Restored Deluxe Winchester 1886 Brings $6,000 at Kramer's May 21st Auction

Article & photos by Kramer Auction

easily be viewed at www.kramersales.com

The High selling Double Bbl. and gun for the day went to a restored Winchester Model 21 shotgun. This 12ga. classic went to a online bidder for $3,225. It was followed closely by a Winchester Model 1873 rifle in rare 22 Short caliber for $3,200. A Scare Stevens Ideal "Walnut Hill" target rifle in 38-55 cal shot to $3,025 in the blink of an eye. Shotguns rounded out the other top spots with an AH Fox Ansley 16ga. Dbl. for $3,105. A rare & surprising Russian mfg. 12ga. over & under shocked the crowd as it soared from $300 and ended just shy of $3000 for $2,990. Then a fancy AYA Double 20ga. settled in for $2,875.

Then onto May 21st were 700 Antique on Modern arms were scheduled to cross the block on that day. Restored guns took the top 3 spots of the auction on that day. Keep in mind these are all professional restorations of rare & desirable models. The 50 Express is the King of the calibers when you are talking about Winchester Lever actions. A restored Deluxe 1886 Winchester which was re-barreled to 50 Express caliber climbed steadily until it rested at $6,000 with a buyer from Texas. Then a nickel Colt 1872 Open Top Rim-fire revolver kept the restored guns strong for $3,565. A refurbished Winchester Model 12 was next at $2,650. After those, an original Winchester 1885 Hi-Wall rifle in 45-90 cal shot to $2,310. An Engraved standard Ruger 22 pistol demanded $2,200. Rounding out the top five on this day was a nice WWII Camo German M-35 helmet, this great original estate helmet was purchased by a happy phone bidder for an even $2,200.

Kramer Auction will hold an additional Gun & Sporting Auction on Friday August 12th 2016. This added summer sale will feature 400+ guns of all types along with a larger amount of modern & collectible sporting items, reloading supplies & components along with related items from the larger estate collections sold this Spring. Also make sure to keep an eye on their October & December sales this year with a great Winchester & Military collections scheduled for those months. The following are some other prizes realized on the March & May auctions & other auction results can Explore the history of the Romantic Era through the whimsy and artistry of Staffordshire Figures. With Staffordshire Figures 1780 to 1840 Volume 3: Animals, Animal Performers, Dandies, and Murder and Volume 4: Family, Friendship, Play, & Classical Subjects author Myrna Schkolne catalogs the enormous range of enamel-painted figures made predominantly in the Staffordshire Potteries. Here is more information on these titles.

Volume 3 of this comprehensive, multi-volume work includes over 1100 brilliant color photographs of Staffordshire figures portraying animals and animal entertainment, dandies, death, and murder. Among the menagerie of animals presented are cats, dogs, and a host of wild animals and farm animals. There is also valuable information about the makers and design sources, along with a values guide. This impressive series catalogs the enormous range of enamel-painted figures made predominantly in the Staffordshire Potteries between 1780 and 1840. Many of these figures are hauntingly beautiful and have long been hidden from the public eye. Fashioned in an era before photography, they give us rare glimpses of a world that has vanished. To hold one is to touch the past.

APPRAISING: THE KEY TO FAIR DIVORCE SETTLEMENTS

by David Federman

Has a once-married friend ever told you they got a raw deal in their divorce settlement? At the time, you probably chalked off their sour feelings to “sour grapes.” But now that you are about to become, or thinking of becoming, an ex-spouse, do you suddenly fear the same fate? This time, you know the fear isn't just based on emotions; it's based on economics, too. What do you do to get a fair, rather than a raw, deal in your divorce settlement?

Start by finding a good lawyer—but then take one extra giant step. For those who are parting ways to ensure an equitable division of marital property, find a professional appraiser. They are the key to fair divorce settlements.

Given the importance of a professionally prepared divorce settlement appraisal, you would think there would be an abundance of professional appraisers and that it would be easy to find one. Think again. The average person's chances of obtaining such a report are almost as slim as their chances of winning the lottery.

Worse, there is even less trustworthy information available about divorce-settlement appraisals. Take it from me. I've been writing about personal property appraising since 1982 when I wrote “The Seven Deadly Sins of Personal Property Appraising.” Needless to say, the article stirred up a hornet's nest. Nevertheless, the information vacuum persisted. In 1993, I finally took matters into my own hands and wrote a book on the subject. Twenty-two years later, my book is long out of print and consumers are as much in the dark as before about the true nature of appraisals and appraisers.

It's time to shed some light on the subject. But be warned, it's a harsh light.

PERSONAL PROPERTY APPRAISING: A PRETENSE NOT A PROFESSION

Here's the lowdown about the scandalously high number of raw-deal divorce settlements: Personal property appraising is an unregulated profession. Indeed, it isn't even a profession. How could it be when anyone has the right to call themselves a personal property appraiser? You heard right. With little or no training and experience, any person can hang out a shingle as a personal property appraiser.

This isn't the case with real estate appraisers. In the domain of buildings valuation, a person must be educated and tested—just like an attorney or a doctor. In the field of real estate, there is no excuse allowed for the lack of formal, rigorous appraisal training. To lack such an education would be the equivalent of letting someone who drives an ambulance or is versed in first aid call themselves a doctor.

Alas, personal property appraising is another matter. Believe it or not, banks and mortgage companies that wouldn't dare allow an uncertified appraiser to put a value on a house will allow untrained hacks to put “values” on personal property accepted as backing for loans. If I told you how many banks are sitting on worthless collateral because they accepted incompetent and inflated personal property appraisals by no-nothing appraisers, you would be horrified. Yet financial institutions do nothing to correct the situation. Don't ask me why. I've been puzzling over this paradox for decades.

Meanwhile, personal property appraisers who feel under no obligation to seek training and testing by professional schools and associations, parade a number of meaningless credentials in front of clients seeking some basis for trusting their abilities and hiring them. Don't laugh, but I have seen resumes for divorce-settlement appraisers that listed everything from Fine Arts degrees to membership in the 4-H Club as proof of skill and accreditation. Just citing such irrelevancies shows profound ignorance about professional appraising by those who use them. This is like having a tattoo artist say he is a doctor because he is versed in needle use.

If you learn nothing else from this article, learn this: experience buying and selling the kinds of property one appraises does not make that person an appraiser. Often people in the tumultuous throes of a divorce will seek out auctioneers to appraise their marital property. They figure that no one will know the worth of their belongings better than someone who regularly sells items like it. This assumption is wrong and potentially ruinous.

Unfortunately, the belief that experience liquidating marital property makes one an appraiser is encouraged by auctioneers who believe their experience qualifies them to write divorce-settlement appraisals. It doesn't. Auctions are only one type of market for the disposal of marital property. There are many others and an appraiser must be aware of them in order to determine correct value. That's why calculating correct appraisal values for personal property takes as much training as it does for valuing real estate.

In short, being an auctioneer doesn't make one an appraiser.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION IS WORTH A POUND OF CURE

Many men and women cheated out of a fair divorce settlement by an unfair appraisal think they can take their grievances to court and get a more just settlement. And, in theory, there is always a second chance for fair play. However, it's a poor one. The fact is, it is hard to contest an appraisal once it has been completed. Worse, it is hard to realize that one has been the victim of appraiser incompetence and suffered financial harm due to them. You'll need to find an expert who can challenge and shred the content of a poor appraisal—as well as impeach the appraiser's abilities and credentials.

No, a good offense is your best defense against a raw-deal appraisal. So find the expert before the divorce is final—not after. A professional appraisal assures a fair shake the first time around. So the job of the ex-spouse is to find the right person right off the bat. That isn't as hard as it sounds—but only if you seek an appraiser with the same care and caution you would a surgeon. With a surgeon, your physical well-being is at stake; with a surgeon, your fiscal well-being is just as much at stake..

Whether you are selecting the appraiser or your attorney is recommending one to you, begin your search by asking for the appraiser's professional profile. As I said before, scrutinize closely every credential. Make sure they have direct bearing on appraising.

Once you examine a resume, and are satisfied with the appraiser's qualifications, don't take the appraiser's word for them. Vet the candidate by calling the associations to which they say they belong and verifying their membership and any titles conferred by the group. If the appraiser says he has a degree or diploma or has completed courses, check these claims, also.

SOME APPRAISAL BASICS

Put simply, appraising is putting a value on something. But the process of valuation is hardly simple. It is complex, determined by the needs of the client. The appraiser's value-conclusions will vary according to those needs. In this case, you are seeking a divorce-settlement appraisal. However, definitions of value differ from state to state. Indeed, every major component of the divorce-settlement appraisal, including the effective date, is regulated by law. Those laws vary by locality.

So never forget this: Appraisals are legal documents that must comply with laws governing their preparation.

Most appraisers lack the mandatory legal knowledge and training to write divorce-settlement appraisals that adhere to prevailing law. It goes without saying that their ignorance can cost their clients dearly. Let's review the steps of professional appraisal preparation.

STEP 1: EVALUATION. Before one can assign a value to a piece of property, they must be able to fully and accurately identify it. This first phase of an appraisal is called “evaluation.” If it is botched, determining the property's correct worth will be botched.

STEP 2: VALUATION. After “evaluation” comes “valuation,” assigning a dollar-worth to the property that fulfills the client's needs. This requires training in valuation methodology. That training can only come in a classroom where accepted procedures and standardized techniques are taught.

Untrained appraisers usually treat value as an arbitrary or hypothetical concept. Often they will give seat-of-the-pants estimates of value based on their personal experience buying and selling. But value is far more concrete and composite, as well as factual and fluid. That's because it is a function of market activity requiring research of transacted prices for identical or comparable items. Value is based on knowledgeable sampling of markets not best-guess hunches about them. An appraisal offers a reasoned, researched opinion of value as of a given date (specified by law), supported by facts gathered in the appropriate marketplace.

In short, appraising is an academic research and computation discipline requiring academic training. That makes it a profession, like accounting, where performance is taught and tested.

PICKING AN APPRAISER: RULES OF THE ROAD

With so much riding on the appraiser's expertise and qualifications, you must conduct a job search for an appraiser. Start by requesting and thoroughly examining a written professional profile or resume of any job candidate. That means making sure it gives a verifiable history of the appraiser's education and experience.

Many so-called professional profiles are designed to bamboozle and deceive. So watch out for an “alphabet soup” of titles, designations and affiliations. Find out what they mean and how they were earned. Many designations have absolutely nothing to do with appraising. Even college degrees are very often irrelevant to personal property appraising. The sad fact is this: few colleges in America have degree programs in personal property appraising. So while college degrees may be evidence of general intelligence, most are worthless as appraising credentials. The same usually goes for certificates that prove attendance at seminars and conferences—unless they relate directly to personal property appraising. Even then, these hardly prove in-depth training or eligibility to appraise property.

BEWARE OF QUACKS

Your search for a bona fide personal property appraiser may lead you to meetings with quacks. Quacks are good at impressing prospective clients with supposed bona fides. Indeed, they would be insulted if you called them fakes or phonies. A case in point: Patriot Paul Revere was arguably the best silversmith of his time. But when business was bad, he doubled as a dentist, filling teeth with the silver he used to make bowls.

Now ask yourself: Would you want your cavities filled by a silversmith? Of course not.

Well, neither would you want your marital property appraised by someone with no formal training valuing in it.

THE MYTH OF EXPERIENCE

Time may heal all wounds but it doesn't necessarily heal all heels. Most appraisal quacks have been plying their trade for decades and use years on the job as sole, or primary, proof of expertise. But doing something the wrong way for 25 years doesn't make it the right way. Your job is to find out if the appraiser has been practicing the right or wrong way.

Many quack appraisers believe that experience alone makes them appraisers. As I said before, these tradesmen they will cite long experience buying and selling goods from marital estates as proof of appraisal competence. It isn't.

Appraising is vastly different from putting a price tag on or frequently buying goods at an auction or a liquidation sale. Don't get sidetracked by false qualifications. Question each appraiser about their aptitude and skill as appraisers. Don't allow yourself to be fooled into believing experience in sales of property is the same, or good, as appraising it. It isn't.

When interviewing an appraiser, keep in mind that the quack is often a smooth talker who throws the prospective client off guard by using professional-sounding, but irrelevant, jargon. For example, beware talk about federal IRS definitions of “fair market value” in connection with divorce-settlement appraisals. Many ignorant appraisers use a one-definition-fits-all approach to fair market value. In actuality, the IRS has three definitions. Ironically, none of them are valid for divorce-settlement appraisals since divorces are handled on the state and not on the federal level.

THE LITTLE MISTAKES THAT LEAD TO BIG LOSSES

Ignorance of the law leads appraisers to make many procedural and technical errors that invalidate their reports in the eyes of the law. Something as seemingly inconsequential as an “effective date” (the date as of which the value conclusions apply) can cost an appraisal its legitimacy. Believe it or not, “effective dates” vary with the type of assignment. For an insurance casualty loss, it is the date of loss; for estate tax it's the date of death. And for a dissolution of marriage appraisal, there are 5 “effective dates” to choose from—none of them the commonly-used date of preparing the report.

As you can see, an appraiser is a kind of paralegal. Indeed, in France, where appraisals are considered binding legal documents, appraisers must take state examinations and be certified to practice their trade. American lawmakers are far more short-sightedness about the importance of appraisals than their French counterparts. Consequently, you, the client, must give appraisers the far-sighted examination they too often fail to receive. Your future and fortunes depend on it.

About the author: David Federman is a business journalist who has written extensively about personal property appraising. His book, “The Professional's Guide to Jewelry Insurance Appraising,” published in 1993 by Vance Publishing Corp., was the first of its kind.

Golf Collectors' Society

A Brief History

The Golf Collectors Society is an international organization dedicated to preserving the treasures and traditions of the game of golf. Founded in 1970 by Robert Kuntz and Joseph S.F. Murdoch, the organization today has over 1400 members from 15 different countries. The philosophy of the Society was and has always remained "a not for profit fraternal organization that encourages members to visit, share information, and to establish friendships based on a common interest, the love of golf. Collecting the Game

The GCS unites those who have a love for the game of golf and its artifacts. Members collect hickory shafted golf clubs, balls, books, tees, ceramics, silver, art, programs, postcards, early golf magazines, and autographs to name just a few. If it was used in the game of golf or portrays the game of golf, it's likely a GCS member collects it!

Society Members

GCS members come from all walks of life. Tour and club pros, notable golf writers, the curators of the world's most prominent golf museums, the guy who lives down the block, all share in the same common interest - golf and the memorabilia associated with it.

Membership in the GCS brings many benefits. Each member receives a Membership Directory and our magazine, The Bulletin, which is published on a quarterly basis. It includes golf history, featured collections and collectors, book reviews, unusual clubs and artifacts, and general news on Society doings. Members are also welcome to attend the frequent Regional Meetings held in every part of the country, as well as the Annual Meeting, held yearly in the early fall.

Annual Dues

Dues are based on a calendar year and are:

$60 for US residents, $65 for Canadians and $70 for international members.

Visit <http://www.golfcollectors.com> for more information.

Antique & Appraisal School Celebrates Half-Century Milestone

Ashford Director, Charles Green Celebrating School's 50th Anniversary

While not quite considered an "antique" just yet, the Ashford Institute of Antiques, a professional-level distance learning program on antiques, collectibles, and appraising, turned fifty this past week, marking a milestone in antiques and appraising education, as the longest running Institute of its kind. Although the school premiered its home-study program to the antique world in late 1965, it didn't officially open its doors to students until 1966.

"We've seen an awful lot of changes since our inception" said Peter Green, the Institute's original founder. Green, who started the school based on the notion that there was a need for antique and appraisal education, said he could hardly believe how the antique and appraisal services market had grown over the past 50 years – "I can remember when antique stores were hard to find... now you can tap your phone and find virtually anything instantly!"

During the 1980's, Green's son, Charles took over the day-to-day operations of Ashford, and is the school's current director. When asked what he thought represented the Institute's high-water mark over the past fifty-years, Green unabashedly responded that the introduction of the school's new online e-Course earlier this year was a game-changer for antique and appraisal education in general. "The e-Course allowed us to bring a half-century worth of teaching expertise to a new and expanded format," said Green. "With the ability to use online interactive multimedia for instruction, we've really been able to raise the bar in antiques and appraising education for our students." Green went on to say that although online instruction had obviously become the new norm, the "text-book" version would still be offered for a number of years to come.

According to a press statement, as part of the school's year-long celebration, staff from the Institute will also participate in a traveling roadshow to commemorate the school's 50th anniversary. Plans reportedly include tours of major antique events and shows throughout North America, and will incorporate free appraisal clinics, business seminars and evaluations to mark the Institute's anniversary. "We really want to give something back to our students and those interested in antiques," said founder Peter Green, "It's been a great privilege to teach so many... it's just our way of saying thanks." Exact dates for upcoming events have yet to be released, but are expected to be announced later this month according to school spokesperson, Pamela Drew.

For readers seeking more information about the schools antiques and appraisal program, they can be contacted at: (877) 444-4508 or visit their web site at; www.ashford.com. You can also write to them at; the Ashford Institute of Antiques 981 Harbor Blvd., Suite 3, Dept. 275FA9 Destin, FL 32541-2525, or at their Canadian office at; 131 Bloor Street West, Suite 200, Dept. 124FA9 Toronto, ON M5S 1R8.
