Stephanie Clergé

Biography

A native of Arizona, Stephanie Clergé graduated from Stanford University with a degree in Industrial Engineering and Management Science. After graduation she joined Intel Corporation where she worked for nearly 15 years, developing teams to meet complex operational goals in the Technology Manufacturing Group. She earned an MBA from Babson College, focusing on corporate entrepreneurship and holds a Leadership Coaching Certification from the Hudson Institute of Coaching. Several years ago she started StrengthsPRO, a leadership development firm specializing in transforming managers into leaders and groups of individuals into high performing teams through the use of their collective talents.

Keynotes / Master's Level Speaking

Lead Like An Engineer

Leadership and engineering don't often occur in the same sentence, but they probably should. The two constructs have so much in common that borrowing a page from one another's playbook only makes sense. From problem solving to data analysis to systems thinking, learn how to add these necessary tools and more to your unique leadership situation and style. Discover an innovative new approach to leadership that challenges your thinking around how to achieve optimal business results.

Enlisting Maximum Performance

We've all seen the dismal employee engagement statistics, and more importantly we've experienced the lack of engagement or requisite performance in our organizations. But do you know what your personal role is in bringing out the best in each individual on your team or in your organization? Join Stephanie on a powerful journey to discover how to engage both the high potential and hidden potential employees exploring the various levers of culture, processes and leadership and their connection to individual and collective results.

Supporting Excellence: Elevating the Role of Business Partner

Being in a business support function is often anything but glamorous. In fact, it is often a thankless job. Whether putting out fires or preventing them from happening, you rarely get the same attention as the fire starters—the business leaders and employees in “revenue-generating” departments. And yet you are a key member of the team looking for ways to continuously improve your level of service and the impact you make on the business. Drawing from nearly half of her 15 year career in hi-tech in a role as liaison between operational leadership and HR, Finance, Procurement, and Facilities, Stephanie explores the fundamentals of how to create the partnership and outcomes you desire.

“Stephanie is a rare breed of insightful and mindful coach focused on stretching you beyond your obstacles and perceived limitations.”
