The bridge is finally open

2 ¹/₂ years after closing, the Fort Street Bridge reopened to traffic on Sunday.

Project reconstruction began in 2013, though complex repairs delayed the 278-foot structure's reopening, initially scheduled for late 2014. No formal announcements were made regarding the resurrection of the bridge, but traffic flowed freely last weekend as residents took advantage of the reemergence of a main fixture in the downriver community.

According to Michigan Department of Transportation

Residents from through the Downriver community attended a public hearing held at River Rouge High School to address the request from Marathon Petroleum to install a new process to manufacture a lower sulfur gasoline that complies with the EPA guidelines. The outcry from the citizens was a resounding NO.

CALL TO ACTION Know your credit score and improve it

It's worth your time and attention

The federal law allows you to get a free copy of your credit report every 12 months from each credit reporting company. The website is www.AnnualCreditReport.com. Once you get your report ensure that the information on all of your credit reports is correct and up to date. When you review your credit reports it helps you catch signs of identity theft early.

You may wonder why reviewing your credit report and addressing your credit score matters. It matters because your credit score may affect your mortgage rates, credit card approvals, apartment requests, your job application and car insurance rates.

Here are five reasons why your three-digit credit score is very important

1. It determines the cost of future purchases.

Lenders and insurance agents look at your credit score when they're figuring out how to price the products they're selling you. For instance, when you apply for your first car loan, the bank you're working with will run a credit check to decide how much to charge you in interest on the auto note. A low credit score will mean paying a much higher interest rate. This, of course, will make the cost of the loan higher overall.

2. Once your score goes down, it takes longer to improve.

Messing up just once could result in a serious loss of points that will take a long time to correct. For instance, if you don't pay a bill and it goes into collections, you'll lose a lot of points from your credit score – perhaps as many as 100.

3. It's almost impossible to put a bad score behind you. Your credit score will follow you everywhere you go for the rest of your adult life. Since it's checked under so many circumstances. You'll need it, and need it to be good, for as long as you're participating in the financial system. It is worth the effort to begin today to work towards improving your score.

4. It will influence your ability to find a place to live.

When it comes to basic human needs, shelter is at the top of the list. Most landlords will check your credit score as part of the rental application process, and many simply won't accept tenants with bad scores. Of course, the same is true if you're thinking of buying a home. If you don't have good credit, qualifying for a mortgage will be nearly impossible. So no matter what, building and maintaining good credit will affect your ability to find housing.

5. It could put a crimp in your romantic relationships. It might seem strange, but your credit score could have an impact on your dating life. According to a 2014 NerdWallet analysis, more than half of single adults over age 25 are someone with bad credit. Most young adults realize that a significant other with bad credit might come with financial baggage and don't want to get serious with someone who might hold them back. Having good credit is a bigger deal than you may think. But as the year begins, this is a perfect time to make a plan to bring your credit score up.

"somewhat less likely" or "much less likely" to date

Here are a few tips to help you establish a good credit score:

• Pay your bills on time.

Avoid credit card debt, and avoid maxing out a credit card.
Start establishing a credit history as soon as you can. The easiest way to do this is by getting a credit card early and using it responsibly.

• Don't apply for too much credit at once.

• Check your credit reports at least once per year. if you spot a mistake, have it corrected as soon as you can.

Lots of sites promise credit reports for free. AnnualCreditReport.com is the only official site explicitly directed by Federal law to provide them. If you follow these tips, you'll be on your way to a bright financial future.

What Will You Sacrifice for Justice?

By Julianne Malveaux - NNPA Columnist

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. once wrote, "It may be true that the law cannot make a man love me, but it can keep him from lynching me, and I think that's pretty important." Those students who are protesting campus racism need to keep that quote in mind as they assert their right to feel safe and comfortable on campus. When the protests have been well defined and include an end game, such as the University of Missouri protests that toppled a President and Chancellor, they have been effective. When protests broadly address issues like comfort, they are less successful. And while it is satisfying to force a President (or a faculty member for that matter) to resign, the conditions of campus life will not necessarily change because there is a new leader. Structural racism is so firmly embedded in our culture that it will take years, if not decades, of focused work and commitment to eliminate it. Unfortunately, too many are less dedicated to eliminating institutional racism than they are to maintaining the status quo. Consider, for example, the rhetoric during these Republican Presidential debates. Or, consider the racist clumsily question Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia posed when he asked whether black students should attend "lesser schools" than schools like the University of Texas.

Student activism was one of the highlights of 2015. Without waxing nostalgic, though, I'd suggest that some of these young activists take a page from the playbook written in the late 1960s and early 1970s, when protests shut campuses down for weeks. Student protests led to curriculum review on some campuses, the development of academic departments like African American studies and Ethnic Studies, the addition of faculty of color, a commitment to enroll more students of color, and more. "Back in the day," we were far less concerned with "feeling" comfortable than with being empowered. We wanted change, and we were willing to fight for it. And, the change we wanted was tied to metrics. More scholarships, more faculty, more student admits. Not

ARE YOU YOUR

From my perspective discomfort is a good thing. Discomfort is a sign that something is wrong. Clearly there is much that is wrong on our campuses and in our nation. Racism is alive and well, though it shows itself in different forms than it did decades ago. The signs don't say "white" or "colored" anymore. Few "civilized" Whites use the n— word, but expletives are hardly necessary when there is a coded language of exclusion.

Too many of us prefer complacency to discomfort. We prefer to think that everything is fine. Too many would like to pretend that inequality and injustice are minor matters until a headline shakes us out of complacency - a young man shot 16 times while he is on his back, a young woman supposedly hanging herself in a jail cell. Then there is protest, and anger, and rage. Still, too little done to develop a sustainable attack on the racism that plagues our nation. Student activists of 2015 could learn from the sixties activists, and they can also teach "mainstream" leaders twenty-first century organizing techniques. And across generations, there must be teaching and learning about complacency and discomfort, about what change looks like, and about what people are willing to give up to get change.

This 2016 election year promises lots of conversation about justice and change. Some political leaders will talk of "overregulation", while others will suggest that we must pass new laws. Some will suggest that affirmative action is no longer necessary, while others are clear that there remains unequal access to higher education. When guestions of law are debated, I find it useful to consider Dr. King's view of law it won't make you love me, but it will keep you from lynching me and, as he said, "that's pretty important." Dr. King described himself as a "drum major for justice," not a drum major for comfort. The campus activists who are raising critical questions are motivated by justice and cannot allow themselves to be sidelined with conversations about comfort. Comfort will always be elusive in a racist society. And that's a good thing. Julianne Malveaux is an author and economist based in Washington, DC. Her latest book "Are We Better Off? Race, Obama and Public Policy" will be released in 2016 and is available for preorder at www.juliannemalveaux.com.

MONTH OF JANUARY AWARENESS

National Blood Donor Month

Winter is a time for blood donations. During this time, due to cold temperatures, less people donate blood, so there is less available for patients.

The Red Cross is accepting donors year round, but especially throughout the cold season. Please donate.

National Clean Up Your Computer Month

Everyone experiences it. The overflow of junk documents on your computer slow it down.

This January, spend time deleting old or duplicate files, and organize your folders to streamline your browsing experience.

National Glaucoma Awareness Month

According to Glaucoma.org, over 3 million people are afflicted with glaucoma and the National Eye Institute predicts that there will be a 58% by 2030.

Once lost, vision is irreparable, which is why it's detrimental to have regular eye check-ups to detect any anomalies. Once found, treatment can begin.

Thyroid Awareness Month

The thyroid gland lies in the neck, yet it has the potential to affect many areas of the body, including skin, heart, brain, liver, and kidneys. An unchecked thyroid problem can cause an onset of many other health disorders such as osteoporosis and heart disease.

The Los Angeles...?

By Jim Abeare - Telegram Columnist

Three teams, the ST. Louis Rams, San Diego Chargers and Oakland Raiders have petitioned the National Football League for permission to relocate to the Los Angeles area.

To move a team must win three quarter of the league owners (24 of 32 teams).

The team or teams that move will be required to pay a $550 relocation fee.

The three teams at one time in their history played in L.A.

I am usually against a team moving, ripping the heart out of a city. This time is no different.

I was against the Oakland Raiders first move to Los Angeles in 1982. The Raiders belong in Oakland.

The Rams should've stayed in Los Angeles in 1994 when they moved to St. Louis. But then, St.Louis was robbed of a team when the Cardinals moved to Arizona in the 1980's.

The NFL will only allow up to two teams to move to L.A. One team will stay in their current city.

The Chargers claim 25 percent of their fan base comes from north of San Diego.

If the Chargers was smart, instead of trying to jion the Raiders in a stadium plan in Carson, California, they wolud build a new stadium somewhere between the two cities and draw from both markets.

The Rams' have only been playing in their current home, the Edward Jones Dome, since 1995.

St. Louis is proposing a new $1.1 billion stadium along the Mississippi River.

The NFL has been using L.A. as a bargaining chip for teams to get what they want for 21 years, ever since the Rams and Raiders left.

What city will be used as the next bargaining chip? St. Louis? San Diego? San Antonio? London?

The Nfl might want to think about expanding.

Stir Up the Gift

by Janine Folks By Janine Folks - Religion Columnist

Stir up the gift! There is a gift inside you! Maybe you already know what it is. It's that thing you're really good at. It's that thing that blesses people when you do it. Maybe it comes so naturally to you and it's so second nature, that you don't even realize it's a gift.

Your gift is that thing you do so well. It comes easy to you while others struggle to be as good. When you operate in your gift, you are in your element and you feel like you were put here to do this. It brings joy and meaning to your life when you do it. It makes others feel blessed too.

Maybe you used to exercise your gift, but not so much lately. Discouragement, disappointment, distractions or something may have removed you from your connection to your gift. Maybe your gift has just been sitting dormant for a while. Or maybe you're just too afraid to activate it because you don't think you have resources you need to do what you want with it anyway.

Well, I stopped by to say, "Stir up the gift!" Reacquaint yourself with the gift. Begin again using it. If you are already using your gift, how about taking it up a notch!? Do something bigger with it. A new business or new career? Hobby? Do something with it.

We can all do something greater with our gifts. What could possibly stop you? I believe that if you start moving forward, the resources will come.

Well it doesn't come from God. Therefore, we need to release the fear and move forward. Don't worry about who will like it, support it or think it's good. Don't worry about failure. Just keep trying and pray for wisdom to create new ideas and ways to pursue it effectively. I pray that one of your mantras for 2016 will be "Stir up the gift." When we stir up our gift, things begin to happen. Proverbs 18, verse 16 says, "A man's (woman's) gift makes room for him or her, and brings him or her before great people." Doing your gift can take places you never you dreamed of. Just have the courage to take some steps. It can bless your life in many ways.

"Therefore I remind you to STIR UP THE GIFT of God which is in you through the laying on of my hands. For God has not given you the spirit of fear, but of POWER and of LOVE and of a SOUND MIND (2 Timothy 1:6,7 NKJV)."

Happy New Year, Sweet 16! Stir up the gift! Don't be afraid. "Beloved, I pray that you may prosper in all things (including your gift) and be in good health, just as your soul prospers (3 John 1:2 NKJV)."

The Transformative Legacy of Martin Luther King, Jr., in 2016

By Benjamin F. Chavis, Jr. NNPA News Wire Columnist

There is no debate concerning the irrefutable fact that The Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. was one of the greatest leaders recognized, admired and affirmed by millions of people across America and throughout the world. King's activism and leadership changed America and the world, as did Mahatma Gandhi and Nelson Mandela in their respective global impacts.

As we prepare to celebrate the 87th birthday of Dr. King as part the official federal holiday celebrations, I believe it is very important to focus on how Dr King's legacy today is still relevant and transformative for all people who cry out for freedom, justice, equality and empowerment.

Martin Luther King, Jr. was a devoted man of faith and a committed freedom fighter for the establishment and building of "The Beloved Community." Dr. King was clear about the ultimate goal of the Civil Rights Movement. His vision went beyond changing laws and winning victories against the forces of injustice and repression. Social change for Dr. King was not an abstraction or just a dream or an unreachable goal, but it was a realistic, achievable and tangible outcome of the struggle for freedom and equality: "The Beloved Community"

In his own words, King emphasized, "The nonviolent resister must often express his protest through noncooperation or boycotts, but noncooperation and boycotts are not ends themselves; they are merely means to awaken a sense of moral shame in the opponent. The end is redemption and reconciliation. The aftermath of nonviolence is the creation of the beloved community, while the aftermath of violence is tragic bitterness."

Today, in the bold tradition of Martin Luther King, Jr., we salute the Black Lives Matter movement. It is being led by young, gifted, talented and courageous activists, who are using nonviolent civil disobedience anew to challenge racial injustice and the wanton police violence and murders that have become too frequent against Black Americans and others.

But today we must also assert in King's transformative tradition that "All Black Lives Matter!" In other words, yes we have to stand up effectively against police brutality and prosecutorial misconduct. Yes, we urgently have to reform the criminal justice system in its totality. Yet, we must also stand up effectively with our activism to stop the self-destructive violence and murders that too many of us perpetrate on each other in our own families and communities.

In principle and in faith, the truth is we have to be against all forms of violence and all forms of the destruction of humanity. There is no justification to take the life of another human being. It would be a gross contradiction to everything Dr. King worked and sacrificed for if we remained silent about the surge in self-destructive gun vio-

Women of Transition Kingdom Prima Donnas prayer gathering and lence that prevails today in too many of our communities.

Reconciliation for Dr. King was not reconciling or compromising to leave injustice or racial bigotry in place. However reconciliation was the active and involved process that resulted in specific social transformation that inured benefits to all people. The success of the Civil Rights Movement under Dr. King's leadership not only benefited Black America, but also the success of this movement for change provided benefits to all people.

King never suspended his faith in the God of justice and liberation. He refused to bend his principles and beliefs on the effectiveness of nonviolent social change activism and multiracial movement building. The organization of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) by Dr. King and other Black church leaders was a prophetic step forward that kept the Black church in America at the forefront of the battle for civil rights and human rights. King was an intellectual genius who stood on the universal theological principles of the oneness of God and the oneness of all humanity.

In my younger years, I personally worked with Dr. King, Golden Frinks and Milton Fitch in the North Carolina SCLC. I witnessed firsthand how Dr. King transformed and inspired the consciousness of people to believe and exert a grassroots power to promote social change. We could use that kind of grassroots power today to get a massive voter turnout.

Dr. King was not a "weak" leader who sought to appease or to entertain the powerful in the high places and principalities of oppression. Martin Luther King, Jr. was in complete solidarity with the poor and marginalized, but yet determined to end poverty and injustice wherever those evils were manifested.

Thus, we should also revisit Dr. King's economic justice demands. It is my opinion that if Dr. King were alive today he would be encouraging "principled youth entrepreneurial development." Participating in the U.S. economy as business owners that help to financially sustain our communities should be a priority.

In his last public speech on April 3, 1968 on the night before his tragic assassination in Memphis, Tennessee, without fear Dr King asserted, "The nation is sick; trouble is in the land, confusion all around...But I know, somehow, that only when it is dark enough can you see the stars. And I see God working in this period of the twentieth century. Something is happening in our world. The masses of people are rising up. And wherever they are assembled today, whether they are in Johannesburg, South Africa; Nairobi, Kenya; Accra, Ghana; New York City; Atlanta, Georgia; Jackson, Mississippi; or Memphis, Tennessee, the cry is always the same: 'We want to be free."

In 2016, "We want to be free!" We want an end to racial injustice and all manifestations of inequity and inequality. But we realize from the living legacy of Martin Luther King, Jr. that we all should remain vigilant and active. Let's keep Dr. King's transformative legacy alive and vibrant with renewed energy and support.

THE HENRY FORD is FREE on Martin Luther King, Jr. Day January 18, 2016 (9:30am - 5pm)

Come celebrate the life of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the many ordinary people who had the extraordinary courage and commitment to ask for more from their nation on civil rights. Bring your family and friends, because all of the activities in Henry Ford Museum on MLK Day are absolutely free, thanks to the generosity of Target. That includes free admission and free parking, plus live music, hands-on fun, make-and-take activities and dramatic presentations. Sit in the Rosa Parks Bus, and hear the story of Mrs. Parks' courageous act. Participate in and be captivated by the highly praised 30-minute show "Minds on Freedom," which celebrates the contributions of Dr. King, Mrs. Parks and other civil rights champions such as Fannie Lou Hamer, Gloria Rackley and the Freedom Riders. Sing, carry a protest sign and interact with the performers. You, too, can make history.

Bridge opens

spokeswoman Diane Cross, only select lanes remain open, though remaining paths will be made accessible in the coming months. Likewise, due to reduced power control, the new bridge takes approximately 20 minutes to go up and down. Nevertheless, operation times will be reduced to less than a minute in the near future.

"The more than $46 million project has only one lane open in each direction so that roofing work can be completed on the maintenance room," Cross said. "Some issues with power are also keeping the bridge at 10% of its power, causing slow opening and closing of the 8.2 million pound bridge leaf. This is expected to be corrected in next month."

For citizens and business owners alike, Sunday's event brought a wide sense of relief to a region long affected by the bridge's inoperative status. Serving as a main transport between the downriver community and downtown Detroit, the closure of the Fort Street structure - paired with the shutdown of the Jefferson Avenue Bridge in May 2013 brought significant economic hardship to the area. In fact. with both fixtures simultaneously defective, several residents lost jobs, while local businesses reported a steady decrease in consumer traffic. "These [bridge] closures have had a drastic effect because they relegate our local business district to a dead end street," River Rouge City Commissioner Dan Cooney said in December. "People used to roll through town to get to work in Delray or Downtown Detroit, but now they're forced to go around us to I-75, which has caused an additional problem with dangerous potholes on the [freeway] bridge. Top that off with the fact that people are losing jobs because some places have had to cut down on employees, and some businesses have closed altogether."

Indeed, while these changes produced negative effects on the downriver area, at last there is light at the end of the tunnel. In the coming months, as residents continue to utilize the Fort Street Bridge, they can also look forward to another long awaited reopening. Last December, Wayne County officials announced that work on the Jefferson Avenue drawbridge remains underway. The $17 million project is expected to be complete by August 2016.

Martin Luther King Jr. celebration in Westland

The services will begin at 9 a.m. at John Glenn High School. A Freedom Walk will take place from John Glenn High School to the Friendship Center on Newburgh Rd. at which time, we will host a Prayer Breakfast. Celebrating National Mentoring Month

By Shelby Jefferson – Telegram Staff Reporter

Famous celebrities are stepping up to be mentors to youth from the various communities

"In a Nation of limitless possibility, every child deserves the chance to unlock his or her potential. When young Americans have the support they need to make the most of themselves, they can achieve their dreams and strengthen our country, which has always moved forward by extending ladders of opportunity to the next generation."

-President Barack Obama

In 2002, Harvard's T.H. Chan School of Public Health and the National Mentoring Partnership established January as National Mentoring Month. The campaign, first endorsed by President George W. Bush, highlights adult mentors who help shape America's youth, while also focusing on individuals, businesses, government agencies, schools, faith communities and nonprofits who can each contribute to increasing the number of active mentors in the United States.

On January 21st, National Mentoring Month is culminated by Thank Your Mentor Day, where Americans from all around thank and honor those who have guided and impacted their lives. Past national spokespersons for the campaign have included former Secretary of State Colin Powell, with a plethora of other one relationships that change their lives for the better, forever."

4-H National Mentoring Program

4-H offers mentoring services that are supported by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDPD). With programs available throughout the country, the organization targets high-risk populations with a goal to reduce juvenile delinquency, drug abuse, truancy and youth unemployment.

As an extension of Michigan State University, Michigan's 4-H chapter remains the largest youth development organization in the state, helping more than 200,000 youth reach their full potential.

National Cares Mentoring Movement (NCMM)

Founded by Essence Magazine Editor in Chief Emeritus, Susan L. Taylor, the National Cares Mentoring Movement is designed to uplift African American youth. Unlike other organizations of its kind, NCMM does not provide direct mentorship opportunities, but instead pairs children with different organizations that offer effective mentoring services. NCMM also strives to increase the number of black mentors throughout the country. Detroit Cares Mentoring,

NCCM's local affiliate, collaborates with youth-focused organizations in the Metro area to mentor children from kindergarten through the third grade. The organization is openly supported by various big name figures, from Oprah Winfrey to Harry Belafonte, Terrence Howard, Ciara and Spike Lee. Phone: 313-649-7633

There is conflicting stories about the incidence that lead up to the young man's death. Police say their officer opened fire on the Matthews, who was wanted on a probation violation warrant and suspected in a larceny after the man ran from police on Wednesday. The officer stated that they struggled over his gun. Over 200 people along with family members of Matthews came out and walked down Michigan Ave to the Dearborn Police Station.

Michigan Chapter of the National Action Network, Rev. Charles Williams, said, "We're going to fight this,". "This is an injustice. ... We will receive justice in the name of our brother Kevin Matthews. It is time out for officers thinking they can go around gunning down our youth. It is time out for officers thinking they can go around gunning down our black men." Williams said Matthews suffered from paranoidschizophrenia but was known in the community and to some Detroit Police officers as a harmless man. Local government leaders ask Gov. Snyder to veto SB 571

Say state shouldn't ban local governments from providing factual election information

Local governments must use a different process to educate the residents before the election

Local government leaders from across the state today joined to ask Gov. Rick Snyder to veto Senate Bill 571, which would gag local officials seeking to provide constituents with factual information on election matters 60 days before the election.

City, township, county, school and other officials said that constituents need to have the facts to become informed voters on key matters that come before them, including local millage issues, charter changes, land transfers and other issues required by state law to go to local elections.

SB 571 includes provisions banning local officials or employees of local governments from using public funds for a communication 60 days before an election "by means of radio, television, mass mailing or prerecorded telephone message if that communication references a local ballot question..."

"In other words, in the weeks before an election we cannot use a mailing or local cable outlets to inform our constituents if a measure will raise or lower their tax rate, who it will affect, if it will mean the community will be selling a piece of property and where it is, how a charter change will affect them or anything else," said Dearborn Mayor Jack O'Reilly, president of the Michigan Municipal League.

"State law already prohibits combining these two issues. We cannot rely solely on our local media to cover this important taxpayer issue. Voters could be in the dark unless the township provides information explaining why we are taking this action and how it will impact their taxes."

Terry Jungel, executive director of the Michigan Sheriffs Association, said that law enforcement in rural and metropolitan Michigan relies on local funding often provided by special millage. "Public safety millages can range from a small increase for road patrol in a township to a substantial increase to build a new jail to meet modern requirements," Jungel said. "Voters need to get factual information on where the money will go and what they will be getting for their additional tax dollars - or the consequences of not approving a millage. Then they can cast an informed vote."

"State law requires local elections on a wide variety of issues, from library millages to land sales, charter amendments to police and fire enhancements. Factual information is vital if we want informed voters," said Judy Karandjeff, president of the League of Women Voters of Michigan. "If local governments don't provide this information who will? We see newspapers cutting back coverage, and radio and television stations reducing staff. Voters trust their local officials to give them the facts. Gov.

Americans want Harriet Tubman on the $20 bill

Tubman was the winner of a 10-week poll conducted by the nonprofit group Women On 20s, which wants to replace President Andrew Jackson with a woman on a $20 bill.

Tubman, who helped hundreds of slaves escape to freedom on the Underground Railroad, received 33.6 percent of the 352,431 votes cast in the final round of the poll. Eleanor Roosevelt came in second, followed by Rosa Parks and Cherokee Nation Principal Chief Wilma Mankiller. Over 600,000 people submitted votes in the contest overall.

"Our paper bills are like pocket monuments to great figures in our history," Women On 20s Executive Director Susan Ades Stone said in a statement. "Our work won't be done until we're holding a Harriet $20 bill in our hands in time for the centennial of women's suffrage in 2020."

Women on 20s also announced on Tuesday that they were launching an online campaign to urge the White House to adopt the changes. Obama has said that he thought putting a woman on the $20 bill is a "pretty good idea."

Stone said that the White House could easily instruct Treasury Secretary Jack Lew to redesign the $20 bill.

"I think it's really a very easy thing for the White House to do if they decide that they want to do it," Stone told The Huffington Post.

Sen. Jeanne Shaheen (D-N.H.) and Rep. Luis Gutierrez (D-III.) introduced legislation in their respective chambers of Congress last month to put a woman on the bill. Stone said that the legislation had given momentum to her group's campaign by showing that there was support for the idea in Congress.

Putting a woman on a $20 bill is a "no brainer," Stone said, and is simply a matter of recognizing the contributions that women have made to the United States.

"Men and women really built this country and it's just that the women have been in the background," Stone said. "This is a chance to bring women into the foreground and recognize them for what they've accomplished and to show young people that if you make sacrifices and dedicate yourself to something, you will be recognized for it the same that a man would be."

electioneering using public resources, and rightly so," O'Reilly said. "But voters need to have facts – and in too many cases, there is no other source than local governments. Gov. Snyder should veto this bill, and then ask the Legislature to hold hearings to determine if there is a real issue here and if so, how best to address it in a more limited fashion."

Chris Barnett, supervisor of Orion Township in Oakland County, noted that this year the township plans to combine two fire millages, to help lower election costs. "If SB 571 is enacted, we cannot communicate to our voters that we are seeking to save money by Snyder should too, and should veto this bill."

Others speaking at the news conference were Commissioner Matt Bierlein of Tuscola County, Rochester Mayor Bryan Barnett, Lansing School District Superintendent Yvonne Caamal Canul and Kalamazoo Public Schools Superintendent Michael Rice.

Others who have asked for a veto include the Michigan Association of School Boards, County Road Association of Michigan, Michigan Infrastructure and Transportation Association and the Michigan Association of School Administrators.

Tyson the Bullmastiff embarks on long road to recovery

By Shelby Jefferson – Telegram Staff Reporter

Tyson receives treatment at Affiliated Veterinary Emergency Service in Ann Arbor

RIVER ROUGE - Last week, animal control officers rescued a severely emaciated bullmastiff in River Rouge. Barely clinging to life, the dog was taken to the River Rouge Animal Shelter, and was subsetransported quently to Affiliated Veterinary Emergency Service in Ann Arbor with help from Providing For Paws. Through it all, the mastiff showed unwavering resilience - eventually earning a new name based on his undying will to survive.

"When I brought him to the vet, the staff asked me if I knew his name," said Patty Trevino, Director of the River Rouge Animal Shelter. "I told them that I didn't know, but I knew for sure that this dog was a fighter. One of the girls there suggested that we call him Tyson. I said yes, that certainly works for me."

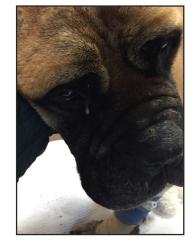

Today, Tyson remains under the watchful eye of doctors at Affiliated Veterinary Emergency Service, where he remains in critical, but stable According condition. to Trevino, at the point of rescue, the mastiff's body temperature read dangerously low at 82 degrees – much of which can be attributed to a complete shutdown of the circulatory system. Additionally covered in visible bite marks, Tyson weighed in at a mere 52 pounds, an aspect that completely hindered his ability to eat, stand, or walk. Nonetheless, as he continues round the clock veterinary treatment, slow strides have been made in what certainly stands as a lengthy journey towards healing. "I remember picking [Tyson] up to place him on a bed. I've never felt anything so cold that was still alive," said Trevino. "He was nonresponsive; you could pick up his head and it would drop right back down. If we weren't able to get him to an emergency vet, he definitely would have passed away, but today he's starting to do a lot better. One thing of note however is the fact that he is heart worm positive, so that will require long term treatment. It's certainly going to be a lengthy road to recovery."

For many of today's veterinary facilities, funds for such an extensive recuperation are often hard to come by. But not for Tyson, who became a national celebrity once his story aired on Channel 7 News last week. To date, more than $19,000 in funds have been donated to help with his care, while hundreds of concerned citizens continue to express interest in adopting the loveable mastiff. In the end, Trevino remains grateful that Tyson was saved, while expressing great optimism for the future.

"It's wonderful that people have come together to help [Tyson]," she said. "If you look at him now, he's walking around and showing off the huge personality he has. He's like a big Marmaduke; such a sweet, loving dog. We're all very thankful, and we definitely look forward to seeing what the future holds for Tyson."

The State of the Lions

By Butch Davis - Sports Reporter

Jim Caldwell Lions Head Coach

Detroit avoided a last-place finish in the NFC North with its sixth win in eight games over the Chicago Bears this pass Sunday. Now here are some good cheers about our Lions this season.

Head Coach Jim Caldwell is 18-14 after two seasons and will end this his second term as the only Lions coach since the start of the Super Bowl era with a winning record after two seasons. He chose not to point that out when asked about making his case to stay on the job this week. Running back Theo Riddick caught two passes to set a club record for running backs with 78. James Jones had the previous mark with 77 in 1984. Rookie RB Ameer Abdullah's 29.1 kickoff return average in 2015 set a new single-season franchise record, breaking the previous high of 28.4 by wide receiver Mel Gray in 1994. Abdullah finished second in the NFL in kickoff return average this season. Defensive end Ezekiel Ansah registered 1.0 sack at Chicago in the Lions' 24-20 win. Ansah's career high 14.5 sacks rank as the second highest single-season total (official since 1982), trailing only Robert Porcher's 15.0 sacks in 1999. There's more, Matthew Stafford set the franchise's 8-game record for com-(70.0 pletion percentage percent) by surpassing the 68.9 completion percentage tallied by QB Jon Kitna over eight games in 2006-07. Calvin Johnson caught 10 passes for 137 yards, including a 36-yard touchdown, in the Lions' 24-20 win at Chicago. Johnson finished the season with 1,214 yards and surpassed 1,200 yards in a season for the fifth time in his career.

Now Coach Caldwell mead this statement this past Monday, on the state of the team at the conclusion of the season: "When you look at the team, I think our guys have done a tremendous job. What they accomplished in the second half is hard to do, it's very difficult to do when things aren't going well to end an eight-game stretch 6-2 and I've been on some great teams that had a tough time doing that down the stretch. But nevertheless, these guys hung in there; they battled through a lot of adversity. I certainly have to give them a lot of credit. I'm proud of them, did a tremendous job and the coaching staff. This day and age, just in terms of the scrutiny and the media and all the things they get bombarded with, it's tough to keep them all I think headed in the same direction, I think that's difficult. I think our coaching staff did a tremendous job with that, but also, the leadership that we have amongst our players I think is exceptional. I think there's a quote by, it might have been Kennedy who said that, 'Victory has many fathers, but defeat is an orphan.' But, what I think our guys have done is that, they've measured up and took responsibility like we all have for the things we didn't do well and there were a number of things we didn't do well. But I think also, you've got to give those guys credit for the things that they did do well this latter half of the season. Holding it together in some tough situations and winning on the road and things of that nature. So all in all, it's one of those tough seasons, but I think with three wins in a row at the tail end of it, it leaves you, certainly have some hope."

Yeah, let get down, "to the real Nitti gritty". Will Lions coach Jim Caldwell be fired at the end of this 7-9 season? The owner of the team says no decision has been made. Whether the Lions bring back Caldwell for a third season is uncertain.

Lion's owner Martha Ford spoke briefly to reporters after Sunday win at Chicago, and she said it's too soon to say what Caldwell's future holds. "I haven't gotten that far yet," she said. Lions President Rod Wood also spoke to us reporters and took issue with an ESPN report saying the Lions were planning to keep Caldwell. According to Wood, until the Lions hire a G.M., there are no plans on Caldwell's future. "Nothing's changed." Wood said. "I'm going to continue to let the G.M. make that decision." The Lions are planning to interview G.M. candidates this week. Only after that role is filled will Caldwell find out if he's going to be back.

As of this past Monday here are some names that are starting to emerge in the Detroit Lions' search for a new general manager as per talk with Dave Birkett, of the Detroit Free Press, Seattle Seahawks co-director of player personnel Trent Kirchner will be interview. ESPN reported New England Patriots director of pro scouting Bob Quinn had been also ask. In checking the New England Patriots Monday, Quinn had no comment. Detroit Lions Interim GM Sheldon White also will interview with the teams upper brass sometime this week.

Another coach on the Lions staff maybe have possibilities on moving from the team as the NFL Network reported late Sunday night that Teryl Austin, the Detroit Lions defensive coordinator as he has interviews scheduled this week with the Cleveland Browns and Miami Dolphins and could meet with the Philadelphia Eagles as well. The Lions have two potential replacements for Austin on staff get my high school tours starting again. Everything about this year has to be better than the last. The number one focus is to get my team assembled and build my brand. Once that is completed the next step is to get to work. The world will be seeing a lot more of my face. Telegram- What exactly is your job description?

Telegram- What is your vision

T Kay- I'm all about entertainment. I don't host parties, it's not my crowd. I know my crowd and I love my crowd. I am an event host, things like fashion and shows. Sit back relax and have fun. If you want to take your shoes off to party by all means party.

Telegram- How hard is it for you to find work?

T Kay- My email's inbox is pretty thick, I don't jump at every chance I'm offered I recently turned down a gig at a strip club. But I normally work 5 to 10 events a month.

Telegram- I can tell your biggest focus isn't working on yourself. You're putting a lot of work into building your brand why is that?

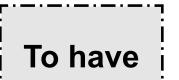

T Kay- What you do and how you work is a reflection of you. A lot of people know me as my brand, and they know I love my brand.

Telegram- What's the best thing about working with other people?

T Kay- You learn a lot about people. Every chance is a chance to network. But I learned you have to watch out for people and their intentions, anybody could be ready to put a knife in your back.

Telegram- Thank you for your time, good luck with 2016.

T Kay- Your welcome, same to you.

Gun Control

that fewer felons, domestic abusers and mentally ill have access to guns."

Other measures include expanding the role of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, and making a $500 million investment to improve access to mental-health care. Opponents are promising to fight them, although the president said he's confident the actions will withstand any legal challenges. Obama also was criticized for bypassing Congress, but Brundage said past attempts at gun-control reform have failed despite public opinion.

"It's not a panacea. There isn't a panacea," she said. "But just because we cannot do everything doesn't mean we should do nothing. This is definitely a move in the right direction."

Brundage said polling shows 90 percent of Americans want all background checks on all guns sales. According to new FBI data, gun sales in 2015 were the highest recorded, with background checks on gun purchases and permits up 10 percent.

Video of the president's full announcement is online at whitehouse.gov/blog.

NNPA Foundation launches Anti-Human Trafficking Campaign, UNDress

WASHINGTON, D.C. (January 4, 2016) — The National Newspaper Publishers Association Foundation (NNPAF) commences National Human Trafficking Awareness month by launching its own antihuman trafficking campaign called "UNDress," which stands for Undermining Nationwide Demand for the Recruitment, Exploitation and Sexual Solicitation of women and children. The campaign will target those who buy and traffic women and children by placing public service announcements in places where buyers typically 'shop' for sexual services.

"The NNPA Foundation is in a unique position to address this issue, because we can generate education and awareness by utilizing our own media products," said Kimberly Johnson, the Foundation's executive director.

Years before her term at the NNPA Foundation, Johnson conducted speaking and training events all over Georgia, working with trafficking survivors, local nonprofits, government agencies, advocates and local and national law enforcement. Johnson is certified to train on human trafficking and child sexual abuse and is an award-winning producer of the docufilm, Sex Trafficking in Atlanta: A Survivor's Perspective.

"The issue of human trafficking, particularly sex trafficking, is partly fueled by salacious images in media", Johnson said. "We plan to counter the effects of those images through our own content and resources. We are looking to partner with other organizations in this effort."

The National Newspaper Publishers Association (NNPA) will hold its Mid-Winter Conference in Coconut Grove, Florida on January 27-30, 2016 where the NNPA Foundation (NNPAF) will announce its initiative during a press luncheon.

The NNPA Foundation has plans to host a series of human trafficking town hall meetings in 2016, including one in DC during the organization's Black Press Week conference in March. Other initiatives scheduled for launch include STEM Reach 2020. To support the NNPA Foundation, contact ED@nnpafoundation.org.

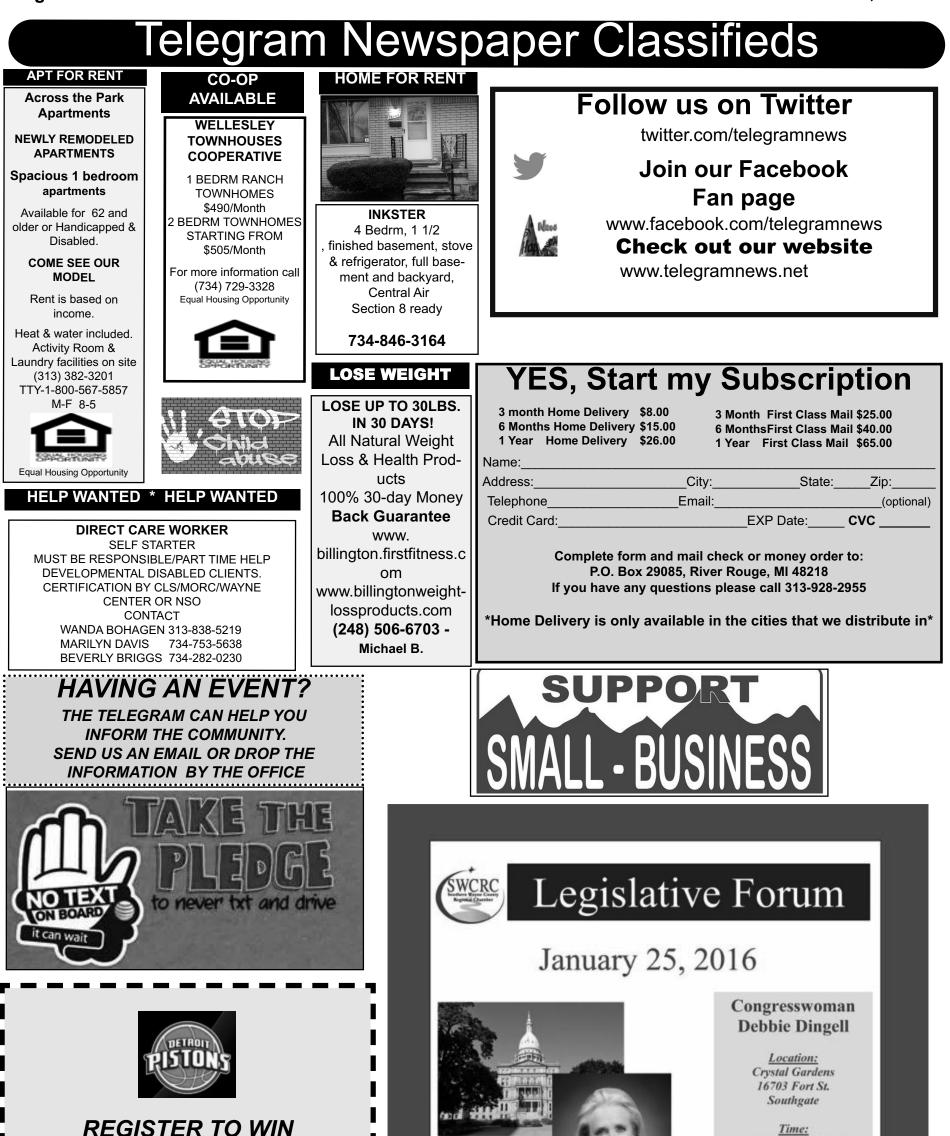

The National Newspaper Publishers Association Foundation's (NNPAF) mission is to exemplify and advance the highest standards in media by influencing education, technology, health, wellness, business, economic empowerment, and cultural and civic engagement.

The National Newspaper Publishers Association (NNPA) is the trade association for the more than 200 African Americanowned community newspapers across the United States, delivering news, information and commentary to more than 20 million people each week. Since its founding 75 years ago, NNPA has consistently been the voice of the black community by reporting news that makes history and impacts our country.

Top Movies of 2015

By Dwight Brown - NNPA News Wire Film Critic

Dwight Brown says that "Straight Outta Compton"This is a full-fledged, big-budget looking homage to the L.A. rap scene, that smartly, emotionally and historically capsulizes the life and times of Eazy-E, Ice Cube, Dr. Dre. (Lionsgate)

Movies have become a great comfort in what has been a tumultuous year. They've entertained us. Made us laugh, feel courageous, scared, romantic and educated us too. It's a perfect time to reflect on the films, performances and Black artists who made 2015 special. And might as well get a head start on the highquality movies that will contend for Oscars and be released in theaters and on DVD/VOD in weeks to come.

Amy (*1/2) Amy Winehouse burned bright like a firefly and died just about as quickly. Her jazzy, smooth and tortured Billie Holidayish voice haunts the soundtrack. Her infamous drug addiction and self-destructive relationships are on view. A brilliant and sobering documentary by director Asif Kapadia.

Black Panthers: Vanguard of a Revolution (*) Whittling down what must have been countless hours of possibilities (archival footage, interviews, photos) into a thought-provoking and coherent documentary about the Black Panthers was done expertly by director/producer/writer Stanley Nelson and editor Algernon Tunsil.

Movies have become a great as the aged pugilist Rocky Balboa. comfort in what has been a tumul- A knockout.

The Revenant (1/2) After the success of his Oscar-winning film Birdman, one might have thought filmmaker Alejandro G. Inarritu might miss a beat. He didn't. His tale of a frontiersman, who survives a brutal bear attack, is left for dead then seeks revenge for his son's murder, is a violent and riveting experience. Leonardo DiCaprio deserves the Oscar for Best Actor for sheer brilliance and guts.

Room (*) A young woman (Brie Larson) and her vulnerable son (Jacob Tremblay) have been locked up in a shed and held hostage for years. They plot their escape. A deceptively simple script (Emma Donoghu), directed with skill and restraint (Lenny Abrahamson), turns into an astounding and heart-wrenching film that never loses its dramatic edge.

Sicario () FBI Field agents Kate (Emily Blunt) and Reggie (Daniel Kaluuya) seek revenge when a drug cartel kills their colleagues. They team up with a smarmy Defense Department "contractor" (Josh Brolin) and a mysterious figure (Benicio Del Toro) to hunt the bad guys. Imagine Zero Dark Thirty tequila style. Genius direction (Denis Villeneuve), perfect screenplay (Taylor Sheridan) and superb ensemble acting.

with him throughout this hell." The audience witnesses a very personal story about a man determined to give a dead teenager a proper burial at Auschwitz. The claustrophobic cinematography keeps you astonished.

Straight Outta Compton (1/2) This isn't some chump change Sundance indie movie about the rap group NWA and hip-hop culture. This is a full-fledged, big-budget looking homage to the L.A. rap scene, that smartly, emotionally and historically capsulizes the life and times of Eazy-E, lce Cube, Dr. Dre and everyone around them who caused the big bang that popularized West Coast rap music. An Oscar-caliber film.

ASK ALMA

My cousin steals from me

Dear Alma,

I love my cousin dearly and we spend a lot of time together. She and I grew up together, we're close in age and we have a ton of stuff in common. We both love to travel and the outdoors, we go hiking, skiing and scuba diving. Here's the problem: I think she's stealing money from me. On occasions when we're traveling, I noticed money missing from my wallet. When out to dinner, after I leave I find some of my money is missing. A few times it was all my cash and on other occasions she left a one-dollar bill. At first I thought I was crazy, so the other night, I counted all my money before we met and after and yep, she got me. I'm not sure what to do. I don't want to stop seeing her and I don't know how to bring it up on conversation. I don't have enough nerve. We are gainfully employed and she sure doesn't need my money.

What's your advice?

— Crushed Cuzzin

Dear Crushed Cuzzin,

Aww sweetie, like your cuzzin in this moment, I seem to be conflicted, wondering if she's taking advantage because she needs help or just doesn't really like you. Hmm, I wonder, could she really be that sad and lonely on the inside? Or is she just overspending and short when it comes to paying her bills? Nonetheless, her actions require consequences, because she is jeopardizing your relationship.

My hot-mess side says, dang, stealing from family is jacked up and she deserves a smack! While my highly favored and blessed side says, this is undoubtedly a devious cry for attention. The fact that you don't want to address her is a sure softhearted indication that you don't want to hurt her feelings. With that said, before you next excursion, I'd suggest that you stuff your dollars in your brassiere.

Family is family, and one things for sure, she doesn't like or respect you like longtime kin. Otherwise she wouldn't steal from you. Allow some time and grass to grow under your feet in between hook ups for outdoor adventures. This relationship is flighty, there's no debt or foundation. Sometimes what you want and what it is, are two different things. Forgiveness is fine, but don't lose sight that she's gone rogue.

Residents Speak out against the Marathon permit request

Convers Cautions MDEQ on Possible Raising of Sulfur Dioxide Levels in Detroit

Johnny Hanes of South West Detroit - 48217 speakes during the publich hearing held on Wednesday in River Rouge

DETROIT – It was a full house at the public hearing in River Rouge as residents spoke out against the request of Marathon. In January 2016, Rep. John Conyers, Jr. (MI-13) released the following statement in response the Michigan Department of Environment Quality's (MDEQ) consideration of a proposal from Marathon Petroleum refinery to allow them to expand facility operations in Southwest Detroit:

"I am alarmed to hear that the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) may raise the ceiling on Sulfur Dioxide pollution in the Detroit area. Given the serious health consequences of Sulfur Dioxide pollution, such a measure should receive the highest-level of consideration and discussion. cent record demonstrates they are not fully weighing the consequences of their lax approach to regulation. The recent reports out of Flint, that tens of thousands of citizens were exposed to toxic lead levels while MDEQ ignored the threat, should give anyone in public office pause before trusting the word of MDEQ. Their rush to approve the haphazard storage of Petroleum Coke along the Detroit River in 2013 tells us this is a problem that goes back some time.

"Unfortunately, the MDEQ's re-

"It seems that whenever an urban or low-income community's air or water quality is in question, risks and costs are almost always deemed acceptable. For those of us who live in those communities, it hardly needs to be said that MDEQ's assurances are not as assuring as they once were.

"As public officials, we are entrusted to provide for the health and welfare of our community, which means overseeing those employed by the state to protect us. As Detroiters and Michiganders, our families and friends have to live with the consequences of damage to our environment. I will be paying careful attention to this evening's public discussion on raising the allowable Sulfur Dioxide emissions. More importantly, I will be watching for evidence that our state's regulators have learned some lesson from their recent terrible mistakes.

Johnny Hanes made the suggestion that the DEQ should come to live in the area for two weeks to see what its like to live here. He asked what is the DEQ making their decision on.

Larry Kelsey from Lincoln Park said that the polluted air doesn't have any borders. He is encouraging the Legislators in Lansing to change the law. Erma Lockridge says No, No, No and No again. We can't take this anymore. Her words were 'Marathon, you are killing us."

Many people that spoke expressed their lack of trust in the Department of Enviornmental Quality after the decision about the Flint water problem. The sentiment was that DEQ is siding with big business instead of the health and welfare of the citizens of Michigan."
