W. Yoder Barbershop Auction, A Cut Above The Rest

Article & photos by W. Yoder Auction

On Saturday, April 20th, W. Yoder Auction held a sale at their facility in Wautoma, Wisconsin. The auction featured a nice collection of Occupational Shaving Mugs, Barber Shop, Art and Antiques and lots of other fantastic items. It was a nice sale to get everyone in the spring auction spirit! And bidders got to take home some great items for their collections.

Included in the sale was a nice collection of barber chairs, barber poles, razors, straps, as well as shaving blades. Other items included a WWI cannon replica, an unusual dentist chair, approximately 20 wooden duck decoys and much more.

Also featured in the sale were a huge art work collection, many were signed by the artist (oils, water colors, prints, sketches and photographs).

W Yoder Auction was founded by Wayne Yoder Jr. in 1999, and has been a member of the National Auctioneers Association since 2002. When asked why he became an auctioneer, he will tell you it is because he enjoys the many different types of people he meets across the country that come to the auctions and the action each auction provides. In 2008, Wayne became the Wisconsin Auctioneer State Champion when he participated in the competition held every year at the Wisconsin State Fair located in Milwaukee, WI. "It was a wonderful experience that I will never forget." He had participated in the competition 3 times prior to winning and each year learned from his mistakes and bettered himself. His hard work shows through in every auction that he has.

"Ya Snooze Ya Lose" As The Saying Goes

Article & Photos by Michelle Goltz

When I arrived the parking lot was full and people were also parking on the street which always puts a smile on my face! I love seeing the crowds and enthusiasm, not only with the vendors but the guests that are at the show searching for that perfect treasure and eager to hear information regarding the piece. The crowds stayed steady which makes my stay a bit longer but I don't mind at all. I am happy to step aside so that the vendors can tend to a guest, it gives me a chance to hear more stories and what some of the people are fascinated with as well. One thing about going to an antique show it is very different then just going shopping, you won't find multiples of the same item. I only stepped aside for about a minute trying to decide if I wanted to purchase a stained glass piece with a tree and in that short time someone walked up and started talking about it and bought it. "ya snooze ya lose". So if you see it and want, it you usually have to make the decision sooner than later! I still left with a few small treasures that I was happy to come across. If you are interested in the next show you can check out oregongfwc.org.

Dodgeville Lion's Club Antique Show & Flea Market

A Great Event To Attend

Article by Bob Kratochwill (Dodgeville Lions Club)

The Dodgeville Lions Antique Show and Flea Market is a great show to attend. Located at Ley Pavilion at Harris Park in Dodgeville, Wisconsin, they sale is from 8:00 AM to 3:00 PM. In June there were sixty four dealer spaces filled with great merchandise for shoppers. Photos attached show some of the merchandise from the June Show. Several shoppers commented on how pleased they were to see so many quality antique items available for purchase. Comments of this nature are pleasing to hear but shouldn't take away from many great older collectibles also available. A great selection of vintage, older toys and other collectibles were available and many more will be available at the upcoming show.

All spaces are inside the Ley Pavilion and shopping is leisurely and uncrowded. Repeat dealers return for shoppers looking for their favorites. This show held twice yearly has been ongoing for twenty seven years. Some dealers go back to the beginning years and are very pleased with the venue.

The August 25th date promises to have a great selection of items available for buyers to review. Our venue is rain free. We have a great snack bar to also include fresh baked pies available for purchase by the piece. Have one alameda with a fresh cup of coffee. The Dodgeville

Lioness Club is responsible for the pies and they are always a sellout.

Get in your car and "drift" on over to Dodgeville and enjoy the beautiful scenery in an area noted for being in the Driftless Un-glaciated part of the country.

DON'T MISS THIS EVENT FOR A FUN FILLED SUNDAY AFTERNOON TREAT.

Accent on Antique Phonographs

Mark your calendars for the Grayslake, IL Accent on Phonographs show September 7-8th. This is a venue to promote the phonograph hobby as part of Grayslake, IL Antique Market.

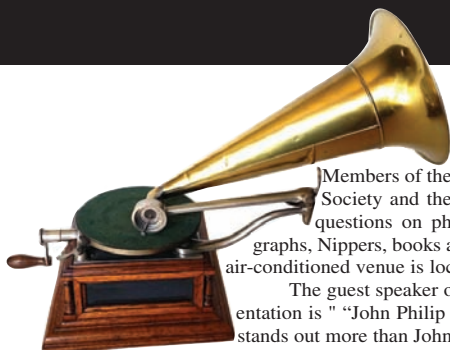

Members of the Wisconsin Illinois Phonograph Society, The Antique Phonograph Society and the Music Box Society International will be at the show to answer questions on phonographs, records, and music boxes. Vintage records, phonographs, Nippers, books and related items will be on display and for sale. This large indoor, air-conditioned venue is located about 30 miles North of Chicago.

The guest speaker on September 7, at 1:00 will be John Hauger. The title of his presentation is "John Philip Sousa: The March King" Among America's music icons, no one stands out more than John Philip Sousa. Studying music as early as six years old, his talent was soon evident to his father, who was conductor of the United States Marine Band. Invited to the Paris Exposition of 1900, Sousa's music gave Europe a fresh look at culture and refinement in the United States. Soon, tours took the Sousa Band around the world. World War I saw Sousa enlisted in the Navy, raising funds with his band to support the enormous War effort. In later life, Sousa crisscrossed the country encouraging high schools to develop top-notch bands and orchestras. Sousa's untiring efforts and international stature as well as composing over 100 marches, 9 operettas along with many orchestral suites, have given him the well-deserved title of "The March King".

Antiques & Appraising School Launches “New” e-Course

Article by Charles Green (Ashford Institute of Antiques)

The Ashford Institute of Antiques (AIA), a professional-level distance learning program on antiques, collectibles and appraising, recently rolled out its first ever online "e-Course," at an industry trade gathering earlier this month, in anticipation of the school's 50th anniversary to be held in New York later this year.

Described by school spokesperson Shelly Dumont, as a watershed moment for the Institute, Dumont said the school's first foray into e-learning was consistent with Ashford's innovative and groundbreaking teaching techniques employed over the last 50 years. "When we offer something new, we like to take the time to make sure it's done right," said Dumont at a Q & A session following the announcement.

When asked about the differences in curriculum between textbooks and the new e-Course format of the program, Dumont said there was literally no comparison. "In terms of sheer volume, it's almost double the size of the printed version, and comes loaded with interactive videos, multimedia-activities, web-based resource links, and a host of other features we simply can't add into the texts." Dumont went on to say that the e-Course had been in development for almost two years by the school's IT team, before any release dates were even considered.

Industry insiders attending the trade gathering were granted temporary passcodes to the e-Course, and were given full access to the programs options and features at a demonstration held during the event. Director of the school, Charles Green presided over the presentation, and noted during the unveiling, that the program had undergone almost a year of beta-testing by international students prior to its intended release in North America.

A statement issued from the school's Admissions Officer, Tony Drew seemed to indicate a "full" release date for the new e-Course to be some time in mid-July. "We don't want to rush it, but we're really pleased with the response so far," said Drew, "We think the e-Course is really going to be a game-changer when it comes to setting the bar for future antiques and appraising education." The press release went on to say that while the textbooks for the Ashford program were still available, they would likely be phased out in the next five to ten years.

For readers seeking more information about the school's new e-Course program, they can be contacted at: (877) 444-4508 or visit their web site at; www.ashford.com. The History of the Nelson McCoy Pottery

By Dewayne Imsand

In 1910, Nelson McCoy Sr., with help from his father and along with five stockholders, established the Nelson McCoy Sanitary and Stoneware Company in Roseville, Ohio. The pottery produced utilitarian stoneware and operated successfully until about 1919. At that time the pottery joined with eleven other stoneware potteries and formed the American Clay Products Company, which was located in Zanesville, Ohio. All of the member potteries produced stoneware to be marketed by the new company. The ACPC produced sales catalogs of the wares that were produced, which purposely had no trademark, and had salesmen to advertise and take orders. The pottery orders received by the company were shared among the different potteries based on production capability, and the revenue received was proportionally distributed.

The ACPC thrived until January 1926, at which time the company was liquidated. The demise of the company released the former member potteries to once again become independent and they became in direct competition with one another. Also around this time the demand for utilitarian stoneware was beginning to decrease.

In order to re-establish its own identity, and also to reflect the changing times, the Nelson McCoy Sanitary and Stoneware Co., by 1929, had changed its name to the Nelson McCoy Sanitary Stoneware Co. Additionally, it was around this time that the company began the practice of marking its wares. No evidence has been found that the company had ever marked any of its wares prior to this time. In 1933, in response to a further decreased demand for food and sanitary wares, and an increased demand for decorative pieces, the name of the pottery was changed again. The pottery became simply, the Nelson McCoy Pottery Co.

Nelson McCoy Sr., Nelson Melick, and later Nelson McCoy Jr., in turn, operated the pottery for 57 years until it was sold in 1967 to the owners of the Mt. Clemens Pottery Co., although Nelson McCoy Jr. remained as president of the pottery. After about seven years of operation the Lancaster Colony Corporation purchased the pottery in 1974. In 1981 Nelson McCoy Jr. retired. In 1985, the pottery was sold once again, this time to Designer Accents of New Jersey. Some months earlier, Designer Accents had acquired two other potteries, Holiday Designs of Sebring, Ohio and their Sebring Studios division. Designer Accents also acquired the Sunstone Pottery of Cambridge, Ohio.

All production at these potteries was moved to the Nelson McCoy Pottery. The production of some of the wares formerly produced was continued, and other wares were discontinued. The ware formerly produced by Holiday Designs, being lower priced items, was discontinued, while the higher priced wares from Sebring Studios were continued for some time. The ware produced under the name Sebring Studios was marked with only a style number.

Selected items previously made by the McCoy pottery, and some newly designed items, were marketed by Designer Accents under the name Nelson McCoy Ceramics. Some of these items have the familiar McCoy name on them. The Floraline line with its distinctive mark, first produced by the Nelson McCoy Pottery in 1960, was also continued.

Designer Accents operated for about five years until late 1990 when the doors were finally closed. The portion of the pottery containing the offices burned in the fall of 1991.

History of R.S. Prussia

History of the Company
By Lee Marple

Much of the historical information about R.S. Prussia in antique publications prior to 1994 is incorrect. Although not known until long after the fact, a detailed history of the ownership and economic fortunes of the Reinhold Schlegelmilch Porcelain Factory was described in Brend Hartwich's 1984 thesis. Information in his thesis was not available in America until the translation was published in 1993 (Int'l Society R.S. Prussia Collectors, Inc). Perhaps the best discussion of the inaccuracies concerning Reinhold's porcelain factory can be found in the first part of Capers Notes on the Marks of Prussia, (Alphabet Printing Inc., 1996).

For a long time, it was thought that Reinhold and Erdmann were brothers who jointly owned or ran the factory at Suhl, Germany. In actual fact, there were two factories in Suhl, Erdmann's and Reinhold's. Contrary to folklore, these two operations were in direct competition with each other. Reinhold's factory was founded and initially owned by Reinhold, and subsequently with his two sons, Ehrhard and Arnold. Arnold took over an existing porcelain factory in Tillowitz in 1894, and continued to run it as part of the Reinhold Schlegelmilch enterprise until he died in 1934. Erdmann's factory, in contrast, was founded and originally owned by Leonhard Schlegelmilch. Later on, Oscar, Julius Martin, and Carl Schlegelmilch had a hand in owning and/or running the factory. Oscar Schlegelmilch eventually started his own factory in Langenwiesen, and Julius eventually (1899) took over the ownership of Erdmann's Suhl operation. The historical research by Ron Capers shows there was no blood relationship between Leonhard and Reinhold Schlegelmilch.

From the time of founding up to 1892, it appears that little porcelain was exported to America from Reinhold's factory. At the present time, we know for sure what just a few of these early products look like. Objects in several mold patterns used between 1889 and 1892 are known to be marked with the RS "Arrow" mark. Unfortunately, "Arrow" marked objects do not appear in any of the 1892-93 catalogs we have accessed. This may explain the small degree of overlap of "Arrow" marked mold and transfer patterns with other marked examples in the RS continuum of products from later years. Beginning 1893, US wholesale firms began to import larger quantities of china tableware from Europe, and almost all was from Reinhold's factory. Two events in 1894 appeared to have a significant on Reinhold's production. First, the second factory in Tillowitz, (Upper Silesia) began to make far less expensive porcelain than the one in Suhl, owing to the closer proximity of raw materials, and the abundance of cheap labor. Second, the very high US import tariff on decorated porcelain was substantially lowered by the Tariff Act of 1894. Based on the number and type of entries in American wholesale catalogs, the tariff reduction opened the door to a flood of European porcelain. Overall, most of the tableware (as opposed to dinnerware) came from Reinhold's two factories. To date, we have not been able to find any china tableware from Erdmann's factory in wholesale catalogs issued before 1902.

We estimate that between 1895 and 1900, R. S. Prussia exports to U.S. wholesale firms increased between five and ten fold. It was during this time that the R. S. "Wing" trademark was used. The run of good fortune continued through 1903-05, partly due to the growing popularity of the Art Nouveau movement, and partly to the continued updating of the mold and decorating patterns. Reinhold's firm was noted for innovations in the manufacture and decoration of porcelain. Two patents were issued in the United States. One for a clock case was assigned to George Borgfeldt of New York in 1894. Clocks made according to this patent were sold up to the turn of the century. While a round, beveled "patent" mirror was used in many different molds for shaving mugs, we have yet to find records that a patent was actually issued. The conversion to quality decalcomanias (decals) for decoration beginning 1900 produced goods with more color and eye appeal. This may have been the key that opened the door to greater sales. Throughout the years, there was a continued improvement in the manufacturing facilities. Hartwich details many of the modifications made to improve both the quantity and quality of porcelain that the firm could produce.

Reinhold's products from the 1900-1905 period were noted as being among the best to be made in Europe. Unfortunately, public taste began to change about 1905. The complex mold patterns stocked by American wholesale firms began to be replaced by china in simple shapes. At the same time, imports of inexpensive Japanese china increased. All these factors contributed to year to year decline in the amount of R. S. Prussia carried by wholesale firms. By 1910, simple shapes predominate in all catalogs, wholesale and retail, and Reinhold's products were largely replaced by china from both Japan and other European firms.

Reinhold's products made after 1910 are frequently referred to as R. S. Germany, owing to a change in trademark. However, the change in the country of origin is only one of several to have been made between 1895 and 1910. Consequently, we consider the products made from 1910 to the beginning of WWI to be R. S. Prussia, for both manufacturing plants were still in operation. When the hostilities of WWI began in earnest, the Suhl factory was effectively shut down, owing to a lack of skilled labor. Most likely, some talented factory workers were relocated to Tillowitz. The manufacture of porcelain in Tillowitz continued through WWII. Although the plant survived undamaged, much of the equipment used to make porcelain was removed upon Russian occupation. Today, the factory still stands, but the major product is china dinnerware.

We need to note at this time how most of the R. S. Prussia was sold in this country, at least during the 1892-1910 period. During January and February, Reinhold shipped factory samples to wholesale firms, and most likely, to factory representatives as well. Orders based on these samples were taken and placed with the factory during the first part of the year. In this way, the firm knew before mid-year just how much china had to be made and subsequently shipped overseas. Manufacturing likely started upon receipt of an order, but delivery was probably timed to arrive at wholesale firms in late September or early October. In this way, merchandise could be in the hands of retail accounts by the Holiday selling season. Most wholesale firms issuing catalogs throughout the year show large sections of imported china only in their September through November issues. In catalog after catalog, we note that imported china was promoted as giftware for Thanksgiving, Christmas and the New Year holidays.

The sampling, ordering, manufacturing, and shipping cycle was a continuous, year round process. This had several consequences for Reinhold's firm. First, samples could be made from October to the following January without impacting any of the manufacturing activities. Second, if orders were not placed for items in the sample merchandise, then no more were made. The import of salable samples may explain why collectors occasionally find an object with a unique decoration. Third, Reinhold's firm knew exactly how much china had to be produced by any given date. For this reason, the firm would not have made a "surplus" of unfinished goods. Although some unpainted porcelain was furnished to other European decorating firms (eg. Helena Wolfsohn), examples of their finished products are almost unknown in this country. While white ware could have been exported to American firms supplying china blanks for home decoration, there is no evidence to suggest this took place. Our review of catalogs from firms selling into the home decorating market prior to WWI indicates that undecorated blanks primarily came from Austria and Bavaria. The sale of an excess of Reinhold's undecorated blanks has been proposed to explain some of the trade names to be found on R. S. Prussia blanks. At present, there is no evidence to support this view.
