LITERATURE REVIEW

“KNOWLEDGE FADE DUE TO NON-USE”

What is skill maintenance?

Skill maintenance is the process of preventing skills from deteriorating below an acceptable performance level.

Retention interval

It is widely accepted that the longer the period of non-use the greater the probability of decay (Annett, (1979); Farr, (1987); Gaurlin & Sitterly, (1972); Hurlock & Montague, (1982); Naylor & Briggs, (1961); Prophet (1976) cited in Arthur et al. (1998)).

Skill re-acquisition

Skill re-acquisition is the concept relating to the re-training of a skill that has deteriorated below an acceptable criterion. The greater the skill loss, the greater the effort required to bring the individual up to proficiency. Summers et al. state that the considerations for skill re-acquisition include: the nature, timing, amount, and frequency of training.

- The nature of the training may simply be to remind the individual of the information.
- The timing is concerned with the operational requirement and the availability of the necessary facilities.
- The amount and frequency of training are related to the level of skill loss, task difficulty, the level of skill proficiency required and the purpose for the training.

*It is the sincere effort by AMERICAN EDUCATION CERTIFICATION ASSOCIATION (AECA) to refresh the individual with majority of knowledge possible through our online continuing education portal. Disclosure notice: The online continuing education units program of 15 C.E.Us is in no way a substitute for an actual program offered by an educational institution, it is just a part of continuing education which is available only for candidates who have already been through a training program or course and on successful completion got certified by attempting a certification exam. Employment data may be reported to the education institution from where you received your training.
