The revived show, now in its ninth year after a long hiatus, had encouraging crowds and sales on both days, thanks to renewed efforts by the 100-member strong association. The historic Fine Arts Building is a great venue for the show, giving the event a unique art gallery feel all its own.

Minnesota State Fairgrounds Hosts Annual MADA Antiques & Decorative Arts Show

Article & Photos by Brian Maloney

The Minnesota State Fairgrounds has hosted the event since its inception. Some of you may remember an older incarnation of the show, discontinued many years ago. It was nine years ago though, that members expressed interest in reviving the event, and the MADA Antiques & Decorative Arts Show was reborn. The forty year-old association's membership has grown substantially in recent years too, and now boasts more than one-hundred dealers as active members.

The MADA Show may be a relative newcomer to the Minnesota show-scene, but for many of the members it's a highlight of the show season. "We had a wonderful crowd for the event," Show Committee co-chair Richard Larson told me, "committed efforts of the group to get the word out about the show have had a big impact. Local media are always tapped to help promote the event; and press releases, distributed statewide, have brought in new collectors from a wider area."

I earlier described the Minnesota State Fairgrounds as beautiful, and it truly is that. I first visited here several years ago, and my first impression was: what a difference from your typical fairgrounds! After passing under a large iron archway into the grounds, you're surrounded by what looks sort of like a "streets of yesteryear," with tall trees shading the wide boulevards lined with lovely brick & stone buildings. It really is a pleasant place - and a busy one too! Be sure to stroll past the Art Deco/Art Moderne 4-H Building adjacent to the antiques show itself, and the nearby Art Deco Horticulture Building too. There are usually multiple events here on a typical summer weekend, the June schedule including everything from the MSRA Back to the 50's Car Show to the St. Paul Summer Beer Fest, plus dozens more. Another nice feature of the fairgrounds: plenty of parking adjacent to the venues, and free too!

The show itself is held in the Fine Arts Building, a grand old neoclassical brick structure. The huge open room is divided by dozens of freestanding white partition walls; giving the whole space the feel of a museum or art gallery. Each dealer has plenty of ready-made wall area for hanging objects, or just as a backdrop.

Those dealers ranged from Victorian to vintage to mid-century modern, or sometimes all-of-the-above in one booth. Eastwood Gallery's display contained the classic Arts & Crafts furnishings they're noted for, plus mid-century lighting and some industrial design thrown in for good measure.

Things couldn't have looked more different than at the nearby Loretta Gosse Antiques, home of period Continental bronzes and more. My favorite there: a lovely polychrome glazed ceramic sculpture from the 1890s collaboration of Swedish-born sculptor Agnès de Frumerie and French potter Edmond Lachenal. The 23" long piece, titled Interval at the Ball depicted three lovely ladies conversing on a bench, and had an asking price of $10,500.

And I always find something interesting at Country Gallery Antiques, purveyors of all-things-Scandinavian. Owner Suzanne Jameson Kramer literally grew up in the antiques business. "I think I was eight years old when I started helping out at my parents' Minneapolis antiques shop" she told me, "and soon after, at the many regional antiques shows we displayed at. In fact, it was at one of those shows that I met the man I'd later marry - his family also long-time antiques dealers."

Treasures there ranged from a charming paint-decorated Swedish Mora tall-case clock (dated-1840, $2,500) to an early 20th century Swedish tapestry with two mythical Bäckahästen (brook horses) flanking a tree-of-life, price tag $595. No matter where your tastes lie, you're likely to find something to love here at the MADA Show. Two good examples: a monogrammed silver dresser set that once belonged to Hollywood movie mogul Cecil B. DeMille (from Vintage Couture, $950), and the stylish Eero Saarinen-designed oval marble table (6', $3,200) at H & B Gallery.

Show Committee co-chair Richard Larson told me not to forget to mention the countless hours the other committee members worked putting together this 2013 show - with the help of many dedicated volunteers. You can contact the Minnesota Antiques Dealers Association through their website www.mnantiquesdealers.com. There, you'll find a member list, an application for membership, as well as a discount coupon for admission to their annual show. And as always, keep an eye out for listings of the 2014 MADA Antiques & Decorative Arts Show in the Auction Action Antique News!

Classic Continental style at Sebasky & Hildreth Antiques: the matched pair of G. Marmile spaniel portraits priced at $6,800, the 19th century Venetian painted armchairs at $4,300 for the set. 612-804-6055

Standouts among the English pottery at Sebasky & Hildreth Antiques were this 16" pair of Jackfield Pottery spaniels, asking price $2,450. 612-804-6055

One of the more interesting local finds at the MADA Show: this handmade copy of the famed 11th century Baldishol Tapestry displayed by Country Gallery Antiques - a first premium winner at the 1967 Minnesota State Fair. 715-425-7107

Period Swedish textiles at Country Gallery Antiques included this early 20th century Water Horse & Tree of Life tapestry measuring 40" x 60" - $595. 715-425-7107

From Gwen LeFevre Antiques, a charming Victorian alphabet block set in its original box, asking price $165. 715-442-2086

I found this matched pair of Sterling-over-bronze electric sconces at Katherine Walker Griffith Antiques, measuring 21" in height & priced at $6,500. 612-840-1938

A stylish corner of Eastwood Gallery contained a nicely-reupholstered Mid Century sofa ($850) paired with a folk art oil of Native Americans riding ($2,500) and a vintage industrial cart-turned-sofa-table, asking price $350. 651-695-1902

Period Swedish textiles at Country Gallery Antiques included this early 20th century Water Horse & Tree of Life tapestry measuring 40" x 60" - $595. 715-425-7107

A straw-filled, jointed early Teddy Bear ($185) at Gwen LeFevre Antiques relaxes on a dated-1883 child's armchair, asking price $145. 715-442-2086

Highlights at Katherine Walker Griffith Antiques ranged from an antique English portrait of Henry II (22" x 34") to this monumental 21" Japanese Imari charger depicting a folding screen - $650. 612-840-1938

A wonderland of 19th century art glass awaited at Jeff Durst Antiques, among the inventory this Vaseline glass & silver-plate cruet set - $1,295. 612-715-2458

Shoppers could browse from thousands of period decoratives at Jeff Durst Antiques, like this 1890s enameled glass & silver bride's basket - $350. 612-715-2458

A blue & gold landscape adorns this vintage Japanese silk kimono ($120) from Vintage Couture, one of many available at the MADA Show. 612-227-1766

A Surprising find at Vintage Couture: this monogrammed silver-plate dresser set that once belonged to famed movie mogul Cecil B. DeMille - asking price $950. 612-227-1766

Lighting at Eastwood Gallery included this matched pair of Rembrandt table lamps ($295) flanking a tiny Handel leaded glass lamp - $1,650. 651-695-1902

Motorcycle Memorabilia (Much of it Harley-Davidson), Vintage Advertising, Petroliana, Automobilia will be Sold Aug. 28th

The auction will be conducted by Matthews Auctions at the Clarion Hotel in Davenport, Ia.

Three mid-20th century Servi-Car "trikes" (three-wheel motorcycles), including the one shown, will be sold.

(DAVENPORT, Ia.) – A single-owner lifetime collection of motorcycle memorabilia – much of it Harley-Davidson and to include vintage clothing, posters, accessories, parts, signs and even three operational Servi-Car three-wheelers – will be sold at an auction on Wednesday, Aug. 28, at the Clarion Hotel & Conference Center, 5202 Brady Street in Davenport, at 10 a.m. (CST).

The auction will be conducted by Matthews Auctions, LLC, based in Nokomis, Ill. In addition to the motorcycle items, the sale will also feature nearly 100 examples of porcelain and painted petroliana, automobilia and antique advertising signs. For those unable to attend, Internet bidding will be facilitated by Proxibid.com. Telephone and absentee bids will also be accepted.

Harley-Davidson Motorcycles vintage cardboard sign, professionally framed, circa 1915 (est. $4,000-$5,000).

Harley-Davidson Motorcycles Sales-Service single-sided embossed tin sign, with bar-and-shield logo, circa 1920s/'30s (est. $3,000-$4,000).

The three three-wheelers – or "trikes" as they're called – are from the mid-1900s (two are circa 1950s; the other was made in 1965). They are Servi-Cars, three-wheelers often used by the police, or owned as novelty vehicles by the general public. All three are operational and could conceivably be driven off the auction site. They are expected to gavel for $7,000-$15,000 each.

Harley-Davidson signs will feature a vintage cardboard sign, framed, made circa 1915 and reading "J.D. Dickerson, Rural Home" (est. $4,000-$5,000); a Sales-Service single-sided embossed tin sign ("Leo N. Herrick, Rochester, N.Y."), with bar-and-shield logo, circa '20s/'30s (est. $3,000-$4,000); and a Sales-Service double-sided metal flange sign (est. $4,000-$5,000).

Accessories (all circa 1930s-'50s) will include a rare Harley-Davidson mini wind sock (est. $3,000-$4,000); a Harley-Davidson metal bottle opener and spinner, in the form of a man on a motorcycle (est. $750-$1,000); a combination motorcycle grip and cigarette lighter (est. $1,000-$1,200); a Harley-Davidson pocket knife (est. $300-$500); and a brass fender mount fixture of a spread-wing eagle with Harley-Davidson bar-and-shield logo (est. $1,500-$2,000).

A great selection of 50-70 vintage motorcycle clothing items will be offered, for prices expected to bring $300 and up. These include an Atlanta Motorcycle Club jacket with Antique Motorcycles of America (AMA) patch; a Twin States Ramblers child's leather jacket; and a full uniform, complete with pins, insignias and a cap stitched with the words "Road Kings" on it.

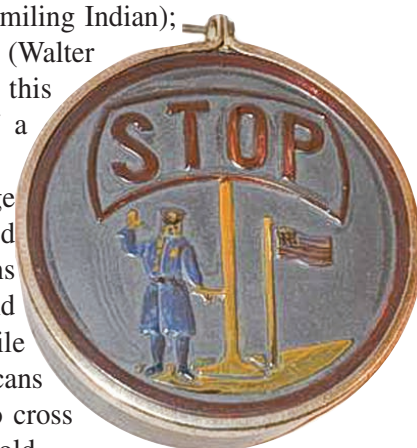

A group of felt pennants will also come up for bid and should fetch $1,500-$2,000 each. These will include ones for the A.M.A. Motorcycle Gypsy Tour (Belknap Mt. Area, Laconia, Gilford, N.H.); the Old Orchard Beach Maine Gypsy Tour (N.E. Champ Races, 1940); Indian Motorcycles (Hendee Mfg. Co., Springfield, Ben-Hur Grocer ("The Sign of a Dependable Grocer") double-sided porcelain sign (est. $7,000-$10,000).

Mass., with graphic of a smiling Indian); and Indian Motorcycles (Walter Goerke, Newark, N.J.), this one with a depiction of a stern-faced Indian.

A collection of vintage Harley-Davidson and Indian one-quart oil cans should hammer for around $200-$700 per can, while 30-40 other lots of oil cans and accessories will also cross the auction block. Also sold will be after-market accessories (all pertaining to Buco), such as Buco leather motorcycle gloves, Buco motorcycle goggles and after-market accessory catalogs.

After-market stop light accessory with traffic cop and American flag graphics, for car or motorcycle (est. $1,000+).

Also sold will be an after-market stop light with traffic cop and American flag graphic, for car or motorcycle mounting, about 8 inches in diameter (est. $1,000-$1,500); a very retro and colorful space-ship design hood ornament for car or motorcycle, metal, made in the 1940s or '50s (est. $1,000-$1,500); and a genuine 1907 bicycle used for mail delivery RFD (Rural Free Delivery) in Carlisle, Pa. The bike, with wooden rims, is expected to hammer for $2,000-$4,000.

William Penn Motor Oils ("100% Pure Pennsylvania Oil") double-sided porcelain sign, 24 inches in diameter (est. $5,000-$7,000).

Petroliana signs will feature a group of Signal Gasoline single-sided porcelain pump plate signs, all about 12 inches in diameter and all expected to bring $1,200-$2,000 each; a William Penn Motor Oils (Permit No. 29) double-sided porcelain sign ("100% Pure Pennsylvania Oil"), 24 inches in diameter (est. $5,000-$7,000); an En-ar-co Motor Oil ("White Rose Gasoline") single-sided round porcelain sign, with graphic of a man in short checkered pants (est. $2,000-$3,000); and a Husky Hi-Power single-sided porcelain sign with dog image (est. $5,000-$6,000).

Advertising signs will include a Ben-Hur Grocer double-sided porcelain sign ("Full Line Agency – The Sign of a Dependable Grocer"), with graphics of Ben-Hur coffee, tea and other products (est. $7,000-$10,000); and a Povey ("Baby First Best Milk") single-sided porcelain sign with image of a baby clutching a bottle and smiling (est. $5,000-$7,000). Also sold will be a group of black memorabilia cast-iron banks, all circa 1880-1920, by J. & E. Stevens and others.

18th Annual Wisconsin Pottery Association Show & Sale

The Wisconsin Pottery Association (WPA) will hold its 18th annual Show and Sale on August 24, 2013. Fifty of America's best pottery dealers will be selling a range of antique and contemporary art pottery. As always, experts will be on hand to identify and evaluate your "mystery" pottery (limit 2 per admission).

Gazo Foudji was a Japanese-born artist who worked at the Weller Pottery before moving to Roseville (ca. 1905-1906) and creating the Fudji (pictured) and Fujiyama lines.

This year's Exhibit is Roseville: America's Decorative Art Pottery. On display will be over 120 examples of Roseville pottery, representing many of the best lines from the company's 63 year history.

In 1892 the Roseville Pottery began producing utilitarian cooking vessels, flower pots and spittoons in Roseville, Ohio. George F. Young was the company's secretary, treasurer and general manager. The firm went out of business after a few years, and Young bought the business and assumed the role of president, as well as continuing on as general manager. The Young family owned and managed the company continuously from 1896 until it closed in 1954.

In addition to continuing its utilitarian products, Young also made the first decorative art pottery at Roseville. The so-called Vase Assortment line featured brightly colored vases with molded floral designs that were given away by A&P Grocery Stores as premiums to customers. In 1898 Young purchased a second factory eight miles away in Zanesville, Ohio in order to expand his art pottery production and take advantage of the growing commercial market for art ware. The Rookwood Pottery in Cincinnati was the pioneering Ohio art pottery maker, and along with various New England firms, had created and dominated the new market. Other Zanesville potteries, most notably the Weller Pottery and the Owens Pottery, had already started making decorative art pottery in Zanesville shortly before Roseville set up their primary shop there.

Roseville's first art lines included the blended glaze lines now called Majolica and Roseville's version of Rookwood's Standard Glaze line which was called Rozane Royal. Ross C. Purdy created the glazes and developed the technical processes underlying Roseville's standard glaze line. Similar "standard glaze" lines were produced by both of Roseville's Zanesville competitors, the Owens and Weller potteries. Majolica pieces were probably being produced before 1900 at Roseville, while the earliest Rozane Royal vase is dated 1900.

Roseville "Vase Assortment" pieces were Roseville's earliest art pottery, beginning around 1896. The vases were sold in bulk to the A&P Grocery chain, where they were given away as premiums to customers.

In 1900, George Young hired Austrian-born John J. Herold, a self-taught craftsman who used technical trade papers, careful observation and experimentation to standardize Roseville's earthenware bodies, glazes and production process. Herold was also responsible for creating the Azurean line, a sort of blue standard glaze, and Modern Art, a line that brought the European art nouveau style to Roseville.

Roseville Early Utility pitchers. Introduced around 1900 and popular for decades thereafter, Roseville made dozens of different pitchers. Some Roseville collectors specialize in pitchers alone!

Roseville's most important early artist was the Englishman Frederick H. Rhead who came from a family of potters in Staffordshire, England. Only 22 when he emigrated to Wheeling, West Virginia to take a job with the Avon

Pottery Company in 1902, Rhead moved 75 miles west to take a job at the Weller Pottery where he created several important pottery lines including Jap Birdimal and Rhead Faience. But Rhead's best early work was done at Roseville where he was hired as art director in 1904. There he created what is arguably America's greatest art pottery line, Della Robbia, and supervised the development of many of Roseville best early lines including Cremo, Crocus, Mongol, Egypto, Woodland, Olympic, Fudji, Matt Green, Creamware, Rozane Royal Light, and Crystalis among others. Examples of these rare, valuable and beautiful art pottery lines will be on display at the 2013 WPA exhibit.

After Frederick H. Rhead left Roseville in 1908, his brother Harry Rhead became art director until 1918. While Harry did not produce the great art pottery that exemplified his brother's stay at Roseville, his oversight had a crucial economic impact on the company by de-emphasizing labor intensive, hand-tooled art ware in favor of molded ware with raised (embossed) patterns, which served as templates for hand painted decoration of the pottery. This technique allowed less-skilled artisans to decorate more pieces, which increased the amount of ware produced, and profits, a trend that other Zanesville potteries such as Weller were also embracing. Harry Rhead designed several popular lines, including the Arts and Crafts Mostique, and the classically patterned Donatello, which featured embossed cherubs on a tan, green and white background. The Early Velmoss, Early Carnelian, Antique Matt Green, and Pauleo lines were also introduced during Harry Rhead's tenure at Roseville.

Frank Ferrell created the Roseville pottery that is most familiar and popular to antique lovers today. A Zanesville native and artist at several area potteries, he became Roseville's art director in 1919, and continued in that position until the plant closed in 1953. Ferrell designed nearly all of Roseville's Art Pottery during this period, about 90 lines in all. Ferrell sculpted the embossed patterns, designed thousands of shapes, and chose the colors based on ceramic engineer George Krause's beautiful and durable matt glazes.

One of Frank Ferrell's greatest creations for Roseville was the Pine Cone line. Introduced in the early 1930s in rich blue, golden brown, and soft green glazes, it was the company's best-selling line, and the legend is that it saved the firm from bankruptcy during the Depression, just as the Donatello pattern was said to have reversed the company's fortunes in 1915. Over 150 Pine Cone shapes were created, the largest number of forms in any Roseville line. A common misconception among beginning collectors is that Roseville lines were produced for one year only; in fact, the company continued making a line, and even adding new forms to it, until sales declined. The Pine Cone line is a good example of this. Pine Cone forms can be found unmarked (they probably had the silver or gold paper label used in the early 1930s), with an impressed mark, and, most commonly, with the raised script mark that was used after 1937. New Pine Cone forms were continually being added to the line. In 1953, Ferrell revisited the line and introduced 51 new shapes, all with raised script numbers in the 400s. It was named Pine Cone Modern.

Following World War II, Roseville encountered competition from cheaper art ware made overseas, as well as a burgeoning California commercial pottery industry. Despite efforts to modernize its style, and even enter the dinnerware market with Raymore dinnerware, Roseville closed its doors in 1954, ending an important period in Zanesville, and beginning a new era as one of America's foremost collectible potteries.

This will be the Wisconsin Pottery Association's 18th all-Pottery Show/Sale and Exhibit. The WPA is a non-profit organization formed in 1992 by collectors interested in studying and promoting collectible pottery. Meetings are held monthly and include speakers and informal discussions on pottery. For more information, visit the WPA website (<http://wisconsinpottery.org>) or write the WPA at PO Box 705, Madison, Wisconsin 53701-0705.

Roseville Rosecraft, 1921, also known at Florane when it appears in this tan color. The form of this vase foreshadows the art deco telescoping and saucer-like shapes that were perfected in the Futura line seven years later.

This article takes its lead on Roseville history, line names, dates and facts from Mark Bassett's outstanding and well documented books, Introducing Roseville Pottery and Understanding Roseville Pottery, available from Schiffer Books.

The Pottery Show/Sale, and the Exhibit: Roseville: America's Decorative Art Pottery, will be one day only, Saturday, August 24, 2013 at the Alliant Energy Center off Rimrock Road near John Nolan Drive in Madison, Wisconsin. From I-90, take Exit 142-A, Highway 12-18 west five miles to Exit 262, Rimrock Road, then north one-quarter mile. The Exhibit and Show will be open from 9am until 4pm. Admission will be $6. Show ads can be used to secure free parking.

Roseville Creamware window box, with an early automobile facing off with a cow. "Tourist" creamware is probably Roseville's most sought after and valuable creamware lines.

The Wisteria line, first produced in 1933, is highly valued among collectors today.

The New Sunday at Sandwich Antiques Show - Alive and Thriving

Article & Photos by Maureen Little

Sunday at Sandwich is not a flea market, but variety is encouraged by the management. Visitors will find quality Americana, collectibles, garden fare, mid century modern, re-purposed items, advertising, industrial pieces, and some glitz and jewelry. No new craft items are allowed, but vintage folk art is welcomed.

Paved walkways between areas facilitates handicapped visitors to shop in their wheel chairs or with their walkers. It also helps young moms with children in strollers, too. Parking is free at Sunday at Sandwich Antiques and admission is only $5.00, with under 12, free. A variety of food vendors are always on hand, and attended restrooms are always clean. Early buyers may shop on set-up Saturday and early Sunday for a $20 fee. Dealer inquiries are invited.

An added plus for customers to the market is the opportunity to also visit the several antiques malls and shops in the quaint town of Sandwich. One can shop as long as one has energy to do so. Only 62 miles from Chicago, and 75 from Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, it's worth the trip to see all of the offerings. Visit www.sundayatsandwichantiques.com and facebook for more information.

tising, industrial pieces, and some glitz and jewelry. No new craft items are allowed, but vintage folk art is welcomed.

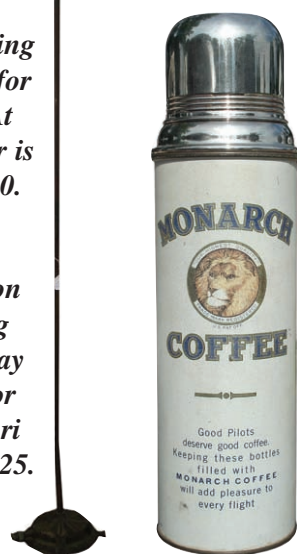

Joe Cardetti of Kracker Barrel Antiques from St. James, Missouri offered a nice early Rare pair of matching salt-glazed canning jars. The jars are decorated on both sides and were made by a Baltimore Potter. They were purchased by Joe in the state of Penn. And the pair sold at the Sunday at Sandwich Antiques show for $395.

Joe Cardetti of Kracker Barrel Antiques from St. James, Missouri offered for sale a very large Horn Cup made by Thomas Johnson in London in 1875. The cup is hallmarked on the lip and base in sterling. The base is glass and a Rare Large size measuring over 9 inches tall. The Horn Cup was priced at $385.

This primitive burl walnut charger measuring 23 1/2 inches with tulip handles was offered for sale by Roy and Diane Walker of Country At Heart out of Marseilles Illinois. The Charger is an east coast piece dating between 1800-1830. This beautiful piece was priced at $495.

Jim Ingraham of J. Wornstyle from Trenton Missouri sold this interesting piece during early buy on the Saturday before the Sunday at Sandwich Antiques Show. This outdoor free standing shower was found in Missouri and sold for the very reasonable price of $125. There were several buyers waiting to purchase this item.

Priced and $195, this commemorative hand-made flag came from a small town in Kansas. The flag represented the soldiers serving in WWI from that small town. Jim Ingraham of J. Wornstyle from Trenton Missouri had offered this wonderfully unique item up for sale.

Jerry and Kim Holub of Riverside Antiques from Des Plaines, Illinois had this 1938 Lone Ranger

Target made by Marx Toys for sale in their booth at the Sunday at Sandwich Antiques Show for the price of $60.

This Monarch Coffee Thermos was priced at $165 in the booth of Jerry and Kim Holub. The thermos was given to pilots with compliments & best wishes by the Reid, Murdoch & Co. It was manufactured and distributed by Monarch Food Products. It was one of the interesting and cool items for sale at the Sunday at Sandwich Antiques Show on Sunday, June 9th at the Sandwich Fairgrounds.

John Godlewski of Golden Oak Antiques from Arlington Heights, Illinois brought a Morrisys & Zastrow Attorneys At Law Sign. The wonderful "shingle" was hanging from it's original iron bracket and priced at $675.

Chris and Lisa Robinson of Robinson Ridge Antiques out of Serena, Illinois had an early 1900's child's buggy seat for sale at the Sunday at Sandwich Antiques Show. It was in original found condition and priced at $210.

Donna Finegan of Donna Finegan Antiques in Palatine, Illinois offered a beautiful rare linen 19th century homespun blanket. The blanket is from Pennsylvania and rare to find made of linen and not wool. The piece was priced at $650.
