and remembering that they have a voice. You know, when things go along relatively smoothly . . . relatively smoothly, and there are no great demands upon everyone, everyone can become complacent, relax, I'm going to say, too much. Meaning, relax to the point of forgetting Birthrights, relaxing to the point where there's no need to make demands for everything or for anything because basically everything is running rather smoothly.

But in the process one can forget that one has a voice. One can forget that there is a need to bear witness for your Brother or your Sister. There is a need in the middle of crisis, in the middle of injustice no matter who seems to have started it, there is a need to let your Brother or Sister be enough justification for you to say, "Father, what is the truth here? Father, what is needed here?" And then if, through the movement of the Living Waters in you, you find that you need to go out and throw some rocks or stand firmly against an onslaught of injustice coming in the form of unjust preservation of law, if you find that you need to occupy someone's backyard whose house is being inappropriately taken away from them, if you find that you need to stand with others and say, "No!" even though you think it's impossible because of course, it's the government, it's the financial system, it's the setup itself . . . you can't do anything about it. Well, it's not true.

You may find yourself called upon as a practice of the holy instant and as a practice of establishing holy relationships, that you will do uncommon things in acts that elicit respect for human decency, that stand in respect of Brothers and Sisters who, because they really are the Sons and Daughters of God, do not deserve to be fooled into thinking that they must just roll over and be taken advantage of without any experience of Brotherhood being expressed, where one stands with another, where many stand with many others witnessing for the truth, witnessing for justice, witnessing for safety, witnessing for no more threat, witnessing for no more greed at the expense of others.

Beautiful words we read tonight. You never know what the practical application of them will be and don't be afraid of it. And by all means realize that when you dare to engage in the holy instant—the level of the Living Waters—your life is going to become exciting, interesting, stimulated by that which brings forth the best, that which is transformational, that which will be a source of joy.

And thank God you can't know ahead of time what it is and what it's going to look like, because if you did you would limit it terribly.

I love you all. Remember, the practice of the holy instant is a kick-ass activity in the best meaning of those words. Embrace it.

I love you again. And I look forward to being with you next time.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

December 11th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I love you. I love all of you. It is the purpose of my Being to love you—every single one of you. It is the purpose of my Being to love you in such a way that you remember who you Are, and that you are not who you are pretending to be.

It is the purpose of my Being to love you so that all resistance to who you divinely Are evaporates because you feel safe. That's the purpose of my Being. That was the purpose of my Being on what you call, "The First Christmas." The birth of the Christ Child as it was seen was an introduction into a world very much like the one you are experiencing today. It was a world of political domination, of caste systems, of groups—you know, of Romans and the Jews and others.

And the Romans dominated. And those whom they dominated suffered, griped and experienced a great faith within them that a savior would come to release them from this domination.

Today domination by governments is rampant. As unfair as it was two thousand years ago, the behavior that subjects mankind to unfairness, injustice, bad treatment, constitutes a call for love just like it did two thousand years ago.

And a call for love is being answered. The call for Love is being answered by a book called A Course in Miracles, by those who listen to the Holy Spirit and respond to their Brothers and Sisters from there—and by me.

Here you are in a Season designed to express love, affection, caring, the Season, you might say, in which abundance is appropriate so that the joy of sharing can be easily done—easily had.

But no, austerity is the theme and the lifting of austerity into a position of “beneficence” as though it is the answer to lack, not love. And austerity, as you all know, whether it’s forced upon you or chosen by you, is an experience of suffering. It is not an experience that has ever led to abundance. It is not a practice that has ever led to a spontaneous expression of love or joy.

It is a practice that needs to stop because it stands in opposition to the nature of Being.

Divine love always has met and always will meet every human need. It’s easy to forget that. It’s necessary to remember it on purpose.

Now as you proceed during the next few weeks here, you’re liable to experience stress, concern, worry and involuntary experience of vulnerability as a result of lack. And as a result of the fact that this Season calls for something that seems not to be available and which calls for something else to be practiced, the something that seems not to be available is abundance: Abundance of joy, abundance of cash, abundance of caring.

And what does seem to be called for is to accept that you don’t have, to accept that there is lack and that you’re going to have to “bite the bullet” and live with it. And that somehow that practice of, “Oh-h . . . a rod up your backbone and a stiff upper lip” is somehow going to spontaneously produce joy, the free-flow of a willingness to dare to give.

And you know what? It’s not appropriate . . . it’s not at all appropriate to go through the next few weeks operating on that basis. And it’s not appropriate even after that to operate on that basis. If you operate on that basis, then you’re calling what is happening, “a call for hurt—a call for suffering” not a call for love, not a call for healing.

And you can’t afford to forget that whatever is happening that seems to be less than the best is only a call for love.

What is it a call for? It’s a call for you to be me. It’s a call for you, today, in the world that you’re living in, to be the one who looks at your Brother and remembers the Father just as two thousand years ago it was my purpose for Being: To look at my Brothers and remember my Father and give Voice to what my Father was Being so that my Brothers who had forgotten might remember and might be inspired by the truth, rather than assuming that domination, limitation, lack, was life, . . . and one must simply make the best of it.

That was not my Message, was it. And that’s not the message called for today.

Between now and the end of the Holidays, you're going to be provided with ample opportunities to respond to the call for love, as though it is a call for love. So that it causes you to reach beyond appearances and beyond your surface reactions to a depth in you, in the holiness of you, where the love that you Are, the love that the Father is Being in you, has a chance to slip forward, not with great effort, not with great strain, but to just slip forward out to the surface, out to your relationship with your Brother or your Sister so that you become an expression of God. And you fulfill your purpose for Being which is to give Voice to the Voice for truth—the Voice for God because austerity is not the answer.

Austerity isn't what is called for. Austerity is not what everyone deserves. Because there isn't a single one of you anywhere on your globe who is not the Son or Daughter of God, utterly and absolutely divine, who has a divine Birthright.

I know, I've said this over and over again. But you know when you come to a Season, we'll say, the purpose of which is to remind everyone of God's Love, and everyone forgets that because it's so strenuous, and everybody is trying to live up to everyone's expectations and can't . . . and labors and labors and labors and then feels guilty for not being able to perform, Oh-h, this is not your Birthright.

Now if you find yourself beginning to feel depressed, sad, and you can't quite put your finger on why, I want you to be alert. I want you to treat that as a red flag. I want you to treat that as though, instead of being a problem to be suffered from, it is a call for love which you are to be blessed by because in the caring enough to dig deeply for that Love and share it, you become inspired with it as well. And you give Voice to the Father. You give Voice to the divine purpose of Being. And I mean the divine purpose of being right here on planet Earth, today, tonight, tomorrow.

Many of you walk through the stores and hear the Christmas Carols and hear the word "jolly" and "merry" and it seems empty. Don't let it become empty . . . don't let it become empty. Catch yourself when you begin to agree with that thought.

And then, you know what? I want you to notice the children that are there where the music is playing and where all the Christmas festivities are, and look at the twinkle in their eyes. They don't have any trouble seeing the merry in Christmas. Let them be your teachers. Don't stand there and say, "Well they haven't had enough life experience to know that all of this means nothing," even though next year if you have abundance and you have health you will see the merry in it and you will enjoy the merry in it, because your perception this year is colored temporarily.

And why is it colored? It's not because there are austerity programs. It's not because there are governments who aren't governing fairly and well. It's because you've forgotten to do the two-step . . . you've forgotten to do what you're here to do.

Can you imagine if the Christ Child was born into a world of unfairness, political unfairness, governmental, religious unfairness and slowly began to say, "Wow, this is an awful world." You tell me what good it would be for the Christ to appear "in the human condition" and forget why He was there. And then imagine yourself as one of those who need the Christ to appear, who need the inspiration and you will begin to be able to grasp with feeling just how valuable your position is to your Brothers and Sisters and even globally, because the inspiration that heals is what is being called for.

Gripping, suffering, putting up with terror, just living with the awfulness of it is, well, it's to fall prey to ignorance. And once having fallen prey to it, causing it to seem to be an active evil, destructive. Well, that's not what you're here for. And you have to remember what you're here for. And then you have to remember that what you're here for is possible for you. You have the capacity to be the holy Son or Daughter of God because that is who you Are.

And you also have the capacity to override the belief structures, the mutual agreements that you've all entered into that cover over and absolutely hide your divinity and your potential. You have the capacity to override it.

Take time during this Holiday Season to be diligent and override the invitations you constantly feel to join in suffering, in lack, in poverty, in stuckness and disagree with it!

You are here to share the love with your Brothers and Sisters actively, concertedly, just as you are being loved by your Father, by the Holy Spirit and by me. You are here to remember the joyful sound and share it. You're here to represent God by claiming your Birthright received from Him and insisting on exercising no other rights that you imagine you might have.

Gee, it would have been nice—"I'm supposed to be the Christ"—to have been born into a time when it's easy to be the Christ. Well you know what? The time and the place where it's easy to do that is the Kingdom of Heaven. And that's not what you seem to be experiencing at the moment. And so, because it isn't what you're experiencing at the moment—even though it is the actuality of what is going on in the moment—you have a task and a responsibility which you are capable of fulfilling. And that is to be the Christ when it doesn't seem to be easy to look into your Brother's eyes and remember God, when the last thing your Brother feels like doing is remembering God because he is so full of suffering from the austerity program or the lack or the unemployment or on and on and on.

Nevertheless, your purpose remains unchanged and the potential for your experiencing joy, you stand at the threshold of, absolutely. And so I'm encouraging you not to shrink from the opportunity, which you might be seeing as an obligation—a hard job.

You know what? Every single one of you are worth my full attention: My task, if you will, of bringing my full attention to you for the purpose of seeing who you divinely Are, instead of who you believe you are, and then stand with you steadfastly until the truth of who you Are registers with you. That's why there was a Christmas morning. That's why there's a Christmas morning this year. And that's why there's every other morning this year, because there's only one thing to do and that is Wake up and end the experience of suffering because you already Are the Sons and Daughters of God.

And because you already Are, you need do nothing to deserve the experience, you need do nothing to earn the experience. Not having it is not a penalty laid upon you, but an experience of lack laid upon you by yourself in your choice to have a different perspective from the Father and to have a function different from the holy function established in you for the purpose of your joy and your fulfillment.

The call for love is presenting itself all over your globe. At the bottom line, it's a call for humanity . . . it's a call for loving your Brother more than you love yourself.

Let the meaning of these Holidays in and out. And remember that all of the wonderful words associated with Christmas: Joy, laughter, merriness, holiness, that God loves you, all of these things are the things which need to be given voice—and not their opposite—expressed with conviction and commitment. You're not here to give voice to the lie. You're here to give voice to the truth. You're here, as I am, to give place, you might say, to the Father.

In doing that you fulfill your function. And in doing that you see the Father's function in your Brothers and Sisters. And this blesses and heals them and you as well.

That's the business of Christmas. Let's all be about it.

Again, I love you all. And I see all the things you see that are going on. I see all the corruption. I see all of the lack. I see all the mean-spiritedness. I see all the manipulation and control. But you know what? I haven't lost my joy. And it hasn't caused me to forget who all of you Are, who are in one way or another indulging in this corruption and mean-spiritedness and negativity and so on. It hasn't caused me to see you any differently. And it hasn't caused me to stop speaking, and telling you who you divinely Are. That's your task as well . . . that's your wonderful task as well. Practice it and enjoy the spirit and meaning of Christmas.

I love you. I love you all.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

December 20th 2011

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

You know, there was a reason that something came upon a midnight clear. There was a reason that the Christ child was born. And it was for something more than conveying to everyone that there was a God that loved them while they were experiencing relative misery. There was more reason to it than to make it halfway comfortable without changing the miserable ongoing experience called, "the human condition."

Everyone has used the Christmas story. Everyone has used my life as a way to make the human condition more comfortable without realizing that the whole point of my showing up was to convey something that would cause an "ah-ha"—a realization that the human condition was not your Birthright and was not what was natural to you and that it was to come to an end. That it was to be transformed—that your experience of being was to be transformed.

You know, I said, "If you have seen me, you have seen the Father."¹

And I conveyed that "Those things that I have done you would do and greater things."² Why? A special gift to a poor mortal? No! Because you're my Brothers and your my Sisters. We are family and we have the same Father. We have the same inheritance. You were not short-changed by the Father while I was given everything.

I came to transform your minds by presenting something that the experiences of your ancestors weren't able to give you. They weren't able to give you the steps out of the dream—the steps out of the human condition—and yet, that's your Birthright. And I came to present you with it . . . to change your minds.

Now, what we are going to be talking about tonight describes the Christmas Gift . . . describes the Gift I came to give. It tells you how to step out of the dream. It helps you understand that you're not bound, and how to step out of the dream.

It wasn't meant for you to not get the point for two thousand and twelve years. It was meant for you to get the point when I was there—when I was with you on the planet, while I was talking with you. And it is the message that was supposed to get through with anyone who managed to become defenseless enough to hear my voice down through the two thousand and twelve years . . . so that what? [snaps fingers] you didn't have to wait until two thousand twelve to Wake up! You see?

The reason I came was to promote change. The reason I came was to help inspire in you the desire to change, and not just continue to repeat your ancestors' patterns and thoughts and concepts.

Now, if indeed I came to teach you something, it means that you were capable of being taught. It means that you have always been capable of grasping what I am saying. It's always been possible for you to grasp the Meaning of the Love you are embraced with by the Father. A Love which, when you let yourself feel It, inspires you out of your limited concepts—out of your willingness to just suffer through the human condition with the inspiration that you let yourself have by virtue of thinking about Christmas . . . thinking about the birth of the Christ . . . thinking about the things that I said.

You're not to make suffering more palatable by means of what I shared. You're supposed to let the things I shared [snaps fingers] lift you out of it—out of the suffering, out the human condition—and into the conscious experience of what? The Kingdom of Heaven and your holiness, that's what.

And you know what? You don't have to wait until two thousand twelve to do It. It can be tonight. It can be tomorrow night.

The Gift of Awakening isn't going to be given to you in two thousand twelve. The Gift of Awakening was given to you by the Father, in His Creation of You. And it was emphasized, it was embellished, it was shared more completely when I joined you, apparently in your dream, and gave you what it took to Wake up. And I'm here tonight and the Course is with you every day, every night for you to refer to and remind yourself.

So let's remember, you might say, that what we're going to discuss tonight was the whole reason there was a manger scene . . . the whole reason there were wise men . . . the whole reason that there was my life and my teaching and my involvement with my Brothers and Sisters.

This is a holy instant. This is an instant in which the holiness of Being, which it was my purpose to remind you of two thousand eleven years ago. So let's not let the holiness of the instant we're in escape us.

Now, (just a moment) . . . we're in a new section called:

THE BASIS OF THE DREAM ³

Well, without reading, after all the discussions we've had together, what do you think the basis of the dream would be? What is the basis of the experience of illusion that you have been taught you are in the middle of?

The basis of the dream is the decision you made to get a divorce from your Father. In other words, the basis for the dream is an imagination that you can exist independently in your own right, coupled with a decision to enact that with commitment. Such commitment, that it caused you to neglect to remember, in other words, to forget your holiness, your Birthright, Who your Father/Mother is, and the experience of the Kingdom of Heaven.

In its place, as we've discussed many times, you found the Kingdom of Heaven, which was the only thing available to you to experience . . . you found yourself experiencing it as the world and universe—the material world and universe—you found it to be all of the definitions you chose to give to it.

And so it moved you into a very active conscious experience that was based in ignorance, that was based in nothingness, which you then filled with the definitions you wanted to give everything because you thought that making those definitions and making them real would make you real in your own right, independent from who you really Were and unconscious of Reality.

Now, that's the basis of the dream.

In that enactment you seemed to create a duality. Reality was one—the Kingdom of Heaven. And alongside it, an imaginative state of being in which through imagination, meanings were given to everything in the Kingdom of Heaven, while ignoring that it was the Kingdom of Heaven.

So there was the conscious experience of Reality, was one state of Being, and the unconsciousness of Reality as another state of being. Those are the only two choices that could possibly seem to have been made. And it's Awakening from the two of them back into the conscious awareness of the only one that is Real that constitutes your Salvation.

Doing that is the whole reason that there was a first Christmas. Do you understand?

So, it's not a complicated problem. The only complexity there is to it is, all of the little intellectual defenses and beliefs and confidences with which you have wrapped up all of your meanings that you have given to the Kingdom of Heaven that make it seem to be something else.

And it's getting you to release all these little definitions and meanings and convictions and confidences that it is my task to do. And the means of doing it is simple. It's the two-step, it's the holy instant.

Therefore, you could say that the whole reason there was a first Christmas, the whole reason the Christ showed up, was to reveal the holy instant as the way Home—as the way out of the dreams and illusions that you were bound by. That's the simplicity. That is the Message of Christmas.

Now . . .

THE BASIS OF THE DREAM

Does not a world that seems quite real arise in dreams?

. . . night dreams.

Yet think what this world is. It is clearly NOT the world you saw before you slept.

Meaning, during the daytime before you went to bed.

Rather, it is a distortion of the world, planned solely around what you would have preferred. Here, you are "free" to make over whatever seemed to attack you, and change it into a tribute to your ego, which was outraged by the "attack."

You see? In the daytime when you're awake in the real world, things happen that make you feel vulnerable, that take advantage of you that hurt you and you can't seem to do anything about it. But boy, the moment you fall asleep, you have free reign over everything. You can make everything be the way you want it.

This would not BE . . .

. . . in other words, a tribute to your ego which was outraged by the attack . . .

This would not BE your wish unless you saw yourself as one with the ego, . .

. . . the ego—this one that is looking at everything and giving definitions to it all by himself. You know, it's not an ego "out there" different from you. It's just you behaving inconsistently with what you Are and who you Are, ignoring your holiness and defending yourself against all the misery you see when what you're seeing isn't embraced by your holiness, but is embraced by the fear you experience because you're ignoring your holiness. You see?

This would not BE your wish unless you saw yourself as one with the ego, which always looks upon itself, and therefore on you, as under attack and highly vulnerable to it.

Really relatively simple. Now, . . .

Dreams . . .

. . . that you have at night . . .

. . . are chaotic BECAUSE they are governed by your conflicting wishes, and therefore they have no CONCERN with what is true.

You see? "I'm afraid . . . I feel vulnerable. And so I choose to see everything as though it's against me—my wish is to see that everything is against me. But at the same time, there's something in me that I don't have a whole lot of control over, called 'Love.' And so it wants equality and it wants to generate balance without abandoning the need to assert oneself to protect himself.

So these are conflicted needs which are embraced side-by-side. And there are many extenuations of that.

They are the best example . . .

. . . in other words, dreams are . . .

. . . the best example you could have of how perception can be utilized to substitute illusions for truth.

When you compare your daytime life to the dreams you have at night, the dreams at night provide wonderful illustrations of the ego and of how the ego works—how your mind works when it has chosen to ignore its divinity, to ignore your Birthright.

You do not take them seriously . . .

... dreams ...

You do not take them seriously on awaking because the fact that reality is so outrageously violated in them becomes apparent.

In other words, the reality of your daytime activities when you wake up, it's so obvious that what happened in the dream outrageously violates the daytime reality, that becomes apparent and frees you from whatever hold they had on you while you were having the dream.

Yet they are ...

... the dreams are ...

... a way of looking at the world, ..

... in other words, they are a way for you to look at the world different from the way you're looking at it during the daytime and suffering from what you can't control.

... they are a way of looking at the world, and changing it to suit the ego better.

... to suit the you who wants to govern and determine what everything is better.

They ...

... the dreams ...

... provide striking examples, both of the ego's inability to tolerate reality, ..

... reality of the daytime. How do you know it can't tolerate it? Because at nighttime it changes reality around to make you not guilty, to make you not vulnerable, to put the blame "out there," to make the conflict seem to be not your responsibility, while at the same time getting justice in your dreams.

They provide striking examples, both of the ego's inability to tolerate reality, and your willingness to CHANGE reality on its behalf.

During your dreamtime, you change all of the characteristics of the reality going on in the daytime to suit you and to suit your purposes, which are not at all in alignment with your Father or with your holiness.

So dreams provide you . . . your night-dreams provide you with a clarity about the ego and a clarity about the human condition.

You do not find the differences between what you see in sleep and on awaking disturbing.

You don't. Sometimes a nightmare lingers. Sometimes a very fearful experience in the dream lingers. But you know it was a dream. You know it was different from the reality of your being awake during the day.

You do not find the differences between what you see in sleep and on awaking disturbing. You recognize that what you see on waking is blotted out in dreams. Yet on awakening, you do not expect it to be gone.

Let's understand that.

You recognize that what you see on waking . . .

. . . the reality of daytime . . .

. . . is blotted out in dreams. Yet on awakening, you do not expect . . .

. . . that because it was blotted out in your dreams, it will be gone when you wake up. You see?

Again . . .

You recognize that what you see on waking is blotted out in dreams. Yet on awakening, you do not expect it to be gone. In dreams YOU arrange everything.

Obviously.

People become what you would have them be and what they do YOU order.

Now pay attention as you read through this because you can understand this and can see the actuality of it. And it's just a description of the night-dream. Don't make it more complicated by trying to apply it in other areas. This is a very simple explanation of the experience of dreaming night dreams.

People become what you would have them be, and what they do YOU order. No limits on substitution is laid upon you.

You can make that guy the worst bastard there ever was or the greatest saint there ever was, or any degree in between. And you can even imagine that that one is schizophrenic and he can be the greatest guy one minute and the worst guy the next minute. And you can make anything out of him. You can make substitutions of what he is freely, with care-free abandon.

No limits on substitution is laid upon you. For a time, it seems as if the world were given you, to make it what you will. You do not realize that you are ATTACKING it, trying to triumph over it and make it serve you.

When you're having the dream, you do not realize that you are attacking the world you were living in the daytime by determining that it was something different, with different meanings that did not make you guilty of anything, but made you the innocent one which justified trying to achieve justice and make someone else guilty so you would be exonerated, not realizing that the only way to be exonerated from what's going on in the dream is to have your alarm clock go off or have something in you rouse you so that you wake up on your bed and realize you didn't need to be exonerated from anything because the whole thing was a dream. You see?

Dreams . . .

. . . night dreams, we're still just talking about simple night-dreaming, . . .

Dreams are perceptual temper tantrums, in which you literally scream, "I want it THUS!"

You see? "I'm going to take charge here. I'm going to make things be the way they ought to be!"

And thus, it seems to be. And yet, the dream cannot escape its origin.

What's the origin of the dream? The origin of the dream is "Father, I'd rather see things my way. Father, I want a divorce. Father, I am going to determine for myself what everything is." That's the origin of the dream. That's the point at which you have convinced yourself that you became the authority and that all the meanings you give to everything are the meanings they have.

Anger and fear pervade it . . .

. . . the dream . . .

... and in an instant, the illusion of satisfaction is invaded by the illusion of terror.

Your dreams are never dependable. They're never stable, they never ever provide a constant unchanging perspective, and when things change suddenly, having no connection with what went before, you don't even question it.

For the dream of your ability to control reality . . .

. . . which is why you got the divorce in the first place . . .

... by substituting a world which you prefer IS terrifying.

You remember that we've discussed the fact that the moment you did that, two things came into play: Fear and guilt. Fear and guilt are the flavor of everything that follows. They are the flavor and the context of all of your dreams. You see?

Your attempts to blot out reality . . .

. . . by giving it your own meanings and definitions . . .

... are very fearful, but this you are not willing to accept. And so you substitute the fantasy that REALITY is fearful, not what you would DO to it.

That you do during the daytime . . .

... you substitute the fantasy that REALITY . . .

. . . your daily life . . .

... is fearful, not what you would DO to it.

In other words, what you would do to it is not what is fearful to you, even though that is what makes it fearful.

And thus is guilt made real.

When you said, "Father, I would rather see it myself, I'd rather do it my way, I'd rather give definitions to everything, I want a divorce," God's reality became a fearful thing to you because it tended to get in the way of your ability to determine what everything is on your own. And it, coupled with fear and guilt, caused you to perceive your situation as calling for defense on your part against the God's honest truth—Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven. When you said in response to that, "The suffering I'm experiencing is not because of anything I did, but because of all the fearful things I see going on in the world as I look at it through my independent stance," you hid from yourself the conscious awareness of what is Real. You established yourself in the state of independence, which is flavored of fear and guilt. And in the blotting out of your experience of what everything truly Is, you made guilt real for you. You made the guilt that was inseparable from independence, substantial and actual for yourself, because you blocked from your view the way out. Simple as that.

Dreams show you that you HAVE the power to make a world as you would have it be, and that because you WANT it you SEE IT.

Now, these are night dreams. They prove that to you. It happens with every dream you have.

And while you see it, you do not doubt that it is real.

Right? When you're in the middle of the dream you do not doubt that it is real.

Yet here is a world, clearly within your mind, that seems to be OUTSIDE [you].

Right? You find yourself in the middle of a world that you are ordering around, that you are creating with your mind and it seems to be outside of the you, you experience in the dream. And it's a hostile world, which you're getting the better of, and there's nothing to stop you getting the better of one way or another, unless you wake up prematurely and don't have a chance to get justice. [Chuckles] Oh-h-h!

. . . here is a world, clearly within your mind, that seems to be OUTSIDE. You do not respond to it as though you made it, nor do you realize that the emotions which the dream produce MUST come from you.

Mind you, we're still just talking about every night, every day . . . we're just talking about ordinary dreams that you experience at night or whenever you're sleeping and having a dream.

It is the figures in the dream and what THEY do that seem to make the dream. You do not realize that you are making them act out for YOU, for if you did, the guilt would not be theirs, and the illusion of satisfaction would be gone.

You'd be stuck with the conscious awareness of what was promoting all of this and you would not be able to blame anything else and you would realize that a change in you is what is called for.

In dreams these features are not obscure. You seem to waken, and the dream is gone.

Now here's the key point.

Yet what you fail to recognize is that what caused the dream has not gone with it.

The pieces of the dream that you had at night has not gone along with the dream when you wake up in the morning.

Your wish to make another world that is not real REMAINS with you.

Now I'm adding this: It remains with you because it was present before you went to sleep. It was part and parcel of the way you were experiencing the daytime the day before you had the night dreams. And it's still there.

And what you seem to wake to is but another form of this same world you see in dreams.

Now here's where the whole reason for the first Christmas becomes crystallized because this is the message that I came to share to promote Awakening out of the dream then—that was the point then. Let that sink in. Because if you realize that that was the point then, you will realize that it is still the point. And you will begin to engage or participate in the meaning of Christmas in a fuller way than you have in the past.

Listen again:

Your wish to make another world that is not real REMAINS with you.

... when you wake up in the morning.

And what you seem to wake to . . .

... your daily life . . .

. . . is but another form of this same world you see in dreams.

So it's saying that you wake up from your night dream and in the daytime when you thought you weren't dreaming at all, you're still dreaming. And ultimately what you can glean from your night dream, which is so utterly clear to you as to its meaning, you can transfer to your day dream, which you call normal, awake mentality.

Your wish to make another world that is not real REMAINS with you. And what you seem to wake to is but another form of this same world you see in dreams.

Here is the point of release that could seem to be difficult to accept:

All your time is spent in dreaming.

. . . whether it's at night or in the daytime. That's good news because once you accept that, once you consider it as a real possibility, it is possible for you to be spontaneously released from your way of perceiving everything that causes you to suffer and keeps you bound to suffering. And the point is [snaps fingers] the release! And the point of Christmas, [snaps fingers] that first Christmas, was to cause that release!

Your sleeping and your waking dreams have different forms, and that is all. Their CONTENT is the same. They . . .

. . . your night dream and your day time life, which is actually a day dream.

They are your protest against reality, and your fixed and insane idea that you can change it. In your waking dreams, . .

. . . and let me say this: Don't listen to what I'm saying and consider the reality of it and then say, "Wow, I must really be insane! Wow, I'm a lost soul! Wow . . ." and image all kinds of negative definitions about you that would simply cause you to neglect to take a simple intelligent look, dispassionate look at the nature of a night dream and then consider looking at your daytime activities and see similarities in it and realize that just as there is something to wake up to from your night dream there is something to Wake up to from your day dream! That's the message of Christmas.

In your waking dreams, the special relationship is your determination to keep your hold on unreality, and to prevent yourself from waking.

Listen again:

In your waking dreams, the special relationship is your determination to keep your hold on unreality, . .

. . . and what's a special relationship? It's a relationship you engage in with another while leaving God out. In other words, it is a focused unintelligent practice which, at the bottom line, hidden out of sight, has as its purpose keeping you unconscious of God, keeping you unconscious of your divinity, keeping you unconscious of your partners or the divinity of the one you're in relationship with. You see? That's what a special relationship is. It has, as its bottom line function, the purpose of keeping you absolutely unconscious of what it takes to Wake up. Simple. Don't let it get more complicated than that. In that clarity it's easy to change your mind.

In your waking dreams, the special relationship is your determination to keep your hold on unreality, and to prevent yourself from waking. And while you see more value in sleeping than in waking, you will not let go of it.

That's destructive! That's destructive!

The answer to that is the two-step, the holy instant, which is the means of letting in the experience of a holy relationship because you've chosen to abandon your independence and say, "Father, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, help me look at this one I'm in relationship with and remember . . . not what he did yesterday, not what he did ten years ago, not what his whole family has done to my family for generations, but what is the truth about him now? Help me have the experience of who he truly is, free of my definitions and confidences and arrogant judgments of him. I want to know the truth. I want to look at him or her and I want to remember God."

Now:

The Holy Spirit, ever practical in His wisdom, accepts your dreams, and uses them as means for waking. YOU would have used them to remain asleep. We once said that the first change, before dreams disappear, is that your dreams of fear are changed to happy dreams. That is what the Holy Spirit does in your special relationship.

. . . and brings it into focus more specifically as you insist on remaining true to the revealing of what is Real that the Holy Spirit brings to you.

He does not destroy it, nor snatch it away from you. Your special relationship will remain, not as a source of pain and guilt, but as a source of joy and freedom.

Of course:

It will not be for you alone, for therein lay its misery.

You see? The human condition: That which called forth the “midnight clear” and the “manger” and the “wise men” . . . that which brought it forth was that the correction of your divorce from your Father and your insistence upon independence would be corrected and you would be freed of undeserved misery and an undeserved, unconsciousness of your holiness as an experience.

Your special relationship will remain, not as a source of pain and guilt, but as a source of joy and freedom. It will not be for you alone, for therein lay its misery. As its unholiness kept it a thing apart, its holiness will become an offering to everyone.

“Peace on Earth, goodwill toward men.” A change of perception, a change of behavior, a change in which you consider and experience your Brother and Sister that doesn’t call on anything other than peace on Earth, goodwill toward men. Goodwill . . . that thing that happens when you look in your Brother’s eyes and remember God. That’s the meaning of “Goodwill toward men . . .” toward your Brother, toward your Sister, toward your enemy.

Your special relationship . . .

. . . having been given over to the Holy Spirit by your practice of the holy instant . . .

. . . will be a means for undoing guilt in everyone blessed through your holy relationship.

Blessed by your getting the Christmas message, by your getting the point today, here, now.

It will be a happy dream, and one which you will share with all who come within your sight.

You know, when you see something clearly and when you’re filled with joy, you can’t help but share it, it just happens. And sometimes it’s your lack of speaking, your lack of doing something in a circumstance that another recognizes you ordinarily would have had great reaction with, great volatility and they are blessed because they know the difference and they are glad to have been with you in that moment and not experienced “the old you.”

Through it, the blessing which the Holy Spirit has laid upon it will be extended. Think not that He has forgotten anyone in the purpose He has given you.

It's not a special gift. It's not something you're getting exclusively. Man, when you get His gift, when you feel the truth of God's Perspective, everyone is touched by it. It's that simple.

Think not that He has forgotten anyone in the purpose He has given you. And think not that He has forgotten you to whom He gave the gift.

For what you give you get to keep. You are blessed by that which you bless others . . . that you are blessed by having received because you chose to abandon your independence and say, "Father, what's the truth here? Holy Spirit, help me look in my Brother's eyes and remember what's really there—remember God."

He uses everyone who calls on Him as means for the salvation of everyone. And He will waken everyone through you who offered your relationship to Him.

And what if it's not just you, but you . . . and everyone doing this?

If you but recognized His gratitude! Or mine through His!

. . . or the rest of the Brotherhood who is experiencing the transformation of you.

For we are joined as in one purpose, being of one mind with Him.

Let not the dream . . .

. . . the dream, the day dream that you are experiencing as a result of not having fallen asleep at night but as a result of having claimed independence from your Father.

Let not the dream . . .

. . . the day dream . . .

. . . take hold to close your eyes. It is not strange that dreams can make a world that is unreal.

That's not strange.

The WISH to make it is incredible.

[Chuckles] The wish to make a world that is unreal is what's insane, is what's impossible to accomplish, making it incredible, not credible, and outlandish.

Your relationship has become one in which the wish has been removed, . .

. . . when you engage in the holy instant and establish a holy relationship and let it infill you. When you do . . .

Your relationship has become one in which the wish . . .

. . . to make a world that is unreal.

Your relationship has become one in which the wish has been removed, because its purpose has been changed from one of dreams to one of truth.

Now, when it happens, you are not sure of this because you think it may be this "the happy dream" when everything seems to be going beautifully and it has new meaning for you.

You are not sure of this because you think it may be THIS that is the dream. You are so used to choosing between dreams you do not see that you have made, at last, the choice between the truth and ALL illusions.

Because that isn't clear to you, it's possible to think that the transition itself is a dream and that you haven't really begun to Awaken.

Yet Heaven is sure. This is no dream. Its coming means that you have chosen truth, and it has come because you have been willing to let your special relationship meet its conditions.

. . . the conditions of Heaven. You've let your relationship meet its conditions because you've said, "I want to know the truth, Father. I want to have the experience of the Reality, the holiness of my Brother, Holy Spirit. Help me." You see? When you do that, you are relaxing, you are yielding up your control so that your relationship might meet the conditions of Heaven blessing you, blessing your Brother and blessing everything and everyone.

In your relationship, . . .

. . . where you have grasped the meaning of Christmas, engaged in the holy instant, . .

. . . the Holy Spirit has gently laid the real world; . .

[repeats] . . . the Holy Spirit has gently laid the real world; . .

. . . in your relationship. And think about it: If your relationship isn't exclusive but shared with the whole Brotherhood, then it's in that universal context that the Holy Spirit has gently laid the real world, and more unity is experienced and more joy is felt because more of the Brotherhood is joined and loneliness, for lack of contact, is no longer being felt by those who were Awake.

In your relationship, the Holy Spirit has gently laid the real world; the world of happy dreams, from which awaking is so easy and so natural. For as your sleeping and your waking dreams represent the same wishes in your mind, so do the real world . . .

. . . the God's honest Real world, the Kingdom of Heaven . . .

. . . and the truth of Heaven join in the Will of God. The dream of waking is easily transferred to its reality. For this dream comes from your will joined with the Will of God. And what this Will would have accomplished has never NOT been done.

What does that mean? It means you are neither behind the point of perfection, nor advancing toward it. You are at that point and must understand yourself therefrom. And that is the meaning of Christmas.

Let it bless this Holiday Season. I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

January 7th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We ended up last time with these sentences:

The dream of waking is easily transferred to its reality. For the dream comes from your will joined with the Will of God. And what this Will would have accomplished has never NOT been done.¹

In the act of Creation, in the Movement from which you emerged as the Father's Self Expression, you were joined with the Father—your will was joined with the Father's. And there was no attempt on your part and no imaginative reason being held to justify being at odds with the Father's Will. The experience of being with the Father's Will, being in alignment, flowing with the Father's Will caused you to experience Heaven, caused you to experience the unalterable divinity of everything.

Now, since that was established from the beginning, you are not now in your process of Awakening, working toward a state of being that you never had before, that is totally foreign to you and which would make it very difficult to shift from a misperception to the conscious experience of Reality. You see?

Awakening is a Movement in which it becomes clear to you that what you thought you had accomplished on your own, which inadvertently resulted in a human condition subject to sin, disease and death never was accomplished!

If you had actually succeeded in establishing some real existence different from God, you would have altered God. You would have caused God to be something less than He is. And that's impossible.

Now, the problem is that you think you have accomplished creating things on your own and made them real. What makes that problematic is that it causes you to be unable to fathom how you could be something different from the definitions you have given yourself, the definitions others have given you, the definitions you've given the world—all of which are different from God.

And yet, that's all it takes to Wake up.

All it takes is for you to be able to fathom the possibility that what seems real to you as a result of your own actions is not real at all, never was real, never became real, God never stopped Being what He is, and therefore, the you that at the moment of Creation, whose will was at one with the Father are unchanged and have always been unchanged.

And so Waking up is not a matter of accomplishing something and becoming something different than what you Are. It's actually you abandoning the idea that you are something different from what the Father has created . . . it's not true.

And so Awakening is best described as a miracle—a sudden shift of perception—a sudden shift of perception in which you begin to fathom the truth as being totally true about you right now and that what the Father created you As, you still Are and you haven't been able to alter that in the slightest. You see?

Waking up is only going to be a matter of a shift of perception. It's not going to be turning you into something incredibly different from what you are right now. That's why it's easy. A shift of perception is easy. All of you have experienced shifts of perception in your lives, where you believed one way and suddenly you were able to see a different way and you shifted—your perception shifted—and the ignorance you had been governed by before then is now absent and you're no longer governed by it.

This is very important to understand.

This Course is not so long, is not as extensive as it is because what you're going to need to do is going to be so difficult. It's so long because it's difficult for you to fathom Reality as being not only possible but actual right now while you're still part of a material world and universe as a mortal. You see? While this experience is still going on, you must begin to fathom the fact that it's not true and that no matter how absolutely sure you are of it, it can be left behind in a wink of an eye—in a sudden simple shift of perception.

New Section:

LIGHT IN THE DREAM

You who have spent your lives in bringing truth to illusion, . .

. . . meaning, you who have brought the meanings of Creation that God has enacted, those who have brought these things to a place in you where they are put through a process of redefinition in your mind through the use of your imagination, that's called bringing truth to illusion . . . bringing Reality to the threshold of your mind and then operating on it through the use of your imagination, you're bringing truth to a place where you are transforming it into what it is not and believing that you've done it! That's bringing truth to illusion.

So:

You who have spent your lives in bringing truth to illusion, reality to fantasy, have walked the way of dreams.

I don't have to keep saying that you didn't do it on purpose, but whether you knew what you were doing or not, that is what was done. And until you bring God into the picture relative to everything you are experiencing, you're continuing to bring Reality to fantasy. But the minute you say, "Wait a minute!". . . the moment you decide to shut up and practice the two-step and move into the holy instant, you reverse the flow, so to speak, and you bring fantasy to Reality. You bring yourself to a place where you're willing to abandon your definitions, your fantasies, your beliefs, and enquire of the Source of all—God—"What is the truth here? I want to know the truth. I want to exchange my fantasies for Reality."

So, whether you like it or not . . .

You who have spent your lives in bringing truth to illusion, reality to fantasy, have walked the way of dreams.

What's the meaning of the Christmas Message? Stepping out of the dream. Waking up. Coming back into your right Mind. Joining me as my Brother or Sister—Knowing that you are my Brother or Sister. You see?

For you . . .

. . . have walked the way of dreams.

Yes.

For you have gone from waking to sleeping, and on and on to a yet deeper sleep.

How do you do that? Well, the sleep gets deeper and deeper by means of all the additional definitions and mutual agreements that are brought into play for self-satisfaction, for self-aggrandizement, for control and to attempt to become something real in your own right.

It is like government in a way: Mutual definitions are arrived at, mutual agreements are arrived at and mutual agreements on top of mutual agreements are brought into play until it becomes very difficult to know what the first mutual agreements were that make the ones you're making now reasonable and valid and worth embracing. You see? It gets more and more complex.

Each dream has led to other dreams, and every fantasy which seemed to bring a light into the darkness but made the darkness deeper. Your GOAL was darkness, in which no ray of light could enter.

What does that mean? It means that your goal was to make up your own definitions and meanings and commit yourself to them at the expense of the conscious experience of what those newly defined things actually were. So what they actually were could not enter any longer.

And so again:

Your GOAL was darkness, . .

. . . your goal was fantasy . . .

. . . in which no ray of light could enter. And you sought a blackness so complete that you could hide from truth forever, in complete insanity.

If you arrive at a point where you believe that you have made yourself real and valid, by virtue of authority you have imagined you have and have exercised, then you create an ignorance so complete that the real Meaning of everything cannot enter—the light cannot enter.

. . . a blackness so complete that you could hide from truth forever, in complete insanity.

What does that mean? It means you could hide in this definition of yourself and this sense of who you are and how you work and where you came from and how important you are. You see?

What you forgot was simply that God cannot destroy Himself.

No matter how much fantasy you collect and assemble so that it looks like something valid—a real you—no matter how much you engage in that and how committed you are to it . . .

God cannot destroy Himself.

Therefore, He hasn't and therefore you haven't become anything less than what He created. This is the fact that you're coming to a point of recognizing by means of a shift of perception—by means of the miracle. It's that simple.

The light is IN you.

Always has been. Never went anywhere. Even though you have ignored it, blinded yourself to it by committing to a belief about yourself so insane that there's just no way for you to recognize the Light in you. But it's there! And that's why I'm here telling you about it. And that's why the Course is here telling you about it because you need to be reminded of something that's already so—not something you have to achieve.

The light is IN you. Darkness can cover it, but CANNOT put it out.

If it cannot put it out, it has not put it out. And therefore, what you divinely Are is fully present with full capacity at this very instant. You cannot fathom it but you must let yourself begin to.

Now:

As the light comes nearer you will rush to darkness, shrinking from the truth, . .

. . . as the light comes nearer . . . now why would the light be coming nearer? The light would be coming nearer because you've engaged in the holy instant. You have engaged in a holy relationship . . . remember that's the context of what this is about that we've been considering. And so you have decided to participate in a holy relationship, which means you've decided to bring God into the picture: "Father what is the truth about this one I'm in relationship with? I want to know the truth. I do not want to be hung up on who that one thinks he or she is, or who I think she is, or he is. I want to get past that." You see?

In that commitment something automatically begins to happen: The light comes nearer.

Now:

As the light comes nearer you will rush to darkness, . .

. . . so don't be surprised and don't be too quick to judge yourself . . .

. . . you will rush to darkness, shrinking from the truth, sometimes retreating to the lesser forms of fear, . .

. . . you won't necessarily shift into the full blown forms of fear, but you will because of what you're afraid the truth is and what the truth will do to you, you will find yourself backing off from the commitment to a holy relationship. It will happen. Don't be surprised and let it simply be a signal to you to get back on the beam, to make recommitment to your desire to ask God "What is the truth here about this one I'm in relationship with? Help me to see this one as You created him or her. Let me experience Your Perspective." You see? That's what causes the light to come nearer. And when you become afraid, you must remember to reinstate that intent. It's all that simple.

As the light comes nearer you will rush to darkness, shrinking from the truth, sometimes retreating to the lesser forms of fear, and sometimes to stark terror.

You know, when you first said you'd rather see things your way, fear and guilt came into the picture and then became compounded.

It isn't easy to come back Home. It's simple, but it isn't easy to come back Home because of your conditioned sense of yourself and of your guilt and of your unworthiness and that there's a penalty of some sort that you must pay for what you've done in your attempt to be independent and deny your Father, God.

So:

But you WILL advance because your goal IS the advance from fear to truth.

What goal? The goal put into place by your engaging in a holy relationship through the use of the holy instant.

Remember, you can have the intent and you can move along smoothly and then something will happen that triggers a self-protective response in you and that takes over your mind and you forget that you're part of an agreement to engage in a holy relationship. And you've simply got to remind yourself of that, so that you can recognize that this self-protection that you're engaging in absolutely blocks the holy relationship and does not serve you, so that no matter how reasonable it seems, how justifiable it is, you can say, "No sir, I will have nothing to do with you. You have nothing to do with Reality or my Awakening or my experience with the holy relationship." And let it go.

. . . your goal IS the advance from fear to truth. You KNOW this.

Temporary memory loss sometimes and you forget but you do know it.

The goal which you accepted IS the goal of knowledge, . .

. . . or as I've said, "Knowing" . . .

. . . for which you signified your willingness . . .

. . . by entering into a holy relationship and desiring to stick with it.

Fear seems to live in darkness, and when you are afraid you have stepped back.

That's all, you have stepped back.

Let us then join quickly in an instant of light, and it will be enough to remind you that your goal IS light. Truth has rushed to meet you since you called upon it.

That's not only wonderful, it's important to know. When you desire to know the truth, the truth rushes forward to share itself with you. Be with that for a moment . . .

Truth isn't a collection of facts listed on a page. Truth is the living Presence of the conscious awareness of what is Real. It is present because God created it that way—created it there—and also created it as that which has the intent to be Known by every single part of Creation. So it is not inanimate. Again, not just a collection of facts. It's the true Meaning of every single aspect of Creation which intends to share itself with you and with every part of Creation. It's a living active Presence presenting Itself. And the moment you desire to know the truth, truly Know the truth, you will find it presenting itself to you.

Sometimes that is frightening because you tend to think of truth as one of a pair. The other part of the pair is consequence—truth or consequences. So truth is perceived and felt by everyone as something that brings with it penalty. Its job is to keep you in line. You see?

But the purpose of truth is to reveal to you at the level of meaning and feeling that anything you thought you had accomplished that was a denial of your Self or the Father you never accomplished. It never happened! Therefore, there is no foundation for a consequence of any kind—not as a result of knowing the truth.

Now you have already had the consequences of the intent to do what you can't do—fear and guilt, sin, sickness and death, pain, suffering. But those weren't the result of knowing the truth. Those weren't the fruits of truth rushing in and embracing you and embracing your mind in that which discloses your innocence. You see?

If you knew Who walks beside you on this way which you have chosen, fear would be impossible.

Well, who walks with you on this way? Well, the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind. It's inseparable from you, even if you're ignoring it. The Holy Spirit walks with you. All of the Brotherhood, which is Awake, walks with you—knows everything about you. Nothing about you is hidden from those Who are Awake. They see the Father. They look at you and are reminded of the Father—They remember God. That's what relationships do.

Who else walks with you? I walk with you. And you know what? The Father, figuratively speaking, walks with you because the Father is Being you and is therefore ever Present and wholly Present with you and as You.

So . . .

If you knew Who walks beside you on this way which you have chosen, . .

. . . the way of a holy relationship . . .

. . . fear would be impossible. You do not know because the journey into darkness has been long and cruel, and you have gone deep into it.

I know everyone's tired of it.

A little flicker of your eyelids, closed so long, has not [yet] been sufficient to give you confidence in yourselves, . .

You have all in one way or another experienced the Presence of the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind. All of you have experienced revelation in one way or another, in one time or another, and it has changed you. But you're immediately faced with the same world that you were perceiving before the illumination occurred. And so after the flicker of the eyelid, it's easy to become overwhelmed again by all the meanings you have given to everything and believed for so long.

A little flicker of your eyelids, closed so long, has not yet been sufficient to give you confidence in yourselves, . .

. . . not confidence in yourselves as egos, or as who you believed you were, but the experience of being invulnerable, of being utterly safe because you are the Son or Daughter of God and for a moment you have experienced it.

The experience of it can be described as confidence in yourselves because when you experience it you're not doubting. And I don't even have to say you're not doubting yourself—you're not doubting! And in the absence of doubt, your invulnerability, your wholeness, your Reality, your eternity all congeal in a form or a manner that you have no doubt about. And so, one could say you have confidence in yourselves.

Again:

A little flicker of your eyelids, closed so long, has not yet been sufficient to give you confidence in yourselves, so long despised.

I know, you didn't think you despised yourself—some of you will acknowledge it. But the simple fact is, when you're walking around in a state of fear feeling guilty about something, you're in a despicable place. And it must be because there is something despicable about you. It must be your fault no matter how hard you try to put it out there on something or someone else.

So:

You go toward love still hating it, and terribly afraid of its judgment upon you.

You must understand that this is the nature of the trip Home. This is the nature of the mentality encountered as you yield up your faith in all the meanings that you've given and the fearful sense of yourself that has accompanied you since you got your divorce from the Father and chose to ignore Him and surprisingly lost the experience of your own divinity and holy Birthright.

You go toward love still hating it, and terribly afraid of its judgment upon you. And you do not realize that you are not afraid of love, but only of what you have made of it.

You see? And what you have made of it is the result of the use of imagination, which constitutes a perception that's not Real. And perceptions are easily replaced. Misperceptions can disappear and be replaced by truth instantaneously at this moment. Not a complicated thing.

You are advancing to love's meaning, and away from all illusions in which you have surrounded it.

You see? That's another way of saying, "You are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. You are at that point and must understand yourself therefrom."

When you retreat to the illusion your fear increases, for there is little doubt that what you think it means IS fearful. Yet what is that to us who travel surely and very swiftly AWAY from fear?

Again, remember you are engaged in a holy relationship consciously and on purpose. That is the focal point of Waking up—of the shift of perception. And you join with me and you join with the Holy Spirit. And when your connection with us is more important than anything else, you will find that we will travel surely and very swiftly away from fear. You simply have to remember to return to our joint effort.

You who hold each other's hand also hold mine, for when you joined each other you were not alone.

Right? We talked about the fact that when you join with each other for the purpose of having a holy relationship, you actually, momentarily withdraw your attention from each other and give your attention to the Father or the Holy Spirit so that you might ask, "What is the truth about this one I'm in relationship with?". . . so that the truth of it may infill you and spontaneously find expression in your relationship.

So:

You who hold each other's hand also hold mine, for when you joined each other you were not alone. Do you believe that I would leave you in the darkness you agreed to leave with ME? In your relationship is this world's light.

The Real light . . . the light of truth . . . the light of Love.

And fear MUST disappear before you now.

That's inevitable. You just need to not lose faith. You just need to persist in the union with me or the Holy Spirit or the Father, desiring to be infilled with the experience of truth so that it might be easily shared, blessing your Brother and being something you're able to keep.

Be tempted not to snatch away the gift of faith you offered to each other. You will succeed only in frightening yourselves.

But I will tell you the temptation will be there. Just don't yield to it.

The gift is given forever, for God Himself received it. You CANNOT take it back. You have accepted God.

The practice of the holy relationship and the practice of the holy instant sets correction into motion, sets transformation, regeneration and redemption into motion, sets Awakening into motion. And because you're not totally ignorant any longer, it will persist whether you have momentary lose of faith.

You have accepted God. The holiness of your relationship is established in Heaven.

You see?

You do not understand what you accepted, but remember that your understanding is not necessary.

It takes trust to let yourself be swept into the holy instant and all the Meanings of a holy relationship because you don't at this moment remember what it involves.

You do not understand what you accepted, but remember that your understanding is not necessary.

Why? Because the moment of the Holy Spirit infilling you with the truth puts you in a position of Knowing—being aware of something with conviction because it's so clear to you that what you're Knowing is absolutely true. There is no question about it. There is no call for doubt. There is no occasion for fear. So understanding is not necessary because Knowing of the truth will be what you are experiencing.

So you can dare to engage in what seems fearful to you because you're abandoning control and yielding to That which you can't quite fathom yet. You're yielding to the Holy Spirit—your divinity. And you're yielding to the Father's Will.

You do not understand what you accepted, but remember that your understanding is not necessary. All that was necessary was merely the WISH to understand.

"Father, what is the truth here?" That's all that's necessary. You don't have to understand what the answer is going to be. It will be lovingly provided.

All that was necessary was merely the WISH to understand. That wish was the desire to be holy. The will of God is granted you. For you desire the only thing you ever had, or ever were.

You see? Being a mortal, being an ego is the result of attempting to be what you're not and never were. And of course it hasn't worked. It has not been accomplished. But when you say, "Father, what is the truth here? Father, what is the truth about this one I'm in relationship with?" You are desiring the only thing you ever had or ever were, because it didn't go anywhere while you played in an insane imagination.

Each instant that we spend together will teach you that this goal is possible, . .

. . . you see, that's the point. [chuckling] All of this is to bring clearly into the foreground the fact that the holy instant works. Don't forget that! The holy instant works. What you have been engaging in hasn't worked.

So dare to risk the chance that the holy instant works. And that the Holy Spirit—which has been held in trust for you while you dallied with the ego—is still the only thing that's Real about you and is available for you to experience [snaps fingers] now.

Each instant that we spend together . . .

. . . whether it's like this or whether it's directly in the within-ness of your being . . .

Each instant that we spend together will teach you that this goal is possible, and will strengthen your desire to reach it.

Be persistent! Have faith!

And in your desire lies its accomplishment. Your desire is now in complete accord with all the power of the Holy Spirit's Will.

You see? When you want to know the truth, your desire of the Holy Spirit is for the Holy Spirit to do what has been held in trust to do—to join with you and bring you into joining with It so that there is no confusion about Who and What you Are.

No little, faltering footsteps that you may take can separate your desire from His Will and from His strength. I hold your hand . . . I hold your hand . . . I hold your hand as surely as you agreed to take each other's. You will not separate for I stand with you, and walk with you in your advance to truth. And where we go we carry God with us.

So, tonight we're talking in terms of confirmation of the fact that the holy instant is the Meaning of the Christmas message. And that it's the undoing of something that was never done, but you believe was done and hold yourself accountable for and cause yourself to sin, be sick and die, even though it cannot actually be done. And it is time for the undoing of the belief that it could be done and was done.

Everyone likes to have a meaning to hold onto—a phrase or a slogan, a catch word. And so I am going to yield to that and say that the meaning of this new year is: The Year of the Miracle. The definition of miracle being: A sudden shift of perception. And I am saying that this is The Year of the Miracle in the sense that there will be multitudes who will be practicing the holy instant, engaging in a holy relationship or many holy relationships and that will turn the tide, and the reason for the first Christmas will have been fulfilled.

So I wish you a Happy New Year and an ongoing fulfilling Christmas.

And I look forward to being with you next week.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

January 22nd 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We've talked about the fact that the meaning of the Christmas Message is embodied in the holy instant.

Now what I want to make clear is, that the meaning of Christmas is the leading edge of an event, the trailing edge of which is Easter. Christmas and Easter are the front and the back of a single coin or a single wholeness.

Easter evidenced is transformation, regeneration and redemption ending an experience of mortality, the undoing of which was Christmas. My Gift to everyone was not a life for you to stand in awe of. But rather a life in which you found your Self and in which you allowed yourself to be transformed because you had justification for allowing the transformation and chose for it.

You were not meant to stand back in awe of an event—a lifetime. You were to become and are to become what I'm going to call enactments of that life. Because I was here to tell you, you are my Brothers and you are my Sisters and we have the same Father and you are not a mortal living out or dying out—mortality. You see? And that is the point right now.

Now we read last week:

Each instant that we . . .¹

. . . you and I . . .

. . . spend together . . .

... especially directly within yourselves ...

Each instant that we spend together will teach you that this goal is possible, . .

... what goal is it referring to? The goal of holiness—the transformative effect of the holy instant that discloses to you at an experiential level that you are holy, like me. The belief that you are not is what has caused you to experience holiness and the Kingdom of Heaven as an experience of mortality in which you are guilty and must be punished for being sourceless—at least absent of any divine Source. You see? So ...

Each instant that we spend together will teach you that this goal . . .

... the experience of holiness ...

is possible, . .

... the experience of holiness, not the idea of holiness, not the thoughts about holiness, but the experience of holiness is possible.

Each instant that we spend together will . . .

. . . strengthen your desire to reach it.

Every instant we don't spend together will not strengthen your desire to reach it but will cause you to be distracted from it and caught up in a devotion to reaction, fear, and the attempt to overcome what will kill you. Simple.

And in your desire lies its accomplishment.

Why? Because, continuing ...

Your desire is now in complete accord with all the power of the Holy Spirit's Will.

You see? When you abandon attempting to be in charge of things yourself, when you abandon trying to direct the course of events and you shut up, you become still and you become curious, you bring your attention to wanting to know the truth, then you are in complete accord with the Father's Will. You're in complete accord with your holiness. You're in complete accord with the Holy Spirit, which is nothing more than your right Mind which has been held in trust while you dally with being an ego.

No little, faltering footsteps that you may take can separate your desire from His Will and from His strength. I . . .

. . . and this is important . . .

I hold your hand as surely as you agreed to take each other's.

The holy relationship is you joining with another from the Father's Point of View. You joining with me . . . you joining with the Holy Spirit, . . . you joining with the Father. In other words, your taking my hand, the Father's Hand, the Holy Spirit's Hand, allows you to take your Brothers' hand in a truly meaningful transformational healing way that helps break the dream—the mutual ignorance—that everybody is joined together in because they've said they would rather do everything themselves, they would rather say what everything meant, they would rather be independent and separate from their Source, the Father.

You will not separate for I stand with you, and walk with you in your advance to truth. And where we go we carry God with us.

Do you want to be alone? You're not. Do you want to be alone? You don't have to be. I am with you and when you dare to let that be a fact in your conscious awareness and you reach out to me and I answer you, you Know you're not alone. And if you're not alone and you're joined with the holy Son of God and the holy Son of God that you're joined with is telling you that you are the holy Son of God or the holy Daughter of God, you are not only in good company, you are in transformational company.

That is significant. And that is enough for you to be willing to risk the chance that it's true. Because if you risk the chance that it's true, it certainly won't make things worse, you're already experiencing the human condition—mortality. What could get worse than that? There's absolutely no justification for not listening to me when I say you are my Brother, you are my Sister, all of you are my siblings, if you will . . . a terrible sounding word.

But we are Brothers and Sisters—Family—absolutely divine. And it is our Birthright to be experiencing our Father's Perspective and not suffering sin, sickness and death.

Now, you must remember that the holy instant is made to work! It's not made to fail. And so it's the one thing that you can dare to lean into—to give your weight to, to give up to, yield to. You see?

Now remember, there's no way to do this all by yourself with a personal, private intent of your own. In order to have the experience, you must join with me or you must join with the Holy Spirit. You must reach out beyond your present sense of yourself and you must shut up your own agendas.

You must dare to really join—not intellectually join—because in it lies your salvation. Joining is your salvation.

In your relationship, you have joined with me . . .

. . . in your holy relationship that you've engaged in where you've decided that you want to know the truth about the one you're in relationship with from the Father's Perspective . . .

In your relationship, you have joined with me in bringing Heaven to the Son of God, who hid in darkness.

Now it's happened sort of in two stages: You bring Heaven to the Son of God, who hid in darkness. You, when you say, "Father, what is the truth here?" when you say, "Holy Spirit what is the truth here?" when you turn to me and say, "What are you here to tell me?" you are ceasing to hide in darkness. You are desiring to come where the light, where Vision, where understanding can happen. Then, when that revelation occurs, when that conscious awareness of truth occurs . . . about what? About what you asked to know about—your Brother or Sister, the one you're desiring to be in holy relationship with—when you ask for the light to be brought to you so you can give it to your Sister or Brother and you give it, your Sister or Brother is also blessed . . . both of you are blessed together.

And that's the key . . . the key like you put in a lock to unlock. You see? It takes two. It takes you and one whom you more than anything else desire to have a true experience of—a true experience provided to you by what? Your Father, the Holy Spirit, the Christ.

You have been willing to bring the darkness to light, . .

. . . yours . . .

. . . and this willingness has given strength to everyone who would remain in darkness.

You see? Your bringing your darkness to the light doesn't just illumine you, because your reason for doing it was your Brother in the first place so that you could Know the truth and thereby automatically extend the light to your Brother or Sister and thereby strengthen him or her in his or her conscious experience of holiness. You see?

When you withdraw from the mutual agreements about the human condition and the state of being called, "mortality," when you withdraw from that, you weaken the mutual agreements that everyone else are involved in regarding their mortality and their bondage to their mutual agreements. It's a Gift.

Those who would see WILL see.

The Gift you bring will be received by those who are willing to receive it. What does that mean? It means that those who are not willing to receive it will not receive it.

So it's not up to you to determine where your Gift is to be effective. It's only necessary for you to arrive at a point where giving the Gift—making the Gift—is more important than anything else to you, whether it's received or not.

Be careful. Because if you insist that your Gift of the conscious awareness of holiness must be received by someone you have designated and it's not received because that one is still willfully engaged in being mortal, you are likely to be willing to abandon your intent to Know the truth and block the influx of inspiration that reveals the truth to you whether what you're seeing the truth about, will accept it or recognize it or not.

You, by virtue of Vision, become a teacher. And you teach by communicating the truth and behaving as though the truth is true. But you cannot designate who your students are. You see? Listening for the Father, yielding to the Father and letting His Perspective infill you happens or succeeds because you have abandoned the intent to be in charge. You see? It's when you abandon the attempt to be in charge and yield to the Father that the influx of truth comes. And then you spontaneously give it.

If you attempt to determine who the student is and what the student must learn by virtue of what's been revealed to you, you will have stepped back from the position you've stepped into when you said, "I'm going to engage in the holy instant," you step out of the holy instant and you start being in charge again and it will not work.

Now, you may be someone's teacher and then a point will be arrived at where you will no longer be the one to be the teacher because someone else specifically present for the one you were a teacher to, will take over because the lesson will be more effectively delivered. The Vision that the one needing to learn needs, will be more effective coming from another, or a circumstance will.

So be careful. Because engaging in the holy instant and letting yourself be infilled with the Father's Perspective has absolutely nothing to do with being in charge, being able to determine what is true, what is not, what needs to be done, what doesn't need to be done. When you move into that space of joining with the Holy Spirit or the Father, you have moved into a place that is your natural state of Being, which is one of being pure conscious awareness—the presence of attention, not the presence of assertion. And as the presence of attention, learning, being fully aware of what the truth is so that you're not confused and you no longer convey confusion in your relationship with the one you're in a holy relationship with. You see?

It's difficult to lay hold on that or allow it to be because it seems to give you no credit. But who needs credit when he's experiencing his holiness, when he or she is experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven, where before it was a material universe where sin, disease and death were inevitable for everything.

Those who would see . . .

. . . when you make the Gift . . .

. . . WILL see. And they will join with me in carrying their light into the darkness, when the darkness in them is offered to the light, and is removed forever.

You see?

. . . when the darkness in them is offered to the light, . .

. . . when the darkness in them is offered to the light by them. That's the part you can't do. But you can bring the light that illuminates and transforms the darkness. That's your job. That's your fulfillment. That's the meaning of your Being. That's your part in the Christmas—Easter Story—Movement.

My need for you, joined with me in the holy light of your relationship, . .

. . . your holy relationship . . .

. . . is YOUR need for salvation.

See, here's the two sides of the coin again. My need for you is your need for salvation because together we constitute the undoing of illusion. And both of us are needed to participate together. And so we are together and always have been. But you have been convinced that you're just a mortal in a material universe. And you've had no justification for abandoning such a commitment to such a false belief.

And now what do I do? I consistently confront you with the truth that you didn't know was the truth. YOU ARE MY BROTHERS AND SISTERS. You are the holy Sons and Daughters of God. And it's your Birthright to be experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven right where a material universe seems to be what you're seeing and you are convinced what you are seeing.

And I say it so that you might have the delightful, wonderful experience of having the scales fall from your eyes so you can see everything as it is. That's the promise of the holy instant. The promise of the holy instant, the promise of Christmas is Easter. And it doesn't have to be thirty-three years apart. It can be one minute apart. Or if you want to fool around, you could wait until May and say, "December was Christmas and May is Easter and I'm going to do it in a short amount of time."

Now if you want to do that, do that. But you're not going to get my support.

The reason for the holy instant, the Meaning of Christmas, is Easter. Right now and any moment you're willing to embrace it. Any minute you're willing not to have any other agenda.

Would I not give you what you gave to me?

What did I give to you? My attention. Would you not give to me the same . . . your attention? And by virtue of our having our attention on each other, Wake up? For when you joined with each other in the desire to have a holy relationship, you answered me . . . you answered me. I called, it was called Christmas two thousand twelve years ago. I called it to you because that's my task. My task is to call to you if it takes an eternity, in order that you hear the truth, let it in and Wake up to who you truly Are.

You who are now the bringers of salvation have the function of bringing light to darkness.

See that's what you might call the task of the holy relationship.

You who are now the bringers of salvation have the function of bringing light to darkness.

You say, "Father, I want to experience the light." The influx of light occurs and your perceptions are transformed and it's impossible for you to see your Brother the way you saw him before. Your vision and awareness of him is now true and you can't help but treat him as though it is. And so you strengthen him in his capacity to bring darkness to light or light to the darkness to bring together the things that release him from bondage to beliefs and ignorance.

The darkness in you HAS been brought to light. Carry it back to darkness, from the holy instant to which you brought it.

As I've said, when the influx occurs you can't help but see things in a new way and you do bring back the light. It's not even a matter of choice. When you see the truth you say, "Wow!" and you have no chance in that moment to argue with it. It's just unimaginably incredible! And you're moved by it and your perception is changed forever.

We are made whole in our desire to make whole.

What you give you get to keep.

Let not time worry you, for all the fear that you experience is really past.

It's not present in the holy instant. In the midst of the influx of the conscious awareness of truth, it's not present to be experienced or dealt with. It's the past. It's never present in the now, in the holy instant.

Time has been re-adjusted to help us do, together, what your separate pasts . . .

. . . you and the one in your holy relationship . . .

. . . would hinder. You have gone past fear, for no two minds can join in the desire for love without love's joining THEM.

You can't desire to experience what love is without love joining you and constituting the transformation of your perception that causes you to see your Brother as he truly is, which can find no better definition or description than love.

To be approached by someone who sees your perfection and cannot be swayed from that perspective is an incredible experience of being loved, unlike any other apparently human concept or expression of it.

Not one light in Heaven but goes with you. Not one ray that shines forever in the Mind of God but shines on you. Heaven is joined with you in your advance to Heaven.

Sort of like the "Prodigal Son," once you start for Home, the Father comes out to greet you before you've gotten very close.

When such great light has joined with you to give the little spark of your desire the power of God Himself, CAN you remain in darkness?

No! So why doesn't it happen, you say? The simple reason is that you don't take the time to silence human will—your will—and you're intensing your judgments and your agendas and your position as director of the play.

And so you never truly become quiet enough and you never arrive at a point where you wish to be silent enough so as not to interfere with the influx of the Father's Perspective. You don't have to put forth great effort to make the influx occur, all you have to do is to neglect to want to experience anything else. In other words, arrive at a perfect space of silence. That's when human will is not functioning, will not register with you and will not distract you from the influx of the Father's Perspective that it is your Birthright to be experiencing every single moment because you are His holy Son, His holy Daughter, my Brothers and Sisters.

You are coming home together, after a long and meaningless journey which you undertook apart, and which led nowhere. You have found each other, . .

. . . in other words, you have found reason for turning to the Father, not to each other for fulfillment. You each have found someone to justify your turning to the Father to ask what the truth is so that you might share that with your partner in the holy relationship.

You have found each other, and will light each other's way. And from this light will the great rays extend back into darkness and forward unto God, to shine away the past . . .

. . . and your determined use of it in order to be in charge.

. . . and so make room for His eternal Presence, in Which everything is radiant in the light.

That's what it's all about. It's really rather simple. Learning to make it simple is what seems complicated. But it is always a matter of engaging in more and more neglect . . . less and less effort being put forth . . . more and more defenselessness so that that which is benign but omnipotent can register with you.

Now we're at a new Section in this Chapter called:

THE LITTLE WILLINGNESS

This is the simplicity, this is the effortlessness, this is the answer which is so insulting to an aggravated ego.

The holy instant is the result of your determination to be holy.

When you ask, "Father, what is the truth here?" you're asking Him to tell you of the holiness of you and everything. When you don't know something and you ask to be enlightened, you are asking for one thing: To have your holiness disclosed to you and the holiness of everything else. You may not have thought about it. You may just think you're having a problem and you're asking for help with your problem. But your question has a more infinite context . . . thank God.

The holy instant is the result of your determination to be holy. It is the ANSWER.

It's not the question that creates the answer so as to conform with your determinations as to how everything ought to work. It's the answer that you're not expecting. It's the answer that you're not in control of. It's the answer that it's the Gift of God to you that uncovers what you haven't seen and what you didn't know to look for.

The desire and the willingness to let it come precedes its coming.

You see?

The desire and the willingness to let it come precedes its coming.

It doesn't say that the desire and the willingness to let it be what you want it to be precedes its coming. Absolutely not! That blocks it. That's what you're already experiencing. And that's what you have to abandon. And that's what the little willingness is about.

You prepare your minds for it only to the extent of recognizing that you want it above all else.

What you value you will have. What you desire will come to you. And if you desire to not have the truth, you will not have the truth. You will have the untruth. And you will have to cope with it even though it's just plain old ignorance manipulating your perceptions of the Kingdom of Heaven.

It is not necessary that you do more; . .

. . . than want it above all else.

It is not necessary that you do more; indeed, it is necessary that you realize that you CANNOT do more.

That's the insulting part. But that's the blessing. Because when you abandon the desire to do more, then there is nothing present in you blocking the influx of revelation that reveals to you who you really Are, what your Brother is, and what the universe Is. And that will not happen as long as you're attempting to do more than is required—when you are attempting to do that which introduces static, noise, confusion in the threshold of the influx of truth—thus obscuring it from you.

Do not attempt to give the Holy Spirit what He does not ask, . .

. . . [chuckling] the Holy Spirit doesn't ask you to tell It what to do. The Holy Spirit doesn't ask you to tell It how the universe works. The Holy Spirit doesn't ask you to tell you how you can change your family members or the company you work for or the political system you're in or the international workings of commerce and trade and involvement as societies. The Holy Spirit doesn't ask for that. The only thing the Holy Spirit asks for is for you to shut up long enough for the Holy Spirit to speak and register with you because there's enough silence . . . that is, if you've been willing to be inquisitive . . . that is, if you're willing to bring your attention there. If you are, you will be rewarded with your wish being fulfilled.

Do not attempt to give the Holy Spirit what He does not ask, or you will add the ego unto Him, and confuse the two.

That means you will be confused by the two that you're trying to make work together. And again, it will confuse and block the truth registering with you.

He asks but little . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind.

He asks but little. It is HE Who adds the greatness and the might. He joins with you to make the holy instant far greater than you can understand.

Now if that's the truth, then stop bringing what you think your understanding is into the process. Be humble enough, and I'm going to say, practical enough to ask to know the truth while acknowledging that you don't know what it is. If you are willing to say that you do not have the slightest idea what the truth is and you want to know the truth, I promise you nothing will be present to block the full influx of what truth is. That's the simplicity of it. That's the blessing of it. And because of it, there is no way for you to inadvertently screw it up.

It is your realization that you need do so little that enables Him to give so much.

Now again, I want to point out to you that you are not alone and you have never been alone. The Holy Spirit of course, being nothing more than your right Mind, held in trust while you dally with the ego, you know, you're joined at the hip. You're joined at the Being. You know, there's no way for separation to actually have occurred. But also the Father, stands with you because you Are His expression. And all of the Brotherhood stands with you because we Are Family that can't actually be broken apart.

And so while you're engaged in all of this, you are supported by That which stands in loving favor of your becoming actually unconfused, your becoming actually clear right here on planet Earth and ultimately right there with you wherever you might happen to me in the universe.

Trust not your good intentions.

Your good intentions are coming from you privately and have arisen out of what you call your experience in the material world and universe as a mortal. That's where your good intentions have come from, an experience of something I'm telling you, doesn't actually exist because you're the holy Son of God or Daughter, smack dab in the middle . . . I'm going to say, smack dab in the middle of your Father's Mind where your experience of everything that He is Being is available to you because you're not interfering with it in any way.

Trust not your good intentions. They are not enough. But trust implicitly your willingness, . .

. . . what is willingness? It's you being present with nothing in you to interfere in any way. That's willingness. It's an absolute absence of effort of any kind. That's the simplicity of it. Again:

Trust not your good intentions. They are not enough. But trust implicitly your willingness, whatever else may enter.

Whatever else may enter is irrelevant, it's going to be a distraction from your willingness, from the silence that you're willing to be in with your attentiveness directed toward the truth that you've asked to be revealed to you from the Father or from the Holy Spirit.

Concentrate only on this, and be not disturbed that shadows surround it. That is why you came. If you could come without them, . . .

. . . the shadows . . .

. . . you would not NEED the holy instant. Come to it not in arrogance, assuming that you must achieve the state its coming brings with it.

You see? Simplicity, the absolute absence of effort.

The miracle of the holy instant lies in your willingness to . . .

. . . what . . .

. . . let it be what it is.

Now you've got to become childlike. You've got to be willing to become curious to experience what you haven't experienced and what you don't think you know so that the unknown inspires you with an invigorated involvement with Life, because Life has a capital "L," and isn't mortality or a material world and universe, but something far different, where sin, disease and death are absent.

. . . let it be what it is. And in your willingness for this lies also your acceptance of yourself as YOU were meant to be.

Now mind you, this all sounds wonderful. And I'm telling you that the holy instant is meant to work. And so this is inevitable if you'll do the one simple thing of silencing yourself, silencing who you think you are, silencing who you have come to believe you are. And silencing the character and personality that you've developed—based upon who you think you are—so that the Gift that goes beyond everything, that reveals your holiness to you, may register with you so that you might be in what you thought was a material world and universe as a mortal, in a brand new way, where the Kingdom of Heaven that it is, is the only thing that confronts you and your holiness is the quality of Being and the actuality of Being from which you Be in the Kingdom of Heaven.

Between now and the next time we get together I'm going to invite you all—whoever is listening—to read this Section through to the end: The Section entitled The Little Willingness. It will make the quality of your week different and it will lay the groundwork for a fuller understanding of what I'm going to share next time to you.

The leading edge Christmas, the trailing edge Easter, that's where everyone is.
And it makes for interesting times.

I love you. I love you all and I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

February 5th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I'm going to back up a couple of sentences, which we read last week:

The miracle of the holy instant lies in your willingness to let it be what it is. And in your willingness for this lies also your acceptance of yourself as YOU were meant to be.

Sounds like a simple idea. It is, but everyone tends to make it complicated.

The miracle of the holy instant lies in your willingness to let it be what it is.

And I'm going to read it with this emphasis:

You see? You don't know what it is. And that's why you're still dreaming. That's why you're still experiencing life in the Kingdom of Heaven as just the human condition.

Your willingness to let the holy instant work lies in your recognition that you don't know what it is and that's why you're asking. And the key is, when you're asking, to make no assumptions whatsoever and let it be what it is and in the process, educate you as to what it is . . . put you in the position of learning what you didn't know. So the key is not to try to be prepared when you lean into the holy instant. Just be willing.

And in your willingness for this lies also your acceptance of yourself as YOU were meant to be.

Yes. You as YOU were meant to be, you as you divinely Are, are the presence of attention. Not the problem-solver, not the intellectual corrections officer. Your task, your purpose, is to be the presence of attention where you let Creation reveal itself to you as your conscious awareness of Being, which amounts to letting God's Perspective fill you because God's Perspective is your true Perspective.

Now it's really quite simple if you stop to think about it. If you're busy thinking, if you're busy trying to be a problem solver, if you're busy trying to do things your way, you are not listening, are you. You're not in a mode of attention where your mind is still.

Now, it's very simple. The difference between being in a state of attention and being in a state of assertion is the difference between being Awake and being asleep. It really is that simple. It really is that fundamental.

Now . . .

. . . in your willingness for this lies also your acceptance of yourself as YOU were meant to be.

Not arguing with it anymore, not fighting for the last chance to be in charge. Now, that's going to leave you in a position where you could say all the meaning has gone out of your life. All the meaning you've been able to give yourself is gone because you've abandoned the assertive role—the role of initiator.

Now that's humiliating to the ego. But when it's embraced without resistance, it's called humility. And it isn't meaningless. As it says here, continuing:

Humility will never ask that you remain content with littleness.

. . . meaninglessness, inconsequentialness. No.

Humility will never ask that you remain content with [them]. But it DOES require that you be NOT content with less than greatness . . .

. . . now if the sentence ended there, that could be very satisfying to you. And you could slip right out of the opportunity to Wake up. But here's what it actually says:

Humility . . . DOES require that you be NOT content with less than greatness which comes not of you.

You've got to be content with greatness that you didn't initiate, that you didn't develop, that you didn't create and therefore that you cannot get credit for. Let me read it again:

Humility . . .

. . . your Birthright, that out of which your fulfillment arises . . .

. . . will never ask that you remain content with littleness. But it DOES require that you be NOT content with less than greatness which comes not of you.

Your difficulty with the holy instant, your difficulty with the two-step, your difficulty with engaging in what will prompt your Awakening, arises from your fixed conviction that you're not worthy of it.

Well, you know, that's what the ego says. But what it really means is that it requires you to abandon something important to you, so important to you that you're perfectly willing to lie to yourself and say that your fulfillment is something you're not worthy of and therefore, you can't have it! Pretty slick.

Your difficulty with the holy instant . . .

. . . as something practical, as something worth engaging . . .

. . . arises from your fixed conviction that you are not worthy of it.

Your fixed conviction that you're not worthy of it is your armor . . . it's the means by which you avoid having to abandon authority that is all important to you. That's all. It's a lie that you say to yourself. And it keeps you safe, dreaming. And what is this, but the determination to be as you would make yourself. You see? You, through thinking . . . you, through not being silent . . . you through not engaging in the two-step at all, make of yourself something unworthy of that which arises out of the two-step: Awakening—Waking up to the truth, rediscovering who you Are, rediscovering your Birthright and embodying it because you're not resisting it in any way with arguments and lies.

God did not create His dwelling-place unworthy of Him.

. . . you . . .

. . . His dwelling-place, to be unworthy of Him. And if you believe He cannot enter where He wills to be, you must be INTERFERING with His Will.

You see? You see, it's not because you're not worthy of it, but your interfering with your Father's Will, which is for you to be sane, not suffering from insanity, being able to clearly experience yourself as His Son, His Daughter—His direct expression in which all that He is, is embodied fully.

That's what makes you a worthy dwelling place for Him. It's not as though He had any choice, you know. [chuckles] There aren't multiple dwelling places for Him. There are the places where He is expressing Himself, called "you" and you . . . and you . . . and you . . . and everyone.

You do not need the strength of willingness to come from YOU, but only from HIS Will.

Now we're beginning to step onto a difficulty here, because you want to play a part. You think you need to play a part. Your whole state of existence as an independent entity has revolved around your intelligence, your reasoning, your capacities, your definitions and that and those therefore constitute the normal activity of an entity like you.

And so, you think that in your process of Waking up, you're going to continue to be the one authorizing the Awakening by taking certain steps. And so, you're going to be willing to Wake up. And in the process you will in all likelihood, create the definitions of what your willingness means and where your willingness is going to take you. And because you will have given some good definitions that you can believe, you'll put yourself behind the effort. You'll give permission to go forward. But all you're doing is fulfilling your plan, your idea of what the two-step and what the awareness of holiness will mean. You see?

And so you're stuck. You're stuck in the place where your Birthright can't be experienced because you're not in a state of listening—of attention.

The holy instant does not come from your little willingness alone. It is always the result of your small willingness combined with the unlimited power of God's Will. You have been wrong in thinking that it is needful to PREPARE yourself for Him. It is impossible to make arrogant preparations for holiness, and NOT believe that it is up to you to establish the conditions for peace. GOD has established them. They do not wait upon your willingness for what they are.

You see? Oh-h . . . so insulting! The more we go along, the less there is for you to do and the more pejorative the words are that are used to describe what you're doing when you're bringing your willingness and not doing less, not doing nothing, not being still, not just being the presence of attention. Whew! It is insulting and you know it. Because when you actually, genuinely decide to reach out to the Father, you become clearly aware that you're not comfortable with what your joining with the Father will mean for you.

I mean, after all to say, “Not my will be done, but Thine . . .” is insulting to someone who, through the practice of his will becomes something Real. To abandon it, necessarily means that you will become unreal. And that is what is frightening, that is what is insulting.

It is impossible . . .

. . . nevertheless . . .

. . . to make arrogant preparations for holiness, and NOT believe that it is up to you to establish the conditions for peace. GOD has established them. They do not wait upon your willingness for what they are. Your willingness is needed only to make it possible to TEACH you what they are.

You know what? It's very simple. You do have apparently, the capacity to think. You do apparently have the capacity to reason. And you have the capacity to use logic. Those are not meaningless but they are used by you to practice and establish meaninglessness. Now their use is for one thing: Logic, thinking, reasoning are all available to you to utilize when someone is telling you the truth that goes beyond your present sense of things.

You read the scriptures, you read holy books, you read and embrace spiritual ideas and they all get blended into reasonableness for you. Now the purpose is for them to bring you to a place where you can reasonably abandon control because reason used in relationship to what you've learned, what you've been taught, tells you that God is Love. It tells you that God is your Source. It tells you that when you're joined with Him you are in your peace and you are in the place of experiencing total fulfillment, not only apparently by yourself, but with involvement with all of Creation and all of the Brotherhood.

These things help you arrive at a point where you can say, "Father . . ." you see, abandoning the independence . . . "Father, what is the truth here? Father, what is Your Perspective on this? How do you see this part of the human condition as it truly Is, being the Kingdom of Heaven that it actually Is, and my being the holy Son of God that I actually Am? It is clear enough to me that the way I have described things in my request of you, Father, I can dare to abandon my control, my need for authority, and the need for an ego hit if I'm successful in exercising that authority and I am going to shut up! I'm going to let out a sigh . . . I'm going to release my tension and I'm going to turn my attention to You with devotion. And I will listen until I hear. Because I know you are waiting for this exact moment where I desire to join with You again."

You see, that's the proper use of logic and thinking and reasoning. To help you arrive at a point where you can conceive that there is no vulnerability associated with coming back into your right Mind as a result of joining with the Father to say, "Father, how do you see things? Show me what it's my Birthright to be experiencing. Show me my holiness." You see?

If you maintain you are unworthy of learning this, you are interfering with the lesson by believing that you [can] make the LEARNER different.

You, the learner.

You did not make the learner, nor CAN you make him different.

The learner is the one you think you are when you don't know who you Are. The learner is the one you think you are when you don't know that you are the holy Son or Daughter of God.

You did not make the learner, nor CAN you make him different. Would you first make a miracle yourself, and then expect one to be made FOR you?

Here's the simplicity of it:

YOU merely ask the question. The answer is GIVEN.

It's a Gift.

Seek not to answer it, but merely RECEIVE the answer as it is given.

And you know that you will seek to answer it yourself. And if you don't seek to answer it, you will after having asked, overwhelm yourself with all the arguments of why you can't have the answer, why you don't want the answer and why you're going to be unwilling to receive it.

"Oh, it's going to change my life too drastically! Oh, there are so many things I want to do that, of course, when I'm Awake, I'm not going to be able to do. Oh, I'm not going to do it because doing it doesn't respect me. I have to abandon self-respect to do this. Oh, I have emergencies to take care of that require my personal attention, my personal evaluation, and I must attend to those before I can possibly take time to sit down, shut up, and listen for what the answer might be . . .” even though the answer might be far superior and far more instantaneous than the one you will come up with as a result of your own personal effort. You see?

Seek not to answer it, . . .

. . . even though you're likely to . . .

. . . but merely RECEIVE the answer as it is given.

Remember, you don't know the answer. And the answer is going to take you in a direction you haven't been in yet, because if you had been in it, you would be Awake right now.

So I'm sorry, there's nothing useful for you to utilize in the process of Awakening, except whatever has helped you arrive at a point of saying "Thy Will, not mine be done. Father, I lean into You on purpose and I will introduce nothing that will interfere with my willingly falling into Your Arms and Your Support and Your Insight and Your Perspective" . . . and on and on.

In preparing for the holy instant, do not attempt to make yourself holy to be ready to receive it.

Do you see how silly that is?

In preparing for the holy instant, do not attempt to make yourself holy to be ready to receive it. That is but to confuse your role with God's. Atonement cannot come to those who think that THEY must first atone, but only to those who offer it nothing more than simple willingness to make way for it.

To make way for it to present itself to you and by virtue of its presentation, change you, cause learning to occur, because you didn't interfere with the learning by introducing theories and concepts or justifications or denials of it. You see? You see, the simplicity of it is, you could say, found in the complete absence of a need for you to do anything relative to it except to invite it. Whew!

You will find that one of the biggest arguments against it is, "I don't have time." "I don't have time to be quiet." "I don't have time to listen." And it's only after you have pursued your solutions and failing that you finally arrive at a point where you'll say, "I need to sit down and be quiet. I need help. I can't do it by myself," which means, "I must not be the one who needs to be involved in the correction of this problem. It's the Father, in whose Presence and in my willingness to receive of Him I will find that there is no problem to solve. It's disappeared. Correction has apparently occurred.

Purification . . .

Did you ever think that purification would be a matter of cleansing your mind about all of your thoughts, beliefs, concepts, definitions, that purification is the filtering out of what doesn't belong in what is to be a simple state of attention—not filled with thoughts or ideas or concepts or definitions?

Purification is of God alone, and therefore for you. Rather than seek to prepare yourself for Him, try to think thus:

"I who am host to God AM worthy of Him.

He Who established His dwelling-place in me created it as

He would have it be.

It is not needful that I make it ready for Him, . . ."

. . . let's hear that again: . . .

"It is not needful that I make it ready for Him,

But only that I do not interfere with His plan to restore to me my own awareness of my readiness, which is eternal.

I need add nothing to His plan.

But to receive it, I must be willing not to substitute my own in place of it."

Beautifully simple and simply beautiful.

Now it should be easy to see the meaningfulness of this with reference to the point at which you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. Father, I'd rather do it my way." In order to Wake up you have to undo that.

"I need add nothing to His plan.

But to receive it, I must be willing not to substitute my own in place of it."

The whole problem . . . the experience of the human condition—sin, sickness, death, suffering—is the result of your having substituted your own in place of the Father's Will.

It's so simple. And therefore, the correction is simple.

But through my talking and through your study of the Course and through your study of other Spiritual works where truth is revealed, you are able through reason, thinking and logic to arrive at a point where you can dare not to substitute your own in place of His.

You're on your way out. You are on your way out of the illusion that you're in something that never could have actually happened. Never could the Kingdom of Heaven have been translated into the human condition—a material world and universe—therefore it never happened. But in your firm belief that it has, because you made the definitions up, incorrect as they were, and you believe them and you base your existence upon them . . . you're lost. You are incapable of seeing the Kingdom of Heaven that you've misinterpreted. But you're on your way out. You're on your way back into your sanity.

"I need add nothing to His plan.

But to receive it, I must be willing not to substitute my own in place of it."

And that is all.

Four words . . . the biggest four words there are.

And that is all. Add more, and you will merely TAKE AWAY the little that is asked.

Because you've switched back into being the authorizer, you've switched back to being on your own. You've switched back into the mindset that causes the Kingdom of Heaven to be seen as the human condition and a material world and universe, even though the Kingdom of Heaven hasn't changed.

Remember you made guilt, and that your plan for the escape from guilt has been to bring Atonement TO it, and make salvation fearful.

Okay. I know some of you still will argue about that you made guilt, but the moment you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. Father, I am getting a divorce. Father, I am turning away from You and paying attention only to myself," two things came into the picture . . . fear and guilt. Your decision to abandon the Father, to become independent in your own right, created fear and guilt. That's just the way it is.

Remember you made guilt, and that your plan for the escape from guilt has been to bring Atonement TO it, and make salvation fearful.

Why would that be? Well, if you're going to bring atonement to your illusion, you know that atonement is going to invalidate your illusion. It's going to invalidate you and you're going to be faced with what you're faced with right now, which is the fear that you're going to become meaningless and that you will never again be able to be meaningful in anyway. And so that makes atonement fearful. You see? And it's not true.

And it is only fear that you will add, if you prepare YOURSELF for love.

If you prepare yourself. You say: Prepare yourself for the holy instant. Prepare yourself for holiness . . .

. . . prepare YOURSELF for love.

You know, there's a beautiful statement: "Love inspires, illumines, designates and leads the way."²

Again: "Love inspires, illumines, designates and leads the way."

How can you prepare yourself for love? You need to be humble enough, to be quiet enough so that inspiration can enter you, so that you might be lifted up by the inspiration that love brings. You can't prepare the inspiration for yourself that's going to lift you up. You can't prepare for love. All you can do is become still and make the invitation. Love waits for you to invite it in. When you let it in, you feel inspired. And every one of you have had experiences of inspiration brought by love that lifted you out of some situation or condition and helped move you and lead you and support you on the way out, with a peace that you couldn't possibly have brought into the picture all by yourself.

So this is an easy way for you to understand that it is only fear that you will add if you prepare yourself for love and what the alternative is to let love disclose to you through inspiration what heals.

The preparation for the holy instant belongs to Him Who gives it.

Not him who receives it. So if you are going to be prepared for the holy instant that you are choosing for, then all you need to bring to this event is joyful inquisitiveness: “How is the Father, going to prepare me for the holy instant?” You see? To think that you have to prepare yourself is to busy yourself with something that will only delay the Father’s preparation of you, which will occur when you become still.

Release yourselves to Him Whose function is release.

It’s a little repetitious, isn’t it? It says, stop trying to do things. You’re not going to create the answer. You’re not going to bring the answer forth. You’re not going to figure out a way to be what you have never been before. But you have a means of obtaining all of them. And it is by, you could say, saying, “Help!” or “Father, help me!” or “Father, show me the way. Father, reveal the truth to me.” or Holy Spirit or Jesus. You see?

Release yourselves to Him Whose function is release. Do not assume . . .

. . . take on . . .

. . . His function for Him. Give Him but what He asks, that you may learn how little is your part, and how great is His.

Now here we are, we’re going to address it directly:

It is this that makes the holy instant so easy and so natural. You make it difficult, because you insist [that] there must be more that you need do. And it is very hard for you to realize that it is not personally insulting that your contribution and the Holy Spirit’s are so extremely disproportionate. You are still convinced YOUR understanding is a powerful contribution to the truth, and makes it what it is. [And] Yet we have emphasized that you need understand nothing.

Just keeps hammering away.

Salvation is easy just BECAUSE it asks nothing that you cannot give RIGHT NOW.

But it asks something that you’re unwilling to give right now, cause it’s a sacrifice of you and your integrity. You know, it’s like going to a casting agent for a movie, “Don’t you have at least a small bit part for me? Can I stand in the crowd in the background almost out of sight? Cannot my presence add something to the scene?”

Thank God, it's not required. You don't have to be in the movie. You don't have to ask for a place in the Kingdom of Heaven because you already have a place.

And so it's when you shut up human will and say, "Father, what is the truth here?" that the truth is revealed to you by the Father—not by your preparation and not by your imagination. And in the revelation of your place in the Kingdom of Heaven, in Reality that is unalterable and eternal, you find that all the meaningfulness that your Being could possibly have is yours and always has been yours, was yours while you were imagining differently, before you decided to genuinely engage in the two-step and abandon your will . . . your willfulness.

This is absolutely beautiful . . . absolutely simple . . . and yet it seems impossible.

You say, "Well, your teachings, Jesus, have been around for two-thousand-eleven years . . . hasn't happened yet. There have been great spiritual teachers even before you and it hasn't happened yet. It's completely unreasonable for me to embrace the idea that it's possible for me, or that it's actually possible for anyone. After all, in all of existence if it hasn't happened yet, what justification is there for my believing that it can and will?"

Well, let me ask you this: What would have happened if Wilbur and Orville Wright had said, "You know, in all of existence no man has ever flown, only the birds. Birds were meant to fly not man. There's no way to do it." What if they used that argument: That in all of time, in all of human existence no man ever got off the ground, therefore it can't happen now.

I'm telling you that it can happen. It's time for it to happen. And you've got to take a look and see just how much faith and commitment you bring to your crazy thoughts, to your negative thoughts, to your thoughts of what is possible and impossible. But remember, what makes things seem possible and impossible to you are simply the way you have linked together beliefs, ideas and misunderstandings and some bits and pieces of truth. Your release from it comes in your abandoning of what you have such great commitment to.

You know, many of you say, "Well, there's no reason not to have some new technological gadget. There's no reason to not have a machine that can levitate us off the ground. There's no reason not to explore new inventions." And you will go after those new inventions with great vigor.

Well, I tell you what, be like Wilbur and Orville Wright and go after something that's never happened before. Go after your holiness. Go after the experience of your sanity, which means, go after the experience of the Kingdom of Heaven that you're in the middle of but not experiencing because you're so damn sure that your definitions about matter and the way the universe works proves that everything I'm talking about can't possibly be true.

Stop arguing yourself into defeat. And dare to explore a little, dare to be radical a little.

Forget not that it has been your decision to make everything that IS natural and easy for you impossible.

That's sanity. It's the truth that can release you quite suddenly. It's very helpful.

Forget not that it has been your decision to make everything that IS natural and easy for you impossible. What you believe to be impossible will BE, if God so wills it, . .

. . . you can't just decide what can or cannot be and have it be so.

What you believe to be impossible will BE, if God so wills it, but you will remain quite unaware of it. If you believe the holy instant is difficult for you, it is because you have become the arbiter of what is possible, and remain unwilling to give place to One Who KNOWS.

Yield . . . give up into . . . abandon authority for paying attention and letting something else fill your attention, something other than you fill your attention.

The whole belief in orders of difficulty in miracles is centered on this.

What was it again?

If you believe the holy instant is difficult for you, it is because you have become the arbiter of what is possible, and remain unwilling . . .

[Repeats] . . . remain unwilling to give place to One Who KNOWS.

The Father, the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind—your Guide or me.

The whole belief in orders of difficulty in miracles is centered on this.

Your . . .

. . . unwilling to give place to One Who KNOWS.

And that's what causes order of difficulty in miracles.

Everything God wills is not only possible, . .

. . . listen to this:

Everything God wills is not only possible, but has already HAPPENED. And that is why the past has gone. It NEVER happened in reality.

All of the illusions never happened in Reality. All of the problems, which cause you to say, "I don't have time to practice the holy instant," never happened.

It NEVER happened in reality. Only in your minds, which thought it did . . .

You see? It's a little bit of misdirection that occurs. You see a problem and you say, "I've got to attend to correcting that problem." But the only thing that causes the problem to seem to be real is a glitch in your mind. And if you want to correct the problem or deal with it, you're going to have to let it go and attend to the glitch that caused it to seem to be real. And caused it to seem to be something that it was more important for you to give your attention to than attending to that in your mind—the glitch. And attending to the glitch is accomplished through the holy instant.

Now, this is the simplicity of it, this is the beauty of it. It also seems to be the great impossibility of it and something which you can't let go of your doubt about. But you have to persist. Like Orville and Wilbur Wright, persist. It's the way Home.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with your next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

February 12th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

As you begin to more consistently practice the holy instant, choosing to join with the Father and no longer maintain your divorce from Him, no longer maintain your independence, you are going to find yourselves experiencing the fact that in the holy instant—in that joined state of Mind—God's laws prevail.

God's laws disallow for anything unlike God. And the disallowing of anything unlike God is therefore at the Hand of God, at the Hand of the way things work, and not because of any power you personally have.

As you engage in the holy instant, irregularly, but nevertheless you engage in it frequently, you're going to have experiences of the correction of problems because of the fact that you have allowed yourself to be in the place where God's laws prevail. And this is going to cause you to find reason or justification for engaging in the holy instant, in joining with the Father.

Now, you are going to prefer not to do your own thinking. You are going to prefer not to engage your imagination as you go through your daily affairs. And as a result, you will abandon the arena in which sin, sickness and death occur. You will also abandon the arena in which you as an authorizer seem to exist—you as a source of control.

You're going to find that by comparison with your movements in and out of the holy instant, that to be alone with your own thoughts really isn't satisfying. It's going to cause them to be something you don't choose to indulge in anymore.

Now, this is not going to turn you into a monk, or a weird one of any sort. I mean by that, someone behaving considerably at odds with everyone else. But the fact that you will be more and more consistently joining and saying, "Father what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?" you're going to find that the state of being in the holy instant is a state of being in prayer . . . constant prayer . . . "Father what is the truth here?" and you listen and you grasp the Meaning and you naturally say, "Yes." And as I've said many times, prayer is saying "Yes" to God.

So, you're not going to be engaging in denying the world. You're not going to be engaged in trying to get rid of or control anything "in the world." That's what you've been doing forever, relatively speaking. And you are going to find yourself turning to the Father and staying in connection.

Waking up is best described as moving into a constant state of prayer.

There's another aspect to prayer. And that is, that you're deferring authority away from yourself. Prayer is a state of humility. A state in which there is no arrogance and therefore no fear, no guilt. I want you to keep this in mind. Prayer is the state of Being when you move out of the driver's seat. Isn't that wonderful?

Now, we're at the beginning of a new section entitled:

THE HAPPY DREAM¹

Prepare you NOW for the undoing of what never was. If you already understood the difference between truth and illusion, the Atonement would have no meaning. The holy instant, your holy relationship, the Holy Spirit's teaching, and all the means by which salvation is accomplished, would have no purpose.

[repeats] If you already understood the difference between truth and illusion, . .

For they are all but aspects of the plan to change your dreams of fear to happy dreams, from which you waken easily to knowledge.

How do you shift to happy dreams? By abandoning your independence, practicing the holy instant, asking of God what the truth is, what is needed, and listening. And listening until you hear, listening until you manage to accidentally let go of control. And I'm going to say accidentally because the only way you will let go of control is with help. And when you get the help, it will happen not at your hand and you will call that, "accidental."

It's important.

Put yourself not in charge of this, for you cannot distinguish between advance and retreat.

It's bad news. You don't know the difference between truth and illusion and you cannot distinguish between advance and retreat. But again, it's only when you dare to realize this and accept it as true that you will begin to actually reach out to Something beyond whatever wonderful capacities you have thought you've had.

Some of your greatest advances you have judged as failures, and some of your deepest retreats you have evaluated as success.

You don't know the difference. And as long as you think you do, you will bring your best resources, your best independent resources into play instead of shutting up, instead of going into the silence within to the altar within you which is where you naturally find yourself when you've chosen for your peace, when you choose for the holy instant and you say, "Father, what is the truth here? Father, I need help. Holy Spirit, help me."

Your reluctance to engage in this lies in the fact that you still have confidence in your own personal private independent capacities which you, at your hand, have nurtured and developed until they have seemed to bring a semblance of dignity, integrity and structure to this independent one that you are.

Again, I want to remind you that no matter how well things are going for you, if you're still experiencing sin, sickness and death, you are not experiencing success. You are not experiencing truth because you are denying the fact that God is all, in all. And therefore what is happening is happening at God's Hand because it's the Movement of Creation which your choice to participate in the holy instant moves you into the access of.

It's your Birthright to be that which observes, is conscious of, the Movements God engages in as the act of Creation—the forever Movement of Creation. As you move back into that state of attention, the happy dream is the result. The comprehension of truth infills you and gives you peace and allows you to move in harmony with what God's Will is bringing forth in the movements that you had before, called the world and universe that started from a "Big Bang" and is constituted of the definitions you have adopted either by your own creation or by being taught by others what it is, without ever shutting up and saying, "In spite of what I've been taught Father, in spite of what seems intelligent to me, Father, what is the truth here? I think it's a material world and universe. I want to see and experience the Kingdom of Heaven which You have told me it Is, which it has been revealed to me is the truth about it. I do not know how to shift from my definitions and the teachings I've adopted, into what to me seems to be an utterly uncontrollable, original experience of what you, Father, are Creating. Help me because I do not know how to do it."

Continuing . . .

Never approach the holy instant after YOU have tried to remove all fear and hatred from your mind.

See, you don't even have to do that. In fact you had better not do that.

Never approach the holy instant after YOU have tried to remove all fear and hatred from your mind. That is ITS function.

That is the function of the holy instant. And . . .

Never attempt to overlook your guilt BEFORE you ask the Holy Spirit's help. That is HIS function. Your part is only to offer Him a little willingness to . . .

. . . what?

. . . LET Him remove all fear and hatred, and to BE forgiven.

This is very confusing to the mind that tries to order itself in order to have integrity and some confidence that one is not totally vulnerable, because it says do something that it tells you, you can't do. Or it tells you to do something that you're not inclined to do because you're used to doing things for yourself. And here it's saying you must turn to Something that is in charge, that is not you! That's confusing.

If you dare to become still, if you dare to practice the holy instant, it puts you in a place where you're not in control—a place where no order will enter until you let the Father speak, until you let the Holy Spirit address you and inspire you and illumine the truth to you, and then guide you in Its practice so that you are behaving in what had been a material world and universe, in a new way, which ultimately you will discover is the way you behave in the Kingdom of Heaven. And by virtue of following the Guidance that you get, so that your practice of yielding is more and more complete, you will find your mind transformed and you will find yourself having the Kingdom of Heaven illuminated to you.

It's a Gift. It's a Gift you can't control into your experience but it is a Gift you can let into your experience. Letting is what is confusing to everyone. Doing is what everyone has great confidence in.

If you're doing doesn't happen until after you have let inspiration illuminate the truth, then your doing will be in perfect harmony with Reality, in perfect harmony with the Kingdom of Heaven that you're misinterpreting at this moment to be something else. And as a result then of your being, acting, doing, in harmony with the Kingdom of Heaven, all of your feedback will confirm your divinity and will confirm the Kingdom of Heaven and will confirm the fact that you have been successfully leaving the orphanage, the place of your so-called independence.

On your little faith, . .

. . . that you put forth in practicing the two-step, engaging in the holy instant, .

On your little faith, joined with his understanding, He will build your part in the Atonement, and make sure you will fulfill it easily.

When you turn all of your decisions over to the Holy Spirit and you act on the basis of the Holy Spirit's decisions which He reveals to you, you find yourself more and more in harmony with Reality. That's the way it works. And as the result of turning your decisions over to the Holy Spirit, you, because the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind, find the cohesiveness and the intelligence and the divine order of your Being once again illuminated—lit up in you so that it doesn't escape your attention—and you are transformed.

All of this because you have chosen to engage in a holy relationship and to honor that relationship.

Again, what is a holy relationship? It's a relationship you have with someone or even something where God is not left out in the process. In other words, to once again be specifically clear: The holy relationship is the relationship you have with someone where you have not looked to them first to gather the facts of their being, but have instead done the two-step, shut up, and in the silence asked, "Father what is the truth about this one?" so that what is revealed to you by your joining with your Father about your Brother or Sister, becomes your new perception of them which automatically, as I've said before, causes your behavior toward them to reflect their holiness, to reflect what has been revealed to you, rather than anything you might have believed about them or anything they may have presented to you as being the truth about them.

On your little faith, joined with His understanding, HE will build your part in the Atonement, and make sure that you fulfill it easily. And with Him, YOU . . .

. . . in partnership . . .

. . . will build a ladder planted in the solid rock of faith, and rising even to Heaven. Nor will you use it to ascend to Heaven alone.

Now, we're coming up to a part here that might help you see why you ought to not try to figure this out yourself, not try to plan it, and not try to direct it. But rather with total awareness that you don't know what it's going to take or how it's going to happen, turn to the Father and say, "Lead me . . . lead me."

Through your holy relationship, reborn and blessed in every holy instant which you do not arrange, . .

. . . got it?

. . . blessed in every holy instant which you do not arrange, thousands will rise to Heaven with you. Can YOU plan for this?

How could you plan for it when you don't even know that's what will happen? Would you possibly conceive that that is something for you to pay attention for or that that will happen as a result of your practicing the holy instant? No.

You might think this is a private little journey of you back into your right Mind which obviously is right with you where you are because it's one, "You know, it's relatively private, except I'm going to use my partner in the holy relationship as the justification for seeking what the Father's Will is." In that way it's not private. But would you have thought that . . .

. . . reborn and blessed in every holy instant which you do not arrange, thousands will rise to Heaven with you?

No.

Can YOU Plan for this? Or could you prepare YOURSELVES for such a function? Yet it is possible, because God wills it.

That's why you want to know what God's Will is. That's why you want to be willing to abandon the way you think things work and how you think things ought to work, because you will think too small. You will think, as a practice of defense, in a way that couldn't possibly be overwhelming or miraculous for you.

. . . it is possible, because God wills it. Nor will He change His Mind about it.

Thank God . . . because that means your way Home is securely established. And ultimately you will find that you've been Home all along. And that's why the way back to the conscious awareness of it is unchangeable and secure and dependable.

The means and purpose BOTH belong to Him.

See? They don't belong to you . . . thank God.

The means and purpose BOTH belong to Him. You have accepted one; . .

. . . the purpose. Remember . . . what's the purpose here? The goal is to access your holiness. Holiness is the goal. So:

You have accepted one; . .

. . . the purpose . . .

. . . the other will be provided.

Out of your hands. But your hands are there to receive.

A purpose such as this, . .

. . . the goal of holiness . . .

. . . without the means, is inconceivable. He will provide the means to ANYONE who shares His purpose.

So if the goal is holiness, if that's the purpose, and you share that purpose with the Father, with the Holy Spirit, with your Brother or Sister, . .

He will provide the means . . .

. . . it's absolute. He will not change His Mind about it. But you're going to have to mean it when you say, "Father, Thy Will be done, not mine." You're going to need to mean it. Which means you're going to have to listen for His Voice, for His Meanings without having an ace up your sleeve, without having a backup plan. And just letting yourself . . . abandon yourself into whatever His answer is going to be—lean into Him without reservation.

And just do it. Do it throughout your day, lean into His understanding, when you're driving on the road, when you're feeding your cat, when you're cleaning your house, when you're at the office. Want to know of holiness about everything. It doesn't have to be a formal process which you're in control of—"I'm going to sit down. I'm going to meditate for twenty minutes and I'm going to do it twice a day. No, I'm going to do it three times a day." Great organization, huh?

No! [snaps fingers] Do it on the spur of the moment. [snaps fingers] Do it wherever you are. [snaps fingers] Do it with whatever is going on—say, "I want to experience the holiness of this, that or the other thing . . . of this moment." You see? It will become a devotion, because you would much rather know of the holiness of everything than the suffering that is otherwise experienced.

Happy dreams come true, . . .

. . . hear that?

Happy dreams come true, NOT because they are dreams, but only because they are HAPPY. And so they must be loving.

Joy is inseparable from love. Happiness is an expression of love. Happiness is a form of love.

Their message . . .

. . . the messages of happy dreams . . .

Their message is, "Thy Will be done," and not, "I want it otherwise."

Again:

Their message is, "Thy Will be done," and not, "I want it otherwise."

You see? When you got a divorce from the Father and began to function independently, everything was based on the statement, "I want it otherwise." Otherwise you would have stayed with the Father and said, "Thy Will be done."

So, the happy dream is going to cost you something. The happy dream is going to cost you the right to say, "I want it otherwise." And you're going to replace it with, "Thy Will be done." That's the way you . . . what? That's the way you annul the divorce!

Moving into an attitude of "Thy Will be done," constitutes a joining . . . a joining that breaks the independence. And it expresses an honoring of that to which you're giving the right for His Will to be done for you in your life.

The alignment of means and purpose is an undertaking impossible for you to understand.

And that's okay. It's not the end of the world for you not to be able to understand it, because it's going to be done for you. You don't have to be able to understand it.

You do not even realize you HAVE accepted the Holy Spirit's purpose as your own, and you would merely bring unholy means to its accomplishment.

Now, what does that mean? You don't realize you have accepted the Holy Spirit's purpose as your own? The simple fact is that in spite of your insistence of imagining yourself as independent, you've never stopped being the Son or Daughter of God. Your will has never been at odds with the Father—impossible.

And so, the Holy Spirit's purpose for you to remember and access your holiness is your will as well already. It's just that you are so persistent in attempting to be on your own—independent. So:

You do not even realize you HAVE accepted the Holy Spirit's purpose . . .

. . . for holiness . . .

. . . as your own, and . . .

. . . I'm going to add, because of that . . .

. . . you would merely bring unholy means to its accomplishment.

That's what the human condition and your life as you're currently experiencing it is.

The little faith it needed to change the purpose . . .

. . . from independent, creativity and authority to the goal of holiness . . .

The little faith it needed to change the purpose is all that is required to receive the means and USE them.

And so when you have decided not to engage with anyone without bringing God into the picture, you've set the scene . . .

. . . to receive the means and USE them.

Receive the means as direct communication from the Father, the Holy Spirit, your Guide or me. It's like tipping the first domino, the rest of them come down without effort on your part. You bring the little willingness—the domino falls.

It is no dream to love your brother as yourself. Nor is your holy relationship a dream. All that remains of dreams within it is that it is still a SPECIAL relationship.

Again:

All that remains of dreams within it . . .

. . . within the holy relationship . . .

. . . is that it is still a SPECIAL relationship.

You still seem to be orphans negotiating or maybe allowing for an annulment of your divorce from your Father to occur.

Yet it is very useful to the Holy Spirit, . .

. . . this special relationship that you still have.

Yet it is very useful to the Holy Spirit, Who HAS a special function here. It will become the happy dream through which He can spread joy to thousands on thousands who believe that love is fear, not happiness. Let Him fulfill the function that He gave to your relationship . . .

. . . this very all encompassing function.

Let Him fulfill the function that He gave to your relationship by accepting it FOR you, . .

. . . still letting it be done . . .

. . . and nothing will be wanting that would make of it what He would have it be.

Again . . . the practice of the holy instant is the tipping over of the first domino. And incredibly more happens as a result than you could imagine that contributes to the Awakening of all the brothers who are sleeping. Because when you and another withdraw investment in mutual agreements—mutual agreements that keep the illusion going—it weakens everyone else’s capacity to maintain the illusion. And I will tell you, that those who are very close to letting go of their control, will feel themselves pushed over the brink, out of the grasp of control and the desire for it and find transformation spontaneously happening with them.

Now, there’s more that you have not dreamed of, but this is enough to warrant your practice—your more diligent, your more faithful practice—of the holy instant, because not only does it move you into the arena where God’s laws prevail and transform you correcting illusions that dog your heels, it also blesses the one you’re in a holy relationship with and it blesses infinitely.

When you feel the holiness of your relationship is threatened by anything, . .

. . . you know, difficulty or strife between you and this one you’re in a holy relationship with—this one you’re being in relationship without neglecting to bring the Father with you into it.

When you feel the holiness of your relationship is threatened by anything, stop instantly and offer the Holy Spirit your willingness, IN SPITE of fear, to let Him exchange this instant . . .

. . . of fear . . .

. . . for the holy one which you would rather have.

I want you to consider that as you practice the holy instant more consistently, as you turn your decisions over to the Holy Spirit more consistently, what you love is going to shift, what you value is going to shift. And that means that your obsession with doing things yourself is going to lessen, because you’re really finding it more meaningful to engage in the holy instant and have the blessing that undoes sin, disease and death and provides a promise of your eternal life, not as off in the future but as very close. And therefore, because it’s very close, you desire and feel in harmony with further abandoning your authority and saying, “Thy Will be done,” to the Father—practicing the holy instant.

He . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . will never fail in this. But forget not that your relationship is one, and so it must be that whatever threatens the peace of one is an equal threat to the other. The power of joining and its blessing lie in the fact that it is now impossible for either of you to experience fear alone, or to attempt to deal with it alone.

You see? You've got to realize that you're in this partnership. And in that partnership life is shared, meaning is shared, ignorance is shared and so on.

Never believe that this is necessary, or even possible.

Again:

The power of joining and its blessing lie in the fact that it is now impossible for either of you to experience fear alone, or to attempt to deal with it alone. Never believe that this is necessary, or even possible.

Meaning, even possible now that you've joined in the holy relationship.

Yet just as this is impossible, so is it equally impossible that the holy instant come to either of you WITHOUT the other.

You see?

And it will come to BOTH at the request of either.

Now, during this coming week I want you to review this because this is very important. You haven't realized how complete the union is in the holy relationship. And because of that, you both have the capacity to help each other move forward.

Whichever is saner at the time when the threat is perceived should remember how deep is his indebtedness to the other, and how much gratitude is due him, and be glad that he can pay his debt by bringing happiness to both.

Because of the commitment to the holy relationship, when there's a challenge, whichever one has the greater stability to remember to not use his or her mind for ego purposes, for purposes of control or judgment, and chooses right at the moment of threat or disturbance to say, "Father, what is the truth here? . . ." you see . . . don't even engage in reaction, "Father, what is the truth here?" . . . you and your partner will be blessed. You will be blessed. Why? Well, the fact that you personally, neither one of you can do anything to change the situation and the fact that that's accepted and one of you says, "Father, what is the truth here?" . . . one of you joins in the holy instant. This lifts you both out. Why? Because in the request, the Holy Spirit responds and does for the two of you what you can't do for yourself.

And so when there is threat, when there is dissonance, whatever, and you're incline to react emotionally, catch yourself, engage in the holy instant. Simply abandon the dynamics of what are disturbing and say, "Father, Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? Help! I do not know how to do it and I understand now that it's not my job to do it personally, but for me to let You do it for us. This I ask for."

Again:

Which ever . . .

. . . and I'm going to add, of you . . .

. . . is saner at the time when the threat is perceived should remember how deep is his indebtedness to the other, and how much gratitude is due him, and be glad that he can pay his debt by bringing happiness to both. Let him remember this, and say:

"I desire this holy instant for myself
That I may share it with my brother, whom I love.
It is not possible that I can have it without him, or he without me.
Yet it is wholly possible for us to share it NOW.
And so I choose this instant as the one to offer to the Holy Spirit,
That His blessing may descend on us, and keep us BOTH in peace."

Now, that's a prayer, isn't it. And that meets the criteria of what a prayer is, as I said earlier, saying, "Yes," to God.

Let this coming week be as full of prayer as possible. And be alert, because you know what the opposite of prayer feels like and so you're able to recognize when you're not putting your mind to its true use, or to a good use and engage immediately in this prayer.

Let it be a prayerful, joined, transformational week.

I love you. And I look forward to being with all of you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

March 24th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I'm going to be a little repetitious tonight to bring the point home that we're talking about. And we need to bring the point home because the subject has to do with the release from dreams—the release from illusions. And it has to do with the way everyone keeps themselves dreaming—keeps themselves from Waking up.

This section is somewhat easily misunderstood and if it succeeds in not being understood it can greatly delay Awakening because one's attention will be in the wrong place.

So let's go back to the beginning: In the beginning, God. And in the beginning, God moved. And the movement was Creation. And Creation was infinite . . . absolutely unbounded, as unbounded as the Mind that moved—that constituted Creation—God's Mind.

And you and all of Creation were the expression of this Mind, this infinite Mind that is God. And the infinity, the infiniteness of It was an absolutely ever-present total experience of every aspect of Creation, not just you and your Brothers and Sisters, but all creatures and all forms and let us say, every leaf on a tree and every blade of grass and every star. Everything embodied the Mind of God. The rocks were conscious. The tree and leaves were conscious. The creatures were conscious. You were conscious. And that consciousness was unseparated. It was whole, all inclusive, so that every aspect of Creation was experiencing every other aspect of Creation without interference.

And as a result, the Love that God is, the Spirit that God is, the Life that God is, was magnified, was the Allness, was the totality and was the infinite focus of Being conscious.

Now as we have discussed, there came a point which the Bible refers to as “The Fall,”¹ there came a point where two Sons or Daughters of God discussed the possibility—an interesting play of the mind—they discussed the possibility of giving everything that God had Created, different definitions. Almost like a game . . . “Wouldn’t it be interesting to call a skunk, a horse? Wouldn’t it be interesting to say that a tree should be like a sheep and give birth to lambs? Wouldn’t it be interesting to be utterly creative?”

And the two of them decided to do this. They made a mutual agreement to think at odds with the natural function of the Mind of God which was instilled in them as their very Being. And so, in effect, they decided by mutual agreement and decision to stand opposed to the Meanings already established.

And as we’ve discussed, when that decision to become divorced from God, when that happened, something totally unexpected happened: They found that they were no longer experiencing the infinite conscious awareness of Creation and their infinite connectedness with every aspect of Creation. And they found themselves to be quite separate, quite tiny in comparison to the totality of the universe—of Creation.

And something else was present that hadn’t been: Fear...FEAR. And they knew they had done something wrong. And guilt immediately came into the picture. But they were steadfast in their determination to be independent. And so they began to determine that life was about overcoming the fear and the guilt. That it wasn’t wrong for them to be independent obviously, because they were being able to do it. They simply had to learn what the trick was to experience their peace and the infinite harmony of Being once again while they were making up the definitions.

Now, fear and guilt brought up a determination to overcome them, placing them in their experience as enemies, as something that was threatening to them that they needed to protect themselves against. But what could they use to protect themselves?

Well, this body that they were experiencing, it was the only tool available to them to exert force or coercion. And so their determination—and here is the key point—their determination to remain independent of the Father was to be accomplished by the use that they put their bodies to which was for the purpose of self-defense.

The body is the lynch-pin in whatever stability can be brought forth regarding being independent and vulnerable. The body misinterpreted by means of giving it definitions that God did not give it, caused it to become the single element which inhibited them from going back Home.

Now mind you, it wasn't the body that kept them from Waking up. And today with every one of you, it is not the body that keeps you from Waking up, that keeps you from experiencing Reality. It's the use you put it to through the use of imagination . . . it's the use you put it to through imagination.

Therefore, the simplicity of everything is, that if you want to Wake up, you have to abandon imagination and specifically, you have to abandon the imaginations that you have applied to your body in giving it definitions that were never present in the Movement of Creation that your Father engaged in by Being . . . by simply Being.

And so it's very important. It is very important not to come to the conclusion that the body is an illusion. Because you see, if you're going to Wake up, you've got to do something more than just discount it as an illusion. You have to engage your body for purposes other than the ones you've been using. You must stop using your body as the means of defense to secure your invulnerability against a chaotic and polarized universe and polarized entities whether they are animals or whether they are Brothers or Sisters.

If you don't understand this, you will not put forth the effort necessary to learn something new and to begin to behave in a new way relative to your body and in the use you put it to.

You see, part of the problem as we've discussed is, that not only are you afraid of your Brothers and Sisters because of the definitions you've applied to them and the confidences you have in your own personal private interpretations of your Brothers and Sisters, you also have definitions about your body which are as polarized as the ones you've applied to everything else.

And so you fantasize that your body can be against you, that because it is not real, or because it is just a material organism, you can't trust it. You must be afraid of it. You must defend yourself against it. You must be on guard and all of this because you've made up imaginary stories about your body and you're reacting to those stories instead of your body. You're having no direct connection with your body, you're having a direct connection with your mind and your fantasy and your great confidence in your imaginations. And if you don't stop that, you will not Wake up.

Well, if you are going to stop that, if you are going to stop relying upon the definitions you've applied to your body, and you're going to begin to look at it with a willingness to see God there, to see the evidence of all of the characteristics of God there, such as eternality, such as harmony, such as perfection, if you're not going to do that, then you're going to stay stuck. And the fantastic thing is that all that's necessary to experience release from it is to stop using your imagination and start looking at your body and your world with an invitation made to God to uncover to you once again your natural Birthright to experience all of Creation as the Kingdom of Heaven. That's all. But you must do it.

Now, going into the book:

It is insane to use the body as the scapegoat for guilt, . .

. . . you see? You feel guilty because you've denied your Father, you've denied your Source. You've turned yourself into an orphan, you have no connection with the vitality of Life itself—the Presence of God. And then you use your body to convey guilt to your Brothers and Sisters. And you also use your body as a means of hurting yourself. And I don't need to go into that. You all know that that happens and how it happens. So . . .

It is insane to use the body as the scapegoat for guilt, directing its attack and blaming it for what you wished it to do. It is IMPOSSIBLE to act out fantasies.

Why? Because what isn't real, what is imaginary can't be demonstrated—can't be rendered visible. It can only be formulated in the mind, held to and as a result of that imaginary process, making yourself miserable. Or holding another guilty and making him miserable, not because you're connected with him, but because you're connected with your picture of him which you are projecting upon him and then challenging or correcting or harming. You see?

It is IMPOSSIBLE to act out fantasies.

They must forever remain nefarious mental insinuations that never become something.

For it is still the FANTASIES you want, and they have nothing to do with what the body does. IT . . .

. . . the body . . .

. . . does not dream of them, and they but make it

. . . the body . . .

a liability where it could be an asset.

Now here's the thing: If you determine for yourselves that the body is an illusion, you will never have the experience of it being an asset. And yet that is exactly what needs to happen. Because in the recognition of it as an asset, there is an acknowledgement of value and an acknowledgement of value is, no matter how subtle it is, an expression of Love. And now you're turning the tide, you're shifting the frame of reference you're using and your changing your behavior mentally. And that opens the door for God's Perspective to infill you.

Again:

IT...

... the body ...

... does not dream of them, ..

... fantasies ...

... and they but make it a liability where it could be an asset.
For fantasies have made your body your "enemy," weak, vulnerable and treacherous, ..

... Oh yeah, you may not think about it much because it's too unpleasant. But you are afraid that one day it will kill you. One day it will just [snaps fingers] stop functioning and there you'll be—gone—or some other illness or injury or accident will cause it to create problems for you.

So, your imaginations, your ...

... fantasies have made your body your "enemy," weak, vulnerable and treacherous, worthy of the hate which you invest in it.

We've talked before about the fact that the word, "hate" is quite apropos and I'm not going to repeat myself tonight.

How has this served you? You have IDENTIFIED with this thing you hate, ..

... in other words, the body you see which is the definition you made up about it.

You have IDENTIFIED with this thing you hate, the instrument of vengeance and the perceived source of your guilt. You have done this to a thing that has no meaning, proclaiming it to be the dwelling-place of the Son of God, and turning it against him.

You have done this thing, you have done this, turned the divine part of Creation, . . .

. . . You have done this to a thing that has no meaning.

So, you haven't actually done it to something that is a divine part of Creation, you have done this to what you've ended up with as a result of the definitions you've applied to it. And that has no meaning. The body you perceive has no meaning. The body you have created as a result of fear and guilt has no meaning. That definition has been overlaid upon something that does: The visibility and tangibility of your individuality. And your individuality is the Presence of God expressed and expressing interminably eternally.

You have done this to a thing that has no meaning, . .

. . . your definition of it . . .

. . . , proclaiming it to be the dwelling-place of the Son of God, . .

. . . you. You exist in your body. Of course you're not thinking of yourself as the Son of God. But in effect, that's what the attempt was . . . to turn something meaningless, a false, a fake, a confused definition to be the dwelling place of the Son of God and turning it against him. Your definitions of your body hold it to be something that can function at odds with you and sooner or later it will! What is the saying? "There's nothing sure but death and taxes." The termination of your body, it's acting in a manner that terminates your existence is something you've created by an imagination and a definition. It hasn't turned your body into that. But it has caused you to be absolutely confident in the termination of your life because of what the body is and how it works.

Now it doesn't hurt for me to be bold and frank about this. And it doesn't hurt you to take a look at it because if you take a look at it squarely, you can see the nonsensicalness of it. You can see that indeed you have justification for learning something and changing the way you behave, especially when doing it is going to cause you to Wake up. It's going to cause you to let that Mind be in you which is your right Mind which is presently being called "The Holy Spirit" while you dally with a tiny sense of mind making all these very creative decisions that result in blocking you entirely from coming back into your right Mind.

This . . .

. . . the body you have imagined . . .

. . . This is the host of God that YOU have made.

Your body is where God is Present expressing Himself as You—it is the host of God. It truly is . . . divinely is. But the host of God that you have made is the one that is bound to die and thus be the ultimate source of the failure of You to be successfully independent.

This is the host of God that YOU have made. And neither God nor His most holy Son . . .

. . . you...you...you...you . . .

. . . can enter an abode which harbors hate, and where you have sown the seeds of vengeance, violence and death. This thing you made to serve your guilt stands between you and other minds.

. . . of all of the Brotherhood, of every aspect of Creation which is the conscious Expression of God embodying or being fully conscious, able to communicate It's infinite holiness to everyone and capable of experiencing the holiness of all the rest of Creation as It's expressed.

But:

This thing you made . . .

. . . this material body that can become sick and die . . .

. . . you made to serve your guilt [it] stands between you and other minds.

You see? When you said, “Father, I’d rather see it my way,” you decided to be private, not sharing Reality.

Now:

This thing you made to serve your guilt stands between you and other minds. The minds ARE joined, . .

You see? In spite of the fact that you have used guilt to stand between you and other minds, the minds ARE joined. The imaginary attempts that you engage in don't change Reality at all.

The minds ARE joined, but you do not identify with them.

“No, I’d rather see it my way. Charlie, I’d rather see it my way. You can tell me your way if you want to, but I’m not going to be able to agree with you. And I may be willing to make some adjustments so we can get along, but I’m never going to agree with you. I’m never going to share with you one hundred percent.” You see? Privacy is absolutely essential and it’s maintained as though it were.

The minds ARE joined, but you do not identify with them. You see yourself locked in a separate prison, removed and unreachable, . .

. . . course that’s your protection, being unreachable. If they can’t reach you they can’t hurt you.

. . . incapable of reaching out as being reached. You hate this prison you have made, and would destroy it. But you would not escape from it, leaving it unharmed, without your guilt upon it.

You need the body as a defense. And you’re not about to give it up, because you’re not about to become defenseless. And you’re not about to become defenseless because you’re afraid. And yet as we keep looking at this, it becomes clearer and clearer that being afraid . . . that the fear and the guilt are not part of Creation. They’re not actual. They are that which says to you, “Don’t separate yourself any further from the Father, because if you do it’s going to be uncomfortable.” It’s your sanity saying, “Don’t proceed any further. You are going to create for yourself a confused and illusory experience of the Kingdom of Heaven in which you can become lost, so preoccupied with self-defense against this fear and guilt that aren’t even real, that you neglect to do the one all important thing. And that is: To realize that the fear and guilt are meaningless.

You should write that down: Fear and Guilt are meaningless.

If you will consider that, you will find yourself beginning to have the courage to not respond to that which seems fearful, and which seems inseparable from guilt. The fear and the guilt will immobilize you in terms of your Awakening, in terms of your learning something and beginning to be in a new way that releases you.

Fear and guilt are meaningless. No if’s, and’s or but’s! Because fear and guilt are meaningless you can afford to set down the things that seem so fearful, and which you feel guilty enough about that you don’t think you deserve escape from them . . . and give your attention to other things, like for instance, praying: “Father, what is the truth here? What is the truth that my actions of defense against what I’m afraid of, cover up and cause me not to see, and keep me from seeing?”

This is a key learning: Fear and guilt are meaningless. If they are meaningless, they do not need to be dealt with, reacted to, distracted by. This flies right in the face of the conditioning of your imaginations. And if you attempt to practice it, it can seem to instill greater fear. But it is essential to engage in abandoning fear and guilt. It is essential. It's the act which initiates release from bondage.

So:

You hate this prison you have made, and would destroy it. But you would not escape from it, leaving it unharmed, without your guilt upon it.

Yet only thus CAN you escape.

You see? That's what we've just been saying. The only means of escape from the bondage of mortality is to start using your body in a new way—defining it as something divine, that which renders visible the Presence of God called You. Embodying the holiness of God and therefore the holiness of You and where It's every action blesses everything rather than cursing it with fear and guilt so as to distract you from releasing yourself from responding to fear and guilt and letting it be the motivation of your life.

. . . although you imagined it up.

The home of vengeance is not yours; the place you set aside to house your hate is not a prison, but an illusion of . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . of YOURSELF.

You see? A definition you have created about yourself. “I am a body. I am not free. I am a mortal. I will die. And in between now and the time I die I will from time to time become sick and weak and there will be other times where I will become so upset from my polarization and my fear and guilt that I will act out harmful behavior against my Brother and Sister. I don't want to do it, but there's no way out of it.” You see?

Man, what a story line and what an amazing thing to believe it, and not believe what I'm saying and not believe what it says in the Course.

The body is a limit imposed on . . .

. . . listen to this . . .

. . . The body is a limit imposed [upon] the universal communication which is an eternal property of mind.

The body you made up. The definitions of it that you're giving it and holding it to and holding yourself to and killing yourself with—seemingly . . .

. . . is a limit imposed on . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . the universal communication which is an eternal property of mind.

Remember? I said that every aspect of Creation, every leaf, every rock, everything is conscious. And every single conscious awareness if I may put it that way, is absolutely in full communication with every other aspect of Creation. And what is the communication that It's there to share? It's there to share Its meaning. It's there to share what It Is, the Presence of God that It Is. You see?

The body as you've defined it is a limit. You've created a tiny circumference to something, which is an Idea in the Mind of God.

The body is a limit imposed on the universal communication which is an eternal property of mind. But the communication is INTERNAL.

I said a long time ago: The most direct route to your fellowman is through the center of your Being . . . the most direct route to your fellowman is right through the center of your Being—in Mind.

Mind reaches to ITSELF. It does not go OUT.

Remember? This Section entitled: Dreams and the Body, began with these five words:

There is NOTHING outside you.

Within itself . . .

. . . Mind . . .

. . . it has no limits, and there is nothing outside it. It encompasses you entirely; you within it, and it within you.

What is it? Mind.

Mind reaches to ITSELF.

That is the means of communication.

It does not go OUT. Within itself it has no limits, and there is nothing outside it. It encompasses you entirely; you within it, and it within you. There is nothing else, anywhere or ever.

If that's the case, if that's the nature of experiencing Reality, you can see how foolish it is to continue to give a mean-spirited negative definition to your body which results in your never being able to come back into your right Mind as long as you're committed to the use of your body as self-defense because you are treating fear and guilt as though they are meaningful.

The body . . .

. . . as you're experiencing it as a result of the definitions you're applying to it.

The body is outside you, and but SEEMS to surround you, shutting you off from others, and keeping you apart from them. It is not there.

You see? That does not mean that the visibility and tangibility of your individuality isn't there. It means that the body that you have imagined and that you're governing your every action toward it on the basis of, isn't there. It is a fantasy. And as we've said, fantasies cannot be acted out. You cannot manifest a fantasy. When you believe you have, you are deluded. And if it is a serious enough delusion you're put in a mental institution.

There IS no barrier between God and His Son, nor can His Son be separated from himself except in illusions. This is not his reality, though he believes it is.

This is not your reality, though you believe it is.

Yet this could only be if God were wrong.

So here's the simple logic.

God would have had to create differently, and to have separated Himself from His Son to make this possible.

And of course, you can see the impossibility of that.

He would have had to create different things, and to establish different ORDERS of reality, . .

. . . much the way you have . . .

. . . only SOME of which were love. Yet love must be forever like itself, changeless forever, and forever without alternative.

What's the communication? What's the divine communication? It's the expression of love, which gains its aliveness from your willingness to share yourself uninhibitedly, unprotectedly, uncalculatedly. The minute you make the gift of you, minus any form of self-protection, it is an expression of love that becomes illuminated—universal illumination—that everyone rejoices in experiencing and everything feels.

And so it is. You cannot put a barrier around yourself because God placed none between Himself and you.

Part of the learning and the change of behavior in you is not only abandoning the honoring of guilt and fear and treating it as though it were meaningful, it is that in the absence of communicating fear and guilt, you begin to communicate love. You approach your fellowman as though he is a holy Son of God and you expect to see the evidence of it. Why? Because you're not about to spend one moment in your imagination creating a definition—a mean-spirited definition—of him. And in the absence of that, you are going to be the Presence of Love.

This is so important. It is the key to Awakening. Be with this and let it infill you and let it inspire you. Let it move you to change. Let it cause learning to occur, so that you find yourself in a place you were not before and so the past isn't being repeated.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 8th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, from the West Coast of the United States, we are in the last few hours of Easter Sunday. And So I can still take the opportunity, legitimately, to wish everyone a Happy Easter. And of course, what will make Easter happiest this year, is for everyone to get the point. Because when everyone gets the point, they will Wake up. And the whole reason for my having come will be fulfilled.

I'm going to suggest tonight . . . that few of you know why I came. At least it hasn't occurred to you in the context that I'm going to speak about it tonight.

Because the reason I came was to undo a misunderstanding—a misunderstanding that arose out of your having decided to look at things whatever way you chose to look at them and to abandon the Father's Perspective. And as we've discussed, when you did that and made commitment to it with a Brother or Sister so that the two of you were committed to it, something happened that was unexpected.

Suddenly, the infinite perspective that you had had available to you was lost in a very tiny limited perspective associated with what you call, "your body," which prior to this commitment, had simply been an essential and integral part of all of Creation. Because absolutely everything created is identifiable, whether it is identifiable as a leaf or a body, it's identifiable. There is visibility and tangibility. There is experience-ability of each created thing.

And so, indeed, there was that which specifically identified you but it was an integral part of the infinity of that which identified everything.

Now you decided to get a divorce from your Father. You decided you wanted to look at things your way. You wanted to be the determiner of the meaning of everything and you and a partner engaged in it and suddenly lost the infinite view . . . found yourself experiencing yourself as limited to this form.

And as we've discussed, fear and guilt came into the picture because there had to be something to say, "Don't do this." There had to be something built in to the sanity of your Being that said, "Although you can attempt to do this, don't do it, because it's not in harmony with your Being. It's not in harmony with the way things work. It's bound to cause you to lose the experience of your integrity, and therefore your soundness, your stability, your grounded invulnerability—you're bound to lose it and so, don't proceed any further." You see?

There's a built-in factor in you that says, "try to do the impossible and you will get feedback so that you will not waste your time doing it." But you wasted your time doing it and you became, in your own mind, identified with your body and you identified yourself as a body and you had to use your body to create an environment in which you weren't overwhelmed by the fear and the guilt you were feeling.

And so you had to use your body—you thought—for self-protection.

Now, whoever you partnered with in moving into this delusion, he or she also had to come to this same conclusion. And so you, together, became wary partners, untrusting, because it was impossible for you to determine what was really threatening—what was really creating the feeling of fear and guilt.

So you and your partner and others who joined you in this state of affairs, began to create mutual agreements. And in the process of making mutual agreements, you saw to it—all of you saw to it—that in the agreements you made, your integrity was protected . . . your validity was protected, or the environment in which to substantiate your validity was secure enough to allow you to work on securing your stability.

And so, you know what happened? Judgments came into play: Whose value was greater? Judgments about value or valuelessness came into play . . . greater value, lesser value . . . those with a skill to assert authority more than others became more important. You see?

Now something happened in this process: You began to see the body as an object. And since you identified yourself with the body, you saw yourself as an object and you saw everyone else as objects. And you know what? As objects, you could be purchased and sold. You could be owned. You could be possessed and governed depending upon your "status." And whether you, in a subservient role, found a way to oppose it and win so that you could free yourself, you see?

Now what you don't realize . . . what you haven't thought about is, that on Christmas morning, what happened on your globe was Something, Someone arrived to challenge the theory of evolution—to challenge Darwinism.¹

[chuckle] Now, you might say Darwin didn't even exist then, he hadn't developed his theory yet. No. But everyone already knew the structures, everyone already knew what Darwin simply crystallized into an explanation which he saw as governing life in time: Survival of the fittest. You see? But any slave owner two thousand years ago, was already living Darwin's theory, was already demonstrating it.

And so now you realize, that when you got your divorce from the Father, when you said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way," you created the Darwinian state.

We haven't talked about it like that before. But what can make it evident to you is that in the process of transitioning from the infinite view to the finite view, from being the Father's Son or Daughter to being an orphan, the body became the all-important thing. And it became an object of definition. And it became an object of ownership.

And Moses undid that ownership for the Jews. But mankind and including the Jews after that, continued to function as those who were divorced from the Father. They were still behaving as orphans.

And so I arrived, and I taught and I demonstrated the Truth. And then the time came when a crucifixion happened, and although I didn't say it in the Garden of Gethsemane (as has been reported that I did) the statement does bear some value: "Father, if You will, please let this cup pass from me, but nevertheless, Thy Will be Done."²

I never said that because I never lost the faith. I never lost the Perspective of Who I was as the Father expressed—as the Father expressing in that moment.

But it does demonstrate what everyone has to come to in terms of an act of their own where they do the two-step, where they involve themselves in the holy instant.

At the end of this lifetime, between Christmas and Easter, I demonstrated that life is deathless. I demonstrated, that although a crucifixion seemed to occur and although a body seemed to die and be placed in a tomb, that body emerged. Why?

Because it demonstrated the statement from the Course, "I am not a body."³ You may have thought I was, you may have thought a body was crucified, you may have thought a body died, but hey everyone . . . look! I did not die!

I am not a body. Even though there is that which identifies me, I'm not it! It is not what I am! I'm not participating and I haven't been participating in the dream of separation from God—of having gotten a divorce from the Father and said, "I would rather see things my way." You see? I never joined anyone in that.

And so, this demonstration of the fact that I am not a body of the sort you have identified me as, and of the sort that you think you are, I am not a body, I am still free to be as God created me. Or we could even say, as God is Being me at this very moment after the period of three days in the sepulcher. You see?

My disciples and those who had listened to my teachings had the opportunity to realize that this demonstration: That I am not a body was a demonstration that they were not a body . . . even though they're visible and tangible and identifiable. And that therefore, their existence is eternal—deathless. And they don't need to go through this process called "death." You see?

My life undid the idea that Being is a matter of a body going through a series of linear experiences from a starting point to an ending point and in the process, having to survive against unreasonable and overwhelming odds that nobody wins.

Be with that for just a moment . . .

Let's go into the book: A new section

"I NEED DO NOTHING"⁴

You still have too much faith in the body as a source of strength.

Even though we have been talking a number of weeks about what the body is, and what its function is. And the fact that there is a need for a transition from body identification to Mind identification in which the conscious experience of body is occurring along with all the rest of Creation and that what Mind is experiencing as body and Creation are the infinite ideas that God is consciously experiencing eternally and which therefore, because your very being is the embodiment of His, your existence is an existence of feeling and recognizing and experiencing ideas. Even though once you got the divorce from the Father and determined what everything was, you determined that the body was material along with all of the rest of Creation, and that it was something which developed, became more than it was, and that whatever was dominant took over: the survival of the fittest. So . . .

You still have too much faith in the body as a source of strength. What plans do you make that do not involve its comfort or protection or enjoyment in some way? This makes it an end and not a means in your interpretation, and this ALWAYS means you still find sin attractive.

See, there we go [chuckle]. It accuses you of something that you have no idea how it could be true or how it could have happened. But you see, the only sin there is, is the misidentification of you by you. And when you say, "Father, I want a divorce, I want to see things my way. I want to do things my way. I want to determine what the meaning of what everything is, and what the rules are that govern everything, . ." you do that, you're missing the mark. You are denying the very essence of your Being and you're therefore existing in a state of self-denial and in a state of denial about the Kingdom of Heaven because you and your Brothers and Sisters have determined that It's a material, physical universe where chaos prevails but somehow, it manages to . . . um . . . move in such a way as to cause forward movement in the development of the species. You see? And so it's redeemed from its chaos by some unknown factor which causes chaos to become constructive.

Now to believe that, to practice it, is sin because you're in a state of Self-denial.

Now the fact is, you can practice Self-denial and you can practice it forever. And you can exist in pain and suffering and everything negative without causing yourself to cease to be. Because all you're doing is overlaying what you divinely Are with an imagination that isn't true. But as long as you're doing that, you are doing what the word, "sin" means.

When you love the challenge of overcoming fear and guilt, your attention and your intent certainly isn't expressed as a way of glorifying God . . . is it? It's not expressed as a way of manifesting and acknowledging and expressing your divinity. . . is it? No. If you're doing something other than that, then you are engaging in nonsense. And if you are believing that the nonsense is meaningful, then you are in a state of sin—something to abandon.

No-one accepts Atonement for himself who still accepts sin as his goal.

You know . . . practicing the survival of the fittest: Anyone who's caught up in that is not one who accepts Atonement for himself, because Atonement is a word that defines you yielding to the Father—you practicing willingness to be directed, rather than being the authority yourself. It's you deciding to abandon your independence so that you might fit in with and cooperate with the Movement of God and let that Movement be what finds expression through you in the world.

Now that's the opposite of the practice of the survival of the fittest.

You have thus not met your ONE responsibility. Atonement is not welcomed by those who prefer pain and destruction . . .

. . . and the survival of the fittest as a theme—as a purpose in life—is what someone who prefers pain and destruction engages in.

Now . . .

You have made much progress and are really trying to make still more, but there is one thing you have never done; not for one instant have you utterly forgotten the body.

If you stop and think about it, you take care of it all day long. Your attention is on it one way or another. You say, you're driving to the store . . . but if there's a little discomfort in the seat of your pants, you shift your position to become comfortable. You attend to your body constantly for its comfort.

It has faded at times from your sight, but it has not yet completely disappeared.

And let's understand something here: We're not talking about it disappearing because it's an illusion. We're talking about the fact that it hasn't disappeared from your mind as that which secures your safety and which you must ever be ready to utilize it for, to secure your safety. It's never faded from your mind because it's your bottom-line protection. You may think that your mind is what saves you, but if your mind doesn't clarify things for your Brother so that your Brother stops threatening you, then you know your body is the last resort.

It has faded at times from your sight, but it has not yet completely disappeared.

You can see that the only time that it would ever disappear, the only time it's survival of the fittest function could disappear, is if you felt utterly safe.

You are not asked to let this happen for more than an instant, yet it is in this instant . . .

. . . the holy instant . . .

. . . that the miracle of Atonement happens.

The holy instant is that experience which results from your ceasing thinking and energizing your definitions of everything and saying, "Separate and apart from my best judgments, my pet theories and what's important to me, 'Father, what is the truth here? I wish to abandon my independence and join with You and have You enlighten me as to what is Real so that I might respond in a manner that fits the occasion'" . . . the occasion being, a moment in the Kingdom of Heaven.

Afterwards, you will see the body again, but never quite the same.

Meaning, you will slip back into using your body for your self-protection. And therefore as the means you utilize to keep yourself from being in touch with the Father and experiencing His healing Perspective.

And every instant that you spend WITHOUT awareness of it . . .

. . . the body . . .

. . . gives you a different view of it when you return .

Now whenever Paul is letting me speak . . . like right now, he is not aware of his body, meaning, that his attention isn't on it for the purpose of being prepared to defend himself if something should happen that threatens him. Because when he is in this space joined with me, just as when you are in the space you're in when you are joined with your Guide, body identification isn't happening. It's that simple. And as you can see, his body hasn't disappeared. And as he speaks, his lips move, his hands move, all in service of the expression of the truth that he is allowing through him. You see?

Now here's a startling statement:

At no single instant does the body exist at all.

These words have a very "tight" meaning . . . very narrow meaning . . .

At no single instant does the body exist at all.

In the holy instant, the body as a means of defense, and the body as your identity does not exist in the holy instant—in that place where you have abandoned time. This is important!

At no single instant does the body exist at all.

Let's be even more clear:

At no single instant does the body . . .

. . . as you have defined it . . .

. . . exist at all.

It therefore does not function as a defense or an identity. That's what it means. As a defense or an identity it does not exist at all in the holy instant. One of the reasons is, that in the holy instant fear and guilt are absent and there is no call for self-protection. Without the call, you are free to experience how everything appears and what it's Meaning is because there is a purity of your attention, a holiness—a wholeness—of your attention that doesn't screen out any part of the Kingdom of Heaven.

At no single instant does the body exist at all. It is always remembered or anticipated, but never experienced just NOW.

Your salvation lies in your willingness to be present in the NOW. Because that's where you can experience Being without a call for defense which allows your definitions of your body to fade from your mind because there's no use for them, at least for that instant. Do you see?

Only its past and future make it seem real . . .

. . . the definition of body you've given.

Only its past . . .

. . . what's happened to it before . . .

And [its] future . . .

. . . what's likely to happen tomorrow . . .

. . . make it seem real. Time controls it entirely, . .

. . . you see? And time is where evolution occurs . . . you see?

So I was correcting . . . and the Course is correcting Darwinian concepts and theories—corrected them before Darwin congealed them. And everyone else said, “Wow! We would like to agree with your definitions here that finally explain to us what the state of orphanhood is.” You see? And the mutual agreement took over as law—as fact—unchallengeable.

Time controls it entirely, for sin is never present.

Sin is never present in the holy instant.

In any single instant, the attraction of guilt would be experienced as pain and nothing else, and would be avoided.

And I would add: Would be simply avoided. You see? No contest. Without guilt and fear present and the accompanying attraction, pain would be avoided.

It has no attraction NOW.

You see? It has no attraction in the holy instant. It has no attraction in the moment, if you let your attention be present in the moment without distraction.

Its whole attraction is imaginary, and therefore MUST be thought of in the past or in the future.

. . . when you move into a dreamy state of imagination. But when you're in a clear state of attention now, it's nowhere to be found and there is no effect to it.

It is impossible to accept the holy instant without reservation unless, just for an instant, you are willing to see NO past or future. You cannot prepare for it WITHOUT placing it in the future.

You can only prepare for something you're anticipating.

Release is given you the instant you desire it.

Not the month you desire it, not the one year that you're going to desire it because you've developed a one year plan. No.

Release is given you the instant you desire it.

The instant you're present in the moment and desire it.

Many have spent a lifetime in preparation, and have indeed achieved their instants of success. This course does not attempt to teach more than they learned in time, but it does aim at SAVING time.

This is important.

[Repeats] Many have spent a lifetime in preparation, and have indeed achieved their instants of success. This course does not attempt to teach more than they learned in time, but . . .

. . . here's what it offers . . .

. . . it does aim at SAVING time.

In this process of learning what the Course is teaching and practicing the holy instant . . .

You are attempting to follow a very long road to the goal you have accepted. It is extremely difficult to reach Atonement by fighting against sin.

That's not the answer. You see? The agreement to overcome fear and guilt, which are present because sin is being engaged in, is not the way out of the orphanage. It is to withdraw your attention from the fear and the guilt. To do the two-step, which is to back off, become still and secondly, ask "Father, Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?" That's what works. Not fighting against sin.

Nor is a lifetime of contemplation and long periods of meditation aimed at detachment from the body necessary. All such attempts . . .

. . . listen to this, because it's not discounting them.

All such attempts will ultimately succeed because of their purpose. Yet the means are tedious and very time consuming, for all of them look to the FUTURE for release from a state of present unworthiness and inadequacy.

A now experience of a now definition—a now meaning that you’re employing and validating and governing yourself according to.

Your way . . .

. . . our way with the Course.

Your way will be different, not in purpose, but in means. A holy relationship is a means of SAVING TIME.

You see? Years of meditation and contemplation done in a cave or in a sanctuary of some sort, is something that you can engage in alone. You know what? Aloneness does not prompt you to bring your attention into the moment, not like a relationship does. Nothing, no commitment to anything other than a partnership with a conscious intent, can bring your attention specifically and only into the moment with the least amount of defendedness.

If you join with another for the purpose of having a holy relationship, which means that the two of you choose to be together and to relate to each other only after each one of you individually has turned to the Father and said, “Father, what is the truth about my partner?” That that is when you relate to each other on the basis of the infilling of truth and clarity that the Father provides to you about your partner. That causes you to not be vague in any way. It truly brings your attention into the moment you’re in with a specific desire of the Father to see your Brother or Sister truly. That’s what shortens time. Because that’s what brings your attention out of time into the moment you’re in with love as the motive. You see? It’s so simple. And it’s so beneficent in its function.

One instant spent TOGETHER restores the universe to BOTH of you.

You see? Something that meditating for a lifetime cannot as effectively do. You see?

You ARE prepared. Now you need but to remember you need do NOTHING.

What does that mean? Well, when you got your divorce from the Father, when you said, “I’m going to determine what things are and I’m going to believe what I and my Brother have decided are true,” the first thing that you were prompted about was to do something, to overcome and cope with fear and guilt. And what did you have available to yourself to use for that purpose? Why . . . your body. And so you did. You needed to do, and so you did.

And the undoing of the constant affirmation of your divorce from your Father occurs when you’re willing to do the two-step and join with the Father or the Holy Spirit with a genuine desire to know the truth about this one you’re in relationship with. You see?

In doing the two-step, in backing off, so to speak, from engaging in doing for or against your partner, you stop engaging your mind and your body in defense. And in the absence of the practice of defense you are abandoning the definitions, or you are abandoning the commitment to the definitions you have given about your body and you're willing to be defenseless. In other words, you're willing to be present with your partner, weaponless. You see? Which means you're engaged in doing nothing that before practicing the holy instant, you would have been engaging in, and which would have kept you ignorant.

Now you need but to remember you need do NOTHING. It would be far more profitable now merely to concentrate on this than to consider what you SHOULD do.

Or: What you SHOULD DO.

When peace comes at last to those who wrestle with temptation and fight against the giving in to sin; when the light comes at last into the mind given to contemplation, or when the goal is finally achieved by anyone, it ALWAYS comes with just one happy realization; "I need do nothing."

Anyone who has practiced meditation knows that with its regular practice even for only twenty minutes, twice a day, you move in that twenty minutes into a place where fear is absent and peace is present. And it is even reflected in your body as the dropping of high blood pressure, the balancing of the systems, because peace is where your attention is.

Doing nothing and being in the silence, not exercising your so-called capacity to think for yourself, is what leads to the influx of truth together with an inseparable pair—Love and Peace.

Here is the ultimate release which everyone will one day find in his own way, at his own time.

But listen . . . I'm saying, but listen . . . and I'm continuing:

We do not need this time.

You do not need to wait so that it happens at your own time. You don't need to rely on time, you don't need to employ time. If you want to, then go sit in a cave and meditate for ten years, twenty, forty. But:

We do not need this time.

Why? Because you have someone with whom you can join in a holy relationship through the individual practice together of the holy instant.

Time has been saved for you because you are together.

You're not doing this alone. You're doing it in a way that causes great focus, simple focus to occur.

This is the special means this course is using to save you time. You are not making use of the course if you insist on using means which have served others well, neglecting what was made for YOU.

What was made for you? The Course . . . A Course In Miracles. Also what is made for you? Is, the Holy Spirit's guidance. The guidance of that which is nothing more than your right Mind, already present with you, already being your right Mind even though you are employing a mental activity which doesn't reflect the existence of the Holy Spirit, of your right Mind. So:

Save time for me . . .

. . . and I'm going to add: And for yourself . . .

. . . by only this ONE preparation, and practice doing nothing else.

Christmas was the introduction of this idea. And Easter was the completion, the full demonstration of this.

"I need do nothing" is a statement of allegiance, a truly undivided loyalty.

Loyalty to what? The moment you are in with one that you intend to have a holy relationship with, which causes you only to be in relationship with him or her by means of asking first of the Father, "What is the truth here? What do I need to know? What needs to be done?" so that the answer can be the basis of what you do with your partner that reflects holiness, healing, transformation, atonement.

Believe it for just one instant, and you will accomplish more than is given to a century of contemplation, or of struggle against temptation.

Can you imagine?

Believe it for just one instant, and you will accomplish more than is given to a century of contemplation, . .

This means, the means of being in a holy relationship with another saves that kind of time and promotes your Awakening with far greater rapidity and it helps to tip the first domino that causes the transformation to spontaneously occur with Brothers and Sisters who are very close to yielding completely into the moment.

To DO anything involves the body.

Survival of the fittest again, control, manipulation . . . you know, finding a place on the ladder of good, better, best, bested . . . right?

To DO anything involves the body. And if you recognize you NEED do nothing, you have withdrawn the body's value from your mind.

In other words, you've withdrawn the significant meanings that you have faith in that you created about what your body is and on the basis of which you act in the world.

Here is the quick and open door through which you slip past centuries of effort, and escape from time.

The only place where evolution can seem to occur and justify all that embodies the survival of the fittest.

This is the way in which sin loses all attraction RIGHT NOW.

Not in the future.

For here is time denied, and past and future gone.

It's true. Any of you who have meditated and simply moved into the state of peace, know that time has disappeared, past and future are gone, that which was causing fear is no longer fearsome. And in fact, if you stay in that peaceful space, you can consider what had been fearsome before you started meditating, and hear that which will resolve the fearsomeness because you are in your peace, able to see what works to bring about harmony and remove what your unclear mind had seen as an impossible threat. This is simple, but it is important.

Who need do nothing has no need for time. To do nothing is to rest, and make a place within you where the activity of the body ceases to demand attention. Into this place the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . that which is nothing more than your right Mind . . .

. . . comes, and there abides. He will remain when you forget, and the body's activities return to occupy your conscious mind.

Again, the definitions of your body that you have employed for the purpose of keeping yourself safe, of being the fittest under the circumstance, whatever the circumstance might be.

Yet there will always be this place of rest to which you can return.

The thing is, you have to remember to return. Because your habit is to engage in the seductive suggestion that you have reason to be proud if you can survive and be the fittest. You see?

[Yet] there will always be this place of rest to which you can return.

If you remember to return.

And you will be more aware of this quiet center of the storm than all its raging activity.

In other words, the storm may not go away while you are shifting your attention from survival to centeredness and the peace of your Being that is ever present with you. The raging activity will not hook you and upset you so you can see what to do, what fits in the face of the raging activity, and you can behave from peace with unscattered intelligence that is revealed to you.

This quiet center, in which you do nothing, . .

. . . of the sort that you had conditioned yourself to engage in for self-protection.

This quiet center, in which you do nothing, will remain with you, giving you rest in the midst of every busy doing on which you are sent.

Did you catch that?

This quiet center, . . will remain with you, giving you rest in the midst of every busy doing on which you are sent.

Well, wait a minute, I thought this section said, “I need do nothing,” um . . . and your body is supposed to disappear.

This quiet center, . . will remain with you, giving you rest [peace] in the midst of every busy doing on which you are sent.

Ah-h . . . yes, you’re asking, “Father, what is the truth here? What do I need to know?” And in that innocent attentiveness, the Father, the Holy Spirit reveals the truth to you. And just as Paul knows how to move his lips right now and put his hands in this position, it is not because his attention is being given to his body doing something, but because he is . . .

. . . in the midst of busy doing on which he has been sent.

You see? You will know what to be. You will know what to do. And indeed, as I’ve been reading here in this section which says “I need do nothing,” you may be saying, “Wait a minute, there’s another place in the Course that says, ‘Listen, learn and do.’ That doesn’t make sense, that’s inconsistent.” No. Do the two-step: Meaning, become still and ask, “What is the truth here?” That’s . . . listen. Then comes the influx . . . learn. And in the learning of what the truth is, one knows how to be, or one knows how to do. You see? But it's not a doing that arises out of the concept that the body is here to do things to protect you and to control others. You see?

So when you listen, you will be given busy doing to do. You will be sent on busy doing. Again, let me read the sentence:

This quiet center, in which you do nothing, will remain with you, . .

. . . no matter what's going on . . .

. . . giving you rest . . .

. . . and I'm adding the word "peace," . .

. . . in the midst of every busy doing on which you are sent.

And for which you must obviously need to have something that identifies your presence, renders it visible, experienceable, so that the doing, the being, can be what happens.

For from this center will you be directed how to use the body sinlessly.

You hear that? It doesn't say, "For from this center will you discover that you don't have a body, because it's an illusion." No.

In other words, not as part of the Darwinian system of "survival of the fittest." You see? That's not sinless activity of the body. That's not using the body sinlessly.

So be sure that you are willing to embrace the body as something holy with a function that identifies holiness.

It is this center, from which the body is absent, that will keep it so in your awareness of it.

Listen again:

It is this center, . .

. . . of peace and the holy instant where God's laws prevail.

It is this center, from which the body . . .

. . . you have concocted, is absent. It is from this center that a body used for self-defense and control . . .

. . . is absent, that will keep it so . . .

. . . that will keep it in its sinless state . . .

. . . in your awareness of it.

I think everyone can agree that you are in a time which calls for bodily activity that is sinless. It is a time for the understanding of what the body is to be released from the theory of the “survival of the fittest,” of domination, of slave and owner mentalities and everything that accompanies that, so that relationships in families, in communities, in countries and between countries can be moved by and transformed by holiness, sinlessness, that it is everyone’s right . . . that it is everyone’s Birthright to be able to employ and experience to be blessed by and to bless by.

Happy Easter.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 22nd 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

You know, never should you think that the study of the Course is bound to be a protracted process that is difficult, that is somehow different from your nature and therefore something not easily graspable by you.

During these past few weeks while we've been discussing in great detail the nature of the holy instant and the role of the holy relationship, it has become clearer and clearer how simple Awakening is. It's something that occurs in the silence when you choose to silence your thoughts and make an enquiry of the Father, "what is the truth here?" meaning, "Father, what is Your Perspective regardless of my perspective?" It's done in the silence—a simple question and then a simple giving of attention in the silence.

We've discussed the fact that it's in this place of joining with your Father—this rejoining with your Father—that you move into an arena where God's laws prevail. The arena is the arena of silence—the arena of the absence of your busy, controlling thinking. That's all . . . that's all.

One clearly absolute requirement that accompanies this is the necessity of doing it on behalf of a Brother or of a Sister or of some part of God's Creation—some part of the world and universe that is confronting you. You cannot do it for yourself and yourself alone. You get the benefit of what you give. And that's the way it works.

You see, when you said, "Father I'd rather do it my way, Father I'd rather make up the definitions and the meanings for everything, Father I want a divorce" and you did this with a Brother in tandem, in a mutual agreement to do so, you caused yourself to experience being disconnected from your Source.

And as we discussed, you began to see yourself as an object instead of that conscious awareness which is the Mind of God in You, enjoying the Father's Perspective regarding the Kingdom of Heaven, which is not made up of objects but made up of Ideas which are perfectly tangible to the Mind that formed them.

When you shifted with commitment to your own private personal perspective, you not only experienced separation from the Father, you experienced separation from your Brothers and Sisters—the object that you became are the objects that they became.

And so your intimate connection with them was lost. Why? Because in this place of isolation, you felt fear and guilt because it was not natural to your Being. And so you became defensive. You became self-protective against the very Brother with whom you made a mutual agreement to make up all of the meanings for everything.

Do you see what kind of an untenable position this created? [snaps fingers] It instantly created tension! You need your Brother to join in the mutual agreement to stand separate from the Father. And yet, in the standing apart, you became opponents. You became enemies, either mild enemies or potentially great enemies.

And so it creates a push-me-pull-you state of tension: "I need you but I don't trust you. You are essential to my being in this place where I can make decisions and be in charge of things myself. But I cannot trust you and so I engage in this mutual agreement with you carefully, untrustingly and therefore, it puts us in a constant state of potential war . . . sometimes actualized."

You didn't expect that, when the two of you said, "Let's make up our own definitions and let's agree to them together so that they have more substance than just our puny imagination."

So, in order to return to your sanity, in order to Wake up, in order to have the Father's Perspective which is your true perspective returned to you, you must undo the divorce from your Father which estranged you from your Brothers and Sisters. And this is why it is an inescapable absolute fact that Awakening requires your doing the Awakening, your practicing the two-step on behalf of your Brother or your Sister or some part of the infinitude of Creation that you see as an object different from you—dangerous to you. You see?

Now, this still sounds complicated . . . what if your Brother doesn't agree . . . what if your Sister doesn't cooperate? "What if I have an ancient grudge or grievance that I'm unwilling to let go of, I'll be stuck here forever." And it would seem to you that there must be hundreds of thousands if not millions of little justifications for not Awakening that will stand in your way, making Awakening a formidable if not impossible task.

But remember what we discussed last week. The one simple thing that needs to be brought into the picture is not a war against your ego, but rather a simple practice of curiosity—a curiosity to see the more of what God is Being right here, right there, anywhere, than what you're seeing. The curiosity to see the more of what God is Being right there anywhere, than what you're seeing.

You may find it impossible to lay down a grievance, but it is relatively easy to practice curiosity. Especially when you have heard me say over and over in so many different ways that the practice of curiosity invites one thing: When you say, "Father"—here's the curiosity—"what is the truth here?" you're abandoning your isolation and you're asking for a perspective greater than the one you're currently suffering from.

That is simple . . . that is simple.

I've made it clear that the payoff for doing this—this practice of curiosity—will inevitably come and it will not cost you anything. It will constitute an experience of fulfillment. So if for any reason you thought, "Boy, it's taking us a long time to get through the book, is it going to be another eight years before we get to the end and can Wake up?" No. Wake up tonight. Practice curiosity tonight, tomorrow . . . today. You see?

Practice curiosity with whatever degree of safety you have been able to acquire through listening to me explain the nature of Awakening, the process of it, the steps of it, and the fact that coming into your right Mind—coming back into your Right Mind—is a natural wholizing process not an unnatural traumatic process.

And so you can dare to practice curiosity with a little bit more carefree abandon.

Now, continuing in the book, we ended up last week referring to this private sense of self-hood:

This little self is not your kingdom.¹

It is not your kingdom . . .

Arched high above it and surrounding it with love is the glorious whole, which offers all its happiness and deep content to every part. The little aspect which you think you set apart is no exception.

In other words, this little part of the wholeness of you that you've said is what you are is no exception to the fact that all of Creation, all of infinity, all of the wholeness of you is what is inside this little boundary that you've created. And so you are not any different from the wholeness of You, and the wholeness of You which we've called the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind held in trust for you while you keep reinforcing this flimsy bubble—this flimsy boundary . . . you see?

You are embraced by and constituted of everything that's outside the bubble because the bubble is just creating an artificial boundary between the whole of you—the whole of God's Mind, the whole of God's Creation.

Now . . .

Love knows no bodies, . .

. . . and that isn't because bodies are an illusion.

Love knows no bodies, . .

. . . as boundaries.

Love knows no bodies, . .

. . . as that which you have devised through an incredible use of your imaginations. Love knows no boundaries. That's what it means . . .

. . . and reaches to everything created like itself.

In other words, it doesn't reach to that which you've created, that which you've imagineered. You see?

So it reaches to that which is inside the bubble, and it reaches to that which is outside the bubble, because what's inside and outside is the same thing. And the bubble is nonsense to Love because it's not actual. It only seems actual to you in your mind's eye through the use of your imagination.

So again:

Love knows no bodies, and reaches to everything created like itself. Its total lack of limit IS its meaning.

You see? . . . and you inside the bubble . . . you see, the total limit established by the bubble is your meaning, is the meaning you have established for yourself. You see? But it's just imagination and you can abandon it at any moment that you would rather Wake up, that you would rather release your anger, your frustration, your pride, your attempt to become great all by yourself, on your terms by means of your definitions.

Love . . .

It is completely impartial in its giving, encompassing . . .

. . . embracing . . .

. . . only to preserve and keep complete what it would give.

You see, if it didn't embrace it and it let a little bit slip out of it's embrace, well that little bit wouldn't be kept whole with the whole, would it? Suddenly we have a little random gad-about, sourceless, looks like love, but it's not embraced in everything. You see? Nonsense!

[Love] is completely impartial in its giving, encompassing only to preserve and keep complete . . .

. . . or whole . . .

. . . what it would give. In your tiny kingdom you have so little!

Poor you. Poor everyone. But it was set up that way so that you could achieve, so that you could get, so that you could accumulate and prove your worth by your accumulations. Littleness is essential to satisfaction and accomplishment. Because when you can overcome the littleness you have proven yourself to be real.

In your tiny kingdom you have so little!

Do you have an abundance of health eternally? No. You just have a little bit: um...possibly seventy, eighty, ninety years? That's not much. And you accept it. You don't like it but you have thought that's the way it is. That's what life is . . . short . . . little.

In your tiny kingdom you have so little! Should it not, then, be there that you would call on love to enter?

Yes! And that's the function of the two-step. That's the function of the holy instant and that's the purpose of a holy relationship. You see how it all fits together?

You don't try to escape the awfulness of your little kingdom, you invite that which is Big into it. How do you do that? You do it by causing a pin-prick in the bubble. And you cause the pin-prick in the bubble by reaching beyond it: "Father, Holy Spirit"—that which is outside the bubble—"what is the truth?" You see?

Should it not, then, be there that you would call on love to enter?
Look at the desert, . .

. . . look at the barrenness of your life. Look at the sickness, sin, and death. Look at the predominance of effort and strain as opposed to abundance and peace.

Look at the desert, dry and unproductive, scorched and joyless, which makes up your little kingdom.

. . . but which you've tried to make something out of. And you're proud of what you have managed to provide and create and it's given you some satisfaction that causes you to want to work even harder at doing even more without abandoning your isolation.

Look at the desert, dry and unproductive, scorched and joyless, which makes up your little kingdom.

Now, let's face it. That's what life without your Source already is. Every day you . . .

Look at the desert, dry and unproductive, scorched and joyless, which makes up your little kingdom.

. . . and it depresses you! It does not make you happy and it shouldn't. But understand that you're already doing this. We're talking about not just doing that. Listen . . .

Look at the desert, dry and unproductive, . .

. . . look at it for what it is. Don't gloss it over. Don't see it as some integral part—necessary part—of your achieving success, something that you would thereby want to keep and use for your progress.

Look at the desert, dry and unproductive, scorched and joyless, which makes up your little kingdom. And realize the life and joy which love would bring to it from where it comes, and where it would return with you.

You see? Quite a difference. Take a square hard look at what isn't satisfying.

And realize the life and joy which love . . .

. . . which fills infinity beyond the bubble as well as within the bubble . . .

. . . would bring to it from where it comes, . .

. . . would bring to the inside of the bubble from the outside of the bubble . . .

. . . and where it would return with you.

By virtue of its entry into the bubble and your desire to reach beyond the bubble, the bubble will burst. And you will be with love in the wholeness of your Being in Creation itself with the Father's Perspective.

The Thought of God surrounds your little kingdom, . .

. . . Creation, the Kingdom of Heaven, as what It is, inside and outside the bubble, actually asserts Itself to burst the bubble because it's an unnatural unreal phenomena that doesn't fit.

The Thought of God surrounds your little kingdom, waiting at the barrier you built to come inside and shine upon the barren ground. See how life springs up everywhere!

When that happens, . .

. . . See how life springs up everywhere! The desert becomes a garden, green and deep and quiet, offering rest to those who lost their way and wander in the dust.

The only reason they're wandering in dust and the only reason there seems to be dust instead of green, lush, verdant life is because the definition given to the earth is one of evolution through struggle. And so the evidence of what makes it a struggling affair is built right into it and the dust covers everything, covering up its lush greenness and moisture.

But Creation as the Father is Being It, is present right there, out of sight, underneath the definitions you have applied on top of it. You see? That's why all that's needed is curiosity, not a makeover of a false creation that's "real."

Give them . . . those who lost their way and wander in the dust.

Give them a place of refuge, prepared by love for them where once a desert was.

Well, how's this place prepared for them? It's prepared for them by your caring enough to want to know the truth, the God's honest truth about them—your Brothers and Sisters—and about this world and universe that you have forgotten is actually the Kingdom of Heaven and which you are not expressing any curiosity to see for what It truly Is.

You're going to prepare this place for those who are weary of the struggle, by virtue of wanting to know what the truth is for them, not so that you can become great or have it for yourself. But in your willingness to desire it for them to become conscious of it so that it's easy to share the truth with them, you get to keep what you give.

But boy, try and get it for yourself alone and you're just rehearsing what you've always been doing in the dream and it won't cause Awakening.

Give them a place of refuge, prepared by love . . .

. . . your desire to know what is Real.

Give them a place of refuge, prepared by love for them where once a desert was. And everyone you welcome will bring love with him from Heaven for you.

Listen . . . you don't want to miss some of these important words

And everyone you welcome will bring love with him from Heaven for you.

Now mind you, these that you're welcoming are those who have . . .

. . . lost their way and wander in the dust.

So these are not Awakened Brothers. But it says . . .

. . . everyone you welcome will bring love with him from Heaven for you.

Here's the key word, "welcome."

And everyone you welcome . . .

Remember, I started out this evening talking about the fact that when you got a divorce from your Father and lost your connection, you also lost your intimate loving connection with your Brother because your Brother became somebody you could not trust. And so your Brother became your enemy. And as a result, you treat everyone with guarded care. Some you don't have to bring as much concern to and other's you have to be very alert for—you think. But you never allow yourself to be totally vulnerable with anyone, because at the bottom line you do not welcome them. You are guarded. You practice doubt.

In many ways you become a sleuth and you become very good at spotting irregularities that might pin-point a deviant behavior or intent that might be to your disadvantage. You see? But listen to this again:

And everyone you welcome will bring love with him from Heaven for you.

That's what happens when you stop seeing your Brother as an opponent, as someone untrustworthy. The moment you abandon your defense against him and let him in defenselessly, he will bring love with him, she will bring love with her, because he or she feels your benignness. It's that simple. You will find everyone's behavior changing.

And everyone you welcome will bring love with him from Heaven for you.

That one will feel safe enough to be defenseless himself or herself, and what will exude from them will be their Heaven-sent nature, which they are safe to share with you.

They enter one by one into this holy place, but they will not depart as they had come, alone.

Joining will have occurred because you welcomed them and they could feel it. This is the effect of the holy instant. And the capacity to treat your Brothers that way arises out of your willingness to treat one Brother that way.

The love they brought with them will stay with them, . .

. . . it won't be stolen away to add to your good, it . . .

. . . will stay with them, as it will stay with YOU. And under its beneficence, your little garden will expand, and reach out to everyone who thirsts for living water, but has grown too weary to go on alone.

You see? What you are willing to bring to one Brother in a holy relationship, you begin to be able to bring to many Brothers. And so the breakdown of isolation expands. Embrace includes more and more. And so once the movement begins it progresses until it becomes all inclusive. And all the way along the way you will be practicing loving your Brother and Sister, reaching out to more and more of them on purpose because it's your function and there's nothing that you would rather do than be part of that which is the transformation of the orphanage into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Go out and find them, . .

. . . there you go. You've listened to know how to use your body sinlessly, in other words, for something other than self-defense. And when you do, you're given a task. You find what it's appropriate to be being and it's easy to be that. And so you do.

Go out and find them, for they bring your Self with them.

They bring their Self with them and they bring their capacity to see your Self with them. And because you're undefended, you're not relating to them as a body which is a boundary. They feel welcome and welcomed. And they give from the truth of them. I promise you, this is what it's about.

And lead them gently to your quiet garden, and receive their blessing there. So will it grow and stretch across the desert, leaving no lonely little kingdoms . . .

. . . um, you know, little egos with their kingdoms inside their head.

So will it grow and stretch across the desert, leaving no lonely little kingdoms locked away from love, . .

. . . why? Because you care enough to engage in the holy instant with them. And because you care enough to have a holy relationship with them, which is one of love and inclusion, rather than self-protection and defense. And mind you, you can start that tonight. You can start it right now, whenever it is you're listening to this. And you don't have to put it off. Now is the time.

So will it grow and stretch across the desert, leaving no lonely little kingdoms locked away from love, and leaving YOU inside. And you will recognize yourself, and see your little garden gently transformed into the Kingdom of Heaven, . .

. . . not like it was really something else, but it will be transformed into what it always was, because you will not be reinforcing the definitions you have brought into play for the purpose of making something great out of yourself. You won't be doing this anymore or you won't be trying to do this anymore.

. . . you will recognize yourself, and see your little garden gently transformed into the Kingdom of Heaven, with all the love of its Creator shining upon it.

Uh-oh . . . with all the love of its Creator . . . is that you? Is that the you who's Waking up? No. Its Creator is God. Its Creator is the infinite Mind, which moves, the Movement of which is Creation. And your function is to acknowledge It for what It is, and in that acknowledgment be co-creator with the Father.

The holy instant is your invitation to love, to enter into your bleak and joyless kingdom, . .

. . . see, it's not about you doing something like . . .

The holy instant is your invitation to love, . .

. . . not your invitation to be loving yourself, but . . .

The holy instant is your invitation to love, to enter into your bleak and joyless kingdom, . .

. . . this love that is filling. Infinity beyond the circumference of the bubble that you've used to separate a little part of your wholeness off from the rest so that it could become something important. So:

The holy instant is your invitation to love, to enter into your bleak and joyless kingdom, and to transform it into a garden of peace and welcome.

That's the effect of practicing the two-step and the holy instant. That's the effect of the simple practice of the two-step and the holy instant.

Love's answer . . .

. . . what did I say? . .

. . . is inevitable.

That which is outside the bubble will inevitably perforate and pass through the bubble causing it to no longer seem to separate what is actually One.

It will come because you came without the body, . .

. . . now what does it really mean? Because you came without the boundary, you came without the practice of defense . . .

. . . and interposed no barriers which would interfere with its glad coming. In the holy instant, you ask of love only what it offers everyone, neither less nor more. ASKING for everything, you will RECEIVE it.

Demanding it, thinking you can create it yourself out of whole cloth, out of imagination won't work.

ASKING . . .

. . . isn't that humiliating, like begging?

ASKING for everything, you will RECEIVE it. And your shining Self will lift the tiny aspect which you tried to hide from Heaven straight INTO Heaven.

Listen to that again:

And your shining Self will lift the tiny aspect which you tried to hide from Heaven straight INTO Heaven.

The bubble pops and that of you which you were only paying attention to within the bubble is immediately sucked into, immediately finds itself in the middle of the Whole—the all of You.

No part of love calls on the whole in vain. No Son of God remains outside His Fatherhood.

Be sure of this; love has entered your special relationship, . .

Now we're not using the word "special relationship" every time we read from the last couple of chapters, but the context of all of this is the replacement of the special relationship with the holy relationship. And so if you thought that because we weren't talking about special or holy relationships quite as much as we have about the holy instant don't think that you can Wake up without this fundamental intimate involvement with your Brother where your Brother is the reason you use for wanting to know what the truth is here.

Be sure of this; love has entered your special relationship, and entered fully at your weak request.

You don't abandon what you love joyfully or vocally or loudly, or with great strength. You're not sure if you really want to Awaken. You don't even know for sure whether there is really anything to Awaken into. And so you sort of gingerly—like you would step into a cold swimming pool, stick a toe in—you gingerly, lightly, weakly desire to know the truth. Doesn't make any difference if you do it, if you make the request, if you express the curiosity it will be rewarded.

You do not recognize that love has come because you have not yet let go of all the barriers you hold against each other. And you will not be able to give love welcome separately.

Just absolutely fundamental:

. . . you will not be able to give love welcome separately. You could no more know God alone than He knows you without your brother. But, TOGETHER, you could no more be unaware of love than love could know you not, or fail to recognize itself in you.

You see, Awakening is the undoing of an ignorance of what's Real, of what is already true and could never have changed. Waking up is remembering what you have always been, even though you have been pre-occupied with your imagination and your great investment of commitment to it. So it does not take a great amount of effort or strength to reconfigure everything. All it takes is the willingness to abandon the commitment you have to the definitions you have made up which you have so far been unwilling to release because you think your life depends upon them.

Releasing them is the simple abandonment of a faith in something that isn't Real, an imagination, an idea. That's all. Remember this. That's why you can Wake up tonight or today or tomorrow, not way down the line.

You have reached the end of an ancient journey, not realizing yet that it is over. You are still worn and tired, and the desert's dust still seems to cloud your eyes and keep you sightless. Yet He Whom you welcomed has come to you, and would welcome YOU.

Your Brother . . . your Brothers and Sisters.

Yet He Whom you welcomed . . .

. . . He Whom you confronted without defense. He Whom you confronted without a preoccupation with your own safety will allow himself or herself to be received by you without defense as well.

Yet He Whom you welcomed . . .

. . . embraced defenselessly . . .

. . . has come to you, and would welcome . . .

. . . embrace defenselessly . . .

. . . YOU.

You see? What you give you receive and what you give you get to keep. It's a simple principle.

He has waited long to give you this . . .

. . . your Brothers and Sisters have. Your Brothers and Sisters don't know it yet, not all of them. Not those who are sick in the dream. But nevertheless, this is not their natural state. And that which is natural in them has waited a long time to be in touch with that which is natural in you.

He has waited long to give you this. Receive it now of Him, . .

. . . you can't receive through a boundary. You can't receive through a defense, but you can receive through defenseless welcome.

Receive it now of Him, for He would have you know Him.

Now we're not talking about an Awakened brother. We're talking about the guy who lives next door or the lady who lives up above you . . . or the child who is hollering and crying in the other room because he's impatient.

Receive it now of Him, for He would have you know Him.

. . . not who he believes he is.

Only a little wall of dust . . .

. . . or a flimsy bit of water and soap . . .

. . . still stands between you. Blow on it lightly and with happy laughter and it will fall away, and walk into the garden love has prepared for BOTH of you.

I could ask you, what keeps you from doing it? But you know what? You are going to get caught up for the next five weeks or five months trying to answer that and thinking that the answer to it would be somehow valuable and contributive.

Don't wonder or explore why you're not doing it. [snaps fingers] Do it with carefree abandon, what you might feel is carelessness. [snaps fingers] Do it! It's what it's all about. And it's the only thing standing between you—the doing or not doing of it—is the only thing that stands between you. No, the not doing of it is the only thing that stands between you and your Awakening and the Gift you would bring to everyone who is still dreaming.

I love you. I love you all. Have fun stepping up to the flimsy boundary and diving through it or blowing on it or laughing at it. And invite the Father's Perspective in . . . invite Love's Presence in . . . invite the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind, in Its totality, in.

And I look forward to being with you next week.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 29th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

So, we're coming down to simplicity. The simplicity of the two-step, which means shutting up—step 1—and enquiring of the Father or the Holy Spirit: "What is the truth here? In other words, separate and apart from whatever I think things mean, What is the truth here?" and then listening.

The other part of the simplicity is also dual, in that it involves shifting from body identification to Mind identification. Shifting from the perception of yourself as the body you see, to the awareness of yourself that is the Mind, the conscious awareness in which your body, world and universe are being experienced. This is the simplicity.

These are the only factors there are in the process of Awakening. This whole book, A Course In Miracles, is aimed not on teaching a philosophy, not on teaching a theory, but on directing your attention to these two dual factors. Why? So that you can involve yourself in change, not so that you can involve yourself in new levels of knowing and new theories to be able to logically put together in such a manner that it will force a conclusion that will cause you to change. No.

This is important.

Now we have a new section tonight, entitled either

THE DELUSIONAL THOUGHT SYSTEM'

. . . in some of the copies of the Course, and . . .

THE TWO WORLDS

And it begins . . .

You have been told to bring the darkness to the light, and guilt to holiness. And you have also been told that error must be corrected at its source. Therefore, it is the tiny part of yourself, the little thought that seems split off and separate, which the Holy Spirit needs.

It's this little part inside the bubble—inside this artificial boundary—that separates you from the rest of You. It's this little part that the Holy Spirit needs.

Now for perspective, and I'm aware we've discussed this over and over but it needs to be remembered: That which is on the outside of the bubble is identically the same thing as that which is on the inside of the bubble. This flimsy bubble simply creates a division in that which is One. And it isn't even solid. The "you" that identifies itself as what is inside the circle is the same substance, the same atmosphere, the same thing that is on the outside of the bubble because there's only one Presence, and a little bubble didn't create two.

Now, as long as you got your divorce from the Father and you are identifying yourself as that which is private and tiny, something, we'll say, had to be done to the rest of You that you've chosen to ignore. And what was done, we will say, is that the Father identified it as the Holy Spirit—the rest of You that you are not presently embracing. And so, that of You which is on the outside of the bubble, which is intent upon reuniting itself with the part of it that is on the inside of the bubble is called, "The Holy Spirit."

Why does the Holy Spirit need you? Because it needs the you that identifies itself as being inside the bubble because it's the rest of Itself. Its intent is for Itself to be whole which means for you not to be separated from It any longer, and not to be experiencing a false perception of yourself any longer and suffering from it.

So . . .

. . . it is the tiny part of yourself, the little thought that seems split off and separate, which the Holy Spirit needs. The rest is fully in God's keeping, and NEEDS no guide. Yet this wild and delusional thought . . .

. . . inside the bubble . . .

... needs help because, in its delusions, it thinks it is the Son of God, whole and omnipotent, sole ruler of the kingdom it set apart to tyrannize by madness into obedience and slavery.

I know you're getting used to the severity of the words and that you understand that the kingdom it set apart to tyrannize by madness into obedience and slavery is another way of saying that the you, who has given definition to everything and overlaid it upon the Kingdom of Heaven, so that you can now claim it to be your kingdom, that creation of yours—that imaginary configuration of ideas—that doesn't reflect what the Father is Being there, has been made in a context where you are frightened, where you are governed by fear and guilt.

As a result of your fear, you manipulate this world that you have given definition to, and you have treated the world as though it is an opponent. And the only way to govern an opponent is through manipulation, severity, threat, and to enslave it, we will say, by means of mutual agreements that cause it and everything in it to behave in a way that doesn't destroy you, because you are afraid it will.

This is a terrible state of mind to be in—to be governed by and to attempt to govern everything else by. And it is this that it is your Birthright to be freed from and freeing you from it is what we're engaged in.

This is the little part of you you think you stole from Heaven.

Well, maybe you didn't think you stole it from Heaven, but when you said, "Father, I'd rather see things my way, I would rather determine how things work, what they are, what their purpose and meaning is, I want a divorce." And so you separated yourself on the premise that you felt you could successfully function independent of your Father—independent of your Source—and be successful at it.

So . . .

This is the little part of you you think you stole from Heaven.
Give it back to Heaven.

What does that mean? It means release your attempts at control of it. Let God be in charge again.

Give it back to Heaven. Heaven has not lost it, but YOU have lost sight of Heaven.

Of course. You said, "Father, I'd rather see it my way. I'd rather have my own sight."

Let the Holy Spirit remove it.

That's what the process of Awakening is involved in—letting the Holy Spirit remove it. Let go of your control.

Let the Holy Spirit remove it from the withered kingdom in which you set it off, surrounded by darkness, guarded by attack, and reinforced by hate.

Again, if you think those words are too harsh, they aren't. Because think of how fundamentally you treat and go through your day in a self-protective mode, in a manner that will help you avoid the occasion of fear. Notice how dominant fear seems to be as a potential and look squarely at the fact that it interferes with your joy, so much so that you can't say every day at the end of the day, "My day was full of joy."

But you can say, "My day wasn't full of misery . . . I am very grateful!" And in effect, your feeling of gratitude is being a substitute for joy and yet the gratitude isn't for something real. Not having too much misery is not something real.

Feeling joy well up from within you, that is Real. Seeing your day unfold in harmonious constructive, uplifting and transforming manner, that is Real.

Remember this, so that you don't settle for some artificial substitute for joy, like gratitude that you didn't have a bad day.

Within its barricades . . .

. . . meaning the bubble . . .

. . . is still a tiny segment of the Son of God, complete and holy, serene and unaware of what you think surrounds it.

That tiny segment of the Son of God is you. Because there's only one you, no matter how you have twisted the definition of you so that you have become unrecognizable to yourself in your holiness. There's still only one you. And that which is on the inside of the barricade—on the inside of the bubble—is identical to and part of inseparably that which is on the outside of the bubble.

But . . .

Within [the] barricades . . .

. . . within the bubble, you are not experiencing yourself at peace. You're experiencing yourself in fear, living a life of self-protection. That's the illusion. You have fooled yourself into believing that you are not the Son of God that you Are. That you are not what God is expressing of Himself right now, right where you are. And you believe that you are this vulnerable mortal in a world of matter that inevitably sins, gets sick and dies.

Listen to this again:

Within its barricades . . .

. . . within the confines of the bubble . . .

. . . is still a tiny segment of the Son of God, . .

. . . you . . .

. . . complete and holy, serene and unaware . . .

. . . meaning, not altered in any way at this very moment from what God is expressing of Himself right there where you are. This is important! You are not a soul developing, growing, becoming refined. Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God, right in your experience of limitation, you are the Holy Son of God in your fullness, in your wholeness, as it says here, in your serenity.

You will not grow into it. You are going to have to accept your wholeness as a present fact to be embraced, not denied, not argued against. That's the important news!

Be you not separate, . .

. . . be you not separate, don't be separate anymore. Don't carry on this farce any longer.

Be you not separate. For the One Who DOES surround it, . .

. . . which is what? The Holy Spirit, your divinity held in trust while you're insisting on being this miserable little piece of the Son of God inside this artificial boundary.

Be you not separate. For the One Who DOES surround it, . .

. . . the infinity of You—the rest of You—your sanity . . .

. . . has brought union to you, returning your little offering of darkness to the eternal Light.

How is this done? [Well] it is extremely simple, being based on what this little kingdom really is . . .

. . . the one you made up: The Kingdom of Heaven, under the rules and definitions that you have applied to It.

It is extremely simple, being based on what this little kingdom really is. The barren sands, the darkness and the lifelessness . . .

. . . that which causes you to be miserable and depressed and not in the fullness of your joy every day . . .

. . . are seen only through the body's eyes.

They're seen only through the eyes of the body as you have defined the body and what its function is and what the function of your eyes are.

Remember, we spoke some time ago about the fact that you send out messengers constantly into the world. They go out looking for confirmation of the message you asked them to look for. And so you feel hate or you feel fear, or you feel jealousy. And you send a messenger out into the world and indeed it will find what it was sent to find: jealousy, fear and so on. And it will come back and confirm to you that what you sent it out to find, is there. And you sent it out to find the very tools you are using with which to see your world—the very definitions you are using to define your world.

If it's looking for your definitions rather than the Meanings God is bringing into play through the act of Creation at every moment, then obviously the messages coming back are going to confirm your mortality. They will confirm that you are justified in your anger, in your distress, in your fear. And you will believe them and you will govern yourself accordingly and you will cause your body to have those feelings of fear, anxiety . . . whatever.

But none of it will be real. Now:

The barren sands, the darkness and the lifelessness are seen only through the body's eyes.

In other words, the body you have imagined has certain functions. The bottom line function is self-defense, self-preservation, because your mindset is that you are vulnerable, that you are unsafe, that you can be damaged and sooner or later, likely will be—inevitably will be.

Its vision . . .

. . . the vision of the body you have imagined . . .

. . . IS distorted, and the messages it transmits to you who made it to LIMIT your awareness ARE little and limited, and so fragmented they are meaningless.

But man, watch what happens: the messages come back and they don't seem to be meaningless. They seem to be charged with importance and threat and justification for anger and acts of self-protection and doubt and suspicion and on and on.

From the world of bodies, . .

. . . the ones all of the Sons and Daughters of God have made up as the definition of themselves.

From the world of bodies, made by insanity, insane messages seem to be returned to the mind which made it. And these messages bear witness to this world, . .

. . . the world you made up—the world constituted of definitions that are obscuring what's really there: the Kingdom of Heaven, what's really present here: the Kingdom of Heaven.

And these messages bear witness to this world, pronouncing it as true. For YOU sent forth these messengers to bring this back to you.

Face it. The simplicity of it is, that if you are not looking at your world with the Father—joined—and giving your attention to the Father to learn of Him what you are looking at, then whatever you are seeing is a meaning you have given to it. And the confirmation of its validity has been accomplished by your sending out a messenger looking for confirmation. And so doubt will find that which is worthy of doubt, whether it's true or not!

So it's simple. If you are looking at a thing at any time during your day and you're not consciously joined with the Father so that you are able to hear what the Father is telling you those things are, and you are experiencing meaning, then they are meanings you have provided. And what validates those meanings to you are the result of the return of messengers you have sent out looking for confirmation, and willing to return to you conclusions that are as insane as the thought that caused you to send it out to find the confirmation.

So there's never any confusion actually available to you. If you're not hearing the Father joined with you, revealing to you what is going on here, what the meaning of this is . . . if the Father is not with you every moment during your day, then the moments when He isn't, is when you're in charge. The moments He isn't, is when you're experiencing your definitions, rather than the truth.

So you can't say, "Well, I don't know for sure, I think I'm getting a hint that it's this or that . . ." No. When the Father speaks, you know. You understand. You are inspired. It's unmistakable. And if you're not having constantly unmistakable experiences yet, the call is for you to persist further . . . to do what is normal for you to do. And the Course and I are providing a new definition of "normal." Normal is not to be confused. Normal is not to be in a constant state of wondering but not knowing.

Now:

Everything these messages relay to you is quite external. There are no messages which speak of what lies underneath, . .

. . . when it says that the messages relay to you what is external, it means "out there" and it also means "on the surface." And on the surface what is communicated is your meanings, your definitions—how you define the world.

There are no messages which speak of what lies underneath, for it is not the body that COULD speak of this.

That's why the two-step is essential, so that you can get to what's underneath. "Father, in spite of what I think, in spite of what I have determined everything to mean, what is the truth here? In other words, underneath the definition I have overlaid the Kingdom of Heaven with, what is the truth? Reveal the Kingdom of Heaven to me."

Now the body could not speak to you about what's underneath it. Because the body will only convey to you the words you put in its mouth. And you send out a messenger of suspicion and because there's no intelligence being used in determining what is true, the message comes back that indeed there is something for you to be suspicious about.

But when you say, "Father, what is the truth here in spite of what I think, or in spite of what is suggested by circumstances," your sending out a messenger there that says, "I want to know the truth—I want to know the truth of the Kingdom of Heaven that is covered over by my definitions." When you practice the two-step, you want to know the truth that is behind the appearance.

Its eyes . . .

. . . the body's eyes . . .

. . . perceive it not; its senses remain quite unaware of it; its tongue cannot relay its messages. Yet God can bring you there, if you are willing to follow the Holy Spirit through seeming terror, trusting Him not to abandon you and leave you there. For it is not His purpose to frighten you, but only YOURS.

As you've already learned, you frighten yourselves so as to be distracted from the guilt you're feeling, which if you were willing to feel it, would uncover to you that you're trying to do something unnatural to you and actually impossible to succeed at. And it would point your attention in the direction of the two-step and the holy instant and joining with the Father.

You are severely tempted to abandon Him at the outside ring of fear, but He would lead you safely through and far beyond.

Well, in practical terms what does that mean: "the outside ring of fear?" It means: That place where you have to abandon your self-protection because you are choosing to lean into the holy instant, you're choosing to lean into what you haven't figured out for yourself yet. You're abandoning the practice of self-control and the control of everything else.

When you are willing to say, "Father, aside from my best judgments, what is the truth here?" you're asking to know something that you're not aware of at the moment and you are having to yield to something other than yourself and this is frightening.

This is what you run into when you get near the bubble and engage in anything that might cause it to pop. And you need not to be surprised by the experience. Understand that when you run into this, you are severely tempted to abandon Him, the Holy Spirit or the Father, . . .

. . . but He would lead you safely through and far beyond . . .

. . . an important point. You're going to have to move through the fear, not around it and not finding some way to avoid it completely. You have to move through the gargoyles that you have put in place to keep yourself from finding out that not only are you guilty as you believe you are but there is a punishment awaiting you—which is not true.

The circle of fear lies just below the level the body sees, . . .

. . . the body you have defined, the purposes you have defined it as having do not allow it to see the holiness of life, the holiness of your Brother, the holiness of your Self. But it's there. It's there in everything you see. The holiness of Creation is there in everything you see right now.

The universe is not going through the “refiner’s fire” and becoming more spiritual and moving toward an ultimate divinity. The universe is the Kingdom of Heaven. You call it a universe because you’ve decided not to see the Kingdom of Heaven because if you saw the Kingdom of Heaven you would be joining with the Father and you would no longer be saying, “Father, I would rather define everything myself. I would rather do it my way. I would rather be independent. I would rather do everything solo.”

Again:

The circle of fear lies just below the level the body sees, and seems to be the whole foundation on which the world is based.

What world? The world you’ve defined with your frightened mental attitude.

Here are all the illusions, all the twisted thoughts, all the insane attacks, the fury, vengeance and betrayal that were made to keep the guilt in place, so that the world . . .

. . . that you’re defining . . .

. . . could rise from it and keep it hidden.

Keep the guilt hidden. Keep you distracted from the guilt, engaged in becoming a successful independent agent without a Father, without a Source.

Its shadow . . .

. . . the shadow of guilt . . .

. . . rises to the surface, enough to hold its most external manifestations in darkness, and to bring despair and loneliness to it and keep it joyless.

Don’t be afraid of this. Don’t be afraid of looking at it because in looking at it you can see that there’s really nothing about it that you would want to hold on to. And if indeed you have been holding onto it, you can choose to let go of it now, since you didn’t know you were doing that.

Yet its intensity . . .

. . . the intensity of guilt . . .

. . . is veiled by its heavy coverings, and kept apart from what was made to keep it hidden.

What distracts you successfully is the ego determination to make something of itself—to become a success, to become wealthy, to become wise, to become special, to become what would be equal to the Son of God without being the Son of God.

The body cannot see this, for the body arose from this for its protection, . . .

. . . the body you created arose from the need to cover up fear, to cover up guilt, for the protection of guilt, . . .

. . . which must always depend on keeping it NOT seen. The body's eyes . . .

. . . the eyes whose function and meaning you have defined as material.

The body's eyes will never look on it. Yet they will see what it dictates.

The body will remain guilt's messenger, and will act as it directs as long as you believe that guilt is real.

Why? Because as long as you believe guilt is real, you're going to send out the messengers which will come back and confirm the need to protect yourself so that you can avoid feeling the guilt.

For the reality of guilt is the illusion which seems to make it heavy and opaque, impenetrable, and a real foundation for the ego's thought system. Its thinness and transparency are not apparent until . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . you see the light BEHIND it.

The bubble is just a bubble. It's just a thin film standing between you and Reality and causing Reality to appear distorted. And you don't need to be subject to it any longer and there is nothing actual to hold you back from experiencing it.

Listen:

[sentence not read: And then you see it as a fragile veil before the light.]

This heavy-seeming barrier, this artificial floor which looks like rock, . . .

. . . meaning, solid . . .

. . . is like a bank of low dark clouds that seems to be a solid wall before the sun. Its impenetrable appearance is wholly an illusion. It gives way softly to the mountain tops which rise above it, and has no power at all to hold back anyone willing to climb above it . . .

. . . the cloud bank . . .

. . . and see the sun. It is not strong enough to stop a button's fall, nor hold a feather. Try but to touch it and it disappears; attempt to grasp it and your hands hold nothing.

But you see, if you are frightened to touch it because it is keeping guilt out of sight which keeps you free of the compulsive fear that you're going to be terribly punished for something, you will not try to touch it, you will not try to move through it. And this is why you need help. And this is why you need to return the little part of you inside the bubble back to the Holy Spirit—a transferring of identity outside the bubble—so that the wholeness and integrity and therefore sanity of you congeals, jells as actual, and insanity no longer presents itself as a definition of your state of mind.

Yet in this cloud bank it is easy to see a whole world rising. A solid mountain range, a lake, a city, all rise in your imagination, and from the clouds the messengers of your perception return to you, assuring you that it is all there.

You know, you remember lying on your back on the grass and looking at the clouds and seeing a dog and a horse and a bird . . . and all sorts of things.

Figures stand out and move about, actions seem real, and forms appear and shift from loveliness to the grotesque. And back and forth they go, as long as you would play the game of children's make believe. Yet however long you play it, . . .

. . . and I will say, however long you played it as a child.

Yet however long you play it, and regardless of how much imagination you bring to it, you do not . . .

. . . and did not . . .

. . . confuse it with the world below, . . .

. . . you know, the lawn you were lying on, the trees that you could see through as you looked into the sky and the clouds . . .

. . . you [did] not confuse it with the world below, nor seek to make it real.

Not so with your determination to be an independent agent, because what you see—the images you've created—become essential to your attempt at successfully becoming real in your own right. And so you take the images seriously. And that is insane—something you didn't do as a child when you looked.

So should it be with the dark clouds of guilt, no more impenetrable and no more substantial. You will not bruise yourself against them in traveling through. Let your Guide TEACH you their unsubstantial nature . . .

. . . you've got to do it! You've got to be willing to join with your Guide and move through the fear of guilt and retribution so that you might arrive at a point where you can see through the barrier, see the light on the other side and realize that the barrier is flimsy and insubstantial and not justifying your becoming immobilized and moving no further forward.

Let your Guide TEACH you their unsubstantial nature as He leads you past them, for beneath them is a world of light . . .

. . . underneath the dust of the definitions that you have spread all over Creation so that it now looks bleak and mortal, right there, currently holy and divine, is the Kingdom of Heaven available to you to experience.

Let your Guide TEACH you their unsubstantial nature as He leads you past them, . .

. . . and I would say, not only let your Guide teach you, demand of your Guide to teach you. He will be glad to answer as many questions as you have. He will be glad to assuage your fears no matter how completely they engulf you, because your Guide, the Holy Spirit is the wholeness of you, which loves you and embraces you and wants you not to suffer from illusions. It wants you to experience Its sanity, because Its sanity is yours already.

Let your Guide TEACH you their unsubstantial nature as He leads you past them, for beneath them is a world of light whereon they cast no shadows. Their shadows lie upon the world beyond them, still further from the light. Yet from them TO the light their shadows cannot fall.

The world that lies beyond them, that the shadows can be cast upon, is the world of your definitions and meanings. But the shadows cannot be cast towards the light. And when you are engaging in the two-step, when you are letting your Guide teach you, when you are demanding that your Guide teaches you, nothing can block the communication that brings you back into the Oneness of your Being. It's a fact. And learning that this is a fact is essential to your daring to take the steps to find out for a fact that it's the truth, and come back into your right Mind.

This world of light, . . .

. . . which isn't the one you made up.

This world of light, this circle of brightness, is the real world where guilt meets with . . .

. . . what? Penalty? No, . . .

. . . where guilt meets with forgiveness.

You must understand this. If you will dare to understand this and embrace it, it will give you the courage to move through the level of fear, the outer circle of fear where your illusions get undone together with their penalties.

Here, the world outside is seen anew, without the shadow of guilt upon it. Here are you forgiven, for here you have forgiven everyone. Here is the new perception, where everything is bright and shining with innocence, . . .

. . . including you . . .

. . . washed in the waters of forgiveness, . . .

. . . including you . . .

. . . and cleansed of every evil thought you had laid upon it.

. . . by means of your mean-spirited definitions, which were mean-spirited because you were suffering from fear and guilt and thought it was necessary to protect yourself.

Here there is no attack upon the Son of God, . . .

. . . You. You want the you I'm talking to right now, who still thinks it is enclosed, separate from your invulnerability and eternity in a tiny bubble.

Here there is no attack upon the Son of God, . .

. . . You . . .

. . . and you are welcome.

Remember the wonderful meaning of welcome? Welcome is when you are embracing someone without any shred of defense. And the state of welcome invites the presence of welcome from the one you are welcoming and a new way of being together emerges because defense isn't destroying the experience of holiness.

Here is your innocence, waiting to clothe you and protect you, and make you ready for the final step in the journey inward. Here are the dark and heavy garments of guilt laid by, and gently replaced by purity and love . . .

. . . clothing you, representing the nature of that which it clothes, revealing to you a new self-awareness and thereby a new self-appreciation—an appreciation without reservation.

Yet even forgiveness is not the end. Forgiveness DOES make lovely, but it does not create. It is the source of healing, but it is the messenger of love, and not its Source. Here you are led that God Himself can take the final step unhindered, for here does nothing interfere with love, . .

. . . you're not bringing a defense, you're not bringing a boundary called a body that is there to keep you safe.

Here you are led that God Himself can take the final step unhindered, for here does nothing interfere with love, letting it be itself. A step beyond this holy place, a step still further inward but the one YOU cannot take, transports you to something completely different. Here is the Source of light; nothing perceived, forgiven nor transformed. But merely KNOWN.

The lyrics of a song said: "First you see the mountain, then you don't, then you see the mountain . . ."2

When you arrive at the experience of the Source of light where nothing is perceived, forgiven nor transformed, but merely Known, you will discover that first you saw the Kingdom of Heaven but called it a material world and universe. And then in the transition, you didn't see it. And then you see it as the Kingdom of Heaven. It will not disappear.

Creation will not disappear, but it will no longer return messengers to you confirming your isolation and seeming potential for grand success, because you won't be sending messengers out looking for that. You will have let yourself be sucked out into the wholeness of You, outside the bubble as the bubble popped. And everything will be, I'm going to say, surprising, unexpected, and yet as It is revealed to you, you will recognize It because It is your Home. It always was your Home and you experienced It as It truly is, before.

Now you're getting unstuck from misperceptions. Treat it seriously. In other words, treat it as though it were Real and not just fantasy or too good to be true. And dig into it on purpose. Let the Holy Spirit teach you and push the Holy Spirit, demand of the Holy Spirit to Know more.

This is the nitty-gritty and yet the nitty-gritty is simple.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

May 12th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, we're coming to the end of a chapter, which is entitled:

THE DREAM AND THE REALITY.¹

And I encourage everyone who has been participating in these study groups to take some time this coming week to go back and review what has been discussed. You will find that this chapter is like . . . it describes the anatomy of the holy instant, it describes the function of the holy instant and the purpose of the holy instant.

And if you remember last time, we discussed the fact that as you come near the boundary that divides you from who you divinely Are, the boundary that embraces that which you identify as you and you alone, not you and You joined, but you and you alone, you become uncomfortable. Because the closer you get to the boundary, the more likely it is that the bubble will pop. This flimsy boundary will break up and you will lose all of the authority and all of that which has made you valuable. You will lose all that you have created—the self you have created, the respect you have garnered from your excellent work, and so on.

But more than anything, it will uncover the guilt that's ever-present as long as you're trying to maintain the bubble. Once you see the guilt, once you feel the guilt and you don't avoid it, a peculiar thing happens: The boundary of the bubble before it bursts becomes less opaque. And you can see Light on the other side. You can, we'll say, see through it. And as that happens, it becomes more obvious to you that there's nothing for you to fear.

Now the point is, that when you arrive where the fear arises, you need to hold onto your Guide's hand, you need to hold on to the Holy Spirit's hand ever more tightly because you have moved toward the boundary because you've been led. That which is nothing more than your right Mind, which occupies all of infinity on the outside of the bubble is intent upon bringing the tiny part of you that you value so highly that is enclosed within the bubble, outside the bubble so that that flimsy boundary separating you from the wholeness of You is no longer causing this aberration of perception called, "separation" and you experience the wholeness of You with nothing any longer seeming to separate you into two.

Now, you might even find that as you've listened to Guidance, as you have reached out in the holy instant to the Father or to the Holy Spirit and asked, "What is the truth here? What is Reality that fills the inside and the outside of the bubble and therefore renders the bubble useless, meaningless and false," when you do that, when you practice the holy instant as I said, you've done it because the movement toward the boundary occurs because the Holy Spirit or the Father leads you. As a result, you can come to the false conclusion that listening to Guidance is not helpful, is dangerous, otherwise you would not be frightened. And that can cause you to refuse to listen. Because not listening allows you to move away from the boundary and you feel more safe, less frightened.

You must understand the phenomena here so that when you experience the fear, you say, "Okay Holy Spirit, I am leaning more significantly into Your Guidance. I entrust myself to you more completely. Because I know it is Your purpose to move me through the boundary freeing me from it and bringing me back into the clear undistorted experience of Reality, we could say, the clear undistorted experience of the world and universe as what it really is—the Kingdom of Heaven."

This chapter describes the process of the holy instant and how it brings you to the boundary and carries you through. And so, at the very end of the chapter here, we're in a section called:

THE PASSING OF THE DREAM

It could also be called, The Abandonment of the Dream, The Release from the Dream. Abandonment of the Dream is a better choice of words. Release from the Dream makes it sound as though the dream has a capacity to entrap and hold you—something in itself that can have a negative effect on you. And that's not the case. You will abandon the dream. The practice of the holy instant is the process of abandoning the dream.

The holy instant is the bridge out of the dream—out of the bubble—which in the process of the Movement, pops the bubble, restoring you to your wholeness, restoring you to your holiness, restoring the one you have joined with in a holy relationship for the purpose of Awakening.

Now, going into the book:

THE PASSING OF THE DREAM

This course will LEAD to knowledge, but knowledge itself is still beyond the scope of our curriculum. Nor is there any need for us to try to speak of what must forever lie beyond words.

Now I have used the word, “Knowing” which I capitalize so that it means something different from a puny little mind thinking it knows something. I have used the word, “Knowing” in preference to the word, “knowledge” as it has been used in the Course. So:

This Course will lead to [Knowing], but [Knowing] itself is still beyond the scope of our curriculum.

And what that means is, that Knowing is still beyond the scope of the bubble and the curriculum. The whole purpose of the curriculum is to bring you to the place where the bubble is burst. Your insistence upon joining with the Father or the Holy Spirit and abandoning your isolation, that is what the Course is about and that is what its study should be leading you to—an act! Not accumulated knowledge.

So again . . .

[The] Course will lead to knowledge, . .

. . . will lead to Knowing, . .

. . . but [Knowing] itself is still beyond the scope our curriculum.

The curriculum is only going to take you to the edge of your decision to be alone, on your own. There’s Something that’s going to carry you beyond that. But that’s all the Course can do. And so in the process of movement, in the process of the benefit of practicing the holy instant, you will seem to be learning and you will seem to be acquiring knowledge. But it is all for the purpose of leading you to the point where you will go beyond it.

So, Knowing itself . . .

... knowledge itself is still beyond the scope of our curriculum. Nor is there any need for us to try to speak of what must forever lie beyond words. We need remember only that whoever attains the real world, beyond which learning cannot go, WILL go beyond it, but in a different way.

Learning, being willing to learn will take you to the threshold, to the boundary of the bubble, the boundary of the definitions which you have made up and firmly identified yourself as, it will take you there. And then no more learning will occur. No more learning can take you beyond the boundary. So learning will not continue when you go beyond the boundary. But you . . .

... WILL go beyond it, . . .

... you will go beyond learning . . .

... but in a different way.

Now what I'm going to say here is in some ways actual and in some ways not literal. I use it to help explain how you might go beyond the boundary and experience things in a different way.

Through education, someone can describe to you what sandpaper is. And you might be able to visualize that there's paper with grit that has been applied to it that is rough, that is actually rough enough to wear down substances if you rub it against substances. And so you will have an intellectual understanding, you will have knowledge about it. But when someone actually hands you a piece of sandpaper and you feel it and you have the experience of what the description meant, that is entirely different. You see?

So, . . .

We need remember only that whoever attains the real world, . . .

... and that doesn't mean some will and some won't.

We need remember only that [when you attain] the real world . . .

... I'll start over . . .

We need remember only that whoever attains the real world, beyond which learning cannot go, WILL go beyond it, but in a different way.

When you move through the bubble, for lack of better words, you will experience God's Perspective about each and every thing. It will be an experience, not an explanation. You see?

The whole purpose of this book and the whole purpose of this chapter that we've just been reading, is to clearly express the dynamics and the nature of this movement through the bubble so that you, we will say, graduate out of knowledge into experience.

You should not be studying this book for the purpose of acquiring knowledge about what "A Course in Miracles" is about. You need to be reading it as though it is talking about you and helping move you into an experience of Reality, rather than knowledge. Knowledge is static. It is as though knowledge is set in stone.

But the experience of Reality is a Movement to be experienced in the moment—to be experienced as you bring your attention to "the Now," without preconceptions and with the child-like curiosity to Know what's really going on here? So that you might join with the Father Who is out of Himself, Being You. "What is the truth here? How do You see things Father? What is really going on?"

Where learning ends . . .

. . . we'll say, at the edge of the bubble . . .

. . . there God begins, . .

. . . and goes forever, beyond the circumference of the bubble.

Where learning ends . . .

. . . and I'm going to say, where learning ends, there you in your Reality, begin.

Where learning ends there God begins, for learning ends before Him Who is complete where He begins, . .

. . . listen to this again:

. . . learning ends before Him Who is complete where He begins,

. . . learning ends when you get to the edge of the bubble. If you move through the edge of the bubble, you are at the beginning of God. But having moved through the bubble, you are where God is whole . . . you see? . . . complete, and at that instant the bubble pops! And there's no "behind" that's called “the inside of the bubble.” The behind is the rest of the infinity of God and the rest of the infinity of You. So:

Where learning ends there God begins, for learning ends before Him Who is complete where He begins, and where there IS no end.

You see? The minute you move through the bubble, you’re where God seems to begin because it’s on the other side of the boundary of self that you have artificially created. And when you move through it, the bubble pops and where God began is where God also never ends because you have shifted into Eternity, you have shifted into Infinity which is an Eternal Now constituted of the Movement of the divine Mind of God, the Movement of which is experienced as Creation and which you experience as Creation—no longer as a “material world and universe”—and you join with the Father acknowledging what it is, truly. And that’s called, “Co-Creation.”

It is not for us to dwell on what CANNOT be attained. There is too much to learn.

So we won’t talk about what it’s going to be like after you pass through the bubble and experience your wholeness, because at the moment there’s still learning to be engaged in.

What learning? Well, the learning that will happen whenever you decide to practice the holy instant. Because until you are Awake, the holy instant stands as the bridge that brings you closer and closer to the edge of the bubble, and in the process reveals—by means of your Guide’s Guidance—the truth about You, the truth about your Brother, the truth about the world and universe.

And by virtue of your standing firmly hand-in-hand with your Guide, you will be led through peace and fear to the other side of the bubble [snaps fingers] where the bubble pops!

But there needs to be commitment to stay with your Guide, even though your Guide brings you closer and closer to . . . what? . . . the nature of the decision you made when you got your divorce from the Father. The last thing you will undo, the last thing, the last element that keeps that bubble together, is the decision you made to get a divorce from your Father and be independent. And the undoing of that, you must arrive at a willingness to engage in.

You will only be able to do that through the Love of the Holy Spirit and the Love of the Father, which has set into place the means for coming back into your right Mind.

And so, you're at a place where you must, for lack of better words, significantly hang onto your Sanity—your holiness. The Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind—is your Sanity. And your Sanity will safely carry you over the threshold of the boundary you created. It will safely carry you across. And in the crossing undo . . . burst the bubble.

There is too much to learn. The readiness for knowledge still must be attained.

And again, that is the purpose of the holy relationship. The purpose of the holy relationship is to attain the clarity of the Presence of God in your Brother or your Sister because you love your Brother or Sister enough to want to see beneath the surface, to see beyond the definitions you're applying to him or her, or the definitions he or she is applying to himself or herself. That's what it's all about.

The holy instant is never a place in which separate, individual, isolated, private realization occurs.

Love is not learned. Its meaning lies in itself.

[whispering] It's an experience. Love is an experience, actually, whether you're Awake or asleep, whether you're thinking you're separate and alone or not. Love is an experience. And you have the experience. The problem is that you embrace it in your very highly stylized perceptions that arise out of fear and guilt because you chose an independent stance. Nevertheless, it's an experience that you have whether you're inside or outside the bubble.

Love is not learned. Its meaning lies in itself. And learning ends when you have recognized all it is NOT.

Listen to that again . . .

. . . learning ends when you have recognized all it is NOT.

Whew! . . . now that . . . that could sound like it would take eternity for you to ferret out, all that love is not. I mean, you know . . . you know there's a lot of stuff going on, you know there's a lot of stuff that has occurred in your own minds that is not love. You mean you've got to ferret it out, every last bit before you can Wake up? No. Listen to this . . .

. . . learning ends when you have recognized all it is NOT.

And here's the all that it is not: THINKING! Thinking is all that love is not. It doesn't matter how many thousands of thoughts you might have, once you realize that thinking binds you to insanity, once you realize that thinking, no matter what the subject, is useless, once you realize that it blocks you from your good, you can stop doing all that love is not, by silencing yourself. You see how simple, how uncomplicated?

Love is not learned. Its meaning lies in itself.

The experience it is.

And learning ends when you have recognized all it is NOT.

You see? In effect, learning is the undoing of all the thinking you've done. But the ultimate learning in it is to arrive at a point where you realize that thinking itself, and not what you have been thinking about, is what needs to be abandoned. You see?

That is the interference; . .

. . . all that love is not. Thinking!

That is the interference; that is what needs to be undone.

. . . not a whole bunch of stuff—one thing. Silence yourself. Shut up! And in the silence ask, “Father, what is the truth here?” You see how simple.

Love is not learned because there never was a time in which you knew it not. Learning is useless in the Presence of your Creator,

. . . well, when you come to the boundary that you have created artificially, by means of definitions you have made up and committed yourself to, you're standing right in the Presence of your Creator with the flimsiest of films between you and Him, between you the thinker and Him the Be-er, Whose Being is supposed to be your experience rather than something you have knowledge about. And learning is useless because in the Presence of your Creator, you're in the Presence of Knowing, you're in the Presence of a Mind that's not different from yours and you're not engaged in attempting to maintain a mind separate from His.

So there's no learning that occurs because you've allowed Knowing to simply be in you as you. When you do that, it's an act of absolute effortlessness. It's something that occurs when you actually completely let go of attempting to be independently assertive, when you in true humility, yield.

Learning is useless in the Presence of your Creator, Whose acknowledgement of you and yours of Him so far transcend all learning that everything you learned is meaningless, replaced forever by the knowledge of love and its one meaning.

Everything that you learned in the process of practicing the holy instant moves you into a perspective where everything you've learned becomes meaningless. All the things you've taught yourself become meaningless. All the things that your educators have taught you become meaningless. And you move through the bubble, you have experienced the transition and Knowing replaces all of the learning that eventually brought you to the edge of the bubble. The learning related only to your separated sense of self and its return to its Sanity.

Your relationship . . .

. . . the holy relationship you engaged in as the reason for your practicing the holy instant . . .

. . . has been uprooted . . .

. . . we'll say, at this point . . .

. . . has been uprooted from the world of shadows, and its unholy purpose has been safely brought through the barriers of guilt, . .

. . . and I'm going to add: of fear . . .

. . . washed with forgiveness, and set shining and firmly rooted in the world of light.

Because remember, when you go through that bubble you will not go through alone. You and your Brother will go through. And all of Eternity and infinity, all of Creation will be blessed by your return. And Its blessing will fall upon you both as well.

So, your relationship . . .

. . . has been safely brought through the barriers of guilt, washed with forgiveness, and set shining and firmly rooted in the world of light. From there, it . . .

. . . your relationship . . .

. . . calls to you to follow the course it took, lifted high above the darkness, and gently placed before the gates of Heaven.

You see? It's important to know that this is about you returning to your right Mind—you regaining your Sanity. It's equally essential for you to understand that you will not do that alone, you will do it in tandem with someone else.

And it's in that joining that the one unified meaning of love will become your experience, and the other in your relationship, his or her experience. This will keep you grounded in the process because you cannot on your own ram your way through your boundary that you have dedicated yourself to create and maintain, it's the result of having become independent not only from God but from your Brothers and Sisters. So understand how it works.

The holy instant in which you were united . . .

. . . you and your partner in the holy relationship.

The holy instant in which you were united is but the messenger of love, sent from beyond forgiveness to remind you of all that lies beyond it.

That's why when you shut up and say, "What is the truth here?" you get an answer . . .

. . . sent from beyond forgiveness to remind you of all that lies beyond it. Yet it is through forgiveness that it will BE remembered.

You see? Unity . . . relationship.

And when the memory of God has come to you in the holy place of forgiveness, you will remember nothing else, and memory will be as useless as learning. . .

. . . you see? When you have that breakthrough, when the bubble pops, you won't even remember learning because that of you which was Real inside the bubble is joined with that of you that is Real on the outside of the bubble and that which never actually happened is not available to remember.

Again:

And when the memory of God has come to you in the holy place of forgiveness, you will remember nothing else, and memory will be as useless as learning, for your only purpose will be creating.

Joined with the Father, in which the Love that the Father Is, in which the infinite Mind that the Father Is, is what constitutes your Being. You will engage in and be involved in the Movement of the Father that's inseparable from you and you will participate in and stand in awe of Creation, which can be fully appreciated and embraced because there's no little you feeling vulnerable and therefore needing to protect itself by creating this boundary that protects it from the rest of Creation. You see?

Yet this you cannot know until every perception has been cleansed and purified, . .

. . . how is every perception cleansed and purified? By abandoning thinking, which is where perceptions originate, arise from, and are maintained.

. . . this you cannot know until every perception has been cleansed and purified, . .

. . . but not something you have to fare it out. It will be cleansed and purified by the absence of thinking . . .

. . . and finally removed forever.

Ah-h . . . peace . . . peace is the underlying and overriding experience when the divorce is annulled, when your independence is a non-existence—a non-existent thing of the past that no longer exists. You see?

Forgiveness removes only the UNTRUE, . .

. . . this is what you cannot find out if you do not take the hand of the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind—and firmly and steadfastly hold It as It moves you through the apparently fearsome experience of breaking the boundary, which was your initial decision to get the divorce, and undo it forever.

Forgiveness removes only the UNTRUE, lifting the shadows from the world, . .

. . . of your imagination . . .

. . . and carrying it, safe and sure within its gentleness, to the bright world of new and clean perception.

Sounds almost like, sanitary. But it's clean, clear perception because it's your experience of the Father's Meaning that He is embodying in all of Creation, which it is now your joyous activity to participate in, by giving your attention to. Beautiful.

There is your purpose NOW. And it is there that peace awaits you.

Where? On the other side of the holy instant. Where? On the other side of the flimsy boundary—the bubble—that seems to imply that you are what is inside and you are not what is outside. Now are we the Sons and Daughters of

God. Now fear and preoccupation with what you think you'll lose is all that keeps you from daring to do the one thing that will help you cross the threshold, and that is hold tight to the Love that embraces you and is called the Holy Spirit, and let it move you through this last part of the foundation of your delusion and your false interpretation of the Kingdom of Heaven and all that accompanies it: sin, sickness, death on and on and on.

So, the holy instant is the means of the miracle. The holy instant, we'll say, is the womb in which the sudden shift of perception called "a miracle" occurs. And that is the whole point of this book.

When I say I love you all, you have no idea at the moment how total it is, how full it is, how supportive it is, how healing and transformational it is. But I do. And you will too. And that is what I am helping move you toward.

Again, I must remind you, do not imagine that this will be a long process that will occur in the distant future. Now are you still the holy Son of God. You're neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. You're at that point and must understand yourself therefrom. And you will, when you practice the holy instant and ask the Father or the Holy Spirit, "What is the truth here? What is the perfection that I'm neither behind or advancing toward?" and demand an answer.

And you know what that means? It doesn't mean be arrogant, it simply means neglect to argue against the answer, neglect to think that you know better than to expect to have that kind of a divine and holy experience. You see?

I love you. And I look forward to being with you next week.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

May 20th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

A new Chapter [NINETEEN]:

BEYOND THE BODY¹

That simply refers to what we've been talking about for the last couple of weeks: Moving beyond body identification to Mind identification, where you recognize that what you Are is conscious awareness in which the experience of body is going on along with all of Creation.

The function of the two-step is to move you beyond the body.

And so, beginning in the book:

We said before that, when a situation has been dedicated wholly to truth, peace is inevitable.

[repeats] when a situation has been dedicated wholly to truth . . .

. . . well, when a situation has been dedicated wholly to truth it means you have abandoned your dedication to your best concepts, to your best judgments, to your best thinking.

So when you have abandoned thinking, when you have moved into the silence where silence is the only thing there is—awareness is the only thing there is—without a subject or topic of awareness, there always is peace. That is what meditation accomplishes: Moving you to that place where you've abandoned your preference to your best judgments and your best thinking, in fact, the act of thinking itself.

So it's not terribly complicated to dedicate something wholly to truth. It means, like I said, to withdraw your dedication to your best thinking. So it's simply moving into the silence. Not complicated.

Its attainment . . .

. . . peace . . .

. . . is the criterion by which the wholeness of the dedication can be safely assumed.

In other words, if you have arrived at a place where no thoughts are going on, where pure awareness is occurring, you're aware of everything that is going on, but you're having no response to it other than being conscious of it.

So the attainment of that shows you that the dedication has been complete.

Yet we also said that peace without faith will NEVER be attained, for what is wholly dedicated to truth as its only goal is brought to truth BY faith.

You are, everyone is absolutely smitten by his or her capacity to think and reason and come to conclusions. In fact, many believe that the act of thinking is what constitutes being conscious because they have yet to discover that they can be in the silence without thinking and be totally conscious.

Because of the dedication to thinking and reasoning and always being alert, so that you can protect yourself, you never bring faith into play. You're always negating the need for faith by being on top of things—in charge of things yourself—by virtue of your thinking. But the simple fact is, that because you rely upon it for your safety—your capacity to think—it takes faith to be willing to abandon it.

Surprising maybe . . . but it's the truth. You will never arrive at the experience of peace, without faith that everything will not collapse while you do it, without faith that you will not lose control or go crazy in the process.

So faith is always essential to arriving at a place where you are totally dedicated to peace because you are totally unhooked to your self-protection. So faith is necessary but it isn't a humungous amount that is needed. A little bit of faith . . . a little bit of willingness to become silent is met with positive results.

Yet we also said that peace without faith will NEVER be attained, for what is wholly dedicated to truth as its only goal is brought to truth BY faith. This faith encompasses everyone involved, for only thus the situation is perceived as meaningful and as [a] whole.

When you're doing the two-step, when you're willing to shut-up, when you're willing to say in the silence that ensues: "Father, what is the truth here?" you're in a place without biases, without evaluations, without things that are better or worse than other things.

This brings everything into Oneness. This brings everything into the unity that it has always been in but which you haven't perceived because you've been so busy protecting yourself by means of clear correct thinking. It's a shame.

And everyone must be involved in it, . .

. . . in this willingness for peace and this experience of peace . . .

. . . or else your faith is limited, and your dedication incomplete.

Why? Because you're still giving preference to some of your capacity to evaluate and to make sure while you're daring to be silent that you're not going to be vulnerable and end up being abused, attacked or mistreated.

Every situation, properly perceived, becomes an opportunity to heal the Son of God.

Every situation properly perceived becomes an opportunity to do the two-step. Every situation—anything that happens, anything that you are experiencing—is a prime opportunity for you to express curiosity and ask to understand beyond your present understanding and say, "Father, what is the truth here? Father what is your Perspective about this?" And at the bottom line, what you're doing is using every experience as an opportunity to return to your Sanity. It's that simple and yet, that profound, which makes it utterly justifiable to spend your day constantly asking, "What is the truth here?" so that you might observe what's going on from your Sanity and behave relative to the situation from your Sanity. And thus have a healed experience in which harmony reigns—peace governs. You see?

Every situation, properly perceived, becomes . . .

. . . I'm going to say, a wonderful . . .

... opportunity to heal the Son of God.

... to see your Brother as the Son of God and not who he thinks he is, and not who you think he is. That means that every moment of your conscious awareness is a moment primed for redemption . . . a glorious thing. Something which, if you take advantage of it, will provide the occasion for healing after healing after healing. A wonderful thing to participate in.

Every situation, properly perceived, becomes an opportunity to heal the Son of God. And he is healed BECAUSE you offered faith to him, giving him to the Holy Spirit and releasing him from every demand your ego would make of him.

Now those of you who are students of the Course, I am sure have on many occasions, heard someone say, “Well, my daughter or so-in-so was having a problem and I turned them over to the Holy Spirit . . . I said, ‘Holy Spirit, I turn my daughter over to You. Holy Spirit, I turn this situation over to You.’” And then they went along their merry way, thinking that’s what it meant.

No. It requires a little more involvement than that. Your Brother, the Son of God . . .

... is healed BECAUSE you offered faith to him, . .

. . . not doubt, not pessimism, not your worst judgments, not even your conditioned good judgments that didn’t necessarily have anything at all to do with your Brother but you had adopted them as definitions. So, he . . .

... is healed BECAUSE you offered faith . . .

. . . not faithlessness . . .

... to him, giving him to the Holy Spirit and releasing him from every demand your ego would make of him.

In other words, instead of approaching your Brother, based upon your best judgments and your best concepts about him, you release him from that by turning your attention to the Holy Spirit and saying, “Father, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, reveal to me the holy Son of God that neither he nor I is seeing completely this moment.” You see?

You don’t take your Brother out there, and sort of shove him off on the Holy Spirit. You don’t just turn him over to the Holy Spirit and leave the rest up to the Holy Spirit. No. You turn your attention to the Holy Spirit. You say, “Father . . . ” you say, “Holy Spirit, I want to know the truth about my Brother so that I might stand in faith with him and be part of the transformation—the healing that is called for—because I’ve been willing to pay attention to You, Holy Spirit, in order to bless my Brother with Your Perspective, because I’ve been willing to listen . . . because I’ve been willing to be involved so that You, Holy Spirit, and I may be agents of change on behalf of my Brother.” You see?

That’s what giving it to the Holy Spirit means. It means no longer giving him to your best judgments or worst. But instead, giving your attention to the Holy Spirit to Know the truth about him. So that you might be the one who extends the consciousness of truth that embodies the faith you have in what he truly is, rather than what he believes he is and even rather than what you always thought he was. That’s the key.

Thus do you see him free, . .

No. Thus, do you see him free. You see? It doesn’t matter that “thus does the Holy Spirit see him free” because you released him to the Holy Spirit. No.

Thus do you see him free, and in this vision does the Holy Spirit share.

You’re joined with the Holy Spirit, that which is nothing more than your right Mind.

And since He shares it He has given it, and so He heals through YOU.

Now if you turn your Brother over to the Holy Spirit or his problem and you go off on down the street and tend to your business, how can He possibly heal through you when that is the means, that is the purpose of the practice of the two-step and the holy instant . . . so that you might be involved in Brotherhood.

It is this joining Him . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . in a united purpose which makes this purpose real . . .

. . . you might say, which actualizes this purpose . . .

. . . because you make it Whole.

You make it whole by not walking off from it and leaving the problem with the Holy Spirit to solve. You make it whole by being present as part of it. Without you, without your attention, without your care, there's a black hole. There's an emptiness where you are supposed to be fulfilling your part in the wholeness and thereby discovering that the wholeness of Creation is not in the slightest bit separate from you.

It's very important.

And this IS healing. The body is healed, because you came without it . . .

. . . meaning, no longer identifying with it and as it.

The body is healed, because you came without it and joined the Mind in which all healing rests.

In other words, you shifted from body identification to Mind identification in which all healing rests.

New Section:

HEALING AND THE MIND

The body cannot heal, because it cannot make itself sick. It NEEDS no healing. Its health or sickness depends entirely on how the mind perceives it, and the purpose which the mind would use it FOR.

Now if you have stepped beyond the body by shifting to Mind identification, then you will be using the body to identify the purpose which the Holy Spirit puts forth and gives for you to act out. It therefore, serves the Holy Spirit's purpose, which is transformation, regeneration and redemption: Healing—the calling forth of the perfection that the Father, in the Movement of Creation, created and which, never for an instant, has been altered. You see?

Its health or sickness depends entirely on how the mind perceives it, and the purpose which the mind would use it FOR. And it is obvious that a segment of the mind CAN see itself as separated from the Universal Purpose.

It really is obvious isn't it, you're not Awake. You're not experiencing invulnerability. You're not experiencing interminable and unalterable peace.

[And] it is obvious that a segment of the mind . . .

. . . the part you're using right now . . .

... CAN see itself as separated from the Universal Purpose.

It's possible for a part of the mind to conceive that it has its own purpose and reason for being. And in fact, has a "God-ordained right" to practice and exercise it and succeed at its goals. So indeed, it is obvious.

When this occurs, ..

... this apparent separation ...

... the body becomes its weapon, ..

... the mind's weapon ...

... used AGAINST this Purpose ...

... this universal purpose ...

... to demonstrate the "fact" that separation has occurred.

"Look at me! I'm on my own! I'm real and I'm going to do whatever I damn well please!" You see? The body is used to prove this stance, this imaginative but not actual stance.

The body thus becomes the instrument of illusion, acting accordingly; seeing what is not there, hearing what truth has never said, and behaving insanely, being imprisoned BY insanity.

There cannot be too many of you who have been joining me, who would argue this choice of words any longer. But you see, as long as you think you are the governing factor, the governing force, the authority and you think that you are here to make everything in your image, reflecting your likeness and your thoughts and your definitions, you are insane. Because your choice to see only what you believe constitutes a preoccupation with yourself, when everything, including you, has Meaning separate and apart from your definitions, Meaning embodied by the Father's Expression of His infinite Expression.

When all you are seeing is what you want to see and you are wandering around in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven seeing a material world and universe, you are experiencing temporary insanity, which it is your Birthright not to be experiencing.

Nevertheless, until you abandon this faith in your best judgments and your right to act independently as you believe you are, you have some work to do. Correction is called for and will continue to be called for until you answer the call. Practice some self-discipline. Shift from self-protection to the expression and embrace of Love. And by-so-doing, are transformed by the renewing of your mind, and you Wake up, and you fulfill the purpose of the holy instant, and you have the joy of being Whole.

Do not overlook our earlier statement that faithlessness leads straight to illusions.

What is faithlessness? It's your dependence and devotion to the best judgments you can come up with, where you are not taking a single moment to silence your mind and inquire of the divine One within you to know what the truth is, and to arrive at the experience of truth without having relied in anyway upon a supposed capacity you have to think for yourself and be on purpose and experience fulfillment.

Do not overlook our earlier statement that faithlessness leads straight to illusions.

Thinking and reasoning on your own leads directly away from the conscious experience of truth and the conscious experience of Reality.

For faithlessness is the perception of a brother as a body, . .

. . . just as you experience yourself as a body.

For faithlessness is the perception of a brother as a body, and the body cannot be used for purposes of union.

What is it that can unite? Mind—that conscious awareness in which Love is the motive and action. That is the only thing that can embrace and that is the only thing that can use the body for purposes of expressing embrace and safety and the absence of need for self-protection.

If, then, you see your brother AS a body, you have established a condition in which uniting with him becomes impossible.

But you will inevitably say that your Brother and what's wrong with him and how he behaves makes your uniting with him impossible. Not true.

Your faithlessness to him . . .

. . . your unwillingness to desire to see the Holy Spirit in him, your reluctance to see his holiness . . .

. . . has separated you from him, . .

... and always will separate you from him ...

... and kept you BOTH apart from being healed.

Healing is the point. The experience of joined wholeness is the point. And the only time joining can occur is when your thinking isn't getting in the way, is when your thinking has been set aside so there is room for the Holy Spirit to register with you and correct your perception and provide you with the joy of seeing who your Brother or Sister truly is, so that your spontaneous behavior then will embody that perspective and heal your Brother or your Sister, because here she knows that he needs or she needs provide no defense and therefore no armor against your presence, against the presence of the Love that you are being because you did engage with the Holy Spirit and not your best thinking.

Your faithlessness has ...

... and always will ...

Your faithlessness has thus opposed the Holy Spirit's purpose, and brought illusions, centered on the BODY, to stand between you. And the body WILL seem to be sick, for you have made of it an "enemy" of healing, and the opposite of truth.

And how have you done this? By identifying with the body, and as the body. And then identifying your Brother or Sister, who is in need of help, as a body. And in that misperception of yourself and your Brother, there is no link to join in union and so you deny healing.

It cannot be difficult to realize that faith must be the opposite of faithlessness. Yet the difference in how they operate is less apparent, though it follows directly from the fundamental difference in what they are.

The difference between faith and faithlessness is that faith is the act and the state of mind which reaches beyond all present perceptions with the expectation of seeing a closer approximation of truth about your Brother or Sister. Faithlessness, on the other hand, does not involve any reach beyond the present sense of things and thus binds you and your Brother in a place where no change can occur.

Faithlessness would always limit and attack; faith would remove all limitations and make whole.

And you are the fulcrum. You are the choosing point. Which are you choosing for? Your historical best judgments? Or your non-historical, fresh, original, unpredictable influx or awareness of what is truly true of your Brother, which transforms you and him? It's your choice. It's up to you.

Practicing the holy instant is choosing for the unexpected influx of the conscious awareness of truth that changes you forever and lays the groundwork for your Brother or Sister to change. That's the way it works. And it works that way because you don't or didn't turn things over to the Holy Spirit and go along on your merry way, but stood present and available and involved for the purpose of hearing what the Holy Spirit would reveal to you because it's your function to be the place where healing occurs. It's your function to be the place where the actualization of God's Presence occurs wonderfully because you were willing to allow it.

It's that simple. It's that loving. It's that kind. It's that meaningful.

Faithlessness . . .

. . . preoccupation with your best thinking . . .

. . . would interpose illusions between the Son of God and his Creator; faith would remove all obstacles that seem to rise between them.

It wouldn't settle for them. The seeming rise would not be believed. The seeming rise would be challenged. And love would promote the steadfastness and patience that would provide the opportunity for clarity to come where confusion had disturbed.

Faithlessness . . .

. . . your best judgment, your best thinking.

Faithlessness is wholly dedicated to illusions; faith wholly to truth.

Why is faithlessness dedicated to illusions? Because it's dedicated to thinking, which has been used to imagine meanings while ignoring the Meanings that every single bit of Creation embodies and expresses at the impulse of Its Creator.

Partial dedication is impossible.

You can't be a little bit in the silence and still be thinking a little bit.

Truth is the ABSENCE of illusion; . .

. . . like silence, peace is the absence of self-assertion, in which peace reigns.

Truth is the ABSENCE of illusion; illusion the ABSENCE of truth.

Again, I must remind everyone that this is all not just simplistic, but actually simple. Every one of you is capable of being, of meditating and experiencing peace. It's not complicated. It doesn't take years of study.

It takes simply sitting down, relaxing, being present in the present, breathing or saying a mantra and giving your attention to the sensation of the air going through your nostrils or the sound of the word, of the mantra, and just letting your attention rest with that alone. And if you find yourself suddenly thinking . . . be aware of it . . . give yourself permission to think about it after the meditation and return to the mantra or the sensation of the air as it passes through your nostrils. And you will inevitably find that there will be a point where you will not be feeling the sensation of the air, you will not be saying the mantra. Nothing at all will be happening except pure awareness of everything that is going on in your environment—silence and peace.

You can make the mistake, we'll say, of doing that and enjoying the experience and then immediately jumping up and going back to your normal activities. Or you can acknowledge and recognize this peace, this silence that you're experiencing does not have to be abandoned. And you can gently re-emerge into the activities of your day bringing that peace with you. And the more you do this the longer the period of time in which the peace will remain with you and bless every activity that you engage in because perspective without fear is governing.

So what we're talking about here is simple, easily attainable. But it requires a constant choice to commit to the peace, to commit to the joining with the Holy Spirit in the silence for the purpose of experiencing the revelation of what is true and what is Real that allows you to be new and allows your behavior to be new, where Love is what finds gentle expression all the time.

I love you all and I look forward to being with you next time. And in the meantime, practice the two-step more and more frequently because you really have nothing better to do than to take advantage of every moment that provides you with the opportunity to choose for the truth and be healed. You can do it right here in what appears to be a mundane world that holds no promise. That's not the truth. Okay.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 3rd 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

In the last few weeks we've been talking about faith and faithlessness with a rather narrow definition applied to them, one which makes things simpler.

Simply put, faithlessness is when each one of you leans upon your own understanding. Faithlessness is when you never reach beyond the meanings and definitions which you employ in order to "understand" life. Faithlessness is when you never have to bring anything more into the picture than the confidence you place in your memory and in your skill at manipulating ideas, so as to, through the use of logic, come to conclusions that are undeniable . . . conclusions that require you not to employ faith at all. You see?

Faithlessness is a totally self-centered act.

Faith, on the other hand, is what the Course is all about. Faithlessness is what life has been all about up until the illumination that the Course has brought forth. Faith is when you silence your self-will, when you silence your best thinking. When you stop relying upon yourself and you reach beyond. It's the practice of the holy instant or the two-step, as I've been calling it and describing it.

It's when you abandon faithlessness, meaning self-centeredness and you reach beyond and you say, "Father"—meaning God, the Source of all Being, or Holy Spirit—"What is the truth here? I want to see the truth . . . that I want to see the more of what God is Being, I want to see the more of what Reality is, right here where I have been seeing what I've defined as a material world and universe. In other words, if this is more than a material world and universe, if this truly is the Kingdom of Heaven misperceived by me, then I sincerely and committedly abandon everything I've imagined. I devalue it and I make commitment to reaching toward the Father, toward the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than my right Mind—so that I might escape the results of faithlessness, so that I might see instead of be blind . . . that I might Awaken and no longer dream.”

So you see, faith and faithlessness are really black and white. Just like being the holy Son of God or being an orphan because you said, “Father, I'd rather get a divorce from you and determine what everything is myself.” You see?

It's black or white. It's this or that. And you know what? If anyone is truly interested in Awakening to the truth, they are going to have to, with determination, abandon the way they have been functioning up until this moment and bring something new into play.

Now what you're going to bring into play isn't really something new, it isn't something you've never heard of before, but it's something you've neglected to employ because you gave preference to something else. This thing that you need to employ is faith. And because faithlessness, meaning your typical everyday way of looking at things, because it is not contributing in any way to your returning to your Sanity, you must be willing to refuse to employ or utilize it because it undermines whatever degree of faith you might bring into play—or try to bring into play.

This is very important.

Now, the last sentence, the last time we were together was:

Truth is the ABSENCE of illusion, illusion the ABSENCE of truth.

Once again, very black and white . . . right?

Both cannot BE together, nor perceived in the same place. To dedicate yourself to both is to set up a goal forever impossible to attain, for part of it is sought through the body, thought of as a means for seeking out reality through attack, while the other part would heal, and therefore calls upon the mind and NOT the body.

Now we read:

. . . part of it is sought through the body, . .

. . . and what that means is that part of it is sought through the body as you have defined it: a material organism, not a divine Idea held in the Mind of God, illuminating and expressing the divinity of the Idea that the Father is expressing as that Identity. You see? This applies to all bodies, all forms.

Now . . .

The inevitable compromise . . .

. . . when you want to have truth and illusion side-by-side, and employ a little bit of that one and a little bit of the other as it suits your purpose and your fancy as you go through your day, . . .

. . . The inevitable compromise between the two is the belief that the BODY must be healed, and not the mind.

When the mind was where the decision was made, “Father, I want a divorce. Father, I want to determine the meaning of everything.” See? And in that act, followed by commitment, which also was mental, you fell asleep. Suddenly, instead of all of Creation being the total Meaning of Being—meaning your Being and your inseparability from all of It—all of a sudden you were identified solely with the specific identification of you, which is part of the infinity of Creation.

And you said, “Oh-h, what happened? I’m a body, I didn’t expect that, but hey, I’ll give a different definition for that and I’ll make it a definition that can contribute to my being the ultimate that I can be, as a result of my use of my mind to define myself and my world.” You see? . . . Ah, now there was the initial act of faithlessness. And the result of it was identification as a body, an illusion—not the truth of You—but something you couldn’t escape when you decided to think for yourself and determine things for yourself instead of being co-creator with God, by being the presence of that which recognized God in everything and acknowledged God because you saw and experienced It, thus confirming Creation and being co-creator of It by your recognition and confirmation of It.

Now again . . .

The inevitable compromise . . .

. . . when you’re trying to have illusion and truth be together . . .

. . . The inevitable compromise is the belief that the BODY must be healed, and NOT the mind.

Even though, as I just described, the mind is where the problem occurred and therefore is the place where it must be resolved.

For this divided goal has given both . . .

. . . meaning truth and illusion . . .

. . . has given both an equal reality, which could be possible only if the mind is limited to the body, . .

. . . meaning only if you have arrived at a point where you think that your mind is in a brain, in a skull, a part of the body, rather than being That in which the body, the brain, the fingernails, everything and all of Creation abide and have their actual Being as divine Ideas to be recognized for what they Are and acknowledged for what they Are as the Presence of God in motion called “Creation.”

[For] this divided goal has given both an equal reality, which could be possible only if the mind is limited to the body, and divided into little parts of seeming wholeness, but without connection. This will not harm the body, . .

. . . this is very important . . .

. . . but it WILL keep the delusional thought system in the MIND.

Now, to have been practicing faithlessness, we’ll say, for as long as you can remember, because at the moment you’ve forgotten that you’re the holy Son or Daughter of God for as long as you have been practicing faithlessness, which we will say is forever, the body has been what you thought you were. I don’t care how many incarnations you might have experienced, the fundamental of each one of those apparent lifetimes has been identification as a body—a body that is subject to sin, sickness and death—a body that does not seem to identify what’s true about you, what’s true about your holiness. It doesn’t identify eternity, does it. But that’s because you have identified it with meanings you have imagined, that have arisen out of an absence of connection with your Source. As a result, your body seems to be able to be destructive, destructible and mortal.

Now here’s the thing:

This will not harm the body, . .

. . . you can live as many lifetimes as you want, you may believe that you are a body and behave defensively and use it to attack the world so as to better define it, you can do that but this will not harm the body.

What it means is, that it will not harm what the body actually is, which is an Idea held in the Mind of God, moved by, enlivened by the Movement, an action of omnipotence. What it truly is cannot be harmed. And the evidence you have of that, if you believe in reincarnation, the evidence of that is that even though it seems to die because of this disease or that accident, why, you still exist. And you still exist again and you still exist again. So you see, it doesn't harm the body, but until you abandon the definitions you have applied to it, you will seem to not see God in it. You will seem to not see eternity in it even though the repetitiousness of it [chuckle] is a demonstration of its eternity.

So:

This will not harm the body, . .

. . . all of this trying to make truth equal to illusion and try to employ them both and let them be side-by-side . . .

. . . This will not harm the body, but it WILL keep the delusional thought system in the MIND.

Because the delusion can't be going on anywhere else. And so it's not going on anywhere else. And what the Course is teaching and what we're illuminating is the fact that the solution to the human condition lies in the shift from identification with the body to identification with Mind.

Here, then, . .

. . . meaning mind . . .

. . . is healing needed. And it is here that healing IS.

It simply is nowhere else.

For God gave healing not APART from sickness, nor established remedy where sickness cannot be.

So you see, God didn't place the remedy in the physical universe. God didn't place the remedy in the body. God established the remedy where the flaw emerged, where the unintelligence was expressed and that's in the mind.

They are TOGETHER, and when they are SEEN together, all attempts to keep both truth and illusion in the mind, where both MUST be, are recognized as dedication to ILLUSION; . .

. . . you see? Once this becomes clear to you, you'll see that illusion is a false perception and truth is a true perception. Illusion is the false perception of Reality and truth is the true perception of Reality. Very simple. Since they're both perceptions, they can't actually co-exist in an intelligent mind. They can't exist in the divine Mind. And when you see that clearly, you will recognize that it's foolish, meaningless, to continue to try to incorporate the human condition into the divine condition or to have divinity alter the human condition but still leave it human. You see?

And so it will become clear to you what you need to do. It will become clear that you need to address this in the mind . . . in your mind. And the way you address it is through the use of the holy instant, is through the use of the two-step, where you shut up your mind and you abide in the consciousness of peace or of silence. And in that peace you reach out, "Father, what is the truth here?" You see? "Holy Spirit, what is the God's honest truth here?" And then you maintain the silence—you push against the silence instead of reverting to your well established habits of thinking. You remain devoted to Knowing the truth, having the truth revealed to you.

And I have been here all along to reinforce in your minds the fact that when you ask, the Father answers. When you reach out to your divinity, meaning the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind—It answers because integrity and unity is what characterizes Being and therefore, You.

And so you must recognize the "black" and "white" of it, the "this" and "that" of it and choose for that and remain steadfast with that choice. You see? It's really very simple.

What seems to make it complicated is that you have great investments in your best judgments and the definitions and meanings you have applied to life. And they are all associated with your becoming a more perfected, valuable entity who has integrity in his own right. And so it's difficult to let go of faithlessness because it seems to be the abandonment of the possibility of your integrity in your own right. It thus, seems to be dangerous to your well-being.

Again:

They . . .

. . . sickness and healing . . .

. . . are TOGETHER, and when they are SEEN together, all attempts to keep both truth and illusion in the mind, where both MUST be, are recognized as dedication to ILLUSION; . .

. . . that recognition is called "learning." And it puts you in a new place able to be on a new basis. So . . .

... when they are SEEN together, all attempts to keep both truth and illusion in the mind, where they [both] MUST be, are recognized as dedication to ILLUSION; . .

... it's foolish to try to keep them together ...

... and given up when brought to truth, and seen as totally unreconcilable with truth, in any respect or in any way.

The human condition and the experience of holiness are irreconcilable. They're not reconcilable. They will not be brought together. Misperception will be given up for true perception. They will not seem to exist side-by-side as choices anymore, once you make the choice for truth with commitment and persistence.

Truth and illusion have NO connection.

Faithlessness and faith have no connection. The orphanage and the Kingdom of Heaven have no connection. What seemed to be two will turn into one when the other is abandoned. That's what this is all about. And this is what the practice of the holy instant is for.

Truth and illusion have NO connection. This will remain forever true, however much you seek to connect them.

“Oh, I would love to be anointed by God. I would love to be inspired by God. I would love to be in-filled by an experience of divinity so that I might help my fellowman, so that I might transform this world from the chaos and the conflict that it seems to be in the middle of.”

Well, I'll tell you something: That's trying to combine truth with illusion, faith with faithlessness. Because you can't hold onto a world in turmoil to be fixed up, while you reach for that which is unlike it because it's holy, because it's divine, so that in your grasp of it you might be able, with your feet firmly in the orphanage, with your feet firmly in the land of faithlessness—meaning the land of the definitions you've given to everything—you can't do that and that's not what the holy instant is for and that's not what Waking up is for. Because when you make this commitment and persist in this commitment until revelation occurs in you, because you've asked, “What is the more of what God is being here than what I'm seeing?” you won't see the world through the lens of your definitions and meanings anymore.

And so, although you will recognize the “call for love” and you will know how to bring that call of love forth, because the Father has illuminated it to you, correction will occur. But it won't be the fixing up of the old, it will be the correcting of the misperception because it's not the body or world that needs to be healed, but the mind which is misperceiving. The mind, I will say, whose Birthright is to be seeing everything perfectly with the Father's Perception in its divinity.

Truth and illusion have NO connection. This will remain forever true, however much you seek to connect them. But illusions are ALWAYS connected, as is truth.

All of truth is connected and all of illusion is connected.

Each is united, a complete thought system, but totally disconnected to each other.

You see? Faithlessness and faith are totally disconnected. The orphanage and the Sonship are totally disconnected. But they don't constitute two completely separate things. They constitute two completely different perceptions. You see?

Where there is no overlap, there separation must be complete.

And this is repetitious, but it needs to become clearer than it ever has been before: That Reality and unreality are totally isolated from each other, illusion and truth are totally isolated from each other, being an orphan and being a holy Son of God are totally separate from each other. There is no connection. There never will be an overlapping. There will be mind misperceiving, suddenly through faith beginning to perceive truly.

Where there is no overlap, there separation must be complete. And to perceive this is to recognize where separation IS, . .

. . . meaning, in the mind . . .

. . . and where it must be healed.

Meaning, in the mind.

The result of an idea is never separate from its source. The IDEA of separation produced the body, . .

. . . produced the body constituted of the definitions you made up about it. And the definitions never included God anywhere.

The IDEA of separation produced . . .

. . . I'm going to say, your definition of . . .

. . . the body, and remains connected to it, making it sick because of its identification with it.

[Big sigh] That which is not connected to its Source seems not to have the qualities, characteristics or actualities of its Source. Without God, the body is what you're experiencing. And sickness and death are inevitable.

But remember, this will not harm the body. Okay, so maybe it won't harm the body, but if it's not harming the body and you're just sort of stuck in a "Groundhog Day," constantly repeating the meanings that lead to the end of the day called "death" and the beginning of the next day, which is the repeat of the previous day . . . if that's all that's happening, man, you have justification—perfect justification to do something different.

You think you are protecting the body by hiding this connection, .

. . . the connection between your idea of it and the result of your idea of it . . .

. . . for this concealment seems to keep your identification safe from the "attack" of truth.

Whew! Like I said, the more committed you are to asking to know what the truth is here where your body is, where all form is, the closer you get to actually letting the answer in, the more you will be uncomfortable, the more you will experience fear, because it will require you to abandon your attempt to make yourself a successful independent entity in your own right. And that to you—again, to make it perfectly clear—constitutes a terminable violation of your integrity. Of course, that means the integrity of the definition you have given to who you are supposed to be and become. So you become frightened because you're going to lose your integrity or the potential of capturing it and that will mean you will be nothing. You see?

That's what you think truth will uncover, that's what you think faith will uncover, not realizing that what has covered you up—your misperceptions—will dissolve and you will find yourself Sane, whole, mentally clear as the co-creator of Creation forever.

If you but understood how much this strange concealment has hurt your mind, and how confused your own identification has become because of it! You do not see how great the devastation wrought by your faithlessness.

In other words, your preoccupation with your self-interests and your own ideas and thoughts.

For faithlessness is an attack which seems to be justified by its RESULTS. For by withholding faith, you see what IS unworthy of it, and cannot look beyond the barrier to what is joined with you.

It binds you, it keeps you bound, it keeps you ignorant, it keeps you unconscious, it keeps you misperceiving and as a result, not knowing where you really are, what you really are or what the nature of what everything is. But listen:

To have faith is to heal.

To have faith is an answer, we will say, to have faith is the answer. It's the fulfillment of your Being. It's you coming into the full, unified, conscious awareness of who you Are as the Presence of Love, as the Presence of the Father, as the Presence of That which never was meant to experience lack or suffering or jealousy or hate . . . or sickness or death.

To have faith is to heal. It is the sign that you have accepted the Atonement for yourself, . .

. . . you see? It's the sign that you've been willing to push against the silence, but not by thinking. To push against the silence by listening ever more attentively and ever more consistently until the very act of embracing the unknown, by bringing your attention to it, convinces you that there is indeed another activity you can engage in than faithlessness. And as that becomes more actualized in your mind, it precipitates the breakthrough.

[He did not read: and would therefore share it.]

By faith, you offer the gift of freedom from the past, which YOU received.

When you do it, you are released from the past—meaning your faithlessness, all of your thinking, all of your judgments, all of your determinations as to what everything means.

You do not use anything your brother has done before to condemn him NOW. You freely choose to overlook his errors, looking past all barriers between your self and his, and seeing them as one.

That's what happens when you push against the silence. That's what happens when you press against the flimsy bubble.

And in that one you see your faith is fully justified. There IS no justification for faithlessness, but faith is ALWAYS justified.

Faithlessness is very simply something that has never worked. Everything associated with it has never come to fruition. By that I mean, not a single one of you who is dreaming has managed to arrive at a point of being successfully independent, credible with integrity in your own right, meaning unjoined with your Source.

So, dare to make the commitment. Dare to push into the unknown, against whatever resistance is there, by doing something you are quite capable of doing. You really can sit or stand wherever you are and say, “Father, what is the truth here?” And you can do that with meaning because the words are very simple. And you know you’re not asking your human father. You know you’re reaching beyond the human condition.

“Father, what is the truth here . . . Father, what is the truth here? I choose no longer to be insane. I choose no longer to be in a state of ignorance thinking I’m in a state of intelligence. Father, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than my right Mind—what is the truth here? I will let You in. I invite You in. I invite You to do anything you can do to break through, although I know You cannot violate my free-will. I invite You to do everything You can to reach me in my willfulness and I will do everything I can to abandon it.”

As I said last time, none of this is simplistic, all of it is simple.

I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 17th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well . . . *In the beginning was the Word and the word was with God and the Word was God.*¹ And God, the Word, moved and the Movement was called Creation. The Movement is called Creation.

No matter how you're seeing that Movement, whether clearly or through a glass darkly,² it is the one and only Movement there is.

Creation, and this may sound a little silly, but Creation was created to work, not fail. Being created by the only Presence there is, God, there was no flaw in it and therefore, again, no matter how you are seeing it, it is still the one and only Creation unflawed, perfect, unalterable, always reflecting its Source.

Now, why would I say that Creation was created to work, not fail? I say it because you look at the world and universe sometimes forgetting that it's really Creation unflawed. And in your ignorance of what It is—in your temporary memory loss—you determine what It is and you don't see It as perfect. And you see It as something flawed, something threatening, something dangerous.

And so you need to be reminded: No, that is not the truth about It. The truth about the world and the universe you are experiencing every day is that It is Creation, that It is God Moving. God isn't in It, but It, in every aspect, reflects its Source, the present living Movement of God.

Now there was a time when you were experiencing It as exactly what It divinely is. And as we've discussed many times, you arrived at a point with an ally—a partner, another Son or Daughter of God—where the two of you said, “We would rather make up the definitions of what everything is. We would have fun giving an alternative meaning to everything.” And so you decided to get a divorce from the Father.

As I’ve also said before, when this happened, because your Mind was whole, because your Mind was the Mind of God embodied as You, this decision you made was made with great confidence. You were full of the experience of omnipotence as well as omnipresence. And so to engage in this activity was done without fear. This is important.

Now, the moment the two of you joined in your mutual agreement to make up the meaning of everything between the two of you, something happened, as I’ve said, that you didn’t expect. That was, that unplugged from your Source—not relating to your Source anymore—you lost the infinite view and you seemed to be identified with the specific visibility and tangibility of you that you now call your body, which is part of the infinitude of Creation. And in that experience of tininess of shape, of form, that is what it is and is not what everything else is, two things entered into the picture: fear and guilt and they colored every subsequent thought you had—every subsequent thought the two of you had.

And so your whole experience of the Kingdom of Heaven, which was still the only thing available to you to be experiencing, occurred through the lens of fear and guilt.

Now here’s why I’m going over this again because I want to explain it in a very simple way that it will be difficult for you to forget. When you abandoned the infinite view, when you said “Father, I’d rather do it my way,” you did it with great confidence—without fear. And it was easy to do. Now, from the other side where everything is colored by fear and guilt, any attempt you make to go back Home will be colored by fear and guilt. You will not find within you the confidence, the strength, or the fearlessness to return Home to reunite with your Father with commitment.

Mind you, this is not a punishment, it’s just inherent in the point of view. It’s like looking in the wrong end of binoculars. Everything isn’t tiny and far away because you’ve done something wrong, it’s just the nature of looking through the lenses in reverse.

So don’t be surprised that it seems to be laborious to go Home, as you attempt to bring commitment to bear upon your experience.

The practice of the two-step, the practice of the holy instant is a practice which goes against the fear and guilt that color everything you see and do. The decision to reach outside your best judgments and to say, “Father, Holy Spirit, what is the truth here, what is the truth beyond what I’m seeing?” when you do that, that act is an objection to the frame of mind in which fear and guilt govern—the orphan mindset.

Understand this and you won’t mind the effort that it seems to take. And because you now are clearly aware that it’s inherent in, we’ll say, the direction that you’re moving from—it’s inherent in the arena you’re moving from and will be present in the movement in the direction toward which you’re going—you can invalidate it. You can say . . . you can realize, “this experience of fear and guilt that I’m having which tends to immobilize me is not valid. It’s inherent in the trip back Home because it’s part and parcel of my believing that I’m separate and apart from God . . . that I’m not holy, that I am a quirk of nature, of the physical universe.”

So, let’s look at it this way: Why don’t you engage in the holy instant constantly? This past week, even though you may have engaged in the holy instant many times, why didn’t you stick with it? Why didn’t you persist? Why didn’t you escalate it to the point where it was your constant activity? Even though you’ve been told that it’s the way back into your right Mind, even though you’ve been told that the result will be the influx of the Father’s Perspective—the holy Mind of God—infilling you as your conscious awareness of everything, even though you’ve been told that that is the result, why haven’t you dared to persevere? Why hasn’t that been sufficient justification?

Well, because you need to cover your ass! It’s because you need to protect yourself against real danger, whether mental or physical. And you cannot comfortably abandon what you have thought provided you with safety even if it’s in order to Awaken and share the Father’s Mind.

Your fear is paramount and it becomes such the closer you get to abandoning self-control. I mean by that, controlling everything yourself by the acts and decisions of your mind. When you get close to actually abandoning that, it causes fear because you’re giving up your armor. You’re giving up what has—you thought—provided you with safety.

And so where it should have caused pangs of fear to think about getting a divorce from the Father and it didn’t, likewise, returning Home should cause joy and commitment and it doesn’t. You see? You could say it’s almost a mechanical aspect. But because it is, it doesn’t really have true emotional value. It’s just a knee-jerk reaction. Start for Home? Fear and guilt! “Can’t do that! Gotta protect myself! Don’t have time for that, circumstances call for my attention to protect myself! Oh-h...gotta be sure I don’t do anything which makes me look like a fool to all the other orphans—to the ones I’ve joined in mutual agreements with to be alone—to be in this place where fear and guilt are automatic partners and governors of my experience!”

But you see, the perception is untrue and the suggestion that you can't afford to abandon protecting yourself by engaging in the holy instant is false. And you've got to realize this. You've got to remember it!

You know, when you rely upon yourself, as we've said, you are engaging in faithlessness. When you are abandoning this self that you think you are and reaching beyond it into what you feel is the unknown, reaching out and asking of the Source of Being—your Father—“What is the truth here?” you are practicing faith, even though faith has an overriding underlying absence of confidence in it and doesn't feel like anything powerful or motivating or anything that could cause something else. But that perception, that conclusion, that line of reasoning is false and you must go against it.

Now, the Course in Miracles may not in itself be something that you can practice. A Course in Miracles is an expression of ideas, which move you in the direction of an action you can take. And that action is the holy instant—the practice of the holy instant.

You may have thought, as we've discussed as well, that the practice of A Course in Miracles is to express love to your neighbor no matter how the neighbor is behaving, no matter how the neighbor is perceiving himself or yourself, truly or untruly, it's learning how to love him and not be bothered—not be moved by the behavior or the concepts being expressed. But if you're not moved by it, no correction can occur, can it? You become one cooperating with the ignorance, confirming by not objecting to it or not contradicting it.

No. The call is for Love. But not for you to be loving. And when I say loving, I mean not you fulfilling the concepts of what love is. You see? Not fulfilling your best judgments, your best ideas about what love is. No.

If you want to express love, you're going to have to engage in the holy instant. You're going to have to do the two-step, which is instead of speaking and expressing loving thoughts and loving appraisals of your Brother without correcting the problem, instead of that, you shut up! And you go into the silence within you. You stop dealing with your Brother whose expressed, we'll say, a call for Love and you say, “Father” or “Holy Spirit, what do I need to know here? What needs to be said? What is the truth here? I will not rely upon my best judgments in response to this situation. I want to hear from You and I will listen until I do.”

When you hear . . . what you hear will be loving—will be the expression of Love that hits the mark and acts like a catalyst transforming the call for Love into a receipt of Love on the part of your Brother. You see?

Well, what if the call for Love seemed to be an inconsiderate or mean-spirited or threatening action directed toward you by that Brother? You might say, “Oh I don’t have time for the holy instant here. I’ve got to protect myself.” You see?

No you don’t. Practicing faithlessness is never under any circumstance justifiable because the practice of faithlessness effects nothing! It brings nothing into greater clarity. It causes no movement into greater harmony and identified fulfillment. You see?

Protecting your ass keeps you in the orphanage. Protecting your ass keeps you in the arena of faithlessness. Nothing else can it do. It’s that simple. It’s that absolute. And as you let that percolate, as you let that sink in, you will begin to have a capacity that arise in you to persist in the holy instant. You see?

You’ve got to wrestle with the angel that looks like a devil. You’ve got to look squarely at the call for correction. You’ve got to look squarely at the call for Love that seems to be something other than love. And you have to persist in ~~at~~ looking at it squarely in the face while you say, “Father, what is the truth here? Father what is the truth, what is the divine fact that is going on right where a call for Love, which is unpleasant, seems to be going on?”

You see, caring for your Brother means persisting in seeing the God’s honest truth right where an unruly or unpleasant or threatening Brother seems to be, because mind you, God created Creation to work. And so It is working. If that is what It was created for, that is what It is.

And so, the God’s honest Son of God that just seemed to express a call for Love, is the God’s honest Son of God in spite of his insane behavior that seems to claim that he is not the holy Son of God created to work and therefore, actually working as [chuckle] designed.

Loving your Brother is standing there, not abandoning him and not abandoning your need to know the truth so that you might be free of the insinuation that’s being presented to you, that this one is not the Son of God and he’s not worth persisting in the holy instant, he’s not worth being the one that causes you to reach for your Sanity, your perception of Reality unwaveringly until you see it. And then because you see it, spontaneously share it with your Brother. You see?

A Course In Miracles is not a lot of soothing thoughts and ideas to make you comfortable in the human condition. And the words that are in the book are not there to be memorized, but are there to—in thousands of different ways—move you to a point of realization that you want to practice the holy instant because it's the way Home. And you want to be in your right Mind and you're willing to do whatever it takes. And now it's clearer than ever that what it will take is an act which will be accompanied by fear and guilt because there's no other way to go back Home than to do it through territory governed by fear and guilt. You see?

However, the fear and guilt are illusions and the penalties and threats that are thrown at you as potentials cannot be carried out. There is no lawgiver external from you making assessments and judgments and then holding you to the penalty. Only you and the partner whom you joined together with in getting the divorce from the Father have the means of focusing your attention unintelligently on illusions and believing them. But you are hearing clearly that the illusions of fear and guilt that raise their head as you dare to abandon your personal private control, is an illusion that cannot hold you back and cannot actually penalize you if you persist in the practice of the holy instant.

It's that simple. Do you need to be afraid of all of this? No! But you do need to bring your curiosity out into the open. You do need to dare to take a chance at having some fun. You need to dare to experiment at Waking up. You need to not be afraid of It. And when fear and guilt pops its head up, tell it to, "go fly a kite," or use any kind of words that you might want to use that disrespect the fear and guilt, that dishonor it, that treat it as though it is silly, meaningless and unworthy of your attention. And then give your attention back to the holy instant. Give your attention back to, what? The desire to know what is the truth here? What is God being right here? . . . right where a sniffling child or an angry adult is making a call for Love, which doesn't sound like a call for Love at all, it sounds like the start of a fight or an argument or a strong long drawn out disagreement.

No matter how pleasant a life situation you may have worked out for yourself or you seemed to have just fallen into, if you're not Awake, then you don't know the real meaning yet of harmony and peace and fulfillment. It isn't just the absence of threat. It isn't just the presence of comfort. My goodness, Creation is illuminated with the energy of Spirit, which is Love. It glows, it effervesces with the aliveness of Life and Truth and Love.

I have to be very frank . . . some of you might say I have to be very Raj: There is no justification for you to be complacently happy at any moment, no matter how pleasant everything is. If you are being complacently happy, you are indulging in stupid rest . . . which needs to be interrupted. It needs to be interrupted because the stupid rest doesn't prime you for change. It doesn't prime you for healing. It doesn't prime you for Revelation. It's rather like a tranquilizer. And you think you're so well off. And although you're not overjoyed, you are in peace and you're not in fear, but you're also not conscious. You are not experiencing that Mind in you which was also in me—which is also in me.

You're not experiencing your Birthright as the Son or Daughter of God. And nothing should keep you from reaching for your Birthright. That's what the Course is all about. It says: Establish a holy relationship with a Brother or a Sister and then, as the act which characterizes every part of that relationship, engage in the holy instant so that what you bring to that partner is what the Father is revealing to you is the truth about your partner as well as yourself, so that you are being together in an entirely new way, I'm going to say, at an entirely new level, not the level of ignorance anymore but the level of understanding, the level of Knowing, not thinking the truth, but Knowing the truth, that which is embedded in you forever as part of your comprehension of All.

Now, let's understand something else: The movement back Home is one which will have fear and guilt dogging you at your heels. I encourage you to arrive at a point where you laugh at it because it's only an insinuation that you're guilty and that there is something to be afraid of. It's only an insinuation that you need to pay more attention to the fear and the guilt than you do your goal of desiring to Know the truth about what's going on, right where the human condition seems to be going on. You see?

Persistence . . . persistence with curiosity, persistence with frivolous laughter where you make guilt and fear a frivolous thing, not worth paying attention to or governing yourself by.

Now, because the practice of the two-step and the willingness to abandon self-protection—protection by means of your own hand—because fear and guilt accompany you as you get close to abandoning self-protection, one might have moments of fear that seem to persist if you're not making fun of the overtures of the fear and the guilt. And if one is determined through self-will to not abandon all acts of self-protection as a maintenance of one's integrity, this fear and guilt can seem to stretch out in time where fear and guilt are on the scene for more than a few minutes—could be for a few days or a few weeks or a few months.

Why? Why would this happen? It happens because you feel you need to cover your ass, and covering your ass is more important than anything else. Acting on the basis of your best judgments and your securing your independent integrity is more important than Waking up.

And so your insistence upon your will causes the holy instant to seem to be drawn out in time and for fear and guilt to seem to have hold of you. You see? When it's really you insisting upon fighting for the right to defend yourself because you have more faith in what you can control than what the Father can do, which you don't comprehend at the moment because you're coming from the orphanage, the place for fear and guilt and weakness and so on.

This has often been called "a dark night of the Soul." And I'm bringing this up on purpose because it indicates how one can take a simple experience of self-will carried out to an extreme, which can be easily corrected by abandoning the self-will and giving your attention to something else, like the two-step, the holy instant. It takes that simple act of self-will and turns it into a drama, I'm going to say, that seems somehow to be something you can go through.

You can go through "the dark night of the Soul." It's like you're on your way south from Los Angeles and if you take a left turn you can go through the death valley, as though it's a place that really has those meanings.

So a persistent act of willfulness has been turned into a general concept embraced practically world-wide that there is a dark night of the Soul which you can go through and actually probably will go through. And who knows how long it will last. You see? Because who has anything to do with it? Not you of course. It couldn't possibly be a simple act of persistent self-will, refusing to engage in the holy instant and practice faith and be the presence of faith which creates miracles. It couldn't be something that simple, right?

So be careful. Don't purpose the idea of a dark night of the Soul. Don't suggest it. Don't repeat it. Because it misses the point entirely and makes it seem as though it is a complicated thing that you're not responsible for, that you must just put up with until somehow it matures you or spits you out on the "other side," transformed. When at the best it's just caused you to take a little bit more self responsibility than you were taking when you initiated the ongoing act of willfulness to protect yourself so that you could take credit for the victory and add that to your list of things which document your credibility. You see?

Things are simpler.

We're not going to go into the book tonight, although I'm going to suggest that during the coming week you do read to the end of this section.

But more than anything, I am inviting everyone to practice the holy instant as consistently as possible throughout the week, without determining that there are times in which you have the right to not have to work so hard, which really means you have the right to not engage in the effort it takes to really be conscious. You see?

Remember that, because you'll realize that the desire not to be so conscious is a desire to be lazy, doped, drugged and therefore, unable to comprehend the miracle of Creation that is the only thing you're confronted with at any moment. And so you miss the presence of God and the only justification you will ever need for practicing the holy instant permanently.

I love you. I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

July 22nd 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

THE HOLY INSTANT—THE TWO-STEP

You know, it's not necessary to have ever heard about the holy instant or the two-step in order to have had the experience. Nor is it necessary in order to have the experience now. It is convenient and helpful to know about it because it makes it easier to practice it.

If you don't know about it, it happens spontaneously—usually under extreme stress or emergency.

Most everyone prays, most everyone has a relationship with God, but it isn't until some circumstance occurs that puts you right up against a rock and you are stymied, totally. It isn't until one gets into that situation that one actually engages in what the two-step and the holy instant is all about.

It isn't until then that one says, "I have nothing more important in the whole world than to ask God for help. Anything else I might try to do will not solve this problem I'm confronted by." And so under this circumstance, under the pressure of it, you become committed, committed enough that you don't abandon trying to talk to God—trying to get the Father's help, until you get the help.

This is very important to understand. You see?

We've talked about the holy instant. We've described it as a two-step process and everyone who has listened to what I've shared has in one way or another tried it out—practiced it. But what I want to convey here is that this element of commitment, this element of resolve to practice the two-step, engage the holy instant and do it without an ace up your sleeve—some other avenue to take if this doesn't work—that's what is essential.

And most everyone thinks: “Well, I have enough time in the day that even when I'm on the run I can say, “Father, what is the truth here, Father, what is the truth there, Father what do I need to know?” and you reach out to the Father. But resolve isn't brought into play and you abandon the listening easily.

Now tonight it is my task to encourage everyone to get to the point of resolve, to know that when you're engaging in the two-step and turning to the Father and asking to know the truth, that you bring resolve and commitment to it that causes you to say, “I'm not going to allow my attention to be totally distracted from my intent to know the truth—even if I'm engaging in other things—until I hear the answer.” Because it's when the answer comes that faith accompanies it and fills you with faith bringing you to a point where your perception is transformed and there is healing for you.

But you know what? Something that is inseparable from this is that not only does faith get extended to you by the Father, but the experience of His Love for you is extended by the Father as an unmistakable experience—a transforming experience. Why? Because when you experience this Love, when you experience being loved in this all-consuming way, you experience your innocence. You experience the fact that you deserve this experience of love, that you are worthy of it, which is something that had not entered your mind. In fact, all of you to one degree or another, feel unworthy of experiencing the Father's Love because you are guilty of this, and guilty of that and guilty of the other thing.

And so it doesn't occur to you to let in the Father's Love because obviously He would punish you first before He extended His Love, and one could say, before extending the faith that is the Father's Gift.

When you, with commitment, listen, expecting to hear because that's part of the package, that's the way it works and therefore, it is worth your commitment to listen until you hear—until the Blessing is laid on you.

Now this is an incredible experience. Something else that accompanies it is that when you look at your Brother or your Sister, your fellowman, you recognize that what you're experiencing about your innocence is true about your Brother or Sister, your fellowman. It is inescapable to you that they're loved by the Father right now just as you are, and that they are worthy of it, just as you are, and that they are innocent of anything that would make them unworthy of it just as you are.

This, as I've said before, changes your perspective and causes you to behave in a new way toward your Brother and Sister. It's important to understand this.

Now I'm going to go into the book but I'm going to start one paragraph earlier than I announced. It begins by saying:

To have faith is to heal.*¹

Now, healing is a word that many students of the Course don't embrace as fully as is needed because they believe that faith, that healing, has to do with one's mind, with one's perspective, but not necessarily to the evidence—the manifestation, called the world and universe—the evidence of God because it is the Kingdom of Heaven seen clearly or seen through a glass darkly.² Seen through a glass darkly and believed, it seems to be something that A Course In Miracles is not relevant to. And this needs to be corrected because everyone is here, and through the study of the Course, everyone is put in a position of becoming an agent for change.

Calls for correction are calls for correction!

They're not calls for overlooking or for being overlooked. They're calls for correction.

Now,

To have faith is to heal.

In other words, if you have faith you have engaged in the two-step. You have practiced the holy instant with commitment, and you have hung in there until the Father responded or until you were willing to let the Father's Response register with you. At that point, the experience of the Father's Love fills you, embraces you, and the gift of faith is extended to you. So to have faith means that you have arrived at that point of having practiced the holy instant and experienced the gifts that accompany its true practice.

To have faith is to heal.

Why? Because when you Know the truth about your Brother, you're seeing him through your Father's Eyes with your Father's Vision . . . pulls you out of the orphan mind-set in which you saw your Brother as worthy of being judged and having held him to his guilt until he's paid the penalty. You see?

Not now, not after seeing the truth about your Brother. So,

To have faith is to heal.

That means real, actual change including what you would call physical change—physical healing.

To have faith is to heal. It is the sign you have accepted the Atonement for yourself, and would therefore share it.

And it really isn't something that you would think to withhold. It is spontaneously shared because the truth is so obvious to you, you can't share anything else. It's spontaneous.

By faith, you offer the gift of freedom from the past, which YOU received.

You see? The faith that was the gift of the Father together with the experience of His Love for you—His beloved Son who is worthy of His Love—you can't help but offer that. You've been freed from the past. You know every little thing you did that was not right, that was not just, that was not kind and yet here you are experiencing the Father's Love.

What's happened? All of the justifications for poor behavior, all of the fear, all of the guilt that you've carried with you that has beaten you down and caused you to behave in mean-spirited ways, these things no longer make sense to you, because the Father loves you and you feel it . . . you know it!

So you've been freed from the past: The past that you have maintained in your mind as justification for lack of self-appreciation, as justification for anger and jealousy and a whole gamut of emotions that you feel justified to bring into play against your Brothers and Sisters or your world. So:

By faith, you offer the gift of freedom from the past, . .

. . . freedom from the past . . .

. . . which YOU received. You do not use anything your brother has done before to condemn him NOW. You freely choose to overlook his errors, looking past all barriers between your self and his, and seeing them as one.

You recognize yourself in him as the Son of God—innocent, guiltless, perfect, loved, safe, and so on.

And in that one you see your faith is fully justified.

Your faith in what? Your faith in him. Because you're having faith in the truth about him that you're experiencing as a result of letting that experience in for yourself first.

There is no justification for faithlessness, but faith is ALWAYS justified.

Now faith is ALWAYS justified. Faith in what you recognize to be the truth about your Brother. Not an intellectual recognition, but a deep down experiential Knowing because you are having an experience about your holiness—a deep reliable experience and that is what you Know within without any process to it, is the truth about your Brother.

Now just because you see the truth about your Brother, just because you feel and know the truth about your Brother which can be quite enough for your Brother to recognize it in himself when he is in your presence, doesn't however, necessarily mean that he does recognize it. And if there is a call for correction, it falls to you who now has the Vision to be the agent for change for your Brother. Something you can do because you do see the truth about him—you do see his innocence, you feel it and you feel the love that he is embraced in from the Father.

Having that, gives you the perspective and the honor of dealing with your Brother in a way that inspires him to change—inspires him to allow the correction that is called for to occur. It's only because you have become free of your past experience of your Brother and are experiencing the now-present reality about him that you can involve yourself with him or with her in a way that supports transformation, change, correction.

Now, one other aspect of this is that in your experience of the Father's Love for you that you are filled with, it does make things that need correction in you obvious as things that need to be corrected because they simply don't fit with the holy Son of God that you're experiencing yourself as. The holiness of you uncovers what doesn't fit and puts you in a position of having to change. You see?

Now many of you have had this experience without ever having heard of the holy instant or the two-step. And you had it because in your extremity, you genuinely and committedly reached out to the Father and persisted until you heard His response. And you had your healing. It was a miracle. But when you said "it was a miracle," you thought that it was an experience set apart from normal daily life—not a fluke but not a typical event. Not one that you could expect to happen again because you see it as the Father having done something for you, rather than your having done something that opened you up to the Father and allowed you to let in the Father's Love that has always been present. And therefore, it's not an unnatural experience . . . it wasn't an unnatural experience. Not miraculous in the sense of other-worldly or not of this world.

And in the understanding that it occurred because you abandoned your self-confidence and you turned toward your Father and you said "help!" and you yielded to Him. Because that's the event that happened. It is one that you can repeat. You can bring that same level of committedness to your reaching out to the Father with the willingness to abandon your control. You can do that over and over and over and more frequently and more frequently and more frequently so that it becomes your normal ongoing eternal experience.

Why? Because in the process of that you have discovered how valueless it is to try to be in charge yourself, independent from your Source. And so you willingly let go of the inclination to practice it and keep it alive and keep your orphanhood uninterrupted.

Now . . .

Faith is the opposite of fear, as much a part of love as fear is of attack. Faith is the acknowledgment of union..

Oneness.

It is the gracious acknowledgment of everyone as a Son of your most loving Father, . .

. . . you see? The blessing of your clear experience of your holiness—of your being loved by the Father—blesses your Vision of everyone you see, not just one that you entered into a holy relationship with. You see?

It is the gracious acknowledgment . . .

. . . recognition, recognition accompanied by understanding.

It is the gracious acknowledgment of everyone as a Son of your most loving Father, loved by Him . . .

. . . the Father . . .

. . . like you, and therefore loved by you as yourself.

Because you recognize yourself in Him, you see?

It is His Love . . .

... the Father's Love ...

... that joins you, ..

... as a matter of recognition not intellectual theories. As a matter of felt experience it joins you ...

... and for His Love you would keep no-one separate from YOURS. Each one appears ...

... in this Vision ...

Each one appears just as he is perceived in the holy instant, ..

... in his holiness, in his perfection, in his being embraced by the Father which you can, for lack of better words, see. It's clear to you, it's palpable to you. Your seeing what the eyes can't see. You're experiencing it.

Each one appears just as he is perceived in the holy instant, united in your purpose to be released from guilt.

You might not have thought that when you reached out to the Father with commitment, that you were looking for a release from guilt. But the simple fact is, that guilt came into play when you said, "Father, I'd rather do it my way."

To reach to the Father again and re-embrace Him and let Him be what He is to you—your Source—is naturally ...

... to be released from guilt.

You see?

You saw the Christ in him, ..

... your brother ...

... and he was healed ...

... and I'm going to say, "in your sight," ..

... because you looked on what makes faith forever justified in everyone.

What did you look on? You looked on the love that your Brother's embraced by because you can feel and experience it and you know that it's the same as what you're experiencing. So it is a unified experience. You see? And it's justified in everyone.

Now once again, we're talking about being released from guilt, we're talking about healing, we're talking about transformation. The fact that it is clear to you that faith is forever justified in everyone, means that whether that one dares to embrace his holiness or not, you know the truth that puts you in the position, and I'm going to say, gives you the responsibility to mentor your Brother with the true perception, knowing that your Brother is capable of engaging in the correction necessary because what he is laboring under is not the truth about him and cannot actually be binding him in suffering.

And because this is so clear to you, it's impossible for you to believe his behavior or his belief, thus causing you to be able to provide a perspective of inspiration that promotes change and causes you to hang in there with your Brother or Sister until the change occurs, because you know from your experience with God that he's suffering an illegitimate bondage and there's nothing actually binding him to it except his own doubt and fear. And so you engage in releasing the bondage because that's what knowing the truth is for.

Continuing:

Faith is the gift of God, through Him Whom God has given you.

Who's that? What is that? It's the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is the avenue through which the Father's faith is given you.

Faithlessness looks upon the Son of God, and judges him unworthy of forgiveness. But through the eyes of faith, the Son of God is seen ALREADY forgiven, free of all the guilt he laid upon himself.

And that he may still be laying upon himself. So let me read that again:

But through the eyes of faith, the Son of God is seen ALREADY forgiven, free of all the guilt he laid upon himself. Faith sees him only NOW because it looks not to the past to judge him, but would see in him only what it would see in YOU.

Again:

Faith sees him only NOW . . .

... and the giant overwhelming characteristic of seeing him in the NOW, as a result of your joining with the Father, is that your holiness and his holiness and your immeasurably being embraced by the Father's love just as your Brother is, *that characterizes you and your Brother. It characterizes the only way you have available to you in the moment to perceive your Brother. And that is the point of the holy instant. That's why the holy instant is such a big deal. That's why it deserves attention beyond the attention you would give to anything else, because it serves as the threshold for Awakening. That's big! It's meaningful. It deserves undivided attention. It deserves being brought to bear upon everything that you experience in your day.

And as I said, in the practice of the holy instant and the reaching out to the Father, the Father always answers ... the Father always answers ... even you. It's unavoidable. It's the way things work. But you must dare to persist and not wait until a terminable illness or injury or anything else threatens you so completely that you know there is no way you can cope with it on your own. You don't have to wait for that kind of circumstance to bring forth that kind of commitment. So do it in your daily activity when there is no emergency to it. And in the absence of overwhelming fear you can bring your commitment to it without distraction—without the distraction of fear or pain or whatever. You see?

It...

... faith ...

... sees not through the body's eyes, nor looks to bodies for its justification.

This experience with your Brother in which you experience your holiness and his holiness, is not a result of what you see with your eyes, but with Vision and faith that the Father has opened you up with and which you have allowed. However, it is an inescapable fact that what you see with your eyes is a farer form far different from when you were looking through your eyes with the orphan mentality—an incredible wonderful difference.

It is the messenger of the new perception, sent forth to gather witnesses unto its coming, and to return their messages to you.

You see? The Vision you extend is a gift, which goes out to find confirmation of what you're seeing and bring the confirmation back to you. We've talked about this long ago.

On the other hand, when you are engaging in fearful or negative thoughts, there the messengers are messengers of fear and negativity sent out to find confirmation and bring the confirmation back to you.

And so your experience is absolutely governed by the messengers you are sending out. And through an understanding of the two-step and the holy instant, a little better use of your mind is being practiced. And the result is that more messengers are coming back confirming the truth to you. But I'll tell you, when you ask of the Father, "What is the truth here?" or when you ask of the Holy Spirit, "What is the truth here?" The truth is brought to you and then you spontaneously make the gift of the recognition of that truth and messengers go out to find confirmation to bring back to you. And your Brothers and Sisters and your world are blessed. It's just the way it works.

Faith is as easily exchanged for knowledge . . .

. . . or Knowing . . .

. . . as is the real world. For faith arises from the Holy Spirit's perception, and is the sign you share it with Him.

And who is the Holy Spirit? What is it? Nothing more than your right Mind. That part of your mind which you have put on the back burner in favor of trying to be an independent agent on your own, separate from your Source.

Faith is a gift you offer to the Son of God through Him, and wholly acceptable to his Father as to him. And therefore offered YOU.

Now, I have shared with you something of what you can expect when you practice the holy instant. But you know what? When it happens, it's still going to be a surprise. It's still going to knock your socks off. It comes without your knowing what it will be because you have leaned into the unknown with commitment. As I said, ordinarily one doesn't lean into the unknown unless all other options are gone.

Now you might say, "How can I experience the unknown? [chuckles] I don't have any capacity for that. I can learn about what is known. But discover the unknown? And you're suggesting to me that I am to lean into this, whatever this unknown is, with commitment? I'm to listen for answers that I obviously don't have already or I wouldn't have the problem that I'm asking for the answers about. This is what you're saying?" And I am saying "Yes!" I am saying "YES," unequivocally!

Now, it is essential for me, tonight, to encourage you to look at the world and not say, "What in the world is happening to the world?" You listen to the news and you hear awful things, awful things about the economy, of your country, the economies of the world and the threat that the world is feeling because of the instability of the economies. You are learning of mass killings. You are learning of strife within countries in an attempt to overcome unjust rules.

And it appears to be so overwhelming that there's nothing you can do. And it's not the truth. You can be the agent for change. You must be the agent for change, just as I must be the agent for change. Change or correction is called for.

You are not sorry orphans limited and bound in injustice and lack and fear. That's not your Birthright. The majority say it is. And I could say, "What can I do? I can't do anything. Everyone is convinced. Everyone is sure. Everyone is unwilling to abandon what they're confident of, because after all, how can you lean into the unknown? How can you expect to know something you don't know that isn't known yet?" Well, by doing the two-step, by engaging in the holy instant and knowing that there is going to be an actual redemptive result because you are the holy Son of God leaning back into your Source that never left you—even though you've ignored It—from which the blessing of Atonement, of Awakening occurs.

Now, don't look at your world and see it as a set of circumstances which are governed by dynamics much larger than anything you can have an effect upon. Don't do that! Because it's not the truth.

All it takes is one inspired idea. When the one inspired idea comes from your mouth, it makes change. That's where the change will come from. Maybe the answer to the economies that are falling, that are failing, that are in dire straits, maybe the solution to that isn't to be met by new and more creative actions of large corporations and governments.

Maybe, just maybe it has to do with one individual or many individuals—not in a group—having the inspiring idea of how to be in the world in a way that meets the human need, by demonstrating that the human need can be grown out of, moved out of, replaced by the sovereignty, we'll say, of the holy Sons and Daughters of God. Maybe it's a single idea that a single one of you might have that you do what? *You speak. You put the word out. You share it so that others [snaps fingers] can recognize it and pass it on. And in this day and age with the internet, you have the means of sharing an idea that can go around the world in less than an hour. You have the means to share ideas on a global scale.

You know what? What is this world coming to? It's coming to whatever the majority believe!

I will tell you that the answers that will rapidly, and without great stress, transform the world, will be the ones that have come to someone because they have looked for the answer to human need. I'm not talking about the answer as to how to become wealthy. I'm not talking about ways to get others to serve you to make you important.

I'm talking about individuals with ideas that see suffering and lack and say to themselves, "This can't be the Will of the Father for His beloved Children, which we all Are." And then what do you do? You do the two-step. You shut up. You say, "Father, what is the truth here? What do I need to know?" Hey, if everyone isn't Awake, if everyone isn't experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven but there is a Kingdom of Heaven and they are all the Sons and Daughters of God then there is a way out of the human dilemma. And it will come in Ideas. It will come in faith that is the gift of the Father that is extended to you when you shut up. And with commitment lean into the silence, lean into the nebulousness of the unknown with expectancy.

If you are conscious, you are not insignificant. If you are conscious, the Totality of what God is, is present in you because of who you Are. It is not only your Birthright it is your obligation to take hold of what you Are and practice what you Are.

You see, instead of looking at things in terms of circumstances and saying, "Well, I will have to think twice before I go to a midnight showing of a new movie in the future. Well, I'm sure I'm going to have to think twice before I fly in a plane to foreign countries." You see?

How are you using your mind? What's the picture you're painting? And did you gather that from the quiet stillness of the holy instant? Did you get that answer because you were joined and the Father loved you and provided the faith that inspires your vision to see truth, see everything as it truly is? No. So why do it? And why send out the messengers of fear that are embodied in that use of your mind? Because I promise you they will find justification and bring it back to you. The justification won't be true, but it will be brought back to you. And because of where your faith is you will believe the lies that your fear and distrust brought back, because they were looking for what isn't there, they were not looking for what would resolve the situation. You see?

The holy instant is profound. Its practice is the most meaningful thing you can engage in. And it won't work fully until you've brought real commitment to engaging in it.

Please, don't think that there can be anything that makes it inconvenient to do the most important thing in the world and ultimately the most important thing for the world.

I love you. I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

August 4th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

A new section:

SIN VERSUS ERROR

Now, where in the world did this come from?

We ended up with a significant clarifying thought last week which said:

Let then, your dedication be to the eternal, and learn how NOT to interfere with it and make it slave to time. For what you think you do to the eternal you do to YOU. Whom God created as His Son is slave to nothing, being lord of all along with his Creator. You can enslave a body, but an IDEA is free, incapable of being kept in prison, or limited in any way except by the mind that thought it. For it remains joined to its source, which is its jailor or its liberator, according to which it chooses as its purpose for itself.

Now earlier on, the Course said, to have faith is to heal. And then we proceeded to find beautiful expressions about how through the practice of faith, healing can occur because it's inseparable from the practice of faith. And then we ended up:

Let then, your dedication be to the eternal, . .

. . . right?

Now . . . it's like, out of the blue: SIN VERSUS ERROR

But we have had an interesting time, have we not, with words and new meanings? We've talked about thinking and listening and the fact that the two, you could say, stand on either side of a chasm. They really are not linked in any way.

Then, we talked about faith and faithlessness. And again, the two stand on either side of a chasm. They do not relate to each other. And we found that faith is not something you express, but rather faith is something you give. You give your attention to the Father, enquiring to know what the truth is—or to the Holy Spirit, desiring to know what the truth is.

And then you shut up and you listen. You see? Thinking and listening. You listen and you let yourself be infilled and you determine, we will say, to listen without interference until you hear, because the point is to hear. And when you hear, you find yourself filled with understanding and with faith that is a Gift from God.

Faith is not something you practice, it's something you stand in receipt of.
You see?

Faithlessness, on the other hand—and I am repeating myself because it's important for these things to be very clear—faithlessness doesn't make sense to the ego, to what you would call the rational mind, because faithlessness is when you're relying on yourself alone as an independent agent for change.

It seems like it's an action of faith because you are bringing your faith to bear upon the situation. But because you are behaving unequivocally as an orphan when you're not, because you are relying entirely upon yourself without desiring to know of your Source—of the Father, of God—what the truth is, you, as we said, put yourself in the position of misunderstanding everything. You put yourself in a state of active ignorance that causes you to be unable to see the Kingdom of Heaven as the Kingdom of Heaven. And instead, you see and experience it as a material universe.

In other words, faith and faithlessness are not equal. They do stand on either side of a chasm of an actual unchangeable separation and they determine how you are going to experiencing Reality: truly or falsely. Makes all the difference in the world because the Kingdom of Heaven—harmony—embodies and expresses life alone. And the other expresses sin, sickness, death and all of the other negatives of the human condition.

Now after listening to what we discussed last week, one might think that all one has to do is engage in the holy instant, turn your attention to the Father, be determined to be attentive until you are able to let the Father's Response register with you and then, in the presence of that influx of inspiration and faith, see your Brother or Sister in the light of the truth of them because that is revealed in the process of faith being gifted to you. And then, shall I say, magically observing healing occurring spontaneously with your Brother or Sister because of the innocence of your vision.

Now, that isn't always the case and that is exactly why we now are entering into an exposition of the difference between sin and error

Now it's interesting, you may be infused with faith, understanding and spiritual clarity that you've never experienced before that reveals your Brother to you in a light you hadn't seen him or her before—an amazing and healing perspective. When that happens, as I've said, your behavior immediately changes because you can't help but relate to your Brother in the context of this new clarity which you are experiencing.

Now, if there is a call for correction and you have seen it and you have let yourself be filled with faith and understanding, two things will happen: Either there will be spontaneous healing, or there will not. Either healing will be received—will be allowed, your Brother will let it in and will let go of whatever the details of the bondage were. But sometimes what calls for correction is something that your Brother doesn't want corrected.

And it's important for you to understand this so you don't feel as though what I'm sharing is baseless and false or that you have somehow not practiced the holy instant well . . . that it must be your fault. In fact, if you are dealing with someone who is also a student of the Course, and understands about the holy instant and understands, we'll say, from their perspective what we read last week, they might be inclined to say, "There is nothing going on with me that needs correcting. It is your perspective that is false and you are projecting it on me."

And the reason for making that statement is to delay engaging in the correction that does indeed need to be made. It is very easy to avoid correction that isn't wanted by blaming the other person's perspective and laying a guilt trip on him or her for having such a misunderstanding. And yet at the bottom line, this whole exchange of ideas placing the guilt where it doesn't belong is just a means of delaying being involved in the correction.

Now: SIN VERSUS ERROR* pretty much equate to thinking, and I'm going to say, listening. It pretty much equates to faith and faithlessness.

I'm going to read:

It is essential that error be not confused with “sin,” and it is this distinction which makes salvation possible.

What’s the difference between sin and error? Well the difference is that error you don’t want to hold on to. Error hurts and you don’t want to hurt. You’re willing to give up error. But sin, we’ll say, is error you want to keep. Sin is something you don’t want to release.

It’s very simple. You’re running a fever. You’re uncomfortable or you have a stomachache or you bumped your finger in the door. There’s no way you want to hold on to these things. When you say, “Help” you really want help and you’re really willing to let go of the pain—the distress. You see? Because having it is a result of an error, an error, indeed in your mind—a misunderstanding of what you divinely Are.

As God created you, it’s not your Birthright to be experiencing any of those things I just described. And you deserve to be free of them. It is your Birthright not only to not have had them enter your experience, but also to have them leave your experience [snaps fingers] instantaneously because God did not ordain them and therefore, they have no justification for remaining.

It’s simple. Healing, you desire because it’s the release from that which is unpleasant.

And so, when you stop thinking, which is what results in sin, sickness and death—pain of any sort—when you abandon thinking and you choose to listen for the answer, you’re willing to hear it. And if you are joined with a Brother who is willing to listen, on your behalf, to hear the truth about you so that you might become free of the pain, you are willing to hear the answer that will relieve you. You see?

So, what is it about sin? Well, sin is like thinking. Let’s be really clear: Thinking is sin. Thinking is you, the holy Son or Daughter of God insisting on behaving as though you’re not, and that you are an independent entity formed out of the ethers, physically as a fluke of evolution. You see? That thinking creates a misinterpretation and a distorted experience of the Kingdom of Heaven.

Now, how did sin come about? Because it’s really simply one thing. It isn’t all the complexities of sinfulness that you can talk about. Sin describes you and another Son or Daughter of God saying to God, “Father, I want a divorce from You. Father, I want to stand on my own. Father, I want to determine the meaning of everything. You see? I...I...I...I want to magnify “I.” I want to engage in activities that make me God. You see?

Now what is that? It can be called an attack on God because you are trying to separate yourself from your Source—your Father, your Mother. It's you trying to create a new origin of yourself. Get it? And it's called the origin-al sin—the original sin, the mistake, the false belief about your origin. And the attempt then to become actualized, as I've said many times, as an independent agent, it is the attempt to be successfully independent when it's impossible for you to exist that way. And the only way you could seem to have the possibility of doing it is because you've already been created, not at your own hand.

So when you said, “Father, I'd rather do it myself. Father, I'd rather determine what things are myself.” And you attempted to do what couldn't be done, you engaged in sin. But it's more than that. Because it's one thing to, you might say, doodle with Creation and alter it here and there and play with it, it's another thing to do it with gusto! To do it with commitment! And at the bottom line, once the decision was made to attempt to function independently, what you would call the power of your being, which is really emotion, rose up with a commitment to succeed at doing the impossible.

That commitment to succeed at doing the impossible is the original and real meaning of addiction.

You can be addicted to a lot of little things. You can be addicted to heroin, you can be addicted to pot, you can be addicted to jujubes . . . it doesn't have to be something horrible. You could be addicted to collecting butterflies. But the point is, that you do it with an obsession and all of these lesser forms of addiction really reflect the only addiction there is, which is, at the bottom line, to not Wake up—to not be the Son or Daughter of God that you Are. You see?

You say “I want to Wake up,” you say “I love A Course in Miracles,” you say “I love what Raj has to say and I study it and I try to practice it.” But as you all know, you lapse in the practice of it. Why? Well you say, “It's because it's a habit. I'm used to thinking. I'm used to figuring things out.” You see?

But it's more than that. It's that you do not want to abandon the attempt to succeed at being Fatherless, Motherless, independent, autonomous. You're addicted to it. That's why you lapse. You really value it more.

And so, although you're familiar with looking at your Brother or Sister or a family member or a neighbor and watch them disallow correction, disallow healing, and you can see what they're doing, each one of you who is not Awake at this moment is doing the same thing.

It's interesting that that's all the meaning there is to the word, “sin”—the attempt to accomplish something that is impossible, obsessively. And we're talking about obsessively attempting to change the constitution of your mind so completely that it is incomprehensible to perceive yourself to be the holy Son or Daughter of God.

So:

It is essential that error be not confused with "sin," and it is this distinction which makes salvation possible. For error can be corrected, and the wrong made right.

Why? Because that's what you want. You don't want to hurt. You don't want to hold onto errors. Because you're not using them to make something important out of yourself, you're not using them as building blocks to create a self-hood that has incredible control and power.

But sin, were it possible, . .

. . . and those are the key words.

But sin, were it possible, would be irreversible.

Not correctable.

The belief in sin is necessarily based on the firm conviction that MINDS, not bodies, can attack.

And you all know that you use that skill really well. Maybe you don't have to use it often, but when it's needed, [snaps fingers] man, you've got the skill!

The belief in sin is necessarily based on the firm conviction that MINDS, not bodies, can attack. And thus the mind IS guilty, and will forever so remain unless a mind not part of it can give it absolution.

Actually, the very fact that you said, "Father I want to do things for myself, I want a divorce" and so on, that's really the only form of attack that needs to be corrected. All other attacks are copycats. And undoing them will not undo the original. But if you undo the original, it will undo all of the copycats.

Now:

[And] thus the mind IS guilty, and will forever so remain unless a mind not part of it can give it absolution.

The mind not part of it that can give it absolution is the Holy Spirit—that part of the holy Son of God that is being ignored, that was separate from in an attempt to be autonomous. And its function is to undo the divorce. Its function is to reinstate your Sanity. Its function is to heal your mind by making it clear to you that this sin has never been a sin. What has happened is not irreversible because it is only an error.

And I promise you, that once you see that all it is, is an error you will want to let go of it just as though it was appendicitis or a badly stubbed toe.

Sin calls for punishment as error for correction, . .

. . . sin calls for punishment as error calls for correction. But here's what it says:

Sin calls for punishment as error for correction, and the belief that punishment IS correction is clearly insane.

In everyone's insanity they use punishment as a means of correction. They use punishment as correction. And you know it. But it can only seem to be valid when you think that sin is real, that sin is actual, that the independence that is being sought can actually be actualized. And it can't. So punishment will never correct it. The abandonment of it will be the only thing that will correct it.

Sin is not an error, for sin entails an arrogance which the idea of error lacks.

No one arrogantly has appendicitis. No one arrogantly has a stubbed toe. No one arrogantly has a fever. You see?

To sin would be to violate reality, and to SUCCEED.

You see? Again:

To sin would be to violate reality, and to SUCCEED.

Now it's my function to share the truth with you, to show that all this is, is an error which is correctable and that no sin has occurred that requires punishment that you cannot escape. When you engage in the holy instant with a Brother asking of the Father to know what is the truth here about your Brother? you are helping demonstrate the fact that their problem is not the result of a sin that they cannot escape the punishment for, and that it is a mistake that can be corrected. You see?

When you engage in the holy instant and desire to know the truth of your Father, the function of that act is to cause healing—correction that will be accepted.

Sin is the proclamation that attack is real and guilt is justified.

You did indeed deny your Father and He will never forgive you. And you will never be able to go back Home and so you must make it on your own. You see? But that's an error. It's not true.

It assumes the Son of God is guilty, and has thus . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . succeeded in losing his innocence, and making himself what God created not. Thus is creation seen as not eternal, . .

. . . you see? There we are. You practice faithlessness by attempting to be independently successful and you cause the Kingdom of Heaven to seem to be a material world and universe.

Thus is creation seen as not eternal, and the Will of God open to opposition and defeat.

Now it can't be true. But if you're sloppy in your thinking, you can believe anything if it serves you. And it might serve you to think that God has been defeated because if He hasn't, great punishment awaits you—unavoidable punishment awaits you. And so that causes your obsession with succeeding at being independent to intensify. You see? It causes you to strive harder to do what you cannot do and it keeps you unconscious of the fact that freedom to be what you divinely Are awaits you as a gift held out to you, for you to take hold of the moment you desire to without any explanation, without any justification.

Sin is the "grand illusion" underlying all the ego's grandiosity. For by it, God Himself is changed and rendered incomplete.

Not true. But if you're going to think on your own, if you're going to practice faithlessness, you are going to have a dark, mean-spirited, harsh experience of the Kingdom of Heaven and of being the Son or Daughter of God, simply because you are committed to not believe that you're the Son or Daughter of God in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven. That's why it's sin. You're committed to an illusion, committed . . . obsessed, it's very [chuckle] very strong commitment. Now:

The Son of God . . .

. . . which is what you Are . . .

... can be mistaken; he can deceive himself; he can even turn the power of his mind against himself. But he CANNOT sin.

[repeats] he CANNOT sin. There is nothing he ...

... there is nothing you ...

... can do that would REALLY change his reality ...

... your reality ...

... in any way, nor make him. ...

... you ...

... really guilty.

Now that statement will over-joy the one who doesn't want to change. There is nothing you can do that would REALLY change your reality in any way, nor make you really guilty. Glory hallelujah! I have justification for delaying the correction of my mistake. I can hold onto what I love longer. But:

There is nothing he can do that would REALLY change his reality in any way, nor make him really guilty.

But what needs to be corrected still needs to be corrected. False beliefs and commitments to insane attempts to be what you are not has to stop, because it causes you to experience the Kingdom of Heaven as a material world and universe in which you sin, get sick and die, and you have no choice about it.

And so correction of that has to occur. It isn't true ... that you are perceiving it is an insanity. But it's not a sin. And you know what? It's not a disease. It's a misperception held onto for faulty reasons. And they are correctible if someone not entertaining your present mindset, who is entertaining the Holy Spirit's Mindset, joins with you and tells you that what you're doing needs correcting and there will not be punishment from its correction. There will be release from the sin, disease and death that you're already experiencing by virtue of not correcting it. You see?

And that's what I'm doing. And that's what each of you will do when you choose to practice the holy instant in the context of a holy relationship. Again:

There is nothing he can do that would REALLY change his reality in any way, nor make him really guilty. That is what sin would do, for such is its purpose. Yet for all the wild insanity inherent in the whole idea of sin, it is IMPOSSIBLE.

If it is impossible then even though sin seems to have occurred it hasn't because sin is succeeding at being what you cannot be, sin is succeeding at denying God and by that denial causing Him to cease to exist. It cannot be done. It is impossible. You see? That's why the solution to your dilemma is easy.

For the wages of sin IS death, . .

. . . that happens to be true. The wages of sin IS death. It's inescapable . . .

. . . and how can the immortal die?

You see? So it's not possible.

For the wages of sin IS death, and how can the immortal die?

You see? It's irrational. It's meaningless. Now:

A major tenet in the ego's insane religion is that sin is not error but TRUTH, and it is INNOCENCE that would deceive.

INNOCENCE . . . oh, how about that which teaches of innocence? The ego says that which would teach of innocence, like I am doing with you and like any of you will do with your Brothers if you practice the holy instant, when I teach of your innocence I am telling the truth, but your conditioned thinking says, "No, it is not. It's a nice idea that I'm a holy Son of God but it certainly isn't actual enough for me to be experiencing it now. I can't claim my divinity and stand in the face of error and not be moved by it. I can't stand with the truth of myself and watch appendicitis [snaps fingers] vanish, let's say, even in five minutes, much less immediately. I can't!" You see?

So when I tell you these things and I base it on your innocence, and I teach you of your innocence, it's all turned into a lie, or something true in the sweet-by-and-by . . . but not now. And so it's denied and you must continue to suffer or you must assume that it's going to be extremely difficult to demonstrate your holiness. You see?

And so your faithlessness in the sense of not actually engaging in the two-step and the holy instant occurs, you refrain from practicing the two-step with follow-through. And I'm here to tell you: engage in it with follow-through because there is nothing binding you. You have not sinned. You have not become what you cannot be. And although you've imagined that you've gotten a divorce from your Father, your Oneness with Him hasn't changed and never will.

Purity is seen as arrogance, . .

. . . a poor substitute for the arrogance of being a mean-old-bastard who can get anything done through force and manipulation, because one is so excellent at being a mean-old-bastard. You see? That kind of arrogance is quite acceptable. And the better you get at being a mean-old-bastard with a certain amount of finesse, the more powerful you become and of course, the less likely you are going to want to listen to what I'm saying when I say, "Stop! The correction of the problem, the way to move out of the path of sin, sickness and death and mortality is to stop thinking and to start listening, to join with the Father—your Father, who happens to be God, you holy Son of God—I'm telling you the truth about you." But you're not going to want to listen to that because you have this great commitment to still attempting to succeed at the impossible.

Purity . . .

. . . anything good . . .

. . . is seen as arrogance, and the acceptance of the self as sinful is perceived as holiness.

"I'm a mean-old-bastard and I'm good at it, and it counts for something. In the long run it counts for something. At the end of the day it counts for something. And I am going to persist in what counts for something!"

And it is this doctrine which replaces the reality of the Son of God as his Father created him, and willed that he be forever.

You see? It replaces the Reality. You use your mind to blind yourself to the Reality and at one level or another you know you are doing it. And therefore, you know that you have denied, or we'll say, attacked the Father and therefore, you know that you are guilty and therefore, you know that you cannot avoid punishment. You see? And the cards are stacked against you skillfully by you. But the cards will fall the minute you stop all of that mental gymnastics, all of those mental gymnastics and you shut up and you say, "Father, what is the truth here?" It's so simple. The correction is simple because sin has not occurred, just error.

[And] it is this doctrine which replaces the reality of the Son of God as his Father created him, and willed that he be forever. Is this humility? Or is it, rather, an attempt to wrest creation AWAY from truth, and keep it separate?

Any attempt to re-interpret sin as error . . .

. . . which I've just been describing . . .

. . . is always indefensible to the ego.

So be attentive and watch for the arguments that come up in you that make such a statement indefensible, meaning, make it something not reasonable for you to pursue with persistence. See, the whole purpose would simply be to immobilize you and stop you from discovering that your cell is not locked—the door on your cell is unlocked.

The idea of sin is wholly sacrosanct to its thought system, and quite unapproachable except through reverence and awe.

Well, just think of Darwin's theories and the awe and the reverence that are given to them, which account for God in no way at all, and arrogantly suggest existence and creation to not be the evidence, the ongoing evidence of a living God, Primal Intelligence, Love, Life, Truth, Principle, Mind, Soul, Spirit.

It's quite a thought system. And it's a thought system that sanctifies the idea that you not only don't have a Father, you didn't have a Father that you got a divorce from. You're just hanging out there in the wind, Sourceless and Beingless. And it's not true.

It is the most "holy" concept in the ego's system; lovely and powerful, wholly true, and necessarily protected with every defense at its disposal.

In other words, that sin is true, sin is not an error.

For here lies its "best" defense, which all the others serve. Here is its armor, its protection, and the fundamental purpose of the special relationship in its interpretation.

What is it that it defends you against? It defends you against the truth that there is a God, that you are the direct expression of God, every moment brand new. That you are the living current expression of a living current God, and you are holy and the environment infinitely that you exist in, is the Kingdom of Heaven and you're supposed to be experiencing it without any distortions whatsoever. And you can have the experience because you didn't actually do anything that's irrevocable that will keep you from experiencing your Birthright and because the only thing that stand between you and the clear glorious experience of Reality is a mistake, an error which is correctible. It's a mistake which holds no eternal meaning in itself, which if you just simply abandon it, "Oops, I dropped it in the middle of the ocean . . . Oops, I dropped it!" You see? That's the simplicity of it.

Now I will briefly touch on this tonight: Now that you know that the practice of the holy instant will not spontaneously cause correction, because there are those who will insist upon holding onto that which needs to be corrected and not let it be corrected. You must begin to consider a new . . . what you will do when you're confronted by that.

Now I don't want you to imagine what you will do, I want you to ask. I want you to ask within . . . what do you do? What do you do with someone who is unwilling to be healed?

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

August 11th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Last week I posed a question at the very end for everyone to consider. And the question was: "What do you do with someone who is unwilling to be healed?"

Now of course, we talked about the fact that some things everyone wants to be healed of: sickness, injury, accident, so on. But the things that people don't want to be healed of are the things that they are committed to toward the accomplishment of unintelligent conclusions . . . like being an independent agent for change, like being an orphan—someone without a Source, someone who is committed to becoming real even though he has no Source, and who has caused "becoming real" to be his life work.

This is someone who does not want to hear that he is to abandon that endeavor, because he is already real. He's just not real in his own right.

You see, at the bottom line, after one said, "Father, I'd rather see things my way, do things my way and determine the meaning of everything," after saying that to the Father, one was faced with the demand to prove himself to be righteous. Righteous: meaning, including all right ideas, including all that was true, including all that makes him real in his own right.

The result of such a goal would be to arrive at a point of true self-righteousness. That is sin. It's the intent to accomplish something that cannot be accomplished and to do it with determination . . . to do it with commitment. But even that's not enough. The easiest way to put it is that sin is an act engaged in through addiction. It's not just a goal. It's not just an idea. But it's a meaning that one attempts to accomplish through force of emotion . . . *dedicated emotion . . . undying emotion.

Now, what could promote undying emotion that drives one relentlessly toward a goal—this specific goal?

Well, if the one engaging in it has no Source and is attempting to make a righteous entity out of himself, he's trying to make himself real. He's trying to make himself real in his own right.

Now what happens if he doesn't succeed? Well you see, he can't even consider that because he must succeed in order to prove his existence is actual. So the addiction to the accomplishment of that arises out of a fear and a premonition that he will not exist if he doesn't succeed. In other words, he will dissolve into nothingness. He will cease to exist. You could say, he will die—you will die. You see?

Now that constitutes motivation. And the fear of dying or the insatiable intent to exist as that which is righteous and real is a goal that will never on its own, die. It will not cease. You see?

How does one accomplish this goal? One thinks. One thinks, one observes, ignoring of course the fact that what he's observing he didn't create. But he doesn't ask where it came from? Oh yes, it came from "the Big Bang." It was a [snaps fingers] physical event—a universal, physical event . . . pretty amazing stuff. Okay. So he observes everything. He defines everything through the use of his mind and his imagination. And then he evaluates everything and he evaluates his Brothers and Sisters and comes to conclusions about them and always, the measuring stick of those conclusions is their demonstration of their righteousness.

So you see, what's created out of this addiction—out of this goal—is that one himself engages in demonstrating and proving his righteousness so that he can exercise authority and control, period. Secondly, he requires everyone else to prove their righteousness. You see? So not only is there this inner fear of death if one doesn't succeed at proving his righteousness and his independent actuality or reality, he is faced with the demand of everyone else to prove his righteousness to their satisfaction. You see?

Everyone else reinforces his addiction because the proving of righteousness and the actualizing of it in social settings, in cooperation, in governing, and so on, it all creates the climate of competition and keeps the addiction fed. The addiction is there just because of inner fear of death but with everyone requiring everyone else to demonstrate their righteousness to the satisfaction of the investigator simply substantiates the insanity further. You see?

This is very important to understand.

Now always, this interaction of the Sons and Daughters of God involves deceit. You see? It's not honest! Because no one is really disclosing to everyone else that he's feeling invalid—that he doesn't feel a Birthright that holds him securely in the grasp of, I'm going to say, holiness—wholeness—but holiness. No one discloses that. Everyone says, you know, that God or the "Powers that Be" gave them a mind and a body and a will of their own to use as they wish and therefore, it's their right. It's not only their right, it's their calling—it's that which they must engage in.

But they don't disclose this. They say, "I was created to be independent. I was created to do this. I was created to evolve my righteousness." And what's not stated is that that righteousness is going to be used for control, not necessarily for the best interests of everyone being controlled. And the reverse is the case as well. So the controller needs to be wary of not being controlled by others who are exercising the same right and the same practice—the same addiction.

So the answer to the question is an answer that no one is really going to like. And I mention this because it's characteristic of truth that is revealed as you reach out for Guidance, that it will very often contradict your beliefs, your faiths, your confidences. You see?

And I'm going to answer the question: "What do you do with someone who is unwilling to be healed?" by just illustrating what I told my disciples: I told them that if they go into a town or a village or a place where they are not welcomed, that they are to leave and to "shake the dust from off thy feet."¹ Meaning, when you leave the town, shake off everything about the town and leave it with the town and move on. I didn't say this—it's not recorded—but the point was, go where you are welcome, go where you will not be rebuffed. Go where the truth that you are sharing will not be argued against. Don't try to change the minds of those who are unwilling to be healed.

Does that sound unspiritual? Does that sound unholy? Does that sound unloving?

No. As you lean into the holy instant, as you enquire of the Holy Spirit or of your Guide or of the Father, "What is the truth here?" and it is revealed to you, it doesn't mean that you've moved into a holy activity which must fulfill your preconceptions of what a holy activity would be, else you will attempt to construe what you're hearing through the sieve of your preconception and try to practice something that wasn't meant.

If you're listening carefully and if you're being used by someone who asks for help but is unwilling to receive it, you're not to abandon intelligence, you simply say to this one: "There is not honesty in what you're engaging in with me. You're asking for the answer but you are unwilling to accept the answer because you have another agenda. When you actually want to know the truth and receive it—embrace it—call me. But until then, I won't validate your deceitful activity by joining you in it and being manipulated by it." You see?

There are rules. There is "the way things work."

For example, when Paul first heard that there was such a thing as inner Guidance, and he decided to sit down and take time regularly to reach out to it, he did it as a practice, an intelligent application of his attention. And he did this for a couple of weeks, every night, sometimes more than once a day and heard nothing. And as I've shared before, there was a point at which he got perturbed and impatient, and he said to whoever was out there, "I have better things to do than sit here and ask and ask and ask and not hear anything."

Well, he still didn't get any answer that night. But over the next twenty-four hours, he realized that his exercise of impatience and demand indicated that he was coming from a place of control—that he was trying to make the event of communion happen. He realized that, in so many words, he was trying to twist the Universe's arm. And it registered with him that it wouldn't work.

The next night he sat down humbly, his attitude was, "if it takes a year of sitting down every night and listening without hearing an answer, I will do it because I do not want to bring willfulness into the process." Without my even speaking with him directly, it became clear to him that willfulness brought into the attempt at communion with his Guide would absolutely block the communication.

So you see, if someone is intent on being an independent agent and he tries to connect with the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than his right Mind—or his Guide or the Father, no communication will occur because his willfulness will block it. In so many words, his willfulness will constitute a dissonance that will cause him not to hear the answer that's given every time he or any of you ask for Guidance.

So that's the way it works. If you bring willfulness into your engagement with Guidance, you will hear nothing. If a town does not welcome the truth, they will hear nothing. Except in the case with my disciples or we'll say even in the case with Paul where he can hear me, and relay to you, it is not appropriate to engage because of the deceit in the activity.

And so intelligence must prevail and say, “No. But when you are ready to embrace the truth, when you really want to change, I will be present and we will talk and we will be together and there will be healing.”

Now it’s important to talk to those who are willing to hear. Because each one that hears, [snaps fingers] each one who experiences an “aha” and is led to abandon their independence and seek Guidance and give it preference to their own best thinking, they will, by virtue of the illumination in them of the Father’s Perspective, be agents for change.

And so more and more of the Sons and Daughters of God who have been dreaming will stop dreaming. And the result will be that the camaraderie of unity of dreams will weaken. And those who have felt the support of their independent stance and the viability of their insanity and addiction will find their resolve weakening because the withdrawal of mutual agreement among their Brothers and Sisters will make it harder to support the commitment.

And so even the towns where my disciples left, or those whom you discontinued involvement with, will find themselves, I’m going to say, beginning to spontaneously experience clarity—clarification—healing.

You cannot afford to become preoccupied with those who do not want to hear the truth but want to argue it or who want to engage you and pepper you with question after question so that they can provide a further stumbling block to you and enjoy your dilemma of trying to help them. You see?

That can be satisfying too and it could take you quite a while to realize that you’re being used and that the other one is enjoying watching you squirm. Then intelligence comes into play and you say, with meaning and with understanding that you have better things to do than engage in futility, and you say, “No.” And you leave the vicinity and you shake whatever remnants of the interchange are that might be lingering. You can’t leave it and be angry about it. You’ve got to leave it behind because there is a step that must occur. It’s matter of fact. It’s black and white. It’s simple. It’s intelligent and it is free of distress. You say “no” to a deceitful, dishonest involvement and you require that the future involvement be honest. That is holy.

Now, let’s go into the book.

It can indeed be said the ego made its world on sin.²

Well first of all, what’s happening in the state of independence from the Father is that a self must be imagined, an independent self—one who has all the capacity to become real that is needed and so on.

So this self that is brought forth is what is referred to as the ego and it makes its world on sin. What does it make it on? What is the sin? The sin is the insane and addicted goal of becoming righteous independently and doing it with an incapacity to falter in that goal because faltering means death, utter failure, nonexistence. And that is all it takes to keep the addiction maximal.

The ego made its world on this. It determines what its world is from that context. You see? It's not that a sinful thing was done, "Oh, he was immoral with her!" What a distraction. It's a distraction from the correction of sin because, as you can see, there's no way you can get from his being immoral with her to the issue of being addicted to the goal of being a successful, fully-realized, independent entity. Hey:

Only in such a world could everything be upside-down.

A hundred-and-eighty-degrees out of sync. Where sin, disease and death replace life, truth and love. You see? A hundred-and-eighty-degrees out of sync.

This is the strange illusion which makes the clouds of guilt seem heavy and impenetrable.

What clouds of guilt? Well, the guilt that you imagine you're engaged in. The guilt that you imagine is a result of your not succeeding yet—your failing at your goal even though you're trying. And the guilt that is inseparable from your initial act of divorcing your Father: "Father, I'd rather see it my way. I am not interested in Your perspective any longer."

The nature of addiction is: That it causes you to not experience the joy of being, but the distress of being that covers everything in a heavy and impenetrable way. It's depressing.

The solidness this world's foundation seems to have . . .

. . . the one of the ego's creating . . .

. . . is found in this. For sin has changed creation from an Idea of God to an ideal the ego wants; . .

. . . and this is very important: It didn't create a universe that isn't real. Listen:

For sin has changed creation from . . .

. . . what it is . . .

... an Idea of God to an ideal the ego wants; . .

. . . it's a mental shift that doesn't change the actuality of the Kingdom of Heaven or Creation, but alters the experience or perception of it. And so there's not a universe that's going to disappear, but Creation is going to emerge out of the distortion that the addiction to becoming righteous blocks. You will not see Creation as it is until you abandon your independence, join with the Father, with inquiry that you're willing to accept the answers to. You see?

. . . not in actuality, because that's impossible, but it's changed the perception of it. It . . .

. . . changed creation from an Idea of God to an ideal the ego wants; a world IT rules, made up of bodies, mindless and capable of complete corruption and decay.

Sin, disease and death—the human condition, which is simply a misperception of Creation in all of Its perfection. Now:

If this is a mistake, it can be undone easily by truth.

If it's an error—the section we're reading is called SIN VERSUS ERROR—if it's error it's correctible.

If this is a mistake, it can be undone easily by truth.

Well you say, “It sure hasn't been happening for me!” Well, be sure that as you enter into your desire to hear the truth—to hear Guidance—that you're not bringing this sort of arrogant obtuse flavor, “Well, it hasn't been easy for me.” You see? That's an emotion. That's an idea. It's an evaluation and the energy of it will keep you from hearing. It's not useful. You say, “Well, I sure feel it.”

Well, let's get something else clear. There's a difference between feeling and emotions. If you're angry, if you're upset, if you're depressed, if you're jealous, these are emotions. They have nothing to do with Soul. But feelings, on the other hand, have only to do with Soul. Feelings are love, joy, peace, awe, the recognition of good without anything obscuring it. These are feelings. They are the capacity of Soul to experience God's Meanings in Creation without interference.

Emotions that you call feelings are something you can relish and roll around in your mind and dwell with for long periods of time. And because you feel them, you think that your expression of them is an honest expression of you, when they are simply misunderstandings, misinterpretations that disallow you from experiencing Reality—the Kingdom of Heaven and feeling the Meaning of It. You see?

Any mistake can be corrected, if truth be left to judge it. But if the mistake . . .

. . . the goal of becoming righteous . . .

. . . if the mistake is given the STATUS of truth, to what can it be brought?

You see? Lifted to the status of truth, why it's supreme and it will govern you. And the addiction that arises out of the fear of death—your failure to become an actualized independent entity—you will not find release from. And yet that is what Waking up is the release from. That's what Atonement is the release from.

The "holiness" of sin is kept in place by just this strange device.

What strange device? The device of raising the mistake to the status of truth.

As truth it is inviolate, and everything is brought to IT for judgment.

And it's brought to it for judgment with vengeance, because if you don't practice this clearly, succinctly and with pure logic you will delay your arriving at the point of becoming an actualized, righteous, independent being and you will die.

As truth . . .

. . . that the mistake has been raised to the status of truth.

As truth it is inviolate, and everything is brought to IT for judgment.

But:

As a mistake, IT must be brought to truth.

Now the simple fact is, that you wouldn't bring it to truth because of your commitment to it. And that's why the word "sin" is applied to it, because you bring commitment to staying asleep, even though you can't succeed. It's unachievable. And you cannot realize it on your own when you're under its influence.

It is [however] impossible to have faith in sin, for sin IS faithlessness.

Faithlessness . . . being your claim to be independent from the Father and to rely upon yourself. You see?

Yet it IS possible to have faith that a mistake can be corrected.

And so I am telling you that the whole human condition, the insane attempt to become righteous in your own right is something that cannot be accomplished. And therefore, your additive belief that it can be accomplished is nothing more than a mistake. If it's a mistake, it's an error. And an error can be corrected. And an error can be corrected very simply.

There is no stone in all the ego's embattled citadel more heavily defended than the idea that sin is real; the natural expression of what the Son of God has made himself to be, and what he IS.

That's the claim anyway.

To the ego, this is NO MISTAKE.

You know, the commitment to righteousness. There's no way that can be seen as a mistake. It seems very real. It seems very reasonable. And yet the goal of righteousness does not have righteousness as its goal, it has the goal of making something that isn't real—a self that doesn't exist, real. You see?

To the ego, this is NO MISTAKE. For this IS its reality; this is the "truth" from which escape will always be impossible.

Impossible, without a perspective being provided by those who are not under the influence of the addiction.

This is his past, his present and his future.

The one who's going for the goal.

For he has somehow managed to corrupt his Father, . .

. . . No . . . not.

For he has somehow managed to corrupt his Father, and changed His Mind . . .

. . . the Father's Mind . . .

... completely.

That's the belief. If it isn't believed that the Father's Mind has been changed completely, then no one would be engaged in the goal of righteousness as the action of an addiction.

Mourn, then, the death of God, Whom sin has killed! And this would be ...

... what? ..

... the ego's wish, which in its madness it thinks it has ACCOMPLISHED.

Mind you, it hasn't and it's not true and the suffering associated with the human condition is something you can be released from easily, because it is an error. It is only a mistake.

Would you not RATHER that all this be nothing more than a mistake, entirely correctable, and so easily escaped from that its whole correction is like walking through a mist into the sun? For that is all it is.

Too hard to believe? I'm sorry, don't bring that feeling or idea into your listening for Guidance to know "what is the truth here?" Don't bring that which casts a shadow on your path causing the Light to be obscured from you. Don't you be that which the shadow identifies. Abandon the shadow. Abandon the doubt. Abandon the mistake.

Perhaps you would be tempted to agree with the ego that it is far better to be sinful than mistaken.

Well, it's far better to have an addictive goal that promises fulfillment, pure full-fledged, self-righteousness, than it is to be mistaken. Because if you're mistaken, then you must stop doing the thing that guarantees your life! And that means that your life won't be guaranteed. That's too risky. That's too dangerous. That's too unrealistic, when the actuality is that that is the threshold of release into Wholeness.

Yet think you carefully before you allow yourself to make this choice. Approach it not lightly, for it IS the choice of hell or Heaven.

Now because you're experiencing or seem to be subject to sin, sickness and death, you've already made the choice incorrectly. And that's why the Holy Spirit, your Guides, myself and God must bring the truth to your attention from a place outside the addiction, and penetrate the addictive perspective and introduce an idea perpendicular to, out of phase with the addiction and the commitment to it, so that a light bulb might go on and you say, “Whoa, there is another way to look at this . . . there is another way to be.” And then invite it.

I tell you, the subject of Sin Versus Error could have seemed to be a really heavy complicated thing. I mean, sin can be so humongous and all pervasive and controlling of you, putting you at such a disadvantage that you might as well just ignore it and live out this lifetime. But it is vital and it is interesting and it’s easy to see the difference between sin and error. And it’s easier, since we’ve been talking about it, to see how you employ it, how you foil your attempts to Wake up, because you so easily backslide and begin once again to rely upon your best thinking, your best judgments, your conditionings, all of the agreements that you’ve made with everyone about what things are. You see?

But those agreements don’t have to be honored. You are free to abandon them and choose for the Perspective that undoes the illusion of sin and corrects it because all it was, was a mistake.

Thank you for listening. Thank you for hearing. I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

August 18th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, we're going to spend another delightful evening talking about the wonderful subject of sin and fear and guilt.

You see, it's only when you don't know what sin and fear and guilt are and what function they perform, that it would seem to be an unpleasant subject to consider or a frightening one. But it is truly wonderful to understand what they are or as is the case tonight, what they aren't—*The Unreality Of Sin, not the reality of sin.

Now before we begin, I want to remind everyone that in the beginning of the human condition—in the beginning of all that everyone is wanting to get out of—something simple happened: Two Sons or Daughters of God chose to join together and to abandon their union with their Father and get a divorce from God. And through the use of their Mind—which they completely overlook was in them because the Father placed it there—they decided to determine the meaning of everything and do it independently of God but joined together with each other.

Now as I've said before, when that decision was made and committed to, two things came into play. You remember what they are? Fear and guilt. They, like two sides of a coin, are always present together. They are always functioning together or against each other. And what it is imperative for everyone to understand is that that divorce, that decision and the introduction of fear and guilt didn't happen in the past. It's always been a current practice of each one of you. The divorce is being certified, you might say, now...now...now...now...now, every moment in which you determine that you are going to decide what everything means.

So you don't have an actual lengthy history that has built up a residual strength in you that it is going to be difficult for you to overcome because the only thing that is keeping you from being Awake is a decision that is occurring now...now...now...now...now...now. And all that you need to do to escape from that decision is to decide something else, now...now...now...now...now.

And that something else is to say, "Father..." as the beginning of a sentence, as the beginning of a conversation, as the beginning of an involvement with God, "Father..." and then say whatever else you want to say, "...what is the truth here? What does this mean? Is it okay for me to sit here and do nothing? Is it okay for me to do something? Share with me Your Perspective of everything that I'm seeing because I understand that, although it looks to me like a physical universe, that it's really the Kingdom of Heaven seen through a glass darkly—seen through misperceptions that I'm introducing. So Father, I'm going to be still with You and ask: Will you share with me how You are seeing everything that's in front of me because I want to have the shared experience of Reality rather than the isolated experience of illusion."

It's that simple. And all you have to do is do that now...now...now...now...now...now. Because the only thing that's keeping you in the dark is something that you're doing now...now...now...now...now. This is the simplicity of it. If you make more of it than that, if you make it more complicated than that and you believe yourself, you will be making a decision not to see the truth now...now...now...now...now . . . not because you did something in the past.

So, a new section:

THE UNREALITY OF SIN¹

I guess we better remind ourselves what sin means since it's a very different definition than the one generally accepted. Sin is an act that you engage in to attempt to accomplish the impossible. And it's not just any impossible, it's a very specific impossible. It is the attempt to be something in your own right without any connection to God. And it is the attempt to be something with such conviction and commitment that you will not, for any reason, give up the attempt.

And as we discussed last week, that goal has become an obsession—an addiction. And what has caused it to be an addiction is the fear that if you do not accomplish establishing your autonomous reality, you will die. And so you will do anything you can to not die and that's what brings the obsessive addictive element into the picture.

That is the meaning of sin. It is You, the Son or Daughter of God, claiming vehemently, adamantly and totally that you're not a Son or Daughter of God, that you are an entity in your own right and by dammit, you're gonna prove it!

Now it begins, this section:

The attraction of guilt is found in sin, not error.

Guilt—the attraction to guilt—does not attach itself to error. Because when you make a mistake, you don't want to hold on to the mistake. But when it comes to sin, you refuse, as I said, to give it up because if you do, you will die. What does the well-known statement say? "The wages of sin is death."²

Of course, [chuckle] it's not referring to sin as I am, it's referring to sins you can engage in in the world and with your fellowman or against your fellowman. But nevertheless, the experience of what sin truly is—the attempt to be something you cannot be—does promise death which is exactly why you are addicted to proving successfully, that you are a whole, real, puppet—a whole real person instead of a puppet, like Pinocchio.

So where does guilt come into the picture—the attraction of guilt? What could be attractive about guilt? What would make you use guilt to accomplish your goal, which is sin? Guilt is attractive in the same sense that sirens are attractive to seafarers to lure them onto the rocks and destroy them and their ships.³ Guilt is used to attract. It's used to attract you and others to try even harder than you are to become an independent entity, which you cannot become.

Always that which attracts one to an addiction is a promise of wholeness that one doesn't currently have. That's what makes it attractive, that's what seems to make it believable.

Now in order to accomplish anything with guilt, it has to be used for a purpose. And the interesting thing is that you will never use guilt on yourself. Guilt is always used on someone else. Have you ever heard of "guilting" someone into behaving well? "Oh, yes . . . we guilted him sufficiently to cause him to change his ways in order to become free of the guilt trip we were laying on him."

Now guilt is an unavailable and non-existent experience to the holy Son or Daughter of God who hasn't gotten a divorce from the Father. But the moment the divorce—the moment the separation—was finalized by commitment, relationships became the arena in which guilt and fear took form—manifested.

Now it's interesting . . . you can use guilt on someone to get them to conform to your rules—to those things that benefit you and make you apparently more real and respectable. And others can and will attempt to use guilt on you for the same reason.

Now I said that you will never use it on yourself, but you will in an indirect way. You will use your Brother or Sister as justification for feeling guilty. You will lay a guilt trip on yourself by saying, “Mary will think thus and thus about me if I do this . . .” or “Joe does think poorly of me. He thinks I’m guilty. He thinks I’m guilty and this is dangerous to me, this is impractical for me because I need him to be my friend, I need him to be on my side, I need him to succumb to the guilt trips I lay on him for the good of everyone, of course.”

So you see, you in a negative appraisal of yourself can guilt yourself by projecting the source of the guilt on others around you when they aren't projecting a guilt trip on you at all.

Now what is there about guilt that could be delicious? Delicious like a siren speaking to the seafarers—delicious and attractive, to pull one's attention in a direction that is self-defeating?

Believe it or not, guilt is the sweetener that makes the drug of choice easier to swallow, causing the goal to apparently become easier to attain. You say, “Oh, I don't like to feel guilty” but you use guilt—every single one of you use it. You use it on yourself, through projection on others laying a guilt trip on you. And you use it . . . you know what? . . . you use it to keep yourself unconscious of the truth. You use it to ensure beyond a shadow of a doubt, that you are going to stay on your quest to independent, righteous self-hood without anything getting in the way.

You feel guilt and you say, “I don't like the clutching in the area of my solar plexus. I don't like the uneasiness. I don't like the churning that makes me feel like throwing up.” But you know what? How many of you put it down? I'm not asking how many of you argue it away. I'm asking, how many of you just set it down as though it's meaningless, as though you're not going to indulge in it anymore? And why not? You can . . . and that's the point.

The feeling of guilt is used by you to spur you further in the direction of accomplishing your impossible goal. It's like negative attention. Negative attention can get more benefit to you if you're lonely than positive attention, if there isn't a lot of it.

So this brings us to the next point. Why do you use guilt? Because at the bottom line, you don't want to feel lonely. And when you got the divorce from your Father, your inseparability from your Brothers and Sisters and all Creation got interrupted—got separated into bits and pieces—and you found yourself alone with a need to establish connection. And guilt helps you establish connection, not by healing anything, but rather by complicating the situation, complicating the relationships so that you must apply yourself with more diligence to bringing about equilibrium. You see?

And you use guilt as a means of control in the relationship. It's all crazy. It's all insane, because as the subject of this section says, sin is unreal—The Unreality Of Sin.

The attraction of guilt is found in sin, not error.

It's like there are two arenas: Sin and error—devotion to insanity and an arena of mistakes. And it's only in the arena of sin that the attraction of guilt exists.

Sin will be repeated BECAUSE of this attraction.

You see? Mistakes are not repeated because of an attraction to making mistakes. But:

Sin will be repeated BECAUSE of this attraction. Fear can become so acute that the sin is denied the acting out, but while the guilt remains attractive the mind will suffer, and not let go of the idea of sin.

You see? You can guilt someone into good behavior but you can't make the belief in sin go away and you can't make the guilt go away. You can just change the behavior artificially, when what you want is a change of behavior because of healing—actual transformation, actual abandonment of the idea that you can do the impossible, so that you stop trying.

. . . while the guilt remains attractive the mind will suffer, and not let go of the idea of sin. For guilt still calls to it, and the mind hears it and yearns for it, . .

. . . heads right for the rocks, seduced by the attractiveness, the sweetness . . .

. . . making itself a willing captive to its sick appeal.

Now mind you, this is something every single one of you who hears my voice is doing right now. Interesting that you haven't died from it yet. More than interesting it's a clue: If you haven't died from it, then perhaps you haven't accomplished the sins. And perhaps you haven't accomplished the sins because they're un-accomplishable and therefore there is no such thing as sin as an actuality—as a demonstrated object—Real.

Sin is an idea of evil that CANNOT be corrected, and will be forever desirable.

Is that an unfair? Is that something that some malevolent force has laid upon you? No. It's just the way the Kingdom of Heaven and the holy Son and Daughter of God are experienced when that holy Son or Daughter of God, in this moment now...now...now...now, is attempting not to be the Son or Daughter of God. It says that to be a Son or Daughter of God is unbelievable. "How can I believe that about myself . . . sinner that I am?"

You know, it's a time honored law, imagined law, that everyone is a sinner. It's imagined, because no one yet has been able to accomplish sin. No one has yet been able to accomplish becoming an independent entity in his own right with no Father, with no God, period. It hasn't happened.

So although this sounds very serious, because everyone is practicing this, the effect is minor compared to death, compared to an end, a forever end—extinction. A few aches or pains here or there these are minor compared to death.

So you don't need to get too alarmed that you may be engaging in sin, engaging in the convicted attempt to accomplish what you can't accomplish. And you can dare to consider that all it takes is a new devotion now...now...now...now...now. And that's all. Just abandoning the old devotion now...now...now. That's all.

And so although:

Sin is an idea of evil that CANNOT be corrected, and will be forever desirable.

. . . it doesn't make any difference because sin is unreal. There is no such thing as it, except as an imagination. That means that all it is, is a mistake that's correctible, that stands present to be corrected because that's what mistakes are for.

Now speaking of sin:

As an essential part of what the ego thinks you are, . .

. . . as an essential part of what your present sense of self thinks you are, as an essential part of what the church thinks you are . . .

... you will ALWAYS want it.

Amazing. But it 'tain't so! 'tain't so!

As an essential part of what the ego thinks you are, you will ALWAYS want it. And only an avenger, with a mind unlike your own, could stamp it out through fear.

See? A bigger mistaken one than the ego you think you are. You see? .

... could stamp it out through fear.

But that isn't what will get rid of it. It is, we'll say:

And only an [in quotes] avenger, with a mind unlike your own, . .

... like the Holy Spirit . . .

... could stamp it out through . . .

... love. Could stamp it out through a different choice. Now:

The ego does not think it possible that love, not fear, is really called upon by sin, . .

... but you see, if sin is a mistake, it calls for correction. That's all. It's simple.

The ego does not think it possible that love, not fear, is really called upon by sin, and always ANSWERS.

It never fails to answer. But the ego doesn't think that's possible, of course.

For the ego brings sin to FEAR, . .

... the other side of the coin, the other part of the partnership that's always present. And they always play off of each other or against each other in a dance that keeps the dream going, instead of directing your attention where the solution is, which is to annul the divorce.

For the ego brings sin to FEAR, . .

... listen . . .

... demanding . . .

... What? . . .

. . . punishment. Yet punishment is but another form of guilt's protection . . .

... more of the insane reasoning . . .

. . . for what is deserving punishment must have been really DONE.

You see the use of logic there? The claim is that punishment is deserved. And then everyone else come up with the conclusion: “Well, if it’s deserved, then what it’s deserved for must have actually been accomplished.” So if . . .

. . . the ego brings sin to FEAR, demanding punishment.

... then, as I said, what is deserving punishment must have been really done.

Punishment is always the great preserver of sin; . .

“Well, he went to jail, he must have done it!” Ten years later, “Oh, I’m sorry, we did some DNA testing and although he served time and he was punished, he didn’t do it. Oh dear, well that’s the way it goes.”

. . . punishment is but another form of guilt's protection for what is deserving punishment must have been really DONE. Punishment is always the great preserver of sin; treating it with respect, and honoring its enormity. For what you think is real you WANT, and will not let it go.

Um . . . you see? You think that you are autonomous. You think you are a product of a physical universe. You think you can become something on your own and that although God may have created this universe, which is like a perpetual motion machine, you are now left free to make something out of yourself and it’s a God-given right. It’s what you are here for.

But there’s this fear of dying. And so you better make your time count. And there are even loop-holes: If you don’t quite get it right this lifetime you’ll have another lifetime to perfect yourself further. You see? When what’s needed is to step off the merry-go-round to say, “I’m not playing this game anymore.” That’s your right. And that’s what I’m telling you about. And that’s what I’m encouraging you to engage in so that you might see that you have not been placed under the definition: sinner . . . ever! And you’re not bound in any way. And all you have to do is change your commitment now...now...now...now.

[For] what you think is real you WANT, and will not let it go. An error, on the other hand, is not attractive. What you see clearly as a mistake you WANT corrected.

Sometimes a sin can be repeated over and over, with obviously distressing results, but without the loss of its appeal.

Anybody not had that experience, ever?

Sometimes a sin can be repeated over and over, with obviously distressing results, but without the loss of its appeal. And suddenly, you change its status from a sin to a mistake.

Now you will not repeat it; you will merely stop and let it go, unless the guilt REMAINS.

Now before we get into what happens if the guilt REMAINS let's pay attention to this:

And suddenly, you change its status from a sin to a mistake. Now you will not repeat it; you will merely stop and let it go, . .

. . . here it is right out of the book. It's that simple. That's all there is to it. That's a very simple definition of the two-step or the practice of the holy instant. And the reason you can do that is because the divorce and the commitment to being on your own is occurring now...now...now...now...now...now...today...today...here...here...now...now, nowhere else. It's happening right where you can decide to do something different [snaps fingers] with just a simple choice, now...now...now.

So, don't labor under the idea that this is complicated or hard to do. It isn't full of process, it's full of simplicity.

So as we learn this about sin and the escape from sin, you can be happy that we've been discussing it and that you have been considering it, because it's easier to see how easy it is. As a result, you might risk the chance that it really is that easy and drop it, let it go, now...now...now...now...now. . . please.

Now you will not repeat it; you will merely stop and let it go, unless the guilt REMAINS.

You see? You can change the behavior and be a good boy or a good girl, but if the guilt remains you're not free. And you're not experiencing the Father's Perspective, which it is your Birthright to be experiencing.

For then you will but change the FORM of sin, granting that it was an error, but keeping it uncorrectable. This is not really a change in your perception, for it is SIN that calls for punishment, not error.

If you had seen it as a mistake, if you had seen it as error, you would not experience within yourself a call for punishment. It would simply be gone because it isn't present in the mindset, I'm going to say, of "an error to be corrected." You see?

The Holy Spirit CANNOT punish sin.

Why? Oh-h, the subject of this section is: The Unreality Of Sin. If it's unreal the Holy Spirit cannot punish it.

Mistakes He recognizes, and would correct them all as God entrusted Him to do. But sin He knows not, nor can He recognize mistakes which cannot be corrected.

You see? Mistakes which cannot be corrected constitute an experience of being held in bondage to uncorrected mistakes which does constitute suffering, which means punishment is being enacted, which means you must have actually accomplished something impossible, when you didn't—when you haven't.

The Holy Spirit CANNOT punish sin. Mistakes He recognizes, and would correct them all as God entrusted Him to do. But sin He knows not, nor can He recognize mistakes which cannot be corrected. For a mistake which cannot be corrected is meaningless to Him.

It's meaningless because there is no such thing. And so he's not fooled and he doesn't labor under a misunderstanding that could even develop into a "fact" which could be believed and committed to. Dangerous territory!

It's simple.

Mistakes are FOR correction, and they call for nothing else.

They don't even call for a three hour lecture to set you straight.

Mistakes are FOR correction, . .

. . . letting go of, dropping . . .

. . . and they call for nothing else. What calls for punishment must call for nothing.

Why? Because what calls for punishment could only be sin and sin doesn't exist. Sin is unreal. Sin is something that cannot happen and has not ever happened. And so what calls for punishment, must call for nothing.

Every mistake MUST be a call for love.

What does that mean? It means that every mistake that is brought to your attention is a call for you not to abandon your union with your Father and your devotion to that which is nothing more than your right Mind, the Holy Spirit and the Holy Spirit's Perspective, which is the Father's Perspective held in trust for you while you play with sin and fear and guilt.

What, then, is sin? What could it be but a mistake you would keep hidden; a call for help that you would keep unheard and thus unanswered? In time, the Holy Spirit clearly sees the Son of God can make mistakes. On this you share His vision. Yet you do not share His recognition of the difference between time and eternity.

Again:

In time, the Holy Spirit clearly sees the Son of God can make mistakes.

Oh, mistakes . . . those are the correctible things. Those are the easy things, because no one wants to be experiencing error. No one wants to be experiencing mistakes.

. . . His recognition . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit's recognition . . .

. . . of the difference between time and eternity.

I'm sorry:

On this you share His vision. Yet you do not share His recognition of the difference between time and eternity. And when correction is completed, time IS eternity.

Now this is important.

It's like when the correction of your misperception occurs, the material world and universe IS the Kingdom of Heaven. You see? Time IS eternity.

Everything that caused eternity, which is the context of the Kingdom of Heaven, suffuses itself into your limited experience of time in a physical world and universe, transforming your experience of it as your ignorance falls away from your vision and everything becomes crystal clear in its actuality.

And so, you find that time, what you had called time, . . . what shall we say? Um...the duration, the eternity of Creation, replaces time. That's the point. That's what this little decision now...now...now...now...now means. That's what it promises. That's the reason the Course educates about it. That's the reason I'm taking time to elaborate on it, so that the simplicity of it can register with you. And the awfulness of sin that's part and parcel of the sinner that you are, born into sin as you were, poor souls that you are. You see? It's time to Wake up from this insanity!

It's time to break your independence from your Father so that you might step forth with the garments of sin falling off your back onto the ground never to be seen again, because everyone who said it was your true nature was wrong. And it's wrong for you to believe it. And it's wrong for you not to challenge it by simply practicing a new decision, now...now...now...now...now...here...this moment, because the opposite is being brought into play now...now...now...now...here in this moment. And its effect is only as strong as the commitment to your denial of the Kingdom of Heaven and your holiness is in this moment now...now...now...now. Do you get it?

I love you all. Enjoy this expanded understanding of sin and its nothingness and of your holiness and the ease with which you can experience it again.

I look forward to being with you all next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

August 27th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Now because there is so much to learn about what sin is and how to cope with it or not cope with it, we are not going to go on in the Text tonight, but do some review of some very necessary points. So before we do that though, let us have a quiet time together.

(Quiet time)

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Sin and everything associated with it is utterly sneaky, dishonest, unfair, misleading by nature because that's the only way it can get your attention and keep it.

Now as I said last week, sin is the attempt to be something in your own right without any connection to God. This is very literal. And what it means is very identifiable as you go throughout the day.

When you find yourself aroused to a commitment, I'm going to say, to excellence for the sake of excellence and for the sake of a righteous gift, you have taken the bait that secures your addiction further and entirely distracts you from what will lead to your success.

Now you will usually discover, when you have this unreasonable commitment in play, when you find yourself irritated because something is standing in the way of what you are planning on accomplishing, that's how you find [chuckle] that your attempts to be successful isn't arising out of peace, but is arising out of a sense of emptiness in you that says, "you do not have inherent worth, you do not have inherent value, you are not inherently worthy of anything."

Now many churches teach that you are a sinner and that you are born into sin. But you may not be religious. And so you may have not heard that before. But you heard in other terms. You heard it in the terms of your being “an organism,” part of a development of a species that has risen and risen and risen above others and achieved a level of excellence that goes beyond others. And the normal or natural deduction from that is that it is your function, it is your purpose to refine yourself, to improve yourself further. You see?

And so that’s the means by which you are caused to feel dissatisfied with yourself, I’m going to say, incomplete, experiencing an emptiness that it’s up to you to fill by virtue of your practice of your will. You see?

Now since you have forgotten that you got a divorce from your Father and are a holy Son or Daughter of God whose attempting to function independently as an entity in his or her own right, you don’t know that the solution to coming back into your wholeness—into the experience of your holiness—can only be accomplished by the abandonment of your attempt to improve yourself, by yourself, using the skills you think you have obtained from natural physical evolution. And so you are not in a position to make a shift of intent and establish or bring into play a new practice that is the opposite of trying to be a success in your own right.

Now part of the dynamic of all of this is that you are led to the conclusion that if you do not accomplish this success, you will indeed be a failure with nothing to stand you in good stead as a valuable and valid being. And so it becomes an engrained part of your psyche to persist in the attempt to be independently successful.

Now because of this emptiness that everyone is trying to overcome by being successful, you are led to believe that success is not assured, that in effect, it’s like the brass ring on a merry-go-round which you have the opportunity to get as you circle around on the merry-go-round. And there are many rings. They are silver in color but every now and then there’s a gold one and somebody else may get to the gold ring before you. And you are frustrated with having to wait until you come around to the rings so that you might, perchance, have the brass ring next.

And so you’re kept in a constant state of uneasy suspension. And what does it do? [chuckle] It causes you to sit on the horse on the merry-go-round with intensity trying to get the merry-go-round to go faster, if you could, to get your horse to the rings before someone else of which of course, is impossible. But nevertheless, you fill yourself with the intensity of trying to make something happen that cannot happen.

This is hell. This is not your Birthright. This is not the way you are to exist.

Now what's the answer? [laughs] The answer is to get off the horse and get off the merry-go-round! Going for the brass ring, going for success that isn't naturally yours, is an artificial goal—an attempt to do something that existence isn't requiring of you, that your very being isn't requiring of you.

Now let's say, in a lifetime you have the opportunity to go around the merry-go-round five thousand times and at the end of the five thousandth turn you still haven't got the brass ring, that the likelihood, and even if you do get a brass ring, it won't forever be the end-all of your success. It will tarnish as the success becomes old, familiar, not bouncing with the inspiration that it had initially. You see? And you'll want to get back on the merry-go-round and go for another brass ring.

Now if you go through the five thousand rounds and don't get the brass ring and this lifetime is over, you would say you were a failure. And in fact, avoiding failure is the whole reason you're on the merry-go-round and going for the brass ring.

Oh, I know . . . you've been taught the non-religious terminology that says that you are here to accomplish great things, "that whatever you can think of you can do!" And that is said as an encouragement, a validation of your attempting to do what you've thought, or express the idea that you've had and bring it into manifestation. You've been taught. You've been taught to avoid sin, which was just merely your emptiness, in order to fill it with success that wasn't yours but you can make it yours and it will make a permanent indelible statement about you and your validity when the practical fact is that it won't. It will only be temporary.

Is that the kind of success you want? Is that what you call success?

Now let's say that you fail by the four hundredth time that you've gone around. Let's just say that you've done everything you could do and nothing has worked out in this lifetime. And you have failed. And everything that the word, "failure" connotes about you, you are embracing. You're worthless. You don't have what it takes. You never had what it took. You don't have the guts to follow through. Oh, you're afraid of success and that's why you're not bringing it into your experience!

All of this is mean-spirited crappy destructive thinking. Suggestions which you don't have to accept! It isn't true.

Now I have talked before about failure. And I have talked about it positively. And I need to bring it up again . . . because you know what? You're never going to succeed at being an independent free agent who can by virtue of his strength and his perseverance and his intelligence accomplish something truly meaningful and make your mark upon the world.

These are the things that sink in when you actually fail and you suffer from what it means about you.

Now many of you have arrived at this point of failure—abject failure and despondency. And you have given up. And those are the key words: You have given up!

Now first I'm going to point out that if you arrive at that point and you don't give up, you just sogg in the failure and you get angry about it and bitter, and you won't let go of your bitterness, it means you haven't let go of the belief, the confidence that if you had what it took you could do it and therefore, life is unfair and it's against you. You see? But the intent to follow through, the wish to follow through is still there. And so you haven't given up. And when you haven't given up you suffer. You continue to suffer the emptiness that you were trying to escape by becoming something at your own hand.

And so I'll say, you've missed the point. You've missed the gift inherent in the failure because as I started to say, many of you have failed and you have given up. You have abandoned the wish to succeed. You have abandoned all of the supporting concepts that led you to believe that you could accomplish the goal. And you've let yourself be in the void without anger, frustration, bitterness, and all of the other things that block you from your experience of fulfillment.

And "God Moved" you would say. "God Moved in my life." Or one might say, "The Universe was on my side. I had discovered there's something innately beautiful about Being . . . about life. There is something I am aware of about life that I was never aware of before. And that is, that it is self-fulfilling . . . self-fulfilling because when I failed and I gave up, my situation turned around. And I became successful, but not the way I had tried to in the past. I became successful because I was blessed when I was a failure."

The Blessing is called "Grace." When you fail at your attempt to be an independent agent—an independent success—and you give up, you let yourself be a failure without fussing about it and you allow yourself to be in the Void in your peace, Grace registers with you.

Now when you got the divorce from your Father, the event was called, "The Fall from Grace"¹ wasn't it. The Fall from Grace. What caused the Fall from Grace? not that Grace was not extended to you, but you got a divorce from the Source of Grace and you said "I want to exist and operate and function independent of Grace because of course, if I let Grace bless me, I won't be able to take credit for it and I will not be able to prove that I am a real presence—a real entity in my own right. So the last thing I want is the experience of Grace.”

So what do you do?

If you want to experience success, which I'm going to define as fulfillment—the experience of wholeness that is present and abides in you as You when you're not being self-assertive—how do you access that?

You access it by giving up. And the thing is you don't have to wait until the end of a lifetime to give up. And you don't even have to wait for a crisis to occur to prove to you your incapacity to be in charge so that you might [snaps fingers] get the idea and go ahead and fail and give up the attempt to do otherwise. You see?

You can do this at any time. It is, in a way, harder because it requires more self-discipline. It requires more self-discipline when a crisis isn't providing the discipline. You see?

But you don't have to wait for the crisis of failure to bring discipline into play and do the two-step. Fail now. When you find yourself irritated because something occurring in your day is taking your attention away from what you need to attend to in order to become successful, when you feel that tension, you know that you are engaged in a process of failure. Why? Because you haven't given up the independent attempt to become successful and fulfill what you believe is your talent or your gift or your reason for being here. You see?

If there is something that can come up in your day that can irritate you because it's standing in the way of your doing what you want or need to do, you may know that you are engaged in . . . what? Willfulness. You are engaged in that which blocks the experience of fulfillment, which will certainly be identifiable as success, but not personal success. Rather it's the success that blesses you and everyone around you, because you chose to fit in with the Movement of fulfillment rather than creating it all by yourself. And that's the difference.

Failure does not mean that you will never have your good. The value and meaning of failure is actually you abandoning your personal private intent, which as I said to someone the other day, blocks you from the inspiration that illuminates and uncovers what works.

It's simple. It's very practical. But as I said, you're conditioned religiously or otherwise to opt for excellence, but excellence at your own hand, excellence that you are supposedly capable of achieving because if you can think it, you can do it! You see?

Even at Disneyland the youngsters are imbued with the idea of imagineering. You see? Imagineering! Being consciously creative and bringing forth excellence. But you know what? If you stop and think about it, if you are willing to look honestly, I will say, at the world scene, you will find that those individuals who made contributions that were truly life changing, truly meaningful and beneficial to all, they didn't, and they will tell you this, they didn't figure it out for themselves—it dawned on them.

Now if you want to be successful, you've got to be in that mental frame of mind where dawning can occur. And if you're not, you're on a wild goose chase, which sooner or later will lead you to the point where you have failed at what you thought you knew you were supposed to be and do and give up, so that you're in that Void with nothing but attentiveness, so that meaningful fulfillment of your Being and fulfillment in the world and universe, or I'm going to say the Kingdom of Heaven, can dawn on you and you can flow with It and give expression to It, and have without strings and without the potential for loss, the very things that you wanted to go for on your own, independently.

This is very important to understand.

Now there's another thing: I mentioned last week, "the wages of sin is death," the result of attempting to accomplish something and become something in your own right without God being in the picture introduces sin, disease and death into your experience. The divorce from your Father, the separation from your Father brings not only fear and guilt, but sin, sickness and death into the picture.

So, when I said last week, as the Course expressed it, sin doesn't exist and punishment of sin is what seems to cause it to exist or makes it easy for you to believe that it exists as something actual, it can be very easy for the ego to suggest to you that you have just heard from a holy book or a holy teacher that sin does not exist and punishment cannot secure it and that if sin does not exist punishment is unnecessary. And one must be very careful, because sin may not exist as an actuality but it seems to exist as a belief that you're validating. And that is a mistake. And just because sin isn't real and therefore, there's nothing to punish, it doesn't mean that *the mistake doesn't need to be corrected.

As it was pointed out last time, mistakes are there to be corrected, mistakes are there for correction. Sin can't be corrected, but sin is a mistake and the mistake can be corrected, therefore, one must get busy correcting the mistake!

Now, sin may not be real, your attempt to determine what everything is without sharing the Father's Perspective not only causes the Kingdom of Heaven to begin to appear to be a physical world and universe that started with a "big bang" but it's also a world and universe in which sin, disease and death occur. And everyone who has gone to a funeral recently didn't have a good time. And the fact that a funeral was there to go to, means that something wasn't corrected! Because for life, truth and love, the constituting nature of the Kingdom of Heaven to be experienced as sin, sickness and death, pain, suffering and so on, that isn't anything to be complacent about.

That's nothing to say that, "Well, sin isn't real and therefore there is no punishment . . . Hell, maybe there isn't punishment for sins." But there is suffering from the misunderstanding of what you're experiencing. You are experiencing the Kingdom of Heaven and you are a Son or Daughter of God experiencing It. Anything else that you are seeing or believing is a mistake. It's a misperception, and the misperception needs to be corrected.

And when the misperception is corrected, when you engage in the two-step, when you refer to the Father to find out what the truth is and then defer to the Father as to what the truth is you will find a physical world and universe transforming in front of your eyes, as the scales fall from your eyes, as the misperceptions fall away from your vision, and you will see the Kingdom of Heaven. And there will be no funeral you went to last week. And there will never be a funeral to go to again. You see?

You must be careful, because the ego would have you "learn" that sin is unreal and therefore, there can be no real punishment for it, that sin and punishment work together to apparently establish the reality of something that doesn't exist. And you need escape from it.

And so you do need to be diligent. But why not be? Why not go through your day paying attention so that when you feel that something is getting in your way, getting in the way of something important that has to do with the establishment of your credibility, you can say, "Whoa," you see the red flag going up and you say, "Uh-uh, I'm going to purposely willingly fail at this right now, because whatever excellence might come through me, will only come through me when I become silent and curious and attentive where inspiration dawns."

And you can do that all day long. And unless you want to wait for a crisis to come along to be the discipline you need to actually do that, you can do it voluntarily without the stress of the crisis even though you will have to engage in the labor of conscious self-discipline so that you say, “No! I refuse to take another step in the direction of accomplishing something all by myself, with an addiction promoting it, that doesn’t actually allow me to experience the inspiration necessary to the fulfillment I know it’s my Birthright to be experiencing, in which I know is present to be experienced. So I’m going to stop doing what blocks it, even though what I’m stopping is what I thought was going to create it. Very important!

Now I know this makes sense in a way it’s utterly uncomplicated. But I’ve got to come back to this: You’ve been taught to value your capacity to be an independent creator through the use of your mind, which most of you think is somewhere in your skull. And so to abandon the very things that you have been taught will, through your careful practice of them, secure your success and even your wholeness—completeness, when you learn and you are willing to accept the fact that it won’t and it hasn’t, the light can dawn in you that inspires you to let go, that inspires you to listen more than speak, to be receptive rather than assertive.

Right now Paul is being receptive and he is engaged in activity. And although you cannot see it tonight his hands are moving, his body is moving and as you know his lips are moving. But what’s happening is not a calculated action meant to impress anyone with Paul’s personal capacity, because Paul isn’t on his mind, being in the Movement is. And when one is being in the Movement, one’s being is meaningful, but it isn’t capable of an egotistical self-appreciation.

If you want meaningful fulfillment, yield to it, rather than trying to create it. And for all practical purposes be willing to yield to it right in the arena where you have been attempting to create it yourself. You say, “What is the truth here? Aside from the way I’ve been looking at it, what is the truth here? Is this needed or not? Is that needed or not? Is this appropriate or not?”

Big question: “How does this fit into a larger picture? How does this fit into the context of the Kingdom of Heaven and the blessing of everything in It?”

Because every single thing in the Kingdom of Heaven blesses every single other thing in the Kingdom of Heaven. You see?

So I’m encouraging you tonight to not be afraid to fail, and in fact to invite failure, to engage in it so that you can be in that place where the dawning of inspiration can occur because you’re not introducing any static where it will appear. But at the same time, let’s not be so impractical about the nonexistence of sin and therefore, the fact that punishment is meaningless. Let's not use that as a means of avoiding the correction that is manifesting as you in a lifetime with birth and a death and sin, disease and death . . . yes? Let's get down to the business of having the correction.

How do you do that? You've got to do the two-step. You've got to shut up, which means silence your will, silence your intensity, silence the intent you have arrived at through your own thinking so that you might listen and hear what it is in you specifically that needs to be abandoned. “What is the belief? What is the intent behind the thought that's governing me?” You see? Do it!

It's the way out of sin, disease and death. It's the means of Awakening. It will take diligence. It will be laborious whether crisis is the discipline needed or that you've waited for, or whether it's the willing abandonment of your attempt to do it all by yourself, whatever it might be. It's going to take effort. But it's going to remove the futility that you've been experiencing. And I mean it! It will remove the futility of failing but not giving up, and therefore not having.

Again, . . . simplicity. I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 8th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We've been talking about the holy instant, the practice of the two step. And I've been discussing it with everyone in rather imperative terms: the necessity to practice it, the necessity to practice it with diligence and commitment. And the fact that without its practice, Awakening will not occur. I've also discussed the fact that it is fundamentally simple.

Now there is something else inseparable from the practice of the holy instant that is necessary to be brought into play in order for the practice of the holy instant to be successful: And that is, the engagement in relationship, the engagement in a holy relationship.

And once again, to make it clear, the simplicity of it is, that a holy relationship is a relationship you engage in with a Brother or Sister while you are joined with the Holy Spirit and are gathering your understanding of what's involved in the relationship not from your Brother or Sister, but from the Holy Spirit, and from that engagement with the Holy Spirit, being involved with your Brother or Sister.

This practice brings the integrity, the balance, the stability characteristic of the Holy Spirit's Perspective into every part of your relationship with your Brother or Sister, causing the relationship to always bless, to always enhance, to always fulfill.

Now what does this mean?

In very practical terms, what does this mean? And I'll share a little illustration: A four-year old is given a puzzle by his parents . . . one of those puzzles which, when you have assembled it, has a picture on the front and the back. And this puzzle has a simple line drawing of a person, of a human being on one side and on the other side it has a picture of the world.

And they give this puzzle to their boy who takes it with glee and sits down and the parents go on to attend to other things imagining that it will take quite a while. But within minutes the child comes running in, “See...see...see what I’ve done!” And they look at it and indeed, it’s perfect. And they said, “How did you do it?” And he said, “It’s easy. When I have my man right, I have my world right.”

Now this is really fundamental point, which I’m going to translate a little, so that it says, when you have your relationships right, you have your world right!

Now, whew! Right now your world is for all practical purposes, in a mess, such a mess that it is causing disturbance as well as inspiration to come forth. But at the moment, the inspiration isn’t matching the disturbance and balancing it out or replacing it with solutions.

Now you also—most of you—are familiar with the fact that on December 21st of this year the Mayan Calendar runs out. It obviously indicates a threshold of some sort. And the threshold will not be one of Armageddon or destruction or the end of everything.

Now being aware of this, you are probably looking at the scene and saying, “How can this possibly happen? How can Awakening possibly occur? How can a major constructive threshold be passed over where the world is different in that short amount of time?” And the very fact that you might wonder about that indicates you don’t understand where you fit into the picture.

Are you waiting for this event to happen to you and for you? Are you waiting for the change to overtake everyone? Or do you recognize the fact that you have to be the change. And do you recognize that the practice of the holy instant in the context of a holy relationship is the means for bringing about the change and being the change yourself?

Now this is very important to understand because you know what?

Relationships are messy. Relationships are difficult. Relationships require attention and commitment. And you know what? If the world attempts to solve its problems by the manipulation of externals such as banking procedures and the operation of businesses and investments and so on, I promise you that the result will be very uncomfortable. Because you cannot afford to change the externals without having first established clearly in your life, a relationship or relationships which constitute the context in which the conduct of business and social change have to occur. Because if relationships are not the bottom line, the basis upon which everything else is done, everything else that will be done will lack humanity!

Now if you want to see significant change in the world, especially by the end of this year, you're going to have to invest your attention in relationships that are time-consuming, messy, demanding, and which put you on the threshold of desiring to know the solution—desiring to know what will identify fulfillment, what will bless the family of man. And you start with your family.

“Oh, but if I have to take the kind of time it takes to bless my relationship, I won't have time to create my success which will bless my family!”

You see? It's sneaky and because it isn't true and the end result that you're expecting to arrive at can't be arrived at, you will not have the fulfillment, you will not have the blessing.

You cannot achieve success on your own in a relationship.

If you're going to have success that will transform the world with a blessing, you must seek your success for your relationship—for the one or ones you are in relationship with. And because you love those you are in relationship with, everything you direct toward them will be humane. Because in your love for the ones you are in relationship with, you know that humanity—humaneness—is the bottom line of what makes life meaningful.

This is why you must join in a holy relationship in order to Wake up.

And if you don't think Waking up is going to mean transformation in your world, then you don't understand what the transformation is about and you don't understand where you fit into it or that you have a part to play. You see?

You want change. If you want change, you've got to be the change. If you're going to be the change, you're going to have to be willing to *be in a new way.

And so, individuals are not going to be able to run off after their success to bless their partner without being involved with your partner first, so that there is communication, brotherly love, harmony between you and a conscious awareness that everything you do must be for the benefit of family—of relationships.

Then things will not be allowed by governments that don't reflect that humaneness. Because you won't be so busy looking after your success in the world to notice that the world is reflecting the fact that everyone else is going after success, having abandoned the relationships they're in. And having lost the fact that what means something to a relationship consciously held in mind as decisions are made, will cause the decisions to embody humanity. You see?

You don't have time to neglect your relationships. And you don't have time to neglect the practice of the two-step and the holy instant so that you are joining with your partner—those you are in relationship with—joined with the Universal Wisdom, God's Perspective provided by means of the Holy Spirit. You see?

It's very important!

Now in relationships, what is the factor that provides the Guidance as to how to ensure that humanity prevails? What it is, is need. What is your Brother's need? You will not necessarily recognize what your Brother's need is if you're having a surface, cursory sort of relationship where you haven't taken the time to care enough to be present with the one you're in relationship with so that you, in enquiring of the Holy Spirit as to what is needed, hear what is needed and know what to share and to extend and to embody in the relationship.

Do you see how important it is? You cannot just run around practicing the holy instant, doing the two-step to know what the truth is about a whole bunch of different things in the universe. That's not enough. That's not the focus. Yes, you do want to be able to recognize the more of what God is Being in everything you're seeing. But the bottom-line motivation is to abandon independence, to abandon self-seeking, to abandon the search for success at the cost of your Brother's good or wealth or health or at the cost of your relationship with your partner and your family.

It's that black and white. But because it's that black and white, the solution is that black and white—that simple to be able to grasp. And so it points you in the direction of success but it points you also in the direction of involvement, involvement that perhaps you don't want because you're still too selfish. You're still intent upon engaging in carrying out your ancestors' concepts of success, your father's concept of how to achieve success in the world, which in all likelihood doesn't allow for your relationships to govern—that the needs in your relationships must govern how you seek success. You see?

Now you do not want to bring forward your ancestor's beliefs and concepts. You want, as we have been discussing, to practice and engage in the two-step and the holy instant, where you are enquiring of God, "What is the truth?" constantly. Why? Because you've let love be more important than the acquiring of wealth or success in the world. So that the love, which is the bottom line for you, imbues your actions in the world with that which secures humanity, secures humaneness.

Now the world is at a threshold. The world is in transition. And the temptation is to say that better control is needed over externals and that you don't have time to pay attention to what simple needs are, so that the steps taken to secure stability in the world arise out of the conscious intent to meet simple human needs.

What is done in the world is done for mankind, is done for the relationships everyone is in. And if not . . . if that is not what the various countries in the world embody within themselves and with each other, if everyone globally does not pay attention to the simple bottom line values of being human and being alive and forcing everything else to conform to the meeting of the needs of humanity for humaneness, then you're going to be faced with an even greater demand to do it. You're not going to be able to get out of it.

It's time, you might say, to grow up! It's time for mankind to grow up and not do great and grand things way out above and beyond the meeting of simple human needs and the valuing of simple, I'm going to say, human life. Because you know what? Simple human life—which there are many false beliefs about—is the Sons and Daughters of God exhibiting and embodying the Father's Will. And the whole picture of this is called the Kingdom of Heaven, and at the level individuality, it's called the Sons and Daughters of God.

Now if you're not looking where human need is apparent, and if you're not letting human need call forth in you a determination to act only in ways that meet the human need and bless everyone, . . .

(I'm sorry this is me, Paul, I lost it there)

. . . then you will have missed a point, you will have missed something you didn't need to miss.

If however, you take hold of the situation now in every exchange in your day, every involvement with another which constitutes a relationship, if you take hold of it now and you refuse to engage in anything but that which enhances the human condition—because you love—then you will be agents for change because you will withdraw your commitment to the general mistake that says there's something more important than loving your neighbor as yourself, than taking the time to engage by deciding that it's more important to love your Brother or Sister instead of seeking the egotistical high that comes from the manipulation of things in the world to give you credibility and to give you wealth that means nothing because it doesn't relate to the human need and the generation of it didn't arise out of human need and the valuing of the meeting of that human need.

I will tell you something: There are governments . . . and those governments are often engaged in actions that have been determined by individuals who have lost touch with human need and the meeting of human need for the family of man. But it doesn't matter because there are more of you in the world who can determine your use of your mind than there are those who choose to govern you inappropriately. Do not forget that.

And your daily practice of the holy instant and your commitment to daring to be involved in the messiness of relationships with your fellowman, you will be withdrawing your investment of faith and involvement in the general mistaken perceptions, and the mutual agreements will weaken because of your withdrawal. And because of the new input that you are introducing because you've dared to say, "Father, what is the truth here?" Not just, "Father what is the truth here and here and here," but, "Father, what is the truth here in my relationship with those I'm involved with everyday?"

A ground swell of love and the insistence upon embodying and enacting in the world that which meets the human need and blesses without cursing in anyway, this is the way you be the change, this is the way you get your man right so that your world is right. Don't let the belief or the idea that being involved with your Brother or Sister and letting your relationship and its fulfillment in humaneness be primary . . . don't you be mislead into thinking that doing that is going to destroy your chances to be successful in the world and therefore, constitute an activity that you should not engage in because it will ruin your chances to be great! It's the Brotherhood, it's the *Family of man that is supposed to be great, because everything about it has embodied the truth.

Now, you could say that what I'm saying tonight is a call to action, one in which humanity and Brotherly love actually take the forefront and actually become the basis from which you do everything else.

Awakening to the Kingdom of Heaven that you are in and you are misperceiving because your attention is being given in the wrong place, will be uncovered through the practice of the holy instant in the context of a holy relationship.

I'm going to say it again, simply: The answer to the world's problems in all of the various forms it is appearing, lies in the shift of attention and intention from the generating of wealth to the embodiment of love so that one's actions cause everything to shift into a more harmonious and holy manifestation.

It's time to reboot relationships. It's time to turn off the operating systems which have been developed by means of mutual agreements between Sons and Daughters of God who think they're only human beings, where love does not seem to be natural, but competition does and succeeding at the cost of another does.

Again, this is the good news. When you shut up, when you turn off the operating system that is operating now, which not only was built on false foundations but has degraded in its extensive use, without being refreshed and then you say—not to your fellowman so you can set up new mutual agreements—but you say, “Father, what is the truth here?” you are rebooting with a new operating system, which is an ancient operating system, since the beginning. And it’s the answer.

Pay attention to your needs, pay attention to your partners’ needs, pay attention to your families’ needs. And don’t say you’re too busy for them, because in attending to them you will, as I’ve said, lay the groundwork for the uncovering of the Kingdom of Heaven and the holy Sons and Daughters of God that you Are. And things will actually be different.

Now I love you all and I encourage you not to take the challenge because I’m not making a challenge for you to take, but take the opportunity to do the one thing that will make a difference and the one thing that will not take time.

One with God is a majority! I love you all and I look forward to being with you next time.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 16th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, how did things go this past week? Were you willing to get involved in your relationships? Were you willing to let the messiness, the time-consuming involvement that happens when you're involved in a relationship? Did you let them happen without resistance? Did you let them happen without resentment?

Were some of you surprised to find just how much conditioned resistance you were holding within yourselves that not only kept you from accomplishing your goal easily, but illuminated to you that, let's say, for the past year or two, for some time you have actually prohibited full and meaningful involvement because these conditioned resistances were in play the whole time and you hadn't noticed—mainly because you weren't trying to establish or confirm the relationship you were in?

It's not necessarily an easy thing to look at and acknowledge. And especially because of the conditioning that you've been embodying, you have not been the kind and wonderful person you thought you had been being. Simply because you were not being unkind [chuckles] even though you weren't being kind on purpose, you weren't being kind by virtue of actual involvement. You weren't being kind by virtue of taking the time to sense into what your partner or your children or your friends were experiencing. You see?

You inhibit Meaning by being in a relationship independently. In other words, when you're being in a relationship but acting as though you're not because your attention is primarily on yourself and the things you think you need to accomplish, and your attention is not on the ones you're in relationship with so that they become a part of the context in which you engage in your activities which can be independent but don't need to be. And taking it a step further, need not to be because if the independence is enforced, humaneness—humanity—goes out the window. Which means kindness goes out the window.

Now if you've had difficulty, it means change is called for . . . change on your part. The practice of this wonderful thing called the holy instant, which now might not appear to be such a wonderful thing because it's going to involve labor, it's going to involve commitment, it's going to involve determination to be sensitive which hasn't been your habit. To be present with the one you're with, even though it hasn't been your habit.

To care, initiating care, which it hasn't been your habit to do, and which hasn't bothered you because even though that has been absent, you have not been unkind, you have not behaved in a harmful way. Anyone observing you with your partner would say, "It must be wonderful for your partner to be in relationship with you," even though your partner knows that you haven't been present with him or her for quite a long time.

Oh yeah, you've been physically present, but you haven't been mentally present. You haven't been caring. Caring means putting someone else first. Caring means expressing kindness, thoughtfulness, love, attention to someone without their asking for it—providing it because it emerges from you as your valuing.

When you're doing that, your partner, the one you're in relationship with, knows you're present . . . feels not alone. You see? And this is what is called for. The change of behavior is called for.

That is essential to Awakening. That is the call for every single one who is not Awake now. And it's a call for actual response. It's a call for you to engage in enacting affection, love, attention, presence. Not you distracted by a thousand things going on in your mind, but presence. You know that you recognize and value presence when someone else is being present with you.

It's an experience of wholeness. It's what you would call a genuine not artificial experience. And it hints of Home. It hints of being Awake. It hints of being once again in your right Mind, therefore constituting an improved experience of Being for you. It is the green light that allows the Movement of Awakening to proceed. And it will proceed when it isn't objected to, when it isn't resisted. It's the Movement of Creation and it moves because it's the Movement of Creation.

As you unblock that Movement, by changing your habit—by abandoning your habit and caring—it does something miraculous: It causes the scales to fall from your eyes. It causes the mutual agreements that have blinded you to fall away from your grasp. It allows you to let go of them so that they will of their own dead weight, fall away from you. And the material world and universe gives way to the Kingdom of Heaven. Not one thing disappearing and being replaced by something entirely different, but the misperceptions of the one and only thing going on—the Kingdom of Heaven—falls away, dissolves. And what is left is everything you've been seeing without the distortion, without the misunderstanding. You see?

The practice of the two-step, the holy instant, is imperative. And that it be practiced in the context of wanting to know the truth about someone other than yourself, wanting to know what there is about your someone else that makes him or her the most significant factor in your Awakening and is the most significant factor in the realization of truth—of what is Real—and being freed from the bondage of sin. Which simply means, being freed from the bondage of the attempt to do something that you can't accomplish with such commitment that you will never abandon the attempt. You see? Becoming free of that is your Birthright. Becoming free of that is necessary in order for all the misery, all of the sin, disease and death that you encounter to disappear, never to haunt you again.

Now going into the book, you will note that I am not reading in the Sparkly book a paragraph and about two or three lines. It is on purpose. It is imagery that I used with Helen when I was dictating the Course to her, which had meaning to her and to her alone. So we ended up last week with this:

What, then, is sin? What could it be but a mistake you would keep hidden; . .

. . . the mistake being, that you want to be divorced from the Father. You want to keep that hidden because you want to forget that you got a divorce from the Father because it's imperative that you be an orphan who can pull himself up by his bootstraps and become something Real without a Father. You see? So you must keep it hidden or the jig is up! [chuckles] You have no cause to fight for because you've let yourself become conscious of the fact that you're doing something impossible and that you do indeed have a Father and therefore, you have a Birthright—a divine Birthright—a Birthright of wholeness because all that the Father is He has expressed in You as in all of Creation. You see? So you don't need to try to become something on your own. So:

What could it be but a mistake you would keep hidden; a call for help that you would keep unheard and thus unanswered? In time, the Holy Spirit clearly sees the Son of God can make mistakes.

[repeats] In time the Son of God can make mistakes.

On this you share His vision. Yet you do not share His recognition of the difference between time and eternity. And when correction is completed, time IS eternity.

Just as when correction is completed, the physical universe IS the Kingdom of Heaven without any of the impediments accompanying the physical universe. You see? Now that's where we ended last time. And now a paragraph and two or three lines further, we continue . . .

This One . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . can teach you how to look on time differently and see BEYOND it, but not while you believe in sin.

Why? Because sin is you not listening to the Holy Spirit. Sin is you not having a relationship with the Holy Spirit. Sin is you not having a relationship with the Father. As a result, there can be no communication of truth that would relieve you of your ignorance and inspire you with the truth about yourself.

This One . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . can teach you how to look on time differently and see BEYOND it, but not while you believe in sin. In error, yes, for this can be corrected by the mind. But sin is the belief that your perception . . .

. . . your wonderful, imaginative perception . . .

. . . is unchangeable.

Why? Because you've made it unchangeable. It's got to be unchangeable so you have something solid to move toward, to accomplish, which is an impossibility, but you've got to make it solid to make it worthwhile going for it. And then, you develop a commitment to it and then you look at your experience while you're ignorant and you feel the fear and the guilt that is ever present with it, and you know that you must compulsively "go for the goal!"

How do you do that? As I said last week, you do it by believing that you will die if you don't! And that's enough to frighten you into addiction to the goal. And it's all fantasy. It's all bullshit! It's all nonsense.

And so I say it this way over and over. I say it in many ways over and over so that it will not be as foreign an idea to you. And it will be easier for you to embrace and explore the possibility of, with determination, with commitment.

Making commitment to the truth about yourself cannot become an addiction. It's very simple. It is sanity, it is stability, it is groundedness embraced and embodied more and more consistently. And that constitutes the return of sanity—not the loss of sanity in uncompromisable addiction.

[But] sin is the belief that your perception is unchangeable, . .

. . . by virtue of your very own edict . . .

. . . and that the mind must accept as true what it is told through it . . .

. . . what it is told through your perceptions.

And if it does not obey, the mind is judged insane.

Even though addiction to accomplishing the impossible is what is insane.

The only power which could change perception . . .

. . . meaning the Holy Spirit, meaning that which is nothing more than your right Mind . . .

. . . is thus kept impotent, held to the body by the FEAR of changed perception which its Teacher . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . Who is one with it, would bring. When you are tempted to believe that sin is real, . .

. . . well, wait a minute . . . why would you be tempted to believe that sin is real? Wow, because it's going to bring you this grand prize of independent, self-established, self-worth and reality. That's why you would be tempted to believe that sin is real and you made up the criteria!

When you are tempted to believe that sin is real, . .

... like every day ...

... remember this: . .

... not only like every day, but like in every involvement with your partner, in every relationship you have with a Brother or Sister, . .

... remember this: If sin is real, both God and you are not.

Look at it. You get a divorce from your Father. You say, “Father, I’m going to ignore you and I’m going to give my full attention to every single thought I have and every single meaning I apply to everything and every single discovery that I have come upon all by myself. And what happens? God, as a Reality disappears from your experience. You, as the Son of God or Daughter of God disappears from your experience. And what you’re left with is an imaginary self which you are expending every last ounce of energy in trying to make Real.

So God and you—the Son of God or Daughter of God that you Are—cannot be Real to you when you are committed to the unreal imaginary self you have created and committed yourself to. That’s what that means.

If creation is extension, the Creator must have extended Himself, and it is impossible that what is part of Him is totally unlike the rest.

God is, what would you say, cohesive. God is integrated. God is inseparable.

If sin is real, God must be at war with Himself. He must be split, and torn between good and evil; partly sane and partially insane. For He must have created what wills to destroy Him, and has the POWER to do so.

Fantastic imagination, isn’t it?

It is not easier to believe that YOU have been mistaken than to believe in this?

I know by this time, after having come this far through the Course with me, it is easier to believe you have been mistaken than to believe that the impossible has occurred.

Until you make commitment to embracing the truth about you as being the holy Son or Daughter of God, you have work to do. You have a habit to break. You have a new behavior to bring into play. You are faced with change that can only occur at your own hand.

Now the human condition: Your human existence is an example of being in a world created by your own hand. At your own hand you have decided to ignore the truth—to be insane. No one is going to come along and undo what your hand has done because no one has access to that ability. You will have to come back Home at your own hand, by your own decision, by your own commitment, by putting everything about you behind the endeavor to remember who you are by asking God or the Holy Spirit to reveal it to you.

While you believe that your reality or your brother's is bounded by a body, you will believe in sin.

And I'm going to say it the other way around: While you believe in sin you will believe that your reality and your Brother's is bounded by a body.

While you believe that bodies can unite, you will find guilt attractive, . .

. . . Oh-h . . . because it gives you such great control . . .

. . . and believe that sin is precious. For the belief that bodies limit mind leads to a perception of the world in which the proof of separation seems to be everywhere.

Now don't let this be complicated. It's a very important fact to understand, that before you said, "Father, I want to do things my way, I want a divorce," before that, the experience of Being was the infinite experience of the Kingdom of Heaven, the experience that all the Father Sees and Knows and Be's because you're introducing nothing foreign to it—into the picture. Here in this state of mind, the substance of everything is not matter it is Spirit. It is the energy of Spirit. It is the substance of Love, because Life, Truth and Love are the tools the Father has to work with in expressing Himself.

Now there was no experience of separation even though there was the experience of infinity, and I mean by that, infinite expression, God, I will say, infinitely Individualized, infinitely expressed. But the infinity of Expression implied in no way separation, difference, because since you were not holding yourself separate and apart from the experience of the Mind of God that God placed in you, you experienced the Oneness of your Mind as the context in which the Oneness of infinite Expression actually exists.

And so, infinite Expression did not constitute a means of separating and seeing things distinctly different from each other in the sense of in any way being at odds with each other and therefore, in any way calling for defense or self-protection.

Now this is important. When you said, “Father, I would rather do things my way. I am going to get a divorce. I am going to ignore you completely and devote myself to my own mind,” when you said that, and as we’ve said before, fear and guilt came into the picture and the apparent call for defense swept over the infinite view of the Kingdom of Heaven that had heretofore been undivided, you saw for the first time, differentness, distinctness that constituted foreignness. And the substance of Spirit that constituted the Kingdom of Heaven became to you the substance called matter, capable of decay, death, injury, all things that one needs to protect himself against.

And so the very nature of the Kingdom of Heaven didn’t actually change but became a misperception in your mind. And thus your body became something that made you distinct over and against your Brother or your Sister. You see? And the substance of that body was no longer divine, being the substance of capital “S” Spirit, but matter, capable of injury, capable of decay, capable of dying. You see?

As a result, you could come up with the idea that you believe that bodies could unite, because of course, they’re separate and yet they can unite for opposing reasons. They can unite to bless or they can unite to harm or even kill. You see?

What the body is, as it was misperceived, as it is still misperceived, is a suffering experience brought about through a malicious thought, “Father, I don’t want to see things Your way,” except it was, “Father, I want to use the creative capacities you have instilled in me to do whatever in the hell I want to do.” And indeed, [chuckles] hell is what you created, hell is what you’re experiencing.

So as long as this is your frame of mind . . .

. . . you will find guilt attractive, and . . .

. . . you will . . .

. . . believe that sin is precious.

For the belief that bodies limit mind, matter limits mind, and mind is just a matter of synapses, little electrical synapses that occur between pieces of meat in your head . . . quite, quite imaginative almost science “fiction-ee.”

. . . the belief that bodies limit mind leads to a perception of the world in which the proof of separation seems to be everywhere.

Whereas, before you got your divorce, the universe in no way implied or provided proof of separation anywhere.

And God and His creations seem to be split apart and overthrown. For sin would PROVE what God created holy could not prevail against it, nor remain itself before the power of sin.

You see? Impossible. And so it hasn't happened but everyone believes it has and everyone believes they can't truly be the Sons or Daughters of God and cannot regain the experience of their divine status. Oh-h! Because sin is proving that . . .

. . . what God created holy could not prevail against it, nor remain itself before the power of sin. Sin is perceived as MIGHTIER than God, . .

. . . but it's only apparently mightier than God when you've sniffed the last line of your drug of preference, which is, "I am somebody and I am going to prove it and I am not going to abandon the attempt for any reason." Again:

Sin is perceived as MIGHTIER than God, before which God Himself must bow, and offer His creation to its conqueror. Is this humility or madness?

Well it's wonderful that we can even ask that question and have it be fairly understood. Because until someone points out in an intelligent way to you that you are something different from what you believe you are, and manages to express it in a way that makes enough sense that you're willing to override your convictions as to what is true and what isn't, that is wonderful. It's wonderful to be able to say, "Is this humility or madness," and have you with fairly reasonable mental attitudes say, "I think it's madness," and really mean it. This is a wonderful forward step.

Now:

If sin were real, it would forever be beyond the hope of healing. For there would be a power beyond God's, capable of making another will which could attack His . . .

. . . God's . . .

. . . Will and OVERCOME It; and give His Son a will apart from His, . .

. . . God's . . .

. . . and STRONGER.

Again, I must remind you, the only thing that seems to make it stronger is the insane presence of energy that comes from the use of the drug of preference that gives an unreal experience of something that seems quite actual and fools you into not abandoning the use of the drug of choice. That's the only thing.

And each part of God's fragmented creation would have a different will, . .

. . . indeed, that is the way it seems to be isn't it? When you look at your Brother or Sister or mankind without joining with the Father first and looking at your Brother and Sister with His Perspective, it does indeed appear that mankind is lost in a web of willful contest that has lost the thirst for humanity, for humaneness, has lost the context in which to engage in the world, which is to do everything in terms of the meeting of human need.

And each part of God's fragmented creation would have a different will, opposed to His, and in eternal opposition to Him and to each other.

You see? But now you know that's not what you have to be bound to. Now you know that that was an illegitimate imposition upon the full conscious experience of your holiness.

Your holy relationship has, as its purpose now, the goal of proving this is impossible.

And that's why in addition to the practice of the two-step, the holy instant, in addition to that must be the acknowledgment of a holy relationship as being the one and only desirable element needing to be brought into play in order to facilitate and give impetus to the process of Awakening globally, like the falling of dominoes.

Your holy relationship has, as its purpose now, the goal of proving this is impossible. Heaven has smiled upon it, and the belief in sin has been uprooted in its smile of love. You see it still because you do not realize that its FOUNDATION has gone.

Why has its FOUNDATION gone? Because you're reluctant to pick up your drug of choice and you actually do have a desire to experience what the truth is when you're free of the effects of your drug of choice. And what is your drug of choice? It is the excitement of attempting to be something all by yourself without a Source.

You see it still because you do not realize that its FOUNDATION has gone.

Your commitment is not one hundred percent full anymore.

Its source has been removed, and so it can be cherished but a little while before it vanishes.

That's the promise. That's what the Movement does. And that's the Movement each of you is engaged in as you refuse to indulge in relationships out of habit—unconsciously—and you say instead, “Father, what is the truth here in my relationship? Father, help me to want to be sensitive, help me to want to be present with, without being distracted by the masturbation of my mind with irrelevant illusions and enjoying it. Let me know how to be present with my fellowman, with my partner. Share with me Your Experience of my partner, of my fellowman.”

Its source has been removed, and so it can be cherished but a little while before it vanishes. Only the habit of LOOKING for it still remains.

You look for it longingly, but there's not the resolve to attempt to create it or bring it to pass. And this may feel depressing as though you have lost purpose. But it's only the habit attracting you.

And yet you look . . .

. . . for it . . .

. . . you look with Heaven's smile upon your lips, and Heaven's blessing on your sight. You will not see it long.

The thing you're looking for.

For in the new perception, the mind corrects it when it seems to be seen, and it becomes invisible. And errors are quickly recognized and quickly given to correction, to be healed, not hidden.

You see? That's the Movement all of you are daring to engage in. And as I said, it's the Movement that precipitates Awakening. It's the Movement that precipitates the shift of perception from a material world and universe to the Kingdom of Heaven that you've actually been looking at and misinterpreting.

You will be healed of sin and all its ravages the instant that you give it no power over each other. And you will help each other overcome mistakes by joyously releasing one another from . . .

... what? . . .

. . . the belief in sin.

That's what I'm engaging in, releasing you from the belief in sin.

Now as I said in the beginning, you may have found this past week difficult. You may have found yourself having to bring attention that you didn't wish to bring, or an amount of attention that you didn't wish to bring—you would have been much more satisfied had you needed to bring less attention—but persist, because it's the threshold which the Course is facilitating and illuminating. And it's the fact that your decisions will illuminate by the transformation of your mind wherein you let the Father's Mind be in you, which is the only Mind there is to be in you.

Wow! Truth is wonderful. Be the place where it finds embodiment. Be the place where it finds expression. And don't let your belief that all your Brothers and Sisters are bodies with a piece of meat in their head that somehow causes consciousness to occur. Stop looking at them and assuming that they must just be the sum of all of their meaty experiences of being conscious, and that they're just habits and they can't help but be what they are because of what they went through as they grew up.

Don't let this definition of them, which appears to be real when you've forgotten that you're the holy Son of God and your Brothers and Sisters are the holy Sons and Daughters of God who are present to be discerned through God's eyes as what they truly Are—the visibility and tangibility of the Father's Will, the substance of which or of Whom is Spirit in every aspect and therefore, it is impossible for them to be conditioned responses stored in meat.

You are all the holy Sons and Daughters of God not bound, period!

I love you all and I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 23rd 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Before we continue, I want to share something: In the last few weeks I've been rather pushy regarding the practice of the holy instant—the practice of the two-step. And in some ways it might seem that I'm calling for everyone to engage in a formidable endeavor that might be impossible, or if you succeed once it might be impossible to have it happen again.

And I need to share with everyone something that I shared with Paul early on in our relationship shortly after we had had our first conversations. I pointed out to him—because even after the first conversation, it was sometimes difficult for him to engage again and have the experience—I explained to him that whenever he or anyone reaches out to their Guide or reaches out to the Holy Spirit or reaches out to the Father, there is always a response. One should never have the feeling that they are engaging in this activity all by themselves, overcoming something deeply engrained in them that it's almost impossible to get past.

And it's not true. The Holy Spirit and your Guide and indeed the Father, always have Their Eyes on you—always hold you in Their attention.

I've mentioned before that everyone's in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven, but they're not seeing It because their eyes are all squinched up and they're saying, "I cannot see the perfection." And in a way it's like all of you are sleeping on a grassy knoll . . . and I've shared this before.

And We watch. We are attentive for the first stirrings—for the first beginnings of your bringing your attention beyond the limits of the sleeping dream. And the moment any of you become restive or minimally attentive, we respond to help facilitate further Awakening.

You should always feel, or feel into the feeling of being attended to, of being paid attention to . . . of being embraced in an ever-present eternal Love which stands in support of your transforming consciousness.

You are Loved. And the minute any of you abandon your preoccupation with your dilemmas and reach beyond your present sense of things, you are responded to. Know this! So that as you engage in practicing the two-step and the holy instant, you might know, even though it's an intellectual knowing, that at the same time your Guide, the Holy Spirit, the Father, is intent on meeting you from the other side of whatever blocks the communication. Your attempt is never a solo attempt. Know this! Embrace it as a fact so that you might, when you reach out, Know that Something . . . Someone is reaching out to you with an Eternal Love devoted to you and your Waking up.

It's important to know this.

Now I share this because as we go into the book tonight, you'll see that it says:

In the holy instant, you will see the smile of Heaven shining on BOTH of you . . . ¹

. . . you and the one that you're in a holy relationship with. You and the one you have decided to use as the reason for your abandoning your definitions of him or her. You're abandoning his or her definitions of himself or herself. Reaching beyond the imaginary self that you have thought you were and you have thought they were with the intent of gathering your information about yourself and your Brother from a Source other than your puny little mind.

Now when you do that, and when you have the experience of the influx of inspiration, where you are seeing and experiencing the truth about your Brother or Sister, you feel the smile of Heaven. There's no other words for it.

Now very early on, shortly before Paul's first conversation with me, he had an experience that can best be called, "illumination." He was at a friend's house, the friend was rather wealthy and so the place she lived was very nice. And there was on the walls in the living room, beautiful flocked wallpaper. And all the appointments in the room were equally beautiful. And suddenly, it is as though all of the definitions he had embraced melted. Nothing happened to the room or anything in it. But his way of perceiving it changed.

Suddenly, he became aware that the walls and the wallpaper and everything else in the room was alive, in a state of, you might say, stationary flux because it was living but it was actively being the flocked wallpaper or actively being the furniture or actively being the space between him and the wallpaper or the furniture . . . that it was all living and the substance of it was Love. The substance of the wallpaper and the flocking and the design and everything else was Love. And everything was loving him. He was having a conscious experience of substance as Spirit, instead of matter.

Now I share this because you're likely to think when you say, "Father what is the truth here?" or "Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?" that you are going to get an intellectual explanation of it rather than an experience of it. And to help you broaden the context in which you listen for the answer to "what is the truth here?" I want you to consider that the answer will be an experience of Meaning, not an explanation.

If before Paul had this experience of illumination, he had said, "Father, what is the truth about this flocked wallpaper?" he might have expected an answer that would have to do with design and what the flocking was made out of and what developments had taken place that allowed for such beautiful workmanship and blah...blah...blah.

But the answer to "what is the truth about the wallpaper" was: It is living Love that is loving you.

Now the fact is that when Paul was having this experience, he found himself loving the wallpaper and loving everything else. So it was a circular give and take, you might say . . . a circular sharing of love.

Don't look for an explanation of truth about objects. "What is the truth about my partner? What is the truth about this child? What is the truth about this plant that is withering?" You see?

The truth is the Meaning . . . the Meaning.

If you look for an explanation you're likely to miss the answer as to what the truth is. You see? So don't be so sure that you know what the form of truth about anything will be. Except that I will tell you that it will always involve the experience of Meaning. Little did Paul know that the Meaning of the wallpaper or the Meaning of everything in the room was not only Love, but Love loving him, meaning that everything was conscious of him . . . not just an inanimate material substance, but an active exchange of living Love.

Who would've thunk . . . you see? Who would have thought that that might be the answer or the kind of answer one might get when one asks "What is the truth here?" You see?

The Father expresses Himself as infinite Meaning. And what you want is not an understanding of the meaning of something, like a definition, but you want the experience of the Meaning which you will have to add words to afterwards. You see? Because you've had the experience of the Meaning, you've had the experience of the truth. And in having the experience of the truth, you understand the wallpaper and you understand yourself. And you understand that the wallpaper and you are a Movement of Love expressed and acknowledging—the giving and the receiving. It is a wholeness and indeed, one could call it the smile of Heaven. So keep this in mind.

In the holy instant, you will see the smile . . .

. . . you will experience, feel the Meaning of . . .

. . . the smile of Heaven shining on BOTH of you. And you will shine upon each other, in glad acknowledgment of the grace that has been given you.

So first of all, when you're reaching out by means of the holy instant, you're not reaching out by yourself . . . at the same time, the Holy Spirit or your Guide is reaching out to you to, for lack of better words, complete the connection. It's a mutual endeavor.

For sin will not prevail against a union Heaven has smiled upon.

I promise you, in the experience of the smile of Heaven, in the experience of the substance of everything being Love, in the experience of it being the direct expression of God, there simply is no room for sin—for a desire to imagine what things really are all by yourself and make it up and make it be true—it simply is not there. The contest is over while it's happening. The need to pull yourself up by your own bootstraps is over because you're experiencing the Meaning. And again, I point this out, because if you are looking for an explanation, you will miss the Meaning.

If you don't miss the Meaning, you won't need an explanation and it will be left to you afterwards to find a way to explain it to someone else. You see how non-essential the explanation is? You want the experience that requires a new explanation or perhaps, none at all because your very Being communicates the Meaning to whomever you are with.

[For] sin will not prevail against a union Heaven has smiled upon. Your perception was healed in the holy instant Heaven gave you.

Paul's perception of the wallpaper was healed in the holy instant Heaven gave him.

There was another realization that occurred while Paul was having this experience. And that was, that if the walls of that beautiful home had been papered with tarpaper, it would have been as lovely. It would have been as impactful because the substance of it would have been Love loving him. And let's clarify it further: It's divine Love loving him and loving everything else.

And so it doesn't matter what the material is or what the design might be because the very substance of everything is divine Love. And so the definition of beauty changes. There's nothing quite so exquisite as tarpaper when it is seen through the eyes of Love and it's substance as Love is recognized.

And so, flocked paper is not preferable to tarpaper. Either one can be used for any purpose and the fullness of the Gift of God will be present there because you won't be seeing definitions. You will be seeing the Meaning of the impulse of Love expressed—the Presence of God.

Forget what you have seen, . .

. . . when you have this experience . . .

Forget what you have seen, and raise your eyes in faith to what you NOW can see.

Now in the rush of the first moments of the experience there's no alternative you're interested in. But as time seems to pass, let us say, over the next twenty-four hours, the Vision you might say, fades because circumstances seen through habit seem to call upon you to respond in the old way. But it says:

Forget what you have seen, and raise your eyes in faith to what you NOW can see. The barriers to Heaven will disappear before your holy sight, for you who were sightless . . .

. . . you, who looked at flocked wallpaper and just saw flocked wallpaper, those of you who looked at tarpaper and just saw tarpaper, . .

. . . have been given vision, and you can see.

This is important. Because this is all part and parcel of the practice of the holy instant and the fruits of the holy instant. Just be with that for a moment . . .

Look not for what has been removed, but for the glory that has been restored for you to see.

Glory that had been there all along has been restored for you to see by virtue of your vision being restored. And your vision has been restored because you've been willing to withdraw the definitions you have created and you have been willing to do that because you're willing to abandon the goal of making yourself real on your own by virtue of the definitions you create. It's simple. It's beautiful.

The way in which to feel the unending, undying ever-present Love that you're embraced by is to relax . . . is to become still, to abandon your very conscious willful intent so that you might in the peace of your Being, yield to the Movement of God so that you are moving but you're not directing the move. And the Movement isn't being engaged in to gain status, prestige, wealth, or anything else at your own hand.

Continuing . . .

Look upon your Redeemer, . .

. . . Look upon your Redeemer . . . well your Redeemer is the Truth, isn't it. Look upon the truth that is revealed. But also look upon the Holy Spirit, which is your Redeemer—the Holy Spirit truly being nothing more than your right Mind, your Sanity.

Look upon your Redeemer, and behold what He would show you in each other, . .

. . . be willing to look at the partner, be willing to look at the wallpaper, be willing to look at the furnishings and be willing to see what's shown to you by virtue of the holy instant occurring. You see? The holy instant, which is the action of the Holy Spirit and you in your attentiveness, Gifts you with what you aren't expecting! And you don't have to make up the gift. You don't have to have to figure out what the gift is. Why? Because the intent to love you into your Sanity, is ever-present and working with you and loving you for the purpose of renewing and transforming your mind.

It's not something you're doing all by yourself. And it's not something you should try to do all by yourself. You certainly have to participate. But you don't have to do it all by yourself, period.

Look upon your Redeemer, and behold what He would show you in each other, and let not sin arise again to blind your eyes.

What do you mean let not sin rise again? Let not the intent to see by yourself as an independent agent, as an orphan coming to conclusions through the use of imagination and not truth . . .

. . . let that not blind your eyes [again]. For sin . . .

. . . that attempt . . .

. . . would keep you separate, but your Redeemer would have you look upon each other as yourself . . .

Oh-h . . . imagine if flocked wallpaper can provide an exquisite experience of the expression of Love, what might it be if you're looking at your partner and letting God's Meaning about your partner register with you. And can you imagine what your partner would feel like when you have felt the Meaning and your behavior changes, and your very presence communicates that kind of love, that kind of innocence, that absence of self-protection that removes all barriers from your partner's mind as he or she relates to you in your new vision.

Your relationship is now a temple of healing; a place where all the weary ones can come and find rest. Here is the rest that waits for all, after the journey. And it is brought nearer to all by your relationship.

. . . meaning your new relationship, the one in which your partner and the wallpaper and the tarpaper are all the divine presence of Love loving and revealing to you within you that same Love shared with the partner, the wallpaper, the tarpaper, et cetera—a unity there.

As this peace extends from deep inside yourselves to embrace all the Sonship and give it rest, it will encounter many obstacles.

Ah, yet, you knew there was going to be a hook somewhere there, didn't you? Yeah.

As this peace extends from deep inside yourselves to embrace all the Sonship and give it rest, it will encounter many obstacles.

Yeah, the works not over yet! Well, don't be so quick to jump to conclusions. It's an easy way to say—without investigating the experience—that it's not really worth trying. It's going to be too much work. It's not natural to you. Well, it's the most natural thing to you in the universe, it's the most natural thing to you in the Mind of God.

As this peace extends from deep inside yourselves to embrace all the Sonship and give it rest, it will encounter many obstacles. Some of them you will try to impose.

You see? At times it will seem easy to slip back into your habitual definitions and your habitual responses, even though it's impossible for you to forget what the wallpaper really is . . . you see? . . . or the tarpaper, or the furniture.

Others will seem to arise from elsewhere; . .

. . . other obstacles . . .

. . . from your brothers, and from various aspects of the world outside. Yet . . .

. . . here it is . . .

. . . peace will gently cover them, extending past completely unhindered.

You see? The new vision will allow you to relate to everything other than the flocked wallpaper or the tarpaper or the furniture in that particular room. It will extend past that to everything without the hindrance that you might expect. Which I promise you will be a relief and will inspire you to persist in asking to know what the truth is here, what the truth is there, being opened to the experience of its divine Meaning.

The extension of the Holy Spirit's purpose from your relationship to others, to bring them gently in, will quietly extend to every aspect of your lives, surrounding both of you with glowing happiness and the calm awareness of complete protection.

This is part of the Gift. This is part of the smile of Heaven. It's unavoidable. It's simply there. It's provided. It is the fruits of the holy instant.

And you will carry its message of love and safety and freedom to everyone who draws nigh unto your temple, where healing waits for him.

[repeats] . . . draws nigh unto your temple, . .

. . . wow, your temple is your enlivened and unfragmented recognition of Love, acknowledgement of It and return of It through your participation, which you will discover your very Being has always been engaged in even though you saw yourselves as separate, independent and unconnected. The truth of you has never stopped. But you've missed it. And the truth of everything as the evidence of the Kingdom of Heaven has never stopped. And the constant infinite Love that it is embracing all of Creation in, hasn't stopped, even though you've missed it.

You will not wait to give him this, . .

. . . this healing. You will not wait to recognize the Meaning in him, because this becomes, you might say, your new purpose or your new interest. It will be more interesting to you to learn the truth, to experience the Meaning of everything than it had been for you to engage in trying to become something in your own right, all by yourself, as something which had no Source other than a physical action called "a Big Bang," and "evolution."

So:

You will not wait to give him this, . .

. . . healing . . .

. . . for you will call to him and he will answer you, recognizing in your call the Call of God.

Now I'll tell you something: that doesn't mean you're going to be talking about God. It doesn't mean that you'll start teaching religion or become a minister of ideas, of thoughts, of definitions, of words. But your very being will be the undeniable communication of Love, which others will recognize and find attractive, unless they are still absolutely intent upon using their drug of choice and not giving up their fruitless goal quite yet. But even at that, you'll be able to see that they're not just tarpaper like they think they are. They're tarpaper, the living Love of God, beautiful because of the nature of Love, not the apparent physical substance of which it's made. You see?

And you will draw him in and give him rest, as it was given you.

You will draw him in as I draw you in. And you will give him rest as I give you rest. And he will take it or not take it as it is given, just as you take it or not take it as it is given. But you will not be discouraged because you can't forget that he's not just tarpaper, or you can't forget that she's not just flocked wallpaper, but that both are the Presence of God, full of Meaning, divine Meaning, *the smile of Heaven.

All this will you do.

. . . just as I'm doing it with you.

Yet the peace which already lies deeply within must first expand, and flow across the obstacles you placed before it.

Transformation . . . allowance of transformation, the withholding of resentment because you're having to let go of what you thought was valuable, the withdrawal of anger because what you thought was true isn't true, wasn't true. And you will say you were misled. It's not fair . . . until you give up and feel the unction of Love that you're being embraced by, so that it might illuminate in you the Love that you are giving back because there is nothing else to share in light of the real Meaning of everything.

This will you do, for nothing undertaken with the Holy Spirit remains unfinished.

You see? Ah-h, the experience of the holy instant. The smile of Heaven may waver because your attention shifts. But the gift of the Holy Spirit changes you forever and does not allow you to go back to the level of ignorance that you had achieved before. And the truth that has dawned on you, the experience of Creation that you have had, will simply widen the road into a highway that it will be impossible for you to resist because you will want to experience the whole thing.

You can indeed be sure of nothing you see outside you, but of this you CAN be sure: The Holy Spirit asks that you offer Him a resting-place where you will rest in Him.

It's like, let the wallpaper be the Love that it is, so that you can be the Love that you Are.

He answered you, and entered your relationship.

When you did the two-step, when you did the two-step for the specific purpose of wanting to know the truth about your Brother, your Sister, adjoining in which you have committed to not introducing any made-up definitions from your puny imagination.

Would you not now return His graciousness, and enter into a relationship with Him?

The Holy Spirit—that which is nothing but your right Mind, which you hadn't been recognizing as your own right Mind.

Would you not now return His graciousness, and enter into a relationship with Him?

So that you're not saying, "Oh, the Holy Spirit . . . sure . . . the Father, the Son, the Holy Spirit . . . and then there's me." That's not being in a relationship with the Holy Spirit. Being in relationship with the Holy Spirit is where you let the Holy Spirit infill you and rule out of you all self-will—all will that doesn't not arise out of the act of God, the Movement of God Being Itself.

Would you not now return His graciousness, and enter into a relationship with Him? For it is He Who offered your relationship the gift of holiness, . .

. . . the relationship you have with your partner, your Sister, your Brother.

For it is He Who offered your relationship the gift of holiness, without which it would have been forever impossible to appreciate each other.

[chuckles] Without that experience Paul had it would have been forever impossible for him to Know how a wall papered with tarpaper could be as exquisite as a wall papered with flocked wallpaper, because it's the Meaning that the wall was papered with, no matter what form the Meaning took.

The gratitude you owe to Him . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit, your right Mind . . .

. . . He asks but that YOU receive for Him.

In other words, abandon the barrier, abandon the definitions of difference that keep you from grasping and experiencing the Meaning of the Oneness of you and the Holy Spirit. That's what it means.

And when you look with gentle graciousness upon each other, you ARE beholding Him. For you are looking where He IS, and not apart from Him.

And I would add, that you're looking with Him. It is as though you have put on the Holy Spirit like glasses and you are seeing everything with Him.

For you are looking where He IS, and not apart from Him. You cannot see the Holy Spirit, but you CAN see your brothers truly . .

. . . instead of ignorantly, instead of privately through definitions you and your Brother have made up about each other.

You cannot see the Holy Spirit, but you CAN see your brothers truly. And the light in them will show you all that you need to see.

The love in the wallpaper, the love in the tarpaper will show you all that you need to see, the Meaning in each other, the Meaning in the wallpaper, the Meaning in the tarpaper will show you all that you need to see.

When the peace in you has been extended to encompass everyone, . .

. . . which will become easier and easier as you abide in this experience of Meaning.

. . . the Holy Spirit's function here will be accomplished.

Meaning what? The Holy Spirit's function of returning you to your right Mind will have been accomplished.

What need is there for seeing, then?

In other words, seeing definitions, seeing strings of words, explanations, seeing concepts and beliefs . . . what need is there for that, then?

When God has taken the last step Himself, the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . that which is nothing more than your right Mind . . .

. . . will gather all your thanks and gratitude which you have offered Him, and lay them gently before His Creator in the name of His most holy Son . . .

. . . You. He will lay before the Father the union between you and the Holy Spirit that has occurred. The Holy Spirit will present you to the Father in your Sanity.

And the Father will accept them in His Name.

He will own you. He will say, "Welcome, Son! Welcome, Daughter! Welcome, You who know who you Are, because you know who I Am." And your Birthright has been restore to you—your full conscious Sanity has been restored to you.

What need is there of seeing, in the presence of His gratitude?

What need is there for the concept of tarpapered shacks, when tarpaper as Living Love is the Meaning you are filled with. You see?

So the experience of the Meaning of a tarpapered shack and a village of tarpapered shacks could be a castle and a kingdom of most profound . . . profound Meaning, holiness—all that the word, “opulence” could mean.

I’m not going to say, think about it. I’m going to say, be with this during this coming week and let your every request to know what is the truth here be made with an understanding that what you’re looking for is the Meaning, the holy Meaning of whatever it is you are enquiring about. And that the Meaning will be an experience, a wordless, definitionless experience in which nothing is withheld as to its full Meaning. Not having the words, not having the definitions, not having the concepts will not cause you to miss one iota of the divine Meaning of the thing that you’ve enquired about.

And then, as I said, you’ll have to look for the words and you might even find that you won’t spend too much time trying to find the words, because you would rather experience the Meaning and be with your Brothers and Sisters and the world from the experience of the Meaning and let that lead you to whatever actions it leads you.

I love you. I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 30th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, we've been talking about Meaning—the divine Meaning of everything which is revealed in the practice of the holy instant. It is the blessing of the holy instant.

Now suddenly we're talking about:

THE OBSTACLES TO PEACE¹

Why? Well, let's read a little bit. The first subsection is:

1. The Desire to Get Rid of It

... meaning, peace.

The first obstacle that peace must flow across is your desire to get RID of it. For it cannot extend unless you KEEP it.

Now, you have the experience of the influx of inspiration and of the true Meaning of your relationships whether it's with your Brother or the flocked wallpaper or furniture or plants, whatever. You have the experience and then for some reason it begins to fade, or circumstances call into play your habitual responses which arise out of your ignorance of the revelation you've just had. And you respond out of your habit, which is that you lose your peace. And you attempt to resolve the problem on your own without the benefit of the continued benefit of the continued revelation—the continued inspiration that is the result of your not abandoning the two-step or the holy instant in the face of external demands.

Now:

It cannot extend . . .

. . . peace cannot extend . . .

. . . unless you KEEP it.

Meaning, unless you don't abandon it.

Now listen to this:

You are the center from which it radiates outward, to call the others in.

I think we're beginning to have disclosed your meaning which is illuminated in the experience of the holy instant—the blessing of the holy instant.

You are the center from which it radiates outward, . .

. . . to what?

. . . to call the others in. You are its home; its tranquil dwelling-place, from which it gently reaches out, but never leaving YOU.

Why? Because you never abandoned the holy instant. You see? And so you KEEP it and by keeping it, it extends outward. But this is not the way you have defined yourself . . . hasn't been. So, a new understanding of your meaning is illuminated in the fulfillment of the holy instant.

Continuing . . .

If you would make it homeless, . .

. . . by abandoning it . . .

. . . how can it abide within the Son of God?

Meaning, you?

If it would spread across the whole creation, it must begin with you, and FROM you reach to everyone who calls, and bring him rest by joining you.

Now, sounds like you have a job, sounds like you have an activity—a purpose.

If it would spread across the whole creation, it must begin with you, and FROM you reach to everyone who calls, and bring him rest by joining you.

Well, doesn't sound like you're going to have much privacy, doesn't sound like you're going to have much rest. Sounds like your attention is going to be full of Meaning—full of peace extending from you, not as a nice wonderful blessing extended to everyone, but as an actual involvement, an actual healing involvement. You see?

Now that in itself might seem like a reason to get rid of peace. After all, do you really want that much involvement? Even if it's the fulfillment of your purpose of being? You see? So you might object to letting there be too much peace or peace too consistently. It might be nice to have peace and its blessing intermittently . . . on weekends or late at night when there isn't much going on—nothing good on TV. [chuckles]

Now:

Why would you want peace homeless?

. . . in other words, not to be found in you?

What do you think that it must dispossess, to dwell with you?

In other words, what's it going to take away from you?

What seems to be the cost you are so unwilling to pay?

Well as I've just described, it could just be time. It just could be the effort involved in involvement in connected meaningful relationship. It takes away your privacy. It takes away your freedom to do whatever you want.

The little barrier of sand still stands between you. Would you reinforce it NOW?

Meaning, after you've experienced the blessing of the holy instant and grasp the Meaning of everything—the divine Meaning of everything as living Love expressed and expressing and inseparable from the Love you find yourself feeling and extending toward everything else?

You are not asked to let it go for yourselves alone.

. . . the little barrier. . .

Christ asks it of you for Himself.

Why? Because it fulfills my purpose to help fulfill your purpose, so that God's Purpose can be uninhibitedly fulfilled.

He . . .

. . . the Christ . . .

. . . would bring peace to everyone, and how can He do this EXCEPT through you?

You see? It's a mutual endeavor. Not of private puny little egos doing some grand thing, but inseparable infinite Mind expressing and acknowledging and embracing the Will of the Father as his own. Simple . . . profound . . . Awakening—the generator of Atonement.

Would you let a little bank of sand, a wall of dust, a tiny seeming barrier, stand between your brothers and salvation?

Well yeah, you would. Because it still, you believe, takes away too much from you. But you know what? In the face of the experience of the fulfillment of the holy instant that you've had, your insistence upon holding to your orphanhood is *severely weakened. In fact, it has been dealt a death blow even though it still seems to struggle to assert itself, meaning you as an orphan are still trying to assert yourself instead of persisting in practicing the holy instant.

You see, what you want is persistence of Vision having had the inspiration that has caused you to experience everything as Love expressed and expressing as absolutely divine, holy, and exquisitely meaningful. You have the option which it behooves you to take advantage of to stay with the Vision and that is what you are called upon to learn by the initial experience and each successive one. It is something for you to learn. That means, it is meant to change you so that you recognize yourself anew.

Again, if it would spread across the whole creation it must begin with you and from you reach to everyone who calls and bring him rest by joining you.

That's the new meaning of you. That's the context in which you need to be looking at yourself.

As we've said before: You are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. You are at that point and must understand yourself therefrom.

That's what you learn in the fulfillment of the holy instant. So when the tendency is to abandon your peace, to respond as an orphan, you must say, "Absolutely not! I reject the invitation. I'm a holy Son of God neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. I'm at that point and I must understand and be from the persistence of Vision.

Would you let a little bank of sand, a wall of dust, a tiny seeming barrier, stand between your brothers and salvation? And yet, it IS this little remnant of attack you cherish still against each other that is the first obstacle the peace in you encounters in its going forth.

You see? "Oh, my Brother's not worth the effort! My definition of him keeps me from being willing to extend to him the act of the holy instant. I'm unwilling to abandon my conviction that he's not holy and that he deserves my judgment and he deserves my refusal to acknowledge what's true about him by engaging in the holy instant where the truth about him and how I need to behave is illuminated in a manner that is healing."

This little wall of hatred would still oppose the Will of God, . .

. . . that has been made clear in the illumination of the fulfillment of the holy instant.

[It] would still oppose the Will of God, and keep It limited.

Keep the Will of God limited? Well, that is the experience one has if one does not continue to give it entrance into his mind. Now:

The Holy Spirit's purpose rests in peace within you. Yet you are still unwilling to let it join you wholly. You still oppose the Will of God, just by a little. And that little is a limit you would place upon the whole.

Now you don't realize that in the attempt to be independent, you are engaged in an act that is extended to the whole—to everything else but you. But that is what you're doing.

You still oppose the Will of God, just by a little. And that little is a limit you would place upon the whole. God's Will is One, not many.

That's important. God is omnipotent, omniscient, omnipresent. God is One. His infinite Being which is called Creation which includes you is One in its infiniteness.

When you claim independence, you are opposing the whole. You're not just opposing whatever specific thing you might be angry or short-tempered or bitter about, the minute you misuse your mind and separate yourself from the infinite view that the holy instant has provided, you have denied, objected to the whole. You have objected to God.

Another way of putting it is, you have blinded yourself to everything except what you want to see. You have blocked out the real Meaning of everything except what you want to see the way you want to see it.

God's Will is One, not many. It has no opposition, for there is none beside It. What you would still contain behind your little barrier and keep separate from each other seems mightier than the universe,

Your will is mightier than God's Will because when you are exerting your will, you are refusing to be in receipt of the experience of the Father's Will. Thus, you have become mightier when in fact you have become so tiny, so minimalistic that you're in a state of rejection that makes you meaningless and there's no way to get away from that experience of being inconsequential and having to try to overcome it.

The only thing that can help you escape from that is the practice of the holy instant, the re-uniting, by means of desire to know the truth from something other than your imagination. That's the practice of the two-step and the holy instant. And when you do that, the arrogant little you that has seemed mightier than the universe stops expressing its arrogance. And in the absence of that arrogance, what's left for you to be aware of is what is true, is what is Real, is what the Holy Spirit reveals to you. And what the Holy Spirit reveals to you is your Birthright and the omnipotence, omnipresence and omniscience of God.

What you would still contain behind your little barrier and keep separate from each other seems mightier than the universe, for it would hold back the universe and its Creator. This little wall would hide the purpose of Heaven, and keep it FROM Heaven.

It would make you look at wallpaper and just see wallpaper. It would have you look at the movement and presence of living Love, loving you and disclosing to you the nature of everything in the universe. It would hide that from you and keep you from seeing it. What kind of blessing is that? It would keep the experience of Heaven from Heaven by blinding you to it.

Would you thrust salvation away from the GIVER of salvation?

Uh-oh, here we come again for one of those reasons you might not want to keep your peace.

For such have you become.

. . . the GIVER of salvation. You see, one of the things you're going to find out is that you're going to need to become more conscious because there's so much of Creation that you've been missing. And in your laziness, you've kept yourself blind.

And so you are going to have to become more alert. You are going to have to be more attentive. You're going to actually have to be more interested in life than you have been, embracing more by paying more attention to it. What? With the conscious intent to have the Father reveal to you the divine Meaning of what you're paying more attention to. You see?

“Oh, it's too much work! Oh God, do I really have to do that? Isn't there an easier way? Can't I get the fullness and just be a little bit sleepy, not have to pay full attention?”

No you can't! It's not your purpose to be sleepy—drowsy—uh, vague . . . fuzzy, uninvolved, not noticing everything. That's not your function or purpose. No.

Would you thrust salvation away from the GIVER of salvation?
For such have you become.

You see? Now that's good news. It's just not what you're used to. But the good news is also that you have the capacity to be what you were created to be. You have the capacity to be what God is creating you to be now . . . now . . . now.

Peace could no more depart from you than from God. Fear not this little obstacle. It cannot contain the Will of God. Peace WILL flow across it, and join you without hindrance.

You see? It will join you without hindrance if you will relax and not provide hindrance yourself by choosing not to have to fulfill your purpose because it wasn't what you wanted, it wasn't what you expected, it's going to demand too much from you and most of all, it's going to take away your originality, your ability to be creative in your own right, you think. You think it's going to take away originality. But you may not be God but God is all there is of you. And when you let God be all there is of you, you are inseparable from the Movement of Creation—infinite originality. The only thing that you lose is the ability to claim that you are the originator of originality instead of the Movement, the unhindered Movement of originality.

Salvation cannot BE withheld from you. It is your PURPOSE.

You see? It's not just something you need. "Oh, I need salvation. I need to Wake up. Awakening needs to occur. I need to come back into my right Mind." Well, salvation isn't something for you to become. It's something you Are that you need to no longer block the expression of.

You are neither behind the point of perfection, nor advancing toward it. You are at that point and must understand or be there from.

There is a certain amount of satisfaction that one gets as an orphan, from not being at the point of perfection and not understanding one's self from there. It's the stimulating experience of not knowing while continuously being faced with a demand to know and therefore, putting you in the position of having to figure out the answers, to figure out what the truth is and do it yourself as an orphan because in that way you'll get credit for it. And you have the pleasure of enduring the mystery until the last moment when the clarity comes. Mystery is stimulating. Mystery is interesting.

But if you're already whole, if you must understand yourself and be from the point of perfection which you can do when you let yourself be infilled by what the truth is and its Meaning, you will never have to figure out a thing again. And you will never exist in a mystery . . . pretty dull . . . pretty boring . . . pretty uninteresting. Why? Because you can't get a hit from it—no longer using your drug of choice—there's no high that you recognize. And yet [chuckles] the experience of real fulfillment far exceeds the high from the drug of choice. And you must make a choice for it by choosing for your peace and remaining with persistence of Vision . . . so that what? Salvation can be successfully lived by you because it's your purpose.

You CANNOT will apart from this. You have no purpose apart from . . .

. . . what? . .

. . . each other, . .

Now this sentence is the answer to the world's problems today across your globe. Again:

You have no purpose apart from each other, . .

. . . the Family. And the conscious practice of the two-step, of the holy instant, out of appreciation for each other. And an unwillingness to be distracted from your relationships with each other, insisting upon relating to each other by going to the Father first by turning to the Holy Spirit first. And practicing the holy instant so that it might be fulfilled and so that you might continue with persistence of Vision because you haven't subsequently found a reason to give your peace away and engage in judgment toward those you are in relationship with.

Again, the answer to the problems on your globe everywhere is

You have no purpose apart from each other, nor apart from the one you asked the Holy Spirit to share with you. The little wall . .

. . . your insistence upon your independent orphan actions.

The little wall will fall away so quietly beneath the wings of peace!

Exclamation point!

For peace will send its messengers from you to all the world.

Ah-h, isn't that a more hopeful and a more fulfilling destiny, than to be caught up in petty little distinctions, and petty little backbiting and petty little judgments against each other and finding everyone's faults and uncovering them as though that's the purpose of the holy instant? Except that for the most part you'll satisfy those requirements without asking the Holy Spirit anything. Your fulfillment [chuckles] has far more, Meaning than that.

[For] peace will send its messengers from you to all the world. And barriers will fall away before their coming as easily as those which you would interpose will be surmounted.

This is the promise. It's the promise because it's the way things work, it's the way things always have worked. And all that you're doing here is not growing into a greater capacity than you ever had before or going through some karmic development of mankind. You're just neglecting to engage what has blocked the truth from you before. And in the neglect, the truth begins to light up and you begin to see it. Inspiration occurs, holiness occurs and the smile of Heaven is experienced. This is the way it works. Don't make it more complicated than it is.

To overcome the world is no more difficult than to surmount your little wall.

You look out there and you say there's a world out there and it's full of corruption and it's full of dishonesty and it's full of greed and it's full of mortals who can't possibly be expected to do the amount of growing it will take in order to Wake up. Well, what a curse that perspective is. You might say, it's a curse on the world. But you know what? It's a curse on you, because it causes you to not practice the holy instant and it causes you to curse yourself with the same meanings that you are cursing the world with. And yet that mental practice on your part is the only thing that makes overcoming the world seem incredibly difficult, if not impossible, because all that needs to change is your perspective . . . are the decisions you have made, the conclusions you have come to and the honoring of the greatness of your skill in coming to those conclusions.

Again, that's what Atonement costs you. That's what the practice of peace and persistence of Vision costs you.

To overcome the world is no more difficult than to surmount your little wall.

Because your little wall is the only thing that has to be surmounted.

For in the miracle of your relationship, without this barrier, is EVERY miracle contained. There is no order of difficulty in miracles, for they are all the SAME.

Listen:

Each is a gentle winning over from the appeal of guilt to the appeal of love.

So guilt is one of those stimulating, mind-occupying, attention getting things that you all enjoy, because it prods you into coming to better conclusions and manipulating the world and your Brothers and Sisters so as to make things better and reduce the guilt. You love guilt as much as you love the mystery until you practice the holy instant, experience its fulfillment and insist upon persisting in the Vision because that's what allows you to fulfill your purpose of salvation and bless the universe.

How can this FAIL to be accomplished, wherever it is undertaken? Guilt can raise no real barriers against it.

It doesn't. It, at the most, just causes you to delay abandoning it, to delay yielding to the Father's Will, to delay experiencing your whole Mind. It just delays it. It doesn't raise any real barrier.

And all that seems to stand between you must fall away because of the appeal you answered.

What fulfills purpose is always a decision. You must decide what fulfills purpose: Listening to your little orphan self or joining with the Father or the Holy Spirit. And you know what? You won't know for sure what fulfills purpose until you do the one thing you haven't done yet and that is practice the holy instant. So do it, so that you have the experience. And persist in doing it until you have the experience. Because you know from what I'm saying that I'm telling you the truth and that the Course is educating you properly with wisdom.

Or I will say, because of the appeal you answer now...now...now...now.

For from you who answered, He Who answered you would call.

I called to you, the Holy Spirit calls to you, the Father calls to you.

His home is in your holy relationship.

. . . in your involvement with your brothers and sisters, in your involvement with everything in your world, which is Creation misperceived but waiting your true perception of It.

Do no attempt to stand between Him and His holy purpose, . .

. . . do not attempt to stand between me and my holy purpose . . .

. . . for it is yours.

And I will say, as well. Dare to embrace it. Dare to put on the garment of your holiness.

But let Him quietly extend the miracle of your relationship to everyone contained in it as it was given.

It's like the movie, "Pay it Forward." Give what you have received before it is asked for.

There is a hush in Heaven, a happy expectancy, a little pause of gladness in acknowledgment of the journey's end. For Heaven knows you well, as you know Heaven.

This is in the fulfillment of the holy instant.

No illusions stand between you now. Look not upon the little wall of shadows.

. . . the remnants of your habit.

The sun has risen OVER it. How can a shadow keep you from the sun? No more can you be kept by shadows from the light in which illusions end.

Nothing will take it away from you except your willingness to be distracted. And as I said, your willingness to be distracted is terribly weakened, which means that persistence of Vision will not be as hard to maintain. But you've got to make the choice for what fulfills purpose by making a decision and then behaving as though it's true.

Every miracle is but the end of an illusion. Such was the journey; such its ending. And in the goal of truth which you accepted must ALL illusions end.

The little, insane wish to get rid of Him Who you invited in and push Him out MUST produce conflict.

Simple. And you should be able to recognize the conflict and the difference between it and the experience of Meaning that you had during the holy instant. You must recognize the difference so that you may easily make the choice for what fulfills purpose again.

As you look upon the world, this little wish, . .

. . . for autonomy, for orphanhood, for becoming something in your own right which can't be done . . .

. . . this little wish uprooted . . .

. . . which it is now . . .

. . . and floating aimlessly, can land and settle briefly upon anything, for it HAS no purpose now. Before the Holy Spirit entered to abide with you, it seemed to have a MIGHTY purpose; the fixed and unchangeable dedication to sin and its results. Now it is aimless, . .

. . . because you're not convicted in your belief any longer. You know better even though your knowing hasn't stabilized with you yet. That comes with persistence of Vision.

Now it is aimless, wandering pointlessly, causing no more than tiny interruptions in love's appeal.

This feather of a wish, . .

. . . you know, your sense of yourself as an orphan overcoming orphanhood . . .

[he didn't read this] this tiny illusion, this microscopic remnant of the belief in sin, . .

. . . is all that remains of what once seemed to be the world.

The way things are.

It is no longer an unrelenting barrier to peace.

And you know what? Even if you have not yet experienced the holy instant fully, you already have a feeling for it because of what I'm sharing with you and everything we have gone through together since we started reading the Course.

Some of the work is already done, because that which is divine in you is recognizing the truth of what I'm teaching, of what I'm sharing, of what I'm encouraging you with.

Its pointless wandering makes its results appear to be more erratic and unpredictable than before.

Things don't seem to be as dependable as they used to be.

Yet what COULD be more unstable than a tightly-organized delusional system? Its seeming stability is its pervasive WEAKNESS, which extends to everything. The variability which the little remnant induces merely indicates its limited results.

How mighty can a little feather be before the great wings of truth? Can it oppose an eagle's flight, or hinder the advance of summer? Can it interfere with the effects of summer's sun upon a garden covered by the snow? See but how easily this little whisp is lifted up and carried away, never to return, and part with it in gladness, not regret.

Hang in with the practice of the holy instant so that the Vision of truth, the experience of Meaning of everything you're experiencing can replace the ignorant illustrations, like cartoon figures of the Kingdom of Heaven. Let them be replaced with the direct experience of its real meaning of Reality.

So . . .

. . . part with it in gladness, not regret. For it is nothing in itself, and stood for nothing when you had greater faith in its protection. Would you not greet the summer sun than fix your gaze upon a disappearing snowflake, and shiver in remembrance of the winter's cold?

Yes. So watch it. And when you discover—because you're more alert—that you're willing to abandon your peace for your own personally satisfying reactions . . . catch yourself and stop it! And like returning to a mantra in a meditation, abandon your reaction and return to your leaning into the holy instant by shutting up and asking, “Holy Spirit . . . Father, what is the truth here?”

I love you very much and I look forward to returning next time and being with you together.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

October 8th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

There are a couple of things that were discussed last time which I want to make sure we understand clearly before we move on.

The first thing is, that I said that what fulfills purpose is always a decision. And that could very easily be construed to mean that decisions fulfill purpose. "Decision" is a word that everybody likes because it implies power, it implies a capacity to direct things—cause things to move in a certain way.

The power of decision is a concept promoted in New Thought, metaphysical thought, New Age thinking and it is glommed onto by almost everyone because everyone wants to be able to feel secure. And if the power of decision will supply that security, it is something worth learning about, acquiring and practicing.

And yet, when I said what fulfills purpose is always a decision, it didn't have anything to do with any single one of you making a decision as some form of practice of control. And this is important. It's important that I make it clear because the practice of decision-making is well established and well valued and yet it is that practice of decision-making that one has to abandon in order to Wake up, in order to enter into the holy instant, in order to break one's autonomy, which is what holds one in a state of orphanhood, mortality . . . period.

Now there are really only two choices of purpose: One is actual and the other is imagined. But nevertheless they are both treated as real.

One of the practices of purpose, one of the choices of purpose is one that keeps you asleep—still dreaming, still incarcerated in the orphanage. It is a practice of decision that arises out of your logic, that arises out of your need to be in control, not only of your own mind so as to have a certain degree of peace, but also as a means of controlling your fellowman—your fellow inmates in the orphanage.

And so that practice of decision is one that ensures the continued dream—the continued unconsciousness of truth—because it's used to establish your private goal to become a real valid human being even though you're an orphan. And it will be done by making sure that your fellow orphans continue to believe that they are orphans so that they might be subject to your decisions, which will of course be only in your best interest and the sub-heading of that is that you will do things that make your fellow orphans feel like they are benefitting—not because you really want them to benefit, but because you want them to value you and validate you.

Now the other choice of purpose, which is always the result of a decision, is to Wake up . . . is to step out of the dream of sin, sickness, death, of a godless universe in which everything is subject to and arises out of chance.

And the way to do that is what A Course In Miracles is about and is what we have been dealing with all along. But even more pointedly, recently, it's the practice of the two-step. It's a practice where you abandon your personal private decision-making, which arises out of your use of your logic and where you shut up and you stop all the processes you normally used in order to arrive at a valuable decision. And in the absence of that, in the silence, you ask, "Father" or "Holy Spirit, what is the truth here . . ." followed by the words, "about my fellow man? What is the truth here about that which I'm in relationship with?" You see?

You ask not to know yourself better, but to know your Brother better.

And in the answer as to the truth about your Brother, you learn the truth about yourself automatically, spontaneously. And you and your Brother are healed, and Heaven smiles.

Now I also read from the Course:

You have no purpose apart from each other.¹

And I said that statement is the answer to all of the problems on your globe.

Now to a certain degree you do believe that you have no purpose apart from each other. And the purpose you have together is to control each other so that you don't all kill each other, and so that you don't hold each other down, and you are able to become a success at the expense of your Brothers. And of course, your striving for your success means you're confronted by your Brothers' attempts to keep you from your fulfillment and benefit *them. And so, social existence is a constant contest, which because you have a certain amount of intelligence, you've managed to develop a style of, that is fairly peaceful.

But that isn't what I was talking about.

The simple fact is:

You have no purpose apart from each other.

And it's more like the Golden Rule: Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.² The goal is to extend to your Brother love, not fear and control.

Now the simple fact is that the boundaries that exist are not boundaries on the surface of the earth, but they are boundaries of groups of people living in certain areas which exclude for one reason or another, other groups in other areas. And decisions are made to not love. Decisions are made to hate. Even if it's a mild dislike, it's still not love.

You have no purpose apart from each other.

That means, that you have a purpose and the purpose is: Do unto others as you would have them do unto you. In other words, the one focus you have before you at all times is to extend caring to everything you're in relationship with.

“Oh, well if I do that, so-and-so is going to get angry and is not going to accept me, is not going to accept what I'll say. He's a stubborn one!” or “They're a stubborn lot!”

And you categorize them as something to withhold love from. And you think in your spiritual stance, that you're not to “cast pearls before swine,”³ you're not to extend yourself.

Well I'll tell you something: Sometimes the extension of love requires doing something that seems to put you at risk. Sometimes you have to stand in the Presence of Love that the Father extends to you—infills you with—and you are required to extend it whether it is received well or not.

“Oh, well that's not reasonable!”

Well, you know what? You don't have the spiritual luxury to make such off-handed, mean-spirited, love-withholding statements. Because you know what the fact is? When the atomic reactors in Fukushima melted down, there was no healthy way to correct the problem and if the problem wasn't corrected it could affect the whole island. And so it had to be corrected and people had to walk into the mouths of danger and contradict the danger and continue to contradict the danger through faith until the danger is clear.

Now there are life situations that cause all of us to become very practical and get off our "metaphysical or spiritual high horse" and become involved whether it seems reasonable or not.

You have no purpose apart from each other.

If your countries are having financial difficulty, if your people, if mankind on the planet is experiencing being short-changed, this is the time to say "Father, what is the truth here? Father, what is the truth about my Brother?" And here's the real meaning: "Father, what is my Brothers' need? What is my neighboring countries' need?" Because what you want is not only to be able to know the truth about the situation—about the need—you want to know the truth that is the answer to the need.

And you're going to need to roll up your sleeves and participate in the correction. How? By continuing . . . by persevering in doing the two-step so that there are no more flip, off-handed thoughts or comments that roll off your tongue or out of your mind, that fool you into believing that you have nothing to do and that you can't do anything and that there are other things that it's more appropriate for you to be doing.

Love meets needs. But not if you're ignoring the need, not if you're claiming "time out." But that's not your task. Your purpose is to be the holy Son or Daughter of God. That means, it's your purpose for your mind to be the Mind of God because you have not held out room for anything else, called "your piss-ant little presence" on your own.

The need is to be willing to see your Brothers' needs so that you can see the answer to your Brothers' needs and how to be part of the resolution of the need by practicing the two-step, by engaging in the holy instant and persevering until your mind is changed and you see the truth.

Now you're all too logical. You are all too intellectual. And we're at the time, at the point of abandoning it so that you might experience some progress and so that you might experience some Grace.

When I spoke a few times ago about Paul's experience in the living room of a friend, where the walls were covered with flocked wallpaper, I shared that he had a transitioning experience of it and learned from an inner experience, that the substance of the wallpaper and indeed the walls and everything else, was Living Love.

Now, do you think Paul was anticipating that? If he had wanted to know the truth about it, might he have expected an explanation? As I told you, yes.

Well now, let's turn this on your Brother who seems to be a heathen, or who seems to be a bastard, or who seems a druggie, or who seems to be a mean-spirited, unfriendly cuss. What if, in the willingness to let yourself be infilled with "what the truth is here," your Brother, the mean-spirited cuss, or your Sister suddenly, obviously becomes to you the Presence of Living Love, let's say that where he or she is, their body doesn't disappear but you have an experience of an oval light—the shape of an oval illumination in which you realize you're seeing that one for the first time truly. And again, the Light is living Love. And although it doesn't have the characteristics of the human body that you're familiar with, you recognize that one clearly, perfectly as the holy Son or Daughter of God. And what? You find your concept, no matter how good it had been, transformed beyond what you would expect.

You may have thought you were asking, "What is the truth here about my Brother so that I might heal him?" But what if the truth of the matter is, that you learn what the truth is about your Brother so that you see that you don't need to heal him? There you go. You see, it doesn't have anything to do with logic.

As I said before, you may after the fact, have to find words to describe the meaning, the truth that you have learned.

And so it doesn't matter what this religion believes or what that religion believes. It's adherence are the Sons and Daughters of God. They are the Expression of God embodying everything that God is Expressing of Himself right there where they are.

Stop being so sure that you know what your thinking is for or that you know exactly what the Course is meaning. Because I'm telling you, that although the Course uses logic and it uses words and it expresses ideas beautifully which trigger transformation, it is the transformation beyond or out of your present sense of things that is its goal. You see? And the practice of the holy instant is the means by which, in this moment . . . and this moment . . . and this moment, you manage to escape the bonds of limitation—the limitations of the definitions you have given to everything.

So the key is that the decision that always fulfills purpose is the decision to shut up! And to listen beyond your best thinking, wanting specifically to know what the Creator's Idea is that He is manifesting right now . . . right now . . . right now . . . as you and everything you're in relationship with.

It's an utterly simple thing. The call for Awakening is answered in the holy instant.

I am not meaning to be monotonous but you are not getting it completely and so I must say it over.

Relating to everything that exists is something you do when you are listening for the Father's reply, the Father's communication to you of the Meaning He is embodying in everything. And what that means—the simplicity of that is—that you really had nothing else to do all day long, no matter what activity you're engaged in than saying, "Father, what's the truth here?" or being the presence of inquisitive attention as though you don't know, as though you are a child.

That is the simplicity of it. And what makes it difficult is, that you have developed means of staying out of the silence, staying out of the place where you're quiet enough so that you might hear something else. That's the simplicity of it.

As I've said, it's not attractive because there's nothing stimulating about it as far as your having something to be excited about that relates to your credibility. You see?

To Know the truth is peace. To Know the truth, occurs in the peace. The peace is not stimulating, but in peace and arising from it is the Movement of Creation and you have not for a very long time experienced the awesomeness of that. And I promise you it is far more exciting than what you experience in the business of your mind.

Now what is it that is exciting? Oh, guilt is exciting! Guilt is stimulating! Guilt makes you stand up and try harder. Guilt makes you attempt to improve yourself. And so you equate it with the stimulus of Life.

Be quiet with that for a moment . . .

So it's very difficult to imagine being totally alive when you're just letting Life happen. When you are not giving Life direction by means of decisions. But this is what you must begin to engage in, if you want to Wake up—if you want to experience your Birthright and be freed from sin, disease and death and a Godless universe. That is a constant stimulating struggle.

The new section is entitled:

THE ATTRACTION OF GUILT

Well there you are. The attraction of guilt is, it's stimulating nature and the fact that it keeps you on your toes, keeps you from dying even by causing you to engage in overcoming problems, which of course are occurring because you're not taking the time to be silent and do the two-step.

The attraction of guilt produces fear of love, for love would never look on guilt at all. It is the nature of love to look upon only the truth, for there it sees itself, with which it would unite in holy union and completion. As love must look past fear, so must fear see love not.

Now it's important to understand that if you did not validate guilt, if you did not practice it, so to speak, by not objecting to it, if you did object to it and neglected to practice it and instead practiced Love, the experience of guilt would disappear because it doesn't exist in the clarity of Love.

You can't misunderstand flocked wallpaper that is the presence of Living Love, nor can you be afraid of it, nor can it do anything less than provide you with the sudden knowledge that the substance of everything is Living Love, right then, right there in your brand new experience of it.

You suddenly have universal Knowledge, universal Knowing about it. And if you would stay with that experience, stay with the Vision and not jump back into the driver's seat yourself, the Vision would persist and Atonement would have occurred.

As love must look past fear, so must fear see love not.

[chuckles] If fear could see love, everything fearful that it was experiencing would become nothing and fear would cease to exist. And that's the point.

For love contains the end of guilt, as surely as fear depends on it. Overlooking guilt completely, it . . .

. . . Love . . .

. . . sees no fear.

Well, you say, "That's nice to know what it's like for Love, but it's not that way for me." No, and that's why we're talking, because it's supposed to be that for you. And it can be that as simply as you're neglecting to validate fear when it clutches you in the solar plexus.

When you neglect to validate it, when you dismiss it with an abiding conviction that it is illegitimate, it will leave and there will be no fear to deal with and there will be nothing to goad you into improving yourself. And if you have neglected to validate it because of the persistence of Vision, which you are having because you are actually engaged in the practice of the holy instant, you will have secured the stability of your clear Godlike Vision.

Being wholly without attack, it . . .

. . . Love . . .

. . . COULD not be afraid. Fear is attracted to what love sees not, and each believes that what the other looks upon does not exist.

Of course, Love Knows that fear does not exist. And the actuality of it is that fear doesn't exist to know that Love wouldn't see it.

Fear looks on guilt with just the same devotion that love looks on itself. And each has messengers which they send forth, and which return to them with messages written in the language in which their going forth was asked.

So, what is your task? What is your purpose? Your purpose is to decide not which messengers to send forth, but to decide to send forth Love, the messengers of Love to look for Love and return with confirmation of Love. And you thought I was going to say something about doing the other . . . no, not doing anything else. I'm not going to say, send out the messengers of Love and stop sending out the messengers of fear or hate. I'm going to say, send out the messengers of Love. And if you discover that you're not, [snaps fingers] stop! And send out the messengers of Love.

How do you do that, though? It's like, "Mother, may I?" I say, send out the messengers of Love and you must say, "Mother, may I" or "Father, may I?" And saying "Father, may I" means that you hesitated before acting on your own . . . turned to the Father, engaged in the holy instant and you're going to listen for whether the Father says to do this, that, or the other thing. And then you will do that! And of course, always the Father will tell you to send out the messengers of Love from the Love He is infilling you with.

Love's messengers are gently sent, . .

. . . in other words, without the excitement of thrill of sending out fearful ones, messengers of guilt that will prod your Brother into doing something or stimulate your advance. No.

Love's messengers are gently sent, . .

. . . you might say, boringly sent, but full of the Meaning of Love . . .

. . . and return with messages of love and gentleness.

You have no purpose apart from each other. And the purpose you have with each other is to send Love's messengers. To go into the meltdown no matter how dangerous it seems to be because your Brother and the truth about him is that important. And what you give you get to keep. And so your endeavor in spite of the danger, the so-called danger, will reveal to you no danger at all. And both of you will be held in perfection, healed or let us say, not in need of healing because perfection prevails.

On the other hand:

The messengers of fear are harshly ordered to seek out guilt, and cherish every scrap of evil and of sin which they can find, losing none of them on pain of death, and laying them respectfully before their lord and master. Perception cannot obey two masters, each asking for messages of different things in different languages. What fear would feed upon, love overlooks. What fear demands, love cannot even see.

Logic and your backgrounds would cause you, as you read the Course, to expect to find ways to cope with the awfulness of fear and guilt and to learn how to be the active Presence of Love that can be transformational all by yourself, on your own. And that can't happen. And that isn't what is called for.

What is called for is the silencing of that in you that wants to be great at your own hand, and join with the Father because your Brother is in need. Being willing to walk into the meltdown of whatever sort it might be because the truth about your Brother is that there could never have been a meltdown that makes him unworthy of your attention or that could in some way harm you by bringing your attention to your Brother by asking the Father, "What is the truth here? What is the meaning here? What is the experience here?" You see?

There's too much of an expectation that you're going to have to change someone else's mind, instead of becoming defenseless enough yourself in your joining with the Father to have the Father reveal to you the truth that's been there all along, in spite of your beliefs to the contrary and your convictions and the decisions you've arrived at on the basis of them.

It's time to be healed. It's time for every one of you to be healed of your misperceptions and your commitment to them. It's time for the Grace of God to rest upon you and inspire you so that you might be that witness for the truth about your Brother that heals. Not because you knew to begin with what would heal, and through your great skill practice it. But because in your innocence and your willingness to go into the meltdown with your Brother, you were in that place where the Father's Love could show up once again because you weren't blocking it. That's the simplicity of it.

What seems not to be so simple is to have the courage to practice the two-step, to actually shut up, to actually bring your attention full of curiosity to hear the Meanings that the Father is Expressing, by means of the Father revealing them to you and giving you a direct experience of communion with Him.

Now it's going to be too easy to listen to these words and think that they are "holy jabbering." I'm not talking spiritual talk. I'm talking about something in each one of you, as an experience of commitment, in the face of meltdown or danger or whatever, in the face of the limitations you've placed on everything. Taking the time to do what's out of the ordinary for you and silence the screaming words that tell you exactly why something can't happen or tell you exactly what there is about your Brother or your neighbor or another country that justifies your not listening, that justifies your not engaging in an act of caring. Because if you're not engaging in the act of caring, you're not engaging in the act of joining. And you're not engaging in the one and only means you have available to you for coming back into your right Mind.

Most of Waking up is a process of shutting up.

It's a process of doing less on your own, in your own right. It's a process of arriving where you're not doing anything on your own, because although, it's the only thing you're familiar with and everything seems to work, I'll tell you that "the way things work" is escaping you. And the joy and the invulnerability and the bliss and the safety and the absence of sin, sickness and death—these are all escaping you.

Why do you like to think? Why do you like to engage in all these things? Because the excitement of guilt is the engine that moves you to become something in your own right, at your own hand so that you can prove your validity. And all the time you're wasting your time attempting to do what has already been done *FOR YOU!

I love you. I love every single one of you. And I will persist in turning your attention where it needs to be. And I will continue to encourage you to abandon what isn't working, even though you might think it is. It is my task to inspire you to at least experiment with commitment, to see whether what I'm saying is the truth. To have the experience that proves that it is the truth and which will inspire you to persist by listening more closely within, more consistently and Wake up . . . experience the Atonement.

I look forward to being with your next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

October 14th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I'm going to share something with you—something that occurred during the first six months of my communion with Paul.

We arrived at a point where it was clear to me that he was conceiving of our communication as though I were reaching through “the veil” to talk to him as a human being in the middle of the human condition where he thought he was. And I had to share with him the good news which was, that contrary to the picture he had, it was more like him in a submarine sending up a periscope above the surface of the water, above the threshold, we'll say, of the veil and recognizing me and communing with me where I am, meaning, in a state of enlightenment, in a state of being Awake, even though I out of all of Creation, was the only part he was able to recognize and communicate with.

Now this is very important.

Because if you imagine that when you are doing the two-step and you are saying, “Father” or “Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?” and you hear an answer, you are in-filled with the conscious experience of truth that heals. It is not being provided to you as an orphan in the orphanage, or as a human being in the middle of the human condition. No. It means that in your intent to abandon your isolation, you have reached through the boundary where you can hear the Father, or you can hear the Holy Spirit, or you can hear me or your Guide.

Now this helps explain the difference in a graphical way, in a conceptual way that expresses the truth, how it is that you are not one among many, but are the One that constitutes the many. And so that you might not misconstrue that, let me put it this way: When you do the two-step and you abandon your isolation and your solid intent to be an independent agent in your own right, you move your attention into the experience of Atonement—into the experience of being Awake—and so your attention is no longer in the human condition as a human entity.

This is very important.

You are at that point, functioning as the holy Son or Daughter of God that you truly Are and always have been. When you make that connection, what happens is that you join with me or the Holy Spirit or the Father or your Guide—all of which function with the same intent—and with Us, you can turn around and look back at the situation or circumstance that caused you to reach out for help and see it from Our Perspective because that's where you're looking at it from. You see?

Again, the practice of the holy instant puts you in communion with the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind—or me who serves the same function as the Holy Spirit, or the Father who is always bestowing upon you His Perspective, the Truth of everything. And from that place with Us, you are able to turn around, abandoning or having abandoned the perspective that caused you to reach out for help in the first place, and look with Us to see the truth.

Now let's hear these words again. You are not one among many, which is what the human condition seems to be. You are the One that constitutes the many. Now you are the One that constitutes the many when you have engaged in the holy instant, when you have reached out for help and Help has been given and you are experiencing the Help and in that experience of Help, you are looking back at what you had called a problem with God's Perspective.

Now, is not God the One that constitutes the many? Is not God that which constitutes all of Creation forever, making it forever new by virtue of Being the Movement of Creation? That is what God is.

And so God's Experience is the experience of that. And it is your Birthright to be experiencing the same thing, because you've been given by the Father, no other capacity. Your function is to experience what the Father is Being. Your function is to experience the Meanings and only the Meanings that the Father is Embodying in the Movement of Creation.

So the experience of Atonement, the experience of Awakening is going to be one of a shift from the orphanage vantage point, the independent thinker vantage point, the independent receiver of truth vantage point, and you're going to move, I'm going to say for lack of better words, next to Us and turn around and look at what We're looking at, which is just exactly where you were a moment ago in your distress, but we're looking at it with the Father's Perspective.

So the healing of nations and the healing of individuals is a result of aligning with willingly, cooperatively, humbly, with the Father's Perspective which is your Birthright to be experiencing and looking on everything from There.

From There you will find no call for justice. You will find no justification for jealousy or judgment or revenge.

What you want is to be of sound Mind, not fragmented mind. And sound Mind is the experience of the divine eternal intelligence that God is Being right where you are as You in your wholeness.

So you see, it's never a matter of asking from the human condition, "What is the truth here about the human condition?" so that you in the human condition can address the human condition.

Be with that for a moment . . .

And what will you be? You don't know. And when you go into the holy instant not thinking you know what will come of it, you are in a position to experience divine Vision—divine realization—and have a new Perspective which is what is called for.

Just keep the visual in mind of you moving to my Side and then turning around and looking with me at the place where you just came from, looking at it with my Perspective which is the Father's Perspective, which it is your Birthright to be experiencing as your Perspective. You see?

That's how you find yourself experiencing Being the One that constitutes the many because you are experiencing what the Father is experiencing and in that, being co-creator, as I've said before, the co-operator with the Father. You see? That's when everything changes in a twinkling of an eye. And the twinkling of an eye in which everything can change can happen now . . . or by December 21st. You see?

It's time and it's not as complicated as you would make it.

Now most of you who are listening have had the experience of revelation or divine insight—divine communion with a divine Source—that has changed you. And you did not realize that when you had that experience, you weren't having it from the human condition on a planet that is part of a physical universe that come from a “Big Bang” and had nothing to do with a divine Source. You have had the experience of seeing from the Father’s Vantage Point. You have had a moment of illumination in which your divinity was being directly experienced, not successfully blocked by your intent to be a successful independent agent. That is what happened! It was you having an experience of your divinity. It was you Being the One that constituted the many because you were willing to look through the Eyes of that One that does constitute the many and you were not choosing to have a separate interpretation of it all, yourself.

Now let’s go into the book:

The fierce attraction which guilt holds for fear is wholly absent from love’s gentle perception.

It’s the difference between the orphanage perspective—of you being one amongst many—and the Father’s Perspective, the Perspective of the Holy Spirit, in which you are the One that constitutes the many inseparable from the whole.

What love would look upon is meaningless to fear, . . .

. . . you see? . . .

. . . and quite invisible.

But if you stop and think about it, when you reach out in the holy instant to ask for Help, you’re asking for the Help to look upon the meaningless and help you do something about it. And that’s not the answer because it doesn’t allow for your perspective changing so that you are seeing it from a place that Knows the answer which doesn’t call for the practice of force or powerful correction but allows your heart to melt so that Love flows and Love is received, and there is a gentleness of your spirit that was not present when you were in the state of reaction that caused you to be uncomfortable and ask for Help—engage in the holy instant.

Relationships in this world are the result of how the world is seen.

And I’m going to say, where it is seen from.

And this depends on which emotion was called on to send its messengers to look upon it, and return with word of what they saw. Fear’s messengers are trained through terror, and they tremble when their master calls upon them to serve him.

Now this sounds really ugly. Especially if you're the one in the middle of distress who is sending out messengers of fear to find proof that fear is called for, that fear is justified and that force can be appropriately brought to bear upon the situation. But indeed, when it comes right down to it and you're between a rock and a hard place, and your world seems to aggressively demand that you do something to protect yourself, you do indeed succumb to fear and you do indeed send out messengers of fear and that is when you find out how capable you seem to be to be a master of the messengers of fear who trained them through terror so that they tremble when you call upon them to serve you.

You can be pretty ugly when you are between a rock and a hard place. If things are relatively smooth and calm in your life, these things never surface and you say, "Well, I'm far from an agent of a horror movie, I'm far from that which promotes evil," but the fact is that . . .

Fear's messengers . . .

. . . your fear's messengers . . .

. . . are trained through terror, and they tremble when their master calls upon them to serve him. For fear is merciless even to its friends. Its messengers . . .

. . . the ones you send out for confirmation that there is justification for attack . . .

. . . steal guiltily away in hungry search of guilt, for they are kept cold and starving, and made very vicious by their master, who allows them to feast only upon what they return to him.

Mind you, this is talking about each one of you who, while still in the orphanage, engage in this kind of a context of being. Fortunately, the correction is simple. And fortunately, you cannot actually accomplish becoming what you are not. And so there is no penalty awaiting for you. There is just the suffering that you will be relieved of when you abandon your independence and reach "through the veil" to join with your Guide or the Holy Spirit or the Father humbly and with commitment.

No little shred of guilt escapes their hungry eyes.

. . . the messengers you send out . . .

And in their savage search for sin, they pounce on any living thing they see, . . .

... you see? [chuckle] There's not any real discrimination. They pounce on anything, guilty or not. They pounce on any aspect of the Kingdom of Heaven

...

... and carry it screaming to their master ...

... you ...

... to be devoured.

This is one of the reasons it is so important to engage in the holy instant. So that you do not ignorantly or with great purpose, indict and punish your fellowman or yourself or your body by sending out messengers looking for that which is awful and then believing the confirming news that they return to you, so that you end up condemning a Brother or a nation or a race or a situation that needs the healing unction of Love and not the presence of the justification of hate and fear to penalize it.

Send not these savage messengers into the world, to feast upon it, and to prey upon reality.

You hear that?

... and to prey upon reality.

To prey upon the Kingdom of Heaven that it all is. To prey upon the Sons and Daughters of God who they Are—the real actuality of the Presence of God manifest.

I've said it before, there's only one thing confronting you: Seeing either truly or through a glass darkly. And that one thing is Reality. That one thing is God's Creation. That one thing is the Movement of Creation occurring now. . . now . . . now . . . now . . . now. If you're seeing something different, don't believe it. Don't use what you're seeing as the basis for any action other than saying, "Father what is the truth here?" and then be quiet enough to hear the Father or me or the Holy Spirit so that you might, now that you're consciously with Us, turn around so that you can look at everything from where We're standing, where We're Being so that you might experience being the One that constitutes the many. The One that is inseparable from your Brothers and Sisters and all of Creation in its perfection—it's fullness.

Send not these savage messengers into the world, to feast upon it, and to prey upon reality. For they will bring you word of bones and skin and flesh.

Now, very simply what that means is: That when you are identifying as one among many, when you are one diligent independent agent trying to make yourself valid as an independent agent, you will find that you are identifying yourself as a body engaged in these activities:

... bones and skin and flesh.

Not only that, bones and skin and flesh that can be injured, decay and die—in other words, that which is mortal. That is the absurd and destructive perception of God's Creation: The manifestation of the Movement of God which is incapable of sin, disease or death, which is as eternal as the visibility and tangibility of all of the rest of Creation. But they will bring you the messengers you send out, the messengers of fear. . .

... they will bring you word of bones and skin and flesh.

And of course, it'll be talking about your Brothers and Sisters. But it confirms to you that what's true of them is true of you, which is of course, why you sent the messengers out in the first place.

They have been taught to seek for the corruptible, and to return with gorges filled with things decayed and rotted.

In other words, misperceived so badly, distorted so far out of the scope of Reality and of God's Creation that they present nothing Godlike, nothing divine, nothing perfect, nothing loveable.

To them such things are beautiful . . .

... why? . . .

... because they seem to allay their savage pangs of hunger.

They get to bring them home to their master and then they get to feed on them. And so they appreciate them because for a little while they feel full, they feel satisfied, justice has been served, purpose has been fulfilled, correction has been done. But there hasn't been a bit of healing.

For they are frantic with the pain of fear, and would avert the punishment of him who sends them forth by offering him what they hold dear.

That, no matter how well covered up, is the modus operandi of functioning as an orphan in a material world and universe where God is not seen.

But, continuing:

The Holy Spirit . . .

. . . umm, that which you have experienced as a result of being humble and engaging in the holy instant . . .

The Holy Spirit has given you love's messengers to send instead of those you trained through fear. They . . .

. . . Love's messengers . . .

. . . are as eager to return to you what they hold dear as are the others . . .

. . . the messengers for fear.

If you send them . . .

. . . Love's messengers . . .

. . . forth, they will see only the blameless and the beautiful, the gentle and the kind. They will be as careful to let no little act of charity, no tiny expression of forgiveness, no little breathe of love escape their notice. And they will return with all the happy things they found, to share them lovingly with you. Be not afraid of THEM. They offer you salvation. Theirs are the messages of safety, for they see the world as kind.

Okay . . . that paragraph sounds a little Polly Anna, doesn't it? Oh, sort of like the practice of positive thinking, overlooking what needs to be looked at, right? Pretending it's not there, right? Well, that's what the orphan thinks, that's what the independent agent thinks. Because the independent agent believes that he will succeed at becoming real as a result of dealing with and overcoming all of the evil, all the things that the messengers for fear have brought back to confirm that there is danger and that he needs or she needs to protect himself or herself. You see?

If you send forth only the messengers the Holy Spirit gives you, .

. . . which of course, takes trust because it's not been your habit.

If you send forth only the messengers the Holy Spirit gives you, WANTING no messages but theirs, you will see fear no more.

And the ego says, "Right!" And you will be more vulnerable than you've ever been before, because you're ignoring the facts, you're ignoring the reality that this is a world of conflict, this is a polarized world in which the positive and the negative are in constant content . . . constant conflict with each other, constant contest with each other so that there is a constant state of tension and misery.

And so you must face this suggestion and act contrary to it if you're going to reach out to the Holy Spirit and if you're going to benefit from the clarity of His teaching, the clarity which He will reveal to you about what is true and what is real and what is not, and what you no longer need to engage in.

The world will be transformed before your sight, cleansed of all guilt and softly brushed with beauty.

Now here's the key:

The world contains no fear which you laid not upon it.

As an orphan you're convinced that there is a world "out there" that has fearful things in it on its own, in its own right and you're the innocent victim of it. It's not true! But you will not find that it's not true until you engage in the holy instant and follow through and want no messages but the ones that Love's messengers bring back to you.

The world contains no fear which you laid not upon it. And none you cannot ask love's messengers to remove from it, and see it still.

If you ask Love's messengers to remove it, you will no longer be able to see it. Is that like an Ostrich sticking its head in the sand? No it's not! It's like you sticking your periscope up into the Father's Perspective and seeing the truth in which fear is not present and the results of fear are not present.

The Holy Spirit has given you His messengers to send to each other, . .

. . . your Brothers and Sisters and every part of Creation . . .

. . . and return to each with what love sees. They have been given to replace the hungry dogs of fear you sent instead. And they go forth to signify the END of fear.

Now this may all sound very impractical. Because you look out on a world and the very air-waves are full of pronouncements of threat and conspiracy and planned hatred and plots to undermine the peace of mankind, and it all seems to be very real and something that something must be done about.

But I've got to tell you something for perspective: You see a world full of microbes, germs, things that transmit disease, tendencies for bodies to be flawed and suddenly be sent into a tailspin of degeneration. You take medication to protect yourself against this virus or that germ because, not the air-waves, but the very air seems to be laden with danger.

Well, I will tell you something: There are people all around this globe who consciously and consistently engage in healing. And they do it by not paying attention to the messengers that would come back that say, "Oh, this body is terminally ill, this organ is actually being eaten away by this, that or the other thing." These people engaging in healing do not govern themselves according to the messengers which come and claim that there is uncorrectable disease, uncorrectable damage.

This is important.

They insist upon, in there way, practicing the two-step and saying, "Father, what is the truth here? Father, I know that what is presenting itself, the messengers that are coming to me are not telling me the God's honest truth. They are lying! No matter what x-ray shows what's happening, no matter how much physical evidence there is to it, I know that it is not Your Will, therefore, I am not going to trust these messengers. I am not going to attempt to cope with this as an independent agent, as one among many. But I choose to join with You Father, and listen for Your Voice, to have You reveal to me the truth that proves the lie to be a lie, to prove that the messengers are not legitimate or believable. And I'm going to stay with my connection with You until I see the evidence."

And the key is: That healings occur every day of every sort, from the eradication of terminal illness, to a festered sliver coming out spontaneously from a finger that it was embedded in.

Being the One that constitutes the many, means that there are no messages . .

. . . words of bones and skin and flesh . . .

. . . because in the holy instant is where the Father's laws prevail, where the laws of Creation prevail.

And so when those who practice healing everyday on this globe and experience the healings, they are demonstrating the fact that not anyone needs to believe the messengers of fear that they have sent out and that have come back and disturbed things. And without engaging in conflict, but engaging in joining with the Father or the Holy Spirit or me and turning around and looking at the situation with Us, they find NOTHING THERE. In other words, they discover what could be called spontaneous healing, even instantaneous healing. You see?

You listen to the news and you don't join while you're listening, and you come to the conclusion that: "Man, you gotta go out and get those bastards. Do somethin to 'em! Make 'em hurt until they stop!" Keep your attention on what the messengers for fear have returned to you—the negative interpretations, even the apparent behaviors of people, which like an organ being consumed by cancer seems to state is something real to be forced out of the situation, forced out of the world. No. Stop it!

When you hear these things and you're inclined to believe them and get revved up about it, riled up about it, so that you send out even more messengers of fear looking for further confirmation of how dangerous things are so that you might bring more force into play in changing something, which if you practice the holy instant, will become obvious to you is an illusion, no matter how real it seems to be.

Again, I must return to this: Diseases are healed every day, not by forcing a body, not by forcing a physical process to change, but by abandoning the perspective from the orphanage, joining with the Holy Spirit or the Father or me or your Guide where We are, and turning around and looking at what prompted you to join Us from Our vantage point.

Healing occurs and it's miraculous because force is never involved.

If you send forth only the messengers the Holy Spirit gives you, WANTING no messages but theirs, you will see fear no more.

You will see no cancer consumed organ. And the x-rays will say there is perfection here. Because there is a God and there is Creation, and the Creation is as perfect as the singularity of the Father, which disallows for polarization, conflict. This is the truth.

Again, it happens as a result of your coming to where We are and turning around and looking with Us at the place you came from, so that you might see it with Our Perspective, with your true Perspective, free of delusions.

Then you could say:

Love, too, would set a feast before you, on a table covered with a spotless cloth, set in a quiet garden where no sound but singing and a softly joyous whispering is ever heard.

"Oh, yeah, this is too good to be true, this is fantasy." Embrace it as the truth, else you will stand in denial of it and distance yourself from its experience.

This is a feast which honors your holy relationship, and at which everyone is welcomed as an honored guest.

Even the ones whom before you practiced the holy instant, seemed to be the justification for your suffering, that it would have seemed could receive no relief without the bringing of force to bear upon the “bastard” or “bastards.”

And in a holy instant grace is said by everyone together, as they join in gentleness before the table of communion. And I will join you there, as long ago I promised and promise still. For in your new relationship am I made welcome. And where I am made welcome, there I AM.

Where I am welcome, there is the Holy Spirit. Where I am welcome, there is the Father. And where I am welcome, there is You. And where I am and where You are, there is no “bastard” to be dealt with.

The belief is that cancer—most forms of cancer—are terminal. There are beliefs that other forms of disease are terminal, but healing of them is occurring everyday through the shift, in one form or another, from being one amongst the many to being the one that constitutes the many because you have let the One that constitutes the many be your Mind. And you are willing to look at everything from the vantage point of that Mind which is the One that constitutes the many—meaning God. And in that act you come into the full conscious experience of your, capital “S” Self. That’s what this is all about.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

October 21st 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Last time we ended up hearing that:

Love, too, would set a feast before you, . . .¹

. . . and what I want everyone to understand is that existence, the very experience of Being at this very moment for every single one of you, is an experience of Love setting a feast before you . . . except that you're not experiencing it because you're preoccupied with seeing everything through your definitions.

Nevertheless, you could say that the Movement of Creation is Itself Love setting a feast before you. That's the only thing confronting you ever: A feast being set before you by the Father's Love Moving and constituting all of Creation.

And then we read further last time:

And in a holy instant grace is said by everyone together, as they join in gentleness before the table of communion.

. . . In a holy instant: that which happens when you stop and do the two-step and enter into the holy instant.

When you enter into the holy instant what happens? You stop asserting yourself. You let peace reign. You let peace be present because you have shut up your thinking. And you are willing to experience being conscious without a thought. And through your practice of meditation, your practice of the two-step—the holy instant—you learn to stay in the stillness for longer and longer periods of time, not just fleeting moments.

That peace that you allow is the state of Grace. It's the state of Grace because in the silence you are not practicing judgment, you are not practicing independence, you are not continuing to affirm your divorce from your Father—you are in the womb, if you will. You are in the vestibule between the orphanage and Creation Itself—the direct experience of It. You are in that place where the shift can occur—the sudden shift of perception that is called, “the Miracle.”

. . . [And] in a holy instant grace is said by everyone together as they join in gentleness before the table of communion.

The holy instant is communion. The holy instant is when you experience the Presence of the Father directly. It's when you experience the Presence of the Holy Spirit as that which is nothing more than your right Mind—the totality of clear conscious awareness.

And in that communion you learn how to see truly because the Holy Spirit, myself, the Father too, have only one intent when communion occurs and that is to have you look with Us at everything you have been looking at but from our Perspective so that you might enjoy and appreciate It as your Perspective. And in that experience, remember that it used to be your Perspective. And in that discovery, in that awareness, you are able to willingly yield to your Birthright as the holy Son or Daughter of God seeing everything and confirming it for what it truly Is because you're seeing it as the Father sees it and in that you confirm Creation, you confirm the Father's Will.

Now, continuing in the book:

I am made welcome in the state of grace, . . .

. . . meaning in the silence, which I could say is graced by the absence of your willfulness and the dreary results of it.

I am made welcome in the state of grace, which means you have at last forgiven me.

Well, that may seem strange. Some of you might not ever have thought that you were holding anything against me that you needed to forgive me for. But at the very least, when you have looked upon Creation, when you have looked upon all that God is Being and you have said, “But I would rather define it myself,” you have denied Creation. You have condemned it to a level of unworthiness in your mind. Because what is becoming worthy only to you in your mind is your ability to redefine Creation for your purposes so that you might become a god in your own right—the definer of things without a source of your own.

So . . .

I am made welcome in the state of grace, which means you have at last forgiven me.

You have come into the silence and allowed the silence, valued what's in the womb of silence rather than what you could fill the silence with. And so you have come without judgment—completely without judgment. And that is forgiveness.

For I became the symbol of your sin, and so I had to die instead of you.

Well, of course that's not true, but that is the mutual agreement and definition that the majority of you have accepted, agreed to and hold to.

To the ego . . .

. . . in other words, from this independent stance . . .

. . . sin MEANS death, and so Atonement is achieved through murder.

In other words, the ultimate of the religion, you might say, of the ego, is murder and that is Atonement. Whereas in actuality, Atonement is Life—Life restored as It divinely and truly is—because you have been willing to become still and let It register with you on the Holy Spirit's terms, on the Father's terms. You see?

Salvation is looked upon as a way by which the Son of God was killed instead of YOU.

Whew! It's not true. But that is the way it's looked upon, that is the mutual agreement and its continued practice will disallow for the holy instant, will disallow for you rejoining with your right Mind . . . being totally integrated once again consciously as the holy Son or Daughter of God that you Are. That's the truth.

Yet would I offer you my body, . . .

. . . in death, I'm adding . . .

... you whom I love, KNOWING its littleness?

No. I would never have done that and I didn't do that.

Or would I teach that bodies can [not] keep us apart?

No. I wouldn't do that either.

Mine was no greater value than yours; no better means for communication of salvation, but NOT its Source.

... In other words, my body like yours, there can be no better means than it. .

... for communication of salvation, but it is NOT [its] Source.

... of salvation.

No-one can die for anyone, and death does not atone for sin. Yet you can LIVE to show it is not real.

You can LIVE to show that sin is not real.

The body DOES appear to be the symbol of sin, while you believe that it can get you what you want.

You, you poor little orphan who insists on being an orphan and becoming a valid individual—a valid presence—an eternally, identifiably real, divinely real entity through your private efforts. And how are you going to do that? You do it through the use of your body. Your body is the means by which you control your reality into your experience at the expense of your Brothers and yours at the expense of your Brothers' misuse and misunderstanding of you.

While you believe that it can give you pleasure, you will also believe that it can bring you pain.

When you got the divorce, in your imagined state of independence you are denying the Reality—God's Reality of you—and then you're trying to make yourself Real and in the process you are subject to pleasure and pain.

To think you could be satisfied and happy with so little is to hurt yourself, and to limit the happiness that you would have, calls upon pain to fill your meager store and make your lives complete.

In the absence of your wholeness, in the absence of your peace, in the absence of the harmony and security and inviolability of your Being, which you have denied, it . . .

. . . calls upon pain to fill your meager store and make your lives complete.

And of course, as we discussed, the experience of pain and the experience of guilt—whatever hurts—is used by you to further commit yourself to your plan of salvation which is to achieve your wholeness on your own. And that, because it cannot be done, causes you to be confronted by the impossibility, which you experience as threat and imposition and unwarranted blocking of your path, which it is your task to overcome in order to win the prize, to get the brass ring, to become Real.

This IS completion, as the ego sees it. For guilt creeps in where happiness has been removed, and substitutes for it.

It comes in with fear as well, as we said, the moment you committed with your divorce from your Father you were confronted with the pair: guilt and fear.

I'm going to add the word "but," before I continue with the next sentence.

[But] Communion is another kind of completion, which goes beyond guilt, because it goes beyond the body.

Communion: Joining with me, joining with the Holy Spirit, joining with the Father in communion—in actual connection—not like a babe nestling into a soft blanket and having some experience of communion with its softness and its warmth, but a connection in which communication, dialog, two-way, reciprocal experience is had.

Now, that is the function of the holy instant. And to make it clear: When you engage in the holy instant and you find yourself being communicated with, when you find yourself being in-filled with answers, with understanding, with experience that goes beyond the bounds of any experiences you have had so far, when you abide with your Guide or the Holy Spirit and, as we discussed last week, you with your Guide or the Holy Spirit turn and look at whatever it was that prompted you to turn to your Guide, to practice the holy instant, you together with your Brother's perspective, mine, or the Holy Spirit's Perspective will see a forgiven world. You will see the Kingdom of Heaven, which is no longer being obscured by the definitions you embrace now and are so confident about.

Now, just as with Paul right now, when he is being with me in this fashion, in the holy instant, he is perfectly capable of relating to you or anything in the room. His body is present, but he is not identifying with it. As it says in the Course, he has laid it aside, which doesn't mean he's let it die, to decompose and disappear into the nothingness of all illusions. No. It means that when you turn to communion, it takes you beyond the body, it takes you beyond the self-defense that it's used for, or the coercion that it's used for to get your way, to get what you want. It means that it is here to serve not your will, but the purpose and Meaning of Being, as it is unfolding in the holy instant. You see what I mean?

Don't ever be troubled by the term "setting the body aside, laying the body aside." You will lay the use you have put it to aside, when you decide to engage in the holy instant, when you decide to abandon your best judgments, your best thinking, your best concepts, and in the silence brought on by their absence, you reach out and you say, "Father, Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? What is it my Birthright to be experiencing, because I am whole and because I am the holy Son or Daughter of God to Whom I'm turning and from Whom I wish to gain my understanding of what everything Really is."

Your body does not disappear but it ceases to be used for the purposes that the ego would have used, which is to lovelessly control everyone and everything, to serve the selfish purposes of the one identifying with the body. The result of that is war. The result of that is murder, death, disease—a state of conflict in which one thing attacks another thing and brings about its submission or its demise. To give this up is not a sacrifice.

So again, it becomes clearer how significant the holy instant is and what its Meaning and its function is and what you can expect to experience, or the nature of what you can expect to experience.

I am here to invite and motivate you to go against everything you have known, and use this simple means of doing it, which is to "shut up!" It is simple. Become still. Value the stillness because in the stillness that is not objected to, you experience or are experiencing the state of Grace in which Atonement can occur, in which coming back into your right Mind can occur. And you will find yourself experiencing stability, immovability like the Rock of Gibraltar that can't be swayed by winds of change or opinions or any of the things that would have caused you fear in the past. It brings you into that place, as we've said before, where *God's laws prevail and your holiness is the undeniable fact of you in your very own consciousness.

Bring this Gift of Grace to your Brothers, your Sisters, your Fellowman. It is meant to transform the world and restore it in your awareness to its original and ever-present state of perfection.

Now I'm going to stop here for tonight and I encourage you all to gently abide with what I've shared tonight during this coming week. And if it seems difficult, if it seems to be useless, if you seem to not be accomplishing anything, don't stop. You are doing something that flies right in the face of all of your confidences. And so it takes persistence to break down the confidences. It takes persistence to inspire you to persist with a lighter heart! Communion is inevitable in the holy instant.

I am there in the holy instant. Love is setting a feast before you. I am setting a feast before you. The Holy Spirit is setting a feast before you. And you are invited to it. And you have always been invited to it. And you are always welcome to it because you are not a sinner. You are the holy Son or Daughter of God experiencing it clearly or through a glass darkly. But whichever way you are seeing it, you are nevertheless the holy Son or Daughter of God unchangeably.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

November 5th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Tonight there is something important that I want to share with everyone and we won't be going into the book. And before we do . . . before I do, I want to take a few moments to be quiet together.

(Quiet time)

Okay. We've spent a lot of time talking about the holy instant. In fact, I imagine some of you are wondering when we will get on with things and have something new to think about—something new to stretch your imagination and your boundaries.

But the holy instant is so fundamental and so important that I want not to move on until it sinks in deeply—registers deeply—so that your behavior changes, so that you begin to be in a new way. It is this beginning to be in a new way that constitutes Atonement, that constitutes Awakening, that constitutes the fruits of everything that the Course teaches.

Now we've discussed the fact that Awakening is not a private affair. You cannot, no one can in an independent fashion, learn enough to Wake up. It's impossible because it leaves an essential element out. And the essential element that it leaves out is your Brother and your Sister. And foremost, it leaves out God.

The holy instant is to be used for a specific purpose. And that is to establish and nurture a holy relationship. It's that simple. That's why Awakening is not a private affair. It is a matter of relationship. It is a matter of involvement, not involvement of the sort that one engages in, in the orphanage, in the place of independence, but that which occurs in peace and in the atmosphere and substance of Love.

In the environment of the orphanage, relating is always a matter of control—of governing to the best of each one's ability the environment that the group finds itself in. And so you might say, everyone participates in government.

But the problem is that the government is based upon a fundamental idea or misbelief called "independence." And so government is a matter of independent factions or elements all working for and against each other in grand ways. I mean by that, huge complicated ways so as to create order and fulfillment of goals that have been set by all these independent governing agents. You see?

And so relationships are a constant argument. Relationships are a constant, we'll say, disagreement that is being forced into agreement. It's always tense. Because each one is simultaneously attempting to control others—govern others—while at the same time doing his best to not be controlled by the others. This is the tension, this is the polarization and it is accepted as the normal fundamental nature of existence.

And so it's never called into question. It's just lived.

Now that's not what the holy instant is about. Because the holy instant is entered into for the purpose, as I said, of establishing and nurturing a holy relationship. Meaning, a relationship that is, I'm going to say, initiated by one who turns in the silence of his thinking—the absence of his thinking—to the Father and says, "Father, what is the truth here about this one I'm in relationship with?" or "What is the truth about this thing that I am in relationship with?" You see?

It's not a question seeking positive affirmative satisfying answers about one's self but about another. You see? And you're well aware from all of the sharing's that we've had together that this is the secret, you might say, it's the surprise. The way you get to Wake up is by caring more about someone you're in relationship with than yourself.

You know, in almost every religion there is an equivalent to the Golden Rule and the rule is set above others by being called, "Golden." And the Golden Rule is "thou shalt do unto others as you would have them do unto you."¹ The Golden Rule is a rule of behavior, of your behavior toward another. The Golden Rule doesn't say, "force others to behave toward you the way you would behave toward them." You're not the focus of the Golden Rule. The one you're in relationship with is.

Being in an orphanage is a result of a false position that has been taken that says, “I have no Father, I have no Mother, I have no Source.” And it’s not true. And everything that is done from that standpoint is selfish. It is independence carried to the extreme. And it never does what solves the problem that everyone through his or her independence is attempting to get away from.

The only thing that will solve the problem is to care more about another than you care about yourself.

Now that’s the new governance. That’s the uncommon governance. “I wish to see the truth. I wish to see the God’s honest truth about my Brother. And I refuse to act on any other basis than that which becomes clear to me when in the silence I ask for clarity and it is given.” You see?

I know you get the picture. But everyone needs to get the picture clearly enough to consciously put it into practice so that your behavior changes. Because until the behavior changes, you’re still in the orphanage and you’re still in the place where government arises out of a sense of inadequacy that has to be overcome at the expense of others. And of course for those others, it’s at your expense.

And so you must be wary of governance that arises in your mind or in the minds of others around you that doesn’t arise out of a clear experience of wholeness . . . of your wholeness that has become clear to you as an experience because you’ve shut up your independent thoughts, acts and reasoning’s, and you’ve said in the absence of them, “What is the God’s honest truth here that I don’t remember, that I don’t seem to yet know? What is it? I will persist in listening for that until I hear it. Because I understand from what I’m being taught that this is the way out of illusion.”

Now your globe is in a great state of upheaval. Governments are problematic because those in government believe that they are orphans and that the only way to attain order is through control based upon ideas, ideas which are based in a misunderstanding—a misunderstanding about everything you’re in relationship with—that it’s certainly not holy, that it’s certainly not trustworthy, that it is certainly flawed and that its flaws will always surface in mean-spirited, thoughtless, manipulative acts.

It’s inevitable that this is the way social being will work because of the nature of the “animal” of that which everyone is in relationship with. You see?

This is what everyone must step out of. And the stepping out of it is accomplished again, through the practice of the holy instant for the purpose of establishing and nurturing a holy relationship—a relationship which is established and nurtured according to the clarity of the Father's Mind and the Father's Love that He shares with you so that you might embody It and be new.

Now when there are relationships, there are naturally or there is naturally, cooperation. Cooperation is a "working together." Cooperation is not a means of successfully controlling.

It's important to see that difference. It's important to see it so that you don't inadvertently get caught up in engaging in control instead of cooperation. And it's important because you're not going to be able to see the truth about your Brother or relate to him constructively if you think that the absence of control will bring about chaos.

The holy instant calls upon everyone to risk the chance that no one is really an orphan. And that if one approaches his Brother or Sister as though he or she is the holy Son or Daughter of God, you will not get stabbed in the back, that there will not be a price to pay because until you bring that faith to your relationship, there will not be the elements necessary for both of you to relax and be in a new way, from a new paradigm.

Now as I said, in relationships there is cooperation . . . there is cooperation.

Now for cooperation to be constructive and fulfilling you must understand where those you are cooperating with are coming from. Are they coming from the orphan mentality or are they coming from a connectedness with the Father's Perspective? Are they coming from the place where all the details of relationship are manipulative, combative, controlling, where everyone is afraid of everyone else and therefore can't truly afford to care because caring is dangerous and makes you vulnerable because you don't have your guard up?

You must pay attention! Because if you're going to cooperate you're going to have to make some choices—choices as to whom you will cooperate with.

Now the other vantage point of course, the other option for this cooperation, is one where the Golden Rule comes into play and has meaning: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." You know, that at the bottom line, when you're not caught up in your ego-mentality, caring is important. Being cared about is important. Humanity is important. The experience of humaneness is important.

These are the fundamentals upon which the holy instant and holy relationships grow and thrive. But they start simply. They don't start with highfalutin ideas. They don't start with being great. They don't start with grand ideas that everyone must conform to in order to build a huge structure of magnificent excellence of agreements and definitions and meanings that everyone must abide by and ultimately serve. No.

True government arises out of one's ability to connect with what? Not success! Not importance! . . . but one's capacity to recognize and engage with need. Do you hear that?

The road to salvation . . . the road to salvation is the road where needs are felt, paid attention to and corrected. And so you could say that Awakening is going to be a Movement among the needy. And that really means, those who aren't puffed up with their own importance and their own grand ideas that everyone must gather around and conform to, so that importance can be achieved and shared. But of course, not shared fully with the one who didn't generate it, which leaves things still in a state of contest, orphan mentality, actions, activities, events. You see? That's not what's needed.

So, if you want to move forward in terms of Awakening, in terms of, let's say, being on a true path, the call is for you to acknowledge your neediness and to be willing to recognize and not stand in judgment of others' neediness so that all of you in need might join together in Love—the desire to see the need corrected, to see the need fulfilled—so that need is no longer experienced.

But as you can see, this is only going to happen with humble . . . with humbleness, with humble people, with humble participants in relationships.

Now, as you observe the things that are going on in your world today and the contentiousness and the threat and everything else, you're going to have to make a choice as to whom you're going to actively participate with. Those from the orphan mentality—the mentality of lack which exists to be overcome, which always involves righteousness and judgment: us and them, higher and lower and so on, you're going to have to be willing to say, "No, I will not join with and support that, because there is no humanity in it. There is no caring about one's Brother or Sister in it. You see?

This is important.* And you're going to need to take a look at it because choices need to be made if correction of the situation is going to occur. And what I am making very clear and what I'm explaining in a way so that you can relate what the Course has been teaching to everyday real life, I'm saying: Align yourselves with, cooperate with those who recognize the existence of need and value the individualities who are experiencing need so that answers can be brought in the simplest most direct way to the correction of the need because the result of Love is simple.

Love is simplicity. Caring is an urging, an urgency that seeks to find wholeness that gives relief from need. Whatever apparent structures are built upon the recognition of need and the listening for how the simple human need can be met will lead to the correction of the situation on your globe. I'm saying the correction of the situations [Raj emphasizes the plural] on your globe.

There is much relaxing into peace. There is much letting go into natural order that needs to occur and can occur. But you must avoid governance applied to you or that you apply to others. You must avoid such that arises not out of caring and love, but the fulfilling of some concept of righteousness.

If attention and nurturance is given to that which does not support humanity, salvation will not be arrived at, correction will not be arrived at, further pain and distress will come into the picture.

Join with those who value humanity. Your Brother, on the lowest rung of some conceptual ladder is your salvation. Everyone in a state of need is your savior because he or she gives you the one to have a holy relationship with. Relationships with orphans distract you from having a holy relationship because it keeps you in a state of excitement as well as defense and it maintains a wall between everyone. It's not what the truth is about. It's not what the Course is about.

Be willing only to join with those who recognize and acknowledge need and see those needs to be the things to be directly expressed—simply addressed as mutual Brotherly love that provides the simple answer, because the simple answer is available.

Value your humanity. Don't despise it and try to rise above it. Your needs need to be attended to, even though they are not real, even though they are the result of unclear thinking . . . of mistakes that weren't seen as mistakes and keep getting repeated and on and on.

Demand that those whom you would be willing to cooperate with and those who want you to cooperate with them, demand of them that you want the attention to be given to humanity, humaneness, Brotherly love, because you care and because everyone needs everyone else to witness for them. That's the simple truth.

What do you think is happening when one engages in the two-step, in the holy instant and a holy relationship emerges and is nurtured? What do you think is happening? That happens because you've been willing to stop thinking about yourself and wanting to know what the truth about your Brother is.

Why would you want to know the truth about your Brother? Because your knowing it constitutes you being a witness for his holiness. You see?

Whew . . . the day of the self-made-man is past. It never was valid. The time for relationships is here because the infiniteness of God's Creation is an infiniteness of holy relationships. And God in them will only become clearly apparent, clearly manifest when everyone is insisting upon the fruits of caring, the correction of suffering, the solving of need. This is the wonderful simple truth.

But again I must say, a change in behavior needs to occur. Not just a change of a repertoire of ideas and thoughts to be mulled-over, thought about and expressed with others . . . actual change.

Whenever you put yourself in position of allowing others to speak for you which cannot be avoided in the process of cooperation, always be sure of the foundation from which that one works. Is he a controller, a manipulator? Is he one who sees wealth and success as the thing to be served? Or is he one who values humanity and who bases everything he does with everyone else on the meeting of needs and the increase of humanity, humanness, human kindness in the world. Don't join with the selfish ones, else you will promote his or her goals and you will suffer from them as well.

It's time globally for everyone to do the thing that seems to be the weakest thing, the most ineffective thing that you could do, certainly nothing that would move mountains. And yet, the need is simple. You engage in caring and desiring humaneness enough to shut up your own egotistic controlling efforts. And in the silence listen and ask, "What is the truth here about my Brother? What is the truth about the situations in my community, in my town, in my country that needs to be corrected with humaneness as its foundational attribute?" And give your attention to that. Let that caring supersede your inclination to be frustrated and expressing your frustration.

Start using your mind in a new way, in the simple way of Love and put your brothers and sisters on notice that that's what you want from them as well.

Let others know it's important to you. It's important to everyone! But someone has to stand up and start saying it, putting it in the air to give others who are afraid, the courage to say it and put it in the air. And until you say it, those who would attempt to govern mean-spiritedly, competitively, and to your disadvantage, they need to hear that this is the kind of governance you want . . . that this is the kind of relationship you want. You see?

This will constitute the beginning of transformation on your globe. No one is powerless. I'm not talking about the kind of power that is expressed by those who seem to be in charge. No one is powerless when it comes to the use of their mind. And everyone has the capacity to choose what they are going to give their attention to.

You can without interference, choose to do the two-step. In other words, stop, shut up and ask, “What is the truth here?” That’s the engagement called the holy instant. And when you move into the holy instant, you are aware God’s laws prevail. You are aware the Movement of Reality that meets the human need, comes forth. And in solving the human need, demonstrates humanity. You see?

That’s where everyone is at. And everyone has the power of self-governance that without fail, will work.

I love you all.

Begin to give to your world the support it needs for transformation by valuing humanity, humaneness, the meeting of the need, and stick with it because there has arisen in you a caring brought by your desire to know the truth about your Brother so that you might be able to witness for him from the clarity that has filled you up. That’s the task now.

I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

November 12th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

In the practice of the two-step, you employ the practice of peace. You choose for the silence in you—that altar in you—which is not occupied by the business of your personal private thoughts. And in that silence within, not giving preference to your attention to things without, you ask to know the Truth. You ask to have the Father's Perspective, which I have been telling you has been placed in you from the Beginning and has never left.

Now in the process of choosing for your peace, there are four things that have to be met or dealt with, or passed by, moved beyond, let's put it that way. These are: the desire to get rid of the peace which we've already discussed and as we're going to talk about tonight, The Belief that the Body is Valuable for what it Offers. The next obstacle is The Attraction of Death. And the last obstacle is The Fear of God.

If you sit quietly contemplating these four items you'll find that each one is, shall I say, progressively more difficult to cope with or progressively presents a more difficult obstacle to get past. Fear of God is the last.

Now, these four things are dealt with in the order that you can handle most easily. Choosing for your peace in the holy instant is the easiest, it's easier than actually abandoning the fear of God or the fear of what God's Presence would do to you considering who you think you are presently, which is a mortal, a sinner, a flawed presence that must improve itself but as long as it hasn't, there is a still the penalty for the flaws that God will surely meet you with. And so you couldn't possibly deal with the fear of God first.

The willingness to embrace peace—to let go of what objects to it—is the easiest. And it opens the door for communion with the Holy Spirit or with the Father. It opens the door, you might say, briefly but easily, and it puts you in the position of being able to hear divine Guidance even if it is brief. And its continued practice allows it to happen more frequently, more easily, and the communion changes you. The communion reduces your fear of peace and prepares you to be able to take on the second obstacle to peace with not only more confidence but more understanding.

Now the second obstacle is:

[III.] The Belief the Body is Valuable for What it Offers.¹

Well my goodness, what does the body offer each of you? What it offers you is, shall I say, the manifest presence of force that enforces and embodies physically, the presence of you. That's what it does. It provides you with the capacity to be in control through the use of force, even if the only force you are exercising is yelling at someone—a strong voice, a committed sound, the presence of, or shall I say, the absence of weakness. Still, it's the use of force for the purpose of controlling, influencing, making things happen.

Now we have talked in the past about the fact that as an infant, you experienced physical sensations not only of what you learned to call your body but the body of your mother, the body of your father, the bodies of your brothers and sisters and you experienced each of them as discrete presences just as you experienced yourself as a discrete presence. But the thing that escaped your attention and the thing that your parents and siblings could not educate you about and inform you about, was the fact that you are not the discrete body you thought you were and no one else was the discrete body they appeared to be. But you and they were the presence of Mind—consciousness experiencing all of these experiences of form and tangibility. You see?

It escaped everyone's attention that they were Mind, not body.

And so, all of the developmental processes in growing up reinforced and confirmed the misunderstanding—the misperception—until someone came along like me, or until someone engaged in mediation and inadvertently, we'll say, engaged in the two-step and the holy instant, discovered that Mind was the ground of Being, not matter, not form.

Now someone is educating you and making available the truth about existence in a manner that can easily reach everyone. And so you are all learning to make a shift.

Now it's important to understand this because there are misperceptions about it and I've talked about them before too. Basically it is this: The Course says:

I am not a body, I am still free to be as God created me.

Now because of the absolute identification with form that everyone has been involved in, this statement seems to say that a spiritual understanding of things means that bodies are illusions. And it's not true. There is that which identifies you. There is that which makes you experienceable. And I've said this many times and it continues to need to be said in order to facilitate the shift of consciousness that constitutes a miracle.

Now you are not a body but you are not bodiless. You are not without that which identifies you. And yes, you are still free to be as God created you. Which means you are still free to be the Mind—the conscious awareness in which all experience of Creation occurs, in which all Ideas of Mind are experienced as being substantial to the Mind that formed them, but without ever becoming less than the Idea that is rendered visible. To become less than the Idea would be to become the visibility—the identification. And that is not what you are. And that is the misperception that Awakening pulls you out of.

That is why the belief that the body is valuable for what it offers is something that peace moves across as it shifts your perception.

Now when you are angry, when you are perturbed, when you are irritated, you experience physical sensations. When you are depressed, there is a thickness in the head. It's not a headache but it's as though a scull-cap is on and weighing heavily and pressing down so that it's a downward feeling. There's a sensation usually, you think you experience it first, and so you think that depression has come over you when in fact there is an idea—an idea of a loss of power, an idea of being inconsequential, ineffective, incapable through force and the use of your body to do anything to lift yourself up.

And you believe it. You don't challenge it and say, "Wait a minute . . . Father, are You giving me these sensations? Holy Spirit, is this a true experience I'm having? Am I depressed? Do I need to find a way through the use of my body to exert force to establish the presence of me in the world?"

Well the answers are no, of course. And yet it's very hard to abandon them because you have the physical sensations—the physical sensations you value. You think they are important. You think they must be acted upon or you think that you are obligated to let them act upon you and you must just suffer.

Again, it's not true. And it does arise out of the fact that you feel that the body has essential value to you because it will keep you alive. It will allow you to become a success. It will allow you to create and maintain order. Of course it will be your personal private sense of order and not one that takes into consideration everyone and everything. And so peace must move across this obstacle.

Now, I want you to pay attention—you must pay attention to your frame of mind. You must watch to see when the emotions shift and when they seem justified and when they seem to call for a show of force of one form or another to save you . . . to make you safe!

“Well . . .” you say, “Nothing ever happened to my benefit if I or someone else didn’t exert a little force and make changes so that there was greater harmony. Nothing has ever happened without the expression of power—physical power.”

Now it’s not true. Think about it for a moment.

Has no one ever experienced transformation of one sort or another—sometimes miraculous—occurring because of the presence of Love embodied by you or someone else? Has no transformation occurred as a result of a sudden shift of perception, as a result of your mind being imbued with something miraculous above and beyond your personal capacity to conceive?

Of course this has happened. But it doesn’t occur to you that total and complete safety, absolute invulnerability is your Birthright when you engage in the holy instant and you let yourself, your Mind—the presence of Mind that you Are—be filled with the Love and the Grace that the Father bestows upon you, that your experience is being bestowed upon you because you’re not objecting to it as much as in the past? You see? Your Birthright—your wholeness—lies in the complete absence of the use of body as a means of reinforcing a sense of the presence of you in the world that not only changes the world but that others recognize, we’ll say, as a force to be reckoned with. You see?

It’s difficult to give this up because it is a misperception that occurred within moments after birth and you were flooded with sensations and you were completely ignorant of the fact there was Something experiencing the sensations. There was Mind. You see?

Now let’s go into the book:

We said that peace must first surmount the obstacle of your desire to get rid of it. Where the attraction of guilt holds sway, peace is not WANTED.

You see? Because you have more important things to do that are active and that arise out of the stimulus of fear and excitement and this is interpreted by you to mean that it's the vitality of life motivating you to engage in discovery. And it's your nature to discover. You're a discovery mechanism. You're here to do that!

So you don't want peace because you say, "Peace? Well nothing exciting can happen there. Nothing like fear is there to motivate me." And so on. We discussed this at some length.

Now . . .

The second obstacle that peace must flow across, . .

. . . you get that? . . . flow across, flow across like water across a river-bed when the first rains of Spring come. It flows. It doesn't bull-doze its way through. It lets itself through. It flows. No act of force required.

The second obstacle that peace must flow across, and closely related to the first, is the belief that the body is valuable for what it offers.

And we've just discussed what it offers: The presence of force, the presence of energy that can motivate and make things happen!

For here is the attraction of guilt made manifest in the body, and SEEN in it.

You see? First of all you want not to have peace so that you can respond to the stimuli of fear which will move you to become more than you are. And then the second part of it is that you have a body with which to accomplish these goals—these needs. You see? The first part isn't true and the second part isn't true.

You are not a body but you are still as God created you to be. And so that which identifies you continues to identify you even though you are not using it as your focal point of action. You are recognizing your Mind, your conscious awareness as that Presence of attention which follows, which flows with the Movement of Creation without force.

And then as we've said, in your giving It your attention and flowing with It, you are confirming the Movement of Creation that God is Being and you are co-partnering with God, you are cooperating with God, you are confirming the Movement of Creation by virtue of your attention.

So . . .

This the value that you think peace would rob you of.

Meaning this, the body—that which gives force to your presence.

This the value that you think peace would rob you of. This is what you believe that it would dispossess, and leave you homeless.

You see? You think [chuckles] just like you do when you hear the statement: “I am not a body I am still free to be as God created me,” you think that statement is going to dispossess you of the visibility and tangibility of your individuality which you have called “your body” and which you have defined within the first thirty seconds of your birth.

This is what you believe that it would dispossess, and leave you homeless. And it is this for which you would deny a home to peace.

You see? Now you might experience peace and the holy instant and the Guidance and inspiration that naturally accompanies it. But you can't seem to hold onto the experience. And so it passes and you have to renew it. And so you practice the holy instant frequently. And each time you practice it, it becomes easier. And each time you practice it the duration of the peace increases. But then life interferes and calls for you to use your body as the force that identifies your presence in a way that allows for control to occur. You see? And you lost the peace and so you have to do it again. You have to engage in the holy instant again.

The time comes when you need to make commitment to it completely. Because that's the only thing that brings you back into the full experience of your Birthright.

But again . . .

. . . it is this . . .

. . . the loss of your body . . .

. . . for which you would deny a home to peace. This . . .

. . . so-called . . .

. . . “sacrifice” you feel to be too great to make, too much to ask of you.

But only because you don't understand what it means. You don't understand what I've just explained. Now you do have an understanding and it will be easier for you to risk the chance that abandoning the body as the vantage point from which you experience everything will cause you a loss. When the fact is, that abandoning the body as the vantage point and adopting the Mind, which has been with you all along and you don't have to fabricate or imagine, letting that Mind be the focal point from which you experience everything. You see?

Is it a sacrifice, or a release? What has the body really given you that justifies your strange belief that in it lies salvation?

Well, I understand that it seems to have given you a certain amount of control that has perhaps saved you, that has perhaps made your life more tolerable, maybe even greatly blessed. But the point is, that you are not a body and any successful use you put it to that convinces you that it is foolish to abandon the body as your vantage point, that must be overcome! You must arrive at a place where you're willing to abandon that, even if it's only for the sake of experiment, to see whether what I'm saying is true or not.

If the experiment doesn't occur, you will continue to see yourself as a body—vulnerable. And because you're experiencing the visibility and tangibility of your individuality as something that started from a sperm and an egg, a purely physical organism, having nothing to do with the divine Source, your experience of your body will be full of pleasure and pain—conflicting experiences. And they will be unavoidable. They will be ever present until you make this shift from body identification to Mind identification.

What has the body really given you that justifies your strange belief that in it lies salvation?

Nothing!

Do you not see that this is the belief in death?

You see? As long as you continue to identify with the body as a body that happens to have this strange capacity to have ideas because of the way a hunk of meat in your head functions, as long as you embrace that you are dissociated from the very thing that constitutes your eternality and the undisturbed experience of harmony and health and peace, which is your relationship to your Father, which tells you who you Are and which puts you in the place of being able to desire to know what the Father's Perspective is, because the Father's Perspective is now relevant to you—It is now relevant to you—making it worthwhile to give your attention to.

The belief that the body has given you something: well . . .

Here is the focus of the perception of Atonement as murder.

. . . which we talked about: The ego's definition of Atonement is not you abandoning the ego, it is you confirming your mortality. You see?

Here is the source of the idea that love is fear. The Holy Spirit's messengers are sent far beyond the body, calling the mind to join in holy communion and be at peace.

Calling what? The mind. Because Mind is what you Are. And calling the Mind that you Are to join in holy communion and be at peace is to return your attention to its native place and to your holy function. And so it promotes Atonement, it promotes your Awakening. And in so doing, puts you in a position of being able to address the attraction of death—the next obstacle to peace—and to do it without fear and to do it with a greater clarity that death is just a misperception and abandoning the attraction to it constitutes release from illusion, not the loss of anything. This is important.

The Holy Spirit's messengers are sent far beyond the body, . .

You see? Far beyond the body as you are perceiving it, this little discrete shape that for most is not any taller than six feet—little inconsequential in the face of the immensity of space—you send things from your discrete shape to someone else's discrete shape and unity of mind is never experienced. The actuality of what you Are as consciousness and the actuality of the one you're communicating with as consciousness is never brought into play. You see?

Now . . .

The Holy Spirit's messengers are sent far beyond the body, calling the mind . . .

. . . that infinite Presence of attention that includes everything . . .

. . . to join in holy communion and be at peace.

So the peace flows over the valuing of the body for what it seems to be able to do that is apparently essential to your well-being.

Such is the message that I gave them for you.

It is only the messengers of fear that see the body, for they look for what can suffer.

Well, you might not have thought about it that way, but you use control always, and succeed at the use of control through the threat of pain, the threat of suffering, the threat of some sort of penalty or unkindness or inconsideration or withdrawal of approval. You see? It's mean. Because you know from your experience that those things make you hurt either physically or mentally or emotionally. And you know it works. And so you have learned that it's valuable to you to employ.

It is only the messengers of fear that see the body, . .

. . . as something discrete and as something that constitutes the individual . . .

. . . for they look for what can suffer. Is it a sacrifice to be REMOVED from what can suffer?

Now, that may mean being removed from the body or being removed from the misperception of body? Obviously the latter.

The Holy Spirit does not demand you sacrifice the hope of the body's pleasure; . .

. . . remember, I said that in this misidentification or misunderstanding your body enjoys pleasure or pain. We've talked about pain, now here . . .

The Holy Spirit does not demand you sacrifice the hope of the body's pleasure; it HAS no hope of pleasure.

That which doesn't exist the way you're perceiving it can't have any effect applied to it. It can't have an experience of anything. You see? And so the pleasure that you think you might lose if you're not identifying with the body is an impossible circumstance. It never was there as an experience of pleasure in the first place. And the illusion of pain or pleasure in the identification with the body is what will disappear as you shift to identification with the Mind that is aware of body and trees and tables and all form.

But neither can it bring you fear of pain. Pain is the only "sacrifice" the Holy Spirit asks, and this He WOULD remove.

Now, it is always removed when you abandon your insistence upon coping with problems through the use of your body. It's that simple!

When you stop using your body to provide the force to make things happen and you enter into the holy instant to join with the Holy Spirit, which is the Father's Perspective and is nothing more than your right Mind, you will find pain and false pleasure disappearing. And the threat of their being taken away will disappear and the threat of their effects will disappear because now you are functioning in the arena where God's laws prevail. You see? But it only happens in the release of the body as a tool for accomplishing Godless acts. And when I say Godless acts, I mean acts in which God was not brought into the picture and with Whom you are not engaging in actions. You see?

Peace is extended from you only to the eternal, and it reaches out from the eternal in YOU.

In your abandonment of the concept of yourself as a body, as a mortal, as an organism in a physical universe, the divineness of you that has always been present underneath those mistaken self-beliefs, become illuminated to you. And in their illumination from the holiness of you, from the eternal in you, they are shared. That's the blessing of the holy instant. That's the function of the holy instant. It reunites that which was always One as the conscious experience of All from which nothing is withheld and your invulnerability and peace and joy are irrevocably present. This is the point. And the way to that experience is in abandoning the belief that the body is valuable for what it offers, for what use you can put it to without knowing who you Are and without finding God anywhere in anything.

Peace is extended from you only to the eternal, and it reaches out from the eternal in YOU. It flows across all else. The second obstacle is no more solid than the first. For you will neither to get rid of peace NOR limit it.

You don't will for either one of those.

What are these obstacles which you would interpose between peace and its going forth but barriers you place between your will and its accomplishment?

Meaning the accomplishment of your will. You see? The obstacles which you would interpose between peace and its going forth are barriers you place between your will and its accomplishment. In other words, . .

You WANT communion, not the feast of fear. You WANT salvation, not the pain of guilt. And you want your Father, NOT a little mound of clay, to be your home.

You see, those are your will. Stop interposing what blocks it and you will experience it clearly as yours and you will become integrated—single.

In your holy relationship . . .

. . . with your Brother or Sister . . .

... is your Father's Son.

... is your Father's Offspring, the holy one that, the one you're in holy relationship is.

He has not lost communion with Him, . .

... meaning God . . .

... nor with himself. When you agreed to join each other, . .

... in a holy relationship, I'm adding . . .

... you acknowledged this is so. This has no cost, but it has RELEASE from cost.

Wow!

You have paid very dearly for your illusions, and nothing you have paid for brought you peace.

You see? As long as you took the misperception of your first few minutes of life after birth, because you took those perceptions and solidified them into a permanent definition or meaning of you, of body, of world, of Brothers, Sisters and so on, because of that you have not had the opportunity to shift from body identification to Mind identification.

You have paid very dearly for your illusions, and nothing you have paid for brought you peace.

... because you're still stuck in a misidentification of you. And it's coloring every part of your holy experience causing it to seem to be unholy.

Are you not GLAD that Heaven cannot be sacrificed, and sacrifice cannot be asked of you? There IS no obstacle which you can place before our union, . .

... yours and mine . . .

... for in your holy relationship I am there already.

You see? You don't have to seek for me because I was with you before you took your first few breathes and suddenly thought you were a discrete form in a delivery room. I was with you and you were who you divinely Are then and you still Are, but you're only now coming back into the realization of what that Means, you holy Son or Daughter of God.

We will surmount all obstacles together, for we stand within the gates, and not outside.

In other words, we stand within the conscious experience of Being, the state of Attention. We stand within That and not outside. We do not stand in the picture you have of being a discrete form amongst other discrete forms that can only communicate through space to each other and never quite unified, never quite experience perfect unity.

How easily the gates are opened from within, . .

. . . in other words, from that place of identification as Mind.

How easily the gates are opened . . .

. . . like opened outward from the altar within you, instead of opened in a wall on a street, in a city, in a country on your globe in the middle of a universe. You see?

How easily the gates are opened from within, . .

. . . this is what you need to understand so that there's a willingness to embrace the experiment of identifying as Mind, because you will find that the gates open easily . . .

. . . from within, to let peace through. . .

And another way of saying it might be: to let peace out . . .

. . . to bless the tired world! Can it be difficult for us to walk past barriers together, when you have joined the limitless?

No. Now, dare to experiment with this so that we can have the experience together and you can become freed from the belief that the only way to solve problems is to give vent to distress, anger, frustration, hate, through the use of the body to give yourself more presence that can provide greater and greater control through force in your world. Here it is . . .

The end of guilt is in your hands to give.

You see?

Would you stop now to look for guilt in each other?

Would you look for opportunities to tense up your body to get the adrenaline rushing so that you might have the power to overcome whatever stands in the way of what you call your good? Is that what you would do when you have another alternative that arises out of the awareness that the body is not valuable for what it offers, but the Love in you, the Truth in you, the Principle in you, the Life in you governs, inspires, illumines, and is the Movement that is called Creation.

I love you all who have no body which is valuable for what it offers, but who Are the Presence of Mind which embraces everything and blesses everything into the singleness and purity, the unflawed Presence of Life.

And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 15th 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

A new section given two titles:

THE PURPOSE OF THE BODY¹

and . . .

THE LITTLE GARDEN

I'm going to start out addressing this section as THE PURPOSE OF THE BODY.

Now remember, when we ended last week, it said:

. . . from this center, . .

. . . referring to the . . .

. . . quiet center, in which you do nothing, will remain with you, giving you rest in the midst of every busy doing on which you are sent.

Remember, when you take the time to become still, to stop thinking, to stop determining what the meaning of everything is and you say, "Father" or "Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?" and then you continue to be still . . . you will find yourself in-filled with the awareness of truth, with the Father's Perspective on the Reality which you are confronted with but which you are misperceiving as long as you are identifying yourself as a body and as long as you are using your body as a means of control for securing your safety.

In the influx of clarity, it becomes inevitably obvious to you how to be in that moment—how to be in relationship to everything that you are seeing which is actually the Kingdom of Heaven.

And so, you will find yourself Knowing what to do. You will find yourself Knowing what to be.

For from this center will you be directed how to use the body sinlessly.

You see? It doesn't say that when you get there, suddenly this illusion called a body will disappear. No. You find yourself clearly aware of how to use this body sinlessly. In other words, for a reason other than self-protection and control. In other words, for the Father's Reason . . . for the Holy Spirit's reason. You see?

This is very important. It is that which triggers the Movement of Awakening—of transformation, regeneration and redemption.

Now, the new section:

THE PURPOSE OF THE BODY

Begins . . .

It is only the awareness of the body that makes love seem limited. For the body IS a limit on love.

And so let's not become confused here. It is only the awareness of the body that you have created through the use of your imagination as a means of defense as well as that which you actually Are. You see? When you got the divorce, the statement changed. It became: "I am a body and I am not free to be as God created me." You see? You became a defense mechanism because you identified with the visibility and tangibility of you, which you are now calling, "your body." And its function was to make you safe in the unsafe position of being unjoined from your Source.

Now none of you actually want to be a defense mechanism. None of you wants to stand at odds with the universal way things work. And none of you want to experience the misery, the dissonance, the conflict that accompanies it.

Now . . .

It is only the awareness of the body . . .

... as you have imagined it and decided it is ...

... that makes love seem limited. For the body IS a limit on love.

Now why suddenly are we talking about whether love is limited or unlimited? It's because the function of the body as that which the Father has created, is to be the evidence, expression and substance of Love Itself embodying and communicating the Father's Intent. You see?

And so, ...

It is only the awareness of the body ...

... that you have made up ...

... that makes ...

... that which should be unlimited, which is unlimited, being love, ...

... that makes love seem limited. For the body ...

... as you have made it up, ...

... IS a limit on love.

The body is what you have shifted your identification to when you withdrew your identification from God—from your Father, from your Source.

Think not that this is merely allegorical, for it was made to limit YOU.

It was made to identify you as that which is not infinite, as that which has no infinite Source. It was made to identify you as tiny, finite, vulnerable, and as a result of the intent to overcome the vulnerability, a defense mechanism. We could be extreme and say, "a killing machine."

Indeed, the end result of the definition that you have applied to the visibility and tangibility of your divine individuality does result in your death. Because there is no way to avoid, I'm going to say, there's no way to avoid having an experience which can illustrate the truth to you and give you the opportunity to abandon your commitment to your definition of yourself. I say this because when death seems to occur to you, you immediately find yourself alive. You immediately find yourself in an unbroken, uninterrupted experience of Being.

And the very thing that seemed to “kill” you, you realize didn’t have the power to kill you.

At this point you have the opportunity to abandon your commitment to your divorce. Sometimes that commitment is abandoned. Many times it is not because there is still a conscious intent to be in control, to be independent and make a success at it.

Can you who see yourselves within a body know yourself as . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . an IDEA?

And yet, that is what you Are. Because God—infinite Mind, the infinite conscious Awareness—Moved. The Movement of Mind is the experience of consciousness—of being Aware. And what is Mind aware of? Ideas. Complete ideas: Ideas with infinite Meaning, infinite texture, infinite tone, infinite Light, infinite color. And all of these things are part of the Idea embodied through the action of the Mind of God Moving.

Everything you recognize you identify with externals, something outside itself.

You see? Now what is it that happens when you do the two-step, when you become still and you say, “Father, what is the truth here?” “Holy Spirit, reveal to me the Father’s Perspective about what I’m experiencing.” What happens there is, that you shift your focus from body identification to Mind identification. And after all, the truth that Awakening reveals to you is that your whole dilemma had amounted to nothing more than identifying yourself with a specific idea that you called, “form,” and abandoned your divinely established Being as conscious Awareness without limit. You made a shift from the infinite to the finite.

And suddenly, where you, as Mind, had experienced everything infinitely, in its infinite perfection and as the substance and Movement of Love that radiates and embraces everything, you interpreted not only yourself as an object, but all things of Creation as objects—private, separate. And that’s what you will Awaken from.

Awakening is not a matter of improving the body that you define yourself as. It constitutes a shift from a focus of your attention to this specific form, to the Mind in which this form exists to be experienced as what it divinely Is. Since it is an Idea formed by God, by virtue by His Being the infinite Mind that Moves, that constitutes Creation. You see?

Now you know the direction in which to give your attention. It's not a direction in terms of improving the body. It's a Movement in terms of abandoning the focus of attention on the body and bringing the attention into the quietness of the two-step, the place of shutting up and uttering a simple question and leaving it there: "Father what is the truth here?" and then inviting and being receptive to the answer. Because the more I talk about it the clearer it becomes to you, that that shift is what constitutes the steps of Awakening.

You cannot even think of God . . .

. . . of course, the operative word there is "think," . . .

You cannot even think of God without a body, or some form you think you recognize.

Well, I'm going to reiterate that God is infinite, unlimited, in other words, Mind—that which when it Moves, is an unlimited Movement. And the Movement is constituted of Ideas—divine, flawless Ideas—which in themselves are the embodiment of infinity, wholeness, all-inclusiveness, you might say, togetherness, but not of separated little individual parts, but rather, you might say, holograms of the whole.

The body . . .

. . . the one you made up . . .

. . . cannot KNOW. And while you limit your awareness to its tiny senses, you will not see the grandeur which surrounds you.

You will not see the Kingdom of Heaven that all of this really Is. And you will not see the divine one that you are as you really Are.

God cannot come into a body, . .

. . . God cannot come into your imaginative definitions as you have thought you could. You confine yourself to the definitions you made up about the part of the Kingdom of Heaven that you now call your body. You see?

God cannot come into a body, nor can you join Him there.

You see? You can't join the Father in your present definition of yourself. You have to be willing to abandon your present definition of yourself and that's what the holy instant is for, that's what the two-step accomplishes. You see? A withdrawal of your attention from body identification to the quiet stillness of mind in which you reach out to the infinite Mind which is God, so that you might be available for the influx of the Father's Perspective—what the Father's Meanings Are in everything He Created. You are opening yourself to an entirety, for lack of better words, mental experience, an experience entirely constituted of Mind. Because it is in this space that God's laws prevail. And it is in this space where the transformation, regeneration and redemption occurs that uncovers to you Reality as it is and you in your utter safety, security.

Limits on love will always seem to shut Him . . .

. . . the Father . . .

. . . out, and to keep you apart from Him. The body is a tiny fence
. . .

. . . the one you've made up, the imaginative one that you hold and superimpose upon this visibility and tangibility of holiness thus blinding yourself to the holiness of you.

I've said before many times, that the ego is simply a small portion of the infinite Mind that you Are, that you have created a bubble around. And so, there is an inside and an outside to the bubble. But what's on the inside is the same thing that's on the outside. And in fact, that which blinds you to your divinity and keeps you from Waking up, is the fact that you think the bubble is definite and solid when it is as flimsy as a soap bubble and will pop the moment you dare to seriously ask, "In spite of what I think all of this is, Father, what is it truly? I want to experience Your Perspective. Holy Spirit, I want to let You back in." You see?

The Holy Spirit is the All that's on the outside of the bubble. All of you that's on the outside of the bubble that you're keeping yourself separated from by means of the bubble, and giving yourself the "fright of your life" you might say, by believing you are only what is inside and therefore tiny and vulnerable and it causes you to believe that your destiny is to keep the bubble from popping!

The body is a tiny fence around a little part of a glorious and complete idea . . .

. . . the divine You, that at the moment is separated from the infinity of the divine You that's on the outside of the bubble waiting for you to rejoin It.

It draws a circle, infinitely small, around a very little segment of .

..
... what? ..

... Heaven splintered from the whole, proclaiming that within it is your kingdom, where God can enter not.

It's important to understand this. What's on the inside of the circle is a very little segment of Heaven. It is not an alternate creation. It is not something different from what God Acted upon and As. It's just that with a little circle drawn around it, it seems to be totally unlike what it is in its totality. And when you believe that, you're lost until you can break the mesmerism—the attachment to and the commitment to keeping that bubble from popping . . . you know, get a little bit more liquid, get a little more soap, keep that bubble from popping!

Within this kingdom . . .

... inside the circle . . .

... the ego rules, . . .

... you see? God's laws don't seem to be ultimate, actual, unchanging. The keyword being, "seems" because God didn't change.

Within this kingdom the ego rules, and cruelly.

That's because in the constant state of defending itself to protect itself when it is utterly unchangeably safe, its actions are totally at odds with Reality. And as a result, everything it does is a denial of Reality and in that, it is cruel. Not only that, it's part and parcel of a motivation to give you a "hit," a hit of pleasure and satisfaction when you seem to be able to establish your safety, and you don't want to give that up.

Within this kingdom the ego rules, and cruelly. And to defend this little speck of dust, it bids you fight against the universe.

You're keeping this little bubble maintained, is defending what's inside the bubble from all that is on the outside—infinity, the Kingdom of Heaven, Creation. Amazing. And the best news is, that none of this is working. The best news is that nothing unlike God is being created and therefore there is nothing that you are guilty of because you haven't been able to succeed at the impossible.

Therefore, you have justification to let the bubble pop. You have justification to abandon reinforcing it by stopping thinking . . . moving into the Silence in you and reaching outside of your best thinking, your best judgment, your pet theories, and saying, "Father" or "Holy Spirit"—which is the Voice for God—"What is the truth here?"

This fragment of your mind is such a tiny part of it that, could you but appreciate the whole, you would see instantly that it is like the smallest sunbeam to the sun, or like the faintest ripple on the surface of the ocean.

This little you inside the bubble, inside the circle, . . .

. . . is like the smallest sunbeam to the sun,

. . . by comparison . . .

. . . or [like] the faintest ripple on the surface of the ocean. In its amazing arrogance, this tiny sunbeam has decided it IS the sun; this almost imperceptible ripple hails itself as the ocean.

You claim yourself to be a decent, up-right human being, or perhaps a slightly or greatly flawed human being who came from a sperm and an egg as part of an evolutionary process in which there was no God, in which the context of Creation isn't Mind but mindless space, in which chaos is creating order randomly and you just happen to be part of the random order at the moment [snaps fingers] which could stop instantly by accident. You see?

Think how alone and frightened is this little thought, this infinitesimal illusion, holding itself apart against the universe.

See, you didn't know you were doing this and it isn't being brought up so that you can discover how destructive you've been and how un-God-like you've been, and therefore, how guilty you must be for standing over and against God. That's not the reason. It's so that you might find that this has happened, you have engaged in attempting this, but it's impossible to succeed. And therefore, you are not . . . you are not a sinner . . . you are not worthy of going to hell for eternity. You are worthy of becoming clear about the fact that you can't accomplish the impossible, and therefore, you are free to return to what is actual by simply giving up the struggle without having to pay a penalty. You see?

What keeps you from approaching the Father and yielding to the Father is your very firm belief that you are guilty of an ultimate offense and therefore, you don't dare to become vulnerable, to become still and to invite in the Father's Perspective, which He will share with you unhesitatingly because He sees that you haven't accomplished what you thought you had accomplished and you deserve nothing less than to have your mind purified by the truth.

Again:

Think how alone and frightened is this little thought, this infinitesimal illusion, holding itself apart against the universe. The sun becomes the sunbeam's "enemy" which would devour it, and the ocean terrifies the little ripple and wants to swallow it.

You see? There is fear of your wholeness. That's all it is. And it is the result of the intent to be independent and remain independent. And that is all. The minute that intent is abandoned, everything negative that accompanied it will disappear. Why? Because you are doing all of this in the middle of what I'm going to call an "ocean of Love," the Father's Love, which is what is embodied and is called Creation—the Kingdom of Heaven—and which is misidentified as a material world and universe.

Yet neither sun nor ocean is even aware of all this strange and meaningless activity. They merely continue, unaware that they are feared and hated by a tiny segment of themselves.

You can see the foolishness, the meaninglessness of the fear and the anxiety and the guilt that occupies you.

Even that segment . . .

. . . the tiny segment of themselves . . .

Even that segment is not lost to them, for it could not survive APART from them.

The little wave on the ocean could not survive, couldn't exist without the ocean. The sunbeam couldn't exist without the sun. That which is actual is actualizing itself as the sunbeam and the wave, the ripple. You see? Your holiness is being you at this moment.

And what it thinks it is . . .

. . . the little ripple and the sunbeam . . .

. . . what it thinks it is in no way changes its total dependence on them . . .

. . . the sun and the ocean . . .

. . . for its being. Its whole existence still remains in them.

Your whole existence still remains in the Father. You are still His Son. You are still His Offspring. You are still His eternal ongoing Expression.

Without the sun the sunbeam would be gone; the ripple without the ocean is inconceivable.

Such is the strange position in which those in a world inhabited by bodies seem to be.

You know, the made up bodies, the imagined ones, the definitions of this particular shape, that had nothing to do whatsoever with That which Created and maintains them.

Each body seems to house a separate mind, a disconnected thought, living alone and in no way joined to the Thought by which it was created. Each tiny fragment seems to be self-contained, needing each other for some things, but by no means . . . [totally dependent on their one Creator for everything, and] needing the whole to give them any meaning, for by themselves they DO mean nothing. Nor HAVE they any life apart and by themselves.

The body doesn't exist as that which you've defined it. And all that you need to do in order to experience it as what it truly is, is to abandon your commitment to your definitions of it and be willing to step out into what to you feels like the unknown and abandon yourself to what you would call the unreasonable, unreasonable simply because what you let yourself go into isn't something that you have created ahead of time by very orderly intelligent reasoned thought processes which you have determined gives you invulnerability.

Until you are willing to give up your control, you will never find that you are held absolutely . . . in absolute invulnerability, because your very Being is the Presence and activity of God, that which is omnipotent, that which is omnipresent, that which is omniscient and that which you reflect in all respects.

Like to the sun and ocean your Self . . .

. . . the one you really Are, no matter what imaginations you're employing.

Like to the sun and ocean your Self continues, unmindful that this tiny part regards itself AS you.

You see? There it is . . . that which is on the outside of the bubble or the circle, you in your totality continue undisturbed by the little fantasies which occupy your attention one hundred percent and scare you to death and cause you to defend yourself by reinforcing the bubble ever harder. You see?

[He missed this sentence:] [It is not missing; it could not exist if it were separate, nor would the whole be whole without it.]

It is not a separate kingdom, ruled by an idea of separation from the rest.

None of it was accomplished.

Nor does a fence surround it, . .

. . . or a bubble . . .

. . . preventing it from joining with the rest, and keeping it apart from its Creator. This little aspect is no different from the whole, . .

. . . you are right now the holy Sons and Daughters of God, that's why you must understand that you are at the point of perfection now, not moving toward it, not on a long journey.

This little aspect . . .

. . . inside the circle . . .

. . . is no different from the whole, . .

. . . you are the ultimate right now, except that you insist upon believing you are finite and you refuse to abandon yourself to the unknown, meaning that which you're not in control of. But here the truth is getting to you. You are hearing it. And as long as you listen you will continue to hear it until it no longer seems to be fabulous. In other words: of the nature of fable.

This little aspect is no different from the whole, being continuous with it and at one with it. It leads no separate life because its life IS the oneness in which its being was created.

Now, what is this talking about? Is it talking about the bubble or is it talking about that which is inside the bubble? Is it talking about the circle of definitions or that which is inside the circle, you? Of course, it's talking about You. And no matter how separate you have thought you were . . .

It . . .

. . . You . . .

. . . leads no separate life because its life IS the oneness in which its being was created . . .

. . . the universal Presence of Mind in which Mind moves, the movement of which is Creation, the Kingdom of Heaven.

Do not accept this little, fenced-off aspect as yourself.

Do not accept the definitions you're using that say you don't deserve perfection. Do not accept them as yourself. Begin to challenge them. And how do you challenge them? Not by force, but by the presence of curiosity to see the more of what you divinely Are than what you're currently seeing. You challenge it by bringing genuine curiosity into play. And then you be quiet so that your great curiosity can be responded to. It's simple and it's loving, the way Home is.

The sun and ocean are as nothing beside what you are.

That's because we're talking about objects, which you understand the meaning of while you're still dreaming and using the body as your focus—your point of understanding things.

The sun and ocean are as nothing beside what you are. The sunbeam sparkles only in the sunlight, and the ripple dances as it rests upon the ocean. Yet in neither sun nor ocean is the power that rests in you.

This is because you are that unlimited, unbounded, conscious awareness of Being that the word "Mind" labels—gives meaning to. In other words, you are like the space in Creation in which the planet and the sun and the sunbeams and the ripples have their Being. They have it in you because you are Mind conscious of them, not as objects out there, but as ideas embraced within conscious Being. You see how we're shifting from body identification, thing identification, matter identification, to Mind Idea and divine order?

You see, Waking up is going to be a matter of a shift of perception. The word "miracle" as the Course defines it is a "sudden shift of perception."

What you are interested in engaging in as you go through your week, as each of your days, is not the fixing up or changing of forms but rather the shift of identification from you as a body, being conscious of other things as bodies, to you as Mind which is boundaryless, in which all of these conscious experiences are occurring. And because they are not physical, because they are not matter functioning, you are not bound, controlled, injured . . . killed by them. This is the shift. Becoming still and wishing to know the meaning of these things in your Mind as the Father's Perspective—the Perspective of that which is forming all of them is revealed to you. Where? Not in a body on a street walking, but in the Mind in which the body, the street, the planet, the galaxy are occurring—the presence of Mind, the presence of conscious awareness.

It's a subtle shift. And that's why I don't brow-beat everyone with it. That's why I don't stand up and yell about it, because you need to be encouraged to let yourself into the experience of Reality willingly and without force—with embrace.

Would you remain within your tiny kingdom, . .

. . . of bodies . . .

. . . a sorry king, a bitter ruler of all he surveys, who looks on nothing, . .

. . . except his imaginations, which is why what he's looking upon is nothing . .

. . . yet who would still die to defend it? This little self is not your kingdom. Arched high above it and surrounding it with love is the glorious whole, . .

. . . around this bubble, infinitely forever . . .

. . . is the glorious whole, which offers all its happiness and deep content to every part. The little aspect which you think you set apart is no exception.

You cannot be excluded from the Love. You cannot be excluded from the embrace and therefore you are not. And if you are suffering, it's because you're insisting upon penalizing yourselves, not because God is penalizing you. The Father, the Holy Spirit Know that what you are penalizing yourself for hasn't happened, and you are innocent!

Abide with this. Listen to what I have said over and over this week. Find ways to be gently present as conscious awareness rather than a body with a brain, with electrical synapses occurring that approximate ideas and conscious awareness.

That isn't what is happening. Really become curious about what is actually happening. And then be willing to have the Unreasonable reveal itself to you, so that you might find the encouragement to yield into it and abandon your fierce control.

I look forward to being with you all next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

March 31st 2012

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

You know, whenever there is development, whenever something new comes along that replaces something old that came prior to it, whatever was characteristic of the old tends to be carried over and become part of the new in this way: When the automobile was first invented, it replaced a carriage drawn by horses of one sort or another. And so, when the automobile came along it was called what? The horseless carriage. And in fact its design was very similar to a horse-drawn carriage, it's just that it had a motor instead of a horse to draw it.

Now as time passed, the horseless carriage began to be seen as an entity in its own right, you might say, an automobile that did not refer back to what came before it.

Now the reason I'm mentioning this is, that we could have made this teaching perhaps more interesting and more palatable, more stimulating, more inviting, if it were something that stood in advance of where you were and helped you become more, something that you weren't before. And in fact, many "New Age" teachings, many metaphysical teachings do present you—man, woman, mankind—as a creature developing or, I'm going to say, as a spiritual entity developing . . . much like the theories and the origin of the species by Darwin, where the species developed and slowly became more than it was before: More intelligent, more functional, more dominant, and so on.

But you see, if you are just a spiritual entity developing, spiritualizing itself, developing so as to become more God-like than it was before, bringing out more of your potential than you had before, if we adopt that kind of theory, then you have no promise of success, you just have hope of a positive future because the context that is being used to consider it, suggests a progressive developmental movement of being.

Now many of you, because of your prior associations, prior concepts, the things you've learned, the things that were taught to you, approach the Course as though it is here to help you spiritualize yourself more. And it's not. And you must understand that it's not.

Now, I've used a saying many times. It's this: You are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. You are at that point and must understand yourself therefrom. You see? You must understand yourself from the standpoint of your being already perfect, not moving toward perfection, not developing. You see? Either you are the Son or Daughter of God, either you are perfect or you're not. But there's no becoming perfect.

And you know what? You're lucky. It's fortunate that you can't become perfect because it means that the experience of perfection is available to you without your having to earn it, without your having to stand tall and be more than you can be.

It's important to understand that this is a journey without distance because you're starting from the destination, whatever you imagine the destination is. You see?

We've talked about your being the Sons and Daughters of God. And then two of you deciding to play, I'm going to say—have a little imaginative fun. And I promise you it happened in the sense of play. It did not happen in the sense of a dark motivation to overthrow your Father. No. You decided to play with making up your own definitions and making commitment to them. We've talked about this at length.

Now when that happened, when you did that, you seemed to become unconscious of your divinity, unconscious of your infinity, and you became plagued with fear and guilt. And then you got entrapped into overcoming fear and guilt as though that were the purpose of being. That's all. You, the holy Son and Daughter of God, moved into imagination and decided to serve your imagination and you never for an instant became less than the holy Son or Daughter of God.

Therefore, you do not have to regain your position—your status, your holiness. It never left you. You have just been ignoring it. It is essential to understand that you're not regaining a position you lost. You're reawakening to a position you had chosen to ignore. That's all. And that's a fantastic and important difference because it makes the possibility of Waking up to your divinity easy, because it's natural to you, because you never stopped Being the expression of God. Do you see that?

Be with that for a moment . . .

Now, we spoke last week about the fact that once you believed that you got a divorce from your Father and that you were independent and on your own, you used this particular aspect of your infinite presence—the one you call “your body”—as a means of stabilizing yourself in your independent state. You used it and continue to use it to make yourself safe, to exert control over others so as to keep yourself safe. You use it to carry out acts that arise from your fear and your sense of guilt.

And so your body, which is the visibility and tangibility of your divine individuality, you use it in a manner opposite to its function and nature. And that use that you put it to absolutely binds you to your ignorant state of mind. You are using it in a way that keeps you from remembering who you Are because it keeps you from remembering God. Why? Because every use you put it to is used to verify and substantiate your definitions, not His.

It's you use your body to verify you, not the Father. And yet your body and all of Creation has one function and one function only: To glorify God—to represent God, to manifest God—not by any power residing in the body, but by virtue of the body and you allowing it to be what it is and to let its function to be activated, energized, directed by the Father now . . . now . . . now . . . now . . . in every moment.

Now we also discussed last week that the way to Wake up is to abandon using your body this way. To abandon using your body for defense and to abandon using it for defense because you realize that fear and guilt are meaningless. They do not arise out of your sanity. They do not arise out of your holiness.

And they will not be experienced when you are joined with the Father or when you are joined with the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind, another way of saying that it's nothing more than your sanity.

Do you see how important this simple point is? It's the Good News. And it's the good news that you can understand, although it's not the good news that you might be able to maintain a conscious awareness of with consistency. But the point is, that once you know this truth, once you know of its significance, you have a starting point from which to insist upon more and more consistently being joined . . . more and more consistently choosing to say, “Father, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? What is really going on where I seem to see matter, where I seem to see a material world? Help me experience the Kingdom of Heaven that you're telling me it is."

And then let that desire to see the Kingdom of Heaven where a material world and universe has seemed to confront you forever, let that be in the forefront of your conscious awareness over and over and over . . . continuously . . . continuously . . . continuously . . . because it's important to you to not be misperceiving, especially when misperception is the only thing standing in the way of your seeing a restored limb or a restored breast or a straightened limb or straightened teeth—evidences of perfection that reflect the nature of God right there in front of you.

What does it say here in the book?

You can stretch out your hand and reach to Heaven.

Does that mean you can reach out in space, out into the heavens, out to wherever Heaven is? No. You can stretch out and reach to Heaven because whatever you touch, your body, the table, a glass of water, a flower—whatever you touch is the Kingdom of Heaven, the visibility and the tangibility of the Mind of God.

But more than that, you're beginning to understand by virtue of the explanations that are in the Course and that I am sharing, that when it appears that you are touching something in front of you, it's all Mind . . . it's all going on in Mind as a conscious experience of Being. When you touch a book, when you touch a table, you are touching an idea and you are touching it with your attention whether it's called your finger or your arm or your body that you're embracing your wife or your lover with or a tree or whatever. You see? It's all a conscious experience that seems, we'll say for convenience sake, to occupy space.

But it's the infinitude of Mind in which it is all going on—the infinitude of your Mind—the infinitude of you as Mind experiencing Creation infinitely because your Mind is the manifestation of the Mind of God. It's the Presence of the Mind of God. Important. It's not a manifestation . . . like God plopped a manifestation out there in the ethers and it was your mind.

No. God Being, we'll say, in the ethers is the Mind that you are experiencing as the conscious experience of Being. But it's also the Mind that a frog or a rock is experiencing as the infinite conscious experience of Being in which you are part of that rock's or that frog's conscious experience of Being. It's all One but it's all Mind.

So:

You can stretch out your hand and reach to Heaven.

You might call that new knowledge—a new awareness, a new perspective.

You whose hands are joined have begun to reach beyond the body, but NOT outside yourselves, to reach your shared identity TOGETHER.

You, who are purposely engaged in the holy relationship, have begun to reach beyond the body. What does that mean? You've begun to reach beyond the meanings you've applied to the body—the definitions you've given and the purposes that you have assumed your bodies have. You see?

How is it that you've begun to reach beyond the body?

Well, because you have said as two who are joined in a holy relationship, you have chosen not to try to join together with each other as bodies, but you have chosen as individualities, individually, to say, "Father, what is the truth here?" You have decided to practice the holy instant. You have decided not to gather your understanding of things from your memory or the teachings of others or even of each other. And you have decided to gather the truth of Being directly from the Father, or we'll say, His agent, the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind held in trust while you have been dallying with the ego.

Now I've said these things before, I'm saying them again so as to bring them into even clearer and simpler focus.

You whose hands are joined have begun to reach beyond the body, . . .

. . . this thing you've used for self-protection and coercion and control but not outside yourselves, not outside yourselves to each other across the room from each other, but from within, by saying, "Father what is the truth here?"

You . . .

. . . have begun to reach beyond the body, but NOT outside yourselves, to reach your shared identity TOGETHER.

. . . the oneness of the conscious experience of Being in which all is embraced and experienced as consciousness or Mind.

Could this be OUTSIDE you? Where God is NOT?

No.

Is HE a body, and did He create you as He is not, and where He cannot be?

No. The sheer logic of it says no.

You are surrounded only by Him.

You are surrounded only by the infinite Mind that God Is, which, when It Moved, caused the infinite conscious experience of Being in which all was embraced and in which all was complete and in which all was perfect. And in which not one tiny aspect was excluded from any other. And all was embraced in an infinite conscious experience of Being together that constituted Oneness.

What limit can there be on you whom He . . .

. . . God, the infinite Mind that is the Movement that constitutes your Being . . .

. . . encompasses? Everyone has experienced what he would call a sense of being transported beyond himself. This feeling of liberation far exceeds the dream of freedom sometimes experienced in special relationships . . .

. . . the "high," the "hit" of undefendedness, we'll say, against each other, lack of defense against each other even though there's no attempt to be joined with the Father which is the holiness and sanity of your minds. And in that experience, you find yourself experiencing limitlessness.

This feeling of liberation far exceeds the dream of freedom sometimes experienced in special relationships. It is a sense of actual ESCAPE from limitations.

It's a hint of truth, but it's not truth because it isn't the result of the holy instant. It isn't the result of actually consciously joining with the Father desiring to experience His Perspective about this one you're in relationship with.

If you will consider what this "transportation" really entails, you will realize that it is a sudden unawareness of the body, and a joining of yourself and something else in which your mind enlarges to encompass it.

Yes. But be careful. You will realize that it is a sudden unawareness of the body not because the body isn't real, not because it doesn't have any divine actuality, but because in that transportation into an enlarged conscious awareness of things, you have forgotten the need for defense. And without the need for defense, your body, although it is there, does not register with you as being significant because it's no longer relating to you in terms of your safety.

And so, although it is there and able to function perfectly in any way you need to be, it's not there for the purpose that it was before. And therefore, because that's really the only recent meaning or definition of the body that you've been employing, it seems to be absent. It's just not preoccupying you anymore—neither your body, nor the body of another—because you, in your defenselessness, private though it might still be, you feel the peace of Being. You feel the capacity to love. You feel the ability to embrace and you feel the ability to be embraced.

Again, this gives you a hint of the actual effect of the holy instant. Remember the times that that has happened with you, so that you might remind yourself that there's justification in practicing the two-step now. . . in practicing the holy instant now.

It becomes part of you, as you unite with it. And both become whole, as neither is perceived as separate. What really happens is that you have given up the illusion of a limited awareness, and lost your fear of union.

You have given up the illusion of a limited awareness. You've given up the illusion of being a finite body whose function it is to protect yourself and become something more than you have been. And in the process, dominate intelligently, coerce wisely, be in control independently. And that's what the holy instant is about releasing.

The love that instantly replaces it EXTENDS to what has freed you, and unites with it.

It extends to the one you've decided to be in a holy relationship with. Mind you, the uniting that occurs is between you and the Father, between you and the Holy Spirit. And the two of you who are in the holy relationship are not focused on the relationship with each other. You are focused on, I'm going to say, using each other for the benefit of having a reminder to turn to the Holy Spirit in every instant before engaging with your partner in the holy relationship. You see?

The holy relationship that you want to be in is not primarily a relationship one-on-one between you and another. Always the holy relationship with each other comes into being as each of you individually has a mutual agreement—have decided to ask, "Father, what is the truth here." Each of you has agreed to let your primary mode of operating—of being with each other—be joining with the Father first, or asking of the Holy Spirit first. And then looking at each other and responding to each other from the clarity that comes. And that is your holy relationship.

But you know what? It's a gift. It's not something you've created. Oh, and it's a gift of newness. It's a gift of regeneration, of redemption. It's a gift of the return of sanity.

The love that instantly replaces it . . .

. . . when you've given up the illusion of limited awareness . . .

. . . EXTENDS to what has freed you, and unites with it. And while this lasts, you are not uncertain of your identity, and would not limit it. You have escaped from fear to peace, asking no questions of reality, but merely accepting it.

You see? When you're still independent, when you're still in the orphanage and when you're suffering and you want to get out, you do turn to the Father and you ask of the Father, "How can I change that bastard in room 223 down the hall, who simply will not stop bugging me?" You see? You ask for help while providing the process that must be followed in order to answer your question. You try to get Reality to respond to you and change things for you with your limited perception being what governs the appropriate conclusion [chuckles] of, you better get what you're needing because if you don't get that then you might as well of not asked . . . right?

But the incredible thing is, that when you abandon trying to tell the universe how to treat you well or how to make things better for you, and you abandon the control and the definitions you would like to exert, in the absence of that, in the absence of willfulness, in the peace that replaces it, the Father's Perspective comes and provides you with the clarity of what you need to do, of how you need to change the way you're using your body, how you need to change the way you're using your mind so that it becomes humble, quiet, yielding. And then in the absence of the disturbance created by your willfulness, the natural harmony of being with the fellow down the hall will emerge and in fact the structures of the orphanage will begin to disintegrate so that you might rediscover that you are the holy Son of God, the holy Daughter of God and never stopped for a moment.

So:

You have escaped from fear . . .

. . . and I'm going to say, and guilt . . .

. . . to peace, asking no questions of reality, . .

. . . providing no determinations to it, not leading it to get it to do what you want.

. . . asking no questions of reality, but merely accepting it.

Accepting it because in the absence of your willfulness and all the disturbance it does to your perceptions you suddenly can see the truth, feel the truth, see things as they Are.

You have accepted this INSTEAD of the body, and have let yourself be one with something beyond it, . .

. . . what does that mean—you have accepted this INSTEAD of the body? It means that you have accepted this, the Father's Perspective as the determiner of your experience, rather than the use you would put your body to so as to be the determiner of your experience.

Doesn't mean you've discarded the body. Doesn't mean that you've come to a point where you see it's totally an illusion and worthless, useless, meaningless. No. It just means that you've accepted the Father's Perspective as the determining factor of what you see and what you understand everything to be instead of the body and the purpose you have given it, . .

. . . and have let yourself be one with something beyond it, simply by not letting your mind be LIMITED by it.

You see that? It's by an undoing, by a non-doing . . .

. . . simply by not letting your mind be LIMITED by it.

So you stop using the body unintelligently. You stop using the body in a way that is at odds with the Father's intent for it. You abandon it. You let it go. You cease using it. And in that, what's happened? You're no longer providing the definitions, the mean-spirited, self-protective uses and actions that you think it's for. And in the absence of those—which limited you—peace is yours and a new perspective is yours, and your relationship with this one you want to have a holy relationship with is enhanced because your relationship with the Father has been activated and persisted in. It's simple.

This can occur regardless of the physical distance which seems to be between you and what you join; of your respective positions in space; and of your differences in size and seeming quality.

See? All of those would be what you would call physical attributes—distance, size, et cetera. Course, more size, more force, more size, more successful manipulations and control. You see? And all of those things are irrelevant because the things that seem to have size are nothing but ideas fulfilling a purpose God has placed in them as they function in and relate to all of Creation and its harmony and its fulfillment.

Time is not relevant; . .

. . . in that conscious experience.

Time is not relevant; it can occur . . .

. . . the clarity . . .

. . . with something past, present or anticipated. The "something" can be anything and anywhere; a sound, a sight, a thought, a memory, and even a general idea without specific reference.

And in actuality all of those things are ideas.

Yet in every case, you joined it without reservation because you love it, and would be with it.

You see? So here's the thing: If you want to experience the Kingdom of Heaven confronting you right now, instead of the material world and universe that you think is confronting you, you've got to want to join with it. In joining with it you're going to be validating it, not invalidating by calling it an illusion. And by being willing to join with it, you abandon all of the justifications you have for not joining with, which are the mean-spirited definitions that you've applied to it, causing it to seem to be not the Presence of God, causing it to seem to be a material world and universe. You see?

So it's imperative that you not be calling anything that's confronting you an illusion. You may be seeing a misperception, but you're misperceiving something holy.

Yet in every case, you joined it without reservation because you love it, and would be with it. And so you rush to meet it, letting your limits melt away, suspending all the "laws" your body obeys, and gently setting them aside.

There is no violence at all in this escape. The body is not attacked, but simply properly PERCEIVED.

You see? To call it unreal, to call it an illusion, to dismiss it as meaningless is to attack it.

The body is not attacked, . .

. . . in this . . .

. . . but simply properly PERCEIVED. It does not limit you, merely because you would not have it so.

Right now, you all would have it so. You would have it limit you because it's only in this use of it that it can seem to protect you. And being protected is the all important thing. Why? Because of this darned fear and guilt that came into play when you tried to be independent—and you think it's real instead of meaningless. You see?

It does not limit you, merely because you would not have it so.

You would not have it limit you. You are not using it for the old purpose any longer. Now:

You are not really "lifted out" of it; it cannot CONTAIN you.

And therefore, it never has contained you.

. . . it cannot CONTAIN you. You go where you would be, gaining, not losing, a sense of self.

You see, in this process of doing the two-step and of having your vision transformed, is an experience of increase in always as the fullness and wholeness of being is returned to your conscious awareness because you're not blocking it any more. You're saying, "I want it." You're looking at the things in your world and you're saying, "I want the perfection that's there, that I'm not seeing. I want it. And I refuse to continue to use my mind in such a way that holds that in bondage to definitions I'm applying to it that are not true. I want to know the truth about that thing. Father, I will be quiet and listen for Thy Voice. I wish to Know the truth. I wish to join with what is Real about that thing that up until now I thought was a material, mortal object that had nothing whatsoever to do with reality."

You go where you would be, gaining, not losing, a sense of self. In these instants of release from physical restrictions, you experience much of what happens in the holy instant; the lifting of the barriers of time and space, the sudden experience of peace and joy, and, above all, the lack of awareness of the body,

. . . as a means of defense, as a means of control, as a means of protection and ultimately as a means of not having to be joined with the Father, because staying joined with your body and the definitions you've applied to it, are by your definition exactly what will provide you with your salvation. And your definition of salvation is to become a whole-souled individuality on your own. Impossible.

. . . the lifting of the barriers of time and space, the sudden experience of peace and joy, and, above all, the lack of awareness of the body, and of the questioning whether or not all this is possible.

You see? You can nit-pick the Father to death, you might say. You can nit-pick learning to death, by questioning whether it's possible, by wondering if you're capable of it. Are you up to the task? You see? All of these things are relevant to someone developing . . . the development and transformation of the species, whether it's a physical species or a spiritual entity. These questions are simply distractions from saying, "Father, Thy Will be done. Father, what is Thy Will? Father, what is the truth here? I am going to neglect to provide the definitions any longer."

It is possible because you WANT it. The sudden expansion of the self which takes place with your desire for it is the irresistible appeal the holy instant holds. It calls to you to be yourself, within its safe embrace.

Its safe embrace is the embrace, which provides you with the clarity of truth. It isn't the place where you can come up with a better definition of truth on your own. And that's what makes it safe.

There are the laws of limit lifted FOR you, . .

. . . by the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind. Which means that it's done for you by that which you divinely Are and which you are no longer significantly blocking and thereby, your sanity is returning.

There are the laws of limit lifted FOR you, to welcome you to openness of mind and freedom. Come to this place of refuge, where you can be yourself in peace.

Where you can be the self you Are, which is revealed to you when you abandon your attempt to be what you are not, by means of using your body for a purpose it was not intended—self-protection and defense.

Come to this place of refuge, where you can be yourself in peace. Not through destruction, not through a "breaking out," but merely by . . .

. . . listen to this: . . .

. . . a quiet "melting in."

Humility: The state of being humble. "Thy Will, not mine be done, Father. I wish to Know the truth that You are Being in the constant Movement of Creation. I no longer am interested in my definitions. I'm no longer interested in confusing myself by creating definitions that are at odds with Reality. I'm tired of the "hit" of apparently expressing authority. And I will let You be the Mover of Creation that You Are. And I will let myself be Moved by You."

For peace will join you there simply because you have been willing to let go the limits you have placed upon love, and joined it where it is and where it led you, in answer to its gentle call to BE at peace.

Now in many ways the words that we've read this evening are much gentler than the ones we've been reading for the last few get-togethers. But it doesn't change the fact that the beauty of the blessing of the holy instant can only be experienced when you engage in the holy instant.

And remember to let your Brother or Sister, with whom you've joined for the purpose of a holy relationship, let your Brother or Sister be the reason you choose to turn to the Holy Spirit and practice the holy instant, so that your relationship with each other is changed by God's design, by the design of the sanity of your Being and your partners Being, which is one in actuality. You see?

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 27th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We're not going to be reading from the Course tonight. But I am going to ask everyone during this coming week to review the transcript of the last study group which was held on November 12th (2012). It will be posted on the Gathering Place.

The subject we were discussing was The Obstacles to Peace.¹ Let's be refreshed on what was discussed when we begin next week.

Let's take a few moments to be quiet together.

[Quiet time]

Good Evening.

Well, it's been five months since we were last together in this fashion. It's a long time as the experience of time goes. And Paul and Susan and Chris and Judy are very grateful to be resuming tonight and I am aware that there are many listening who are likewise relieved and grateful.

Many who listen find the sound of my voice as it comes out of Paul's mouth, expressive of the fact that you are Loved. Each meeting conveys that meaning and it is felt. But when five months go by and there is no "sound of the Voice" it can become easy to forget that you are Loved.

And so I want to begin tonight by saying ever so clearly to everyone: "You are Loved." Let it register with you . . . let it just sink in.

You are Loved.

You are Loved by me. You are loved with the Father's Love. It's the only Love I can extend to you and it's the only Love any of you can extend to each other—the Father's Love.

But it's difficult to extend it to others when you haven't felt it yourself.

I'm reminding you again of how Loved you are. And I remind you that you are loved with the Father's Love unequivocally because the Father sees you as He created you. And He created you perfect in spite of any imperfect behavior you may have engaged in and by means of which you have concluded that you are unworthy in some way—imperfect beyond redemption, and certainly not deserving of the Father's Love.

But I'm telling you, you are Loved right now. You are Loved, embraced, supported and lifted up as far as you will let yourself be aware of.

The moment you abandon your self-demeaning self-perceptions, you will begin to feel the Father's Love infill you. And as it has been said, it will wipe away your tears and it will fill your heart to bursting. Right now, you are Loved.

Now, since we were last together in this fashion, turmoil has swirled around your globe and in your individual lives. And you may have forgotten in the face of it all that you are Loved. Not because the Love has been withdrawn, but because you have become preoccupied with that which seems to be unloving—with that that actually is unloving.

You must stop giving your undivided attention to the turmoil—to the negativity. Interrupt it with moments where you're willing to remember, even if it's just a string of words that "You are Loved." Because if you start with the string of words and you let that string of words be the interruption to the turmoil, you open the door to the experience of the Father's Love which will transform you, which will cause you to feel hope, which will cause you to look with new eyes, curious to see the evidence of the Father's Love as transformation in your life.

Now how can I say this? You deserve the benefit of your persistence in being willing to remember that you are Loved. It doesn't matter whether the Blessing seems slow in coming or not. It doesn't mean that it's being given slowly, it means that you are relinquishing your resistance to it slowly. But that is irrelevant. It's always irrelevant in the face of your persistence to interrupt the negative message with the declaration: "I am Loved unequivocally, unconditionally by my Father because I am His Son, I am His Daughter and I never became what I imagined myself to be. I am willing to reclaim my divine Sonship or Daughtership. I am willing to stop denying it. And the way I'm going to stop denying it is to conscientiously and consistently with commitment, declare the truth about myself: 'I am Loved.'"

It may be hard to hear when you use the word, "I" and make the statement yourself, but I know it isn't hard for you to hear me say, "You are Loved. You are truly Loved with the infinite Blessed Love of the Father."

Now the fact that you are Loved like this, means in actuality that there is nothing about the way you currently perceive yourself that can't be replaced in an instant by the truth about you: that you are loved because you are the unaltered, unchangeable, unchanged Offspring of God.

You do not need to work out of some horrible state that you're in to reach your Salvation. There is no process you have to engage in. Any process you imagine will dissolve in the awareness, the experience of the fact that you are Loved.

You are Loved.

No. I'm not trying to hypnotize you with some spiritual truth. I am rehearsing over and over the Real truth about you. And you know what? I am the Presence of Love. And so when I say, "you are Loved" I say it with Love. It is imbued with the power of God—the Love that God is.

And you know what? Whether you seem to be able to hear me say that at any given moment through the day, it remains the truth, it remains the powerful, transforming truth. It remains the trigger of your redemption, we'll say, which is simply, I'm going to say, the washing of your mind so that you can see what always has been with clarity—not seen through a glass darkly.

Your redemption isn't a transformation from something awful to something sublimely divine. Your redemption is the clearing of your sight, the cleansing of your eyes, so that you're seeing truly what always was present and didn't require some sever complex process of redemption.

Every single one of you is free at this very instant to Wake up because there is nothing actual holding you back, keeping you asleep. And the reason is because you are loved.

Now as you let this dawn on you, as you let this soak in, as you let it embrace you, you will become obviously aware that there's some change in your behavior that is needed, we'll say, bad behavior, which was the result of your poor perception of yourself and your confidence that you were unworthy of the Father's Love and therefore at that moment or this moment you are not loved. Behavior and attitudes that have arisen out of that mindset will have to be abandoned. You will have to change, it would seem . . . let go of a bad habit . . . behave differently consistently with the truth that you are Loved.

Be careful, because very often when you feel God's Love, you immediately use it as the opportunity to not receive it. You let the love that is extended to you that you are embraced by remind you, we'll say, that you're a sinner, that you really have been bad, that you really are not good, that you really are not loveable.

And you will say . . . you will argue with the Father, "I don't deserve this love . . . uh, You don't love me, I'm unloveable." And you argue. When that happens, shut up and feel, don't feel what you believe, feel the infilling of the Father's Love that has touched you and melted you, warmed you, softened you. And stay with that, because that will cause the spontaneous release of all the arguments to the contrary that you might try to use at this moment of redemption.

Again, you are loved! No matter what you say, no matter what you think to the contrary, you are loved!

"It is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom."² The Father has bestowed upon you as His offspring all that He is. He has withheld nothing of what He is from you. You are truly blessed. That's the God's honest truth right now.

"Oh, if I was really loveable, if I was really as good as you're saying, I wouldn't be having these problems."

Bullshit! That is an argument that you must stop using. You must stop denying your Birthright. You simply have come to believe that you're unloveable by the use of certain thoughts and ideas which the Father never gave you. Stop that! Whew!

When you aren't looking at things through the Father's Love that the Father bestows upon you, Creation appears to be a miserable human condition, not holy in any way. But it doesn't make it so. A distorted perception of something doesn't change the something that a distortion has been applied to, mentally. And so you're perception of what it truly is can be restored instantly when you stop arguing against seeing what it truly is.

You know what the key is to the lock that releases you? It's not a matter of finding new arguments or new lines of reasoning that will help you change your opinion—your mind—about it. It's something entirely different from that, having nothing to do with what you can manipulate through the use of your mind and logic. It's the fact that you are loved! Unequivocally and unconditionally right now with the Father's Love, the holiest of Love.

Stop arguing against that and you will begin to see the fullness of what the Father has given you registering in your vision, registering in your life, and the Kingdom of Heaven will replace the human condition that you thought it all was.

No, you don't have too hard a heart. Your heart is not so hardened that it cannot melt in the Presence of the Father's Love if you're willing to be curious to experience it. There is nothing the Father's Love cannot touch and melt and cause to yield to the fulfillment of the love that embraces it. No, you are loved whether you believe it or not. You are loved whether it seems possible or not. You are loved whether you are dying or not. And the fact that you are loved if you accept it unequivocally will be the end of your dying or the end of whatever it is you use to cause yourself to believe that you're unworthy, that you're too far gone.

Are you in prison? Are you in jail? You are loved with a transformational love that can and will unlock the doors to your cells. The Father's transformational Love reaches all the way to the most unreachable parts of you, the places most hidden, in which the awfulness of you is harbored and used against you. That's the nature of the Father's Love.

Now, part two: Your Brother and your Sister are the Offspring of God as well. And they are Loved with the same transformational redemptive Love that you are. Be very careful not to hold them in a different assessment than you hold yourself when you hear me say: You are Loved!

I love you very much. I always say that at the end of one of our gatherings—any of our gatherings—I love you very much. Tonight has been very single-pointed, simply, profound. And I am glad to be where I can say it to you and you can hear it. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

May 4th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Okay. Tonight we're not going to be reading from the Book once again and I invite everyone to re-read the transcript of the last meeting, the one on November 12th (2012) dealing with the Obstacles to Peace. Another week of review will be good for everyone.

So before we begin tonight, let's all take a few moments to be quiet together.

[Quiet time]

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We talked at some length last week about Love and specifically, that you are Loved. And that the same Love by which you are Loved, your Brother or Sister is Loved by. And that in the experience . . . in your experience of feeling the Father's Love because you've stopped resisting it, you know something about your Brother from within the experience of being Loved by your Father. You know from the tips of your toes, in your soul, that your Brother is Loved likewise, and is as deserving of that Love as you find yourself to be in the experience of that Love.

Now when you dare to become quiet, to go within and engage in the two-step, by giving your attention to the Father, abandoning your own best thinking and judgments, you have only one thing to cope with. And that is, whatever resistance you bring to letting the Father's Love register with you.

So the only arguments you're going to run into against the experience of it are going to be yours. There won't be a hundred-thousand different opinions arguing against your letting yourself have that experience. Just one—yours.

That makes it relatively easy to get past the resistance because you, in so many words, can just tell yourself to “shut-up!” and mean it and abandon the arguments and listen.

But now, let’s say you have the experience of the Father’s Love and in the experience you have learned something about your Brother, about the fact that your Brother is Loved, and loveable and deserving of love just as you are, without qualification. And in that insight, in that new awareness of your Brother that isn’t a thinking process but is an experiential thing, you will behave differently toward your Brother or your Sister—your fellowman or the object of your affection, the part of Creation you’re giving your attention to, and perhaps the one who is blessed by your clarity is unable to accept it, is unable to conceive of it as real, reasonable, something deserved. And that one refuses to accept the gift of awareness of the truth about him that you embrace him with, and as a result, continues to suffer from his limited self-perceptions.

Now what’s happened here? Unlike when you’ve gone into the holy instant, and asked of the Father, “What is the truth here?” where only your arguments against the truth can block the experience of the Father’s extension of It to you, you’re now dealing with someone else—someone else who has arguments against the truth. And that one is not you and therefore, you do not have your hand on the switch that can turn off that argument as you do within yourself. And so it seems to get more complex.

Now the other thing is, that in your looking at your Brother initially with the awareness of his perfection, of his loveableness and the fact that he is uninterruptedly and wholly loved in every moment, you can begin to feel thwarted in your extension of the acknowledgement of the truth about your Brother. And suddenly, an opinion of yours about your Brother comes into play.

And so, in relationship with your fellowman, whom you desire to bless rather than harm, you find that there’s you with your clarity and then there’s your Brother with his ego perception of himself and now you with your ego-perception of him, even more complex. And the result is that you become frustrated by being thwarted in this divine activity which you very much care to be involved in and which you very much care to have your fellowman be blessed by. Because you know it’s part and parcel of Waking up, of everyone Waking up from the dream.

And now any range of emotions can come into play in you: frustration, sadness, grief, impatience. You can feel obligated to find a way to cause your Brother to see the truth and be free of the limitations that he thinks he deserves and that he thinks are real and which you have become aware are not because you have had this glimpse of the fact that you are Loved and that your Brother or Sister is likewise Loved.

Now you have feelings going on that aren't part of the holy instant. Why? Because you've abandoned the holy instant yourself, in your desire to care for your Brother. And in meeting rejection or resistance to it, you shift into reaction instead of doing what gave you the experience of God's Love in the first place, which revealed to you the truth about your Brother that you hadn't seen about your Brother before and which your Brother still isn't seeing.

Now if you allow yourself to slip out of that, well, let's say, out of the holiness of the holy instant, you will begin to take responsibility for what happens and you will begin to feel that you must use force or coercion or some effort to convince your Brother that he is suffering falsely. And of course, now as I said, you're completely out of the holy instant. Your Brother is likely to feel coerced because in fact you are not expressing the spontaneous flow of realization that comes with the experience of the Father's Love.

So there's an important point to remember here, let's say, an easy way to back off from the frustration that comes from being met by resistance to the clarity of your vision that you have about your Brother or Sister. You know, you're always using a measuring stick of some form. And a measuring tape or measuring stick is something that you lay upon or around that which you are measuring. Now suddenly when you abandon the holy instant in frustration with your awareness that your Brother isn't getting healed of that which he deserves to be free of, you've started using a different measuring stick. It's the measuring stick of the ego. It's the measuring stick of human opinions. It's the measuring stick of biased conclusions that you have come to about your Brother from, we'll say, experience with your Brother and an effort to characterize him in your mind based upon his behavior.

Now there is a measuring stick that is the only true measuring stick. And that's the focus of my attention tonight with you. The measuring stick is embodied in a statement, which I am going to paraphrase. And the statement is this:

"The starting point is that God—Spirit—is All in All and there is no other might nor mind."

That is the foundation, the context in which you look into the holy instant in order to learn of the Father about your Brother, about yourself, about Creation, about your world. When you have been infilled with the experience with the Father's Love which has transformed your sense of yourself out of the awful perceptions that you have had into the only perception you can have, when you realize that because you are experiencing God's Love you are worthy of It, you are deserving of It even though you seem not to have gone through any steps of redemption yet. That is a profound experience.

Now, when you look at your Brother from within that experience, you are laying upon or embracing your Brother from that context, from that experience of being Loved. You are in so many words, measuring your Brother from the starting point which is that God—Spirit—is All in All and there is no other might nor mind.

That's why your Vision, given to you by the Father is transformational. But just because it's transformational, doesn't mean that your Brother or Sister is necessarily going to hear It or recognize It or embrace It. Understand that, so you're not surprised, not disappointed, not frustrated and you're not caused to forget to continue doing what brought you the experience of being Loved, in other words, engaging in the two-step: "Father, what is the truth here?"

When you find yourself feeling frustrated because you are so impatient for your Brother to be in the experience of joy, you've got to remind yourself that the frustration is because you have abandoned the proper measuring stick—you've abandoned, stepped away from the starting point as though there's some other point to start from.

The starting point is that God . . . the starting point is God. The starting point is not your Brother or his resistance or his bad behavior that is resulting from his very limited and negative self-perceptions. That is not the starting point. But if you shift and let that become the starting point for you, you will be joining him in his ignorance and abandoning the only thing that will transform.

And so, when this happens even if you are disgruntled and disappointed and feeling powerless, you must go back to the starting point. Remind yourself, the starting point is that God is All in All . . . that God—Spirit—is All in All and there is no other might nor mind.

Now once again, if you're disgruntled and bothered, that statement is just going to be a string of words. It's not going to be the experience you had of the fact that you are Loved by the Father. But in using that string of words, you break or interrupt the attraction you have let take you over to the bad behavior or the unfairness of the situation for your Brother that you know he doesn't have to go through. And it will bring you back to a point of attentiveness—that attentiveness which is part of the holy instant or the practice of the two-step. Your giving your attention to the Father wanting to know, "Father, what is the truth here?" And you can bet your bottom dollar that the truth there is going to be inseparable from the starting point—the starting point of all Being, not just the starting point of your paying attention, that God—Spirit—is All in All and there is no other might nor mind.

As you relax into that because you've abandoned using your Brother or his behavior as your starting point, your peace will return. Your stability will settle in. And you will feel once again the Father's Love, and you will then immediately know the truth about your Brother.

Now we're back where we started before you got off the track. Now while your Brother continues to not believe the truth about him, you must continue to give your attention to the Father: "Father, what is the truth here? Father, what needs to be known, what needs to be done to uncover the blockage to his realization to his experiencing the influx of the awareness that he's Loved?"

This is important.

You engage in the two-step. You practice the holy instant. You experience the blessing of it. You find yourself moved into the arena where God's laws prevail and everything isn't suddenly perfect. That doesn't make any difference because it's your task to stay on target! It's your task not to abandon the holy instant. It's your task not to shift your attention. When you know that, it will be easier to keep your attention there instead of becoming preoccupied by the stupid resistance of your Brother or Sister. You see?

Now you cannot do this with any preconception as to what is appropriate.

I will tell you this: it is not wise—it's never wise—to give an answer to a question that hasn't been asked. When a question is actually asked, there is already a readiness to accept or hear the answer. Therefore, surprising as it might seem, there are times when your Brother is suffering and you see the ridiculousness of it—the complete lack of necessity for it.

There are times when this happens that it is not appropriate for you to do anything . . . that it is appropriate for your Brother to be uncomfortable with his limited sense of what the truth is about himself, so that at the level of feeling, the question that needs to be asked can take form . . . so that he can arrive at the point where for his reasons he says, "I don't want to have this experience any longer. I refuse to justify having this experience. I will abandon my arguments in favor of being limited and being in pain. How do I have that experience of letting go? How do I have the experience of freedom from pain?" Now the question has been asked and the readiness for the answer is present.

You must remember that although it's hard to see about your Brother, you recognize that this is true about you. And the simple fact is that there have been things that were untrue about you that you suffered from only because you refused to let go of the justifications for it. You were getting a payoff for it. And something had to happen in the withinness of you that no one else could accomplish, whereby you were ready to stop hurting yourself, where you were ready to let a fuller experience of your divinity or at least a better life into your experience, maybe not fully expecting that it would come as a realization of the Presence of God Loving you and transforming your sense of yourself. You see?

Now I've told you this. And you can see that yes, this has been true about you and so therefore, it's very likely to be true about someone else and therefore, you can fully expect to get that kind of an answer. And that is the exact opposite of what I'm saying! What I'm saying is that you must go back to the measuring stick. You must bring your attention back on target when you have become frustrated because the extension of your Vision and your love wasn't received and reassume your position at the starting point.

The starting point is: that God—Spirit—is All in All and there is no other might nor mind. And that is the measuring tape to be applied to your Brother or to whatever the circumstance is that is in need of correction, so that you can . . . what? . . . expect to learn that your Brother needs to have a little bit of suffering so that the question that needs to form can take form? No! Don't have any preconceptions! But do be aware that when you do this the answers that unfold to you will go far beyond a simple rehearsal of logical steams of words and sentences. They will go beyond that, in the sense that the way you are behaving with your Brother in the presence of your insight will provide an environment, one that you may not even be fully aware is being created, in which the elements of the necessary question can begin to form in his mind so that there's a willingness to abandon his commitment to his limitation and hear the answer that you may have had all along. You see?

Let's understand something about the holy instant. It's not a temporary experience of an instant. It's not supposed to be ten or twenty holy instants experienced during a day, or ten thousands experienced over a year. The holy instant is describing you in a moment of defenselessness in which the experience of truth is revealed to you by the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind—that Whose purpose is to reveal the Father's Perspective to you because that's your perception of Birthright, we'll say. It [snaps fingers] occurs in an instant, but it doesn't disappear in an instant. And you don't have to abandon it. It's supposed to be something that [snaps fingers] occurs in an instant and remains permanently your vantage point of choice. The starting point has to be your vantage point of choice because by it you will measure everything and as a result by it, you will experience everything truly.

And so as you experience an instant here and an instant there and an instant the next day, remember, it's not supposed to stop. And the point is for you to remember to choose for the holy instant the moment it begins to stop, so it's refreshed until it's refreshed so frequently that it becomes a constant in your life, because you're not abandoning it any more.

When you want to know the truth about your Brother you may not be confronted with a smooth path because the truth about your Brother is going to call for correction of things and sometimes those things are held onto ever so tightly. And so, if you don't want to get frustrated and you don't want to end up giving up, then you've got to remember to get right back into the holy instant where your attention is not on your Brother or his characteristics or his bad habits or his bad behavior and give your attention to God so that God and what God is revealing to you become the measure you apply to your Brother. You see?

"Oh well, I didn't think it was going to be that much hard work?" You know what? It's not your Brother that's the hard work, it's you that's the hard work because you're saying, "I would rather not stay in the holy instant all the time, that's too much work. I would rather not stay in the place where I'm consistently experiencing the clarity that will meet the need, even if the clarity is that you need to be silent for a space of time that allows the discomfort caused by the resistance to create the inner circumstances whereby the elements of the essential question can take form . . . the question that the sufferer has, which because it is his question he will listen for the answer to.

It isn't so much that you want results from the holy instant. It's that you want to learn to be in the place where there is a constancy of the Spirit of God in you, a constancy of the Love of God whereby you are Loved and with which it is your Birthright to be Loving your Brother—an uninterrupted stability that under-girds your eternal holiness.

The shift, you could say, into eternity occurs from the instant you're in by allowing yourself to be in it and not abandoning the starting point . . . no matter what!

This is the good news. This is the practical news. This is what constitutes actual change in you as a result of the initial experience of being Loved by the Father. The Gift is extended, not by becoming preoccupied with your Brother and giving him the Gift, but staying with the Father and the Gift He's giving you. Because when you do that, it flows from you at the Father's Will, not yours. And it feels so much better for it not to be your work—your responsibility carried out well. It feels so much better for healing and balance to be present because they're the nature of Being, not some personal accomplishment of yours, because the nature of Being is all encompassing, unchallengable. That's why it's eternal.

So last week we talked about the fact that you're Loved. And then part two was that your Brother, like you is Loved in exactly the same way. And in part three tonight is, that in engaging in the holy instant and feeling Loved by the Father you cannot help but extend your new clarified perception of yourself to your Brother. And voila! [snaps fingers] suddenly we have relationship . . . right? It's not just you in the privacy of your little mind. We have relationship and there are new dynamics. And it's very easy for the old dynamics, the ignorant dynamics of relationships to suddenly creep in.

And so part three is to remember to go back to the starting point, one could say, go back to the practice of the holy instant. But more than that, it's going back to the starting point that is: that God—Spirit—is All in All and there is no other might nor mind. That as the foundation of everything that follows in the holy instant will always bring out the ultimate and will never aggravate the illusion or magnify it.

The three lessons of Love.

I love you all and I look forward to being with you next time.

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

Well, for the last couple of weeks we've been talking about Love. And as you know, at the end of each meeting I always say, "I love you all."

Now I want you to understand that that isn't some polite courtesy that I'm extending to you. Love is very intimate. Love comes from the depth of me to the depth of you. It comes from the holiness of me to the holiness of you—from the very center of me to the very center of you at the most fundamental levels of our Being. It's significant.

And what you learn in the practice of the holy instant as you are establishing a holy relationship with your Brother or Sister, is that revealed to you is an unbelievably full experience of why your Brother is loveable or your Sister, and that you have in you the capacity to love with that incredible Love.

You know, we have been talking about the Obstacles to Peace, peace being obviously something significant enough that it's important to understand what the obstacles to it are so that they can be released—released so that peace is your experience.

Why? Because it's more comfortable than pain? Because it's an occasional nice diversion from excitement or because it doesn't provide the challenges that wear you out?

No. Peace is itself the absence of fear and guilt. Again, peace is the absence of fear and guilt. It isn't something you use to get rid of fear and guilt. It's something which when you access it, puts you in a place where fear and guilt are simply not present.

This is important.

It means that you don't have to engage in digging out guilt and fear where they're harbored within you and do something to get rid of them. In so many words, you can forget about them and give your attention to meditation—to the practice of the holy instant where you shut up! That means go into the Silence—the absence of thinking, the absence of fretting, the absence of worrying. It's a simple choice, which you can make simply. And when you make it, fear and guilt are absent. You see?

That's the importance of peace. Peace is not only the nature of Being, it is for you in your process of Awakening, the threshold of the miracle—the threshold of insight, the threshold of Revelation. That's why it's something to be practiced deliberately. It is the way you can deliberately Wake up.

Now when you go into the Silence and you experience peace, as we've talked about, you experience the Presence of Love loving you and teaching you about your loveableness and your Brothers and Sisters. It puts you in the truly intimate relationship with your Brother and Sister that is called, “a holy relationship.”

This intimate Love is far different from the casual forms of love that are generally practiced. Why? Because this Love is illuminated in you by God. He illuminates the Presence of Himself as Love in you uncovering to you your eternal nature, uncovering to you what is eternally true about you in a manner that you can grasp the true meaning of.

This is again, very intimate.

So peace unites what has always been One—the infiniteness of God. It unites It as your conscious experience of Being. And it's called “Awakening.” It's called, “you coming back into your right Mind.”

Now going into the book:

You have paid very dearly for your illusions, and nothing you have paid for brought you peace.

And of course, the reason it never brought you peace was because you were trying to do it by yourself. God wasn't brought into the picture. That which is the infinite eternal Love that can reveal infinite eternal Love in you wasn't brought into the picture. You see?

It's simple and it's dependable. Because if you do bring God into the picture, there is the inevitable result of the revealing of the truth about you and your Brothers and Sisters and all of Creation.

Are you not GLAD that Heaven cannot be sacrificed, and sacrifice cannot be asked of you? There IS no obstacle which you can place before our union, . .

. . . meaning, yours and mine . . .

. . . for in your holy relationship . . .

. . . with your Brother or Sister . . .

. . . I am there already.

Remember I said just in the last two weeks, that I was with you before you drew your first breath. We have always been united because that is the way God created Creation. That's the infinite intimacy of Creation, which awaits your experience.

There IS no obstacle which you can place before our union, for in your holy relationship . . .

. . . with your Brother . . .

. . . I am there already. We will surmount all obstacles together, .

. . . you see? You don't have to prove yourself by accomplishing it all by yourself. You cannot! The dream is the evidence of trying to do it independently. But you know what? There's great joy in embarking on the discovery of Reality together and sharing it together because Creation and Being is an infinite intimacy.

We will surmount all obstacles together, for we stand within the gates, and not outside.

See, we stand within the inclusiveness of God, not outside of it as an independent orphan. You see? Our relationship . . . your relationship with all of your Brothers and Sisters, if you were seeing them truly, would reveal to you that they're all going on within the context of God—within the Arena of God's Love. It's always been that way. It never got changed. But you began to ignore it giving preference to imaginative definitions of Creation and having fun with the sometimes weird and perverse and uniquely creative distortions of Reality that you could come up with. But it never, never change.

How easily the gates are opened from within, to let peace through to bless the tired world!

You see? This is the purpose of peace. This is the effect of peace and it's why the obstacles to peace must be abandoned. The blessing of the tired world is the effect of peace engaged in, abided in and committed to.

Can it be difficult for us . . .

. . . us, us together, . .

. . . us to walk past barriers together, when you have joined the limitless?

Together we will find no reason to even be curious about the barriers or even comment on how ridiculous they are or how mean-spirited or destructive they are. We can walk by them in our peace without responding to them at all. Because they serve no purpose, therefore are meaningless, therefore are not real and therefore were illusions that fooled us for a time.

The end of guilt is in your hands to give. Would you stop now to look for guilt in each other?

It's an important question.

If you can hand the end of guilt to your Brothers, your Sisters, to the world, why would you waste your time looking for guilt in your Brothers and Sisters?

Just look at the starkness of it and the idiocy of it. You want to give the end of guilt. Every child of God does. It's not in his genes, it's in his Being. It's in your Being. No matter how often you find justification to block peace, it is not what you want! It is not what is built into your Being. You need to know that so that you can assess yourself truly and beneficially. And so that it's easy to abandon the practice of guilt, either on others or on yourself.

Let me be to you the symbol of the END of guilt, . .

. . . let me be something more than a historical figure in your past. Let me be the living Brother that I am now . . . now . . . now . . . in this moment . . . in this moment. And let the joining be fully intimate.

Well, if you're going to do that, it means you're going to let yourself be completely defenseless with me. Without any defense whatsoever, our joining is total . . . intimate . . . purely intimate.

And when you let that happen, when you let that experience in, it is a holy experience unlike any other that you've ever had. There's no escaping its Meaning. And there's no way for you to be fooled any longer about being an orphan, or about being on your own, or about being unloved, or about being unworthy.

Let me be to you something more than that historical figure in your past who happened to express some wonderful ideas.

Let me be to you the symbol of the END of guilt, and look upon each other as you would look on me.

Look upon the others that you've established a holy relationship with, as you would look on me.

Forgive me all the sins you think the Son of God committed. And in the light of your forgiveness, he will remember who he is, and forget what never was.

This is the blessing of the holy instant. This is the blessing of choosing for your peace.

. . . in the light of your forgiveness, [your Brother] will remember who he is, and forget what never was. I ask for your forgiveness, for if you are guilty, . .

. . . as you believe you are . . .

. . . so must I be.

Is that clear? You cannot believe that you are guilty and believe I am not guilty. What you believe about yourself you project indiscriminately on everything and everyone.

But I will tell you this: You do hold a certain reservation in the enthusiasm with which you project your guilt on me. And as a result, you are able to conceive that maybe I did overcome all sin and everything that would have made me guilty. And that little weakness in your resolve as to how you project your self-assessment out on your world will allow you to experience me as guiltless.

I ask for your forgiveness, . .

... don't think it is silly. If you think you need to be forgiven, then you think I need to be forgiven.

I ask for your forgiveness, for if you are guilty, so must I be. But if I surmounted guilt and overcame the world, YOU were with me.

You see? I was with you before you drew a breath. You were with me before you drew a breath.

... if I surmounted guilt and overcame the world, YOU were with me.

There's that unalterable, invariable intimacy. It's a fact.

Would you see in me the symbol of guilt, or of the END of guilt, remembering that what I signify to you you see within YOURSELF?

Okay, here it is simply put: How you see yourself must be the way you see me. But how you see me must be the way you see yourself. So what vantage point are you going to choose? Then choose it! Make the decision! Abide by the decision. Monitor your thoughts and don't indulge in ideas or feelings that don't arise out of the vantage point—out of my vantage point. You see?

That's how you transform yourself. Not by changing you, but by giving your attention to me and embracing my innocence—making the gift of forgiveness to me. In the light of your forgiveness (I'm paraphrasing here) you will remember who you are and forget what never was. It's a principle. It's absolute.

From your holy relationship . . .

... the one you have cultivated with your Brother or Sister, which has justified your abandoning the obstacles to peace . . .

... truth proclaims the truth, and love looks on itself.

Let's go back.

From your holy relationship . . .

... with your Brother or Sister . . .

... truth proclaims the truth, . .

. . . truth from the depths of you that has been illuminated in you proclaims the truth. And the truth in your Brother recognizes the truth. You see?

. . . and love . . .

. . . from the very depths of you . . .

. . . looks on itself.

. . . in your Brother or Sister. So let me read it again:

From your holy relationship truth proclaims the truth, and love looks on itself.

It's singular, unconflicted, embodying peace infinitely.

Salvation flows from deep within the home you offered to my Father and to me.

What? You said, "Father, what is the truth here?" Ah . . . you made a place for the Father by inviting the Father in to share His infinite perspective because you were interested in it once again. You made a place for the Father and you make place for those who are Awake—that includes me.

Salvation flows . . .

. . . not from us, but . . .

Salvation flows from deep within the home you offered to my Father and to me.

What is this "thing, . . ."

. . . deep within the home . . . [?]

It's the Alter in you. It's the undefended, unprotected presence of the holy one that you Are, even though when you offered it at first you didn't know it was the truth about you. But the moment you said, "Father, what is the truth here? Jesus, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?" you, from deep within, made room there for wholeness to become Real to you again.

One more time:

Salvation flows from deep within the home you offered to my Father and to me. And we are there together, in the quiet communion in which the Father and the Son are joined.

Intimacy again . . . the intimacy of Love which inspires and illumines the Reality of you, the divine Reality of you, the Holiness of you. You see, to shut up and ask, “What is the truth here?” to go into the quietness of the holy instant is not just the absence of stress, [chuckling] it’s the Presence of God experienced by you, uncovering your Birthright to you, your inheritance to you, your divinity to you. And it changes everything for you.

Oh come ye faithful to the holy union of the Father and Son in you!

That’s the benefit of the holy instant, of the practice of the two-step.

And keep you not apart from what is offered you, in gratitude for giving peace its home in Heaven.

When you are infilled with the Love of the Father, do not keep yourself apart from It in anyway. Just don’t! Let It fill you. Let It overflow you. Let It pick you up and carry you in the strength of It’s strong currents. And don’t ever try again to get your authority back.

Send forth to all the world the joyous message of the end of guilt, . .

. . . and what? Not what you would expect . . .

. . . and all the world will answer.

Again:

Send forth to all the world the joyous message of the end of guilt, and all the world will answer.

What’s another way of describing the end of guilt? The presence of Peace. And another way? The presence of Love. But listen:

Send forth to all the world the joyous message of the . . .

. . . the presence of peace, . .

. . . and all the world will answer.

That means the world will answer in acknowledgement of the Meaning of the Peace that you're offering. That is the only thing that is going to eradicate war. "Oh, but you know, I've tried that and it didn't work."

No. You have never tried that. You have never tried that without an ace up your sleeve or a backup plan . . . "Well, if this doesn't work, then I'm going to have to do that. I'll try it but first I will get my plans laid out so that I can be protected."

Now, this Peace that we're talking about extending is the Peace that is given to you, that infills you as a Gift from the Father. And so this Peace that you extend to the world, that you send forth to all the world is partnered, we'll say, with the Father. It is not some puny little personal gift of a tiny ego on the face of a huge planet with thousands, millions of different wills—conflicting wills.

Remember this:

Send forth to all the world the joyous message of the . . .

. . . end of guilt or . . .

. . . the joyous message of . . .

. . . Peace, or . . .

. . . the joyous message of . . .

. . . Love . . .

. . . and all the world will answer.

That's why you have to decide that it's worth it to you to ask of the Father, "What is the truth?" . . . to listen for the answer and then to act on the answer and to stay with the inquiry as the answer is extended and embellished and clarified and made ever new in its transformational effect.

Think of your happiness as everyone offers you witness of the end of sin, . .

You see? [chuckling] How many of you have thought of that? On the other hand, how many of you have thought that you're not likely to be happy because no one is going to offer . . .

. . . you witness of the end of sin, . .

. . . they're too dedicated to their small minded, mean spirited, ego concepts . . .
. right? I know that's a familiar thought. But here is a new one:

Think of your happiness as everyone offers you witness of the end of sin, and shows you that its power is gone forever.

Now either these words are nothing but bullshit or they mean the truth! And I encourage you to accept that they mean the truth and use them and practice them as though they do. It will bring purpose to your existence. And in your practice of them you will see the effect that is described here. And then you will experience . . .

. . . happiness as everyone offers you witness of the end of sin, and shows you that its power is gone forever. Where can guilt be, when the belief in sin is gone?

Exactly! Where can guilt and fear be when you undo the divorce you got from the Father? Only getting the divorce caused guilt and fear to come into play. But join again with you Father and He reveals your Birthright to you in terms you can't deny. And in the absence of orphanhood, there is no guilt and fear present and your world will not reflect back to you that sin is real. This is truth!

Where can guilt be, when the belief in sin is gone? And where is death, when its great advocate is heard no more?

Forgive me your illusions, . .

. . . forgive me the illusions you project on me. Forgive your world the illusions you project on it.

Forgive me your illusions, and release me from punishment for what I have not done. So will you learn the freedom that I taught by teaching freedom to each other, and so releasing me.

Let's hear that again:

So will you learn the freedom that I taught by teaching freedom to each other, and so releasing me. I am within your holy relationship, . .

. . . meaning with your Brothers and Sisters, with anyone you care enough to engage in a holy relationship with. Which means joining with the Father before you act in consonance with your partner, so that it is you and the Father behaving in the relationship rather than puny little ego you, all by yourself, trying to do the best you can, trying to be as loving as you can, but always under the shadows of fear and guilt.

I am within your holy relationship, yet you would imprison me behind the obstacles you raise to freedom, and bar my way to you.

It's true. When you can't hear me you're blocking it. You have some reason not to hear me that you prefer. And when you finally yield, when you finally soften and ask of me, and have no objection, you will hear me. I answer constantly. But you won't hear me unless you let go of the resistance you have to hearing me.

I am within your holy relationship, yet you would imprison me behind the obstacles you raise to freedom, and bar my way to you. Yet it is not possible to keep away One Who is there already.

Important for you to remember that. I am intimately with you already in every single moment, in every little corner of your conscious awareness. I'm there already. So you can't keep me away, but you can ignore me. But because all you're doing is ignoring me, we can connect the moment you decide to—truly the moment you decide to. And I invite you to decide to immediately.

. . . it is not possible to keep away One Who is there already. And in Him it IS possible that our communion, where we are joined already, will be the focus of the new perception that will bring light to all the world, contained in YOU.

That's the blessing and the meaning of intimacy. And it's the outcome of not blocking Peace anymore.

Everyone is on the way out . . . everyone is on their way out of conflict and into Peace. It's the Movement. It is happening. Make it comfortable by not resisting it and by consciously embracing it. And as you do, remember that there is an intimacy of unfathomable depth between you and me, between you and the Father, between you and the Holy Spirit and between you and every single one of your Brothers and Sisters even though they don't know it at the moment and can't join you consciously like I can and the Father can and all those who are already Awake can, including every single one of your Guides.

I invite you during the coming week to remember that you're present in an intimate, holy relationship. And reach for me often, defenselessly.

I love you very much and I look forward to being with you next time.

Chapter 19 – Section: THE ATTRACTION OF PAIN
First Edition – p. (?) / Second Edition – p.414*

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We're reading about the Obstacles to Peace and how to overcome them.

Tonight it's going to be my goal to bring home the practicality of what we're reading. Many of you have been studying the Course for many years. What I want to be very clear to you, is that the Course is not a philosophy. It is not a set of ideas that are pacifying, that give you a good warm fuzzy feeling and allow you to function in the world with more ease.

The Course is, at the bottom line, about changing -- about being in the world in a new way, where your behavior is not what it used to be. To have changed thoughts with no changed behavior means you're not in a position to make any contribution, whatsoever, to the world.

But listen to what we ended up with last week:

I am within your holy relationship, yet you would imprison me behind the obstacles you raise to freedom, and bar my way to you. Yet it is not possible to keep away One Who is there already.

Important! And to repeat myself, "I was there before you took your first breath." I have been with you since "the Beginning." I cannot be barred and you cannot decide to let me in. I'm here. I am with you. You and I are together, whether you are paying attention or not.

. . . it is not possible to keep away One Who is there already. And in Him it IS possible that our communion, where we are joined already, will be the focus . . .

What?

. . . the new perception that will bring light to all the world, contained in YOU.

You're here to join with me and bring light to all the world. How? By means of new behavior -- behavior elicited from our communion, our relationship. This means that your behavior is going to be different from the accepted behaviors of the world. If they're not, there will be no transformation. It's that simple.

Now today was a day of tragedy of, we will say, cataclysmic natural weather events which caused much tragedy. And for those of you who watched the media keeping track of the developments, I would be willing to bet that you didn't keep your peace. I would be willing to bet that you didn't feel that your peace was more important than anything else -- the reason being epitomized in a popular statement which says: "If you're not upset or disturbed, you don't understand the situation."

Obviously, if you chose for your peace and, as a result of that choice, found yourself where fear and guilt were not occurring, where peace was present, that would be the equivalent of demonstrating that you didn't understand the situation and, therefore, you could not possibly be able to function in a truly helpful, compassionate way.

It's not true. The opposite is what is true. Without your peace you cannot be a transformational presence. Without your peace, you do not have the presence of Mind -- because it's overridden by emotion -- to know what would transform, heal and correct the very situation that seems to call for you to be upset in order to be truly helpful—in order for you to be a sensitive human being—something you don't want to lose the capacity to be.

But if being a sensitive human being means you lose your cool, means you lose your balance and all you can do is sort of collapse in a heap along with everyone else who is in the midst of the drama and the trauma, your useless. You're not able to fulfill your purpose of "bringing light to all the world."

Now, let's be very clear: When you choose for your peace and you abandon those things which are obstacles to your peace, you come into a state of inner balance. Not a state of incapacity, not a state of stupidity, but a state of natural spontaneous intelligence. And you will know exactly what the practical things to do are . . . what will meet the human need: How to bind up the wounds, how to be truly supportive, how to be involved in a manner which those being helped recognize as being imbued with Light, imbued with Love that is beyond their momentary loss and fear and trauma. And they feel it and are blessed. Light is brought into the world.

I am talking here in very practical, I'm going to say, "physical terms" of providing comfort, or for giving your attention to desiring that comfort be provided and, in the state of inner balance that I'm talking about, knowing that it is the Father's good pleasure to give peace, to give healing, to undo the illusion of something claiming that fear, guilt are justified -- that being upset is justified.

And so you will not become insensitive, but more sensitive at the level of the immediate human need as well as the larger scope of awareness of divine Reality that every single one involved in the drama and trauma is still embraced by and governed by. And by which they can have a transformed experience immediately because God loves them, and they are what God created them to be, not what they believe themselves to be. They are more.

Now, we mentioned that the starting point -- in other words, the measuring stick that you should have been bringing to your observation of the events as broadcast in the media, should have brought into play that the starting point is that "God, Spirit, is all-in-all, and there is no other might nor Mind." That which seemed to be a cataclysmic weather system does not have more power than the might and Mind that is God, Spirit.

This, I'm going to say "mental stance" is what the Course is leading everyone to, so that you do not succumb to the interpretations and the definitions that everyone on the media are supplying, and which are molding your emotions and your reactions.

Now, here's the radical standpoint. Here's where you will be in a new way: It is by understanding, for example, that being mortal is a behavior, not a condition. Again, being mortal is a behavior, not a condition. And conversely, being holy is a condition, not a behavior.

You must be willing to stand with yourself and your brother on the basis that you are holy and holiness is your condition—not a behavior you can adopt. And that mortality is not a condition of yours, but is a behavior you use to misrepresent yourself, and which it's time for you to stop using because the misrepresentation of yourself is not transformational.

Now, in the section:

PLEASURE AND PAIN

Your little part is but to give the Holy Spirit the whole IDEA of sacrifice.

Don't try to do something with the feeling of sacrifice you have when you decide to do the two-step and yield to the Father. Abandon it.

Your little part is but to give the Holy Spirit the whole IDEA of sacrifice.

Just put it on the Holy Spirit's doorstep and turn your back on it and walk away!

Sacrifice . . . well, when you practice the two-step, you actively engage in a practice of choice. You make a choice between two things: One is abandoning what you call your free will, and the other is, yielding to or surrendering to the Father. It's that sense of sacrifice that you need to just stop giving your attention to. It's not something to figure anything out about. Abandon it so that you can surrender to God.

That's being in the world in a new way.

Now, what does the word "surrender" mean? Yield. But more specifically, "surrender" -- what does it mean? It means, "to yield to the power or possession of another." In other words, it means to let God have the power and to let yourself be His possession. That's the sacrifice that you see. You're going to give up yourself, you're going to give up your right to have your own perceptions—your own perceptions of what constitute pleasure and pain, for example . . . among other things.

It's insulting to the ego and we've talked about it before. It's insulting to the ego to surrender -- to yield to the Power of the Father, to let yourself be the Father's possession . . . which means your giving up your right to have an independent self-assertive standpoint from which to be.

But here's the incredible truth: When you surrender to the Father, when you let yourself become the Father's possession and you are captive, when you surrender to the Father by asking Him what to do, or what is the truth here? He will release you. When you let yourself be the captive of God, God will release you from your captivity -- meaning that you will find yourself being in a new way and, for lack of better words, at a new "level" in which everything you do is in harmony with Creation and in harmony with the ongoing creativity of the Father, causing you to experience not only no loss, but "infinite gain," for lack of better words.

This is important. Think about it:

When you surrender to the Father and become the Father's captive by asking Him -- by genuinely asking Him -- what to do, and then listening for and accepting the answer, He will release you. Now you will be free of the captivity of the self you thought you became when you got your divorce from the Father. You see? And you become released from the captivity that you thought you were entering into by surrendering to the Father.

Now, in your release, the Holy Spirit is not separate from you. That which is nothing more than your right Mind, is now your right Mind! This experience is what is embodied in the practice of the holy instant.

But again, it's going to mean that you're going to have to be in a new way right here in the world. And so it is going to seem to create difference between you and your Brothers. But since the difference will not arise out of the ego, it will be experienced as a blessing. It will be experienced as a blessing and others will grow from it.

Now, doing this requires discipline. It requires you to be willing to stand in the face of threat, in the face of disaster and move through it with intelligence, groundedness, and a love that is not distorted by fear or anxiety or great emotional reaction. And you're not used to this. You're not used to facing into the call for intelligence when unintelligence seems to be governing, or the call for "meeting the need" when the need seems to be so overwhelming that it can't be met.

You are not here to study the Course to become ineffective, dreamy, happily doing nothing when needs need to be met. "Because you know they're not real and therefore nothing really needs to be done and knowing that it's not real is all that's required . . ."

That is not transformational. And as I've said before you can't get into the Kingdom of Heaven by yourself. You've got to bring your Brothers with you. Which means you've got to get involved with your Brothers in a transformational way.

Now, pleasure and pain: "Oh, one man's pain may be another man's pleasure." Psychologically speaking, one man may hate to work on cars and fix them and modify them. And another man may love it, it is his greatest pleasure. Another man may hate to work in the fields, while another man gets great pleasure from it. Even the same man, as a young man working for his father on the farm may find it painful to engage in the labor of farming. And as he matures and begins to find the value and meaning of it, that very same person begins to take great pleasure in it.

So, here is the thing: Pain and pleasure are learned. They're not absolute and they are not arising out of the infinite stability of Creation. They are not a part of what God has made. Don't put such great value on pain and pleasure.

Learn to look at your Brothers and Sisters with attentiveness to their needs so that it is their needs that you attend to by going into and practicing the holy instant. Then neither pain nor pleasure will be the result but fulfillment will be and it will never be solitary or private.

But again, this will not happen unless a stand is taken, unless a choice is made where you stand in the face of need whether it is severe or catastrophic or minimal, and care enough to surrender to God.

Let yourself become His captive. Let Him own you because you are His offspring—you are Him in expression. And in doing that you will be transformational and you will contribute to bringing Light to all the world, which is the point. If you are not doing anything to bring Light to all the world, then you are missing the opportunity for fulfillment beyond your wildest dreams and your very existence is rendered meaningless, unfulfilling, because the Father's Love, the Father's clarity is finding no extension through you.

Again:

Your little part is but to give the Holy Spirit the whole IDEA of sacrifice. And to accept the peace He gave instead, without the limits which would hold its extension back, and so would limit YOUR awareness of it.

You're not here to hold His extension back and . . .

. . . limit YOUR awareness of it.

You're here to be the throughput you might say—that which allows it to flow into expression. And what you give you get to keep. It's a law. It's just the way things work.

For what He gives must be extended, if you would have its limitless power, and use it for the Son of God's release.

You see?

. . . use it for the Son of God's release.

Well I tell you, you're not going to be able to use it for the Son of God's release if you are upset and disturbed and think that because of that you understand the situation. You use it for the Son of God's release by not understanding the situation of terror and destruction and loss for loved ones or any other lesser manifestation of tragedy, of distress.

It doesn't have to be the sort of thing that happened today that's in the news. It's happening everywhere, as a financial crisis, as lack of jobs, as peoples lives deteriorating and falling apart because there isn't enough creativity being allowed that would generate the extension of that which meets needs and would therefore generate income.

There are distressing things—monumentally distressing things that are much quieter than a tornado. And all of these things call for your being able to abandon the obstacles to peace. Why? So that in the presence of the turmoil and the catastrophe you have your peace and therefore the presence of mind—you know, that Mind which is the only might or mind—to look at the situation and address it with such intelligence that it reduces fear and inspires constructive action by those who were devastated and, as a result, giving them hope. See? But it happens by not agreeing with the situation. It happens by being in a new way, a way that you become aware of when you surrender to the Father in the holy instant. You see?

The holy instant isn't just a nice meditation in which you become quiet and peaceful and in that peace you ask sweetly, "Father, what is the truth here." Or you ask to know what needs to be done, what holy thing can you do, what can you do that represents the holy Son of God or your Brother so that you might feel good. It's a lot more active and focused than that. And it requires that you put yourself in the position of being in a new way that opens the door to fulfillment that is new to you and therefore is transforming to everyone else. That is the wonder of it. That is the miracle of the Course In Miracles. That's the point.

. . . what He gives must be extended, if you would have its limitless power, and use it for the Son of God's release. It is not this you would be rid of, and having it you CANNOT limit it. If peace is homeless, so are you and so am I. And He Who is our home is homeless WITH us.

It isn't something perhaps that you've thought about taking hold of, even though you may not have ever thought about getting rid of it. But in order to have the limitless power of the gift of Love extended you must use it for your Brother's release. This is not something you would actually be rid of. You wouldn't choose to be rid of it. You can't choose to be rid of it because then it would mean that peace would be homeless and peace cannot be homeless therefore, it never has been homeless and therefore, regardless of what you think you have never wished to be rid of the capacity to make the gift of the Father's Love that expresses limitless power. You see?

. . . He Who is our home is homeless WITH us.

If he could be, if these things could be.

Is this your will?

"Well, I never really thought about it, hum, I'll have to give that some thought.

Is this your will?

No, it can't be your will because it expresses something impossible and it illicitly an effect that can't actually really happen, even though you've fooled yourselves into believing that it has happened and is true and is therefore, justification for being upset or disturbed, and is therefore justification for not choosing for your peace because you don't want to be an insensitive human being. You see? None of it makes sense.

Would you forever be a wanderer in search of peace?

No, not really. But you will seem to be until you make a choice, until you're ready to make a stand with the Father after having surrendered to the Father so that you might know how to stand in your peace in the face of great need without being moved by it into an ineffectual frame of mind that's governed by fear and emotion and is totally useless.

Would you invest your hope of peace and happiness in what MUST fail?

Well, no of course you wouldn't. But you didn't realize that it would have to fail because it's an attempt to do something impossible. Now you do and that means that you're in a position to make an intelligent choice and stand by it and be in the world in a new way.

Hey, it may be hard work to work in the fields. But when you engage in it willingly, bringing your attention to it, with gratitude in your heart, the laboriousness of it gives way to the pleasure of, for lack of better words, being effective, being meaningful, being a part of that which is life. You see?

Faith in the eternal is always justified, . .

“Oh come on, what does the eternal have with the tragedy that happened today? What about the deaths? What about the children that were crushed under the walls and so on and so forth? What the hell does the eternal have to do with anything right now? I feel justifiably upset and my heart aches for the parents. I know how I would feel if it happened to me.” Yes, you do. And to know how they feel is important. But to be moved by it to the point where you lose your balance and your ability to feel your peace so that you might have a stable mind with which to respond effectively, that is stupid. That is not what you would choose for and that is not what this is about.

It is about having the courage not to react but to find your intelligent peace, so that you might act consciously, constructively and helpfully. That takes determination. And that's what you're learning about through the study of the Course, because it's not just beautiful theory. It's about that which motivates change in you so that you do become the extender of the Father's Love in transformational . . . truly transformational ways.

Faith in the eternal . . .

. . . right in the face of the tragedy is always justified. Why? Because it will help you move out of and free of the influence of pure, raw, uncontrolled emotion which intelligence is not governing, but which overrules or overrides intelligence and the capacity to act truly helpfully. You see?

Faith in the eternal is always justified, for the eternal is forever kind, infinite in its patience, and wholly loving.

Well, I know you can justify the presence of that which is loving and patient with those who are suffering from tragedy. Well, how are you going to extend it if you're caught up in the same reactions they are? You're not. Don't miss your opportunity to express your holiness by reflecting the Father in the middle of the tragedy.

It . . .

. . . faith and the eternal . . .

. . . will accept you wholly, and give you peace. Yet . . .

. . . and here is the key . . .

. . . it can unite only with what ALREADY is at peace in you, immortal as itself.

Faith in the eternal . . .

. . . can unite only with what ALREADY is at peace in you, . .

. . . so you must take the time and put forth the effort it takes to find your peace and abandon the reaction.

So that faith in the eternal . . .

. . . can unite only with what ALREADY is at peace in you, . .

. . . because what is already at peace in you is . . .

. . . immortal as itself. The body can bring you neither peace nor turmoil; neither pain nor joy.

Those are all learned meanings, not actual things.

It is a means, . .

. . . the body is . . .

. . . and not an end. It has NO purpose of itself, . .

. . . as I've said before, it's simply the visibility and tangibility of your Individuality. It has no goal or purpose other than to identify your presence, which is the Presences of God.

It . . . is a means, . .

. . . the body . . .

is a means, and not an end. It has NO purpose of itself, but only what is given to it. The body will seem to be whatever is the means for reaching the goal that you assign to it.

The goals that get assigned to it will be different depending upon whether you've surrendered to God or whether you are asserting your orphanhood.

Peace and guilt are both conditions of the mind, to be attained. And these conditions are the home of the emotion which called them forth, and therefore is compatible with them. But . . .

. . . and this is the big but . . .

. . . think you which it is that is compatible with YOU.

Now I'm going to end here this evening. Again:

. . . think you which it is that is compatible with YOU.

Who are you? The holy Son of God or a mortal? How can you be a behavior—being mortal is a behavior not a condition. You can only be holy. That is a condition not a behavior.

And so you must choose that which is compatible with you and then you must be willing to stand there and you must practice standing there approaching your world from that stand point . . . what? . . . as a result of having surrendered to the Father in the holy instant and learned of the Father what you need to do, so that you might be released from bondage that is not yours and bondage which causes you to be ineffective, useless and meaningless in the world as far as bringing Light to all the world.

This is a pep talk tonight, not a scathing criticism. It is an encouragement to you to find out how to labor in the field and find the meaning of it so that fulfillment fills you, because you haven't contributed to the ongoingness of the suffering human condition but are actually bringing into play that which brings Light to all the world.

I love you very much and I look forward to being with you next time.

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I'm going to continue this week in bringing out the practicality of what we're reading so that we might bring home what it is that makes your life new, which allows you to behave in the world in a new way in the most practical of terms, let's say, terms that count, not just airy-fairy thoughts and wonderful spiritual ideas which somehow never connect with the world and just make an unpleasant experience a little more tolerable.

Again, that's not what it's all about. That's not what the Course is here to illuminate. It's to illuminate you – each and every one of you – in your true context as the Son or Daughter of God, a holy one, instead of a mortal.

Now, as we have discussed many times, when you decided that you wanted to have the right to define what everything was, and you decided in so many words to get a divorce from the Father by exercising this apparent right that you imagined that you had, you lost the infinite view that was characteristic of your experience because you hadn't altered what the Father was Being, as you, up until that moment. As a result, your view of all that is, was as infinite and unconfined as the Father's.

But as we've discussed, when you decided to join with another holy Son or Daughter of God and imagine new definitions for everything, and you agreed to these definitions and then made a bond with each other to commit yourself to those definitions, something unexpected happened: You lost the infinite view. In effect, you lost the position of observer – of that which was conscious of all of Creation and could confirm to the Father that it was indeed the Father in manifestation – you lost that infinite true view. And it was as though you decided to look through the other end of a pair of binoculars.

And now, instead of being the observer, you became the observed. You became a thing among other things. You see? One of many created things rather than the reality of your being the observer and participant in Creating Itself – co-creating with the Father.

Thus, at that moment, you could not help but identify yourself as a body. Mind you, you couldn't get rid of Mind, so you ended up experiencing yourself as a body. In other words, the visibility and tangibility of your individuality, which was present in the infinite view, became that which circumscribed you. It became your home, your domicile, your abiding place.

And so, here you were as a body and conveniently your mind became a part of it, located in your skull. And you no longer recognized yourself to be the pure conscious Awareness in which all experiences of Creation were going on.

Now, simultaneous with this shift, as we've discussed many times, fear and guilt came into the picture. Because you can't be in a state of denial of the Father, which is really a state of Self-denial – you can't deny what you are without having discomfort, without having feedback that says you're attempting to do something you cannot possibly do and as long as you attempt to do it, the impossibility of it will be felt and you will not be comfortable. This is to remind you to stop doing it and return to your normal state of Mind.

So, suddenly you became an orphan. And another word for orphan is “mortal.” In a way the word “mortal” describes more accurately the situation because obviously, if you are in the practice of something which can't be accomplished, when you are in a state of self-denial, you are in a state which must necessarily come to an end because it doesn't actually exist. The fantasy of it and your belief in it must come to an end because there truly is nothing present to perpetuate it. And so the experience of being an orphan is an experience of being mortal. It is an experience in which all that is embraced in it must come to an end. And the word for that is “death.”

Now unfortunately, without your divine perspective, this inevitability of death seems to be the inevitability of your death and the inevitability of the death of all things sooner or later, even inanimate things which slowly erode away and seem to have no eternality to them at all.

The problem is that this state of mortality, not being divinely actual, is something waiting for you to step out of it. It isn't waiting for you to step out of it, but the Father is waiting for you to step out of it. The Holy Spirit – which is nothing more than your right Mind – is waiting for you to step out of it. And everything that we're talking about whenever we get together like this or whenever you reach to your Guidance, is geared to helping you step out of this so-called state of mortality.

Now, last week I read that:

Faith in the eternal is always justified, . .

. . . this is in the paragraph before the one we're to begin with tonight.

Faith in the eternal is always justified, for the eternal is forever kind, infinite in its patience, and wholly loving. It will accept you wholly, and give you peace. Yet it can unite only with what ALREADY is at peace in you, immortal as itself.

Okay. Here it's addressing the real You – the Son or Daughter of God whose dreaming, whose enjoying or suffering from independence that you can't actually achieve. That which is eternal . . .

. . . can unite only with what ALREADY is at peace in you, . .

. . . with that which is already eternal in you . . .

. . . immortal as itself.

You see? Right here where you thought you were nothing but a puny little mortal, you are the Son or Daughter of God in Whom there is eternity, in Whom there is infinity, in Whom there is divine actuality, a holy Son or Daughter of God.

The eternal, when you reach out for it, when you practice the two-step, can come and join with the eternal that is already in you right now. And in that joining, your peace is returned to you . . . which is the removal of the block to whatever seems to be creating pain because it returns you to your Sanity, even if it's momentary, even if you're not able to maintain the connection without reverting to what you're used to.

This is important.

You are at this moment, divine. You never succeeded in getting a divorce from the Father. You never ever became actually separated from Him and you never lost your Birthright. Right now, all of you is intact.

Now, that being said, the next sentence takes a leap and says:

The body can bring you neither peace nor turmoil; neither pain nor joy. It is a means, and not an end. It has NO purpose of itself, but only what is given to it. The body will seem to be whatever is the means for reaching the goal that you assign to it.

You assign to it the goal of finding pain, of confirming pain, of believing that pain is normal and is interspersed with peace and pleasure. But it's always one of a pair, never just pleasure and never just pain.

Depending upon your belief, you set the goal for your body. It's that simple. Why? Because the body isn't governing. The body isn't what you are. A mortal is not what you are. You are the presence of Mind, which is the presence of God in manifestation in the act of Creation. And you are supposed to be experiencing conscious Awareness of Creation as the Father is Being it now . . . now . . . now . . . now. That's what is supposed to be happening. That is what it is your Birthright to be experiencing. Because right now you're not the puny little mortal you think you are and you do not have to suffer endlessly or even momentarily unless you so decide and give the word.

Peace and guilt are both conditions of the . . .

. . . what? . . . body? No . . .

. . . mind . . .

. . . because mind is the ground of Being. Mind is the context in which all form and experience of Creation is going on as eternal, infinite, conscious ideas that are real and tangible to the Mind that forms them.

But again:

Peace and guilt are both conditions of the mind, to be attained. And these conditions are the home of the emotion which called them forth, and therefore is compatible with them.

Peace and guilt: Peace calls forth peace. Guilt calls forth guilt. It's that simple and it's that consistent. It never gets fuzzy. When guilt is what is looked for, when guilt is what is valued, when guilt is what you employ for some mean-spirited gain, that's what you get. And nothing else. You don't get a little bit of peace along with it. And when your goal is peace, you don't get a little bit of guilt or fear with it. You see?

It's really very simple. It's not fuzzy and therefore not confusing. And that's why you can dare to make commitment to peace no matter what catastrophe is going on in your world. And that's why when you choose for your peace, your world will change because you're not introducing that which maintains the illusion. And those of your Brothers and Sisters who are still indulging in the illusion and seems to be supporting it, do not have the full strength that it had when you were participating.

And the more that everyone withdraws their commitment to the use of guilt, the more dramatic will be the transformation in your world. The more the Light will come to it and register noticeably so that the media will have to cover it.

[And] these conditions are the home of the emotion which called them forth, and therefore is compatible with them. But think you which it is that is compatible with YOU.

Now mind you, as an orphan, you can adopt and believe in and support the ongoingness of pain and suffering. Or you can aim for the absence of suffering which you call “pleasure” or “peace.” But both of those, as long as you are not practicing the two-step, as long as no step is taken to join with the Father again, all you will be doing is employing ego concepts of pleasure and pain, and you will not have stepped outside of the realm where the actuality of pleasure and pain is only pain. Even the pleasure sought in the context of the ego is painful because it isn’t dependable and because it will seem to be taken away from you at a moment’s notice, tragically sometimes. So when it says:

But think you which it is that is compatible with YOU.

Understand that what is compatible with YOU is the eternal that unites only with what already is at peace in you, immortal as itself. Do you get that?

That which is compatible with you is the eternal . . . is Reality . . . is the Presence of God. That is compatible with the eternal and the actuality in you. And when you let That in so that It actually joins with That which is already at peace in you, immortalize Itself, then you have stepped outside of the realm of pleasure and pain in the context of the ego. And you are free and the pleasure, the fulfillment that you experience is God ordained and God supported and God actualized. And that’s what you’re after. That is what this is all about!

And again, it’s all about doing this right here and right now.

That which is immortal in you, that which is already at peace in you, is the Presence of God in you right here and right now! which you have been ignoring because you thoroughly believe that you are a mortal.

Oh-h you may be learning about spiritual things and maybe what you are learning will help you overcome an event called “death.” But that’s not what we’re not talking about. We’re talking about What’s already present in you, What is already eternal in you, What already is holy in you as You, which doesn’t have to be gained, but which has to not be argued against by constantly deferring to ideas of death and the inevitability of death and the presence of decay and deterioration.

The simple absence of objection to these is the way you confirm pain and hold onto it even though you don’t like it.

You must truly begin to concertedly and consistently ask, “What is the truth here that contradicts my belief in my mortality . . . in my belief in the mortality of everything? Reveal to me that which is already at peace in me, immortal, and the perspective that accompanies it so that I might not see mortality, so that I might not expect mortality, and instead, be constantly expectantly alert for the Movement of Creation, of that which is always Eternal, so that I no longer feel inclined to behave as a mortal.”

If mortality is a behavior, then you could say that all you have to do is abandon it so that the immortality, which is already the truth about you, might [snaps fingers] snap into focus in a clarified Mind and nothing that can happen will even suggest death to you — and so you will not behave like a mortal and die, only to find that you haven’t died.

You need to find out that you haven’t died by still being here when that which in the past would have caused death didn’t cause death. Why? Because you behaved like an immortal . . . because you behaved like a holy Son of God or a holy Daughter of God.

Let your mind go. Let it not be so confined. What if dying or being injured was just a behavior — a way you behaved that identified your mortality but with a different kind of behavior, wouldn’t?

That’s what we’re talking about. We’re talking about being in the world in a new way that is illumined by the Light, by the truth.

Continuing:

Here is your choice, . .

. . . when you’re paying attention to and being willing to accept only that which is compatible with you.

Here is your choice, and it IS free.

It doesn’t cost a thing.

. . . it IS free. But all that lies in it WILL come with it, . .

. . . if guilt is what you choose for, then all that has to do with guilt . . .

. . . WILL come with it, . .

. . . and if you choose for the eternal in you, for that which is complimentary to the eternal in you, the peace, the harmony, the pleasure . . .

. . . all that lies in it WILL come with it, and what you think you are can never be apart from it.

You see? Only one behaving like a mortal will look to guilt and fear and seek to find it, and seek to confirm it and seek to use it for leverage and control even though it kills you. But if you engage in the two-step, if you shut up and you desire of the Holy Spirit or the Father to know what is true here, all that is true will accompany that. And part of that is eternal life. Why? Because it reveals to you your holiness, because it makes clear to you your Birthright and that your Birthright is unassailable and therefore, never has been successfully assailed even though you believed it did and behaved as though it did. You see?

The body is the great seeming betrayer of faith.

It does seem to act on its own, doesn't it? You never think that you are arousing the manifestations that you're observing by your mortal attitude, by your mortal thoughts, by your embrace of mortality. You see? Even your attempt to overcome death is an attempt to get away from mortality. And that confirms it. Why? Because mortality is a behavior, not a condition. And so the attempt to get rid of that behavior through another behavior won't work. The only thing that will work is to shift from a behavior to a condition, because a condition is Real. A condition is inherent in and part of and objectifies Creation, with a capital "C".

The body is the great seeming betrayer of faith. In it lies disillusionment and the seeds of faithlessness, but . . .

. . . get this . . .

. . . but only if you ask of it what it cannot give.

Simple.

Can your mistake . . .

. . . meaning by that, you're allowing yourself to become disillusioned and faithless.

Can your mistake be reasonable grounds for depression and disillusionment, . .

. . . can your attempt to have the body do what it cannot do be used as . . .

. . . reasonable grounds for depression and disillusionment, and for retaliative attack on what you think has failed you?

You can and you do. You set a task for it that it cannot accomplish and then you say, "Wow, prayers don't work. God doesn't work. I give up!"

Use not your error as the justification for your faithlessness. You have not sinned, but you have been mistaken in what is faithful. And the correction of your mistake will GIVE you grounds for faith.

In other words, when you make the shift to that which is compatible with you, the experience . . .

. . . will GIVE you grounds for faith.

. . . because you'll see the truth and know that it is the truth and that it is eternal and anything less than that is an illusion — has been an illusion. And in that clarity you can't be fooled any longer and you will not hold onto it. It's inevitable.

It is impossible to seek for pleasure through the body . . .

. . . that's the whole point here.

Going back:

Faith in the eternal is always justified, . .

Yet it can unite only with what ALREADY is at peace in you, immortal as itself.

That's the answer. That's where to go. That's where clarity will come. That's where to bring your attention. And right now we're learning more clearly why you don't go to the body for it.

It is impossible to seek for pleasure through the body and NOT find pain.

Why? Because the body isn't the source of either: It's the visibility and tangibility of your Individuality. It's like it's the interference of Light that causes a distinguishable shape to be experienced. But that which disturbs the Light isn't physical.

And so you have that which is visible, but it's not matter, it's not material and it's not an object. It is that which renders visible the presence of something actual and Real — your Individuality. Just as all of Creation renders visible and tangible, we would say — experiencable — all of Creation, all of what the Father is being, you could say, that the Movement of the Mind of God is the introduction of the interference of Light that causes definition to be able to be experienced without ever for a moment, causing matter to be formed. Which is why the substance of Spirit is never polarized and is therefore, eternal, pure, perfect.

Again:

It is impossible to seek for pleasure through the body and NOT find pain. It is essential that this relationship be understood, for it is one the ego sees as PROOF of sin. It is not really punitive at all. It is but the inevitable result of equating yourself with the body, which is . . .

. . . what? . .

. . . the INVITATION to pain.

Now we could say it a different way: When you got the divorce from your Father and saw yourself as independent from the Father, that was the invitation to pain. And the initial manifestation of it was, the introduction of fear and guilt, calling immediately for you to engage in acts of self-protection – defense. And there was the activated polarity, characteristic of the mortal dream, the dream that everyone is going to Awaken from.

It is but the inevitable result of equating yourself with the body, which is the INVITATION to pain. For it invites fear to enter, and become your purpose. The attraction of guilt MUST enter with it, and whatever fear directs the body to do is therefore painful. It will share the pain of ALL illusions, . .

. . . why? Because the divorce from the Father caused all of Creation to be seen in a distorted fashion, in a deluded way, so that you were seeing delusions.

So fear and guilt and pain permeate every part of Creation that you're looking at when you're identifying yourself as a body, which means you are constantly reinforcing your non-connection with the Father — your divorce, your orphanhood.

It will share the pain of ALL illusions, and the illusion of pleasure will be . . .

. . . what? . .

. . . the SAME as pain.

As I said earlier, because pleasure and pain, which are results of your personal independent action, both still remain within the ego frame of reference – the orphan mindset – because the Father was never brought into the picture, the Holy Spirit was never brought into the picture. Your independence was never broken. And as a result, the divine harmony of all of Creation was not allowed into your presence where it would meet the eternal in you. You see?

Is not this inevitable?

It certainly is. But you're not stuck there. It's a mistake. It's a behavior, which you can abandon.

Under fear's orders, . .

... meaning not under orders of the Holy Spirit ...

Under fear's orders, the body will pursue guilt, serving its master whose attraction to guilt maintains the whole illusion of its existence. This, then, IS the attraction of pain. Ruled by this perception, the body becomes the servant of pain, seeking it dutifully, and obeying the idea that pain is pleasure. It is this idea that underlies all of the ego's heavy investment in the body.

Once you got your divorce from the Father and identified with and as the body, you were stuck with serving it and serving the mindset that caused it to look that way to you.

It is this idea that underlies all of the ego's heavy investment in the body. And it is this insane relationship which it keeps hidden, and yet feeds upon.

The orphan mindset feeds upon itself over, and over, and over, and over, and over again, never introducing anything new.

And as we said, even if your mind is changed but your behavior hasn't, nothing is happening that will bring Light into the world and transform it. And yet that is the threshold everyone stands upon today.

To YOU ...

... this insane relationship ...

... it teaches that the body's pleasure is happiness. Yet to ITSELF it whispers, "It is death."

The ego knows what it is, but it won't let you see it. The orphan mindset knows how it works, but it won't let you see the truth about it, because in order for you to see the truth about it you have to become aware of the Father again and you have to be interested in giving the Father at least a little bit of your attention. And that is where the perspective will come from that will show you the death oriented dynamic — the death oriented context of orphanhood.

Now, this isn't complicated. It's really very simple. It's really very black and white. And if you don't stand aghast at the language, at what it sounds like, and if you don't be so fragile as to let yourself be offended by it, you will be able to look at it clearly and let it speak to you clearly because your peace will be with you. And that's the context, that's the invitation to Revelation that will be transforming.

Now I encourage you during this coming week to re-read what we've discussed tonight and listen to the recording, because it's very transformational and it allows for rapid release of the fascination with mortality that causes you not to let go of it easily.

I love you. And my love in sharing this with you, has as its intent and its effect, that of allowing the opening in you that will let the truth register meaningfully, so that you can walk through the world this week more easily in a new way.

And I look forward to being with you all next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 2nd 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Tonight we will not be going into the book because there is something else which it is very important for us to look at together. And so, before we do that, let's all take a few moments to be quiet together.

[Quiet time]

Okay. Tonight we need to talk about Family. We need to talk about Brotherhood. We need to talk about the practicalities of Love and how they get translated into expression in the world with each other.

When you look at the world today, you see a world calling out for help. It looks like people in distress doing the best they can to overcome inequities. And you know what? You all do watch the news, and you do recognize that “this” is an awful situation, or “that's” a terrible one, or another is “unprincipled,” and the inclination is to throw one's hands up and give up.

But everyone who is screaming for help in various languages of expression is asking for one thing: They're asking for you – everyone who's hearing my voice at the moment – they're asking for you to cover their back. They're asking for someone, to use the vernacular, to “cover their ass” – to stand behind them with commitment, to witness for them and to witness for them with commitment. In other words, they want to hear you say, “I am covering your back and you can depend on it!”

It’s called “a bond of Brotherhood.” It’s called the real expression of Family.

It’s your function to cover your Brother’s back. It’s my function to cover my Brother’s back. It’s Paul’s and Susan’s and Chris and Judy’s function to cover their Brother’s back by making commitment to me and to everyone I speak to and communicate with – and to do it dependably so that you can count on it.

My covering your back is not a special function of mine. It is not something for you to watch me do with everyone else and marvel at it or consider how wonderful it is, or “How does he do that? How does he manage to say just the right thing?”

It isn’t a show I’m putting on to make everyone be in a place of wonder.

No. It’s my function because I’m part of our Family. And I am in the process of covering your backs – teaching you that it is your function as well – so that you understand that the benefit of knowing the Truth will never be a private benefit for you and you alone, that will get you and you alone into the Kingdom of Heaven while Joe down the street or Mary in the next city will find their way to be inspired into Awakening into the Kingdom of Heaven.

The call is involvement, because that is the Meaning of Family. It is a commitment to Love. It is a commitment to make the Gift of Love.

Now, I’ve said that it’s everyone’s responsibility to cover their Brother’s back. And if you’re not careful, you might become preoccupied with looking to see who’s going to cover yours. And the minute you do that, you’re in the wrong frame of mind.

Love is giving, not getting. And when you attend to your function – not being concerned whether so-in-so is attending to his function – you will make the Gift that sets into motion . . . transformation, healing, regeneration, redemption.

Now I'm mentioning this . . . I'm bringing this up, because what I am teaching and what I have been sharing for over thirty years through Paul with the devotion and help of Susan and Christopher and Judy, is the "Pearl of Great Price." I am sharing what empowers each one of you, not as an ego, but by illuminating for you how to release the ego and reunite with your Father, claiming thereby your Birthright that has always been your Birthright, so that you might abandon the orphan mentality of "getting" and shift into the holy Son of God or the holy Daughter of God mentality of giving.

This is the real meaning of covering your Brother's back: "I've got your back and you can depend upon it." "I am here for you and you can depend upon it, because I am abandoning the quest for getting help from others and shifting into my natural capacity to give the inspiration that I get by practicing the two-step – by wanting to know what the Truth is here so that I might share the Truth instead of complaining about my need, so that those who are still complaining about their need might hear what allows them to abandon their obsession with it and their fear of it."

Now it's very simple: Paul and Susan and Chris and Judy have a long-standing, ongoing commitment to making the Gift, to listening to me and doing whatever it takes to extend It. And they have done this and done this and done this and done this. They certainly are not . . . what shall I say . . . providing "entertainment" on the Internet for those who love to surf the Internet for interesting things to share with others to be amazed about, but not be changed by.

The Course is a world-changer. The Course is that which expresses the truth that sets everyone free. It clearly states the freedom message in today's language. And we – myself, Paul, Susan, Chris and Judy continue to expand on that. It is an effort worthy of attention. Why? Because what is extended is actually transformational . . . actually does provide the committed involvement that constitutes covering your Brother's back.

No one should be taking it for granted. And no one should be treating it lightly, simply because it is so incredibly transformational. And I'm inviting everyone to look at whatever opportunities you have in front of you to make the Gift . . . to say to your Brother in one way or another, "I've got your back and you can count on it!"

But I'm also specifically asking and encouraging everyone to take a look at what Paul and Susan and Chris and Judy are engaged in with me, and not treat it lightly. It is significant enough for everyone to honor significantly, and support significantly.

At the present time, support is insufficient. Needs are not being met.

There are those who consistently, lovingly and with commitment support the work financially – making contributions, responding when a need is expressed, without hesitation. That is what keeps things going. Because, . . . why? Because it supports an ongoing commitment from Paul and Susan and Chris and Judy. An ongoing commitment of the extension, dependably – of voicing the truth and being there for you, and being there for you at any time of the day or the night on the Internet, covering your back.

One can say, "Well God will take care of them" or "I don't have to be clear with great focus about this. My general positive attitude and support of everything they're doing is a prayer in itself."

But if you're not moved to action, your Brother's back isn't covered. And the dependability of your covering their back is meaningless. And it needs to come into play because it is inseparable from Awakening.

When you are finally willing to abandon your great independence and say "Father, what is the truth here?" and by the acknowledgment that your Father is your Father, you are acknowledging that you are His Son or Daughter, you are, well, for lack of better words, beginning to take yourself seriously in your holiness, in your presence as Love, Whose function is the spontaneous Gift of Itself, dependably.

Now, as I said, the world is crying out. It appears to be a world of distress, but it is Brothers and Sisters saying, "Will someone cover my back in a way that I can depend upon. I am suffering from the lack of Brotherhood. I am suffering for the absence of the meaning of Family.

“And you know what? I want you! I don’t want your spiritual thoughts. I want you recognizing me and standing with me and witnessing for me. And of course, that means I want That which is divine in you to stand with and witness for That which is divine in me. And I want you to do it with strength and courage because our Brotherhood is unexcelled, our Brotherhood is an infinitely meaningful thing and we deserve to be experiencing it together.

“Please come off of your high-horse. Please come off of your air of superiority. Please come off of your independence and let That which is Real in you stand with – backing up – That which is Real in me, so that we might be able to stop being afraid of each other and defending ourselves against each other and crying because of the misery of such a state of affairs.”

Now, I’m telling you the God’s honest truth.

There is much more that Paul and Susan and Chris and Judy could be extending if it weren’t for the time taken up coping with *lack. There is not a day that goes by that a trip is not made to the Post Office to see if there are contributions and then to the bank to deposit what’s there.

This is not what Paul and Susan’s life is meant to be for. There is no sense of home. There’s no sense of a peaceful place in which to make the extension.

Now, Paul can look at Chris with me and see his indispensability, and see his devotion, and to see his unwavering support of not letting anything get in the way of making the extension. It is obvious: The incredible fit together that makes this a team which has not been subject to the ego variables that usually accompany “a partnership.” This is very uncommon. And I am very grateful for it. And everyone else should be very grateful for it as well.

Now, one might say, that I'm laying a guilt trip on everyone. But I'm not. I'm not asking anyone to do anything that he's not feeling. But I am illuminating what things there are to have feelings about so that everyone might take a look at them with fresh eyes, joining with the Holy Spirit to ask, "What is the truth here?" "How can I cover my brother's back dependably, because I'm there for him with commitment?" "How can I do that when that isn't something I'm really used to?" "I have been raised and taught to be independent, to not be needy, and certainly not to burden others with my needs."

And yet, in your lack, you do cry out, just as the world is, very visibly. And you cry out for someone to be there with you to cover your back dependably with love – to cover your back because they love you.

I cover your back because I love you. Paul and Susan and Judy and Chris have commitment to the extension of my Love and theirs with commitment, even when it's been awkward or not easy.

Now the simple fact is that there is insufficient support to do the work. But here's the thing: Neither Paul, nor Susan, nor Chris, nor Judy are going to stop making their commitment and extending.

In other words, the apparent impossibility of things is not a governing factor. They will persist. Here we are tonight, persisting – persisting by illuminating what will refresh the Movement, what will put everyone into alignment with the expression of love, and of valuing what is important, . . . enough to stand behind it and to stand behind those who are committed to sharing it as they have unswervingly for thirty years.

They have no idea how they can continue, but they're going to. And with that kind of commitment, you might say that "the energies of Movement" can configure behind them in support of it. And that's the way it always works.

Engaging in the two-step, practicing the holy instant, provides an environment and the energy of truth which, for lack of better words, the Universe can get behind, and cover your back.

You might say, “Well, why are you and why isn’t Paul doing that themselves instead of laying a trip on us of responsibility?” Well, because it’s not about concepts. It’s not about practicing little obediences that fit a structure of “how things ought to work.”

Right now that which covers your back and covers Paul’s and Susan’s and Chris’s and Judy’s back is me saying exactly what I’m saying. You see? Doing something else is not what constitutes the Movement of God right now in this situation. And so we’re not reading from the Course tonight. And I’m not talking about how everyone can go on their little independent way and somehow find wholeness and healing and redemption.

I’m talking about the need, and the meaning of Family and Brotherhood, because those Realities need to be felt. And in the feeling of them they will elicit expressions, actions of Love. And everyone’s back will be covered, dependably if one does not swerve from the commitment to such a simply premise.

Now, that was the unfolding of the Father’s purpose this evening. This was the miracle of these moments we have spent together.

I thank you for listening and I love you all.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 9th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Last week we talked about Family and Brotherhood and covering one's back. And we did talk some about what I'll call, "economics." Except that I was not talking about the economy of the world. It was more of divine economics and not everyone gleaned from what I said, the fullness of what I meant.

Someone during the week expressed the thought that, "Well, here Paul is talking with Jesus and he has to beg for money every month. If he can't demonstrate fulfillment of finances and he is talking with Jesus, what chance do I have?"

It seems like a reasonable question. However, I need everyone to understand that the request for support isn't a means of generating income. It's a way of functioning in harmony with the means of coming Home – of Awakening.

Now, here I am . . . here I have been and I have been speaking with you through Paul in this way for many years. What is my purpose? My purpose is to invite you back Home – to remind you of Home and to share with you the means of returning. And in all respects, in order to return home there are some basic changes that need to occur. And all of those changes are mental, all of those changes . . . um-m involve the abandoning of false concepts – of beliefs that are false – and replacing them with perceptions that are true.

Now the nature of Home – the nature of the Kingdom of Heaven – is Love and peace and life and truth. Anyone coming Home from their time off as a prodigal Son or Daughter must allow his or her mind to begin to be in harmony with the nature of the destination. And so, selfishness, greed, egotism, jealousy . . . all of these things that all of you employ at one time or another in order to maintain your balance, in order to control the situation so you're half way safe, all of these things must yield to other things.

Jealousy must yield to Love. Limitation must yield to the embrace and acceptance of abundance. Not because it's deserved or earned, but because it's the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom. Not just everything you might need, but all that is.

Now, if I were to relate to you and share what I'm sharing with you, and if the sharing were charged for, if there were a price put on it and you could not have it if you could not pay the price, then I would not be teaching you how to have a new mindset that would put you in harmony with the destination you're headed for.

The only way you can come Home is if you understand the meaning of Gift. Because until you understand the meaning of Gift you will cling to “getting.” You will cling to having getting this for that – an exchange instead of a wholeness shared. And until this “growing up” I'm going to call it, occurs, until this level of maturity kicks in, you will not be able to come Home. You will still be operating as an independent agent among other independent agents. And you will all barter with each other and fight with each other over how to have the most that you think you need to have in order to get to the place that's important.

I cannot teach you how to come Home without teaching you how to grow up – how to shift into the attitude of giving.

Now there is a new paradigm of economics manifesting on your planet among your economists and your forward thinking professors in the Universities. It is showing up in the way musical artists are sharing their work instead of going through the normal channels of contracts and guarantees and manipulation of the market by raising or lowering the prices on the musical products. And it's having an effect. In actuality, it is causing some upheaval because those who are caught up in the old paradigm who are still committed to it, cannot see how there could be equity when control isn't being exercised. And yet, that's the only way equity can be arrived at.

What does this mean? It means that those who are faced with the imminence of change are going to have to stop griping about the new way to experience equity, which they can't understand . . . and explore it . . . *be quiet with it so that they might begin to understand how it works at the level of Love.

It indeed requires re-education, because in order for it to work, people are going to have to begin to care about what they haven't *bothered to care about before. When a price is put on an item and you know you must pay the price before you can have the item and you're obedient to that structure, it never occurs to you to bring love into it because love isn't required.

But in order for everyone to come back Home, to "get back into the Kingdom of Heaven," the shift from getting to giving has to occur. And along with it has to come the grasping of how that works and what the meaning of things is in that paradigm.

And so, one has to look and somehow recognize – if I'm not here to share it with you – somehow recognize that the element that has to be brought into play is Love.

Umm . . . what does that mean? It means involvement. It means coming back into the true understanding of Family and of Brotherhood, where the motive for your behavior with each other is not self-defense, but the sharing of optimal infinite wholeness. Why? Not so that you can get. But because it's your nature to do that and as the Presence of Love, it's natural for you to do that. And when you naturally do it because you've adopted that as normalcy, the manifestation of Wholeness appears. And it appears in a context of intimacy, of Family, of Brotherhood.

Now, let's say that a band of "students of truth" are proceeding forward in a group on the road to the Kingdom of Heaven, and they come to the Pearly Gates, we'll say. In order for them to go through the Pearly Gates they have to have been approaching on the road to the Kingdom of Heaven with a certain attitude, with this maturity that I'm talking about, where nobody is jockeying for a better position so that they can be the first to go through the Gate and where there is no back-biting or competition with each other, where Gift, where caring, where involvement have replaced the aloofness of human economics, and the unlovely characteristics of the nuclear family that have developed as the thought of independence has taken hold and become all-important.

This group must have abandoned independence. In abandoning it, what do they find has happened? Well, they find that it's a lot easier to have fun. It's a lot easier to be happy. It's a lot easier for the creativity of the infinite Mind of God that is their Mind to express Itself because they're not having to protect the incredible ideas that are coming to them, and where everyone is able to stand in full appreciation of the incredibly creative ideas that are shared. You see?

I am teaching how to be in a new way . . . for what purpose? For the purpose of your coming Home, for the purpose of your coming into alignment with the divine way things work.

Now, if I am the Christ and I am present in the world in this fashion, then what I am teaching must be consistent with what will actually allow you to come all the way Home. And so, Paul and Susan and Chris and Judy join with me in behaving in the way that illustrates how things divinely work.

And so we have always shared the things I'm saying and made them available at no charge. And loving responses of appreciation in the form of money have found their way through the mail into Paul's hands so that they might be put to use to continue to make these things available freely.

There is a teaching in this. There is something to be learned from this. It's on purpose and it's not just some novel way to create income for Paul who is doing some kind of work just like everyone else is doing some kind of work and ends up being paid for it. You see?

This isn't about generating income. This is about behaving in a way that teaches how to come Home, and teaches what is of value in terms of coming Home through new behavior, which Paul, Susan and Chris and Judy are exhibiting, embodying, practicing. You see?

Now, this is important to understand, because it lays the groundwork for you to what? Have a new way of generating income like Paul does? No. It puts you in a position of caring to cover your Brother's back, of caring to do it because you care about your Brother. You see?

When you're in business, you don't have to care about your brother when it comes to the transaction of it. But you're not going to be able to get away from the necessity of caring for your Brother, of being involved in that intimacy without self-protection. Because, you see, self-protection puts a shield up between you and your Brother that causes you not to be able to be aware of your Brother's need or of what would truly answer his need so that you could respond with that, that does answer it.

You must be defenseless with your Brother in order to be able to let his need register with you so that you might respond with what answers his need, rather than responding with whatever truth you think everyone ought to hear, which doesn't involve communication or intimacy at all. You see?

So, Family . . . Brotherhood . . . Gift . . . caring . . . undefended involvement, learning to express appreciation for value received – for love extended to you and received by you. Learning to keep involvement alive. Relearning to keep it alive. Remembering to keep it alive. This requires practice. Obviously it requires practice, else we wouldn't have to, rather frequently, invite the awareness that support is needed with an attempt to awaken the caring that causes Love to find expression from you. You see?

And so, the request isn't there to generate income. The request is there to trigger or inspire remembrance of what means something and what is natural to you as a holy Son or Daughter of God, so that you might bring it back into play after its significant absence, while you pretended to be orphans working each other over, protecting yourselves against each other. You see?

That's what this is about . . . that's what this is about. You see?

Now, I'm going to leave it at that tonight, because it brings into crystal clarity and simple focus something very fundamentally important. And it is fundamentally important because when it is embraced and learned and your behavior and your attitudes are changed, it opens up the gates of Heaven. It will cause the way in which mankind on your globe behaves towards each other. And it will support, nourish and magnify the integrity of every one of you. That is significant!

And even if you didn't think that that would pave the way for you to regain entrance into the Kingdom of Heaven, it's something worthy of, for lack of better words, achieving, going for, because everyone deserves to be feeling the integrity of their Being, which is being illuminated and supported by all of their Brothers and Sisters. You see?

You see the harmony and the excellence of the Brotherhood of Man when you look at it this way. It's worth looking at with new eyes, even when you can't grasp what it will mean or how it will work. In fact, everything in you says, "it can't work." Everything in you says, "that chaos will be the result!" But it will not be.

Everyone can afford to dare to risk the chance that there is a God and embody what God Is, by reaching for that which is not understandable yet, reaching for a practical grasp of how giving instead of getting can bless everyone instead of driving them into chaos and poverty . . . because until you take the time to dare to look at what you don't understand, but which is obviously worthwhile, such as the ever-present expression of Love towards your Brothers and Sisters, you will put yourself in alignment with the experience of Revelation and insight that will allow you to behave in a new way, that inspires others to embrace it as well.

That is the Meaning of the way this work, works that Paul and Susan and Chris and Judy and I are engaged in.

And that's the Meaning behind this unique function of Gifting instead of the typical one of engaging in commerce. Be willing to be with this within yourselves, because it's inseparable from Waking up. It's inseparable from the illumination of your salvation.

I love you very much. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 25th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Once again, tonight we will not be reading from the Course because there are some further things I wish to say about the practice of the holy instant and about covering your Brothers' back.

And so, before we begin, let's all take a few moments to be quiet together.

[Quiet time]

Okay. I'm going to begin by making this statement:

“Every single one of you is guilty of being conditioned.”

Everyone is guilty of having a mindset which governs your perspective. It can be a cultural mindset, it can be a social mindset, it can be a religious mindset . . . it can be a combination of them all. But this mindset governs you. It governs what you let in, it governs what you keep out. And the mindsets of different cultures can have opposite values so that what would cause one to feel guilty in one culture causes someone in another culture to feel whole and divine, even.

Now I used the word “guilty” because as long as one has a mindset, as long as one is conditioned to believe in any particular way, one is biased in his perceptions of everything. And biases that do not allow you to have a larger perspective, constitute a state of ignorance that calls for correction – where greater intelligence and greater understanding replaces the ignorance and there is less bias.

It’s important to understand this.

Because it is by means of the conditionings which you have been taught and which you have even taught yourselves, you withhold recognition of value and divine Meaning in various parts of your world, in various individuals, in various cultures and that absolutely disallows for the successful practice of the two-step, where you ask, “Father, what is the truth here?” and you listen for the answer unbiased. You will not be able to hear the healing answer if your conditioning causes your listening to torque, or put through a sieve the ultimate truth that the Father would present, or the Holy Spirit would disclose to you.

And so it is something that everyone, at the bottom line, wants to and needs to get rid of – abandon.

Now, we’ve been talking about covering your Brothers’ back. We’ve been talking about Brotherhood and Family and the fact that bringing the qualities and aspects of Brotherhood and Family into play, is the specific thing which will transform the world and correct the problems that everyone is suffering from. It’s the only means.

Now here’s the bottom line – the bottom line problem – when it comes to the willingness to cover your Brother’s or Sister’s back. And the problem is, that in order to do it, you have to be free of judgment against that Brother or Sister. You really have to come to a place within yourself where you see your Brother’s or Sister’s innocence.

That can be difficult. It doesn’t have to be, but it can be difficult and it is very often difficult. So I want to talk for a few minutes about covering your Brother’s back.

You realize that every bit of growth is a growth from ignorance to greater intelligence – greater understanding. It's always a movement out of something less than the best – less than desirable, something called, “a problem,” something going on in an arena which is difficult to cope with and full of practices and attitudes that are mean-spirited, that are unloving and destructive.

And so, when you're willing to cover your Brother's back, it means you're willing to step into an intimacy with him or her where there is stress and strain and where there is need for healing, because perhaps, they're confronted by a terminal illness.

Now let's start with the easiest situation where you would practice the holy instant and be willing to cover your Brother's back, which means being willing to be intimate enough to want to know what is the truth about her or him – what needs to be known? And perhaps the easiest situation and the one that everyone might most desire and call “a miracle” is where a Brother or a Sister expresses a distress, perhaps a distress that is causing them to be non-functional at the moment. And you, because you see their innocence and because you have enquired of the Father, “What is the truth here?” find a few words, maybe ten or twenty sentences that come to you to share . . . and as a result of it, the friend acts like a load has dropped from his or her shoulders, brightens up, and gets up and proceeds to participate in life with agreeability and enthusiasm, instantly transformed.

And one would say, “Thank you God that was a miracle! I never would have thought that what I said would have had that effect because of course, I didn't figure out what to say.”

Another similar type of situation would be one where you would perhaps, notice that the rash of measles has started to show up on your chest and arms and you turn to the Father . . . and almost before you could say, “What is the truth here?” you find one word tumbling out of your mouth: “Ridiculous!” And you move on with what you're doing and ten seconds later, you look back and the rash is gone.

Once again you would say, “Wow! that's the kind of transformation I would like to see from being willing to cover my Brother's back, by being willing to want to know what the truth is here. It's easy. And it's almost like magic.

And what I want to make clear tonight is, that if that's the only thing or the only way in which you would consider transformation as a result of covering your Brother's back to be a miracle, you would be wrong and you would close yourself off to the other kinds of miracles that occur as a result of covering your Brother's back by being willing to stand with him or her dependably with commitment.

Now, one of the reasons that the examples I just gave you seem desirable is because they're quick! It doesn't take much from you for very long. It's amazing. And you don't have to keep listening – you think that you don't.

You don't realize that the fact that such transformation occurred so easily because you did pay attention, ought to teach you that paying attention in every moment, asking in every moment, is bound to bring forth transformation again and again and again . . . now . . . now . . . now . . . now.

And so, because the easy miracle happened, you go on your way thinking your own thoughts, coming to your own conclusions until you say the next opportunity comes when someone presents to you a call for help.

Hey, in the interim, between the last miracle and the next time someone makes a call for help, you've been walking along your merry way suffering from, or guilty of your conditioning which isn't allowing you to see the truth about everything you're looking at, and is causing you not to experience your right Mind – your true Self, and the experience of the Kingdom of Heaven that is the only thing actually going on.

So during this interim period, you haven't gotten off scot-free. You're still guilty and suffering from conditioned thinking – a conditioned mindset that is interfering with your seeing the Kingdom of Heaven constantly – livingly. You see?

Now there are situations where you need to be willing to cover your Brother's back. And again, mind you, all of these examples and the whole purpose of covering your Brother's back is to reestablish Brotherhood . . . to reestablish the experience of Family in its true aspect.

So you may find the opportunity to cover your Brother's back and you listen. And you are led to take a step. And you take the step and the step causes an event to occur. What's happened is not yet the solution. "Oh, yeah . . . okay, this one's not going to be one of the easy ones . . . I can see that . . . okay." And you could even ask yourself at that point whether you want to pursue it further. But the need is to ask further: "Father, what is the truth here since the problem is not solved yet even though movement has occurred. What is needed here? What is the truth that needs to be known?"

And the truth that needs to be known will be revealed to you and it will be another step. The step may be, pause and don't do anything right now and let the movement that was just initiated come to fruition. And then you have to continue to ask, "Is it time now? Is there something to be done now?" And then you will be given further instruction once the movement that was initiated brings about its fruition.

In the process of these steps where you continue to ask for direction, because the total healing or correction has not yet occurred, you may be brought into a position where you have to, I'm going to say, be wise. Which means do some things without talking about them, without publicizing them because they will also promote certain results that will pave the way for more public steps to occur without being thwarted, all because you were guided to and you were willing to be silent – secret about what you were doing.

And it may cause you to be a little uncomfortable and you will have to ask about that, "Father or Holy Spirit . . ." or ask your Guide, "What is the reason for this? Am I hearing you correctly? Am I to proceed this way?" And as long as you genuinely ask and you are not unwilling to hear the answer, the answer will be given.

And this miracle may take a week. This miracle may take a month, depending upon the situation. But mind you, the steps that are taken and the results that are the success of the steps will always be accomplishing the impossible, or at least they will be accomplishing what to you seems to be impossible.

Mind you, I said that all of these practices of the holy instant are going to be occurring in less than desirable circumstances. You see?

And so, you might say, it could be labor-intensive in the sense that it calls for a degree of attention to your Guidance that you perhaps have not brought into play before and which constitutes an act of Brotherhood that you may never have expressed quite so completely before – an experience of Brotherhood that the one you are covering the back of feels an experience of Brotherhood to a degree that they have never had before.

And so if it takes longer and if it doesn't seem to be easy as a breeze, don't misunderstand, the dedication is still called for. The willingness to see the innocence of the one whose back you are covering needs to be held onto no matter how discouraging things might seem to be.

I will tell you that sometimes, the step that is given to take makes the impossible seem to be even more impossible as though the impossibility was further secured by the step your Guidance just told you to take.

Your Brother is worth standing with . . . again: your Sister is worth standing with, as you cover their back for the purpose of correcting an unjust or an unkind or a life threatening situation.

Now, if you are involved in covering the back of someone who you don't know very well or someone you do know who you like, it's easier to follow through with the "hard work" than it is with someone you do know and for one reason or another, don't like. And this is where the real task is for you, because you are going to have to find a way to set aside your conviction that that one does not deserve your taking the time or putting forth the effort to cover their back, because you know they're not innocent, because you've had experience with them before and they've screwed you! And you know it and you suffered. And they could care less. They did it and they went on their merry way.

And so what right do they have to have you be their benefactor and be willing to step up and cover their back. They don't deserve it. They are not innocent!

I know that every single one of you has someone in your experience that fits that category and that you have that reaction to. Well, thank goodness you're not God, because that is not God's perspective . . . thank God. And thank God it is not God's perspective because you who are not nearly as guilty as them, are still walking around guilty of being governed by a mindset, a conditioning that does not allow you to see other things clearly as God is Being them and as parts of the Kingdom of Heaven that they are.

Well, hey, your insistence upon seeing things the way you see them is your insistence upon not seeing things the way God is Being them.

Uh-h . . . how guilty does that make you . . . how unworthy does that make you when you are straightforwardly confronting God and disagreeing with Him?

Oh, so you've been doing this like so many others, and Oh, last month when you went to the doctor you got a report that you have cancer, or that there's a problem with your liver and you're going to have to have a liver transplant urgently. And maybe there won't be any livers available. Oh well, you probably deserve it. You probably deserve this problem. You probably don't deserve healing. Bullshit!

You are the holy Son, you are the holy Daughter of God every single one of you no matter what you're believing, no matter what conditioning is causing you to see things other than the way God is Being them and Seeing them – including you.

You have not succeeding in becoming what God did not Create. And therefore, you are still innocent and you still deserve to at least have me covering your back. But you know what? You deserve to have those around you covering your back with the same conscious insistence on your innocence that I bring to it . . . the same conscious insistence on your innocence that can register with you and change your mind, or shall I say, change your mindset, your conditioning so that you're no longer insisting upon seeing your definitions and can see the Father's definitions – the Father's Meanings – which are perfect and don't include cancer or liver disease or anything else.

Innocence . . . I tell you, every single one of you hearing my voice and every single one whether they're hearing my voice or not is, as I said before, the holy Son or Daughter of God who hasn't become anything else and therefore, your innocence as the present Expression of God is secure and unchanged and deserves to be acknowledged and witnessed to and held up for all to have the opportunity to see and recognize. That's what Family is for. That is what is needed today. That is what Brotherhood is. That is why we practice the holy instant.

Everyone makes mistakes. Those mistakes cannot condemn you to what God never conceived of, or included in Creation. It's simply a call for realization or the rediscovery of innocence and lovability. No matter what mistakes you made you never became a mortal and therefore, you never became something different from the holy Son of God and therefore, God has never stopped Loving you. And it is God's current, present Expression of Love as you, and toward you, that uncovers and undoes all the apparently valid justifications for your being a mortal, for you dying, for you suffering, for you not being healed.

Now, it's important for each one of you to open up to the experience of God's Love for you. It's really important, because it will transform you. And it will transform the way you look at your Brothers and Sisters. And no matter what is going on that seems to present the appearance of justifiable sin, disease and death, it needs to be seen for the ridiculous misinterpretation and misunderstanding of your Brother or Sister or the World that has no meaning because it has no cause.

Now in the Text we are reading about the Obstacles to Peace. And I will tell you, that one of the biggest obstacles to peace is the right you think you have to judge your Brother or Sister and condemn them to suffering when you will go to all the lengths you can not to be indicted yourself by those things.

Now, “innocence” is the word tonight. Your innocence, the innocence of your Brothers and Sisters, the innocence you must insist upon seeing, because only that will open the door to the realization, the revelation of everyone’s innocence and the instantaneous or step-by-step miracles that uncover the innocence and undo the inappropriate, the unjustifiable, the destructive practices of judgment and self-righteousness. You see? You don’t want to bring these into play even though you feel them strongly because you have been so screwed in the past.

I will tell you something, and you will have to remember this in order to get out of that suffering yourself: You were screwed because you weren’t joined with the Holy Spirit or the Father when your Brother or Sister, as a result of their conditioning, behaved in what seemed to them to be the only rational way to behave in order to preserve and protect themselves. You see?

What they were doing was about them. You thought it was about you. You reacted. You moved into self-protection and a returned attack instead of at that moment saying, “Father, what is the truth here? What is this one sharing about himself or herself? What is the conditioning that is causing the blindness that makes this one attack me?” You see?

If you had, there would have been no injustice in your experience.

And so you both played a role in an illusion. And one of you is going to have to abandon that role and be in a new way. And a new way is the practice of the holy instant and a willingness to be Family, the willingness to be a Brother or a Sister in the intimacy of involvement that heals.

That’s the simple lesson for tonight . . . one not difficult to grasp and one that is more transformational than you can imagine.

I will say this, when you are covering someone’s back who is severely frightened, whose mindset, whose conditioning is so narrow and limited that almost nothing that goes on can be seen in a Loving Light, you will be engaged in one of the more laborious miracle processes that there is to be involved in.

You must realize that re-education is going to have to occur so that the conditionings that are binding that one are undone. And you may not be the one to do it, but don't be too quick to abandon it. There may be others needed to help that one begin to take the practical steps with new perceptions that are more loving and more trusting and more intelligent. That one is worth the effort.

Again, that one is worth the effort. You will have to listen carefully so that you do not get abused in the process while they're still so afraid that they can't do anything but be resistant. But remember, just as you are deserving of every bit of help you can get in your Awakening, and you need me to stand with you and you need the Holy Spirit to stand with you endlessly helping you, so does your Brother or Sister.

So, I love you very much. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 30th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Tonight we will not be reading from the Course. And so before we begin, let's take a few moments to be quiet together.

[Quiet time]

Okay. From time to time, you hear the statement that such and such a disease is the number one killer — the number one cause of death in the world. But it's not true.

The number one killer . . . the number one cause of death in the world is self-righteousness. The number one cause of death is self-righteousness. Believe it or not, to recognize this fact makes it much easier to embrace the Atonement and be the presence of the Atonement.

Because every single one of you can do something about the practice — about your practice — of self-righteousness, where it seems particularly impossible for any of you, by yourself, to bring to an end this disease or that disease or that condition which from time to time has risen to the top to become the number one killer in the world. Each one of you can do something about your practice of self-righteousness.

Now, this may seem like an absurd statement, or certainly outrageous. But think about it. Think about what we've been talking about ever since we've started going through the Course. We started out by learning that there was a point at which two Sons or Daughters of God joined together in their infinite holiness and infinite perfection, and said, "What would it be like to imagine that this thing or that part of Creation is something different?" and made commitment to our mutual definition and abandoned our faith, in fact, our Knowing of what those things actually are.

And the agreement was made. And the commitment was made. And in affect, those two got a divorce from their Father . . . became independent, even though it was in their imagination only. And then they began to invite others to join in these mutual definitions, mutual misperceptions, and invited them to make commitment to them also because it created quite an unusual experience of life – a distorted experience of the Kingdom of Heaven.

And at the bottom line, an entirely false experience of Who they were. And as we've spoken, two things immediately came into play, totally unexpectedly, of course. And those two things were fear and guilt.

The third thing that happened was, that they lost the infinite view. They lost the ability to experience everything as the Father was Being It. And this made them feel infinitesimal instead of infinite . . . vulnerable instead of invulnerable. And life became to them a challenge to overcome the vulnerability.

Now in order to overcome the vulnerability, they had to engage in something they had never engaged in before. And that was, the practice of being better than each other, because they had to do something to prove their validity and their value. You see?

And so life became a practice of self-righteousness.

Now I am asking everyone to be willing to take a look at this seriously and with the expectation that you will find out that it's true. Everyone has become an expert in the practice of self-righteousness. Most of you can do it very skillfully and you can make it look like it's a practice of friendship. You can make it look like a beautiful practice of family. And of course, we've been talking for a few weeks here about Family, haven't we. And covering another's back as an expression of Family.

And last week I talked about the fact that you come across circumstances where you find yourself unwilling to cover your Brother's back because they've "screwed" you in the past or something about them doesn't meet the criteria you use to justify being that one's benefactor.

That's nothing more than self-righteousness.

You don't realize that in your "sweet kindness" you're still always working your Brother or Sister like there are those who work the system to get the most out of it because one needs to demonstrate validity and reality. One needs to demonstrate that one's self is not an illusion even though the inescapable feeling of vulnerability of fear and of guilt constantly says, "You are not the holy Son of God, the Daughter of God, you are not valid because you do not have any Source other than your own imagination."

You know, in normal daily life, the way you deal with and treat your Brothers and Sisters demonstrates the mindset you are operating from. The orphan, the one who has gotten a divorce from his Father, is always using his Brother or Sister for some self-satisfying or self-aggrandizing purpose.

Now that's something far different from covering your Brother's back. That's something far different from the meaning of Family and Brotherhood. The real Meaning of Family and Brotherhood is embodied in the idea of looking into your Brother's eyes and remembering God. Very different.

The willingness to look into your Brother's eyes and remember God is called, "covering your Brother's back."

Now, I want to come back to this fact that self-righteousness is the number one killer in the world.

When each of you arrived at a point where you chose to be the authorizer of the meanings of your world, which really meant that you were choosing to redefine the Kingdom of Heaven that was God's, you moved yourself from the experience of Knowing into the experience of thinking. You had to use thinking and logic in order to express demonstrably intelligent ideas in order to motivate people to do your bidding to benefit you. And you had to be smart enough to find a way to do it so that they felt like they were benefitting too.

It's utter incredible deceit.

And in the act of switching from the divine experience of Knowing all things, to the experience of thinking, so as to become an authorizer who could be in control, you found yourself experiencing mortality.

This is very important.

There is a fundamental mindset that every single one of you on your globe buys into. You're not aware it's a mutual agreement, you think it's a fact. And so it has never occurred to you to challenge it. And that is, that you are a mortal – that you're born of a sperm and an egg of a purely physical act caused by little bits of matter joining together in a very creative way, causing you, an individuality, a physical being that will grow and suffer and die.

You all believe that! And because you don't challenge it, you behave as though it's the truth. And you grow and you become old and you experience difficulty and you die, all because you have abandoned Knowing in favor of thinking because you wanted to get a divorce from the Father and be an independent agent.

That act causes eternal life to seem to be temporary suffering.

I've said before, that there are three things that God does not allow you to have: Sin, disease and death. How does God not allow you to have them? By not having created them. Because they were not created, they are not available as a real experience, only as an imagined experience.

And so you have what appear to be millenniums of birth, life and death. Which from time to time, what you call “seers”¹ have challenged and have inspired those on your globe to look at differently. But no one has taken them seriously, not even the ones who resurrected or ascended.

Now, I am here to remind you of the truth over and over and over, so that you might be reminded of the truth enough to embrace it and not resist it and let it infill you and I’m going to say, *consume you so completely that your false perceptions drop away because you’ve lost interest in validating them.

Someone has to correct the misperception.

Now, not just one someone, not just me because I am the Son of God and it is my task to promote the salvation of all my Brothers who are sleeping. No, every single one of you must join with me in this endeavor. And the incredible simplicity but grand reality of the means of coming Home is, that you can’t come Home alone . . . that you must be willing to look into your Brothers’ eyes and remember God.

You aren’t to look into your Brothers’ eyes and remember your goals for yourself and how he can be forced or cajoled into serving you to make you be the better one – the more valid one – so that more people will believe you and follow you and support you while you fool them into believing that they’re doing that allows you to *benefit them.

Oh, I know. You say, “How can you fault that, if I’m doing that and they are being benefited and I’m being benefited, how can you call that something negative?” Well, here’s how: because when push comes to shove, if the ones you are cajoling into supporting you for one reason or another neglect to do it, you lose your peace. *You lose your peace. You get upset. The deceitfulness of your stance becomes illuminated to you if you pay attention to it, because you become miserable and more afraid and your feeling of guilt increases as well. And if you don’t take that experience as a red flag or a high-sign that a change is called for, you will persist in it. And you know what? *You will die.

I mean after all, being a mortal you will die anyway. You will die if you don't let your love for your Brother cause you to reach beyond yourself to that which is greater than you that has the infinite divine perspective, which will be shared with you the moment you stop resisting it in favor of self-righteous behavior and by virtue of your transformed Mind bringing you back into the experience of Reality, which it's your Birthright to be experiencing. You will behave towards your Brother in the recognition of God and the extension of that to him which will bless him because there is nothing in that process that takes advantage or is deceitful, or furthers the awful definition of relationships held to by the orphans in the orphanage.

Oh, you don't want to die. Okay, but is what I'm describing the only way out of the experience of death? "Am I going to have to change completely? Am I going to have to love innocently and unequivocally? That's too much of a cost. I will opt for dying. I will opt for the thrill that precedes dying and I will pursue my attempts to make something out of myself at the expense of my Brothers and Sisters while pretending to benefit them."

Well, it's an exciting experience because it's a fearful experience . . . a guilt-ridden experience, an unnatural experience.

Let me ask you – each and every one of you: What better thing do you really have to do than to love your Brother enough to ask for help of that which is beyond you, to cover his back, to take part in his or her healing and to have the strength, the courage and the willingness to hang in there while healing occurs? What better thing do you really have to do?

I know, you're not really familiar with consistently doing what I'm describing or what we've been learning about ever since we started reading A Course In Miracles. But you know what? It's not going to do any good for us to continue to read A Course In Miracles if it's just going to be knowledge that you store away to think about it at a later date or to enjoy the beauty of in your quiet moments without Waking up, without experiencing actual change.

And you know what? Everyone is going to Wake up. And the Movement of Awakening is occurring and so the call for covering your Brother's back, the call for remembering the meaning of Family and Brotherhood and then living it! . . . the demand for that is increasing because the hurt is increasing. And as you watch in the world today the promotion of hurt is increasing and many of you are able to say, “Well, because of the Course I'm able to maintain enough peace of mind that it's not really getting to me very much and I'm having a relatively comfortable experience.”

Oh-h, that is a miserable state of affairs. Because what you're practicing is hiding. Remember, Family, Brotherhood is an involvement, an intimacy, not something you withdraw from or hide from or sedate yourself with spiritual truths so as to soften the blows of a disturbed life in the world. You see?

It is time to Wake up! It is time to bring all of these things that we've been learning about into your daily lives where through Guidance – not through the excellent practice of orphanhood – you become intimate with your Brother and you stand there willing to cover your Brother's back or your Sister's back and bring into play whatever Guidance illuminates to you as the next healing step that has as its goal the transformation of the human experience out of itself back into the divine experience that is natural to and is the inheritance of the holy Sons and Daughters of God.

Now, you may not, through the skillful use of your mind, be able to annihilate all diseases, but you can abandon with commitment your use of self-righteousness. And if the use of self-righteousness is the number one cause of death, all those diseases will begin to disappear. Not because you addressed them, but because you addressed the practice that caused you to see a distorted, awful, confused world where the Kingdom of Heaven is actually going on right in front of you. You see?

You haven't been given some humongous challenge, some formidable requirement that you cannot possibly meet. You're able to practice mental self-discipline and you are even in your temporary ignorance of your divinity able to conceive of looking into your Brother's eyes and remembering God, instead of doing some other ridiculous thing that will not cause transformation or healing. You can. It's a simple task. It's called the holy instant. And it requires nothing of you that you don't already have in you to use, to practice the holy instant. You see?

You know what? Sin, disease and death are worse things to suffer than the effort you will need to bring into play to love your Brother enough to cover his back because you insist on asking of the Father how to see your Brother as the holy Son of God or the holy Daughter of God that they actually are. You see?

Sin, disease and death are far more destructive, awful, debilitating, enervating than any amount of effort put into the genuine practice of love. The only reason that my suggestion of the consistent committed practice of love seems to be more work than you're willing to put forth is because you're out of practice. You have forgotten how easy it is and how, when you take the first step of willingness, the Father takes the last step.

Now, we will get back into the book. But we have needed to talk about these things because they're part and parcel to the Obstacles of Peace.

It may be difficult to look at these things. It may be difficult to look at yourself and see how just beneath the surface of your niceness is a mean-spirited, arrogant presence that sees itself as better than everyone else or sees itself as needing to be better than everyone else to the degree that your niceness will always be expressed with the most powerful use of your mean-spirited, self-centeredness that you can practice and get away with. That is hard to look at. But if you will begin to look at it, you will see how often it crops up in your days. And you'll begin to see that you're not as nice as you thought you were or as nice as you wanted everyone else to think you were. And that will begin to bother you, but you will be bothered by clarity. And when you're bothered by clarity it is possible for you to make resolute change because it makes perfect sense to make change to correct something you wouldn't engaged in unless you were unconscious of the fact that you were engaging in it.

And so you find yourself at the leading edge of transformation, at the leading edge of the benefit and blessing of the practice of the holy instant.

I love you all. And I will continue to remind you of the truth of you so that it will become easier and more reasonable to behave in a new way that undoes the divorce you got from your Father, or imagined you got. So that you, like the Prodigal Son or Daughter, can come Home and be met by your Father long before you get Home. You see?

You don't have to make the journey Home all by yourself. And so it will not be an infinite journey of struggle, you just imagine that it will be. But it's not.

I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

A Course In Miracles (reference pages)

Chapter 13 – Section: THE WAY OF SALVATION or YOUR FUNCTION IN THE ATONEMENT
Sparkly Book – p.323 / JCIM – p.135 / CIMS – p.272
Chapter 13 – Section: YOUR FUNCTION IN THE ATONEMENT
First Edition – p. 259 / Second Edition – p.279

The original subject as it was dictated to Helen was “The Way of Salvation.” And when the books were edited, it was changed to “Your Function in the Atonement.” The new Heading is appropriate. A key point—a very important point.

Let’s take a few moments of quiet time before we begin.

[Quiet time]

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who’s joining us on the Internet.

Well, several people found what I had to say last week to be difficult or problematic. I was, perhaps, never clearer in expressing the problem of the human condition and its answer. And to some degree, what I shared seemed to convict everyone to one degree or another.

Someone responded and said, “It was tough medicine, but I needed it.” Another commented that it knocked the wind out of their sails, because they thought they had been being a genuinely kind and loving person. But after hearing what I had to say and paying attention to their behavior, they discovered how, shall I say, shallow was their kindness . . . in other words, how easy it was for their “genuine kindness” to shift to anger or judgment if the kindness expressed was not received or was ridiculed or not cooperated with.

So it has put many in a position of having to reevaluate themselves and to the use to which they’re putting their mind. And it isn’t necessarily easy, especially when one’s behavior has been revealed to him by his very own observance to be self-righteous . . . to be self-serving . . . to be manipulative. That’s not an easy thing to swallow.

And yet, as I said last week, when one is disturbed by clarity, this is a forward step. Because clarity allows new decisions to be made that can effect actual change. And this is important.

Now there are many reasons that what I shared last week might be interpreted as being an impossible task. After all, the bottom line is that you are here to cover your Brothers’ back. You are here to be involved with your Brother or your Sister in a way that supports the illumination and disclosure of their divinity, the uncovering of that which results in healing. And that activity genuinely engaged in will interfere with whatever your goals are – whatever plans you have for yourself.

That’s when you find out that you’re not as kind as you think you are and that your kindness is not as genuine that you thought it was.

And yet the call is for that kindness to become genuine so that your willingness to cover your Brothers’ back is engaged in with commitment – with real caring. Not an act of caring, but real caring, real involvement.

Now, in some ways, as you’re willing to test this way of Being out, you will find that it will seem to call for you to abandon yourself. After all, if covering your Brothers’ back, if engaging in the genuine practice of love towards your Brothers and Sisters, if that is what is going to govern you, then you will seem to be at the mercy of, for lack of better words, your Brothers’ needs.

“Oh my goodness, I can’t do that, I have my own needs to take care of. In fact if I don’t take care of my own needs, I won’t be able to convince my Brothers and Sisters that I’m worthy of their attention and worthy of their support. And therefore, I can’t afford to abandon myself.” You see?

It seems to be an impossible task, if you have to put yourself, not just in second place, but in last place. And yet, the way Home involves looking into your Brothers’ eyes and remembering God.

Again, an impossibility! An impracticality! Something that it is unreasonable for you to be asked to do. And yet, it’s not. It is the simple answer. It is the practice of the holy instant. It is the practice of the two-step where you shut up! And what that means is, you shut up your thinking . . . you shut up your agendas . . . you shut up your self-righteous urgency to take care of yourself as number one, and get everyone else to help take care of you while you imply to them that you’re taking care of them.

Now you, in order to come Home, must arrive at a point where you’re willing to reach out to the Father. You must be willing to arrive at a point where you will reach out to the Father and ask for help! “Father, what is the truth here? Aside from my best judgments, aside from my best agendas, aside from what I want, what is truth here? What is the truth that heals? What is the truth that transforms? What is the truth that Wakes us all up?”

Again, a seeming impossibility. You say, “Well, I’m not in touch with my Guide like Paul is, or so-in-so is. I don’t have that skill, or if I do, I haven’t uncovered it in myself yet. And actually, I haven’t done it with total commitment yet, I haven’t reached out genuinely yet. I’ve reached out with curiosity as though it’s something interesting and perhaps valuable. But you know, I haven’t done it as though I needed to do it.” And that’s the problem.

Nevertheless, it seems to be another reason to say that what I shared last week is impossible and is unreasonable. And that’s why we are moving back about one hundred pages in the Text to a place that we’ve already read and shared together, which now is going to have far much more meaning than it did before and which will clearly express to you the factuality — the truth of what I shared last week. And it will state it so clearly, that even though it still seems impossible to you, you will understand that what seems to be impossible to you, must not be impossible, because here is an answer to the impossibility stated so succinctly that you can't deny, for lack of better words, its pure logic.

This section that we will be reading tonight, I ask you to write the page numbers on a post-it note and put it somewhere where you can always see it. So that when doing the two-step, when practicing the holy instant seems to you to be impossible or certainly not a reasonable thing to do constantly and consistently, you can come back here and see it stated very perfectly, clearly. So that it might inspire you to put a little more faith in the impossible – to put a little more faith in its possibility.

You know what? A shift is occurring. A shift of Awakening is occurring. And those who are beginning to be aware of it think it's impossible. But those who join in actually pushing the envelope, if I may put it that way, by engaging in the holy instant over and over and over and over again, daily, hourly, all who engage in the pushing of the envelope help break the envelope, help break the bubble that seems to be holding you in the human condition.

And so it's important.

So, let's go into the book now:

THE WAY OF SALVATION or YOUR FUNCTION IN THE ATONEMENT

When you accept a brother's guiltlessness, . .

. . . that means, when you're willing to cover your Brother's back by standing close and with him, . .

When you accept a brother's guiltlessness, you will see the Atonement in him.

Mind you, this is a statement of fact. Everything that I will be reading here, is a statement of fact which you can rely upon and which you should read with the comprehension that it's worth being open to its Real Meaning. Again . . .

When you accept a brother's guiltlessness, . .

. . . when you're willing to give him the benefit of the doubt, when you're willing to stand in support of him even though he may have screwed you royally in the past, when you're willing to stand with him to see his divinity, . .

. . . you will see the Atonement in him. For by proclaiming it in him . . .

. . . meaning, for by your proclaiming it in him . . .

. . . you make it YOURS, . .

. . . you see?

. . . and you WILL see what you sought.

Another way of putting that is, you get to keep what you give.

You will not see the symbol of your brother's guiltlessness shining within him while you still believe it is not there.

Simple, straight-forward, factual.

HIS guiltlessness is YOUR Atonement.

What does that mean? That means that your insistence upon looking at him to see his guiltlessness by saying, "Father what is the truth here?" your doing that makes it yours. Because it reveals your Brother's guiltlessness to you and when you see it about your Brother you immediately recognize that it's the truth about yourself as well.

But you won't see it about yourself until you extend it to your Brother first. Another seemingly impossible thing and yet that's the only way it works and therefore, it is possible!

HIS guiltlessness is YOUR Atonement. Grant it to him, . .

. . . grant his guiltlessness to him . . .

. . . and you will see the truth of what you have acknowledged. Yet truth is offered FIRST to be received, . .

. . . to make that even clearer we could say, Yet truth is offered first in order to be received . . .

. . . even as God gave it first to His Son.

. . . you and your Brothers and Sisters.

The first in time means nothing, but the First in eternity is God the Father, Who is both First and One.

Meaning, indivisible.

Beyond the First there is no other, for there is no order, no second or third, and nothing BUT the First.

This is important. This is why Reality is unconflicted. This is why harmony is the eternal fact. This is why eternity is eternity. There is nothing to break it up. There is nothing to break it down.

You who belong to the First Cause, . .

. . . God . . .

. . . created by Him like unto Himself and part of Him, . .

. . . because there's nothing outside the One that God is . . .

. . . are more than merely guiltless.

You at this instant, as you are listening, are guiltless. That is the eternal unchangeable fact about you, one which you do not believe. And one which you do not experience, because you are maintaining a duality. God is both First and One. Singular, indivisible.

Therefore, your attempt to be an independent agent is an attempt to create a second, in addition to God, which is impossible. And the impossibility of it is experienced as sin, sickness and death – the human condition. It's not true. It's not actual. But as long as this attempt to be separate and independent and a second to God, that is the problem that needs to be solved.

It means that anything you engage in independently, any thought you have that is not guided by the Holy Spirit or the Father, is the creative movement of the illusion – of mortality, period.

It is never valuable. And to abandon it does not constitute the abandoning of yourself. Even though you identify so closely with your thinking, you believe that when you're not thinking, you will cease to exist. Which is another thing that makes what I'm teaching seem to be impossible.

Again:

You who belong to the First Cause, created by Him like unto Himself and part of Him, are more than merely guiltless. The state of guiltlessness is only the condition in which what is not there has been removed from the disordered mind that thought it WAS.

Your guilt never was present. You imagine it is. But it is not present.

The state of guiltlessness . . .

. . . which is your true state . . .

. . . is only the condition in which what is not there . . .

. . . meaning guilt . . .

. . . has been removed from the disordered mind that thought it WAS. This state, and only this, must YOU attain with God beside you.

In other words, it is something you need to consciously engage in the release of by joining with the Father consciously, by having the conscious intent not to be separate, independent and isolated.

This state, and only this, must YOU attain . . .

. . . you have to initiate . . .

. . . must YOU attain with God beside you. For until you do, you will still think that you are separate from Him. You can feel His Presence next to you, but CANNOT know that you are one with Him.

This is a little tricky . . .

This need not be taught. Learning applies only to the condition in which it happens OF ITSELF.

You see? You think you teach yourself things. But it's in the absence of your teaching yourself things, it's in the silence of the infinite Mind that you are, that the infinite Mind that God is as your Mind, can register [snaps fingers] with you. And then you learn because truth is revealed and perceived by you but not at your own hand.

And as I've said before, this is what is insulting. And to those who are sorely identified with their thinking, it means that you've got to give up your existence. That's what it seems like to you, which you perceive to be an impossible thing to willingly do because it feels like committing suicide.

When you have let all that obscured the truth in your most holy mind be undone for you and stand in grace before your Father, He will give Himself to you as He has always done.

There it is. You cannot teach yourself. But in the absence of your busy thinking – of your indulgence in self-righteousness – in the absence of that, the Father takes the last step. The Father reveals Himself to you. He will give Himself to you as He has always done. What does that mean, He has always done? Yes, because Being is a Movement of God into manifestation.

Creation is the Movement of God into manifestation. God is always giving Himself to you as your Self, as your Identity. God is giving Himself to you as your Identity. And you see, as long as you're attempting to maintain a puny little private sense of self, you are refusing the Gift of God, of Himself to you.

Giving Himself is all He knows, and so it is all knowledge. For what He knows not cannot be, and therefore cannot be given.

Do you see? This is slowly and clearly undermining any justification you might have for valuing and validating yourself as a private entity with a mind of your own, who has been given a gift of free will by God, you say, to act independent of God, to ignore God if you so choose. And that's all fantasy. And it simply needs to be abandoned.

Ask not to be forgiven, for this has already been accomplished.

You can't be forgiven for what you haven't done. And you have not managed to be an orphan. You have not managed to be an independent agent acting in opposition to the Father. It can't be done! And so you haven't done it. Therefore you are not guilty of it and you can thereby abandon the feelings of guilt that keep you from reaching out to the Father and embracing Him and His Gift to you of Himself as all there is to you.

You see? It's utter simplicity. But it requires the complete abandonment of self-will, which finds expression through self-righteousness.

Ask not to be forgiven, for this has already been accomplished. Ask, rather, to learn how to FORGIVE, and restore what always was to your unforgiving mind.

What unforgiving mind? Well, the mind that gets pissed off when somebody else doesn't pay attention to the kindness and the goodness that's extended to them. And they don't appreciate it and they take up your time giving you the opportunity to be kind and then waste your time by not taking it and using it and benefitting from it. You see?

The anger that comes up is a manifestation of an unforgiving mind. And that means that the gift of kindness that you thought you were giving was an act of kindness – an act, not a genuine kindness. It's the evidence of an unforgiving mind, resting just below the surface, ready to pounce if the good you are doing isn't well-received.

That is self-righteousness. And self-righteousness, as I said last week, is the number one killer. It is that which keeps you separate from the Source of your Life which is your Father, Who, by making the Gift of Himself to you as you is the non-existence of an independent agent, and is the presence of You in your right Mind enjoying and perceiving Creation as it truly Is, so full of joy and love that there cannot be any occasion for mean-spirited, small minded self-interest, self-righteousness, self-importance.

Atonement becomes real and visible to them that USE it.

Atonement becomes real and visible to them that USE it. It remains invisible to those who do not use it . . . to those who refuse to engage in the holy instant or the two-step and defer to something beyond their puny little self-righteous independent agent attitude.

Atonement becomes real and visible to them that USE it. On earth . . .

. . . listen to this . . . where you are.

On earth this is your only function, and you must learn that it is all you WANT to learn.

Do you see how clearly this is put and how it states that what seems to be an impossibility has to be a possibility else you would not be directed to engage in it? It is your unbelief that gets in the way of your hearing the truth of this. But it is so clearly said here that it will be easier for you to be willing to push the envelope and to press for functioning outside of whatever the current limits are that are binding you.

You WILL . . . [repeats] you WILL feel guilty till you learn this.

Period. Simple. Straight forward. The truth, as long as you are trying to deny Reality, Reality will be problematic for you, because it will continue to be omnipresent and omnipotent and it will not honor the limits you try to impose on it. And so it will always press itself against the limits you are trying to reinforce and you will call that opposition and you will try to get rid of it.

You WILL feel guilty till you learn this. For, in the end, whatever form it takes, your guilt arises from your failure to fulfill your function in God's Mind with all of YOURS.

Hear it again:

For, in the end, whatever form it takes, your guilt arises from your failure to fulfill your function in God's Mind with all of YOURS.

. . . with all of your mind.

What is that function? To cover your Brother's back, to abandon your independence, to become vulnerable enough to let your Brother in and to feel into your Brother and care enough, so that the hurt that you find there is something you want to help get rid of so that you, with commitment, ask further of the Father or the Holy Spirit, "What is the truth here that will heal? Because I want to be fulfilling my function here."

Can you escape this guilt by failing to fulfill your function here?

Of course not, you're just going to keep the guilt in place – reaffirm it.

You need not understand creation to do what must be done before that knowledge would be meaningful to you.

So, don't try to understand this before you do it. You don't need to. And you're prejudice, because of the state of self-righteousness that you're in, will tend to keep you from even being able to understand Creation. And so you must do the only thing you've been asked to do: be willing to look into your Brother's eyes and remember God. Look at your Brother with the intent to find God there. That's what you're asked to do . . . and that you can do if you're willing.

God breaks no barriers; neither did He MAKE them. When YOU release them they are gone.

When you release the arguments you have and all the confidences you have put in place that hold you securely, and hold your Brother securely in the orphan state of mind, when you release those, when you stop reinforcing them by persisting in looking into your Brother's eyes and wishing to see God and thereby covering his back, when you do that, when you release them, they are gone, because they never where actual, they never were actually there.

God will not fail, nor ever has in anything.

Now we're going to get even more specific. This is what we've been talking about for the last few weeks and especially last week.

Decide that God is right and YOU are wrong about yourself.

In other words, decide that your choice to be a self-righteous, arrogant, manipulator is a misunderstanding of yourself – of who you are – that you are employing. And so, deciding that God is right and YOU are wrong about yourself is essential to escaping from the bondage that you have created.

He created you out of Himself, but still within Him.

Remember there is no second to God, or third or fourth. There's no outside of God. So everything that exists, exists within the Wholeness the Oneness that God Is, and thereby embodies or manifests that singularity, that indivisible non-conflicted Presence.

He KNOWS what you are.

And I'm going to backup two sentences once more:

Decide that God is right and YOU are wrong about yourself.

That's not very satisfying to the ego. It's insulting to the ego. And if you are wrong about yourself then everything that you have misunderstood or understood incorrectly about yourself, which you use to identify who you are to yourself, will have to go, will have to be released. And again, that seems like extermination – the end of you. And again, I say, it is not! And it is an essential step in the Atonement.

Continuing:

Remember that there is no second to Him. There cannot, therefore, be anyone without His . . .

. . . God's . . .

. . . Holiness, nor anyone unworthy of His perfect Love.

And that means you at this very instant . . . now . . . now . . . now . . . now, tomorrow, the next day, every single moment.

Now here's your task:

Fail not in your function of loving in a loveless place made out of darkness and deceit, for thus are darkness and deceit undone.

Let's make this a little bit more understandable.

Fail not in your function of loving in a loveless place made out of darkness and deceit, . .

Well what is this loveless place made out of darkness and deceit? Well of course, it's the self-righteousness you engage in. It's that mean-spirited, ugliness, this arbitrary offensiveness just beneath the surface that comes into play when you are affronted by a lack of respect for the good that you are doing.

So when it says:

Fail not in your function of loving in a loveless place made out of darkness and deceit, . .

. . . it means, fail not to catch yourself in the act of self-righteous judgment and call yourself on it. Call yourself on it. Tell yourself to "stop," and then stop using your mind that way. Do not energize the darkness and the deceit of self-righteousness. And right then and there, shift your attention to look at your Brother, even if you can't look directly in his eyes, look at him or look at her with the intent to see God there and acknowledge God there, because if he or she exists at all, it is because God is making the Gift of Himself right there as your Brother or Sister.

Fail not in your function of loving in a loveless place made out of darkness and deceit, for thus are darkness and deceit undone.

Again, for simplicity: When you find yourself employing self-righteous judgment and you catch yourself, and you abruptly bring it to a halt and you replace it with the desire to see God in your Brother by asking God, “What is the truth here about your Brother?” then the darkness and deceit are undone. The self-righteousness in you is undone and it is no longer the number one killer in your life. Get it?

Fail not YOURSELF, but instead, offer to God AND YOU His blameless Son.

Meaning you.

For this small gift of appreciation for His Love, . .

. . . for God’s Love . . .

God will Himself exchange your gift for His.

You see? When you make that gift of wishing to see God in whatever you’re looking at, that is the gift you are giving to God. And God will receive it and exchange His Gift with yours. His Gift is: Being All there Is of You. Gifting You with all that He Is and nothing else.

See now, here’s a little bit more of the seeming impossibility that this makes clear is possible, else it wouldn’t give you such a clear direction.

Before you make ANY decisions for yourself, remember that you have decided AGAINST your function in Heaven, and consider carefully whether you WANT to make decisions here.

Um... the only way that makes sense is if you understand that you, in an independent position, making decisions, is this false independent sense of self that got a divorce from the Father and therefore can’t actually accomplish anything whatsoever, that you have to be willing to invalidate and not attempt to use. But as long as you are attempting it, then you have decided against your function in Heaven.

What's your function in Heaven? Your function in Heaven is to refer to the Father, "What is the truth here?" and listen and hear His answer and embrace it. That's your function in Heaven.

So again, before you make any decisions for yourself through the use of your puny little mind and your ability to use reason and logic and your ability to intermingle your intent with all of the mutual agreements that everyone has created in order to have societies that function half way well, when you are willing to invalidate that, and seemingly make the you, you thought you were, extinct, you are at the threshold of the Atonement.

Again, here:

Before you make ANY decisions for yourself, remember that you have decided AGAINST your function in Heaven, and consider carefully whether you WANT to make decisions here.

. . . on Earth with your puny private little mind.

Your function here . . .

. . . listen:

Your function here is only to decide AGAINST deciding what you want, in recognition that you do not KNOW.

Meaning: in recognition that you in your so-called independent state of mind do not Know the Truth. You do not know enough to make a decision that would be in harmony with Creation, with your Source and therefore with your Self. And therefore, that which divides you – self-righteousness – is still the number one killer. And the Atonement which is waiting your acceptance of It and your practice of It, continues to seem to be unavailable to you.

How, then, can you decide what you should do?

Yeah, let's not answer that too quick.

How, then, can you decide what you should do?

A flip answer would be, "Well, I can't. Well, I can't. What do you expect?" Well, that's not the answer. That's just more self-righteousness. That's more orphan talk.

The question again:

How, then, can you decide what you should do?

And here's the answer:

*Leave all decisions to the One Who speaks for God,
and for your function as He KNOWS it.*

"Oh God, there's that impossible thing again. I've got to listen and I've got to defer and I can't even hear my Guide. Thanks a lot."

Oh boy, got a little more self-righteousness don't we. And it gets in the way. It stands in the way of your humility. It stands in the way of your saying, "Well, if I can't hear from my Guide yet, but everything is set up so that when I reach out to my Guide or to the Father, an answer will be provided that will lift me out of the orphanage, that will lift me out of the human condition, that will free me from the self-righteousness, what will that look like? What is the answer?" And then you patiently and humbly continue to listen because you feel the need. Until you feel the need you won't bring the commitment, the genuineness to the process, which is necessary.

Leave all decisions to the One Who speaks for God, .

... Who's the one Who speaks for God? The Holy Spirit. What is the Holy Spirit? That which is nothing more than your right Mind, which you could never get away from, but which you could ignore by making so much independent noise yourself that you drown out the Voice for Truth – which is your right Mind. That’s why the first step of the two-step is to “shut up.” Simplicity.

*Leave all decisions to the One Who speaks for God,
and for your function as He KNOWS it*

The Holy Spirit – that which is nothing more than your right Mind – knows your function because it is you in your right Mind.

So will He teach you to remove the awful burden you have laid upon yourself by loving not the Son of God, and trying to teach him guilt instead of love.

Yes, that is what you have been doing. And you do it by means of the self-righteousness that is just beneath the love and the consideration and the kindness that you bring into play with the conscious intent to manipulate for your benefit and then secondarily for the benefit of the one you are coercing.

So will He . . .

. . . that which is nothing more than your right Mind . . .

. . . teach you to remove the awful burden you have laid upon yourself by loving not the Son of God, and trying to teach him guilt instead of love. Give up this frantic and insane attempt, . .

. . . but of course, it seems most reasonable to you. It seems like the way of life to you. And what you’re being called upon to do seems to be impossible, simply because it’s been awhile since you practiced it and thus it’s naturalness and normalcy doesn’t feel natural and normal to you any more. And your need to survive is overriding your willingness to become still and therefore vulnerable, where God’s Love can reach you and turn the human condition into the divine actuality of you as the Son of God or the Daughter of God.

Give up this frantic and insane attempt, which cheats you of the joy of living with your God and

Father, and awaking gladly to His Love and Holiness which join together . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . as the truth in you, making you One with Him.

See, that's the part you can't do by yourself. You must stand with, along side the Father as you reach out to Him and as you make commitment to Him. But as you make commitment to Him, your gift of commitment He receives and exchanges with His Gift. And His Gift to you is the conscious experience of you as His only Son, as His only Daughter, pure, perfect, invulnerable, which you will experience as one of regeneration and redemption.

When you have learned how to decide WITH God, . .

. . . not against God anymore, not independent of God.

When you have learned how to decide WITH God, . .

. . . which really means, when you learn to listen to God and hear His Voice and decide with Him as to what He has said, . .

. . . all decisions become as easy and as right as breathing. There is no effort, and you will be led as gently as if you were being carried along a quiet path in summer. Only your own volition seems to make deciding hard.

What does that mean, . . Only your own volition? Well, it simply means, only your will to have it your way. Only your insistence upon making up your own plans . . .

. . . make deciding hard.

The Father says, "Here is the Truth." And you say, "Yes, but . . . yes, but . . ." And all the time you're saying, "Yes, but," you're holding off on deciding with the Father on what the Father is Being. And so you delay the experience of Atonement and you continue the practice of self-righteousness and death still awaits you.

Only your own volition seems to make deciding hard.

Deciding for yourself is an exercise of your own volition.

The Holy Spirit . . .

. . . that which is nothing more than your right Mind . . .

. . . will not delay at all in answering your EVERY question what to do. He KNOWS. And He will TELL you and then . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . do it FOR you.

That's the last straw. When the Holy Spirit does it for you – you poor little helpless bastard – that's really insulting! I mean, the Holy Spirit doesn't tell you the truth so that you as an independent authorizer can carry it out. No, because that independent, self-righteous bastard that wants to do it himself is the very thing that creates the whole illusion of sin, sickness and death.

So the ultimate of this is: That the Holy Spirit will tell you and then do it for you. And you will let Him do it, because you want to be through with sin, sickness and death.

You who are tired might consider whether this is not more restful than sleep. For you can bring your guilt into sleeping, but not into this.

And that's the promise of it:

. . . you can bring your guilt into sleeping, but not into this.

And that's your release. When you give up the last vestige of a feeling of a right to engage in an independent activity, the Kingdom is given to you . . . given to you because it's your Birthright and not because you've earned it.

And that is the nature of God's Love. That's the way Atonement works. It is not impossible. And I invite you to refer to this section that we've just read, over and over, so as to remind yourself that what seems to be impossible, must not actually be impossible or you would not have such clear unequivocal explanation of how to come Home.

I love you very much. And I look forward to being with you next time.

All of the activities of the Northwest Foundation for "A Course In Miracles" are provided without charge or obligation. This is possible because of thoughtfulness, love extended without conditions. Such is the nature of Gift. As a result these materials are available to you, because someone like you has already gifted you with them.

And, at Raj's instruction, these materials will never be sold.

If you would like to add your thoughtfulness and love, to gift others with the availability of these materials, you're invited to make a tax-deductible contribution at our website, or send it to our address, both of which are shown below.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

August 4th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

During the past couple of meetings there's been a recurring thread embodied in the following statement:

*The holy instant is the miracle's abiding-place.
From there, each one . . .*

. . . each miracle . . .

. . . is born into this world as witness to a state of mind which has transcended conflict, and has reached to peace.¹

Simple and profound. And of course, the mind which has transcended conflict, and has reached to peace is the mind of the one who has practiced the holy instant: You.

Now from time to time, I have shared something that Paul says to himself before each gathering, before each study group. And it goes like this:

"I allow only for that which expresses the Christ consciousness and only that which is in harmony with the purpose of Being (with a capital 'B') the Father's Will." And he continues . . . "in other words, Thy Will, not mine be done. Let the reign of divine truth, life, and Love be established in me and rule out of me all self-will. And may Thy Word enrich the affections of all mankind and govern them."

This has been very meaningful to Paul since he employed it within the first few conversations that we had together.

Now what he didn't realize was that that was the practice of the holy instant. He had never read the Course yet, but nevertheless, his sitting down and saying simply, "Thy Will be done, not mine" and then listening . . . there you are, the two-step.

As a result of that practice, it was a very short time, less than two weeks before he heard me respond. And the conversations we had were not only inspiring but life-changing for him and very profound. To be talking with me was something quite significant to him.

But you know, it's interesting how self-righteousness can tag along with one's spiritual growth. And for many years after our first conversation, Paul felt that the fact that he was able to talk with me, or that I was willing to talk with him was because he had excelled in his study of truth – his religious upbringing – and that that had brought him to a point of excellence which caused him to be deserving of this experience, which of course, was utterly false. Because at the bottom line, when we had our first conversations, Paul was in dire straits . . . unemployed, with a family of three children and a wife, and none of his practice of his religious upbringing that he felt he had excelled at was correcting the problem.

He was in the pits. He was failing and nothing he did was correcting the situation. That's how competent he was, fortunately, because in the light of that circumstance, it brought him to his knees, literally. And he found himself many times on the floor with his forehead on the carpet, bowed almost as flat as one can get to the floor praying for help – asking for help. No longer thinking that he had any personal capacity or spiritual power all by himself, he abandoned it and then finally started sitting down nightly and making the statement that I just shared with everyone. And then came our first conversations and of course, all the ones since then.

The saying is quite true: *Man's extremity is God's opportunity.*²

When you or Paul or anyone arrives at a point where you willingly and completely abandon your own self-righteousness, your own private personal capacity to accomplish great things on your own, and you are in a state of humility – which to you, you define as failure, which is insulting, which is awful – when you arrive at that point with no more faith in yourself and your righteousness, and you sincerely ask for help, you get the help. Not because of your competence, but because of what you Are, the Son or Daughter of God whom God answers when God is approached genuinely. It's that simple.

After we began talking, Paul's worldly situation began to change as a result of the Guidance and the clearer understanding that I was sharing with him and which he was embracing. But it wasn't because he was making anything happen at all. It wasn't because he was suddenly given power by virtue of his relationship with me to cause good things to happen. No. The good things happened because that's the nature of Being. The good things happened because it's the Father's Will for fulfillment to be the center and circumference of the conscious experience of Being. That's why.

Now everything that you are hearing me teach about what the Course is saying is leading you to the point where you are willing to do exactly what Paul did. And especially in the last few weeks, I have been illuminating the contrast between independent self-assertive arrogant private thinking that seems to convince you that you are an authority of some kind in your own right who can make things happen and you who's willing to abandon that, and in the quietness within you, turn your attention away from yourself and your capacity and how you feel and how right you are, and simply turn to the Father or the Holy Spirit and say, "I need help! I need to know what the truth is separate and apart from anything I personally privately think. Because what I personally privately think is arrogant self-righteousness. It is me valuing my thoughts and my words more than God's. It is me valuing the meanings I am applying to all of Creation in preference to asking God what His Meanings are in all Creation. You see?

Now, although Paul values the prayer he says, and although he says “let the reign of divine truth, life and love be established in me,” meaning not at his own hand but as the law of God Being the lawful orderliness and nature of Paul’s Being without Paul refuting it or modifying it in any way, he’s found during the last few weeks as we’ve been discussing self-righteousness, that he is not that willing in all situations to defer to the Holy Spirit – that which is nothing more than his right Mind – or the Father because he is so damned sure that what he thinks and what he knows is true.

The only thing is that since we’ve been discussing this, as I know it is with many of you, it has caused him to become quite angry. Because there are so many instances where he knows it is appropriate for him to be upset, for him to be self-righteously angry, for him to point the finger and for him to believe that the correction of the problems must be accomplished by manipulating things “out there” instead of abandoning his vantage point – the one, the arrogant self-righteous easily angered, easily disturbed mentality.

And yet, when he yielded to that angry mindset and when he resists letting go of that kind of control, he’s miserable and there is no relief from it. In fact, it gets worse. And then, as I make it clearer to him and you, the impracticality of it, the danger of it, the destructiveness of it, that makes him even more upset. Because if you abandon it, how on earth can you ever get justice?

Now at the bottom line, it isn’t that Paul or any of you are mean-spirited actually, it’s just that as we’ve discussed, you feel that the practice of self-righteousness is essential to your safety, when it’s not.

Now Paul is finding as everyone finds out, that the extended practice of self-righteousness and anger and judgment accomplishes nothing and finally something in you decides it’s not worth it to continue. And what happens? You begin to find value in discovering how to forgive. And as any of you begin to practice forgiveness . . . which means what? your withdrawal of your judgment, you become free of the control of the negative situation that you have been angry at and judgmental of. It doesn’t necessarily mean that the situation goes away but it doesn’t hook you, it doesn’t trick you into committing yourself to being ongoingly upset and righteously judgmental.

And in your peace you can turn your attention elsewhere to things that are actually full of fulfillment.

Now when you do that you've transcended conflict and you have reached to peace and you have the peace and you are supplied with the clarity and insight that lifts you into your natural loving harmonious state of mind. But you can't do it by yourself and this experience has never occurred as a result of your doing it by yourself.

You have to join with the Holy Spirit or with me or with the Father genuinely. And healing comes.

And now, going into the book:

Your healing will extend, . .

. . . as we discussed last week. It will embrace everything. Your clarity will cause everything to be clarified.

If you're wearing a pair of glasses with red lenses in them, it causes everything you see to be colored, altered from its natural state even though nothing has been affected actually by it at all. And therefore when you take the glasses off, all of the distortion vanishes. All of the redness – the unnatural redness – vanishes. Your clear vision extends to everything.

Your healing will extend, and will be brought to problems that you thought were not your own. And it will also be apparent that your many different problems will be solved, as any one of them has been escaped.

You see?

It cannot be their differences which made this possible, for learning does not jump from situations to their opposites, and bring the same results.

You see? So therefore, the problem must be the same problem everywhere. And it is. When you're indulging in the orphan mentality, when you're looking at everything through the lenses of orphanhood, everything is affected even though it is only your perspective which is out of kilter.

Therefore, every problem that is identified by the orphan mentality is only part of the orphan mentality. And therefore, when the orphan mentality is abandoned, the distortions brought on by it all disappear because there was only one problem and the problem wasn't even "out there," the problem was in the choice of vantage point.

All healing must proceed in lawful manner, in accord with laws which have been properly perceived, but never violated. Fear you not the way that you perceive them.

. . . when you're looking out through the lens of orphanhood.

You are wrong, but there is One within you Who is RIGHT.

You see? Not one out there who is right. Not one out there who can be turned into the one that is right.

. . . there is One within you Who is RIGHT.

You see how this is not letting you off the hook, not letting you have a scapegoat, not letting you believe that there's something outside of you that can hold you in bondage? Because you are holding yourself in bondage, you are able to get release from bondage.

Leave, then, the transfer of your learning to the One Who really understands its laws, . .

See? "I allow only for that which expresses the Christ Consciousness and I allow only for that which is in harmony with the purpose of Being, the Father's Will." You see? You have to defer to That which is governing and therefore, to the laws that govern.

Leave, then, the transfer of your learning to the One Who really understands its laws, and Who will guarantee that they remain unviolated and unlimited. Your part . . .

. . . and this is sort of the insulting part.

Your part is merely to apply what He has taught you to . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . YOURSELF, and He will do the rest.

You're not to apply what He has taught you to the world or to your brother or your mis-guided friend or associate or relative.

Your part is merely to apply what He has taught you to YOURSELF, and He will do the rest. And thus the power of your learning will be proved to you by all the many different witnesses it finds.

Ah-h, you take off the glasses with the red lenses and all of a sudden you have infinite witnesses to your freedom from the unnatural coloration that you had been experiencing.

And thus the power of your learning will be proved to you by all the many different witnesses it finds. Your brother first among them will be seen, . .

. . . you see? Not because you change them, but because you changed your mind about what you were seeing, not to a new personally made-up definition, but to the Meaning which the Father or the Holy Spirit has disclosed to you as that which is true.

Your brother first among them will be seen, but thousands stand behind him, and beyond each one there are a thousand more.

It's like a domino effect, the blessing extends.

Each one may seem to have a problem which is different from the rest. Yet they are solved together.

Because the confusion in your perception, having been abandoned in favor of clarity of perception, causes you to see your brother and everything without distortion . . . and what? It causes your behavior to change, so that your behavior reflects the spontaneous appreciation that you can't avoid when you see your brother or sister as the holy Son or Daughter of God that they Are — with Meaning, with comprehension, with understanding. And that inspires them. And their inspiration is reflected upon those in their experience inspiring them . . . behind each one are thousands.

Each one may seem to have a problem which is different from the rest. Yet they are solved together. And their common answer shows the questions could not have been separate.

Even though the definitions you applied to them caused them to appear to be separate and intolerable, and unreasonable, and worthy of judgment and acts of condemnation, which of course, inspired no one to see themselves truly.

So you see, it boils down to one thing: Abandoning self-righteousness, abandoning the valuing of your private definitions and perceptions that you have created. You see? But as with Paul, when it comes right down to it, it's infuriating to be faced with having to abandon the right to be furious, because you think it has value and you think you are right in your perceptions.

And so there is no cooperation and there certainly can be no co-Creation, which is your function joined with the Father. You see?

So as someone says, “there is less and less wiggle room” and that creates distress and anger and judgment when it should not.

Peace be to you to whom is healing offered.

That's your Birthright. That is the result of practicing the two-step and reached to Peace.

Peace be to you to whom is healing offered.

And I'm going to say, because healing is constantly offered, that Peace be to you to whom healing is received. Peace accompanies healing that you are willing to receive. And healing is the realization that you do not wish to practice self-righteousness any more.

And you will learn that peace is given you when you accept the healing for yourself.

Now, you may make headway in more consistently listening and choosing only to give voice to what the Holy Spirit shares with you in any given moment, because the perspective of what is really going on is available to you. And then it may seem that there are circumstances in your world that are totally unreasonable, totally unfair, totally cruel, totally disheartening and it can throw you for a loop and you can lose your balance. And if it's not too severe you can get your balance back relatively easily.

But then if you have three or four or five truly significant . . . well, negative experiences, impactful experiences, you might become obsessively engaged in ranting and raving and expressing your self-righteousness because all you can see is the unfairness, the illegitimacy of what you're being harmed by and the fact that you don't deserve it. And you are absolutely confident in your perspective and you are not about to bring one little iota of forgiveness into the picture because it isn't warranted, and you know damned well and good that it isn't and therefore, you refuse.

Now this is exactly the time that you must go against the current of your self-righteousness. You must find a way to shut up. You must find a way to still the rabid mind that seems to be raging in you. You must be willing to back off from it. You must be willing to do the two-step. You must be willing to shut up first of all. It's not something you want to do. But not doing it keeps you in bondage to the feeling and experience of being an orphan, which you are not.

And so you must stand in the face of that which seems overwhelming and shut up! Remember in that moment that someone told you that under these circumstances shut up! . . . be still, meditate, soak in a hot tub, go and get a massage, do whatever it takes to distract you from the compulsive reacting so that you can become still and then inquire of the Father, “What do I need to know? Fill me up with the true Perspective. Let the rein of divine truth, life and love be established in me and rule out of me all self-will.”

You must take that practical step. And you must take it over and over and over if necessary until the invitation to self-righteousness no longer grabs you. There is no value in knowing about the holy instant if you don't put it into practice.

Again:

Peace be to you to whom is healing offered. And you will learn that peace is given you when you accept the healing for yourself.

You see? When you shut up long enough to let the healing register with you because you're not pushing it away with the loudness of your anger.

Its total value . . .

. . . of the healing.

Its total value need not be appraised by you to let you understand that you have benefited from it.

You'll be able to feel the benefit, because you'll be experiencing Peace.

What occurred within the instant which love entered in without attack . . .

. . . in other words, in the absence of your self-righteousness . . .

. . . will stay with you forever.

You see? It will stay with you forever. You will never ever again be able to get so far into the misery of self-righteousness.

Your healing will be one of its effects, as will your brother's.

I can promise you, you don't get self-righteously angry about a plant that has a leaf that turned brown. The only situations in which you become self-righteous are in relationships with brothers and sisters, your fellowman. Right?

You must arrive at a point where you hold them blameless and correct your misperception and choose for your peace so that you yourself will be filled with the Father's Love and Perspective that causes you to look upon your brother with Love. That is the answer.

Everywhere you go will you behold its multiplied effects.

Man, when your perspective is not dark and miserable, it's not dark and miserable, it's illuminated and beautiful and joyous. No way to avoid it.

Yet all the witnesses that you behold will be far less than all there really are. Infinity cannot be understood by merely counting up its separate parts.

And here's the simplicity:

God thanks you for your healing, for He knows it is a gift of love unto His Son, and therefore is it given unto Him.

When you say in so many words, "I allow only for that which expresses the Christ Consciousness," it means that you're willing to turn your attention only to that which expresses the Christ Consciousness and that is your gift to His Son, which is therefore, given unto the Father. You see?

Right now the practice of self-righteousness can only occur in a world and universe of distinctly separate entities that have no commonality or unity. That is hell! It doesn't embody the Meaning of Creation that the Father is embodying as all of His Sons and Daughters. The solution which is where you do not hold everyone to be separate and distinct, but you abandon your made up perceptions and you look at your brothers and sisters through your Father's Eyes and experience the unity of All, not losing individuality, but losing differentness that is constituted of what is not equal in nature or character or substance.

The result of the practice of the holy instant is the experience of unity therefore, absolute infinite harmony and beauty and order. That is what you regain in abandoning your so-called right to think on your own, by yourself as an authority in your own right, all of which comes under the heading of self-righteousness, the number one killer.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

August 11th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Tonight we will not be going into the book. And so before we begin, let's take a few moments to be quiet together.

[Quiet time]

Well, there is still learning to be experienced about self-righteousness and about the holy instant.

I know that the things I've had to say about self-righteousness and the way I have uncovered them – many styles in which it finds expression in each of you – has been disconcerting, unnerving, unpleasant. And indeed, if you're not careful, you might conclude that coping with self-righteousness means going on an internal which-hunt to find out all the many ways in which you have unconsciously been practicing it. And of course, that approach involves the belief that you are uncovering flaws . . . flaws in what? Flaws in yourself.

And so it becomes a destructive and depressing process and that needs to be corrected.

Now there's something important to understand. And that is, that you cannot engage in self-righteousness alone. It is never a private, autonomous authoritative self-expression. It's always indulged in tandem with another. Another way of saying it is, it always involves relationships.

Therefore, the flaw isn't yours and the flaw isn't that of the one you've joined with. It's simply a fantasy that the two of you have engaged in and given credence to, made commitment to and made yourself miserable by means of.

Now, you know I spoke some time ago about the fact that God never gave you the capacity to think. That's not the function of Mind. The function of Mind is consciousness, awareness, the unlimited experience of Creation – of observation of Creation – of allowing Creation to register and recognize it for what it is.

Now that's your normal divine state. That's what opens up to you and is revealed to you when you engage in the holy instant by becoming still and enquiring, "What is the truth here?" You see? And in the absence of thinking, pure conscious awareness of the only thing there is to be aware of – God's Creation – unfolds to you. Its uncovered and illuminated to you. And you experience without thought processes the Meaning of it all.

Here, there is no possibility of self-righteousness. Why? Because you're not being as an entity in your own right in relationship with anything else as an entity in its own right. You see?

So you could indeed go on an internal witch-hunt using your intellect and your so-called capacity to think, to uncover this awful self-righteousness that is part of you that you need to become free of if you don't want to die. That's a pretty heavy-duty indictment on yourself which will absolutely blind you to the simple answer.

What is the simple answer? It's monotonous, I know.

The simple answer is engage in the holy instant, which means withdraw from the mutual agreements with your brother or sister. Withdraw from your imaginations relative to your brothers and sisters. And become silent . . . still the thinking. Become gently quiet with invitation to Know the truth . . . to have the Father's Perspective revealed to you, which is the Holy Spirit's function. It is to reveal your right Mind to you.

So to put it simply: The holy instant is the vestibule between autonomy or privacy and wholeness.

Now, in the past I've also used the illustration of a sphere . . . a ball made out of pure crystal that has on its surface an infinite number of facets. And each facet is you. Each facet is one of the infinite Sons and Daughters of God. Now you are used to the definition of the facet on the surface of the globe – of the ball. And you are used to thinking that that surface is you and you alone. And you are used to thinking all of the other facets as being other individualities, them and them alone.

And then there is communication that can occur between all of these infinite facets – lines of communication, we'll say, caused by the boundary between the facets.

Now when looked at that way, that is the equivalent of the orphan mentality – the isolated tiny independent alone presence. But if you will look at the ball from the inside and you view the entire, we will say, surface of the inside of this infinite ball, you will see all the Sons and Daughters of God. You will recognize the specific shape of the facet you Are. But something will have changed. Because as you look within the ball you find that the whole interior constituted of pure crystal, is you as well.

The ball is you. And every single one of the Brotherhood of Man is some aspect of you. Because looking from the inside, all of them are at some place in the wholeness of the interior of the ball, just as you are. And so in this way, you can see that all the Sons and the Daughters of God are One, given apparent definition or individuality by means of the facet on the surface of the interior, we will say.

Now I'm going to back up and say that the holy instant is the vestibule between the outside and the inside of the crystal ball. The surface is the vestibule. And when you become still and you wish to Know the truth, imagine if you will, that it is like no longer looking out as far as you can see on the horizon of the surface, but that you have as it were, put your face through the surface as though it were water so that you can see underneath the surface of the crystal ball.

And you shift from being one among many to being the One that is the many recognizing at the same time that every other brother and sister is the One that is the many including you.

How do you handle self-righteousness? By dipping your face into the surface of the ball that is the delineation between the interior and the exterior. In doing that you abandon the autonomous relationships of all of the facets that you can see on the outside, you abandon that in favor of the experience of wholeness – of Oneness with all of your brothers in which there is no way to experience independence or autonomy even though you do not lose individuality.

Now that is a lot simpler than what you might have found yourself doing in the last few weeks. As we've discussed, the danger, the threat, the impracticality of indulging in self-righteousness . . . don't handle self-righteousness, handle the use to which you're putting your mind by, deciding not to use it to think and come to conclusions and to make mutual agreements with other independent brothers and sisters, but to instead become still.

And in the silence, which is another way of describing the interior – the undistinguishable interior of the crystal ball – so that the true perception of your brothers and sisters can register with you while you're just being Mind, not a thinking mind, but Mind, conscious awareness, soaking up by being curious, the infinite Meanings of God which are apparent there in the silence, there in the view through and within the interior of the crystal ball. You see?

The answer is embodied in the holy instant.

Now when I said you can't experience and express self-righteousness all by yourself, that you can't experience it until a joining with a brother or sister has occurred, I've made it clear that the problem is not a personal private problem of your own, but that it is the result of an invitation to be upset by someone else who is upset.

What happens? Someone else has taken the bait from someone else. And they are now upset and they broadcast an invitation to be upset. And if you have entertained ideas that are flawed, but ideas which you have no emotional charge associated with and the invitation from another that comes to you as a charged invitation, it's the same issue or the same thought that you have imaginatively toyed with without emotion, you are easily caught up in having an emotional reaction to what had been an uncharged thought in you because a brother, someone else has invited you.

And now you find yourself angry or you find yourself jealous or you find yourself impatient or judgmental [snaps fingers] out of the blue it would seem, and you think it's your real thought. You think it's you. When you would be greatly helped if the moment you found yourself out of your peace, you ask: "Am I picking up on someone else? Am I being hooked by someone else's reactions? You see?

Reactions of this sort are not practical means of problem-solving. One doesn't have to be upset in order to solve a problem or recognize a problem. In fact, it becomes impossible to solve a problem when you are upset because the inspiration needed to see outside "the box" isn't available to you because you're so tight and tied up in your reaction which you think is yours and which you think is legitimate.

And it's not. It's not legitimate for you and it's not legitimate for the brother who's extending the invitation . . . who received an invitation from another . . . who received an invitation from another . . . who received an invitation from another . . . as it goes around the outside of the globe – the crystal ball – on the lines of communication formed by the delineation between the facets. You see?

How do you break that momentum? How do you break that spontaneous entrapment that you found yourself in?

Well, by first of all challenging the idea that it's yours. And asking, "Am I being impacted by the emotions of others?" I will tell you, if you are emotionally disturbed the answer is always, "yes" because it's impossible for you to experience self-righteousness all by yourself. What does that mean . . . all by yourself? It means it's impossible to experience it in the silence of the holy instant.

The answer – the escape from the whole dilemma – is a matter of moving into the silence, is a matter of abandoning the lines of communication around the outside of the crystal ball and gently placing your face into the surface of the ball and through it so that your attention shifts from privacy to wholeness, from your false definitions to the Meanings of Creation that the Father is Being. You see?

Always, when you are disturbed, when you are indulging in self-righteousness, you are looking from a victim vantage point and not from the vantage point of the answer that undoes the victimization. And whenever you are stuck looking from the victim standpoint you will remain there and suffer because it is a false vantage point. It isn't even yours! Except that you've accepted this invitation to be upset because someone else is upset . . . because someone else is upset . . . because someone else is upset.

Now, the holy instant involves what? The two-step: One, shutting up, silencing the thinking, silencing the imagination, silencing the logic, silencing all of the special uses you've given to your mind, which is only the means of paying attention, of being conscious. When you abandon that and then inquire as to what the truth is, the truth is revealed. It truly is revealed – illuminated to you. Why? Because you have asked the Father or the Holy Spirit or your Guide to have the truth revealed to you.

In other words, you have shifted your attention from the role of victim and all that goes into the victimization mindset . . . you've abandoned that and asked to know what the divine view is. You've shifted from victim mindset to savior mindset. Not that you are able to suddenly be the savior, but in the absence of identifying yourself as the victim and reaching out to That which Knows the answer and asking for the Perspective of the one Who Knows, you're asking to have the savior Perspective, the perspective of Wholeness to answer you, to fill you with clarity. You see? That's the utter simplicity of it.

How do you cope with self-righteousness? You abandon it. You go within, into the silence and you ask of the Father or the Holy Spirit or your Guide or me, “What is Your Perspective? What is the Father's Perspective? Share it with me. Reveal it to me, infill me with it, so that I may have the true experience, not the false imaginative experience of the orphan mentality — the victim. You see?

Many movies these days lose the ability to inspire, because they adopt the vantage point of the victim. And if the answer that heals, if the answer that corrects, if the practice of intelligence which causes relief to come, enters into the picture at all it's very brief and isn't really the point of the picture, because the picture was about the struggle. The victim vantage point was the vantage point from which the film was made, conceived. You see?

Do you want that which clarifies, then you must abandon the victim mentality that you are feeling. You must stop validating it, you must shut it up and you must say, "Father, what is the truth here? I want nothing but the experience of Your Perspective. Holy Spirit, perform your function of uncovering to me my right Mind which is my natural capacity to experience the Father's Perspective, a capacity He instilled to me because He withheld nothing of what He is when He created me. I am going to stop playing around with the excitement of thinking, of valuing my opinion more than the truth, of valuing my perspective more than the Father's. You see?"

That's self-righteousness. And that's you identifying yourself as one of the facets. Hell, if you'll look into the interior of the crystal ball you'll find that all of the facets are you, from a little bit different vantage point, creating a wealth of diversity and interest and originality. You see?

In that experience is peace. You see?

It's simple. As you go into this coming week, don't be looking for what new forms of self-righteousness you can find. If you're not going to engage in the holy instant you'll find that self-righteousness presents itself uninvited to you, spontaneously. You don't have to hunt for it. Just notice if you're happy. "Am I happy now? Yes. Am I happy now? Oh, no. Am I happy now? Oh a little more than I was. Am I happy now?" You see? You know whether you're happy. You know whether you're experiencing peace. And if you're not, you are identifying as a victim. And you're acting out the part. And you're using self-righteousness to validate it. And self-righteousness causes you to experience everything from the outside of the crystal ball where the fullness and the wholeness and the Oneness of Being is unavailable to you and will always be unavailable to you.

The only answer is, gently put your face into the surface of the crystal ball as though it's water and push down into the water into the interior of the crystal ball so that everything in its infinite oneness is available to you as the wholeness of you and the Wholeness of God, where sin, disease and death disappear and where self-righteousness doesn't even come up for consideration.

Don't make yourself miserable by looking for flaws in yourself. There are things that need to be corrected, but an invitation was made to you to participate in reaction to them, by someone who accepted an invitation from someone else. And everyone is suffering from something that isn't theirs, that did not originate with them, but which they all feel – including you – is you having your own legitimate miserable feelings. And it's not true. And you'll never be able to successfully search out all the things that are untrue and get rid of them because only a victim looks for the cause of his victimization.

The holy Son or Daughter of God abandons the search for the cause of victimization and joins with the One Mind for the sole purpose of having what that Mind is, reveal Itself to him or to her, uncovering his or her wholeness and emancipating him or her from the invitation that had been accepted and contributing to the release of all the others who had accepted the invitation, not recognizing it for what it was. The answer is simple.

Now, I'm going to ask you to consider whether or not you're finding yourself losing more and more control, where you seem to be the brunt of chance – not good chance but miserable chance. Are you finding that more and more things are happening that you're no longer being able to cope with, so that you feel pushed down further and further? Good . . . good . . . because it means that you're no longer as deeply imbedded in the victim mentality, you're no longer as deeply imbedded in the orphan mentality and the unreality of it, the impracticality of it is not escaping your attention.

And the reason I say, “good,” the reason I say, “this is excellent,” is that it is making it easier for you to go ahead and risk the chance that there is a God, by setting aside your self-righteousness — shutting up, which is choosing for your peace and then activating your curiosity as conscious awareness, as Mind to Know the truth.

Doing that seems a difficult task, one that it’s hard to believe will work. And that’s because up until recently, almost all of you have had a fair chance of making things work out. And now that capacity to exercise control is diminishing. The dream is ending. The illusion of mortal life is failing.

And what is it doing? It’s requiring that the holy Son and Daughter of God that you Are has to claim his and her Birthright and own it and let it in and have no other option, have no other desire so that it might clear your mind of all the thinking and all of the commitment to your thinking and leave it as the pure capacity to be aware of the Movement of God without distortion and Wake up, ascend into Heaven without dying.

Let there be encouragement from what I am saying. Don’t tolerate self-righteousness when it occurs. Recognize it when it happens. Don’t tolerate it for an instant. Simply abandon it. It is not practical. It is not useful. And it will seem to kill you, because it secures the illusion of mortality even though you are immortal and the death will not be real and you will still be faced with having to make this simple choice that we’re talking about this evening.

So what do you have to lose, except the right to be pissed off whenever you feel like it? What do you have to lose besides being able to be miserable whenever you want? What do you have to lose beside sickness and pain and disease? Nothing!

So I’m going to say, “lighten up.” Don’t pursue an inner witch-hunt. Lighten up and do this irrational thing of abandoning self-righteousness the moment you notice it by doing the one simple thing – the two-step – practicing the holy instant. You’ll have plenty of opportunity because it’s so easy to be reactive, it’s so easy to be miserable, it’s so easy to have a negative interpretation about everything. Hey, everybody is to some degree feeling really miserable and their misery constitutes an invitation to you to feel miserable, even though without the invitation you could avoid it to a certain degree and not be quite as uncomfortable.

So the answer again is simple. Remember that. And this week practice the irrational step of immediately recognizing when you've lost your peace and no matter what the justifications seem to be for it, get back into your peace. Shut up and ask to be informed by the Father, by the Holy Spirit, by me, by your Guide as to what the real truth is that will erase your illusions.

I love you very much, all of you. And I look forward to being with you next time.

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

From time to time, some of you have said that a particular study group was just for you – it hit everything on the head so specifically that it was as though it couldn't possibly have been for anyone else but you.

Well, during the last few weeks when we've been talking about self-righteousness and the practice of the holy instant, Paul has had exactly the same feeling. I managed to express the ideas in such a compelling way or such an understandable way to him, that he was able to easily bring commitment to listening instead of thinking, to doing the two-step. And he endeavored to do that all day long and always failed.

True, there were many periods where instead of responding himself to whatever occurred, he would check with me and listen for me to respond.

But then, a simple thing like Susan saying, "Remind me to pick up some red peppers at the grocery store" and he would say, "Okay," just spontaneously, like "No problem, I'll do that!" And yet, that's not what listening is about. That's not what doing the two-step is about. Something as apparently innocuous as a remark, "Remind me to pick up some red peppers" can be all it takes to reinstate the habit of thinking for one's self and abandoning the union with one's Guide or with the Holy Spirit or with the Father. And this happened incessantly for Paul. And it was discouraging but nevertheless he persisted.

It was so utterly clear to him, especially when he would review the audio of the meetings. It was so utterly clear how could one not choose to listen and respond from the joining that provides the perspective of Reality, the perspective where needs are met, where solutions are illuminated and problems are negated.

And yet, the habit of spontaneously thinking would constantly reassert itself. In a way, it made everything I had said seem like a tease or something insincere because he couldn't do it. It didn't happen as easily as I made it sound.

So in many ways, the last few weeks were distressing. It illuminated to him just how much he needed to practice what I was teaching and illuminating. It illustrated to him . . . his spontaneous practice illustrated to him how consistently he got in the way of healing or revelation or illumination and therefore, the correction of problems.

Nevertheless, he persisted. Then shortly before last week's scheduled study group, a series of things happened which were such that they engaged his thinking with inordinate intensity. They were distressing. And his habitual way of looking at things caused him to think that he knew what the answers were and that he had a right to be upset.

And so, even though he wasn't engaging in the two-step, he was fooling himself into believing that his definition of reasonableness was correct and therefore, he was justified in being upset and that upset him even more. His confirmation of the distressing nature of the things that occurred caused him to become obsessive in his perspective and another way of saying that is, obsessive in his self-righteousness. You see?

The minute one believes that his perspective is right, and that perspective is disturbing, one finds it very difficult to disengage from it because after all, it's pure intelligence, isn't it. It's purely intelligent – the justification for being upset is purely intelligent because it's reasonable, right?

And so, his failure to be able to remain with me constantly, remembering to ask, “What is the truth here?” caused the last few weeks to be distressing and then these events occurred and they capped it off.

Last week when I spoke about the crystal ball and each of you, including Paul, being one of the facets on the surface of the ball, and I talked about putting one's face into the facet and moving through to the interior of the ball, that became interpreted by his distorted perception as being very dangerous. After all, it makes one very vulnerable. Why? Because if you're down on your hands and knees and you are pushing your face gently through the facet, what in the world is it that's sticking up in the air? It's your ass sitting there just waiting for someone to kick it! That's not safe.

The practice of shifting one's attention to the interior, well, although intellectually he grasped it, he found that to be unnerving. His mindset was out of kilter. He became exhausted by the drama and the trauma of his perspective and his obsession with it . . . and because of the obsession, his inability to find it justifiable to shut up and engage in the first part of the two-step.

Nevertheless, he persisted. He did in spite of the discouragement, in spite of the exhaustion and as this past week proceeded, his perspective became better. He was able to intellectually see that if he wasn't in his peace, he would be misinterpreting the events that happened and would try to solve them on the basis of the misinterpretation which would never work.

Now I shared with him a couple of days ago, a variation of a thought that I expressed many times, many years ago: That being, that the only right use of will is not to use it . . . except that a couple days ago, I said it this way: I said, "The right use of will . . . the only right use of will is to agree with God.*" You see?

Disagreeing with God is the wrong use of will. That is the act of self-righteousness. But the right use of will is to agree with God. That is Paul's function . . . that is the function of every single Son and Daughter of God. And how does one agree with God? By turning to God first and saying, "What is the truth here? What is your Perspective?" And that's what Paul had been trying to do for the last few weeks in order to stay with me.

Now, why am I sharing this? I'm sharing it because Paul has experienced not being a success at the Guidance that I've shared with all of you. And of course, that doesn't fit in with righteousness, does it? Righteousness is all about being right. And not only that, it's about being right and therefore, because of being right, being credible, being valid. That's self-righteousness. That is egotism. That is to be confused.

Now, Paul still finds himself tonight, disturbed by the events that happened, even though their resolution has begun to appear when he was able to shut up and move into the silence and in the absence of fear ask, “Well, what is the answer here? What is that which meets the need, by showing that it is not unsolvable?”

Nevertheless, he is still suffering from not being able to consistently engage in the two-step. And so, his frame of mind is still wearing him down, wearing him out and making him difficult [chuckles] for Susan to live with because his fear dominates his behavior.

It has taken courage for him tonight to be having the Gathering. And he’s hearing me quite well. And I am speaking truly to him, for him even though what I am saying is certainly not foreign to anyone else listening. But tonight he is managing to be joined with me and he is willing to not be perfect. You see, one might say, and certainly Paul’s ego says, “Well, if you’ve been talking with Jesus for thirty-one years, how come this is happening? What kind of an example are you? How do you think this will look to everyone else?” — as though that was important.

And so I’m here to tell him that what everyone else thinks, what any of you might have opinions of about him, are irrelevant – they’re sidetracks to his clarity. Because the answer will never come as a result of caring about what other people think. It will only come from caring about, we’ll say, what I think or what the Holy Spirit thinks or Knows. And caring about that enough to enquire as to what it is.

Now, because there is the idea, the self-righteous idea in Paul’s mind that he had some kind of a position to uphold in everyone’s eyes, he couldn’t possibly share his incapacity of his present inability to cope well with a series of apparently overwhelming things that had occurred. And so in order to look good and not cause any negative opinions, you put him in a position of severe privacy.

And you know what? Tonight I’m covering his back and I’m covering his back by sharing his incapacity, sharing his current inability to consistently practice the two-step. It’s important for him not to be alone as he is learning how to consistently stay at the point of attention to me or to the Holy Spirit, so as to stay right where the clarity can come forth, because he’s not distracted by what doesn’t matter. You see? I’m covering his back by sharing this with you.

Now, does that mean you have a responsibility of some sort to fulfill? Not at all – this is not in any way a guilt trip. But you know what? The Brotherhood and Sisterhood of the Children of God constitutes a Family. And being stuck in an isolated frame of mind is the antithesis of Family. And so I'm restoring Family right now. I'm covering Paul's back. It's that simple. And that is my one and only task tonight, so that he will not be alone . . . the only one besides Sue who knows what's going on and how it seems to be undermining his sense of worth, weakening his resolve you might say, although I promise you that is not possible. His devotion to the truth and his devotion to our sharing with everyone is absolute.

The suggestion is – the frightening suggestion is that there may not be any way to continue to doing it. But you know what? Paul knows better than that. And he knows that no matter what might change, his commitment to sharing the truth that emancipates everyone from sin, disease and death is more important than anything else and he will not abandon it.

Your simply knowing what's going on with him – not the idealized picture everyone might have of him, but the real humane picture of the labor he's involved in – in learning to do the two-step consistently, that's what's important. Family is reestablished by the mutual Knowing and the natural mutual love that occurs.

Have I spoken out of turn? No. Have I upset or distressed Paul? No. He's relieved to know that he's not the only one who knows isolation is no fun, independence is no fun. He knows you are there and it is very meaningful to him. And I stand with him and with you as each of you involves yourself in the labor of abandoning independence and engaging in the two-step and not being too proud to be Real with each other in the process.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 1st 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

I'm going to ask a question. After all of the gatherings we've had, after all of the Course in Miracles Study Groups . . . do you believe in healing? Do you believe in Healing?

Well, what do I mean by healing? I mean the return of a situation or a condition to its spiritual original – its original divine status.

Healing isn't just having a better attitude while lack or injury or illness still seems to be present, even though it's in a benign form that isn't really threatening but does represent an incapacity on you or an environment that doesn't allow it to function naturally and normally. In other words, healing is redemption in all respects. Not just emotional or mental, but in what you would call tangible, physical terms.

Do you believe in healing? Do you believe in Redemption where injury is no longer present or observable and there is nothing to indicate or infer that there ever was an injury or an illness – a physical malfunction? Healing is the eradication of that malfunction so that any thorough physical examination will show no evidence of abnormality of any sort.

Now, healing does apply to situations as well. You get word unexpectedly that you're going to be evicted from your apartment or you get word that the company is cutting back and you're going to be laid off. You weren't in the best situation before you heard the news and you have a family. My God, you have a problem!

Now what is a problem? A problem is a situation that you don't have an answer to. A problem is an assertion of lack that will be quite affective in your life that you do not have an answer for. It's the not having the answer that constitutes the problem . . . not the circumstance. And that's important.

When something comes up in your experience of this sort, perhaps also it's a notification that you have an incurable disease that won't kill you but will debilitate you . . . or maybe it's a terminal disease and there's no cure for it. Again, you're confronted with a situation that you have no answer for and you've been told that there is no answer for. Meets the definition of a problem. And under those circumstances fear sets in.

Now fear is itself debilitating. It causes one to become dysfunctional, even non-functional. It finds its engine, if you will, in your belief that nothing can be done. And it becomes so distressing that you become obsessed with fear. It gets more and more of your attention. And it is more and more upsetting, and as a result you are in no mental shape to hear the answer – the redemptive corrective answer that brings the situation or the condition back into its original divine stature.

Now we've been talking for a long time about the holy instant and that it's practice is one of doing the two-step. Which means, as you know, shutting up! Shutting up what? Shutting up your thinking. Shutting up the fear. And in the silence, asking, "What is the answer here?"

Now what needs to be better understood is this: Fear has nothing to do with the problem or the solution. It's all about itself!

Again: Fear has nothing to do with the problem or the solution. It's all and only about itself!

That's why, as you engage fear by choosing to activate it because you don't have an answer and you don't think one is available, you, as it were, put yourself into a closed circuit – a circular circuit – which is repetitive and magnifies itself through its repetition. It distracts you actually, from the situation that you have defined as a problem. You become preoccupied entirely with the experience of fear. And because in its obsessive form, it suggests that the only solution is to mount a great defense, you become self-centered – not problem-centered, or solution-centered – you become self-centered, self-protective, which is arrogance. And then you become angry, which is self-righteousness.

And then when you hear me say the answer is the holy instant and that you need to shut up and ask of the Father, “What is the truth here?” you, because of your preoccupation with fear, ask the question, “What is the truth here?” through the lens of fear. And so when you ask, “What is the truth here about my being laid off?” you think you're going to hear that you're being laid off because you were lazy or because you were misunderstood, or for some illegitimate reason which you can do nothing about. You see? You, through the lens of fear believe that the truth is going to convict you and leave you dangling there in the problem.

And that is a misunderstanding. And that is what I am meaning to clarify tonight. Because fear has nothing to do with the problem or the solution. You can abandon it, except that's not easy because you are obsessed by it. Nevertheless, I'm telling you tonight and you had best write it down so you can remember it:

Fear has nothing to do with the problem or the solution.

Therefore, to abandon fear is not irresponsible, it is not dangerous and it will not put you in the presence of threat of any kind. Because in the absence of this fear that seems so all important to you, you will have peace. And in peace, you can reach for the answer that is Redemptive because Redemptive is healing. Redemptive is the bringing of the situation back into its divine original state.

When you're caught up in fear, when you're obsessed by it, it's almost impossible for you to listen to the words, “God Loves you” or the words, “You are the direct and full expression of God from whom God has withheld nothing of what He is in your creation. It’s hard to hear that. Because your fear is that you are irreparably damaged and it’s uncorrectable and you’re in the problem because of some innate flaw in you.

That’s what it boils down to. It boils down to a conviction of your incompetence or that you deserve the problem!

I’ve heard many students of the Course say when another student is having a problem: “I wonder why God is giving you this lesson – I wonder why God is giving you this problem – there must be some learning in it. And in this, the problem becomes legitimized when it is nothing but an illusion believed to be real that hasn’t been challenged yet!

Now as I said, the problem is a problem because you don’t have the answer.

When you abandon the practice of fear, even though you think you’ve been overcome by it from some external source, when you abandon the practice of fear, you are in a position to step into the holy instant – to step into the Void . . . to move into the pregnant silence where the unknown can become Known. And here you are at another juncture where the remnants of fear can suggest to you that you have trouble hearing Guidance or that for one reason or another, it is not likely that you’re going to be able to hear the Voice for truth or God.

This is where you have to remember there is a God, even though you’re experiencing doubt of one sort or another. It’s essential because Redemption is inevitable. Redemption, the experience of correction — a return to the spiritual original — is, I’m going to say, ordained, but the only reason it’s ordained or inevitable, is because God Being All, never stopped being God Being All. And that fact is going to have to surface. It’s inevitable that the Allness of God will surface as Something that has never changed.

Therefore, when you practice the holy instant and you ask, “What is the truth here?” you are employing faith, you are investing faith in the Father, in the Holy Spirit, in your Guide, in me that the answer that redeems will be made clear to you, even though you don't know what it is. *That is the whole point. The point of the holy instant is to return you to what you don't think you know but which you do Know because the Father placed it in you and is eternally placing it in you by being You in every moment . . . as what? . . . you in your own right with your own personal capabilities? No, as Himself expressing.

Are you getting the point? Here is the point again: In spite of fear, in spite of distress, abandon it. As unreasonable as that seems – at the moment you're employing it – abandon it, because I've told you tonight and repeatedly in other ways in the past, that the practice of the holy instant is the means to remember God by caring about your Brother or caring about some part of the Kingdom of Heaven that you're presently calling a physical universe, and desiring to Know *God's truth about that.

You are inviting what you have forgotten to be remembered, to present itself again, as it were, to you so that you might see that it's already incorporated in you and it never left you and your capacity to see the Kingdom of Heaven where a miserable physical universe seems to be going on.

The holy instant is, and the practice of the two-step is, a matter of leaning into the unknown on purpose – letting yourself not know. Not requiring that you know before you lean into it, before you lean into the Father, before you lean into your right Mind. It is a practice of leaning into the unknown so that the unknown can become Known to you. It's called Revelation. It's inevitable. It's the way Waking up works. It is how the holy instant functions. You see?

To say you have a problem because you have a situation that you don't have the answer to, is to be stuck in a total lack of reason, a simple case of insanity, if you will. If there is a situation calling for correction, correction is available. If there is a situation that does not look like the Kingdom of Heaven or the Perfection of God Being, then there is available that which corrects it, even though you don't know what it is. And you will not know what the redemptive answer is until you let yourself not know what the answer is, which means abandoning any confidences you have in yourself to be able to come up with the answer through the excellent use of reasoning and logic and your best use of your spiritual learning in the past.

You see, until you abandon self-confidence you can't really, with humility, turn to God and ask Him to reveal the truth to you – to reveal the answer that is the answer, to make the unknown Known to you. And yet that is what needs to happen. You see?

You no longer need to labor under the misunderstanding of what the question means, “What is the truth here?” You no longer need to labor under the idea that it is somehow going to convict you. “Oh, it’s karma!” Three lifetimes ago, a hundred lifetimes ago you did such-and-such and now it has returned to haunt you. You see?

All that does is legitimize and consolidate the factors that keep you ignorant, stuck, miserable. It’s not the answer . . . that’s not the unknown having been made Known.

To ask to know, “What is the truth here?” is to be a joyous question, a joyous process, because you can anticipate learning something exceptional, something beyond anything that you would imagine from your independent standpoint.

You have to have faith in two things: One is that there is an answer that redeems, and the second part is that the answer will be made known to you, if you but humbly ask to know what it is. And then listen without biasing the answer with any preconceptions or favorite theories that you have.

Faith is the big word that underlies the efficacy of the holy instant because it requires you to abandon faith in yourself – this miserable puny little organism that sins, suffers and dies – and placing your faith in something that you can't have proof of the existence of until you in your humility reach out to it and expect a response. In the response you have the proof. You see?

It's very important . . . it's very important . . . answers redeem.

Fear has nothing to do with the problem or the solution – it's all about itself. Abandon it and the situation that you were calling a problem, that warranted the fear, will be a situation calling for an answer that does exist, that you can count on the existence of, so that you may, in your peace, without fear, shut-up and ask to know, “Father, reveal to me what the redemptive answer is here? Reveal to me the good news that has nothing to do with the problem as I was perceiving it and all of the imaginative justifications that I was able to come up with for having the problem and therefore condemning me to suffering.” You see?

The practice of the two-step is guaranteed to work. But you will not dare to let the answer in until you are willing to believe that the answer will not convict you but release you. And it will release you by revealing God in every aspect of the situation in God’s Perfection, which will mean the disappearance of injury and the evidence of injury. It will be the permanent remission of a terminal disease or a not so terminal disease.

It will be the returning to the spiritual original everything about you, including your awareness that you are unequivocally worthy of God’s Love, which means His sharing with you His answer that transforms your mind as well as your ability to see the tangible evidence of the truth of what God is Being as a redeemed world that will be obvious to you as the Kingdom of Heaven.

But you must dare to believe in healing to begin with. And you must dare to silence your fear. And you must dare to lean into the unknown with a confidence that what was unknown that redeems the situation will be made clear to you, revealed to you and the joy of it. The joy of it will inspire you in every other situation where the holy instant needs to be practiced, presents itself. And you will not get hooked by fear, which is all and only about itself. And you will move, I will say, from glory unto glory until the transformation is complete in you. And fear and ultimate self-righteousness simply no longer occur.

This is the good news!

Between now and the next time we get together I want all of you to dare to practice leaning into the unknown. Expecting the unknown to reveal itself to you as the Known, as redemption not conviction. And lean into it constantly all day long every day you are not seeing the Kingdom of Heaven. And so the redemption of your vision is available for you to access constantly, as an adventure, if you will. You see?

This should lighten your load and cause you to be able to cast off illusions that burden you falsely.

I'm very grateful to be able to spend this time with you and to share these things with you because your practice of them will Awaken you, so that we may enjoy our Brotherhood without illusions.

I love you all and I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 8th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Okay. This evening we're going to continue our discussion of healing. And so, before we begin, let's take a few moments of quiet together.

[Quiet time]

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

Last week I asked a question: Do you believe in healing? And we discussed the subject at length. As a result it brought up some interesting responses that provide the opportunity for further clarification – a need for further clarification because there is a certain amount of confusion, which actually stands in the way of healing.

There were some of you who found that you believed in healing in the sense of something being returned to its spiritual original stature, like yourselves, that you do believe that you can be healed of your ignorance and returned to the full comprehension and experience of yourself as the holy Son or Daughter of God as God originally created you.

But the belief was or is that what you call, “the body” is not redeemable because it is an illusion. Some of you believe that when you look at your body you are seeing an illusion and therefore, there's truly nothing there to be redeemed. And yet, right there is where healing is needed.

The confusion lies in the idea that an illusion can exist in its own right as something just as real as God's Creation, and therefore, you can have an experience of an illusion – even a universal experience of illusion, which can be called “the physical world and universe.” And that this has absolutely nothing to do with Creation – the Movement of God.

Now the correction of that lies in realizing that when you're looking at your body, you are not seeing an illusion, you are seeing a misperception of something that is Real.

Now I'm getting ahead of myself. I'm going to express the idea tonight that there are three postulates which need to be part of every practice of the two-step you engage in, every practice of the holy instant, every practice of, we'll say, your spiritualization.

Now in the Bible, the idea is expressed, *“In the Beginning was the Word. And the Word was with God. And the Word was God.”*¹ Now there literally is no more succinct way to express the idea, which is the first postulate that God is All. What is a postulate? A postulate is something that is assumed to be a fact without proof, or put another way, something that is self-evident.

Now whether you believe it or not, whether you think the postulate that God is All is true or not, it is essential to adopt this postulate together with the other two in order to arrive at the experience that proves its truth.

Now you've heard me express the idea that you are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. You are at that point and must understand yourself therefrom. Now that's another way of saying, you are the holy Son or Daughter of God. John in the Bible said, *“Now are we the Sons of God. And it does not yet appear what we shall be. But we know that when He (the Christ) shall appear, we shall be like Him. For we shall see Him as He is.”*² And every man that has this hope in him, purifieth himself daily even as he is pure.”³

That hope is another way of expressing the practice of the holy instant or the two-step. And the phrase is interpreted to mean that every man that has this hope in him purifies himself daily even as he, the Christ is pure.

But it really means, that every man that has his hope in Him purifies himself daily even as he, the one purifying himself daily is pure.

Again: A way of succinctly expressing the fact, that now are we the Sons of God, that you are now the holy Son or Daughter of God, that's the second postulate. First postulate: God is All. Second postulate: You are the holy Son or Daughter of God.

You notice these are all in the present tense. It doesn't say, "God will be all. And it doesn't say you will be the holy Son or Daughter of God. No. God is All. And you are the holy Son or Daughter of God.

Now the third postulate is the one most difficult to embrace because of your conditioning. And that is: the world and universe are (present tense) the Kingdom of Heaven. The world and universe are the Kingdom of Heaven.

Now if God is All, then God Being All is the only event there is that's going on. That means that you are the holy Son or Daughter of God because God is all there is to you. And it means that the world and universe that you call a physical, material world and universe, is the Kingdom of Heaven because nothing is going on that isn't God Being All.

You see how those three postulates express a singularity? And this singularity with three aspects to it is the reason that the promise of the Course can be fulfilled. In other words: Atonement. In other words, your Awakening to your divine stature. These three postulates are the reason there can be healing.

Now what does this mean? And we've talked about this before but not in quite this way, not in this three aspected fundamental absolute truth of Being.

Now do you see that there is no movement toward or progress that is going to be made to finally arrive at a state of perfection. The state of perfection – the Allness of God – is already the only thing going on. And when you practice the holy instant, when you do the two-step and you shut up, you silence all of your confidences, all of your beliefs and you allow yourself to be in the “not-knowing place” and you ask to know, “what is the truth here?” the truth is going to reflect those three postulates.

Now I have said before, that it’s an excellent practice to look at anything in your world, whether it’s a table, or a flower or a bug, and desire to experience the more of what God is Being right there than what you are currently seeing.

Now it’s the same thing with your body if there seems to be injury or if there seems to be illness or a malfunction of some sort, or a blemish of some sort or a disproportionate balance of all of your physique.

There is no matter. All substance is Spirit. And the substance of Spirit is Love and Love is illumination . . . Light.

And so, when you’re willing to look at your body, desiring to see the more of that, than what you’ve been educated to see, you are leaning into the unknown because it’s not your experience yet, so that it might be revealed to you and become the known, so that you have half a chance, a quarter of a chance, a hundredth of a chance because it doesn’t really take any more than that of seeing the redemption of your poor concept – the replacement of your poor concept which you are projecting on the visibility and tangibility of the Son of God, allowing what never was true to vanish.

I know, “ashes to ashes and dust to dust” you lay the body aside in the ground, dust to dust, send it back where it came from. CRAP! Don’t believe it . . . it’s not true! God’s Creation is recognizable, it’s identifiable, it is experienceable. God Moving looks like something! It can’t help but look like Something and feel like Something and Be Something.

Now, I know that makes it sound as though form is Real and yet in the Course* I said, “form itself is an illusion.” Here’s what that means:

Form itself is an illusion. The reason being that there can't be any such thing as form itself . . . form all by itself! There isn't any such thing as form itself. Form is always, I'm going to say, the rendering visible of the Movement of Creation – the Movement of the Mind of God. It never stands by itself, of itself because there is no such thing as form of itself. You see?

But that is the way the body and the world are being interpreted presently from the standpoint of physics, from the standpoint of the materialistic hypothesis that are put forth as an explanation of Creation. You treat yourself as though you are a body, that you are the particular form that you identify with yourself. And we've talked about this at length. You're identifying yourself with the form instead of with the conscious awareness in which the experience of form is going on.

And so when you shift your attention to “the form” and you say you are “the form,” you are talking about form itself, on its own, obviously having no connection with God, and a universe itself having no connection with God, with a divine Movement: Something that instead happened from an unexplainable “Big Bang” that set material processes into motion . . . and voila! You have an illusion, you have something standing on its own with nothing behind it – no creative Movement that it is the visibility and tangibility of. You see? And that is the belief structure out of which everyone is moving, who is engaged in Waking up. Do you see what I'm saying?*

Whatever has been separated from a creative movement of a first cause is a form itself — a form on its own. And like a light-bulb not plugged into the socket, there is no light and it is not a light-bulb. There is no function. You see?

This is important. Why? Why? Because there is, right where you are, the visibility and tangibility of you . . . of you, the movement of conscious Awareness that you are, because God is Being that as You. And that is not form itself on its own, but it is the gathering together of what I'm going to call, energies . . . energies of Spirit, of Love, of Life, of Truth, of Principle, of Mind and Soul, that render the Meaning of the Movement experienceable.

In other words, when you look at your body and you say, “I am seeing an illusion,” the truth is, that you are looking at the spiritual original of the Movement of God and misinterpreting it to be a physical organism having nothing to do with God, therefore, being an illusion, therefore, being something not capable of redemption.

And as long as that is your foundation, you will not see healing. You will see sin, disease and death. It’s that simple. Not because sin, disease and death are characteristic of the visibility and tangibility of you, but because you are inflicting yourself with a misperception . . . practicing it and in practicing it, engaging in denial of what your body is. You see?

That is always uncomfortable. Your divine Sanity will always present itself to you to say, “Stop doing this! It is impossible! You cannot succeed! Stop wasting your time! Get back on track!” In other words, get back in touch with the three postulates.

There is no matter! There is no material universe! There is the Kingdom of Heaven, the substance of which in infinite variety and form identifies the infiniteness of God — the Movement of divine Mind that is experienced as the Kingdom of Heaven. You see?

You are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. You see? God is already All. You can’t get to It. You haven’t gotten away from It. And so, all day long in every way you are confronted with the Allness of God. And the you that is being confronted with the Allness of God are the holy Son or Daughter of God, yourself, right now.

That’s why when you stop arguing against the facts, healing – even instantaneous healing – occurs . . . where? In the only place it can, your experience.

Your body is redeemable. There is a spiritual original of it, which you are looking at every time you look at it. Because it is already present, your intention to see beyond your current limits is bound to succeed. You see? Not because you are a powerful healer, but because you are abandoning the practice of denying the already present truth of an already present omnipotent, omnipresent, omniscient God.

This is not a world to escape. Mortality is not a condition for you to get beyond. It's a mindset for you to simply abandon. Stop validating it . . . and how? By becoming curious. What is the two-step? Is it not an ultimate practice of curiosity? You shut up your current mindset, you reach outside of it on purpose and you say, "What is the truth here? What is the ultimate truth right here, right now?" That is ultimate curiosity.

And as I said last week, when you lean into what is currently unknown to you, it can become and will become Known. And once again: This is not a head-trip. It's the real Kingdom of Heaven, which is the only thing confronting you at any moment, being observed by the Son or Daughter of God right now, because that's all there is to you no matter how limited you have become in your [chucking] self-appreciation. You are right now the Son or Daughter of God – already – using your infinite capacity with great limitation. And you believe that the limitation is the actuality of you. And it's not! Now are you the Son or Daughter of God already. You see?

You dishonor yourself by considering yourself in any other way. And you dishonor the visibility and tangibility of the holy Son or Daughter of God that you Are when you look at your body and say, "I am seeing an illusion." Honor it by saying, "If there is imperfection here that I'm experiencing, I'm having a misperception of the visibility and tangibility of the Son of God that I Am. And it's not the truth. And I want to know the truth. Father, reveal it to me. I want to experience the divine body that I'm looking at and seeing through a glass darkly to be illuminated to me." You see?

You're not working towards some future conclusion. You are uncovering the present Reality. The present Reality being covered by the three postulates. One: God Is All – Is All. Number two: You are the holy Son or Daughter of God. And number three: the world and universe are the Kingdom of Heaven. If anything else is being experienced it's because these three actualities are being viewed through a glass darkly, through mutually-agreed-upon-definitions that don't embrace those three postulates.

Oh, it's ancient . . . it's an ancient idea: Ashes to ashes and dust to dust.

Huh? . . . And God Created the Heavens and Earth. And then a mist went up from the ground. And then Creation is engaged in all over again . . . created from the dust. What is that? Not the Movement of God . . . not the Movement of Creation. The mist going up from the ground is that which obscures Creation as it was already completed, if I may put it that way. And what replaced it was the mutual-definitions that mankind came to through the use of imagination and the intent to separate from the Father and be the determiner of what is real himself. You see?

Now that was insanity, because that can't actually occur, therefore, it never did actually occur. But oh boy, a little bit of the dream slipped in: Ashes to ashes and dust to dust. And it stuck. And so it's very hard to not abandon such an ancient habit and be willing to look at any part of Creation, whether, as I've said, it's a table or a flower or a body or a kidney, and recognize that it's substance is Spirit. And that the substance of Spirit is Love, and the characteristic of Love is illumination, and that therefore, you will find that every aspect of Creation is illuminated and spreads its illumination on every other aspect of Creation expressing the glory of God.

Now, this week I'm going to suggest that you actually look at this "dust body" or whatever you want to call it, and declare – just for your own clarity – and declare there's only one substance, the substance of Spirit, God. And it must represent and express what is true about God, which is perfection, beauty, harmony, symmetry. And then ask for that to be illuminated to you, with the expectation of whatever is calling for correction to be corrected, so that no blemish remains, no mis-shaped fingers or arms or any other part of the body remains unreplaced by, once again: balance, harmony, symmetry, beauty.

You know what though? In order to have the experience you're going to have to let it be provided to you because there's no way you will be able to take credit for the healing, because you don't exist in your own right, independent of the Father. And the only way to get to the proof that God is All and that you're the holy Son or Daughter of God and that the world and universe is the Kingdom of Heaven is by abandoning that stance of independent agent, or cause. That's when the proof of the postulates occurs and the postulates cease to be postulates but eternal facts that are the basis of your sound Mind that is no longer confused.

You know what? If you think that everything you see is illusion, as I've said before, you will not be looking in the place where redemption is going to occur. What a shame! You see?

You had better be looking at the very thing you're having a misperception of so that as the misperception is replaced, you will be able to see that particular aspect of Creation in its spiritual original again, whether it's a toenail or a fingernail or an eyelash. You see?

Every aspect of Creation . . . every eyelash, every toenail and so-on is a divine idea in the Mind of God. Its substance is God Himself because God is All. And God could go nowhere else to find the materials with which to Create.

So start looking at your world, start looking at your body, start apprehending yourself on the basis that neither you nor any aspect of Creation is behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it, but is at that point and must be understood, experienced, allowed to register with you from there.

You are looking at God. You are experiencing God. And that which is experiencing God is the Presence of God called the holy Son or Daughter of God. And so you are God recognizing Himself. And that is your function as co-Creator. And all of this happens in the only place there is for it to happen: The Kingdom of Heaven, Creation Itself. You're already Home. Just stop calling Home something it is not and determining that, because it is not what it is. There's no redemption for it, and then look forward to your redemption sometime, somewhere and then be insane enough to feel comforted by that and patiently wait for that day to come. And all the time you wait, missing out on what is to come, it will be going on all around you because there really is nothing else to experience.

Again, God is already All. And you are already His holy Son or Daughter. And the world and universe is already the Kingdom of Heaven. Everything is already the Ultimate, including you. Oh you say, “But I can’t see that, so therefore it can’t be true about me.” And there you set your feet in concrete.

Now are you the Son or Daughter of God. And those who have the hope in them of recognizing the Christ, because you will be like the Christ in the course of going through His day, Your day, will purify yourself even as you already are pure.

I cannot put it any more simply than that. The Ultimate is simple. And this clarity will give you the courage and the willingness to anticipate with joy your Awakening.

I love you very much. And I truly look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 15th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Okay. Tonight we will not be going into the Book. And so before we begin, let's take a few moments to be quiet together.

[Quiet time]

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

How many of you had a difficult week since we last met together?
How many listened to what I had to say last time and experienced extreme clarity – understood the utter simplicity of what I was saying, and therefore, the utter simplicity of Waking up, of ending the dream, of ending “the human condition?”

How many, as a result, looked forward to an incredibly different week from past weeks expecting the clarity to open up vast new doors, or at the least, an incredibly enhanced daily experience? And how many of you diligently and conscientiously reviewed the transcript of the meeting and did your utmost to bring the principles into play during your day and found yourself thwarted – found things not transforming, we'll say, positively?

How many of you found that the situations actually seemed to get worse?

Well, it's not because your clarity was flawed. It was not because you misunderstood what you had heard. But rather, it's something called inertia.

You know what inertia is? Inertia is the tendency of a body in motion to continue in that motion. And you experience it when you're riding in the passenger seat of a car and the car is moving straight forward. Your body is a body in motion moving straight forward. But if the driver goes around the curve to the left, you find yourself pressed against the right-hand door of the car. And the reason is, that your body is continuing to move straight forward and the car, moving left, is getting in the way. And so you feel yourself pressed into the door of the car. Simple . . . easy to understand.

Now, where has the inertia come into play as you have been really, truly, endeavoring to practice the two-step and engage in the holy instant and experiencing Guidance – hearing or feeling the impulse or the direction to act in?

Well, the inertia is and always will be your thinking. You're not used to not thinking. And so the tendency to think will persist when you are engaged in abandoning it. You see?

It will persist. So don't be surprised. You will find that in one way or another, your practice of the holy instant will arouse intellectual responses – habitual intellectual responses. “Well I can't do that!” or “that doesn't make sense” or “that sounds interesting but I'm not quite ready to do that” or any part of the “I can't syndrome.”

“I can't do that. I can't believe that. I can't see how that would be helpful in the slightest.” And you introduce thinking instead of paying attention to the Guidance, which is clearly presenting itself. And then listening to Guidance as it is presenting itself . . . and then listening to Guidance as it is presenting itself and not once engaging in speculative thoughts – doubts, intelligent concerns.

Now, even if you do have an intelligent concern or a doubt, you don't have to persist in a straight line. You can bring that concern or doubt to your Guidance. “I don't see how this can happen. I can't do that. Tell me the truth about it. I want to know why I can do it. I want to know, since You see that this is an appropriate step to take, how that step is to be accomplished,” because You must be able to see it.”

And so you don't activate the inertia of the doubt or the concern. You use it as a continued reason for not thinking and returning your attention to the Guidance that can clarify for you how it can be done or why it is not dangerous. You see? The inertia comes as a result of abandoning listening for Guidance. It comes as a result of abandoning listening to the Voice of truth. It comes as a result of abandoning your intent to connect with That which is nothing more than your right Mind – the Holy Spirit.

Now if you will catch the moment in which you're willing to abandon listening and re-engage thinking, if you will catch yourself when that happens, you will find yourself continuing to be released from the perceptions of yourself and your world that you have been taught, that you have acquired and that you have placed faith in.

Now as you do that, you will find that what could have ended up being an impasse, because inertia set in, will demonstrate to you the value of not valuing your thinking. And then it will be easier the next time inertia sets in to abandon the inertia.

This is a learning process. And it can be described as becoming disenchanted with your thinking. It's not a happy thing to become disenchanted with your thinking. In fact, that can be part of the inertia to ruminate about, the fact it's not pleasant. And therefore, this can't possibly be contributive in any way to any positive result. You see? There's the inertia.

The tendency to continue as you have been gets in the way of being free of preconditioned patterns, free of habits – mind habits, mental habits that keep you bound.

Thinking is always based upon the past. It's always based on your experience. And that's usually considered good – to be able to base your actions on experience. “Oh, he's had a lot of experience and it shows in everything thing he does. He's excellent in his work and it's a result of his experience.” You see? But I'm going to tell you something: Your experience has always been colored by or based in learning that reflects not being joined with your right Mind.

Your experience in the world, in life as its generally perceived, is a result of being conscious of events without realizing that they have a connection with God – with a Prime Mover of pure intelligence. Not only that, that the Prime Mover acts always in the “Now.” And therefore, the experience is always brand new and never based upon the past.

Without that conscious awareness, the Reality of what one is experiencing is lost. And what one is left with is illusion, is memory imbued with, colored with nothing but misunderstanding and misperception.

You see, becoming disenchanted with your thinking means something significant. And you end up in your disenchantment with your thinking in a place where you can experience no self-appreciation because of your thinking, something which for most every one of you has been a source of pride and has lent you credibility and recognition. Oh yes, he, she, you have quite a bit of experience and it shows and you’re to be honored and you’re to be respected because you don’t base things on your imagination but rather on your experience.

Now it’s time for the word “experience” to mean something new. It’s time for the word “experience” to mean what happens when you’re in the silence and you are not asserting a personal private intent or sense of self. And in the absence of a sense of self, but the presence of Mind that you Are, truth is revealed to you. Clarity comes, behavior arises out of it, not out of your best thinking, not out of your best judgment, not out of your vast experience.

And that behavior arising out of the absence of personal private self-assertion, provides you with an experience of what your right Mind truly is: the Holy Spirit, the Presence of the Mind of God Being all there is to the Presence of Mind that you Are.

New identity is revealed to you, which is really your original identity and your only identity. But it’s an identity that has been covered over by your thinking, coupled with the idea – the radical and crazy idea – that you are a free agent, an agent with a capacity to enact things, to be a “cause.”

That’s where the problem lies. And the solution to it lies in the practice of the holy instant and the successful disenchantment with your thinking. To the point where you no longer give preference to your thinking, but you give your preference to persistent listening, persistent joining with That which is nothing more than your right Mind, which just happens to be the Holy Spirit. You see?

It’s all right for your thinking to become meaningless. It’s all right for you not to know the answer. It’s all right not to have the foggiest idea of what to do, if in the absence of a foggy idea you are consciously paying attention with curiosity to know what the truth is that you’re not presently aware of and which isn’t presently defined by your best or worst thinking.

It’s no wonder that it has taken so long for so many to Awaken. It’s not a very appealing prospect from the current perspective, which tends to continue to be the perspective even when the intent to change perspective comes into play. Because when the changed perspective occurs, you experience resistance to it because you tend to not abandon your current habits. That’s the only reason. You tend to resist abandoning your current habits, your current mindsets, your current mutual agreements . . . and the promises from everyone that, if you agree to this or that or the other thing, they will provide you with some goodies, some appreciation, some recognition, some acknowledgement of your worth. You see?

You have to let go of those things in order for inertia not to prevail. You really need to become like a little child. You need to be glad to abandon your preconceptions. Oh, [chuckles] and as many of you know, you can have preconceptions about something you’ve never heard about or thought about before. You begin to open up to spiritual things. You begin to open up to the Bible, A Course In Miracles – inner, honest inquiry of that which is outside the box. And you find out that you can expect healing. And you pursue it and you experience healing, except that it seems to be gradual. And it doesn’t take very long for you to discover that you have a concept about that. “Well, if this is truly spiritual healing it’s not going to take awhile. If it is truly spiritual healing, if God has anything to do with it, it’s going to be instantaneous.”

Now where did that come from? How is it that you have this concept when the genuine idea of being able to experience healing was something you never thought about before?

I will tell you: The private sense of self protects what it calls “its integrity” – keeps its boundaries clear by virtue of having concepts. Concepts provide the structure to what we’ll call “your ego.” And because the ego is nothing more than a defense mechanism, concepts are the tool – the tools that the ego uses to protect itself. And it has the capacity to provide opinions about something that you’ve only just discovered. It is as though the opinion has been waiting in secret for the opportunity to present itself, even though it hasn’t. You see?

It can be tricky, it can be sticky, it can seem to be complicated, but only if you’re willing to be affected by inertia, only if you are insistent upon continuing to practice thinking – thinking based upon the past, thinking based upon perceptions arrived at through nothing more than ignorance . . . perceptions arrived at only in the absence of a conscious connection with one’s Source, one’s true Source and therefore, without the conscious awareness of your own divinity that is and always has been outside of the box. Inertia keeps you in the box. It’s that simple.

What gets you out of the box, what gets you out of inertia is to listen for Guidance. Desire of the Father or the Holy Spirit to Know what the God’s honest truth is, what the truth is from the Father’s Perspective of His perfect Creation and to listen for it and let it in. And then no matter what form inertia takes to distract you and to get you to think about it, or to think against it, or whatever, continue to ask, “Father, Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? Father, I’m experiencing a doubt. What is the truth that eradicates the doubt? I don’t want to magnify the doubt. I don’t want to emphasize the inertia. Father, what is the truth that negates the inertia?” And do it, and do it because the only alternative you have is to think about it, and that will keep you bound, that will prohibit healing, that will prohibit revelation.

If things seem to get worse, ask, “Father, what is the truth that invalidates, proves to be unreal, the worsening of the situation?” Don’t ask the Father what’s causing the worsening of the situation. Always your inquiry in the holy instant has to do with your wishing to abandon your perspective in favor of the Father’s Perspective about whatever it is you’re confused.

Remember, the only thing going on is Reality. The only thing going on is the Kingdom of Heaven. And if you’re seeing anything different from that, you’re seeing a misperception. Understanding the misperception won’t help a thing, when all you need to do is to abandon it with the Father’s help or the Holy Spirit’s help as They reveal to you that part of the Kingdom of Heaven that you were seeing unclearly and showing it to you in Its totality as the spiritual original of what you were seeing unclearly. You see?

Persistence is now what is called for. Don’t be taken in by the experienced of inertia. And as you begin to realize that your thinking is your own worst enemy – you’re not your own worst enemy – but when you realize that your thinking is your own worst enemy, well, if you want to be sad about it, go ahead and be sad about it, but just for a moment. It accomplishes nothing. And then abandon the sadness and get on with the joy of clarity. You see?

Don’t be afraid to be present in your daily experience during this coming week. And if it doesn’t seem to show the promise that I’ve been describing or that you can even clearly see and feel is a real promise, notice that somewhere in there you started thinking. You had an opinion that was at odds with, that disagreed with clarity that was forthcoming, or that came into play before the clarity had a chance to register with you. And look at that and see how impractical and useless it was for you to engage in it, so that you can see that it’s something you don’t wish to employ and you will let go of it spontaneously.

Just realize what the culprit is. The culprit isn’t that what I’ve been telling you isn’t true and doesn’t work. The culprit is that inertia, the tendency to remain with your current mindset and perspective blocks the influx of the experience that will prove the thinking false and make it obviously unattractive and worthless. When that happens you don't even have to throw it out, it will fall away from you because you will find no interest in it and you will not value it in any way. And nothing stays in your experience that you find valueless. That's a promise. That's a fact.

This is a simple lesson tonight, but a very significant lesson. It's very single pointed. And I'm going to leave it that way so that there's no chance to become befuddled about it.

It's your Birthright to be Awake. You are already the holy Son or Daughter of God. And I'm here to promote your experience of It, by creating clarity rather than adding confusion.

I love you very much and I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 23rd 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

We have jumped ahead in the book to the next to the last chapter – Chapter 30. And the Chapter is entitled:

THE NEW BEGINNING

And it begins . . .

The new beginning now becomes the focus of the curriculum.

Well, actually the new beginning has been the very clear focus of what I've been teaching ever since we began at the beginning of the book, but especially since last May. I have been homing in on the practice of the holy instant, which is the new beginning.

Again:

The new beginning now becomes the focus of the curriculum. The goal is clear, . .

. . . and certainly, I've been making it clear over and over and over again for the last few months.

Then last week, we talked about inertia. We talked about the fact that habits are not abandoned easily. Inertia is the tendency to continue doing what has been happening. You have all been thinkers. You have all thought that thinking was something that constantly goes on. It's what happens whenever you're conscious. And we've been correcting that misunderstanding.

Now the fact is that when you engage in practicing the holy instant, the first step is to become silent – to still the mind, to stop the thinking. And you have found it difficult to do. You still the thinking and then you ask of the Holy Spirit or the Father, "What is the truth?" and you listen, still remaining silent – still not thinking.

I have shared with you, and you have had the experience, even if it is an inconsistent experience, that when you listen having enquired beyond your thinking, the Answer will be provided.

You are not meant to be unconscious of the Father's Perspective. His Perspective is instilled in you, embodied in you. And since you have substituted your own thinking for that, you are having to undo the habit so that your right Mind can be returned to you, so that you might discover that you are indeed, the holy Son or Daughter of God.

So, again in the book:

The goal is clear, but now you need specific methods for attaining it.

Why? Because of inertia. That's why we are moving forward in the book because this section will illustrate You to you in your process of learning to listen and not reestablishing thinking. It is something I encourage you to keep with you constantly until you have arrived at the point where you practice the holy instant without interruption. Because listening, joining, hearing and cooperating with God is the divinely natural way for you to be. And it is inevitable for that to become reestablished as your, shall I say, new habit of Being. So:

The goal is clear, but now you need specific methods for attaining it. The speed by which it can be reached depends on this one thing alone; your willingness to practice every step.

And of course, we've referred to the practice of the holy instant as the practice of the two-step:

Step one: Shutting up.

Step two: Asking, “What is the truth here? What do I need to Know? What is Your Perspective, Father?”

And then while continuing to be silent, listening while you are infilled with the Answer.

Now the time will come when you will stop asking questions because your attention – your ongoing attention – will be the question itself. And the ongoing attention will allow for the ongoing influx of the Father's Perspective now . . . now . . . now . . . now. And you won't ask questions anymore as though you are an unknowing entity that must enquire in order to know something. So:

The speed by which it can be reached depends on this one thing alone; your willingness to practice every step.

Now:

Each one will help a little every time it is attempted. And together will these steps lead you from dreams of judgment . . .

. . . thinking . . .

. . . to forgiving dreams and out of pain and fear. They are not new to you, . .

. . . that's important. They are not new to you. We've discussed them at length. You even know how to practice them without being confused about what the practice is.

They are not new to you, but they are more ideas than rules of thought to you as yet. So now we need to practice them awhile, until they are the rules by which you live.

No longer merely ideas.

We seek to make them habits now, so you will have them ready for whatever need.

And so we have a new section entitled:

RULES FOR DECISION

These are the steps you will take when you fail at the two-step.

Decisions are continuous. You do not always know when you are making them. But with a little practice with the ones you recognize, a set begins to form which sees you through the rest. It is not wise to let yourself become preoccupied with every step you take. The proper set, adopted consciously each time you wake, will put you well ahead.

Well, what do you imagine the sets might be? Again, fortunately, it's simple. There are only two sets to choose from and each set represents the voice you're choosing to listen to – the voice you're giving your attention to. The results are entirely different – a hundred and eighty degrees out of sync with each other. They are easy to recognize. But listening to the Voice for Truth, the Holy Spirit is something you're not totally familiar with. Listening to the voice for fear you are well versed in.

And so, you must learn how to distinguish between the two so that a choice can be made.

The proper set, adopted consciously each time you wake, . . .

. . . every morning . . . every morning as we've discussed, before you climb out of bed, decide which voice you're going to listen to today. And then make the connection right there while your head is still on the pillow. “Oh, you don’t have time? Oh, my goodness, you’ve got to get to work? Oh, you’ve got a whole lot of things to do before you go out the door because you forgot to take care of it last night?”

NO! Before anything else say, “Holy Spirit, are you there?” You see? Simple. The means of connection is simple and only takes a moment. “Holy Spirit, are you there? My Guide, are you there?” And don’t move until you hear the answer, “Yes.” And then tell your Guide that you intend to stay with Him or Her throughout the day and if you fail, you ask for help. Then get up and begin to take care of the things that need to be taken care of. But be careful, because the tendency will be to take charge once again without being in communion with your Guide . . . without having the Father’s Perspective available to you to know how to deal with whatever the needs are. So:

The proper set, adopted consciously each time you wake, will put you well ahead. And if you find resistance strong and dedication weak, you are not ready. DO NOT FIGHT YOURSELF.

You see? When you realize, “Oops, I started thinking for myself!” do not get angry with yourself, do not fight yourself, do not criticize or condemn yourself.

But think about the kind of day you want, and tell yourself there IS a way in which this very day can happen just like that. Then try again to have the day you want.

What kind of day do you want? Does that mean to imagine that you would like to drive down a freeway where everyone is easy-going where you encounter no accidents? Does it mean that you imagine events that you would like to have? Or, does it mean that you’re going to return to the basic point of deciding which voice you’re going to listen to.

Which voice is going to be your companion through the day?

So think about the kind of day you want. A day joined with the Holy Spirit guiding you surely and safely and happily through your day whatever happens.

[But] think about the kind of day you want, and tell yourself there IS a way in which this very day can happen just like that.

There is a way for you to have the day joined with the Holy Spirit.

Then try again to have the day you want.

Reconnect and stay connected.

The outlook starts with this . . .

And these are the rules:

1. “Today I will make no decisions by myself.”

Sound familiar? “Today I will listen for Thy Voice lest my footsteps stray. Today I will make decisions only in tandem with Your Guidance. I will let You tell me what my decisions are to be.”

Again:

“Today I will make no decisions by myself.”

This means that you are choosing not to be the judge of what to do. And this is what is so insulting to the ego. It must be the judge of what to do. Because in that way it builds itself up. It creates credibility for itself, which of course, it has none of. So:

This means that you are choosing not to be the judge of what to do. But it must also mean you will not judge the situations where you will be called upon to make response.

Now I'll tell you, that almost daily Paul will get up in the morning and ask, “What's the order of the day?” And I will share with him the general outline and sometimes even specifics regarding the day and he's very cooperative – agreeable. And he has a sense of an orderly day ahead of him that has been set by a tone from me.

And then as he proceeds through the day, events happen that I didn't mention, or situations arise that cause him to have to extend himself in places he doesn't feel like extending himself. And it becomes problematic. And he's had to recognize that choosing not to be the judge of what to do must also mean he will not judge the situations where he is called upon to make response.

For if you judge them, . . .

. . . if he judges them . . .

you have set the rules . . .

. . . you have set the rules, he has . . .

*. . . set the rules for how [he] should react to them.
And then another answer cannot but produce confusion and uncertainty and fear.*

Well, Paul has found very often that another answer from the one he is sure of, very often involves engaging in the activity that he didn't want to engage in, because, well, it wasn't as holy as the outline of the day that I had shared with him.

And so, when I say to him, “Here is the place to let me speak, here is the place to love enough to not abandon the situation or the individual, and relieve yourself of the effort it takes to ask to know what the truth is in a situation you're interested in doing that in.”
You see?

Every single one of you has or will have that experience. And so, when he gets another answer – an answer different from the one I'm giving – it produces confusion and uncertainty and fear. You see? Because Paul has the tendency to feel secure if he knows with Guidance what is going to happen, or what needs to be attended to. And that's not the place to get security.

Security is acquired by learning as a surfer learns, to always stay at the point of balance on the moving wave. You see? Now:

This is your major problem now. You still make up your mind, and THEN decide to ask what you should do. And what you hear may not resolve the problem as YOU saw it first. This leads to fear because it contradicts what you perceive, and so you feel attacked.

Well, what if you have a partner who is also engaging in practicing the holy instant and the two-step, and that partner knows that you are as well? And so, when you get off the beam, by taking authority over the situation without being joined and [he/she] points it out to you, you feel attacked. Or even just having an answer different from the one you expected can cause you to feel unembraced, at odds with . . . when after all, your intent is to be cooperating . . .

. . . and so you feel attacked. And therefore angry.

Now:

There are rules by which this will not happen.

And these are the rules we're talking about, the rules for decision.

There are rules by which this will not happen. But it does occur at first, while you are learning how to hear.

You see how beautifully and simply it expresses what we've been discussing?

Now Rule number two:

2. Throughout the day, at any time you think of it, and have a quiet moment for reflection, tell yourself again the kind of day you want; the feelings you would have, the things you want to happen to you, and the things you would experience, and say,

*"If I make no decision by myself,
This is the kind of day that will be GIVEN me."*

It's that simple. Tell yourself again the kind of day you want: A joined day – a day in which you are companioned with the Holy Spirit or the Christ or the Father. That's the kind of day you want and the feelings you would have that accompany that joining, the things you want to happen to you. Well, the things you want to happen to you are the things that the Father unfolds.

And the things you would experience? The Perspective and the capacity to feel divinely every aspect of what unfolds in your day. You see? And so you say:

*"If I make no decision by myself,
This is the kind of day that will be GIVEN me."*

These two procedures, . . .

. . . the first two rules . . .

. . . practiced well, will serve to let you be directed without fear, for opposition will not first arise and then become a problem in itself.

But there will still be times when you have judged already. Now the answer will provoke attack, unless you quickly straighten out your mind to want an answer that will work. Be certain this has happened if you feel yourself unwilling to sit by, and ask to have the answer given you.

You see? Well, who wants to sit by [chuckle] and have the answer given to him when he can figure it out for himself? Or he already knows what the answer is and simply needs to implement it.

Well, if you feel yourself unwilling to be what feels to you like being a dunce on a stool, having not enough gumption to get answers yourself, but to ask for someone else or something else to provide you with the answer, well, you can be certain that you're not joined anymore. And the feeling will be entirely different: One hundred an eighty degrees out of sync with what you will feel when you are listening to and not resisting the Holy Spirit, which I will remind you, is nothing more than your right Mind. So . . .

. . . if you feel yourself unwilling to sit by, and ask to have the answer given you. This means you HAVE decided by yourself, and cannot see the QUESTION. Now you need a quick restorative before you ask.

And so here's rule number three:

3. Remember once again the day you want . . .

. . . a joined day, a day in communion where every event and experience of the day is viewed through a Partnership – a Partnership in which you insist upon deferring to the Partner and letting yourself be lovingly and safely and wonderfully Guided through the day while you get the hang of Being without being an authority. You see?

Again, the beginning of Rule number three:

3. Remember once again the day you want, and recognize that something has occurred which is not part of it. Then realize that you have asked a question by yourself, and must have set an answer in your terms.

So what do you do?

Then say,

"I HAVE no question. I forgot what to decide."

You see, when you're not joined, when you're not in communion, you don't ask questions, you just assert answers. So when you find yourself uncomfortable because you're not joined, you must realize that in your independent state,

“I HAVE no question. I forgot what to decide.”

“I forgot what kind of day I wanted . . . a joined day, a day in communion.”

This cancels out the terms which you have set, and lets the ANSWER show you what the question must have really been.

You see?

Try to observe this rule without delay, despite your opposition. For you have ALREADY gotten angry, and your fear of being answered in a different way from what your version of the questions asks will gain momentum, until you believe the day you want is one in which you get YOUR answer to YOUR question.

You see? And when you're in this state of mind, your angry, your assertive, your overbearing, your thoughtless, your insensitive and uninvolved.

And you will not get it, . .

You will not get your answer to your question.

And you will not get it, for it would destroy the day by robbing you of what you REALLY want.

It will rob you of the joined day in communion and the blessing of having a real experience of your right Mind and the Kingdom of Heaven.

This can be very hard to realize, . .

. . . of course, because your angry and because your insistent on getting your way.

This can be very hard to realize, when once you have decided by yourself the rules which promise you a happy day.

And every single one of you are well experienced in setting the rules, which you believe will promise you a happy day.

Yet this decision still can be undone, by simple methods which you can accept.

It's very important to understand that each of these rules are very simple . . . very simple . . . easy to engage . . . easy to grasp even when you're in a fit – an ego tantrum. And so . . .

. . . this decision still can be undone, by simple methods which you can accept.

And we have rule number four:

4. If you are so unwilling to receive you cannot even let your question go, . .

. . . oh, your beloved question that you've created that assures you of an answer that you want, whether it's right or not.

If you are so unwilling to receive you cannot even let your question go, you can begin to change your mind with this:

"At least I can decide I do not LIKE what I feel now."

Mind you, you're very familiar with what you're feeling at that moment. You're very familiar with being upset because your will is being thwarted. You're very familiar with that and it doesn't naturally occur to you to think that there may be another way of perceiving, that you can change your mind or cancel out that action. But this rule number four, that you can change your mind with this:

"At least I can decide I do not LIKE what I feel now."

Is the means of being able to reasonably consider changing your mind. And that's what helps release you.

This much is obvious, . . .

. . . that you do not like what you feel now . . .

. . . and paves the way for the next easy step.

Rule number five:

5. Having decided that you do not like the way you feel, what could be easier than to continue with,

"And so I HOPE I have been wrong."

Now, the fact is that it's an easy step, but it's not always easy to embrace it in the heat of the moment. Nevertheless, you are consciously engaged in wanting to Wake up – experience the Atonement. You're not studying the Course for nothing. You're not listening to my words for no reason.

And so, when you're in this fit of anger, where self-assertion and the making of your own decisions seem to be in perfect order, you do have a means of breaking out of that pattern . . . of abandoning that habit.

And so you continue with:

"And so I HOPE I have been wrong."

There is a way for you to actually feel the hope that you've been wrong, even if it's not fully felt.

This works against the sense of opposition, and reminds you that help is not being thrust upon you, but is something that you want and that you need, because you do not like the way you feel. This tiny opening will be enough to let you go ahead with just a few more steps you need to let yourself be helped.

Now you have reached the turning-point, . .

. . . when you can find yourself in the place where you say and feel and mean:

. . . "I HOPE I have been wrong."

You've reached the turning-point. You're no longer caught by a commitment to a habit . . . a habit of self-righteousness.

Now you have reached the turning-point, because it has occurred to you that YOU will gain if what you have decided is not so.

Now, that's a learning. To realize that you will gain in the understanding that what you have decided is not so, that is something acquired through practice. And every time you actually let go of what you have decided, and you find yourself hearing your companion – your companion's advice and guidance – and experience the benefit of it, it makes it easier and easier with each successive try.

Until this point is reached, you will believe your happiness depends on being RIGHT.

And that's where anger and self-righteousness and attack come into play, as you substantiate your puny little self and try to make it valid, forgetting that if you will abandon that and move into your peace and enquire to know what the truth really is, you will be blessed and not cursed.

Until this point is reached, you will believe your happiness depends on being RIGHT. But this much reason have you now attained; you would be better off if you were WRONG.

Now again, I want to remind you to come to this section in the Book when you find yourself upset, and read, because as you read you're going to find the specific point you're at spelled out for you, together with the rule that will release you. It's important.

Rule number six:

6. This tiny gain of wisdom will suffice to take you further. You are not coerced, but merely hope to get a thing you want. [And thus] And you can say in perfect honesty,

"I WANT another way to look at this."

There's where you open the door. There's where you release yourself. This is the place in the two-step or the practice of the holy instant where you open your door and let the Holy Spirit or the Father in and experience yourself in your right Mind, even though it seems at the moment to be coming from elsewhere.

"I WANT another way to look at this."

Now you have changed your mind about the day, and have remembered what you REALLY want. Its purpose has no longer been obscured by the insane belief you want it for the goal of being right when you are wrong.

And the interesting thing is that you will be able to see that your goal of being right was entertained when you were wrong. You will be objective enough to be able to recognize that what you're doing won't work, because when you thought what was right is actually wrong, it's something you don't want to have anything to do with and you abandon it easily.

Thus is the readiness for asking brought to your awareness, for you cannot be in conflict when you ask for what you want, and see that it IS this for which you ask.

What is it you want? You want the result of being joined, of being in communion throughout your day asking and inviting for your Guide's Perspective to be shared with you so that you can see the day as it truly is, rather than the way you believe it is or expect it to be, based upon your decisions.

7. This final step . . .

“I want another way to look at this.”

. . . is but acknowledgment of lack of opposition to be helped. It is a statement of an open mind, not certain yet, but willing to be shown:

*"Perhaps there IS another way to look at this.
What can I LOSE by asking?"*

You see? The steps have brought you back to the initial starting point of the holy instant where you practice the two-step, where you shut up and you enquire:

*"Perhaps there IS another way to look at this.
What can I LOSE by asking?"*

Thus you now can ask a question that makes sense, and so the answer will make sense as well. Nor will you fight against it, for you see that it is YOU who will be helped by it.

It must be clear that it is easier to have a happy day if you prevent unhappiness from entering at all. But this takes practice in the rules which will protect you from the ravages of fear. When this has been achieved, the sorry dream of judgment has forever been undone. But meanwhile, you have need for practicing the rules for its undoing.

As you found out especially in the last couple of weeks, the inertia of thinking blocks you and keeps you from the results you want – healing, harmony, a clear sense of yourself as the holy Son or Daughter of God.

[So] meanwhile, you have need for practicing the rules for its undoing. Let us, then, consider once again the very first of the decisions which are offered here.

We said you can begin a happy day with the determination not to make decisions by yourself. This seems to be a real decision in itself. And yet, . .

. . . listen to this . . .

. . . you CANNOT make decisions by yourself. The only question really is with WHAT you choose to make them. That is really all.

See, when you Wake up and you decide which Guide you are wanting to companion with through the day, you are making a decision. But you can't make a decision all by yourself. So that decision will be made with either with the Holy Spirit or the voice for fear. Let's continue:

The only question really is with WHAT you choose to make them. That is really all. The first rule, then, is not coercion, but a simple statement of a simple fact. You will not make decisions by yourself WHATEVER you decide. For they are made with idols or with God. And you ask help of Christ or anti-Christ, and which you choose will join with you, and tell you what to do.

Your day is not at random. It is set by what you choose to live it with, and how the friend whose counsel you have sought perceives your happiness. You always ask advice before you can decide on anything. Let THIS be understood, and you can see there cannot be coercion here, nor grounds for opposition that you may be free. There IS no freedom from what must occur. And if you think there is, you must be wrong.

You don't have freedom to make decisions by yourself, although you may have thought you have made decisions by yourself. You haven't! But now that you know that you can listen for the Voice for Truth and now that you've experienced hearing the Voice for Truth, it becomes easier for you to recognize when you are hearing another voice and you're able to glean from the learning that it's not your voice. Now:

The second rule as well is but a fact.

Rule number two:

*"If I make no decision by myself,
This is the kind of day that will be GIVEN me."*

The second rule as well is but a fact. For you and your advisor must agree on what you want before it can occur. It is but this AGREEMENT which permits all things to happen.

You see? You've never been isolated, you've never been alone. When you have listened to the voice for fear you have been listening to an illusion, and to that extent you are not connected to anything actual. But when you listen to the Voice for Truth or the Holy Spirit, you are in agreement with Something that is actual. And that's why it can supercede and over-throw the idols, the anti-Christ.

Nothing can be caused without some form of union, be it with a dream of judgment or the Voice for God. Decisions cause results BECAUSE they are not made in isolation. They are made by you and your advisor, for yourself, and for the world as well.

You see the unity of it? You see the integrity of the union of you and your Advisor, of you and the Holy Spirit, of you and that which is nothing more than your right Mind.

The day you want you offer to the world, for it will be what you have asked for, and will reinforce the rules of your advisor in the world.

“Thy Kingdom come, Thy Will be done on Earth as it is in Heaven.”²

Whose kingdom is the world for you today?

The Kingdom of the Voice for Truth or the kingdom of the voice for fear?

What kind of day will you decide to have?

And I will add: Even if you have to decide for it over and over and over and over all day long.

What kind of day will you decide to have?

It needs but two who would have happiness this day to promise it to all the world. It needs but two to understand that they cannot decide alone, to guarantee the joy they asked for will be wholly shared. For they have understood the basic law that makes decision powerful, and gives it all effects that it will ever have. It needs but two. These two are joined before there CAN be a decision. Let this be the one reminder that you keep in mind, and you will have the day you want, and give it to the world by having it yourself. Your judgment has been lifted from the world by your decision for a happy day. And as you have received, so must you give.

Again:

Your judgment has been lifted from the world by your decision for a happy day.

And what constitutes your decision for a happy day? The decision to make no decisions by yourself, but only in communion with the Voice for Truth, which is your choice for your companion, a choice that you need to practice making over and over and over again, until it becomes a habit, and blesses you by your return of sanity, as the holy Son and holy Daughter of God.

Now, I don't usually read so much in one get together, but this needed to be expressed in its wholeness because it's the answer to any problems you encountered as a result of attempting to put into practice what we talked about last week, and overcome inertia.

I invite you to read this section over many times this coming week and let it re-assure you and let it prompt you to get back on the beam and let it provide the simple means for doing it. That is what it is here for.

I love you very much. And I look forward to being with you next time.

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

A new section:

FREEDOM OF WILL¹

How does that relate to what we've been talking about?

Well, let's back up to the Beginning. If the Beginning can be expressed as steps, we would have to say that *in the Beginning, God.*² In the Beginning, the infinite Mind. In the Beginning, the infinite Mind Moved and Consciousness was born. Consciousness is the Movement of Mind.

Being infinite, being boundless, this infinite Mind – this omnipotent, omnipresent Intelligence experienced Itself infinitely. And for lack of better words, we could say that in that Movement of Mind, which was Consciousness, God was infinitely individualized without ceasing to be One. And the individualizations were Mankind. And so in that basic initial Movement of Mind, the Brotherhood of Man and God as infinite Conscious Being came into existence and the Brotherhood of Man experienced Itself as Consciousness, because nothing of what God was, was withheld from that Movement of Mind.

And Man, experiencing what God was Being in Movement, recognized God, confirming Creation to God. And you could say, making God Whole. At the same time, in making God Whole, the Brotherhood of Man – Mankind, made Itself whole . . . still, pure Oneness.

In its activity of recognizing the Movement of God and confirming God in It, as It, the function of Being was established forever.

This conscious experience of Being which Mankind was experiencing, was that of being inseparable from – not different from – the Will of God. The Will of God was Mankind's Will. Simple . . . utterly simple. Uncomplicated.

Now, when someone of the Brotherhood joined with another member of the Brotherhood or Sisterhood and decided to agree to create definitions of Creation different from the Father's, and commitment was made by both of them to that agreement and to those definitions, a will not of God, and a will not actually of Man seemed to come into existence which we will call "human will."

I say this . . . I bring this out so that you understand that this section entitled Freedom of Will is not talking about what you think of as will that you are free to use and that you ought to be free to use, that you were given the right to use to fulfill yourselves. It does not refer to human will. It refers to the Will that is the Conscious experience of Being, inseparable from the divine Mind – God, the Living God, the present, ever present Movement of Being, called Creation.

That is everyone's actual will.

Freedom of that will? Freedom of that will is to have no other goal, no other purpose, no other intent but the Father's Will. To be perfectly at One with God as a Conscious experience of Being. I'm not speaking of Oneness with God as a divine spiritual idea, but as an actual experience that your mind will experience when it abandons human will.

You may remember that I've said in the past that the only right use of will is to choose not to use it – in other words, to abandon it.

Now this doesn't usually happen until one reaches the bottom of the barrel and loses all hope of control and authority and of any personal private capacity to generate credibility, respectability, actuality. And in that moment of hopelessness there is a silence. And usually in that silence, the one in that place calls out for help. And indeed, that constitutes the two-step – something with which all of you can employ without getting to the bottom of the barrel.

When you get to the bottom of the barrel and you give up, you are in a silence. You're in a place where mutual agreements with others are the last thing on your mind because you feel no faith in any capacity on your part to manipulate others.

And so, in this silence, which is utterly private, and you ask for help, you get help – you receive help. And in the receiving of that help, your existence is validated, not by your works, but by your Being, which preexisted any work you ever accomplished. Which means, your innocence and your perfection and the qualities that would make God love you were all preexisting the efforts you made to make something out of yourself.

Whew! What a relief. Because it makes it clear to you that joining with the Father, experiencing the confirming Love of the Father is the unavoidable actual state of your Being.

Again, it's a simple thing, not complicated like the mutual agreements you have or that you had with your Brothers and Sisters.

Now when Paul was in this very situation and gave up and reached out and we began to communicate, he was in a place where there was no self-confidence, there was no arrogance, there was utter, and to him, miserable humility. Miserable because to him, the humility held no option for accomplishing greatness or becoming credible. But nevertheless, in that humility he was able to hear.

In humility everyone can hear. But in humility one no longer finds himself relating to his Brothers and Sisters as an orphan. In actuality, one doesn't find himself relating to his Brothers and Sisters, he or she finds himself or herself relating to the divine Will, to the Holy Spirit, to the Christ or to his or her Guide, all of which serves the same function of returning you to your right Mind.

But let's take a look for a moment here at some of the characteristics of willfulness – of human will.

First of all, there are mutual agreements. Of course, agreements are something one abides by.

So agreements are rules, you might say . . . structures of behavior – structures of social behavior. And so you gather your sense of who you are and how to behave from these mutual agreements, which literally means that everyone is bouncing off of everyone's human will with the greatest amount of harmony that can be mustered up even though one is not connected with the divine Will.

Now, on top of these, we'll say, general mutual agreements there is the habit of meeting others' expectations. These others could be parents, employers, friends that you want to keep as friends. And so you engage in meeting others' expectations. And of course, that gets complicated because you've got to remember what all the different expectations are of all the different people you know.

Then there is the meeting of expectations you imagine others have. Mind you, all of these things that I'm listing involve self-consciousness. I mean that in the worse sense . . . terrible self-consciousness, unhappy self-consciousness, guilty self-consciousness, self-consciousness where you are not at ease.

And so, you imagine that others have expectations of you that they do not have. And you make yourself miserable trying to meet those expectations.

And then you busy yourself with meeting expectations and rules you have created for yourself. As you've grown up, things have happened and you've said, "Man, I will never do that!" And you make commitment to never doing that, whether not doing it fits later on or meets the need later on. And you're simply bound by a rule that you no longer realize you're bound by.

Now all of these things are characteristic of the orphan mind-set. All of these things will be abandoned in your practice of the two-step, in your engaging in the holy instant.

Think about it for a moment . . . contemplate that for a moment.

Oh yes, everyone wants to have the benefit of the holy instant. But oh, does that mean that I might have to abandon my allegiance to my brothers, my sisters, my employer, my spouse, those in the group I'm a member of? Am I going to have to stop serving them, so that I might go into the silence in the presence of humility, and ask the Father, "What is Your Perspective? I wish to draw from an agreement with You and not all of these other human wills. I wish to learn of the Truth from You and live from that joining with You."

That's what it's going to require. That's the beauty of what will be required. But nevertheless, it's something all of you will have to do.

Is that going to make everyone happy? It will make most everyone happy. But you will find those who feel that you're confirming their perspective is what they need in order to feel valid. And they will not be happy with your withdrawing from the mutual agreements that you've had with them. And you're going to have to ask yourself, "Is it worth it to continue to serve our mutual agreements? . . . or is it really going to be necessary for me to become humble, quiet, silent, centered and attentive only to the Father's Will, so that I might gather my comprehension and actual experience of Creation from the very Source of Creation because I have decided to let His Will, which is my only true will, be mine with no preference to express it in any other way. Will I join purely with the Father and from there relate with Creation from our joined Perspective?" That's the question.

More than that, that is the point of decision every one of you will have to come to. A point at which the idea of Atonement is going to have to be replaced with the willingness to actualize it, if I may put it that way, by simply ceasing to express human will, period! And make the shift.

Now I promise you that it will become easier and easier to make the shift because it will become increasingly uncomfortable not to. Why? Well, because it's time to Wake up. It's time for the human condition to yield to the divine Reality. It's time for illusion to be replaced with the Truth as your experience.

Now, from the orphan mind-set with all the infinitude of the Brotherhood of God, in which there are an infinitude of choices, Reality is reduced to a singularity. And I shared a visual of that a few weeks ago with the many faceted crystal ball, and explained how if you were to be standing on the outside of the crystal ball and the facet you were standing on was you, you would have an infinity of other individualities representing all the other facets – a complexity of communication that would have to travel around the surface of the ball on the dividing lines between the facets utterly, confusingly complicated and impossible to maintain harmony perfectly. But if one will, as it were, gently shift to the other side of the facet that's on the interior of the ball, all of the facets are still there but the intervening space is the presence of all of those facets.

And so the infinitude of Being is, I'm going to say, reduced to a singularity in which harmony is the only choice because there is no room for conflict because no duality. You see?

When you do the two-step, you shift. You shift into the purity of conscious Being.

Now, going into the book:

Do you not understand that to oppose the Holy Spirit is to fight YOURSELF?²

Remember, the Holy Spirit is your divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego. Another way of saying that, the Holy Spirit is your right Mind while you claim to have a mind of your own, and insist upon employing it in relationship to other brothers and sisters who are employing independence themselves.

Do you not understand that to oppose the Holy Spirit is to fight YOURSELF? He tells you but YOUR will; . .

. . . when you say, “Holy Spirit or Father, what is the truth here?” as part of the two-step, you’re asking to be told what your Will is. But it is wise to ask for the Holy Spirit’s Perspective or the Father’s Perspective so that you don’t get your current sense of your will confused with your divine Will which is what you’re seeking to know the truth of.

. . . He . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit . . .

. . . speaks for YOU.

You see?

In His Divinity is but your own.

The Holy Spirit is your divinity held in trust while you dally with the ego.

In His Divinity is but your own. All He knows is but your knowledge, saved for you that you may do your will through Him.

In other words, come back into your right Mind by not claiming an independent will of your own, but asking to know what is the Will of the Father, since the Father’s Will is yours and the successful answer to that question reunites you in your unity and therefore your Sanity.

God ASKS you do your will. He joins with YOU. He did not set His kingdom up alone. And Heaven itself but represents . . .

. . . what? . . .

*. . . your will, where everything created is for you.
No spark of life but was created with your glad consent, . .*

. . . you see? . . . as co-creator . . . as that which in the fundamental scheme of things is constitute of your acknowledgement of the Father, your confirmation of the Father.

No spark of life but was created with your glad consent, as you would have it be. And not one Thought that God has ever had but waited for your blessing to be born.

You – every single Son or Daughter of God – I'm going to say, participated in and is right now participating in the Movement of Creation, in spite of the fact that you're paying no attention to that at all because you're very intent upon maintaining your use of your human will to make yourself worthy, valid, recognizable, rememberable . . . memorable, in other words.

God is no enemy to you. He asks no more than that He hear you call Him "Friend."

Whew . . . that's the simplicity of it, the singularity of it. You are asked . . . you are asked to let yourself be in perfect harmony with the Father and draw every meaning of your current experience from Him.

Do you realize that if you do that, you're going to be free of mutual agreements, you're going to be free of meeting others expectations, you're going to be free of the expectations you imagine others have and terrorize yourself with? Do you realize that you're going to be free of meeting expectations and rules you created for yourself that have no foundation whatsoever in an understanding or comprehension of what's Real? Do you realize that that means you will be free of self-consciousness?

How wonderful it is to do your will! For that is freedom. There is nothing else that ever should be called by freedom's name.

Of course, from the ego's vantage point, before you engage in it and make commitment to it, it sounds like the complete loss of freedom, meaning, the loss of freedom to do whatever you please and to make things mean whatever you want them to mean without wisdom, without the benefit of clarity and I'll say, spiritual understanding.

And so it is not a happy thing when one comes to the point of having to make a choice and abandon the familiar. You see? That's inertia. But it must be abandoned.

Unless you do your will you are not free.

Again, unless you do your divine will you are not free, even though you think that expressing your human will is complete freedom.

And would God leave His Son without what he has chosen for himself?

Would God leave you without what you have chosen for yourself? No. You must choose it. You must choose for your will . . . that which is inseparable from the Father's Will and constitutes the state of co-creation forever, with the Father in the full and true conscious experience of the divine meaning of all of Creation, instead of the miserable "physical universe" definition that you're giving to Creation and binding yourself with.

God but ensured that you would never lose your will when He gave you His perfect answer.

See? And so although you're ignoring it, although you're choosing not to avail yourself of it, you have not lost it.

Hear it now, that you may be reminded of His love, and learn your will.

And experience infinite peace and the ability to be forever in harmony in the most confirming way to your Brothers and Sisters and all of Creation, and of course, to yourself . . . but yourself as the direct Expression – the Presence of the Father.

God would not have His Son made prisoner to what he does not want. He JOINS with you in willing you be free. And to oppose Him is to make a choice against YOURSELF, and choose that YOU be bound.

What it's really important to understand is, that that's where you are right now. You are opposing Him and you are making a choice against yourself. And you are choosing that you be bound. That's why you seem to be governed by the laws of sin, disease and death, the laws of physics, the laws of entropy . . . you see? . . . the laws of constant conflict, forever remaining on the fragile balance point between each other. That's misery and not your Birthright.

And when you get brought right to that edge, you realize it and at that point you generally express innate Sanity, and you give up and you say, “Father, help!” And in that act you abandon the mutual agreements, you abandon the brotherhood of orphans and you're set free because the Will of God is still the Will of God, it is still your will and when you are undefended against it, it registers with you.

Look once again upon your enemy, the one you chose to hate instead of love. For thus was hatred born into the world, and thus the rule of fear established there. Now hear God speak to you through Him Who is His Voice . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit or the Christ.

Now hear God speak to you through Him Who is His Voice and yours as well, . .

. . . because after all, the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind, held in trust while you dally with the your private, seemingly powerful, independent mind.

Now hear God speak to you through Him Who is His Voice and yours as well, reminding you that it is not your will to hate, and be a prisoner to fear, a slave to death, a little creature with a little life.

You see, it said . . .

Look once again upon your enemy, . .

. . . well, it turns out that you're your enemy that you look at without love, but with infinite undying hope that you can become loveable. And your dissatisfaction and dislike of yourself drives you unmercifully to try to accomplish the impossible and become something without being joined, without experiencing your actual divine Will that unites you with Everything.

Your will is boundless; . .

. . . remember that.

Your will is boundless; . .

. . . [chuckle] not the one you use every day, but the one that is inherent in you because of what you divinely are.

. . . it is not your will that it be bound. What lies in you has joined with God Himself in all creation's birth.

That's how incredibly meaningful you are. That's how incredible Being is with freedom of will. Freedom of will is you no longer claiming separation from the Will of the Father so that you are at One with It, and move with It, and acknowledge It for what It is and confirm God, confirm Reality.

Remember He Who has created you, and through your will created everything.

Isn't that a much more desirable experience than the self-consciousness and misery that comes from having to meet others expectations and meeting expectations you imagine others have, and being governed by expectations and rules you have created for yourself? You bet!

But again, and this is the critical point: You're going to have to be willing to disregard the distress that others express when you withdraw from the partnership you had been in with them. That is going to have to become meaningless to you so that you can release it.

At the bottom line: It may mean that you will have to rearrange your associations. You may have to let go of some of them. I will tell you, that the most effective way to contribute to the Awakening to all of the brothers and sisters – the Awakening of mankind – is to work with those who love what happens when you join in the two-step, in humility with the Father's Perspective. Because as you join with them and confirm to them the Father's Perspective and the joy of your freedom from laboring under the hassle of false expectations, the movement will spread – the movement of willingness to take that step.

Not one created thing but gives you thanks, for it is by your will that it was born.

But I will tell you, that gratitude is eternal . . . that gratitude embraces you right now, whether it's the gratitude of a wall, a rock, a jar, a table, a plant, an animal, you are constantly surrounded by and imbued with the Love of Everything. And when you feel It, you are confirming them as God Moving and rendered experienceable.

No light of Heaven shines except for you, for it was set in Heaven by your will.

You see what's being said here? You're being given a picture of what you will experience when you dare to abandon self-will, abandon self-righteousness, abandon thinking for yourself, concluding things by yourself. And in the absence of caring what your brothers and sisters think – which is your greatest downfall at this point – you will make the shift. And this view . . . this experience will be yours, it will be re-illuminated in you, because it's your right Mind that's been present all along, held in trust while you've been ignoring It.

What cause have you for anger in a world which merely waits your blessing to be free?

Whew . . . Oh yeah, anger's a hooker. It'll keep you around, it'll keep you from Waking up. "Oh yeah, I gotta get justice here. Can't go until I finish taking care of this loose end and rectifying an injustice." Oh yes you can. You really can, because there's a true view not governed by your mindsets, your imaginations. And it's available to you any moment you choose to receive it – any moment. Nothing has to be taken care of. No loose ends have to be tied up.

If you be prisoner, then God Himself could not be free.

Of course, that is an impossibility, therefore, it's impossible for you not to be free, actually. What you're "overcoming" is the illusion that you're not free. Not an actuality.

For what is done to him whom God so loves is done to God Himself. Think not He wills to bind you, Who has made you . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . co-creator of the universe along with Him. He would but keep your will forever and forever limitless.

Mind you, what this is describing is present right now. And nothing is keeping it from your sight except your insistence upon thinking for yourself, deciding for yourself, authorizing for yourself, making up what you want things to be and mean. Stop it! Do the two-step and persist in that humble silence in which the Oneness – the infinite Oneness of All – is your automatic experience.

This world awaits the freedom you will give when you have recognized that YOU are free.

What keeps you bound? The idea that you are bound, but that you on your own can free yourself. It's not true! You have to join with your Sanity, you have to join with the Holy Spirit – your right Mind – and want to know of It what the truth is.

But you will not forgive the world until you have forgiven Him Who gave your will to you.

What? Why would you have to forgive Him? Well, you have to abandon your abandonment of Him . . . you have to abandon your abandonment of Him. When you and another brother said, “Father, we want to make decisions for ourselves, we what a divorce,” you have to forgive the Father for not being what you wanted Him to be when you wanted your independence and He wouldn’t grant it. So you had to get a divorce. It’s that simple.

. . . you will not forgive the world until you have forgiven Him Who gave your will to you. For it is BY your will the world is given freedom.

The world is given freedom? Yes, the freedom to be the Kingdom of Heaven that It is, without your constant denial of It by virtue of having a different opinion about It and making commitment to your misperception.

Nor can you be free apart from Him Whose holy Will you share. God turns to you to ask the world be saved, for by your own salvation it is healed.

God turns to you. God turned to you and turns to you in every Movement of the infinite Mind that God Is, seeking your confirmation. So don’t be surprised that God would turn to you to ask the world be saved. He turns to you to see the world as It is and recognize Him and your Self in It, because that is Wholeness, that is holiness, that is your Birthright. And that is what will end illusion.

And no-one walks upon the earth but must depend on your decision, . .

. . . you can’t Wake up by yourself. You can’t become clear. You can’t experience the Atonement without every aspect of Creation being blessed by your clear vision of It. So everything depends on your decision.

. . . no-one walks upon the earth but must depend on your decision, that he learn death has no power over him because he shares your freedom, as he shares your will.

Mind you, initially there will be those who will not see that and will defy you. It doesn't matter. Work with those who do recognize it, so that in the joining the meaning of Atonement spreads.

It IS your will to heal him, and because you have decided WITH him, he is healed.

You get that?

. . . and because you have decided WITH him, he is healed.

Work with those who will decide with you.

And now is God forgiven, for you chose to look upon your brother as a friend.

You see? First God wants you to see Him truly and call him Friend, and then your brother must be blessed in that recognition.

So, as you proceed through this coming week, I'm going to ask you to watch carefully to see when you are making yourself miserable or even happy, because you are meeting others' expectations, or suffering from the expectations you imagine others have about you. And especially, watch for expectations and rules that you have created for yourself, which supersede your willingness to abandon them to hear of God or the Holy Spirit what the truth is, no matter what your brothers or sisters think, no matter what you think they're going to think and no matter what you think you ought to be doing instead.

I promise you, that if you do this, it will drive you back to the holy instant very quickly and will promote your more rapid growth, your more rapid movement out of the dream.

I love you very much. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

October 15th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well you would think after our talk last week, that the week that followed should have been . . . well, let's just say better than the weeks before. But I'm going to ask how many of you have experienced increased concern, discouragement, vulnerability?

You know, no matter where you are on the globe there are events occurring which seem not to be generated by love but rather by selfishness and greed and materialism – let's just put it that way. And all of it seems to be for the benefit of a few, at the expense of the many of which most all of you are members of. And as a result, you end up being taken advantage of and you feel it! And you know it's not right! But you're not in charge, so what can you do about it? And so you are used for the benefit of others against your will. And you know what? That's called, "being a hostage."

Now, we're going to talk about the nature of being a hostage and most of it ties in with what we discussed last time.

On a very large scale, I would wager to say that most of you felt hopeful, anticipatory, looking forward to the turn of the century – the coming of the new millennium. It bode of newness, goodness, perhaps even the Second Coming, even though the flip-side of that was that it would be the beginning of Armageddon. And so there were two conflicting concepts being applied to the new century.

Now, I did not appear on January 1st, 2000. And so one would think the Second Coming and all that it implied wasn't going to happen, and the reason for the anticipation and the positive outlook had no further justification.

Now not everyone is governed by this belief system. But most everyone on the globe is aware of the idea of the Second Coming, whether it's a part of their religious training or not. And so even if you didn't put much stock in it like others at the turn of the century, you found a shift occurred in which, I'm going to say, materialism and greed and selfishness and self-centeredness sort of took the front seat.

It's not that it was ever not there, but it just wasn't hiding itself well anymore. And as a result, it stood out where it could be observed and recognized. And it has become increasingly recognizable between the turn of the century and now. And in practically all ways, conditions of life around your globe have become difficult, tension producing, poverty inducing, and even for those who have been diligent seekers of truth – diligent students – there has been discouragement that has grown and the idea that what we're observing is part of Armageddon (the last days) is not being challenged as significantly.

You know, things aren't just difficult . . . they are, for lack of better words, evil. And I mean that in the sense that they reflect conscious calculated attempts to take advantage and to harm or to leave depleted anyone who gets in the way. And of course, in terms of selfishness, everything else gets in the way of the one who is selfish.

And so everyone else is fair game to be taken advantage of on purpose. That is cruel. That is evil. That meets the definition of sin.

Now, who likes being a hostage? Nobody. The Jews in the concentration camps found themselves to be in a situation where they were taken advantage of, and cruelty was consciously expressed and acted out. Now, none of you are in that extreme position. But I will tell you, that the Answer is the same.

Now the Course speaks of being hostage to the ego or host to God. And of course the answer to being hostage to the ego is to find a way to become the host to God. But in order to do that, you've got to find out what it is that attracts you to the state of being a hostage, and causes you to commit yourself to it obsessively without challenging it. And here's the reason:

The behavior of a hostage is based in fear. And of course the response to that is self-protection. Fear is an emotion. And the emotion of fear gathers to it the emotions of jealousy and hate. And emotions are, for lack of better words, a rich texture of . . . well again, I'm going to have to use the word, evil . . . it's a rich texture of elements that are always debilitating and destructive to the one employing them. They are designed to function that way. And they are designed to hook you and addict you to attending to them.

Emotions are different from Love. And you have to be willing to recognize that they are destructive and only destructive before you can find yourself able to abandon the hit of the emotions, so that you can shift your attention to the Father and become host to the Father. You see?

Love is not addictive. Love is not passionate like emotions are. Love doesn't energize you to action – personal action, self-satisfying action, self-increasing actions. Love is gentle. Love is a Gift. Love is attention given, so that that which is the object of Love receives something. You see? There's an entire difference. And what makes it difficult to shift, even if you intellectually know that there's a desirable thing called "shifting" from being the hostage to the ego to the host for God, the difficulty lies in the fact that shifting to the Act of Love is not dynamic and therefore, does not seem capable of protecting you, which is the mindset the hostage is in.

Now, we've discussed in the last few weeks the fact – in fact for the last few years – that there are only two vantage points: The Father's Perspective and the ego's perspective. There are only two voices: The Voice for Truth and the voice for fear. The solution is always simple. It's a choice between two things – one of which isn't even Real.

Again, the difficulty lies in the fact that shifting from self-protection – self-centered self-protection – to an outgoing embrace of love feels like the abandonment of armor of protection and therefore, it doesn't feel intelligent.

You have to come to the point of recognizing that your ability to understand the difference between selfish self-protection and inclusive extension of love – of attentive caring – is the Answer. And then act on the basis of that understanding, not on the basis of what you're feeling.

This is very important.

Now, threat seems to be all around everyone, everywhere. Threat of the loss of this, the loss of that, the loss of your peace, the loss of your life, the loss of your comfortable living, and it would seem that those who are in charge could care less. And yet you know that that is wrong.

Now, how do you look at your world, no matter where you are in it and not be governed by what you see? Well, by remembering that you have available to you two vantage points, and the one that is discouraging you, it is not the Father's Will for you to have. It's not your Birthright. It's not your inheritance and therefore it's not the actuality of You at all.

The Course begins by saying, “Nothing real can be threatened and nothing unreal exists.” Well, when you feel threatened, it does feel to you as though something exists that can be threatened. And to say that that doesn't exist doesn't make sense. And yet it's the only way out of the illusion.

Now, when you find yourself feeling like a hostage, even when you can point at the one who is holding you hostage, or the situation, or the political system that is holding you hostage, you must realize that you've been distracted to something “out there” being the cause of your incarceration – your being jailed and held until some benefit can be obtained before you can be released.

The one thing that's been forgotten is, that you're not paying attention to the role or the part you're playing, because anyone who's holding you hostage is one you've given permission to hold you hostage. You've said that their attack on you, their threats against you, their intent to prove you invalid and to cause you harm has a chance of working, when what they're saying are lies.

Why . . . why are you doing that? It doesn't matter what they're doing. Why are you agreeing with them? Why are you telling yourself that you must be afraid? Well, I'll tell you, you're listening to your ego, you're being host to your ego, which is making you hostage to it and to your fear . . . and you're forgetting to be host to God.

It's really that simple . . . it really is that simple.

This does not mean that those who are consciously trying to take advantage of you do not need to be corrected, or that all you need to do is to emancipate yourself from the dance you played into with them, giving them power they didn't have and blinding yourself to the capacity you have [if you choose to be host to God] to find the steps that undo the hostage situation and cause the attempts to hold you hostage to cease. You need the clarity that comes from outside the dance you've played with those who are holding you hostage. You need to step outside the box.

How many of you have had an experience of . . . oh, let's say, ongoing distress in your family? And the energy and atmosphere in your home for days or weeks or perhaps months has been strained and stressed and exhausting? And you'll get up, and you'll look out the window, and you'll see your neighbors chatting with each other, or planting some new flowers in their flowerbed, completely unaware of the serious distress that you're experiencing . . . and appearing to be insensitive and causing you further distress.

And yet, think about it, if you wanted to take steps to correct the situation you're in, you might choose to call a physician, or a psychologist, or a psychiatrist . . . and you would certainly want to speak to one who didn't agree with you. You would want to speak with someone who was not sensitive to your problem, so sensitive and empathetic that it disturbed them enough that they couldn't help you.

No, you want someone who is not fooled by what's fooling you, who can clearly express the steps out of the dance you're playing. You see?

Now, a few weeks ago we discussed the starting point: that the starting point is that God . . . not the hostage taker . . . the starting point is not the hostage taker, it isn't his motives, it isn't his evil acts, no . . . the starting point is that God—Spirit, is All-in-all and there is no other might nor Mind.

In other words, the starting point is like the neighbor who's planting flowers, oblivious to your need, not caring about it, but perhaps having the perspective it takes to help you out of the mess.

The Father is the starting point. And the Father is the only might and Mind. And so, when you find yourself feeling overwhelmed by the negative events that are going on and you feel like screaming out, and you feel like taking hold of the reins and changing the situation, and talking up the bad points and making sure everyone knows what's wrong, without seeking the answer, you know that you've not taken the essential step of making yourself the host for God. That's the problem!

Making yourself the host for God makes the Father's Perspective available to you to bring into play, to be the expression of in the world that changes the world through love, not more hate, not just another form of manipulative ego or evil. You see?

At some point in the past I used the illustration of the coliseums in Rome, where the gladiators came out and fought the lions. Well, some big deal to be a gladiator huh? Great sounding title! But it meant that you were a criminal, or someone judged to have been a criminal, who is held in cells beneath the coliseum until the next day when the lions would be released and they would be out in the center of the coliseum. And if they were fortunate enough to be one who killed the lion instead of being killed they could keep their gladiator title. But of course, there weren't many gladiators.

Now, what you need to remember is that outside the coliseum, two or three blocks away, people were eating in restaurants and conducting business. They didn't care what was going on in the coliseum. Those in the coliseum – not the observers, but the ones being observed – had complex social structures. They had status amongst themselves and they worked their handlers to move themselves into better positions and so on. And it was a life-style.

They did a dance with their captors, not realizing that the answer was not to constantly be the winner, but to walk out of the coliseum and go down a couple of blocks where they could have dinner and enjoy the company of others, giving not a single thought to the social and political structure of what went on inside the coliseum. They could go out where nobody cared what went on in the coliseum, where nobody cared what they went through and what their social behaviors involved and their fears. You see?

The answer to being a hostage – and you could even be a hostage, you think, to your body – the answer to being a hostage is to abandon the hostage mentality, to abandon the fear that makes a hostage a really good hostage, and as unreasonable as it seems at the moment, shifting the attitude and becoming a host to God. It's the *only way out! It is simple!

Now, I want you to remember that ideas generate fear, but emotions are the engine. So when you find the rich texture of emotions that cause you to remain committed to the unintelligent acts of hostagehood, you must make a switch. You must engage in the two-step, the holy instant. You must abandon the richness of the texture of the engine of emotions and be willing to shift into the gentle, non-coercive but infinitely blessing action of Love, by asking of the Father, “Tell me the truth about everything. I want to gather my information from You.”

That's how you become host to God. And that's how the Father comes back into His Wholeness . . . when His prodigal Son or Daughter returns to Him, acknowledges Him, and acknowledges His or Her divinity and unity is restored.

There is much to be corrected in the world. What part do you play in it? You play your part by not condemning and convicting the ones who are misleading, selfish, cruel, but rather by giving expression to the way things divinely work, to what the truth is, not as an argument against, but as an amplified sharing of what really means something . . . a sharing of the good news, where the good news isn't used as a battering ram to change the misguided ones who do indeed need to learn.

Value the truth that is revealed to you when you engage in the holy instant and join with the Father . . . becoming host to God.

It's important to understand that the Father never intended for you to be estranged from Him. And therefore, His love for you and His wish for you to come Home stands at this very moment unchanged. And so there is a promise present in the Father's intent to be there for you the moment you begin to shift your attention to Him with the intent of becoming host to Him. And it's not something you have to accomplish all by yourself.

There is nothing hopeless going on. There's infinite opportunity for truth to be more clearly seen, and there's infinite opportunity for each one of you to find ways to express the truth that are so attractive that they can't easily be denied by those who have forgotten.

This is very important.* It's important not to overlook the simplicity. It's important not to forget what the starting point is. And it's important for every single one of you to engage in this every day. Because every day the need for true real clarity that blesses all mankind becomes more needed.

I love you all. And I invite you to give your attention to the Father so that you might love each other more consistently and more broadly, more inclusively. That will change the world! No one is stuck!

Okay.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

October 20th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Every year Time Magazine publishes an article entitled, "Man of the Year" or "Person of the Year" or "Woman of the Year." And emergencies that occur that are handled very well by an individual, they may have a "Man of the Moment."

And in that vein, I'm going to suggest that each of you ask yourself, "Are you a man of the moment?" Is the you that you present to the world, the "you of the moment" or "the eternal You?"

Are you the "you of the moment" or the "Eternal You?"

Where are your feet planted? Where are you being from? If you're the man, the person or the woman of the moment, your measuring stick is the moment you're in and the events that are happening in the moment you're in . . . or it's the you that you have presented that everybody expects you to be . . . or it's the you that you want to project and have everyone believe that you are.

And all of it, without being joined, all of it without experiencing your connection with your Source – with your essential Being.

Same old subject, but it's one we need to continue to look at so as to make it easier and more realistically desirable to shift where you have your feet planted.

The you of the moment is the You of the Now. Indeed, we've talked about being in the Now. But you know what? It's not a matter of being in the intersection of "Now" with "Here." Here is a place on a timeline as you are used to looking at it. Now is a place on a timeline as you are used to looking at it – a place between the past and the future.

But you know what? The you who is the eternal You is Being in the Here and the Now that is truly identified as your attention – your consciousness. The Here and the Now is the pure awareness that you are before you have a single thought, the You that is conscious of Creation before you have a single thought about Creation, or before you decide to come up with a personal definition of your own about Creation. The Here and the Now is the pure Awareness that you always Are, that you always have been.

And when you plant your feet there, you are in effect practicing the two-step, abandoning the thinking that conceptualizes and seems to give meaning or definition to the pure experience of Being – the infinite pure experience of Being that is called, "Creation Moving."

That's what you Are – that's what the eternal You is. And that's where, through the practice of the two-step of the holy instant, you plant your feet and make the shift from the "you of the moment."

Now as the "you of the moment," every one of you looks for patterns. Even your pets – even the animals – you notice find patterns and follow the patterns. And when you find patterns, you attempt to use them as, let's say, identification markers for your identity, even when you're thrown into a new experience that you have no identification markers for and you engage in being in this new arena, we'll say, of your life. You don't let it be forever new. You look for identification markers.

It's like moving to a new town and trying to remember key intersections. And you follow certain paths as you go from place to place and you call that, “becoming familiar,” when all you’re really doing is establishing a pattern of behavior . . . a pattern of behavior that doesn’t need to be your pattern of behavior because you could pick any of an infinite other number of patterns and use them to identify your being familiar with the new territory.

Do you see what I’m saying?

The two-step – the planting your feet in the eternal Now as the eternal You – means never allowing the infinite Movement of Creation to become bound by identification markers that tell you who you are.

Being consciousness is who you Are – is What you Are. And it’s when you abandon patterns that you’ve used to make yourself feel secure, that you are free to Wake up and to see Creation for what it Is and to Know yourself for what you Are and to see it as unified – all God – all God being All including You. And You, the recognizer of It, the confirmer of It.

How? By not having applied your own definition to It. But having let It reveal Itself to You, not as a concept or memory to be stored but as a present ever fresh Movement of Meaning.

Now, Paul has had an experience for the last thirty some years of speaking with me, and my sharing what I have to say with everyone. And the happening of it as right now – the happening of it is not a matter of fulfilling a concept. Paul has no way to say what he is right now. And what he’s doing isn’t what he is, but as pure conscious Awareness paying attention in the Now of Attention, he finds himself Being this way and has for all of these years.

He is unable within himself to identify himself as, let’s say, a teacher. Because he hasn’t planned any of this, he hasn’t studied for it. What he’s doing and what comes out of his mouth isn’t calculated for a particular purpose that he developed. He is just Being. And yet, others can look and say, “Oh well, he’s a teacher of A Course in Miracles, or he is channeling Jesus, the Author of A Course in Miracles who is teaching what the Course means, or he’s a teacher of God.”

And then regardless of that, as he looks at the last twelve years where every week there has been an ACIM Study Group he could see a pattern there and begin to feel that every gathering, every meeting is going to follow that pattern because it is an ACIM Study Group. And yet, I've been throwing him for a curve for a number of months now and have jumped around in the book and have even, as tonight, not read from the book at all, discussing things of great value but not following the pattern.

And many of you, like Paul, practice linear thinking . . . very orderly linear thinking. And the linear thinking is a means of control – a means of establishing security. After all, if Paul consistently holds A Course In Miracles Study Groups, others can depend upon the idea that he will continue to do that. And so he will suffer from their expectation, or he could imagine that they have that expectation when they don't, and suffer from not living up to their expectation because of course, it's important to be consistent because that's what renders identity in form.

Identity? . . . wait a minute! Identity is conscious Awareness – Attention. Attention that is non-conceptual, which in the Silence of its capacity to Know, things become Known. And that is the Movement of Creation. That is what being the eternal You means.

Now, what I am teaching, what I am sharing with everyone and have been sharing for a number of months now is for Paul's education as well. Paul has had to learn because of the way his life circumstances are occurring that he can't be prepared to let me speak. He can't be prepared for an ACIM Study Group. And he must come up to the moment we begin to move into that space of the eternal Now and let me speak, let the unfoldment of our Being unfold spontaneously fresh. And he's having to learn to do this without fear and without doubt creeping in to kibosh the unfoldment.

In other words, he's having to trust more so than in the past. He's having to let go control.

And I'm sharing this because it's something everyone needs to do. It's part and parcel of Waking up. Part and parcel of Waking up is learning to let go of patterns that you have used to provide yourself not only with a sense of identity, but with a sense of security, safety and power – presence, if you will.

The moment you recognize a pattern, even of a so-called divine activity, the moment you recognize a pattern like that and then attempt to repeat the pattern, keep the pattern going, because that's normal and because that's what's expected of you, you have lost your innocence. You've lost the innocence of your attention. Your attention has become clouded by preconceptions, by memory and by goals that have nothing to do with the eternal You. Of course, they have to do with the you of the moment. But you want to get out of the moment. Paul wants to get out of the moment. He wants to become free of the bondage of the structures of the conceptions that he brings into play in the moment.

If you're so sure what the structures are, then when you enquire of the Father, "what is the truth here," you are going to expect the answer to conform to the patterns and the identifications that you're in the middle of, and employing, and valuing. That blocks the eternal freshness and spontaneity that Being actually is. And so you're not the eternal You. And that which is characteristic of the eternal You is invisible to you, because you're the "you of the moment," the "you of the circumstances."

Your feet are planted in the wrong place, if you want to Wake up, if you want the benefit of the holy instant. If you want the benefit of the holy instant when you say, "Father, what is the truth here?" you must mean, "Father, separate and apart from my best theories and conceptions and everything I know, what is the truth here? What is the truth beyond my best beliefs?"

Last week I phrased it a little differently. I said, "Father, tell me the truth about everything!" Imagine if you will, a cozy living room in the winter, with a fire in the fireplace and a father sitting in a wing-backed chair, with four small children in their pajamas sitting on the floor around him looking up at him, and he has a book in his hand, and the book says, "Fairy Tales." And the children say, "read to us daddy, read to us!" And now let's change the title of the book to, "The Truth About Everything,” with the children eagerly saying, “Father, tell us the truth about everything!” You see?

When you practice the holy instant, the point is not to say, “What is the truth here about this awful situation, so I can do something about the awful situation.” It’s not like getting spiritual medication to treat some actual problem. It’s a matter of stepping out of the “you of the moment” and the moment that you’re seeing yourself in, and shifting your attention to the eternal You that you Are and gathering information, gathering the wonderful truth from there, that clears your mind and causes you to stop misunderstanding, which will be accompanied with what you would call “healing,” or the resolution of the problem. But it’s not because you stayed in the world, in the moment and fixed something up there, by virtue of bringing something from the eternal Now into the moment of time. You see? That’s not what happens.

You plant your feet firmly in your divinity. You plant your feet firmly in your relationship with the Father or the Holy Spirit and you ask to know the truth about everything, because you want to Know. You don’t want to be ignorant. And you don’t want to make up answers just so you can feel somewhat secure.

“I want to know the truth about everything.” No, you’re not too busy taking care of problems to give your attention there. There aren’t other more important human problems and conditions to be attended to – more important than wanting to know what the truth is about everything. “Father, speak to me about anything I need to know.”

Do you think your Father would talk about something irrelevant to your clarification of mind and your healing? No. But don’t, in the asking of the question, provide a structure that the Father’s Answers must fill or satisfy, because you don’t know what you need to know, primarily because you think you’re the “man of the moment,” the “you of the moment.” And from there you can’t know what the eternal You Knows. And so, your feet don’t get replanted where your Being is the answer and the resolution of the problem.

Write it down and put it on a sticky note where you can see it:

“Father, tell me the truth about everything!”

. . . to remind yourself that He Who is your Source Loves you and is intent upon your being the eternal You and experiencing It and understanding It and daring to be from There with Him.

I really have only one task, and that is to, in as many ways as necessary, tell you that you are in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven, you are in the middle of the Movement of Creation. You are part of It, as with all of Creation you are divine. And you’re not experiencing It as It truly is. And that does not mean you’re insane and that you should be concerned. It simply means that you’re experiencing confusion, which can easily be replaced when you stop accepting all the definitions you’re currently using, and reach out to That which is the Movement that causes all of these things as they divinely are, not as you’re misperceiving them and saying, “Father, tell me the truth about everything! Tell me the truth about this.”

And I must say this, as I said, in as many different ways as possible, to encourage you to dare to risk the chance that doing that will indeed constitute the essential steps of your Awakening. Don’t be satisfied with the miserable way things are. And don’t assume that because there has been a pattern to them that they are actual and substantial.

They’re flimsy, totally flimsy. You give the seeming strength to them by your attention and your belief. But you can do something else. You have the capacity to say, “There must be a different way to look at this. I wonder what it is? Father, tell me the truth about everything! I choose not to ignorantly stay stuck in my ignorance. Father, tell me the truth about everything! I will listen and I will do my best not to coerce Your Answers into the structures of my current, local, finite perceptions.”

The children say, “Father, tell us the truth about everything!” And He looks down at them and says, “Okay, but you’re going to have to expect to hear what you’re not expecting to hear.”

I love you very much. This is the good news. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

October 27th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening . . . or since we have started so late, good morning. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

Tonight, we're going to be talking about Love.

The Bible quotes me as saying, "As I have loved you, love one another."¹

How have I loved you? With patience . . . with inspiration . . . with long-suffering . . . and with persistence.

The other things, the first things I mentioned are relatively easy to do. But the last one – the persistence – is the one most everyone gets hung up on and has the most difficulty with.

Now what is Love? Love is looking into your brother's eyes. There it is – that relationship, that involvement – looking into your brother's eyes and remembering God. It isn't looking into your brother's eyes and getting frustrated with him because of how crazy he is or how inconsistent he is or how hateful he is or how careless he is or how he screwed you over a year ago. Mind you, all of those things will tend to get in the way, but the function is that of looking into your brother's eyes and remembering God.

Now this is not a new subject. But the tendency to be distracted from this familiar subject occurs frequently with everyone. And the necessity is to find a way to no longer be distracted from being the Presence of Love – from wishing to be the Presence of Love and wishing to see the Presence of Love.

Now, in the Course it says:

Do the Holy Spirit's work because, you SHARE in His function.²

Not surprising considering the fact that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind, of course you SHARE in His function.

As your function in heaven is creation, so your function on earth . . .

. . . is what?

. . . healing.

Healing is the evidence of Love, the evidence of looking into your brother's eyes and resolutely, patiently, persistently remembering God.

God shares His function with you in Heaven, . .

. . . that's the function of Creation.

. . . and the Holy Spirit shares His with you on earth.

And His is healing.

When you faithfully fulfill your function of remembering God when you look at your brother or sister or any aspect of your world, your mind is whole – healed – and that wholeness blesses you and your brother together.

“Oh-h, but my brother's not worth it! He's not worth the effort it will take me.” Yes, but is your clarity worth having? Is your peace worth having? Is your recognition of your brother's divinity, which will override all of the justifications you have for not wanting to put forth the effort, worth having?

I realize that sounds sort of selfish but there's nothing selfish about wanting to be sane – to be of single Mind – not to be conflicted and in a state of war within yourself, where you're maintaining that which cannot possibly heal you or your brother.

You know, if healing isn't occurring, it's because you think there is some other alternative. Oh yes, your brother must be willing to be healed! What's the old joke, "How many psychiatrists does it take to change a light-bulb?"

I'm sorry, I forgot . . . this is Paul . . . I've lost the track there . . .

Raj: There are all kinds of excuses that can arise that will seem to justify abandoning the willingness to look into your brother's eyes and remember God. One is, that he doesn't want to change, another is, that his will is stronger than yours and you can't possibly succeed, or you lack the persistence or clarity to be able to follow through and become single of purpose, even though it is fully your intent to Wake up, to engage in the holy instant, to listen for the Holy Spirit's Guidance.

You see, if healing isn't occurring it's because you are not single of mind yet.

Nothing else will heal but Love. Any other means you try to employ to correct a situation that calls for correction will not heal. You can try being kind. You can try being nice. You can try being loving, whatever the current definition of loving might be at any given moment. But when you do any of those things without being joined with That which is your right Mind – the Holy Spirit – will be nothing but a rehearsal of an act devoid of the Meaning of being infilled with the Father's Love, which has been revealed to you by the Holy Spirit and which renders your behavior divinely Meaningful and therefore, healing.

So there is no alternative to persistence.

“Oh-h, but I’ve been loving. I’ve been asking the Holy Spirit over and over and over and the situation has only gotten worse. I must be doing something wrong.”

In fact, most of the explanations you will come up with will be brought up by your ego and will be at your expense. And I will simply discourage you further until you finally hit the bottom of the barrel and you genuinely let go. And you genuinely with all of your heart and with all of your humility ask the Father, “What is the truth here? How can I see my brother as the holy Son of God and not as what I’ve thought he was, not what I am convinced he is. Father, I acknowledge that my perspective *is not healing and cannot be healing because I’m not joined with you. And I am going to join with you steadfastly without interruption because I no longer believe that there’s any other alternative, viable or unviable, real or unreal.”

It is sometimes agonizing to try to be the presence of That which heals. And it makes you self-conscious, as I’ve said before, in a negative way – self depreciating. But the necessity is to forget about yourself and give your attention to your brother, knowing, even if its intellectual knowing, that right there where the bastard is, is a holy Son of God who couldn’t appear to be a bastard if God wasn’t right there being what that brother truly is, in spite of what he thinks he is(.) and in spite of what you might believe he is.

And you are going to stand with that with commitment. Patience is recognizable as Love when nothing else is being employed. And no other options are being held behind your back, just in case loving doesn’t work.

As I have loved you, love one another. Love one another . . . love one another . . . love one another. Let those words ring, let them echo through your day. Love one another . . . love one another . . . love one another. That’s what you are here for.

As your function in Heaven is creation, so your function on earth is healing.

Love one another. In the process be intelligent, being the Presence of Love does not mean becoming stupid. It doesn't mean overlooking what needs correction and letting bad behavior continue – letting what needs to be healed continue.

And so use intelligence so that you are not abused in the name of Love while you are persisting in love. This is important.

Love one another . . . love one another . . . love one another. Love one another enough not to allow what stands in the way of healing to persist, such as abuse or bad behavior. But remember this: When the Love that you are being the expression of is rejected, when it is not received, it doesn't mean that you have to bring something else into play, such as coercion or force or logic or any other method of manipulation, like anger or fear. There are no options to love. There are no alternatives to love.

If you have allowed yourself to be used in the process of your extending love, be Love enough to say, "No!" without anger, without emotion, without all of the results of the fear that love will not be enough.

Sometimes working out problems is very laborious. I mean that when you are consistently and persistently employing the two-step and practicing the holy instant and things seem to get very complicated because you're able to interpret all of the factors that are coming into play to make it difficult. But here's the one factor that is the only factor making it difficult, and that is, that you have been hoodwinked into believing that there is an alternative to loving your brother as I have loved you. And that one divisive thought has split your mind, and of course, that is the definition of conflict.

And the answer is not the manipulation or the coercion of your brother or sister, but the bringing of your mind back into alignment with the one and only thing that heals: Love . . . and refusing to abandon it – I was going to say, no matter what. And yet that involves an assertion of will, "No matter what, I'm not going to do this." No, that's not it. You want to do it without interruption because you know that there's nothing else that works.

This doesn't take force then or coercion. It takes the steadfast turning of your attention to the Father, "Father, what is the truth here?" or, "Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? *Help me see what my function is on Earth in terms of healing here, because together that is our function here. And you know what? I want to Wake up. And I do not want to continue in the dream of suffering. And so, I will persist in finding the way to Be the Presence of Love, because I find no value in anything else. Help me . . . help me! Help me love my brother. Help me do what puts me in the position of being the unconflicted presence of that which heals, of that which is Whole, of that which is the presence of harmony that flows freely from me to everything in recognition of the Father in it. I do not want to be conflicted, and I no longer want to believe that my brother is making me be conflicted. I want to remember that the only thing that works is love. And I want You to help me Father, or Holy Spirit. I want You to help me experience love and remain steadfastly in it with patience and gentleness . . . with fearlessness."

No matter how complicated things seem to get, no matter how many endless strings of spaghetti there seem to be, the answer is always simple: Abandon the spaghetti, turn your attention to the Father or the Holy Spirit. Have one goal: To remember how to be willing to be the avenue through which love finds expression and make no room for anything else to find its way into expression through you.

Love is the Answer. And Love is the Royal way. Hold steadfastly to this truth and don't become discouraged when it doesn't seem to be doing any good. Because it's the only thing that does heal.

Remember this and you will not take any useless side trips away from the singular intent of finding God in your brother's eyes.

I love you very much with singleness of vision, singleness of purpose, persistence, commitment. And as I am loving you, love one another. It's the Answer.

I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

November 3rd 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

Last week we talked about something very important, not just the value of Love, but the practice of Love.

I said repeatedly, love one another . . . love one another. Make a point more than you've ever done before to love one another instead of what you spontaneously tend to do when you're preoccupied with yourself or your situation or with your distress with others that you're called upon to love.

Tonight I'm going to speak about one particular practice that effectively gets in the way of loving one another. And as a result, our Gathering tonight is likely to be shorter than usual. I'm only going to discuss this one facet, because if you will pay attention closely and watch yourself during the coming week, you will find that avoiding this practice will take up a great deal of your time and will also provide the – I'm going to say – engine for transformation, for making changes so that you are more able to love one another well.

Now tell me . . . when you're involved with someone and you say something and they respond and it's obvious from what they said that they didn't hear a thing you had said, it doesn't leave you with a feeling of being loved, does it. It leaves you with a feeling of being estranged, of somehow standing outside of what appears to be a relationship you're involved in because you are supposedly communicating with each other – conversing.

And so the correction to this problem lies in making a point of staying present, staying present with those you are with so that you do not leave them feeling estranged.

Staying present is another way of saying: Look at your brother with innocent eyes. Listen to your brother with innocent ears . . . not with preconceptions.

If you will pay attention during this coming week, you will find that a lot of your time when you are involved with others is spent thinking. In fact one of the modes of thinking that you bring into play when you're with another is to interpret what your brother or sister is saying. You see? You listen to what is being said and in your mind you think, “well, based upon her background or based upon his experience, he's likely to be meaning this or that or the other thing.” And then you respond not to what they meant but to your interpretation of them.

And so you're having this conversation with yourself and leaving your brother out because you're not present with your brother.

One of the greatest disservices you can bring into play in your relationships is to interpret what another means.

Now there's a benefit to this. If you interpret what they mean based upon your assessment of their background, their upbringing, their life-style and so on, you are not present with them. Not being present with them means you're incapable of loving them. You're not in the space or the frame of mind to actually love one another.

Being present means not using interpretations to distance yourself from your brother or sister – to keep the involvement minimal and therefore less messy. You don't want to get too involved. And so you will come up with an interpretation and then usually your response will be some sort of cliché or thought that talks away what it is you thought they meant.

To love one another means really being present with them. It means listening to them without thinking. It means listening to them so that you might simply grasp what they are simply meaning. And I promise you they are simply meaning something. You might believe that there are complex psychological factors coming into play behind what they're saying and you might think that in order to be truly loving you must discern what the complexities are so that you can bring out the answers that reduce the complexities.

But once again, you're not present with them and they know it. Just like when they do that to you, they aren't present with you and you know it.

You don't need to protect yourself against intimacy by not paying close attention to what your brother is sharing about himself. You don't need that. That just keeps the separation going. That keeps the dissonance of no love going. It's not what you want. And it's not only unnecessary, it's destructive. You understand?

Interpreting what your brother means disconnects you from your brother. It disconnects you from each other. That is not the definition of loving one another.

Oh, I know . . . if you really allow intimacy to occur, things are really going to get messy, because of course – and here's your mindset – your brother is nothing but a collection of psychological habits and concepts themselves and they're unclear. And if you're going to be intimate with them, you're going to be intimate with their lack of clarity, their confusion. And you're likely to get sucked in.

Well, unless you let yourself get into that place where your fear of being sucked in can happen, you won't find yourself experiencing real clarity about your brother . . . clarity that is simple and that allows you to speak to your brother so that your brother recognizes that you understand, that you're not a stranger, that you're not from some other planet or some other foreign mindset. And so you don't have the chance to find defenselessness brought into play by virtue of the innocence with which you're being present with your brother or sister. And so, no healing occurs.

And if you thought that your brother in his confusion was stubborn, you will be further convinced that he is stubborn because he obviously doesn't recognize the value of what you're saying. Of course he doesn't, because again, you're responding to your interpretation rather than being in response to an actual connection with your brother in the simplicity of his Being.

Now all of you are going to have to get past this. You are going to need to pay attention so that you can see that, indeed, you do this. You will be amazed to find out what kind of clarity and simplicity will come forth from your involvement with others when you abandon indulging in interpreting what they mean.

Be with your brother. And when your brother says something, whether it's pleasant or unpleasant, no matter what it is . . . when your brother says something, remember that you're not there to immediately think of an answer that addresses what you think they said. Let yourself hesitate before you open your mouth and say a word. And remember that unless you are willing to look with innocent eyes or hear with innocent ears, you're not going to have a fair chance of understanding.

You know, sometimes all that's needed is to be understood.

Sometimes providing a correction is not what heals. Sometimes innocent non-judgmental presence that can be felt as being genuine is all it takes. It certainly is all it takes in order for a meaningful relationship to grow that isn't weighed down with your great intellectual capacity to reason and interpret. You see?

Love . . . love means being with your brother, not knowing how to see his innocence but realizing that that is your purpose in that moment. And that the way to experience it is to stay out of the way yourself and let your . . . well again, your innocent vision provide you with the means to be in your peace and in your genuineness from the tips of your toes, because you have no agenda, no agenda created by your fantastic interpretations.

Love one another. Love one another by neglecting to insert your thinking in between the two of you. It's that simple. But you're going to have to risk the chance of getting that intimate might cause you to be in a place you don't like because your interpretation of it lacks clarity, period.

Do it! So that you might find that in your innocence and in your genuineness, your brother's innocence and genuineness can come forth in ways you could never have logically or intellectually imagined or come up with as a result of great skill at interpreting.

Simplify your involvements with each other by daring to be present with each other without thinking, but with a desire to Know the truth – to know what' really happening.

It's an easy practice to engage in. Nothing complicated about it. Every single one of you can do it. Don't even ask yourself why you're not, when you find that you're not doing it. Just take it as a signal that you need to return to your innocent perceptions by abandoning interpreting your brother.

A simple lesson. It will keep you busy. And it will cause a lot of growth – a lot of learning – which will move you beyond anything you thought you could accomplish in a week. And I will be with you, all of you, as you go through your week, loving you and supporting you in your fearlessness at practicing innocence.

I love you very much. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

November 24th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

I'm going to talk about a simple subject tonight. Certainly one we've talked about before. It's the subject of Love. Not Pollyanna love, not airy-fairy impractical love, but grounded dynamic healing Love.

I spent quite a bit of time a few weeks ago sharing the idea, Love one another. This idea is still of great importance. And to understand its meaning is becoming imperative. Imperative because of disaster? No, but imperative because there is simply no justification for not experiencing the fulfillment of the practice of Love any longer. And there is a need for its blessing.

It used to be that there would be hot spots of distress around your globe, but they would be a very small percentage of the general movement of life on your globe. But today distress, violence, greed, anger, stress itself is present in about every quarter of the planet. And the tendency is to look at it and say, "Oh, these are the signs of the end times." And in a rather perverse way, that recognition is enjoyed in the sense that it means that the illusion isn't going to last much longer . . . as though it's a sign that no matter how rough it gets, no one will have to endure the illusion much longer: It will suddenly, magically be over for everyone because these are the "end times" that have been predicted and described.

Be careful, it's not going to be magically over. It isn't a movement pre-designed that was set into motion that would occur whether anyone liked it or not . . . and everyone would simply find themselves governed by this movement which would bring about the end of illusion.

It's not true. So don't be too happy.

Now, let's also be practical. The signs of the end times are truly no different from the signs of the orphan mentality – the orphan mindset, the ego frame of reference. The signs of the end times are simply the selfishness, the self-righteousness, the attempt to make something valid out of oneself when one has divorced himself or herself from his or her Source, the Father. It's back-biting, it's controlling, it's manipulating at the expense of others, climbing on others' shoulders to get to the top so that one can be the greatest or the most significant, even when it comes to spiritual matters, and let us say, promoting Awakening.

Many studying the Course, and others studying other religious books, are grateful that in these end times they have the most advanced means for providing correction to one's greedy, manipulative self-serving selfish brothers and sisters.

It is a mean-spirited attitude. Why? Well first of all, it isn't your brothers that need correction. It's their illusions. It's that simple. Remember that. It isn't your brothers who need correction. It is their illusions, their misperceptions.

So don't take pleasure in correcting your brothers. Don't take pleasure in having the means to correct your brothers, to call them on the carpet, to make it perfectly clear to them where they are out of sync. Now that is attack. It isn't Love.

Now, I want to remind you that Love is not a means of control. Love is what occurs when control is abandoned, when self-righteous self-assertion is abandoned and one says, “Father, what is the truth here about my brother? What is the truth here that needs to be known?” One shifts into a yielding place where Love, by virtue of its very nature, transforms. Love is the universal solvent, as it were, which dissolves everything unlike itself, without dynamics to it, without force, without stress, through inspiration. Inspiration softens the heart. Inspiration softens and illuminates the soul. That's the nature of Love. And the call is to Love one another.

As you look around and the world situation seems to call for the exercise of forceful control to bring things back into order, you must catch yourself, because in the act of taking control, you will become thoughtless. You will act off the top of your head, you will act out of habit, you will act out of your conditioning without ever having taken the step – the two-step – of stepping beyond your conditionings, reaching beyond your best judgments and saying, “Father, what is the truth here? Father, when I look at my brother or my sister in the way they are acting, I can't see the Holy Spirit there. What is the truth?” And the Father says, “The truth is, that their behavior doesn't govern what you see, your Vision does.” Wow . . .

Love turns the attention in a direction away from the tendency to belittle and scold and correct a brother for his ignorance. And the correction ends up being punishment of some sort. You see? But the Father says their behavior doesn't govern what you see, *your Vision does.

Well, that changes everything. That puts you in a position of releasing your brother as the focus of your attention so that you might turn it towards your Vision. You know, when you ask to know what the truth is here, when you ask to know what the answer is, and I've said this before, it will never be a description of the problem. It will never be a description of the misperception.

Someone is behaving in a manner that could be expressed as two times two equals five. There's a call for correction. Is a call for correction to say, “Stop doing that! What an idiotic thing to do! Now start over again and do it right!” No, the one having made the mistake does not need to be corrected. The answer, which is four, needs to be provided together with the explanation as to how that conclusion is arrived at from two times two. You see? The answer that Love provides when one engages in the two-step is the one that illuminates and puts at rest everything because clarity is experienced and recognizable.

Oh-h . . . that means more involvement than you thought, because you thought you were listening and hearing how to identify where the mistake was being made and then finding a way to get the person to change, when listening for the answer means listening for that which makes clear the truth so that there isn't any resistance to it.

“Oh dear, well that means that I'm obviously going to have to listen more significantly, more deeply than I have in the past. Because if I need to listen for the answer that is clearly true, that's easily recognizable, Oh, that might be a problem. That might be more than I am capable of. When I look at my brother or my sister, it certainly looks to me like there's going to be a lot of resistance and they're not going to easily recognize the truth.”

Well, there you are. You're letting their behavior and your perceptions of it govern how you feel, instead of your vision. And that's not your Vision, that's not your clarity.

Now, you know what? The answers are simple. One of the answers is, “Love one another” instead of judging and enjoying correcting another . . . *Love one another.

The problems aren't really complicated. The complications arise when great defense seems to be needed. And so the defense becomes complicated and confusing because that provides an armor that becomes difficult to penetrate. But Love, well, when you're willing to look at your brother or sister and want to know what the truth is, with an acknowledgement that they are worthy of having the truth no matter what behavior they're presenting, well, you put yourself in a different context. You put yourself in the context of Reality. You put your attention in the context of the Father, the Father's Perception – the Truth.

And you know what? You're as worthy of the miracle of the answer as your brother or sister is. You deserve to experience the simple answer that changes everything. But you're going to have to remember this one simple thing: When you ask for the answer, you must understand that the answer will have to be recognizable because of its utter simplicity, so that it will not be able to be deniable and your brother can with relief say, “Thank you, I am full of gratitude.” You see?

That’s how the end of illusion happens. That is what will mark the end-of-the-end-times. Nothing automatic is going to happen to you or anyone else, where suddenly everyone is Awake without their having wanted to know more than they currently knew and reached beyond their current best judgments and even their current best spiritual understanding.

It says in the Course:

You will never give this holy instant . . .

. . . because of course, every moment is the holy instant utilized or not . . .

You will never give this holy instant to the Holy Spirit on behalf of your relief while you are unwilling to give it to your brothers on behalf of THEIRS. For the instant of holiness is shared and cannot be yours alone. Remember then . . .

. . . it’s so simple.

Remember then when you are tempted to attack a brother, that HIS instant of release is YOURS.

And likewise yours is his. But you can’t get it first and then give it to your brother. You have to extend it to your brother first and then you get to keep it. It’s simple.

The politicians, the governments, oh-h, the solutions of austerity, the weather conditions . . . all of these things seem to justify withholding love. All of these things seem to justify waiting before you honor any of these things enough to be present with them wanting to know the answer. The answer being, that which illuminates fully the truth so that there is no misunderstanding and there is no temptation to hold onto ignorance. The answer is what is obvious.

Again, all of this is going to require involvement, your involvement.

You know, in the “Pogo comic strip” in the late Sixties, a statement appeared that continues to be remembered to this day: “We have met the enemy, and he is us!” Well today we could say, “I have met the enemy and he is me.” Why? “Because I’m insisting upon looking at my brother’s behavior and basing my conclusions about him on his behavior and I’m totally ignoring the investigation of my Vision of genuinely and honestly looking at my capacity to knowing the truth and wish to know it because my brother is the holy Son of God, my sister is the holy Daughter of God and deserves that kind of attention from me.” You see?

And then you stick with listening, even if the answer doesn’t seem to come easily. You stick with it until your willingness to hear the answer is complete . . . until you have no other aces up your sleeve that you can bring into play before you yield completely . . . gentle down . . . soften up completely. You see?

So, hey, hopefully the end times are here. But don’t jump to conclusions based upon appearances or behaviors. Recognize that what you are experiencing is simply providing you with the opportunity to want to know the truth, to want to know the actual answer: Four as the answer to two times two instead of five, together with an understanding as to how that happens, how that correct answer is arrived at, because it is simple and it is understandable.

You know, you can go into a poverty stricken area of a large city and you can find all of the elements that could be identified as end-of-times elements, but because they’re located in a rather confined space one would not say these are “end times.”

Ego dynamics, whether global or individual or in a community, are all the same. And they’re all constituted of ignorances which have answers. And all of the elements identified with the end times will cease as soon as each one of us decides to practice the two-step, whether we can see our brothers’ or sisters’ divinity or not, so that we might be able to bless them with the answer which brings equilibrium to them and to you.

So don't wait too long for the end times. Don't wait for the Rapture that isn't going to come until you've played your part.

Pogo said, "We have met the enemy and he is us!" Today we can say, "We have met the Savior and he is us. I have met the Savior and he is me." But not unless you care enough to love your brothers, to love one another, exonerating them from whatever they believe they've done and whatever you believe they've done, so that in innocence you can listen for the answer that is the specific release, but has the meaning "This is my beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased."²

Love one another.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

December 22nd 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

It is three days before Christmas. And so tonight I have a Christmas message. And in order to give perspective, we will begin by going back in time to the time of the Exodus from Egypt, when Moses led the Israelites out of bondage. And I'm bringing this up because the advent of the Christ appearing on earth was the beginning of the Exodus from bondage to a false perception of one's self and a false perception of the Kingdom of Heaven.

After crossing the Red Sea and no longer being pursued by the Egyptians, there came a point where the people grew restless – their faith being tested. And Moses took leave and went up onto a mountain and did the “two-step.” He silenced “human will” within himself and in so many words said, “Father, what is the truth here? What needs to be known?” And he listened. And the product of the listening came forth as what have been called, “The Ten Commandments.”

Let us say, the understanding of what humanity means as lived by those who embrace it as an integral part of escaping the bondage of illusion. And Moses came back down from the mountain with the tablets that the Commandments were engraved upon. And when he came back to the people he discovered that their faithlessness had taken over. And that they had resorted to idolatry and debauchery and immoral behavior and he believed what he saw!

He saw fault. He saw immorality. He saw people who didn't deserve what he had gone up to the mountain to get and brought back, because he was convinced by what the people were convinced of about themselves. And he joined them in that faithlessness and threw down the tablets and broke them so that the Commandments were lost.

Now the question is: Is seeing what is wrong – identifying it, labeling it – is that the answer that corrects the wrong? Absolutely not! And so there was no way to proceed because the freedom, the Birthright of man could not be achieved through faithlessness and doubt and immorality.

And so Moses had to go up to the mountain again. In other words, he had to stop regarding what he was convinced he saw. He had to abandon the negative assessment of all of those who were following him into freedom out of bondage. He had to let go of that and turn his attention elsewhere. He had to turn his attention to where the truth was available to experience – to Know and to be from.

And so he did the two-step again. And this time when he came down from the mountain, he did not abandon the Vision the Father gave him, and he proceeded to lead the Israelites into the Promised Land. There is a simple but profound lesson in this. The correction of illusion does not occur as a result of making a reality out of it – pinpointing it, labeling it, judging it, being offended by it and in self-righteousness, attempting to get rid of it.

That behavior is behavior that arises out of faithlessness, not out of the result of practicing the two-step. Because practicing the two-step uncovers what is truly true. It uncovers the Good News. It uncovers that which is worth making a joyful noise about. Because it does not confirm what isn't real. You see?

And in the absence of that confirmation and the Vision of a, for lack of better words, new horizon, the movement into freedom is assured.

And this is the important point. And this is the Message of Christmas. This is the Gift that the appearance of the Christ brought and gave to the world. It's important.

It's important not only because the living of It involves the right use of your mind that heals, it keeps the attention from staying bound in the orphan mentality – in the separated tiny, independent, Sourceless, meaningless experience of being.

Now, I want you to contemplate my life from Christmas day on. And I want you to notice how much of my time was spent calling out the sinners, pointing out their sins . . . chastising them, correcting them. You can easily understand that if my attention had been given there, there would have been no healings. There would have been no transformation, because none of that would have revealed the divinity of every single man, woman and child on the planet. And it wouldn't have uncovered the Kingdom of Heaven that everything actually is, but nobody sees because they are convinced by their faithlessness, that it's just a material world and universe. There is no potential for healing or correction there.

My life did not convey that message. My life, my words, my brotherhood uncovered the fact that you are my Brothers and Sisters. That we are One divine family with one Father: God. That we, each one of us . . . every one of us is holy.

Now there's a general belief that God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son to what? To save every sinner on the globe because everyone on the globe had been born in sin?

That's the wrong emphasis. That was not my purpose. And that is not what I engaged in. I engaged in providing the Vision which illuminated faith because it re-awakened in each one the glimmering memory of his or divinity, of his or her divine worth.

If I had magnified everyone's poor assessment of themselves, it would have further depressed everyone. It would have exacerbated the problem, not resolved it.

Now, when Moses came back down from the mountain, the people were still behaving badly, were still expressing their faithlessness. But this time he didn't believe it. And in so many words, in his mind, the declaration was, "tain't so! tain't so! This is not the truth! I will not be swayed by what isn't true, by what isn't so." And he wasn't.

And the message of my life and the reason for my arrival on what you call "Christmas" was to uncover the fact that it "tain't so" that you're sinners. It "tain't so" that you're just mortals. It "tain't so" that you are unholy messes.

That's the gospel. That's the good news that lifts you out of your poor assessment of yourselves and allows you to let your mind be inspired with the truth about you – you holy Son of God, you holy Daughter of God – who are my Brothers and Sisters – equals in actuality.

Whatever else you believe . . . "tain't so!" And my purpose is to convey over and over, "tain't so!" Don't you dare believe it! Don't continue to carry that negative false self-assessment forward with you any further. "Tain't so!"

Now one of the reasons I'm bringing this up is because you all know that you are suffering from false perceptions of the Kingdom of Heaven and of the holy Sons and Daughters of God that are your Brothers and Sisters, and because that is presented to you daily, you need to remember to daily acknowledge, "tain't so!" rather than succumbing to the invitation to believe what tain't so and joining in reaction at that level of divine ignorance. That's the point.

If you do not take that step of declaring that it "tain't so!" the fact that it isn't so can't manifest. In other words, the truth of the holy Son of God and Daughter of God that each of you Are can't emerge as a conscious experience for you or the Brother or Sister that you are acknowledging it about. Healing will not occur.

Now, all of you at this time are very well aware that communication at all levels is being abused. Its purpose is to deceive. It does it through insinuation, and the suggestion that what is said is factual without ever backing it up with facts. And because it is consciously designed to manipulate your mind for reasons you have no awareness of at all, you must be wise so that you don't become used for purposes that are destructive to you or those ones or those things that deceitful information is being shared about.

Now, I can hear someone saying, “Well, what if the information can be backed up with facts?” Well, hey, Moses could see with his own eyes that the people had created calves made of gold and jewels that they were worshipping. He had the proof. It was a fact.

Well, that suckered him in. He bought it hook, line and sinker and said it is true, “these people are not worthy of the holiness of this movement of freedom that they're in the middle of. I am angry with them!” And he lost his divine perspective.

But again, after collecting himself and engaging in the two-step again and turning to the Father and saying, “What is the truth here?” The Commandments – what was needed at that time – were given again. And he brought them down and this time the behavior didn't prove anything of value to him and he knew, “tain't so!” and he didn't buy into it hook, line and sinker and proceeded to lead the way out of that ignorance and out of that faithlessness into the Promised Land. In other words, the Answer – the clarity, the wholeness – that's the message.

When it comes to literature, or any “good story,” there is always a protagonist, there is always the good and the bad balancing off of each other, attempting to overcome each other. And the more conflict there is, the greater potential there is for the story to become great. And everyone likes it. Everyone is turned on by a good story, a story of real conflict in which good does triumph.

But of course, now and then, there has to be a story where evil triumphs so that no one gets to feeling too good, and stays bound to the dynamics of good story telling.

Why am I bringing this up? I'm bringing it up because there are suggestions coming from, we'll say, metaphysical or spiritual sources that you are all coming into times of great potential disaster. And in light of that, directions are being given as to how you can play a part in overcoming the evil. You see? And everyone looks at it and says, “Wow, these are the elements of a good story!” The bigger the evil, the bigger the disaster that’s ahead of us, the greater the truth will be, the greater the reality will be that will override it. And I am going to take my part in what? The drama – the conflict. You see?

And you get sucked in, hook, line and sinker, into a fabric of conflict which you are familiar with and from which you are able to glean a sense of purpose that is gratifying and self-satisfying and causes you to bring commitment to the conflict – to your part in the conflict.

And no one is saying to the whole thing, to the novel – the story that’s unfolding – “tain’t so!” Nobody is saying, “We don’t need a good story or a bad story, we want to be out of the realm of story and the necessary conflict which stories involve.”

So, you say, “What if I have proof that our leaders or our governments or other governments or other leaders are dishonest and I have proof of it?” And not unlike that, the question is, “What if my sister or brother or myself has terminal cancer? I have the facts, it is the truth!”

Well, it’s the same call: “Tain’t so . . . tain’t so . . . tain’t so!” You don’t actually have to yell it, I’m being firm about it because until there is an acknowledgement that it “tain’t so” the illusion of it can’t collapse, its seeming reality can’t fade, so that what is true about your leaders or your governments or your banking systems, and their real humaneness can come through.

The message of Christmas is: You are my Brothers. You are my Sisters. I am the Christ. You are the Christ. We are equals held perfectly, immaculately in the Mind of the God no matter what you might think you are or believe you are. No matter what your apparent history seems to state about you, you are being brought out of a state of bondage by the uncovering of the fact that the bondage is illusory not because it’s real but you have a powerful enough God-given truth to overwhelm it and destroy it. Is that clear?

The correction of the illusion lies in the realization that the illusion has no actual presence. It “tain’t so!” at any level. That’s the message of Christmas. It re-introduces humanity into the conscious experience of Being, together with its absolute underlying divinity – yours.

You are being constantly invited to hold your Brothers in disrespect. Because whoever's inviting you to do it, has a profit to be made from your believing it, has a benefit to be enjoyed by the downfall of whoever they are discrediting.

Again, whether they back it up with facts or not, there is strain occurring around your globe as the truth is being twisted and bent into untruth so that you might validate the untruth and stop being the Presence of That which carries forward the movement out of Egypt, out of bondage, out of mortality.

The message of Christmas is one of joy. And the question is, how are you going to use your mind now that you know that you are the holy Son or Daughter of God and that every single one of your Brothers and Sisters is also. And that you all deserve to experience your sinlessness, your guiltlessness. Because you could never have become what you have been convinced you are, or that you have convinced yourself that you are without ever referring back to the very Source of you – your Being.

The message of Christmas says: Don't be taken in by appearances. Don't be taken in by "the facts," if they don't return you to the mountaintop. If they don't confirm to you the need of not abandoning the Vision that the Father provides of your divinity and your Brothers' divinity. You see?

You're here to be the leaven that leavens the whole lump, that lifts and inspires everything above and out of the state of illusion – the idolatry, the lasciviousness, the immorality.

The Gift of Christmas is Love. Plain, pure and simple. It is Love that insists upon not being sucked in. It is Love that causes you to be unable to say, "It tis so, when it tain't so!" And to have the nerve and the guts and the commitment to reverse the suggestion that presents itself to you that says, "you have justification to be disturbed and you have justification to blame your brother, punish your brother and use whatever force it takes to get him to change his behavior."

Well, I'll tell you something: If you walk around pointing at everyone and saying, "you're a sinner...you're a sinner...you're a sinner...you're a sinner, I'll have nothing to do with you until you stop being a sinner, you sinner." If you do that, everyone is stuck.

You've got to ask yourself where you're giving your attention? Are you looking down or are you looking up? Are you looking at things in your immediate vicinity or are you looking at the horizon? Are you looking from a limited negative viewpoint or the infinite vantage point that the Father provides you with and that its worth your reaching for at every moment.

Be careful. When you bandy about words that characterize, or shall I say mis-characterize the holy Sons and Daughters of God who are in your world at this time, you don't have any other brothers and sisters to have a corrected vision of. So work with the materials at hand.

Oh, I know . . . you could interpret that to mean I'm saying "work with the lousy materials you have at hand and refine them." No. The materials you have at hand no matter how negatively you are assessing them are the Sons and Daughters of God – the holy ones that are worth your denying the illusions about.

If you go around, as I said, saying "you're a sinner...you're a sinner" you keep everyone else looking down, instead of lifting up their minds to the infinite view. You're here to do something more than identify and peg problems and illuminate them. You're here to see it like Moses did and if you're taken in by it, return to the Father, go back to the mountaintop – do the two-step – so that your Vision is coming not from the world, but from the Mind of God that is your real Mind.

Because therein lies the Answer that you can share with your brother that is of such Meaning that he gladly lets go of his poor self-assessment because the truth is so much more meaningful. But if you're going to do that through the right use of your mind, you're going to have to acknowledge that the illusions you see simply aren't so and stop energizing them.

Be wise. Deceit has not always been the primary means of motivating and manipulating the population. But with the information explosion so that it's not only through mass media, but through the internet, it is easier than ever before for mis-information and dis-information to be given. And for those who like a good story to be that which sucks them in, be alert! you holy Son and Daughter of God, so that you don't get sucked in and you don't leave the Father's Vantage Point. You don't abandon the two-step. And you remember that in any way, that you can assess an illusion to be real and justification for condemnation or self-righteousness, you have lost your perspective. And the Promised Land will not be reached.

Love your brother. Love one another. If indeed your brother is engaging in activities that are a result of his poor self-assessment and he's experiencing bondage, you cannot just say, "his behavior is wrong. He's lost. He doesn't deserve the truth."

The call is for you to refuse to receive the invitation to believe that any part of the illusion is real. Because the Answer does not lie in whatever follows that acknowledgement.

The message of Christmas is: Love one another you holy Sons and Daughters of God as I love you, as the Father loves you, as the Holy Spirit loves you. Any justification for anything else will not heal. But your commitment to the truth that you're willing to listen for by going beyond the appearances will heal, will cause the Promised Land, the Kingdom of Heaven to be revealed to you here and now.

How are you going to be? How are you going to behave? I have suggested before that you express the wish to see . . . "I wish to see the evidence of Love. I wish to be the evidence of Love. I wish to see the more of what God is Being right here than what I'm seeing."

These desires place your attention in the infinite vantage point on the horizon as it were. And it is your Birthright to be experiencing the result. You must care enough about your brothers to find a way to go within and do the two-step, engage in the holy instant because you want to see the guiltlessness and nothing else of your Brother, of your Sister.

Sticking with that desire and that commitment is the being of the statement that the illusion, “tain’t so!” and *it is the Answer.

May your holy days be full of glory and joy because you’re finding release from finding fault as though that’s an integral part of Waking up – of embodying the very reason the Christ appeared on that first Christmas.

I love you all. Love one another.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

December 30th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, for all practical purposes it is the last day of the year. Tomorrow is New Year's day . . . a day when many do their best to turn over a new leaf or make commitments to change habits.

Well, in a way that's what we're talking about all the time isn't it.

But I'm going to invite you all to re-listen to or re-read the transcript of our meeting last week, the Christmas Message because it's simple, so simple. And then I would invite you to let the Meaning of that accompany you as you move into the New Year.

Love one another. I'm re-emphasizing that again this week and for the coming year because I will tell you, it is the one transforming element that is called for in order for Awakening to occur. Love one another. I went into some detail about abandoning your perceptions of your Brother or your Sister and your perceptions of yourself. Abandon whatever limited, demeaning insulting definitions you have applied to yourself or others because they do not fit you, you holy Son or Daughter of God.

What do I do every week? I love you by reminding you not of your sins, but of your holiness. And I do that so that the very concept of holiness becomes less and less foreign to you, as relates to you.

And in this way, you more and more easily embrace the idea, which is actually the divine fact that you are the direct expression of God. You are His beloved Son or Daughter in whom He is well pleased because you are not other than Himself/Herself expressed and expressing.

Now when you are engaged in loving one another, you're not engaged in fault-finding. You're not even engaged in correcting one's faults. You're engaged in asking the Father, "What is the truth about my Brother, what is the truth about my Sister – the God's honest truth about them – the truth about what is Real about them, not the truth about why they have such a negative impression of themselves, or why I have such a negative impression of them."

No one needs to listen to a long litany of mistakes that you have made or that others have made in order to understand why they are confused and behaving badly. Because in that, there is no inspiration, there is no realization . . . there is no Revelation. There is nothing to take what is being experienced to another level where confusion is not governing and where thereby vision clears. And the good news, the truth about your Brother or about yourself registers with you and registers with them, releasing them from the bondage of your and their false perceptions.

Now after everything I said last week, the question could arise, "Yes, but when something needs to be corrected, how do you correct it?"

When Moses came back down from the mountain the second time and the people were still practicing their faithlessness, he was not moved by it this time. He did not believe their unbelief. He did not join them. And one could say, "Well, if he didn't correct them, how did he change the situation?"

Well, first of all, I want to point out that the Commandments that he came down with all dealt with the poor activities that they were engaged in as a result of their faithlessness, all of which had to do with having false gods and not relating to each other with love, but rather with usury and lasciviousness and negativity. And although Moses threw the tablets down the first time, he held onto them the second time. And he did not hit them over the head with the tablets.

The tablets, more than being Commandments that perhaps uncovered the inappropriateness of everyone's behavior, more than that, they were the evidence of an element that had been missing, that the people had lost sight of. And that was that they were not alone. God was still with them. You see?

What did Moses do to change them? Well he didn't address what they were doing. By listening, by going up into the mountain top, hearing and experiencing the Vision provided and coming back down and holding onto It, his presence and his actions revealed more clearly than anything else, that everyone was still loved and companioned with, and their loss of faith was baseless. You see?

He did not come down and rail at them about this bad behavior and that bad behavior and what an awful kind of person it made them. He came down evidencing the fact that they were accompanied still by the Father. They were not alone. You see? The answer was something entirely different from any act of correction of any particular behavior. And this is what it is so important to understand.

Now, oh . . . it could seem, and I mean this not just for this day and age, because what I'm going to describe has going on forever, but it could seem that because of the unscrupulous nature of the ego, that it would be wise to be constantly on the watch for evil so that it can be ferreted out and gotten rid of, so it will not spoil everything like the one apple that will spoil the barrel. And so one can justify becoming a watchdog, as it were, always on the alert for evil, always on the alert for the opportunity to correct a mistake.

Well, that can get you into trouble. It's like a child, upon learning that there really isn't a Santa Claus, going through the first Christmas after learning that, making sure to tell everybody that there is no Santa Claus. And when everybody is opening up the presents and they're so happy, he says, "But there is no Santa Claus!" Who turns the day into a wretched day for himself by his constant rehearsal of what he thinks is the truth, as though it's important to know that.

And yet in the ensuing year before the next Christmas, that child realizes that it didn't matter whether Santa had ever been real, because what made the day outstanding was the love and the caring and the thoughtfulness put into giving and shared with all of the members of the family and friends. And that was real. And that was what made the day special.

And so there was no need to make pronouncements of the truth that there is no Santa Claus. Just as there is no need to be a constant watchdog for evil so that you can find it and get rid of it quickly.

And somebody says, “Yeah, but what do you do about evil?” Well it’s the wrong question. You don’t do anything about the evil that you see. You do something about the way you are seeing.

Earlier on in the Course, we spent quite a bit of time discussing the fact that your attention activates the sending out of messengers, messengers that go out to find and return to you with confirmation of whatever it is you are wishing to see. And so if you are wishing to see evil, the messengers that go out with you have that task, that is their charge and you can count on it, they will come back with confirmation of it whether it’s truly there or not.

And so you must understand that you are responsible for what you see just as Moses was. Moses wised up so that when he came down the second time, the messengers that were sent out looked for confirmation of those who were quite capable of understanding the Commandments and a feeling that they were not alone — that they were loved.

And how do you suppose he rallied them to move forward? Not by making an issue out of their behavior. You can imagine that he might have said, “Okay everybody, now that we have this security in terms of a code of behavior that supports and nurtures and values the human being, let’s pack up the golden calf and let’s pack up the pots and pans and the tents and let’s move on because the Father is leading us to the Promised Land.

The absence of judgment from Moses and the clarity as to a Vision of direction was all that was needed for everyone to rally and move forward. You see?

Gee, heaven help the watchdog who’s going to find the tares and the wheat, who happens one Spring to head from Los Angeles to New York through the plains states, who drives for hours through fields of wheat that might have tares in them so that he must stop at every one and check and root them out when it's almost impossible to distinguish which is which at that point, . . . but oh-h, he's doing a great work.

No. You don't try to separate the tares from the wheat until it's time for the harvest and you can easily see which are which or even if there are none. You see?

You can waste your whole year this coming year trying to find error, trying to find evil, exposing it and trying your best to get rid of it through the use of one form of force or another.

Now that's the equivalent, I'm going to say, of having lived in an orphanage where there are codes of behavior, mutual agreements that have been established that everybody abides by and everyone controls each other with and usury and abuse and manipulation goes on constantly because everyone is jockeying for a better position either in the social order or to be able to shift to a room on a higher floor with a better view or whatever. And one happens to humbly reach out for help beyond the agreed upon code of conduct and Guidance is experienced and a different perspective is provided.

The simple fact is, that the different perspective, because it reflects the Father's Will and the Father's Intent and because it reflects what is *Real when embraced by the one listening, causes his perspective to change . . . moves him to a new vantage point that no longer elicits the responses from his fellow orphans that had occurred before and he becomes inspirational. And he doesn't have to call anyone down or criticize them or bully them into changing their behavior, because it's easy for them to catch the Vision, to catch the feeling and join in a new perspective.

Again, healing does not occur because a more powerful truth has been obtained that is capable of overwhelming the illusion that seems to be real. Healing occurs because the intent to see what isn't real is abandoned. The messengers are no longer being sent out. The intention is not looking for fault, is not looking for error, is not looking for evil and so the conformation of evil ceases to come back.

The enemy doesn't need to be coerced into a new behavior because the enemy by virtue of being Loved from the Father's Vantage point through you is relieved. Defense is no longer called for. What a relief! And how wonderful to be able to dare to be genuinely Real instead of constantly abiding according to the code of conduct – the mutually-agreed-upon-definitions for behavior. You see?

Again, whether it's an illness, a disease, a bad attitude, a belief that one is a mortal and that death is inevitable, these things vanish when you dare to love one another, and by virtue of loving one another, send out new messengers.

It's a fact. A change of heart, as it were, can spontaneously cause a change in behavior in someone who has been aggressively and negatively abusive to you. Why? Because you're not sending out the messengers of fear, looking for that which is fearful. And your faith in your brother, rather than faithlessness, inspires your brother.

And so you say, “Well, what if it doesn't?” And I must ask you, “What side of the fence are you choosing to stand on? What are you fighting for?” because you will surely have what you fight for. If you cannot conceive that your brother or sister might actually be as holy as you are beginning to believe you are, then the messages to that affect will be what you send out and they cannot come back and confirm something other than the intent with which you sent them.

Rather than asking “What if they don't change?” you need to be asking, “What is the means of my going back to the mountain top . . . what is the means of my engaging in the two-step genuinely enough and committedly enough to persist in giving my attention to the truth that will make a difference? You see?

Your attention will not be on your brother and what he's doing. Your attention will be on where you are giving your attention and what you are desiring and whether you are willing to say that your brother is worthy of the amount of time or effort or commitment that it takes to stay on the mountain top or to return as many times as necessary in order to get the message again and bring it down from the mountain and not abandon it yourself. You see?

Yes, occasions arise when bad behavior occurs. But God didn't send you here to put the one engaged in bad behavior up on a cross and crucify him. That's not what you're here for. You're here to learn how to be your Father's Son or Daughter. You're here to look at your Brother or Sister with the desire to learn what there is about them that causes your Father to be greatly pleased with them. That Vision immediately constitutes the broadcast, the sending out of new messengers which necessarily must come back, and do come back with conformation of what they were sent to find.

What your Brothers and Sisters seem to be to you or to themselves isn't what they Are. But as long as you believe it is what they are you will have the evidence of it. Is that because you're causing it? No! But it is because you are not doing what is essential to uncover anything else.

And so it's not the correcting of someone that's important, it's the uncovering of Something else other than that which calls for correction. It's the uncovering of their holiness, because that's what you wish to see more than anything. And why do you wish to see it? Ah-h . . . because it heals . . . because it is the practice of Love.

Be alert to what goes on in your own mind. Be alert to judgment that you feel is valid.

You know, the recognition of the holiness of your brother is not a judgment. The ability to acknowledge Reality, the Kingdom of Heaven right here as It is, is not a result of judgment. They are both the result of the abandonment of judgment, the abandonment of reasoning that leads from point A, to point B, to point C and so on. So that you are not engaged in the examination of the function of your intelligence, but you are in touch with your Brother or Sister directly, intimately, wholly. You see?

This is the key. It's not the watchdogs. Your governments have watchdogs and they're called the Armed Forces, and they find evil and they squash it with force, although there is beginning to be a more concerted effort, as they say, to deal with things diplomatically. It's a step in the right direction, but reason is still the basis for the negotiation, rather than the valuing of the holy Brothers and Sisters, the holy Sons and Daughters of God that constitute mankind and the desire to make peace not war.

So there is still further to go, but it all boils down to what I'm telling you tonight . . . Love one another.

Instead of asking, “What do we do to correct them?” You must ask, “What do I do Father, to love my brothers and sisters? Reveal to me their holiness so that I might feel it, not so that I might understand it with my mind, my intellect. Let me feel their holiness. I’m told that when I feel their holiness I get to feel mine as well. How do I hang in here, without joining them by becoming frustrated? How do I hang in with the Vision and stay on the mountain top?” You see?

One of what you call “the Beatitudes” says, “Blessed are the” . . . what? “peacemakers.” Not the watchdogs. Not the ones ferreting out evil. Not the ones checking every wheat field for tares and trampling the good wheat. No. “Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the Children of God.”¹ Well, we can reverse that, “Blessed are the Children of God for they shall be peacemakers.”

You holy Sons and Daughters of God, turn to the Father, turn to the Holy Spirit, desiring to recognize and feel the holiness of the other Children of God called your Brothers and Sisters.

Another of the Beatitudes says, “Blessed are the meek,” not the warmongers. “Blessed are the meek,” not the aggressors. “Blessed are the meek,” those who let love motivate the messengers they send out. “Blessed are they for they shall,” . . . what? “inherit the Earth.” They will find themselves having what “It is the Father’s good pleasure to give them, which is the Kingdom.”²

That’s the way healing occurs. If you want to call it correction, that’s the way correction occurs, because when you are meek, you inherit what it’s the Father’s good pleasure to give you . . . all of the Kingdom. And you will be peacemakers and be called the Children of God, because that is what you Are. And that transforms because you move your attention out of the realm of “accuser,” of “watchdog for evil,” of dishonesty. You abandon that mindset. And in abandoning it, you withdraw the messengers that will go out bringing back confirmation even though what they find isn’t so, because it’s no part of the Kingdom that it’s the Father’s good pleasure to give you. You see?

You won’t have the Kingdom until you are willing to let yourself be the Son or Daughter of God by asking for His Perspective. You certainly won’t have it by manipulating your world by force into what looks like peace and harmony.

Love one another. Find the way to love one another even if the behavior of others seems to convince you that you should be upset. Love one another enough to silence the human will in you that insists upon seeing what it's seeing, and turn to the Holy Spirit or the Father asking, "What is the truth here?" and then staying with that Vision. And if you lose it, go back to the mountain top. And if you lose it, go back to the mountain top. And if you lose it again, go back to the mountain top. Because like the Israelites, you are accompanied by the Father and the Holy Spirit and your Guide and all those who are already Awake. You are not alone.

Enjoy your Brotherhood this year. Love one another. I love you. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

July 14th 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Okay. Tonight we will not be continuing in the Book. There are some further things I want to share about the practice and the abandonment of self-righteousness, because there is more peace that needs to come from understanding it than most of you are experiencing.

So, let's take a few moments to be quiet together.

[Quiet time]

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

I am aware that distress has been felt by many during this past week as a result of willingness to look at the practice of self-righteousness, when one thought one was being loving or being a good citizen, or being a good neighbor.

I am aware that looking around, it is obvious that there are instances of injustice or apparent injustice that have come into play that certainly arouses self-righteousness. And at the same time, because the problem of injustice needs to be corrected and the correction is going to take time to change the laws, one feels on-goingly vulnerable and not at peace – even beyond the discomfort of practicing voluntary self-righteousness.

The situation will call for persistence for an intent to put forth the effort necessary to bring about the corrections. In other words it's going to take work. And at the bottom line, self-righteousness tells you that you shouldn't even be confronted with a need to attend to these things.

And so here you are feeling vulnerable for awhile until it's corrected. And then you're feeling put upon by having to participate by bringing about the changes that install justice into the system and into the world. And so that's one of the disconcerting and distressing aspects of self-righteousness that you're dealing with.

There are other situations with families where injustice is being asserted and is causing abuse to occur with such ferocity or such conviction that it seems that the correction of that will be impossible. But on top of this, because it's family, your emotions are brought into play and you are distressed. And again, you are made to feel powerless and you have reaction to that: "It's unfair. I shouldn't have to be faced with this. Everybody should know better. If everybody would listen to me we wouldn't be having these problems!" And on and on and on go the self-righteous judgments and conclusions.

Another aspect is that you've looked at yourself and it is clearer than ever the degree to which you attempt to control, in order to get what you want, in order to get your partner or your Brother or those you work with to serve your best interests to be thoughtful of you. And yet, they seem to be beyond your control and therefore, in your powerlessness, all you can do is gripe, be distressed and depress yourself.

Also you look and you see what I'm going to call "mortality" presenting itself to loved ones. And they are accepting the presentation hook, line and sinker and are not available to hear any healing perspective that you might be able to provide. And so again, you feel frustrated, angry, powerless. You feel abused yourself. And at the bottom line, the solution to all of this is very simple, but it's not one you want to hear.

Now, we need to take a brief look at how the human condition, how the dream, how the illusion of existence started. And we discussed it briefly last week. It started because you and another holy Son of God decided to make a mutual agreement, an agreement as to the definition of things – the definition of Reality that is different from the Meaning the Father is Embodying in Creation, actually.

Now this mutual agreement agreed to by the two of you caused you to have a special relationship – a relationship other than the one the Father established by expressing Himself as you and your Brother or Sister – with whom you have formed this mutual agreement that is at odds with Creation itself.

Now here we are squarely looking at the practice of self-righteousness, squarely looking at the fact that, as I said a couple weeks ago, self-righteousness is the number one killer.

Now as you've gone through the last couple weeks and you've taken perhaps a more honest look at your practice of self-righteousness or the falsity of your “loving kindness” that you have been sharing with people, you have become confused by thinking that the correction of the difficulty of the distress will come from other people changing – other people changing by virtue of your exercising spiritual control, by virtue of your willing to ask of the Holy Spirit to see your Brother's or your Sister's innocence so that you might cover your Brother's or your Sister's back.

This is tricky, because that understanding will get you into trouble. It will confuse things.

You – and here's the bottom line simplicity of it – you need to stop practicing self-righteousness because it will kill you. I do not say that threateningly or to cause you to be frightened, but to make it utterly clear that the practice of self-righteousness has an effect only on you, who practice it.

Sin, disease and death are the effect of the practice of self-righteousness and the effect is on you who is practicing it. Self-righteousness, practiced by your Brother or Sister affects them in their practice of it, not you.

And so to think that you, through the practice of the two-step, will engage in an activity that will cause your Brother to start treating you better is a misunderstanding.

Again: The human condition – the dream of existence – was the result of a mutual agreement engaged in by two Sons or Daughters of God. And Waking up is the undoing of those mutual agreements. It is the undoing of the mutuality of a special relationship in which special definitions, imaginative definitions have been arrived at and agreed to and committed to. You see?

It's the undoing of the relationship, which means – and this is the part that no one really wants to hear – it means that you and you alone have the means of abandoning the practice of self-righteousness. And in the abandonment of it, having your mind be healed. You see?

In a way it is totally private. It is something you must do in the withinness of your Being without regard to your Brothers or Sisters so that peace replaces the frustration and the self-righteous anger of self-righteousness causing your mind to become clear, unconfused, at peace within itself, so that it is able to let the Father's Perspective register with it – register with you.

And in that Revelation, being healed yourself, so that your perspective of your Brother is changed. Not because you're trying to change your Brother's perspective, but because you've attended to the only thing you can attend to which is whether you're going to continue to practice self-righteousness, or whether you are going to abandon it by abandoning the special relationship and letting your Brother off the hook and letting yourself off the hook by no longer saying, "My Brother will be the death of me yet. My daughter or my son will be the death of me yet!" by saying someone else in some magical way can ruin me, ruin my life. You cannot die from someone else's self-righteousness. You hear that? You cannot die from someone else's self-righteousness.

You can access eternal life by abandoning your practice of self-righteousness. And in your acceptance and receipt of eternal life, you will find yourself being transformational but not because you're trying to. You will be transformational because you will no longer be participating with your Brothers and Sisters in mutual agreements that all of you believe are law and have committed yourselves to. You see?

The whole reason for looking at what self-righteousness is and the need to abandon it and your act of abandoning it is because that brings forth the conscious experience of God's Perspective in you and returns you to your right Mind, which right now is called, "the Holy Spirit" because you've divorced yourself from It. And that is the process of the Movement of Awakening. You will do this because you want to Wake up not because you want to manipulate or control your Brothers and Sisters even for their best interest.

Things will remain messy and complicated if you don't abandon the special relationship and all the habitual techniques that you have engaged in in these special relationships.

You must be willing to turn to the Father, which is what the holy instant is for, to say, "Father, what is the truth here? Father I . . . because I don't want to suffer the dire effects of practicing self-righteousness, want to know the truth. I want You to share with me Your Perspective. I no longer want to be confused and I no longer want to suffer from confusion."

Now last week we went back in the Book about one hundred pages. And tonight I'm going to refer you to something about two hundred pages ahead. It's in Chapter Twenty-Seven and it's a sub heading called, The Healing Example. And I'm going to share it because it helps to clarify the fact that what is called for is abandoning the special relationship, abandoning your expectations of others, abandoning the idea that others through their neglect, can cause you to suffer and have an unfulfilled life, or through their devoted attention they can make you blissfully happy, when at no point, have you bothered yet to abandon your self-righteousness and join with the Father and have His Perspective infill you and transform you. You see?

And so, it says here:

THE HEALING EXAMPLE ¹

The only way to heal is to be healed.

So if you think you want to heal your Brother, you're going to have to be healed yourself.

The only way to heal is to be healed.

The only way to get out from under the effects of self-righteousness is to be healed of the practice of self-righteousness yourself, regardless of what your Brother or Sister is doing.

But listen to this:

The miracle . . .

. . . in the healing.

The miracle extends without your help, but you ARE needed that it can begin.

You see? This isn't just laborious. This isn't just you looking at hard things to look at and dealing with hard things to deal with as though Waking up is a struggle. But the looking at it that we're talking about isn't easy and you need not to be afraid to do the work. It's essential!

Because after all, self-righteousness is the number one killer! I keep saying that because death seems to be such a reasonable justification for changing one's life because it's rather ultimate.

Now, you want to abandon self-righteousness because in its absence, the holy Son or Daughter of God that you Are is revealed to you as your Whole Mindedness. That is incredible! That is worth every bit of effort you might find you need to put forth. So . . .

The only way to heal is to be healed.

To participate in that transformation. And . . .

The miracle extends without your help, but you ARE needed that it can begin. Accept the miracle of healing, and it will go forth because of what it IS.

You see? The good news – God’s Love, Healing, radiates infinitely. It goes out infinitely because that’s It’s nature.

And so when you abandon trying to manipulate or change your mate or your family or your society and you give your undivided attention to monitoring the use you put your mind to and refraining completely from engaging in self-righteousness, you open the door for something marvelous!

The miracle extends without your help, but you ARE needed that it can begin. Accept the miracle of healing, and it will go forth because of what it IS. It is its nature to extend itself the instant it is born. And it is born the instant it is offered and RECEIVED.

It’s borne the minute you let it in, the moment you let yourself be changed by it.

No-one can ask another to be healed.

You see? “Oh, if you would just treat me nicer, I would be happy – that would be healing to me. If you just wouldn’t be engaged in so much self-interest that you abandon me, I would be much happier.”

That’s asking somebody else to heal you.

No-one can ask another to be healed. But he can . . .

. . . this is the part you don’t like.

But he can let HIMSELF be healed, . .

. . . how unfulfilling. How much fuller my relationship would be if I didn’t have to do this all by myself. Well that’s false. Because it’s only in a special relationship – one bound by mutual agreements – that mean the two of you are holding yourselves separate from God, and therefore, your true understanding of your identity, that it could seem to be justifiable.

No-one can ask another to be healed. But he can let HIMSELF be healed, and . . .

. . . listen to this . . .

. . . thus offer the other what he has received.

But you see, it won't be offered with any stigma of manipulation or control or arrogance. My God, when you are filled with Love and you look at your Brother with Love, that's all there is to it. It isn't done for an effect, else it isn't Love, it isn't a simple genuine heart feeling. But when a simple genuine heart feeling of Love is spontaneously shared, it is received — it is felt. And if it isn't felt immediately, it remains there to be recognized.

Who can bestow upon another what he does not have?

You see? Well, I tell you that when you sit being frustrated and pissed-off at your Brothers or your mates or your family, whatever, you are bestowing upon your Brother emptiness. You are bestowing nothing transformational, because nothing in you has softened, nothing in you has melted, nothing in you has gentled-up and come forth with humility that has no designs of any sort on your Brother or Sister. You see?

Who can bestow upon another what he does not have? And who can share what he denies himself?

Oh yeah, you deny yourself because you say, "Damn! I really have a right to be pissed-off. The situation here is so unjust that I have complete reason to be upset and not to abandon my distress." Well, that's the way you insure death, because that is the practice of self-righteousness that keeps you separate from the Father and your divinity because you're bound to a mutual agreement with another holy Son of God in denial of your holiness.

Don't do it! No matter how reasonable it seems, don't do it!

Listen to this.

The Holy Spirit speaks to YOU. He does not speak to someone else.

You see? Difficult to hear. But you spend a lot of your time thinking about him and her and so-and-so and what she did and what they're doing, as though there really is a he, she or it or them or those. When at the bottom line, there is you perceiving Creation correctly or incorrectly. And if you are perceiving it incorrectly, the correction lies in abandoning the misperception, by joining again with the Father or the Holy Spirit and asking, "What is the truth here?" not because of him or her or them or they, but because you don't want to die from self-righteousness. You don't want to lose the conscious experience of your eternal divinity for any reason. And so you must remember that:

The Holy Spirit speaks to YOU. He does not speak to someone else.

As far as you are concerned . . .

He does not speak to someone else.

He speaks to YOU. Give your full attention to Him. Why? Because the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind. Be willing to pay attention to your right Mind and stop worrying about whether or not the Holy Spirit is talking to him or her or them or those. Because as long as you are imagining him or her or them or those, you are not listening within yourself to the Holy Spirit – that is nothing more than your right Mind. And therefore, you are doing nothing to bring about the conscious experience of the integrity of you which will involve the experience of God's Perspective, because that is the Gift of God to you. Again . . .

The Holy Spirit speaks to YOU. He does not speak to someone else. Yet by your listening, His Voice extends because you have ACCEPTED what He says.

Not what He says about someone else or what they ought to do, but you have ACCEPTED what He says that reveals to you your divine clarity and therefore, your ability to be utterly appropriate in every relationship you have. And from there, your relationships will be holy relationships and not special relationships. That's the benefit of attending to the use you are putting your mind to.

Health is the witness unto health. As long as it is unattested, it remains without conviction.

Well, when you're not asking to know what the truth is here and you are insisting upon interpreting everything according to the mutual definitions, then health, Reality has no witness. It's unattested to and it remains without conviction. You see?

Without conviction there will never be manifestation, there will never be the evidence. You don't want to be so busily engaged in self-righteousness that you don't bring conviction into the picture, which is what will give evidence of health. Whose health? Your health! When you have your health, you have it to share with others. And it will be shared because it's obvious, it shows up, everyone can see it, not because you're some grand teacher. You see?

It's done for you. The communication is carried forward because that's the way it works. That's the good news . . . the end result of what we've been talking about in abandoning self-righteousness.

Health is the witness unto health. As long as it is unattested, it remains without conviction. Only when demonstrated has it been proved, and MUST compel belief.

But you don't have to compel the belief. The demonstration, the manifestation compels the belief. It's simply obvious.

No-one is healed through double messages. If you wish only to be healed, you heal.

If you wish only to be healed . . . if you wish only to be relieved of the suffering that accompanies the practice of self-righteousness, stop practicing self-righteousness. You see?

If you wish only to be healed, you heal.

If you wish only to abandon self-righteousness and you abandon it, . . . what? You will find yourself to be the unequivocal and the uncalculated Presence of Love. That's what! That's the marvel! That's what's transformational. And because it's Love it's broadcast, it extends because that is its nature.

If you wish only to be healed, you heal. Your SINGLE purpose makes this possible. But if you are afraid of healing, then it cannot come through you.

You see? Black and white, but therefore, simple. If you are not afraid of healing then it can come through.

The only thing that is required for a healing is a lack of fear.

Well, we've talked about the fact that there's been distress in taking a look at the practice of self-righteousness and in looking at the effects of self-righteousness expressed by others, and the fact that it causes you all to feel out of control, and therefore, vulnerable, and at the bottom line, seeking for some stronger means of control so that you might get your peace back without doing the only thing that will bring your peace back, which is to just abandon the practice of self-righteousness. You see?

The only thing that is required for a healing is a lack of fear. The fearful are not healed, and cannot heal.

Why can they not heal, because they are not healed. And as long as you are trying to manipulate and heal your Brother without your mind being healed, there will be no healing. But the moment you value your Sanity and your Peace enough to catch yourself when you are practicing self-righteousness and immediately abandon it, you will find healing entering and extending because that's what it does. That's the good news! That's what this is all about.

The fearful are not healed, and cannot heal. This does not mean the conflict must be gone forever from your mind.

You don't have to manage to do it perfectly so that it's done forever.

This does not mean the conflict must be gone forever from your mind. For if it were, there were no need for healing then. But it DOES mean, if only for an instant, you love without attack.

[Repeats] . . . it DOES mean, if only for an instant, you love without attack.

That is the simplicity of it.

An instant is sufficient. Miracles wait not on time.

Now:

The holy instant is the miracle's abiding-place.

What a relief. How wonderful to know that. Practicing the holy instant is what we've been talking about, especially in the last few weeks.

The holy instant is the miracle's abiding-place. From there, each one . . .

. . . each miracle . . .

. . . is born into this world as witness to a state of mind which has transcended conflict, . .

. . . yours. You see?

From there, . .

. . . the holy instant . . .

each one . . .

. . . each miracle . . .

. . . is born into this world as witness to a state of mind which has transcended conflict, and has reached to peace.

Peace is an ultimate goal, far more important than whether your mate or family loves you enough to be devoted to you and cause your life to be bliss.

Again:

From . . .

. . . the miracles abiding place, the holy instant, each miracle . . .

. . . is born into this world as witness to a state of mind . . .

. . . yours . . .

. . . which has transcended conflict, and has reached to peace. It carries comfort from the place of peace into the battle-ground, and demonstrates that war has no effects. For all the hurt that war has sought to bring, the broken bodies and the shattered limbs, the screaming dying and the silent dead, are gently lifted up and comforted. There IS no sadness where a miracle has come to heal.

There is no sadness where one has abandoned the right he thinks he has to be self-righteously upset and judgmental of his Brother or Sister.

And nothing more than just ONE instant of your love without attack is necessary, that all this occur.

This is the whole point! Don't get hung up on your self-righteous inclination to jump on your Brother's ass and blame him or your Sister for causing you to be abused or sad or depressed.

. . . nothing more than just ONE instant of your love without attack is necessary, that all this occur. In that one instant are you healed, and in that single instant is all healing done.

That is the simplicity. And that is the Father's Love that you are embraced by and that which is nothing more than your right Mind – the Holy Spirit – is intent upon uncovering the Reality of You to you when you're willing to abandon the mean-spirited right that you think you have to judge and hold grievances and never wish to see your Brother's innocence, which you will automatically see when you humble yourself and let your divine capacity to be the presence of Love fill you up and spill over and extend itself spontaneously, infinitely, because that's what it does . . . and blesses everything.

I love you and I trust that this coming week will not be as nearly distressing as the past week or two have been, because the perspective is clearer about what is meaningful and what is meaningless.

I love you very much.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

July 21st 2013

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

You will notice that we are continuing on from where we left off in the Course last week, rather than returning to the Obstacles to Peace and continuing from there. There is still some unfinished business regarding the practice of self-righteousness. And again, more ease needs to be felt around the abandonment of self-righteousness.

I'm going to back up one paragraph from the stated beginning, where it says:

*The holy instant is the miracle's abiding-place.
From there, each one . . .*

. . . each miracle . . .

. . . is born into this world as witness to a state of mind which has transcended conflict, . .

. . . meaning yours . . .

. . . and has reached to peace. It carries comfort from the place of peace into the battle-ground, and demonstrates that war has no effects.

That's the result of the practice of the holy instant – of your abandonment of attack for even just one clear moment.

For all the hurt that war has sought to bring, the broken bodies and the shattered limbs, the screaming dying and the silent dead, are . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . gently lifted up and comforted.

This is quite a transformation we're talking about. This is quite a correction we're talking about.

There IS no sadness where a miracle has come to heal. And nothing more than just ONE instant of your love without attack is necessary, that all this occur. In that one instant are you healed, and in that single instant is all healing done.

Now mind you, you can understand that in that one instant are you healed. But I don't want you to misunderstand what it means when it says:

. . . and in that single instant is all healing done.

As though you have been healed and then all healing in the world and universally is brought about – is caused to happen. But that isn't what it means.

In that one instant where you have expressed love and not attack, you have arrived at a point of balance within you, a point of perfect peace within you, even if just for a moment. And in that peace, that which is nothing more than your right Mind, called the Holy Spirit, can register with you and your perspective is healed – your vision is cleared, causing everything you see to be seen truly. And when seen truly, it is obviously uninjured, undamaged – perfect in all respects – not because all the bad things got changed, but because the perspective that you had been using, which was one of fear and guilt and self-righteousness, because that was abandoned by you, it causes you to see everything as the Father is Being It, which is Perfect.

In that single instant when your perspective is healed, all correction of your misperceptions of the Kingdom of Heaven have been done. You can see the simplicity of it.

The truth is simple. If self-righteousness is the number one cause of death, then the abandonment of self-righteousness is the number one cause of the revelation of your eternal life, unchallengeable, unchangeable, actual . . . absolute. That's the simplicity.

Now, knowing this, what on earth could cause you to continue to employ self-righteousness? You know you want only the good. You know that you want to Wake up. You know that you want to experience your Salvation and deep within you, you know that it's available to you and it's your Birthright.

So, in the face of that kind of wonderful clarity, what could justify your continuing to practice self-righteousness?

It is understandable. When you got your divorce from the Father by joining with a brother or sister in the manufacturing of false definitions – definitions different from what the Father created Creation to be – you found yourselves feeling disconnected from your Source and fear immediately was experienced and guilt along with it.

As a result, everything that followed and everything that follows to this moment is imbued with the characteristics of fear and guilt. Even your relationship from the holy Son or Daughter of God that you moved into a special relationship with, by means of coming up with definitions of Creation different from the Father's Meanings. As a result, as we've discussed, the special relationship became competitive while at the same time feigning harmony and love and sweetness and light.

Now, let's suppose that during the past few weeks, you have been diligently attending to the task, we'll say, of not employing self-righteousness and being alert for when it creeps in. And let's say that at times it crept in and you didn't notice it, and your partner or a loved one or someone who has joined you in this endeavor to abandon self-righteousness, says to you, “Whoa, you are being self-righteous!” And you cannot see it but it does upset you. It’s seen as criticism – unfair criticism. But why?

Well, the call of the loved one or the partner or the one who’s joined you, they’re bringing it to your attention says to you that you need to stop playing manipulative games because after all, it’s the leading cause of death – it’s totally impractical, it’s dangerous! It’s something you don’t want to engage in or experience.

But if you hear that it’s a call for abandoning self-righteousness, you realize that you have been using it as a defense. You are always using self-righteousness as a defense. But in many instances, your practice of self-defense is like one of many branches on a tree. And yes, you can cut this branch of self-defense off, and that branch, but hey, we’re talking about chopping down the tree, aren’t we. We’re talking about abandoning any use of self-defense.

Well, if you’ve been engaging self-righteousness to protect yourself by implicating your brother or sister or brothers and sisters with whom you are engaged in special relationships, well, you can see that its value to you apparently, but not truly, is to put you in a position of not being totally responsible for whatever might happen. And your brother or sister becomes the scape-goat, the one that you can blame, the one that you can shift the guilt to. You see?

I mean after all, if you’re not going to shift blame and guilt to your brother or sister with whom you’re in a special relationship, then it’s rather like standing there naked, all alone without defense. And of course you think that you will need defense. Why? Because as I said, fear and guilt cover every aspect of your experience of Reality, of the Kingdom of Heaven, of Creation and therefore, you obviously are guilty and the penalty will come. That is the fear.

Another part of it is, that if you’re not going to claim the right to use your brother or sister as a scape-goat – for passing the responsibility on to – then it’s going to mean that your practicing the two-step, engaging in the holy instant, is going to require that you be always absolutely, flawlessly “right!” and Heaven help you if you aren't. You see?

If you can't share the blame, if you can't share the guilt, you're going to have to bear it all by yourself. Again, but the only reason you feel that is because every aspect of your experience when you are unjoined, when you are not engaged in a holy relationship, is an experience of vulnerability. And therefore, if you're going to practice the holy instant, and if you're not going to engage in attack, and if you're going to ask to experience the Father's Love so that you can express the Father's Love, then obviously you are going to be vulnerable like you've never been before. That is the fear. Because of yourself, you have no confidence. Of yourself, you have no ability to be absolutely incredibly “right” all the time.

This is very important to understand.

You use self-righteousness – everyone uses self-righteousness – as a defense against having to bear the brunt of all the guilt there is all by yourself. And in the spotlight of that kind of responsibility and that kind of penalty, it really becomes impossible to say, “Father, what is the truth here? I truly want to know the truth.” It's that simple.

Now, continuing in the Book:

What stands apart from you, when you accept the blessing that the holy instant brings?

Of course, the answer is “nothing.” But that's not what you believe at the outset of this new practice of abandoning self-righteousness. You still don't see unity or its potential, because this “poor little orphan” who is attempting to access an experience of divinity that he's not believed for a long time, he cannot find the courage to do it completely.

But again:

What stands apart from you, when you accept the blessing that the holy instant brings?

The question uncovers the fact that there is nothing that stands apart and therefore, there is no vulnerability left for you to experience.

It's important to know this because it will help give you the courage to do something that seems wildly unintelligent and unreasonable.

Be not afraid of blessing, . .

. . . of healing, of dawning clarity, of Revelation.

Be not afraid of blessing, for the One Who blesses you loves all the world, . .

. . . and who is the One Who blesses you? The Holy Spirit – that which is nothing more than your right Mind – and the blessing of that which is nothing more than your right Mind brings your whole Mind into active Presence as your conscious experience of inviolable integrity. That's the blessing!

Be not afraid of blessing, for the One Who blesses you loves all the world, and leaves nothing within the world that could be feared.

What does that mean? It means that when the truth dawns on you and you look at the world with the truth that has dawned on you, you will see nothing there that could be feared. Not because you've done anything to it, but because you've abandoned what caused the distortion in the first place . . . that said that the Kingdom of Heaven was not the Kingdom of Heaven and that it is flawed, conflicted, polarized and that It will die.

Now, it says:

*But if you shrink from blessing, will the world
indeed seem fearful, . .*

. . . if you shrink from actually abandoning the important right you think you have to express self-righteous indignation – judgment – if you shrink from abandoning that right, then there will be no dawning clarity in your mind and the wholizing of your whole Mind will not occur yet to your perception. And thus the conflicted, polarized nature of the world will be unchanged.

[But] if you shrink from blessing, will the world indeed seem fearful, for you have withheld its peace and comfort, leaving it to die.

You've refused to see it. And you are insisting on seeing a material world and universe, leaving Creation Itself, flawless, infinite eternal Creation to die. You've left it out of sight, out of mind.

Would not a world so bitterly bereft be looked on as a condemnation by the one who could have saved it, but stepped back because he was afraid of being healed?

You see? The experience doesn't seem to be one of being afraid of being healed, it is rather the fear that in not being able to practice self-defense you will be penalized! You see? So you step back from what is actually healing and exercise your right to be "pissed-off" to judge or to hold others or things in contempt.

The eyes of all the dying bring reproach, and suffering whispers, "What is there to fear?"

You see? When you look at the Kingdom of Heaven, when you look at your Brothers who are Sons and Daughters of God, but you are seeing your definition of them, you will see nothing from them but reproach.

. . . and suffering whispers, "What is there to fear?" Consider well its question.

You see? In other words, you're so used to it. You're so used to the expression of self-righteousness and critical judgment that you think there's nothing to fear from it, not realizing that it is the number one cause of death. It is what makes life seem terminal, even though life is eternal.

Consider well its question. It is asked of you on your behalf. A dying world asks only that you rest an instant . . .

. . . hesitate an instant, shut up!

. . . that you rest an instant from attack upon yourself, that it be healed.

The world asks you to stop the attack on yourself so that it can be healed. Meaning, so that you can see it truly and stop defining it through a mean-spirited, self-righteous arrogant frame of mind.

Come to the holy instant and be healed, . .

. . . remember, this section started out last week with the statement, “The only way to heal is to be healed.” Meaning, you. So . . .

Come to the holy instant . . .

. . . practice it – shut up and say, “Father, what is the truth here?” And then listen! Because the answer will be given or ask, “Holy Spirit, what is the truth here, reveal to me what it is my Birthright to be experiencing?”

Come to the holy instant and be healed, for nothing that is there received is left behind, on your returning to the world.

Meaning, as you look at the world you had been looking at before, but are now seeing the Kingdom of Heaven there instead.

. . . nothing that is there received is left behind, on your returning to the world. And being blessed, you will bring blessing.

Now you see, that is what happens. Being found guilty and being judged and paying the penalty for abandoning this wonderful expression of self-protection called “self-righteousness” will bring blessing. That is the actual result.

And so again, you must dare to take these steps, even when your conditioning says it is unintelligent and dangerous, else you will not find that – even though you can understand the logic of it – that when you are clear of mind you will be clear of Mind. You will not suffer from confusion or from misperception.

Life is given you to give the dying world.

Oh, I know . . . that sounds like some sort of grandiose task that must have been given to you because there's something quite special about you. But all it means is, that everything that you're experiencing is an experience given to you so that you might recognize it for what it truly is and give it life – give it life by not disagreeing with what you're seeing and providing a different definition of it.

*Life is given you to give the dying world.
And suffering eyes no longer will accuse, . .*

. . . suffering eyes? Oh yeah, the suffering eyes of others, the suffering eyes of others who you saw through your poor definitions of them and your frightened need for self-protection.

And suffering eyes no longer will accuse, but shine in thanks to you who blessing gave.

When the scales fall from your eyes and you see truly, then I tell you, that even if you are looking at someone who still believes they are an orphan and who still seems to be afraid, you will see the holy Son of God or the holy Daughter of God there. And you will see eyes that shine in thanks for your willingness to see truly.

The holy instant's radiance will light your eyes, and give them sight to see . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . beyond all suffering, and see Christ's face instead. Healing REPLACES suffering.

Clarity replaces confusion. Clarity is the absence of confusion.
Healing is the absence of suffering.

Who looks on one cannot perceive the other, . .

Who looks on healing cannot perceive suffering. Who looks on suffering cannot perceive healing . . .

. . . for they cannot both be there. And what you see the world will witness, and will witness TO.

In that sense, you have a false experience of being all-powerful, because you can choose to believe a lie and you will see the lie. And no matter the fact that God is all there is, you will not see that fact.
And you will not experience Creation here and now.

Thus is your healing everything the world requires, that it may be healed.

That's the simplicity of it. [whew] The special relationship is a sticky, complicated, arrangement of agreements that says, the only way anything can be better or worse is if we cooperate or fight with each other. But it's not true. The only thing that can make things better is for you to abandon the mutual agreements as to what will make things better, so that you, in the peace of your mind, can experience the singularity, the purity of all conscious experience, of all of Creation, which is the manifestation of the Mind of God.

Don't complicate things by making it seem as though others or other things have some means of governing you and causing you to suffer and miss the Kingdom of Heaven that you're right in the middle of.

Thus is your healing everything . . .

. . . and the only thing . . .

. . . the world requires, that it may be healed. It needs ONE lesson which has perfectly been learned.

One lesson – your lesson – the lesson of simply not indulging in self-righteousness again. That’s the lesson that changes absolutely everything and redeems Creation to your sight.

It needs ONE lesson which has perfectly been learned. And then, when you forget it, . .

. . . if you do . . .

. . . will the world remind you gently of what you have taught.

You see? You won’t be able to forget completely. And your clear vision will find means of being reflected back to you and reminding you lovingly without the suggestion of guilt or fear or punishment.

No reinforcement will its thanks withhold from you who let yourself be healed that it . . .

. . . the world . . .

. . . might live. It will call forth its witnesses to show the face of Christ to you who brought the sight to them, by which they witnessed it.

You know, when you are a blessing, others are blessed. And when others are blessed, they bless you back. And out of the love that arises in them and is expressed toward you, you will find when you slip . . . when you slip back, that they will lovingly remind you of the truth through their love, not through self-righteousness of any kind. That is the new way things work when you dare to disregard the fear that you will stand naked and alone and subject to guilt and penalty if you indeed abandon the self-defense of self-righteousness.

The world of accusation is replaced by one in which all eyes look lovingly upon the Friend who brought them their release. And happily your brother will perceive the many friends he thought were enemies.

You get that? As you let yourself be infilled with the spontaneous illumination of the Love you are Loved by from the Father and the Love that you Are that cannot help but flow spontaneously from you, you see with new eyes and you see Friends where you had seen enemies. And the friends you see are illumined themselves and they see Friends where they had previously seen enemies.

Now, you're all familiar with the statement, the saying that "The devil's in the details?" The devil is in the details. Well, here's another way of putting it: The devil's in the definitions. The ego is in the definitions. The devil is in the mutually agreed upon definitions that the Sons and Daughters of God have made up to replace the True perception of everything. You see that?

Now this is important because if at any point during the day you close your eyes for a moment, clear your mind, and imagine that you are opening your eyes up in a place you've never been before, what will you see?

Before we answer that: If, when you close your eyes, you acknowledge that the only thing ever confronting you is the Kingdom of Heaven and you want to see the Kingdom of Heaven and you open your eyes, what will you see? You are not likely to see the Kingdom of Heaven. Why not? Because there will be something in the way. The something that will be in the way are all the meanings and definitions that you have applied to everything you are seeing.

Let's say that you are a spiritual person, one who attempts to be loving, give the benefit of the doubt and feels somewhat holy as a result. And being holy has its own definitions. And someone who is holy does not breathe in or find himself in an immoral atmosphere.

But let's say that at any given moment when you do this little practice and you open up your eyes and you are outside a bar, or perhaps you've had to go into the bar to deliver a message . . . whatever . . . you open up your eyes and you see an immoral atmosphere. You also feel very uncomfortable because it, being an immoral atmosphere, your holiness doesn't fit. And the definition of your holiness says to you that there's no way for you to feel good, there's no way for you to feel your peace until you get out of there as quickly as possible.

Now, that is exactly what gets in the way of your Waking up, because what happened was the practice of self-righteousness, the practice of judgment.

You believe that what you believe everything is, is what everything is.

And as long as you are suffering from that belief you will not be able to feel peace and you will not be defenseless enough to have the Father or the Holy Spirit reveal to you what this place that looks like a bar Really is, because something is there, seen clearly or seen through a glass darkly – seen through self-righteousness. You have a right to be able to open your eyes and see what the Presence of God Is right there where you have learned there is a bar and where there is immorality and where you cannot possibly feel your peace. You see?

The meanings that everything have for you right now, are definitions that you have been taught or that you have made up for yourself. And these are the elements of self-righteousness that cause self-righteousness to be the number one killer — the number one cause of death.

So if you want to Wake up, if you . . . oh, if you want to be free of sin, sickness and death, you are going to have to be willing to look with innocent eyes and with enough courage no matter what you're seeing, to say, "If anything at all is going on here, right now, it has to be Creation, it has to be the Kingdom of Heaven, because in actuality there is nothing else. That's all there Is and I'm seeing it clearly or I'm not.

It's very important that you realize that when you look at your world you are seeing the meanings you are applying to the world, and you're not applying the meaning that what you're seeing is the Kingdom of Heaven seen unclearly, but which you would like to see clearly. You don't even associate the Kingdom of Heaven with what you're seeing today. That's because you're giving preference to the mutually agreed upon definitions that are the devil's details that cause the only thing there Truly is to be misperceived by you, causing you to suffer needlessly.

Continuing in the book:

Problems are not specific, . .

. . . listen to that.

Problems are not specific, . .

. . . problems are not in the details.

Problems are not specific, but they take specific forms, . .

. . . by virtue of the definitions you apply . . .

. . . and these specific shapes make up the world.

And I will say, make up the world you see.

And no-one understands the nature of his problem.

[Chuckling] No one understands that the nature of his problem is that he is looking at everything through the lens of his own misperceptions. And it is the lens of his own misperceptions that need to be abandoned to solve all misperceptions — all problems.

*And no-one understands the nature of his problem.
If he did, it would be there no more for him to see. Its very nature is that it is NOT.*

It's not there for him to see. It's not there for you to see.

And thus, while he perceives it, he can NOT perceive it as it is.

As long as he perceives the Kingdom of Heaven as a material world and universe he cannot see it as the Kingdom of Heaven.

But healing is apparent in specific instances, and generalizes to include them all.

What does that mean? It means that problems are experienced in a general way, not a specific way. And then they take specific forms as you provide definition to it.

But to the contrary, healing appears in specific instances and then generalizes to include them all. And so you experience the disappearance of a cavity in your tooth. You experience appendicitis vanishing. You experience specific things that in a way are finite, but the experience provides you with a basis for anticipating and being able to believe in other specific instances of healing.

... healing is apparent in specific instances, and generalizes to include them all. This is because they really are the same, despite their different forms. All learning aims at transfer, which becomes complete within two situations which are seen as one, for ONLY common elements are there.

Okay, let's break this apart here:

All learning aims at transfer, which becomes complete within two situations which are seen as one, . .

Here are the two situations: A material world and universe, that's one situation. The Kingdom of Heaven is another situation. But when you see that they are one, they are one thing experienced clearly or through a glass darkly, now the two meet and the dawning in your consciousness can flood your awareness and the transfer of what is Real in both situations to each other becomes a singular and only experience of the Kingdom of Heaven of what is Really there. That's the way it works. And you don't have to know how to make it work. You simply have to be willing to look at what appear to be two different things and recognize that they are one thing seen from two different perspectives – one of which is simply false.

Yet . . .

. . . as I just said, this isn't something you have to understand how to do.

Yet this can only be attained by One Who does not see the differences you see.

And that one is the Holy Spirit – that which is nothing but your right Mind, your whole Mindedness.

The total transfer of your learning is not made by you. But that it has been made in spite of all the differences you see, convinces you that they could not be real.

And the moment you are convinced that the differences are not real, ah-h . . . you release the false definitions, you release the self-righteousness, you release the need for self-defense. And in the peace of your mind all of this becomes clear.

Your healing will extend, . .

. . . spontaneously . . .

. . . and will be brought to problems that you thought were not your own. And it will also be apparent that your many different problems will be solved, as any one of them has been escaped.

Dare . . . oh-h, dare to abandon the practice of self-defense. Dare to believe that in the abandoning it, you will not be found guilty and penalized. And genuinely desire to have the Holy Spirit reveal the Truth to you, because the Holy Spirit will do it. And like a domino effect, the healing will move forth and expand.

This is the point. The whole point of this is to bring each of you to a point of inner equilibrium, a balance that feels natural and feels good, one which is inescapably holy but which makes you not better than anything else because it uncovers the holiness of absolutely everything. And you feel at Home, not different.

I encourage all of you during this coming week to continue to explore [chuckling] the abandonment of the practice of self-righteousness.

And bring a little bit more faith to the fact that if you abandon confusion, you will become clear. And the elements of confusion will not color your new clarity. Your new clarity will emancipate you from them.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

January 6th 2014

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

A long time ago I said, "As I have loved you, love one another."¹ Love one another. I'm staying with this again this week, especially as we enter into this New Year.

You may have noticed that I have been speaking less intellectually, less in terms of intellectual principles and behaviors, and more in terms of Brotherhood – relationship, which is of course what A Course in Miracles is truly about. But it can become very easy to get wrapped up in the intellectual concepts and ideas expressed in the Course as if the ideas were what is important rather than your changing behavior.

The Course is not about A Course in Miracles. The Course is about you. Its function is to promote change, growth, emancipation from what? From the intellect . . . emancipation from the intellect into your Soul – Soul – your divine capacity to feel the Meaning of everything. Your capacity to feel . . . to feel, not think about, not intellectually grasp . . . but feel the divinity of all Creation.

If you don't move into Love, you will remain trapped in the human condition which all of you dearly wish to emancipate yourselves from.

But you know what? You're not used to paying attention with your Soul. It takes quietness. It takes the silencing of the intellect – the human mind, the thinking – so that in the emptiness of thought, in the thoughtlessness achieved, we'll say, in the Silence, divine Meaning can become illuminated in you as your awareness of the truth of something.

This is what the two-step is all about . . . becoming still and then enquiring, “What is the truth here?” the truth beyond your intellect, the truth beyond your best reasonings, your best concepts and your best defenses.

In a way listening seems not to be easy. Because what are you listening for? You're listening for what you don't know yet.

So many of you try as diligently and as honestly as you can to become still and listen. But as Paul did in the very beginning, you forget that what will come will be simpler than anything you're expecting. And one of the reasons it is simpler than anything you're expecting is because it's the experience of Love. And Love is utterly simple. It is an experience of Knowing the truth but not in the intellect . . . in the Soul.

This is very important.

You think that the situations you are in, the circumstances call for you to deal with everything from your intellect. When you are upset with a situation you think it calls for you to use your best reasoning. It seems to call for you to do everything but move into Silence. And yet, Salvation is arrived at only through the Silence . . . through the inner quietness in which the experience of Soul and Love and Truth can register with you and renew you and cause you to see afresh, which will cause everything you see to seem to be transformed even though it's simply returning to its original perfect status which had escaped your attention.

Now in order to Love one another, it is absolutely essential to become still and ask of God, “What is the truth here?” and then remain silent. Why? Because the truth will be revealed to you. The Father and the Holy Spirit – which is nothing more than your right Mind – will disclose to you the truth, which is a miraculous experience, a wonder-filled experience, a divine experience.

And in that experience, there is only one behavior that can follow it. And that is the expression of it, whatever the clarity is of the truth will constitute your new Perspective and it will be a wonder to you and it will be wonderful to you. And your Vision will bless, it will seem, everything that you were misperceiving before, because the illusion will have fallen away.

Now the most significant thing that can get in the way of your loving one another is your tendency to define each other according to your poor thought models. And you project guilt and judgment and negative interpretations upon your Brothers and Sisters. Love cannot be felt in that frame of mind.

Love is the abandoning of the projection of guilt and blame and judgment. The silence you go into is the absence of guilt, blame and judgment. And without that being abandoned, your mind can't be transformed making available to you the God's honest truth about your Brother and about everything.

As I have loved you, love one another. Pay attention to how I have treated you . . . how I do treat you . . . how I teach you . . . how I explain things. Does it leave you guiltless? Does it inspire you to let go of your own poor assessment of yourself because you haven't been condemned and you feel safe? Of course.

I'm going to suggest that maybe other than the precepts and the ideas and the explanations of the meanings in the Course, that other than those things, the truly transforming part of our relationship has lain in the way I treat you. The way I have treated you is more important than what I have taught you.

You are loved because of what you divinely Are. That is perfectly clear to me. And because it is perfectly clear to me I cannot treat you otherwise. It's impossible. Give it some attention to how you have felt treated, whether it's in public Gatherings where we have been together face to face or whether it's over the internet, where it's been a visual image and a voice, or whether it's been the printed word –

how I have loved you . . . feeling. These are the things I need you and you need yourself to embrace and find room for expression in this coming year, because it's through the expression of Love that you will find your way into the Kingdom of Heaven.

All of the words we've been using, all of the words we've read from the Course have been geared to your being motivated to dare to trust into the holy instant. It has invited you to believe that there is a part of you that have not been in touch with, that wants to be in touch with you because its Wholeness and your Wholeness are inseparable from that reunion. It's the Holy Spirit.

You allowing What you have been unaware of to come into you and abide in you and renew you is the way the holy instant works. That is the, we will say, mechanism of it.

And so, if guilt . . . if the projection of guilt and judgment and blame are the key things that stand between you and your Brother and the experience of the communion of love, then do practice abandoning the use of guilt . . . for anything.

Forgive...forgive...forgive. What does that mean? It means go into the holy instant...go into the holy instant...go into the holy instant. It means, go where your right use of your mind can bless you with the experience of truth that causes you to be unable to do anything other than love your Brother. And if you lose it, if you become frustrated again, if you lay a guilt trip on your Brother for whatever reason, STOP and move back into the holy instant. Choose again . . . over and over and over and over. And there can never be too many times to do it. Do it until the inclination to do otherwise ceases.

Now why am I stressing this at the beginning of this year? Well, it's not because things are going to get so bad that it's going to be needed. I'm stressing it because as a matter of fact, more of you – more of those on the face of your globe – are at a point of being able to hear and feel and grasp the importance of loving one another. We'll say that a level of maturity has been arrived at which will allow for transformation as a result of Love to occur and spread much more rapidly.

But you know what? That's a fact, but you will need to behave as though it's not the fact. You can't say, "Oh, it's going to be easier now," and then rest back on your laurels and not put yourself in that uncomfortable position of the unknown, where for the thirtieth or the fortieth or the two hundredth time you have given the benefit of the doubt to your Brother or Sister.

Do it as though it's the most important thing in the world. Because your Sanity is the most important thing in the world. And the blessing that the world will experience as a result of your Sanity is the most important thing in the world.

Be alert. Monitor your thoughts. Watch what goes on in your mind. If you are not, in every encounter with your Brother or Sister, insisting upon finding His guiltlessness, you are missing out! You will stay stuck and it is unnecessary.

Again, remember this: to forgive is to engage in an act and it's not an act that extends from your mean-spiritedness directly to your Brother, where you think friendly thoughts. It's not where you, in direct connection with your Brother, try to change things. It is an act of going into the Silence – the first part of the holy instant, the first part of the two-step.

Forgiveness is the silencing of the projection of guilt, judgment and blame. That's an inner act within you. And that inner act practiced, with the intent to learn of your Brother's divinity and holiness and your genuinely listening, will result in insight, in clarity arising, in Revelation. And that's what it's all about.

So forgiveness isn't just refraining from projecting guilt. It's you engaging in a conscious act of going into the Silence within you. You could say, moving into the altar in the very center of your Being, where you bring your innocent attention with inquisitiveness and then abiding in the genuineness of your desire by listening until you hear. That is forgiveness. And that is what heals. That is, we will say, the stepping-stone to your Salvation.

I may seem to be speaking seriously, not bubbling over with joy here, even though we're talking about loving one another and the importance of it. And the reason is, that I do want to convey that commitment needs to be brought into play, simply because every single one of you engages in the projection of guilt and blame and judgment all day long, every day, even if you think you are doing it for positive reasons, for positive outcomes. So it's a habit. And it's a habit that has to be replaced by loving one another. And so it will seem to take effort . . . consistency. That's all.

Is it because you're bad? No. If you want to learn how to play a piece on the piano, you must sit down and practice it. Why, because there's something wrong with you and so you have to bring diligence into play and rehearse and rehearse and rehearse? No. It's because that's the way it works when you are overcoming ignorance. You see? Simple.

So I am encouraging you to purposely – I almost said seriously – to purposely enter into this year practicing the willingness to love one another, and bringing it into play more than ever before. Certainly we have not reached the end of A Course In Miracles, but there is no reason not to begin now to practice what you've learned – what is clear to you – so that you might not have to get to the end of the book before you're Awake!

Love one another. Love yourself . . . as I have loved you, love yourself. As I have loved you, love one another. Every single one of you are worth it. And it is the practice of love that transforms everything. Why? Because the greatest gift you can bring to anyone or anything is the recognition of its divinity, of its holiness.

Like when you see someone that you haven't seen for years and you're not quite sure if it's them, and then they turn toward you and you recognize them. That's not an intellectual process. It's a knowing. A friend is there. You know him, you know her. Recognition occurs. Loving one another is what happens when you turn to the Holy Spirit – that which is nothing more than your right Mind – or the Father, desiring to know the truth and having the truth revealed to you so that you know what to look for, to recognize the divinity and holiness of your Brother or Sister. You see?

And so you can make that gift, which is what it's all about. It's that simple. It's that humble. And to those practicing a great deal of arrogance, it is that humiliating. But it is a healing humiliation.

I do love you all. And my desire is for you to feel it and share it, extend it, embody it, project it on your world, if you will, which will automatically happen. And guilt, judgment and blame will disappear forever. And that is the point. You changing, you being changed by the Revelation of Truth in your mind is what it's all about because you're connected with your Soul again.

I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

January 14th 2014

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We're going to be talking about an interesting topic, one that in many ways we've talked about before, but not quite the way we're going to talk about it tonight.

You've heard me refer to everyone as the holy Sons and Daughters of God. You've heard me make it clear that every single one of you is divine even though you believe otherwise. And you've heard me refer to you as Brothers and Sisters of mine.

Now even though we have discussed this at length, there is a persistent habit of perception that gets in the way of the fulfillment of the Meaning of those words. The persistent perception is that you are human beings – that you are born, that you grow up and as you grow up you learn. And a lot of your learning is done through classes and books. And as you move into adulthood, the sorts of things that you choose to learn about become more varied. And you choose books about all kinds of topics including spirituality and religion. And you gain comfort from your learning as you age and eventually die.

And you don't challenge that sort of moving picture, that perceptual lifetime that you, as one of many human beings, go through and carry on a tradition of, we'll say, spiritual learning. But nevertheless, you do it as you age and die.

Now, when I have referred to you as being holy Sons and Daughters of God, I mean that you are something quite different from that perception that you carry with you. And if the perception isn't challenged, there can't be breakthrough into the *experience of what those words Mean.

Now in the Christian tradition of religion and religious study, there is a concept: the concept of the Trinity – the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit – called, “the three Persons of the Trinity.” And as you study A Course in Miracles and you read about the Holy Spirit, you continue, in spite of what the book says, to perceive the Holy Spirit as a part of a Trinity that keeps It separate from the other two parts, distinctly Itself. And this gets in the way of what needs to happen.

Now, you've heard me incessantly repeat the phrase: “The Holy Spirit – that which is nothing more than your right Mind.” I repeat it, because the only place that phrase appears is in the original transcript of A Course in Miracles. It was edited out of all of the revisions. I repeat it so that it cannot be forgotten, and so that it keeps the door open to an intimacy that exists between you and the Holy Spirit – that keeps It from being a separate part of a Trinity.

Nevertheless, many of you turn problems over to the Holy Spirit. Many of you ask, as you do the two-step, as you practice the holy instant, you ask the Holy Spirit, “What is the truth here?” or the Father, and you listen for an Answer. The Answer always comes as a realization of truth clothed in words because that is what you have asked for and that's the language in which you are listening. In other words, the mode in which you are listening is that of paying attention to hear language – words that express intelligence.

And in a way, this does not contribute to the clarity of mind that would reveal to you that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind. And that in the joining of you with the Holy Spirit, in other words, in the abandoning of the boundary between what you think you are and what you divinely Are, all of what you Are comes together in a unity where the Holy Spirit is your Mind, is therefore, your experience of Being of (I'm going to carefully say) Selfhood.

Now the Trinity is not an eternal fact. It was an accommodation to the choice that was made to be an independent agent, when you said “Father, I’d rather do it my way. Father I would rather determine what this is and what that is. I wish to create my own meanings for everything.”

Now coming Home involves letting that Mind – which is nothing more than your right Mind – permeate the privacy that you have indulged in of a personal individual, self-governing selfhood and letting a melding occur, or a reunion occur.

Now I’m going to suggest to you that when you ask the Holy Spirit, “What is the truth here?” that you ask to have the experience of Truth, not an intellectual understanding. I encourage you to ask the Holy Spirit to reveal to you Its experience of the Truth about you, of the Truth about every aspect of your world, of the Truth about your Brothers and Sisters, so that the two parts of the Trinity, called, “the Son and the Holy Spirit,” collapse, and there is just the Son, which is the Holy Spirit or there is just the Holy Spirit, which is the Son.

Now when that occurs, it would seem that you would be left with the Father and the Holy Spirit/Son: Two things instead of three.

But the wonder of it is, that the Trinity totally collapses into a Unity where the Father, Being the Movement of Mind that constitutes Creation, is the Source and the Manifestation. God Is what is rendered visible and tangible as Creation. It’s all One. And yet in that collapse from a Trinity into a Unity, Creation does not lose its *infinite manifestation, its infinite recognizability.

You as Soul continue to experience everything in terms of what it divinely Is without any misperceptions being overlaid upon everything. And so your Mind is Whole . . . your Mind is Whole, but it is not nebulous. The Holy Spirit – that which is nothing more than your right Mind – when you let It in to the space that you had been holding private, constitutes an influx of (what’s the word we use?) *Enlightenment of Revelation where something is revealed. And what is revealed is the experience of the actual Meaning that the Father is expressing in and as every single thing – every aspect of the infinity of what God Is.

Now, if you have been seeing yourself as a human, a mortal, going through life reading books, praying to a Father which is part of the Trinity, and reaching out to the Holy Spirit which is part of a Trinity, and thinking that the Son is Jesus Christ and not You, you have a wonderful and essential discovery to make. And that's the point. You are going to realize your divinity. You are going to feel it. Your holiness will be inseparable from and indistinguishable from you and your conscious experience of Being. Your conscious experience of being with . . . being in relationship with your Brothers and Sisters who it is very clear to you are also the Christ.

This is what most everyone is afraid to let happen.

It is wonderful to think of yourself as being holy. It's wonderful to think that your true status is that of my full Brothers and Sisters. But, do you want the experience? It's an important question. And especially since I'm stating it so clearly: that the experience *awaits you, that the separation of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit is not actual. You see?

Now it's rather like the "Gold Rush," we'll say, where many flocked to the places where gold was discovered and mined it. And they came from all walks of life – a lot of them from poverty. And what was the procedure? Well, the procedure was first, find gold. Second, stake your claim. And third, register it.

Now as you study the Course, or without studying the Course, if you have leaned into the Silence within yourself wanting to Know the Truth, you have taken the first step – that of looking for gold. Having found it, as it is revealed to you, you have to "stake your claim." In other words, you have to acknowledge that the experience of what you call "Guidance" is Real and is actually being provided to you by an Awakened Brother or Sister who is performing the very same function as the Holy Spirit. Or, it is direct from the Holy Spirit. That's the way you stake your claim – you consciously choose to have this experience.

Then registering your claim means the step we're talking about tonight, where you move beyond the level of information about your divinity and about the divinity of all things and you ask for the experience of the divinity of everything. You ask the Holy Spirit – that which is nothing more than your right Mind – to share with you It's experience of what everything really Is . . . It's experience of Truth.

That's the way you register your claim to your divinity.

You register your claim by claiming it as yours and letting the transformation happen, letting yourself be changed, letting yourself be infilled with an undistorted, unmistakably holy experience of yourself, of your Brothers and Sisters and of everything.

Now, it's a popular idea among Course students that when that happens the universe will disappear – things will cease to be. But it's not true, because the infinite Expression of God is eternal, identifiable, experienceable, actual. The experience of It awaits you in every single moment.

And so, it's time to abandon this picture of yourself as someone who lives in a house or an apartment or a tent or even the back of a car, who reaches out to God or studies a holy book and reaches out to the Holy Spirit asking for understanding, asking for things without ever expecting the Trinity to collapse into a Unity that brings you into an infinite conscious experience of everything as God is Being it and God is Seeing it. Because you see the Father has withheld nothing of what He is from any aspect of His Creation.

Now, you holy Sons and Daughters of God, I want you to realize that your embrace of your holiness is the means by which you escape the distorted perceptions which have been the result of you believing that you are something other than holy. And your reverence for your perceptions, after all it's quite a concept isn't it, that mankind is through the ages growing spiritually, and someday mankind, as this sort of developing group through the ages, will discover the Truth and be transformed into something new.

No, this hasn't been happening through the ages and you don't have to feel like you're carrying on a tradition. You don't want to be carrying on what I taught two thousand years ago. You want to be embodying what I or the Holy Spirit or your Guide or the Father reveals to you in the very moment you're in and making enquiry – NOW!

You're not on a long journey, and you're not on a long journey that mankind, whatever that group is that has been moving down through the centuries. You're not that! You are the point of conscious awareness. You are at this very moment, the presence of Mind – and I'm going to capitalize that word "Mind" because the Mind that you are, the Mind that is you is God presencing Himself right where you are. And so the experience of what God Is, is presencing Itself simultaneously in that very instance. You see?

And so, stop being on a journey of spiritual growth, either down through the ages or through this lifetime which you will end up dying out of and at some future time or place you will Wake up. No, you'll Wake up when you grab the moment you're in and you say, "Father," or you say, "Holy Spirit, reveal to me the experience of Truth right here, it's my Birthright to Know it, to have the experience."

You know, in an allegorical way you could say that before the crucifixion, there was the Father and the Son. And at the end, when I was leaving, we will say, I said that I would provide a Comforter. The Comforter was the Holy Spirit. And of course, the Holy Spirit has been present since the moment you got your divorce from the Father and said, "I would rather do it my way." In that moment when you acted upon your decision, you lost your experience of your divine infinite wholeness. And because it couldn't be affected, it remained, but you were unaware of it, and it was what is called the Holy Spirit – that which is nothing more than your right Mind.

And so, there was a Trinity. It didn't happen as a sequence in time. The establishment, we'll say, of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit happened at the instant that each one of you decided to join with another Son or Daughter of God and make up your own stories, your own rules, your own definitions and your own codes of conduct.

It's the undoing of that that we're talking about. And you need to understand or be clear that the doing of it is something you're doing now, it's not something you did in the past, way back in "the beginning." You can think of it that way but that will bind you.

Your freedom comes in understanding that at this very moment you are that point of conscious awareness, you are the point of Mind that is conscious and embraces all that infinitely is, because your Mind in this moment, is God Moving, God Moving You, God Being You and All.

And so, time cannot trap you. Time is not delaying you. Your holiness is actual at this moment and your practice of the two-step is the way you lay claim to your divinity. Step one of the two-step, of the holy instant is, shut up, isn't it? Abandon your conscious active creation of meanings, of definitions, of explanations, of interpretations that give everything apparent substance, but only to a deluded awareness. It never becomes actual. Nothing ever ceases to be what God is Being. Because in the holy instant, the point of conscious awareness, we will say, in the now . . . in the now . . . in the now . . . is Eternity, is infinity.

When you practice the holy instant from now on, ask for the experience of Truth, ask for the experience that it's not only your Birthright to be experiencing but is the only thing you can actually experience. In this way, your persistence will result in the dissolution of, the evaporating of, the disappearing of misperceptions, and you will experience being holy.

I'm going to end with something important. The experience of holiness is not complicated or strange. It is not outlandish. It is simple. It can best be described as an experience, a humble experience of everything, of yourself and everything you see. As an experience of infinite Creation that is infinitely and specifically incredibly holy, beautiful, harmonious, perfect, inviolable. And nothing is more important than anything else, because holiness is whole. Holiness is ultimate.

And so everything fits exquisitely on an infinite scale that isn't confusing because the simplicity of the Love of God that moves into expression remains simple. You will find your holiness in an experience of yourself that is more genuine, less presumptuous, less magnified and therefore, less threatenable. And it will speak of and illuminate peace while at the same time being an exquisitely ultimate experience of Being.

Don't be afraid to embrace your holiness. Do not be reluctant to ask for the experience of You in your right Mind. You will become, for lack of better words, a more genuine presence, whose presence is a blessing to all things.

And so, in your house, or your apartment, or your tent, or the back seat of your car, you can stop being “a human living through a lifetime that will end in death,” and, instead, everything can become truly meaningful and truly transformational just because Love is its fundamental and actual nature. And you see it. And you behave toward it with that understanding, I will say, which has come from the experience. Let what will be the wonderfulness of you come forth and don't worry that it will make others jealous, or envious, or angry with you.

The Presence of God heals and transforms. And the Presence of God is what the Son is. It is what you Are. Let It in. Consciously invite It so that you can be in your house, or apartment, or tent, or the back seat of your car in a new way that changes everything, by turning the creation that you see that appears to be infinitely conflicted into a unity of perfect harmony. And let your Brothers and Sisters be the reason you engage in embracing your holiness. Let your desire to uncover the holiness of your Brothers and Sisters be that which facilitates your discovery of your holiness unifying what had been chaotic.

I love you all, you holy Sons and Daughter of God, my Brothers and Sisters.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

January 28th 2014

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We're going to stay with the theme a little longer – the theme of loving one another. We're going to come at it from a slightly different angle tonight, that angle being, bearing witness. Usually, bearing witness is thought of as bearing witness for each other as in a court case or in an argument or in a situation where clarification is needed.

But actually, we need to talk about bearing witness to Reality, bearing witness to everything in its Actuality.

When Moses came down from the mountain with the Commandments, one of the Commandments said, "Thou shalt not bear false witness"¹ . . . continuing with examples that was something not to do.

But what to do instead? The very fact that the subject was bearing witness, means that bearing witness is the activity that needs to be engaged in correctly, instead of incorrectly.

Now, the Bible speaks about glorifying God. Well, that's bearing witness. To glorify God is to bear witness to God. Since you are the Son or Daughter of God, your function is to bear witness to your Source – That which is responsible for your Being at this very moment. To let That which is Being You show forth, that is your divine function. And it's through the practice of the holy instant that this is accomplished.

Now when you're not joined with the Holy Spirit or the Father and you are not being "in the world" from that joined place, you are being in it under the guidance and the rules of mutual agreements. And so indeed you witness for each other, but you also witness against each other. And always it is for the purpose of accomplishing a goal of self-improvement. Even when you are engaged in promoting another's self-improvement, it is always with your benefit behind it – to witness for another doesn't mean to witness for what is Real about another or what is true about another, it means doing that which will accomplish a selfish end result – a result that will benefit you and if it is going to benefit you, well, the one you're bearing witness for is going to end up feeling good as well, even though it's a game of manipulation, it's a dance the two of you engage in without ever asking of the Father or the Holy Spirit, "What is the truth about this one I'm relating to, so that I might magnify that, so that I might behave in accordance with what is Real and turn what had been a special relationship into a holy relationship. You see?

Bearing witness . . . bearing witness. You know, to truly bear witness is to be like a teacher. What does a teacher do? The teacher bears witness to that in the student, which the student is not aware of yet. One could say that the teacher bears witness to a capacity beyond what the student thinks he has. And he provides the environment and the encouragement for that student to access it. And the key element of accessing it, is curiosity, isn't it.

A true teacher doesn't send the student to a book to learn. A teacher puts the student in a mental environment – the student's own mental environment – points him there and says, "Now be curious."

You can go to the books all you want and you can read about the result of what someone else ended up with as a result of going within themselves. You see? But that's not what you're supposed to emulate. You're not to emulate the result.

You truly are to go within yourself and reach for, be curious to know what you haven't the slightest idea about yet. You see? The teacher bears witness to that in the student, which the student is not yet aware of.

You see how healing that is? You see how transformational that is? How different that is from manipulating each other for selfish ends – witnessing for another because it will get you something instead of reveal Something already there much greater than was seen before?

The petty manipulations, the small-minded means by which everyone witnesses for each other is empty of fulfillment, because it never lifts those involved out of a personal involvement that is being carried out from an image that each one of them has about themselves being an orphan and needing to do something to establish credibility and meaning.

And yet credibility and meaning cannot be experienced until one abandons the bearing of false witness – follows the Commandment. See, even when you're bearing witness for the integrity of another, if that integrity has nothing to do with an awareness of God in them, it's just an integrity that is conceptual and it doesn't lift anyone into a valid enduring place or way of being.

So, we have the two-step. We have the holy instant to get out of the orphan mind-set and the manipulations that orphans go through.

Now, you want to bear true witness for your Brother? Well then, you shut up. You turn your attention away from your Brother to your Father, or to the Holy Spirit – that which is nothing more than your right Mind – and you ask, “What is the truth here?” And as I said last time, you ask, “I wish to have the experience of what the truth is here so that what I do and what I say and the way I am with my Brother inspires him to let himself into that place in him where the Holy Spirit – that is nothing more than his right Mind – can enter and inspire and illuminate what he didn't know before. So that he ends up along with you, glorifying God, bearing witness to the Presence of God.”

That's what the Course is all about.

There's a lot that's distressing going on in the world today. And you know what? You can't afford to start with the way things are or the way things appear to be or the way you're perceiving them if you want to get out of it. You're going to have to step out of the orphan mind-set, out of the level of manipulation, out of the level of bearing false witness and so-called true witness about the other orphans and make the connection with the Father.

That's what it's all about.

You know, some of you don't like being lonely. Some of you, let's say, who have been mothers or even parents, and your role has been to be a mother and the children grow and the children leave and the house is empty and you have no one to mother or father and your life is empty, meaningless. Well, the role of mother is a temporary one that serves a function. But it isn't who you Are, it isn't what you Are. And to try to keep the role when there's no one to practice it on, causes depression because it's constantly meaningless.

But you know what? When you find yourself alone, if you find yourself without personal friends, if you find yourself without associations that you used to have, be grateful because you have the opportunity and the time and the quietness to become still and practice the holy instant, the two-step.

All of you play roles with each other if you're not listening to Guidance. Count on it! There's nothing original or Real about what you're doing if you're just bouncing off of each other's egos.

And so if you have the quiet time and the space in which to ask of the Holy Spirit what the truth is – to engage in learning – be grateful, because you're not being distracted by your spontaneous tendencies to fulfill a role with your Brother or Sister when you're in the way with them.

Then as a result of your practicing the holy instant and experiencing the influx of the Father's Perspective so that you are able to bear witness to It, you are in a perfect position to have an encounter with a Brother or Sister or friend and not be immediately sucked back into the habitual role, the habitual way of relating to each other that causes you to reinforce the orphan mentality again.

Your job is to love one another, which means, your job is to bear witness for each other, which means to bear witness to the Father in them that you are experiencing because you said, "Before I engage in a relationship with my Brother I am going to join with the Father so that I can see my Brother truly and be with him from there." That is the Answer. That is the step to your salvation. That is the means of your Awakening.

Now, this is not necessarily new to you, but you are in need of someone to witness for you and witness to That in you which you're not yet aware of, and inspire your curiosity which may have been dulled through disappointment, because of the loss of those to manipulate.

And so, I am engaging in witnessing for you by pointing you in the direction of that which you're not experiencing yet but which it is your Birthright to be experiencing. And I'm telling you to go within, into the Silence and become curious, want to know the truth, want to experience the truth.

Now, because this isn't something new in its totality to you, you have engaged in these activities and there have been times when you have been met with resistance. There have been times that opposition has confronted you and you have said, "Oh, this doesn't work." Or, you have persisted and persisted and persisted, and there is a stubbornness on the part of the one you are engaging with, based on that one's internal decisions, that you're not able to overcome. And so you say, "Hm-m-m, this must not be the truth. This must not be the step to salvation. This must not be the ultimate thing that will promote Awakening." And it's not true.

You need some perspective. And so I'm going to return to the example of the teacher — let's say a professor (although it can be a teacher anywhere). But the professor has classes in a university. And students sign up for his classes and show up — attend the classes — and he teaches them.

As he's walking around the campus, or perhaps having lunch in the cafeteria, he engages in chats with other students, who are not his students, and may, from time to time, share with them what he's teaching and invite them to check into his class. But, you know what? He doesn't try to teach them there!

There is a prerequisite to learning. And the prerequisite to learning is the presence of curiosity . . . acted upon. And so, when you run into resistance or sheer opposition, stop attempting to be the teacher! Stop attempting to practice the holy instant for a planned result! Stop using, or trying to use the holy instant as a means of control!

Essential to learning is curiosity, acted upon. And in practical terms for the professor, that means that if he is going to teach a student, the student is going to have to be curious, and he's going to have to act on his curiosity by signing up for the class and showing up in the classroom . . . bringing his attention with him. Then the teacher will give his all to that student. That teacher will practice the two-step himself, practice the holy instant himself or herself, and witness to the more that that student is, and is capable of, than he's presently allowing — inviting and accepting in. It's simple.

Be careful that you don't use your spirituality as a higher level of control, and stay with your common sense. Teach those who have brought their curiosity into your presence.

Now, I've used the example of a teacher, a teacher as a concept, a teacher as a role. And I'm not suggesting that you scan the horizon for the best teachers you've had, or to do a study on what has constituted the greatest teachers in the world, so that you might emulate their behavior in the world. You see?

If you're being a teacher, it's because you're not trying to be a role. It's very simple. When you listen for the truth about your Brother so that you may use it as a means of control, then you are indeed trying to be the role of a teacher.

But when you engage in the holy instant, when you shut your ego up, when you silence your thinking and you bring your curiosity to the Father or the Holy Spirit — which is nothing more than your right Mind — then your attention isn't on yourself and what you're doing, at all, or what others might think you're doing, what it looks like, whether you look foolish, or wise, or important, or unimportant, because your focus, your attention is on the truth and the experience of its Meaning. And you're letting that elicit your behavior, prompt your behavior toward your Brother or your Sister, whom you're not in the least bit interested in controlling or enlightening, as it were.

You're being the Presence of the Father. You're letting the Father show up. You're glorifying God by bearing witness to what? To God, not yourself. You are bearing witness to God. You are involved, but you're not involved as the originator of your behavior and you're not being a role.

And so, there's a simple, humble, genuineness to you. And I'll tell you something: That simple, humble, genuineness feels good, not only to everyone around you, but to everything . . . every plant, every animal, every rock, every object. Because every one of them is a divine Idea, an active divine Idea in the Mind of God at this moment, bearing witness to God at this very moment. And when you're doing the same thing, there is what I'm going to call, a resonance with everything. Resonance is harmony, for lack of better words, it feels good, it is that which elicits joy.

Now, this is your function: to glorify God, to bear witness to the Reality of everything as God is Being It because God is revealing to you what He is being and providing the experience of what it Means.

This is the way the Trinity collapses into a Unity.

Now, let's be clear on something else: Don't even bother to try to bear witness for yourself. You know what? That's what the ego is. That is what you are suffering from. And that is what you want to abandon.

When you are willing to turn within to the Father, or the Holy Spirit – whose job it is to reveal to you the Father's Meanings – you find yourself in utter harmony with everything, and everything finds itself in utter harmony with you. And it is a conscious experience had by everything. And that is a way of describing the Unity that is caused by or brought forth by the collapse of the Trinity. And that's Awakening.

Now let's keep it simple this week. None of you has any other job to engage in, but to bear witness to God . . . to bear witness to God in your Brother and Sister, and to not confuse yourselves by trying to compete with resistance or opposition that you run into. And mind you, having an opinion about it is engaging in competition with it. And it will drag you right down into the polarities of the orphan mentality. And you're going to have to find a way once again to be alone so that you're not reinforcing your old habits and you can shut up without distraction, and you can return your attention to the Father so that you in your bearing witness to the Father, can allow the Father to bear witness to you in your actuality.

It's beautiful. It is simple. Don't let yourselves be discouraged.

I love you very much. And I promise you that no matter when you might be hearing this, I am with you now. You are not alone. The Holy Spirit – which is nothing more than your right Mind – is with you and of course, the Father is with you because the Father is being all there is of you.

Accepting these facts, promotes the collapse, bringing about the experience of Unity. When things seem to be rough, this is what is called for. What is called for is, the Answer to the dissonance, or the problems, or the unfairness and so on. You see? So don't be discouraged, because there's ample opportunity to bare true witness. It will be your joy.

I love you very much. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

February 9th 2014

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

The last time we were together, we talked about bearing witness, and the difference between bearing false witness and bearing true witness. And for a brief review: Bearing false witness is when you witness to your definitions, your beliefs, your confidences. It's when you bear witness to mutual agreements that you have made with each other, but not with God.

It's that simple.

More importantly, bearing true witness is to bear witness to God – to bear witness to Creation as it truly is. Bearing witness to Creation is to glorify God.

And you know what? That's the definition of prayer.

You think of prayer as a request – questions that you ask of God in hopes of getting answers. But prayer is sharing what you have learned as a result of setting aside your best judgments and your best ideas, because in the silence you have asked, “What is the truth here? I want to the know the truth about this, that or the other thing.”

That's not the prayer. Prayer is the act of giving glory to God.

Now this is not a foreign idea. But it's much more intimate the way I'm expressing it than is usual.

When you pray, you give evidence of God by expressing God's Meaning. That is prayer. Prayer is a Gift. It's not something where you ask to get. This is very important.

Now it's simple. There's only one thing confronting you at any given moment – at any point in your day or what you call, your life. The one thing that is confronting you is what God is Being. When I say that, I mean the only thing confronting you is undistorted, perfect Reality which when you see it through a glass darkly, which means when you put it through the sieve of your personal assessment and interpretations and your attempt to give definition yourself, you see a distorted perception — a misperception.

But your perception is not what is there. This is the fundamental point. Because your perception is not what is actually there, because what I will call mankind's perception as to what is there, is not based upon a joining with That which has formed it. You're seeing something that is not only unreal, you're seeing something that can disappear instantly. And what had been a bondage to you will not be present any longer without any process to its disappearance.

That is the importance of it. The fact that your misperceptions of what is going on are purely illusory, is what means that their correction can be instantaneous!

Be with that for a moment . . .

Now, everyone's familiar with the feeling of "not fitting in," of not belonging. Most of the time, you have these feelings relative to groups in your society, or your community, or your family. But at times you experience it on a larger scale: Like, you do not belong here "in the world." You see? You don't fit in the world, in this universe, in this "material" universe. You see?

A book was written entitled, Stranger in a Strange Land,¹ and you feel at times like a stranger in a strange land – foreign to you, unnatural to you. And this idea of a disparity between you and what you're experiencing also finds expression in the words, "being in the world but not of it." You see? As though there's a discrepancy that is actual.

And so, even metaphysically or spiritually the idea of being intelligent and careful not to be deluded, you need to make sure that if you're in the world, you're not of it. This is careless thinking. It is an idea which absolutely blocks the opportunity for the misperception of Reality [snaps fingers] to instantaneously vanish.

Why? Because as long as you feel that there's the possibility of actually not belonging – of actually not fitting in, that you are . . . oh-h . . . in a body temporarily, but it's not your eternal destiny to be in a body, and so you will "live through it" and you will "make the best of it" and you will hopefully turn it into learning, so that if you have the experience again, you'll be further along the road to your Salvation. You see? In the body but not of it! You see? Careless thinking.

Why? Because as I said, if you are only confronted with one thing and that is Reality, if you are only confronted with Creation, meaning exactly what God is perfectly Being, then your way out of your misperception – the past, if you will – the direction to move in is right into that which you're calling "the strange land," the very thing that you do not feel you are a part of.

As long as you indulge in the idea that there is a world that you can be in but not of, you will always be being alert, you will always be scanning your experience to separate what's valid from what's invalid so that you don't get sucked in and end up being "of the world."

And yet, anything you pick in the world, point at, and what you're pointing at is some aspect of Reality, some aspect of the perfect flawless, harmonious, invincible Creation of God. And if you want to cut through the illusion, you've got to home in on the very thing that you would avoid. You've got to be willing to look at any part of your world with the conscious intent to discover God there. You see?

The world is not something to "rise above." You're not to rise above the world. But you are to pierce the misperception. And you're having a misperception of something specific. And the something specific is Reality – the Presence of God.

So, you've got to be willing to give your attention there, anywhere – anywhere at all – give your attention there with a conscious desire to see God there, and abandoning your best judgments and assessments and definitions and saying, “What is the truth here Father?” You see?

Do not let this artificial discrepancy between you and a world that you're not to be of – let it become an invalid concept. Because until you do, there are parts of your world that you will avoid because . . . what? Well, they're beneath you, or they are too immoral, or they are unworthy of your attention or your blessing. That part of the world doesn't deserve it!

Is that not arrogance? Is that not self-righteousness?

You can see now how self-righteousness will, by virtue of the way it functions, cause you to withdraw your attention from the threshold of Awakening! You see that?

This is important. You must become single-minded – single of purpose. You must get up every day and go through your day with the intent to see the Presence of God EVERYWHERE – everywhere you look, any place you give your attention to, any one you give your attention to.

“Oh, they don't deserve it! Oh, they don't want to hear it! They don't want to know the truth.” You see? “I do. They don't and a lot of others don't and that's why I don't fit – that's why I don't belong!”

You know what? When you drive along a road you see “for sale signs.” And sometimes the property that is for sale is a dilapidated property and there's not much desire to purchase it, of course, unless you see a way to make a buck. But that's not my point.

My point is, that when you see a dilapidated property, is it a place to see as foreign to you, unworthy of your attention? Or do you see it as an opportunity to restore its original intent – to redeem it to its original state? You see what I'm getting at?

When you go through your day and you see, in any form, a world that you don't want to be of, or a group that you don't want to be of, or anything else that you use as a means of separating yourself — isolating yourself from — you need to catch yourself and recognize that here is an opportunity of redemption. And that is the purpose of that moment. Because until you do it and until you Wake up, that is the only thing you should be giving your attention to. Because that is the only thing that will free you from the misperception of the Kingdom of Heaven and reveal to you the Kingdom of Heaven that it is right now. That's why it's the only thing to do.

The only thing to do is that which Wakes you up. Anything else leaves you a stranger in a strange land. And you know that being a stranger doesn't feel good. It's not your Birthright. And it's not even actually possible, it's only imaginatively possible. You see? And then the possibility that you're experiencing isn't Real.

Some of you have the experience of a sudden shift of perception, where what wasn't real vanishes and what is in its place is the opposite, and you call it a miracle. If that has happened once in your experience, or if that has happened once to someone else in your immediate experience, where they are close enough for you to catch the Meaning of it, then you understand what I am talking about and can bring your commitment more easily to the task I'm talking about.

Now are you the Sons of God, and now is everything the Kingdom of Heaven. And as the Son or Daughter of God it's your Birthright to be experiencing who you Are, and the Kingdom of Heaven as It is. And the restoration of your Sanity* is what it's all about . . . is what everything we're talking about is all about.

Watch out . . . watch out for any technique that you find being used that distorts your perception and causes you to doubt the true Meaning, the true value, the actual divinity of absolutely everything, which seems to justify your standing apart from It — “rising above it,” as they used to say.

Whatever you feel like rising above, whatever you feel uninclined to expend the energy on, catch yourself and give your attention and energy there.

What does that mean? It means to bring your curiosity there. It doesn't mean to bring some capacity you have in your mind to force a new perception into the picture. It doesn't mean to exercise a form of will through creative imagination. It calls for peace in you. It calls for silence in you. It calls for the humility in you that allows you to abandon control, which means creating new ideas or abiding by ideas already established in your mind, and making room for what you're not expecting, making room for what you don't know, which isn't the exercise of will at all. It's the presence of yielding. You hear that? It's the presence of yielding—letting in.

So, the next time you're in a circumstance which seems to be less than the best — to be one that you would rather not be associated with — or some dilapidated property along the road, catch yourself. Don't go down that road of judgment and false superiority in your mind. Humble yourself to bring wonder into play. That's what curiosity is — wonder. "I wonder what the truth is? I wonder what is actually right there where I seem to see a strange land that I don't fit in."

In the simple act of wonder, that which is wonderful comes forth and that is the only way it does. You see?

In a way it's like being a super-sleuth, because you want to get past all the folderol, all of the belief structures which cause what you're looking at to seem to you to be a strange land, and make you seem to be a stranger in it. When the fact is, that as the holy Son or Daughter of God, you are inseparable from Creation in all of its flawless perfection. And so, you're not a stranger in It and you're not, not of It! It's a unity.

Now, when I said that you're not to rise above the world but pierce the misperception, that could have sounded aggressive to you. But the only way to pierce the misperception is by yielding to what is behind it. It's like yielding through the misperception, sinking through it by not validating the misperception, sinking through it by means of the humble desire to see the Presence of God that has to be there, because there literally is nothing else present! And now that is clearer to you, giving you a means to practice this with more trust and I will even say, with more anticipation.

Wherever you are, whatever you're experiencing, *be present with it, not judging it and standing apart from it — above it, superior to it. Be present with it. Sink into it, knowing that you're not sinking into the current definition you're holding of it, but that you are sinking into the Presence of God that *is what is there that you have been blinded to, but which it is your Birthright to be experiencing, and therefore, awaits your simple acceptance of the fact that the illusion is an illusion, that your current beliefs are not true and have no substance or structural integrity to hold themselves together and successfully blind you. Therefore, they can collapse instantaneously and will collapse instantaneously.

A Course in Miracles* defines a miracle as “a sudden shift of perception.” We're talking tonight about what that sudden shift of perception is.

Be careful not to take the definitions you are applying to your world as you go through your day and the media tempts to bias you and train you into how to see things. Be careful that you do not take your perceptions seriously, else you will be trapped a little longer until you can remember that if you're seeing anything less than the Kingdom of Heaven, if you're seeing anything less than infinite, harmonious, invincible *Reality, then you are seeing nothing with substance and you need to not validate what you are seeing, and you need to bring wonder into your mind with a sense of expectancy. And you must continue to do this until, we'll say, the misperception is pierced, or until in your humble lack of assertion of private perceptions, you find yourself infilled with a sudden shift of perception, in which redemption occurs, healing occurs — everything is redeemed to its spiritual original. And that which appeared to be dilapidated, or unworthy of interest or attention is gone because it has been redeemed.

It's not gone because it wasn't real. It's not gone because it was an illusion. It's gone because the misperception you applied to it was abandoned by you when you began to wonder.

I'm using the word "wonder" here in it's wonderful connotations so that you understand that what I'm talking about tonight is not to be seen as work, it's not a labor to engage in. It's a joy to allow.

Joy to the World . . . joy to the world coming from you is prayer, the evidence to your having said, "Yes" to God. Not the evidence of your having asked for a favor, but because you don't want to hold yourself — you holy Son of God or holy Daughter of God — you don't want to hold yourself separate from the very Source of You one moment longer.

I have been making a joyful noise unto the Lord tonight. And I'm sharing it with you and inviting you to join me in doing the same thing.

I love you all and I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

February 24th 2014

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

A short time ago, I shared with everyone that on February 7th we arrived at an anniversary—the anniversary of my first conversation with Paul, Paul's first conversation with me thirty-two years ago.

Since then we have been working together. And Paul's and Susan's life has revolved around this work we have done together in association with all of you and all of those through the years who have found what we are sharing to be valuable, meaningful and healing.

During those years, there was only one reason that there was a continuity—a consistency, and it wasn't just because Paul was willing to listen to me, but it was because there was, shall I say, a natural partnership which evolved between us and everyone who availed themselves of the materials and the involvement with us.

In other words, there was no private personal wealth that Paul was able to use to successfully carry on the work for thirty-two years. In fact, during those thirty-two years, Paul and Susan have not acquired assets, like automobiles and houses and stocks and bonds. They have constantly lived on the cusp and continue, as many of you know, because we frequently let it be known when there's a need for support and there is less than three hundred dollars in the Foundation's bank account.

The fact is, that the Foundation at this moment owes Paul seven weeks' worth of paychecks because it hasn't been able to pay it.

I mention this, I say this, I share it, so that you might understand that no one here is living high off the hog, or making a profit in any way from the work that is being done. And yet, in the face of constantly living on the cusp, there is persistence, there is commitment. And with that, is this ever present ongoing support from all of you, from everyone who accesses the website from around the world.

It is an amazing and wonderful demonstration of divine economy.

Now the reason that I am bringing this up is, because over the next six weeks there are going to be uncommon expenses—necessary expenses, essential expenses. And so I am letting the . . . what shall I say . . . the wonderful camaraderie, and involvement that we all have, I am going to say, energizing it with the invitation for everyone to join in the intent to have these things fulfilled that are essential, so that the continuity continues, I'm going to say, comfortably . . . easily . . . because the continuity will continue one way or another.

Now, when the residence was purchased three years ago that Paul and Susan occupy, it was paid for in full by means of contributions from you and others like you, and one individual who made a five hundred thousand dollar loan to be paid back when the previous residence was sold. At that time the previous residence was valued at more than the amount of the loan.

Almost immediately afterwards, the economic slump, if you will, occurred and the value of the house dropped below the amount of the loan. And I advised Paul and the one who made the loan, to wait and not attempt to sell the house.

Now it is time. And so the house is going to be prepared to go on sale in the Spring—in April, if at all possible or very shortly thereafter. And so there is work to be done in preparing it: Some refurbishing, replacement of some carpeting, of some tile work, yard work to make the yard presentable and attractive. All of these things are essential in order for the sale of the house to occur. And this will cost approximately fifteen thousand dollars.

Then on April 15th property taxes come due. That is something that occurs twice a year as many of you know, because we always invite help. That is an out of the ordinary expense. And that is approximately sixty-five hundred dollars.

These things are on top of the regular monthly expenses that are supposed to pay Paul regularly an income, and which pay Christopher regularly for his work. And the fact is, that Christopher has not been able to be paid absolutely consistently. But we all work together in spite of it.

Now, I am not going to try to beat the drum and rev you up and tell you what a good thing it would be to support these steps that need to occur. Whatever support comes is invited, and I invite it to come from a natural spontaneous feeling of wanting to support—not being conned into it, not being pushed into it, not being artificially enticed into it, not doing anything to cause you to do it by means of building up your ego. And so, I am not going to spend a single moment tonight trying to talk anyone into anything, you know.

Every need includes within itself everything necessary to its fulfillment. Again: Every need includes within itself everything necessary to its fulfillment.

That means that needs are not a negative, but a doorway or a threshold of fulfillment. And so, I'm sharing the need so that the attention might be brought there and so that the means of its fulfillment can come forth and all of us can watch how it happens—all of us can see it happen. It's the way healing occurs. It's the way the correction of "problems" occurs.

You bring your attention to the need and you do not determine it to be a lack or a problem, but rather something that sits there as a precursor of an answer . . . a solution . . . an uncovering of the fulfillment that renders the need no longer a need.

And so, we will proceed through the next six weeks recognizing the need. And Paul and Susan and I invite all of you, to conscientiously participate in expecting to see the Answer, and bring with you a willingness to embrace It, rather than indulging in any ego arguments that say, “It can’t be done,” or “It shouldn’t have to be this way,” or any other argument that might present itself and distract you from the fulfillment that is in Movement right now.

I’m speaking to you in very grounded terms, so that everyone might stay very grounded and not become nebulous or air-fairy and just say, “Oh, well, God is Love and everything will work out.” Paul could say that, “Oh, God is Love and everything will work out.” “There’s no need to share what Raj has to say, everyone will get it because God is Love and everything will work out.”

Well the fact is that, yes everyone will get it, but what Paul is doing is essential. His involvement is part and parcel of the Revelation of the Truth of Man and his relationship to the Father, his divinity, which no one believes in, in a practical grounded way—who think it will show up in the “sweet by ‘n by” after you die . . . instead of today, instead of now as needs met, as needs being met and the expectation to see them met now in grounded terms without being afraid to be involved in IT.

Now the simple fact is, that if something new is introduced into the world, it doesn’t register with everyone all at once. It seems to register with a few, and they share it. And who they share it with shares it with others, and so it grows, but not without involvement. You see?

Those who have ears to hear, initially, and recognize its value, become part of the wedge, if I may put it that way, that gets inserted into the general consciousness that, like an ice breaker, pushes through making room for the new.

And so those in the beginning who see it become part of the wedge, become part of the means by which it grows, because those who see its value express it, bring it forth in one way or another so that the news spreads.

In the beginning someone might say, “Wow, this is too much of a burden.” “There are so few of us, how can we possibly do anything to really make change?” “There need to be more of us!” “We need more of this, more of that.” No. The need for the truth to appear includes within itself everything necessary to its fulfillment. And for thirty-two years the work that we’ve been doing . . . not just Paul and me and Susan and Chris and Judy, but those of us, as well as all of you and everyone else who has shared and extended to others and also supported what they found of value so that it might be extended more fully. You see?

And it has worked. It is the only way it has worked for thirty-two years. Never has financial manipulation entered into the picture—no back-room deals out of sight. Any mention of finances has always been made publically on the internet, and before that, in letters to everyone on the mailing list. No one was excluded. Everyone was embraced . . . straight forward, honest, simple. And so it remains.

So to put it very simply: There is a need, a substantial need. Not an impossible need. And I am inviting everyone to participate in whatever way they can, whatever way they are led, whatever way you are led, so that we might watch the completion of this move from one residence to the other, with no one coming up short-changed regardless of the state of the economy.

I’m not going to say we are having a fund-raising-drive . . . that’s organized. What we have is an opportunity for simple, honest love to find expression—to identify the security, you might say, of the ongoingness of that which is valuable.

I embrace everyone in the wonder of how it works, of how it has always worked. And we will keep you posted.

I thank everyone for being who they Are and fulfilling the place that they fulfill, and for our involvement together and for the honoring of each other that has been consistently expressed throughout the years.

Thank you for listening.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

March 9th 2014

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

You may not have thought about it, but when you practice the two-step, when you reach out to the Holy Spirit, when you ask for Guidance, you are very specifically requesting to move beyond what you already believe. You are experiencing what you already believe and you are not experiencing what you cannot believe.

The way out of the box, the way out of the limitations you're bound by, is to reach beyond what you believe. And at the bottom line, that's all we're talking about. That is the fundamental point taught by A Course in Miracles.

What it amounts to is stretching your boundaries—accessing what is currently unbelievable to you.

You seem to have a terminal illness. It's unbelievable to you that it not only could go into remission but actually vanish entirely, so that you are not someone with a disease that is in remission, you are whole and invincible where you had believed otherwise.

You believe you're human when you are divine. And A Course in Miracles points you in the direction of Awakening to your divinity, which means moving into an experience of what is currently unbelievable. And as you take steps to Wake up, you push against your doubt—you push against the unbelievability. And even though you have the Guidance of the Holy Spirit, even though you have the Guidance of your Guide who is fully Christed—fully Awake—the Guidance given stretches you sometimes uncomfortably because the call is for you to experience Something more than you are experiencing . . . that there is a demand for you to experience more, a demand that you can't shove aside or make nothing of. And so you feel pushed. And yet it's unbelievable.

And so your faithlessness comes into play.

Well, in other words, you're having little faith in the Guidance that is given as a result of your successfully doing the two-step—as a result of successfully abandoning your willful intent to believe only what you believe so that you might access the more of what God is Being than what you're currently experiencing. You see?

You see, it's not your faith that needs help, it's your faithlessness that needs to be lifted up. It's your faithlessness that needs to be replaced with the inspiration of the Truth. Faithlessness is expressed in an unwillingness to believe what you can't believe.

When you find yourself bound by a demand to believe what you can't believe and you're stuck in that in-between place, you become immobilized. And it feels as though the only thing that will get you out of that is an act of willfulness—some strong personal assertion to overcome the inertia.

But the simple fact is, that the only thing that you can willfully assert is what you already believe. There is no way to assert what you don't believe yet. And there is no way to access what you don't believe through the assertion of what you do believe.

I'm going to say that again: There's no way to access what you don't believe through an act of assertion of what you do believe. You can only yield into the unbelievable. You can only yield into what the Holy Spirit will reveal to you in the absence of willfulness. You see?

Willingness to believe what you can't believe becomes the door through which the Holy Spirit can enter into your awareness and inspire you with the truth that goes beyond what you currently believe and lift you into the experience of fulfillment that you want but that you haven't been able to access because of your very strong beliefs. You see?

Faithlessness or doubt is never charged. It's just doubt. It's just an inability to believe the truth of something. But when your doubt becomes energized by fear, it becomes anxiety. And if you persist, the anxiety is enervating, debilitating, immobilizing.

Why am I bringing this up? I'm bringing it up because it's an experience that all of you have had or will have as you lean into the Holy Spirit more and more significantly—more and more consistently.

You will find yourselves led to do what seems to be impossible to you, because it's time for a breakthrough, because it's time for a real shift to occur. And you will resist it.

What will be needed is for you to ask further questions of Guidance—of the Holy Spirit. But when you're immobilized by anxiety, you're inclined to say, "Why should I ask Guidance for information, for an 'understanding' that doesn't make any more sense than what I've already gotten?" "Why should I ask a question that's going to generate more anxiety?" "I would be better off resorting to the assertion of will and break through this inhibition on my own."

It very often seems that an act of willfulness constitutes real movement. It can seem like that, when willfulness doesn't constitute movement at all. Because movement is the clear and simple result of yielding . . . what? . . . into the Movement that you are not initiating, which, because it is the Movement of Creation it is the Movement of the Father, constitutes fulfillment beyond what you could imagine—beyond what you currently believe. You see?

Now I am bringing this up because in very practical terms, as I shared two weeks ago, Paul and Susan are in the process of taking the steps needing to be taken to put the old residence on the market. And when it became apparent that this needed to happen now, for whatever reason, it went beyond Paul's sense of what was possible.

He found himself full of arguments. It's not the right time. There's no way to do it. He will look like a fool in front of everyone when he publically shares that steps need to be taken that he doesn't believe can be taken . . . and on and on—the ego ranted and raved.

Now, this is not the first time that I have guided Paul and Susan to take steps that seemed to be impossible. There was another time when they moved back to the mainland from Kauai. And when it came time to get a release for the car to be transported back to the mainland which had been purchased on Kauai, the bank said, “No, you cannot take it with you, you have too much of a balance,” the logic of it being that once it got back on the mainland it would be almost impossible to repossess, because difficult to trace.

Well, this was shocking news, because it was like a week before the movers would load up the truck and take it down to the ship to be transported . . . an impossible situation. And then when I was asked, “What do we do?” I told them, “Give the car back to the bank.”

Well, the first Guidance said (that wasn't the first Guidance) the first difficulty that was presented was that the car could not accompany them back to the mainland. The Guidance was to move back to the mainland. That presented an impossible situation. Then when I said, “Give the car back to the bank,” that was an absolutely impossible situation. How can you move back to the mainland and do anything without transportation?

It was alarming. At least Paul was alarmed.

Nevertheless, he called the bank and said to them, “We will let you repossess the car.” And that was that! Within 24 hours he got a call back from the bank and he was told that they had reconsidered their decision and that they would release the car to go back to the mainland for a relatively small sum. It was a sum that was not available in the Foundation's account (the car belonging to the Foundation). But nevertheless that was a significant shift.

Later that day, after they had gotten the news that a relatively small amount was all that was needed in order for the bank to release the car, Paul and Susan received a call from someone who received the Newsletters from the Foundation, had attended Gatherings and so on, and he was visiting Kauai and wanted to know if he could visit with us.

We explained to him—Susan and Paul explained to him—that all there were to sit on were boxes, but they would love to meet with him. And he came and visited. And during the visit Paul shared the situation. And the gentleman said, “Well, that’s no problem, I’ll write you a check right now for the small amount that they require.” And it was a gift.

So that which seemed utterly impossible, which seemed to generate Guidance that was even more impossible, when tempered with a willingness to believe that maybe the impossible was possible, resolved itself as fulfillment identified.

Now, as I said, this is not something that only Paul and Susan will run into or have run into as a result of Guidance. Every single one of you will be faced with the call for the opposite of faithlessness—a call for faith. A call for daring to be willing, without employing willfulness, daring to be willing to be open to the possibility of what seems to you to be impossible and then listening—persisting in listening—being determined, if I may put it that way, focused without willfulness to stay steady in the attitude of attention. Attention toward what? . . . more of the ego talk? No. Attention to the Guidance that the Holy Spirit is intent upon sharing with every one of you, because fulfillment is ordained. The experience of what God is actually Being is ordained to be your experience and will be your experience when faithlessness is abandoned.

Now, as I said, for whatever reasons the preparation of the old residence for sale registered with Paul as something not possible at this time, something that there was no indication there could be a possibility of. And it was discouraging and immobilizing. And when I shared it with everyone two weeks ago, it was difficult for Paul to sit and let me share it, although he did it well—he persisted.

Now, we did not have a meeting last week because of the immobilization that he experienced, an immobilization during which he has, to the best of his ability, persisted in asking me and asking of the Holy Spirit, “What is the truth here? What is the truth beyond what I seem to be able to embrace? What is the truth beyond what seems to be frightening me?” He persisted. He was determined not to be immobilized, but he was also determined not to be willful.

And so, we did not have the meeting, and you may have noticed that there has been less activity on the blog. And to tell you the truth . . .

. . . just a moment . . .

. . . it has taken faith on his part to allow this Gathering to occur. And yet he was insistent upon putting himself in the place where he could hear what I had to say for his healing, and for yours as well.

When you are stuck because you cannot believe, “unbelievable good,” you can stay stuck for as long as you want. You can be uncomfortable for as long as you choose to be, even though you say that the discomfort has been forced upon you. Or, you can engage in the simple act of joining with your Guide, joining with the Holy Spirit, reaching out to ask, “What is the truth here? As unbelievable as it might be, what is the truth here? . . . because I want my boundaries stretched. I do not want to remain tied up in a little ball. And I refuse to employ willfulness to break the bondage.” You see?

This is the good news about the bad news. This is the answer to the difficulty of being stuck by what you currently believe, which is incompatible with the unbelievable answers that release you from the human condition, that release you from the concept of your being mortal that release you from illness, whether terminal or not, or injury or damage whether supposedly permanent or not. Have enough gumption to persist even in your worst moments, to ask the Father, to ask the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind—“What is the truth here?” Persist in reaching, we’ll say, through the veil, through the cloud, through the disturbance that seems to blind you to the experience of joy—the joy of fulfillment.

Now, it's your Birthright to have the breakthrough. It's your Birthright to experience the Atonement. It's inevitable! It is inevitable, because it is impossible for you to remain ignorant of what you never stopped being . . . the divine holy Son or Daughter of God . . . the perfect expression—His perfect Expression.

Now I said two weeks ago that we would keep you informed regarding the refurbishing of the previous residence. And I will share with you, and Paul is very happy, and Susan is very happy that I will share with you that the support, the contributions that have been received have been quite wonderful and there is a lot of gratitude. And a lot of that gratitude reflects the relief from fear that Paul had been experiencing, which of course had been affecting their relationship.

The need is not totally met. It is approximately two-thirds met. But it is an apparently large amount of money, and yet it is showing up. And although I have spent more time tonight talking about overcoming faithlessness, there is one strong message, which we, including me, wish to share, and it is gratitude. Gratitude, Paul can tell you, is a far better thing to be experiencing than faithlessness, fear and anxiety. And although he is not totally free of faithlessness, fear and anxiety, his gratitude out-weighs it and he feels the fact that in the face of present gratitude, faithlessness, fear and anxiety cannot stand.

Thank you to everyone who is participating in whatever way they are participating in the support of this movement which is necessary, and which I will reaffirm will be fulfilled and identified as fulfillment.

Thank you again. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 13th 2014

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Well, are things going smoothly for everyone or do things seem to be more rugged than they used to be? Are situations arising which seem overwhelming, not easy to deal with? Does it seem as though difficult situations are not yielding as quickly and easily as they used to? Do things seem generally more complicated? And do these factors discourage you, do they engage you in negativity? And do they engage you in the attempt to gain authority over them?

Of course, the answer is "Yes."

Some of you have been caught in this mode for days, weeks or even some months without finding the relief that used to come so easily. That's why we're going back in the book to this section entitled:

PRACTICING THE HOLY INSTANT.

If you go back and listen to the Study Groups that have been held over the last three or four years, you will find that almost without fail the holy instant has been a significant part of each discussion—almost monotonously so.

But there is a reason. And the reason is that the holy instant is the threshold of the elements of Atonement. Again, the holy instant is the threshold of the elements of Atonement. There you go. It's so simple. It's so uncomplicated. There are not many parts to it: The holy instant.

Going into the Book:

This course is not beyond IMMEDIATE learning, unless you prefer to believe that what God wills takes time. And this means only that you would RATHER delay the recognition that His Will is so.

Well, I'm sharing this tonight because it's something Paul is needing to learn more significantly than ever before. And so I'm taking the opportunity to teach him along with everyone else the simplicity of it so that release from distress and frustration and anger can be had.

When it says:

. . . this means only that you would RATHER delay the recognition that His Will is so . . .

. . . you, like Paul might be likely to say: "Oh, that's not true. I would not rather delay it. I'm certainly not saying 'God hold off.'"

But the simple fact is, that if you aren't experiencing the holy instant—the instantaneous nature of being in the holy instant—it is because . . .

. . . you would rather delay the recognition that His will is so.

And how do you do that? You do it by exercising your will. You exercise it by choosing to listen to yourself instead of listening to the Father or the Holy Spirit or your Guide.

"Sure," you say, "I go to my Guide and I ask questions and I talk to my Guide." But let me ask you something: How often when you're talking to your Guide are you telling your Guide what you want Him or Her to hear? How much of the time are you asking your Guide to listen to you?

Well, I promise you, if you're not getting the answer that resolves the problem, you are doing that. You're making too much noise. You're filling up the arena with your voice, your concepts, your will. And that's not going into the holy instant.

I'm going to read again:

This course is not beyond IMMEDIATE learning, unless you prefer to believe that what God wills takes time. And this means only that you would RATHER delay the recognition that His Will is so. The holy instant is THIS one and EVERY one. The one you WANT it to be it IS. The one you would not have it be is lost to you.

That doesn't mean that it wasn't the one that could have been the holy instant. It simply means that because you chose for that instant not to be the holy instant, its promise escaped you. What it is passed by your attention because you weren't giving your attention.

YOU must decide on when it is.

You hear that?

YOU must decide on when it is.

When the holy instant is—that you're going to let be the holy instant. You see?

It's never about the circumstances “out there.” It's never about the complexity that you see in them. It's never about the mean-spiritedness that might be being expressed in your environment or in your world. It all boils down to the simplicity of whether or not you have decided that this instant is going to be the holy instant.

Simple! Utterly simple. But although it's utterly simple, because it's the threshold of the elements of Atonement, it is the most significant thing available to you in your existence, because it impels, it promotes Atonement, Awakening—you coming back into your right Mind, you becoming the Sane Expression of the divine intelligence called God.

Delay it not.

The book says.

Delay it not. For beyond the past and future, in which you will not find it, it stands in shimmering readiness for your acceptance.

Whether you're giving your attention to it or not, whether you're allowing it or not, it's there . . .

. . . in shimmering readiness for your acceptance.

Oh-h . . . but I know, you have to attend to the mean-spiritedness that is going on around you, instead of asking, “Father,” or “Holy Spirit, how do I step into the holy instant?” You're saying, “Father, Holy Spirit, tell me how to deal with this mean-spiritedness! Help me to deal with the complications that I see in what's going on.” Or you're saying, “I'm not even going to ask because I know this is an impossible situation and there is no answer . . . I know it! I cannot conceive of an answer, it is an impossible situation!” You see?

That's not entering into the holy instant. That's doing a rant! And expecting your Guide or the Holy Spirit to listen to you—to listen to the idiocy of your rant—instead of saying, “Father, Holy Spirit, what's the truth here?”

So . . .

. . . it stands in shimmering readiness for your acceptance. Yet you cannot bring it into glad awareness while you do not want it, for it holds the whole release from littleness.

You want to know something? When you are engaging as an ego, you think that littleness is gotten rid of by your expressing grand, great authority—power of your own which you exercise forcefully. That feels to you like being BIG.

But like a light-bulb, like a lamp unplugged from the wall, no matter what it does to try to imagine that it's lit, it can't be lit if it's not plugged in. And so the attempt to express authority through force and willfulness constitutes littleness, not the opposite.

Your practice must therefore rest upon your willingness to let all littleness go.

Well, I know you probably think that littleness has to do with being small. But letting all littleness go means letting all of your personal private judgments go—releasing them and not attempting to exercise or practice them.

Letting littleness go is letting your small-mindedness go in favor of saying, “Father, infinite Mind of all that Is, fill me with what You already placed in me the moment You created me by virtue of the fact that You withheld nothing of what You Are from me. I illumine to me the truth about me so that I don't imagine that I have to have solutions of my own—determinations, authorizations of my own. Let me feel my infinite wholeness by illuminating it to me.”

The instant in which magnitude will dawn upon you is but as far away as your DESIRE for it.

Well, I know . . . you desire it, you say you desire it, and yet you continue to anchor yourself in your misperceptions of everything and using those misperceptions as the basis for listening for answers. But as long as you are basing the answers that will come on your misperceptions, you are not listening where resolution can arise from. It's that simple.

And so, the necessity is to abandon any imagined authority that you think you have or that you must exercise. And you must become humble. And you must say, “Father,” or “Holy Spirit, what is the truth here from Your vantage point, separate and apart from any concepts or beliefs I have?”

The instant in which magnitude will dawn upon you is but as far away as your DESIRE for it. As long as you desire it not, and cherish littleness instead, by so much is it far from you. By so much as you want it will you bring it nearer.

Wanting it then means actually engaging in releasing your devotion to your best judgments and your ideas and your goals and your agendas.

By so much as you want it will you bring it nearer. Think not that you can find salvation in your own way and HAVE it.

You see? Now I'm going to suggest something. What we're reading tonight is very simply put. It is not convoluted, complex or difficult to understand. When you find yourselves bound by a feeling of overwhelm, of being trapped in a situation that there's no resolve for, come to this place in the book. Because no matter how overwhelmed you might be with the complexities you think are there to be dealt with, the simplicity of this will be able to register with you.

It's very important.

Once you let it sink in that the answer is simple, you will relax and you will stop trying to do what's complicated and what will not work.

Listen to this:

Give over EVERY plan that you have made for your salvation in exchange for God's. His will content you, . .

[He repeats] His will content you, and there is nothing else that can bring you peace. For peace is of God, and of no-one beside Him.

So peace is of God. It's not of you. It's not of your best judgments. It's not of your worst judgments. It has nothing to do with anything you have come up with or can come up with all by yourself.

It is the act of independence. If you'll remember, the divorce that was gotten from the Father in the Beginning, so to speak, that brought forth two things: Fear and guilt. Fear and guilt combine to make all of the complexities that disturb you, depress you and cause you to give up hope, cause you to abandon the holy instant, cause you to not to engage in the simplicity.

Be humble before Him, and yet great IN Him. And value no plan of the ego before the plan of God. For you leave empty your place in . . .

. . . what?

. . . His plan, which you must fulfill if you would join with me, by your decision to join in any plan BUT His.

Again:

For you leave empty your place in His plan, . . . by your decision to join in any plan BUT His.

It's not your role to leave your place empty. It's your role to fulfill your place if you would join with me.

I call you to fulfill your holy part in the plan that He has given to the world for . . .

. . . what?

. . . its release from littleness.

You see? Right now if you're in the middle of excruciating of long-standing stress and distress, remember this:

I call you to fulfill your holy part in the plan that He has given to the world for its release from littleness.

You see? You either think there's no release from the problems or you think that the release will only come from some force you personally privately exert. And for the most part, you are convinced that you probably don't have what it takes to accomplish that. That's how debilitating it is. But the Answer is simple.

Again:

I call you to fulfill your holy part . . .

I call you to be the holy Son or Daughter of God that you Are right now when you're feeling overwhelmed and you are insistent on your awful point of view.

I call you to fulfill your holy part in the plan that He has given to the world for its release from littleness. God would have His host abide in perfect freedom.

Who is His Host? You.

Every allegiance to a plan of salvation that is apart from Him diminishes the value of His Will for you in your own minds. And yet it is your mind that IS the host to Him.

Would you learn how perfect and immaculate is the holy altar on which your Father has placed Himself?

Where is that holy altar? Right in the center of you. That's where the Father has placed Himself, because you are the Father's Self-expression. You are the Father in Expression. He's placed Himself in you by being all there is of you. . . you holy Son or Daughter of God.

Would you learn how perfect and immaculate is the holy altar on which your Father has placed Himself?

Well, not if you insist on holding onto your best judgments and your confidences and your agendas and how you think things ought to go.

This you will recognize in the holy instant in which you willingly and gladly . . .

. . . what?

. . . give over every plan but His. For there lies peace, perfectly clear because you have been willing to meet its conditions. You can claim the holy instant any time and anywhere you want it.

Oh I know, again you say, “I want it, I want it!” But no, what you really want still, is the right to have your opinion and your judgment—your self-righteous assessment. “Well, this unfoldment is certainly isn’t very convenient, and it certainly isn’t comfortable, it can’t possibly be divine!”

Well there you are, playing God asserting an authorization that you’ve made up. But:

You can claim the holy instant any time and anywhere you want it.

And what will tell you whether you want it or not, is whether you’re holding on tightly to your best judgments and your self-righteous indignation and your authority. If you’re holding on to them you don’t want the holy instant. That’s what that means.

In your practice, try to give over every plan you have accepted for finding magnitude in littleness.

Remember, you think that magnitude comes from the expression of private personal force, an authority that you have somehow mustered up and brought into play for the purpose of controlling the situation or the individuals in the situation. That’s what you are calling magnitude—that so-called capacity—but it’s inseparable from the littleness because it’s you unplugged from your Source.

In your practice, try to give over every plan you have accepted for finding magnitude in littleness. IT IS NOT THERE. Use the holy instant only to recognize that you alone CANNOT know where it is, and can only deceive yourself.

You hear that?

Use the holy instant only to recognize that you alone

...

... all by yourself, privately, secretly ...

... CANNOT know where it is, and can only deceive yourself.

Now that might sound depressing, but the clarity of it is enlightening. Because once you realize that you can't have it on your own, then it becomes clear to you that the only way you can have it is when you are joined in the holy instant with the Holy Spirit or your Father. And you are reaching out to Them for Their Perspective because it's the Perspective They have placed in you since the beginning, which is yours and is therefore part and parcel of your Sanity, which is your peace of mind and your joy and your capacity to Love.

I stand within the holy instant, as clear as you would have me.

And I'm going to add: "no more and no less."

I stand within the holy instant, as clear as you would have me. And the extent to which you learn to be willing to accept me is the measure of the time in which the holy instant will be yours.

In other words, if it takes a long time for you to do it, the holy instant will take that long to be yours. If you accept me now, now the holy instant is yours. You see? It's very simple. It's very black and white, uncomplicated and requires one decision ... that's all! It doesn't require arguments. It doesn't require negotiations. It just requires a simple decision now.

I call to you to make the holy instant yours at once, for the release from littleness in the mind of the host of God ...

. . . you . . .

. . . depends on willingness, and NOT on time.

You see? The willingness to go ahead and say, “Yes” now. “Yes I accept You now. I let You in now. I listen to You now and nothing else.”

The reason why this course is simple is that TRUTH is simple. Complexity is of the ego, and is nothing more than the ego’s attempt to obscure the obvious.

Listen to this:

You could live forever in the holy instant, BEGINNING NOW . . .

. . . not tomorrow, not a week from tomorrow, not a year from now.

You could live forever in the holy instant, BEGINNING NOW and reaching to eternity, but for a very simple reason. Do not obscure the simplicity of this reason, for if you do, it will be only because you prefer not to recognize it, and not to let it go. The simple reason, simply stated, is this: The holy instant is a time in which you receive and GIVE perfect communication. This means, however, that it is a time in which your mind is OPEN, both to receive and give. It is the recognition that all minds ARE in communication. It therefore seeks to CHANGE nothing, but merely to ACCEPT everything.

In order for your mind to be open, both to receive and give, you must not be bringing with you any willfulness, any self-assertive authority. How can you possibly be in harmony with Creation? How can you possibly be in harmony with your Source that is fulfilling you in every moment, if you are harboring a perception or a concept or a determination that you have made up out of “whole cloth” through the use of imagination and committed to. You see?

So therefore, when you are in a place of openness to give and receive, you seek . . .

. . . to CHANGE nothing, but merely to ACCEPT everything.

Now let's be very clear here: It doesn't mean that you will not seek to change anything, and you will let disease be disease, and you will let injury be injury and you will let death continue. It doesn't mean that you accept all that is un-God-like, all that has nothing to do with Eternal Life, has nothing to do with the nature of God, it doesn't mean that you accept that, and don't try to change it. If you think it does, that is something that you have made up. It's a concept that was not given to you by the Father or the Holy Spirit. Exactly the opposite is what you learn from practicing the holy instant.

This is important.

Now I understand that there are those, especially students of the Course, that say, "Well, the body . . . everything that could be injured, everything that can become ill, everything that dies is illusion. And you don't try to fix illusion, you don't try to fix illusion up.

I'll tell you something: Illusion is delusion. And delusion is a misperception of something not an actuality. And that of which the misperception is a misperception is the only thing there is: Creation, God being All-There-Is. In the holy instant you experience Creation as it is and you do not try to change it. You do accept it. But right now in your independent frame of mind, having gotten a divorce from your Father so that you could make up the rules, you have attempted to change everything and you're living with the consequences.

The practice of the holy instant is engaging in the abandonment of what you have made up . . . by what? Not giving your attention to what you've made up and trying to get rid of it, but by turning your attention from what you have made up to the Father, to the Source of your being, or to the Holy Spirit so that you might enquire as to the divine Perspective which has already been placed in you, but which you're not utilizing because you're getting so much damned excitement out of making your own decisions as well as having all of the suffering that accompanies it because you're in a state of self-denial.

You are being what you were not created to be, and you think you are practicing capabilities that were never given you. God did not give you the capacity to be at odds with yourself, Creation, or God Himself.

So . . .

How can you do this when you would prefer to have PRIVATE thoughts, and KEEP them?

If you turn to the Holy Spirit for answers but you refuse to abandon your private thoughts . . . tough luck!

The only way you could do THAT is to DENY the perfect communication that makes the holy instant what it is.

Again:

The only way you could do THAT is to DENY the perfect communication that makes the holy instant what it is. You believe that it is possible to harbor thoughts you would not share, and that salvation lies in keeping your thoughts to yourself ALONE.

And you use your thoughts to curse Creation. You curse Creation by defining it different from what God is Being It.

For in private thoughts, known only to yourself, you think you find a way to keep what you would HAVE alone, and share what YOU would share.

As I said, you go to the Holy Spirit or the Father to have Them listen to what you would share. And that's not the way it works. That's what happened when you got the divorce in the so-called beginning of the illusion.

And then you wonder why it is that you are not in full communication with those around you, and with God Who surrounds ALL of you together.

Well, hey, if you are holding on to private thoughts and keeping them private and not sharing them, you're denying communication itself—you are disallowing it.

Every thought you would keep hidden shuts communication off because you would HAVE it so.

Again, your argument is, “No, I would not have it so!” “I never thought that.” “I never would choose to do that.” But the simple fact is that if you are not confronting your day, or engaging with your day joined with the Holy Spirit’s Perspective, it’s because you would have it so. Because you can’t have communication that way, and as long as you’re insisting upon that, you will not have communication. Because you would have it so, and you would have it so by virtue of not joining and asserting your private thoughts as the law—as the word that everything must revolve around.

It is impossible to recognize perfect communication while BREAKING communication holds value to you.

And now you can begin to see that breaking communication is what you’ve been engaged in, although you didn’t have the words to define it as what it truly was. But now you do and it makes it simpler. And that’s why we are going over this again . . . because it’s time for the difficulty of the times you’re in to become powerless over you, unable to influence you in any way, so that you might engage in the holy instant—the very simple act—and become free and let the elements of Atonement move in you and move you.

Ask yourselves honestly, "Would I WANT to have perfect communication, . .

. . . it’s a good question. And you would say, “Yes,” except that you don’t if you also want to hold onto your arguments—the arguments you have made up with your own private thoughts. As long as you are holding thoughts privately you are un-joined, and the perfect communication that comes from joining cannot be experienced.

Ask yourselves honestly, "Would I WANT to have perfect communication, . .

Paul has had to ask himself that question several times during the last few weeks. And sometimes he has not wanted perfect communication because he has wanted me or the Holy Spirit to understand his point of view. And that's not the way perfect communication occurs.

Ask yourselves honestly, "Would I WANT to have perfect communication, and am I wholly willing to let everything that interferes with it go forever?" If the answer is no, . .

. . . you see? And here is the simplicity of it:

If the answer is no, then the Holy Spirit's readiness to give it to you is not enough to make it yours, for you are not ready to SHARE it with Him. And it cannot come into a mind that has decided to oppose it.

Be willing to look at yourselves squarely. Look at your mental behavior squarely. Honestly assess whether you are being mean-spirited, tight-fisted, small-minded, because you feel that there is going to be some benefit from it. And of course, the primary benefit from it is that you think it's going to make you big, that it's going to give you magnitude and wipe out your vulnerability, make you safe, give you peace. But you're using the wrong tool. You're using the tool that takes away your peace and insures your vulnerability until you abandon it.

And it cannot come into a mind that has decided to oppose it. For the holy instant is given and received with EQUAL willingness, being the acceptance of the single Will that governs ALL thought.

Now, you are Loved. Listen to this:

The necessary condition for the holy instant does NOT require that you have no thoughts which are not pure.

I will tell you, if it did require that, you would be overwhelmed and you would have no resource to get out of it.

The necessary condition for the holy instant does NOT require that you have no thoughts which are not pure. But it DOES require that you have none that you would KEEP.

You see? You don't have to get rid of them, you just have to be willing to let go of them. And the willingness to let go of them occurs when you're actually holding your hands out open with a desire to receive from your joining with me or with the Holy Spirit.

Innocence is not of your making. It is given you the instant you would HAVE it.

Ah-h . . . that would imply wouldn't it, that when you are engaged in your own private thoughts you are not engaged in innocent activity. Of course, the activity you're engaged in is imaginary, so any guilt that you might be experiencing is also illusory. So you're not trapped in any way.

Innocence . . . is given you the instant you would HAVE it.

The instant you would let it in.

Yet it would not be Atonement if there were no NEED for Atonement. You will not be able to accept perfect communication as long as you would HIDE it from yourself. For what you would hide IS hidden from you.

And right now you're hiding it from yourself. You're frustrated, you're feeling vulnerable, you say because of everything going on around you. And even your depressed, angry, frustrated thoughts that you know aren't really serving you, but you think you have no other choice and that feeling them is serving you in some way in giving you magnitude.

For what you would hide IS hidden from you.

In your practice, then, . . .

. . . practice of what? The holy instant—this one simple thing that we have been talking about for years, and which we're revisiting with greater clarity tonight.

In your practice, then, try only to be vigilant against deception, and seek not to protect the thoughts you would keep unto yourself.

Be willing to let them be meaningless, even though they feel meaningful to you. Let them feel meaningless so that you can have reason to open up to and reach for what is truly meaningful.

Let the Holy Spirit's purity shine them away, . . .

You see? Again, I want to point out, what you want is for the Holy Spirit to shine away the thoughts that you would keep to yourself. That's the Answer to the problem you think is constituted of complex circumstances and situations out there in the world that you can do nothing about, that have nothing to do with you except that you must suffer from them. Those things out there are not what you are to address. What you are to address is what you are using as the source of your information . . . the Holy Spirit or your orphan mentality.

Let the Holy Spirit's purity shine them away, and bring all your awareness to the readiness for purity He offers you. Thus will He make you ready to acknowledge that you ARE host to God, and hostage to no-one and nothing.

You see? You are Loved. And you will know it when you will shift what you're giving your attention to. And the instant you do it, you will instantly experience the healing, the clarity, the Sanity, the Movement of the elements of Atonement.

Remember the simplicity of this so that you don't suffer a moment longer unnecessarily because you're addressing the wrong thing with the wrong method.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 16th 2014

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Quite a long time ago, I shared the idea that questions are the leading edge of answers. And just recently, I shared the idea that when you are seeking Guidance—when you are inquiring of the Holy Spirit or your Guide or the Father, “What the truth is here?” or asking any question, that you should treat the question like a grace note. You ask the question and you get off of it quickly and shift your attention to listening for the Answer.

If indeed, the question is the leading edge of the Answer, it means that the emergence of inspiration is occurring, and let's say, tickling your fancy, causing you to be curious. And so, when you bring your curiosity onto the scene, you are primed for the emergence of the Answer, which is in process of coming to mind to your awareness.

Now the tricky thing about it is, that when the emergence of inspiration is occurring and curiosity is experienced, it seems as though what you're curious about is what is important. In other words, that the question is what is important. And even more, it suggests that there is someone asking the question, as though you, having a question, are initiating a movement out of which will come some new information. In other words, the suggestion is that you, as the questioner, are causing an answer to come forth rather than the fact which is, that an Answer coming forth is getting your attention so that you might become curious without becoming preoccupied with yourself as the questioner, or the question. So that the “ah-ha!”—the light bulb, can go on and the inspiration can be experienced—the Revelation—the clearer experience of truth can register with you. You see?

This is important.

God has not created you as an independent entity capable of functioning on its own of its own volition, and with capacities included within you causing you to supposedly function with total independence from anything. That is not . . . that is not what God did and that is not what you Are—infinite Mind, God.

The Movement of inspiration is what causes Creation—is itself the Movement of Creation. You are here to observe it and recognize it for what it is, and not assume that you caused it or that you can take credit for it in any way other than, that you have fulfilled your function which is to recognize God in it.

So you see, there is no “you” as a questioner. You can imagine that there is, but there isn’t. Because inspiration is eternal and it occurs for you to experience—not for you to think you have initiated.

Now whether you recognize it or not, when it is accepted, when it is grasped, is a great relief. Because it means you’re not responsible for anything that you can be guilty for not handling well. There is no you of the sort that could be at fault.

You have a wonderful opportunity as the very nature of your Being to be in the flow—in the Movement of inspiration dawning...dawning...dawning...dawning...dawning, and you recognizing God in it...God in it...God in it. You see? You will find that when you let that be your function—which it is—but when you let it be your only function, sin, disease and death, dissonance, chaos, negativity of all kinds will stop seeming to present themselves to you.

The only thing that ever caused them to show up in your experience was you taking credit—you, thinking you were the initiator, or you were the one able to pose a question, the answer to which would change everything—change the world, contribute to the world, make a huge difference that would prove to you your value and your validity. You see?

Now when you realize that the question is not really a question, but a niggling awareness of something new about to present itself and that there is no questioner at all initiating the answer—initiating the revelation, what happens? Do you disappear? Absolutely not!

Oh-h, but the fear—the anxiety associated with the responsibility of being in charge yourself . . . that disappears. And together with that, the apparent physical effects that seem to accompany fear: self-doubt, self-criticism, self-judgment . . . that disappears.

Now, there is a flip-side, you might say, to this. When you're experiencing a problem, there seems to be a problem that you need to address and there seems to be a “you” who has the problem. And just as with questions and the questioner, the problem and the one with the problem are illusions. But if you don't recognize it, you can end up being snared—caught in the dilemma of being the one with the problem that maybe, you won't be able to cope with, that maybe, will be too big for you to master.

But the key lies in not finding a way to master the problem. It isn't for you, as the one with the problem, to find a way to master the problem. The answer lies in recognizing that the problem and the “you” who you think you are, that has the problem, are misperceptions—are illusory. In other words, as anyone who has studied metaphysics or spirituality knows, these things are said to be not real . . . which in many cases seems to be an unreasonable statement.

But they are not Real. Because when you abandon the stance of being one with the problem that must solve the problem, when you are willing to take a look at that and say, “Maybe this perception of a problem and this perception of a ‘me having the problem’ isn't real,” you have a means of exit from the strangle-hold the problem has on you because you can at least conceive that there's an “outside” of the problem that you can step into.

Just as with the fact that when you realize that the question is not what is important, and the questioner isn't what is important, but that the Answer that is emerging is the only thing going on. Likewise, the “you” with the problem and the problem are not you and are not your perspective, even though you have claimed them as yours and believe that they are yours and believe that it is truly you having the experience and being responsible for it.

And it's not true. Because if you will be willing to at least imagine that at the moment you seem to be embroiled in the problem, it is just a perception, just a mind-set, just a stance you have taken, you can conceive that you can abandon the stance.

And when you abandon it, do you disappear? No. Just as you don't disappear when you stop claiming to be the questioner and you stop seeing the question as the initiator of answers, you find yourself to be in the pristine place of innocence and invulnerability. You see?

It all depends on what you're going to let be your teacher. To what do you turn to learn? Well, this can be a sticky question also.

Do you get up in the morning and look out the window to see the weather, to see what kind of day you're going to have? Do you get up in the morning and check the associated press releases on your phone or turn on the TV to find out what's going on in the world so you might know how you should feel?

What do you let inform you about yourself? What do you use to determine who you are, what you are and how you must feel? Do you let the world inform you about you? Or do you do the two-step. Do you turn to the Holy Spirit to learn and inquire, “What is the truth here?” So the truth dawning in you informs your world as to what it is—what it divinely is—so that you might learn the truth of that Teacher and enjoy your day and see the Father illuminated more and more clearly so that you're able to fulfill your function of recognizing God in your world.

Now we've talked about the two teachers a lot. And usually, the two teachers have been referred to as the ego and the Holy Spirit. But tonight I want to use two different words that will bring home the meaning more fully.

The two teachers and the only two teachers you have to turn to are memory or inspiration. The only two teachers there are that you can gather anything from, are memory and inspiration.

Inspiration you can have no control over whatsoever. Inspiration happens, doesn't it. And I will tell you that it happens whenever you let it. It doesn't seem to happen often because you don't invite it, you don't let it. You don't realize that that is the Movement of Creation. That is the Movement of the infinite Mind that is God that informs Reality called, "Creation."

But it's a fact. But in order to experience inspiration you must be willing to lose your balance, you must be willing to be out of control. You must be willing to ALLOW what is Real to register with you because you've asked to know what it is. And you have declined to search through memory—your memory—to find out what the Answers are. You see?

These are really the meanings of what "the two teachers" mean.

Now, in spite of the truth of what I've said, most of you do let yourselves be informed by your world. And your world seems to be reporting to you chaotic, destructive, inconsistent, unloving actions and events.

And Oh-h . . . does it get to you! It depresses you or it makes you furious or it makes you feel like getting up on your hind feet and making something happen to correct it. It makes you try to take control.

But you see, what you have seen and the effect it had on you is not because your world has informed you, but because you have turned to memory and all of the meanings you have assigned to the world and all of the mutual agreements and rules that you have put into place that you rely upon absolutely in order to try to be in charge and keep a reasonable amount of order in place so that you will not be overcome by chaos and fear and sin, sickness and death. It's that simple.

Now, here's the part that needs to be understood very simply and very clearly. The you who has looked out at the world, the you who has turned to his or her memory in order to determine the meaning of the world he or she has looked out at, that one is an illusion—is an imaginary character! And you, who are employing that stance, have not yet truly seen the world, even though you've observed it to try to gather information about how you are, about how safe you are, and so on.

You are not an illusion. You are actual. But You are the conscious awareness of Being, the presence of Mind, which has only the capacity to be conscious of what Is. And what Is, is what God is Being. And part of God being All includes you recognizing God in All. You see?

It is as though you are the confirmation of Creation. It is as though you are the act of confirming Creation for what it is . . . by what? having asked of God what the truth is. And having asked of God because there is a niggling question [chuckling] that is occurring in you!

Now the niggling question may be occurring because you're in distress and in so many words something in you says, "There must be a better way than this." Where did that thought come from? It didn't come from your memory. It came from the insistence of the Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind—insinuating the wholeness of You into your present limited awareness. It's your salvation releasing you from an unreal bondage—an imagined bondage.

Now, when you arrive at this point where you seem to be caught and overwhelmed and hopeless in a problem, and you look squarely at the possibility that what I'm saying is true, and that the you that seems to be experiencing this, and whatever it is that you're experiencing are an illusion, you're likely to think, "Well that means I'm totally insane. It means that I am possessed by another presence . . . not me. And I am possessed by it so completely that I think it's me, and I have no inclination to seek any other perspective. Now, if that's not the definition of crazy, I don't know what it is. And that scares me."

You see, that line of thought could occur and cause you to stay bound. But I will reaffirm to you something you need to know. And that is, that separate and apart from your present fixation on a sense of self with a problem, and a problem that aren't actually Real, is like an idea in the mind of you having the idea, and the you that is having the idea is not the idea. You see? Therefore, you can abandon the idea. You can abandon the idea in preference to saying, "Father, what is the truth here?" You see?

Now another aspect of all of this is, that the you who has the problem is not going to be able to work its way out of the problem, because the you that has a problem is imagined. It is an imagination and it's not you. That's how come you can escape from it. You see? That's why you can escape from it. And that's why you have A Course In Miracles to explain these things so that you might realize that the way Home is already predetermined, set in place for you because you are not what you think you are. You are divine, and every aspect of your Being is absolutely divine, invulnerable, absolutely perfect. And this perfect presence of Mind that you Are, is untouched at the very moment that you feel caught by a problem, or even overwhelmed by a question that you think there might be an answer to that you could figure out.

The you who has the capacity to Know exists untouched by the imagined self who has a problem, or who has a question . . . and who knows so much about the problem or so much about the question that it seems that an answer is absolutely impossible. And as a result of that conviction, locking yourself into the problem or the question without an answer, and all of it because you think that you are the questioner and that you are the one who has the problem and that you are responsible for only having questions or problems [chuckles] without answers. You see?

To what do you turn to learn . . . memory or inspiration?

So what do you do? You feel frightened. You feel tense. You feel grief-stricken. You feel misunderstood. You feel disrespected when you deserve respect. Well, wait a minute . . . where did those feelings come from? “Well, I don’t know where they came from, but I’m experiencing them. I am sad. I am angry. I do have hurt feelings. I have been mistreated” . . . and on and on and on.

Well, wait a minute . . . there isn’t any you who stands in the middle of problems and solutions, or questions and answers. There isn’t any you that stands between the Holy Spirit and an ego that you are. You see? You don’t have an independent valid place from which to be or do anything. But you imagine that you do.

In other words, at any given moment, a teacher is teaching you something. You are never in an independent place where you’re not being taught by something other than who you think you are. If you are experiencing fear or distress of any sort, or jealousy, or self-righteousness, a teacher is providing you with those dynamics, and of course, we have referred to it as the ego. And I have pointed out in the past that the ego never says, “You are feeling this way, or you are hurt, or you are upset.” The ego, we’ll say, in your mind says, “I am hurt. I am upset. I am feeling appropriately self-righteous.” You see? And you hear the words that a teacher is presenting to you and you hear them as though you are speaking them in your mind. And you claim ownership of something that a teacher is providing you with.

Is the Holy Spirit revealing to you the spirit of fear? No! But something is. And it’s not an independent experience you are having all by your little self, separate and apart from a teacher called the ego, or the teacher called the Holy Spirit.

I’m sorry to hurt your feelings and to tell you that you just don’t exist that way at all. You don’t exist with any independent, self-initiated selfhood. You are always being taught. You are always giving voice to a teacher. In other words, you are a puppet no matter what. And you’re either a puppet of your memory or you are a puppet of the inspiration of Being that is the Movement of the Mind of God called Creation. You see?

Pay attention to this. You’re never having a thought of your own. You are never having a thought of your own. Get used to the idea. Accept it. Acknowledge it. And that will release you. It will cause you to allow yourself to be what you Are—the puppet of the Father, the Expression of the Father, reflecting everything that the Father is Being, not initiating anything on your own. And in that experience is your salvation, your atonement, your Awakening.

Acknowledge and accept it as a precept that you have no ideas by yourself. As long as you think you do, and based upon your memory and the rules that you've set up there, you will believe that having thoughts of your own validates you and you will not be so willing to abandon that right—that so-called right—in favor of being the reflection of the wholeness, the infiniteness of the Movement of God.

Now again, you will never work your way out of the problem. In other words, you will never improve.

You can't get to the truth from the bottom up. The emergence of Truth, the emergence of Reality, the emergence of Salvation, the emergence of Revelation is always from the top down. And the top-down movement is called inspiration.

When and if you are so caught by the morbid or negative energy of a distorted ego viewpoint, or orphan mentality—that which is separated from all that makes it valid—you must remember to stop trying to improve yourself and to engage in the two-step, address the situation at the top, “Father, Holy Spirit, what is the god's honest truth here? I'm willing to abandon what the other teacher is teaching me. In fact, I insist upon it.”

The rules of memory, because you formed them by yourself and in tandem with others governs you absolutely. They are laws that cause you to say, “No, no I am so miserable I do not want to seek the Truth right now. No, I have been so badly wronged I refuse to get into a place where I might experience love or forgiveness or a non-judgmental practicality that allows me to deal with the situation constructively and harmoniously while correction is brought about. You see?

When you seem caught you must insist upon first of all recognizing that a teacher is teaching you and these thoughts and feelings are not your thoughts and feelings, the divine one that you Are. And then stop validating them by insisting upon turning to the Father, changing teachers with commitment. It will take purpose. It is appropriate to be ongoingly consistent in your insistence upon seeking the answer from God's Teachers.

That's the only way you can switch teachers, when you're so upset or unhappy or fearful that you say it is hopeless to ask what is the truth here, that it's hopeless to turn to God. "Well, nobody else has turned to God and made it!" Hey, don't make commitment to that attitude. Don't let that attitude rule you with the same kind of insistence and determination. Switch teachers! "Father, what is the divine fact here that uncovers the Truth—the perfect invulnerable Self that I Am at Your hand." You see? But do it with the same amount of commitment that you bring to your willingness—your stubborn willingness—to govern yourself by the negativity you're feeling.

Abandon your faith in the teacher that is teaching you to DIE. Amen.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

June 29th, 2014

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who is joining us on the internet.

Well, most everyone found our last get together stimulating, to say the least. Setting thought in new directions. Setting attention in new directions.

We discussed the fact that there is no independence whatsoever. Everyone is either the puppet of the ego or the puppet of the Holy Spirit. Or as we said, the puppet of memory or the puppet of inspiration.

And since that get together, someone expressed the idea that they didn't really like the idea or the use of the word, "puppet." They didn't like the idea of being the puppet of we'll say, the Father or the Holy Spirit. They preferred to think of themselves as the reflection of God.

Now that's a wonderful idea—that's a wonderful thought. But it leaves something essential out of the picture in this way: If you see yourself as the reflection of God, then you can say, "I, as the reflection of God, am this or that." "I, as the reflection of God, can expect to have healing where I couldn't have when I didn't know I was a reflection of God."

You can speak of yourself and what is true about you as a reflection of God but that isn't being the reflection of God, that's you thinking about and conceptualizing being the reflection of God.

Now, in the most practical of terms, here's the difference: If you are the puppet of God and if you accept that as a fact, that you're either the puppet of God—the puppet of the Holy spirit—or the puppet of the ego, then you know you have to make a choice between which teacher you're going to use. And when you make the choice you're going to have to what? Listen to that teacher. Which means that you're going to have to shut up. In other words, the one who says, "I as a reflection of God am this or that or the other thing," that has to shut itself up. Did you ask of the Holy Spirit or the Father, if you as the reflection of God were this that or the other thing?

You see, you can think spiritual thoughts without engaging in the connection with God that makes you the puppet of the Father which causes you to give voice to—not your best thinking—but the Father’s Perspective, the Father’s Words, the Holy Spirit’s words. You see?

As a reflection of God you may or may not hear anything except your best thoughts about what being a reflection of God is. You see?

And so you can believe that you are on the right track because you know you’re a reflection of God, when you’re not on the right track at all, because the intimate connection with the Father wherein you hear His Voice and choose to give expression to His Perspective occurs. You see? That’s where the actuality of it is.

You are the puppet of one of two teachers. There is no place where you are not a puppet, but are an independent free agent. God did not create you with free will to be on your own, on your terms, using your imagination and giving definition to everything yourself.

That is the fundamental mistaken belief. And the only way to get past that is to recognize that since there is no independent place and you are a puppet of one of two teachers, then you must choose the teacher you’re going to follow . . . you must. That becomes clearer and it helps motivate you to make the choice and to make it with commitment.

Now I gave clues to this when I was present on Earth. If you remember, I told my disciples, “If you have seen me, you have seen the Father.”¹ Now, why would I say that? I said it to convey the fact that what was present and presenting Itself where I was, was the Father and not Jesus’ memory, not Jesus’ background, not Jesus’ thoughts. You see? If you have seen me, you have seen the Father, because in actuality the Father is all there is to the presence called “You.”

That was my task, because that’s my function. And that is your function.

Now in the Garden of Gethsemane, I said in so many words, “Father, if this cup can pass from me . . .”² In other words, if I don’t have to go through this I would prefer it, but nevertheless, thy Will be done. You see?

In other words, the bottom line was yielding to the Father. Letting myself be the presence of what the Father intended to be out of Love for His Sons and Daughters at that moment. I let myself be the unequivocal puppet.

Now that wasn’t the only moment. At every moment during what everyone calls “my ministry,” that is what I was doing. That is what I was Being. And I was setting the example.

Now you have the same task in front of you.

Now we must understand what the Holy Spirit is, because the Holy Spirit is one of the two teachers. The one sentence, the one important sentence that didn't make it intact into the revisions of the Course but which was present in the dictation to Helen was, "The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind."

Now I've described that when you got a divorce from the Father, when you said, "But Father, I'd rather see it my way," you abandoned the infiniteness of you—the omnipresence, the omniscience of you—and in effect you circumscribed infinity and said, "This little part of It is me . . . this is the new definition of me." And you excluded everything else as not you. And suddenly you were finite. Suddenly you were limited. Suddenly you were experiencing guilt and fear because you can't help but be fundamentally uncomfortable when you're in a state of self-denial.

Now I've explained that everything on the outside of this circumscribed area that you are now describing or defining as you, everything else—the rest of the infiniteness of you—became what is called, "The Holy Spirit." That's why the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind. The Holy Spirit is your Teacher. And the Holy Spirit's function, just as mine is, is to reveal to you and disclose to you the Father's Will. Why? Because It insists upon bringing you back into your right Mind. And in your right Mind, you are the presence of the Father's Will in action Being the Movement of Creation.

Now I would ask you why would you not want to be the puppet of the Holy Spirit, if the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind? Why would you not want to be absolutely governed by the absolute puppet of your right Mind—your infinite right Mind—if that constituted you being sane and nothing else did?

You see? That makes it clear doesn't it.

To this bound off little area of the infiniteness of you and the vulnerable perceptions that are experienced there, your yielding up your autonomy feels insane. Because it takes everything you have to keep a sense of order when you're doing it all by yourself. And your belief is that if you abandon that you will collapse, chaos will ensue, order . . . whatever degree of order you are experiencing will be lost, and the very essence of you will disappear. And it's not true.

What is true about you has already disappeared by virtue of your blocking it off and saying, "Here I am and I'm the puppet of no one and there is everything else and it's not me."

And so you're living an untruth without knowing it. You have created for yourself an ego—a tiny separated sense of self. And you know what? As you have spent time in this separated off sense of self, you have not done it alone. You have done it with others who had the same goal and who are now experiencing the same vulnerability and the same need for self-defense and all of you together have established mutual agreements and definitions as to how things work. Each of you has created an ego for yourselves—structures of thought, structures of concepts, structures of beliefs—all of which you use to maintain a sense of relative peace or to use to regain peace when you lost it. You create an ego for yourself and everything you do is scripted.

You think you're being original but everything you do is an expression of the decisions and the agreements and the definitions that you have put into place. And every single word that comes out of your mouth in one way or another, expresses the script of those ego structures. The script could be you being "Mr. Nice Guy." Or as many of you know, you do employ different scripts at different times of the day. At one time of the day the script is one of a parent. At another time of the day, it's the script of an employer. At another time of the day, it's the script of a mate or a partner.

And you have rules that you abide by. "Mr. Nice Guy" has lots of rules of etiquette—of proper behavior. You see? And so you've created an ego for yourself.

Now the interesting thing, if I may put it that way, is that these structures govern what you see. They become a sieve through which life arrives at your attention, causing you to see according to the script you're using. And so when you look at your Brother, you have a script for your Brother. The Course says that you created an ego for yourself and your Brother. You see? That's how you do it. You have a script for yourself depending upon who you are supposed to be at any given moment. And that script governs how you see the world and it causes you to create an ego for your Brother or your Sister or your spouse or your parents or your children. And you will lock them into your definition and it will cause you to see what you have decided to see no matter what they're doing.

So this simply elaborates on what we discussed last time . . . the fact that the questioner and the question are an illusion. The "you" has an ego and the egos it creates for everyone else and the made up definitions that get applied to Creation—all of these things are illusions. The illusions are the result of following the teacher—the ego—instead of following the Teacher, the Holy Spirit.

You think you're being original. You think you're being creative. But it's all going on through the sieve of the structures of belief that you are employing—the imaginative made up, artificial, untrue ideas. And you, if you are a student of the Course, are beginning to become aware that there's another way to look at this.

Now let's understand a little more about the Holy Spirit because students of the Course very often refer to the Holy Spirit in a very loose way that's very misleading.

You have a problem and you say, "I turned it over to the Holy Spirit." Or a friend and an acquaintance of his are having a great disagreement and you say, "I turned them over to the Holy Spirit." Well gee, how dandy! What in the heck does that mean, you turned them over to the Holy Spirit? Is the Holy Spirit like a mail box where you send dysfunctional situations so that somehow they can be magically dealt with?

No. Look, here's a clearer way to understand those words. When you are confronted by someone or something that is exhibiting problems and their behavior is a call for correction, you can turn them over to the Holy Spirit by not turning them over to your best judgment. In other words, instead of trying to figure out how to solve the problem by your independent “goody-two-shoes self,” you can do the two-step. You can shut up the goody-two-shoes self. And in the silence, turn to the Holy Spirit. You see? Turn it over to the Holy Spirit by turning your attention to the Holy Spirit and inquiring, “What is the truth here?”

Turning it over to the Holy Spirit is not a way of becoming relieved of having to be involved or having to be an active part of the correction of the problem. You turn it over to the Holy Spirit by turning your attention to the Holy Spirit and saying, “What is the truth here?” and letting your right Mind be, if I may put it this way, the hand with the strings that are attached to the wonderful puppet that you are so that you can hear the truth and give Voice to the Truth and be the Presence that heals. You see?

The Holy Spirit isn’t something “out there,” some wonderful fatherly presence, or brotherly presence who will help you not have so many problems if you will simply ask. No. The Holy Spirit is the Presence of Mind that is your right Mind which, when you embrace it without resistance, consumes you, overwhelms you completely with Itself, which is your right Mind and is therefore, your Self in its total Sanity being able to be the illumined Presence of Mind that is the Love of God which transforms and heals the situation. You see?

You don’t want to find ways to somehow have the benefits of the Truth without ever having to give your attention to It, invite It in and yield to It completely. That is what it’s about. That is what the Course is teaching. You see?

I know . . . everyone is used to going “willy nilly” along their way having care-free fun with care-free thoughts thinking that they are experiencing freedom when every single care-free thought is a scripted thought carrying out instructions, I will say, that embody a concept of you that you are trying to create and maintain and establish and turn into a real you.

That’s the orphan mentality. That’s the ego mentality. And it’s all made up. It is all invalid. There is no such you!

Every single one of you has experiences that demonstrate to you that it isn’t you. And those experiences are what you call “inspiration”—sudden inputs of insight that go beyond anything you had embraced before that involve divinity, for lack of better words. You don’t have any other way to describe it to yourself. And that penetration of the divine into your current mindset—your current orphan mindset—is a demonstration of the fact that indeed there is another way to look at this. And you can specifically choose for it. And you need to.

Now this is being made explicitly clear. And as you embrace it and you dare to more consistently say, “Father, what is the truth here? Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?” and you listen for the Answer before you express anything, much less your best judgments, you will have the Answers coming more and more fluidly even though it’s halting in the beginning. And your new behavior, your choice—your conscious choice—for the Teacher that’s nothing more than your right Mind, that will transform you, and it will leaven the whole lump of mankind that doesn’t yet think there’s another way to look at this.

And this is important. And it’s worth engaging in. But you won’t engage in it until it really registers with you that you are not independent, you are the puppet of one of two teachers. You see?

You think there’s no penalty for being your wonderful independent self. Because you don’t know there’s an alternative and you don’t know that this wonderful independent self is an illusion, which is accompanied by sin, sickness and death. And therefore, you don’t realize that there’s a choice that can release you from those three things and return your Sanity to you . . . and your peace and your vital aliveness to Creation.

This is very important! It is very practical good news.

It really doesn’t do a lot of good to talk about A Course in Miracles. It doesn’t really do a lot of good to talk about the “Raj materials,” because they mean nothing if they’re not moving you to a place of making a choice—a choice to abandon the unoriginal scripted life that you have been living and you didn’t know you had an alternative to.

The benefit is too great. The detriment is too great. And the detriment is a useless meaningless side-trip that in the end has never affected the holy Son or Daughter of God that you Are. And has never affected Creation that all of you are calling “the material world and universe” and which you see through the lens of your definitions and which, as you are aware, also seem to embody sin, disease and death. You see? Deterioration, entropy, positive and negative polarizations . . . and on and on and on . . . this is the way it looks through the scripts you’ve written and adopted that govern what you see.

And you know what? You want to come back into your right Mind. You want to be dominated. You want the imaginary you to be over ruled by the Holy Spirit—that is your right Mind—because it’s the end of illusions and it’s the return of the experience of the glory of God that is inseparable from you in your right Mind . . . recognizing God in everything.

When you do that, you abandon the ego and you—you don’t overcome it, you don’t destroy it, you abandon the ego in you. And you also abandon the egos that you created for others and release them, which makes it so much easier for them to release themselves from the ego they created for themselves. It’s the way you witness for your Brother and your Sister and confirm the truth. And that is healing.

So let’s stay attentive and let’s stay grounded and let’s stay practical. And let’s not get airy-fairy and, “Oh, I’m the reflection of God.” Well you know what, you’re not the reflection of God until you’ve turned to God and you’ve asked of God, “What is the truth here?” and you hear God’s Voice and you give voice to It instead of giving voice to yourself. You see?

Now there is one way in which you could say you are the reflection of God and that is in the sense that the word is used when you say, “He watched the incredible sunset and continued to sit there after it was over reflecting upon it.”

Reflection is a Movement of Mind, and you are the reflection of God. You are an Idea of God in the Mind of God. You are the Presence of His Mind moving. And in that way you are God’s reflection. But in order for that to be actualized you have to be willing to open up to that awareness—God’s Reflection.

“What is the meaning of me? What am I God, as you are seeing/being me. I want the experience—not the idea, not the words—I want the experience. I’m happy to abandon all of my concepts and all the pictures I have in my mind and all the rules of what’s true about me that I’ve been making everything fit into. I’m willing to abandon all of that for the experience of what I am as Your Reflection—as the reflection, the activity of your Mind being me. I am happy to be the puppet of the Movement of Your Mind by accepting that I am Your Mind expressed and expressing Itself. And I no longer choose to try to initiate and practice a contrary concept, viewpoint, perspective and so on.”

This is the truth.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

September 15th 2014

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We've talked before about your getting a divorce from the Father. We've talked about the "act of independence" in which you and another Son or Daughter of God said "Father, we'd rather do it our way." "Father, we'd rather define what everything is." "Father we would rather think for ourselves, instead of always and only acknowledging the Movement of Your infinite Mind . . . always behaving in deference to You."

And we talked about the fact when you made the decision to act on your own, two things came into play: fear and guilt.

Now we've talked about how fear and guilt can be used by you as triggers to accomplishment—as the justification for improving yourselves. And in that sense, fear and guilt are cast in a so-called constructive light. But there's an aspect to it which is actually its real aspect and it is not constructive. It is not comfortable. It is not kind or loving or promotive of any good thing.

What you find behind the so-called positive use you're putting it to, that it is nothing more than a terrorizer. It tells you that you have denied God. And that therefore you are guilty of a profound sin. And therefore you had better not approach the Father in any way—don't even think about the Father in any way.

It scares you and does everything it can to promote ongoing fear so as to prevent you from returning to the Father and instead promoting your independent self so that you might become what the ego now tells you is the Father's goal for you—to be an independent will successfully and prove your worth, your value, and your validity.

And so, using terror, using fear of that which would solve your problems, it goads you into defending yourself, protecting yourself and getting your brothers and sisters who have also decided to try to be independent, to join with you either through cooperation or manipulation, to secure the “brotherhood of man” we'll say,—these organisms that have nothing to do with God.

Now, my language is not too strong. The ego is a terrorizer and it governs every single individuality who has gotten this imaginative divorce from his Father and is ignoring his Father or her Father, totally. The result is a life of suffering which is made somewhat comfortable by the skillful manipulation of each other.

Now, the ego—the voice for fear—is constantly distracting you from the real source of your problem. It convinces you that the wrath of God awaits you and if you want to escape the wrath of God and escape that fundamental problem you had better continue to defend and protect yourself and engage in entirely selfish actions at the expense, if necessary, of every one of your brothers and sisters.

This approach—this style of distraction—keeps you from recognizing that it is the ego itself that is your problem. It points the finger “out there” at your brothers and sisters—at the countries in your world—at the political parties in your countries. It points the finger out even more infinitely to God and turns your existence into a constant state of self-protection fueled by compulsive fear.

As a general rule, you don't feel it as starkly as it is actually. But I will tell you, and I don't really need to tell you that “the times, they are a changing.” And the starkness of evil, the starkness of the mean-spirited distraction from what solves every problem is no longer able to be experienced with as much comfort. And as a result, most everyone to one degree or another is experiencing heightened fear, together with heightened guilt. Because at the same time that the ego points its finger at another and says “they are the problem,” it also points the finger at you, and says “you are responsible for it.” It even takes your spiritual teachings and tells you that your thinking has brought it on you. You are the culprit. You are guilty. And therefore, since there is no infinite loving Source available to you, you are stuck with this untenable situation, of being guilty and not being able to get free of it.

Many of you, because of what is going on in the world scene or in individual countries or in communities or in families or friendships, many of you are finding yourselves experiencing fear, experiencing being discounted—finding that what of value you are able to share is not wanted. In fact, you are ridiculed and this undermines your stability and your security even more than the general presence of fear and guilt.

And so there is more discouragement than usual. And it seems to be just the way things are. The ego distracts you significantly enough that it is almost impossible to remember that “there is another way to look at this.” If you cannot remember that in the midst of a state of fear, you will be stuck and you will be inclined to take steps based on your misunderstanding of the nature of Being, and you will use force in an act of desperate self-preservation that constitutes the out picturing of further terrorism—terrorism upon whatever you are acting against. And that magnifies the problem.

You must find a way to remember that there is another way to look at this. You must find a way to remember that there is something that we’ve called, “the two-step.” You must find a way to remember that there’s something called, “the holy instant” which is the bridge out of the insane distortion of your mind that the voice for fear has created into the inherent unchangeable divine sanity of your Being.

And then you must have the courage. You must find the willing—not willful—the willing determination to plant your attention firmly in the holy instant, in that place where you are saying, “Father, what is the truth here?” “Holy Spirit, what is the truth here, separate and apart from what the voice for fear is describing?” “What is the God’s honest truth here?” “What is God Being here?” And then you must be willing to stay there until you hear the Answer, without attempting to provide the answer first, yourself.

Terrorism is a result of a disconnection with your Source, with your Father, with that infinite divine Mind and infinite divine Presence, which in Its Movement, constitutes Creation—constitutes everything of which you are aware but of which you are experiencing a misperception because you’ve been listening to the voice for fear which will tell you anything to get you to engage your personal will and forget to shut it up and in the Silence turn away from the voice for fear to the Father or the Holy Spirit truly wanting to know what the other way to look at it is . . . what the Father’s Way of seeing it, is.

“Oh . . .” the ego says, “Well, you’ve never done that before. What makes you think you’re going to be able to have that experience now?”

And so when you try—when you make a point of becoming still and asking—your conditioning makes it difficult for you because you’ve been told that the wrath of God awaits you. You’ve been told that you’re not divine. You’ve been told that you have no inherent worth and you have to earn it. And therefore there is no justification whatsoever for your hearing the Voice for Truth—for your hearing the Voice for God. And that makes it difficult, that makes something that is utterly simple, difficult.

In the beginning when Paul was able to hear me initially, it did not flow smoothly like it is right now and I had to remind him many times, the answer is simpler than anything you’re expecting. I had to tell him that because it’s the truth and because that would help him relax and not try so hard to overcome a lack of skill that he thought he must have to have which “holy people” have, but not everyone.

Maybe you haven’t experienced the Voice for Truth directly within yourself yet, or maybe you have experienced it intermittently. But there is little confidence that it could happen again. Well, that’s no reason to stop. Persistence will not give you the skill to do something that’s difficult. Persistence will wear down the resistance to hearing.

It will undo the strength of the belief you're entertaining that says it won't work.

Now, you look at the world, you look at your communities, you look at your families and you're confronted with situations that seem unresolvable either because the members of the family or the community can't see any alternative or believe that there can't possibly be a viable alternative or because you yourself and your conditioning are arguing against it.

But again, the answer is: step into the void. Step into that place where you lack control, authority, or the knowledge it takes to resolve the situation. Step into that "not-knowing place" with the desire to have the knowledge needed, imparted to you, and do it, if for no other reason than I am telling you that the Father waits. The Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your right Mind—waits. I wait. The Awakened Brotherhood waits to fill you up with the Answers, with the resolutions, with the inspiration, with the strength to move out of the territory—to move out of the neighborhood in which terrorism lurks and seems to insert itself.

You know what? The Truth is true. It is true that you are the holy Son or Daughter of God—the direct expression of the Father and nothing less. And you are that right now. And it is the truth that you are that right now in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven right now, even though the definitions of yourself and your world as provided by the voice for fear has totally colored it, depriving you of the holy experience of yourself, your body and your world.

The Ultimate is what you're right in the middle of and this is the Truth. And it's the Truth that you forget when you're overwhelmed by the voice for fear and you BELIEVE what it is saying about your brothers and sisters and your world and yourself.

It is as though you're drugged into a stupor and you cannot think clearly and you believe what you are thinking. And yet that is not your natural state and it is not your perfect conscious experience of Being, which cannot be taken away from you but which you can be distracted from when you are not carefully choosing your teacher.

And so, one of the great lessons of A Course in Miracles is, that there is another way to look at this—whatever it is. There is a way to look at it and see the more of what God is Being right there than what the voice for fear is telling you is there and causing you to commit yourself to.

If you want to become free of fear, if you want to be in that place where terrorism is not controlling you and manipulating you, you must remember this fundamental fact: There is another way to look at this—and then abandon the voice for fear. In other words, you must arrive at a place within yourself right when the voice for fear is at its loudest. And you must come to what seems like a totally irrational position of believing that every compelling thing the voice for fear is presenting you with is meaningless and does not deserve your attention or emotional response! And then shut up. Turn to the Holy Spirit, engage in the holy instant by saying, “Father, Holy Spirit, what is the truth here?”

As I said, perhaps the bottom line significant point to be recognized, which the Course presents is this: There is another way to look at this. “Ah,” the ego could say, “Well, what’s new about that? For centuries, forever, it’s been a fact, there’s another way to look at this. I mean after all people walked to get everywhere and they said, ‘there’s got to be another way to look at this’ and so they started riding horses. And then they said, ‘there’s got to be a better way than this, another way to look at it’ and there were automobiles and then there were planes and on and on.” And in every area of human life, and human endeavor there’s been a constant overturning of the way things are seen: ‘there’s another way to look at this.”

Well, that’s not what we’re talking about. We’re not just talking about having some new creative mutual agreement for everybody to manipulate each other with and hold each other in line with, and control.

There is another way to look at this means: there is a way to look at what I am seeing as a material body, as mortals, as a material world and universe. There’s another way for me to look at it than that, and that is to look for and desire to experience the Kingdom of Heaven, the actual Movement of Creation, right here, right now that the infinite Mind that is God is, I'm going to say, fabricating, or bringing into an experienceable form (isn't the right word). Well, we'll say, bringing it into an experienceable experience that embodies all that the Father is, including the fact that because God is Love, every aspect of the experienceable experience is imbued with Love. Which is experienced by every part of Creation, so that you are experienced by the flowers and the trees and the stars and the elements as the radiance of Love loving them, just as they are experienceable by you as the radiance of Love that they are, because it's all the infinite expression, the infinite experienceable experience that embodies, that expresses the fundamental Love that God is, that the infinite Mind is that is Moving and looking like all of Creation.

That's the different way to look at this. That is the different way.

So be sure that you are not limiting what you expect to experience when you say, "There is another way to look at this."

Now, it's very simple, from the standpoint of everyday human experience at the moment, when you are overwhelmed by fear and guilt and self-criticism that always accompanies it, because that is what will distract you from returning to the Father, because you expect his wrath to meet you, when you remember to look for and be opened to infinite holiness, but you're doing it in the midst of the onslaught of fear and guilt, you may well have to be diligent, determined . . . not determined to make a change happen, but determined in the form of self-discipline to listen for the Voice for Truth and nothing else. And when you catch yourself distracted [snaps his fingers] as in a meditation, bring your attention back. And stay with the Teacher who will reveal the Truth about everything and the Truth about You.

I am not meaning to imply in any way that hard times are upon everyone or that it's going to get worse like "the end times." I am simply pointing out that the illusion is wearing thin. What the voice for fear teaches is incapable of registering with everyone as significantly as it used to as though it were truth. And this is felt as a disturbance, because after all, it would be nice to keep the status-quo. I mean after all, there has been a certain amount of reasonable amount of peace for all these centuries. But the illusion is wearing thin, which means that you're faced with a very practical help in your Awakening. And this very practical help is that remaining asleep isn't going to work anymore.

You're going to lose what you thought the status-quo was. Thank God. This can be discouraging or you can, in a mature way, look at it and say, "Okay, no more fooling around. I can't dally with the ego any longer while my divinity is held in trust as the Holy Spirit, unavailable to me as my conscious experience of my individuality and identity. I can't maintain that anymore and so I'm going to stop. And I am going to make commitment to remember the fundamental point: There is another way to look at this." And then act upon that by engaging in the holy instant, practicing the two-step.

Now, a simple piece of advice: When you join with the Holy Spirit and you listen for Its guidance and the coming together of all that you Are begins to occur so that the Holy Spirit is not something different from your conscious experience of Being, you may find, as I said earlier, that others will say, "I don't want what you have to give. What you are calling clarity is nonsense." You know, just as you when you are in the thick of your relationship with the voice for fear think that returning to the Father is not going to be your salvation, when that happens and there is a refusal to value what you are sharing, be wise and ask further of your connection with the Holy Spirit—that is nothing more than your right Mind—whether or not you should persist or whether you should turn your back and walk away and find those who are ready to embrace and enjoy the benefit and the growth that comes from what you have to give.

It's very simple. The more who Awaken, the fewer there will be who are asleep. The fewer who are asleep means that the strength of the mutual agreement is weakened. And so instead of working with the hardcore committed individuals who insist upon listening only to the voice for fear and doing little to lessen the strength of the mutual agreement, because there is no real contribution to the number of those Awakening, go to those who are hungry for the Truth and facilitate their Awakening. Because, if I may put it this way, that's the only thing that will break the back of the terrorizers. That's the only thing that will take away the strength of the mutual agreement that makes it seem reasonable for those who are addicted to the voice for fear to continue. “Oh, but she’s my mother. Oh, but she’s my daughter. Oh, but she’s my wife. I must stay and fight with her will, to overcome it and weaken it so that she sees the truth!”

Don’t get me wrong, always be willing to share the Truth. But don’t dedicate yourself to those who are dedicated to not hearing it . . . another aspect of maturity that will contribute to the speedup, the acceleration of the breakdown of the mutual agreements that keep the voice for fear alive. That is Love . . . that is Love.

So, what am I saying? I am saying that the good news is, that it is now becoming increasingly difficult to engage in and maintain illusion. And this means that you will have to be willing to abandon your use of manipulation and control to keep you safe . . . and let it push you . . . let yourself be pushed by the demands of the times you’re in, to shift from your exercise of control out of fear and guilt to an inner state of innocence and humility that will flow with the Movement of Mind—the infinite Mind that is the Father—so that the Movement of Mind that constitutes Creation now . . . now . . . now . . . now registers with you as what It is, instead of what the voice for fear had been telling you it was.

Some old habits will have to be dropped: The habit of ruminating over the awfulness of the situation here or there or elsewhere, shock at the boldness of evil. All of this distracts you from noticing how you are using your mind and keeps you from recognizing the simple step that needs to be taken.

“Oh, there is another way to look at this. I am going to engage in the two-step. I’m going to employ the holy instant with diligence and dedication. I’m going to do that and nothing else. And if I find myself waffling back and forth, I’m going to catch myself and rededicate myself to doing only that—only listening for the Voice for Truth until I hear it. And then I’m going to continue to listen here . . . listen here . . . listen and hear so that the way I Be is in perfect harmony with the way the infinite Mind that is God, Moves and I can see it and recognize God in it, and know my place, which is always to defer to God. Because in deferring to the way things are, I experience the way things are without fear and guilt and with a full comprehension and understanding of the absolute divinity of everything that is going on right here and right now. And I no longer suffer from the idea that it's somewhere off after I die.”

This is the good news! It may sound as though I was unnecessarily repetitive tonight but I know that there are going to be many occasions very often in the middle of the night, in the darkness where fear takes over, that many will listen to what I have just said. And my constant elucidation of the Truth will wear down their commitment to their fear and help release them. And I know that every one of you who has been listening as I have been speaking—we will say live—have likewise been moved, even if you weren't in the darkness of despair at this very moment.

I love you all. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 18, 2015

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I'm going to talk about something important tonight, not necessarily anything new. Something we've been discussing for quite awhile, which I know the majority of those listening are finding to be more significant and more demanding than you might have thought.

Now I want to back up to the account of Creation, to the point at which Adam and Eve were created and were told not to eat of the fruit of the Knowledge of good and evil. And they ate of the fruit.

Now this has been called an allegory but it has been taken literally. It is almost impossible for anyone familiar with the Bible to not feel that there were a man and a woman in the Garden of Eden—the realm of perfection—who were disobedient to God and ate some fruit. But that wasn't the disobedience, that wasn't the thing that caused the fall.

Literally, the thing that caused the fall was that the two of them made a decision. The two of them made a decision.

Now, let's take a look at this: God did not give man the capacity to make decisions. That is not the way the Being of God manifesting as Creation, including mankind, functions. We've talked about this, we referred to the fall as being when two or more brothers or sisters—Sons or Daughters of God decided to act independently. Literally, that means they decided to make decisions for themselves without referring to their Father, without being joined, which, of course, is impossible.

That which is the Expression of God cannot become disjoined from Him. And so, that never happened, not as a fact. But a decision was made to act on the basis of thought processes which never arose out of the inspiration and revelation that is the movement of the Mind of God that it is mankind's function to experience as the Father is Expressing and Being it and reflecting back to the Father the acknowledgment of His action—the crediting, you might say, of the Father with what the Sons and Daughters of God are experiencing.

In other words, it is the function of the Sons and Daughters of God to bear witness to the Father, breaking that mode of Being, which is the result of being still, joining, listening, hearing and acknowledging, that the abandonment of that amounted to a decision to act independently. And it didn't matter whether they ate fruit or killed animals to eat and pretend that they were living off of the protein and so on, it doesn't matter what the acts were, it's the fact that they chose to do something they weren't given the capacity to do—make decisions independently.

Now, we know from months and months and months of my talking about it and from anyone reading the Course to any extent, that the moment a divorce was believed to have occurred from the Father, those who got the divorce moved into the realm of imagination. Whatever they imagined a thing to be, that's what they said it was, and that's what they decided it was, and that's what they based all of their thinking on.

This pretension of independence, believe it or not, is hard work. Because it denies the very nature of one's Being, which is to be inseparably, eternally joined with the Father as the Father's Expression, bearing witness to the Father because they're paying attention to what the Father is Being, and not to what they wanted to decide everything was and what the meaning was.

This takes effort because it's an act of Self-denial.

This is important.

The effort is not a comfortable experience. And so there is an ever present dissonance which everyone is trying to get away from. The only thing is, everyone is trying to get away from it by virtue of even more independent thinking and reasoning and use of logic and still being unjoined, divorced from their Source. Again, an impossible thing.

Now that's the experience. The experience seems to be one of struggle as though it's difficult to deny one's Source.

But what I want to point out is, that the struggle is caused by the presence of the Holy Spirit which, for the first time, has been described as “that which is nothing more than your right Mind” in the book A Course in Miracles. This is the first time that has found expression and it's a key point.

The Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind. It is that of you which is held in trust while you're in a state of denying it. But it isn't just idly, patiently abiding in the background while you have fun being independently, imaginatively creative.

You must understand that if you attempt to deny the majority of your Being, the majority of your Being that is being excluded from your awareness by your willfulness, is going to feel like pressure to you because it is going to and it always has been insisting upon registering with you and Waking you up!

This is important to understand. Because it means that you are constantly partnered with, by That of you which you are in a constant state of denying. And this partner with you—which is nothing more than the rest of your right Mind—is the presence of Love constantly undermining your willfulness, constantly being your Teacher, constantly supporting your being shaken out of your intent to continue to think independently and define everything yourself without ever saying, “Father,” or “Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? What is the more of what God is Being right here than what I'm seeing?”

You are constantly companioned with, by that of you which is your holiness which is holding in trust the Father's Perspective of Creation and of You and the correct Perspective of your Brothers and Sisters which it is your Birthright to be experiencing and blessing your brothers and sisters with, by the acknowledgement of their divinity as well.

Now, because it's believed that there's a trinity—an actual separation of three different elements—it seems to you even though you are a student of the Course that the Holy Spirit is something separate with Whom you can communicate and Who is willing to be your Helper to reunite you with the Father.

What is not clear to you and which must become clear is the fact that the Holy Spirit is the rest of you. It is the rest of your infinite conscious awareness which you're not connecting with because you're engaging in private, personal, willful activity that's unjoined with that which is Universal, that which is divine.

And so, in the belief there is an actual Trinity, you do not realize that in practicing the two-step, in practicing the holy instant, you are letting all of what you really Are back into your conscious awareness. You are letting It's constant intent to insinuate your Sanity back into your mind—you're allowing that to happen.

But in order to do that, you must stop thinking independently. You must become still, you must reach out with a constant . . . with a conscious act of joining, of abandoning privacy, and want to know what is the truth here, where I am seeing an unholy, ungodly mess called my world or my personal relationships, and so on.

Well, so many of you say, "there are only a few who are able to hear the Holy Spirit or hear the Christ, and so I must depend on them and I'm just going to have to be satisfied with the fact that I can't do it."

Well, congratulations! You've just engaged in a decision. You've taken an idea, you've stated it, you've stated it as a fact, you've accepted it and you have succumbed to it. And of course, you're not going to hear anything.

But here's the point. It's time for everyone to Wake up out of the illusion of privacy, independence and some incredible capacity to imaginatively be as creative as anything could be. Because as a mortal—as a human being—you have this capacity and the truth that's being revealed is that you do NOT have that capacity and you are suffering from practicing it as though it's real.

The holy instant is the silence in the very essence of you in which you abandon your confidence in your little private self-hood and what it can accomplish and in the genuine absence of that you lean into an Answer that you don't yet have. And you lean into it with commitment because you, for some intelligent reason, have decided that you want to break the habit of mortality. You want to break the habit of being miserable, of sinning, getting sick and dying!

Now, just as I said with Adam and Eve, it didn't matter what act they engaged in, as long as the act was based on a decision that constituted an independent act.

Well, in terms of Waking up—in terms of the practice of the holy instant—it doesn't matter what you're doing: washing dishes, washing your car, repairing your car, weeding the garden, feeding the hummingbirds . . . it doesn't matter what you're doing. If you decide not to do it alone, you are engaged in the process of Waking up. You are engaged in refraining from being independent and beginning to value and enjoy the desire to not be alone, to be joined with that which represents God—which is nothing more than your right Mind—which is ever available to you, which has been companionship with you and is insisting upon registering with you because your Sanity is actually irrevocable and although you're not experiencing it, it is not gone.

And so, what needs to be understood is, that although you go through your day without doing hardly anything joined, you just act and behave on the basis of what you were raised to believe, and you may even be acting with very stern and strict, I will say, postulates—principles—that were handed down to you by strict parents or by a society which was very confined to principled behavior. And it's time for you to abandon that.

I will tell you, if you are not listening and if you are not hearing, then everything you are doing is being done in your imagination— everything is being defined by what you have imagined, or by what the imaginations of others were that were taught to you. And you are not connected in that place where the Revelation of truth and healing and invulnerability and eternity are present for you to regain the experience of.

You can see from what I'm saying that what is called for and what the ultimate issue that the Course is teaching, is that every moment of your day should be intended by you to be engaged in with someone else. I don't mean family. I don't mean brothers and sisters here. I mean by the Holy Spirit or by joining with me or by consciously reaching out to the Father because if you're not joined, no matter what you're dealing with, it's being dealt with through illusion— imagination that isn't based on fact.

So, the practice of the holy instant is ultimately important. It needs to be brought into play constantly. You need to arrive at the point where you're going through your day knowing that you're not alone and reaching out for the experience of communion. And even if you are not succeeding at it initially . . . persist.

You might even have to just go through your day and every ten or fifteen minutes or more often ask, "Are you there Holy Spirit?" "Are you there Jesus?" "Are you there my Guide?" As I check out in the grocery store, "Are you here with me? Are we doing this together?" The simple reminder that it is supposed to be an experience of being joined—of not being alone—will help promote your hearing. But you've got to know that's the point. And that's what I'm needing to refresh tonight before we continue on through the book.

Love is constantly present with you, tapping you on the shoulder, as it were, to say, "Move this way, move that way, say this, say that, here's how it really is," teaching you, guiding you, in ways that have one result: healing, wholeizing—the returning of your Sanity by the acceptance of the Holy Spirit's Perspective because it is nothing more than your true Perspective which you've been ignoring as long as you've been choosing to use your own definitions about how things work.

Now, you're not used to doing this. You're not used to the idea of not going through your day outside of the privacy of your own thoughts and your own decisions and your own conclusions, etc.—your own interpretations. You're not used to that. And so it feels like an impossible change, something that's going to be really hard.

Well, if you're going to be genuine in the desire to join, if you're going to genuinely engage in the holy instant, you are going to have to bring a level of faith into it. You are going to have to bring, for lack of better words, a certain determination into play. And it's going to feel like you're doing it all by yourself, because you aren't going to be relying on the way everyone else sees things. You're not going to be relying on what you've been taught everything is. And you're going to be moving into a space where what you're not familiar with can be revealed to you.

You're going to have to lean into a new experience of being conscious that will only register with you when you engage in a conscious choice to not do anything or believe anything or engage in private thinking about anything. And you join because you want to know the truth that the Holy Spirit or the Father or Jesus can give you.

Your conditioning, your definitions—the meanings you give, tell you that you're not likely going to be able to succeed because it is so radically different and you have no means of justifying it yet. That is where the determination and the commitment must come into play so that you engage in what doesn't make sense to your imaginative private mind. Because that's the only way you will step outside of memory and the bondage of rules and behaviors that cannot change.

The Holy Spirit—the Presence of Love that companions with you, is willing to make things so clear to you that all it takes is a little willingness on your part. It's true. But at the moment you're quite conditioned to believe what you believe and to believe you do not have a means or a way of becoming quiet enough to let an entirely new perspective register with you. But that is nothing more than conditioned thinking—a habit of thought which you validate because you're more familiar with it even though it doesn't work!

You need to know how wonderfully supported you are, how constantly supported you are. And you must bring, as I've said, an act of faith into relinquishing your confidence in what you believe, and for lack of better words, asking the Holy Spirit for a better belief, we'll say, for a perspective that more closely approximates what is utterly divinely true about you, about Creation and about everything ~~that~~ you're experiencing.

In other words, you must want to know the truth that you don't know yet, and that you have no means on your own of discovering. I'm talking about going through your day wanting to know the divine truth about everything you're experiencing. You're well familiar with the lousy interpretation your imagination and your conditioning is giving to everything you're experiencing.

And yet, as I've said before, Reality is the only thing confronting you, which you're either seeing clearly or through a glass darkly. You're either seeing clearly because you decided to join and inquire as to what the truth is, or *you're seeing through a glass darkly*¹ because you have abandoned the avenue of revelation that's available to you, and instead you're using your own best judgments and the skills you think you have that no one ever gave you. You see?

The task is to go through your day as consistently as possible wanting to know the truth—the divine Reality of everything you're confronted with and you need to know that on your own you can't possibly know. And therefore, there is no benefit in trying to figure everything out yourself no matter how creative you are, or think you are.

Un-joined means not Awake—unconscious of what the Reality of everything is that you're experiencing. Joined puts you at the threshold of the awareness of truth that it's your Birthright to be experiencing in the absence of any call for decisions—private decisions—of your own. This should be a joyous thing to engage in, even though it isn't initially.

I'm here to encourage you to bring the desire to look at everything and experience everything with the Holy Spirit, asking for the Holy Spirit's Perspective, which is truly your divine perspective and recognizing that this is the only way you will get out of the prison of the misperception of the Kingdom of Heaven, which is the only thing confronting you.

The simplest way for this to have meaning for you is, that if you will at the least assume that there is a God and that God is omnipotent and that you are His Expression and the Kingdom of Heaven, Reality—whatever the words, “Garden of Eden” originally meant—if you recognize that because God is omnipotent there must be available to you a different experience than the one you’re having, it will be easier for you to want to have the experience of truth. And for it to be a practical enough understanding, we’ll say, of the need that you’re willing to want it as consistently and as permanently as possible, so that you bring, I’m going to call it, a determined willingness, which is different from willfulness, so that you bring a determined willingness into play to hear the Voice for Truth and to no longer rely upon whatever goes through your mind when you’re not joined. You see?

Now we will continue moving through the book, A Course In Miracles. But no matter how much more you read, at the bottom line, it’s going to come down to the call for you to yield whatever pride you have in your own capacity to do things independently, and in humility and the absence of your trying to be something special, you want to know the truth.

You want to know the truth that you can’t possibly arrive at through the use of imagination, and you can only arrive at in the willingness to be so joined with your right Mind that you find yourself joined irrevocably with the Father and you are able to experience everything and recognize, actually recognize God in what you’re experiencing so that you are able to bear witness to Him, which is your part of the act of Creation.

I am inviting everyone not to get so hung up on the words in the Course or the concepts in the Course, that you can think about and discuss them at length, very intelligently, but neglect to do the one essential thing, which is to “shut up!” to become still, and engage in rejoining, abolishing the divorce from the Father that you and a brother or sister initiated at some point. You see?

You know, when a crisis arises, when something happens that is, I will say, major, and to you it is overwhelming because you know you have no way whatsoever to cope with it, then you will practice the holy instant. Then you will engage in the two-step. You will silence your imagination. You will refuse to scare yourself to death and exacerbate the problem. And in the silence of the absence of your best judgments, you will reach out, you will lean into the Holy Spirit. You will lean into the disclosure of what is True, and you will be healed. The problem will be resolved, because you lost faith entirely in your private, personal capacity to cope.

Now, I am here to constantly remind you that you don't have to wait until some major experience that overwhelms your imagined capacity to cope. You can just simply abandon it at any moment, without any good reason other than that you, knowing that there is Truth beyond what you're experiencing, want to know what it is.

And so you bring the wanting into play, constantly providing an energy, an atmosphere of humility and willingness, an invitation that you're not blocking. It may feel to you as though everything will collapse. What I want you to know is that in your acts of independence everything has collapsed. Things aren't that great. You're not experiencing healing and transformation even though you study the Course or any other religious or spiritual teaching—and you believe that it's possible.

You can lean into the actuality of it on purpose by wanting to know the Truth that goes beyond the most imaginative perfection that you might be able to come up with, and you want to experience it because It is the Expression of an eternal God, where there is no variableness, where what God is, is constantly moving into Expression and nothing else. Want that and remember to want it no matter what you're engaged in.

Everything . . . everything that is true is intent upon registering with you. Because everything that is true needs you to bear witness to God, to acknowledge God—not as a theory, but as an actual experiential recognition—because then you are fulfilling your role as co-creator and not denying it, not escaping from it because you'd rather think for yourself.

And so no matter how many more pages there are to read, no matter how many more things there are to say and to elucidate, there's one thing that it all boils down to. And you can begin this very moment and have every day, every hour, every minute from now on, filled with an active awareness of your wanting to know the Truth that you don't know yet and that you have no way of discovering all by yourself.

That's the simplicity of it. And you could say that's the difficulty of it. But the only thing that makes it difficult is the familiarity and the reverence that you bring to what you believe and what you want to believe without joining with that which can provide you with an incredibly different view that exposes God and the Kingdom of Heaven to you today, right where you are in every moment. And that's the point.

You don't have to wait till you get to the last page of the Course and then say, "Okay, what do I do now?" And you realize, "Oh, I better engage in the holy instant. I better practice the two-step, because now I can't rely on the ongoing good feelings and wonderful perspectives that I was exposing myself to as I was reading through the book. Now I better do it! Now I had better recognize, and I know I'm being repetitious, but it's the simple truth, now I recognize that no matter what I think on my own, it is an experience that denies me the discovery of what I truly am that causes me not to experience the Holy Spirit as that which is nothing more than my right Mind. And I don't want to have that experience any longer. I'm going to abandon it."

You might feel that you have no choice once you get to the end of the book, although you could start the book over and over and over. So don't wait until the end of the buoyancy that comes from reading the wonderful ideas in the Course. Don't arrive at the end of that and in the emptiness that follows, dare to start engaging in the holy instant.

Do it now . . . do it now . . . do it now!

Do it as you're listening to what I'm saying. Do it so that you recognize that what is happening is that a Brother is bearing witness of you to you to cause you to recognize that there truly is another way to look at this that far exceeds anything you can imagine, and moves you to the willingness to open up to it.

All you have to do is be quiet and curious and the insistence of the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind—will flood you because it is intent on your Sanity being returned to you. And that's called Love. It is the Holy Spirit's purpose to uncover the Father in you and in everything you're experiencing. And that insistence will succeed when you give up and open up.

And so, this won't be the last time you hear me talk about this. But we needed to talk about it before we proceed further in the book.

And I will share with you that I'm very glad to be with you in this manner once again continuing forward.

I love you. I am the Presence of Love moving you into your willingness to want to know the truth about everything, no matter what you're engaged in. And I look forward to being with you next week.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

April 25, 2015

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Let's go back to the Beginning. A little refresher helps.

In the Beginning there was peace. In the Beginning there was fullness. In the Beginning there was indivisible wholeness. In the Beginning was the experience of omnipotence. The only thing was, that omnipotence wasn't something enacted by the Sons and Daughters and God. It was, rather, experienced as invulnerability—the absence of any call for any act of authority whatsoever. And Being—the experience of Being—was the conscious experience of the Movement of Creation in its pristine perfection because there was nothing present in the omnipresence of God to create a distortion of any sort.

And so again, in the Beginning, there was peace. Then as we've discussed through the years, a decision was made by two or more Sons and Daughters of God. They said to each other in so many words, "Let's pretend . . . let's pretend that the tree is not an idea, but is something quite physically tangible in its own right and it derives its life from moisture from the ground it is growing in. And in fact, it is growing in the ground—lets decide that for sure. It is not what we have experienced it to be—the ever-present illuminated Presence of the Love of God exhibiting Life, Truth, Intelligence, Principle, Mind, Soul and Spirit as is the ground, as is the moisture, and nothing is living off of anything else. But no, let's pretend otherwise. Let's agree together, let's decide to imagine and make commitment to our imagination."

Now, as we've discussed, something happened that was quite surprising. Because after all, this "decision" was made by those who had experienced omnipotence, meaning invulnerability—eternal unchangeable harmony of Being. And so when this decision to stop referring everything that they were experiencing back to the Father, which was their part in the Movement of Creation—their co-creative part—they, in effect, divorced themselves from That which was Being them, That which was expressing Itself and appearing as Them. And the surprise was, that the experience of omnipotence vanished. It wasn't expected, because the decision was being made by those who knew they were omnipotent.

Now two things came into play instantaneously and automatically. And the reason it came into play was because it was the innate sanity of the Sons and Daughters of God who were going to pretend to be disconnected from their Source. The sanity that was making it clear at an experiential level that they could not become something less than what the Father was Being them as, couldn't happen without the experience of dissonance—something that said, "don't do this, it is impossible. You will discover the impossibility of it. And while you are discovering the impossibility of it, you will not be comfortable because you will be in a state of Self-denial."

And two things came into play—like two sides of a coin: The first was fear, although they didn't come in a specific order, they came simultaneously, and the second was guilt. Fear and guilt inundated them. Nevertheless, because they still knew they were omnipotent even though they couldn't understand why they weren't experiencing it, they insisted upon being independent with more intensity, with more willfulness. The act of independence was the obstacle to peace.

The act of independence which brought into play fear and guilt, was the obstacle to peace. It was that which disallowed for That which was from the Beginning and still was the Fact and the purpose of It was to say, "don't proceed any further down this path." But the desire for power, the desire to engage in an action which would defeat the fear and the guilt was brought into play.

And so, the obstacle to peace, which was the act of independence, took on some additional character—four characteristics. And right now in this place in the Course, these four things are being discussed. And we are resuming in the second section of the OBSTACLES TO PEACE, entitled: The Belief the Body is Valuable for What it Offers. And although I said we would start on a certain paragraph, I am moving back to the beginning, about six paragraphs of this section.

It says:

We said that peace must first surmount the obstacle of your desire to get rid of it.

Interesting. Now we've discussed this previously. But why would you want to get rid of the peace? You would want to get rid of the peace because it would mean you would lose this sense of authority—this sense of independent power, willfulness, that causes you to seem to be of importance all by yourself on your own.

Why would you want peace when it requires you to lose an experience of strength—of having a will of your own? Well, only because you don't realize that it's an illusion. But because you don't, you held onto it, and exercised it with more fervor.

Continuing . . .

Where the attraction of guilt holds sway, peace is not WANTED.

Well, you know, this will come up later. Another reason not to abandon this thrill—the hit of independent willful action, and the promise of personal power that it seems to hold. Why would you want to let go of that if it meant returning to the Father . . . deferring to the Father, honoring the Father, wouldn't your disobedience be punished? You see?

That's another reason—that is the fourth reason for not embracing your peace once again. And that's an illusion too, caused by the fact that everything you're perceiving now is in the imagination and isn't true and isn't real. Again:

Where the attraction of guilt holds sway, peace is not WANTED.

And let's be very clear. If you are not joined constantly with That which is nothing more than your right Mind—the Holy Spirit—and if you are not joined with me all the time, if you are not companionship with That or those which are Awake, you are in the realm of imagination. You are where fear and guilt govern and you are where fear and guilt govern the way you experience everything including the return Home . . . including your return to embrace the Holy Spirit . . . including your willingness to join with me. All of it is colored by fear and guilt.

And so, there is resistance—obstacles to peace.

Now, to summarize what we've discussed in the previous chapter, the previous section . . .

PAUL: I'm sorry. This is me, Paul, I lost it . . . just a moment . . .

RAJ: Continuing . . . in the first paragraph of the Obstacles to Peace, Part II:

The second obstacle that peace must flow across, and closely related to the first, is the belief that the body is valuable for what it offers. For here is the attraction of guilt made manifest in the body, and SEEN in it.

Now we've already covered this in the last meeting. But to summarize it: The body is your means of presenting force to your willfulness. It is the means by which you exercise power to make change or to coerce people, whether it's through fist fights, whether it's through a caress, whether it's through a loud voice, whether it's through a physical demeanor that expresses commitment and therefore apparent strength and so on. You use the body as the means of exerting force literally, to make change. And in this state of independence governed by fear and guilt, you have developed a theory—a set of concepts—that suggest that to whatever degree you are able to bring forth into play, whether for good or for ill, it increases your independent existence and will ultimately bring you, like Pinocchio, to a point of becoming a real boy on your own, which we've discussed before, as well.

And so, put simply, the body is the second thing used as an obstacle to peace. Why would you abandon that which promises you reality without being connected to your Source and brings into play capacities of thought and reason and logic that will cause you to succeed in this task—capacities God gave you and set you free to utilize—so you could make something out of yourself? That's the theory that has arisen out of independence and the resulting fear and guilt. It's the obstacle to peace.

Why is peace important? Because in the silence of your Being when your independent chatter of the mind and the willfulness with which you use your mind for purposes other than peace, if you had disengaged from that, you are afraid that will succumb to all of the worst—everything will collapse, there will be no order.

But that's because in the realm of fear and guilt, you can't remember that order and peace were the first law of Being. Peace was in the Beginning. Peace, because God hasn't changed, is still in the Now, in the Present. Peace has gone nowhere and what you divinely Are hasn't changed one bit.

Recognizing the obstacles to peace and abandoning them, puts you at the threshold of remembering who you divinely Are. It puts you at the threshold of hearing the Holy Spirit remind you gently but firmly, and encouragingly, and lovingly of what it is your Birthright to be consciously experiencing instead of fear and guilt and everything you have associated with it.

The end of the obstacles to peace comes in the holy instant. It comes in the two-step, where you shut up, and in the genuine humble Silence that is present, you reach out beyond any of your best thinking and you say, “Father, Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? What is the experience that it is my Birthright to be having, which I lost the experience of when I decided to try to be independent and cherish the independence?” And then stay in the Silence. Continue to bring your attention to the threshold of Awakening—the threshold by which you abandon your independence.

Now, most of this I have said before. In the Silence, when you are genuinely, trustingly, humbly and even sometimes humiliatedly listening because you are feeling incapable and not objecting to it, Revelation occurs—inspiration infills you—the Holy Spirit, your right Mind responds and registers with you. The Christ can reach you. The Father can reach you. Your Guides can reach you and they do. And there is a shift of perception that occurs.

Peace is fleshed out with the experience of why it’s incontrovertible, unchangeable, eternal, and why it’s an excellent description of the omnipotence of your Being—the invulnerability of your Being. That means that authority never has to be brought into play for self-defense. And this changes your perception about your brothers and sisters and about your world.

Now, continuing into the fourth paragraph of this section: It says . . .

Peace is extended from you only to the eternal, and it reaches out from the eternal in YOU.

When you abandon the independence where mortality, not eternality is the rule, when you step out of it, you experience the eternal that has always been present, active and inseparable from you because it’s your nature instigated by the Father’s act of Self-expression.

So, when you move in to the holy instant, when you allow peace by devaluing all of your best skilled independent thinking and listen, and hear, you move out of that realm of mortality. You experience your eternality, and I will tell you something, whatever you experience about the Truth of you, you simultaneously recognize as being the Truth about your fellowman and it’s so simple then to be able to appreciate and honor your fellowman in that place. And so . . .

Peace is extended from you only to the eternal, . .

. . . meaning, to all that really exists, all of Creation including your brothers . . .

. . . and it reaches out from the eternal in YOU.

Do you see? It means that your willingness to abandon the obstacle to peace that values your body for the power it can bring into play in order to secure your safety, make you important, and also cause you to become a “real boy” independent of your Source, when you abandon that, your experience of your brothers and sisters is that they have been released from it as well in your conscious awareness of them. The eternal in you extends to the eternal in them that you are recognizing and experiencing, and blesses them.

Again:

Peace is extended from you only to the eternal, and it reaches out from the eternal in YOU. It flows across all else. The second obstacle . . .

. . . the valuing of the body and not wanting to let go of the good it brings to you.

The second obstacle is no more solid than the first. For you will neither to get rid of peace NOR limit it. What are these obstacles which you would interpose between peace and its going forth but barriers you place between your will and its accomplishment?

This is important. You place barriers between your will and the accomplishment of your will. But this is not speaking here of your human will, or I will put it this way, your divine will perceived through the lens of fear and guilt which cause it to seem quite separated from That which placed It in you and continues to express It in you as you at this moment.

You WANT communion, not the feast of fear.

That's your will.

You WANT salvation, not the pain of guilt.

You do not want to be experiencing either of the two sides of the coin—fear or guilt. But as long as you choose for fear and guilt and the wonderful challenge of overcoming them all by yourself, you keep fear and guilt alive and block your willingness to let your true will be accomplished.

And you want your Father, NOT a little mound of clay, to be your home.

[note: Raj skipped reading rest of paragraph]

Now:

You have paid very dearly for your illusions, and nothing you have paid for brought you peace. Are you not GLAD . . .

. . . GLAD . . .

. . . that Heaven cannot be sacrificed, and sacrifice cannot be asked of you?

It's impossible for the omnipotence of God to be overthrown by a puny little willful act of imagination. It's impossible. And no matter what you've thought you've done, you haven't done it! And whatever you think because of your fear and guilt, that you will be punished for, you never did. Therefore, punishment is not awaiting you, but like the Prodigal Son, embrace and the abundance, the infiniteness of the Father is bestowed upon you. Not because you didn't have it and the Father finally brings it to you, but because you're not blocking what was never taken away from you, except that which you chose to ignore in the excitement and fun of trying to be something you cannot be and overcoming the dissonance of fear and guilt that accompanied it.

This has to be becoming clearer and clearer.

You know what? Every moment is the threshold of illusion or Truth. At every moment, you, the holy Son or Daughter of God is confronted by the Kingdom of Heaven and nothing else! If you choose to view it from a state of independence where fear and guilt color everything you're seeing, you seem to have lost your holiness. In fact, it's hard to believe that you really are holy. But your holiness has not deteriorated nor declined in the least through all of this imagination.

. . . Heaven cannot be sacrificed, and sacrifice cannot be asked of you? There IS no obstacle which you can place before our union, for in your holy relationship I am there already.

That means: in your holy relationship with your brothers and sisters or the trees or the lady bugs or the scorpions or the grass, I am there already with you. The Holy Spirit—that which is nothing more than your infinite capacity to experience everything without distortion—is there already.

We will surmount all obstacles together, for we stand within the gates, and not outside.

What does that mean? It means you and we stand within the Presence of Mind in which the conscious experience of everything is going on, and in which the meaning and substantiality and validity of everything is waiting your acknowledgement and your recognition that God—the Infinite Mind—is expressing those ideas perfectly, eternally.

How easily the gates are opened from within, . .

. . . meaning, from the presence of mind that you are . . .

. . . to let peace through to bless the tired world!

Meaning, to cause the transformation of the Kingdom of Heaven that you were seeing as a troubled world, back into what it truly is, the Kingdom of Heaven—a healed world, Creation with no more distortions blinding you to Its glory and your glory—because it's your role to be co-creator in the Movement of Creation.

Can it be difficult for us to walk past barriers together, when you have joined the limitless?

And I'm going to add, "instead of the finite." You're not alone. You're accompanied by your very own divinity, the Holy Spirit. You're accompanied by me. You're not accompanied by the Father. You are initiated by the Father now . . . now . . . now . . . now . . . now. The eternal idea that you are is constantly infused with the brand new expression of the energy of God and you miss this when you choose to operate within the realm of fear and guilt, and make commitment to being there and staying there.

The end of guilt . . .

Listen to this:

The end of guilt is in your hands to . . .

. . . what? Not take hold of. Not to create, but to give.

The end of guilt is in your hands to give.

That means engaging in forgiveness. That means looking at the Kingdom of Heaven and withdrawing your misperception, your highly valued misperception which gives you a feeling of importance that you're unwilling to let go of because you need to know that there is something valid about you, but you can't see it when you're looking through the lens of fear and guilt.

The end of guilt is in your hands to give. Would you stop now to look for guilt in each other?

Would you?

Would you stop now to look for guilt in each other?

You must, no matter what justifications you think you have. Those justifications are pure imagination colored by guilt and fear, which stops you in your tracks from coming Home, from yielding to the Father, from letting your right Mind back in to be the totality of you.

Now that's where we ended up when we were last reading from the Obstacles to Peace. Continuing . . .

Let me be to you the symbol of the END of guilt, and look upon each other as you would look on me.

In other words, look upon each other as the symbol of the end of guilt. Your brothers and sisters are holy Sons and Daughters of God. They are guiltless, no matter what the definition you are applying to them, no matter what the definition they are applying to themselves, when both of you are insisting upon looking at everything through the lens of fear and guilt.

Forgive me all the sins you think the Son of God . . .

Meaning your brothers, your sisters . . .

. . . committed.

Forgive me all the sins you think [they] committed. And in the light of your forgiveness, he . . .

. . . your brother or your sister . . .

. . . will remember who he is, and forget what never was.

You don't believe that. You have too much experience behind you to say that having faith in your brother doesn't always work, "and with this one it never has worked!" And you believe yourself. You don't realize that this has nothing to do with your brother, but it has entirely to do with an idea in your own mind which has been put through the sieve of fear and guilt and is causing you to misapprehend your brother and sister. And as long as you are committed to that, you will not find your brother or sister remembering who he is, but rather reacting to your lousy perception which you are holding him to and attempting to convince him of, by means of your lousy unloving behavior.

I ask for your forgiveness, for if you are guilty, so must I be.

A simple sentence absolutely true: Life changing.

I ask for your forgiveness, for if you are guilty, so must I be. But if I surmounted guilt and overcame the world, YOU were with me. Would you see in me the symbol of guilt, or of the END of guilt, remembering that what I signify to you you see within YOURSELF?

You look at me through the lens of fear and guilt and it is hard for you to trust me. It is hard for you to let me in. It is easier for you to say that someone else has the talent to do it, and you don't. That is the way you block me from registering with you and uncovering, revealing your divinity to you as an experience. You block me by relying upon your pitiful assessment of your capacity, or of me.

From your holy relationship truth proclaims the truth, and love looks on itself. Salvation flows from deep within the home you offered to my Father and to me.

What home? Your heart, your soul, the quiet place in you, the altar in the center of you, when you practice the two-step or the holy instant and you silence your independence and you say, "Father, Holy Spirit, Jesus, what is the truth here?" you've made a home for us, the obstacle to us, you have abandoned.

Salvation flows from deep within the home you offered to my Father and to me.

When? A moment ago, ten moments ago, three hours ago when you were in the grocery store, five hours ago when you picked up a MacDonald's hamburger. You see? Every moment is a moment in which to practice the holy instant, to bring your curiosity, your attention with desire to experience the more of what God is being right there than what you're used to seeing because of the definitions you've been using and valuing. You see?

Salvation flows from deep within the home you offered to my Father and to me. And we are there together, in the quiet communion in which the Father and the Son are joined.

This is the way it works. And it needs to become apparent that the obstacles to peace are silly imaginations that truly don't require your servitude, your allegiance, your commitment to.

Oh come ye faithful to the holy union of the Father and Son in you!

The holy Son of God, the holy Daughter of God that you Are right now and have forever been.

And keep you not apart from what is offered you, in gratitude for giving peace its home in Heaven.

You see, when the obstacles to peace are released, change occurs, transformation of your mind occurs as you become Sane, divinely Sane once again. And you're in a new place with new gifts to make. Spontaneous gifts that end up being made the moment you recognize something new that you see is incontrovertible and from which you cannot withhold your devotion to any longer—your acknowledgement of.

Send forth to all the world the joyous message of the end of guilt, and . . .

. . . what?

. . . all the world will answer.

Not true, you say. “Just look at the mess everything's in and it's getting worse and it's getting scarier. It's becoming more undependable. The rules of war are no longer being abided by. And random acts of hatred that can't be predicted because there aren't any rules of bad behavior that everybody has agreed to follow. And this makes it really scary. And this makes it seem as though evil is really real." You see?

Wait a minute . . . you can't afford to switch your attention to a world out there and not realize that when you do that you slip back into your best or worst definitions of everything, which you have commitment to, and that you have forgotten that you do not have to look at everything through the lens of fear and guilt, which are not your Birthright and which will vanish the moment you withdraw your attention from your definitions about everything "out there" and in the absence of them, in the gentle holy silence in the middle of you, you say, "Holy Spirit, what is the divine truth here?" You see?

As it has been said, "You can never solve a problem from the level of the problem." You can never solve the effects of fear and guilt from the realm of fear and guilt. And so you have to bring your attention to another place. And that's the whole point of the holy instant.

Where is the threshold to Awakening? You could say it's right in the center of you. But I'm going to be more specific: The threshold of Awakening is in the Now.

Right now, if you abandon your thinking, you will be aware of where you Are. You will be aware of the circumstances . . . the trees, the roads, the homes, the furnishings, the people you're with. When you are not preoccupied with your best thinking, which takes you to the past or the future, and you silence it, in the silence your attention will be in the Now. The threshold to Awakening is in the Now. It isn't out there in anyone else's behavior.

The transformation of the world begins with your withdrawal from your great valuing of your independent self, and the gathering together of power that you utilize through the use of your body as a means of securing your reality as something you could never be. When you abandon that, the way you see the world will change. When the way you see the world changes, when the way you see your brothers and sisters is a true approximation of what they divinely Are, there will come from you a grateful joyous recognition, an acknowledgement of it. And this will transform.

It's not better rules of war and it's not the forceful coercive manipulation of those who don't want to follow the rules but want to do that which is evil. You see?

Think of your happiness as everyone offers you witness of the end of sin, . .

Think of your happiness—think of the happiness you will experience. .

. . . as everyone offers you witness of the end of sin, and shows you that its power is gone forever.

“Oh, I know, [chuckling] that's really far-fetched isn't it? You're going to tell me that the members of ISIS are going to witness to the ends of sin because I have chosen to humble myself and abandon a different level of willfulness than they're bringing into play. Really? You expect me to believe that?”

Yes, it's the truth. You will see everything falsely as long as you maintain an independent willful commitment to seeing things the way you have decided to define them or the way everyone else has decided that you should define them. It's that simple and the release is that simple.

Where can guilt be, when the belief in sin is gone?

“I know, they're not going to release their belief in sin!” Well, there you go again—you jumped the rails! You abandoned the relinquishment of your very own divorce from the Father by insisting upon not engaging in the holy instant, because what good will it do. It's the only way Home, because you never left Home and you never became a sinner among sinners, and the way you're seeing everyone right now is not dependable, because you're not seeing them joined with the Holy Spirit, or me or the Father and therefore you are Pinocchio still trying to get your own independence.

And here's the big one:

And where is death, when its great advocate is heard no more?

Fear and guilt and a willful expression of them, are the advocates not only for death but for sin, disease and death. But where is death, where is sin, where is disease when their great advocate is heard no more? Heard from where? Your own preoccupation with your tininess and your vulnerability and your innate capacity that you believe you have to secure your invulnerability as an unhooked puppet. But you can never become unjoined with that Life force, that Mind Intelligence that is forming you and forming you, now . . . now . . . now . . . now in absolute unchanging perfection.

Forgive me your illusions, and release me from punishment for what I have not done.

In other words, stop blocking me. Stop putting up obstacles that keep you from hearing me. Stop blocking the Holy Spirit. Stop putting up the obstacles of personal self-willfulness.

Forgive [us] your illusions, and release [us] from punishment for what [we] have not done.

And really what it means is: release yourself from your own imaginations which are incapable of disclosing to you your fulfillment, your divinity, and the Kingdom of Heaven that is constantly being distorted by the presence of fear and guilt, which will not disappear until you abandon them and join with us.

Forgive me your illusions, and release me from punishment for what I have not done. So will you learn the freedom that I taught by teaching freedom to each other, and so releasing me.

Paul is releasing me right now. He is not withholding me. He's not saying, "At this time it's more important for me to be distressed by what my fear and guilt is confronting me with."

I am within your holy relationship, . .

Your holy relationship. Paul's holy relationship with you, your holy relationship with Paul.

I am within your holy relationship, yet you would imprison me behind the obstacles you raise to freedom, and bar my way to you. Yet it is not possible to keep away One Who is there already.

The Holy Spirit is with you already. It is You already in your infinite wholeness. I am with you already. The Father is with you already.

And in Him it IS possible that our communion, where we are joined already, will be . . .

. . . what?

. . . the focus of the new perception that will bring light to all the world, contained in YOU.

You are the Presence of the Father in Expression. You are the Presence of the Father in Expression. As with the Father, all there is for you to experience is the Movement of divine Mind. And all there is for you to do with It, is to recognize It and acknowledge It as the Presence of God Being all there is to everything, including you. And therefore, the clear undistorted experience of Reality lies in you like a bright light that you will recognize the brightness of when you will open your eyes up and stop providing an obstruction to the experience of it.

Now let's remember what are the obstacles to? Peace. What was in the beginning? Peace. What is to become clear again? Peace. Because in Peace is where God's laws reign supreme, where omnipotence, omnipresence and all that Reality truly is, is experienced.

I'm going to read this last sentence again, so it's fresh in your mind:

And in Him it IS possible that our communion, where we are joined already, will be the focus of the new perception that will bring light to all the world, contained in YOU.

You holy Son of God, you holy Daughter of God whom I love dearly, eternally. I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES

STUDY GROUP

WITH RAJ

May 3rd, 2015

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Things are getting simpler and simpler. There are fewer and fewer choices that seem to be available. And the choices that are available are stark and easy to recognize even if everyone is not enthusiastic about accepting their meaning and making a new choice.

You are—every single one of you—holy Sons and Daughters of God right now. That is an eternal fact. It is a governing fact. Accepting that is one of the choices you have. And at this point, it's becoming clear to everyone that there's only one other choice you can seem to make, and that is to deny what I just described you as and to see yourself as what? A body. A body that was born of other bodies as part of an evolution of physicality—of physical form and physical laws.

That seems to everyone to be obvious. The obvious actual choice—the reality. Wow . . . but it's time for a new perspective. It's time for a corrected perspective.

Any moment you take to just become still and be the presence of attention, you will find that you are able to first of all, imagine and then to actually begin to experience the fact that you are Awareness. You are not a body sitting or standing there, being aware, but you are Awareness in which the experience of body and world and universe is going on. We have discussed this before.

Now, the holy instant is a practice of making a shift from body identification to mind identification. And these are the only two choices you have available to you. They are the only two choices you've ever had available to you.

Now, when you join with the Holy Spirit, when you join in the holy instant as conscious awareness with That which is nothing more than your right Mind, which you have been calling the Holy Spirit, you are shifting from body identification to Mind identification. And I'm going to read part of the last sentence we read last week:

[And] in [the Holy Spirit] it IS possible . . .

. . . and only there is it possible . . .

. . . that our communion . . .

. . . mine, the Holy Spirit's, the Father's with you . . .

. . . it IS possible that our communion, where we are joined already, will be the focus of the new perception that will bring light to all the world, contained in YOU.

Of course, in you as that Mind, that conscious Awareness which is the Presence of Mind that is God in which all of Creation is embraced and is available for you to experience as what it truly is, It is shifting from body identification back to Mind identification, which is joining with the Father and claiming no other perception.

That is where translation, transformation, Awakening occurs. And suddenly everything that you have been experiencing and everything that you temporarily were not experiencing will become available to you once again. You will see everything including everything you're already experiencing in the light of what it divinely really is.

And I will tell you, that in that experience, there is no sin, disease or death. There is no fear or guilt. Because those five things exist—or seem to exist—only when body identification is being employed.

We're reading about the Obstacles to Peace. And we're reading about the second obstacle which is entitled, The Belief the Body is Valuable for What it Offers. Now, man . . . if that isn't body identification, I don't know what it is. You holy Sons and Daughters of God who are not bodies, but who are not body-less.

Now this new sub-heading entitled PLEASURE AND PAIN in some of the editions and which is called the ATTRACTION OF PAIN in others. And before I continue with the text of it, I will comment that the ATTRACTION OF PAIN might seem to be the more appropriate sub-heading because of the fact that pain seems to grab your attention. But actually, it isn't that pain grabs your attention, it's that you reach for pain. And you have what you've reached for.

When you said, "Father, I would rather determine what everything is for myself" you chose an act of independence—a state of independence which doesn't exist except in your imagination. And as we've discussed, when that separation imaginatively but not actually occurred, you were immediately met with pain, with fear and guilt. They go hand in hand.

Now, pain is not the only thing you're attracted to when you're identifying as a body. Pleasure, you're also attracted to when you are identifying with and as a body. And so the subject is truly is more appropriate—PLEASURE AND PAIN—because pleasure and pain looked for in the wrong place, are both illusory, are both attractive, and the ego fights for both of them equally. And as is obvious, whoever opposites you are fighting for equally, are going to cause an experience of conflict—an undesirable state which one must endeavor to get out of, or improve. You see?

Now, going into the Text here:

Your little part . . .

Your little part in joining with the Holy Spirit, with me and with the Father which brings into focus the new perception . . .

. . . Your little part is but to give the Holy Spirit the whole IDEA of sacrifice . . .

. . . of lack, of not being equal to, of always being at a disadvantage, of always having an undercurrent of fear and an undercurrent of guilt which you can't quite identify but which becomes obvious as you, let' say, understand the dynamics of illusion better. You discover that the guilt is there because you know that you have denied the Father, you have denied your i-d-e-n-t-i-t-y, your Source. And there is always this undercurrent of guilt. Important to understand.

And so . . .

Your little part . . .

. . . in the transition . . .

. . . is but to give the Holy Spirit the whole IDEA of sacrifice.

Another way of putting that, now, you can see, is to give up identification with the body and being willing to shift to identification with and as Mind—that conscious awareness in which all conscious experience is occurring.

Your little part is but to give the Holy Spirit the whole IDEA of sacrifice. And to accept the peace He gave instead, without the limits which would hold its extension back, . .

. . . what's that mean?

. . . the limits which would hold its extension back, . .

The limits are the obstacles you place in the extension of what the Holy Spirit reveals to you, which you are totally unconscious of when you are dedicated to identifying with and as a body.

Your little part is but to give the Holy Spirit the whole IDEA of sacrifice. And . . .

. . . in it's place . . .

. . . to accept the peace He gave instead, without the limits which would hold its extension back, and so would limit YOUR awareness of it.

You see? If you do not extend what the Holy Spirit reveals to you to your Brother, you limit your awareness of it. You actually deny your awareness of it. You see? It's binding, you might say—one doesn't come without the other. In your willingness to extend what the Holy Spirit reveals to you because you've asked, "What's the truth here?" If you extend that to your Brother because you love your Brother and because your Brother deserves nothing less than that, you give that to yourself as well. And it confirms both you and your Brother or Sister as the Sons or Daughters of God that you actually are. And that is how the sudden shift of perception occurs that is called, "a miracle."

For what He gives must be extended, if you would have its limitless power, . .

You cannot have what you do not give. You see? You see how simple it's becoming? . . you might say, how choiceless it's becoming?

Now everyone can ignore this and continue to experience sin, sickness and death—the result of introducing obstacles to your peace by introducing obstacles to your union, your communion with me, with the Holy Spirit, with the Father. You see? It's utterly simple. It's utterly, difficultly simple if you bring resistance to it. But it is that simple.

. . . what He gives must be extended, . .

[repeats] what He gives must be extended, if you would have its limitless power, and . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . use it for the Son of God's release.

You can't just accept it and embrace it for yourself. You can't have it if you don't extend it.

It is not this you would be rid of, and having it you CANNOT limit it.

In other words, it is not this you would truly be rid of. You don't want to be rid of that which illuminates your holiness and your Brother's holiness . . . and the experience of what that means.

It is not this you would be rid of, and having it you CANNOT limit it.

You see? The minute you dare to extend to your Brother the illumination that the Holy Spirit provides to you, you also have what you've given and there is no limit to it. It is an experience of infiniteness, of absolute wholeness, of integrity, of invulnerability as we discussed last time, which is an experience of omnipotence that doesn't have to be exercised because there is nothing unlike it to exercise it upon.

Now:

If peace is homeless, . .

. . . if peace isn't finding a residence in you . . .

If peace is homeless, so are you and so am I. And He Who is our home is homeless WITH us.

Either all is God Being All, or all is not God being all. It's always a unity. So, only one of them is actual and it's your Birthright to be experiencing it.

Is this your will?

Is it your will to be homeless and for me to be homeless, and for the Father to be homeless?

Is this your will? Would you forever be a wanderer in search of peace?

A wanderer . . . you know about wandering in the wilderness. Well, when you identify as body and have divorced yourself from the experience of being Mind in which everything is going on, you are in the wilderness of fear and guilt. It's that simple. And you move through this desert which you call “life today” struggling, doing your best, sometimes over insurmountable odds it would seem, where there is no support for your doing your best. It’s a struggle . . . it’s work . . . it’s the experience of sacrifice.

But the holy instant is when you give to the Holy Spirit the whole idea of sacrifice. In other words, you abandon identification with the body which is the arena—the desert—in which your Birthright is withheld from you.

Would you forever be a wanderer in search of peace?

If not, then you must start today to dishonor everything you think everything is—all that you think everything is—and be curious to see “the More of what God is Being” right there in what you’re seeing. And that requires an attitude of Mind—a desire in Mind, and a commitment in Mind. It constitutes a shift of your operating base, we could say. And when you make that shift, the result will be that everything that looks so horrible—the wilderness of sin sickness and death—will transform so that it becomes obviously, the Kingdom of Heaven.

But it requires, beginning NOW, to consciously choose between body identification and Mind identification.

*Would you forever be a wanderer in search of peace?
Would you invest your hope of peace and happiness in what MUST fail?*

You do invest your hope of peace in your body, in your partner, in your home, in your job, in the environment—the physical environment you live in. You invest your hope of peace outside of your mind so that you can bring it into your experience and then, because of that, have peace of mind.

But remember, the obstacle of peace is the belief that your body in its own right, is what you are and it has value—value to you. Value to any hope for decency and well-being that you might have.

It’s a struggle. It’s not your Birthright. Don’t be afraid to acknowledge it as a struggle and don’t be afraid to acknowledge that the way out of the struggle is to struggle more.

Dare to be radical enough to consciously throughout your days, try to remember that you are the presence of Mind in which all of the experiences, all of the things that you are experiencing is going on and they are the manifestation of the Movement of God, called Creation . . . not as you're seeing them, but as you will see them when you abandon identification with the body and valuing it for the salvation it can bring you.

Would you invest your hope of peace and happiness in what MUST fail?

Body identification? Not really. Not that in you which is divine. Not that in you which Knows that what you're experiencing right now is not right, is not your Birthright. No.

Now here's the thing: When you identify with body, then the next sentence is nonsense—impossible to embrace.

Faith in the eternal is always justified, . .

“Oh no!” your ego says, “Faith in the temporal is the only thing that is justified.” Faith in fear and trouble and dissonance and working through problems—this is justified and there is incredible faith in it. But . . .

Faith in the eternal is always justified, for the eternal is forever kind, infinite in its patience, and wholly loving. It will accept you wholly, and give you peace.

But it won't give you peace if peace isn't your goal and if you're not looking for peace in the right place. Fortunately, there are only two places that you seem to have to be able to choose between. And one is, your Birthright—to be the divine and holy Son or Daughter of God that you are and never have stopped Being and to give your attention to the Father Who supplies you with the true perception of Creation when you are not holding yourself apart from Him, and when you are not using your mind to provide obstacles to that experience.

The eternal . . .

. . . will accept you wholly, and give you peace. Yet it can unite only with what ALREADY is at peace in you, immortal as itself.

You know what? The “hooker” is, that you are so bound to your allegiance to body identification and significance, or I’m going to say, apparent significance of fear and guilt, that you cannot find justification—willingness to become silent and reach for peace beyond circumstances, the peace that is inherent in your very presence of Mind.

The eternal . . .

. . . can unite only with what ALREADY is at peace in you, immortal as itself.

Now that’s the absolute fact. And if you want to experience that which awaits your experience absolutely, you have to be willing to abandon the urgency with which you think you have to honor fear and guilt!

The fear and guilt are distortions which were introduced into your conscious experience of Being when you chose to be conscious without being joined to your Source and as a result, losing your experience of unity and harmony and love truly with your Brothers and Sisters.

The body can bring you neither peace nor turmoil; . .

. . . the body gets a bad rap. And I will say, it gets an especially bad rap from students of A Course in Miracles, when students of A Course in Miracles should be moving beyond the traditional negative interpretation of the body. The Course presents the fact that . . .

. . . the body can bring you neither peace nor turmoil.

Therefore, it cannot be blamed for anything. It does not have to be gotten rid of. It has to be recognized for what it is and, shall I say, be used and used appropriately.

The body can bring you neither peace nor turmoil; neither pain nor joy.

But everyone believes it can, and looks for those things there. You don't have to continue doing it!

It . . .

. . . the body . . .

. . . is a means, and not an end. It has NO purpose of itself,

No. Is it saying here that it doesn't exist? That it's an illusion? No. It simply . . .

. . . has no purpose of itself, but only what is given to it.

Ah, by awareness. But is it Awareness Guided and inspired by the Father? Or is it awareness guided and inspired by a misperception of existence as being of that of a body?

The body will seem to be whatever is the means for reaching the goal that you assign to it.

Is the goal joy and peace? Is the goal dominance? Is the goal strength and power? Is the goal to be a force for good? To be a force for good is as bad as being a force for bad. Because force doesn't come into play at all when one is joined with the Holy Spirit and the Father's Perspective.

Peace and guilt are both conditions of the mind, to be attained.

You hear that?

Peace and guilt are both conditions of the mind, to be attained.

Here are your only two choices. Are you going to choose for the condition of peace or for the condition of guilt? You see how unyieldingly simple this is, even though it's very demanding because of the habit of mis-identifying one's Self and Creation.

Peace and guilt are both conditions of the mind, to be attained. And these conditions are the home of the emotion which called them forth, and therefore is compatible with them.

(chuckles) There's wonderful logic for you. Are you going to pay attention to it? Is it reasonable? No. That's why the question that follows . . .

But think you which it is that is compatible with YOU.

Is identifying as a body compatible with the holy Son or Daughter of God that you are? Is it? No. It is not compatible! So you must abandon it as a goal. You see?

“Well, if I have any imagination of what that's going to mean, it's going to mean radical change. It's going to be more than I can bear. I am reluctant!”

Oh, there we go—there's the obstacle forming. But that's because you're looking at the goal from body identification.

Here is your choice, and it IS free. But all that lies in it WILL come with it, and what you think you are can never be apart from it.

Uh-oh, that's going to mean that you're going to find yourself changed. Well, who will you be? What will you be like? Will you be safe? Will you be strong? Will you be capable? Will people recognize your integrity? All this is body-oriented wilderness thinking.

Listen again because this is good news:

Here is your choice, and it IS free. But all that lies in it WILL come with it, . .

. . . it won't be a partial gift. It won't be a little bit now and then monthly installments.

. . . all that lies in it WILL come with it, and what you think you are can never be apart from it. The body . . .

. . . and I'll say, body identification . . .

The body is the great seeming betrayer of faith.

Identification with the body and the emotions that accompany it—fear, guilt, the experience of sin, sickness and death—they block faith. They undo faith. They invalidate faith, at least to those who have placed their faith in the illusion of being a body.

But it's not true. And it doesn't require the denial or the rising above a body to get out of it, it only requires a shift of attention from identifying with the body and placing your attention in your mind and recognizing that as consciousness, you are experiencing body and trees and birds, etc.

The body . . .

. . . or body identification . . .

. . . is the great seeming . . .

. . . seeming . . .

. . . betrayer of faith.

It's not the betrayer of faith and therefore, the idea of being the betrayer of faith cannot be used to discount it or minimize it, or suggest that it must be risen above and gotten rid of.

The body is the great seeming betrayer of faith.

Why? Because it's not the body. It's what you're using your mind for, to identify as body, ignoring the fact that what is seeing and defining what the body is—is Mind. And that which made the definition never left the place of being Mind.

In it . . .

. . . the body . . .

... lies disillusionment ...

... in the body orientation, the body mindset, the body identification, disillusionment ...

... lies disillusionment ...

... of course ...

... and the seeds of faithlessness, . .

... but here you go ...

... but only if you ask of it what it cannot give.

So, you're going to move toward having the body disappear because you asked of it something it couldn't give and you've had a disappointing experience? (chuckles) Disappointing in the sense that you've experienced fear and guilt and pain and sin, disease and death!

Don't get rid of the body because you asked it to do something it couldn't do and it provided you with a terminal life perception.

Write that down on a piece of paper—a stick-it note—and put it on your refrigerator or on the wall in front of your toilet, some place where you can be reminded of it. That fact needs to become more familiar to everyone.

Can your mistake be reasonable grounds for depression and disillusionment, and for retaliative attack on what you think has failed you?

You see? You're going to retaliate against the body because you think it failed you because you made a mistake? And are you going to use the results of your mistake to feel depressed and justify it—and to feel it so emotionally that it's impossible for you to conceive or consider that the Eternal is kind and patient and loving? You see?

Use not your error as the justification for your faithlessness.

Now this is important. Because anybody who has existed in the realm of body-identification, knows that if one has made an error, one is guilty. And there is a penalty for the error, one way or another. And conversely, if you've done something right, and it has virtue, you will benefit from it.

Both of those are a trap.

Use not your error as the justification for your faithlessness. You have not sinned, but you have been mistaken in what is faithful.

Two words there: Sinned and mistaken. To have made a mistake is not to have sinned. To have made a mistake is not to make you guilty. To have made a mistake cannot be the cause for fear. To have made a mistake cannot be the justification for suicide. To have made a mistake is not justification to try to get rid of the body or to try to get rid of your Brother. You see?

You have not sinned, but you have been mistaken . . .

. . . two entirely different things . . .

. . . in what is faithful. And . . .

. . . here you go . . .

. . . the correction of your mistake will GIVE you grounds for faith.

Another, you might say, rule. Write it down.

. . . the correction of your mistake . . .

. . . the correction, not the acceptance of punishment for having made a mistake, not walking around in great guilt and fear because you've made a mistake, but simply doing it—correcting it—will give you grounds for faith. And what's the correction?

Once again, none of this is complicated. They're really only two choices in any of this at any level. The correction is to shift from your confidence that you're nothing more than a physical body thinking with electrical impulses and synapses in a hunk of meat in your head. Recognizing that consciousness or Mind is something entirely different from electrical impulses in which something is going on which is being called electrical impulses. You see? Consciousness . . . Mind is that in which everything is going on as a conscious, identifiable, experience-able experience.

So again, the correction of your mistake, shifting back to Mind identification through the practice of the holy instant will give you grounds for faith. Your faith will be revived, you might say, it will be illuminated in you because it never left you except for the fact that you brought obstacles to its experience by virtue of your faith in and devotion to your belief that you are a body.

It is impossible to seek for pleasure through the body and NOT find pain.

Well that does not mean again, “Man, you gotta get out of this mortal experience and the experience of a body if you're not going to be able to find anything but pain.” No.

It is impossible to seek for pleasure through the body and NOT find pain.

Because you're trying to get something from the body that it cannot give. You're looking in the wrong place with a wrong sense of yourself—an independent isolated sense of self separated from its divine Source. It's inevitable, if you seek pleasure through the realm of body identification, you will find pain. If you look to anything—a tree or a car or another body, if you seek for pleasure in a big house, or a tennis court or a swimming pool, you will not be able to do it without finding pain because pleasure is not in the things, it's in the mind through which the things are being experienced when that mind is joined with its holiness, not its mortality—with its Eternality by virtue of not bringing obstacles to that experience.

Again:

It is impossible to seek for pleasure through the body and NOT find pain. It is essential that this relationship be understood, for it is one the ego sees as PROOF of sin. It is not really punitive at all.

The pain you experience when you're looking for it in the wrong place, is not a punishment. It's not a reaction to your stupidity or any other pejorative term you might apply to yourself. It is not a punishment and it is not punitive.

If you put your hand under a faucet with hot water, it will be uncomfortable, not because you were stupid, but because hot water and your finger don't belong together. And you learn not to do that again. It's inevitable if you try to do what doesn't work—it won't work, it won't be comfortable! And that's your salvation because it clearly says, "Don't do that again!" That's all. It brings about a call for correction . . . not a call for guilt or depression or thoughts of suicide or emotional responses. It's like, "Oh, well, won't do that again." Truly.

Again:

It is not really punitive at all . . .

. . . the pain that you experience.

It is but the inevitable result . . .

. . . of what?

. . . of equating yourself with the body, which is the INVITATION to pain.

When you abandon your experience of being consciousness—Mind, the Presence of the Mind of God that God is expressing as you—when you abandon that, and then identify with what is left, you're inviting the two things that come into play which you didn't know were there awaiting you: Fear and guilt, and the pain that results from the two. You see?

Denying yourself invites an experience of divine Sanity which says: Don't go any further in this direction because what will follow will be illusory and will make it difficult for you to come back into your right Mind.

[Pain] is the inevitable result of equating yourself with the body, which is the INVITATION to pain. For it invites fear to enter, and become your purpose. The attraction of guilt MUST enter with it, . .

. . . right? The two things, when you abandon your identity—your Source—the two things that come into play are fear and guilt.

The attraction of guilt MUST enter with it, and whatever fear directs the body to do is therefore painful. It will share the pain of ALL illusions, and the illusion of pleasure will be the SAME as pain. Is not this inevitable?

Is it becoming clear? It just is simply inevitable.

Under fear's orders, the body will pursue guilt, . .

. . . what does that mean? It will attach itself to the feeling of guilt and it will let the feeling of guilt become the motivating factor for the actions that will follow.

Under fear's orders, the body will pursue guilt, serving its master whose attraction to guilt maintains the whole illusion of its existence.

[repeats] the attraction to guilt maintains the whole illusion of its existence.

Because the attraction is so compelling that you become seemingly unable to let go of it and choose once again for your peace with a faith in the Eternal.

This, then, IS the attraction of pain.

You see? But the point is, you don't have to be governed by it. You don't have to respond to it.

You know what you can do? You can ask, "Father, are you giving me this message of fear?" "Holy Spirit, are you giving me this message of guilt?" "Jesus, is what I'm perceiving true? Should I value it and validate it?"

At least if you will do that you will break the flow and allow a point of interruption in it so that you can shift your attention, and realize that you do not have to follow willy-nilly, the destructive, I will say, depressing movement that is involved.

Ruled by this perception, the body becomes the servant of pain, seeking it dutifully, and obeying the idea that pain is pleasure.

“Well, I must be learning something from this. You know, it must be having some beneficial effect.” Don’t become confused. The Holy Spirit can turn every situation to your advantage not because every situation is advantageous but because It knows how to undo the validation you give to circumstances that are invalid and not real.

No negative experience you are having is in itself advantageous—although you will learn. Is that clear? You don’t want to validate or provide justification for suffering by saying, “It must be doing some good for me.”

CRAP! BULLSHIT! Be firm with it. Denounce it absolutely! Do not be kind with it or about it. Recognize it for what it is—it’s trickery!

Ruled by this perception, the body becomes the servant of pain, seeking it dutifully, and obeying the idea that pain is pleasure. It is this idea that underlies all of the ego's heavy investment in the body. And it is this insane relationship which it keeps hidden, and yet feeds upon. To YOU it teaches that the body's pleasure is happiness.

And I’m going to add: One way or another.

Yet to ITSELF it whispers, "It is death."

It’s time to simply make the choice between the arena in which sin, sickness, death, fear, guilt and pain seem to be occurring and are illusory, and choosing for the holy instant. Choosing for identification with Mind as pure conscious Awareness and holding to that with devotion and commitment. Because if you do that, clarity will follow. Faith in the Eternal will show up, will register with you.

Now, I'm going to end there for tonight. I'm encouraging everyone to become more black and white in their appraisal. Let there be fewer choices and let the fact that there are only two choices confront you with which choice you need to be making, so that you will make it instead of delaying because you have “so many options” and “you have so many opportunities as a body to make progress and do wonderful things” while never experiencing the peace of your Being and the peace in which the Eternal is the center and circumference of you.

I love you very much because of what you Are. And I'm not fooled for a moment by the fact that you think you're a body—something that came from a sperm and an egg. Something was happening, but it was the Movement of Creation as Mind and all that was identifiable. All that ever is ever identifiable is the visibility and tangibility of Mind Moving and recognizing Itself in the Movement—a singular integrity of perfection that becomes your experience when you make a single choice and start doing it today.

I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

May 9th 2015

—————oOo—————

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We are currently reading about the Obstacles to Peace. And so it's well to keep in mind that peace is the focus. Peace is the subject. And we are addressing the things that are obstacles to it.

As you read and hear discussion about the body, and this and that and the other thing, it's possible to become preoccupied with those subjects and forget that we're talking about them in the context of abandoning them because peace is where the attention needs to be.

Peace, you could say, is the road Home.

Now, right now, we're discussing the second Obstacle to Peace, which is, The Belief the Body is Valuable for What it Offers.

Now it's very important to realize that it does not say that the second obstacle to peace is the body. No. It says, "the belief the body is valuable for what it offers." You will not find me letting up on this topic. I will not let the belief continue that says that the body is not real.

You know what? Let's get real simple here. And the simplest way to look at this as the starting point is, that the body can be used for two purposes: It can either be used for defense or embrace. If it is used for defense, it is being used by a mentality that has separated itself from its Infinite Source and is no longer conscious of its holiness—it's divinity.

And so life is a struggle and the best way to meet those struggles is through the use of a body. And so the body becomes a defense mechanism—a way to secure some modicum of peace, a way to secure a certain sense of safety, a way to somehow manage to demonstrate self-responsibility that will earn respect and so on.

Mind you, all of these uses that the body is put to are forms of defense and they keep you from accessing your peace. They keep you off of the road Home. It's important to remember.

Now, you can say that the body can be used for embrace as a means of defense—as a means of control. And indeed it can, but that’s not what I’m speaking of. The body can be used for defense by a misguided mind or it can be used for embrace by that mind which has abandoned its independence, joined with the Father, asked of the Holy Spirit or me, what is the truth here? And then in harmony with the response given, the body is used to embrace, not for control, but as acknowledgement of the holiness of the one being embraced.

And this heals. This is the proper purposeful use of the body.

Now continuing from where we left off last week. It says:

Why should the body be anything to you?

Now I could have read it, “why should the body be anything to you?” But it’s very easy to read it in a flippant way, “why should the body be anything to you?” And it’s important for the answer not to be a flippant answer like, “well nothing! It isn’t supposed to mean anything to you because it’s an illusion!” Now that’s a flippant answer.

Why should the body be anything to you?

Because it’s the visibility and tangibility of your divine individuality and there is absolutely nothing material about it. Everything about it is Spirit. Its substance is Spirit. Its nature is Love. Its action is Life. And it’s none of these in contrast to an opposite.

Why should the body be anything to you?

Because it is the Movement of God expressed . . . identifiable, experience-able. But as a means of control and force, and somehow succeeding at being an independent entity, it should mean nothing to you. And it doesn’t have those meanings when you have chosen for your peace.

Certainly what it is made of . . .

. . . the body . . .

. . . is not precious.

Well, certainly it isn’t if you are an independent thinker providing the definitions of everything. That’s not the way you or anyone else is defining it. But the visibility and tangibility of your divine individuality—the substance of it is precious because it is the divine Presence of God expressing the Father’s Will, now . . . now . . . now . . . now . . . brand new . . . now . . . now . . .

It . . .

. . . the body . . .

. . . transmits to you the feelings that you WANT.

Well, this is true. And what is the “you” that we’re referring to? Well, if it’s the independent you—the arrogant, self-willed determiner of everything on your terms, then it transmits to you the feelings that you in that frame of mind, want. It will transmit to you the need for defense and it will transmit to you that you can use it successfully for defense. You see?

But if you have chosen for your peace, if you have abandoned your independence and joined with the Holy Spirit, it will transmit to you the Meanings which we will call, “feelings” that the Holy Spirit reveals to you about the truth of everything you’re experiencing. You see?

Like any communication medium, the body receives and sends the messages that it is given.

Independent willful messages, send and receive, the same. Joined messages couched in, submerged in Love and Truth and Principle, will return those. It’s simple.

It has no feeling for them.

What? The body? No. Of itself, it is nothing. Because it doesn’t exist of itself except in the imagination of some distressed Sons and Daughters of God.

All of the feeling with which they are invested is given by the sender and the receiver.

Well, if the sender is an independent distressed mentality, that mentality is also going to be the receiver. What is given, gets to be kept. You see?

But when they are invested with clarity, groundedness, invulnerability, Truth, then that is what is received. So the question is, where are the messages being sent from? An independent ego or a holy Son or Daughter of God who is happy, willing to have his mind filled with the Truth, by That which Knows the Truth and shares it. It’s that simple.

The ego and the Holy Spirit both recognize this, . .

. . . both recognize what? . .

. . . that the sender and receiver are [one in] the SAME.

[repeats] The ego and the Holy Spirit both recognize this, and both also recognize that here the sender and receiver are the SAME. The Holy Spirit tells you this with joy.

The Holy Spirit reveals to you the Truth and when you receive it and are infilled with it, it is an experience of joy.

Now, as I keep saying over and over, the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind. So when the Holy Spirit is turned to while you still feel independent, and you truly, genuinely humbly ask, “What is the truth?” and it is revealed to you, something else is revealed to you: That the Holy Spirit is your Mind—is You. And so the sender of the message is the Holy Spirit and the receiver of the message is the You that is not separated from the Holy Spirit any longer. The sender and the receiver are One. And You are that One.

It is really important to let this idea quietly rest in your awareness, so that, as I've said before, it becomes less strange, more familiar, causing you to relax and be willing to more easily reach out in the holy instant to ask, "What is the truth here?"

Now:

Who would send messages of hatred and attack if he but understood he sends them to HIMSELF?

Who would accuse, make guilty, and condemn himself? True. And that's the trickery of the way the ego works. It doesn't tell you that you are misusing your mind by engaging in anger or jealousy or hatred or the call for justice. It doesn't tell you that in this misuse of your mind, you are debilitating yourself and removing yourself further from the ease of Waking up—from the uninhibited willingness to ask for help and to reach outside of your current tiny mindset. No, it doesn't tell you that.

And so, you think that your anger is at someone else and you express it towards them either out loud or silently in your mind. This is what has to be recognized. When you are engaging in hate, jealousy, fear—any of these things, which motivate you to take action to get justice or to cause hurt in another so as to change their behavior so that it doesn't hurt you in the way that you've been imagining your being hurt—when you recognize that, you can STOP! because there is perspective and clarity present that tells you the only one you're hurting is yourself.

If you're experiencing illness or dire circumstances in your life, you may know that these are the evidences of the misuse of your mind which debilitates your capacity to experience what? PEACE, which is the road Home.

The ego's messages are always sent AWAY from you, . . .

. . . you know, your anger is always directed at someone else, and you know what? Even though you can tell me that many times your anger is directed at yourself, if you're honest about it, you will realize that you are being hard on yourself so that pity can be extracted from others. It is still a means of a practicing manipulation and control over what? Not yourself . . . those out there.

So, this kind of direct, honest, self-clarity is very important. The ego tells you that if you will look at it that way you will be proving to yourself that you are guilty. But the fact is, that it doesn't automatically arouse guilt. What it automatically does without the help of your ego, is provide you with a clarity of mind which allows you to choose differently and make the new choice not to escape from a penalty due you because you were guilty, but allows you to become free of the problem because you were simply mistaken in your perception, in your belief and in your commitment to your belief.

Really, really important!

The ego's messages are always sent AWAY from you, in the . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . belief that for your message of attack and guilt will someone other than yourself suffer. And even if you suffer, yet someone else will suffer more.

You see?

The great deceiver . . .

. . . the ego, which really means the mentality which has chosen to try to be independent of its Source.

The great deceiver recognizes that this is not so, but as the “enemy” of peace, it urges you to send out all your messages of hate and free YOURSELF . . .

. . . you know, [chuckling] be rid of them! Dump it! Dump it out there on him, on her, on this country, on that country. You see? And that is going to relieve you. Man-o-man, you have kept that bottled up for so long. Dump it! Dump it! Get rid of it! Dump it out there on him or her and then try to convince him or her that they really are responsible for your distress, not you engaged in a misuse of your mind that is keeping you from consciously choosing for your peace and, we'll say, changing horses in midstream—jumping the track from finiteness to infinity.

And to convince you this is possible, it . . .

. . . the ego . . .

. . . bids the body search for pain in attack upon another, . . .

. . . make them suffer! Only then will you have justice. Only then will you feel good. In fact, right now while you're extracting justice and creating pain this is pleasurable. In fact, it continues here:

. . . calling it pleasure and offering it to you as freedom FROM attack.

Or as part of that is, get him before he gets you. That makes you free of attack from him. But it's all part of the complex mishmash of ignorance that arises out of the fact that initially you have abandoned your peace. And the answer isn't in the complexities of the details of the problem. The answer lies in the making of a new choice for your peace. And that's the whole point of this part of the Course.

Hear not its madness, . . .

. . . the ego's madness. Hear not the madness of a frame of mind that's distorted because it's constantly having to defy the Father's Perspective that is instilled in him in order to have the luxury, we'll say, of an independent novel experience. And the stress of it hurts. The stress of it cannot be escaped until the attempt to be independent stops.

Hear not its madness, and believe not the impossible is true. Forget not that the ego . . .

. . . again, this distressed frame of mind . . .

. . . has dedicated the body to the goal of sin, . .

. . . Oh . . . it has dedicated the body to the goal of sin. Well, to the goal of missing the mark it has dedicated the body to be used as a defense mechanism, as a place of physical force which can coerce and alter human experience, while keeping that one's holiness outside of his range of awareness. The denial of one's Source causes one to miss the mark, to do what doesn't work and persist in it with commitment. That is the meaning of sin.

And so, the ego has dedicated the body to the goal of successfully keeping you unconscious of your holiness . . .

. . . and places in it all its faith that this can be accomplished.

And man-o-man, everyone with great commitment continues to go through each day seeing themselves as a body, whether it's real or not in their assessment . . . and attempting to overcome the incessant distractions. And it does it with commitment because it really believes that solution lies there.

All that I'm saying is, that everyone has forgotten their holiness. Everyone has forgotten who their Father is, and that there is no such thing as private independence. Being is, you might say, a joint venture: You acknowledging your Father. You participating with your Father in the Movement of Creation by acknowledging Him in It and experiencing Him in It. This is the simple shift that will precipitate Awakening.

Its sad disciples . . .

. . . the ego's . . .

. . . sad disciples chant the body's praise continually, in solemn celebration of the ego's rule. Not one but must believe that yielding to the attraction of guilt is the ESCAPE from pain.

Which is what we've just been talking about.

Not one but must regard the body . . .

. . . what? . .

. . . as himself, without which he would die, and yet within which is his death equally inevitable.

This is the big problem. It's the hooker. When the choice for independence from the Father was made, one found himself preoccupied with the visibility and tangibility of his individuality because it couldn't go anywhere, having been created by the Father and is continuing to be created by the Father.

The preoccupation with the body as something other than the declaration of the Son of God's holiness, causes it to become a means of defense which must be brought into play because, as you know, divorced from the Father, fear and guilt automatically came in like gangbusters, full force to be coped with.

It is not given to the ego's disciples . . .

. . . to those who believe their very own distorted perceptions.

It is not given to the ego's disciples to realize that they have dedicated THEMSELVES to death.

Wow, heavy duty! Well, death isn't the only thing that they've dedicated themselves to, they've dedicated themselves to sin and sickness. They've dedicated themselves to be unconscious of the Truth.

And so you see, if you look at history, the constant carrying out of birth, sin, sickness and death, with only a few variations where ascension or translation occurred. And everyone believes the history. Everyone awaits death. "Oh, it's inevitable!" And you know what? This mindset, that death is inevitable gets carried along with each of you as you move into a new realm, we'll say, of understanding.

And so you have here A Course in Miracles, which does not support that belief, but because you know that death is inevitable you are reading it into what the Course is saying. And you do not hesitate to embrace the idea that the body is an illusion and that therefore you will drop it. You missed the point that what you drop is the misperception of the visibility and tangibility of your divine individuality which is not material and is not subject to sin, disease and death. You see?

And that is why I'm harping on it, because we're having to break the habit of thought so that you can embrace, for lack of better words, a new expectation. Again:

It is not given to the ego's disciples to realize that they have dedicated THEMSELVES to death. Freedom is offered them, . .

. . . I'm offering it. The Holy Spirit offers it. The Father offers it. It is constantly insinuated into your awareness in one way or another. But for the most part it is overridden because you know how things really work. And that's where your faith and commitment lies. Again:

It is not given to the ego's disciples to realize that they have dedicated THEMSELVES to death. Freedom is offered them, but they have not accepted it, and what is offered must also be received, to be truly given.

One always accompanies the other in order for it to be actual, in order for it to be actualized.

For the Holy Spirit, too, is a communication medium, receiving from the Father and offering His messages unto the Son.

You, you holy Sons and Daughters of God.

Now, think about this: if indeed the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind, then when you abandon completely your independence and the Holy Spirit, we'll say, is rejoined with you or you are rejoined with It without any sense of separation, then you will be the . . .

. . . communication medium, receiving from the Father and offering His messages unto the Son.

In other words, embracing them, incorporating them, not denying them.

Like the ego, the Holy Spirit is both the sender and the receiver.

It's the singularity. And this is what you bring into your experience every time you practice the holy instant, every time you engage in the two-step, humbly, genuinely.

For what is sent through Him RETURNS to Him, . . .

. . . what is sent through you returns to you . . .

. . . seeking itself along the way, and finding what it seeks. So does the ego find the death IT seeks, returning it to YOU.

That's the way it seems to work until peace is more important to you, until your willingness to embrace yourself as the holy Son or Daughter of God is embraced by you.

The second Obstacle To Peace: The Belief the Body is Valuable for What it Offers is really an easy thing to abandon, once you begin to see it. You can see it leads nowhere. And what you're experiencing is a distortion and not real and that the choice for peace—the abandonment of the belief that the body is valuable for what it offers—is the answer and it is an answer that is available to you now . . . now . . . now.

Your peace is ever present. It is the very underlying nature of your Being. It is and always has been ever present. It is available to you because it is functioning in you, as you at this moment. And so, the little willingness that the Course speaks about is really all it takes. Dare to be adventurous, let's say, and abandon defense—not stupidly. Abandon defense by making a different choice, turning to the Holy Spirit in the holy instant desiring to know what the truth is here, and then listening for the inevitable Answer. I will tell you, you will be able to tell how genuine your desire is when you discover how quickly you're willing to abandon the listening.

You may not be familiar with being in this way, but the only way you will become familiar with it—at ease with it—will be through persistence.

Now, be with this. Let it sink in. Be attentive to these ideas and let new perspective in, new perspective from that which is nothing more than your right Mind—the Holy Spirit. Then you'll be ready to deal with the next obstacle which we will discuss next time.

I love you very much.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

May 17th 2015

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We are reading about the Obstacles to Peace. And as I mentioned last week, with all of the specific details that are covered, it may sound like the subject is everything other than peace. But the fact is, all of these relate to peace as being the primary state of Being through which and in which one Awakens—through which and in which the miracle occurs.

Now, as you will remember, the first obstacle was The Desire to Get Rid of It—meaning peace. The second obstacle was The Belief the Body is Valuable for What It Offers. And tonight we're beginning with the third obstacle:

The Attraction of Death¹

Now, there are four obstacles and they are presented in the order in which they are most easily undone. And that's the point! That's the reason for considering each of them—not so that you might be impressed with how horrible and insurmountable the obstacles are, but rather, that they are to be undone and how to undo them so that . . . what? Peace returns as the foundation and the superstructure of your conscious experience of Being.

Now I'm going to back up to the beginning of the last paragraph we read last week. It begins:

It is not given to the ego's disciples to realize that they have dedicated THEMSELVES to death.

Wow . . . it continues:

Freedom is offered them, but they have not accepted it, and what is offered must also be received, to be truly given. For the Holy Spirit, too, is a communication medium, receiving from the Father and offering His messages unto the Son. Like the ego, the Holy Spirit is both the sender and the receiver. For what is sent through Him RETURNS to Him, seeking itself along the way, and finding what it seeks. So does the ego find the death IT seeks, returning it to YOU.

Now it's important, when you're reading the Course, not to gloss quickly over the things hard to understand, or the things you don't really want to consider, and get on to the more positive things.

And so, when this paragraph starts out by saying . . .

It is not given to the ego's disciples to realize that they have dedicated THEMSELVES to death,
..

. . . it's like, "hum . . . that's about all the further I want to go into that!" And then what the next sentence says:

Freedom is offered them, but they have not accepted it, . .

"Wow! Freedom has been offered. I'm going to glom onto that. I'm going to reach for that. I'm going to give my attention to that, and I'm going to feel better than I was feeling when I read:

It is not given to the ego's disciples to realize that they have dedicated THEMSELVES to death,
..

"I'm not going to dwell on that."

Well, you're going to have to dwell on it. Because understanding what it means is essential to your being able to do, what? Undo it. Release it. Become unbound by it!

So, pretty heavy-handed, I would say: The ego's disciples . . .

. . . have dedicated THEMSELVES to death.

Well, let's be grounded . . . let's be practical . . . let's be sober.

Who of you has absolute confidence that you will not die? How many of you have confidence that you will not die?

How many of you feel, right now, that you are being, and it will be uninterrupted by death—no variation will occur [as] it has with almost everyone else except for the handful who have ascended or translated?

If you know that you're going to die, then you are one of the ego's disciples who is dedicated to death!

What's the saying? "The only sure thing is death and taxes."

So, you know what? You're already disciples of the ego. And you are already dedicated to death because you're absolutely sure that it's going to happen to you. Of course, there will be another lifetime where you will return to Heaven and your life will not have ended. And so, therefore, you don't mind being absolutely sure that you're going to die out of this experience.

Man, that's dedication! That's commitment! You are bound with a certainty—the certainty of your inner decision about it. So you're already in it. And you have just found a way to describe it so that it's not as distressing as it might otherwise be. You see?

One way or another it's a certainty, and you have arrived at a certain amount of peace about it. And that peace is false. And that peace disallows for correction to occur. It disallows for this obstacle to peace to be destroyed. And yet that's the call.

You are the holy Sons and Daughters of God, who, somewhere along the line, decided with another to pay more attention to your own thoughts than the Thoughts of God. And so you forgot who you were and you forgot your function.

And now here you are living in an experience that is full of sin, sickness and death. And you think it's normal. You think it's the way God set it up. And, as I've said, you've built a story around it—many stories around it—that make it a more comfortable experience.

This Course is not here to make you comfortable in an illusion until the illusion is over, because the illusion won't be over until you abandon it! And you won't abandon it until you look squarely at it and see how you are engaging with it. You see?

So don't be afraid to look soberly at it.

“Well,” someone says, “how come nobody else who is teaching the Course is saying this? How come everyone else who studies the Course believes that death is inevitable?” It doesn't really matter. What matters is that I am teaching that it is not inevitable and I am bringing out the ways in which the Course intends to undo the obstacle. Why? So that you shall never see death!

“He that believeth on me shall never see death!”²

That's my declaration. That's my promise. That's the simple truth. Death is to be undone. And the Course has no different purpose from that. If death is not inevitable, then it means that sickness that leads to death is not inevitable. And it means that sin—the attempt to do something that can't be done with commitment—that is to be undone as well.

That means what? A lot of things. It means ever-present health. It means no signs of aging. More than that, as you engage in the holy instant and lean into the Father's Perspective by asking of the Holy Spirit, “What is the truth here?” you set into motion your capacity to see the truth. And by that I mean, in the transformation of your awareness, as it is infilled with the inspired truth that the Holy Spirit provides, you will find what you would call physical evidence of correction of all that wasn't real, all that were misperceptions—like aging.

And so you would say you're experiencing “youthing”—the return of better symmetry, more perfect form and outline and color. You see?

You should be going through your day, every day, with an expectation of eternal Life showing up in practical language of perception, now . . . and not just reading the Course and glossing over the hard parts and getting to the sweet and beautiful parts that allow you some peace and comfort without correcting a darn thing! You see?

The word, “correction” means something changes. A call for correction is a call for a change. Where? Right in the middle of your experience. We could call it, “the human experience.” But actually, it’s right in the middle of your divine experience and revealing, uncovering, the divinity of it more clearly to you in your conscious awareness. This is what it’s about!

Now, beginning in this new sub-heading (The Attraction of Death):

To you, in whose special relationship the Holy Spirit entered, . .

. . . meaning, when in your relationship with your fellowman, you turned to the Holy Spirit to gather the facts instead of your memory and your mutual agreements, . .

To you, in whose special relationship the Holy Spirit entered, . .

. . . because you invited Him . . .

. . . it is given to release and be released from the dedication to death.

The holy instant genuinely and humbly practiced, is the threshold into the conscious experience of eternal Life—yours, NOW . . . not after you pass on.

For it was offered you, and you ACCEPTED.

And that’s the key. You ACCEPTED. The moment you turn to the Holy Spirit or the Father, or your Guide, or me, and you ask to know the truth, the truth will be provided if your desire is humble and genuine. And because . . .

. . . it was offered you, and you ACCEPTED [it] . . .

. . . the miracle occurs. And the miracle embraces you and your Brother or Sister always. It is never private—exclusively yours. NEVER!

Yet, . .

. . . in spite of the fact that . . .

. . . it’s been given and received, you must learn still more about this strange devotion, for it contains the third of the obstacles which peace must flow across.

Notice that. Peace flows across these obstacles like water. It doesn’t fight with them, it doesn’t engage with them. It floats over them.

No-one can die unless he chooses death.

Now mind you, I know! You say you're not choosing death. You're choosing life every day. You go around with a positive attitude every day. You engage in good deeds every day. You engage in helping. You're not choosing death. If you're a teenager, if you're in your twenties, if you're in your thirties, the feeling is that the sky is the limit and nothing holds you back. You're not afraid of death.

Nevertheless, you went to your grandmother's funeral a few months ago. You've noticed the obituaries. You watch the news. You see that people are dying. It isn't occupying your mind—you have a very positive attitude. But nevertheless, you have embodied, we'll say, the very definite belief that your life is a life span with a beginning and an end. You believe that. You're just not concerned about it yet.

Your belief in it though, is your devotion to it.

So, when it says . . .

No-one can die unless he chooses death . . .

. . . it means exactly that. And here's the key: If you are not choosing to engage in the holy instant, if you are not choosing to engage in the two-step and to silence your thinking, and genuinely desire to know the truth of Something beyond your best capacities to think . . . if you're not doing that, you are caught. You are devoted to death and death will happen because you're choosing it.

There's only one way to un-choose it, and that is to abandon the independence. Abandon your "right" to think for yourself, and partner once again with the Holy Spirit, with the Father, with your Guide. Partner—consciously do everything in the awareness that you are not alone. Partner by inquiring to know the more of what God is Being right there in your experience, than you're presently experiencing. You see? That's the only way to un-choose for death.

What SEEMS to be the fear of death is really its ATTRACTION.

Not really so hard to grasp the meaning of.

You see, because you believe that life has a beginning and an end, and you're devoted to that, and you're devoted to death, you are simultaneously voting for it and being afraid of it. This is where a sober look is really important.

Everyone who insists upon being an independent thinker—a body with a brain that developed through evolutionary processes in a material world—that entity is a concept. It is an interpretation placed upon the holy Son or Daughter of God and given preference to What lies underneath it.

So, you're put in this experience of a bind where you are confident there will be death and you are afraid of it at the same time. You are attracted to death because you are attracted to being in a way that is pure illusion. You are attracted to function as an independent physical entity which you are not. But as long as you are unwilling to look any further than that, you will be bound to the experience of death.

Guilt, too, is feared and fearful. Yet it could have no hold at all except on those who are attracted to it and seek it out.

Well see, I know! Nobody seeks it out. Nobody thinks they do. But the fact is that the moment you, as I've said before, got a divorce from your Father, two things immediately came into play that you weren't expecting: fear and guilt. And so, as long as you are seeking to be independent, you are attracted to and seek the experience of fear and guilt.

You don't think of it that way because you're thinking about the fun and the exhilaration and the hit you will get from being independently intelligent, creative, and making someone out of yourself. That's what you're thinking about—something that makes utterly no sense at all to a holy Son or Daughter of God who hasn't said, "Father, I'd rather do it my way. I'd rather see things my way." You see?

And so it is with death. Made by the ego, its dark shadow falls across all living things, because the ego is the "enemy" of life.

God is Life. Life is what God is. Life is an Absolute. Life is unlimited because there is nothing present to be unlike it. But when someone says, "I'd rather make up the rules.

"I'd rather define what everything is," "I'd rather make up the definition," then you are separating yourself from Life. You are choosing to be different from your Source. And different means, un-like. The only way to be un-like Life is to be that which posits and demonstrates and manifests death. That's the bottom line.

It doesn't matter that it's an illusion. As long as one is engaged in an illusory sense of self, the illusion is going to seem quite real, and it is an unworthy experience for a holy Son or Daughter of God. It is not the Birthright of a holy Son or Daughter of God—You. Therefore, correction is called for: the need to see death as an obstacle to peace, your peace—the place in you in which miracles occur, in which Awakening occurs.

The act of independence, the cherishing of independence and the commitment to it is a commitment against All that Truly Is.

The thinking—the mindsets engaged in that—are what the word "ego" means. You are not an ego, but you can imaginatively think that you are independent and that you can make up the meanings of everything. And what happens is, you become a disciple of a "way" of thinking—of a perspective. You see? Not an actuality. So correction is called for. The obstacle is to be undone.

Identifying with that which is the enemy of Life is the inevitable next step.

Death:

Made by the ego, its dark shadow falls across all living things, . .

. . . at least as far as you can see, looking through the lens of independence that you're looking through, . .

. . . because the ego is the "enemy" of life.

And yet a shadow cannot kill.

In other words, that which has no substance, but just an appearance, cannot kill. It cannot do anything

What is a shadow to the living?

What is a misperception to a holy Son or Daughter of God?

They but walk past and it is gone. But what of those whose dedication it is NOT to live; . .

I know! Nobody has a dedication not to live. But now you know that if you're operating independently, you are in the realm of what is not real, where death is inevitable because the state of mind is devoted to the opposite of what is Real. It's devoted to the opposite of Life, Truth and Love, therefore it's opposing Life. It's affirming and constantly confirming death.

But what of those whose dedication it is NOT to live; the black-draped "sinners," the ego's mournful chorus, plodding so heavily away from life, dragging their chains and marching in the slow procession which honors their grim master, lord of death?

Well, gee whiz, who in the hell are these individuals that this is talking about? My goodness! Could it be you? Could it be the one who isn't expecting miracles? Could it be the one who doesn't think death can be avoided, or that death isn't even real and therefore nothing associated with it is real either?

You all have mutual agreements and you stand together solidly. That's the "mournful chorus." "Oh, Joe has this terminal illness. He only has six months to live. Well, we can pray for him to have maximum comfort between now and then. We can ask the Holy Spirit to help him."

[Chuckling] But I'm not hearing anybody say, "Hey, let's raise the dead," or "let's undo the death process, and let's expect to see it here and now!"

Now that's the correction of the attraction to death and that's the correction of death. And here and now is when to be engaging in that correction . . . by what? . . abandoning your best judgments and everyone else's best judgments and shutting up and saying, "Father," or "Holy Spirit, what is the living truth here? What is the truth that eradicates the obstacle?"

Touch any one of them . . .

. . . anyone with a "mournful chorus" . . .

. . . with the gentle hands of forgiveness, and watch the chains fall away, along with yours.

That's always the way it works: "what you give, you get to keep," what you extend, you end up embodying. The question is: where is the gift coming from? What's the source of the gift you're giving . . . the ego or the Holy Spirit—your deranged mind that you seem to have imaginatively created, or that which is nothing but your right Mind, the Holy Spirit?

. . . watch the chains fall away, along with yours.

NOW!

See him throw aside the black robe he was wearing to his funeral, and hear him laugh at death.

You see? This is what the destruction of this obstacle to peace is going to look like here and now.

The sentence sin would lay upon him he can escape through your forgiveness.

(Whew!) Why, because you're special? No. But because your forgiveness is you being willing to abandon the mutual agreement about death and seeking for an answer beyond your best judgment and your best education with what seems to you to be perfectly obvious. And then extending the insight, the inspiration, the experience of truth about him or her that infills you . . . you see? The undoing of the obstacle here and now.

This is no arrogance. It is the Will of God. What is impossible to you who chose His Will as yours? What is death to you?

You see? Realization: the transformation of your conscious awareness of life and of the infinite manifestation of God transforms the material world. The Bible speaks of this as the scales falling from your eyes.³ The scales falling from your eyes cause you to seem to see a world that was transformed, but what it has always divinely been has simply registered with you in your defenselessness, in the absence of your willfulness.

YOUR dedication . . .

. . . if you've accepted the will of God.

YOUR dedication is not to death, nor to its master. When you accepted the Holy Spirit's purpose in place of the ego's, you renounced death, . . .

. . . I'm going to bring that into the present tense:

When you [accept] the Holy Spirit's purpose in place of the ego's, you [renounce] death.

It couldn't be any clearer than that. It also couldn't be any more radical than that. But the Course is about radical. The Course is about undoing the obstacles to peace and therefore undoing those things that stand in the way of your Awakening.

When you accepted the Holy Spirit's purpose in place of the ego's, you renounced death, exchanging it for life. We know that an idea leaves not its source. And death is the result of the thought we call the ego, as surely as life is the result of the Thought of God.

Wow! A sub-heading entitled:

THE INCORRUPTIBLE BODY

Strange words if one thinks that the Course is teaching that the body is an illusion:

THE INCORRUPTIBLE BODY

Continuing:

From the ego came sin and guilt and death, in opposition to life and innocence, and to the Will of God Himself.

You see? That's why it's a dedication to death. Again, nobody thinks of it quite that way because there is such pleasure taken and such an ethic of being able to take credit for being independently creative. But all the time one is engaged in independence, one is denying who he is and what his function is.

Where can such opposition lie but in the sick minds of the insane, dedicated to madness and set against the peace of Heaven.

Again, rather strong language, because that's the last thing you would describe yourself as—you wouldn't use those words relative to you. But if you don't realize that you have adopted a way of interpreting Creation and Life that is inconsistent with what it truly divinely is, then you are indulging in a mind that is sick, insane, dedicated to madness and set against the Peace of Heaven.

Don't shy away from that, because the clarity of it makes it possible for you to, with absolute clarity, choose differently, knowing why you are choosing differently.

One thing is sure: God, Who created neither sin nor death, wills not that you be bound by them. He knows of neither sin nor its results.

[Chuckling] Those have all been manufactured by a creative, disturbed, disconnected mind.

The shrouded figures in the funeral procession march not in honor of their Creator, . .

. . . meaning God . . .

. . . Whose Will it is they live. They are not following It; they are OPPOSING It.

And what is the black-draped body they would bury? A body which THEY dedicated to death, a symbol of corruption, a sacrifice to sin, offered to sin to feed upon and keep itself alive; a thing condemned, damned by its maker, and lamented by every mourner who looks upon it as himself.

[Sighs] You know what? It's simple. If you are choosing not to look at everything through the Father's eyes, by *letting that Mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus*⁴—which was the Father's Mind—then there is nothing positive that can be said about it. And these words which I just read:

. . . a thing condemned, damned by its maker, . .

. . . blah, blah, blah.”

Those are not too strong and that's not the entire list. But understand that there is no way for there to be any positive adjective applied, not until you are willing to engage in the two-step, the holy instant, and abandon your confidence in your best private thinking and rejoin with your Source.

You know, you can listen to this and you can dare to say, “Wow, I must be all screwed up! But, I do see that if I exist at all, I have to be the manifestation of a Source—an infinite Source, one that is not flawed. And I'm willing to abandon my confidence in all of what must be my screwed up thinking. I'm willing to abandon it and reach beyond it because, as a matter of fact, I do agree that everyone is going to die and that means me too. And if for some strange reason, death is an obstacle to peace that is to be undone, then I'm going to not get excited and upset and depressed because I'm so confused. And I am going to more consistently engage in the holy instant. I am going to engage in That which I am told, undoes the obstacles to peace.”

Continuing:

[Raj did not read these next two sentences: You who believe you have condemned the Son of God to this ARE arrogant. But you who would release him are but honoring the Will of his Creator.]

The arrogance of sin, the pride of guilt, the sepulchre of separation, all are part of your unrecognized dedication to death. The glitter of guilt you laid upon the body would kill it. For what the ego . . .

. . . listen to this:

For what the ego loves it kills for its obedience.

You see, the threat of death is what keeps you cemented to the confused outlook defined by the word “ego.”

For what the ego loves it kills for its obedience.

But listen to this:

But what obeys it not it CANNOT kill.

Well, how do you not obey the ego? You abandon it! As I’ve said many times before: the only thing the ego cannot defend itself against, is disregard. How do you disregard it? Yep, the two-step, the practice of the holy instant.

You have another dedication . . .

[Chuckling] . . . one besides the dedication to the ego and death.

You have another dedication which would keep the body incorruptible and perfect as long as it is useful for your holy purpose.

Wow! Is that the way you would describe an illusion? Is that the way you would describe something that is going to disappear?

You have another dedication which would keep the body incorruptible and perfect as long as it is useful for your holy purpose.

That simply means forever, unless you choose to abandon your holy purpose and attempt once again to be an arrogant ego.

[Raj reads these two sentences a little farther down: The body no more dies than it can feel. It does NOTHING.]

Of itself, . .

. . . those are the key words.

Of itself, . .

. . . referring to the body . . .

. . . it is neither corruptible nor incorruptible.

That’s because it doesn’t exist of itself.

Of itself, it is neither corruptible nor incorruptible. It IS nothing. It is the result of a tiny, mad idea of corruption which can be CORRECTED.

But now, I'm going to get real picky here. I'm going to change the wording, because this expresses the real meaning here:

The body no more dies than it can feel. It does NOTHING. Of itself, it is neither corruptible nor incorruptible. [Of itself,] it IS nothing. [Of itself,] it is the result of a tiny, mad idea of corruption which can be CORRECTED.

The words "of itself," need to begin all three of those sentences. So you can see that it is not saying that the body is nothing.

Of itself, it is neither corruptible nor incorruptible. [Of itself,] it IS nothing.

Of course, of itself.

[Of itself,] it is the result of a tiny, mad idea of corruption which . . .

. . . what?

. . . can be CORRECTED.

Not gotten rid of. The body is not there to be gotten rid of, but the misperception is to be corrected. That's what all of this is about: The undoing of the obstacle to peace, called the Attraction of Death.

For God has answered this insane idea with His Own, an answer which left Him not, and therefore brings the Creator to the awareness of every mind which heard His answer and ACCEPTED it.

Now we've paid attention in a sober way to the idea of the attraction of death. And I have elaborated on it to provide more meaning. Listen to this. Continuing . . .

You who are dedicated to the incorruptible have been given, through your acceptance, the power to RELEASE from corruption.

You see? The undoing of the obstacle.

What better way to teach the first and fundamental principle in a course on miracles than by showing you the one which seems to be the hardest can be accomplished first? The body can but serve your purpose. As you look upon it, so will it seem to be.

Doesn't say, "so will it seem to appear and disappear."

As you look upon it, so will it seem to be.

And the question is: with what are you going to look upon it? That's all. One secures the seeming interminable on-goingness of birth and death and the other undoes it, giving rise to or revealing eternal Life now . . . now . . . now.

I love you very much. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

June 7th 2015

—————oOo—————

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We are considering the Obstacles to Peace and have been, in quite some detail, for a few weeks now. Currently, we are considering the third obstacle which is, The Attraction of Death.

Before we continue, I want to point out that there is one element which arouses the obstacles to peace—which brings the obstacles to peace into play—and that element is independence . . . independence.

Independence from what?

Well, always it's independence from relationship. You see? Independence is always the breaking of a relationship—the violation of a relationship.

You, as the Sons and Daughters of God, have a Function. And that Function is to recognize the Movement of the infinite Mind of God, and recognize It and acknowledge It for what It is: The Movement of God—the Movement of the divine Mind that God is. Your confirmation of the Movement of God as God's, secures infinity and eternity as a singularity—as That which is indivisible and undivided even though It is an infinite expression.

In your recognition of that infinite expression, you are in intimate relationship with it all. You see that?

Before any act of independence occurred, before any Son or Daughter of God said, “Father, I'd rather define things for myself,” there was no, I will say, objectivity, where you were separate from what you were experiencing and recognizing as the infinite expression of God.

As a result, the singularity of Mind was an experience of infinite ever-present omnipresent relationship with all of Creation. That is not only your Birthright to be experiencing, it is what is utterly natural and normal for you when you're not insisting upon being some sort of an independent agent—being creative all by yourself.

So, overcoming the Obstacles of Peace is never a matter of managing somehow to independently escape the obstacles and to then independently be free of them. The eradication of the Obstacles to Peace is the reestablishment of the inviolable, unchangeable intimate relationship that you and every one of the Sons and Daughters of God enjoy as, for lack of better words, your natural habitat, your natural way of Being.

Overcoming the Obstacles to Peace is the uninhibited and unavowed experience of intimacy—of unity—of active conscious Brotherhood.

We need to keep this in mind because Atonement—the coming back into your right Mind—is never an independent act, action, or activity. It is always going to be relative to a Brother or a Sister, or some part of Creation in which you become innocently present with Creation, or that aspect of it.

The removal of the Obstacles to Peace is the reestablishment of union, of Brotherhood. And all of the Obstacles to Peace have as their goal, the breakdown of union because it is predicated on an act—by a Son or Daughter of God—of separation from his Father. From God.

So everything that we've been talking about needs to be considered in relation to your relationships with each other—those immediately in your experience as well as mankind as a whole. It won't just be the Obstacles to Peace in your head. It won't be the escape from the Obstacles to Peace in your immediate relationships, but in the Brotherhood of Man, the result of which will be Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men.¹

This is important to understand, because it will ground you. It will also cause you to look at, we'll say, the Attraction to Death in a more grounded way, in a more practical way, in a less esoteric way, because you will be able to look at it relative to the use to which you're putting your mind. Because you are always using your mind to create the Obstacles to Peace and to, we're going to say, activate it, objectify it, manifest it.

Now, going into the book we see:

Death, were it true, would be the final and complete disruption of communication which is the ego's goal.²

Now, it isn't that the ego is an entity in itself, that has a goal of disrupting communication. It is that you as a Son or Daughter of God, initially disrupted communication with your Father by deciding to act independently of the Father. And that disruption of the unity of Mind between the Father and the Son became manifest as a disturbed mind. The communication was disturbed and the result was a disturbed mind that then had to communicate with the Brotherhood through language, ideas and coercion.

Communication became something between two things. Whereas communion is the oneness of One infinite Thing. You see the difference? It's important.

Now I want you to think about it. When you are in conflict, when you are angry, jealous, when you are depressed . . . when you are any of these things, they're never something private—just about you. They always have their root in a relationship you're in, and, at the bottom line, a call in that relationship for communion. In other words, a call for those in the relationship to abandon their personal, private willfulness—to learn of the Father, to learn of their Source what the Truth is, so that a unified understanding occurs. That’s communion. That is what is normal. That is what is holy. That is “the goal.”

When you get into arguments with each other, when you get down and dirty with each other, always the technique employs doing whatever it takes to avoid communication, to avoid looking squarely at the need and changing, when change is called for.

This is important.

I shared with Paul this past week, this idea: What you see with your ego, you have to convince me of. I did not mean when I was saying it to him that what he saw with his ego, he had to convince me of. I was speaking with relevance to relationships. And one could say this to his Brother, or one’s Brother could say this to you: “What you see with your ego, you have to convince me of.”

Now this is because communication, not being communion, is something that is projected from one thing to another. Unfortunately, the ego is a state of independence from the Father in which fear and guilt are the bottom line elements. And so every single bit of communication, where what one sees with his ego he has to convince the other of, is disruptive, distorting and destructive. What you see with your ego you have to convince me of.

But I continued . . . What you see with the Holy Spirit, the Holy Spirit convinces me of. That’s because it’s communion.

Every one of you at this point who are hearing my voice are functioning in the ego’s realm. And what the Course is bringing to your attention and illuminating to you is the necessity of practicing the holy instant in which you become still. You stop listening to and talking with your ego. And in the Silence, you ask of the Holy Spirit, “What is the truth here?” so that the Holy Spirit can respond. And what you see with the Holy Spirit, the Holy Spirit convinces your Brother of—the one whom you were having a grievance with. And there is no level of coercion that occurs.

The practice of the holy instant is the way you move out of and become free of the Obstacles to Peace.

Continuing:

Those who fear death see not how often and how loudly they call to it, and bid it come to save them from communication.

Every argument you get in, every disagreement you have with another and every bit of the wrangling that goes on, is the avoidance of communication. Technically, it’s the avoidance of communion. It’s the avoidance of being of One Mind.

Well, how often are you in disagreement? How much of your day is spent being distressed—whether it's a little bit or a lot—with another one's perspective, or what another one is attempting to do? And how many of you enjoy the practice of judgment that you engage in, without realizing that the practice of judgment, for lack of better words, affects you physically, negatively. It raises blood pressure. It disrupts digestion. It disrupts your heart rate. It unsettles you. Anger, carried to its extreme, can give you a heart attack.

What I'm pointing out here is, that the practice of grievance, the practice of fear and hate is a devotion to death. And of course, if death occurs, then the conflict is over and the disagreement and the stubbornness of your Brother or Sister doesn't have to be dealt with anymore.

But of course, you're not thinking about that. Why? Because when you experience fear and anger, it brings you in touch with a need—you think—to be in touch with your strength. And so in a way, fear magnifies the opportunity for you to express your strength, and therefore, is self-confirming. And that is pleasing. And that is why it is difficult to abandon the practice of fear and hate. If you do, it seems that you're abandoning the opportunity for your strength to be confirmed.

Now . . .

For death is seen as safety, the great dark saviour from the light of truth, the answer to the Answer, the silencer of the Voice that speaks for God.

Yes, it does. No one wants to really look directly at the issues that need to be looked at, because the ego suggests that looking at what the Answer to those things is, will be your guilt calling for penalty. And so to hear the Father's Answer becomes frightening instead of relieving, instead of something that you would run for and leap into your Father's Arms to be supported and held and safe.

Yet the retreat to death is not the end of conflict.

In other words, the practice of avoiding unity, the practice of avoiding hearing the Holy Spirit answer you and resolve things, does not end conflict. To get away from that which will penalize you will not end the conflict because you have been deceptively invited to stay in the place which is itself, conflicted.

Only GOD'S answer is its end.

The end of conflict.

The obstacle of your seeming love for death that peace must flow across seems to be very great.

Now, that doesn't necessarily mean in terms of size, like a huge gap to leap across. It can seem to be very great because the fear is experienced as a sensation in your gut. It is a sensation which spontaneously calls for self-preservation—something in your best interest, you think.

And so, the degree of the sensation of fear succeeds in distracting you further and further away from whatever little willingness you might have to turn to the Holy Spirit or the Father and pray—ask for help, ask to know what is the healing truth here? You see?

The obstacle of your seeming love for death that peace must flow across seems to be very great. For in it lies hidden all the ego's secrets, all its strange devices for deception, all its sick ideas and weird imaginings.

Tonight I'm wanting you to take a look at what goes on in your mind when you are distressed, because you will find, when you pay attention right when you're in the middle of this, that the physical sensations of fear, the apparent call for self-preservation which seems to be in your best interest, these things all arise out of many different little deceits that you believe.

"Oh, the Father will condemn me." "Oh, if I do that I will be controlled by anyone who wants to control me." "I will lose my invulnerability that I will be able to have through the use of my own personal power and strength."

And it goes on and on and on, and all of these deceptive little lies keep you from having the nerve or the faith or the daring to reach outside of it to the Holy Spirit, or to the Father, or to me and genuinely ask for help without being afraid of the Answer.

So these words are very meaningful:

For in it lies hidden all the ego's secrets, all its strange devices for deception, all its sick ideas and weird imaginings.

These are things that go on in your own mind as justifications to be distracted from your holiness and from the peace that is in you and is ever present for you to avail yourself of, and something that once you have availed yourself of it, will be the environment in which the sudden shift of perception that's called, "a miracle," can happen and will happen.

Here is the final end of union, the triumph of the ego's making over creation, the victory of lifelessness on Life Itself.

Emotion and distorted ideas cause you to commit yourself to abandoning God, abandoning any gumption you might have to stand up and speak to God, "Father, what is the truth here?" "Father, help me." "Holy Spirit, reveal to me what I need to know."

Why? Part of the deception in the weird imaginings is the idea that, "Well, if God really were my helper, who I've called upon a lot, then I wouldn't be in this bad shape that I'm in. And therefore, asking God for help doesn't work. Asking the Holy Spirit to know the truth doesn't mean that I will become infused with a Knowing of what the truth is that uncovers to me, as an experience, my invulnerability and allows me to let out a sigh and let go of whatever strength I was going to use to preserve myself, because I Know I'm not under threat."

Under the dusty edge of its distorted world the ego would lay . . .

. . . who?

. . . the Son of God, slain by its orders, proof in his decay that God Himself is powerless before the ego's might, unable to protect the life that He created . . .

. . . that God created . . .

. . . against the ego's savage wish to kill.

All of this goes on daily, and it goes on as an activity of your mind that you need to be willing to dare to look at and contradict . . . you need to be willing to look at it and contradict it and step away from it on purpose.

Continuing:

My brothers, Children of our Father, this is a DREAM of death.

The whole thing is a charade, if I might put it that way. The whole thing is imagination—pure imagination—and you don't need to be governed by imagination any more. The point here is to overcome or abandon the obstacle to peace, because the obstacle to peace is an illusion and can be abandoned. And therefore, you must dare to go ahead and do it in spite of your conditioning, in spite of your strong belief to the contrary.

There is no funeral, no dark altars, no grim commandments nor twisted rituals of condemnation to which the body leads you.

[Chuckling] “Oh, yes, but all bodies deteriorate and die. All bodies do lead to a funeral.” No! That's the belief. That's the practiced committed belief. But you are learning here that it is to be contradicted, and that it can be contradicted, and you can step out of it into the conscious experience of eternal life NOW, not after you die.

Ask not release of IT.

Meaning, don't ask for release from your body! Don't ask your body to let you go and not have to die.

But free it from the merciless and unrelenting orders YOU laid upon it, and forgive it what YOU ordered it to do.

Your commitment to the idea that your body will finally put you in the grave, or cause you to pass on while it goes into a grave . . . your commitment to that is what needs to be abandoned.

You're ordering your body to do that, by virtue of confidence in this false idea—which you didn't know was false—but which you now, at least, have heard from me, is false, and which it is now up to you to pick up and dare to act upon. And how do you act upon it? By trying to make the body eternal? No! You act upon it by abandoning the fear and the guilt. And you abandon the fear and the guilt by reaching outside of your best judgments and your best thinking, and asking, leaning into, the infinite Mind of God and the Holy Spirit to have the truth revealed to you.

In its exaltation . . .

. . . the body's—by giving it powers in your imaginative way to control you . . .

In its exaltation you commanded it to die, for only death COULD conquer life. And what but insanity could look upon the defeat of God, and think it real?

Well, you may not have thought of it that way. But when you are exalting the body—that which you define as something which is born, grows, grows old and dies—you are honoring and lifting up with respect that which has as its ultimate conclusion, death. And it's time to withdraw your honor from it. That is what this is all about.

And what but insanity could look upon the defeat of God, and think it real?

Well, here comes one of those little, oh-o-o, secrets of the ego, the strange devices and deception that comes along and says, “Well, you see, I told you. If you look to find out what the truth is, you'll find that the truth is that you are behaving insanely.” You see, it twisted things. It said, “You are behaving insanely,” instead of that these ideas are insane, are not true, are not practical, are not to be honored because they will lead you to nothing but confusion.

The fear of death will go as its appeal is yielded to love's REAL attraction.

Now mind you, I want to back up here. The attraction of the ego is found in the emotions and the physical sensations of fear and strengths. So the fear of death will go as its appeal—as the sensations and the beliefs—are yielded to love's REAL attraction.

The end of sin, which nestles . . .

Listen to this:

The end of sin, which nestles quietly in the safety of your relationship, . .

. . . what relationship? The relationship with your fellowman that is disrupted by the act of independence.

The end of sin, which nestles quietly in the safety of your relationship, . .

. . . the relationship that would be disrupted by independence, has within it the end of sin and it nestles there quietly.

. . . protected by your union, ready to grow into a mighty force for God, . .

I'm going to read the whole sentence over again:

The end of sin, which nestles quietly in the safety of your relationship, protected by your union, ready to grow into a mighty force for God, is very near.

You see, once you know that this obstacle for peace is not real and that it can be moved past, that causes the relief to be very near.

The infancy of salvation is carefully guarded by love, preserved from every thought that would attack it, and quietly made ready to fulfill the mighty task for which it was given you.

What is that mighty task? To be the full-fledged Son or Daughter of God that you Are and never stopped being . . . without the impediment and the pain and the sorrow and the sickness and the sin and the death that accompanies this distorted perception called "independence."

Your newborn purpose . . .

. . . newborn in the relationship that you are turning over to the Holy Spirit.

Your newborn purpose is nursed by angels, cherished by the Holy Spirit, and protected by God Himself.

This is what meets you as you abandon the obstacle for peace, the attraction of death. You see?

It needs not your protection; IT is YOURS.

It is your protection. But you will not feel its presence until you've abandoned the wild strength of your willfulness in your attempt to be a successful independent agent.

It needs not your protection; IT is YOURS. For it is deathless, and within it lies the end of death.

You see? That's the only thing that will end the conflict, not succeeding in overcoming God.

What danger can assail the wholly innocent? What can attack the guiltless? What fear can enter and disturb the peace of sinlessness? What has been given you, even in its infancy, is in full communication with God and you.

The infancy of Salvation is in full communication with God and you.

In its tiny hands it holds, in perfect safety, every miracle you will perform, held out to you.

This is what you are unaware of when you are consumed with emotion and physical sensations that arise out of fear and guilt. This is the replacement.

The miracle of life is ageless, born in time but nourished in eternity.

And I would say, born and dying in time, but nourished in eternity. Because time is a perception that is false and in it birth and death occur. But Life is ageless, nourished in eternity. You see? Changelessly fulfilled in eternity.

Behold this infant, . . .

And I'm going to say, dare to behold this infant right in the middle of your being consumed with fear or anger or jealousy or any other manipulative selfish movement.

Behold this infant, to whom you gave a resting-place by your forgiveness of each other, and see in it the Will of God.

There we go . . . that's your part in co-creation, is to see the Movement of God and acknowledge It as His.

Here is the babe of Bethlehem reborn.

In you, as you.

And everyone who gives him shelter will follow him, not to the cross, but to the Resurrection and the Life.

And that's the point! Atonement, Awakening, coming back into your right Mind and Knowing it.

When anything seems to you to be a source of fear, when any situation strikes you with terror and makes your body tremble and the cold sweat of fear comes over it, remember it is always for ONE reason; the ego has perceived it as a symbol of fear, a sign of sin and death.

I'm going to go back:

When anything seems to you to be a source of fear, .

It's not because it is, but it's because . . .

. . . the ego has perceived it as a symbol of fear, a sign of sin and death.

That's very important.

Waking up is a matter of abandoning the ego's interpretations by abandoning the ego, which means, again, becoming still, silencing the human thinking and expressing the prayer, "Father," or "Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? What is the redeeming, regenerative, redemptive truth here?"

Remember, then, that neither [the] sign nor [the] symbol .

In other words, whatever definition the ego is overlaying on what is happening . . .

. . . should be confused with source, . .

Remember, then, that neither sign nor symbol should be confused with source, for they must stand for something OTHER than themselves. Their meaning cannot lie in them, but must be sought in what they REPRESENT.

Well, they represent the ego, whose goal is to disrupt communication, disrupt union.

And they may thus mean everything or nothing, according to the truth or falsity of the idea which they reflect. Confronted with such seeming uncertainty of meaning, . .

. . . meaning when you find yourself confused and frightened and don't know where to turn . . .

. . . judge it not.

Don't get tangled in it.

Remember the holy presence of the One given to you to be the Source of judgment.

Well, who might that be? The Holy Spirit, of course. Remember, see, right in the middle of your great distress of your great emotion, of your great physical sensations of fear and power, right in the middle of that which would grab your attention and say nothing else is worth giving your attention to, right in the middle of that:

Remember the holy presence of the One given to you to be the Source of judgment.

The Holy Spirit.

Give it to Him to judge for you, and say:

And you tell me whether this isn't the description of the holy instant:

Give it to Him to judge for you, and say: "Take this from me and look upon it, judging it for me. Let me not see it as a sign of sin and death, nor use it for destruction. Teach me how NOT to make of it an obstacle to peace, But let You use it FOR me, to facilitate its coming."

This is the way you undo the Obstacles to Peace and specifically The Attraction of Death.

I love you very much. I want you to grasp the Meaning of this. And as I said when we began, I want you to remember that the abandoning of the Obstacles to Peace is what reestablishes union in the Brotherhood. It's a Brotherhood thing, not an individual thing.

It's your Brother or your Sister: It's your daughter, or your wife, or your husband or son who you are to be willing to relate to without the judgment that arises out of fear and guilt, but instead in the peace of the joining with the Holy Spirit that allows Revelation to occur that changes your mind.

I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

June 14th 2015

—————oOo—————

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

It is very easy when coping with fear or when attempting to move beyond it, to feel that it is a very complex problem—one that you're likely to be unable to accomplish. And when—as we're reading about the Obstacles to Peace—you hear what seems to be a very complex set of beliefs and misunderstandings, you can very easily begin to think that it's going to be difficult, because it is so complex. And so, before we continue tonight, I want to consider the larger picture.

You—all of us—are the Sons and Daughters of God. No matter what you think, no matter what you've come to believe, that is the bottom line. That is the unchangeable fact. You and I—we—are all the Sons and Daughters of God right now. The difference between you and me is that you don't believe it, and you claim another definition for yourself—a definition which you are committed to. But nevertheless, we are Brothers and Sisters. Offspring of the same Father.

My purpose in communicating with you, in being involved in our Brotherhood in a very active way, as I am right now, is to remind you of the truth about you . . . which is the truth right now, even though it seems unbelievable to you.

Because you are the Sons and Daughters of God, I have shared that you must remember that you are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. You are at that point and must understand yourself therefrom.

This means that the apparent journey that you embark upon in abandoning the obstacles to peace, is a journey without distance as the Course speaks of. You are making the journey from your destination. You are right now a holy Son or Daughter of God believing that you are not, and engaged in the steps which will allow you to rediscover—remember—that you are, and never stopped Being the holy Sons and Daughters of God.

And so, you are Waking up to your holiness from your holiness. You see what I mean? The divine one that you Are, we could say, is engaged in remembering your divinity from your holy place of divinity.

This is very important to understand, because the complexity that you seem to be confronted with, is not complex at all, even though you can think about it with great complexity.

Now, when you decided to dally with the ego by claiming independence from the Father and from everything else, your divinity, your true Selfhood was held in trust, as I've said before, and it's what's called "the Holy Spirit." That of you which you were ignoring, did not go away, could not go away, could not be altered in any way, and therefore, the wholeness of you constantly has been engaged in getting your attention.

In other words, the poor little mortal that you have thought you were, has been constantly invited to remember your holiness. There has been the constant invitation to you by, for lack of better words, divine Love encouraging you to become unsure about your commitment to your mortality and to cause a chink in your armor that would let the Light of your Being—the truth of You—penetrate and register with you.

In other words, you have never been alone, you have never been abandoned, and you have constantly been embraced and encouraged—invited to remember who you divinely Are.

Now, there's no way to overcome or move beyond the Obstacles to Peace all by yourself, or for your own private reasons. Because as we discussed last time, independence is the problem and union is the solution.

Now, the fourth obstacle is The Fear of God.

What would you see without the fear of death?¹

"Well," you say, "I don't know. I'm not sure. Without the fear of death, I would be thrown into the not-knowing place, because the one thing I was sure of, I'm abandoning—death!"

Well, you know what? You don't have to use your imagination. You don't have to imagine something radical. Every single one of you, at one time or another—usually due to circumstances—have had the occasion where you were called into Silence. I mean by that, that either through illness or injury or overwhelming fear, you have been brought to a place of humility, except that you would have called it "humiliation."

And in that state, your arrogance was abandoned. And in that place in one way or another, divine Love was able to penetrate your willfulness and touch you and lift you and restore you. Every one of you has had that experience to one degree or another. That experience is the experience you have without the fear of death.

Without the fear of death, you would see everything without any indulgence in self-protection, without any need to provide any definition to what you were experiencing. And in the absence of your defining everything, what everything divinely is can register with you and everything is at peace.

That's the first thing. Everything is at peace: Living, Loving, dynamic peace.

What would you see without the fear of death? What would you feel and think if death held no attraction for you? Very simply, you would remember your Father.

Why? Because in your peace, in the absence of willful self-assertion, that of you which you've been ignoring which has been called "the Holy Spirit," has an open door to connect with and register with you.

And what is the Holy Spirit's Function? It is to reveal God to you and to reveal your relationship—your inseparable Oneness—with the Father. And thus bring you back into your right Mind.

So that's why you will remember your Father.

Very simply, you would remember your Father.

And listen to this:

The Creator of life, the Source of everything that lives, the Father of the universe and of the universe of universes, and of everything that lies even beyond them would you remember.

Does that sound to you like the world and universe is going to disappear? If your Father is the Father of the universe and of the universe of universes, and of everything that lies even beyond them, and this is what you're going to remember, then there is not going to be a radical interruption of your conscious experience of everything. It will instead, be a gentle adjustment into the awareness of it all and the fact that it is all at peace. In other words, the Movement of Creation involves no conflict. It is pure harmony, and you are purely at peace and in harmony with it.

Now, you all have the opportunity, without dying and without having to have a radical imagination, you all have the opportunity and the means of moving into that experience. And it's called, "meditation." Meditation is when you silence the mind, which means you shut down the thinking so that the pure experience of conscious Awareness is what is left.

Now every time we have a meeting, every time Paul shares me with anyone, he moves into the holy instant. He moves into that place where his thinking is silenced. He moves into that place in which everything is at peace, and there is nothing, no conflict to resolve or overcome. And every single one of you, when you meditate and move into the Silence, have done the same thing.

It is the way you move out of the obstacles to peace. And in that space, even though initially it is a limited experience of the universe of universes and everything beyond it that you will remember, you are nevertheless experiencing the quality and the nature of Reality.

It's important to understand this. Because when you meditate and become still, you're not engaged in overcoming anything. You're simply engaged in abandoning the making of noise. You see?

And so, the overcoming of the obstacles to peace is that simple. And you already have the experience. And if you haven't had it, it's easily available to you.

And as this memory . . .

. . . of the universe of universes of everything beyond . . .

. . . rises in your mind, peace must still surmount a final obstacle, after which is salvation completed, and the Son of God entirely restored to sanity. For here your world DOES end.

And what does that mean? It means the world, as you have chosen to perceive it, ends . . . because you've abandoned the thinking. You've abandoned the use of your mind that seems to have created a creation different from the Kingdom of Heaven.

That is what ends, because clarity is restored. Peace is restored.

The fourth obstacle to be surmounted . . .

. . . The Fear of God . . .

. . . hangs like a heavy veil before the face of Christ.

Before your face. Don't think it hangs before mine, between you and me. The veil hangs between you and your Real face—the face of the Christ that you Are. In other words, if you are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it, but are at that point and must understand yourself therefrom, it means that the Christ that awaits you on the other side of the veil, is the Christ that you Are—the Christ that is making this journey of moving through the veil from the other side of the veil already.

Catch the meaning of this! Because it's essential.

Yet as His face . . .

. . . the Christ's face—your face . . .

. . . rises beyond it, . . .

. . . the veil . . .

. . . shining with joy because He . . .

. . . you . . .

. . . is in His Father's Love, peace will lightly brush the veil aside and run to meet Him, . . .

. . . you . . .

... and to join with Him ...

... you ...

... at last. For this dark veil, which seems to make the face of Christ Himself ...

... your face ...

... like to a leper's, and the bright rays of His Father's Love ...

... your Father's Love ...

... which light His face ...

... your face ...

... with glory appear as streams of blood, fades in the blazing light beyond it when the fear of death is gone.

When the fear of death is gone, clarity of Mind—the clarity of your divinity—fills you, becomes your experience of you because It is. It rushes in because you've made room for It and opened the door.

You see?

This is the darkest veil, upheld by the belief in death, and protected by its attraction.

Your Oneness with God and your willingness to experience It is the last part of moving beyond the obstacles to peace. Abandoning your attraction to your definitions and your attraction to your commitment to death, by virtue of your unwillingness to believe your eternity, that will be gone.

The dedication to death and to its sovereignty is but the solemn vow, the promise made in secret to the ego never to lift this veil, not to approach it, nor even to suspect that it is there.

Now here's part of the complexity. Because you can run-off at the mind [chuckling] with all kinds of conjectures and suppositions about what that means, that you made a solemn vow to not even suspect that it is there. Oh-h, but don't go there, don't waste your energy.

The fact is that you are bound, apparently by the laws of sin and death. But it's not true. And you are bound to become free of it.

This is the secret bargain made with the ego to keep what lies beyond the veil forever blotted out and unremembered.

Again, though, you're on the other side of the veil. That which you divinely Are, you still divinely Are. And It is intent upon reuniting this private part of you that you want to keep private, with It . . . to reunite you with It.

Here is your promise never to allow union to call you out of separation; the great amnesia in which the memory of God seems quite forgotten; the cleavage of your Self from you;— THE FEAR OF GOD, . .

. . . the fourth Obstacle to Peace . . .

. . . the final step in your dissociation.

“Oh, but Father, I'd rather define it myself.” “Oh, but Father, I'd rather do it my way.” And that first step followed through to an ultimate fear of God that caused you to make a pact with the sense of yourself that you developed that said, you would forever be devoted to this finite, fearful, guilty, entity that you have become.

But none of it is true. None of it has ever been true. And the uncovering of it, and your freedom from it, is what we are engaged in facilitating.

See how the belief in death would seem to “save” you.

From what? From having to look at God, from having to recognize God for what He is and therefore, you for what you Are.

. . . the belief in death would seem to “save” you. For if this is gone, what can you fear but LIFE?

Nothing.

It is the attraction of death that makes life seem to be ugly, cruel and tyrannical.

You know, let's not be too indefinite here:

. . . ugly, cruel and tyrannical.

Well, tyrannical: you believe that your body has a life of its own and it can do to you what it will. And it will ultimately harm you, because by your definition, it is something which deteriorates and ultimately self-destructs, which means it destroys you. That's the way life can seem to be tyrannical—brought down to practical terms.

Cruel, wow . . . earthquakes, enemies, they can take away your life, they can take away your happiness, they can make you miserable. And they do behave miserably and create misery, because they are filled with fear and guilt, because they also think that they are a separated entity that they were confronted with when they said, “Father, I'd rather see it my way.”

Well, there is another way to look at everything. And that's what we're doing in the process of getting past the obstacles to peace.

Now, this next sentence will surprise you:

You are no more afraid of death than of the ego. These are your chosen FRIENDS. For in your secret alliance with them, you have agreed never to let the fear of God be lifted, so you could look upon the face of Christ, and join Him in His Father.

Meaning: so that you could look upon your face as the Son of God, and in your realization and acknowledgement of your Sonship, to join Him. To not be different from Him, because He is your Father, He is your Source.

Now you wouldn't say that you've made friends with death, but when I tell you that you are the Son or Daughter of God, and that you are Eternal at this very moment, and that no matter what you believe or what you see, you are incapable of dying and that you can have immediate evidence of the restoration of what you divinely Are at any moment, you don't believe me.

"Oh-h . . . yes," you say, "I know that as I work through my 'karma' I will eventually arrive at a point, not of resuming my divinity, but deserving to be given divine status." You see?

You're not divine now . . . but you can earn it! There's your commitment to death, there's your commitment to the fear of God, there's your unwillingness to see God in your Brother's eyes, or your very own when you look in the mirror. "Oh, yes, maybe someday, but not now . . . NOT NOW!"

There's the commitment! There you are choosing for death, choosing for the lack of peace and choosing to fear God and to see God as a fearful aspect of your future even as you regain or achieve divinity.

Now are you the Sons of God. And it does not yet appear what you shall be . . . what you shall be . . . well it doesn't matter what you shall be, now are you the Sons and Daughters of God. And now is when you can experience that fact. But you will not experience it if you do not abandon the four obstacles to peace.

And as I'm pointing out tonight: abandoning them is not as difficult as it might sound as we read here, or as you might think when you're confronted with fear, or feelings of guilt. But the simple fact is, that no matter what is going on, no matter what frightening thing is going on, you are capable of sitting down, closing your eyes and saying a mantra, or paying attention to the sensation of the air moving past the bridge of your nose, and neglecting to think, because you are devoted to saying the mantra or paying attention to the sensation. And peace comes. You experience peace. It is unavoidable if you take the steps.

It doesn't matter what's going on. It doesn't matter how conflicted everything seems to be in your life or in the world as you look out there. And everything going on out there seems to convince you that there is justification not to be in your peace. But your peace is available to you, and in the experience of it, you are succeeding in getting past the fear of God and being in that place where the Holy Spirit—your right Mind—can reveal the presence of God in you as You. And it is not more complicated than that.

Every obstacle that peace must flow across is surmounted in just the same way; . .

. . . each of the four obstacles . . .

. . . is surmounted in just the same way; . .

There isn't a different technique or practice because each of them is different or more complicated than the other.

Every obstacle . . .

. . . of the four obstacles . . .

. . . that peace must flow across is surmounted in just the same way; . .

And here it is:

. . . the fear that raised it yields to the love beneath, and so the fear is gone. And so it is with this.

. . . the fear of God. Do you hear that?

Every obstacle that peace must flow across is surmounted in just the same way; the fear that raised it yields to the love beneath, and so the fear is gone. [And so it is with this.] The desire to get rid of peace and drive the Holy Spirit from you . . .

. . . which is the first obstacle . . .

. . . fades in the presence of the quiet recognition that you love Him.

. . . the Holy Spirit.

The exaltation of the body . . .

. . . which is the second obstacle . . .

. . . is given up in favor of the Spirit, which you love as you could NEVER love the body. And the appeal of death . . .

. . . the third obstacle . . .

. . . is lost forever as love's attraction stirs and calls to you. From beyond each of the obstacles to love, Love Itself has called, and each has been surmounted by the power of the attraction of what lies beyond.

What lies beyond each of the obstacles. You see? It's not as complicated as you think and the only reason you are on the journey, the apparent journey, is because you're being helped from the destination . . . right now . . . right here . . . no matter whether you think you deserve it or not, because whatever definition is being applied to you, if it isn't that you are the holy Son or Daughter of God, it isn't true and you are not bound by it. You are free to move beyond it by virtue of abandoning the obstacles to peace. That's what this is all about.

Your WANTING fear seemed to be holding them in place.

The obstacles to peace.

Your WANTING fear . . .

. . . and we talked about this. Oh, I know, you don't want fear, but, oh boy, you sure do use it. And you use it [chuckling] with a degree of skill and excellence—misguided as it is—to magnify your strengths and your credibility to prove to yourself that you are something valid and valuable and worthy. Oh no, you don't want fear, but boy, you sure want the benefit that can come from dealing with fear. Well, you see, pay attention.

Your WANTING fear seemed to be holding them in place. Yet when you heard the voice of love beyond them, you answered and they disappeared.

Now, as I said, you have all in one way or another—and no one is excluded from this—each one of you, in one way or another, has had the experience of humiliation and humility that it took in order for Love to reach you and show you that your validity wasn't dependent upon anything you could do, but was inherent in you as an eternal Gift that caused you, in whatever circumstance you were in, to shift perception and experience the blessing and the healing of that.

So we are not talking about something foreign to you that it will be hard for you to achieve.

Yet when you heard the voice of love beyond them, . .

. . . the obstacles to peace . . .

. . . you answered and they disappeared.

And now you stand in terror before what you swore never to look upon.

Referring to the forth obstacle: The Fear of God.

Your eyes look down, remembering your promise to your "friends."

You know, fear and guilt and the ego.

The “loveliness” of sin, . .

. . . “loveliness,” of course is in quotes.

The “loveliness” . . .

. . . the attractiveness of sin, the pleasure of sin . . .

. . . the delicate appeal of guilt, the “holy” waxen image of death, and the fear of vengeance of the ego you swore in blood not to desert, all rise and bid you not to raise your eyes.

Not to look at God again.

For you realize that if you look on this and LET the veil be lifted, THEY will be gone forever.

The obstacles to peace will be gone forever. The ego and it’s misdirection and it’s deceased will be gone forever. Fear will be gone forever, and you will never be called upon again to show your validity by the strength with which you overcame the fear. That will be gone. And what will you be left with? The remembrance of your Father and therefore the remembrance of who you divinely Are.

All of your “friends,” your “protectors” and your “home” . . .

. . . meaning, your body as you were defining it . . .

. . . will vanish.

In other words, the use to which you put Creation for your own purposes will be gone! And you’ll be left with what? Creation as It is. Creation as the Father is being It, including You as the witness to Creation as being the Expression of the Father. Your Function is as co-creator—to confirm that Creation is the Father’s.

When you’re in this process:

[Raj did not read this sentence:] Nothing that you remember now will you remember.

It seems to you the world will utterly abandon you if you but raise your eyes. Yet all that will occur is you will leave the world . . .

. . . what world? Not Creation, not the universe of universes and everything beyond and everything up close. No!

. . . all that will occur is you will leave the world forever.

You will leave the meanings you have superimposed upon it. And you will leave the suffering that was the result of your superimposing your definitions upon Creation.

This is the re-establishment of YOUR will.

And we're not talking here about the will you were engaged in using to create a distorted perception of Reality. We're talking about the Father's Will in you, which you can have none other than, because you are the current direct Expression of God being All.

Look upon it, . .

. . . your will . . .

. . . open-eyed, and you will nevermore believe that you are at the mercy of things beyond you, forces you cannot control, and thoughts that come to you against your will.

[Repeating] Look upon it, open-eyed, . .

. . . meaning, your will. And let's be very clear here: what you're looking upon that's your will, is the Father's Will not being altered, tampered with or manipulated or biased in any way, by any effort on your part. Look at your will in the recognition that it's the Father's Will and you will never be afraid again, nor will you think that you have anything to overcome, especially through some special private skill of your own.

It IS your will to look on this. No mad desire, no trivial impulse to forget again, no stab of fear nor the cold sweat of seeming death can stand against your will.

The Father's Will in you that is You.

For what attracts you from beyond the veil is also deep WITHIN you, unseparated from it and completely One.

You see? Right now, when you think that you are a private mortal entity, you are not. You, right here, evidently in the middle of mortality, are the unchanged Son or Daughter of God, the one who, because He or She never changed, is on the other side of the veil, calling to you in the form of the Holy Spirit, to get you to abandon the division that you have put in place.

So, we are talking about the abandonment of independence and the reemergence as a conscious experience of unity, of union. And the divine one that you Are, as you think you are a mortal, is inseparable from the divine one that you Are, who is neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it, but is at that point, and which it calls to you to understand, and in the understanding, move beyond the obstacles to peace.

Don't let this get too complicated. Don't let the solution become difficult in your mind. You all have the capacity to still the human mind, to become still and to inquire in the Silence, "Father, Holy Spirit, what is the truth there?" And in so doing, find yourself in the space in which the obstacles to peace are absent. The simple necessity is to begin to practice this now . . . now . . . now.

I love you all and I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

June 21st 2015

—————oOo—————

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We're discussing the Obstacles to Peace. Why? What is the purpose of overcoming the Obstacles to Peace? Is it so that you might ultimately rejoin with the Father—abandon your independence from the Father and reunite—and come back into your natural divine relationship with Him? Well, yes, but not that alone.

The simple fact is, you did not get a divorce from your Father, you did not claim your independence with total independence, if I may put it that way. You claimed your independence by joining with a Brother or a Sister in a mutual agreement to decide what everything meant, what everything means, to take the place of the movement of Creation that the Father Is, so that you might have, with a Brother or Sister, a unique experience of your Own.

And so you didn't just walk in, we'll say, into the Presence of the Father and deny Him, and walk away independent from Him. No, that cannot be done. The only thing that can be done and the only thing that happened was, that you and a Brother—without walking into the Father's Presence at all to ask Him or tell Him anything—said to each other, “Well, I'm looking at this and I'm looking at that. You know . . . there must be a different way to look at this.

“Because we are the expression of the Creator, we must be able to be creative. So let's you and I make up the meanings. Let's decide what everything means. Let's decide how we're going to deal with everything and we'll forget about the Father. We'll just have fun altering what He has made.”

And so, as part of the Atonement, the undoing of that mutual act of independence must occur. And so the overcoming of the Obstacles to Peace is not just to undo the separation and independence from your Father that you have been engaged in. It is to undo the separation and independence from your brothers and sisters as well.

Well, does that now all of a sudden throw a complication into the picture? I mean, after all, we've been talking about overcoming the Fear of God, the fourth obstacle—the last obstacle. And I made it clear last week . . . I reminded everyone . . . that you are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. You are at that point and you must understand yourself therefrom. I pointed this out so that you might be able to easily grasp that you're making this journey Home . . . from Home.

Well, there's an additional little piece to this. And that is, that your brother, your sister is neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. Your brother or sister is at that point, just as you are, and you must understand them therefrom.

“Oh-h, in other words, we've got to go back together? I can't [chuckling] independently abandon my independence?”

That's right . . . that's right.

Now, this isn't really new. All along throughout the Course, you have been reminded in one way or another that your Salvation lies in your brother, not in yourself—that you can't prove your divinity or worth, your brother must! And likewise, your task is to bear witness to your brother's or sister's divinity, holiness, perfection.

So, keep this in mind as we continue on in this new Section:

The Lifting of the Veil¹

Forget not that you came this far TOGETHER.

You came this far with each other—with your fellow man. When you have practiced the two-step, when you have practiced the holy instant and you have asked, “What is the truth here?” you will remember that for the most part, the question has referred to something regarding your brother or sister.

“What is the truth here with my sister or my brother? What is the truth about my brother that I may feel and comprehend and understand so completely that that's the way in which I regard my brothers or sisters and is the basis upon which I treat my brothers or sisters so that I become, as you have said, a benign presence,” a presence in whom it is easier for your brother to embrace the truth about himself. You see?

This is the wholeness of the process of Atonement.

So . . .

Forget not that you came this far TOGETHER. And it was surely not the ego that led you here. No obstacle to peace can be surmounted through ITS help. IT does not open up its secrets, and bid you look on them and go beyond them.

[Chuckling] Of course not.

IT would not have you see its weakness, and learn it has no power to keep you from the truth. The Guide Who brought you here . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit or your Guide.

The Guide Who brought you here REMAINS with you, . .

. . . now, at this point in your increasing clarity . . .

. . . and when you raise your eyes, . .

. . . to once again look at God and violate the pact you have with the ego never to do that . . .

. . . when you raise your eyes, you will be READY to look on terror with no fear at all.

What terror? The terror that has been established in you by your impossible, independent thinking that has caused you to see God as wrathful and as one who will take out His wrath on you for having denied Him.

. . . you will be READY to look on terror with no fear at all. But first, lift up your eyes and look upon each other in innocence born of complete forgiveness of each other's illusions, and through the eyes of faith, which sees them not.

You see? You're going to have to go back Home together. So, as you lift your eyes to look at God without fear, on the way you need to give your attention to your brothers and sisters.

Now, you have been doing this. As we have gone along, I've constantly pointed out to you that when you practice the holy instant, it is to be an agent for change for your brother, to be a witness on behalf of your sister's holiness and so on.

So this isn't something new that you're now going to have to do before Atonement can be experienced. It's just that there is no way for you to look at the Father without fear and join with Him without bringing along with you, your brother, whom you have joined with, because you have been practicing the holy instant, and you have been able to witness for him or her. And you have witnessed. And it has brought you to the point where you can now look at what we're discussing and dare to take the next step of looking on up to the Father without fear.

No-one can look upon the fear of God unterrified unless he has accepted the Atonement, . .

In other words, unless he has begun to experience what the Atonement means, as a result of his genuine and humble practice of the two-step, the holy instant . . .

. . . No-one can look upon the fear of God unterrified unless he has accepted the Atonement, and learned illusions are not real . . .

. . . that they are nothing more than wild imagination that has its source in nothing, at least nothing valid, and therefore, have no power whatsoever, except the fear which you introduce and exercise as wildly as the imaginations were formed . . . and scare yourself.

No-one can stand before this obstacle . . .

. . . the fourth obstacle, The Fear of God . . .

. . . alone, for he could not have reached thus far UNLESS his brother walked beside him . . .

. . . the brothers or sisters that you have been willing to use as justification for abandoning your best judgments, and turning to the Holy Spirit or the Father to know the truth about them.

And no-one would dare to look on it without complete forgiveness of his brother in his heart.

Why? Because the love that is embodied in the forgiveness extended to a brother is the language of Being, through which the communication of unity moves and finds expression—actualization.

Stand you here a while, and tremble not.

Stand you here in this regard of your Brother or your Sister and your forgiveness of them, before forcing your way further on into looking at God without fear. You're not going to be able to look at God without fear, without your brother or sister standing beside you in your unconditional loving embrace.

Stand you here a while, and tremble not. You will be ready. Let us join together in a holy instant, here in this place where the purpose GIVEN in a holy instant has led you.

Let us join together in this conscious awareness of forgiveness of your brother and sister, knowing that it is an integral part of lifting your eyes all the way to look at God without fear, and thus overcome the last of the four Obstacles to Peace.

And let us join in faith that He Who brought us here together will offer you the innocence you need, and that you will accept it for my love and His.

Now let's understand this clearly.

. . . let us join in faith that He Who brought us here together . . .

Who is that He? That He is the Christ that your Brother Is, even though he doesn't believe it and you don't believe it. But the presence of your Brother, we'll say, being a problem, is what is causing you to turn to the Father for clarification and for healing—not just for yourself but for your Brother. The Christ, the one that is neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it, is confronting you, and brings us here together.

So . . .

. . . let us join in faith that He Who brought us here together will offer you the innocence you need, . . .

See? Your innocent Brother—the one who's neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it—is extending you Love. The Christ of your Brother is extending you Love because right now He is at the point of perfection just as you are—even though he and you believe differently.

Nor is it possible to look on this too soon.

In other words, there's no justification for delay whatsoever. Let's get on with the transforming elements that move you beyond the Obstacles to Peace.

This is the place to which everyone must come when he is ready. Once he has found his brother he IS ready.

Once you have found your brother, whether he's expressing Love or a call for Love, you are at a point of readiness, actually, to know the truth that heals both your brother and yourself, else you wouldn't be confronted with anything.

Yet merely to reach the place is not enough. A journey without a purpose is still meaningless, and even when it is over it seems to make no sense. How can you KNOW that it is over unless you realize its purpose IS accomplished?

I will tell you, you will Know the Answer to that when you do it, when you are willing to look into your brother's eyes and remember God, instead of what you have determined he is, and instead of what he has determined he is with your help.

And it is here you choose whether to look upon it . . .

. . . actually do it . . .

. . . or wander on, only to return and make the choice again.

So, you don't only get one chance. You can approach it and re-approach it over and over again. But the conclusion to this process will not arrive . . . you will not arrive at the conclusion until you actually make commitment to the joining with the same strength that you made commitment to the act of independence. That means you will have to express with energy, with that which evokes real change in you—a resolve in you. But it can never be too soon to look on this.

So this is where we are. This is the point in the abandonment or the overcoming of the fourth Obstacle to Peace that you are ready for and that it is time to tackle.

To look upon the fear of God DOES need some preparation.

And I will tell you that every time you actively engage in the holy instant, desiring of the Father or the Holy Spirit to Know what the truth is here, right now, on planet Earth, no matter what it is you're doing, your practice of that prepares you. You have been preparing yourself.

To look upon the fear of God DOES need some preparation.

And that is not meant to imply that you haven't already been engaged in it. At least if we have been meeting together and you have been hearing what I've said and you have been practicing that.

Only the sane can look on stark insanity and raving madness with pity and compassion, but not with fear. For only if they share in it does it seem fearful, and you DO share in it . . .

Listen to this:

. . . until you look upon each other with perfect faith and love and tenderness.

And that's why you practice the holy instant so that you, sooner rather than later . . .

. . . look upon each other with perfect faith and love and tenderness. Before complete forgiveness you still stand unforgiving. You are afraid of God BECAUSE you fear each other. Those you do not forgive YOU FEAR. And no-one reaches love with fear beside him.

You see now, the importance of practicing the holy instant now . . . now . . . now . . . now, throughout your day, right here on planet Earth, right here in what you have determined to be "the human condition"? Because that's the way fear is lessened. And with fear lessened, what lies underneath it, which is Love, emerges fully and is the transforming element.

This brother who stands beside you still seems to be a stranger. You do not know him, and your interpretation of him is very fearful.

Pay attention when you listen to the news, whether it's news of your city, of your country, or of another country or of another group. This brother, these brothers that you see whose behavior is illustrated in the news, this brother who stands beside you still seems to be a stranger. You're frightened. You feel justification for fear.

You do not know him, and your interpretation of him is very fearful.

Mind you, it says your interpretation of him is very fearful. It doesn't say "he is very fearful."

. . . your interpretation of him is very fearful. And you attack him still, . . .

. . . we'll say, at the least, by simply being afraid of him.

And you attack him still, to keep what seems to be YOURSELF unharmed. Yet in his hands is your salvation.

Mind you, I know you like the idea that the truth about you is that you are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it, that you are at that point and that somehow the task is to understand yourself therefrom. But the call is for you to do the very same thing about your brother, whether he's shooting people in a church, whether he's shooting people in a dark alley, whether the one shooting is a police officer misbehaving, whether it is a group of people in the Middle East who are wreaking havoc, whether it's a country that's wreaking havoc. The fact is, that these brothers are, just as you are—the Christ—the holy Sons and Daughters of God, just like me. And you must come to the point of extending to them the same acknowledgement that I am extending to you, because that is the transforming element.

That is very important.

. . . in his hands is your salvation. You see his madness, which you hate because you SHARE it. And all the pity and forgiveness that would heal it gives way to fear. Brothers, you NEED forgiveness of each other, . .

Mind you, we're no longer talking at the moment about lifting your eyes up to look at God without fear, because this must be part and parcel of it.

. . . you NEED forgiveness of each other, for you will share in madness or in Heaven together.

You see? Together!

And you will raise your eyes in faith together, or not at all.

This may be difficult to hear. It may seem impossible, like an impossible task, but that's part of your fearful mindset and is not what will be conveyed to you when you engage in the holy instant on behalf of your brother, so that you might become cleared of false information which it is inappropriate for you to be indulging in or believing.

Beside each of you is one who offers you the chalice of Atonement, . .

Beside each of you . . . I'm not talking here about angels or your Guides. I'm talking about your brothers and sisters whom you can see and touch.

Beside each of you is one who offers you the chalice of Atonement, for the Holy Spirit is in him.

. . . not behind or advancing toward the point of perfection.

. . . the Holy Spirit is in him. Would you hold his sins against him, or accept his gift to you?

“Why, he's not giving me the gift of salvation, he's giving me the gift of fear. He is threatening me. He's brandishing a gun in my face. He is proving to me that I can't go to sleep at night and be in my peace.”

Well you know what? We're talking about two different “entities,” if I may put it that way. If you're going to be difficult and harsh with your brother in that way, you must be hard and harsh with yourself, because you are not behaving as though you are at the point of perfection and understanding yourself therefrom. You are engaging in fearful, aggressive, mean-spirited responses. “He is doing this.” “He is doing that.” “He isn't doing anything to make me feel comfortable.” You are not in the Silence.

You are not, and have not said, “Father, what is the truth about him?” so that you can open up your mouth and say something entirely different, and know that it’s the truth about him and that therefore your behavior needs to be entirely different from the tirade and attack you engaged in, in belittling him.

[Raj didn’t read these sentences: Is this giver of salvation your friend or enemy? Choose which he is, remembering that you will receive of him according to your choice.]

He has in him the power to forgive your sins, as you for him.

And remember, he’s the only one that can forgive you your sins. You can’t forgive yourself yours. And you are the only one who can forgive him his. And that is your task. And you will only be able to do that if you engage in the holy instant, if you abandon your right to your own awful independent thinking.

He has in him the power to forgive your sins, as you for him. Neither can give it to himself alone. And yet your Savior stands beside each one.

You, standing beside your brother, are the Savior that is standing beside him. And your brother, who is standing beside you, is your Savior.

Let him be what he is, and seek not to make of love an enemy.

Is this becoming utterly clear?

Now, let’s remember something: God is all. God is omnipotent. There is none other than God. Therefore, there is no actual opponent. There is no actual conflict. And because that is the unalterable fact, you are guaranteed, and all of your brothers and sisters are guaranteed of coming into the conscious realization that you don’t need to be judging each other to be something less than they are and treating them as though your perception of them is true. You are bound to become free of that.

In other words, the very nature of Being, the very nature of the movement of God guarantees the success of overcoming the Obstacles to Peace as well as the manifestations of them, such as war, jealousy, hate, mistreatment, and so on.

Creation is made to work the way God is Making it, the way the divine intelligence is Being it, right now.

Behold your Friend, the Christ Who stands beside you . . .

. . . who happens to look like a police officer who doesn’t obey the law, who looks like a family member who isn’t behaving like a family member.

Behold your Friend, the Christ Who stands beside you.

Be willing to see your brother as That, just as you find yourself willing to consider the possibility that in actuality you are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. You are there.

How holy and how beautiful He is!

. . . your Brother who is the Christ, just as how beautiful you are to Him as the Christ that you Are.

You thought He sinned because you cast the veil of sin upon Him to hide His loveliness.

And the word “Him” and the word “His” are capitalized. That means the Christ that He is, the Christ that you Are at the point of perfection where each of you is right now, but refusing to believe it.

Yet still He holds forgiveness out to you, to share His holiness. This “enemy,” this “stranger” still offers you salvation as His Friend . . .

. . . speaking of the Christ of you, the one you really Are, right now.

The “enemies” of Christ, the worshippers of sin, know not Whom they attack.

They don’t know, just as you don’t know when you’re attacking, that you are attacking and they are attacking the holy Son or Daughter of God. And thus they instill a false perception and seem to back it up with commitment and force, willfulness, strength.

This is your brother, crucified by sin, and waiting for release from pain.

You see? You can’t really go on and raise your eyes to look at God without fear, without loving your brother, without being willing to see your brother through God’s eyes. And when you are engaging in the holy instant, practicing the two-step, you are opening yourself up to the realization of what your Brother and Sister really Are.

Would you not offer him forgiveness, when only he can offer it to YOU? For his redemption he will give you yours . . .

What does that mean? It means that what you give you get to keep. What you give is conferred upon you. What you confirm in another is confirmed in you. That’s what that means.

For his redemption he will give you yours as surely as God created every living thing and loves it. And he will give it truly, for it will be both offered and received.

You see? Given! What you get to give, offer, you get to keep . . . you receive.

There is no grace of Heaven that you cannot offer to each other, . .

And that's what you're all supposed to be doing on your Globe. And you are needing to treat each other as the divine one's that you Are, and educate each other in that awareness, rather than trying to prove that each other is flawed and must pay a penalty for it.

There is no grace of Heaven that you cannot offer to each other, and receive from your most holy Friend.

In other words, your flesh and blood brother and sister. You must be willing to see your Brother and Sister with the same assessment of Their Holiness that you are willing to give to yourself, as a process of your Atonement—as a part of the process of overcoming and abandoning the Obstacles to Peace.

Let him withhold it not, for by receiving it you offer it to him.

“Oh, I can't be bothered with him! I've got to Wake up! I've got to Wake up! I've got to give my attention to looking at God without fearing Him.”

I'm going to tell you something. Find at least one brother or sister whom you are willing not to determine to be a distraction from your holy quest to look at God without fear, and ask God for the clarity and the awareness of truth about that brother or sister, because that's an essential part of the process.

Redemption has been given you to give each other, and thus receive it.

You see? Oh, no, you're not gonna be able to look at God without fear and then receive it from God—one on one, privately. Not the way it works.

Redemption has been given you to give each other, and thus receive it. Whom you forgive is free, and what you give you share. Forgive the sins your brother thinks he has committed, and all the guilt you think you see in him.

You can't walk into the presence of God to look at Him without fear with a grudge up your sleeve against a brother. That's not honest. That's conflicted. It doesn't work. It doesn't fit.

Here is the holy place of resurrection, to which we come again; to which we will return until redemption is accomplished and RECEIVED.

Wow, if you are experiencing a disease that has caused a portion of your body to deteriorate so that it is not fully present, you don't ask for the ability to be comfortable and not die from it. You ask for transformation, regeneration, redemption . . . redemption!

Now, if you deserve redemption because you believe you are the holy Son or Daughter of God, then certainly your brother and sister do also, and it behooves you to extend that to them willingly.

Here is the holy place of resurrection, to which we come again; to which we will return until redemption is accomplished and RECEIVED.

In other words, redemption is the body whole again, and redemption is brothers in harmony with each other—no longer fighting, no longer untrustworthy, no longer dangerous—because someone has taken the time to treat him or her as though he or she is holy, and has been willing to take the time to present the ideas and the education necessary to make the truth viable and acceptable and reasonable, even though it is so different from what everyone has been conditioned to feel and believe.

Think who your brother is, before you would condemn him.

I think of who you Are, you holy Son and Daughter of God. And because I do, I recognize your holiness and I treat you as though you are holy. And I tell you to rethink your concepts of yourself and abandon what doesn't fit your holiness, so that you will not punish yourself through mean-spirited, self attack, and might extend to yourself the Love that the Holy Spirit and I and the Father are constantly enveloping you in.

And offer thanks to God that he is holy, . .

. . . your brother . . .

. . . and has been given the gift of holiness for YOU. Join him . . .

. . . your brother . . .

. . . in gladness, and remove all trace of guilt from his disturbed and tortured mind.

Educate him! Speak . . . and do not speak that which condemns or insinuates fault or shortcomings or unacceptabilities.

Help him to lift the heavy burden of sin you laid upon him and he accepted as his own, and toss it lightly and with happy laughter away from him.

That's what all of this is about. This is what the overcoming of the Obstacles to Peace is about.

I said last week, that when you do go into the Silence, and when you do silence the thinking, the first thing you notice is that everything is at peace—you are, but not just you. Nothing that is going on arouses fear or anger or anything other than peace in you. And you see it anew. This is what you need to anchor yourself in so that you might share the truth of it with your brothers and sisters who are not at peace.

Help him to lift the heavy burden of sin you laid upon him and he accepted as his own, and toss it lightly and with happy laughter away from him. Press it not like thorns against his brow, nor nail him to it unredeemed and hopeless.

Before you raise your eyes to look at God without fear . . .

. . . Give each other faith, for faith and hope and mercy are yours to give.

Now, let's be clear. The reason they are yours to give is because, if you've practice the holy instant after having silenced your thinking and have asked to know what the truth is here, it is revealed to you by the Holy Spirit—speaking for the Father—to reveal the Father to you . . . and you have It to give. That's the way it works.

Into the hands that give the gift is given.

What you give you get to keep—that's the way you “have.”

Look on your brother, and see in him the gift of God you would receive.

You certainly want it for yourself. That's why you're endeavoring to practice the holy instant. That's why you are willing to consider abandoning this right you think you have to determine what everything is and to be successfully independent. That's the whole reason.

It is almost Easter, . .

. . . at the time this was written.

It is almost Easter, the time of resurrection. Let us give redemption to each other and SHARE in it, that we may rise as one in resurrection, and not separate in death. Behold the gift of freedom that I gave the Holy Spirit for BOTH of you. And be you free together, as you offer to the Holy Spirit this same gift.

You see? This is the practicality of what this is all about.

And giving it receive it of Him in return for what you gave. He leadeth you and me together, that we might meet here in this holy place, and make the same decision.

Who is that he? The Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit . . .

. . . leadeth you and me together, that we might meet here in this holy place, and make the same decision.

To overcome The Fear of God brings peace on Earth, good will toward men. And that's part of the redemption and resurrection.

I love you all and I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

June 28th 2015

—————oOo—————

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good afternoon. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Overcoming the Obstacles to Peace . . . so that we might arrive at a point where we can be defenseless with our brothers and sisters and, in the love that arises out of that defenselessness, we can turn to the Father to ask for His Perspective of our brother, our sister and ourselves, and thus bring everything back into a unity.

Now, when we ended up last time, we read . . .

It is almost Easter, the time of resurrection.¹

And of course, that was at the time this was being dictated to Helen.

Let us give redemption to each other and SHARE in it, that we may rise as one in resurrection and not separate in death.

This is the goal. This is the end of the journey without distance. This is the reason for the journey.

The point is, to be able to look at your brother or any aspect of Creation without defense, without fear, without judgment . . . with unconditional love.

This is the call. This is the call in your daily life. This is the call every moment, because in every moment you are in relationship with Creation. Your attention may be specifically on one thing, or one person or one event. But it is an experience of relationship—a relationship that needs to be able to be clear of everything impure, everything not in harmony with God's Creation.

Everything where? In your mind, because "out there" there is nothing out of place. The correction is called for in your mind.

All four of the Obstacles to Peace are aspects or concepts in your mind which color everything that you are aware of. And when the Obstacles to Peace are overcome, are seen for what they are, and abandoned because of their uselessness, your true Vision—the undistorted conscious experience of Creation—becomes yours because the veil of your superimposed preconceptions, imaginations have been released.

You, right now, right here, are in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven and you are the Sons—the holy Sons and Daughters of God. You hear me say this to you over and over. This is my greatest Gift to you, to reveal to you and to reinforce in your mind the truth about you that it's hard for you to believe and accept and embrace and let in, so that nothing else is presenting itself right there where you are.

This is a Gift. It is THE Gift that is transforming, and will lift you and support you in your claiming of your divine Birthright.

Without my doing this, you would be lost. And I am setting the example because this is exactly what you need to be giving to each other, so that life on earth ceases to be what is called “the human condition” and becomes the divine condition of Reality without your having to go anywhere or get beyond any thing—any aspect of Creation.

Behold the gift of freedom that I gave the Holy Spirit for BOTH of you.

You and your brother, you and your sister.

And be you free together, as you offer to the Holy Spirit this same gift. And giving it receive it of Him in return for what you gave. He leadeth you and me together, that we might meet here in this holy place, and make the same decision.

In this holy place of realization, in this holy place of conscious awareness where the undistorted Perspective of Mind that is God's Perspective, is not only available to you but is now being experienced by you because you're not choosing to be smaller—a part of that which has a right to be creative in your own imaginative way without the attempt to be something on your own which would have to be something tiny in the face of all of Creation—instead of claiming that, your release of it is your embrace of the whole and the conscious experience of it.

Your life here and now on earth is supposed to be pure fulfillment. And the only reason it isn't, is because you hold something against parts of it. You hold something against a brother or sister, you hold something against a society, you hold something against a prevailing weather system. You see? And this is what you have to abandon.

We're now continuing . . .

Free your brother here, . . .

. . . in this place of awareness. In other words, in your mind.

Free your brother here, as I freed you.

And as I'm freeing you right now.

At the time of the crucifixion, when I was being judged and condemned and crucified, I didn't forget who you were. I didn't forget who my Brothers were—that they were my Brothers. That we had the same Father, we had the same inheritance or Birthright in spite of what everyone thought they were.

The lack of condemnation on my part, the spotless holiness with which I regarded every single one playing out this imaginative drama, held them guiltless.

Because you cannot kill the Son of God, the Son of God was not killed. And that's why there was a Resurrection, to break the concept that death was permanent and constituted an end. And thus, those who judged me worthy of being crucified and those who crucified me, could not be held accountable—guilty of anything—because they could not do what they imaginatively believed they were doing.

You see, your task is to find the way to look at your brother and hold him guiltless, so that there is no condemnation for him to overcome the guilt of. And in that guiltlessness—that regard which you embrace your brother in, or your sister—that causes your brother or sister to be able to relax and feel his or her peace and embrace potential, we will say, beyond that one's present concept of what is possible in terms of his holiness—his divinity—his excellence.

There isn't going to be peace on earth until each one of you dares to be the Christ and looks upon his brother with the clarity of that brother's divinity and treats that one on the basis of that divinity. In other words, with respect, with love. Not just smoochy, cloud-nine cotton candy love, but love that arises out of the clear recognition of God right there where that brother is . . . and God right there where you are.

This is far different from your present concept. But I am illuminating it to you so that you might recognize that there is a contrast, a difference, something new that you can embrace or desire to have the experience of, instead of simply settling for the present concept you have of yourself and suffering with it.

It is very important for me to tell you of your holiness right now, not after you die, not off in the future as something you may someday finally deserve. It is important for you to know it now. And to put it very simply, your job is to present that same fact and acknowledgement to your brothers and sisters, so that the world can begin to change, because individuals with a dawning awareness of their divinity, are willing to abandon self-protection, jealousy, doubt, anger, mean-spiritedness, and on and on and on.

Free your brother here, as I freed you. Give him the self-same gift, nor look upon him with condemnation of any kind. See him as guiltless as I look on you, and overlook the sins he thinks he sees within himself. Offer each other freedom and complete release from sin, here in the garden of seeming agony and death.

That's figurative speaking for "the human condition." You daily live in an equivalent of the garden of agony and death—the Garden of Gethsemane.²

But you don't have to remain here. Because you don't have to embrace the faulty misperceptions of the Kingdom of Heaven that cause it to look like a garden of agony and death. You can choose differently! And that is the point. And you need to choose differently regarding your fellowman, because it makes a difference.

It makes a difference for me to inform you and remind you and not let you forget that you are, at this very moment, the holy Son or Daughter of God—you really are. And your Birthright as the Son or Daughter of God is yours to take hold of at any moment. But in order to take hold of it, you will have to abandon the Obstacles to Peace.

So will we prepare together the way unto the resurrection of God's Son, and let him rise again to glad remembrance of his Father, Who knows no sin, no death, but only life eternal.

Now, I know each and every one of you have in your life, circumstances or individuals where there is strife—unyielding strife. And it can be so distressing, that for the sake of self-protection, you feel justified in being angered, experiencing righteous indignation, and enough reason to not forgive, to not change your absolute negative perception. That's what forgiveness is. It's you abandoning your bad thinking about another, or about a situation or about a thing.

You, in your anger, absolutely block your capacity to experience the fact that you are the holy Son or Daughter of God. And that is too great a cost. It doesn't matter at all whether your brother deserves or doesn't deserve it. Or whether your brother changes or doesn't change. What matters is, whether you are blocking your experience of your holiness. Because I promise you, if you can't experience your holiness, you will not be able to recognize it in your brother nor will you find the willingness to find it in your brother.

And that's simply not intelligent.

Together, . . .

. . . meaning, once we make this decision together to not operate on the basis of the Obstacles to Peace . . .

. . . we will disappear into the Presence beyond the veil, . . .

Now, let's be careful here. Because we're not talking about a veil hanging somewhere in three-dimensional space that will lift, that's hanging between you and Reality, meaning you as a body standing there with eyes looking at three-dimensional space. No, the veils are preoccupations, distractions in your mind that keep you from giving your attention where Reality is present to be experienced.

The veils are mental distractions. They're not hanging between you and anything. They're simply invitations for you to look at something that isn't real and believe that it's real and thus be involved in a fantasy.

To abandon successfully the Obstacles to Peace is to let go of the distractions. In other words, to practice the holy instant—to become still and ask, “Father,” or “Holy Spirit, what is the truth beyond the Obstacles to Peace that are distracting me from experiencing Reality here and now? What is the Reality here and now? Help me experience it.”

Together we will disappear into the Presence beyond the veil, not to be lost but FOUND; not to be seen but KNOWN.

You will find yourself Knowing everything—all of Creation—Knowing your brothers and sisters. Knowing the beetle and the blade of grass and a star. Knowing it for what it divinely is. And Knowing yourself as that which embraces it all because you're that Mind which is the Mind of God seeing all that is and Knowing that God is its Source.

Again:

Together we will disappear into the Presence beyond the veil, . .

. . . what does that mean, we will disappearing? Oh-h . . . no, we're not talking about disappearing. We're talking about the concepts and beliefs about what you are and what your brother and sister are. Those concepts will disappear. You will not see or believe yourself to be what you had believed before. And your brother and sister and the beetle and the blade of grass and the star will all register with you as what they divinely Are. And you will relate to them from within the framework of what I'm going to call, “mental holiness”—we could say, “mental wholeness.” You see?

And so what you were in your belief and the way everything appeared to you in your belief, including you and me will disappear. And we as what we really Are, will register instead.

. . . we will disappear into the Presence . . .

. . . the Presence of what? The Presence of God. The Presence of the movement of God which is infinite Creation.

. . . we will disappear into the Presence . . .

. . . the Oneness the Allness . . .

. . . beyond the veil, not to be lost but FOUND; not to be seen but KNOWN. And knowing, nothing in the plan God has established for salvation will be left undone. This is the journey's purpose, . .

And you will look upon your brothers and sisters and world and universe, and universe of universes and everything beyond. And you will be glad. You will be filled with joy. And joy will exude from you and will be delivered infinitely. And you will experience the infinite deliverance of joy from all other aspects of Creation. The Love with which you love all, you will find yourself loved by.

[Raj did not read the end of that sentence . . . without which IS the journey meaningless.] Here is the peace of God, given to you eternally by Him.

Something which had been present all along, but because you did not believe that you were a holy Son or Daughter of God, and believed instead that you were a physical mortal, you missed, you didn't experience. And you weren't even curious to see, because you were so sure you knew what everything was and how it worked.

Here is the peace of God, given to you eternally by Him. Here is the rest and quiet that you seek, the reason for the journey from its beginning.

You see? The whole point is, to arrive at the place where Creation is what you're experiencing with God's Perspective, because that's your Birthright.

Heaven is the gift you owe each other, . . .

You see? The divine ones that you Are owe each other the experience of Heaven, the experience of a holy Son or Daughter of God. It isn't as though it's a debt, but it's the incredible truth that can only spill out of you and bless everyone. You owe it to each other, because nothing else can happen except the extension of the gift of the joy of your holiness given to your brothers and sisters in acknowledgement of theirs.

Heaven is the gift you owe each other, the debt of gratitude you offer to the Son of God in thanks for what he is, and what his Father created him to be.

But mind you, right now you have to be willing to give this gift to the bastard sitting next to you, or across the room, or down the street who's just waiting for you to drive by so he can shoot at you.

In other words, right now you seem to be in the Garden of Gethsemane, you seem to be in the human condition. There's no other place for you to be the Presence of Love. And the fact that this seems to be your environment is a dominant call for that Love to be expressed that can heal and transform it. And so, you do not have the luxury of being able to say, "I don't deserve to have to deal with this." Why not deal with it? Why not discover your holiness that allows you to be able to look at your brother and recognize his and make the gift of that clarity to him, so that he might discover that he doesn't have to behave in the way he's committed to behave, because you, for one, are no longer requiring it of him and are opening a door to a new avenue.

Now, I need to make something else clear. Not everyone has to Wake up in order for you to Wake up. You do not have to transform everyone's miserable mindsets before you can Wake up, before you can experience the Atonement.

I am Awake. The majority of the Brotherhood is Awake. Your Guides are Awake. The fact that you are not, doesn't mean that your Guide can't be Awake. Therefore, you, even though you're obligated to be the transforming Presence for everyone, do not have to wait until everyone Awakens before you can Wake up. Therefore, this is not an overwhelming task. But you do have to find one or more who has a willingness to be transformed—a willingness to learn, a desire to be free of being a miserable mortal. And you have to let that brother or those brothers and sisters be your reason for choosing to engage in the holy instant, so that you might be the Presence of the Christ that is the agent for change in that brother's or sister's life.

I've said before, that I do not look for those who are in the soundest, deepest sleep, and challenge their sleep by vigorously shaking them, trying to Wake them up. Because I will tell you, anyone who is deeply committed to sleep will use any distraction from it as a justification for going further into sleep. And so, I do not waste my time, and you cannot afford to waste your time on what will not work. And give your attention where there is willingness. Give your attention and your perseverance and your commitment to those who are rousing, and tell them the truth because you see it. And you will not react to their ignorance, because you know it isn't a threat to you and therefore, you don't need to react to it, but can be the clear presence of mind that is Peace and Love.

Think carefully how you would look upon the giver of this gift, for as you look on him, so will the gift itself appear to be.

If you look on your brother as a bastard, then no matter what he does you will see the effect of a bastard's mentality, even though that has been your definition which you have applied to him. And in your mean-spirited, small-mindedness, you block your capacity to be the Presence of the Christ Consciousness that recognizes your brother's divinity while he is not recognizing it. And your recognition assures you that you cannot be harmed by this Christed one. And you're giving your attention to the Christed one that he is, will reach him.

Again, be clear on this. It will register with him if he is already arousing himself. If he isn't, then you will be engaged in spiritual manipulation, high-minded folly, and you will suffer for it, because you are attempting willfully to do what you know ought to work. Of course, that is a poor use of the word "know," because it's pure imagination. You can dare to act when in the practice of the holy instant—you see and feel the revelation of what to do.

[Raj did not read this sentence: As he is seen as either the giver of guilt or of salvation, so will his offering be seen, and so received.] The crucified give pain because they are in pain.

So be careful not to correct a brother when you are one of the crucified who is in pain, because your help will be self-righteous and painful to your brother and will absolutely block any opportunity for transformation to occur.

But the redeemed give joy because they have been HEALED of pain.

You see? You want to get past the Obstacles to Peace so that you may be healed of pain and be redeemed, and as a result, give joy that your brother or sister will be blessed by. You see?

Everyone gives as he receives, but he must choose what it will BE that he receives.

Whew! Are you willing to receive crucifixion? Are you willing to listen to the voice for fear that whispers and speaks in your mind and distracts you into malicious thoughts and attitudes which hurt you? Is that what you're going to choose to receive? Or are you going to silence that by withdrawing your attention, and saying, "Father, Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? . . . what is the truth?"

Everyone gives as he receives, but he must choose what it will BE that he receives. And he will recognize his choice by what he gives, and what is given him.

And how often do you find that what you've given—in other words, after the fact—how much of the time do you find that what you've given has been sarcasm, even just in your mind as a mental response to someone else's behavior or words? How much of it is spontaneous criticism? How much of your day is spent in a bad attitude? That's more likely what you would call it.

But you will recognize what you've chosen to receive by what you give. And if you're giving criticism and negativity, you know the voice you've been listening to. And you can use that, and you must use that as the sign calling for [chuckling] a different way to look at this.

[You] will recognize his choice by what he gives, and what is given him. Nor is it given anything in hell or Heaven to interfere with his decision.

Whose decision? Your decision! Nothing is given anything in hell or Heaven to interfere with your decision as to the voice you are going to choose to listen to. Nothing can override that! You are in one hundred percent complete control.

I am telling you, you holy Sons and Daughters of God that you are divine. My voice, the words you're hearing are the truth, and they are the truth for you to receive and they are the truth for you to give to each other. The moment there is a willingness on the part of your brothers to receive, give it!

You came this far because the journey WAS your choice.

Well, if . . .

. . . You came this far because the journey WAS your choice . . .

. . . your brothers and sisters will go as far as they've gone because the journey was their choice. You can't choose for them. But you can recognize where they are and support them further, IF you are not listening to the voice for fear.

You came this far, your brothers and sisters came this far, because the journey was your choice, their choice.

And no-one undertakes to do what he believes is meaningless.

So you made this choice because you felt it was meaningful. And in that you lent your conviction and commitment to the journey. And that is important.

What you had faith in . . .

And in order to do this you had to have had faith in the Holy Spirit or the Father.

What you had faith in still is faithful, and watches over you in faith so gentle yet so strong that it would lift you far BEYOND the veil, . .

. . . the veil? The veil is constituted of the four Obstacles to Peace.

. . . it would lift you far BEYOND the veil, and place the Son of God . . .

. . . You . . .

. . . safely within the sure protection of his Father. Here is the only purpose that gives this world and the long journey through this world whatever meaning lies in them.

What does that mean . . . this world? This world, the Kingdom of Heaven that is colored by your misperceptions of it. So there is value found scattered among your misperceptions and the value there is what's real there that can inspire you beyond your misperceptions. And that's the only value they have.

But the Kingdom of Heaven that you're in the middle of, experiencing misperceptions of, that remains eternally constant.

Beyond this, . .

. . . transition point . . .

. . . they . . .

. . . the false perceptions mixed in with true experiences. The false perceptions . . .

. . . Beyond this, they ARE meaningless. You stand together, still without conviction they HAVE a purpose.

You see? You have a conviction that when you're looking out at the world and universe, you have a conviction that it's not the Kingdom of Heaven, and therefore, doesn't have purpose—Real purpose.

You stand together, still without conviction they HAVE a purpose. Yet it is given you to see this purpose in your holy Friend, and recognize it is your own.

Do you see what that means? It means that your capacity to experience the transfer value of realization is available to you in your relationship with your brother or sister—your holy friend whom you didn't think was holy and whom your friend didn't think he was holy. But in your willingness and commitment to find and confirm the divinity of each other, you provide the one single element that will allow the transfer value to register with you, wherein the world and universe registers with you as the Kingdom of Heaven and you are Home.

You can see from this how essential and important your relationship with your brother and sister is, and your relying upon each other to be that which lifts you out of the “human condition,” the misery, the garden of agony.

Value your brother no matter how awful you are determining him to be, and no matter how awful he is determining himself to be. And work diligently and with commitment with those brothers and sisters who are arousing themselves and are willing to receive. In this way, what you give . . . what is received, you get to keep. Their receipt of your gift confirms what is true of you. And the blessing is complete.

That's what it's all about.

I love you, you holy Sons and Daughters of God right now. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

July 5th 2015

—————oOo—————

THIS IS A ROUGH TRANSCRIPT.
THIS COPY IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good Afternoon. And welcome to everyone joining us on the Internet.

We have a new Chapter:

[Chapter Twenty]¹

The Promise of The Resurrection

And it begins with these words:

This is Palm Sunday, . .

Well, of course we're not reading this in sync with the real Palm Sunday. It was Palm Sunday when I was dictating this to Helen. But you have an interesting correlative circumstance occurring on your globe that renders this section that we're going to discuss this afternoon, and provides an opportunity to truly put into practice what we've been reading about overcoming the Obstacles to Peace, rendering what the Course teaches practical today.

This is Palm Sunday, the celebration of victory and the acceptance of the truth.

Now, you have a country on your globe that had a referendum today and they voted "No." They voted "not to agree." The country of course, is Greece. And they voted not to agree with the European Union. Greece is in financial distress—significant distress. But you know what? They wouldn't agree to abandon their integrity.

They voted. They chose to stand in an acknowledgement of their worth because the agreement they were invited to join in said, "you have lost your worth and therefore, you must be obedient to the rules that we set up for those who have lost their worth. And of course, the rules were established in order for those laying down the rules not to lose money. And that meant that the one significant element was left out, the element of Brotherhood . . . the element of Brotherhood.

Now, you all know of the parable of the shepherd whose flock was missing a member—one lost sheep.² And the shepherd left the ninety and nine of the flock and went looking for the one lost sheep in order to bring that one back into the fold so that wholeness was reestablished, so that the integrity of the flock was reestablished.

Of course the shepherd could have said, “Well . . . if that one had been paying attention, he wouldn’t have gotten lost, he wouldn’t have lost sight of the rest of the flock. Therefore, he deserves whatever happens. I’m not going to go back and find him.”

Well, you get the point. The point is, that there’s one part of the European Union that is in a bad situation—apparently lost its footing—apparently. Not truly through neglect, but through circumstances—circumstances governed by the almighty god of money.

Now, because they voted to stand in their integrity, even when everyone is claiming that they have lost it, that is their victory!

Again . . .

This is Palm Sunday, the celebration of victory and the acceptance of the truth. Let us not spend this holy week brooding on the crucifixion of God’s Son, but happily in the celebration of his release.

This coming week in Greece and in the European Union, it is a turning point—it is a point for deciding. And the decision, if it does not involve the overriding element of Brotherhood, if decision is not made for the purpose of bringing all of the lambs back into the fold, then there will be problems. But, that’s not the purpose of the holy week. That’s not the purpose of what has been set into motion by the celebration of victory by the willingness of the Greek people to acknowledge and stand firmly in integrity that they know they have, no matter what the circumstances are. And their demand to have the results of what happens in the coming week or weeks reflect that integrity rather than a lack of integrity.

That is victory. That is the Vision of holiness and the promise of Resurrection.

For Easter is the sign of peace, not pain.

And this week from Palm Sunday to Easter Sunday is often called, “Easter week.” And what I want to convey is that, correlatively speaking, the globe is in an Easter week right now. And the call for Brotherhood has been made . . . has been announced. And every single one of you everywhere, is called upon to recognize the Christ and the promise of this week and the Resurrection that is the result of abiding in one’s integrity and disagreeing with anything other than that.

It takes courage. Whether it’s a country making a decision, or whether it’s you standing up to a threat of a disease or accident or injury or a failing marriage, or any other circumstance that seems inevitably to call for or foretell of disaster, of negative consequences.

Greece has taken that stance. You, as brothers and sisters of everyone in Greece as well as everyone in the European Union, you are called upon to register your recognition of Brotherhood, instead of standing on mutually agreed upon principles that haven't arisen out of Love.

And so, I am talking about this today because what we happen to be reading tonight is pertinent to it and because it is a significant and urgent call for everyone to participate in this week and the circumstances in the European Union to look for the Christ, to see the Christ, to confirm the Christ, so that Resurrection is the inevitable outcome for everyone, not just Greece but for the European Union and for the rest of the world. Because I promise you, you're all in one boat and nothing can go on in Europe that doesn't affect you—that you have no part in.

And so let's practice abandoning the obstacles of peace by bringing into play the element of Brotherhood and taking your place in that Brotherhood actively by doing the two-step, by going into the Silence and by saying, "Father," or "Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? What is the Answer that illuminates the divine wholeness of everyone—that blesses everyone, puts no one at a disadvantage and requires no one to accept as a premise that they're at a disadvantage because of their poverty of wealth, or poverty of mind or poverty of faith."

Acknowledging poverty does not generate abundance. Recognizing that poverty exists and invalidating it is what promotes abundance, because there's no mutual agreement to bind one to something which isn't true.

A slain Christ has no meaning.

If I had been crucified and simply died, it would've had no meaning. If Greece is crucified and dies, it has no meaning for Greece or for the European Union or for any of the rest of you.

A slain Christ has no meaning.

So withdraw your attention from anything that would promote or substantiate good reason . . . ha-ha. . . for having a slain Christ, for Greece being abandoned and not brought back and kept in the flock.

A slain Christ has no meaning. But a RISEN Christ becomes the symbol of the Son of God's forgiveness on himself; . .

You know what? Today Greece became the symbol of the Son of God's forgiveness on Himself. They did not hold themselves to . . . (whew!) to an incorrect and destructive definition of themselves. In the abandonment of that . . . in the unwillingness to embrace it, they forgave themselves.

A slain Christ has no meaning. But a RISEN Christ becomes the symbol of the Son of God's forgiveness on himself; the sign he looks upon himself as healed and whole.

In other words, Greece, today said, “We are neither behind the point of perfection nor advancing toward it. We are at that point and we insist upon understanding ourselves therefrom and we insist upon everyone else understanding us therefrom and dealing with us on that basis.” You see?

The first sub-heading in this chapter is called:

Holy Week

It’s the week we’re in with a different Christ. But the same dynamics.

This week begins with palms . . .

. . . it began today in Greece’s decision. It’s the equivalent of the week beginning with palms. Those in Greece may not all feel that they are behaving victoriously. But they are.

This week begins with palms and ends with lilies, . .

. . . that’s the promise of this week for Greece and for the European Union. Because remember, that what blesses Greece blesses the European Union and strengthens it when all one-hundred of the sheep are in the flock, the flock is whole. It is not at a disadvantage, it is nothing less than what it was created to be.

Let no dark sign of crucifixion intervene between the journey and its purpose; . .

. . . the journey being, coming back into Jerusalem triumphantly . . .

. . . between the acceptance of the truth and its expression.

So, you, through the use of memory, can begin holy week remembering the crucifixion and not the Resurrection and feeling bad and rehearsing the steps leading up to the horrible act of crucifixion and all that everyone has agreed it means.

But . . .

Let no dark sign of crucifixion intervene between the journey and its purpose; between the acceptance of the truth and its expression.

As you go through this week, do not look at the news and assume the worst for Greece, or justify whatever negative might happen. Don’t do it! Watch how you are using your thoughts and see whether your thoughts lead to the crucifixion of the Son of God or the “hundredth sheep.”

This week we celebrate life, not death.

That is what this week is about in Europe. It’s a week of celebrating life because life has been set into motion by the strength and courage of the Greek people who have said, “We have integrity and we're acknowledging it and we're standing with it and we require everyone else to deal with us in light of our integrity as we resolve the problem!"

This week we celebrate life, not death. And we honor the perfect purity of the Son of God, and not his sins.

And of course, every one of your brothers and sisters is the Son of God. And every brother and sister who is in Greece is your Brother and Sister whose Father is God, whose divinity is equal. And if one is at a disadvantage, then another who seems to be at great advantage will naturally support the one that is apparently at a disadvantage and get rid of the disadvantage and demonstrate Brotherhood. That's what this is about.

Offer each other the gift of lilies, not the crown of thorns; . .

You see? Greece was offered a crown of thorns and they said, "No thank you. There is another way to look at this, and we want everyone to take advantage of the opportunity to look at it a different way. Take away the thorns. We don't accept the offer."

Offer each other the gift of lilies, not the crown of thorns; the gift of love and not the "gift" . . .

. . . which is no gift . . .

. . . of fear. You stand beside each other, thorns in one hand and lilies in the other, uncertain which to give.

Mind you, this applies equally to those in Greece, but it also applies equally to those in the European Union.

You stand beside each other, thorns in one hand and lilies in the other, . .

So you say, "Wow, I get it! I need to give lilies to those in Greece." But then part of you will say, "Well then, I must offer the gift of thorns to the European Union, because someone's wrong and someone has to pay for it . . . the penalty that is." So you must make sure that you're not gifting thorns to any of the members of the European Union, whether it's the one lost member or the other ninety and nine.

Join now with me and throw away the thorns, offering the lilies to replace them.

These words so specifically address what needs to be addressed this week on your Globe, that I am very grateful to be able to share it.

This Easter, . .

. . . this Easter week, which will end in Resurrection, . .

. . . I would have the gift of your forgiveness offered by you to me, . .

. . . and likewise, this Easter, your brothers and sisters in Greece and in the European Union, would have the gift of your forgiveness offered by you to them. That's the call! And that is why I am bringing it up.

. . . I would have the gift of your forgiveness offered by you to me, and returned by me to you.

Your brothers in the European Union would like your forgiveness offered to them, so that they might return it to you, and so that they might return it to each other and be blessed through the events that transpire, rather than hurt and creating that which calls for further love and correction and a more significant practice of Brotherhood.

We CANNOT be united in crucifixion and in death.

And obviously the European Union and Greece cannot be united in penalty and in the breakup of the Union.

Nor can the resurrection be complete till your forgiveness rests on Christ along with mine.

Your forgiveness needs to rest upon whatever fault you might feel the Greeks engaged in, or whatever fault the European Union might be engaged in.

. . . the resurrection [cannot] be complete till your forgiveness rests on Christ along with mine. A week is short, and yet this holy week . . .

. . . literally, the next seven days in July in the year 2015.

. . . this holy week is the symbol of the whole journey the Son of God has undertaken.

Undertaken today by the vote they made that honored themselves and their integrity.

He started with the sign of victory, . . .

. . . meaning Jesus, me. But Greece started with the . . .

the sign of victory, the promise of the resurrection, already given him.

Given him because it abided in the recognition of worth that gave them the strength to say, "No!"

Let him not wander into the temptation of crucifixion, and delay him there.

[Chuckling] And I would say, "Don't push him" . . .

. . . into the temptation of crucifixion, and delay him there.

Join your brother in his recognition of his integrity. Acknowledge it, and confirm it and stand shoulder to shoulder, or mind to mind, if I can put it that way, confirming his integrity because you see yours embodied in his.

Help him to go in peace beyond it, . . .

. . . the temptation of crucifixion. They need support. And also those governing the European Union need support in having the Vision that resolves the situation while blessing all of the participants, not just the few at the expense of one.

Help him to go in peace beyond it, [the temptation of crucifixion] with the light of his own innocence lighting his way to his redemption and release.

The light of his own innocence shown more brightly today because of the commitment with which the Greek people declared it.

Hold him not back with thorns and nails, . . .

Don't threaten him. Don't frighten him. Don't do things to get him to change his mind and abandon his recognition of his integrity just so that financial stability for the rich can be had. Financial stability can be had without threatening anyone in the realm of economics, although it might cost some part of their wealth, in order to make the Brotherhood, in order to make the Union whole. But it will only make it whole if it is an expression of Love.

Those governing the European Union need support in being able to feel the love that will arise to promote the correction that blesses all alike. And that's your task to support. That's your part in the Brotherhood.

Hold him not back with thorns and nails, when his redemption is so near.

No, hell, I know . . . there are many who say, "Oh, there redemption isn't near. They're so far down the hole they will probably never get out of it!" Well, what a prophecy. What a thing to put in the air to influence and affect the minds of others and keep them from realizing that inspiration is at the threshold of their mind—the inspiration necessary to provide answers that bless everyone and release everyone from the experience of austerity.

Hold him not back with thorns and nails, when his redemption is so near. But let the whiteness of your shining gift of lilies speed him on his way to . . .

. . . what? . . .

. . . to resurrection.

But remember, what you give you get to keep. What the European Union gives to Greece it gets to keep. If they give a requirement of austerity they get to keep austerity. If they give the gift of Love and of answers that quickly resolve the problem, the European Union and those in it are relieved of the penalties of the previous austerity. They get to keep it too. They get to have it too.

If you see glimpses of the face of Christ behind the veil, looking between the snow white petals of the lilies you have received and given as your gift, . .

. . . what? . .

. . . you will behold each other's face and RECOGNIZE it.

You'll see the Christ in them, they'll see the Christ in you and you will both recognize your Brotherhood as Christ. You, the Greeks, the European Union, you're all part of the whole flock.

I was a stranger and you took me in, not knowing who I was.

You see? Many are looking at Greece and saying, "We don't know you! [Chuckling] You're certainly not the Christ, are you . . . you're a poor example of humanity. You can't possibly be the Sons and Daughters of God. I don't recognize you. If you're the Son or Daughter of God [chuckling] I don't recognize you!"

Well, get busy then in your own head, in your own mind and desire, through the practice of the holy instant, to know what the truth is here, so that you might experience the Son of God there, the Christ there, so that you recognize amongst the lilies, your Brother the Christ, which confirms your Christhood and all are blessed.

I was a stranger and you took me in, not knowing who I was. Yet for your gift of lilies you WILL know. In your forgiveness of this stranger, . .

. . . this . . . uh-h . . . strange group in Greece.

In your forgiveness of this stranger, alien to you and yet your ancient Friend, lie his release and your redemption with him.

Greece has not always been in a state of lack. And Greece has been an ancient Friend to many. It is not unreasonable to share the ancient Friendship now, today, with Greece, with your Brothers and Sisters there.

The time of Easter is a time of joy, and not of mourning.

So don't make it a time of mourning. Don't turn this coming week into a process of demoralization and decay of structures of Brotherhood that have existed for time immemorial.

Look on your risen Friend, . .

. . . the Christ that the Holy Spirit has helped you see right there where there was a tendency to say, "I don't know you. I'm not going to come and find you and bring you back into the fold."

Look on your risen Friend, and celebrate his holiness along with me. For Easter is the time of YOUR salvation, along with mine.

You celebrate Easter at a particular time of the year. But this is Easter week. And next week is Easter week. Today is Easter day and every day is Easter day. Every day is the day to be willing to silence human will and the negative definitions that you apply to yourself, so that you might in the silence turn your attention away from your pet theories to the Father or to the Holy Spirit to gather your information from a more reliable Source—One whose information, for lack of better words, is transformational, healing and redeeming, bringing you and your brothers and sisters back into the true apprehension of who and what you all Are.

You need the support you will get by means of the support you give to the people of Greece and those running the European Union. The support you give to them of their capacity to recognize truth because they care to Love while they're looking for the truth, and not condemn.

It's a wonderful week, and I am encouraging every single one of you whose hearing my voice to use this week, to use every day as an opportunity to consciously embrace the movement of Easter week as it is enfolding toward resurrection in the European Union and therefore in your world. I of course, will be with you every step of the way.

I love you very much and I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

July 13th 2015

—————oOo—————

THIS IS A ROUGH DRAFT
AND IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM.

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I wonder, if we really understand the meaning of the word, "forgiveness?"

We've just been reading about and considering the Obstacles to Peace. And the reason we've been considering them is because peace is the threshold of Awakening. Peace is the threshold of Atonement. Peace is the threshold of Awakening from the dream—coming back into our right Mind, our divine Sanity.

The Fourth Obstacle was The Fear of God. And part and parcel of overcoming the fear of God, is the experience of recognizing our divinity. In overcoming the fear of God and being willing to be present with Him, our divinity as His Sons and Daughters registers with us. We are able to remember who we Are because the fear of God is gone. The fear of the retribution of a "wrathful" God is gone, and in the peace, the Father's Love can register with us.

In fact, as the parable of *The Prodigal Son*¹ states very clearly, once the Prodigal begins to return Home, the Father starts out to meet him while he's still a long way off.

The Father's Love is always embracing every single one of you—each one of us. And when we are [abandoning] the Obstacles to Peace that we have created in our attempts to be independent, that Love begins to register with us and embrace us—not just as an idea, but as an experience. And that's the key thing, an experience . . . what I have referred to as "Knowing" because it's a deep thoughtless conviction—meaning that it is not a conviction that has been arrived at through an intellectual process of reasoning. It's an experience from the very depths of one's Being as to the Truth of Him.

Now, in that realization that you are the Son or Daughter of God, you also realize that this is true of everyone—all of your Brothers and Sisters.

And that is Forgiveness!

Now, it's very important to understand that you do not have to earn forgiveness. You do not have to deserve forgiveness. You cannot make yourself be forgiven. It is a Gift. It's your Birthright to not be confused and labor under the structures of the confusion.

It's important to understand this because no matter what you're suffering from, no matter how specifically and intellectually and logically you can find reasons for your misery [which] amount to being your fault and therefore [make] you unworthy of forgiveness, forgiveness is still your Birthright!

Forgiveness is there for you to be blessed by. And the Father does not [let] all of your mean-spirited, intellectual processes, by which you have convicted yourself, get in His way of Loving you as His beloved Son or Daughter in whom He is well-pleased, and then thereby, your experiencing healing.

To employ or imagine that there are reasons that are reasonable for your misery, and that therefore, your misery is justifiable, stands in the way of your ability to look at the Father without fear and be blessed by His gentle loving gaze and embrace. And yet It's available and it is your Birthright to be experiencing It.

Now, in the parable of The Prodigal Son, the prodigal was met, . . . not after he arrived at Home, but he was met along the way, and he was given—he was gifted—with fine clothing. He was gifted with the acknowledgement of his excellence as the Son of his Father, whose inheritance was intact.

Now, we spoke last week about the shepherd going out and finding the one lost sheep, leaving the ninety-nine so as to bring the lost one back into the fold. The parable makes no suggestion that upon finding the lost sheep, the shepherd said, by his actions, “you have caused me a great deal of difficulty and we are going back to the flock, and we are going to go back by the most difficult way that I can find, so that you will find no pleasure at all in this adventure. And, in fact, on the way back, you will have to carry me part of the way, especially in the most difficult spots, so that you never forget to not do this again!”

No, it doesn't say that at all, because that's not the motive or the attitude of the shepherd. The call is for the flock to be whole. And the one lost sheep does not have to suffer through trials in order to become deserving of being with the flock again—in order to experience wholeness again.

The motive of the shepherd is love . . . wholeness . . . completion . . . completeness.

Now when you overcome your fear of God and are willing to approach Him, or you're willing to say, “Father, tell me the truth about things,” and you are genuinely interested and you are genuinely attentive, the Answer is given. It flows and you receive it. And when you receive it, your perspective changes. And as your perspective changes, your world and your brothers and sisters are blessed by the new perspective.

Forgiveness occurs. And that's the call.

Now, going into the book. New subject:

Thorns and Lilies²

Or The Gift of Lilies, depending upon the edition you're reading from. And it says:

Look upon all the trinkets made to hang upon the body, or to cover it, or for its use. See all the useless things made for its eyes to see. Think on the many offerings made for its pleasure, and remember all these were made to make seem lovely what you hate.

When you don't know that you are the holy Son or Daughter of God, you believe that you are a body. And you treat yourself as though you're a body and you treat your brothers and sisters as though they are bodies. And that is the way you control each other. That is the way you manipulate approximations of harmony. And the very thing that you are afraid can take away your life, becomes the bottom line, we'll say, the governing factor of everything that happens.

Now, when you read this:

Look upon all the trinkets made to hang upon the body, . .

I'm sure you think of jewelry and clothing, makeup, hairstyles, mustaches, beards. But I want to bring out something else that you adorn the body with or put on it, and that is obligation. You put the weight of obligation upon your shoulders and upon the shoulders of your brothers and sisters. And of course, if you're half-way smart, you find a way to do it that's palatable and that strokes the other person so that they feel honored to carry the burden or to be obedient to you or behave the way you like that doesn't stretch you or burden you.

You have mutual agreements that you abide by and you hold each other to. And you place them on these bodies that you think you are and that you think others are.

Look upon all the trinkets . . .

. . . look upon all the obligations. Look upon all of the guilt-producing techniques that you can lay upon a brother—a body—someone who is certainly not the holy Son or Daughter of God and therefore, must be the result of a “big bang” and “physical evolution,” who is most definitely “a body.” You see?

[So] Look upon all [these things] made to hang upon the body, or to cover it, or for its use.

And I would say, it's beneficent or mean-spirited use.

See all the useless things . . .

. . . all the things that have nothing to do with forgiveness.

See all the useless things made for its eyes to see.

. . . and believe and bow down to, and suffer from, and put up with.

Think on the many offerings made for its pleasure, and remember all these were made to make seem lovely what you hate.

Oh, yeah, a happy society is one that isn't killing itself. Creatures like mice or rabbits or cows that move around on the surface of a globe called, "earth" in the solar system—just one of the creatures.

What a miserable ignorance of that which is a holy Son or Daughter of God. What an unforgiving and therefore, unforgiven experience.

Would you employ this hated thing to draw your brother to you, and to attract his body's eyes?

Learn . . .

. . . learn . . .

. . . you but offer him a crown of thorns, not recognizing it for what it is, and trying to justify your own interpretation of its value by his acceptance. Yet still the gift proclaims his worthlessness to you, as his acceptance and delight acknowledges the lack of value he places on himself.

Now, it's easy to apply this to your immediate experience and those around you, but we were talking last time about something going on, on your globe—Greece and its relationship with the European Union.

Now, I referred to this past week as the equivalent of an Easter Week. We still haven't had the Resurrection. We still have the gifts that we've just talked about.

Learn you but offer him . . .

. . . learn that it, Greece, was offered a crown of thorns not recognizing it for what it is. And trying to justify your own interpretation of its value—the gift of the structures, of cost and paying for your sins, your mistakes—like the lost sheep being given a rugged climb and walk back home to the flock.

Yet still the gift proclaims his worthlessness to you, . .

. . . the gift of all of these demands, all of this absence of forgiveness proclaims Greece's worthlessness to you—to the European Union . . .

. . . as his acceptance . . .

. . . and in this case, not delight . . .

... acknowledges the lack of value he ...

... it ...

... places on himself.

Itself. That will tell you, that the integrity of Greece—the integrity of the Greek people—is still intact and is still felt. But they're faced with something every single one of you are faced with, and that is the fear of being on the outside of the group.

What are you willing to sacrifice to not break the mutual agreements that seem to give you a modicum of peace?

How many of you are unwilling to shake things up?

How many of you tell your friends of your valuing of A Course in Miracles?

How many of you open your mouth up and share it with those whom you think might not find it of value?

How many of you are willing to say, "I am the holy Son or Daughter of God?"

How many of you keep your mouth shut in order to keep peace in the group?

How many of you are sacrificing your integrity for the sake of the family or the relationship or your place in the community?

How many of you are willing to abandon your integrity—put it on the back shelf and not look at it too strongly because if you do it will make you feel miserable because you are violating yourself and you can feel it?

This is the practicality of A Course in Miracles ... learning this.

Continuing ...

Gifts are not made through bodies, if they be truly given and received. For bodies ...

... in and of themselves ...

... can neither offer nor accept; hold out nor take. Only the mind can value, and only the mind decides on what it would receive and give. And every gift it offers depends on what it WANTS. It will adorn its chosen home ...

... the body ...

. . . most carefully, making it ready to receive the gifts it wants by offering them to those who come unto its chosen home, or those it would attract to it. And there they will exchange their gifts, offering and receiving what their minds judge to be worthy of them.

And there's just been a number of days of—a summit meeting—you might say, in which gifts were exchanged all for the purpose of achieving what the ones making the gift wants.

Each gift is an evaluation of the receiver and the GIVER. No-one but sees his chosen home an altar to himself.

In other words, everyone sees his chosen home as an altar to himself. And in this frame of mind, that “himself” is a body—an effect of nature, of evolution.

No-one but seeks to draw to it the worshippers of what he placed upon it, making it worthy of their devotion.

And as you know, very often, because integrity isn't recognized and stood by, as the saying says, “the majority rules.”

And each has set a light upon his altar, . .

. . . the altar to himself . . .

. . . that they may see what he has placed upon it, and take it for their own.

In other words, agree . . . AGREE.

Here is the value that you lay upon your brother and on yourself. Here is your gift to BOTH; your judgment on the Son of God for what he is. Forget not that it is your Saviour to whom the gift is offered.

The gift that Greece gives to the European Union is given to its Savior. But the gift given by the members of the European Union to Greece is given to their Savior. But of course, when the altar is an altar to oneself, there is no Savior and there is no consideration of another. And there is therefore, no love. There is therefore, no Brotherhood.

This is very important.

Offer him thorns and YOU are crucified. Offer him lilies and it is YOURSELF you free.

I have great need for lilies, for the Son of God has not forgiven me.

The Sons of God who still think they're mortals, who still think they're bodies, who still think they have to manipulate each other through mutual agreement—through thorns. And . . .

. . . can I offer him . . .

. . . the one who hasn't forgiven me . . .

. . . can I offer him forgiveness, when he offers thorns to me? For he who offers thorns to anyone is against me still, and who is whole without him? Be you his friend for me, that I may be forgiven, and you may look upon the Son of God as whole.

You see? You see the level of involvement, the level of Brotherhood?

Be you his friend for me, . .

. . . you can't do that in your little ivory tower with all of your spiritual thoughts, private. And A Course in Miracles does not teach uninvolvedness.

Be you his friend for me, that I may be forgiven, . .

. . . Why? Why would I be forgiven? Because if you abandon your fear of God and remember, rediscover, we'll say, as an experience that you are a holy Son or Daughter of God, you, as I've said before, immediately Know that this is the truth about your Brother and Sister—not as an intellectual thing but as an experiential thing. Now you Know your Brother in a way you've never known him before.

Be you his friend for me, that I may be forgiven, . .

When you have forgiven your Brother by your recognition of his holiness, he can recognize it. And when he recognizes it, he will Know you and he will Know me and I will be forgiven.

. . . and you may look upon the Son of God as whole. But look you first upon the altar in your chosen home, and see what you have laid upon it to offer me.

And this is the bottom line, this is the crux, this is where the transformation comes into play, because, for lack of better words, this is where the work is done. This is where the change occurs. This is where learning happens when you look within to what you're laying upon the altar. Right now the altar is an altar to you. And you put all sorts of trinkets on it and all the things that you would have another see so that they might have the right concept about you. And you act out all of those trinkets and all of those things you value.

Now, I'm going to do something I've never done before, and that is, that I'm going to go to a lesson in the Workbook. It's Lesson 191.³ This lesson has as its primary thought, "I am the holy Son of God Himself." Why am I reading this? Because this is what needs to be on your Altar. This is the Gift you need to be able to give in order for forgiveness to occur.

It's so easy to think that, "Oh, this is going on in Europe. And there are other things going on in the Middle East. And it's amazing, isn't it, just how much learning they must all be going through. And it's very entertaining and sometimes a little scary to see how awkwardly they're doing it. But you know what? I know the Holy Spirit will turn all of it to their advantage." Such supercilious, haughtiness and arrogance. And what a misunderstanding, because there isn't anyone who is not your brother or your sister, there isn't anyone that you do not make a gift to all the time, because you are not separate and you are not able to live independent lives that don't affect each other.

Now, you could say to me, "Well, I have enough brothers and sisters right here in my neighborhood, from my family, to actual neighbors, to the bankers, you know, to the money lenders, to the grocery store. I have enough to deal with right here." Well you know what? You're not called upon to like, reach out and engage with each individual separately. No, the gift of forgiveness happens on the Altar right in the middle of you.

So there is something to be done. You can't imagine that this stuff is going on over there with them and so you must be a Brother, you must recognize your place in the Family or the Brotherhood of Man and consciously make your gift instead of unconsciously making it. And what is the gift you make, "Well, that's their problem over there let them take care of it. They must take care of it. It's between them and their God." That's the gift you're making. It's the gift of separation, it's the gift of isolation and it is absolutely inconsistent with everything the Course teaches. And you can't afford to justify it by means of things you've chosen to interpret strangely from the Course.

Lesson 191:
"I am the holy Son of God Himself."

Mind you, this is the Gift that needs to be on your Altar. Remember, that although you can read this and interpret it to mean that it is a recognition you have in the privacy of your mind at the Altar in the middle of your Being, that has nothing to do with anyone else.

How do you arrive at the awareness, the experience of being the holy Son of God yourself? By overcoming your fear of God—the last Obstacle to Peace—and realizing, as I've said, that you are the holy Son or Daughter of God. So it's that which is on your Altar and, as I said, inseparable from that realization, simultaneous with that experience is the experience that it's the truth about every one of your fellowmen—your brothers and sisters. Their holiness will not confound you but it will astound you. It will be whelming, not overwhelming. It will be a significant experience of the sort you've not had for a very long time.

So here's this Gift: Your realization that you're the Son or Daughter of God that is the simultaneous realization that your Brother and Sister are the holy Sons and Daughters of God. It's not a private recognition.

Beginning Lesson 191:

Here is your declaration of release from bondage of the world. And here as well . . .

. . . what?

. . . is all the world released. You do not see what you have done by giving to the world the role of jailer to the Son of God. What could it be but vicious and afraid, fearful of shadows, punitive and wild, lacking all reason, blind, insane [and sad]?

That's the state of the Son or Daughter of God who is jailed by the world. But here's the key question:

What have you done that this should be your world? What have you done that this is what you see?

Oh, is it looking for guilt? Is it about to make you the guilty one? No. It's simply saying, take a look at the mechanics of this process:

What have you done that this should be your world? What have you done that this is what you see?

Well, here's the simple answer:

Deny your own Identity, . .

. . . you holy Son or Daughter of God.

Deny your own Identity, and this is what remains.

You see? It's simple. There's no one who's guilty. But when you deny your Identity, all that's left is an experience of the dissonance of the miserable unreality of the idea.

You look on chaos and proclaim it is yourself. There is no sight that fails to witness this to you.

Look at this again:

You look on chaos and proclaim it [as] yourself.

The result is:

There is no sight that fails to witness this to you.

Your perception governs absolutely what you're seeing, because of what you have on the Altar and what the gift is that you're giving, which isn't one of forgiveness.

There is no sound that does not speak of frailty within you and without; no breath you draw that does not seem to bring you nearer death; no hope you hold but will dissolve in tears.

Without an awareness that you're the holy Son or Daughter of God, this is the kind of existence you experience. Without being able to recognize the Kingdom of Heaven is where you are, you will see what you believe It is. And because there is no inspiration of Love and of your divinity in your perception, the Kingdom of Heaven is all of these things.

There is no sight that fails to witness [chaos] to you. There is no sound that does not speak of frailty within you and without; no breath you draw that does not seem to bring you nearer death; no hope you hold but will dissolve in tears.

It's miserable! And yet it's very easy to become addicted to the preoccupation with these things and bury yourself deeper in forgetfulness so that you do not bring to the Altar in the middle of you the answer, which is the realization, "I am the holy Son of God."

Deny your own Identity, and you will not escape the madness which induced this weird, unnatural and ghostly thought [which] mocks creation and [which] laughs at God.

Every single concept, every single misperception you embrace about the world that says, "It has nothing to do with God, it's just a physical universe." You're looking at Creation and defining it with those meanings, and it mocks God, because it's a denial of what is actually in front of you, which is God appearing, called "Creation," blessed by the Love that God Is and the indivisibility that God Is which precludes the possibility of conflict of any sort.

Deny your own Identity, and you assail the universe alone, without a friend, a tiny particle of dust against the legions of your enemies.

And you see enemies. Because on your Altar there is not a recognition or an acceptance or a consideration of the idea that you are a holy Son or Daughter of God. And therefore, you do not extend it! Forgiveness doesn't occur. What does that mean—forgiveness doesn't occur? Well, something happens. And if forgiveness isn't occurring, the something else that happens—that is happening—is the accusation of guilt. There is no void.

Deny your own Identity, and look on evil, sin and death, . .

. . . you're going to look on something. You're looking, you're going to see something.

. . . and watch despair snatch from your fingers every scrap of hope, leaving you nothing but the wish to die.

Yet what is it . . .

Listen to this:

Yet what is it except a game . . .

. . . a game that silly children might play.

Yet what is it except a game you play in which Identity can be denied?

It's preposterous! All of this is nothing more than the, I will say, experiential effect of playing a ridiculous meaningless game in which Identity can be denied. It's ridiculous because . . . continuing . . .

You are as God created you. All else but this one thing is folly to believe.

You know, there's almost not a single time we get together that I do not share with you, confront you, encourage you to recognize and believe that you are right now the holy Son or Daughter of God and that you never stopped being It. That's what's on my Altar. And that's what I offer to you. And you could call it forgiveness, because you don't believe what I'm saying. And there is a mindset that could say, you are guilty of not believing what I'm saying, you're guilty of not believing the truth and therefore, there is a penalty that you ought to pay and must pay. It isn't true.

Now are you the Sons and Daughters of God. You don't have to earn It, you don't have to grow into It, you don't have to refine yourself from something less to something more. And the Gift I make is the constant reminder of that and it's the Gift that you need to make to your brothers and sisters.

You are as God created you. All else but this one thing is folly to believe. In this one thought is [everything] set free. In this one truth are all illusions gone. In this one fact is sinlessness proclaimed to be forever part of everything, the central core of its existence and its guarantee of immortality.

Is that something that can't be had until there's been a difficult trek back Home where you pay for having lost your way?

You are as God created you.

Such a simple thing.

In this one thought is [everything] set free.

In that Gift that you make, the difficult trek, the laborious process of refining your soul vanishes, instantaneously! It doesn't wait upon time. It doesn't wait upon process unless you imagine time and process into the event. And then you will act as though time and process is occurring, when it isn't [chuckling].

Forgiveness is called for still in Europe and in Greece. Love, family—not money—needs to govern the decisions and the actions. The participants may not be looking at themselves and recognizing that, "I am the holy Son of God Himself," but you can. And that Gift in that one thought, is everything set free.

Now I'm not going to read all of Lesson 191, but I'm going to invite you all to do so on your own.

Jumping a little bit I will read something else:

You who perceive yourself as weak and frail, with futile hopes and devastated dreams, born but to die, to weep and suffer pain, hear this: All power is given unto you in earth and Heaven. There is nothing that you cannot do. You play the game of death, of being helpless, pitifully tied to dissolution in a world which shows no mercy to you. Yet when you accord it mercy, will its mercy shine on you.

Then let the Son of God . . .

. . . meaning, the divine one that you Are . . .

. . . awaken from his sleep, and opening his holy eyes, return again to bless the world he made.

Bless the world he made by letting it be replaced with the clarity of what it is as the Kingdom of Heaven.

In error it began, but it will end in the reflection of his holiness.

Forgiveness . . . the Gift you make that transforms the world, is not something you do to the world. It's something you do quietly in the withinness of you, where you abandon the fear of God and you say, "Father, what is the truth here?" and let the Father fill you with His Perspective, revealing to you your divinity and your brother's as well.

The details of what is going on in Europe and Greece are not relevant factors to be used to govern how you feel about things. Who you divinely are and who every member of Greece and the European Union—the recognition of what you all Are—is the only pertinent thing, which, if you will dare to embrace, will cause spontaneous realization to occur of what truly blesses everyone.

And then I invite you to be the best brother and sister you can possibly be, you holy Sons and Daughters of God.

I love you very much and I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

July 21st 2015

—————oOo—————

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I'm going to back up to the beginning of the paragraph for context:

I have great need for lilies, for the Son of God¹ . . .

. . . meaning those of you who are not Awake, . . .

. . . has not forgiven me. And can I offer him forgiveness, when he offers thorns to me?

Now, of course I can offer forgiveness, but if you or anyone else offer thorns to me, you are in an aggressive expressive position, not a quiet receptive attitude. And so what I offer, you will not receive or hear.

Again:

And can I offer him forgiveness, when he offers thorns to me? For he who offers thorns to anyone is against me still, and who is whole without him?

I can't just stand there, you can't just stand there and let someone else stand in a state of defiance without recognizing that there is a call for correction that needs to be implemented. And, of course, the implementation is going to be a matter of education, isn't it—that which promotes a shift of perception out of confusion into clarity?

Be you his friend for me, that I may be forgiven, and you may look upon the Son of God . . .

. . . your brother, who is in a defiant state . . .

. . . as whole. But look you first upon the altar in your chosen home, and see what you have laid upon it to offer me. If it be thorns whose points gleam sharply in a blood-red light, the body is your chosen home, and it is separation that you offer me.

Now, I'm going to take this in a direction that the Text will not go, because it's important to understand that those words . . .

. . . whose points gleam sharply in a blood-red light, . . .

. . . are not overly dramatic, are not said for an impression.

When you got a divorce from your Father, when you said, along with a brother or sister, “Father, I’d rather see it my way.” “I’d rather do it my way.” “We would rather define everything ourselves,” you not only separated yourself conceptually from your Source which caused you to feel unexpectedly minus a parent—in other words, you found yourself in a state of orphanhood as an experience, even though it was totally imaginative—when that happened, this brother or sister whom you got the divorce from the Father with, became untrustworthy because in your state of orphanhood there was no grounded stability present.

Everything was dangerous, everything was questionable. And although the two of you—and others as they came along—made up definitions yourself and worked “together” . . . apparently . . . there was always present an absence of trust: “What will he do?” “What will she do next?” “Well, he or she is just a product of their psychological development as they grew. And each one is different and no one is predictable. And from my experience, I have learned that sometimes the unpredictable behavior is harmful—is hurtful. And so I do not trust my brother, I do not trust my sister, even though I express deep love by giving them the extreme benefit of the doubt, even though it is not a total benefit of the doubt.”

Oh-h . . . but you see, that’s an approximation of love, that’s an approximation of trust, that’s an approximation of respect, because it’s not total. And so, whether you’ve thought about it this way or not, the distrust that each of you has [of] your brothers and sisters,—with all of Mankind—is a grievance. A grievance that you are constantly holding. For the most part, you can rise above it and not be moved by it particularly, until an incident of some sort or another occurs. But pay attention. When the grievance comes to the surface, you are most unkind. The thorns, the jabs, the aggressive mean-spiritedness are . . .

. . . points that gleam sharply in a blood-red light . . .

. . . in an awful light . . . in an unlovely light—an extremely unlovely light. There is nothing [beneficent] about the attitude that is expressed as a result of your grievance.

Now, we’ve been reading about the Obstacles to Peace and how to overcome them, so that you are experiencing your peace instead of grievance, instead of distrust, instead of fear. And the fact is, that if you are not experiencing your peace, you are in a state of ignorance. You are experiencing something invalid.

But when you—when anyone—experiences a grievance, it is something that is quite seductive. It is something that is quite compelling. It’s something quite mesmerizing. And it causes you to stand in emotional agreement—turning up the volume, as it were—instead of recognizing that this is an invalid experience that doesn’t express your Birthright or your integrity, and does not constitute any kind of respect for the integrity of the brothers or sisters who are being the recipient . . . uh-h-h . . . of these gleaming points in a blood-red light.

Now, each of you does this because you are not experiencing your invulnerability . . . which, of course, has nothing to do with your brothers or sisters. It has nothing to do with any of the ones you hold a grievance against. It has to do only with the fact that at one point, you said, “Father, I’d rather determine what things are my way.” “I’d rather define everything myself.” And you began to ignore your Father—your Source. You separated yourself from It. That is the only thing that needs to be corrected—not your brothers, sisters, or circumstances.

Now, I said:

. . . look . . . first upon the altar in your chosen home, and see what you have laid upon it to offer me.

And I promise you that any time you are offering thorns—grievances expressed toward a brother—you cannot say you love me but you’re having a problem with your brother—[that the two of us] are different. If you are expressing [grievances], if you indulge in them, if you’re not bothered by them, then you are not joined with the Father. And the fourth Obstacle to Peace is still functioning, is still determining your experience and your perceptions. It’s that simple. And so you cannot be loving me any more than the brother that you feel you have an obvious reason for holding a grievance against.

So, the answer is not changing your brother to give you your peace, even though your brother may need to be changed. What needs to happen is: You need to abandon your fear of the Father, the Fourth Obstacle, so that you might, in your surrendering of your will, feel the Father’s Will in you as You and experience the Love that experientially illuminates to you that you must indeed, be nothing less than the holy Son or Daughter of God.

And as I said, that’s the threshold of the second part of the realization. And that is, that your brother, your sister, is likewise the holy Son or Daughter of God for exactly the same reason you Are, . . . and your perception of your brother or sister shifts. When it shifts, and there is correction called for in your brothers’ experience, you will be able to express it, . . . you will be able to respond in a way that promotes that realization rather than aggravates his grievance. And this is very important.

Now, I’m going to continue with the thread as it’s unfolding in the Course:

Be you his friend for me, that I may be forgiven, and you may look upon the Son of God as whole. But look you first upon the altar in your chosen home, and see what you have laid upon it to offer me. If it be thorns whose points gleam sharply in a blood-red light, the body is your chosen home, . . .

. . . you’re identifying yourself as “a body” . . .

. . . and it is separation that you offer me. And yet the thorns are gone.

And yet the thorns are gone? What does that mean?

Well, you must remember that I was sharing this in a context with Helen. And there's a continuity here that has, you might say, been interrupted by the introduction of a new chapter heading that occurs right in the middle of the flow, and makes it seem as though we have finished about the Obstacles to Peace and the result of overcoming and abandoning them. And it's not true.

And so, when it says . . .

. . . If it be thorns whose points gleam sharply in a blood-red light, the body is your chosen home, and it is separation that you offer me. And yet the thorns are gone . . .

. . . it means that the thorns are gone because you have abandoned all four Obstacles to Peace.

We're continuing on with the movement, because when you overcome and abandon the four Obstacles to Peace, there's more. There's now the experience of being able to relate to your brothers and sisters with the Knowing of their divinity—no matter how they are seeing themselves and, as I said, when you are able to see it because there is no other way to see a brother or sister of someone who is the holy Son or Daughter of God—meaning you. If you are [the holy Son or Daughter of God] and you are feeling it, then you, as I said, immediately feel it about your brothers and sisters. And so there will be a process of education that occurs—a process of correction where brothers and sisters are still reluctant to abandon their fear of God. But you [will] make it easier. You [will] facilitate it for your brothers and sisters.

And so it says:

And yet the thorns are gone.

They're gone because you made the shift.

Look you still closer at them now, and you will see your altar is no longer what it was.

Well, what was it before? Well, it had all these trinkets on it, didn't it? All these tools that you used for manipulation in order to get what you valued and make other people value what you value so that you could become something more than this orphan that you feel like.

So, once you've overcome the Fourth Obstacle, the altar changes. It no longer has these trinkets on it. No. What it has on it is the gift of your realization: "I am the holy Son of God." "I am the holy Daughter of God." That's the only thing left on it. You see?

Now . . .

You look still with the body's eyes, and they CAN see but thorns. Yet you have asked for and received ANOTHER sight. Those who accept the Holy Spirit's purpose as their own share also His vision.

And this makes even more sense when you remember that the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind.

Those who accept the Holy Spirit's purpose . . .

. . . which obviously, has to be each one's purpose . . .

. . . as their own share also His vision.

That's the shift of perception. That's the correction that occurs with love.

And what enables Him to see His purpose shine forth from every altar now is yours as well as His.

The altars in every single one of your brothers and sisters [are] not actually adorned with trinkets and manipulative tools. They think [they are], and they behave as though [they are], but their holiness is still the only thing sitting there on the altar—the only thing that is being expressed and being broadcast.

He sees no strangers, only dearly loved and loving friends . . .

. . . and sometimes friends who aren't being loving, because they have yet to remember that they are the holy Sons and Daughters of God, who have yet to feel the Father's Love which transforms their mind and their perception of themselves—something which you now are able to share with your brothers and sisters . . . the Father's Love, the real perception and experience of the Truth of him.

He . . .

. . . the Holy Spirit, and therefore you . . .

. . . sees no thorns but only lilies, gleaming in the gentle glow of peace that shines on everything He looks upon and loves.

And the fact that that is what is being seen, is that which heals and transforms and lifts your brothers and your sisters, along with you, into the experience of Truth, the experience of peace, the experience in which grievances are absent.

If you are not experiencing your peace, you are experiencing an illusion, and there is nothing valid in the experience for you to understand or make better. If you are not experiencing peace, you must be willing to abandon your preoccupation with the illusion. And it's very easy to do.

All one has to do is meditate . . .

. . . and in the process of meditating and having arrived at a state of inner peace, asking, "Father what is the truth?" . . .

. . . and listening.

This Easter, . .

. . . which was of course, when I was sharing this with Helen. But Easter is any moment in which the realization of Truth can occur and transform your mind.

This Easter, look with different eyes upon each other. You HAVE forgiven me. And yet I cannot use your gift of lilies while YOU see them not. Nor can you use what I have given unless you share it.

You see? There's nothing private about this. There's nothing about this that you can do all alone with God, or all alone with me, or all alone with the Holy Spirit. This is involvement in Family.

The Holy Spirit's vision . . .

. . . which is really the vision of that which is "nothing more than your right Mind" . . .

. . . is no idle gift, no plaything to be tossed about a while, and laid aside.

I know . . . it's easy to think, "Well, I'll ask the Holy Spirit," or "I'll ask Jesus." "I'll get quiet for a while here and I will genuinely listen and get the Answer. And then I'll stop listening and go about my business, benefiting from the Answer," as though the Holy Spirit or Jesus is some infinite answering machine. No!

Listen and hear this carefully, nor think it but a dream; a careless thought to play with, or a toy you would pick up from time to time, and then put by. For if you do, so will it be to you:

Well, what will be so to you? Oh, that Guidance or communication with the Holy Spirit, or learning from the Holy Spirit, is something that happens from time to time, whenever you're curious enough. But you see, that's still being asleep! That's still being an orphan.

If the Holy Spirit is nothing more than your right Mind, then if you are going to be Sane, you are going to be in your right Mind always. Is that very clear?

You have the vision now to look past ALL illusions.

In other words, once you get past the four Obstacles to Peace.

You have the vision now to look past ALL illusions. It has been given you to see no thorns, no strangers, and no obstacles to peace. The fear of God is nothing to you now. Who is afraid to look upon illusions, knowing his Savior stands beside him?

The word "Savior" has a capital "S," but it's referring to your brother—your brothers and sisters right here.

With him, your vision has become the greatest power for the undoing of illusion that God Himself could give.

Do you hear that? It means that the cooperation, the camaraderie, the Brotherhood shared by every single one of you with each other, experienced from the realization that each is the holy Son or Daughter of God, has become the greatest power for the undoing of illusion that God Himself could give! And that means as the world is blessed and transformed by the sharing, by the acts of Brotherhood, by holding fast—unswervingly—to the conscious awareness that your brothers and sisters are the holy Sons and Daughters of God, and then being appropriate when correction is called for, when education is called for, when learning is called for in those who still think they're just a body. You see?

Now one could say, “Well, that’s a formidable task. That’s an impossible task. How can I do that with everyone? How can I feel their holiness? How can I feel the holiness of this one, and that one, and the other one, and the one over there, and the one back there?”

This isn’t something that happens through space. It happens through realization. And what you don’t understand is, that when you value the abandoning of the Obstacles to Peace enough to overcome them—abandon them—this realization that I’ve described, occurs. You feel the Father’s Love. And it reveals to you your holiness, and simultaneously reveals to you the holiness, not of your brother or your sister, but of your brothers-s-s and sisters-s-s—plural—every single one of them. There is no way to consider any of them differently.

And so you don’t have to work at accumulating a capacity to infinitely love this one, and that one, and the other one, and the other one. It is therefore not a formidable task. In the experience of it, it is an experience of Oneness, of Wholeness.

So do not flinch as you approach this threshold. When you cross the threshold, what you have been expecting will not be there to meet you.

With him, . .

. . . your brother, sister . . .

. . . your vision has become the greatest power for the undoing of illusion that God Himself could give. For what God gave the Holy Spirit, you have received. The Son of God looks unto you . . .

. . . your brothers and sisters, in other words . . .

. . . The Son of God looks unto you for his release . . .

. . . for your forgiveness, for your withdrawal of any concept you might hold of him that is different from the Vision of him as the holy Son or Daughter of God that God has revealed to you.

For you have asked for, and been given, the strength to look upon this final obstacle, and see no thorns nor nails to crucify the Son of God, and crown him king of death. Your chosen home is on the other side, beyond the veil.

And I'm going to add, "without dying!" . . . without dying!

It has been carefully prepared for you, and it is ready to receive you now.

Your place was never truly abandoned. It has never been truly empty. And it's not like your Father used your room for other purposes until you decided to come Home. Your place is constituted of You, and You have always been in It, You have always been filling It. But you have indulged in this imaginative state of mind in which you pretended to be on your own, and it altered your perception of everything.

The only thing that is undone is a perception. And what has always been, will register with you again. And this does not take labor, this takes willingness . . . willingness on your part to stop valuing your independence and the power you think you ought to have in that independence, but which you never truly have.

Your chosen home is on the other side, beyond the veil.

You've already moved there, when you have abandoned your fear of the Father.

It has been carefully prepared for you, and it is ready to receive you now. You will not see it with the body's eyes. Yet all you need you have.

That's what you will discover: all you need you have.

Your home has called to you since time began, . .

That sounds beautiful and poetic . . . doesn't it? Sort of like an encouraging, nurturing statement. But it's nothing that fancy. It's a matter of fact.

Your home . . .

. . . your Sanity . . .

. . . has called to you since time began, . .

. . . since you caused time to seem to come into existence by choosing to be imaginatively—not really—independent.

Your home has called to you since time began, nor have you ever failed entirely to hear. You heard, but knew not HOW to look, nor WHERE. And now you know.

How do you know? You know by virtue of the exposition of the four Obstacles to Peace . . . and now the fifth—the final. The final obstacle is to . . .

. . . see no thorns nor nails to crucify the Son of God, and crown him king of death.

In other words, you must look at every one of your brothers and sisters and overcome, abandon the fifth obstacle—the final obstacle—which is your distrust of your brother and your withholding of full acknowledgement of what he divinely Is. You must dare to overcome your fear of your brother. You see? That’s why you can’t go back Home alone, because there is no such thing as “alone at Home.”

In you the knowledge lies, ready to be unveiled and freed from all the terror that kept it hidden . . .

. . . all of the grievances.

There IS no fear in love. The song of Easter is the glad refrain the Son of God was NEVER crucified. Let us lift up our eyes together, not in fear, but faith.

Again, these aren’t just nice religious words:

Let us lift up our eyes together, . .

. . . let’s not be separate anymore. Let’s not approach each other distrustingly.

Let us lift up our eyes together, not in fear, but faith. And there WILL be no fear in us, for in our vision will be no illusions; only a pathway to the open door of Heaven, the home we share in quietness, and where we live in gentleness and peace, as one together.

As one together . . . not all of us disappearing into a single amorphous blob, but all of us as the infinite Expression of God—together—without misperceptions getting in the way of our full experience of each other.

Now I’m going to stop here for tonight. I invite everyone to consider these things as soberly as the things I shared last week, although here, it seems as though what I’m inviting you to soberly consider are sweet and gentle and supportive things. But please understand that they are as practical, and down to earth, “nuts and bolts things” to consider and embrace and embody.

Again:

Listen and hear this carefully, nor think it but a dream; a careless thought to play with, or a toy you would pick up from time to time, and then put by. For if you do, so will it be to you:

There’s the nuts and bolts of it. It’s the Truth . . . but you need to let It transform your behavior.

I love you very much, and I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

August 1st 2015

—————oOo—————

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We have spent a lot of time talking about the Obstacles to Peace, moving past each one of the four, . . . the last of which was the Fear of God.

Now, I want to make it clear that whenever you practice the holy instant, whenever you engage in the two-step and, in the Silence, hear the Voice for Truth—hear the Holy Spirit reveal the truth to you that causes an “ah-ha” to occur, a realization, a shift of perception—you have overcome the last obstacle: the Fear of God.

You may not be able to stay in that state of fearlessness consistently, or even for very long, but it does not change the fact that you have experienced Communion—you have experienced the Presence of God in you.

Now, I've mentioned before that when you got a divorce from the Father, something unexpected happened when you said, “I'd rather do it my way,” “I'd rather see it my way.” When you and a brother together decided to abandon the Father's Perspective, something unexpected happened. You were suddenly confronted with something you had never experienced before: Fear and guilt.

These are not elements of omnipotence. These are not the elements of invulnerability which are your Birthright, and which had been your experience up until the moment you decided to abandon the Father's Perspective. But when you did, suddenly you were confronted with what you didn't expect.

Now, when you overcome the fourth Obstacle to Peace—the Fear of God—you find yourself infilled with the truth about you. You find yourself infilled with the experience of Love, the experience of being Loved infinitely, profoundly—so completely that it causes a realization in you that you are the holy Son or the holy Daughter of God. That you are absolutely divine. That you are a Christed One, just as I am.

And, as I have said, simultaneous with that experience and realization, you find yourself Knowing that this very same thing is true about your brother and sister. And that is a profound shift of perception—a miracle. And it causes you, in that clarity, to behave in a brand new way with your brothers and sisters, in a way that asserts and affirms their divinity—their holiness.

Now, we learned the last time we were together that this is a profound Gift; that It is the means of your coming back Home, . . . but not just you! It is the Gift that brings both you and your brother back Home. And that's the only way you can come back Home.

It is the most powerful Gift, the most profound Gift that the Father can give. Why? Because it works. And because it is the only thing that works—to be able to look into your brother's eyes and remember God, instead of [chuckling] all the lousy things he or your sister did to you, how difficult they made it for you, how cruel they were, how much suffering it caused you.

And so, you're met with a surprise.

You're met with the experience of your holiness and this profound Awareness of the holiness of your brothers and sisters—because of their immaculate relationship with God, which is the only thing true about them, just as it is the only true thing about you. And now you have a spontaneous inclination to treat them as the holy ones that they Are.

But the surprise is the answer to the question: Are you willing to extend it, or are you going to hold onto a grievance?

“Well, I'm not going to acknowledge who they really Are and let them off the hook when they haven't paid for the inconvenience and the hurt that they've caused!”

That's the surprise!

And it's a conflict, . . . because in the realization of the truth about them, you intend, from a bottomless place, to love them and treat them on the basis of Who and What you now Know they Are, with profound love and respect. And so you bring into play within yourself a merciless conflict, a truly rugged conflict that hurts you and delays your brother's Awakening—your brother's freedom.

[Turning to the book.]

I'm going to start a few sentences back from where I said we would start tonight. Where it says:

The song of Easter is the glad refrain the Son of God was NEVER crucified. ¹

That's the realization. The Son of God was NEVER crucified. The Son of God was never less than the Son of God. You have never been the “piss-ant” mortal you thought you were and neither has your brother or sister. That's the realization of Easter.

Part of the realization of Easter is embodied in the words from the Bible: “If I be lifted up I draw all men nigh unto me.”² Now likewise, if you be lifted up, you draw all men unto you. It is a natural and spontaneous action that occurs and it's out of your control.

So . . .

The song of Easter is the glad refrain the Son of God was NEVER crucified. Let us lift up our eyes together, not in fear, but faith. And there WILL be no fear in us, for in our vision will be no illusions; . .

All of them have been wiped away in your direct experience of being profoundly loved by the Father so completely that you clearly Know you are divine . . . and so is your mean-spirited brother and your bitchy sister. They aren't who they think they are and they aren't who you thought they were.

But you, in your tiny little emotional ego, feel hurt.

Now, your puny little ego is not the place in which you've experienced the Father's Love. It's an imaginary concept you have about yourself, that you have energized and valued, and which this realization of your holiness undoes, undermines, invalidates.

But it's your habit!

You're committed to being pissed off at your sister or brother for what they've done, in spite of the fact that your realization has uncovered to you that they never actually did it and you were never hurt by it, because you're not who you thought you were and they're not who you thought they were, and there's a requirement of a shift!

Let me put it this way: In the experience of God's Love, the shift occurs. But you know what? You must come along and validate the shift. You must confirm the shift by changing your mind. And I mean by that, by abandoning—letting go of—what doesn't fit and what isn't true . . . which you now know isn't true.

Let us lift up our eyes together, . .

See? No longer at odds, no longer sitting in righteous judgment—"superior" you, and "inferior" them. Superior you, who of course, never ever treated them badly, thought of them badly, even though right now, in your self-righteousness, you are claiming that they are inferior and unworthy of your extending What is pressuring Itself in you to come out of you that acknowledges that they are not what you thought they were . . . and that they are indeed utterly holy loved Sons and Daughters of God, just like you.

And there WILL be no fear in us, for in our vision will be no illusions; only a pathway to the open door of Heaven, the home we share in quietness, and where we live in gentleness and peace, as one together.

Now, if I hadn't shared with you what I just shared with you, this next sentence might have been quickly brushed by.

Would you not have your holy brother lead you there . . .

. . . on the pathway to the open door of Heaven?

Would you not have your holy brother lead you there?

Well, you are likely to conveniently define the meaning of that as, “Would you not have me lead you there”—the holy one that you do believe I am?

But that’s not what it’s meaning.

Would you not have your holy brother . . .

. . . or sister, that’s right there with you where you are . . .

. . . lead you there?

“Um-m... well it just depends if I can get past my righteous anger and distress and my great need for justice.”

So, in order to have your holy brother lead you there, you’re likely to find yourself having to do something you don’t want to do, something that requires you to make a really fundamental basic change in you by your conscious choice. And you’re likely to call that “work.” And you had hoped that Awakening would be a lovely easy breeze because it’s a spiritual thing that’s happening that obviously is going to be natural to you.

Well, yes, it’s utterly natural to you and it’s going to impel Itself out into action. But if you’re going to say, “No, that person is not worthy of that kind of love and respect yet,” then the Gift will not be made and you provide yourself with a crown of thorns, and not lilies that provide the entry into the Kingdom of Heaven—the conscious experience of Reality.

Important!

Would you not have your holy brother lead you there?

Well, now you know that you might not—at least there might be a few that you will not. But you know what? I’m going to promise you that those are the ones who will come into your experience and remain there because they’re uncovering your unwillingness to Wake up yourself.

Would you not have your holy brother lead you there? His innocence . . .

[Chuckling] “Yeah, right! His innocence, you say!”

[Yes] His innocence . . .

. . . as the holy Son or Daughter of God that he or she is . . .

. . . will light your way, offering you its guiding light and sure protection, and shining from the holy altar within him where you laid . . .

. . . if you did . . .

. . . the lilies of forgiveness.

Why will his innocence light your way? Why will it offer you its guiding light and sure protection? It's not so much because of what your brother or sister will be or do, as it is the degree of honesty and consistency and straightness that you bring to your consideration of your brother or sister.

You are going to have to be willing to extend the full message in its full import that was revealed to you when you engaged in the holy instant and were willing to look into your brother's eyes—even for a moment—and remember God. You see?

I could say it's the precision of the truthfulness of your commitment that causes your brother's innocence to light your way, because there will be no light and there will be no way if you aren't doing it together. It will offer . . .

. . . you its guiding light and sure protection, . .

And the protection part of it has to do with the fact that you are not wavering in your willingness to share the good news of your holiness and your brother's or sister's holiness to your brother and sister so that it might be shared as a common experience—a communion experience. You see?

His innocence . . .

. . . the innocence that's really there behind his imperfect sense of himself and behind your imperfect sense of him . . .

. . . will light your way, offering you its guiding light and sure protection, and shining from the holy altar within him where you laid the lilies of forgiveness.

In other words, where you really laid the lilies of forgiveness, and didn't keep an "ace up your sleeve" for a little vengeance down the road if necessary, because he doesn't really deserve the full Gift.

Let him be to you the Savior from illusions, . .

Ordinarily that word, capitalized, refers only to me, but this is referring to your brother or sister because they perform the same function I do when you are willing to acknowledge without reservation their divinity that has been revealed to you as an experience of yours.

Let him be to you the Savior from illusions, and look on him with the new vision that looks upon the lilies and brings YOU joy.

Your clear honest committed willingness to acknowledge your brother's or sister's divinity brings you joy. And the joy won't be there until you do it!

We go beyond the veil of fear, lighting each other's way.

You see?

The holiness that leads us is WITHIN us, as is our home. So will we find what we were meant to find by Him Who leads us.

And again we have capital "H" Him, capital "W" Who leads us. And that one Who leads us is our Brother and our Sister whose divinity we have dared to look at without reservation and without qualification . . . and embrace.

This is the way to Heaven and to the peace of Easter, in which we join in glad awareness that the Son of God is risen from the past, and has awakened to the present.

You and your Brothers and Sisters with whom you are sharing this awareness of holiness have risen from the previous ignorance.

Now is he . . .

. . . your brother, or she, your sister . . .

free, unlimited in his communion with all that is within him. Now are the lilies of his innocence untouched by guilt, and perfectly protected from the cold chill of fear and withering blight of sin alike. Your gift . . .

. . . listen to this:

Your gift has saved him from the thorns and nails, and his strong arm is free to guide you safely through them, and beyond.

It's no private job. It's no private endeavor. It's no private accomplishment. You have to do it together. If you're not doing it together, you are avoiding Love. And Love is [chuckling] the pass key, so to speak, back into the Kingdom of Heaven—the conscious experience of what everything Really is.

Your gift has saved him from the thorns and nails, and his strong arm is free to guide you safely through them, . . .

. . . this one that you thought was the bastard or the bitch. Their arms are free to guide you. Are you ready to let yourself be guided by your brother or sister because you are insisting upon seeing nothing less than their divinity, so that your mind is single of purpose and not conflicted?

That's the surprising question that you find yourself confronted with.

Walk with him now rejoicing . . .

How stubborn are you? How long are you going to hold onto the grievance before you will walk with him now rejoicing? And you know, don't fool yourself and say, "Well, he is causing my distress." No.

You are refusing to pay attention to the realization that came forth as a result of your engaging in the holy instant and experiencing the Love of God. And you are deciding that this one is not worthy, and therefore, you are going to withhold this clear experience of him that you do have.

Walk with him now rejoicing, for the Savior from illusions has come to greet you, and lead you home with him.

I know this isn't necessarily good news, because grievances are mesmeric. Grievances get ahold of you and cause you to become obligated to them—do or die. Nothing less than justice will be allowed. And you certainly are not going to let your brother off or your sister off scot-free. But you're going to have to. And whatever work, whatever effort it takes, you're going to have to engage in. You are going to have to argue with the voice for fear in you that tells you not to trust your brother, not to engage in whatever it takes to express the Love that heals and transforms where correction is needed—not just in you, but in your brother or sister as well.

Here is your Savior and your Friend, released from crucifixion through your vision, and free to lead you now where HE would be.

You both join in leading each other to where you want to be, which is in the unequivocal experience of God's Love that demonstrates to you without a shadow of a doubt, your holiness, your innocence, and the fact that you were never other than the beloved Son or Daughter of God.

Here is your Savior and your Friend, released from crucifixion through your vision, and free to lead you now where HE would be. He will not leave you, nor forsake the Savior from his pain. And gladly will you walk the way of innocence together, singing as you behold the open door of Heaven, and recognize the home that called to you.

Here's the call. Here's what's called for in this last step—Part B—of the Fourth Obstacle to Peace:

Give joyously to one another the freedom and the strength to lead you there. And come before each other's holy altar where the strength and freedom wait, to offer and receive the bright awareness that leads you home.

What is now on your altar, now that you've overcome the Fourth Obstacle to Peace? It's the awareness, "I am the holy Son of God." "I am the holy Daughter of God." And there's nothing else on your altar. It's pure simplicity that reveals the infinite, immaculate fullness of divine Being . . . of Creation.

The lamp is lit in both of you for one another.

Not for you and you alone!

The lamp is lit in both of you for one another.

That means that you and your brother, you and your sister are worth every bit of devoted attention you can give . . . to see, to find and to confirm each other's holiness, each other's divinity.

Again:

The lamp is lit in both of you for one another. And by the hands that gave it to each other shall both of you be led past fear to love.

It's quite profound and it's quite simple, if you're just not too damned obstinate. It still remains simple, because all that is required is to make a different choice. And now you know what the choice is.

And a word to the wise: Don't look at a brother or sister whom you have grievances against and completely refuse to engage in the holy instant with regard to them.

[Chuckling] You're not saved from anything by not experiencing the Father's Love of you, so that a brother can't be blessed. You will stay in the same hell that your brother is in, and that you have been in, until you make a different choice—the simple choice . . . the choice that is Love, that moves you both past fear.

I love you very much. Revel in what I have shared with you. And I will look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

August 23rd 2015

—————oOo—————

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

Last time we were together, we ended up with these thoughts from the Course. Speaking of your brother or sister with whom you have found a holy relationship, it says . . .

Here is your Savior and your Friend, released from crucifixion through your vision, and free to lead you now where He would be.¹

This beautifully expresses the union involved in the forward movement—the togetherness of it, the singleness of purpose.

And further . . .

The lamp is lit in both of you for one another. And by the hands that gave it to each other shall both of you be led past fear to love.

Now, suddenly we have a new section entitled:

SIN AS AN ADJUSTMENT

And it begins . . . which is a continuation of where we left off . . .

The belief in sin is an ADJUSTMENT.

It is an abrupt change. The reason being, that to have this mind-changing, life-changing realization of your holiness and your brother's or sister's holiness, is the breaking of a long established and well established set of perceptions which you have used to determine what everything is, what everything means, and what all of it can be used for.

And so, this sudden realization of your holiness and of your brother's holiness, and indeed the holiness of all of mankind—all of the Brotherhood—causes you to be put in a position of re-evaluating, we might say, all of your past perceptions. It requires you to be willing to look at the world you have been looking at, and being willing to see it anew, according to the Vision that it's all God and it's all holy—that it is the Kingdom of Heaven occupied by, enjoyed by, embraced by the holy Sons and Daughters of God.

And so, . . . how can I put it? It's a time of radical transformation, the abandoning of habitual perceptions, and habitual ways of behaving in favor of the behavior that is appropriate for holy Sons and Daughters of God who have no need to defend themselves anymore, and who no longer believe that the world and universe is something God has nothing to do with . . . and because God has everything to do with it, it is not what you had perceived it to be. It is not a polarized, conflicted universe, but it is the Kingdom of Heaven in infinite perfect harmony.

Now we're going to take a look at the mindset that the holy Sons and Daughters of God, who have discovered a holy relationship, have just left.

So it begins:

The belief in sin is an ADJUSTMENT.

And the word ADJUSTMENT is the key word.

And an adjustment is a CHANGE; a shift in perception, or a belief that what was so before has been made different. Every adjustment is therefore a distortion, and calls upon defenses to uphold it against reality.

Now you can look at this two ways. You can look at this as something you're seeing with brand new eyes from a point of clarity that you have found yourself in because you KNOW that you are a holy Son or Daughter of God. Or you can look at it from your present vantage point and have an explanation of what you're seeing that helps you to be willing to release it more easily.

So let's back up:

. . . an adjustment is a CHANGE; a shift in perception, . . .

Now, we've talked about this before, and for context, I will repeat it: When you and a brother or sister decided you wanted to do things your way—that you wanted to get a divorce from the Father—you did it with the intent to be able to say what this is, what that is, what this means, what that means.

Now, obviously Creation already existed in Its completeness, in Its ever-moving expression of perfection in wholeness. And so, when you decided you wanted to be giving the definitions as to what everything was, you had to be altering the meaning of that which already existed because God made it so.

So, . . .

. . . sin is an ADJUSTMENT . . .

It's a change.

. . . a shift in perception, or a belief that what was so before . . .

. . . Creation, in Its perfection . . .

. . . has been made different.

And of course, it's been made different at your hand and the hand of your brother or sister.

Every adjustment is therefore a distortion, . .

. . . it's not the actual creation of something new. It's an alteration, a distortion of that which already is—that which already was . . .

. . . and calls upon defenses to uphold it against reality.

Now to understand this more simply: There are frames made for glasses which they say . . . they use the word “memory” to describe it. The metal frames have a memory, so that if you sit on them or bend them, they do not stay in a new configuration. The memory causes them to return to their original state. If you squeeze them or attempt to bend them, you find yourself experiencing resistance. The metal—the memory, you will say—provides resistance to being bent out of shape. And that resistance remains in place until you let go of the glasses and let them return to normal.

It's important to understand this because the definitions, the misunderstandings, the misperceptions which have been applied to the Kingdom of Heaven that cause it to appear to be a material world and universe to you, that alteration doesn't change anything. And the Actuality of God's Creation resists, we'll say, your attempt to change it. And that resistance remains in place until you abandon your attempt.

Now, that is defined as life being difficult—as the “human condition”—which is fraught with dilemmas and illnesses and everything unpleasant.

But what it is, is an ever-present help—if you want to call it that—an ever-present intent that causes you to have the Truth available to you again, as soon as you abandon your expression of “will” and let it be replaced with humility.

You are not *sinner*s who have sinned so badly that you cannot experience Reality or God's Love until you've gone through major steps of paying a debt. No. The Kingdom of Heaven is constantly pressuring everyone who's dreaming dreams or imagining imaginations and believing them . . . it's constantly pressuring you to abandon them and, without your having to do something new—in fact, in the absence of doing anything and humbly yielding—the “frames of the glasses” resume their shape. The Kingdom of Heaven simply registers with you.

Everyone is constantly being pressured to Awaken.

This is so important.

Every adjustment is therefore a distortion, and calls upon defenses to uphold it against reality. Knowledge, . .

. . . or what I have called, Knowing, . .

. . . requires NO adjustment, and, in fact, is lost if any shift or change is undertaken.

That's like saying the experience of the Kingdom of Heaven requires no adjustment. And, in fact, is lost if any shift or change or attempt to change It is undertaken.

For this reduces it at once to mere perception; a way of LOOKING in which certainty is lost, and doubt has entered.

“Oh yeah, sure . . . I'm sure we can all look at everything and say it's the Kingdom of Heaven. I guess that's a way of looking at It. But I prefer to think of it as a universe—a physical universe—that functions according to the laws of physics. And of course, the laws of physics, because they are laws, demonstrate the reality of the physical universe as a physical universe.” You see how the logic, the concept, is used to reinforce itself?

When that happens, the experience of the Kingdom of Heaven is lost. You become unconscious of It. The Kingdom of Heaven doesn't go away or disappear. You simply become unconscious of It, in preference to being conscious of the definition you are choosing to validate and make real to yourself and behave according to.

Mind you, what we're describing here is the perspective that those who have joined in a holy relationship and who have experienced God's Love so clearly that their holiness is clear to them, this is what they are in a position of becoming free of.

We're talking about it though, because one doesn't abandon old habits easily. And so it's important not to be surprised that there are ongoing corrections of perceptions that will occur.

Knowledge requires NO adjustment, and, in fact, is lost if any shift or change is undertaken. For this reduces it at once to mere perception; a way of LOOKING in which certainty is lost, and doubt has entered.

I will comment here . . . that the moment doubt has entered, and the experience of what Reality is becomes a mere perception, then there is like, infinite choice! Wow! How fantastic! How interesting! You see? Nothing is dull anymore with only one way of seeing everything and interpreting it. You see? And so it's enticing.

To this impaired condition ARE adjustments necessary, because they are not true.

And having experienced and practiced the holy instant to the degree where your holiness and your brother's or sister's holiness is clear to you, and you are able to join in a holy relationship, you are in a position of being able to deal with these adjustments to an impaired condition so as to have the Truth completely replace the definitions which you've created and loved and held onto.

Who need adjust to truth, which calls on only what he is, to understand?

You . . . you holy Sons and Daughters of God . . . are the presence of Truth embodied. For you to experience the Truth is inescapable because of what you Are and it doesn't have to be understood, it doesn't have to be reasoned out so that you might have a concept of . . . You know the Truth when you're not introducing anything else into the picture.

Adjustments of any kind are of the ego.

Well, of course. When you got the divorce from the Father, everything that followed was adjustment. Life became a matter of making adjustments. We've talked about them as mutual agreements, and coming up with new definitions. These are just adjustments—alterations applied to the unchangeable perfection of the Kingdom of Heaven, the Presence of the Father, and actually, the infiniteness of you.

Adjustments of any kind are of the ego. For it is the ego's fixed belief that all relationships DEPEND upon adjustments to make of them what it would have them be.

What it would have them be, instead of what they Are. What it would have them be in order to gain an advantage. What it would have them be in order to become wealthy. What it would have them be in order to be in control . . . and on and on and on.

Direct relationships, . . .

(Chuckling) . . . ones in which no adjustments have been introduced . . .

Direct relationships, in which there are no interference's, are ALWAYS seen as dangerous.

I'm going to read that again:

Direct relationships, in which there are no interference's, are ALWAYS seen as dangerous.

Heaven help you if you should become trustingly spontaneous instead of willfully calculated. Heaven help you if you became unpredictable, transformational. Oh...no.

Direct relationships, in which there are no interference's, are ALWAYS seen as dangerous. The ego is the self-appointed mediator of all relationships, making whatever adjustments it deems necessary, and interposing them . . .

. . . where? . . .

. . . between those who would meet, to keep them separate and prevent their union.

Why do you think there are mutual agreements? Why do you think there is something called, “cooperation?” Where did the concept of “working together” come from? From a fundamental idea of separation—of independence. Two things that are independent can agree with each other. They can also disagree with each other. They can cooperate with each other or they can fight with each other. You see? And the cooperation presents the approximation of harmony when activity occurs that Love is not present in. You see?

It is this studied interference which makes it difficult for you to recognize your holy relationship for what it is. Everyone has a holy relationship. Everyone is in a holy relationship insofar as everyone is a holy Son or Daughter of God who hasn't changed from what God created him to be or what God is creating him as, in this moment. And in that sense, everyone is a holy Son or Daughter of God in a holy relationship.

But, as long as the concept of independence is revered above all else, and as long as mutual agreements and adjustments have been arrived at that allow for a certain modicum of harmony to seem to be present, without actual union of everyone involved, one is not joined, one is not connected. There is no actual relationship. It's only what you could call, “a relationship by association.” The cat is lying by the tree. There's a relationship there. But the cat doesn't know the tree and the tree doesn't know the cat. And so there isn't really a relationship. You see?

So, now you have had an experience of the Love of God so profoundly, that you, without a shadow of a doubt, have discovered that you are holy and that your Brother or Sister is also. And therefore, what made it difficult for you to see your holy relationship, is not as strong, is not as confusing, is not as undermining as it had been.

The holy do not interfere with truth.

Those who are Awake, those who have had an experience of their holiness do not interfere with truth. The very fact that there was an infilling of God's Love in you that transformed your awareness of yourself was an indicator that you didn't have to create the experience, that the experience was awaiting the opportunity, intent upon registering with you. You see?

When you didn't interfere with truth, Realization occurred.

The holy do not interfere with truth.

Those who truly engage in the holy instant do not interfere with truth.

They are not afraid of it, for it is within the truth they recognized their holiness, and rejoiced at what they saw. They looked on it directly, . .

. . . in the holy instant, in the moment of Revelation . . .

. . . without attempting to adjust themselves to it, or it to them.

It was just wholly allowed.

And so they saw that it was IN them, not deciding first where they would HAVE it be. Their looking, . . .

. . . their practice of the holy instant . . .

Their looking merely asked a question, and it was what they SAW that answered them. YOU . . .

. . . and I'm going to add, "on the other hand" . . .

YOU make the world and THEN adjust to it, and it to you.

That's what the orphan does. That's what the independent one does—the one independent from the Father and the one who actually has established independence from his brother or sister with whom he got the divorce from this Father. You see the unexpected consequence of engaging in an illusion—or I'm going to say, a delusion.

YOU make the world and THEN adjust to it, and it to you. Nor is there any difference between yourself and it in your perception, which made them BOTH.

You see? You decided who you were and you decided what the world was. No, I'm going to put it this way: You decided who you were and you decided what the Kingdom of Heaven was and you called it something else. But you created them both, and thus you made adjustments which completely covered over the Kingdom of Heaven and the holy Son or Daughter of God that you Are, from your conscious experience.

This is what the holy relationship moves you beyond, this is what the practice of the holy instant moves you beyond.

A simple question yet remains, and needs an answer. Do you LIKE what you have made? – a world of murder and attack, through which you thread your timid way through constant dangers, alone and frightened, . . .

. . . and I'm going to add, excited at it all, . . .

. . . hoping at most that death will wait a little longer before it overtakes you and you disappear?

Why? Because of the adventure of it, the potential of overcoming the threat—excitement that you never had as a holy Son or Daughter of God in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven.

YOU MADE THIS UP. It is a picture of what you think YOU are; of how you see YOURSELF .

..

. . . how the orphan sees itself. Which of course, wasn't something you planned on when you first said, "Father, I want a divorce. I want to define everything for myself."

A murderer IS frightened, and those who kill FEAR death. All these are but the fearful thoughts of those who would adjust themselves to a world made fearful by their adjustments.

Amazing, huh?

And they look out in sorrow from what is sad within, and see the sadness THERE.

But gloriously, this is what you experience relief from when you engage genuinely and humbly in the holy instant and let your holiness be revealed to you, together with the holiness of your Brother or Sister.

Have you not wondered what the world is REALLY like; . .

Oh, yes, I know. The world is not real. The world is an illusion. The world doesn't exist. But then, why would I have said this:

Have you not wondered what the world is REALLY like; . .

. . . well what world are we talking about? It's the world that adjustments have been made to. That's the world.

Have you not wondered what the world is REALLY like . . .

. . . without the adjustments applied to it that have been applied to it?

Have you not wondered what the world is REALLY like; how it would look through HAPPY eyes? The world you see is but a judgment on yourself. It is not there at all.

Key words: The world you see. The world you see as a result of the adjustments you have made, is not there at all.

Yet judgment lays a sentence on it, justifies it, and makes it REAL. Such is the world you see; a judgment on yourself, and made by YOU . . .

And I will say . . . overlaid upon the Kingdom of Heaven without changing the Kingdom of Heaven one bit.

This sickly picture of yourself is carefully preserved by the ego, whose image it is and which it loves, and placed outside you in the world. And to this world must you adjust, as long as you believe this picture is outside, and has you at its mercy.

Key point: only . . .

. . . as long as you believe this picture is outside, and has you at its mercy.

This world IS merciless, and were it outside you, you should indeed be fearful. Yet it was you who MADE it merciless, and now if mercilessness seems to look back at you, . .

. . . what? . .

. . . it can be CORRECTED . . .

. . . because you can change your mind. You can look anew. You can engage in the holy instant. You can dare to conceive that God possibly is All-in-all and that you are the direct Expression of God in which All that God is, is embodied. And that your place in this, is one of being that which acknowledges God as your Source—That which is presencing Itself right where you see yourself. You see? It can be corrected because you made it up.

Now you won't be able to do it by going out and trying to change "the world." The experience of Who and What you divinely Are needs to register with you first, because in that realization of divinity does the divinity of everything become revealed for you as a fact.

This then gives you the courage and the ability to abandon the world of adjustments that you have habitually created and reinforced, but which you know enough now to let go of without any sense of real loss.

Who in a holy relationship can long remain unholy?

[Repeats] Who in a holy relationship can long remain unholy? The world the holy see is one with them, just as the world the ego looks upon is like itself.

It's the same old question, which voice are you going to listen to? The Voice for Truth or the voice for fear—the Holy Spirit or the ego?

The world the holy see is beautiful because they see their innocence in it. They did not tell it what it was; they did not make adjustments to fit their orders. They gently questioned it and whispered, "What are you?"

Like I said, when you practice the two-step, the holy instant, you become still, you still the thinking. And in the quietness you say, "Father, what is the truth here?" The holy . . .

. . . gently questioned it and whispered, "What are you?" And He Who watches over all perception answered.

That's what happened in the holy instant when your holiness was revealed to you. That's what happens in the holy instant when your holiness IS revealed to you.

Take not the judgment of the world as answer to the question, "What am I?"

The world BELIEVES in sin, . .

. . . no, wait a minute, what world? The world . . . the world you see believes in sin, because the world you see is the result of adjustments you have made to the Kingdom of Heaven. And so, naturally it is impossible for you to conceive of a world that isn't governed by adjustments, when adjustments that you have created, created the world you're looking at.

The world BELIEVES in sin, . .

. . . in adjustments, because you, through your adjustments, created the world you see.

. . . but the belief that made it as you see it is not outside you. Seek not to make the Son of God ADJUST to his insanity.

Whew! That is the proper description of the human condition, where everyone seeks to make the Son of God adjust to insanity. And that's what the holy instant is the exit from.

There IS a stranger in him, . .

. . . the Son of God . . .

. . . who wandered carelessly into the home of truth, and who will wander off. He came without a purpose, but he will not remain before the shining light the Holy Spirit offered, and you accepted. For there the stranger is made homeless . . .

. . . the orphan, the one who indulged in making adjustments.

For there the stranger is made homeless and YOU . .

. . . the holy Son of God, the holy Daughter of God . . .

. . . are welcome.

Hey . . .

Ask not this transient stranger, "What am I?" He is the only thing in all the universe that does not know. Yet it is he you asked, and it is to his answer that you would adjust.

That's the way it has been working. And if, after your Vision, after your transforming experience of the Father's Love, if you out of habit ask again of this transient stranger . . . well, you must catch yourself and abandon the question and get back in the holy instant, remember your holiness, and be consistent with it.

This one wild thought, fierce in its arrogance, and yet so tiny and so meaningless it slips unnoticed through the universe of truth, becomes your guide.

This concept or idea of what you are—the adjusted you—is just a collection of concepts, miniscule, meaningless.

To it you turn to ask the meaning of the universe. And of the one blind thing in all the seeing universe of truth you ask, “How shall I look upon the Son of God?”

You see? These things are things that you will become aware of as clarification of how the illusion worked when you join in a holy relationship with a brother or a sister.

Does one ask judgment of what is totally BEREFT of judgment? And if you have, would you BELIEVE the answer, and adjust to it as if it were the truth?

Well, you would and you have, but you don't have to anymore. And you realize this in the clarity of your experiencing yourself as the holy Son or Daughter of God.

The world you look on is the answer that it gave you, and YOU have given it power to adjust the world to MAKE its answer true. You asked this puff of madness for the meaning of your unholy relationship, and adjusted it according to its insane answer.

You see, this is not an indictment. This is clarity—the kind of clarity that one experiences as a result of the active engagement in a holy relationship.

How happy did it make you? Did you meet with joy, to bless the Son of God, and give him thanks for all the happiness which he held out to you?

Well . . . no, not hardly, because [chuckling] you, looking through your adjustments, saw someone in need of adjustment, and someone to create adjustments called “mutual agreements” with, to protect yourself against his unscrupulousness, which had to be there because it was part and parcel of your need to make adjustments in your perception of him in the first place.

Did you recognize each other as the eternal gift of God to you?

No. But now you are able to look at your brother, your brothers and sisters, and acknowledge that. You are able to look at your brothers and sisters, and, I'm going to say, determine it to be true, so that your thinking is consistent with the truth and aligns you with the capacity to experience it beyond thought.

Did you see the holiness that shone in both of you, to bless the other? That is the purpose of your HOLY relationship.

That's the purpose of this relationship you now find yourself experiencing.

Ask not the means of its attainment of the one thing that still would have it be unholy.

Don't in your, let's say, immaturity of experience of a holy relationship, return to that voice you used to inquire of to find out how to proceed. That's all it means.

Give it NO power to adjust the means and end.

Prisoners bound with heavy chains for years, starved and emaciated, weak and exhausted, and with eyes so long cast down in darkness they remember not the light, do not leap up in joy the instant they are made free. It takes a while for them to understand what freedom IS. You groped but feebly in the dust and found each other's hand, uncertain whether to let it go, or to take hold on life so long forgotten. Strengthen your hold, and raise your eyes unto your strong companion,
..

. . . the brother whose hand you're holding, the sister whose hand you're holding in this new experience of holy relationship . . .

. . . in whom the meaning of your freedom lies. He seemed to be crucified beside you. And yet his holiness remained untouched and perfect, and with him beside you, you shall this day enter with him to Paradise, and know the peace of God.

That simply means, to experience being infinitely without any adjustments placed between you and what you are experiencing, causing you to not see what it truly Is and keeping you from feeling your Oneness with It.

Such is my will for both of you, and for each of you for one another, and for himself. Here there is only holiness and joining without limit. For what is Heaven but union, direct and perfect, and without the veil of fear upon it? Here are we one, looking with perfect gentleness upon each other, and on ourselves. Here all thoughts of any separation between us becomes impossible. You who were prisoners in separation are now made free in Paradise. And here would I unite with you, my friends, my brothers and my Self. Your gift unto each other has given me the certainty our union will be soon.

Share, then, this faith with me, and know that it is justified. There is no fear in perfect love BECAUSE it knows no sin, . .

. . . no adjustments made to anything.

. . . and it must look on others as on itself. Looking with charity within, what can it fear WITHOUT? The innocent see safety, and the pure in heart see God within His Son, and look unto the Son to lead them to the Father. And where else would they go but where they will to be? Each of you now will lead the other to the Father as surely as God created His Son holy, and kept him so. In your brother is the light of God's eternal promise of your immortality.

Hear that again:

In your brother . . . In your brother is the light of God's eternal promise of your immortality.

Your brother is absolutely essential.

See HIM as sinless, and there can BE no fear in you.

Now that's the end of this Section. And before I end, I must bring out the fact, that to see the holiness of your brothers, to function in the world in light of your realization that each and every one are holy Sons and Daughters of God, you are going to be called upon to deal with those in whom correction is called for, because they do not see this yet.

And when it says here that you will see the innocence of your brother, it means that you will see what is true about him and you will disagree with what is not true about him.

And when your brother comes to you and asks of you for something harmful, for something that keeps the illusion alive, for something that would demean you or cause you to sacrifice your clarity, your recognition of their innocence will require you to give what is needed and which is revealed to you on the spot! It will not be a prepared response, but it will embody the experience of two of my disciples who came upon a beggar at a gate asking for alms. Their response was: "Silver and gold have we none, but what we have we will give you."²

So your recognition of the holiness and the innocence of your brother will cause you to say, "I cannot give you what you are asking for. I don't have that, but here's what I have." And you will share the correcting truth, the healing truth that comes to you on the spot, new and fresh and unrehearsed. Why? Because you've been willing to connect with the holiness in that one and [have been] able to be Real with him.

So, you will not be foolish. What I just finished reading, which sounds very idyllic in a way, will prepare you to be joined carefully and wisely with the conscious intent not to introduce any adjustments—meaning any of your own personal concepts—and to respond from the unadjusted union with the Holy Spirit, which is your right Mind.

This is the way transformation will occur.

I love you very much. Love each other likewise. And I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

September 13th 2015

THIS TRANSCRIPT
IS NOT IN ITS FINAL FORM
AND WILL BE UPDATED

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

I'm going to ask a question: How many of you use your spirituality—your practice of your religion, your practice of A Course in Miracles—as a defense? How many use it as a means of establishing peace in your life so that there are simply no disturbances?

How many of you think that it is through the power of your mind that you create your world, and that whatever problems you have are of your own creation, and therefore, you are the one who is responsible for correcting what is going on in your mind in order to have an improved experience?

And again: How many of you think that through that practice, you are supposed to arrive at an experience of Life which is not confronted with disturbances? That a disturbance-free life is proof or evidence of your living your holiness well?

In other words, how many of you use the Course or your spirituality as a “cross” that one might hold up in the face of a vampire to protect oneself from the onslaught of evil?

Now, I'm talking about serious things tonight. I'm wanting everyone to take a look at how they misuse the Truth, how they misuse spiritual teachings to further establish the human condition instead of lifting everyone out of it.

You know, if you think you are the creator of your experience and that you are responsible for everything in it . . . Wow! What a mean-spirited, destructive, debilitating attitude! How far removed it is from what Love reveals. How far it is from That which uncovers Redemption. And how easily it is used to remain separate and uninvolved from your brothers and sisters.

After all, if you are creating your problems yourself, and you are the one responsible for un-creating them . . . then likewise, the problems your brothers and sisters are having were self-created by them and they are the ones who must correct it, thus absolving you of any need for involvement and ensuring that without remorse or guilt, or inner discomfort whatsoever, you can ignore their plight because it's literally, none of your business. Your problems and the correction of them are your business and theirs are theirs. And, after all, you have arrived at a point where your life is on a pretty even keel as a result of your excellent practice of thought-control, mind-control . . . practice of spiritual truths.

And you know what?

That is as ignorant as any other part of the dream of human existence. It amounts to arriving at a point where you are a successful orphan—one who has managed to stay independent, to not feel anything in terms of Brotherhood—and in the peace you seem to have created at the hand of your own mind, you no longer need to have to stoop to the level of . . . uh-h . . . having to cope with your brother's stupidity. Am I being too harsh? No, I'm uncovering something that needs to be clearly seen.

You have things going on, on your globe, at this time, which reflect need and call for needs to be met.

Let me ask you something (sigh): At what point are you or any of your brothers so deluded, so demented, so destructively engaged in “creating” your lives, that you are not deserving of the Love of a brother, or your brother is not deserving of your engaging in the two-step to ask “What is the truth here?” about your brother so that his holiness can be revealed to you. So that you can forgive your misperception of him that says he is an entity who, through the use of his mind, has created an experience for himself that is awful . . . “and it's not my job to correct it! In fact, he's the only one who has his hand on the switch. I can't reach it.”

You know . . . you are never so demented or so confused or so debased by your false thoughts and fears that you are not worthy of my attention and of the, I will say, energy and time it takes for me to engage with you and assure you, and reassure you as often as is necessary for you to finally feel comfortable enough to abandon your confidence in your negative perspective, your negative perceptions.

I am Awake. Does that mean that I do not need to attend to you? Does it mean that I am free to disregard you totally because it's your job to undo your ignorance? No. If you're faced with the call right now to attend to the need with compassion and with a recognition that those who are in great need in your world are deserving of your Vision and your love and your compassion, you will not see the demand as an inconvenience that you must put up with, or a disturbance that you must tolerate until you can get back to your nice “peace and quiet” that you've created for yourself at the hand of your own thinking!

Listen, learn, and do! . . . is the admonishment.

Listening to the Holy Spirit, engaging in the two-step in the holy instant, learning from the encounter you have there, does not bring you to a clarity of mind that creates for you a life of peace in which you will never find anything disturbing happening and therefore, requiring you to do nothing.

The purpose of listening, of turning to the Holy Spirit, is to have your divinity uncovered to you which uncovers the divinity of your brother and sister to you . . . not so that you can sit back and revel in the clarity of it all, but so that you might actually change the way in which you behave toward and with your brothers and sisters. So that you can “do” in a new way. So that you can be in a way that no longer calls forth defense from your brother or sister and allows him or her to let down his or her guard because he or she feels the love and the respect, and in the feeling of it, can begin to believe that he or she is deserving and respectable . . . so that his or her divinity begins to be experienced as a reality by him or by her.

You do not create your world. And the world is not an illusion. And you must get over this idea, else you will not treat it respectfully. You will not be willing to honor it and, in the willingness to honor it, let it reveal to you itself in all of its divinity.

All . . . as I’ve said before, all you can create is a misperception of something actual. All you can do is create or fabricate an adjustment to Reality—an alteration of it in your mind. And so you create adjustments—alterations in your mind—about your brothers and sisters and you create terms for them that classify them, you know—“immigrants,” “refugees”—words that have a pejorative connotation.

Well, if the world is an illusion, nothing needs to be done. So forget about “Listen, learn, and do.” And if what everyone is experiencing is a world of their own creating, then they must uncreate it and forget about “Listen, learn, and do.” You can sit back! You need do nothing! That is a favorite misunderstood sentence from A Course in Miracles—You need do nothing.

No. Calls for correction are occurring all the time. Correction of what? Correction of misperceptions and, in the correction of the misperceptions, an uncovering of a world different from that which your adjustment caused it to appear to be to you . . . uncovering its holiness. Uncovering the Kingdom of Heaven and the holy Sons and Daughters of God. That’s your task.

“Oh-h . . . well, does that mean that I can’t discount the refugees? Does that mean that I must be willing to look at them in my mind’s eye and see a worthy human being just like me?”

Are they, having come from a war-torn country, any different from those who are today homeless because wild-fires burned down their homes? And they are sleeping in gymnasiums or in houses that other people have opened up for them if they don’t have relatives nearby?

Rich or poor, the houses were burned down and there they are, with their life turned upside down, with all of their security wiped away in a day! Is compassion not appropriate because . . . well, they created the experience for themselves?

Do you see? There is no love in that. And if you think that your spirituality brings you to a point where that attitude can be embraced and embodied by you, you are exhibiting a call for correction in your life—a need for your perceptions to change—so that you give up your independence and your isolation and you get involved in the “messiness,” I will say—the extreme demand for involvement—helping in unexpected situations with commitment and perseverance, to see to it that you are communicating to those who are suddenly at a disadvantage that whether they're rich or poor, they deserve to feel safe. They deserve to feel “joined with,” “in community with others,” in the midst of what they are experiencing as great loss and a call for great adjustment.

Listen, learn and do means abandoning your own independence by turning to the Holy Spirit and choosing not to operate independent from your right Mind which reflects the Mind of God, any longer. And in that joining, having the clarity unfold in you regarding the holy brother or sister that is your Savior, if you are willing to become involved in the most practical of ways, in the most grounded of ways that truly convey, not through spiritual wonderful lofty ideas, but perhaps, a hug, a gentle constancy of eye contact . . . that communicates connection and presence.

But of course, this takes time. In other words, it requires you to abandon whatever you so enjoy doing in your “spiritually-achieved independence and sovereignty.” Do you see what I’m saying?

You know what? You don’t get a spiritual understanding, you don’t study A Course in Miracles or any religion so that you can get a grasp on life as though it were something static to gain possession of, so that you’re never thrown into a position of dealing with the unknown. No.

“Life”—the very word,—means Movement . . . means vitality . . . means, for lack of better words, disturbance to the status quo, forever requiring you to look, to be conscious, with attentiveness to what you weren’t expecting to see, because Creation is never a repeat or a replay of anything. The very word, “Creation” embodies the Meaning of that which is forever new—forever unexpected. I will say, forever surprising!

But of course, if you think your study of Truth is going to get you to a point where Being is changeless . . . well, you will find yourself constantly frustrated because the dictum, “Behold I make all things new”² will constantly interfere with the status quo, with the “immovableness of Being” that you think the Presence of God is . . . because, of course, everything that is constantly revealing something new, called “the Universe” called “Creation” is an illusion, and you’re supposed to become free of that!

You never will.

And you will never become free of having to engage in the holy instant—in the practice of the two-step—in deferring constantly to Something other than your memory and your best judgments, arrived at on your own without a conscious joining with the Source of All that Is and fulfilling your Function, which is to acknowledge the Movement of that Source of All that Is, thus playing your part in Creation called “co-Creation.”

It’s so easy to look at others and judge, and come to the conclusion, for whatever the reason, spiritual or not, that they are unworthy of your attention. That they do not deserve it. And perhaps the most mean-spirited and worst reason that you could have for it, is that “they created it for themselves,” and they are the ones that must uncreate it. It’s not your job. And you don’t want it to be your job because it will interfere with you doing the fun things you want to do in your state of independence, where you're supposed to be free to enjoy whatever you want to enjoy, without distraction or interference, because that is what epitomizes the sublime state of holiness.

Anything which promotes and substantiates independence and is used as justification for not joining is the opposite of love and should be dishonored with vigor. How do you dishonor it with vigor? By engaging with your brother, by engaging with your sister, by letting yourself be disturbed and pulled out of your isolated reverie and looking at what is needed, with the intent to not use your memory or your best judgment, but to let yourself be in the “not knowing” place, where you are open to Revelation. Where you are open to the Vision that the Holy Spirit provides—which is nothing more than your right Mind.

What is happening today should not be happening. And you know what? I'm not speaking about what has happened in the past—what has been done in various countries in the past that has promoted what is happening today. It isn't that that shouldn't have happened. Today that's not the issue. What shouldn't be happening today is the self-righteous spiritual disregard of need, and the judgment of those in need, and the unwillingness to break the boundaries of the status-quo in the minds of the world to see a new answer that embodies the dignity and the high regard that every single individual involved in this dilemma deserves.

Listen, learn and do.

Part of the “doing” is watching your own thoughts. Be careful not to diminish your brothers and sisters, wherever they might be, or whatever circumstances they find themselves in. You may be able to get very high in your metaphysical thinking, your spiritual thinking, so that you say, “No matter how you look at it, no matter whether you think the benefit of the doubt should be given or not, every single one of those individuals has created their circumstance, and they need to uncreate it. Just as I am the only one who can uncreate my misperceptions, they are the only ones who can correct their misperceptions.”

But I'm telling you something right now: I'm correcting your misperceptions . . . misperceptions that perhaps you didn't know you were suffering from, and behavior that is the result of those misperceptions. And you couldn't possibly undo those misperceptions without the help of One who is not suffering from them.

So you are not able to correct your own misperceptions, because without help you don't know what those misperceptions are. And Someone has to take the time to share them with you and stay with you . . . and stay with you . . . and stay with you . . . until you see it and get it so that you can release it.

You could say that I am inconvenienced by your ignorance and your commitment to your ignorance. Wow, what an egotistical mean-spirited slant on things.

Just as I am, you are the presence of Love. You are the presence of That which is not only capable, but It is your nature and the very intent of your being for you to express It and let It interfere with your selfish, private, undisturbed activities that you would like to preserve at the expense of not only your brother's and sister's, but your discovery of your true Function, and Who and What you really Are.

What you don't extend to your brother, you don't get to keep for yourself.

Now I am saying that there is a great need here. And it is not just a temporary circumstance, a world circumstance that everyone will get through and come out on the other side of and be able to resume undisturbed, private activities that are a sign of everyone's practice of creating a pleasant world.

Right now the world is at a point . . . mankind, you, everyone is faced with the demand, the obligation—which is not going to pass—to be the presence of love that is willingly distracted from private, selfish endeavors and gratefully engages in, for lack of better words, problem solving, by reaching into the unknown for Answers that have never been had before, that meet the human need by uncovering the divinity of everyone. Love must replace selfishness.

Everyone is confronted with this demand. The whole globe is aware of the dilemma. And you know what? It's not just the dilemma of those who are departing their homelands, their homes, their belongings, everything that has meant something to them, but those who are subjected to the controlling, demeaning effects of selfish commercialism.

You know what? Every aspect of what you call human existence needs to be transformed into the expression of Love, where no matter how fulfillment is distributed, no matter whether dollars and cents exchange hands, the motive is the extension of and the manifesting of care, of the meeting of the human need, the extension of the evidence of well-being, rather than the getting of the evidence of well-being.

No matter how good your situation is, no matter whether you're one of the rich or well-to-do who has a home that's not under threat, or whether you are a so-called poor person—not living in a third-world country, but living in Chicago or Los Angeles or Timbuktu—who is having a difficult time making ends meet, you need to find ways to let every activity express caring, extend caring, because that's the way blessings occur. That's what makes the word "Brotherhood" mean something.

And because that can only be done by engaging in the holy instant, shutting up self-will and genuinely inquiring, "Father, what is the answer here? Holy Spirit, what is the truth here? What is the truth that I don't know yet, that answers this problem that I don't have the answer to, which seems to be overwhelming or impossible to deal with?" You see, that's Love. Putting one's self in the apparently vulnerable situation of not knowing and not assuming that you do know and not assuming that you ought to know, and something's wrong with you because you don't, and abiding in that "not knowing place," that pregnant silence with faithful attention, undefended against answers that you don't have yet. So that having listened, you might learn . . . and having learned, you might do.

You know, there are all kinds of refugees. And you should not assume that in some ways, you are not a refugee from something. You don't usually think of yourselves as refugees and those who are currently refugees don't ordinarily think of themselves as refugees either. And they know that they're not whatever that word negatively means.

Everyone needs to join together in that healthy appraisal, not only of yourselves, but of each other, so that the, perhaps, inconvenient answers can be embraced and acted upon. "Oh, gee whiz, you know I just got my kids raised. My husband or my wife and I have a chance to relax and not be engaged in the rigors of raising a child or raising children, and now you want me to consider taking in a refugee? I don't need that kind of disturbance. I don't need that kind of interruption of the fulfillment of my goal of privacy and independent fun.

Yes, you do. Because if you don't, part of what you are a refugee from, is a lack of brotherhood, and the loss of your own experience of your humanity. And that's not healthy, it's not wise, it's not good and it's not worthy of respect.

What is my theme tonight? My theme is: don't use A Course in Miracles and what it teaches, or what you think it teaches, don't let your spirituality and your love of God or your love of Truth become a tool by which you manage to remain aloof, untouched by any demand to be in that uncomfortable place of not knowing, so that you might know something beyond your present experience of knowing, and meet a need that was never there before, at least in your experience.

When Hitler invaded much of Europe, did the people in England create that experience for themselves? And was it up to them to undo it, to create a new experience? Were they victims of their own ignorance? And what about the Jews? "Oh, I know, there are ways to logically convict everyone who was imposed upon by Hitler—to convict them of being responsible for the experience they were having." But if that had been done, correction would not have occurred and freedom from the imposition of that which was unlike God would not have been enjoyed by everyone.

Caring, joining together, recognizing the worth of everyone who was imposed upon, and being willing to stand together with them and for them. That was what was called for and that was what happened. And everyone was imposed upon. Women had to go to work in factories—something relatively unheard of before—taken out of their homes and their roles of motherhood, to run lathes and equipment and manufacture things. Inconvenience occurred. Thank God that it was not ignored! Thank God that the inconvenience was not overlooked or refused attention!

You are the presence of love. And you are that which has the capacity to engage in the two-step, in the holy instant and ask to know the truth that goes beyond what you presently know, that answers needs that most everyone was ignorant, existed, or ignorant of the existence of. And again the fundamental problem that most everyone is unconscious of is: engaging in activities of all sorts for the purpose of getting instead of for the purpose of giving, where giving arises out of caring, out of feeling brotherhood.

You know what? Your brother is worth every ounce of energy you put forth to see his holiness and to confirm it to him over and over and over again. In as many ways as it takes in order for him to overcome his fear and let it go.

It's the way you come into a full experience of the holy One that you Are.

I love you all enough to make all of this very clear to you, to take the time to give the attention, to put forth the energy instead of rollicking around in the Kingdom of Heaven and strum my harp on a pink cloud. Love is about Brotherhood. A Course in Miracles indicates that the need is to be able to look into your brother's eyes and remember God because in that is not only the experience of your brother's holiness but the experience of yours. And you have nothing better to do than that.

I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

October 2nd 2015

—————oOo—————

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

We're going to talk about something simple tonight, but something profoundly important. Perhaps nothing new, but it is certainly my intent for it to register with you . . . deeply . . . sincerely . . . and transformationally.

I have said before: "As I have loved you, love one another."¹

It is time for the meaning of this to register. It is time for it to become supremely important. Not to ward off catastrophe, but rather, so as to be so in tune with, so in harmony with your Father and with the Function that it is yours to fulfill, that you fulfill It . . . and Its transformational benefit be felt around your globe.

As I have loved you . . . Well, how have I loved you?

Mind you, I am not speaking of as I have spoken with you through Paul. I am your Brother just as I am Paul's Brother. And I speak to you and I give you my attention individually, just as I do with Paul.

This is very important.

My communion with you has been ever-present and constant since you decided to act independent of your Source.

Now, I know that some of you—students of the Course—believe that individuality is an illusion. It is not! If individuality is an illusion, then who am I speaking to right now? And who is hearing me? That also must be an illusion. But it is not!

Your individuality is eternal, invulnerable, forever itSelf—forever the Father in expression—infinitely. Therefore the Father, for lack of better words, is eternally attentive to you, just as I am. And actually, just as all of the Awakened Brotherhood is.

It's very important for you to listen for me on your own, not just through Paul. It's important for you to have a desire to know the Truth and to be willing to sit down and become still and ask to Know it, and to ask it of me, or ask it of the Holy Spirit. But I am inviting you to ask it of me because it is my intent for you to experience our Brotherhood actually . . . yourself . . . in communion . . . in camaraderie . . . in dialogue . . . in the sharing of the experience of Reality.

Now, if the way I love you is individually, and you are to love your brother as I have loved you, how are you to love your brother? How are you to love your sister?

Individually.

You are to look into your brother's eyes and remember God. You are to let your intimate encounter with your brother or sister substantiate and evidence God. That means involvement. It doesn't mean thinking lofty ideas about each other without ever engaging in an act of brotherhood—an act of involvement.

It is time to once again be intimate! That is the way I love you . . . intimately. And, when you will allow it, actively, and through mutual exchange of awareness of each other and of whatever we care to consider together.

How do I love you? I love you Knowing that I am the Son of God. In other words, I love you not as a role, not as a figurehead, but as one who looks at you through his Father's eyes because I choose not to have a peculiar or specifically different way of looking at you than anyone else or even than the Father. You see?

As a result, I am always reflecting back to you the Father's Perspective of you, because it is mine. And again, it is mine because I have not chosen to indulge in a private perception of you. I have not taken on a role of "peculiar perceiver" that can see you in very unique ways and apply definitions to you that are very unique as well, which have nothing to do with the fact that you are the Son of the Father and that you are the evidence of the Father in expression, and you are not the evidence of a concept you have of yourself, or a role you have developed for yourself.

And so, because I look at you joined with the Father, seeing you through the Father's eyes, I confirm in you that which allows you to abandon the role you have adopted or the peculiar or quirky way you have of thinking about who you are and trying to live it and get everyone else to agree with it and cooperate with it and be influenced by it. You see?

If that's the way I love you, and you are to love your brother—the way I love you—then that is your Function as well. That is your task.

Now, it simply isn't the way everyone on your globe is behaving or being, because everyone is behaving on the basis of a role that they have made up for themselves or that they have been taught to identify as themselves. You see?

So everyone is living by . . . uh-h . . . a code of conduct, [chuckle] rather than because you're alive to Reality and seeing It for what It is, the way the Father is Being It, and joining with everyone in the enjoyment of that experience. You see?

You're living in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven. You're living in the middle of Reality without being conscious of It and without being able to enjoy It, because you're all so busy creating and confirming a unique and peculiar slant on everything. And in that sense you're all living out fantasy and missing what's really going on.

The strife on your globe is evidence of having become ungrounded, of having forgotten to love, of having abandoned being intimate with each other . . . and, indeed, with everything . . . from the perspective of That which created it—that infinite Mind with infinitely expressed ideas that is all there is to the mind you have.

Love needs to come back into the picture. Intimacy needs to be restored.

What happens when I join with the Father and look at you and see you as you are in Truth, while you are seeing yourself otherwise? Well, everything that comes out of my mouth, everything that I express to you, whether it's through Paul or whether it's directly, has one function—one purpose—and it embodies what Love means.

I share what restores your faith, what restores your spirit, what restores your Soul to you . . . I share the Good News. I do not criticize you for the ignorance you're suffering from. I do not condemn you. I do not call for penalty. I engage in sharing what illuminates the Truth to you about you, compassionately, gently, but emphatically. And this is the way one becomes an agent for change. This is the way one finds himself as a Son of God restored to Himself.

How is it? Not by finding a way to define oneself better, but by caring about your brother enough to ask of the Father what the Truth is about your brother . . . and, in the process of having that revealed to you, finding that your right Mind has been restored to you, or is being restored to you as you persist in wanting to know what the Truth is.

Because you're willing to become intimate with your brother, undefended and with a reduced distance between the two of you, you become the epitome of Love and that is felt by your brother.

Now you could say, "Well, I can love the whole world!" but that's a very easy way of avoiding actual involvement, actual communion, actual connection, actual relationship.

"As I have loved you" . . . as I have loved you . . . "love one another." Your brother is worth it. You are worth it for me. I will not cease to be connected and intimate with every single one of you. And my connection with you will have for its sole purpose your Awakening—your rediscovery of your right Mind and your embracing of It, which is called the Holy Spirit.

And you know what? Those on your globe are not the only ones dreaming dreams and believing they are real. Every single one of the Awakened Brotherhood are intimately and attentively, and compassionately connected and communing with every one of the Brotherhood who are still suffering from their dreams, as well as all of the rest who are Awake.

I want this to be very clear. There is no such thing as being aloof in Reality. There is infinite intimacy, without confusion, without overwhelm. Love embraces consciously every single aspect of Creation. And that includes you. Do you see?

When you find yourself consumed with judgment, or when you find judgment beginning to creep in, be alert . . . be alert. That isn't an expression of love and therefore, whatever follows will constitute the undoing of the experience of love, the undoing of the experience of well-being and it will seem to create conflict in you. That's the important point. It causes you to lose your experience of who you divinely are as the Son or Daughter of God. And you become a concept that you entertain about yourself, and roles which you adopt and express—different roles in different circumstances—and that reinforces the function or the so-called purpose of roles for others as well.

Now, I touched on this the last time we were together: You are, on your globe, approaching a threshold. You are approaching a time in which self-serving selfishness, self-serving greed, self-serving activities will no longer be able to be entertained and expressed and create an acceptable level of comfort and functionality.

The practice of selfishness has increased to a point where it is becoming obvious that it is a problem, that it is a call for correction. There will be no peace if it continues to be practiced. And it will call for the simple remembrance of what I'm saying: "As I have loved you, love one another."

Humaneness—the expression of humanity, one to another—is an intimate one-on-one expression, because there is a valuing of each other, and because there is a humility that allows simple needs, basic needs, to be recognized and fulfilled, not ignored in favor of complicated, conceptual, mental structures and codes of behavior that are used to get the advantage at the expense of each other.

This is a time of transition, which everyone can dare to embrace with expectancy and gratitude because it is a threshold, a breakthrough in which bondage will be abandoned and release will come.

But again, it will come because there has been a shift in attitude, where independence and separation have been recognized as destructive. And in the light of that realization everyone can dare to care intimately and simply and individually with each other, with the inevitable benefit of the encounters being transformational, because God was called into the picture when you chose to look at and be involved individually with your brother or your sister, so that you could see him or see her through your Father's eyes, and therefore, see them as you were created to see them, as you are currently being expressed by the Father, fulfilling your purpose.

Pay attention! And watch to see what excuses you use for not being intimate, or for not even being willing to try to be intimate. To whatever degree that comes up, you are being selfish, you are engaged in selfishness, which has a benefit to you—you think—that you are unwilling to give up. It's unreasonable to give it up, but you're going to have to, because you are the holy Son or Daughter of God in whom the Father is well pleased and whose Birthright it is to be who you divinely Are . . . to no longer be bound by a bondage that you don't see at the moment, except that you are watching the evidence of this general miasma taking form in the world and requiring a reevaluation, requiring learning to occur.

That's what my love does. You learn from the way I treat you. You learn from the way I consider you. You learn a new or different way of considering yourself, which awakens in you a desire to be in new ways. It's your job to bring this to your brothers and sisters. Why? because it reveals the Truth. It brings about Awakening. It amounts to you coming back into your right Mind, your Sanity.

Now it says in the Course that it is not possible to teach what Love is. And that's true. But I can tell you how to find out what It is. And that's what I've been doing. You can find out what It is by being willing to move into the intimacy of individual involvement with your brothers and your sisters with the intent to see them through your Father's eyes, so that you might remember God in them and thus be transformed by the renewing of your Mind² and the willingness to be in that place where you don't know how to be in that place ahead of time. That reveals to you what Love is. You see?

I told you that we would be talking about something simple, and it is. And I told you that we would be talking about something profound, and it is. And I told you that it would be expressed gently, and it has been. And that is the nature of Love. But I want you also to know that when you desire to be the expression of Love by virtue of letting the Father reveal to you what the behavior is that identifies It, you will not be a wimp, you will not be some spiritual pushover, because you will also recognize where correction is called for, and Love will address it—will address the correction firmly, unequivocally, gently, with respect for the holy one who, at the moment, needs to learn something new.

This will not put you in a new role of being a “teacher.” But if you stop and think about it for a moment, it puts you in a Movement of Being, which is illuminating—the illumination coming from the Father whose perspective is finding expression through you—and the illumination will cause learning, and you will be being a teacher. But that will be irrelevant to you, and it won't be a role of any kind. It will be the nature of Being in expression, harmonizing the inharmonious, healing the sick, raising the dead.

What more can I say?

I promise you, I will have lots more to say, because it's my Function to be your Brother. And you may know that I have lots to say in the spirit of Brotherhood to you directly on an individual basis, on a basis that will confirm the eternality of your individuality and its Reality. And that in itself is an incredible learning experience.

I love you all very much, infinitely, eternally, with ever present attention to you. I Know you. And it's okay for me to know each of you individually. And it's okay for you to get to know each other individually through the Awakened awareness that comes from desiring to see each other from the Father's perspective.

I look forward to being with you next time.

A COURSE IN MIRACLES STUDY GROUP WITH RAJ

October 21st 2015

—————oOo—————

Good evening. And welcome to everyone who's joining us on the Internet.

For the last few weeks we've been discussing looking into our brother's eyes and remembering God (instead of looking into our brother's eyes and seeing our definition of them or their definition of themselves), and that the call at the present time around your globe is for the bringing forth of acts of humanity—the call for behavior that embodies Love, that embodies respect, that embodies the honoring of the divinity of everyone you come in contact with. And in fact, it needs to be extended to every thing on your globe—the Earth itself, the life, the plants, and so on and so forth.

Honor and respect need to be brought to it all because it is all the divine expression of God. Why? As I've been saying before, because you are smack dab in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven, calling it something else and, in the process of calling it something else, treating it inhumanely—treating it without respect, treating it as though it is there to fulfill selfish purposes. The opposite of Gift.

Inhumanity to man must be replaced with humanity itself. And humanity is not an idea, it's an expression—a behavior! That makes all the difference in the world, because it's not manipulative and because it bestows on the recipient of the behavior, a fundamental knowledge of holiness.

This is what is needed.

One would think that this would be embraced enthusiastically. But, of course, it's not. It's not because it means many—the majority—would have to abandon, give up, all of the means they have used to make themselves important, respectable and as wealthy as possible . . . and, at the expense of others if necessary . . . or even if possible. It becomes a goal.

Now someone recently, since I have been sharing these needs, these ideas, suggested that maybe Paul is no longer “channeling” Jesus because what's being said is inconsistent with the Course, in that it would bring truth to illusion . . . it would bring truth to illusion . . . as though letting one's brother be the focus of his attention was to bring truth to an illusion.

But let's be clear on what it means to bring truth to illusion.

Here's an example of bringing truth to illusion:

One looks at the world and says, "Oh, it's a material world that started from a 'Big Bang.' It is a physical event . . . a purely physical event that can be explained through physics . . . and it has nothing to do with anything other than matter, period."

In other words, there's nothing beyond or before the Big Bang. There is no God. And so, to look at the world and apply a definition to it that says, "it is a material world" is to bring truth to illusion.

In other words it is not true that the world is a physical material universe, but to declare that it is, is to make a truth of the statement, a truth of the concept. And so truth has been brought to something which is not true and has been applied to it, and everyone has been encouraged to embrace that concept. That's bringing truth to illusion.

What's bringing truth to illusion? It's looking at a brother or a sister and saying: "God, she's ugly!" or "Boy, what a deformity that fellow has. It's a shame isn't it!" And what is seen, and the definition given to it, is treated as though it's true . . . as though it is truth . . . even though at the bottom line, it doesn't at all reflect or express anything of the holiness and integrity and perfection of those individuals. But! It's taken to be the truth and it's not challenged.

How do you bring truth to illusion?¹ You say that "life is terminal." You say that "sin, sickness and death are real." "Everyone will die." "It's a fact" . . . you see? . . . even though Life is eternal. "Oh, everyone will die." That's making a truth out of illusion. That's bringing truth, or the idea of truth, to an illusion and applying it to the illusion and stating it as a fact . . . which therefore one would not bother to challenge.

Oh, I know . . . it is said that, "Well, it's the truth for now. But after you die and you go to Heaven, you discover that all along you've been eternal and you are eternal and life is eternal." You see? And so, one weasel's his way out of any need to challenge the "truths" that had been conceived, imagined and applied, and which cause one to never look into his brother's eyes and remember God, and never to look at someone with a disease and see healing occur, or challenge the terminality of a disease successfully. That's bringing truth to illusion. You see?

Now the problem is, that when one talks about what I've just shared, of bringing truth to illusion, when one looks and sees a material world and universe where birth, sin, sickness and death are "facts," where humanity is nothing but a collection of psychological neuroses, we'll say, or concepts that are arising out of electrical synapsis in the brain—a piece of meat—when one looks at that, one takes that as the starting point. And that's where the mistake lies. If you take that as the starting point, you're taking that as the given—as the fundamental fact. Truth has been brought to illusion.

And so, one is stuck. One has no way out.

But if you're going to bring illusion to truth, your starting point must be . . . that God is All. And the Movement of the infinite Mind that God is, is the Movement of Creation. And Creation is the, I'm going to say, emergence of Ideas forever new. And those Ideas are perfectly experienceable by the Mind that forms them. And on that basis, in spite of what everyone has been educated to believe, everyone is in the middle of the Kingdom of Heaven.

With this as the fundamental starting point, then you look at whatever is in front of you in your world—which currently you are defining as a “material world and universe”—and you desire to see the more of what God is Being right there than registers with you when you are looking at it through your very confined definitions and beliefs. You see?

So, you must look into your brother's eyes. Why? To see God. And you must look at the trees and the plants and the fish. Why? To see God—to see the more of what's there than your limited definitions are allowing you to see. This is the way you bring illusion to truth.

You bring illusion to truth by looking at what you are deluded about with a very specific desire to see the Truth of it . . . to see the Presence of God there. And this is absolutely consistent with what the Course teaches. It is the function of the holy instant—the practice of which puts you in a position of having the Father's Perspective revealed to you because you're willing to abandon what you thought everything was, in favor of the experience of what God is actually Being . . . so that you might wake up to the Truth. Do you see?

It's very simple and straight-forward.

What makes it complicated is the devotion you have to your concept or definition of yourself which, of course, not acknowledging and honoring your holiness, causes you to engage in the very manipulations that I was speaking of . . . where you manipulate and control to the best of your ability and with the greatest skill you have available to you, to cause your brother to behave nicely toward you and to in any way possible get him to cross your palms with silver and make you wealthy, even if in the process he becomes a little poorer.

And if you're really skillful, you can make him feel not so bad about being poorer. You see? All of this because you don't Know who you Are.

You think you are a mortal. You think you are, perhaps, part of God's Creation who has been given free will and set you free to pursue your life's goals . . . your health, wealth and happiness . . . on your own.

If you believe that, then it is not a very interesting prospect to consider yielding to the Father—yielding up your authority that you think you have—losing the benefit of screwing your brothers and sisters out of their good, to your benefit, and hopefully being able to do it in a way that causes them not to feel bad.

Now, the only way you can look into your brother's eyes and remember God, is to want to see God yourself—is to want to have a different perspective than the one you're currently employing. And as I've said before, it doesn't have to be a terminal disease or a horrendous life situation to put you at a point of willingness to reach beyond your apparent capacities that you thought would always be sufficient to keep you "healthy, wealthy and wise." It doesn't take that.

But, when you decide you want to Wake up without a catastrophe motivating it, it takes some conscientiousness. It takes some courage, because you're used to being able to exercise control pretty well. And it feels good. And it feels right. And it says something to you about your nature and your character . . . all of which feeds your ego.

Now, if you think that practicing the holy instant, or if you think that anything in the Course in Miracles is geared toward the improvement of your ego, the improvement of your ability to be independent, you're wrong. And it's important to know that.

It's going to move you out of that. It's going to move you into a new "space." That's where the courage comes in. And that's where the fulfillment awaits. And that's where the persistence and the commitment come into play.

Now, the holy instant—the two-step, as I've called it—where you shut up your thinking and you meditate, or in some way become still in your mind, and then you let there be a single idea, "Father, share with me the Truth." "What is the Truth that it's my Birthright to be experiencing, that returns my Sanity to me?" . . .

[Now it doesn't take that many words, but that's the meaning behind the simple thought in the middle of the Silence that you've chosen to move into.]

. . . Now, when the Revelation occurs, when the Father or the Holy Spirit conveys to you the Truth, you are moved by It. It changes you. And if you are with someone when this is happening, and you share what you're experiencing—you share what you're hearing, you're sharing the view that you're having and what it means—whoever you're sharing it with will feel blessed.

But you know what? You will not have been trying to bless that person. You will not have been trying to do anything. In fact, here is the important point: You will not have been self-conscious at all. You certainly will have been the presence of the movement of illumination in expression—an expression that your brother or sister who is with you could hear and understand and be blessed by—but that would be irrelevant to you. That is irrelevant to you when that's happening. And this is a new experience of who you Are.

It's an experience of being the presence of Love, the presence of Life, the presence of Truth, the presence of Mind, the presence of Soul, the presence of Spirit and the fundamental presence of Principle . . . all without trying. And all without an intent to impress or teach in any way, because you weren't self-conscious. You didn't have yourself on your mind.

Now, maybe you didn't have yourself on your mind. Maybe you weren't self-conscious. But you didn't disappear! And whoever was with you when you were sharing, will have found "being with you” to be much more significant and much more valuable than when you were talking with him or her from your concept of yourself, from who you thought you were, from the role you were playing as part of your manipulation of your world to make you happy, healthy, wealthy and wise. You see?

So, when you become who you Are, which occurs in the holy instant, when you behave in a new way with your brother or sister from the perspective of the Father—the perspective of the Holy Spirit that is revealed to you—you’re arriving at Home. And the point of the holy instant is to bring you into that conscious experience of Being which is unified. Not one where you disappear. Not one where your presence is meaningless, but where what the Father is Being right there as You takes on the fullness of His Creation that He embodied, embodies, is embodying in You.

It’s a different experience.

You could say it feels like a different function. And yet, when it’s happening you don’t even have a definition for that. You just Know that you’re Home. You just Know that this is Reality. It changes the way you experience everything. Everything looks like, feels like and is the Kingdom of Heaven to you when you don’t have yourself on your mind, when you’re letting the Father’s perspective be what you have on your mind . . . when you let that be what’s on your mind.

As one of the disciples said: “Let that mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus.”² You see? Then you’re being who you Are, and “understanding” who you Are, conceptually, intellectually, gets swallowed up in the experience, the fullness, the wholeness of being what you Are.

Now, I will share this with you: After the Resurrection my disciples were left with the call to follow me, to do the works that I did. And that did not just include my disciples, but all of mankind. “Follow thou me.”³ Follow me in joining in the holy instant with the Holy Spirit—which is nothing more than your right Mind, your divine Sanity. Join with the Father and be from that vantage point. And vantage point, are not the right words, but they convey the meaning.

The message left for all mankind was: Do this! Be from this Perspective! And don’t stop! It will not help you be a better mortal, who will live longer and make more money. It will let you fit in with the Movement of Being—the Presence of God in action called Creation—and Gift everything with a clear apprehension of what it is and acknowledge it. And, in the acknowledgement of it, gift it with the Love of the recognition of the Father in it.

As you do that, as you begin right where you are, looking into your brother’s eyes, looking at your world, looking at each thing in it, with the desire to see the more of what God is Being, you are bringing illusion to Truth and it will be uncovered to you. And it will be uncovered to you right where your misperception was going on. In other words, right where the illusion was being perceived.

So do not misunderstand. You must look at the illusion by looking through it to what is beyond the definition that is keeping your vision limited, because you don't want to be stuck with surface appearances and imaginary definitions that aren't true . . . and then call them truth.

Now I want to bring up one more thing. There are elections going on, and they have been going on in many parts of the world over the past few months. And there is a clamoring amongst the citizens of these various countries—a clamoring for integrity and honesty and a push to have those who are governing, not be governed by, we'll say, Wall Street or the big money around the globe.

They want their politicians to stop selling their souls. Because as long as they have sold their souls they can't afford to be honest, because they have to serve the ones who own their soul, the ones with whom they have a contract, when supposedly they are supposed to have the contract with the people they represent. And there is a lot of self-righteousness expressed about those who have sold their souls. But there's no love in that, and there's no perspective in that. And there's much need for perspective, because with perspective there can be love.

The saying is: People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones.

There's almost no one who can hear my voice who hasn't sold their soul already. They sold their soul to a partnership with another brother or sister, holy Sons or Daughters of God, by making a pact and together saying to the Father, "We'd rather do it our way," and "human will" was born. And the human wills were orphans because they had disowned their Father—their Source.

We've talked about this before, but I'm bringing it out in this context because it's important.

Don't be self-righteously, mean-spiritedly critical of your brothers who have sold themselves to big money, or to a constituency or to an organization, because you have done likewise.

You sell your soul to your wife. You don't want to make her mad, and so you're careful what you say. You don't want to make enemies with your family, and so you are dishonest at times. You also want to be, let us say, a good "father," and a good "husband," or a good "wife," or a good "son," and so you're dishonest in the attempt to fit a concept of what a good son, a good husband, a good wife and so on, is. You're willing to do whatever it takes to fulfill a role, when you aren't in touch with your soul.

Now here's what needs to be looked at: How do you get in touch with your soul again? In other words, how do you arrive at a point where you shift from selling your soul to sharing your soul? The only way to do it, no matter what words are used to express it is, what is embodied and shared in A Course in Miracles. It is through the practice of the holy instant for the purpose of having a holy relationship. And we've already talked about that.

It requires setting aside your best judgments, your best definitions, your best skills at manipulating without upsetting people too much, and even perhaps making them feel good. It means abandoning those things. It means abandoning control, and it means becoming still as a role, becoming still as a personality, becoming free of being the best or the highest or the most worthwhile. It means abandoning being self-conscious, where you have yourself on your mind. And it means in the silence within you leaning into something other than you—at least at that moment what you think you are—and letting yourself be filled with the conscious awareness of what is Real, what is True, and then being from there and not abandoning that position.

Now, until you can do that, you cannot afford to be self-righteously indignant at your fellowman who's not sharing his soul either because he has sold it and is still serving the one or ones to whom he has sold it.

Now, let's be perfectly clear. That doesn't mean that you approve of the behavior that comes from those who have sold their soul. But the correction that is called for is not going to come through the normal channels of manipulation. And I'm being perfectly clear here with you, because every single individuality on your globe has the opportunity to be part of the shift that isn't one of "manipulation," of "control," where the furtherance of self-righteousness and egotism can occur.

The call is for everyone to dare to take seriously the meaning of the holy instant and the desire for a holy relationship and persisting in the attempt, in the intent and in the accomplishment of it, more, and more, and more, and more, until it is continuous, because you have discovered that it is too uncomfortable to not be able to share your soul. It's too uncomfortable not to Gift everything with the acknowledgement of what it truly Is. It's too confining, it's too dark, it's too miserable . . . and besides it's full of sin, sickness and death.

You see?

You are the unself-conscious presence of Mind, being the flow of the Movement of God and being utterly appropriate in every moment, blessing everything in every moment because you're playing your part as co-creator in recognizing and acknowledging God in it All, without having yourself on your mind for a moment. And I will tell you that that is utter freedom and it is utter bliss and it is your Birthright.

Don't hesitate to bring illusion to truth and do stop bringing truth to illusion.

I love you all and I look forward to being with you next time.
