

Stephanie Clergé Biography

Stephanie Clergé is a leadership and professional development coach and speaker specializing in strengths-based development of individuals and teams, enabling them to maximize their performance. Stephanie believes that our strength comes from the intersection of our competence and character, and harnessing that strength enables us to lead intentional and fulfilled lives. She enjoys working with high potential leaders and change agents across many industries who appreciate a practical approach to making a positive difference in the lives of others.

Stephanie has worked in the technology industry for nearly 15 years serving as a program and people manager and corporate leadership coach. She holds an Industrial Engineering degree from Stanford University and an MBA from Babson College, where she grew her love for all things entrepreneurial. She completed a Coaching Certification from the Hudson Institute of Coaching and is an Associate Certified Coach of the International Coaching Federation.

Stephanie enjoys spending time with her husband and two young children, volunteering at education-related non-profits and finding new outlets for her creativity and curiosity.