Forty-Four Years & Growing for Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Club's Big Annual Show

Article & photos by Brian Maloney

An enthusiastic crowd of antique bottle collectors recently converged at the Country Springs Hotel & Conference Center in Waukesha, Wisconsin - site of the Forty-Fourth Annual Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Club Show & Sale. Antique bottles are the focus at this one-day event, where show-goers can browse through more than one hundred & fifty tables filled with bottles and advertising from Colonial Era to the 20th century. Veteran breweriana collector David Kapsos has been running the show for the past many seasons, and the event is bigger & better than ever, with dealers filling two ballrooms at the Milwaukee-area resort.

A cool advertising piece from Jon Steiner: this Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus poster promoting lion-tamer Bert Nelson, "Lord and Master of the Most Ferocious Brutes in the Animal Kingdom," measuring 20" x 26", $475. 262-252-3513

Stop by Steve Ketcham's display for an education in historical flasks, whose 19th century owners would get them filled at their local tavern. Among his inventory: this unusual olive green "Success to the Railroad" version, asking price $799. 952-221-0915

Green Bay's Dave Akin brought a great selection of Crowntainer beer cans, among the rarest this Schell's Deer Brand Beer version priced at $1,000. 920-233-0865

A colorful back-bar beer sign from Mark & Michelle McGarigle's display: this a hard-to-find 1950's Pabst on Tap wood & Lucite sign priced at $325. 414-688-1368

Shoppers found period advertising of all sorts at Kountry Koop Antiques, my pick, this Mule Kick Closet Bowl Cleaner store display priced at $450. 920-699-2802

Out & About

Weathered the storm at home. We got a misty wet snow first, then snow, then a heavy wet snow which then turned into a freezing snow/rain to end the night with a heavy snow. So, I was not in the adventurous challenge mood. Brandon was in charge of snow removal and of course, the snowblower auger broke. So, now he has a summer project to repair it.

Remember when sending us photos, try to use light backgrounds. Remove as many objects from in front of or on top of the object you are taking the picture of. This helps us provide you with better pictures for your ads. If you have a budget you are working with, let us know, so that we can better serve you, our customer. When sending a PDF be sure to call to get our color and size specifications.

If you happened to call the office this week, you might have heard a new voice. My son Brandon answered the phone this week to gain phone experience. I thought he did a awesome job. He also helped us take the backgrounds out of photos. He admitted today that he understood how difficult our jobs were. Tomorrow he will help us mail the paper, which he has done many of times during the summer.

History Comes Alive at the 44th Annual Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Show

Article & photos by Brian Maloney

You only have to walk through the doors of the Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Club Show to realize what a popular (and rather unusual) hobby bottle collecting is. Space at the show is always sold out long in advance, with an even longer waiting list for prospective exhibitors. When you talk to the members of the Club, they don't think their pastime is strange at all. But what other hobby is there that has folks scuba diving in frigid Wisconsin waterways in midwinter - thrusting Kevlar glove-clad arms shoulder deep into the bottom muck? Or digging holes several feet wide and deep in the back yards privy sites of old homesteads - all with the hope of finding that rare and elusive antique bottle.

Many of the exhibitors are members of the Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Club, one of many similar organizations located throughout the country. It really does seem to be an addictive pursuit, like being an amateur urban archeologist. The fun of the hunt itself is the main motivation, with the majority of the bottles they find selling for pretty modest prices - but sometimes something really special turns up. And bottle collecting is popular all over: avid bottle collector Jim Hall told me that there's a bottle show going on somewhere in America on nearly every weekend throughout the year.

These guys are enthusiastic about their hobby, and when they get started with stories of their recent finds, that enthusiasm becomes contagious. I have to admit - I don't even collect antique bottles, but this show is more fun than just about any other antiques & collectibles show I've ever been to. Most are just passionate collectors - not professional dealers. For them, the show is a reunion of sorts, a chance to reconnect with other bottle collectors from all over the country.

Of course, knowing where to look is the most important part of bottle collecting, whether you're digging or diving. The earliest types of bottles tend to be the most valuable, so collectors become expert in finding collecting sites where the oldest human settlements occurred. In Wisconsin, that would usually mean around the mid-19th century. I guess it's no surprise that beer bottles are among the most commonly encountered bottles in those early settled areas. Pepper-sauce bottles are common from that era too, as are patent medicine bottles that were really more of a socially-accepted form of alcohol than a cure for any disease.

Yes, there are thousands of antique and vintage bottles here to be found here, but they only make up a small part of the show. You'll also find a huge amount of advertising collectibles, much of it beer and soda related. I found everything from pre-prohibition beer posters to restored neon signs among the dealer's wares. And the region's most experienced bottle restorers are always here too, offering the latest in cleaning and polishing services.

The bottles most often restored are those that have spent the last century or more buried underground, especially those found in old privy holes. The acids and minerals in the soil create that strange iridescent layer (called glass sickness) on the bottle's surface. Using custom made rigs that are akin to rock tumblers, professional bottle restorers can carefully remove that layer with a slurry of abrasive material, returning the bottle to its original appearance.

Bottle collecting truly is a fascinating hobby, where one can literally dig up the past in one's own - or someone else's - backyard. It's a fun bunch of people who make up the Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Club, and the show is just as much fun to attend - even if you're not a bottle & advertising enthusiast. Even better, go to www.milwaukeebottleclub.org and become a member. If you have questions about the show, you can contact organizer David Kapsos by email at bottleshow@charter.net. Be sure to pencil in next year's 45th Annual Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Club Show for February of 2017, and as always, keep an eye out for listings of the event in the Auction Action Antique News!

The Country Springs Hotel & Conference Center hosted the 44th Annual Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Show, where one hundred & fifty tables of treasures filled two ballrooms at the beautiful Waukesha, Wisconsin facility.

Busy doesn't even begin to describe the Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Show, where 1,000-plus shoppers gather for the popular one-day event.

There's a new club in town! Jon Steiner, president of the new Wisconsin Antique & Advertising Club, was on hand promoting the statewide organization. Just visit www.wisantique.com for membership information, benefits, and more!

Long-time breweriana collector David Kapsos organizes the Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Show with lots of help from his wife Debbie. For more info, just visit www.milwaukeebottleclub.org, give Dave a call at 608-838-8041, or email him at bottleshow@charter.net

Club members assembled a wonderful display of period Milwaukee and Waukesha bottles for the show - everything from beer and soft drink examples to some early embossed bitters bottles dating back as far as the 1850s!

Two vintage light-up Lucite signs from Blatz Beer specialists Mark & Michelle McGarigle: the mint 1950s "America's Good Taste Beer" example priced at $325, the Milwaukee's Finest Beer oval at $90. 414-688-1368

Shoppers found vintage beer bottles to spare at Jon Steiner's display, plus rare advertising like this super-clean Mory Ice Cream porcelain sign measuring 18" x 24" & priced at $850. 262-252-3513

Two very-different period glass bottles from Prairieville Antiques: the figural Galaxy Asteroid Commander soda syrup bottle priced at $40, the 1880s Wierbach & Co. bottle with misspelled "Millwaukee" at $85. 414-453-2125

At Rich Yahr Antiques, this pristine West Bend Lithia Beer porcelain corner sign was priced at $1,395, this painted steel West Bend Lithia Co's Beverages sign at $695. 262-626-4369

Most exhibitors (like enthusiastic collector Rick Tyler shown here) are long-time members of the Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Club, hosts of this once-a-year show. Join yourself at www.milwaukeebottleclub.org, or visit the site just to see the rarities that members have recently found!

Framed period calendars at Scott & Christy Campbell Antiques included this WWII-themed 1943 Northwest Airlines example, 18" x 38" and priced at $285. 262-569-5772

Among the dozens of vintage beer signs at Scott & Christy Campbell Antiques sat this colorful Kingsbury Pale Beer embossed steel sign, 20" x 28" and priced at $410. 262-569-5772

Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Club President Sid Hatch came with local beer bottle stand-outs including this Schlitz "hotel bottle" with porcelain lid, asking price $90. Interested in joining the club? Just give Sid a call at 414-218-4670 for membership information!

Cutest of the vintage Gettelman Beer composition plaques from Scott & Christy Campbell Antiques: this version featuring two bear cubs frolicking, asking price $125. 262-569-5772

Two more near-mint Crowntainer beer cans from Dave Akin: the Potosi Pilsener Beer example priced at $450, the Leinenkugel Chippewa Pride Beer can at $325. 920-233-0865

In Dave Akin's Display sat this colorful pre-Prohibition South Bend Brewing Association litho-tin tray, 14 1/2" in diameter and priced at $350. 920-233-0865

Steve Hochhalter "The Glass Artisan" always makes an appearance at the show. He's been professionally restoring antique bottles for more than a decade - give him a call at 414-281-5885 for all the details.

At Steve Ketcham Antiques, this rare & mint 1930s Schlitz on Draught reverse-painted light-up window sign carried a $1,500 price tag. 952-221-0915

Veteran collector Peter Maas came with early Milwaukee beer bottle rarities like this 1870s P. H. Altpeter quart bottle with applied lip, price tag $550. Maas's website www.mrbottles.com is always worth a visit, as it's long been one of the best resources around for bottle collectors nationwide.

They don't call it the Milwaukee Antique Bottle & Advertising Show for nothing! You'll find thousands of period beer, soft drink, and milk bottles here, plus vintage advertising from paper ephemera to porcelain signs in every collecting category. Just visit www.milwaukeebottleclub.org to plan a trip to next year's 45th Annual Show.

Author & historian John Schoenknecht (left) and publisher Bill Schley were on hand with copies of their newly-updated book, The Great Waukesha Springs Era, a fascinating history of the city's rise and fall in the mineral water & soda industry. Call 262-361-4483 or email bill@wschley.com to get a copy for your library!

Ok, it's not a bottle, but collector Henry Hecker couldn't resist buying this 19th century Watertown-found earthenware milk bowl that a show-goer brought in, 15" in diameter and with hand-twisted wire netting all around.

In Tim Piche's display, a plastic Hamm's can display was $145, A Hamm's Big Bear Drinking Club display at $175.

Antique Mason jars filled the display of Illinois exhibitor Pete Peterson, with rare examples like this patented-1872 Maxims Preserving House jar priced at $400.

Wisconsin collector Steve Mueller came with oddities of all sorts, including this boxed set of six red glass "For Fire" grenades, asking price $375.

Feeling a little down? Jim Hall's display of antique patent medicine bottles surely offered a cure, from this Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure bottle ($250) to a Craig Kidney Cure Company example priced at $195. 847-249-3715

Two Lady Hunter-themed Braumeister Beer posters from collector Tim Piche: the 17" x 22" Duck Hunting example priced at $145, the 14" x 18" Golden Retriever at $90.

Make Plans To Plant Yourself At The April 29 – May 1 Rich Penn Auction Event

Toy cycle, tin windup, Lehmann New Century Cycle featuring driver w/tophat sheltered by man holding umbrella, Made in Germany, c.1920s, VG played-with cond, 5" L.

Springtime gets us thinking about sunshine, warm breezes, enjoying being outside and planting things.

For those who made their living from the soil, it was the time to get to work. The late Fred Schwartz was one of them. With his three sons, Fred farmed several thousand acres of rich Mississippi River bottom land. That river can be friend or foe. So those farms can be both bountiful or barren. Fred spent his life successfully working that soil and in his spare time, with the same passion, collected voraciously!

A love of the land...a love for collecting.

Fred loved anything that had to do with farming. But he loved a lot more too. Now his lifetime collection comes to market. This important Rich Penn Auction Event will be held April 29 and May 1 in Des Moines, IA at the Iowa State Fairgrounds. Even though this might be the planting season, collectors will want to find time to plant themselves at this 1,300+ lot auction.

Along with Fred's collection come several others that make this auction diverse and full of unique pieces. Cast iron and pressed steel toys include many farming toys from Arcade, Kingsbury, Hubley, Kenton and others. Windup toys from Wyandotte, Marx, Strauss and Lehmann. The collection also includes dozens of cast iron still banks, including many rare ones. Signs, country store, windmill weights and weathervanes, Native American, character radios, coin operated machines and even ice cream dippers...all are part of this auction.

Other Rich Penn Auction Events.

August 3, 2016 will be the Iowa Gas Auction at the Des Moines, IA Airport Holiday Inn. The auction will start at noon and include 500 lots of great petroliana. Expect to see gas globes, porcelain & metal signs, pumps, cans, oil bottles and other great display materials.

Rich Penn Auctions always offers multiple bidding options including absentee, telephone and live online bidding through LiveAuctioneers. Find the links to the online catalog on Penn's web site. Full color catalogs will be available for $40. Prices realized will be posted online. Just contact Rich Penn Auctions at 319-291-6688 to order yours. Go to RichPennAuctions.com to register or to preview the auction. Absentee and phone bidding is always welcome.

“Catching” a Glimpse: A Look at Early Angling Photography

article provided by Midwest Decoy Collectors Association

Anglers today have no valid excuse for not getting a good photo of a great catch. With modern technology placing cameras in nearly every cell phone & small pocket sized digital cameras available, there should be no “I swear it was this big.....” stories told to fellow fishermen in an effort to exaggerate the size of the catch without a supporting photo. But this was not the case for the pioneers of the sport. In fact, early images of anglers & their gear are some of the most difficult photographs to locate, for several reasons. Perhaps most notable was the fact that fishing was not a recreational sport in the mid-to-late 1800’s, unless you were wealthy; & in that case, only an extraordinary catch was likely to be deemed important enough to capture on film. When you add to that the need for bulky equipment for on site photography or the cost for a studio shot, it is easy to see why these very early photo images of yesterday’s anglers are so rare.

Introduced to the United States in 1839, the Daguerreotype was the first commercially successful image type, with larger East Coast cities having studios built for this method of portrait photography shortly after its introduction. Brought to America by inventor & artist, Samuel F.B. Morse, after a trip to France where he witnessed the process developed by Louis Daguerre & Joseph Niepce. It involved creating an image on a sheet of copper plate with a thin coat of silver. It has been documented that these very early images required anywhere from 3 to 15 minutes to capture, making it difficult at best to produce “blurry free” images as few could sit perfectly still for the required length of time.

Producing images that did not have the shiny finish of a Daguerreotype, at a greatly reduced cost, helped boost the popularity of the Ambrotype. Though examples are very rare, each of these early methods produced some great images of early fishing gear.

However, it wasn’t until the introduction of the Tintype that outdoor photography became more prevalent, with the equipment more travel friendly & the images produced available for the customer within minutes. Introduced in the mid 1850’s, the Tintype involved a process that used a sheet of iron blackened by painting as the medium for the collodion emulsion.

Images on paper began to appear with the introduction of the CDV, or Carte-de-Viste, which really gained a foothold on image photography around 1860. Made from an Albumen print, the paper images were placed on heavy cardstock, usually small, measuring approximately 2 x 3-1/2”. These were replaced by a larger version of the same format circa 1870, the Cabinet Card, typically a gear are still obtainable. Not only do they make great display items, they also show us just what, where, & how early tackle was used, which can be a tremendous help when putting together a display of correct period items.

As with most collectible fishing tackle, there are things to watch for that add to the desirability of any give item or photo. Clear photos that have indentifiable gear, such as a Vom Hofe reel, Chapman metal lure, or an early wooden minnow are going to increase the value of any image, as well as photographs depicting famous fishermen such as James Henshall, Charles Orvis, or Seth Green. Subject & location can play an important role, too; an image of a child or a woman wielding fishing equipment is more difficult to find, & an outdoor scene in Daguerreotype or Ambrotype format much more elusive than the typical “set up” studio shots. Size is also a factor when determining value, as is often the case with collectible fishing lures, with the smallest & largest examples more uncommon than the standard sizes. With Tintype photos, full plate, or 6-1/2 x 8-1/2” images are very rare, as are the tiny 1/2 x 1” Gem size photos.

Another analogy to lures is the packaging which housed these early photos.

Like the box that adds to both the desirability & value of a given lure, so too are the cases which held the three earliest photo types. These can substantially enhance the eye appeal & value of an image. Made with leather covers or completely of Gutta Percha, these cases can sometimes be more valuable than the images held inside.

Other formats used to capture angling images included the Stereo card, a side-by-side Albumen image that created a three dimensional appearance when using a stereoview viewer. These interesting cardstock images date between 1860 & 1920 & can be found with angling images taken outdoors, making better use

4-1/4 x 6-1/2” size image, allowing more space for notes about the photo’s subject on the front & studio information on the reverse. Despite the large number of cabinet cards produced by photography studios, angling images are still quite scarce. It wasn’t until the introduction of the Kodak Brownie camera that fishing images became commonplace, aided by the growing popularity of fishing as a sport for the masses, not just the wealthy.

Collecting the earliest images can be a challenge, given their rarity; however later cabinet cards depicting both anglers & their

of their three dimensional qualities.

Magic Lantern Slides were also a popular format for displaying images, using a glass plate image & projected light to view the photo on a wall or screen. Fishing images are often found in color with this format. Lastly, the real photo postcard is by far the easiest of all the early fishing images to find. Great cards depicting lures & reels used post-1900 can be still be obtained very reasonably, unless the lure or reel depicted can be identified, which can lead to higher prices due to competition from lure & reel collectors.

No matter what the format, vintage images of our sporting past can make for a fascinating collection, especially when displayed with the actual rod, reel or creel represented in the photograph. If this subject is of interest to you, I highly recommend obtaining a copy of “An Angler’s Album - Fishing in Photograph & Literature” by Charles H. Traub, with an introduction by Charles Kuralt.

This is just one of many categories that members of the Midwest Decoy Collectors Association delve in. Membership includes an annual “Membership Directory”, published in March, which includes members’ collecting interest. The Midwest Decoy Collectors Association is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to collect & preserve the history of the decoy as original American folk art.

Our Annual Show is always the last full weekend in April at the Pheasant Run Resort in St. Charles, Illinois, & advertised in the Auction Action Antique News. The convention & show is the premier opportunity for the novice, antique dealer or the experienced collector to network & learn more about their collectible as functional folk art or to add to their collections. ## Madison Club Vignettes

While cleaning out the attic at the farmhouse, we found buttons in envelopes. Knowing my mother-in-law didn't keep anything without a reason, I purchased the book Button, Button: Identification & Price Guide by Peggy Ann Osborne. I realized that my mother-in-law and her friends were collectors. I was hooked. I think of her fondly as I'm sure she is smiling down at my overflowing button room. My favorite buttons are pearl. Kathy Sigglekow

I began collecting buttons when I was about 9 years old. I only collected from friends' and relatives' button boxes and knew nothing about button clubs. After high school, I forgot about buttons when I moved away from home and was doing other things. In 1980 my mother told me to take my collection home with me and do something with it. I told her I really didn't want it. She insisted I find the buttons from great grandma and the ivory button that was hand carved in a missionary girls' school in India. While hunting for those I found several other really unique buttons, went to the library, found the National Button Bulletin, and decided to order it. I found out later that by ordering the bulletin I was joining the National Button Society. Purchasing that "magazine" not only got me into collecting buttons, but also onto the WSBS Board in 1984, selling buttons since 1994, coordinating several NBS Conventions, and serving on the NBS Board for 9 years in various positions. Lisa Schulz

While playing I discovered some unique old buttons in the drawers of my grandmother's Singer treadle sewing machine and the spark was lit. Decades later I sought out jars and tins of buttons at farm auctions and estate sales. My button education took a quantum leap when I joined the Madison Button Club in 1990. My evolution into a true collector began under the mentorship of Martha Lound, Phyllis Callies, Lyn Keyser, Willa Severson, Wilma Argue, and Lisa Schulz. During my first year with the club, Martha gave a program on Golden Age Gilts, and I was smitten by their subtle elegance. At my first WSBS show, I was amazed that buttons of that age (1820-1850) were readily available and affordable. Although I later branched out to collect just about every other material and subject, the Golden Age Gilts will always be a sentimental favorite. Button pictured is a Golden Age gilt, backmarked Benedict & Burnham. Mary Schmidt

I've been a collector of most anything related to antiques for much of my life, and after retiring about 4 years ago, I finally found some time to better examine many collectible items I had stored away. I found a few trays of buttons I wasn't even aware

I still had. The more I studied them, the more intrigued and fascinated I became. I had no idea, other than the Internet, of where to find more of them so I put a few ads in our local newspaper to buy antique and collectible buttons. I received a call from a lady who said she had a large collection of buttons she was willing to sell. She said she had been a collector for sixty-some years. This sparked my collecting passion and I bought my first button collection. Soon after that I received a call from another lady suggesting I join a button club to learn more about buttons. I accepted that logic and joined my first button club. Today I am President of that club, the Rock River Button Club of Rockton, Illinois. I am also the current President of the Madison (Wisconsin) Button Club. My passion for buttons has remained steady primarily because I can find no stop signs as to how much a person can learn about them. Dave Meicher

China whistle buttons are made in two parts and have four different construction methods. These buttons are made in 20 shapes that are listed in Guidelines for Collecting China Buttons. There are several unlisted shapes found since this book was published in 1970. Presently, I have eighteen of the twenty shapes listed in the book, including one of the rarest-shape #1 which has three holes. I collected these buttons so I could complete a study card of china whistle buttons shapes. Pat Diskin

Several years ago, I had a notion that it would be fun to meet with my gal pals once in a while to play poker using buttons instead of poker chips. I ended up working at the vintage goods store where I found not only my fun and affordable buttons, but cabinets full of true collectors' buttons. I needed to learn about what I was now sorting and labeling, so I pored over books and websites and joined button clubs. But since I worked with all the buttons at the store, I didn't need to buy any.

Then I found that there are buttons with rabbits on them, and I was hooked! I've loved rabbits as house pets over many years. These were buttons I wanted to own. My interest quickly broadened to other kinds of buttons simply because they tickle my fancy in some way. I'm also loving the addition of button people to my life! Nancy Lindsay

What does an old Clark Candy Bar box have to do with button collecting? Years ago, I collected advertising items to decorate my house. When my babysitter, Mrs. Stallings, was selling the contents of her Beecher General Store, I discovered the Clark Box. When I looked inside, several cards of small china buttons were hiding in the Clark Box. She chose to sell me the box only if the buttons were included. Soooo, okay. Now I am a button collector. Judy Winder

National Fishing Lure Collectors Club

The National Fishing Lure Collectors Club (NFLCC) was founded in 1976 and has grown into an international organization. The primary objectives of the NFLCC are to foster an awareness of fishing tackle collecting as a hobby and to assist members in the location, identification, and trading of collectible fishing related equipment. The NFLCC encompasses every aspect of collecting fishing related tackle and ephemera, e.g. rods, reels, catalogs, advertising, minnow traps and buckets, creels, photos, etc. - not just fishing lures.

The club's website at www.nflcc.org is a tremendous service to collectors in this hobby area, and particularly to NFLCC members. The site features member information and services, everything from the NFLCC Constitution and Bylaws, grading systems and ethics to a club shop. Their show calendar is helpful and the "Gallery" is superb! The photos and information on fishing tackle, lures, decoys, reference charts and catalogs is a library in and of itself. Any visitor to the NFLCC website can't help but be impressed with the Gallery - and with NFLCC.

The Association of Collecting Clubs is pleased to designate the National Fishing Lure Collectors Club as an ACC Featured Club Website recipient.

Antique & Appraisal School Celebrates Half-Century Milestone

Asheford Director, Charles Green Celebrating School's 50th Anniversary

While not quite considered an "antique" just yet, the Asheford Institute of Antiques, a professional-level distance learning program on antiques, collectibles, and appraising, turned fifty this past week, marking a milestone in antiques and appraising education, as the longest running Institute of its kind. Although the school premiered its home-study program to the antique world in late 1965, it didn't officially open its doors to students until 1966.

"We've seen an awful lot of changes since our inception" said Peter Green, the Institute's original founder. Green, who started the school based on the notion that there was a need for antique and appraisal education, said he could hardly believe how the antique and appraisal services market had grown over the past 50 years – "I can remember when antique stores were hard to find... now you can tap your phone and find virtually anything instantly!"

During the 1980's, Green's son, Charles took over the day-to-day operations of Asheford, and is the school's current director. When asked what he thought represented the Institute's high-water mark over the past fifty-years, Green unabashedly responded that the introduction of the school's new online e-Course earlier this year was a game-changer for antique and appraisal education in general. "The e-Course allowed us to bring a half-century worth of teaching expertise to a new and expanded format," said Green. "With the ability to use online interactive multimedia for instruction, we've really been able to raise the bar in antiques and appraising education for our students." Green went on to say that although online instruction had obviously become the new norm, the "text-book" version would still be offered for a number of years to come.

According to a press statement, as part of the school's year-long celebration, staff from the Institute will also participate in a traveling roadshow to commemorate the school's 50th anniversary. Plans reportedly include tours of major antique events and shows throughout North America, and will incorporate free appraisal clinics, business seminars and evaluations to mark the Institute's anniversary. "We really want to give something back to our students and those interested in antiques," said founder Peter Green, "It's been a great privilege to teach so many... it's just our way of saying thanks." Exact dates for upcoming events have yet to be released, but are expected to be announced later this month according to school spokesperson, Pamela Drew.

For readers seeking more information about the schools antiques and appraisal program, they can be contacted at: (877) 444-4508 or visit their web site at; www.asheford.com.
